'Epidemic' Of Arson Suspected

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A plague of suspicious fires has killed more than 50 persons in two months in northern New Jersey, and a federal official said Monday the fires are part of a "national epidemic of arson."

The latest, a tenement fire Sunday, killed four children and a man. It broke out at a city-owned tenement that had been declared "unfit for human habitation" by city health and building inspectors.

"Almost without doubt, this was an arson fire," says Fire Director John Caulfield.

It is the latest in a rash of fatal fires that have broken out here, in Jersey City, and in Hoboken since December. Fire officials call them "suspicious but unrelated."

National Problem

And, says Richard Strother, associate director of the United States Fire Administration in Washington, it is part of a national problem.

"New Jersey is on the lead edge of a national epidemic of arson. It's becoming a common way to settle grievances and quarrels. Before, people who wanted revenge would shoot their enemy. Now, they burn him out."

Strother called arson the nation's fastest-growing crime and said the nationwide incidence has jumped 300 percent in the past three years. At the current rate, he said, more than 1,000 persons are dying from fires of suspicious origin each year.

Yearly totals for New Jersey are not available because statistics on arson deaths have not routinely been compiled. The most nearly comparable statistics, based on a state police survey, show at least 168 persons died in all categories of fires in 1977, the last year for which figures are available.

232,000 Suspicious Fires

In that year, there were 232,000 fires of suspicious origin in the United States at a cost of $1.7 billion, said Peg Malloy, information director for the United States Fire Administration.

One reason the arson death rate has been so high in New Jersey this winter is that a few fires have taken a large number of lives — 21 in a blaze in Hoboken in January, 12 in another in Newark in December, seven in a Jersey City fire in January.

Separate fires also killed two in Jersey City and three in Newark on Saturday, in addition to the fire here Sunday that took five lives.

According to Strother, arson is most often committed by children playing with matches, landlords seeking to unload unprofitable buildings, juvenile gangs seeking "kicks," sexual deviates and, increasingly, small businessmen seeking to get out from under debt.

Economic Motives Contribute

Strother said economic motives make dilapidated tenements in depressed inner cities prime targets. "A lot of landlords want to unload property that has become unprofitable due to rent control," he said. "Or they may want to get the tenants out and fix up the place to attract higher income tenants."

Most of the buildings on East Kinney Street, the site of Sunday's fire, previously had been destroyed by fire. "They're all suspicious and they're very common place," Caulfield said of the blazes.

Carl Stoffers, head of the Arson Squad in Newark for more than six years, says public apathy is arsonists' "greatest ally."

New Guidelines Set For CETA Funding

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE LOCAL CETA office has almost $470,000 in federal funds to allocate to the "right" applicants — and that may exclude some or all of the 15 agencies already approved for $403,367 of the money.

Because of new contract stipulations being initiated at the option of the local Comprehensive Employment Training Act office, the agencies now will have to prove they have established accounting procedures and travel and personnel policies.

They also will have to be willing to handle payrolls for their CETA-funded programs and have enough ready cash to pay employees before being reimbursed by CETA.

Changes Affect 15 Agencies

The changes will affect the 15 agencies and 49 CETA workers already approved for the Title VI special projects funds and those whose applications are pending final approval, Juanita Forbes, CETA administrator, recently told the Manpower Planning Council.

The council recommends fund disbursement to the South Plains Association of Governments, which in turn authorizes contracts with the agencies.

According to law, at least 50 percent of all Title VI funds — in this case, $46,435 — must be used for special projects. If not enough agencies qualify under the new guidelines established by Mrs. Forbes' office, the remainder of the Title VI program funding could be jeopardized.

Mrs. Forbes told the planning council the U.S. Department of Labor ordered the change in payroll procedures last week.

Violations Corrected

She explained the department's officials decided the local CETA office's former procedure of handling payroll accounts for all Title VI projects "violates the new (CETA) law" recently enacted by Congress.

However, a spokesman in the department's Office of Inspector General, which handles accounting regulations, said no rules mandating such a change have been issued to CETA sponsors in this region.

Jackie Nelson, who drafts regulations for the CETA program, said there is a section in the new law stating that fund recipients keep sufficient "auditable" records and be monitored for fund mismanagement.

But, he added, it is "not a directive" that the accounting procedures being initiated here are mandatory.

Mrs. Forbes said her staff is developing a form to inventory the accounting practices of the Title VI applicants.

Those already approved without the retroactive accounting review include, in order of their priority rating by SPAG: —City of Lubbock, $51,051, for an energy project.

Lone Gunmen Strike San Antonio Firms

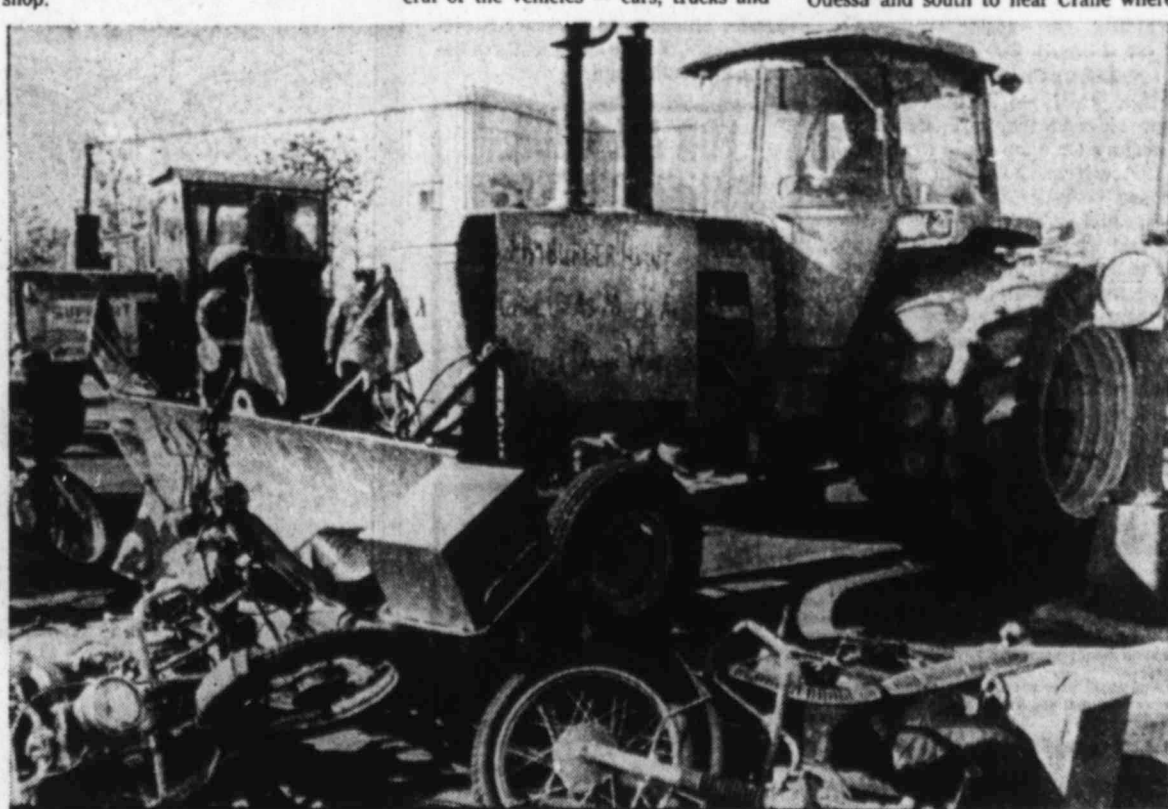

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two San Antonio financial institutions within a mile of each other were robbed by different lone gunmen in a 15-minute span Monday afternoon, police said.

A young white male armed with a pistol held up a Government Employees Credit Union branch office about 2:30 p.m., officers said. Bank officials said an "unknown" amount of money was taken, but indicated the loss was not substantial.

About 15 minutes later, a black gunman robbed the nearby Windsor Park Bank of a "substantial" amount of cash after firing a shot that narrowly missed a customer, police said.

Bill Goertz, president of the Windsor Park bank, said the bandit walked into the bank and fired a single shot into a second-floor balcony.

"He apparently wanted to get everyone's attention," Goertz said, adding that the shot missed by inches a customer sitting in the bank's second-floor coffee shop.

Protesting Farmers Clubbed, Arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of farmers turned their tractors and plows into weapons of street politics on Monday, jamming capital traffic and triggering sporadic violence despite a total mobilization of police.

"We've raised enough corn, but not enough hell!" came the battle cry, as several separate cauldrons of farm vehicles poured into the city in a road-snaring demand for higher government price supports for their crops.

All told, police estimated at the end of the day, 1,950 vehicles had crept into the city in the demonstration — cars, campers, pickup trucks, livestock trailers, even some combines, as well as tractors.

At Least 19 Arrested

Police arrested at least 19 farmers and impounded at least 17 vehicles, many of which had been abandoned in key intersections.

Several police cruisers were rammed, and tires slashed and windows broken on others. One officer was injured when a tractor was driven over his foot, and Police Chief Burtell Jefferson, who called out his entire force, was personally involved in a shoving match.

Tear gas was fired at one driver who allegedly resisted arrest after blocking Independence Avenue near the Agriculture Department. Another tractor driver was clubbed and dragged to a paddy wagon; officers said he had brandished a baseball bat at them. In another episode, a tractor was set ablaze near the department.

Jefferson said at least six policemen were injured.

Government Workers Late

Many government workers were three or more hours late reaching their offices — and some high officials were late for a meeting at the White House with President Carter. But evening traffic was not disrupted. The protesting farmers left their machines parked in long rows along the Mall, which runs from the Washington Monument to the Capitol. Many took hotel rooms for the night.

The demonstration was launched by the American Agriculture movement, an organization seeking full implementation of existing authority to guarantee farmers prices of up to 90 percent of parity for their crops. Full parity would give them roughly the same purchasing power that farmers enjoyed early this century. Prices now range around 70 percent.

At an afternoon rally on the Capitol steps, protest leader Gerald McCathern told about 5,000 farmers. "In the morning, let's have those tractors rolling again through the city of Washington. We didn't bring them up here to sit idle."

Reps. Charles W. Stenholm, D-Texas, and Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., were booed when they urged the farmers to be peaceful. Shouts of "No! No!" erupted when Stenholm said "Let's be awfully careful that we don't do those things that break the law. ... Let's work with the police."

"Remember," said Albosta, "we didn't have any trouble last year." Someone yelled back: "Yeah, and we didn't get anything last year, either."

Victims Of Inflation

In a speech earlier Monday, President Carter said that "I don't know of any group that's suffered more from the effect of inflation than farmers." But, in remarks to the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture, he also said net farm income had increased 40 percent in the last year, though more should be done to ensure that all farmers share that prosperity.

Alfred Kahn, Carter's chief anti-inflation spokesman, said the demonstrations "do not bode well for food prices." And he disagreed with Carter that farmers were hardest hit by inflation. "No, I don't think so," he said.

"The Farmers Are Here!" declared banners trailing from many of the 2,000 tractors and trucks that entered the city at a crawl just before dawn Monday. Several of the vehicles — cars, trucks and even mobile homes — had several farmers aboard, and American Agriculture claims their ranks will swell to 30,000 over the next several days.

Tens of thousands of exasperated commuters found themselves arriving at their offices — if at all — up to four hours late due to the massive traffic tie-ups on principal freeways and streets. Many, hearing of the chaos via radio and television, simply stayed home.

At the White House, Budget Director James McIntyre and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall showed up late for a scheduled 9 a.m. Cabinet meeting with President Carter. Marshall later tried to drive from the executive mansion down Pennsylvania Avenue to his office, but had to abandon his car due to a seven-abreast motorcade of tractors on the famed street.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, also was late for his appointment to give the president his daily national security briefing. The secretary of agriculture, Bob Bergland, was in Seattle, meanwhile, while his department was besieged with demonstrators, some of whom took advantage of the building's cafeteria for lunch.

Once inside the city, the farmers drove up and down the major avenues, circling the White House, the Capitol and other landmarks. In several cases, vehicles See TRAFFIC Page 16

Snowfall Varies; Roads Slippery

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SNOW and drizzle that fell across much of the South Plains Monday night are expected to cause hazardous driving conditions in the region early today.

Department of Public Safety officials warn that highways could become dangerous this morning as temperatures, which dropped to 20 overnight, turn the 2 to 3 inch blanket of snow over much of the area's roadways into treacherous icy surfaces.

By 10 p.m. Monday, as snow continued to fall, Big Spring reported a 3-inch layer of snow, with 2 inches reported at Lamesa and Andrews. Midland also reported two inches of snow accompanied by freezing rain.

The National Weather Service placed Lubbock's snowfall at half an inch.

Accidents Rise

Department of Public Safety officials in Abilene and Midland noted an increase in traffic accidents in those areas, as the storm moved eastward. No serious accidents, however, were reported.

Although temperatures today should be considerably warmer than Monday's high of 28, the weather service warns that a 20 percent chance for more precipitation still is expected.

Temperatures today should rise to the middle 40s before dropping to near 20 tonight. The high Wednesday should be near 50. Temperatures, however, should begin cooling again by Saturday, according to the weather service.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect Monday night from Lamesa southward, where 3 to 5 inches of the white powder were expected to accumulate. In areas north of Lamesa, including the Lubbock vicinity, snowfall was expected to measure less than two inches.

Heavier Snow Area

By 10 p.m., the low pressure system was dumping snow from a line extending from Hobbs, N.M., to 10 miles west of Lubbock and 25 miles northwest of Midland. Scattered patches of freezing rain were reported 50 to 60 miles east of Midland.

While light snow and sleet coated the Lubbock area, an 8 to 10 inch blanket of snow was reported at Van Horn near El Paso, 2 inches of snow was reported at Wink and 1.5 inches of ice was reported from Crane to Dryden.

South of the low pressure system, highway officials reported deteriorating driving conditions and slick or dangerous roads near Abilene, Dallas, El Paso, Midland, Mineral Wells, Ozona, Pecos, San Angelo, Sherman and Wichita Falls.

Up to 3 inches of snow covered Interstate 20 from Big Spring to Pecos late Monday. Slick roads also were reported from Andrews through Midland and Odessa and south to near Crane where weather officials cautioned against travel unless absolutely necessary.

Heavy rain in South Texas prompted a flash flood watch for southeast Texas from Palacios to Lufkin, while a developing low pressure system in the western Gulf of Mexico was expected to bring more heavy rain to that region.

Gale warnings and small craft advisories were posted for the upper coast from Port Arthur to Port O'Connor as winds blew Monday from the northeast at 40 to 52 mph and seas had risen 10 to 15 feet.

Snow, freezing rain and sleet in Oklahoma also prompted weather officials to post travelers advisories for the southern half of the state.

High wind warnings and travelers advisories for persons along the western slopes of the Montana Rockies and parts of Wyoming were in effect Monday where winds gusting up to 80 mph and drifting snow were reported.

New Leader Named By Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini took a fateful step in his fight for power Monday, naming a veteran anti-shah politician to head a "revolutionary" regime rivaling Iran's shaky government and warning the military they risk God's wrath if they try to stop him.

The Moslem holy man called on the people of Iran to obey the new "transitional government" of 70-year-old Mehdi Bazargan, which is to pave the way for an Islamic republic. He urged them to show their support through peaceful marches nationwide.

Khomeini declared the U.S.-endorsed government of Prime Minister Shapur Bakhtiari must go, "including Bakhtiari himself, appointed by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi before the monarch left Iran Jan. 16.

Compromise Possible

Western diplomats said Khomeini's move heightened the danger of a confrontation between his revolutionary movement and the armed forces, whose commanders have vowed to support the monarchy and the constitutional government. But some say a compromise is still possible.

Reacting to Khomeini's challenge, the army sent troops into the offices of government ministries, apparently to maintain discipline among workers and head off a possible takeover by the rival group. For the third day in a row no political violence was reported in Iran.

Khomeini, who made his announcement at a news conference, urged civil servants and soldiers to cooperate with Bazargan, and Bazargan insisted his was not a "shadow government." It is a real government that will oversee elections for a new republic.

Bans Physical Move

But the new "prime minister," reportedly the key intermediary in secret contacts between the two camps, also said he does not intend to try to physically move into the Bakhtiari government offices.

The embattled Bakhtiari told Iranian television that as long as the new "government" is a "matter of words, it's possible."

"But if it comes to action, it's a different thing. I will have no objection to the announcement of a temporary government provided this government plays the role of a shadow government or future government... There is one Iran and one government," he said.

The 78-year-old Khomeini, who returned here last week after orchestrating Iran's year-long anti-shah campaign from exile, met with reporters as thousands of followers gathered outside his headquarters.

Court Overrules Judge, But Takes No Action

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A judge acted illegally in the lenient sentence he imposed on three Houston policemen who killed a prisoner, a federal appeals court ruled Monday. But the court declined to do anything about it.

The 2-1 ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals came in an extraordinary plea filed by the Department of Justice seeking to "correct" the sentences.

Terry Wayne Denson, Stephen Orlando and Joseph James Janish, policemen at the time, were convicted of beating up Joe Campos Torres on May 6, 1977, and pushing him into Buffalo Bayou, where he drowned.

They were held guilty on Feb. 8, 1978, of depriving Torres of his constitutional rights while acting as policemen.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross N. Sterling sentenced each man to 10 years in prison on one count, but then suspended that sentence, and ordered 5 years of supervised probation, instead.

On another count, Judge Sterling sentenced each defendant to one year in prison. So the actual prison time for the offense would be one year.

The government appealed, contending that Judge Sterling had no authority to reduce the sentence to probation. The plea asked the 5th circuit to issue an order to Sterling commanding him to re-sentence the men properly.

In its ruling, the 5th circuit agreed Judge Sterling had no authority to do what he did. But the 5th declined to issue any order.

Judge Sterling, among other things, said he sentenced the men as he did because a fourth policeman involved in the incident, Louis Glenn Kinney, turned states' evidence and in return was allowed to plead to a misdemeanor.

That plea bargain was none of Judge Sterling's business, and his attitude carried to its logical extreme would be absurd, the 5th circuit said.

"It is inappropriate for the sentencing court to attempt to harmonize the fate of convicted defendants with the fate of witnesses with whom the government has struck a bargain."

However, the 5th circuit said though it has the power to command lower court judges to obey the law, it was not going to do so in this case because "we could not direct that the district court enter a particular sentence even if we decided to issue writ."

In dissent, Judge Irving L. Goldberg of Dallas said a court order from the 5th would be the proper way to handle an illegal sentencing.

"The heart of the majority's 'discretionary' refusal to issue the writ is its fear that the district judge, on resentencing, will be even more lenient, thus causing our writ to be rendered a futile gesture," he said.

"I do not agree. I cannot believe that this district judge would turn this proceeding into a charade..."

"Our duty is only to issue the writ of mandamus where a statutorily illegal sentence was imposed. Such a sentence has been imposed here, for a crime that is singularly offensive to a free society — a flagrant and violent breach of the law by those charged with enforcing it. I would grant the writ."

January Temps Third Coldest Recorded Here

January 1979, with its average temperature of 31.7 degrees, was the third coldest January on record for Lubbock since recordkeeping began in 1911.

The monthly average reading was 7.4 degrees below normal.

Only colder Januarys on record were in 1930, with an average of 30.6 and in 1947, with a 31.2 reading.

The National Weather Service statistics released Saturday only confirmed what city residents had already felt in their bones: January 1979 was cold.

A pair of 59-year-old records and one eight-year-old record fell in January 1979 as well. The January 12 maximum of 12 degrees broke the 1919 record low for that date by three degrees.

The minimum of 2 degrees below zero, on January 2 broke the old record of 2 degrees, also set in 1919.

The high of 27 degrees on the 6th of January broke the 1971 record of 28. Total precipitation for the month was .33, 22 below normal, despite 9 days of snow for the month.

Farmers had some reason for optimism for the coming planting season however, as the NWS reported that widespread late fall precipitation and the small amount in January combined for a promising picture as regards ground moisture.

With all but some extreme western and southern counties measured, the Service reported soil moisture levels "about normal for this time of year."

"With only the normal precipitation between now and planting time, many farmers will find adequate planting moisture," said NWS officials.

The outlook for February 1979 calls for temperatures to average a few degrees below normal and precipitation to be above normal. Outbreaks of cold air are expected to continue on about a three-to-four day cycle. Light snow will accompany nearly every cold outbreak with rain mixed with snow or freezing rain over southern sections.

Service officials said February is normally the last of the colder months of the year on the South Plains.

clared the winner by one vote of the Precinct 4 commissioners post. A canvass, however, showed that Democrat Matthew McHale had won by four votes.

Perez was forbidden by a Nov. 24 court order to serve as commissioner until a district court ruling. Williams then ruled last week that McHale was the winner. Gutierrez, however, swore in Perez on Jan. 1 despite the Nov. 24 court order, but was found innocent of a contempt charge stemming from the actual swearing in.

Williams, visiting from nearby Ozone, said he found enough evidence of voter irregularities and fraud to warrant new elections.

The judge said he will determine who will serve as election judges and clerks for the new elections.

The voided races included those for district clerk, county clerk, another commissioner post, county treasurer and a justice of the peace post.

Zavala County Elections Not Valid

CRYSTAL CITY (AP) — A state district judge has struck down the results of five 1978 Zavala County elections in which La Raza Unida candidates won over Democrats. The judge said he found evidence of irregularities and fraud, and ordered new elections for April 7.

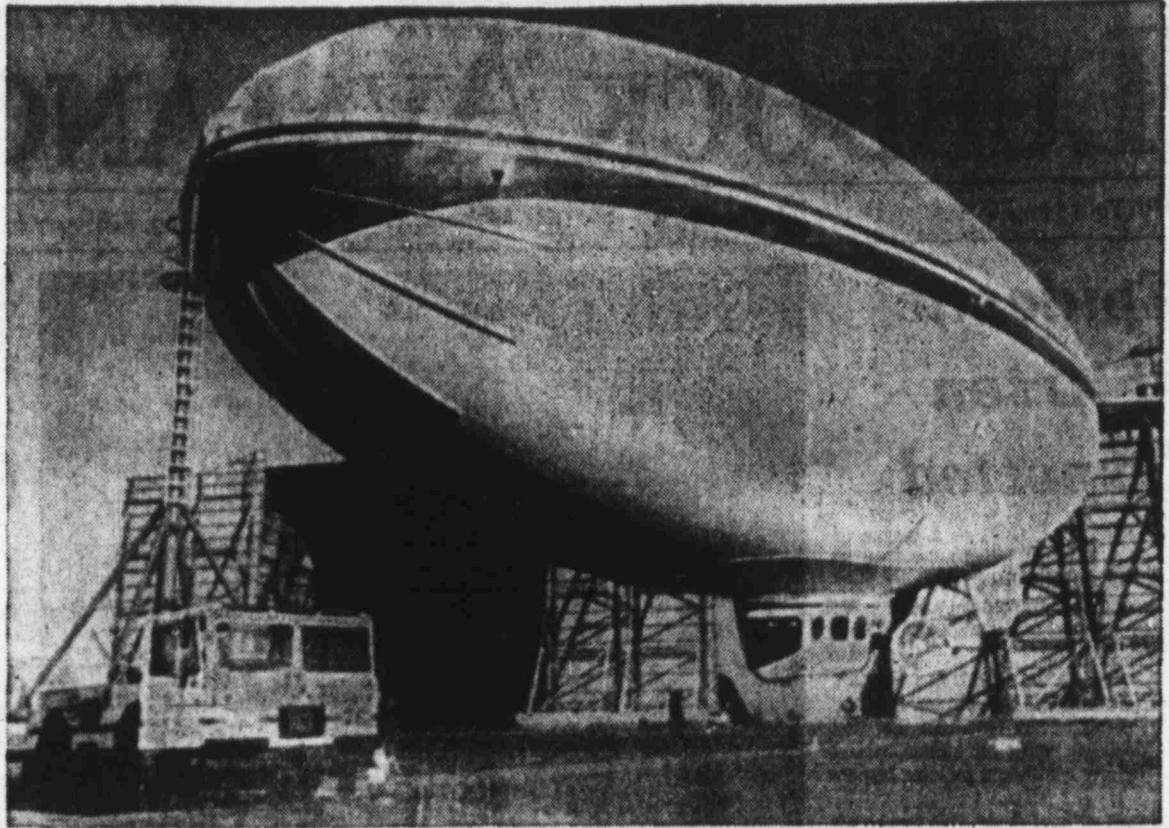

State District Judge Troy Williams also ruled Zavala County Judge Jose Angel Gutierrez, a founder of Raza Unida, was in contempt of court for allowing one of the contested winners to participate in a Jan. 8 commissioner's court meeting in violation of a court order.

The judge found the new commissioner, Alejandro Perez, and his attorney in contempt of court in connection with the meeting.

The three will be sentenced Wednesday.

Zavala County is the only Texas county controlled by Raza Unida, a nine-year-old political party composed predominantly of Mexican-Americans.

After the Nov. 7 election, Perez was de-

Tech Students Receive Harris Scholarships

Jane D. Ketcham and Sue Ellen Williams, both museum science students at Texas Tech University, are the first to receive $200 scholarships given in memory of Kevin Harris.

Harris, a museum science student at Texas Tech last year, died July 11 following brain surgery. His family and friends established the scholarship named in his memory.

He was curatorial assistant at the Lubbock Lake Site Project and was also involved with the Museum Experience Project.

His parents, who were instrumental in the establishment of the scholarship, are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Harris, formerly of Chittanooga, N.Y., and now of Greensboro, N.C. Also participating were his brother, Dana, Rochester, N.Y., and sister, Linda, Chittanooga.

Harris was a graduate of Cornell University and was working on his master's degree in museum science at The Museum of Science and Industry, New York. He had attended the Rochester, N.Y., Museum of Science and Industry.

Scholarship recipient Jane Ketcham is a first year museum science student. She holds a bachelor's degree in history and anthropology from the University of Washington. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ferris F. Ketcham of Seattle.

Miss Williams is a second year student. She earned a bachelor's degree in anthropology at Texas Tech. Her mother, Janet Williams, lives in Fort Worth.

McCrory Now Lives Under New Identity

DALLAS (AP) — After David McCrory testified against his former boss in the murder-for-hire trial of millionaire Cullen Davis, federal authorities hustled him into hiding with a new life and a new identity.

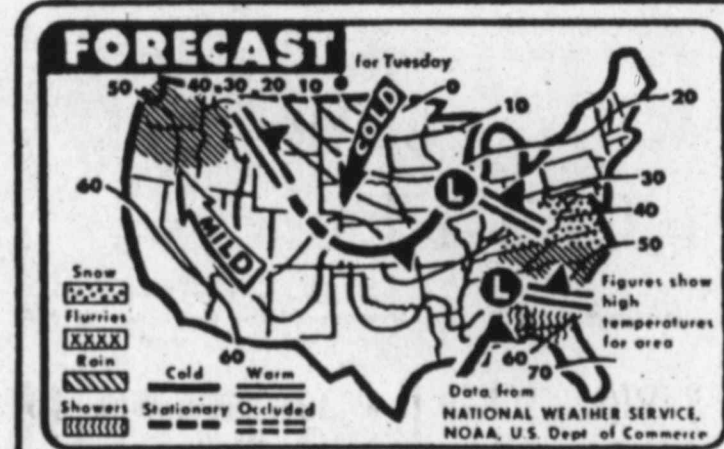

"The price has been too damned high," McCrory told the Dallas Times-Herald in a telephone interview arranged through federal authorities.

"I'm looking over my shoulder constantly," McCrory said. He said he checks under the hood of his car every time he gets into it, even for short trips to the grocery store.

McCrory told the FBI last summer that Davis had asked him to hire a hit man to kill the judge overseeing the millionaire industrialist's bitter divorce. He said Davis had a list of about 15 people he wanted killed.

The FBI wired McCrory for sound and recorded his conversations with Davis, who was arrested on a murder solicitation charge after a rendezvous in Fort Worth.

WEATHER FORECAST — Precipitation is expected for a large area east of the Mississippi with showers in Florida and Georgia, rain in the Carolinas and eastern Tennessee changing to snow in the Virginias and eastern Kentucky for Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service. ANCIENT CHURCH FOUND
ROME (AP) — Archeologists announced Monday they have discovered a 4th-century Christian basilica at Ostia, the first such church found in what was a booming port city in ancient Roman times. Chief archeologist Roberto Giordani said the 140-by-46-foot church, uncovered in an area 13 miles west of Rome, served mainly as a cemetery for early Christians. For centuries clandestine diggers had looted the basilica, Giordani said. "They only left the walls of the building and a very important object, a beautifully carved marble table which apparently served as the main altar of the church," he said.

AN EDITORIAL:

Kids No Match For Cigarettes

THE UPDATED surgeon general's report on the hazards of the smoking habit may have a considerable impact, but by no means is it the decisive shot in what promises to be a long, drawn-out duel.

Neither The Tobacco Institute, representing five of the six leading cigarette manufacturers, nor HEW Sec. Joseph Califano, an ex-smoker, is about to give ground.

It almost has all the makings of a David and Goliath situation.

Except between Califano, who wants to marshal the resources of the federal government to publicize the consequences of smoking, and the multi-billion tobacco industry, with its political clout, er, clout, it's tough deciding who should be David and who should be Goliath.

PUBLICITY CLEARLY has some effect since an estimated 30 million smokers have become "exes" since the original 1964 report made smoking a public issue.

The prognosis for those who do make a serious effort to quit is encouraging.

Julius Fast's self-help book, "How to Stop Smoking and Lose Weight," one of many on the subject, points out that since nicotine is only minimally addictive physiologically, the one-time smoker stands a much better chance of staying off than does a drug user attempting to kick the habit.

The Tobacco Institute dismisses the 1,200-page wrapup of studies made and statistics compiled during the past 15 years as "more hash than research," and labels Califano as a "reformed sinner" seeking publicity.

Finding stronger evidence of smoking's role not only in heart disease and cancer but in a range of additional ailments such as allergies, pregnancy complications and drug reactions, the new report makes good copy.

BUT IT'S not all bad news. Total and per capita cigarette consumption shows a decline. Proportionately, so does the smoking population.

Currently, smokers represent an estimated 33 percent of the adult U.S. population, as against more than 40 percent 15 years ago. The drop has been most pronounced among men, down to 37.5 percent from a 1965 estimate of 51 percent.

The decline among adults has, however, been offset by a sharp increase in teenage smokers, particularly girls. The number of smokers under age 20 is put at some 6 million and, says Califano, 100,000 of these are under age 13. By his estimate, 4,000 children start smoking every day. Which focuses on a key point of the controversy: the proselytizing efforts of the industry.

Three-fourths of smokers acquire the habit before age 21. And it is at this market that the half-billion dollars in tobacco advertising is targeted. It is not the mature smoker who is meant to be impressed by virile male and glamorous female images, but the impressionable young, seeking instant access to supposed pleasures and prerogatives of adulthood.

AN EDITORIAL:

Built On Infirm Foundation

IT CANNOT have escaped the attention of many who have lived through any significant portion of the period that catchy slogans, or would-be catchy slogans, have become almost as predictable a feature of the 20th Century presidency as the inaugural ceremony itself.

President Carter, not an exception just a bit slow in the delivery, now has come up with his own contribution to the genre.

His "New Foundation," tossed at us in the State of the Union message marking the midway point of his term, joins a lengthy list of political catchwords destined for the most part not to go down as bywords in history.

QUICK NOW (and no fair reference checking), which presidential administration brought us the "New Federalism?" How about the "New Prosperity?" Okay, then, "New Directions?" Just one more, an easy one, the "New Frontier?"

The most prolific slogan coiner was Richard Nixon, who tried out the first three of those mentioned in the above quick quiz, all three surviving in the public consciousness scarcely longer than the speeches in which they were delivered.

Of contemporary chief executives, only

Dwight Eisenhower and Gerald Ford did not adopt some slogan for their administrations—well, unless you want to stretch the point considerably to include Mr. Ford's tepid "Whip Inflation Now (WIN)."

But only Franklin D. Roosevelt's "New Deal" and just possibly John F. Kennedy's "New Frontier" give indications of having much staying power.

FDR'S FOR its association with a true watershed in American history and a vast body of enduring social legislation. And JFK's for its evocation of a presidency that made up in color and drama for what it lacked in lasting accomplishments.

At least one is probably best forgotten altogether, the reality of Lyndon Johnson's ambitious "Great Society" having fallen far short of the goal—and its most notable mementoes being a disastrous war and, apparently, a nonstop inflation.

In an atypical display of presidential modesty and honesty, Jimmy Carter foresees nothing extraordinary for his own contribution. Said he:

"I doubt if it will survive."
This is one case where, unquestionably, he has history on his side.

ANDREW TULLY:

'Disdain For Public; Disrespect For Law'

WASHINGTON—It's a catchy title: "Harvard Hates America." My review copy of the book arrived last October and I made a mental note to say something about it in print some day.

So much for mental notes. But perhaps late is still better than never.

The thought was prompted by a piece in The New York Times by the book's author, John LeBoutillier, which seems particularly timely against the background of an America that is in bad shape morally as well as economically and whose leaders in and out of government are doing very little leading.

LeBoutillier is a 1976 Magna Cum Laude graduate of Harvard College, and is now in his second year of Harvard Business School.

I enjoyed his book, but I couldn't help wondering whether he was just another hustler, conservative division, a rightist owned by Big Biz.

BUT IN THE TIMES, LeBoutillier takes a big stick to private, corporate leadership. He notes that the Westinghouse Electric Corp. pleaded guilty to the bribery of an Egyptian official in return for millions of dollars worth of contracts.

The incident, he writes, "represents two serious flaws in contemporary American leadership: an elitist disdain for the public, and an amoral disrespect for the law."

His judgment is based on his experience at Harvard, although he sees the flaws elsewhere. But Harvard indisputably is, as he puts it, "a symbol for leaders in America."

So the author is justified in using Harvard as an example of the roots of decay.

HE WRITES that during a class discussion in his sophomore year as an undergraduate, the instructor told his students: "Socialism is coming. It is inevitable. You can't stop it. At last we will be able to run the country the right way."

Writes LeBoutillier:
"When I inquired about the 'we' the instructor smiled. He said, 'The educated elite will run the government because we are better equipped, better able to determine the states' priorities."

Then in graduate school, his class was confronted with a business problem that involved conforming with state-regulated building codes.

He goes on:

"SOME QUICK mathematical figuring indicated that the requirements would cost $25,000. This would mean decreased profits...a member of the class...explained how much simpler and cost effective it would be to pay the inspector a $10,000 bribe thereby preserving at least $15,000 in profit."

When LeBoutillier dissented, he was greeted with snickers, and a patronizing lecture from the instructor:

"Obviously you haven't been out in the real world because if you had you'd know that if our competitors do it then we have to do it." Some "elitist" school. And some "business-owned" conservative.

For in his Times piece, LeBoutillier goes on to condemn a widespread notion of "inbred superiority and an easy acceptance of law-breaking to solve business problems."

HE CALLS "this lack of morality among America's leaders indicative of a larger trend." And the young man is right.

He writes of corporations that "knowingly produce and market unsafe products, of union leaders robbing their members' pension funds. He writes of 'publicly elected officials voting themselves huge pay increases, then disguising that vote to escape the wrath of a thrift-minded electorate."

Ordinarily, it's presumptuous to speak of morality because none of us is named God. But lack of that virtue in government offices and board rooms is one of the causes of the Republic's decay, especially its plunge into the black hole of galloping inflation.

Read "Harvard Hates America," my friends. It'll make you sore—and anger is the working stiff's only weapon against the elitists.

'They're Not Scientific--They're Just A Lot Of Funny Coincidences'

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Billing And Wooing

EVANS

WASHINGTON—When the AFL-CIO's top brass hosted a fund-raising dinner for a non-liberal member of the Senate Republican leadership, it was giving notice to the political world:

Any Republican who backs us on the things we really care about will get our help, no matter how conservative he may be otherwise.

The $500-a-plate dinner was held Jan. 25 for Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon at the Washington home of AFL-CIO staffer Victor Kamber. The dinner chairman was Robert George, head of the building trades unions. Sharing top billing at the dinner with Packwood was Lane Kirkland, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer and possible successor to George Meany as president.

Far from associating with such labor notables in the past, middle-roader Packwood never before has enjoyed AFL-CIO endorsement.

Newly elected chairman of the Senate Republican conference, Packwood does not have the kind of record that ordinarily wins labor backing. His record on issues selected by the AFL-CIO is only 48 percent favorable. But Packwood sides with labor on what it cares most about.

He backed both the labor law revision and the bill to legalize common situs picketing—two measures stopped in the last Congress thanks to massive Republican opposition. Kirkland, a close friend of Packwood, is telling Republicans, in effect, that they need not back every liberal social welfare measure to get labor's blessing.

DONALD F. GRAFF:

Hope For The Pope

JOHN PAUL II is a pope of many talents, not least of which is a facility for languages.

In addition to his native Polish, he is fluent in Latin, Italian, English, French and German and sufficiently at home in Russian to take on Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in one-on-one conversation.

Recently, he undertook a crash course in yet another tongue—Spanish—in preparation for his visit to Latin America.

The effort would be amply justified if only because almost half of the world's some 700 million Roman Catholic communicants are inhabitants of the score of nations of Spanish, French and Portuguese colonial origin sprawling across the Caribbean islands, Central America and the entire South American continent.

But of even greater import at the moment, Latin America is the arena for a confrontation over human, political and economic rights in which the regional church is deeply involved.

FOR SUCH A traditionally conservative institution, the last decade has been a heady experience for the Latin church.

Priests, nuns and important figures in the religious hierarchy have become secular activists, speaking out against oppressive regimes in a number of countries and supporting—in some cases leading—popular movements for human rights and social reform.

For their efforts, they have been harassed by authorities, imprisoned and occasionally killed.

Not all of the Latin clergy has taken to the barricades, however. A traditionalist element is strongly opposed to the activists and is seeking to turn the church away from social consciousness and back to its familiar theological preoccupations.

THESE ISSUES are really "the" issue of the conference of Latin American bishops at Puebla, Mexico, continuing through Feb. 13, the reason for Pope John Paul's first pontifical visit outside Italy.

The theme of the Puebla conference, with the agenda determined by conservatives, is evangelism—the winning of souls, rather than the improvement of the conditions of life in one of the world's most poverty-stricken and oppressed regions.

It also provides a guideline as to how this pope will address the problems not only of Latin America but the entire underdeveloped world and the less-advantaged portions of the populations of the affluent nations.

THE FORMER Cardinal Wojtyla has the reputation of a warm-hearted, accessible man of the people. He has had ample experience with repressive secular authority in his native Poland.

He is known to be a traditionalist on doctrine, but how this may affect his pontificate's policies on many issues is still to be seen.

The Puebla conference is thus not only a test for the Latin American church but for the pope. And it will test his talents not only in linguistics but in other fields—notably diplomacy and human relations.

THAT PHILOSOPHY is rejected by the United Auto Workers and other more liberal unions who demand broad liberal voting records on all issues, not just narrow union questions.

It is also uncongenial to some AFL-CIO operatives who want to support Portland's liberal Democratic Mayor Neil Goldschmidt against Packwood's third-term bid next year.

Nevertheless, the Republican is likely to get the AFL-CIO endorsement.

A footnote: Packwood may need all the labor help he gets. The right to life lobby has targeted him for defeat because of his pro-abortion stance. Thus, the Oregon race will measure the relative political clout of big labor and the anti-abortionists.

RONALD REAGAN, front-running Republican presidential prospect for 1980, has decided to keep his campaign as far as possible from the Washington establishment by making Los Angeles his campaign headquarters.

Reagan's surprising intention to avoid the capital is a tribute of sorts to Jimmy Carter's anti-Washington campaign for the Democratic nomination in 1976, whose headquarters were kept in Atlanta.

But Los Angeles entails more problems than Atlanta. The three-hour time change between West and East coasts means significant political news made on the West Coast in the evening often never gets published in the East's big morning newspapers and is stale for later editions.

Nevertheless, Reagan believes there is a net gain from running for President as an "outsider. His theory: voters are even more disillusioned with Washington politics and politicians today than they were four years ago.

THE SUCCESSION of big labor's defeats in the last Congress continued in the new one when the House Democratic caucus spurned the wishes of union lobbyists and elected conservative Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma to the House Budget Committee.

Jones had been picked by Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, as one of his committee's representatives on the budget group. But organized labor, still bitter over Jones' leadership in pushing a conservative-oriented tax bill through the House last year, wanted a more liberal member on the budget group. Thanks to labor muscle, Jones was rejected by the steering committee.

That was thought to be the end of it, particularly with Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill supporting the steering committee decision. But Ullman and Jones went to work; the full caucus reversed the decision and put Jones on the budget unit. That not only insures a more tight-fisted approach on the Budget Committee but helps cement the Ullman-Jones partnership, which meant big trouble on tax questions for Carter last year.

THE ELECTION Dec. 6 of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California as chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission suggests he may be moving into the oil decontrol camp, probably in opposition to President Carter.

Brown has been hinting at support for federal deregulation of the oil industry. More substance was given those hints when Brown was pushed for chairman at the commission's meeting in Phoenix by then-Gov. (now U.S. senator) David Boren of Oklahoma, a staunch advocate of oil decontrol and sharp critic of Carter's energy policy.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Caught In The Act

PICTURE, IF YOU will, the spectacle of a little old granny trying to sneak a peek at a naughty girlie magazine without getting caught by the granddaughters.

It has come to that.

I didn't make it, either.

Actually, Gallery isn't one of the REAL naughty ones. Publishers send me plenty of those, hoping, I guess, to spark some kind of printed response. Those wind up immediately in the trash. (Okay, maybe after a few furtive glances, purely in the interests of research.)

This one arrived in a "brown paper wrapper" (it's true) and, while it had the usual assortment of nekkid women, it wasn't what you'd call pornographic. "Sophomoric" would be more like it.

BUT IT DID have an article that caught my eye, putting me in the same class with those men who say they "read" Playboy. This was an expose on all the man-made junk that's still orbiting around in space, and what the chances are of one crashing down on our heads.

We had a narrow escape back there in December, 1977, when a Russian satellite fell into rural Canada. Just one more orbit, the article says, and it might have landed on New York City at the peak of the morning rush hour.

It's a miracle we haven't had a real tragedy because, by actual count, more than 1,200 satellite "payloads" and nearly 5,000 pieces of mechanical garbage have already fallen back to earth.

Most have burned up on re-entry, but some of the bigger chunks made it through the atmosphere. So far, the only fatality has been a cow in Cuba.

AND NOW, with our own Skylab losing altitude and threatening to land—somewhere—any day now, I decided to find out if Chicken Little was right all along.

Well, as luck would have it, my timing was off. When I started reading, all three granddaughters—plus two school friends and the dog—were whooping it up in another part of the house.

And I was so engrossed in charges that NASA knew Skylab was in trouble months before it did anything about it, I failed to notice the kids were back.

This is hard to believe because five girls (six, if you count the dog) never, ever, do anything quietly.

So, when I came to "continued on page 106," I casually leafed past a full-color layout of undressed damsels cavorting in the woods.

AND SET off a blast of squeals the likes of which my eardrums will never forget.

"Let us see! Wow-woeee! They're NAKED! Turn back; let us see!"

"No way," says I firmly, closing the magazine.

"Oh, please, please, please!" (Hysterical giggles from both the 8-year-olds, the 6-year-olds, and even one 3-year-old. We don't call her "go-along-Gillian" for nothing.)

When I refused, they turned on the big guns. Anguished wails and blushing pleas for just one look at the page where "they show EVERYTHING!"

"After all, you know," smirked Amanda.

"We're all women!" (She's 8.)

GIVE ME credit. I stared her down with a straight face.

They finally gave up and clattered down to the basement playroom, from which more suspicious snickers echoed up the stairs. Leaving me in a state of shock, trying to figure what triggered the explosive reaction.

It's not as if they'd never seen a picture of a nude before; there are art books all over the house. And besides, their mother is a firm believer in early briefings on these things. She's already covered the subject of basic s-e-x in both flavors, male and female.

It's not as if we run a prudish ship around here, either. Many a serious sand-box problem has been solved in the bathroom, with one or other of the moppets perched on the washbasin and Granny in the suds.

I NEVER DID dredge up an answer for the hysterical shrieks. But I did find out what they were up to in the basement.

With what I have to admit was a pretty good imitation of a burlesque strut (wherever do they learn these things???) in they sashayed, singing and giggling—and jiggling.

Yep, jiggling, as in the TV girlie shows. All five little T-shirts were stuffed with tennis balls that turned the ladies into junior-grade Dolly Partons.

That's when I lost my cool. I laughed.

But then I began to wonder. Up until now I have tended to go along with the psychologists who say the "art" magazines never influenced anybody. Yet here were five little (pre-almost-anything) girls obviously unstrung.

I'm still wondering—and looking over my shoulder.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

YEARS AGO when I worked as a reporter in New York City, one assignment called for writing of a brief bit about a capital criminal sentenced to die in the electric chair.

The name, the date, even the crime is now forgotten. What comes back to mind only is the fact that the man ordered for his final meal a platter of sauteed mushrooms which he theretofore had been afraid to try.

No Big League baseball umpire has ever been convicted of cheating. That's some record. A phony umpire in cabots with the betting boys could probably make a sizable sum of dirty dough. But it has never been known to happen. How do your bankers, brokers, politicians, et al., stack up against those umpires over the years? None too well, what?

That mixed drink long known as the cocktail did not originate as the happy discovery of some zippy little taste test. In all its variations was concocted simply to hide the bite of bad booze. It has been around a long time, true. But it really got its push during Prohibition when much liquor was not only quicker but sicker. Cocktail signified camouflage.

One of the things Thomas A. Edison had in mind when he invented the electric light bulb was the possibility that it might make sleep obsolete. He hoped for that. Sleep, he thought, was a stupid waste of time. He didn't need much, and he didn't see why anybody else should need much.

Human Rights Campaigner Named By Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—The head of the "provisional government" proclaimed Monday by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is a soft-spoken, 70-year-old engineer and human rights campaigner with a reputation as a skillful trouble-shooter in Iranian politics.

Mehdi Bazargan—described by one local newspaper as "so clean that no adjective can describe him"—is a veteran of anti-shah campaigns and is viewed as a devout Moslem by the nation's religious activists.

Western diplomats, who had feared a more radical choice as prime minister, consider him moderate on most political questions and believe he will lend a professional tone to Khomeini's government if it ever comes to power.

He has attracted attention in the past year as head of the unofficial Iranian Human Rights Committee, exposing alleged rights violations by the agents of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's government.

Bazargan, a balding, white-garbed former professor, comes from the same political background as the provisional government's chief opponent—Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar. Both served in the 1951-53 socialist government of Mohammad Mossadegh, which briefly forced the shah into exile before being overthrown itself in a military coup that many say was engineered by Washington.

Bakhtiar was undersecretary of labor under Mossadegh, and Bazargan headed the national oil industry.

Both men went into opposition politics after Mossadegh's defeat and were jailed for their activities. But while Bakhtiar changed camps last month and accepted the shah's invitation to become prime minister, Bazargan remained firmly in the Khomeini camp opposing the shah.

As Khomeini's special envoy, Bazargan was the key figure in getting striking oil workers last month to agree to produce enough petroleum for domestic needs. He toured oilfields and lectured at mosques and political rallies, carrying Khomeini's orders to the oilmen and negotiating with the government's oil monopoly.

Bazargan earned a thermodynamics engineering degree from the University of Paris at a time when study abroad was a rare thing for a young Iranian. He returned to his homeland and taught at Tehran University, beginning in 1942. He won a reputation as one of Iran's best mathematicians and was awarded the chair of thermodynamics at the university's technical college.

After World War II, he became increasingly involved in politics and was a close ally of Mossadegh. When he came to power, the leftist general stripped the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. of its assets in Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan Province and sent Bazargan to head oil operations there.

An anecdote from that period purports to show Bazargan's Islamic abhorrence of alcohol. He supposedly was told by associates there was no further use for hundreds of cases of beer left behind by British oil workers in Khuzestan.

Asked whether the state oil firm should sell off the beer, Bazargan said, "We are here to sell oil and not beer. Dump the cases into the Shatt (an estuary off the Persian Gulf)."

After Mossadegh's ouster, Bazargan formed the opposition Liberation Movement with the participation of the Moslem religious leader Ayatollah Mahmood Taleghani of Tehran.

The Liberation Movement and Bakhtiar's Iran Party were both affiliated with the National Front, the umbrella opposition group that is now a close Khomeini ally.

For his political activities, Bazargan was put in jail, including one five-year term beginning in 1962, and sent into exile. In the late 1960s he was barred from ever teaching again.

Last year he was arrested and kept in custody for 10 days by the military government that preceded Bakhtiar in power.

Bazargan has also been in the private heating business and has written several books on modern civilization and Islam. He speaks English and French.

Don Louie Warren Trial Gets Underway

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A new trial for Don Louie Warren, convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death more than three years ago, began Monday in 140th District Court with Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford prosecuting.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled last summer that evidence in the case did not support the death penalty.

Warren, 29, was found guilty of shooting 37-year-old Vic Tucker during a Jan. 4, 1975, burglary at the Tucker home at 6203 W. 19th St.

Most of Monday was taken up by jury selection and testimony on basic facts by police officers who went to the death scene.

If Warren is found guilty again, the jury will have to consider the question of whether or not his action was deliberate and committed without provocation and if he presents a continuing violent threat to society.

Appellate Judge John Onion wrote in ordering the case retried that the shooting "was not a calculated act." Warren testified in the first trial in October 1975 that neither he nor a companion was carrying a gun when they broke into the home. He said he put a pistol he found there into his belt, planning to sell it, and that Tucker was killed after the man came in and threatened to kill the intruders.

In other court action Monday, 18-year-old Valentino Robles of 2909 Baylor St. went on trial for murder in the May 26, 1978, shooting death of a 26-year-old Lubbock man in a nightclub parking lot.

Robles is accused of shooting Abdon Rangel Jr. in the back and head behind a club at 1708 4th St.

He is being tried in 99th District Court.

Throckmorton died at 11:45 a.m. Sunday at his home. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy ruled the death due to natural causes.

Throckmorton was a native of Culey, Okla. He entered the restaurant business as a young man and operated the Skyline Restaurant at the old Lubbock Airport Terminal. He moved here from Tulsa, Okla., in 1951. He married the former Maxine Smith in 1929. She died in 1966. He was a member of Asbury United Methodist Church and the Yellowhouse Masonic Lodge, the Lubbock Scottish Rite Consistory and the Kiva Shrine Temple.

Survivors include one son, Clark, of Houston; one daughter, Wanda Lee Norman also of Houston; one sister, Winifred of Lubbock; two grandchildren and two great-grandsons.

Laurie K. Walker

Services for Laurie K. Walker, 24, of 2608 43rd St. will be at 2 p.m. today in Redeemer Lutheran Church with the Rev. Paul T. Rueckwald, associate pastor, officiating and the Rev. James Hanner, pastor, assisting.

Burial will follow at Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

Miss Walker died Saturday at Methodist Hospital after suffering a heart attack.

A graduate of Monterey High School, Miss Walker attended Texas Tech University before graduating from the Methodist Hospital School of Medicine Technicians.

She was employed by a local physician and was a member of the Redeemer Lutheran Church.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Brian M. Walker of 2608 43rd St., have suggested memorials to the American Diabetes Association, in care of the local chapter, Box 685, Lubbock, 79408.

Other survivors include three sisters, Mrs. Zachary (Debbie) Hyatt, April M. Walker and Melinda D. Walker, all of Lubbock; a brother, Brian R. Walker of Lubbock; and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard C. Witt of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker of Houghton Lake, Mich.

Palbearers will be C.C. Hyatt, Zachary Hyatt, Dewayne Maudlin, Jon Coleman, Kelton Brown and Jerry Clark.

Ralph Williamson

Services for Ralph J. Williamson, 68, of 1202 Broadway are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

Williamson was found dead about 11 a.m. Monday at his home. Justice of the Peace Charles Smith ruled the death was of natural causes.

Williamson, a retired plumber, was born in Coffeyville, Kan., and had lived in Lubbock since 1940. He was a member of St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church.

Survivors include a son, Bill of Shallowater; two sisters, Ruth Johnson of Lubbock and Clara Cooper of Oklahoma City, Okla.; and two grandchildren.

John Hamp Wood

SNYDER (Special) — Services for John Hamp Wood, 86, of Hermleigh will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel here with the Rev. R. Virgil Mott, pastor of Bethel Baptist Church here, officiating.

Burial will be in Camp Springs Cemetery under the direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Wood died at 7:35 a.m. Sunday in Fisher County Memorial Hospital in Rotan.

The Alabama native was married to Lola Smith Feb. 28, 1914, in Circe, Ark.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Opal Eades of Snyder; a son, Johnny F. of Mesquite; three brothers, Cecil and Carl, both of Snyder, and Otha of McFarland, Calif.; two grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

British Deny Abuse Of IRA Prisoners

LONDON (AP) — Britain has launched a propaganda campaign, largely aimed at the United States, to counter Northern Ireland's Irish Republican Army claims that convicted guerrillas are kept in "stinking hell-holes."

Some 340 IRA men in the Maze prison near Belfast, Northern Ireland, are refusing to wear prison uniforms, do prison work, clean their cells or use lavatories in protest of Britain's March 1, 1976, abolition of the "political prisoner" status for convicted guerrillas.

Visiting British legislators have described the protesters' excrement-fouled cells as "revolting."

The Northern Ireland Office is distributing a four-page broadsheet that stresses the protesters' plight is self-inflicted and notes that 90 of the guerrillas were convicted of murder or attempted murder and more than 100 for offenses related to explosives.

The IRA, an overwhelmingly Catholic movement, is fighting to end British rule and Protestant domination in Northern Ireland and achieve the historic Gaelic dream of a united Ireland.

A NIO spokesman said Monday that 10,000 of the documents have been printed and "we're still printing." He said the sheets have been circulated to all British Information Service bureaus around the world and to newspapers and elected officials in Britain and the United States.

America is the main target because the protest has aroused sympathy among 15 million Irish-Americans and some congressmen.

Prime Minister James Callaghan's government fears rekindled financial support among Irish-Americans — estimated by British Intelligence three years ago at $2 million a year.

The flow dwindled sharply last year following appeals by British and Irish Republican government ministers who said the money was subsidizing death and destruction.

The Maze protesters were dubbed "men on the blanket" when they began refusing to wear anything but blankets three years ago. They stepped up their protest last year.

The protest led at least three U.S. congressmen to visit Northern Ireland to investigate conditions at Maze. One of them, Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., heads an ad hoc committee publicizing the protest in the United States.

The British refused to allow the congressmen into the Maze.

Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., last week reportedly told a New York gathering of Northern Aid, which the British consider an IRA front, that if he becomes chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee "we'll have the first official hearings on human rights in Northern Ireland."

The IRA charges guards beat weakened prisoners, hosed them with scalding water while cleaning cells and used other forms of brutality. The British deny the allegations, but admit three protesters have been hospitalized.

Britain was embarrassed last year when the European Court of Human Rights said it was guilty of torturing IRA suspects in 1971.

Tech Course Focuses On Business Problems

A persistent problem for small business operators is finding reliable, professional counsel when a business problem develops. Now a new program at Texas Tech University can, according to Dean Carl H. Stem of the College of Business Administration, help the small-business man or woman solve virtually any problem.

The program is known as the Small Business Development Center. The Center will make available to business people a wide range of resources, counseling and advice.

"The SBDC will do a lot of diagnostic work to determine what the problem really is, and then send the business person to an expert or the appropriate agency" for assistance, Stem said.

He noted that the center will offer advice and research, and will specialize in areas of management, taxes, accounting, advertising and consumer relations, as well as engineering and law.

As the program expands, other areas of expertise both on and off campus may be incorporated.

SBDC is operating on a limited scale with resources provided by Small Business Administration.

Since its inception the College of Business Administration has been keeping close to problems of area business. For the past nine years the Small Business Institute at Tech has been providing teams of students to assist businesses with a variety of problems.

Currently there are eight SBDC's in the country. Texas is just beginning the program. Eventually there will be centers located at about 40 universities and colleges throughout three regional divisions. Texas Tech will have about 15 centers affiliated with the university, all of which will be working through the Texas Industrial Commission.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am in my early 50s. My wife is 45. Despite our combined yearly income of $45,000, we have been unable to save enough money for our three children's college education. Our only potential hope for doing so is to remortgage our home, which has a current market value of $80,000 and on which we have a 5½ percent mortgage with a $7,000 balance.

I am thinking of getting a new $20,000 mortgage, at 10½ percent. That would give us $13,000 cash, $3,000 of which would be used immediately for college expenses. We would put the other $10,000 in six-month savings certificates at our local bank. Such certificates currently pay 9½ percent interest.

Assuming we can handle the new monthly mortgage payments, is this a sound plan?

A. No. It's dumb. Sorry, but that's the best word I can think of. As far as family financial planning is concerned, you seem to have done everything wrong, to date, and are about to make even bigger mistakes. Let's not belabor the obvious fact that, with your family income, you should have been able to put money aside for the kids' education. What you call a "plan" to give up a 5½ percent mortgage and take out one at 10½ percent shows no "planning" at all. It would cost you many, many more thousands of dollars in interest.

You mention 9½ percent interest being available on six-month savings certificates at one bank. As I put this through the typewriter, it is possible to get as much as 10.36 percent on those certificates. This indicates you simply haven't shopped around. The rates on new six-month certificates change from week to week. But anyone who puts $10,000 — the minimum — into such certificates without getting the highest available rate has no one to blame but himself or herself.

I think you could solve your family's financial problems by regimenting yourselves to an austerity budget. You should be able to squirrel away that $3,000 to meet education costs within three of four months. And, when that crisis is past, you should stay on a tight budget — to put money away for the future.

Try it. You might like it.

Q. I am enclosing the year-end statement I received from a mutual fund. Am I correct that the net worth of this account is the "total shares (280.98) multiplied by the price per share ($3.88)" as shown on the statement? Or would it be the 280.98 shares multiplied by $3.66 — the price of the shares printed in the newspapers on a recent date?

A. It was both — $3.88 a share on the date of your statement and $3.66 a share on the date you checked the newspapers. As I write this, the newspaper mutual fund quotations show it to be $3.75 a share. And it will, no doubt, change again before you read this. Mutual fund price quotations can change every business day. Their ups or downs depend on the rise or fall of the securities in which the fund has invested.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

EXTRAVAGANTLY LACED — Perfect for cold weather sleeping, this softly warm nightgown is made of brushed nylon and generously trimmed with lace. Featuring dolman sleeves, the nightgown has a deep v-neck bodice.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: You've been a friend to waitresses, motel maids, firemen, policemen, newspaper carriers, postmen, and taxi drivers. Now will you please say a good word for us women who are actually your co-workers in a sense?

I am a PBX operator for a newspaper in the Midwest. No one would believe the questions we are asked. I hope your column will help educate some of those folks out there. It would sure improve the quality of our lives.

Kids call to ask who was President in 1936. They also want to know what time the movie starts and what is playing. We are expected to know if there are any more girdles left in "that big department store." People phone and ask for the name of the best dentist in town. Last week I got a call from a woman who asked if I knew of a good doctor who could remove her corns.

If, heaven forbid, the paper should leave something out, we get called every name in the book. If it happens to be Ann Landers, the board lights up like a Christmas tree. We get threats from people who scream, "If the column isn't in tomorrow, we're cancelling our subscription."

When there are hockey games, or football games, or basketball games, they call us and want to know the score. If they hear on TV about a fire in town, they call and ask, "How's the fire coming?" On election night we get hundreds of calls wanting to know, "Who's ahead?"

I'll bet no one would believe we are bothered like this with stuff that has nothing to do with our jobs. So please, Ann Landers, print my letter and do a lot of newspaper telephone operators a big favor. Sincerely yours — Love My Work, But Oh Those People

Dear Love: Here's your letter, along with my sympathy. I go along with almost everything you complained about — but I hope your PBX board continues to light up like a Christmas tree when they leave my column out. Or, if it looks a lot shorter than usual, I hope you get plenty of complaints. Put 'em through to the managing editor and let him sweat with it.

P.S.: I'll bet plenty of papers around the country drop this letter. If YOUR paper prints it, you've got a five-star, straight-arrow staff.

Dear Ann Landers: I am only a 15-year-old girl and I know I'm not an authority on life. But I do try to evaluate things sensibly.

Ann, I've been reading your column every day since I was ten. I know you give a lot of practical advice. I wish more people would listen to you when you suggest counseling. It's the one word that most folks ignore when it's directed at them. People just don't want to believe they need it.

Counseling is not just for "weirdos" or "crazies." It's for everyone who has a problem and having a problem doesn't mean you are nuts. When Ann gives advice, take it. When you ignore it, YOU are the one who is crazy. — Facing Reality

Dear Facing: How right you are when you say most people resent the suggestion that they get counseling — or they think I'm copping out. Very few people have their act together from the cradle to the grave. Almost everyone can profit from a little outside help at some time or another. A fresh eye — or an ear that will listen — can be enormously helpful. Thanks for writing.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can you explain how the new intrauterine devices for birth control work? I am told there is one now that has a little bag of hormones that keeps a woman safe continually. — Mrs. T.E.

These are the so-called "progestone-bearing" IUD's (intrauterine devices). They carry a tiny sac containing the hormone progesterone. After insertion (in the uterus) the hormone is released gradually and continuously through the sac's skin-like membrane.

It is not quite clear just how this prevents pregnancy. Progesterone is the natural hormone produced by the ovaries after ovulation (production and release of an egg). It is felt that the hormone released directly into the uterus makes it unsuited for the implantation of the egg. The hormone may also interfere with actual growth of an implanted egg.

The rationale behind it all is to allow the woman's ovaries to perform normally, as well as to avoid some of the possible undesired effects of the Pill. By acting directly on the uterus there is less interference with the work of other glands.

Another device being studied is the copper IUD, which has a similar effect on the uterus. Disadvantages are the same found with any IUD by some women — irritation, bleeding, infection and pain. The progesterone supply in the IUD you refer to has to be replenished about every 12 months and the IUD has to be removed to do this.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Explain the safeguards people with only one kidney have to take. I had one removed about 12 years ago, when I was 22. I had an infection. I had blood in my urine. I can't tell you how traumatic this was and how it increased my appreciation of life. You don't appreciate something until you lose it. — T.T.

A single kidney is entirely adequate to take care of bodily needs. As long as your remaining kidney is normal and healthy, you should have no more problems than you've had the past 12 years. Problems would arise, of course, if the remaining kidney became damaged in any way. Persons live normal lives with only one, however, and life expectancy is not affected. You do have to be alert to future infections and be treated promptly as they occur.

I am frequently asked about liquid consumption with a single kidney. The lone kidney quickly adjusts and there is no problem in getting plenty of fluid to satisfy thirst and body needs. Few would argue about not missing the water till the well runs dry. If you want to study up on kidneys the booklet, "Your Kidneys: Facts You Need to Know," has a fuller discussion. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

No way to do this. The obstacle is the Dear Dr. Ruble: With so much popularity of jogging, I wondered how doctors really feel about it. I don't know any jogging doctors. — M.M.

You may not know them, but there apparently are quite a few. A recent poll conducted by the American Medical Association answers your question in part. In answer to a question about exercises they engaged in, most doctors said jogging was one. This was followed by tennis and swimming. Only 10 percent listed golf. I suppose this could be interpreted as a sort of endorsement of jogging as a healthful activity.

Dear Dr. Ruble: What do you advise for cradle cap? — J.A.

The scaling of cradle cap is the result of normal activity of oil glands of the skin, which are quite active in an infant. Any of the approved baby oils will loosen the scales. They can then be gently combed out.

While harmless in itself, cradle cap does require increased attention to hygiene. Babies' oil glands are more active in some than in others. So more frequent shampooing may be required to discourage the scaling. In very stubborn cases a doctor can suggest more effective ointments to dissolve the scales.

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for the booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have sheer curtain panels made of polyester fabric, and after washing them they came out very wrinkled. I tried steam ironing them but to no avail. I would appreciate it if you could help me out as the curtains are still in very good condition. — Mrs. Elina Ishihara

We have heard from many of our readers on this same subject with the same problem. Wrinkles! Seems the fabric is the culprit as wrinkling occurs after laundering not only in sheer curtains, but in blouses, etc., made of polyester.

Our friends at the Soap and Detergent Association suggest that the use of a dryer which has a cool down period at the end of the cycle would help.

Set the dryer for about 15-20 minutes and allow the curtains to remain in the dryer during the cool down period as this relaxes the fibers and removes the wrinkles. Be sure to remove the curtains immediately and smooth out on a flat surface. Don't leave them in a crumpled ball until they can be hung.

If the wrinkles have already set on curtains or other items made of polyester, try re-washing them following the above directions. They should be wrinkle-free.

Don't you wish sometimes there was some magic formula to remove those that are (or inevitably will be) on one's face? Love you! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I found myself constantly turning on the hot water faucet in the kitchen sink to rinse things during the day when cold water would do just as well.

To solve this I put a piece of red tape on the cold water faucet. This attracts my attention to it when reaching to turn the water on.

Saves a lot of hot water (money) during the day. — Olga Dalidchik

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep pans with non-stick finishes from being scratched when stacked, I cut a circle from a plastic meat tray and put it in the bottom of each pan.

Pieces of these trays also make good throwaway spoon rests, (but don't get them close to a burner on the stove). In fact, there are so many uses for these trays I find myself saving each one I get.

I use them in my hanging shoe holder so the soles, which might have bits of grit from the driveway, won't touch the shelves in the bag.

One tray becomes a sewing tray while watching TV. It holds my thread, scissors, etc., and I can stick needles and pins in the edges so they won't fall on the floor.

There are many more uses too numerous to mention, but you get the idea. — Mrs. Haven

I do! I do! How about pet dishes, under flower pots, packing material. The list really is almost endless. Just remember to save the trays. You'll come up with plenty of your own ideas for using them. — Heloise

Teachers Learn Four Food Groups
In Nutrition Education Workshop

Children in Lubbock elementary schools, depending on grade level, will soon be learning the four basic food groups and what to eat from them for balanced meals.

Better nutrition for Lubbock school children is the goal of the Lubbock Independent School District's nutrition education workshops for elementary teachers and interested parents, sponsored by the school system and the National Dairy Council.

The workshops, designed to give teachers and interested parents the techniques and information they need to provide nutrition education to the school children, have been coordinated by Mrs. Eva Samples, elementary science consultant; Mrs. Donna Carruthers, nutrition supervisor of the cafeteria department of the school district and Mrs. Patricia Smith, nutrition consultant for the National Dairy Council.

According to Mrs. Carruthers, children at the lower levels will be taught food identification through a sequence; the playing of games will be used as an learning tool to make the lessons more interesting. The upper grades will learn how to eat from all the food groups and be taught about nutrition background and nutrients.

The first workshop for teachers and parents is slated for today in Dupree Elementary School, and will be for teachers and parents from Dupree, Mahon, Guadalupe and Wilson Elementary Schools. "The program for teachers will continue through March 7, offering teaching aids, posters, games and other entertaining ways to help children learn the four basic food groups and other facts about basic nutrition," Mrs. Carruthers said.

Persons attending the workshops will have a choice between sections given by Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Carruthers. The one given by Mrs. Smith will mostly focus on kindergarten, second and fifth grades.

As the program continues, "before" and "after" tests will be given to the children to see how the program has helped them in understanding the food groups and how they are used in a diet pattern.

South won the spade lead with his jack. Then he led his king of diamonds. East was unkind enough to let the king hold.

At this stage of the proceedings South stopped to think. It was too late for thinking to help. He had one diamond trick in and that was all the diamond tricks he could get. He went after the clubs and if they had broken 3-3, he would still have made his contract. But clubs were 4-2 and South wound up one trick short and one rubber late.

If South had stopped to think and to Count, his winners at trick one he would have gone right up with his ace of spades. This would have wasted the free finesse given him by the opening lead. But the king of spades would have been a sure entry to dummy and South could have been sure of two spades, one heart, five diamonds and two clubs for a total of 10 easy sure tricks.

"I drove 240 miles

"and every mile was worth it!"

Mrs. Charles Henley's True Story

Diet pills, home exercise machines, bike riding—I'd tried everything I'd ever heard about to lose weight, but I still looked like I was about to have twins.

Not that I was expecting, it's just that I'd always had a problem with weight around my middle, and nothing seemed to help.

I heard about Pat Walker's from a friend.

and even though it meant driving 80 miles round trip to the salon closest to my country home in Waller, I decided to do it. Two or three times a week I made the trip to have a treatment on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit, and to talk with my counselors about my progress.

I didn't even have to change out of my regular clothes, since the unit does all the work.

"You simply relax in a nice, private treatment room, and enjoy it."

When I started going to Pat Walker's, I weighed 150 pounds, and wore a size 15. Today, I weigh 111 pounds and wear a size 5. My waist measurement has gone from 32½ to 25—not bad for a 42-year-old!

My husband and my son are so pleased, and that's very important to me. Although I love being a country housewife, and doing my own gardening and canning, I do want to look good—for myself and my family.

A&M Sets Farm Credit School

COLLEGE STATION (Special)—A special session on making agricultural loans will be one of the highlights of the 27th Farm and Ranch Credit School for Commercial Bankers Monday and Tuesday at Texas A&M University's Rudder Center.

Since different agricultural enterprises require specific analysis and consideration, four major loan areas will be examined at the school, points out Dr. Dick Trimble, the school's general chairman. These are crops and machinery, cow-calf operation, feedlot, and dairy loans. Texas bankers who are experienced in making these types of loans will conduct each of the sessions.

In light of the recent National Farm Summit held at Texas A&M University, a special feature of the school will be a presentation of current policy issues in agriculture, says Trimble, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Dr. Ron Knutson, extension economist in agricultural policy, will act as moderator. Joining Knutson will be a panel of policy analysts providing additional insight into how policy decisions may affect commercial bankers.

The school will be kicked off with a session on examining sources of funds for small agricultural banks. Discussions will include how city banks can assist country banks in providing loan funds and how country banks can acquire additional loan funds in their own area, notes Trimble.

Rounding out the school for commercial bankers will be sessions dealing with crop, livestock and money market outlook information as well as new concept in marketing agricultural products.

The school is planned for bankers by the Agricultural and Rural Affairs Section of the Texas Bankers' Association. It is sponsored by the TBA, Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

In conjunction with the school, an Agricultural Credit Analysis Workshop will begin the afternoon of Wednesday and will continue through Friday morning. The workshop will deal with preparing financial statements, analyzing and reconciling farm records and preparing cash flow projections. Case problems will also be studied and solved, points out Trimble.

Running concurrently with this workshop will be a special three-day commodity hedging session. This session will investigate the mechanics of hedging, hedging decision guides, and what bankers should know about living with a hedged loan.

Trimble invites Texans who are concerned with agricultural financing to attend the credit school and either of the two workshops. For registration information, write to Room 108, Agriculture Building, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas. 77843 or call 713-845-8011.

Cattle Futures Close Lower In Midwest

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 45 to 150 points lower Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange led by February through June at the limit level decline. August was down a like amount early. Sales totaled 28,172 cars. The market reacted after an early gain of 20.

Most contracts were lower from the start on aggressive selling by a cash-connected commission house along with other commission houses and locals. Prices fell to 3 1/2 week lows, more than three cents under recent record highs.

There have been 79 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was off 1 cent at 94 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were off $1 to $1 with the best top $65.50 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $64. Slaughter was 117,000 head. About 15,300 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 130 to 150 lower with most contracts at the daily limit loss. Earlier, all contracts except January tumbled the limit. Sales totaled 2,345 lots.

Prices fell to the lowest in two weeks on spillover pressure from the live cattle pit with easiness in cash cattle and beef touching off aggressive profit-taking and other selling after last week's highs.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $2 with the best top $130 per hundredweight at San Antonio. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to be 1,800 head today.

Hog futures closed unchanged to off 110 led by April on 8,400 cars. The contract was down 125 before stiffening. Distant April briefly gained 55.

Much of the selling spilled over from limit lower cattle pits and there was also pressure from some lower cash hogs despite reduced arrivals. The bitterly cold weather made for scattered support on the scale-down.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 87 1/2 to 88 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up $1 to off $1 with the best top $56 per hundredweight at Peoria. Kill was 288,000 head. About 27,500 head are expected at the major markets today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 75 higher to 50 lower on 5,624 cars. August was up the most after climbing 105 with February off the most following a loss of 125.

The early upturn carried prices to the highest in two months and was prompted by heavy bacon slicings and reduced hog arrivals. Late selling spilled over from limit lower cattle futures.

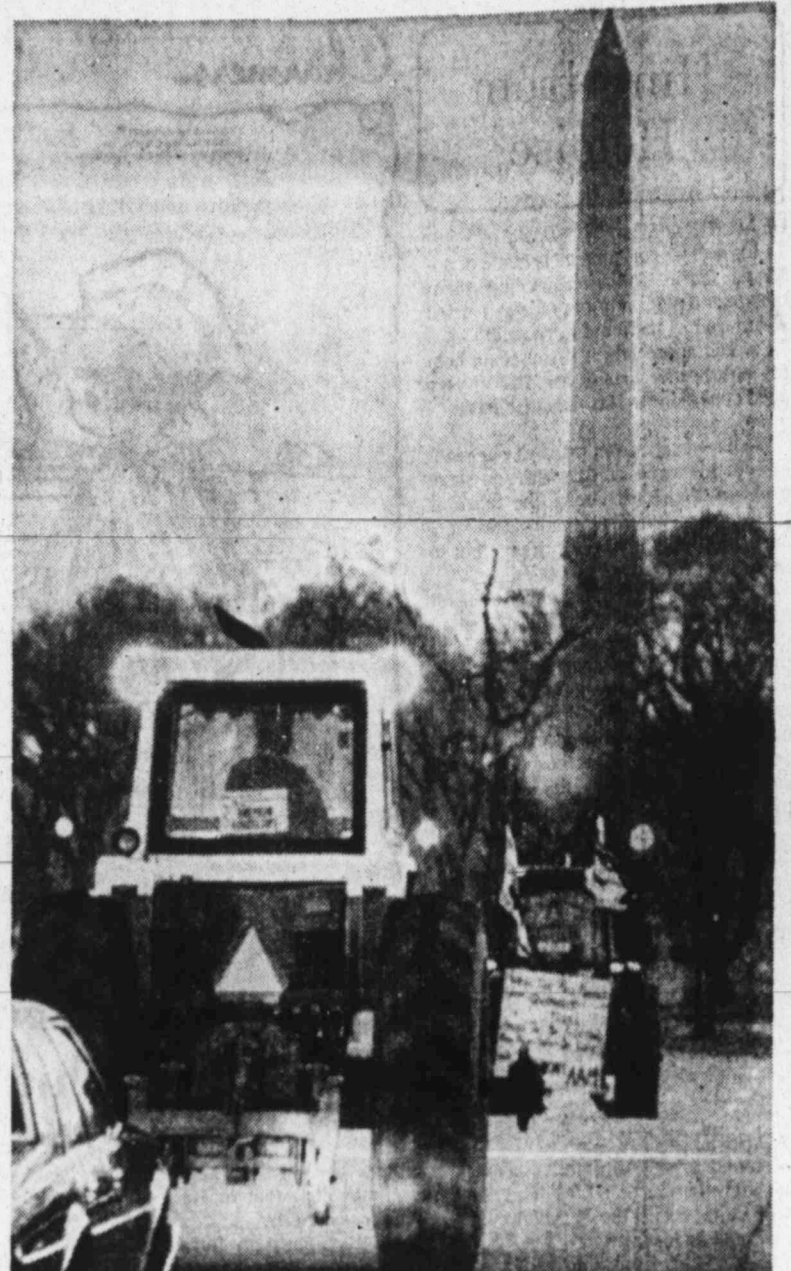

There have been 24 deliveries thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off 1/4 cent at 62 to 64 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Candy Company To Amend Ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beatrice Foods Co. has agreed to follow suggestions from the Better Business Bureau in future advertising for its Candy Candy.

The BBB had questioned advertising which offered toy cars for 12 candy wrappers and "only $1.95."

The company agreed to follow the children's advertising guidelines in future advertisements.

TEXAS FARMERS ARRIVE — A contingent of farmers from Texas, part of a mass of farmers from over the country, move toward the Washington Monument as they arrive in the Capital early Monday. Bacon Processing Plants Fail To Comply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department announced Monday the names of three more processing plants that were found in preliminary tests to be producing bacon containing excessive nitrosamines.

A department report issued in December said nitrosamines formed when bacon is fried at high heat "are considered to be carcinogenic (cancer-causing) since laboratory animals administered these compounds develop cancer."

The American Meat Institute and some other industry groups, along with some members of Congress, had objected to release of the information on grounds it might be misleading to the public.

Bacon from the three plants identified in the latest report was found to exceed maximum nitrosamine levels set by the government.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

POOR CROPS EXCEED EXPECTATIONS: good crops fall short. That old saying in High Plains cotton circles often is far more right than wrong, point out officials of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

And it's now apparent that, true to form, the 1978 crop is turning out better than expected earlier.

Production figures for the 25-county area represented by the PCG are steadily inching toward the 2-million-bale mark, compared with commonly heard pre-harvest estimates of 1.3 million to a little over 1.8 million bales.

BALES CLASSED AND ON HAND at the U. S. Department of Agriculture's cotton classing offices through last Thursday amounted to an areawide total of 1,810,000 bales.

Samples still were being received at the rate of 10,000 to 15,000 a day. Paul Dickson, head of area classing office operations, expects to class "at least another 50,000 and possibly as much as 100,000 more" bales.

The final production figure for the 25 counties will include all but about 10,000 bales (from eastern New Mexico and Scurry County) of the total received by the four classing offices, plus an estimated 50,000 from the four PCG counties that send cotton to classing offices in Memphis and Abilene.

Howard, Martin and Midland counties probably will send a combined total of about 30,000 bales to the Abilene office, and the Memphis office may receive about 20,000 from Motley County, Dickens County, which formerly used the Memphis classing facility, now sends cotton to Lubbock.

PUTTING ALL THESE FIGURES TOGETHER, including the 50,000 to 100,000 samples still expected by Dickson, would bring the 25-county running bale total to 1,900,000 to 1,950,000 bales.

Net compress weights on High Plains cotton normally average 3 to 5 percent heavier than 480 pounds. Using a 4 percent conversion factor would bring the 25-county net weight bale total to 1,976,000 to 2,028,000 bales.

In its final estimate Jan. 11, the USDA pegged the 25-county area at approximately 2,075,000 bales of 480 pounds net. The latest private estimate on the Plains, made early in December by a committee of the Lubbock Cotton Exchange, put production at 1,777,000 bales.

Official county-by-county net weight figures will be released in June or July by the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Mary Tyler Moore Hoping New TV Format Will Succeed

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mary Tyler Moore breezed into her CBS-TV offices from a dance rehearsal, her hair in disarray, wearing a sweatshirt and clinging dance pants and looking terrific.

She is in the midst of preparing 11 new hour-long shows, the first scheduled March 4, from the debris of her musical-variety series which crashed and burned last October.

Mary and producer-husband Grant Tinker pulled the series, suffering dismal ratings, after three shows.

Mary, with new writers, director and producer, hopes to rise, Phoenix-like, from the ashes with a fresh concept, 80 percent sitcom, 20 percent variety.

Like other superstars with career problems, Mary is subject to scrutiny by writers ascribing to her a variety of psychological, physical and emotional quirks in hopes of revealing "the REAL Mary Tyler Moore."

She rattled off a typical beginning: "Mary Tyler Moore, a fixed smile concealing her true feelings, chain-smoked uneasily as she reviewed events of the past year."

Mary, ravenous, pitched into a tuna fish salad and diet cola. She flashed her bright, white smile (not fixed) and smoked only one cigarette.

"There's no REAL me other than what everybody sees," she said. "Attempts to reveal my motives and my private life drive me mad. I'm not that complicated. I'm a comedy actress who likes to sing and dance."

It is Mary's lifelong dream to sing and dance which has brought her to professional grief. A dozen years ago the musical version of "Breakfast at Tiffany's," with Mary starring, bombed on Broadway. Last fall's show failed.

"They are the only painful disappointments," she said. "Otherwise, it's been a remarkable career since I began, the day after I graduated from high school."

"I'll never know if I did the right thing cutting off the variety show. It might have caught on or really sealed my fate. Instead of disliking me and the show, viewers could have hated me and the show."

"But I like facing audiences directly, talking to the camera. I still have my childhood fantasy of singing and dancing. I was brought up on Astaire and Rogers, Kelly and Charisse. That's all I knew."

Mary has been advised that hundreds of women sing and dance. Some attain stardom: Liza Minnelli, Juliet Prowse, Mitzi Gaynor.

But it's a rare woman who becomes America's Sweetheart.

Mary Pickford did so in silent films playing winsome darlings well into her 50s. Mary Tyler Moore became an electronic America's Sweetheart in the 1960s as Laura Petrie in "The Dick Van Dyke Show" and as Mary Richards in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

"But I'm 41!" Mary exclaimed. "How long can I be convincing as the optimistic, naive and vulnerable GIRL next door? I'm not a girl. I'm a woman. It's not an easy image."

Mary has been made aware most American men cherish those qualities in their wives and lovers, mothers and daughters at all ages. Male and female viewers expect to see and love Mary Richards when they tune in Mary Tyler Moore.

Those shining feminine attributes were missing in Mary's variety show. She came on confident, sophisticated and seemingly invulnerable. But "seemingly" only, because Mary was a mass of nerves and insecurities when the show made its debut.

In the revamped series she will play Mary McKinnon, a combination of Laura Petrie and Mary Richards, who stars in a variety show but who will also have a "family" sitcom life offstage.

"We looked for ways in which Mary McKinnon can be made vulnerable even though she is a big star," Mary said. "We found a solution in her TV producer who is an authority figure. She is intimidated by him but also stands up to him."

"We are cognizant of the qualities of sincerity, determination, optimism and vulnerability that made the other characters so popular."

USC Film School Celebrates 50th Anniversary With Party

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The academic world sniffed in 1929 when the University of Southern California offered the country's first college course in the motion picture. "The flickers an art? Preposterous!" the pedants said.

Today, according to the American Film Institute's latest survey, 40,590 students are seeking degrees in film, television and related subjects at 1,513 colleges and universities. A total of 200,000 young Americans are enrolled in the 9,228 courses in those fields.

The USC film school, now called the division of Cinema-Television, is celebrating its 50th anniversary Feb. 9 with a gala dinner at the Century Plaza Hotel. The event is the start of a $15-million drive for a building to replace the ancient bungalows where the school has been located since 1940.

Significantly, co-chairing the dinner are Ted Ashley, Barry Diller, Alan Ladd, Jr. and Sidney Sheinberg, all top bosses of major studios. That testifies to Hollywood's opinion of the USC school.

And no wonder. Graduates include George Lucas ("Star Wars") and his producer Gary Kurtz, John Milius ("The Wind and the Lion"), Randal Kleiser ("Grease"), Hal Barwood and Matt Robbins ("Corvette Summer"), David Wolper (executive producer: "Roots"), Irvin Kershner ("Eyes of Laura Mars"), Curtis Harrington ("Games"), cinematographers William Fraker and Conrad Hall, and many other achievers.

It all started with a course called "Introduction to the Photoplay," originated by USC with the newly founded Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Among the lecturers were D. W. Griffith, Irving Thalberg, Milton Sills, Douglas Fairbanks, Ernst Lubitsch and William de Mille. The latter, brother of Cecil B. de Mille, headed the university's film department for many years.

In 1932, UEC began offering the first cinema bachelor of arts degree in the country. The master's degree came four years later, and the Ph.D. in 1958. George Lucas' first movie, "THX-1138," and last year's "Fraternity Row" originated as campus films. Oscars have been awarded to "The Face of Lincoln" and "The Resurrection of Bronco Billy," shorts made at the university.

With such a record, you can imagine that USC is flooded with applicants seeking a sure route to the Hollywood studios.

"We can accept only one of every ten applicants," says E. Russell McGregor, co-chairman with Morton Zarcoff of the Cinema-Television Division. "We can handle a maximum of 40 students at any time."

What does the school look for in applicants? A high grade point average — "with so many applicants we can settle for 3.7 and strength in other subjects, though we will accept 2.8 or 2.7 in special cases." Films made by applicants are not necessary and in fact can be a drawback, said McGregor.

"We ask to see a portfolio list indicating evidence of creative activity in many fields," he added. "Also, we're interested in extra-curricular interests, say, if a person had bicycled through Bogota. What we don't want are those who are coming to school to prolong their adolescence."

The curriculum is divided into three areas: The history, criticism and aesthetics of film, for which enrollment is usually open; the new television school; and film production, the most popular department.

The young filmmakers learn by doing, starting in their first semester making five films in super-8mm. Later, they move up to 16mm and during the entire course make a total of 10 films. Critics of film schools claim the only real way to learn movie making is on the job in studios. McGregor disagrees.

"You can't teach talent, but the school offers a good arena to try out ideas, to discover what works and what doesn't work."

Film school graduates have long complained that the industry is closed to them after they graduate. Not true of USC students, says McGregor.

"Eighty-five percent of our graduates find work on films — not only in theatrical films which are only 20 per cent of the market, but in other areas as well. We are fortunate in that we are pretty good at what we do. We have the added advantage of proximity to Hollywood and four to five thousand of our alumni."

CBS To Air Horror Film Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Anthony Perkins is no doubt a gentle soul, loves his wife and children, and is kind to animals. But for anyone who saw him as the psychotic killer in "Psycho," one flash of his shy smile is enough to send shivers up the spine.

That makes Perkins a fitting host for the two-hour special on CBS-TV Tuesday night dedicated to the horror film in all its gory glory. Its title — as ungainly as some of the misshapen creatures who star in it — is "The Horror Show: 60 Magical Years of Movie Monsters, Madmen and Other Creatures of the Night."

All the great fiends of filmdom are here: Dracula, Frankenstein's monster, the Mummy, the Werewolf of London. The Invisible Man is visible, and the Phantom of the Opera is heard from. So are the more recent Creature From The Black Lagoon, atomic-age mutants like The Fly, and animals run amok, like The Birds and Willard's rats.

Sixty years of good, unwholesome entertainment — and 60 years of good business at the box-office.

"Legend insists that only a stake driven through the heart can finally kill Dracula," Perkins reminds us at one point. "Actually, the only way to get rid of him entirely is to drive stakes through the hearts of every movie producer in the world."

The script, by Time magazine film critic Richard Schickel, brings a touch of historical perspective to bear and leavens the screams and shudders of the clips with a light tone. Discussing the many Frankenstein sequels, each of which ends with the monster seemingly destroyed but actually ready to spring back for the next movie, Perkins describes his assailants as "strangely careless about checking out their handiwork."

Occasionally, however, the efforts to relate horror movies to other aspects of life grow ponderous, as when we are told that the shark in "Jaws" is "a mugger" who "translates our fear of crime in the streets to crime in the deep."

One problem inherent in such a broad survey is the that we get only a cursory glimpse of each film — many sequences tend to run together in the memory. Still we do get some classic moments intact: Janet Leigh being surprised in the shower in "Psycho"; Elsa Lanchester being created by lightning in "The Bride of Frankenstein."

Another problem is the wide variation in quality of the films chosen. True-blue horror movie fans will regard it as sacrilege to see snippets of a favorite like "King Kong" surrounded by such inferior examples of the craft as "Return of the Fly" or "The Omen."

Aspects Of Media Reviewed In Mass Communications Week

Five days of seminars, demonstrations and lectures by top mass media executives and professional personnel are planned for Texas Tech University's Mass Communications Week, Feb. 18-24.

The week will be highlighted by presentation of the Thomas Jefferson Award to Richard E. Wiley, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, and induction of editor-publisher Wayne C. Sellers of Palestine into the Texas Tech Mass Communications Hall of Fame.

The Thomas Jefferson Award is presented annually to a public official who has made outstanding contributions toward defending and preserving the freedom of the news media. The award will be presented at an award dinner Friday, Feb. 23.

The "Hall of Fame" designation recognizes Texas Tech alumni or other persons who have distinguished themselves in mass communications and have specifically aided the educational programs in mass communications at Tech. Sellers will be inducted into the hall during a Thursday luncheon.

Monday, Feb. 19, will be devoted to public relations; Tuesday, Feb. 20, to journalism; Wednesday, Feb. 21, to photography and film; Thursday, Feb. 22, to advertising; and Friday, Feb. 23, to telecommunications.

Speakers for the first day of activities will include Linda Walker Buck, account executive with Tracy-Locke Advertising and Public Relations, Dallas; William L. Hill, creative director, Bloom Advertising Agency, Dallas; and Sam Petok, vice president of communications for Rockwell International, Pittsburgh. A Rockwell multi-media production will also be aired.

Journalism Day speakers will include

John Bailey, executive director of the International Association of Business Communicators, San Francisco, and Glen Guzzo, Fort Worth Star-Telegram reporter who covered the Cullen Davis trials.

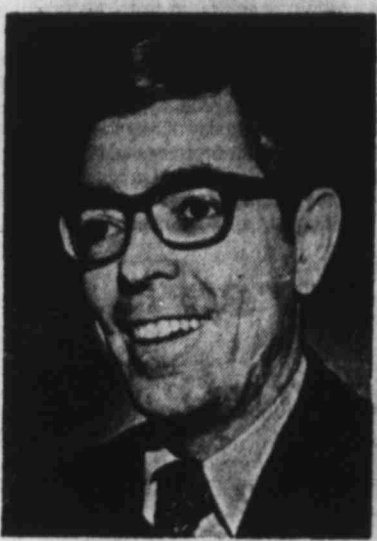

A Journalism Day panel discussion featuring Texas Tech students also is planned. Participants will include Rusty Jones of KMCC-TV, Lubbock; Mary Lou Kromer of Rockwell International, Pittsburgh; Don Richards, press secretary to U.S. Rep. Kent Hance in Washington, D.C.; and Roy McQueen, publisher of the Snyder Daily News.

Photo/Film Day will feature speakers Bob Dodson, NBC Dallas correspondent, and Fred Bunch of the Houston Post. Nine films will be shown. Photography by Texas Tech students will also be displayed.

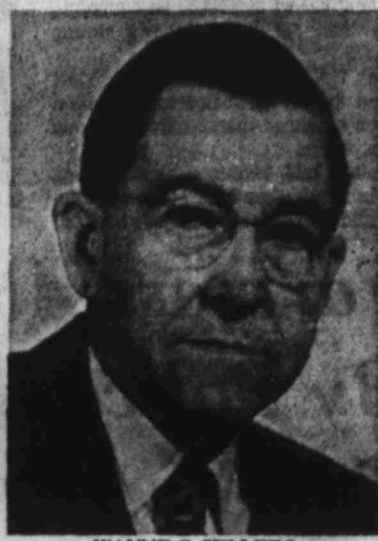

The "World of Advertising Seminar" Thursday will feature Chuck Shemely, vice president of marketing with Keebler Co., Elmhurst, Ill.; Tom Ross, vice president and account supervisor for Leo Burnett USA, Chicago; Kathy Keeton, associate publisher for Penthouse International, Ltd., New York; Beverly Wardale, director of advertising for OMNI Magazine, New York; and James P. Healy, Jr., vice president of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc., Chicago.

Friday's Telecommunications Day speakers will be Al Bond, president-elect of the International Television Association national organization, and manager of Media Center Production at Texas Instruments, Dallas; Charles Jones, director of radio development, Cosmos Broadcasting, Columbia, S.C.; Ed Giles, media specialist with Emory University Medical School in Atlanta; and David Dowe, independent producer, Dallas.

The week will conclude Friday with the Thomas Jefferson Award Dinner.

New Look Magazine Made Debut Monday

NEW YORK (AP) — A new Look magazine made its debut on newsstands Monday more than seven years after the original version folded.

The 128-page issue features photojournalism and articles ranging from interviews with Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and the late Nelson A. Rockefeller to Patricia Hearst and the late Marilyn Monroe.

Of the 1.2 million copies distributed nationally this week, 800,000 in the East had Rockefeller on the cover and 400,000 West of the Rocky Mountains had Miss Hearst.

"We believe that our world is both a panorama and a carnival," said Daniel Filipacchi, Look's board chairman, "and photojournalism is the best instrument to record the triumphs and tragedies, the great events and the intimate moments, the famous and the little-known personalities of our time."

Also in the first issue, dated Feb. 19, were stories on the application of space-age technology to the treatment of pain, how to build your own house and 29-foot long limousines and the people who buy them.

Bob Gutwillig, formerly of Playboy Enterprises, McGraw-Hill and New American Library, is editor and president of Look.

The magazine sells for $1.25.

The original Look magazine first was published in 1937. Its last issue was Oct. 19, 1971.

'Moby Dick' Items Stolen

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Memorabilia of author Herman Melville that were stolen from a public library here are irreplaceable in terms of historic value, the librarian said Monday.

A preliminary estimate of the value of the items stolen on Friday was $50,000.

"I'm in a state of shock," said Lawrence Solomon, director of the Downtown Free Public Library. "We had installed an alarm system in the genealogy room, and we had plans to put one in the Melville room, but the thief beat us to it."

None of the items collected by "Moby Dick" author Melville — stored in glass display cases — was insured.

Included were 1841 documents from the ship "Richmond." Melville signed on for the cruise and later used his experiences to write the sea classic about a giant white whale.

Among the items stolen was a first edition of "Moby Dick," bound in porpoise skin. Also stolen was the ship's log, maps and pictures of whaling scenes, the crew list including Melville's name, a letter from the U.S. counsel in Hawaii stating that Melville jumped ship there and ship's papers signed by President Andrew Jackson.

Solomon said a complete list of the stolen items will be sent to the state police, the FBI and auction houses.

Gold Price Soars On London Mart

LONDON (AP) — Feverish speculative buying of gold, sparked by a threatened world oil shortage, sent the price of bullion soaring nearly $15 an ounce Monday to a record $246.50 an ounce at the close of trading in London.

The price jumped $14.875 from last Friday's closing $231.625 an ounce. In Zurich, Europe's other major bullion market, gold closed at $243.50 an ounce, up more than $13 from Friday's closing $230.375.

The U.S. dollar, meanwhile, lost ground against all major currencies on foreign exchange markets from London to Tokyo.

Dealers said investors began buying gold in a rush when trade sources in London said Saudi Arabia will cut back oil production. The news came on top of an apparently worsening political situation in Iran, the world's fourth largest oil producer, as well as the weaker U.S. dollar and reports that South Africa, the world's biggest gold producer, is buying oil with gold.

The report concerned Saudi Arabia's decision, disclosed last week, to allow the oil consortium operating in that country to increase the production quota from 8.5 million to 9.5 million barrels a day.

But analysts later pointed out the Saudi consortium had been producing as much as 10 million barrels a day during the Iran cutoff, and the Saudi decision could have the eventual effect of cutting production to meet the 9.5 million barrel average.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco), a consortium of oil companies that acts as the middleman in many U.S.-Arab oil deals, said the organization had no comment on the reports.

Sources in the United States who are close to the consortium said nothing has been heard either way from Saudi Arabia for several days, and it is unclear just how the Saudis will administer the new production quota.

Gold hit its previous peak last Oct. 30 when it closed at $245.25 an ounce, after a record gain on that day of $11 while the U.S. dollar was falling to its record low in Tokyo of 175.50 yen. The dollar closed in Tokyo Monday at 201.775 yen, down from 202.25 Monday.

Other Metals Surge
Other precious metals, including platinum and silver, also surged in price in London Monday. Platinum leaped more than 4 pounds ($8) to a new record of 199.25 pounds ($398.50) an ounce. Helping to boost the gold price were reports that the Soviet Union, the second largest gold producer, is not selling its gold because it does not want dollars. The Soviets were said to be waiting for gold to go higher in the currencies they most desire: Swiss francs, West German marks and Japanese yen.

"Really amazing and excessive in its extent," said one Milan bullion dealer. He said goldsmiths would not buy it at that price, but that investors hoping to sell at a profit were buying at the record price of 6,650 lire.

Dealers on the London Metals Exchange said that the upsurge in metals prices was led by copper, which shot up to more than 1,000 pounds ($2,000) a ton when dealers digested the sharply higher closing prices in New York Friday.

ers shouting slogans and chanting "Bazargan! Bazargan! Bazargan!"

"I am appointing Mehdi Bazargan," Khomeini announced, "who is an honest and religious person, as head of a transitional government to appoint his ministers and introduce them to me."

He said Bazargan's government would conduct an election for members of a constituent assembly "to ratify the drafted constitution" for an Islamic republic, abolishing the monarchy. This would be followed by parliamentary elections and appointment of a permanent government.

The white-coated Bazargan, who was seated next to Khomeini during the news conference, is an engineer, a Moslem nationalist and a long-time human rights activist who headed Iran's oil industry under the 1950-53 socialist government of Prime Minister Mohammad Mossadegh.

When asked about the possibility of military intervention, Khomeini replied: "The army will not do such. However, if they do, the first punishment will come from Allah and secondly we will punish them according to Islamic laws." Not submitting to the new regime would be "treason," Khomeini said.

In an apparent effort to reassure Iranians the new republic will not totally overhaul Iranian society, Khomeini acknowledged that much of the royalist 1906 constitution was legitimate and is incorporated in the new document.

Bazargan did not say when he would name the members of his Cabinet. There was no indication whether he hoped to collect taxes, set up a police force or carry out other traditional government functions.

Some Western diplomats believe royalist military commanders have decided they are not strong enough to impose their will through a coup and are eager to find grounds for a compromise with Khomeini.

Asked afterwards if Monday's confrontations hampered the AAM's efforts, Hance replied: "It's hard to say. The problem with violence, is no matter whose fault it is, it gets you away from the real problems you face. Any violence or alleged illegal acts, starts getting everything off on a different step."

Stenholm said one positive move on tap for Tuesday was a meeting with House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill during which the AAM leaders will have a chance to explain their views.

loses no matter who's at fault," Hance said.

Despite the violence, the freshman congressman said "I stand by my position of trying to help improve the situation through legislative means and a positive approach."

"I know they've got a problem and I want to help them solve it."

Hance said he set up a meeting for today between American Agriculture leader Gerald McCathern of Hereford and House leaders including Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill and Majority Leader Jim Wright.

Farm strike leaders also will meet with members of the House freshman class this afternoon, a meeting Hance and 17th District Rep. Charles Stenholm arranged. Texas Senators Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower also plan to meet with striking Texas farmers today.

Farmers Angered By Police Assault On Tractorcade

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas farmers discovered burrs in their tractor seats Monday after the diesel-powered assault on Capitol Hill erupted in violent encounters with club-swinging, mace-spraying police.

One Texan was among 14 men arrested. Clifton C. Walser, 20, of Seagraves was held briefly on disorderly conduct charges as were 13 others. Another man was charged with assault on a police officer.

A.D. Hughes, a 34-year-old Ropesville cotton farmer, was one of several American Agriculture Movement members sprayed in the face with mace from mounted policemen during the day's most volatile confrontation.

"To me, the policemen overreacted," said Hughes who had been one of the first farmers into Washington Monday morning as five lines of roaring diesel monsters converged on the Capital. "We had planned a peaceful march (toward Capitol Hill) singing Christian hymns and waving the American flag...it looked like the police planned their attack."

Tractor Used As Ram
The farmers became infuriated after a police officer began driving a Missouri man's tractor up Constitution Avenue with the man's wife still in the cab. Just minutes before, police had reportedly physically removed the Missourian from his tractor.

As the officer began using the tractor as a battering ram against another tractor blocking Constitution Avenue, angry farmers smashed the glass on one side of the cab and pelted the officer and the woman with eggs.

Two school buses loaded with club-wielding, helmeted policemen converged on the crowd forcing farmers away from the tractor.

Minutes later, 10 mounted officers arrived and used mace to drive the crowd out of the street.

Claims Incidents Staged

"It looked to me like the police planned the whole thing," said Wesley Cox, another Ropesville cotton farmer at the scene. "They would drive a squad car in front of a tractor knowing the tractor couldn't stop before it hit the car. These tractors can turn on a dime but it takes a few feet to stop 'em."

"After the tractor hit the squad car, the police would drag the farmer off his tractor and take him away."

District of Columbia police officer Gary H. Hawkins said the entire force — 4,100 officers — had been called to duty. Six large cranes had also been rented to handle the removal of traffic-blocking tractors.

"I think the police overreacted," said Plainview farmer Marvin Meek, the wagonmaster for the Abilene tractorcade. "There were some isolated incidents where some of those boys (farmers) asked for it. But some of those boys who got maced or beat on the head were standing on the sidewalk."

"I knew they'd be some of this but I'm glad to see the farmers didn't get out of hand."

Hance Warns Violence Hurts Protest Purpose

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

The violence which erupted Monday between protesting American Agriculture Movement members in Washington, D.C. and police only will harm the farmers' push for higher prices for agricultural products, says U.S. Rep. Kent Hance.

"Anytime there's violence or alleged violence, you lose the purpose of what you're trying to accomplish which, in this case, is trying to tell the story about your problem," the Lubbock congressman said.

"At meeting after meeting," Hance said he told AAM participants to "steer away from such acts."

"I told the people from our area to make sure and go visit with the different staff people — to take it on a positive basis and explain the problem," he said. When violence breaks out, "everybody

GI INSURANCE FIGHT—The parents of Robert B. Huff, a Marine killed in the battle for Guadalcanal in 1942, are pressing for GI insurance now. Huff's photograph is surrounded

Couple Wages 30-Year GI Insurance Battle

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An elderly Michigan couple finally has found an ex-Marine to corroborate their claim that their son had GI life insurance when he was killed during the World War II invasion of Guadalcanal.

For 30 years, Clayton and Lila Huff of Washtenaw County have been trying to collect on a $10,000 National Service Life Insurance policy on their son, Robert, who was 19 when he was cut down by machinegun fire in the 1942 battle.

Federal authorities say they can find no record of the policy. Now Eugene Bal of Riverside, N.J., who fought alongside Huff in the same Marine squad, says he is sure his buddy signed up for the insurance, like the others, but the records were lost when a transport was sunk.

Huff's father, now 83, lives in Scio Township just outside Ann Arbor and cares for his bedridden wife. A retired engineer whose main source of income is Social Security payments, he estimates that with interest, the insurance policy would be worth about $75,000.

U.S. Rep. Robert Carr, D-Mich., sponsored a bill last year which would have aided families like the Huffs, but it died with little progress. Carr has promised to bring it up again.

Bal said he recently saw a story about the Huffs in a newspaper and recognized his Marine Corps pal from a photograph. He immediately wrote Graydon E. Caldwell, of Minneapolis, president of the Guadalcanal Campaign Veterans Association.

"I was in Robert Huff's squad," Bal wrote. "I knew him. We all signed the insurance papers. A Cpl. Lieberman was the company clerk who signed us up."

The elder Huff is especially incensed about an effort in Congress to pay G.I. insurance to the widow of Pvt. Eddie Slovik, the Detroit soldier who was executed for desertion in France during World War II.

"In the Slovik case, they are willing to pay for a coward," Huff said.

"The letter we received from my son's commanding officer said Bob died with his rifle in his hands, that he died a hero, that he showed great courage and loyalty during combat."

Bal said he remembered two other Marines in the squad — he could identify them only as Pfc. Lovalee and Friedburger — who also signed up for insurance and were killed on Guadalcanal.

"I suppose their families didn't get the insurance either," he wrote.

—Citizens for Improved Transportation, $57,339, for nine workers to develop a plan agency referral transportation system for the elderly and handicapped;

—South Plains Alcoholism Regional Council, $47,054, for three workers to provide counseling, housing and job placement service to former prisoners;

—Texas Employment Commission, $7,414, for a recruiter to sign up "disadvantaged youth" from Lubbock and Garza counties for training in the Job Corps;

—Area Agency of Aging, $35,532, for four participants to "assist the area agency on aging in providing services for the senior citizens of the South Plains" by publishing newsletters, developing housing and coordinating activities of agencies;

—City of Lubbock, $38,164, for a "recreation specialists" to assist in programs providing meals and activities to the elderly;

—Commerciales Organizadas Mexico Americanos (COMA), $22,226, for three workers to help "encourage and enhance economic growth and stability in Lubbock County and provide guidance and assistance to the minority business community."

—Children's Home of Lubbock, three separate projects of $14,424 and $4,238 and $6,308 for a total of five workers to tutor children now and during the summer and to work on the home's farm;

—American G.I. Forum, $14,445, for two workers to aid clients in drafting business plans and securing loans;

—Reese Air Force Base, in four separate projects of $64,753, $22,751, $13,113 and $4,550 for a total of 24 CETA participants to plant trees, upgrade golf course greens, repair fences, stripe layouts, check and date drawings and inspect trees.

Groups not yet approved by SPAG but okayed by the planning council are:

—Roots Historical Arts Council, which requested $6,160 to develop an art program for minority groups in Lubbock;

—Auxilio, Inc., which wants $41,043 to hire five workers to help migrant youths and adults "realize the danger of drugs, solvent sniffing, pills, etc."

—Texas Tech University College of Education, asking $19,570 to finance a survey to determine the "specific educational needs of the students in the Lubbock High School attendance zone."

Mrs. Forbes said some of these latter groups may be excluded from Title VI special projects funding because they have no past history of accounting procedures and because CETA funds must not be used to start-up an agency.

And, she added, it will not be acceptable for an agency to hire bookkeeping firms to handle the payroll and keep records.

Instead, she said, the groups will have to prove past experience in handling state or local funds, in having bonded employees and in working with workmen's compensation plans.

Traffic Jams Caused By Farm Protest were stopped in the middle of key intersections and abandoned.

Gerald McCathern of Hereford, Texas, the "national wagonmaster" for the protest, said the activity "exceeded all our expectations. With tractors from all over the country, this should show the American people that this is a national problem. We're looking at 1948 prices for our commodities and the 1979 cost of production."

One senator, Republican Larry Pressler of South Dakota, agreed and took the wheel of a tractor himself.

"When we talk about the supposed increase in farm income last year, we're really talking about the corporate farms," he said. "The family farmer didn't have it so good."

But Rep. Peter Peyer, D-N.Y., disdained the proceedings. "I can think of few demonstrations as inappropriate and as counterproductive as the game currently being played on the streets of our nation's capital," he said.

Peyer complained also that the estimated 600,000 gallons of fuel used by the farm vehicles in their trek across the nation was a waste of needed energy.

Rep. John T. Myers, R-Ind., declared "I'm for farmers, but not that kind. They've lost my support."

Police said they were doing their best to accommodate the demonstrations, including giving the tractorcades priority use of the major roadways while commuters, backed up for miles, fumed. George Berkley of the U.S. Park Police said "It's the old story of a 900-pound gorilla in a cocktail lounge. You serve the gorilla first."

Underground Group Sabotages Utilities In Uganda's Capital

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — An underground Ugandan movement opposed to President Idi Amin claimed responsibility Monday for sabotage attacks that damaged a fuel depot and sharply curtailed electricity and water supplies in the Ugandan capital, Kampala.

Amin later announced his security forces had arrested the saboteurs and that they were subversives sent from Tanzania, rather than dissident Ugandans living within the country, official Uganda Radio reported. They were not further identified.

A spokesman for the so-called Save Uganda Movement said here the Saturday night bombing of three steel towers carrying a 132-kilowatt power line from generators at Jinja, near Kampala, reduced the capital's power supplies and also cut electricity to a large part of western Uganda.

He said the towers were about 2 1/2 miles from Amin's command post.

Water-pumping stations around the capital shut down because of the power cut, the Ugandan exile said. Government-run Uganda Radio went off the air temporarily but later resumed domestic and foreign broadcasts using its own generating equipment.

An employee of the Uganda electricity board confirmed power transmission had been cut between Jinja and the capital.

The anti-Amin spokesman also claimed responsibility for bombings at the French-controlled Total Uganda Ltd. facility Saturday night.

Oil company officials reported two bombs exploded at Total Uganda's diesel fuel storage tank and pumps near downtown Kampala. They said the blasts damaged a partly filled 60,000-gallon tank and sparked a fire that burned for two hours.

Kampala, a city of 400,000, was reported quiet Monday, with little sign of special security measures.

The Uganda Radio broadcast, monitored in Nairobi, said the saboteurs had been sent by Tanzanian President Julius K. Nyerere and exiled former Ugandan President Milton Obote, ousted by Amin eight years ago.

In the Tanzanian capital of Dar es Salaam, meanwhile, Nyerere said in a nationwide radio broadcast that Amin was again massing troops near the border and that Tanzanian troops had been given permission to cross into Uganda if necessary to prevent another invasion.

Nyerere said he sought to protect Tanzanian territory and not to overthrow Amin or to re-install Obote.

Ugandan forces crossed into northern Tanzania last year, battled with Nyerere's troops and temporarily seized 700 square miles of Tanzanian territory.

Since then both sides have accused each other of armed provocations.

Amin has been accused by human-rights groups, Ugandan exiles and others of being responsible for the deaths of thousands of Ugandans since he took power in 1971.

The Save Uganda Movement spokesman, who asked not to be identified, has been a reliable source on Ugandan developments in recent months since Uganda and Tanzania went to war.

The spokesman said the movement was a relatively new one formed by Ugandans living within the country. He claimed there was widespread support for the group but gave no details of its structure, leadership or political direction.

He showed reporters in Nairobi a one-page leaflet he said was being widely distributed in Uganda on behalf of the Save Uganda Movement. The 15-paragraph leaflet urged Ugandan soldiers, civil servants and businessmen to rebel against Amin and kill him.

The leaflet said the alternative for Ugandans was to continue "living in fear of death from Amin" and his mercenaries.

Two Men Shot During Argument In Pool Hall

Two Lubbock men were transported to West Texas Hospital early Monday with gunshot wounds they suffered about 12:15 a.m. in an apparent altercation at a pool hall in the 100-block of North University Avenue.

Ernest C. Solis, 32, of 720 Hub Homes was in serious condition late Monday at West Texas with a gunshot wound in the chest. Raymond Santana Guerra, 33, of 3010 Dartmouth St. was in satisfactory condition at that hospital with a bullet wound in the arm.

Police late Monday were seeking a 27-year-old Mexican-American man in connection with the incident.

When police arrived, they found Solis lying unconscious on the floor in the back of the business. Witnesses said an argument resulted in the suspect pulling a pistol and firing at Solis about four times, with one of the bullets striking Guerra.

After the shooting, the armed man fled out the back door of the pool hall, witnesses said.

A 23-year-old man was arrested about 7:15 p.m. Sunday after he allegedly hit two children with his car and then drove off. The two girls, ages 11 and 13, were not seriously injured in the incident in a parking lot at Parkway Drive and Zenith Avenue.

Police saw the man walking into a residence in the 2700-block of East Second Place, and were told by another person that the suspect had just driven into his fence.

After apprehending the man inside the residence, the officers were notified of the car-pedestrian mishap at Parkway and Zenith, about two blocks away. The suspect was taken to the parking lot where witnesses reportedly identified him as the driver of the vehicle which hit the children.

In other criminal activity, four men complained that someone had stolen their vehicles sometime Monday or over the weekend.

Jimmy Jay Turner said that someone drove off in his $15,000 diesel truck, which was parked at 1511 E. 19th St., sometime between 5 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Don Demetro of 305 Ave. W discovered his $4,000 van missing from his residence Monday morning while Johnny Key of 1636 36th St. reported that someone had removed his 1967 Mercury Cougar from his home sometime between 5:30 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Monday.

Robert Owens Haynes told officers that someone took his 1968 Buick from a vacant lot at Erskine Street and U.S. 87 sometime between Saturday afternoon and Monday morning.

In residential and business break-ins, Larry Campbell of 8010 Wayne Ave. said that someone took a $500 microwave oven from his home late Sunday or early Monday.

Thieves made off with $418 worth of tools from a steel supply business at 62nd Street and Quirt Avenue sometime between Friday afternoon and Monday morning, Ralph J. Harding reported.

Gerald Black of 2521 25th St. complained that burglars took a metal detector from his garage sometime after Jan. 10.

Valley Prison Proposal Aired

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Bill Moore held up a bill Monday that could threaten to awaken an old controversy over locating a new state prison in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Moore, D-Bryan, had given notice he would ask the Senate to approve the bill but said an unnamed senator had asked for more time.

He apparently referred to Sen. Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, who wants assurances from prison officials they will not try again to build a new prison near Longoria's hometown.

Moore's bill would allow the prison system to sell or swap its Blue Ridge Farm in Harris County and acquire land anywhere else in Texas.

The bill drops a requirement that proceeds from selling the farm be used to buy land within a 75-mile radius of Huntsville.

The measure would clear away legal impediments cited by former Attorney General John Hill in an opinion that blocked the $8 million purchase of 6,740 acres near Edinburg last April.

Interviewed after the Senate had adjourned, Moore said Blue Ridge Farm is surplus land — "very valuable land."

Asked where he thought prison officials might look for a prison site, Moore said, "It wouldn't surprise me anywhere they look."

State prisoners grow their own food and Moore said, "The people of Texas don't know how lucky they are." He said it costs only $1 a day to feed a prisoner compared with $2 per prisoner in other states.

This is significant in Texas, which has a prison population of nearly 25,000, Moore said. He pointed out that any prison site needs a long growing season and plentiful water supply.

Prison officials indicated last week at a Senate Finance Committee hearing that they already ruled out the Van Horn and Fort Stockton areas of West Texas because of insufficient water reserves.

Few Licensing Changes Needed, Nuclear Agency Head Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear Regulatory Commission Chairman Joseph Hendrie predicted Monday that the agency won't have to change many licensing decisions despite its re-evaluation of a study formerly used to prove the safety of nuclear power.

Hendrie and the five other NRC commissioners told a Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee that WASH-1400 or the Rasmussen report, which had been used to gauge the mathematical possibility of nuclear accidents, was not the critical factor in making licensing decisions.

They said the Rasmussen report, which also had been widely used as a means of generating public support for nuclear power, was one of many tools used in the regulatory process and that the others are still valid.

The NRC has withdrawn its endorsement of the Rasmussen report and now says it is misleading. The commission changed its position after an internal review which Hendrie interpreted as saying, "You'd better be careful about anchoring any critical decisions just on that effort."

Now, NRC is evaluating its licensing decisions to make sure that none of them hinged too strongly on the use of this mathematical formula.

But Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who heads the subcommittee on nuclear regulation, said the NRC's change of heart "is going to reverberate back through society and have some impact."

Hart said the public had come to rely on the Rasmussen report as a basis for feeling secure against the possibility of nuclear accidents.

"Professional assurances about the low degree of risk were very crucial in the public's acceptance," he said.

Commissioner John F. Ahearn conceded that the public did tend to look upon the Rasmussen report "as a verification that reactors are safe."

"To the extent that persons relied on those numbers, we can say they don't have those numbers to rely on any more," added Commissioner Victor Gilinsky.

Each of the commissioners stressed that the detailed licensing procedure is an adequate safeguard against accidents.

Ahearn said the NRC staff has always based its judgments in licensing questions on engineering decisions and that, fundamentally, nothing has changed.

Hart used the subcommittee's budget authorization hearing as a way of questioning the commissioners on the Rasmussen report. The NRC is asking for $374 million in fiscal 1980, 13 percent more than for the current year.

The NRC's change of position on the Rasmussen report led a group of scientists to call on the government to close 16 nuclear power plants. The Union of Concerned Scientists said defects in the electrical systems at those plants make them subject to fires which could cripple safety mechanisms and lead to a serious release of radiation.

Convicted Policeman Plans Second Career In Baptist Ministry

FORT GRANT, Ariz. (AP) — A former policeman serving a 99-year prison sentence for murder has a job waiting for him at Arizona's largest Baptist church if he is paroled this spring.

"He's a rocket that just needs to be aimed," said Harold Green, associate pastor of the North Phoenix Baptist Church.

Robert J. Erler, 34, was convicted of killing a 12-year-old girl and wounding her mother in 1968 on Dania Beach near Miami. He was on the Hollywood, Fla., police force at the time.

Erler, now confined to a minimum-security facility near here, began preaching and leading fellow inmates in prayer meetings two years ago. The Phoenix church heard of his work and "licensed" him to preach.

"We've never done anything like this before. He's been licensed to preach by the church, he has a job with us and we have a commitment to help him go to school to become an ordained minister."

Richard Jackson, pastor of the 8,500-member congregation, said Monday that the church offered Erler an unspecified position. Jackson said Erler might be called on to preach but is not being offered a job as a staff pastor.

"We put our blessing upon him; that's all the license to preach means. He is not ordained," said Jackson.

Erler, now 11 years into his prison term, is eligible for parole in May. The Florida Parole Commission rejected his application in 1978, saying they wanted to watch him another year.

Erler was convicted by a Florida court in the shooting death of Marilyn Clark and the wounding of her mother, Dorothy. Testimony indicated Erler, who was wearing his uniform from a previous job on the Dania police force, made sexual advances and attempted to rob the woman before the shootings occurred.

At his trial, Erler denied he did the shooting, but he recently told the Arizona Daily Star in Tucson: "Something just clicked and I said, 'Kill her.' It was like retreating back in my mind and standing there watching myself do it. The little girl started screaming so I shot her."

"I can't change what I did. I know man will never forgive me. It's just one of those things I have to deal with. I've always offered to pay all the woman's medical bills or do anything to make it right. But I can't change it."

After his conviction, Erler was sent to the Florida State Prison. He escaped in 1973 and was placed in solitary confinement for 14 months. During his confinement, he read the Bible and accepted religion.

Erler, who was transferred to the Arizona State Prison to be nearer his family, is confident that he will be paroled, but says he will be content even if he is denied release.

"The last four years of my life have been the happiest," he told the Daily Star. "I could do another year. It would just make me stronger."

Harvard Re-Extends Invitation To Korean

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Harvard University has renewed its invitation to Korean opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, who recently was freed from jail, Harvard professor Jerome Cohen said Monday.

Cohen, en route to Peking, told reporters.

ELECTIONS DELAYED

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Ecuador's presidential and congressional elections have been delayed until April 29. The military junta set the new date Friday night after several political parties asked for more time to register their candidates. The elections had been scheduled for April 8, with a registration deadline of Feb. 7.

ers at Kim's home that Harvard invited him to study under a fellowship granted by the university several years ago.

Kim said he would reply to "in the near future" But, he said, "complete restoration of my human rights" would be "prerequisite to my exit" from Korea. Korean President Park Chung-hee, Kim's bitter foe, has said earlier that Kim could not be allowed to leave the country because of his pending trial on charges of violating the election law in the 1971 presidential race in which he nearly beat Park.

Some Americans, including several educators, previously have tried in vain to obtain a passport for Kim.

LCHS, Trojans Vie For 'CAT'

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It doesn't happen very often, but tonight Lubbock's private high schools are pushing the public schools off the center stage.

The schoolboy spotlight will be on the LCC gym tonight where the Lubbock Christian High Eagles will host Christ The King. The girls game begins at 6:30 p.m. and the boys at 8.

The LCHS-CTK rivalry doesn't feature anything quite as dramatic as the Silver Spurs, but there is a "CAT" involved here. The CAT is the Christian Athletic Trophy, awarded annually to the winner in the boys contest.

It's supposed to be a traveling trophy but actually the CAT has spent most of its time in the LCHS trophy case. CTK, with a smaller enrollment than LCHS, has only won the trophy one time since the contest was initiated ten years ago.

In other city contests tonight, the Monterey boys travel to Lubbock High and the Westerner girls visit MHS in the only District 4-AAAA action here. Dunbar will host the Canyon boys and girls in a cruise MHS Page 2

THE LEAN VISITOR, with the closely cropped hair, worked across the top of the key, directing traffic and playing the ball-handling role a couple of weeks ago, when an Aggie fan turned to his companion and remarked, "Look at that haircut; that guy looks like a Marine drill sergeant."

Last Saturday, Baylor fans must have thought that Geoff Huston was the entire artillery battalion, the way he blasted the goal with near-perfect accuracy. And, suddenly, the Southwest Conference was aware that Vinnie Johnson isn't the only Brooklyn import with a scoring touch.

It was a natural situation Saturday when the Raiders and Baylor squared off: Vinnie Johnson (Brooklyn Roosevelt) against Huston (Brooklyn Canarsie). Vinnie was the scorer — one of the nation's leaders — but Huston was Tech's floor leader. As it turned out, however, Huston poured in 28 points — hitting 11 of 13 from the floor — and Johnson got a point less off 13 of 19 shots.

Johnson has gotten more in a game this year. Huston had not scored that many in his four-year career at Tech.

But, maybe, this is the time of the year for Huston to find the range.

SINCE ARRIVING AT Tech four years ago, Huston's SWC performances have outdistanced his season work, indicating a trend in the late stretches of the campaigns.

This season, the 6-2 guard is hitting 9.6 points, but he is averaging 11.2 in conference. His season and SWC averages were 8.6 and 10.9 last year; 10.0 and 10.2 as a sophomore and 6.8 and 8.9 as a freshman.

The shooting percentages follow the same pattern: 49.7 for this season, 52.3 in conference; 48.7 and 50.7 as a junior, 57.7 and 60.6 as a sophomore and 46.9 and 49.2 as a freshman. That 60.6 percent shooting as a sophomore is the second best ever for a Raider.

Last year, he hit 18 points against SMU and 21 and 15 against the Aggies, 22 and 24 against Houston and 15 against the Ags as a sophomore, and 18 against Arkansas as a freshman.

"Well, I guess I have scored better later in the season," Huston observed Monday. Speaking slowly, and in a soft tone — unlike a Marine Drill Sergeant — he theorized, "Late in the season, you know, the offense is more established (which could be one reason for the upswing). Early in the year, I'm concentrating on learning and directing the offense."

WHEN HUSTON ARRIVED from New York, he was accustomed to the playground-type, one-on-one game. The change was to a pattern-type game, and Huston's role was that of the quarter-backing guard most of the time.

He played primarily behind Steve Dunn for a couple of seasons, before gaining a starting spot.

As a schoolboy, he had both scored and handled the ball; "On our team, we have three guards who averaged about 20 points a game," he said. Still, Huston played in the shadow of Tyrone Ladson (now at A&M) until breaking out in the New York City playoffs and making all-city.

And his 40 points in one game broke the Canarsie H.S. record set by Lloyd Free, now "All-World" with the San Diego NBA team.

CONSISTENCY ON THE 10-point scoring level is just one part of the game for Huston, who is the only senior in the Raider lineup. "I try to concentrate on

Wary Raiders Host SMU

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Gerald Myers was more impressed with the SMU guards... until he started talking about the Mustangs' inside game. Then...

"We broke down on defense all night against their guards," said the Texas Tech coach. "They'd penetrate just about any time they wanted to. (Billy) Allen and (Phil) Hale were just quicker than our guards, and they hurt us."

But, then, the Raider coach turned to another aspect.

"When they'd penetrate, then our inside guys would have to help out. And, then they'd just pass off. That was why (6-10 Brad) Branson and (6-5 Reggie) Franklin and their other inside people were scoring so well."

"If we don't stop their guards, though, we're in for a long night."

That night — long or pleasant — is just a few hours away, as the Raiders, picking up a bit of momentum off three straight wins, will host SMU at 7:30 tonight in Lubbock Coliseum. And from here on out, all the games are crucial.

Here's the setting:
• Tech is 7-4 in the Southwest Conference (15-6 for the year), in fourth place in the league and hoping to hold on or move up on the Texas-A&M-Arkansas triumvirate with the SWC tourney just three weeks away;

• SMU is 3-6 in SWC (9-12 for the year) and trying to gain ground on Baylor (which plays at Houston tonight) for fifth and grab one of the home spots for the SWC tourney's first round; and

• A near-capacity crowd is expected in the coliseum to witness the battle.

Myers gained his appreciation of the SMU lineup three weeks ago when the Mustangs tripped his Raiders 69-65 in Dallas in the middle game of a three-game losing string.

Branson owned the area under the goal, scoring 14 points (as did Franklin) and grabbing 14 rebounds.

Allen, the freshman playmaker, impressed Myers although he was ill with influenza that night. He has not been at full strength since, and his dad-coach Sonny Allen said Monday that it is unlikely that Billy will play tonight.

It's a day-to-day situation because of the illness, SMU officials reported.

If Billy, carrying a 15-point scoring average, is unable to play, another freshman, 6-1 Keith Beverly, will get the call alongside the 6-4 Hale.

Branson is the leading scorer, at 15.2 points a game. Hale is hitting 10.5, Franklin 10.1. Richard Harris, at 6-5, is expected to complete the lineup.

"Every game is a big game from here on in," Myers said Monday, "and every team in the league is looking at it the same way."

Although Tech has developed a consistency — a point which pleases Myers — over the past few games, he is concerned about the size and speed of the Mustangs. "We don't match up well with them," Myers commented. "We don't have anybody as tall as Branson. They beat us all night inside. They blocked shots (seven, four by Branson) and outrebounded us."

"And offensively, we never did get the ball inside against them and get any free shots."

In an attempt to extend that modest winning streak to four games, Myers will use a lineup of 6-8 Ralph Brewster, 6-6 Ben Hill and 6-5 Jeff Taylor inside, and 6-2 Geoff Huston and 6-5 Kent Williams outside.

With a more balanced scoring attack and extensive use of reserves, Tech has only two players (Williams at 13.0 and Brewster at 11.6 points) hitting in double figures. Huston paced Tech's 79-70 win last Saturday over Baylor at Waco, scoring 28 points.

That game was Tech's best in a month, Myers felt.

A limited number of tickets for tonight's game will be on sale at the ticket office, beginning at 7 p.m., Tech officials reported.

In addition to the game here, the SWC schedule calls for a big battle at Fayetteville where co-leader Texas A&M meets third-placer Arkansas.

Rice visits Texas, which shares the lead with the Aggies, and Baylor will play at Houston.

Tech Women Tackle Nationally Rated WBC

Texas Tech women, coming off a 20-point win over UT-Arlington, will take on one of the top teams in the nation tonight, hosting the Wayland Baptist College Flying Queens at 5 p.m. in Lubbock Coliseum.

The Red Raiders have never beaten WBC and fell to it 85-63 earlier in the year.

Tech comes in with a 9-14 record, following the 72-53 win over UTA, and the Queens will come into the coliseum with a ranking in the top ten in the country and a 13-5 record. WBC fell to Stephen F. Austin (also nationally ranked) 86-69 last Saturday.

Tech's starting unit will have Rose Penkulis, Liz Havens and Lynn inside, and Rosemary Scott and Louise Davis at guards. Miss Webb carries an 8.7-point scoring average, and she hit 21 points in the win over UTA.

Miss Havens is averaging 7 points a game, Miss Penkulis 5.7.

Notre Dame Retains Cage Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame and Indiana State maintained the No. 1 and No. 2 positions, respectively, in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday while preseason choice Duke inched closer to the top.

The Irish collected 25 of 54 first-place ballots and 1,036 points in balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, edging the Sycamores by 33 points. Notre Dame scored victories over

Brown, Xavier of Ohio and Dayton last week, raising its record to 15-2.

Indiana State was tabbed first on 20 ballots after posting a 91-89 overtime victory over New Mexico State and a 66-56 triumph over Tulsa last week. The Sycamores, 20-0, trailed New Mexico State by two points with three seconds left last Thursday night but tied the score on Bob Heaton's 50-shot at the buzzer.

Notre Dame and Indiana State both were named on all the ballots. The Irish were tabbed no lower than sixth, while the Sycamores were ranked as low as ninth by one voter.

Duke, runner-up in last year's NCAA championship, received seven first-place votes and 984 points after defeating Wake Forest and Maryland last week.

UCLA, No. 5 last week, moved into the No. 4 position with no first-place votes and 918 points, followed closely by Louisville with two first-place votes and 874 points.

North Carolina fell from No. 3 to No. 6 this week with 729 points, 11 more than No. 7 Syracuse. The Tar Heels were beaten by Furman last week.

Louisiana State moved from No. 10 into the No. 8 position with 673 points followed by Marquette, 619, and Michigan State, 498.

Texas A&M headed the Second Ten, followed by Southwest Conference rival Texas. Ohio State, No. 7 last week, was 13th followed by Arkansas, Iowa, Alabama, Vanderbilt, Georgetown, Temple and Illinois.

Iowa, 15-4 and tied for the lead in the Big Ten Conference, was the only new member of the AP poll. Maryland, No. 17 last week, dropped out of the Top 20 following losses to Virginia and Duke.

CG Tourney Weigh-In Slated

Official weigh-in for all boxers competing in the Lubbock Regional Golden Gloves Tournament begins tonight at 7:30 in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The boxing action begins Wednesday night in the Civic Center. Admission will be $3 and $4 for reserved seats and $2 for general admission.

The fights will attract boxers from Lubbock and the surrounding communities and the open-class winners will advance to the state finals in Fort Worth.

Competition will be held in open, novice and high school divisions.

Lobos Outlast ENMU 100-82

ALPINE (Special) — Things got a little wild in the second half of the Eastern New Mexico-Sul Ross contest Monday night as both squads combined for 110 points. But the Lobos held on to a 43-29 halftime advantage to win it 100-82.

Nine players scored in double figures and the second half took on the appearance of an NBA all-star contest. Lobo Victor Flores led all scorers with 27 points and the Greyhounds were paced by Alvin Massenburg with 20.

Sul Ross is now 10-9 on the year and ENMU is even at 10-10.

McCulley Named Aide With Jets

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete McCulley, fired as head coach of the San Francisco 49ers last season, was hired Monday by the New York Jets as an assistant coach, the National Football League team announced Monday.

McCulley, who coached the 49ers their first nine games before being fired, will direct Jets receivers. He succeeds Dan Henning, who left New York to join the Miami Dolphins as an assistant.

McCulley was the first in a string of 49ers' coaches in the last year. Fred O'Connor replaced McCulley with the 49ers but was fired at the end of the season. Former Stanford coach Bill Walsh has been named to pilot the team next season.

McCulley was an assistant for the Washington Redskins and Baltimore Colts before his stint with San Francisco.

cial 1-AAA matchup, and Dumas is at Estacado, also in 1-AAA.

"Our boys are looking at the LCHS game as a real challenge," said CTK coach Miles Johnson. "We've only won the CAT once — but we've always played them tough."

And Eagle coach Gary Bowe is quick to admit that the wins haven't been easy. "It's always a good game, always close," said Bowe. "I think we won by 3 points last year."

"Yeah, they beat us 66-63 last year," said CTK forward Mike Sever. "But we've got a chance (tonight). No one on this team has ever beaten them, so that's giving us something to shoot for."

Ironically, both teams have been so busy with post-season tournaments that they've had little time to prepare for tonight's contest. Both were out of town over the weekend and CTK leaves for San Antonio on Thursday for the TCIL state tourney.

"We just had a light workout today (Monday) and tried to loosen up over the weekend," said Johnson. "We haven't really had a lot of time to stop and think about LCHS."

Basically the matchup looks like this. LCHS, with a 25-4 record, runs the fast break as well as any high school in Lubbock. CTK, with a 13-4 slate, executes one of the finest full court presses in this area.

Whistles blew all over Levelland Monday night, and when the final one had sounded, host South Plains College had outlasted Howard College 92-82 in a Western JC Conference contest.

The men's game saw 61 fouls called, 36 against the host Texans. However, they had but one man to foul out, Howard College three.

Robbie Randolph led the visitors in scoring, and Ronnie Butler had 19 for SPC, 11 of the points coming at the free throw line.

SPC is now 6-5 in conference, 10-13 for the year. HC fell to 1-10, 8-15.

The South Plains college women's basketball jumped out to a 46-33 halftime lead against Howard College Monday night and then held off a late HC rally to win 71-69.

Linda Vaughn pumped in 18 points to key the SPC home-court victory and give them a 2-4 WJC slate. Howard got 20 points from Sherrie Colson and owns a 4-3 conference record.

Greg Stewart, a 6-8 freshman from the Bronx, N.Y., turned in the WJCC season's most incredible performance as he scored 44 points, hauled down 21 rebounds and had seven blocked shots to almost singlehandedly led Western Texas to a 97-86 victory over Odessa College.

Race Scandal Uncovered

BOSTON (AP) — Twenty-one men, some with alleged ties to organized crime on the East Coast and in Las Vegas, were named Monday in a million dollar federal race fixing indictment.

The charges, which include strong-arm tactics, climaxed a two-year racketeering probe by the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Related indictments are expected from federal grand juries in Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

It was alleged that more than $1.5 million realized by six of the principals was subject to forfeiture to the United States.

A Somerville man, William Barnoski, allegedly received $630,000 and five others, $180,000 each.

The defendants include two men now in state prison on extortion charges, three jockeys — one of whom, Norman Mercier, 47, of Attleboro, has ridden 2-501 winners — and two owners. Payoffs for the so-called fixed races — between December 1973, and November 1975 — represented many thousands of dollars.

Evidence was presented to the grand jury by Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeremiah O'Sullivan in association with Gerald E. McDowell, chief attorney of the New England Organized Crime Strike Force, and U.S. Attorney Edward F. Harrington.

Details of the secret indictments were released after Sidney Tildsley, 47, of Somerville, the only defendant arrested by noon, appeared before Federal Magistrate Lawrence Cohen. Tildsley, who has a record for bookmaking, was scheduled to be arraigned Feb. 15. A divorced father of five, Tildsley said he is assistant manager and "more or less runs" El Sids Lounge in Somerville.

Police said Howard T. Winter, 49, of Lexington, and James M. Martorano, 37, of Quincy, are now in prison on other convictions, and two others are fugitives — Joseph M. McDonald, 61, of Somerville, and James L. Simms of Malden.

assists and running the offense," Huston said.

"The team doesn't need me to score 35 points a game. Other night, I wasn't going one-on-one with Vinnie, I was just getting shots off the offense around the foul line and key area."

Huston then turned to the Raiders' SWC season: "Since the TCU game (last week), we've had more intensity and everybody is learning the offense. But, the big thing for us is that now we're starting to jell on defense, too."

SMU's defense wasn't as strong (three weeks ago when SMU nipped Tech in Dallas) as it is now. What we have to do is get out ahead. We can't let SMU set the tempo. We have been letting people control the tempo on us. When you control the tempo, you usually control the game. "We're trying to win as many as we can now. The tournament isn't the only thing. We want to move up and finish as high as we can."

"That's our goal."

'Cult' Investigation Stirs Religious Protesters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some religious leaders told a congressional panel Monday that existing criminal laws cover any illegal behavior by cults, and no new laws are needed that might interfere with religious freedoms.

But critics of the Peoples Temple and the Unification Church argued that Congress should investigate what they called mind-control techniques allegedly used by those cults.

Some 200 members of the Unification Church demonstrated outside the hearing room, holding signs calling the proceedings a "witchhunt."

Inside, the hearing often was interrupted by members of the audience who shouted "liar" at witnesses criticizing the Unification Church.

Rabbi Maurice Davis of White Plains, N.Y., who claims to have separated 128 young people from cults, said cults generally have dictatorial leaders, unlimited funds, and a philosophy of "instilling fear, hatred and suspicion of the outside world in order to keep the victims in line."

He added: "Put them all together and you have a prescription for violence, death, and for destruction. It is a formula that fits the Nazi Youth Movement as accurately as it describes the Unification Church or the Peoples Temple."

Davis said the First Amendment properly prevents the government from investigating the beliefs of any group that calls itself religious. "But it does not prevent the government from investigating the activities of any group, whatever its name may be," he said.

The Rev. Barry W. Lynn, legislative counsel for the United Church of Christ, said Congress must not get involved in non-criminal acts of cults.

"Critics of new religions frequently allege that groups use psychological coercion on potential converts," said Lynn. "For the Congress to adopt this conclusion would place them in a constitutionally forbidden zone."

He said, however, that incidents such as the rape of new converts, the physical abuse of infants by poor nutrition, and the forced use of drugs should be controlled by existing criminal laws. In cases where funds are raised under false pretenses, Lynn said, state and criminal fraud statutes cover the transgressions.

"If the Congress or state governments end up making any mistakes in response to the phenomenon of new religious groups, let those mistakes be on the side of religious tolerance," said Lynn. Another witness, Ted Patrick, who has helped parents remove their children from religious organizations, called the cult movement "one of the most dangerous and vicious wars of mankind."

"They destroy a person's free will," he said. "They make a willing slave out of them."

Jackie Speier, the legislative aide wounded when Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., was shot to death after visiting the Peoples Temple settlement in Guyana, said Congress should investigate religious groups that "may be fronting for other purposes."

However, she said, "I strongly caution against a McCarthy-type witchhunt or any lessening of true religious freedom."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., were co-chairmen of the hearing, billed as an unofficial examination of what legal issues might surround the cults in America.

The initial witness list issued earlier this month did not include spokesmen for major church organizations. But after a letter of protest last week, Dole expanded the agenda to hear from members of several religious beliefs.

One of the final witnesses to testify was Neil Salonen, president of the Unification Church of America. He was in the audience and was granted permission to answer criticism leveled at the church.

"The name of the Rev. (Sun Myung) Moon (founder of the Unification Church) has been smeared," said Salonen.

Salonen said if the Unification Church did something wrong, the matter should be taken up by the Justice Department. "But to be held up to public ridicule is wrong, and we won't tolerate it," he said.

Water District Board Rejects Salary Hikes

By TOM GRIESS

Avalanche-Journal Staff
Citing fiscal responsibility and a generous schedule of benefits, the Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 board of directors Monday declined to award cost-of-living pay increases to most of the district's salaried employees.

After listening to Buffalo Springs Lake general manager James Segrest's request for an across-the-board 7 percent annual raise in salaried employees' paychecks, the board opted to limit the pay hikes to $25 per month for three employees.

Two board members argued that the recreation facility has strict limitations imposed upon its revenues — Buffalo

Springs Lake is self-supporting by means of set entrance fees, boat rentals and lot leases — and under those circumstances it would be unwise to substantially increase salary expenses.

The members also stressed the benefits currently supplied to some of the salaried employees, which in some cases include free housing at the lake.

While limiting the pay raises to salaried workers, the board voted with little discussion to increase by 25 cents per hour the wages paid to Buffalo Springs Lake hourly employees. The board acted after Segrest made the point that many of the workers are currently making only slightly more than the federal minimum wage of $2.90 effective Jan. 1, 1979.

Earlier, the board canvassed the Jan. 20 votes of the election of two board members to the district. The official tally was the same as the unofficial results, with R.M. "Max" Wiser receiving 316 votes; Dale Miller, 220 votes; Joanna Doss, 146 votes; Ray Bowen, 74 votes; Bill Hughes, 83 votes; and Bill Hughlin, two votes.

In a matter related to the December meeting, the board formally approved a new ground lease form and a security agreement form related to the ground lease form.

At the December meeting the board voted to restructure all future Buffalo Springs Lake leases to expire in 1997. As expiring leases are renewed between 1979 and 1987, they will include the recently revised $350 annual rental for waterfront lots and $250 annual rental for other lots.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

State To Consider Court Reform Bill

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka has introduced three bills dealing with the administration of the courts in Texas.

Senate Bill 421 allows judges and juries to require participation in an alcohol or drug abuse program as a condition for probation.

Short also proposes increasing the state's contribution to the salaries of Ector County judges from $3,500 a year to $10,000 a year, and requiring judges of county courts-at-law to comply with state ethics and financial disclosure laws.

In another bill, SB 413, Short provides transition procedures for school boards that change from common to independent status.

Cops Ticket Automobiles During Church Services

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Lord giveth, but the Rev. Joseph F. Smith — with the assistance of the Philadelphia Police Department — taketh away.

After several warnings in the church bulletin, Smith called the cops Sunday on congregation members who park illegally on a street near St. Christopher's Roman Catholic Church. Some 20 churchgoers were ticketed to the tune of $25 for illegal parking during services.

PEOPLE WHO NEED PEOPLE

Murder Investigation Continues

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies late Monday were continuing their investigation into the death of Israel Duran, 23, of Anton, whose body was discovered early Monday on a dirt road just east of the Lubbock city limits.

Deputies also were puzzled over the nearby discovery of a dog, which appeared to have been killed along with the man.

Sheriff's Capt. J.B. Douglas said the man, discovered about 8:45 a.m. on a dirt road about a half mile from the city limits and a half mile south of the Idalou Highway, appeared to have been shot four times in the chest and head with a small-caliber pistol.

The dog, which was found about 20 feet from the man, had been shot once in the throat with a large-caliber weapon, Douglas said.

Idalou Justice of the Peace Earl Yarbrough ruled the death a homicide and has ordered an autopsy.

Friends and family of the slain man told officers Monday afternoon they had last seen the man alive about 9 p.m. Sunday, when they dropped him off at a North University Avenue motel. Duran had been staying at the motel for the past three or four days, deputies said.

From talking to family members, Douglas also said he doesn't think the killing of the dog is related to the man's death. The man's relatives indicated Duran did not have a dog as a pet.

Both the animal and the man appeared to have been dragged off to the side of the road near some weeds. Criminal investigating deputy Alton Hobbs said that after seeing the man "I saw some more drag tracks and thought I'd find another body, but instead, I found that greyhound."

"That's kind of puzzling. It looks like the same deal, but why, I don't know."

Lubbock police received a call from a man shortly before 9 a.m. today, saying there was a dead body near the Children's Home of Lubbock. The sheriff's department was notified when it was learned the discovery was made outside the city.

Douglas said this morning a motive had not been determined for the killing, nor had it been determined why the dog was killed.

The man was thought to have been dead about four or five hours when he was discovered, Douglas said. Deputies found a metal rod with blood stains near the victim's feet, but no gun was found in the area.

The dead man's wallet, containing $1, appeared not to have been touched, according to Douglas. The only other items found on the body were some papers, the captain said.

The man, whose face and chest were covered with blood, was clad in a striped shirt, dark pants and black shoes. The dog was found about 20 feet from the victim's head.

The man's death marks the third homicide this year in Lubbock County.

Services for Duran are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

$73.2 Billion Owed U.S. By Foreign Countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign countries owed the United States a total of $73.2 billion last year, including $27.5 billion in debt that dates back to World War I, a Treasury Department official told Congress Monday.

Assistant Treasury Secretary C. Fred Bergsten also said that delinquencies on debts since World War II increased by $21 million last year to a total of $612 million.

Taiwan, Iran, Turkey and Zaire, all countries with special problems recently, have fallen behind in payment of their debts to the U.S. government, Treasury Department figures showed.

Taiwan was $108 million in arrears as of last Sept. 30, followed by Iran, $36.1 million; Zaire, $34 million; and Turkey, $7 million.

Bergsten said the delinquencies from Taiwan are among those that are "the subject of special interest at the present time," an apparent reference to the decision by the United States to withdraw recognition of Taiwan as the legal government of China.

He referred to the former Nationalist

Chinese government as "the authorities on Taiwan."

Bergsten noted that the U.S. government also is owed about $50 million in principal and interest on loans made to China in 1946 before the Communists seized power on the mainland and the Nationalist government fled to Taiwan.

"There also remain some other debts which we will be discussing with the People's Republic of China at an appropriate time," Bergsten told the Senate Finance subcommittee on taxation and debt management.

Of the debt owed the U.S. government from World War I, Bergsten held out little hope that it can be substantially reduced in the foreseeable future.

"I regret to say that, during the past year, we have made no progress in collecting these debts beyond the continuing repayments from Hungary and Greece," he said.

Of the $45.7 billion in post-World War II debt, about 99 percent of it is in long-term credit programs for such things as aid to developing countries, military credits, agricultural credits and loans from the Export-Import Bank.

Bergsten said most of the debt is being repaid on time, and the arrearages of $612 million are a "relatively small portion" of the total. He added that adverse political situations have caused most of the delinquencies that have occurred.

About $200 million of this stems from logistical support provided to other countries during the Korean War. Some of these countries have objected to paying and the debts may be written off, he said.

Another $76 million is owed by Cuba and $24.3 million is overdue from Vietnam and Cambodia, all stemming from loans made prior to the Communist takeovers in those countries.

Snow Walker Takes Job With Newspaper

SHARONVILLE, Ohio (AP) — William Kain, who collapsed in the snow last month after walking about 35 miles in search of work, now has a job. He is a copy aide at the Cincinnati Post.

"It's a strange way to get into (journalism)," said the 18-year-old Kain. "I never was very interested in papers, but I like people."

Kain said he received more than a dozen job and school offers after the Cincinnati Enquirer wrote of his unsuccessful attempts to get a job.

He was found lying in the snow by the crew of a highway truck. He said he had walked about 35 miles that day in search of employment.

Kain had been walking around the area because he does not have a car. He said however that he now plans to take a bus to work.

STUDENTS SENTENCED

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A military tribunal sentenced two university students to 20 months imprisonment Monday for "obstructing academic freedom" on their campus. The two, who attended a technical vocational teachers' college, beat a right-wing student severely and prevented others from entering classes.

Taiwan Defense Bill Promised Fast Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter would veto legislation tying full diplomatic relations with the Peoples Republic of China to a U.S. commitment to defend Taiwan militarily, the State Department said Monday.

"It would be impossible for the president to approve legislation inconsistent with the normalization of relations with the People's Republic of China," Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Warren Christopher told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Christopher said, however, the State Department will cooperate in writing legislation to express U.S. concern for the security of Taiwan without jeopardizing the normalization of relations with China.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the committee chairman, said he considers the administration's proposal to maintain commercial and cultural relations with the people of Taiwan to be "woefully inadequate."

And Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, the panel's ranking Republican, said he believes the president must give the Chinese strong notice that the United States will not tolerate the use of force against Taiwan.

Both Christopher and Secretary of Defense Harold O. Brown said it would be against Chinese interests to attack Taiwan. Brown said the Chinese don't have the military capacity to mount a successful invasion.

Church said he believes continuation of the normalization process should be "conditioned upon an American expectation that there will be no use of force with respect to Taiwan."

He said it would be "the honorable thing" to write that expectation into law and predicted the committee will do just that.

In response to Javits' demand, Christopher said that if the Chinese resorted to force, the administration would consult with Congress and be prepared "to act together to protect our interests."

Javits called that insufficient. He said the Chinese have to be put on notice formally that the normalization process will be terminated if they do not renounce the use of force against Taiwan.

"If they don't agree, I'm prepared to forego it, (normalization) hot as I am for it," Javits said.

Christopher said, "Any resolution which sought to give an official character to Taiwan would contradict the basis of our policy of normalization."

In addition, he said any language which sought to reassert the mutual defense treaty with Taiwan would be "difficult and delicate."

He declined to discuss what specific language might or might not be acceptable.

Christopher assured the committee that there have been no secret agreements between the United States and China.

And he said failure by the Taiwanese to set up by the end of the month an instrument to maintain unofficial economic and defense ties with the United States would lead to "very serious difficulties."

Carlsbad Reports 15 Hepatitis Cases

CARLSBAD, N.M. (Special) — Fifteen Carlsbad residents have been stricken with infectious hepatitis during the last six weeks, prompting an investigation by the New Mexico Department of Health and Environment and formulation of a hepatitis task force by area doctors.

The highly contagious inflammation of the liver has been reported by 13 children and two adults.

Investigators discovered no direct cause for the outbreak, but found the disease was spreading from household to household, said Dr. Johathan Mann, founder of the hepatitis task force.

"When one person in the family gets the disease, the other family members are the most likely to get the infection next," Mann said.

"Fifteen cases in six weeks is more hepatitis than usual for any area, even New Mexico. The state has a hepatitis rate three times the national average anyway, but we can find no real reason for an outbreak of cases now."

The hepatitis task force, the state health department, and private physicians have started a program to inoculate high risk individuals with gamma globulin, a drug which can prevent spread of the disease.

"We plan to try to inoculate the family members first, since the disease seems to be spreading among several families," Mann said.

The effectiveness of the gamma globulin inoculations will not be known soon because a person can have the disease for up to six weeks before showing any symptoms.
