Hurricane kills about 1,500 in Bangladesh

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A hurricane that swept out of the Bay of Bengal killed at least 1,460 people throughout Bangladesh, driving a 10-foot wall of water that washed away one island's population, authorities said Sunday.

Many more people were feared dead. There were reports of thousands of people missing.

Fifty thousand families were reported homeless in one area alone.

Officials at the Cyclone Control Room at the chief martial law administrator's secretariat raised the confirmed death toll as a result of Saturday's storm to 1,464 with new reports of 1,000 dead at Sudharam in southern Noakhali district.

Everybody who stayed on the tiny island of Urirchar was swept into the Bay of Bengal by waves 10 to 15 feet high, said officials at the control room.

The officials said some of the estimated 10,000 islanders on Urirchar were evacuated to the mainland before the hurricane hit, but at least 500 were reported missing..

No contact could be established with the island, 35 miles off the coast from the town of Noakhali and near Sandwip island. But the officials, who cannot be identified under martial law regulations, told The Associated Press a plane that flew over the area reported the island raked clean by waves.

Four years ago people who lost their land to erosion from rivers began settling on the four-mile square island. Many islanders lived on small boats.

A Dhaka journalist who visited Urirchar two years ago told the AP the settlers probably ignored the hurricane warning for fear of being displaced from their newly acquired land. There is no hurricane shelter on the island.

Only one family of four has been reported rescued by search teams sent to the area.

At Sudharam, tidal waves driven by winds of over 100 mph washed inland Saturday, killing at least 1,000 people. Officials said Sunday that 500 bodies have been buried so far.

The control room reported 181 dead in other areas of Noakhali, 217 on Sandwip island, 24 on Bhola island and 42 from Sonagazi in the district of Feni, all near the mouth of the Ganges River.

Sultan Mahmood, the chief air force vice marshal, told the AP after touring the area that a 60-mile strip from Noakhali to the islands of Pirbakhsh and Char Clark had been ravaged, and he did not see any houses standing except for hurricane shelters.

Residents told Mahmood that 6,000 are missing on those islands, he said.

At least 50,000 families have lost their homes in Noakhali, Mahmood said.

Officials have reported that three-fourths of the housing has been destroyed on the islands of Kutbdia, Saint Martins, Moheskhali, Atiya, Sandwip, and Daulatkhan.

Between 200 and 300 people are reported missing in Sonagazi in the Feni district, according to Control Room officials.

President Hussain Mohammed Ershad flew to the stricken areas and ordered relief and rescue operations for victims. He earmarked $400,000 for the effort.

Tajul Islam, the president's press secretary, said air force helicopters and four Bangladeshi navy ships had been pressed into service. Army and air force teams are conducting rescue and relief operations in the southern and southeastern districts.

About 50,000 people have been affected in northeastern India by floods caused by the storm, the United News of India reported Sunday.

Widespread flooding and continuous rains were reported from Tripura and Manipur state, causing millions of dollars of property damage, UNI said.

Memorial activities varied

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

Ceremonies and parades in memory of the nation's war dead marked the Memorial Day weekend, but many families flocked to beaches and picnic grounds and thousands rejoiced to the song of racing engines at full cry in Sunday's Indy 500.

The National Safety Council estimated that 380 to 480 people could lose their lives in traffic accidents during the three-day weekend that kicks off the summer vacation season.

Sunshine was predicted for Memorial Day from the southern Atlantic Coast west to the southern Rockies, but the National Weather Service warned that scattered storms could rain on parades from northern New England across the southern Great Lakes and most of the Mississippi Valley and the Plains to the northern and central Rockies.

Vietnam veterans were to be the focus of many observances in this 10th year after the war in Southeast Asia.

Organizers of Michigan's largest observance in the Detroit suburb of Dearborn hoped 1,000 Vietnam veterans would turn out for Monday's parade, expected to attract 250,000 spectators.

In a prison in New Orleans, officials planned to dedicate a large mural, painted by inmates and deputies, showing a Purple Heart medal and two Congressional Medals of Honor beside an enormous rippling American flag, scenes from the war and a map of Vietnam.

In memory

A lone mourner observes Memorial Day by placing flags on the grave of a fallen veteran. Memorial Day honors America's war dead. It began as a tribute to those who died in the Civil War, but now honors the memory of all who gave their lives for their country during wartime.

Mourning teen began tradition in 1864

By MAUD S. BEELMAN

BOALSBURG, Pa. (AP) — In 1864, a teen-age girl mourning the death of her father in the Civil War gathered up a handful of flowers and walked down to the village cemetery to place them on his grave.

That simple act, folks in this central Pennsylvania village say, gave rise to a tradition that now includes a national day of recognition, marked by speeches, parades and collective reflection.

It is here, they say, that Memorial Day was really born.

The teen-ager was Emma Hunter, whose father Reuben, a surgeon, died after contracting yellow fever while caring for soldiers at a military hospital in Annapolis, according to resident Ruth Corter. She has made it her business to know the historical details of this hamlet in the Allegheny foothills.

Though the honor of being the official birthplace of Memorial Day went to Waterloo, N.Y., through a presidential proclamation in May 1966, Boalsburg maintains its claims and has continued the tradition, without interruption, for 121 years.

Boalsburg lost out to Waterloo because residents at the time couldn't find written proof that the tradition began in 1864, Mrs. Corter said. Waterloo began its observances in 1866, according to that village's historical society.

As the story goes, Emma "and her girlfriend, Sophie Keller, decided they would take flowers down to the father's grave and on the way they met the mother of Amos Myers," a young man who had died on the last day of the battle of Gettysburg, Mrs. Corter said.

"They told her where they were going and she quickly gathered some flowers and went with them. They put flowers on both of the graves and decided that they would go and get more flowers and put them on the other soldiers' graves."

"It just made them feel good. So they agreed, these three ladies did, that the next year they would do this again," Mrs. Corter continued.

The women also decided to spread the word about their plans. And by the following July "a great many villagers turned out" for the two-block walk from the Boalsburg Diamond, or town square, to the cemetery.

"It became a custom and it just grew through the years," Mrs. Corter said.

'Club Fed' quips don't make Big Spring facility less than prison

BIG SPRING (AP) — Officially, it's known as the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp — but it's often referred to by local residents as "Club Fed."

There are no fences, no guard towers, no walls or searchlights. The front entrance is an oasis of green and a line of cedars and neatly manicured lawns seem immune to the harsh West Texas sun.

Among its inmates are a notable lot — including former Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Thayer, former millionaire rancher Rex Cauble and ex-Dallas stockbroker Billy Bob Harris.

Until two years ago, nationally known wheeler-dealer Billy Sol Estes also served his time at the prison camp.

The air of benign incarceration — as well as the tennis courts and the softball tournaments — goes against the concept of crime and punishment held by some area residents.

Local jokes about the camp are laced with sarcasm.

"You can tell the inmates," one Big Spring man said. "They're the ones with good suntans."

But Janet Schmidt, the prison's assistant superintendent, said the facility is still a jail.

"The fact that we have no fences and are a much more relaxed environment has spawned that image," she told The Dallas Morning News. "But we have no golf course or swimming pool. Our recreational facilities are the same as you'll find at a maximum-security facility."

Estes, who was freed from the camp about two years ago, agreed.

"Let me tell you, when a man has lost his freedom, he could be locked up in the fanciest hotel in Dallas and he'd still be a prisoner," Estes said.

"At Big Spring, the inmates were treated fairly and decently, and they responded in kind. But it was a prison and it was run as a prison. And it's unfair to the men doing time there to think otherwise," he said.

The prison camp is built on the grounds of the now-closed Webb Air Force Base. Its average population is about 460 inmates. Most are serving sentences of one to five years on drug-related and "white-collar" crime convictions.

Mrs. Schmidt said all inmates are required to work at such tasks as carpentry, electrical work, building and grounds maintenance and clerical chores. Inmates also can study computer sciences, government, real estate and stock investments.

"During working hours, there is little freedom of movement. Everyone has a job to do and must do it."

State Senate determines fate of several agencies

AUSTIN (AP) — State senators, voicing concern over a citizen majority on the Texas Air Control Board, refused Sunday to accept House amendments to a bill that would extend the life of the board.

At Sen. Carl Parker's urging, the Senate voted 16-13 not to accept the amendments and to appoint a conference committee.

Several other state agencies were continued. These votes on the next to last day the 140-day legislative session are crucial, because the agencies would expire Sept. 1 if they are not renewed. Failure to continue them could lead to a special session.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, to start work at once on an Air Control Board compromise.

Caperton said the House had made "something of an improvement" by adding nine amendments to the Senate version of the Air Control Board.

Parker and Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, questioned five of the nine board members being members of the "general public."

Three area residents killed in two Sunday accidents

From Staff Reports

Two accidents Sunday left three area people dead, including two Midlanders killed while riding their bicycles on State Highway 191, according to the Department of Public Safety.

George Hoffman, 35, 202 Ridglea, and 14-year-old David Kyle Werner, 2806 Haynes, were pronounced dead about 3:45 p.m. Sunday in Midland Memorial Hospital after being struck by a car driven by an Odessa man.

Hoffman and Werner were among a group of four cyclists riding two abreast in the outside eastbound lane of SH 191 at about 2:37 p.m. when a 1979 Ford driven by Sean A. Hannon of Odessa struck them and carried them over 200 yards, according to the DPS. The other two cyclists were uninjured in the accident, which occurred in Midland County about 7.3 miles west of the city limits.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Kuwaiti security forces seek suspect in assassination attempt

KUWAIT (AP) — Security forces rounded up suspects and a dragnet was spread in this tiny Persian Gulf emirate on Sunday, one day after a suicide car-bomb driver failed in his attempt to kill the ruler of Kuwait.

The 56-year-old emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, resumed his regular duties Sunday and met leaders of other oil-rich gulf countries, who rallied around the Arab monarch in show of support.

President Reagan and the Soviet leadership also sent messages to Jaber, denouncing the attempt on his life, Kuwati officials reported.

The emir suffered minor injuries, but the terrorist and three other people perished in the explosion.

Fighting continues near Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy fighting raged between Shiite Moslem forces and beleaguered Palestinian guerrillas for the seventh day Sunday, thwarting a Red Cross attempt to rescue casualties trapped in Beirut's refugee camps.

Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt, an ally of the Shiites in Lebanon's civil war, mediated a cease-fire for 2:30 p.m. to allow International Red Cross ambulances to go into Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camps. The Druse have remained neutral in the battle of the camps.

But the truce failed. The Red Cross convoy waited 1½ hours, then drove off. "We could not enter the camps because the cease-fire never happened," said Sophie Martin, the Red Cross' Swiss chief in Beirut. "As soon as the cease-fire is settled, we will enter."

A Palestinian spokesman, who spoke on condition he was not identified, said about 250 casualties were to have been taken to hospitals in the Druse-controlled central mountains "because Shiites have killed many Palestinians in Beirut hospitals."

Police said at least three people were killed and 57 wounded Sunday. That raised the known toll to 361 killed and 1,658 wounded since Shiites attacked the camps last Sunday.

Korean students conclude seige

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Still shouting defiance, 73 militant students ended without incident on Sunday their four-day occupation of a U.S. government facility to protest American support of the South Korean government.

The students, looking weak after three days without food, exited the U.S. Information Service building in the heart of Seoul as reporters looked on.

"Down with Chun Doo-hwan!" — South Korea's president, they shouted, and called on the United States to "Stop supporting the military regime!"

Both American and South Korean government officials expressed relief the episode had not damaged U.S.-Korea relations.

Iraqi planes raid Iranian cities

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi warplanes on Sunday raided Iranian cities, including the capital of Tehran, one day after Iraq blamed Iran for the car-bomb attack against the ruler of Kuwait and vowed to retaliate.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency — IRNA — said six people were killed and 15 wounded in the pre-dawn attacks on a half dozen cities, and Iran responded with an air raid on the southern Iraqi town of Al-Amarah.

A later report said another Iraqi plane flew over Tehran at 9:27 p.m. and was met by heavy anti-aircraft fire. It reported there were three explosions, and electricity was cut off in some parts of the capital for 20 minutes, but said no reports of damage or casualties were available.

The official Iraqi News Agency, in a report from Baghdad, said Iraqi warplanes "carried out four raids non selected targets in Tehran" Sunday night.

AN IRNA report Sunday morning had said six people were killed in Tehran and 15 perished in the cities of Ilam and Marivan from the pre-dawn raids.

Eight killed at soccer playoffs

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Eight people died and 29 were injured as thousands pressed through a stadium tunnel to watch a playoff game for the Mexican national soccer championship, the Red Cross said Sunday.

Fernando Corona, a Red Cross spokesman, said he did not know the cause of the deaths.

The official news agency Notimex, however, reported that the people died from asphyxiation.

Notimex said four children, from ages 11 to 15, were among the dead. The others were between 17 and 40 years old, it said.

The Highway Department rescue squad said a commotion broke out in one of the long passageways leading into the stadium, according to Notimex.

Soviets discover WWII deserter

MOSCOW (NYT) — Two weeks after a triumphant celebration of the Soviet victory in World War II, a newspaper here has published an account of a Red Army deserter who was discovered recently after spending 41 years hiding in a pigsty.

The deserter, bearded, ragged and unwashed, now 74 years old, was found by astonished villagers only after the death of his wife, whom he had terrorized into hiding and feeding him, the weekly newspaper Nedelya reported over the weekend.

The newspaper said that when the terrified deserter, Pavel Navrotsky, came face to face with strangers for the first time in four decades, all he could find to say was, "Will I be punished?"

Periodically since the end of the war, the Soviet press has told similar stories of deserters who have been found or turned themselves in after years of hiding. As in the case of Navrotsky, they are said to have been spared punishment, with the sentiment, as Nedelya put it, that "nobody in the world could punish him as harshly as his own fear has punished him."

Policeman killed; Women stoned

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A black policeman was attacked and killed by a mob of blacks and two white women suffered minor injuries when their cars were stoned in riots against the white-minority government, officials reported Sunday.

They said the policeman was killed in Tembisa, northeast of Johannesburg, late Saturday when a gang of knife-wielding blacks attacked him after he tried to scatter rioters with pistol shots.

In a fatal incident in Welkom, 155 south of Johannesburg, a black policeman shot and killed a black man who attacked the officer while he was investigating a robbery, police said. They said the death was not related to the racial violence.

Near Port Elizabeth, an Indian Ocean harbor city 600 miles south of Johannesburg, police said two white women suffered minor wounds Sunday when blacks stoned their cars as they drove by a black township.

In the rioting that began in black townships in late August, black policemen viewed as collaborators with South Africa's racial segregation policies have been frequent targets of rioters.

Campground mishap kills eleven

ST. CYR, France (AP) — A concrete wall separating a terraced hillside campground collapsed onto car trailers and tents on Sunday, killing 11 people and injuring six.

Four of those killed were children.

"This wall was built last winter to avoid just such an accident because children had a tendency to play on the sandy hillside and risked falling," said Aimee Joly, director of the campground.

Officials said a landslide caused by recent heavy rains may have toppled the wall, but that it was too soon to say. An investigation was begun.

Abortion clinic regulation favored

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators voted Sunday for state regulation of abortion clinics and to keep in operation a state agency the House has voted to kill.

The disagreement over the Texas Health Facilities Commission could force a special session of the Legislature. The current session ends Monday.

The battleground is the Department of Health, which would go out of business Sept. 1 if not continued by the Legislature. House members have approved the Department of Health bill.

Senate amendments to the bill would allow the state to license and regulate abortion clinics and would revive the Health Facilities Commission. The House voted 98-49 Friday to let that commission die. The agency controls construction of hospitals and nursing homes.

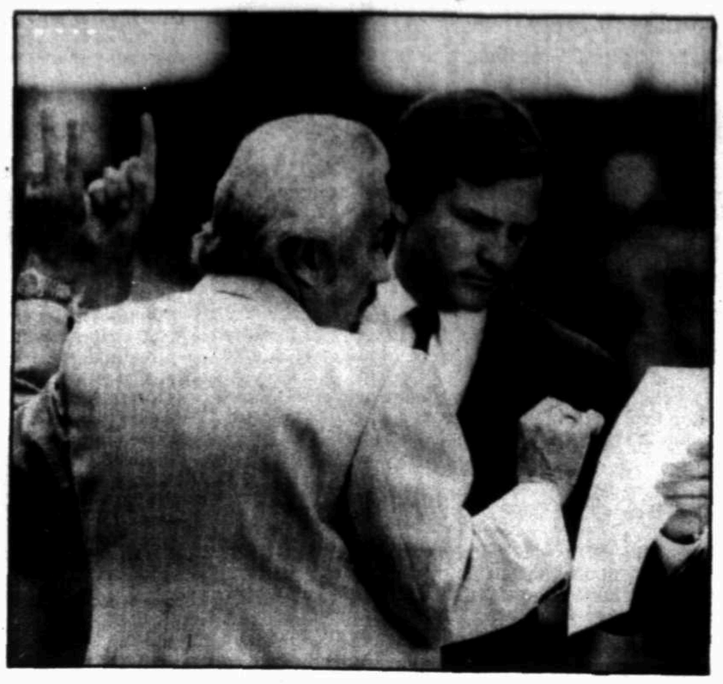

Speaker Gib Lewis said he sees little chance the House would back down.

"I think the House has spoken pretty firmly on the Health Facilities Commission. The votes are out there and it's pretty firm," Lewis said, adding that he would rule the Senate amendment is not pertinent to the Department of Health bill.

Rep. Brad Wright, D-Houston, led the fight to kill the agency, which he said is controlled by the industry it is supposed to regulate. He said the Senate action would force a special session.

"Obviously, that would give the lobbyists time to regroup and squeeze people for another 30 days. That could cause some people to waffle," he said.

Wright said the House probably would not object to the abortion regulation amendment. Pro-life and pro-choice forces have said the state should try to guarantee that abortions are performed safely. Abortion clinics now are not regulated in Texas.

Senators Chet Brooks, left, and Chet Edwards signal opposing votes on an amendment to a bill to continue the Texas Department of Health during Sunday's session of the Texas Senate. Please see related stories, Pages 1A and 6C.

"The state has a right and duty to regulate hospital-like procedures," said Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, whose amendment would create the Texas Abortions Facilities Reporting and Licensing Act.

"For the first time we will know how many abortions are performed in Texas and under what conditions," Lyon said. "This is designed to protect women. This is the first time we have right-to-life and pro-choice people supporting the same thing."

The only argument against the amendment came from Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, who thought the maximum civil penalty for violating regulations made for abortion facilities should be higher than $500 a day.

Voting against the amendment were Sens. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, Craig Washington, D-Houston, and Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas.

Lyon's proposal would have the Texas Board of Health adopt rules for licensing places where abortions are performed and set out minimum standards of operation.

Abortions could be performed only by a physician.

The minimum standards could be no more stringent than those required by Medicare for professional and nonprofessional personnel, sanitary and hygenic conditions, essential equipment and clinical records.

The state health department would make inspections "as reasonable as necessary."

Washington's amendment put the Health Facilities Commission back in business by saying the Department of Health will continue certification of new health facilities, such as hospitals, clinics, nursing homes and other health care facilities. The estimated $2.2 million cost the next two years would be appropriated from the fees collected in the certification process.

Other changes made in the House bill to continue the Department of Health until 1997 included:

— Lower the maximum civil penalty that could be levied against any nursing home or health care facility for not meeting standards from $25,000 to $10,000 a day.

— Authorize the Department of Health to make and enforce rules that sanitary facilities be furnished railway workers on the job.

— Add regulations on boarding kennels for dogs and cats that have more than six animals to the duties of the Department of Health..

"It's a tribute to the price paid, not only by those who served in Vietnam, but to all of the prices paid by all the people who've fought for the freedom we enjoy," said Orleans Parish Criminal Sheriff Charles C. Foti.

Gen. William Westmoreland, Army commander in Vietnam during part of the war, dedicated a Vietnam veterans memorial Saturday at Conway, S.C., saying, "History may judge American aid to Vietnam as one of our country's most noble causes."

U.S. forces "did well and, in return, those men and women were often ignored, abused and neglected by the nation," Westmoreland, a resident of South Carolina, told a tearful crowd. "That irrational and sordid period in America manifested itself in many ways. But it is now all history."

In Maine, actor Tony Curtis joined Gov. Joseph E. Brennan for a dinner Saturday to raise funds for a Vietnam veterans' monument near the State House. The 20-foot statue, featuring two soldiers carrying a wounded GI, is to be completed in October.

Another conflict was remembered Saturday at Ellington, Conn. A baseball field was dedicated in memory of Stephen D. Tingley, a Marine who was among the 240 killed during the October 1983 bombing in Beirut, Lebanon.

A far earlier conflict is remembered annually at Madison, Wis., where 140 Confederate soldiers who died in a prison camp are memorialized with flowers and the playing of taps.

For others, it was a weekend to try out new lounge chairs, fishing gear or barbecue grills and start working on tans.

At Maryland's Chesapeake Bay Bridge, about 2,400 eastbound cars crossed per hour Saturday as people dashed for Atlantic shore beaches, police reported.

Sunny weather attracted thousands to beaches on the south shore of New York's Long Island. 'You couldn't see the boardwalk for the people," said Milton H. Berger of the Coney Island Chamber of Commerce. He estimated Sunday's crowd at more than 1 million.

Of those who stayed in town, thousands hit New York City's Central Park. "It looks like Coney Island out there," said Anne Arrowsmith, who works at the park's visitor information center.

New Yorkers at play also had a Cuban Day parade Sunday, the Spanish Grocers and Merchants Association festival in the South Bronx and the U.S. Stickball Championship.

An estimated 350,000 people packed downtown Indianapolis on Saturday for a parade that is part of the month-long 500 Festival, a prelude to the race at the city's 2.5-mile oval racetrack.

On Sunday, thousands more jammed the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's seats and infield to watch, or just hear, racers with 700-plus horsepower engines scream past at up to 200 mph.

The 500-mile race was won by Danny Sullivan, who earlier had nearly eliminated himself and veteran Mario Andretti when he spun out trying to pass Andretti. Andretti was just 3.4 seconds behind Sullivan, who averaged 152.982 mph.

Out West, a warning of a possible new eruption at Mount St. Helens didn't keep tourists away from campgrounds, fishing areas and resorts outside.

Woman seeks husband's right to die

By CHRISTOPHER B. DALY

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — Patricia Brophy says her husband had seen many hopelessly ill people, kept alive by tubes and technology, and often said he didn't want to suffer that fate.

For two years, however, 48-year-old Paul Brophy has been in a coma, kept alive by nourishment which trickles through a tube — and by a hospital's insistence that it can do nothing which would inevitably kill a patient.

In a turn-of-the century stone courthouse in this Boston suburb, Mrs. Brophy is seeking a court order to remove her husband's feeding tube and let him die — a process that would take a matter of weeks.

Brophy suffered a burst blood vessel in his brain two years ago.

Doctors at New England Medical Center in Boston tried to repair the damage, but he never regained consciousness. He was later transferred to New England Sinai Hospital, a private chronic care facility in Stoughton, where he remains.

Mrs. Brophy, a registered nurse, wants the feeding ended, and says her husband would agree.

The issue of withholding food from an unconscious, irreversibly ill patient has rarely been decided in United States courts, according to attorneys in the case. In part, that is because patients like Brophy would have died quickly as recently as the 1960s.

In New Jersey, the state Supreme Court ruled earlier this year that life-sustaining treatment might be withheld from an incompetent patient if it was clear that the patient would agree with that course. The case involved a comatose 84-year-old nursing home patient whose guardian sought permission to remove her feeding tube. She died before the court ruled.

After months of watching her husband lie in what doctors call "a persistent vegetative state," Mrs. Brophy went to her Roman Catholic parish priest for advice. He put her in touch with the Rev. John J. Paris, a Jesuit professor at Holy Cross College in Worcester and an expert in ethics.

Paris testified last week that he asked Mrs. Brophy to read the expert literature on the subject, then he posed three questions: Was her husband's condition hopeless? Would he want to stop treatment? Does the family agree with her decision to withhold nourishment?

When she answered yes to all three, Paris said he urged Mrs. Brophy to begin negotiations with Brophy's hospital caretakers.

At that point, sometime this spring, a medical case began to turn into a legal controversy.

Doctors at New England Sinai balked at her request, saying it would violate their professional, ethical and moral standards. Experts testified last week that such decisions are made routinely in American hospitals, but only when all sides agree.

When the hospital refused, Paris referred Mrs. Brophy to Frank Reardon, a Boston attorney who agreed to take the case without his usual fee.

At a pre-trial hearing, the court appointed an attorney, Peter Gubellini, to serve as an advocate for Brophy. New England Sinai was also ordered to make every effort to keep the patient alive until a decision is reached.

Mrs. Brophy has said her husband, an emergency medical techician, had seen many helpless patients and the couple had often discussed the issue. "He said, 'If I ever get to be this way, I want you to pull the plug,'" Mrs. Brophy told The New York Times.

She said her husband's care costs about $150,000 a year, which is largely paid by Blue Cross.

As the trial began on Mrs. Brophy's complaint against the hospital, Reardon used expert witnesses to argue that withholding food from Brophy — given his condition and his outlook — would be a painless way to let his illness run its course.

"The question you always want to ask is, 'What is the goal of the intervention?' If it is merely to prolong the dying process, there is no moral obligation whatsoever," Paris testified.

Sitting next to Reardon in court has been Elaine Moriarty, representing New England Sinai. She says the hospital would not fight an order to move Brophy to another facility where doctors would agree to remove or clamp Brophy's feeding tube.

Next to her sits Gubellini, whose role has so far been limited to objecting to Reardon's tactics and cross-examining Reardon's witnesses.

One opposing witness did take the stand Friday.

Dr. Richard A. Field, New England Sinai's medical chief, said he had helped liberate thousands of starving Jews from a Nazi concentration camp in 1945.

State representatives approve 'natural death act' legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Sunday sent Gov. Mark White a measure that would allow relatives to determine whether life-prolonging efforts should be withheld from terminally ill patients.

Sponsor Bob Bush, D-Sherman, called the measure the "natural death act." Critics called it the "pull-the-plug bill."

A voice vote in the House gave approval to an amendment added in the Senate.

Under the bill, two physicians, including the one attending the patient, must say in writing the patient is terminally ill. Then the patient, in writing or orally, can grant the right to two other persons to make the right-to-die decision if the patient is not able to make it.

Current state law, passed in 1977, allows removal of life-support systems only if a patient has previously directed in writing that such systems not be used to prolong life.

Earlier Sunday, a 55-year-old Odessa man was pronounced dead by Ector County Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford after his 1985 Ford pickup swerved slowly off the road while heading south on State Highway 385, struck a fence and gradually came to a rest in a field, DPS reports said.

An autopsy may be performed to determine the cause of death for Jack Edward Scott, 3136 N. Dixie, in the accident, which occurred at about 10:40 a.m. in Ector County, approximately 2.5 miles south of Odessa, according to the DPS.

SENATE

"The theory is that the board needs public members who are sensitive to the environment," said Caperton.

Asked about a provision to "sunset' the board in two years, unless continued by the Legislature, Caperton said, "The House feels the board has not been as concerned with environmental concerns as it could be."

Parker said he wanted a board that would be "free of public sentiment" at the time of decision-making.

"House amendments are not going to be detrimental to industry," said Caperton, but a 16-member Senate majority voted with Parker to reject House amendments.

The Senate narrowly beat back an attempt to go to conference committee on a bill that would continue the Texas Commission on Alcoholism. A motion not to accept House amendments failed 14-15, and the agency, with the new name of Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, was continued 15-13.

Several senators objected to transferring drug abuse programs from the Texas Department of Community Affairs to the alcohol-drug commission.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, said the Texas Commission on Alcoholism had been cited for needing 74 employees to administer a $10 million budget, which included only $6.3 million in client aid.

Spanish tankers blasts claim at least 16 lives

ALGECIRAS, Spain (AP) — Explosions tore through two oil tankers docked at a refinery across from the Rock of Gibraltar Sunday, killing at least 16 people and leaving 19 missing, an official said.

Heat from the flaming hulks kept police frogmen from searching for more bodies, said Mariano Baquedano, civil governor of the province of Cadiz.

The Spanish Merchant Marine in Madrid issued a statement saying the explosions could have been caused by gases that accumulated in the hold of one tanker, the Petragen One, as it unloaded a cargo of naphtha.

Witnesses said the explosions engulfed the wharf in flames in this southern Spanish port.

Bacquedano reported 34 men were hospitalized for injuries suffered when at least two explosions rocked the Panamanian-registered Petragen One and the Spanish tanker Camponavia.

Both tankers were docked in front of the Gibraltar refinery, owned by the Spanish company CEPSA. Refinery manager Jose Maria Pons told The Associated Press that the Petragen One had picked up 20,000 tons of naphtha in Libya.

The Camponavia, moored at the wharf closeby, was taking on a load of gasoline from the refinery, Pons said. The tankers' destinations were not immediately known.

Pons said all indications were that the first explosion occurred in the Petragen One, which he said sank in flames. He said the Spanish tanker broke in two.

The 19,060-ton Petragen One carried a crew of 29, said Antonio Fernandez, spokesman for the Cadiz civil governor's office.

From a list of crew released to the Spanish national news agency EFE, it appeared most of the crewmen were South Koreans, although the captain, Umbibe Masasika, and at least five others apparently were Japanese.

Officials identified two Japanese and three South Koreans among the dead.

Texas may experience growth spurt

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite being recognized as the energy capital of the nation, Texas has often found itself waiting in the wings while such state as New York dominated much of the nation's limelight.

But as the 21st century rolls around, Texas, it seems, could take center stage, becoming the first or second most populous state — behind California with growth reaching 20 million, the Houston Post reported Sunday.

Texas currently ranks third in population behind California and New York.

The U.S. Census Bureau places Texas second to California in the year 2000 — with respective populations of 20.7 million and 30.6 million.

But the Lone Star boom could put Texas in first place that year, according to Susan Szaniszlo, coordinator of the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations in Austin.

The commission also projects Texas to pass New York in 1990.

The Texas Department of Health predicts Texas actually will have a population of about 27.8 million by 2000, including 14,354,264 Anglos, 11,153,252 Hispanics, and 2,347,928 blacks.

The anticipated population explosion is expected to include a massive influx of senior citizens seeking Sun Belt comfort and a continuing increase in the numbers of Hispanics seeking to better their lives by moving into Texas from Mexico, officials say.

The estimated 3.8 million Hispanics in Texas today are expected to almost triple to just more than 11 million, exceeding today's Anglos population of 10 million plus.

Irish unrest dates to Christmas greeting

By MARCUS ELIASON

LIMAVADY, Northern Ireland (AP) — On Christmas Day 1983, the Rev. Kevin Mullan left his Roman Catholic church, crossed the road to the Presbyterian chapel where his friend the Rev. David Armstrong was officiating, and wished the congregation Happy Christmas.

It was a bold gesture involving two young and forward-looking clerics, both in their mid-30s, but it was to convulse the little town of Limavady, and eventually force the Presbyterian minister to quit Northern Ireland, leaving his congregation bitterly divided.

Limavady, an otherwise tranquil town of 1,500 Protestants and 1,200 Catholics in the north of the British province also known as Ulster, has become a microcosm of the religious gulf that lies at the bottom of Northern Ireland's troubles.

On Christmas 1983, Mullan had only recently taken up his position at the Church of Christ the King. But he had already met Armstrong, pastor of the First Limavady Presbyterian Church across Scroggy Road, and had been impressed by his speeches.

In 1981 a bomb planted outside the Catholic church had broken the windows of the Presbyterian one.

"A lot of people feel that we have all suffered together in the troubles and that any little gesture at all would help," Mullan said.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Mullan recalled that as he crossed Scroggy Road to Armstrong's church, "I was a little nervous." But Armstrong welcomed him and had him address the congregation.

"I just introduced myself as their new Catholic neighbor across the way and said I wanted them to know that I wished them well," he said. Most of the worshipers applauded, "but some of them avoided shaking hands."

Armstrong said to him: "That was great! Can I do the same for your congregation?" Mullan invited him to his church during Mass, and he was received rapturously by the Catholic worshipers.

To hard-line Protestants in Northern Ireland, the event smacked of ecumenism, which they see as a Catholic plot to weaken the Protestants' resolve and draw them into accepting the unification of the province, which has a 2-1 Protestant majority, with the predominantly Catholic Irish republic to the south.

On Christmas 1984, about 40 demonstrators assembled outside the Presbyterian church, waiting for Mullan to appear as he did the year before.

The priest recalled: "Their leader said, 'I don't wish you any harm.' I said, 'I don't wish you any harm either....' He started giving me this big tract about the Reformation, how the Catholic Church had burned heretics at the stake. I said: 'I wouldn't do that to you and I hope you wouldn't do that to me.' "

As he entered the church, he said, a demonstrator preceded him saying, "Make way for the agent of Rome." Inside the church, "three gentlemen stood up in the second row holding Bibles and shouting to David (Armstrong) that he was betraying the Reformation," Mullan went on. "Other people were saying 'sit down' and 'keep quiet' to them."

"Some of them were crying. A lot of us ended up crying because it was a terrible experience to have on Christmas Day....

"As we left people came up and said, 'It was right for you to come and you're to come again next year and we can't let this sort of thing happen.' "

This past April, Armstrong announced that he was leaving for mainland Britain.

"A church that has nothing to say about reconciliation has got nothing to say at all," he was quoted by the Belfast Telegraph as saying.

Opinions are divided on whom to blame. Mullan blames "the Paisleyites," followers of the militant Rev. Ian Paisley's Free Presbyterian Church.

Armstrong, who is in Oxford preparing to join the Church of England, has refused to give interviews since leaving Limavady.

Grateful memory

Memorial Day was set aside to honor the defenders of an idea.

It's ironic that although the occasion was established to honor the graves of Civil War dead, most of those who died in subsequent wars perished outside the United States. They fell in distant lands, defending not their farms or families but an idea — the concept of freedom.

America's relatively short attention span stems from its unique heritage, its ideal geography and its abundant resources. For a lot of Americans, Memorial Day is a three-day weekend, not a day of retrospection on enduring truths. While that may in a way detract from the full and solemn meaning of the celebration, it is still a right a million American servicemen gave their lives to insure.

They died at places like Concord, New Orleans, Bull Run, San Juan, Chateau-Thierry, St. Lo, Iwo Jima, Inchon, Khe Sanh and Da Nang. Their blood was given for the idea, the way of life that somehow made it worthwhile.

The wars have been great bonding agents in this widely diverse nation. Even so, the consensus has been fragile. It was only last year that Ronald Reagan became the symbolic father of Vietnam's Unknown Soldier. It was only two weeks ago that the tickertape fell for those who bravely fought for us in Vietnam despite our loss of faith in their cause there.

Today Midlanders should join all other Americans in giving thanks that there are no Americans stumbling into the hell of battle. We are at peace. Yet, our willingness to defend ourselves and to uphold the liberty and self-determination of embattled nations must abide. That willingness is renewed by Memorial Day rededication.

Taps echo over American cemeteries throughout the continents of the world. Those who fell and now lie in peace are gratefully remembered.

Mobile castles?

One of the more interesting rulings of the Supreme Court in recent weeks reflects the increasingly transient nature of the U.S. population. It also states definitions which may prove somewhat transitory themselves in this technological age.

In a 6-3 decision, the high court determined that a motor home, if it is the type that can be driven away easily, may be searched by police without a warrant just like an ordinary automobile on the highway. Dissenters on the court argued that while a motor home is not the proverbial "man's castle," it is at least the "functional equivalent" of a dwelling place whose occupants merit protection from warrantless intrusion.

Unfortunately, the Supreme Court decision, stemming from a narcotics raid on a motor home in California, left open the question of dealing with those mobile homes that are anchored to foundation supports and connected to utility lines. Unquestionably the country — and the U.S. Supreme Court — will soon be hearing from that sector.

Another View:

Pentagon 'windfall'

The Pentagon is caught in another embarrassment of riches that doesn't ease the task of lawmakers trying to pass a fair deficit reduction package.

This latest defense budget flap doesn't involve outrageous charges by greedy contractors, but is the result of a falling inflation rate during the last four years. Because the Reagan administration overestimated the rate of inflation, more money has been appropriated than needed.

The windfall came to light a few days ago at congressional hearings on the deficit reduction package. After the Senate passed what appeared to be a "no growth" budget limiting defense increases to the rate of inflation, the Senate Armed Services Committee was informed by Pentagon controller Robert W. Helm that its task of cutting programs to meet any cuts would be easier than imagined because $4 billion in unspent funds had turned up from this fiscal year's accounts.

Mr. Helm's disclosure was churlishly received by Congress, especially from House Democrats who want a freeze in defense spending instead of one for Social Security. House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., was moved to charge that between $18 billion to $50 billion in funds had been squirreled away by the Pentagon during the last four years.

Meanwhile, Republican senators who voted for a one-year freeze in Social Security benefits to cover the "no growth" Pentagon budget, were furious they hadn't been told the money was available.

In fairness to the Pentagon, inflation accounted for only $1.6 billion of the $4 billion surplus; the rest came from unspent contingencies that federal agencies traditionally squander at the end of a fiscal year to avoid any surplus showing for budget cutters.

It should also be noted that during the 1970s, many federal programs, including those for defense, suffered because of the tendency to underestimate the rate of inflation. The Reagan administration's effort to catch up with $1 trillion worth of defense improvements — twice overwhelmingly endorsed by the voters — has brought wasteful production and procurement bottlenecks.

But cutting the defense budget too harshly on the assumption that billions may be hidden away could be a costly mistake if it forces another major buildup in the future.

Because both national security and popular domestic programs are at stake, the American people deserve to learn the truth about any Pentagon budget padding. Unfortunately, the controversy appears to have degenerated into a partisan treasure hunt with the "can't do anything right" Pentagon targeted for easy pickings.

JACK ANDERSON

Agent told drop Donovan probe

WASHINGTON — An FBI agent who turned up allegations that Labor Secretary-designate Raymond Donovan had close ties to the underworld was told not to pursue the matter, according to documents the FBI has suppressed for more than four years.

Jack Anderson

The G-man's disclosure of Donovan's alleged mob connections was included in a teletype dated Jan. 10, 1981, during the initial stages of Donovan's first confirmation hearing before the Senate Labor Committee.

In an FBI interview 10 days later, the agent charged that he had been told to drop this line of inquiry. This occurred one week before FBI officials assured the Senate committee there was no evidence that Donovan had any "significant" dealings with alleged Mafia figure William Masselli.

Neither the incriminating teletype nor the agent's charge that he had been called off was made known to the Senate committee. Our associate Tony Capaccio has obtained copies of the teletype and the FBI interview with the agent. Here's what happened:

Special Agent Lawrence T. Sweeney of the FBI's New York office was told by an informant that "the Schiavone Construction Co., in which appointee (Donovan) has been serving as vice president, has particularly close ties to the Genovese family of La Cosa Nostra," according to the teletype sent to FBI headquarters in Washington.

The informant also "advised that appointee has a particularly close relationship with William Masselli." The teletype added: "Masselli is a 'soldier' in the Genovese LCN family. Through Masselli, appointee is supposed to have been introduced to Genovese (lieutenants)."

Sweeney had an interview with the FBI inspector 10 days later to review allegations that his informant, Michael Orlando, was "dirty" and "uncontrollable." The reliability of Orlando's information was never called into question.

Sweeney defended his informant during the Jan. 20 interview. "Sweeney said the informant calls with information and volunteers this information," according to the interview transcript. "(Orlando) recently called and volunteered information concerning (Donovan) and the informant had not even realized the significance of the information."

Sweeney "advised that he had worked on the Donovan matter the past weekend and had been asked whether or not he had asked the informant any questions (about Donovan) and he said he had not," the interview transcript states.

Sweeney said "he then asked if he could query the informant about the matter and was informed 'no,' he could not ask the informant any questions (about Donovan)."

Apparently Sweeney wasn't asked who had told him not to pursue Donovan's alleged mob ties nor did the agent volunteer the identity. Sweeney reportedly wrote down his accusation and sent it to FBI Director William Webster, at Webster's request.

Footnote: The case on which Orlando was giving Sweeney information was the controversial "TUMCON" surveillance of alleged mobsters, in which the FBI recorded 892 tapes in 1979.

Though the FBI was aware that Donovan and other Schiavone executives were mentioned repeatedly in the TUMCON tapes, FBI officials deliberately misled the Senate committee about what was on the tapes. The TUMCON tapes are now the basis of the government's grand larceny case against Donovan, Masselli and eight others.

WE TOLD YOU SO: The Washington Post's Bob Woodward and Charles Babcock broke the story that a CIA-supported counterterrorist group had conducted an unauthorized car-bomb mission in Beirut, resulting in more than 80 deaths. This is exactly what we warned would happen.

As far back as Aug. 26, 1981, we reported that the CIA "is preparing to join forces with ... anti-communist factions in the conduct of covert operations around the world," that this "could throw us into an uncomfortable embrace with extremists who are morally objectionable ... even with terrorists whom we claim to abhor" and that the CIA could "wind up supporting revolutionary forces and exile groups, with no control over what these groups do."

WHITE HOUSE WHISPERS: No one would offend Paul Volcker, the 6-foot-7 Federal Reserve Board chairman, to his face. But behind his back, some White House higher-ups call him "Mumbles." They have a hard time following his rambling, mumbling style of disclosure. To make matters worse, few can decipher Volcker's handwritten memos.

FUTURE FILE: Is another banking crisis in the offing? The number of "problem banks" on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s list now numbers more than 960 — a record post-Depression high. In California alone, one out of every eight banks is in difficulty. Banking regulators predict privately that more than 100 U.S. banks will go under this year. (From 1943 to 1981, there were only six failures per year on the average.)

Bush campaign 'premature'?

WASHINGTON — The emergence of Nicholas Brady, head of the Wall Street house Dillon Read, as Vice President George Bush's senior political adviser points to the direction and exposes the dangers of his embryonic campaign for the 1988 presidential nomination.

Investment banker Brady never has run for office nor been deeply involved in campaign politics. He appeared on the national political scene only during his eight-month stint as an appointive senator from New Jersey. The fact that he is at Bush's side and the more politically experienced Bush lieutenants of past years are on the shelf leads one such discarded adviser to see "a buttoned-down, striped-tie, Eastern establishment candidacy" that could be fatal.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Linked to this danger is the old political malady of premature incumbency, a misperception that very nearly cost Walter F. Mondale the 1984 Democratic nomination. "I think the nomination is his to lose," a Bush aide told us, unconsciously repeating the exact words used endlessly by Mondalites in the years preceding 1984.

Such an assessment is hardly unreasonable. Bush runs far ahead of any other Republican in the polls, has been all but endorsed by President Reagan and has neutralized his former opposition on the Right (winning endorsement from the Moral Majority's Jerry Falwell).

Nobody can even say with certainty that Rep. Jack Kemp, presumably the vice president's most formidable challenger, is actually running. In contrast, the remarkably advanced state of the Bush campaign was evidenced when the vice president talked political strategy last weekend in Nashville in a hush-hush session with key supporters from throughout the South. Most were leaders in past Bush and Reagan campaigns.

Yet, the "his-to-lose" mindset leads to playing it safe — the politics of caution that nearly ruined Mondale and has cost Bush dearly in the past. His political apparatus, restructured since his unhappy vice-presidential campaign, is built for caution rather than innovation.

Such caution was foreshadowed at the 1984 convention in Dallas when Bush ordered — and got — a vice-presidential acceptance speech tailored for conformity rather than passion. In the ensuing campaign, he encountered the worst publicity of his career, not because of Agnewesque gaffes but because of media perception of lockstep conformity.

Whatever the cause of his 1984 troubles, it was his longtime political advisers who were benched. No longer in the inner circle are the key Bush advisers of the past five years: political wise man Dean Burch, a Goldwaterite insurgent of 1964 who became a Washington insider; ex-Agnew aide Vic Gold, Bush's most skilled speechwriter; veteran press secretary Pete Teeley, who has opened his own public relations firm.

In their place is a four-man inner circle headed by Brady and including pollster Robert Teeter, political consultant (and 1984 Reagan-Bush deputy campaign manager) Lee Atwater, and Craig Fuller, snatched from the White House to be the vice president's chief of staff. That this Brady cadre is short on passion reinforces George Bush's own tendencies.

Indeed, when one of them suggested to Bush he consider distancing himself from President Reagan, the vice president flared up and asserted that he had gotten this far as a Reagan man and was going to continue as one. He promptly showed it with uncompromising support of the the Bitburg visit.

As demonstrated by Richard Nixon in 1960 and Hubert Humphrey in 1968, a sitting vice president has little margin for straying from his president — a partial explanation of why Martin Van Buren was the last incumbent vice president elected. Kemp and others, perhaps including Sen. Bob Dole, have more freedom to pick and choose.

What could be fatal is acting as though the nomination were already won. Scattered instances of longtime Bush supporters unable to get an appointment with the vice president, or even get Fuller on the telephone, smell of premature incumbency.

That odor is unsettling to longtime Bush backers who know their man. He is most appealing and effective in the role of battling underdog, as when he announced his 1980 presidential campaign amid sarcastic amusement by insiders. He can be at his worst as the front-runner, as when that same year he pulled defeat from the jaws of victory in New Hampshire following his great Iowa upset. Avoiding the ills of premature incumbency is not the same as running Dillon Read.

CHARLEY REESE

Books can't impart virtue

A visit to any bookstore except one for pornography will reveal the products of a large industry: Books that propose solutions to every problem from poverty to puberty. Most are either nonsense or formularized expansions on old proverbs and common sense. However, they do have the advantage of a positive outlook over the largest industry among intellectuals — describing problems.

Charley Reese

Solving a problem requires brains, creativity and energy. Any lazy and mediocre mind can describe a problem, especially one that already has been described to death. Sociologists and political scientists, like certain literary academicians, feed off each other's mental excrement so that the same material keeps getting recycled into print. Like some members of the political right, they have confused footnotes with proof.

Government grants are the major contributor to this useless industry. If the government is going to meddle at all, it should offer prizes for solutions, not grants for studying. Studying, in modern academia, means simply describing and cataloging previous descriptions. It produces pomposity but rarely if ever advances human knowledge.

Hidden in all this intellectual gobbledygook is a basic truth, namely that most of what people call problems are not mistakes but deliberate acts of immorality. Lack of data and ignorance of consequences don't cause most human misery. Willful acts by dishonorable and vice-ridden people cause it.

Modern man, however, seems determined to rule morality out of existence as a factor in human behavior. Actually, it is the chief factor. Ancient vices — dishonesty, greed, lust, and cowardice — are the causes of most modern problems.

Defense fraud and overcharges, for example, are not an effect of a system but are the result of dishonest and greedy people who have chosen to act in dishonorable ways. Cheating is a form of theft, no different from bank robbery except in methodology. Unfair pricing, producing inferior products, and exploiting employees also are forms of theft. They demonstrate a person's willingness to deprive others of the fruit of their labor by deception or by a form of coercion.

It is a fallacy to suppose that you can correct immorality with laws, regulations and systems. The only thing the law can do is punish it. Yet most modern intellectuals, like Jonah trying to hide from God, will do almost anything rather than admit the critical role morality plays in human affairs.

A key factor in the success of the American Revolution was not only the intelligence but the integrity and honor of the American leaders. Thomas Jefferson, in rebuffing an attempt by Aaron Burr to blackmail him, scornfully told Burr that he feared no lie Burr could tell and that as for the truth, he (Jefferson) had never done or said anything in his life that he would be ashamed for the whole world to know.

Jefferson said of James Monroe that he was so honest "you could turn his soul inside out and never find a spot on it." George Washington's commitment to honesty and honor was so fierce that his associates feared to act in any way he would consider dishonorable.

Jefferson told Peter Carr, his favorite nephew: "Pursue the interests of your country, the interests of your friends, and your own interests also, with the purest integrity, the most chaste honor. The defect of virtues can never be made by all the other acquirements of body and mind ... Give up money, give up fame, give up science, give up the Earth itself and all it contains, rather than do an immoral act."

The wonderful thing about morality is that anyone can become virtuous by simply deciding to be virtuous. It's an accomplishment within the grasp of every human being regardless of wealth, position, age, sex, race, creed or anything else. Virtue, as both Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin stressed, is strengthened by practice.

A modern comedian remarked, "If you don't like the world, then right yourself." There is indeed no other solution, no other hope for relieving human misery, than for human beings, one by one, to make the decision to be virtuous. I don't think it is too much to ask of any human being that he or she be honest, just and kind in his or her relationships in public and private life.

Rather than more studies and more how-to books, we need men and women who will make a vow to live with honor and integrity. The alternative, and don't kid yourself that there is another, is the law of the jungle where the strong and ruthless devour the weak.

Mengele's trail grows cold in Paraguay

Tracking Dr. Josef Mengele

The trail of the Auschwitz "death doctor" reportedly leads through almost a dozen countries. Many believe he is still in Paraguay.

1944 — Auschwitz, Poland
1945 — Prison camp, W. Germany?
1945 — Guenzburg, W. Germany
1949 — Genoa, Italy — Argentina
1959 — Asuncion, Paraguay
1960 — Argentina?
1960-65 — Paraguay?
1965 — Spain?
1966 — Argentina?
1967 — Brazil
1972 — Paraguay?
1977 — Bolivia?
1979 — Paraguay, Chile?
1980 — Portugal, Chile, Bolivia Uruguay?
1982-84 — Paraguay?

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this 40th anniversary year of World War II's end, the search for old Nazi war criminals has taken on new urgency. Justice is losing its race with time. And time has made one man the most hunted fugitive of all. Here is a report.

By CHARLES J.HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

From the deathly winter of Auschwitz, the trail leads to the steamy, everlasting summer of Paraguay. And there it fades in the green emptiness.

"Born March 16, 1911, Guenzburg, Germany," reads the Interpol bulletin. "Height 174 cm. Green-brown eyes. Oval face. High forehead. Straight nose. Broad chin. Speaks German, Spanish, English."

After 40 years, after 6,400 German war criminals have been brought to justice, after uncounted others have died peacefully in their beds, and one man remains as the living, unpunished symbol of the Nazi Holocaust.

Dr. Josef Mengele, Auschwitz's "Angel of Death," has been durable, elusive — and lucky.

Israeli agents just missed trapping him 25 years ago in Argentina. They later tracked him down again in Paraguay, but they hesitated and he was gone.

Paraguay's strongman president, Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, contends Mengele has not been there for years. But Hans Eberhard Klein, the West German prosecutor with the Mengele dossier, does not buy it.

"Most evidence we have indicates Mengele is living in Paraguay," he says.

In an unprecedented move, West German, Israeli and U.S. government investigators have announced a joint effort to try to capture the 74-year-old German physician.

If brought to trial — in West Germany, Israel or Poland — he faces an indictment of staggering dimensions: the murder of 400,000 Jews and others he allegedly selected for the Auschwitz gas chambers, and the murder and maiming of thousands in cruel medical experiments.

The Mengele trail is almost cold.

Most reports of the well-traveled doctor's stopovers are second-or third-hand, passed on by dedicated "Nazi hunters" or investigative writers. Reconstructing the trail, relying on usually unverifiable accounts, produces a story filled with unexplained gaps and mysteries:

In 1943-44, the young, dark-haired doctor stood regularly at the Auschwitz railway platform, coolly consigning 90 percent of new arrivals to the gas chambers, survivors report. They say the rest were put to hard labor or were subjected to Mengele's primitive experiments.

But on Jan. 27, 1945, when advancing Soviet troops liberated the camp complex in southern Poland, SS Capt. Mengele was no longer there.

It is generally believed he had made his way back to his Bavarian hometown, Guenzburg, where the Mengele family still owns a farm-machinery factory. But a recently declassified U.S. Army document and the recollection of an ex-GI suggest that the death-camp doctor actually might have been in U.S. custody for a time. The Army is now digging deeper into its old files for firmer evidence.

An American prosecutor at the Nuremburg war crimes trial reported erroneously in 1946 that Mengele was dead, columnist Jack Anderson has reported.

If Mengele was imprisoned, he was released or escaped at some point, since authorities are sure that in 1949 he sailed from Genoa, Italy, for Argentina, bearing a Red Cross passport in the name "Helmut Gregor."

He arrived in Buenos Aires at the height of dictator Juan Peron's power, a time when ex-Nazis were openly accepted there. One was Adolf Eichmann, a top official responsible for the Jewish genocide.

Little is known of Mengele's decade in Argentina. Unconfirmed reports say he sold Mengele-made farm equipment and practiced medicine. One account says he performed abortions.

In September 1955, President Peron was driven from Argentina and fled to neighboring, landlocked Paraguay. Mengele may have gone there at about the same time, or he may have traveled back and forth between the two countries. He was certainly in Paraguay's sleepy riverside capital of Asuncion on Nov. 27, 1959, when he was naturalized as a Paraguayan citizen.

"No one was looking for him when he applied to become a Paraguayan," Judge Eugenio Jimenez y Nunez, who approved the naturalization, recalled in a recent interview.

Within weeks, however, someone was indeed looking for Mengele.

Israeli agents who slipped into Buenos Aires in early 1960 to kidnap Eichmann learned that another prize, the Auschwitz "death doctor," was living in a wealthy northern suburb.

Isser Harel, director of Israel's Mossad secret service at the time, recalls that his agents abducted Eichmann and held him in a "safe-house" for 10 days while they reconnoitered for Mengele. In the end, they discovered he had left his house weeks before. They took Eichmann alone back to Israel, where he was tried and hanged. But Mengele was never far from Harel's mind.

Through the 1960s, he says, Israeli agents again and again traced Mengele to Paraguayan hideouts, including a mansion in Encarnacion, a port on the broad Parana River. But he was always heavily guarded, and "we would have had to use military force to get him out," Harel said.

In West Germany, meanwhile, a trial opened in December 1963 for two dozen Auschwitz officers. The Bonn government asked Paraguay for Mengele's extradition, but the Paraguayans said he could not be found.

Possibly conflicting reports muddle the Mengele trail in the 1960s.

In the 20 years since then, Mengele has been reported sighted again and again in Paraguay and nearby countries, especially in small German communities along the muddy Parana.

On Aug. 8, 1979, the Supreme Court in Asuncion stripped Mengele of his Paraguayan citizenship, asserting he had been absent from the country since 1960.

Temperature climbs near record high

From Staff and Wire Reports

The temperature reached 98 in Midland Sunday, only 2 degrees short of the 1945 record of 100, and a high near 100 is predicted for today, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The thunderstorms of recent days have receded, and skies will be clear for Memorial Day, with winds from the south at 5-10 mph. Tonight will be clear with a low near 70, and Tuesday will be clear with a high in the upper 90s.

The overnight low of 61 was 13 degrees above the 1947 record of 48.

STATE

Mostly fair skies and unusually warm temperatures pervaded Texas Sunday, but the National Weather Service said conditions were ripe for another round of thunderstorms.

A weak upper air disturbance stretching from western Oklahoma to Midland threatened to bring severe thunderstorms to northern areas of the state.

Late Sunday afternoon, a few scattered showers and thunderstorms were beginning over the eastern Panhandle, but no other moisture was reported across the state throughout the day.

Temperatures soared into the 90s in most areas of Texas and peaked at 101 in the West Texas town of Wink. A few 80-degree readings were reported in eastern areas of the state.

Daytime temperatures are expected to be in the 80s and 90s over most of the state on Memorial Day.

Overnight lows will be in the 60s and 70s Monday night.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered Sunday from New York state to Wisconsin and the middle Missouri Valley, with a few showers over Florida, while fair weather prevailed across the rest of the nation.

Temperatures warmed into the 80s and lower 90s from the southern and middle Atlantic Coast states to the southern and central Plains, which were below a weather front. Temperatures north of the front were mostly in the 50s and 60s, with some 40s around the Great Lakes.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 45 degrees at Houghton, Mich., to 95 degrees at Phoenix, Ariz.

Monday's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from northern New England across parts of the upper Ohio Valley.

Sullivan turns Sunday spin into victory

AP Laserphoto

Danny Sullivan slides sideways with his tires smoking just 21 laps before taking the checkered flag in the Indy 500 Sunday. He managed to avoid wall and stay in the race.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Sullivan took a Sunday spin — literally — and came away with his first victory in the Indianapolis 500.

Sullivan, who did a 360-degree spin at high speed after making a pass for the lead just over halfway through the race, somehow managed to miss the concrete wall, gather the car back in and go on to frustrate Mario Andretti's 15th bid for a second Indy victory.

"I was just hanging on," Sullivan said. "Once we got through that, I knew we could make it. I looked at it this way: The sun was shining on me. Somebody up there was looking out for us."

Andretti, who won this race in 1969 and has come up empty-handed ever since, said of Sullivan's spin right in front of his speeding Lola, "I just prayed a little for the milisecond I had, but everything worked out all right."

The 45-year-old Andretti regained the lead when Sullivan spun on lap 120. But Sullivan got back on top for good just 20 laps later.

His white and red March racer beat Andretti's Lola to the finish line by 2.5 seconds, averaging 152.982 mph and covering the 500 miles in 3 hours, 16 minutes and 6.069 seconds. Andretti was clocked at 152.852 mph.

The race was slowed by nine caution flags and fell far below the speed record of 163.612 set last year by Rick Mears.

Roberto Guerrero of Colombia, last year's runner-up as a rookie, was third in the unofficial finish, followed by three-time winners Al Unser and Johnny Rutherford, and Holland's Arie Luyendyk, the highest finisher among the rookies.

Andretti, who led most of the first half of the race, was obviously disappointed by falling short on his best effort since 1981, when he finished second to Bobby Unser.

"It was pretty much the race that everyone predicted," Andretti said. "I ran as hard as I could. I made no mistakes. I just didn't have enough speed."

Sullivan, 35, a jet-set playboy from Louisville, Ky., who spent several years as a journeyman in Formula One racing, finished 14th as an Indy rookie in 1982. He concentrated on the Formula One series in 1983 and did not run any Indy-car races that year, but came back last year and finished 29th after his car was damaged in a collision on the 57th lap. He also won three races on the CART Indy-car circuit and finished fourth in the season standings.

"We just had it all hooked up," he said. "These guys (on his Penske Racing Team crew) were just great. We had some little problems early on. We thought we had got ourselves behind the 8-ball, but we got back in. The next thing we knew, we were leading and then they couldn't get rid of us."

Andretti was just one of six former Indy champions in the race and the only one who was in contention near the end of the 69th edition of the world's richest and most important race. Four-time winner A.J. Foyt finished 28th in his 28th start, falling two laps short of logging 10,000 miles at Indy, while three-time winners Unser and Johnny Rutherford were fourth and fifth, respectively. Two-time winner Mears was 21st and 1983 winner Tom Sneva, knocked out by one of three crashes, was 20th.

Shreveport steals Beaumont bus magic

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Whatever it is they put on that Beaumont-to-Midland bus, the Midland Angels would sure like to know what it is and bottle it.

Early in May, Midland stepped off the bus from Beaumont and scored 17 runs. Sunday, the Shreveport Captains made the 12-hour trip and it was the Angels who paid the price, 11-5.

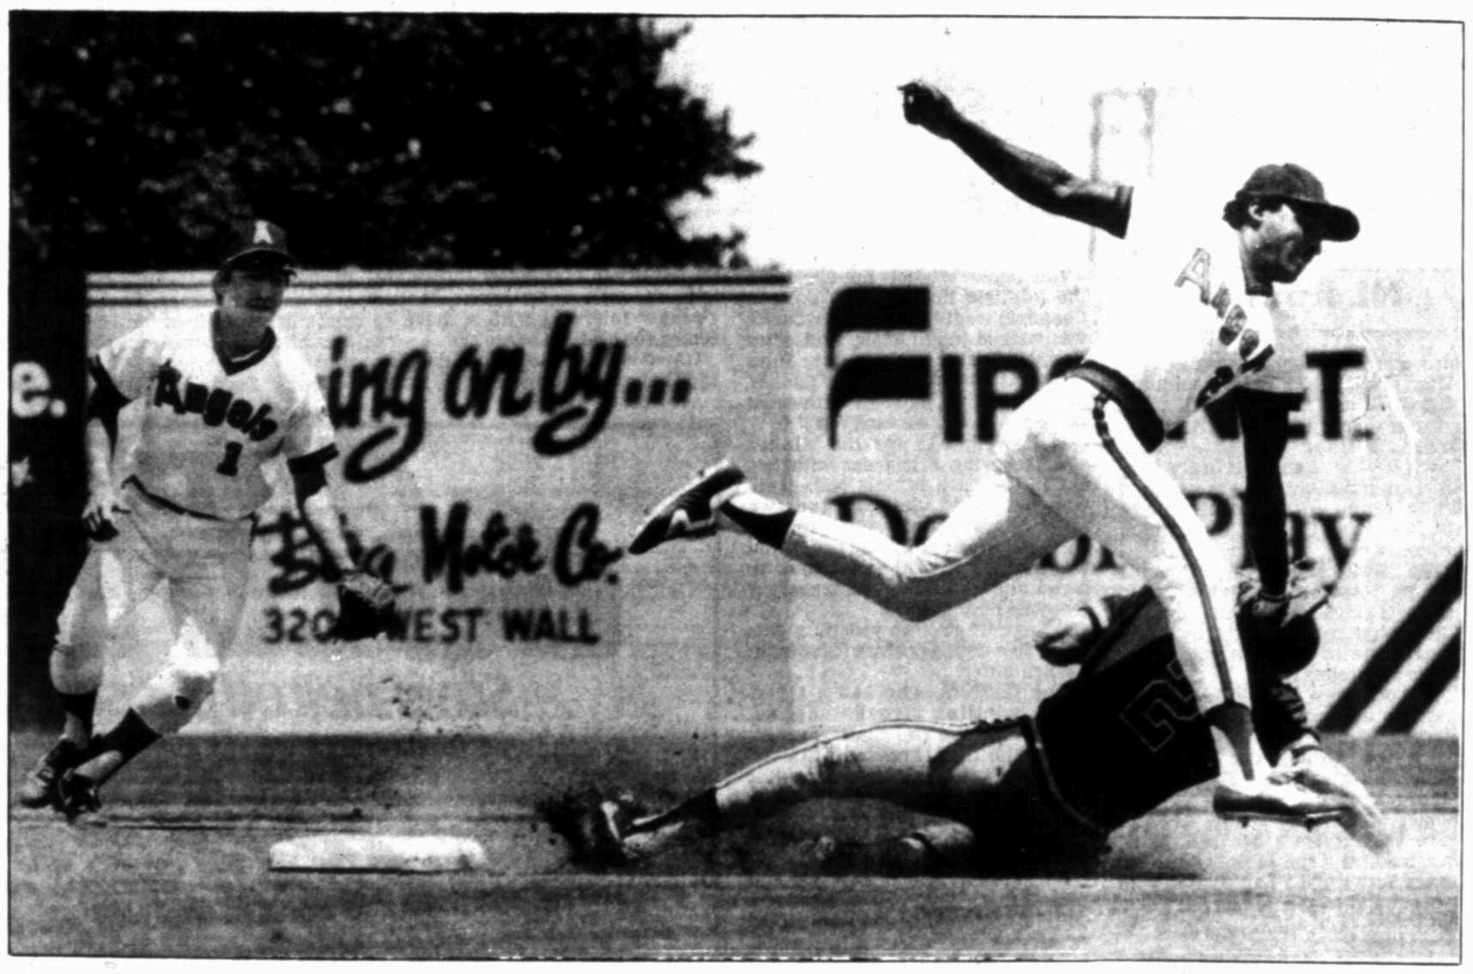

Just hours after stepping off the grueling night ride from one end of the Western Division of the Texas League to the other, Shreveport put a decisive end to their hitting woes and a five-game losing streak at the Angels' expense.

"Sometimes you get on that edge of being tired, being hungry and everything else, and you forget all that and relax and play, and sometimes something good comes out of it," said Shreveport manager Duane Espy. "That's what happened to us today."

It was a situation the Angels, now six games under .500 (20-26), know all too well.

"Today they did what we did once, but from past experience we know the tough part is coming back the next day, that's when it really starts to catch up with you," Angels' manager Joe Maddon said.

For the Captains, it was a momentary boost. And at this point, it might be all they needed. Shreveport's 11 runs equaled its output for the entire five-game series with the Beaumont Gators — all losses, and four were by one run.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Shreveport's Robert Thompson (2) slides safely into second base in the first inning Sunday as Midland's Kevin Davis (2) lunges for the ball. Juan Cruz (1) is backing up the play for the Angels, who lost the game 11-5.

IT DIDN'T take long for the "magic bus" to take effect as Shreveport touched Midland starter Fred Wilburn for a pair of two-run homers in the first inning. An inning Wilburn never saw the end of and which saw nine Captains step to the plate before it was over.

The Angels were down 4-0 before they even looked at a pitch from Shreveport starter Larry Crews, 1-1.

What they saw wasn't pretty, at least not for an Angel fan.

Making only his third start in the Texas League this season after a stint in Phoenix AAA, which was spent mostly on the disabled list, Crews faced the minimum through three innings. In the fourth, Midland pushed a run across when Greg Key walked, moved to second on a ground out and scored on a pop single by Reggie Montgomery, the first hit off Crews.

BY THEN it was 8-0 in the Captains' favor and, with Crews in control, it was turning into a long afternoon for the Angels.

"Every start is getting better for me now," said Crews, who was 11-10 for Shreveport last season. "I'm showing a gradual improvement every time out. I've got more command of my pitches and I'm getting the ball over the plate.

"The bus rides are just one those things you have to deal with. I think the whole club responded pretty well considering the circumstances."

Pretty well, indeed.

Wilburn, who lasted 8⅓ innings in his past two starts, was rocked.

In the first, two-run homers by Mike Aldrete, his fourth, and Everett Graham, his fourth, knocked Wilburn out of the box in the first. His replacement, Scott Suehr, struggled.

SUEHR WAS roughed up for four runs in the next three innings. After lefthander Eddie Delzer escaped jams in the fifth and sixth, Spiro Psaltis came in, only to allow a three-run homer to leftfielder Alan Cockrell that put the final touches on the rout.

When Crews tired after seven with the score 11-1, Espy brought in relievers Kernan Ronan and Dan Yokubaitis to finish up, and they didn't do nearly as well.

Midland rallied for three runs in the eighth, on a two-run homer by Devon White, and another RBI double by Montgomery, and a lone run in the ninth. Montgomery's two RBIs on the afternoon pushed his season total to 43. But it was a case of much too little, much too late.

The Director of Player Development for the Angels' organization, Bill Bavasi, came to town Saturday and will be here through the end of the homestand Thursday. Bavasi is not yet showing signs of panic at the 6 ½ game spread between Midland and first-place Beaumont

"If this was the second half of the season and we played inconsistently, I would be concerned. It's still too early for me to say 'I want consistency.' This is a young club and they will be consistent."

...Further word on the status of second baseman Mark McLemore is expected from California today. Midland officials are expecting a speedy return. Da Murphy celebrated his 27th birthday Sunday with a double in five trips to the plate...

1937 — Carl Hubbell, working relief for the New York Giants, won his 24th game in a row over two seasons, beating the Reds 3-2. The string had started July 17, 1936.

Cab driver shows 'em how at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Sullivan, winner of Sunday's Indiaiapolis 500, had the perfect training ground for the grueling race.

He once drove a cab in New York City.

That was during a lengthy stretch when he worked at a variety of jobs after leaving the University of Kentucky.

"I decided with a friend to go to New York for the weekend," Sullivan said. "We stayed 2½ years."

During that time, Sullivan worked as a janitor, a lumberjack, a sod-cutter, a chicken-ranch hand and a waiter as well as driving that cab.

"I did everything," he said.

But the cab driving hardly contributed in the long run to his racing career. "Both have got their treacherous parts," he said. "I didn't drive long enough to get involved in too many bad deals."

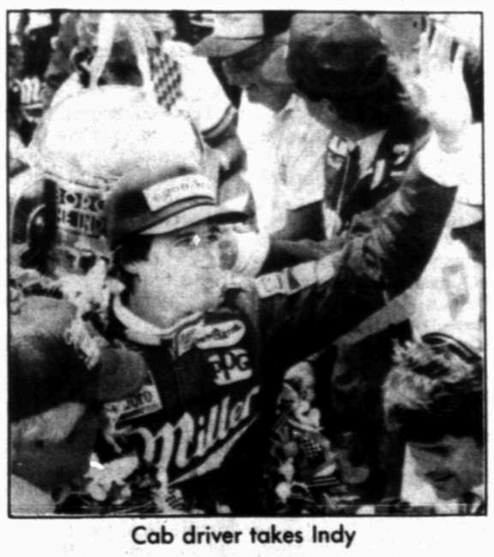

Sullivan was out of touch with his family during the time he was in New York. His folks in Lousville, Ky., sent a friend, Dr. Frank Falkner, noted world wide as a racing official, to look for him.

Falkner, now a professor of pediatrics at the University of California, found Sullivan waiting on tables at Maxwell's Plum, a singles bar on New York's swinging east side.

"I was bumming around in New York, doing odd jobs here and there," Sullivan said. "He made a deal with me. He said he'd send me to driving school if I'd go back to the university. He'll call that bet in someday and I'll have to go back to college."

As a 21st birthday gift, Falkner paid Sullivan's tuition to driving school in England and, three years later, Sullivan began his professional driving career in Europe.

He won more than 20 races in the next five years before returning to the United States with a reputation as a road-racing specialist. Last season was his first full year of Indy-car racing.

Cab driver takes Indy

"Racing in Europe on the junior league circuit is one of the most aggresive experiences I've come across," Sullivan said. "I think that affected me here. I was too aggressive. I didn't sit back and wait, saying to myself, 'Hold on, hold on, there'll be a yellow, a pit sotp, and then we can adjust.'"

Ironically, it was a pit stop that he caused with a frightening spin in front of Mario Andretti that helped Sullivan get control of his car early in the race. He had challenged Andretti for the lead and as he moved on the veteran driver he spun in front of him.

But he came out of it with no trouble, facing in the proper direction, and was able to continue driving.

"I was just holding on," he said. "I thought that was everything. I just looped and I thought, 'That's all she wrote.' But I turned around facing turn 2 and I just took off."

Sullivan said he made his move on Andretti at that moment by mistake. "I misread radio communications. I thought there were only 12 laps left," Sullivan said. "I didn't hear right how many laps there were to go. I thought, 'I've got to get ahead of Mario quick.'"

Asked what his reaction was when he learned of his mistake, he smiled.

"I was shocked the first time, relieved the second time," he said.

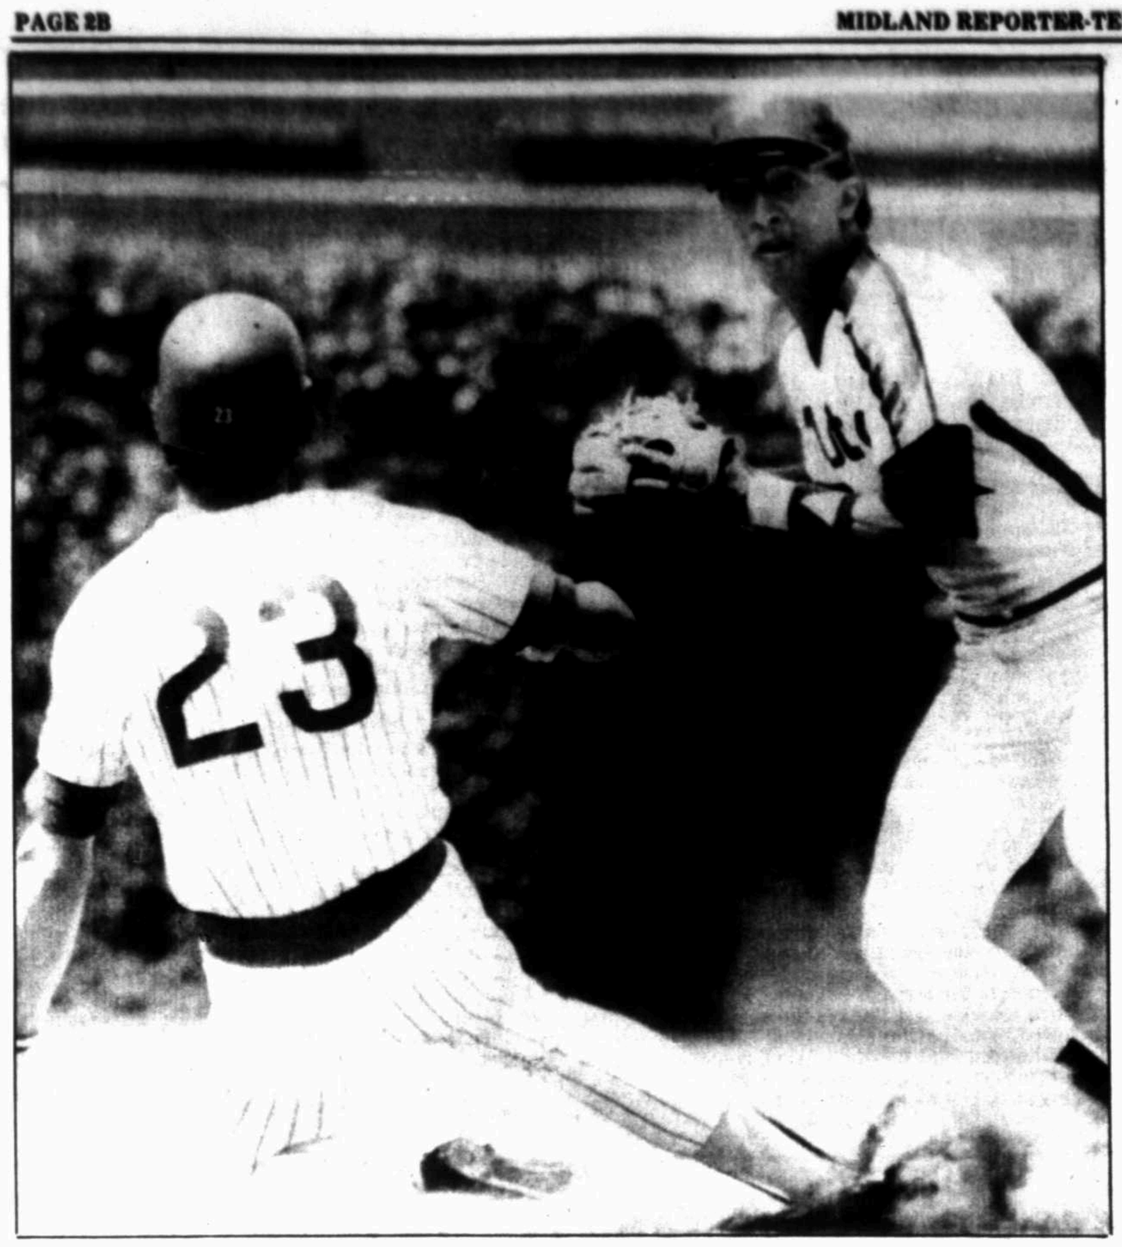

As it turned out, much more of the race remained and Sullivan later avoided more trouble when Tom Sneva and Rich Vogler collided in a turn 1 accident.

"Two guys hooked and were going to the wall," Sullivan said. "I backed out and went on the brakes. That's one of the hardest questions to decide — are you going to weave your way through it or do you wait it out?"

A year ago, in a similar incident at Indy, Sullivan bumped another car during the yellow light for Patrick Bedard's accident and was forced out of the race, finishing 29th. This time, though, he had learned patience, pulled back and was able to get through safely.

With just over 50 laps left in the race, Sullivan moved ahead of Andretti and held the lead the rest of the way. His victory was the second in a row for the Penske team, which won last year with Rick Mears.

Asked when he thought he had the race in control, Sullivan gave a two-part answer.

Chicago Cub Ryne Sandberg (23) breaks up a double play during a 10-8 victory over Houston Sunday as he slides into shortstop Bert Pena.

Cubs' Cey slays Astros

Chambliss ends Braves' drought

Associated Press

Ron Cey slammed two home runs and a double Sunday to power the Chicago Cubs to an uphill 10-8 victory over the Houston Astros.

Cey, who hit a solo home run in the second inning and doubled in a three-run sixth, capped Chicago's four-run seventh with a tie-breaking two-run homer, his eighth of the season.

Ryne Sandberg opened the seventh with a single and Davey Lopes, who earlier hit a two-run homer, walked. Keith Moreland, breaking an 0-for-17 slump, doubled home two runs to tie the game before Cey followed with his second homer off loser Mark Ross, 0-2.

It was the second day in a row Ross lost in relief to the Cubs. George Frazier, 2-1, was the winner with Lee Smith pitching the final 1⅔ innings for his 11th save. The comeback from an early 5-0 deficit also enabled the Cubs to remain tied for first place in the National league East with the New York Mets.

Bill Doran singled to open the game off Chicago's Ray Fontenot, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a pair of infield outs. Enos Cabell's two-run triple capped a four-run second inning which included singles by Jerry Mumphrey and Doran plus a sacrifice fly by pitcher Mike Scott.

Cey homered in the Cubs' second and Lopes crashed a two-run shot, his fourth, in the fifth inning to make it 5-3.

Terry Puhl's double plus singles by Bert Pena and Jim Pankovits accounted for two Houston runs in the sixth but the Cubs got them right back in the bottom of the sixth off Bill Dawley on a walk and successive doubles by Cey and Jody Davis, the latter driving in the runs.

Houston added a run in the seventh on a single by Mumphrey and Puhl's second double to take an 8-6 lead.

Braves 5, Pirates 4

Chris Chambliss' pinch-hit bases-loaded single in a bizarre 10th inning drove in the winning run as Atlanta snapped a five-game losing streak.

Chambliss' fly ball over a drawn-in outfield came after the Pirates walked two batters intentionally to load the bases and employed a five-man infield with only two outfielders.

Paul Zuvella started the winning rally against Ray Krawczyk, 0-1, with a bloop single to right and scored the tying run when Gerald Perry's single got past right fielder Doug Frobel and rolled to the fence. It appeared that Perry also could have scored but he was held up by third-base coach Bobby Wine.

The Pirates then walked Dale Murphy and Terry Harper to load the bases and Chambliss greeted Al Holland with a routine fly that fell behind Frobel.

Jeff Dedmon, 2-0, who yielded a run in the top of the 10th, was the winner.

Scott Loucks started the Pirates' 10th with a double and was sacrificed to third by Johnny Ray. Lee Mazzilli was walked intentionally before Foli lined his hit to left-center. Mazzilli was cut down when he tried to score behind Loucks.

Pittsburgh, the only National League team whose pitching staff has not recorded a shutout, blew a 3-0 lead in the ninth on Rafael Ramirez's three-run double after Rick Reuschel blanked Atlanta on five hits for seven innings.

Dale Murphy started the Braves' ninth with a single off John Candelaria and Terry Harper also singled. After pinch hitter Brad Komminsk walked to load the bases, all three runners scored when Ramirez drilled a liner to right-center. Ramirez went to third as Bruce Benedict grounded out but was stranded when pinch hitter Paul Runge struck out and Claudell Washington grounded out.

NL Roundup

The Pirates had only two hits off Atlanta starter Rick Mahler, who left for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. Their first hit, a single by Tony Pena, came in the fifth when they broke a scoreless tie.

Madlock drew a leadoff walk and went to second on Pena's single. Marvell Wynne sacrificed and Frobel walked to load the bases. Bill Almon hit a sacrifice fly to score Madlock and Madlock's second homer of the year in the seventh gave the Pirates a 2-0 lead. Pittsburgh added a run in the eighth off Bruce Sutter when Ray singled with two out and scored on Mazzilli's double.

Padres 7, Phillies 2

Bruce Bochy's first home run of the season ignited a four-run fifth inning and Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run shot in the eighth as San Diego recorded its seventh consecutive victory.

The victory was the 1,354th for Padres Manager Dick Williams, tying him with Earl Weaver for 18th place on the all-time list.

LaMarr Hoyt, 4-4, allowed both Philadelphia runs and nine hits before Rich Gossage came on for his 13th save after Hoyt walked Glenn Wilson to start the eighth. Steve Carlton, 1-4, was the loser.

After Bochy's home run tied the score, Garry Templeton was safe on third baseman Mike Schmidt's throwing error and was sacrificed to second by Hoyt. Jerry Royster doubled Templeton home and went to third on Tony Gwynn's single, with Gwynn taking second on the throw to the plate. Steve Garvey's sacrifice fly scored Royster and Gwynn came home on Kevin McReynolds' single.

San Diego jumped on rookie Ricky Childress for their other three runs in the ninth. Gossage drew a leadoff walk, Royster sacrificed him to second and Gwynn was intentionally walked. After Garvey popped out, McReynolds hit his sixth home run of the season.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second inning. Wilson reached first on third baseman Kurt Bevacqua's throwing error and was forced by Ozzie Virgil. Juan Samuel singled and Luis Aguayo was hit by a pitch to load the bases and Carlton hit a sacrifice fly.

Philadelphia, which has lost four games in a row, scored its other run in the seventh when pinch hitter Jeff Stone beat out a bunt and scored on Schmidt's two-out double.

Mets 2, Dodgers 1

Keith Hernandez drove in the first of two unearned third-inning runs with an opposite-field double as Mets broke a four-game losing streak behind the combined five-hit pitching of Sid Fernandez and Roger McDowell.

Mookie Wilson singled with one out in the third off Rick Honeycutt, 2-5, and went to second when Los Angeles shortstop Mariano Duncan booted Kelvin Chapman's double play grounder. It was the Dodgers' 54th error, most in the National League.

Hernandez's bloop double down the left-field line scored Wilson as Chapman went to third. Gary Carter was walked intentionally and, after George Foster struck out, John Christensen walked on four pitches, forcing home Chapman with what proved to be the winning ren.

McDowell, 5-1, was the winner after relieving Fernandez with two out in the fifth inning. McDowell, who has three victories and two saves in his last six relief appearances, allowed one hit the rest of the way, retiring 13 of the 14 batters he faced and extending his streak of scoreless innings to 19.

Honeycutt gave up just three hits in his five innings before leaving for a pinch hitter.

The Dodgers, who had a three-game winning streak snapped, scored their run and chased Fernandez in the fifth. Fernandez walked Steve Sax to lead off the inning. Sax stole second, went to third when catcher Carter's throw went into center field and scored on a grounder by R.J. Reynolds.

Fernandez, who missed his last turn with an inflamed Achilles tendon, left after Mike Marshall's pop-fly eluded first baseman Hernandez for an infield hit and Greg Brock walked. McDowell assumed a 2-0 count on Candy Maldonado and retired pinch hitter Ken Landreaux on a grounder to end the inning.

Cardinals 7, Reds 2

Tom Herr and Willie McGee drove in two runs apiece to support Danny Cox's six-hit pitching.

The victory gave the Cardinals a 21-20 record, the first time they have been above .500 this season.

Cox, 5-1, struck out six and walked two in his second complete game of the season as he won his fourth consecutive decision. John Stuper, 5-3, making his first start against his former teammates, was the loser.

Andy Van Slyke walked to start the St. Louis second, took third on Ozzie Smith's single and scored on Darrell Porter's sacrifice fly. Vince Coleman walked to start the third and scored on McGee's hit that took a high bounce off the artificial turf that eluded center fielder Eddie Milner and right fielder Dave Parker and went for a triple. Herr's sacrifice fly scored McGee for a 3-0 lead.

The Reds scored an unearned run in the fourth. Pete Rose reached on left fielder Coleman's fielding error and was forced at second by Parker. Alan Knicely doubled to score Parker.

Parker led off the seventh with his eighth homer to stretch his hitting streak to 17 games, longest in the majors this season, to make the score 3-2.

The Cardinals added three runs in the eighth. McGee's triple off reliever John Franco started the inning and he scored on Herr's double. Herr went 2-for-3 to raise his major-league-leading batting average to .385. Whiteside, Adams win by eight

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Steve Whiteside is on a roll. A couple of weeks ago he teamed up with Randy Geiselman to win the Ernie Nelson Midland Country Club Partnership and Sunday the former Midland Lee golfer and Craig Adams, the brother of touring pro John Adams, completed their triumphant march to the Ranchland Hills Country Club Stampede Partnership title.

Whiteside-Adams combined for a final round 67 and a 195, good for an eight-stroke victory over Bob Herrod and Steve Thompson, who shot a final round 71—203. Third place went to Craig Winborn-Tim Peden, 68-205, who made up two strokes on the final 18 to tie Jamie Winkel and C.E. Boyd at 205 and then won the playoff.

Tommy Gibson-Dan Earp also made up two strokes on the final day to win the first flight with a 71-213 as 36-hole leaders Claude Mitchell and Ed Barfield , 74-215, slipped into a tie with fast finishing Jack Hunnicut-Guy Proctor, who had a 70-215 and then won the playoff for second.

Whiteside's streak couldn't have been timed better or the partnership victory come at a more suitable site with the Men's West Texas returning to RHCC after a long absence.

"The course is a lot tougher than it used to be," said Whiteside. "The greens are better and it is putting faster.

"Yes, I plan to play in the Men's West Texas. I haven't played in it since Abilene in 1982 when I finished 10th. John Slaughter won that year at Abilene's Fairway Oaks by 10 strokes. He was eight under par, which is a Men's WT record."

Whiteside won't have to worry about Slaughter this year. He has since turned pro.

Steve's best Men's WT showing came in 1974 at Pampa, a second place finish.

His chances of contending for this year's title? "Well, actually, I'm playing better golf now than I did in college."

Whiteside predicted it would take a six to eight under to win this year.

In the Nelson, Whiteside-Geiselman beat Amarillo's John Farquhar and Lubbock's Roland Adams, both of whom figure to be in the RHCC field in June.

In high school, Whiteside was a member of probably the strongest Lee golf team ever back in 1971. Teammates were John Adams, Steve Cromwell, Tony Farish and Steve Cagle. Adams is a touring pro and Cagle an assistant pro at Dallas' Bear Creek.

MCC eyes busy golf weekend

From Staff Reports

Midland Country Club's golf schedule will have a busy weekend Saturday and Sunday and it holds competition for two events.

Saturday and Sunday the club will host its annual men's high-low team championship for club members. Members with handicaps of 13 through 16 may play either high or low. Entry deadline is Thursday at 6 p.m. and persons may sign-up at the MCC golf shop.

Also Saturday, MCC will hold qualifying for the Midland Country Club team that will compete in the national Oldsmobile scramble golf championship. The MCC team that earns this honor will play in sectional action at Dallas' Bear Creek. The nationals will be held at Woodlands in Houston. Contact MCC golf pro George Clarke for further information.

McEnroe falls, but Connors saves U.S.

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) - Ivan Lendl downed John McEnroe but Jimmy Connors fought back from an 4-0 defict in the final set to help the defending champion United States to a 2-1 victory over Czechoslovakia in the final of the $500,000 Ambre Solaire World Team Tennis Cup Sunday.

The victory was worth $200,000 to the Americans and allowed the U.S. team to hang on to the cup. The Czechoslovakians took home $100,000.

Ken Flach and Robert Seguso clinched the cup by taking the doubles against Lendl and Tomas Smid 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) in a match that finished in fading light on the red clay courts of the Rochus Club.

Earlier, Lendl gave Czechoslovakia a 1-0 lead by beating McEnroe 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (8-6), 6-3.

But Connors kept the Americans' hopes alive with a stunning victory over Miloslav Mecir, after losing eight straight games and trailing 0-4 in the final set.

With Mecir suffering from a rare case of nerves, Connors prevailed in 2½ hours, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5.

Mecir, ranked 13th in the world, quickly opened up a 4-0 lead in the decisive set, wearing Connors down with accurate cross-court shots.

The American appeared doomed until he broke Mecir to love in the fifth game. Connors also won the next four points on his serve but Mecir held his serve to take what appeared to be a decisive 5-2 lead.

Connors, ranked third internationally, held to come back to 3-5 and then Mecir crumbled.

Apparently overcome by a severe case of nerves, Mecir served two double faults. When his fifth serve also went long, he served his second under-arm. Connors volleyed it away for a winner to break Mecir and reduce the score to 4-5.

Sensing that Mecir's moment was over, the experienced American started playing more aggressively. Connors served to level at 5-5 and Mecir again served three double faults in the next game to take a 6-5 lead.

Connors went down 15-30 in the 12th game, but took the next three to clinch the set 7-5 and save the match for the Americans.

"I don't know what happened down there," Connors said. I've never had a guy serve under-arm against me in my life."

"He got tight, and the tighter he got the looser I got."

"But even when I was down 0-4 in the last set, I really felt I wasn't completely out of the match," Connors said. "He got nervous and I put more pressure on him."

Hale Irwin ends victory drought

Memorial Golf

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - Hale Irwin wrested the lead from Lanny Wadkins with a two-shot swing on the fourth hole and went on to a one-stroke victory Sunday in the Memorial Golf Tournament.

The steady veteran needed only a closing round of par 72 in gusty winds to end a 15-month victory drought with the 17th triumph of his 18-year career.

Irwin won this one with a 281 total, 7-under par on Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village Golf Club course, and joined the tournament host and founder as the only two-time Memorial winners.

The victory, Irwin's first since the 1984 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, was worth $100,-000 from the total purse of $600,000 and lifted Irwin's earnings for the year to $159,266.

Wadkins, already the winner of two titles this year, had a one-stroke lead when the day's play began, but lost it when he bogeyed the fourth from a bunker and Irwin made birdie, dropping a 12-foot putt.

Wadkins never led again. He bogeyed four times in a five-hole stretch beginning on the eighth, once trailed by four shots but made it close with a birdie on the 15th and bogeys by Irwin on the 16th and 18th.

Wadkins finished with a 74 and had a 282 total. He collected $60,000 for second.

Bill Kratzert, playing with Irwin and Wadkins in the last group, had a 73 and took third at 284.

George Burns, Keith Fergus and Corey Pavin, winner of last week's Colonial National Invitation Tournament, were next at 286. Burns closed up with a 69, Pavin shot 70 and Fergus matched par 72.

Bill Rogers, a former British Open champion trying to fight his way out of a two-year slump, was the only other man able to break par 288. His closing 74 in the difficult conditions, put him at 287.

Nicklaus ended the defense of his title with a struggling 78 and finished with a 299 total.

Tom Watson, the 1984 Player of the Year but still in search of his first title of the season, had a 71-294.

Wadkins stayed close until he started the string of bogeys on the eighth where he went from bunker to bunker and had to sink a 12-footer to avoid double bogey.

He missed the green on the ninth, saw his chip rim the cup, then missed an 18-inch par putt.

He missed the green with a sand wedge and bogeyed the 11th, and then bogeyed the 12th from a bunker.

"Those four holes were my undoing," he said.

When Irwin birdied the 12th, from about 15 feet, he went four in front.

"That put him in the driver's seat," Wadkins said. "From then on, it was his tournament to win or lose."

Wadkins got one shot back with a birdie-4 on the 15th and Irwin's lead dwindled to two when he bogeyed the 16th from a huge bunker.

A two-shot swing in Wadkins' favor—which would have put Hale and Lanny in a tie—appeared possible on the final hole.

Both drove into a fairway bunker. Irwin couldn't reach the green. Wadkins did, hitting a 4-iron shot about 20 feet below the cup. Irwin was on in three and had a 15-footer.

But Wadkins, needing the birdie to have any legitimate chance, missed. Irwin 2-putted for bogey, all he needed to win.

Rizzo finally defeats Crafter in match duel

Corning Golf

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Patti Rizzo shot a 71 for a 16-under-par 272 Sunday to defeat a surging Jane Crafter by one stroke in a duel between experienced match-play golfers in the $250,000 LPGA Corning Classic.

Rizzo used strong putting to equal the lowest score on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year. Her bogey at No. 18 prevented her from tying Hollis Stacy's LPGA record of 271.

"After about the fourth hole it was like match play," said Rizzo, who starred in the one-on-one competition before going professional in 1982. "At least six times today, Jane made a putt and I had to make one on top of it."

Crafter started the day three strokes off the pace and even moved into the lead for one hole, but spoiled her chance at victory when she failed to match Rizzo's par at No. 16 and then bogeyed No. 17.

She shot a 69 to finish at 15-under-par 273.

"You've got to attack and I did," said Crafter, of Adelaide, Australia, who said she learned match play from her father back home. "I'm excited to finish second. ... I feel it's like the beginning of good things."

Rizzo's only other victory on the tour was in the Boston Five Classic in 1983. She said Boston writers told her last year that no winner at the Boston Five had ever won again, and the pattern had started to concern her.

"You can't believe in jinxes. Now they can't say that anymore," she said.

Rizzo, of Fort Pierce, Fla., picked up a $37,500 first-place check and her second victory since joining the tour in 1982.

The only lower score was by Hollis Stacy in the Rail Charity Classic in Springfield, Ill., in 1977. Rizzo tied the Corning record of 272 set by Patty Sheehan in 1983.

Pat Bradley dogged the leaders until near the end, when the No. 3 money-winner double-bogeyed the 17th hole. She shot a 70 and finished third at 12-under 276.

Muffin Spencer-Devlin shot a 68 to end at 11-under-par 277. Sherri Turner, who led the first two rounds, shot a 73 to tie with Amy Benz, who had a 69. They were both at 10-under-par 278.

The Corning Country Club course had not been known as an easy one since becoming a tour stop in 1979. But players ripped the par-72, 6,050-yard circuit for record-low scores under ideal conditions of dry fairways and well-maintained greens.

Rizzo's sole previous victory since joining the tour in 1982 was at the Boston Five Classic in 1983.

Hungry Celtics test wiser Lakers for championship

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, still hungry after reaching the top, and the Los Angeles Lakers, older and wiser after falling short, renew their infrequent but intense rivalry at 2 p.m. today in the opener of the National Basketball Association championship series.

"Boston against L.A. creates a lot of excitement that no other teams can create," Lakers' floor general Earvin "Magic" Johnson said Sunday.

"Even though we haven't played but two times during the regular season," said Boston assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers, "after going through a seven-game series, you learn an awful lot about an opponent."

BOSTON WON last year's title series 4-3 and, starting with today's opener, the teams hope to put to good use the lessons of those meetings.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series will be here Thursday night followed by three games, if necessary, in Los Angeles and the last two in Boston.

The Lakers, trying to avoid becoming only the third team in NBA history to lose three consecutive finals, need to crash the boards, help each other on defense and play intelligently.

The Celtics must get back quickly on defense against Los Angeles' devastating fastbreak and work the ball inside on offense.

"We've concentrated more on rebounding this year," said Lakers' forward Bob McAdoo. "We saw what it took last year to win the championship, that was Boston outrebounded us, and we worked on it more this season."

Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said the Lakers don't have to do much differently than they did in last season's title series.

"Just be a little smarter, do the little things," he said.

The Celtics are motivated to become the first team to win consecutive NBA titles since Boston did it in 1968 and 1969.

Despite having won the championship, "I feel that we're more hungry than last year," said Boston guard Danny Ainge. "We're a very hungry team and we've been planning on this all year long."

THE CELTICS, who split their two regular-season games with the Lakers, figure they must keep them from running wild. Los Angeles did that in breezing through its first three playoff series, when it compiled an 11-2 record and averaged 131.2 points per game.

"The key to the game is not giving up easy baskets," said Ainge, who is having an outstanding playoff season. "If that means giving up 20-footers, we'll give up 20-footers."

This year, the Lakers, who have won 42 of their last 48 games, are better equipped to hit them. Ten of their players have made more than half their field-goal attempts during the playoffs.

Guard Byron Scott averaged six points per game and hit 47.4 percent of his field-goal attempts as a substitute in all seven playoff games against Boston last year.

As a playoff starter now, he has scored 19.5 points per game and connected on 56.5 percent of his shots. The threat of his outside shooting could keep the Celtics from sagging in on Los Angeles' big men as much as they would like.

Scott and forward James Worthy had their first post-season experience last year. A bad pass by Worthy was stolen by Gerald Henderson, who then drove in to score with 11 seconds left, and probably cost the Lakers the second game last season.

"We have James Worthy and Byron now with a year of playoff experience," said Abdul-Jabbar. "They're just wiser."

BOSTON HAS two current starters who came off the bench in last year's finals. Kevin McHale has replaced Cedric Maxwell, still subpar following knee surgery, and Ainge has taken over for Henderson, who went to Seattle in a pre-season trade.

Alluding to the reputations of Los Angeles being a flashy, finesse team, while Boston is a blue-collar, physical team, McHale said the series features "the stars vs. the longshoremen."

"I don't feel they're any more physical than we are," Johnson said. "All physicalness is is aggressiveness."

"Kevin McHale, god bless him, always refers to himself as a longshoreman," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "Here's a guy who makes a million (dollars) a year. He's never ever opened up a hatch on a ship to haul cargo out. I can guarantee you, during the summer he's not going to go down to the wharf offering his services."

McHale does his best work within five feet of the basket. At 6-feet-10 and with long arms, he is difficult to stop once he gets the ball in a position he likes.

So is Boston's Larry Bird, who hasn't been finding that position lately. He averaged just 20.8 points and 7.2 rebounds per game in the Eastern Conference final against Philadelphia after compiling regular season averages of 28.7 points and 10.5 rebounds.

"I've got to go inside more this series, use my weight, use my body," said Bird. "I'm getting the ball too far out on the court."

Michael Cooper, who Bird considers the best defender against him, said, "I've been able to get away with my quickness in the past because mostly he stayed by the perimeter...When he's taken me down low where he has the height advantage that's hurt me."

THE LAKERS may be improved, but that doesn't mean they'll win the title.

"Everybody's improved until they play someone else," McHale said. "Philadelphia had played great and swept Milwaukee in four games," before losing to Boston 4-1.

The Celtics may be eager to repeat, but that doesn't mean they will.

"We won the title in 1981-82 and we were just as motivated to repeat and got swept" in the finals by Philadelphia, Riley said. "It's just a whole new year. That's the thing about winning the world championship, It's only for one year and you come back and play it again."

Longhorn David Denny (center) gets a hero's welcome after an eighth inning homer in Texas' 10-2 romp over Lamar in the NCAA Central baseball playoffs Sunday in Austin.

Texas pelts Lamar, 10-2

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas won its fifth straight trip to the College World Series by trouncing Lamar 10-2 to win the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament Sunday afternoon.

The Longhorns, 60-12, runners-up in last year's CWS to Cal State-Fullerton, will be seeking their fifth national title in the tournament starting Friday in Omaha, Nebraska.

Pitcher Mike Poehl struck out 13 Lamar batters on the way to keeping Texas undefeated in the tournament. The Cardinals, who fought their way out of the losers' bracket by elminating tournament favorite Oklahoma Saturday night, found themselves runners-up to the Longhorns in the championship game for the second year in a row.

Lamar, ending its season at 35-24, took an early 1-0 lead on John DiPillo's first inning RBI single. But Texas tied the score in the third after Bill Bates stole second and third and scored on Dennis Cook's single.

Poehl gave up one more run in the fourth, then shut down Lamar at the plate while his teammates took care of the offense.

Texas batters tore into Cardinal starter Dirk Tidwell for five runs on five hits in the fourth and never relinquished the lead. Bates knocked in two runs with a triple and Cook, Rusty Richards and Coby Kerlin added an RBI each.

Richards added RBIs in the fifth and ninth. Kerlin scored again in the sixth and David Denny slammed a solo homer over the left field fence to close out the Texas scoring.

Waltrip wins 600 gamble

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip gambled on fuel Sunday and won the World 600 Grand National stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway by a margin of more than 14 seconds.

"We stretched it right to the limit," Waltrip said after roaring across the finish line 14.11 seconds ahead of Harry Gant's Chevrolet and 21 laps ahead of polesitter Bill Elliott's Ford. "There are some advantages to a Chevrolet, and good gas mileage is one of them."

With 73 of 400 laps to go, Gant had pulled out of a pit stop first, closely followed by Waltrip and Bobby Allison's Buick. Waltrip tailed Gant, saving fuel by staying in his draft, until Gant had to stop again for fuel on lap 390 — and it was no contest after that.

Allison finished third on the 1.5-mile quad-oval, followed one lap later by the Chevrolets of Terry Labonte and Dale Earnhardt.

Waltrip, 38, of Franklin, Tenn., drove an average 141.742 mph. He picked up $90,733 for his first victory this year on the 28-race Grand National NASCAR circuit and the 65th win of his career.

It was his second speedway victory in two days, however. Waltrip had won $200,000 at the speedway Saturday by winning The Winston, a race for the 12 Grand National drivers who won at least one event last year, but the victory doesn't count in career standings.

An estimated 155,300 people, many drawn by the possibility that Elliott would win $1 million for a third "Big Four" race, packed the speedway for the 42-car contest.

Elliott finished 18th after an 11-minute pit stop to replace his master cylinder. He had won the Daytona 500 and the Winston 500 in Talladega, Ala., and may still take the bonus if he wins the Southern 500 in Darlington, S.C. on Sept. 1.

Waltrip, who started fourth, took the lead 10 times for a total of 91 laps. There were 29 lead changes among eight drivers.

The caution flag came out seven times for a total of 34 laps, including spins by Buddy Baker on lap 61, Kyle Petty on laps 155 and 327 and Rusty Wallace on lap 315.

U.S. ties Costa Rica in Cup play

ALAJUELA, Costa Rica (AP) — A young United States soccer team survived a 90-minute siege by Costa Rica and escaped with a 1-1 tie Sunday in an elimination game for a ticket to the 1986 World Cup soccer tournament.

The tie kept the United States one point ahead of Costa Rica with the deciding match scheduled for May 31 in Torrance, Calif. Another tie would send the United States into a three-team tournament with Honduras and Canada for the right to represent the region in the World Cup.

"It was a difficult game," said U.S. coach Alkis Panagoulias after the match in the 25,000-seat Alajuela stadium 13 miles south of San Jose. "Costa Rica is a fine team. The race is still wide open."

The United States sent a team that included five college players against seasoned Costa Rican professional league players.

Two of the Americans, Jeff Hooker of UCLA and John Kerr of Duke combined to score for the United States in the 44th minute of the first half to calm down a noisy crowd that had gone wild a minute earlier when Costa Rica had taken a 1-0 lead.

The Costa Ricans put the pressure on from the first minute with constant sweeps and frontal attacks that crashed against a stubborn zone defense led by Dan Canter and Paul Caligiuri, another college player from UCLA.

Oscar Ramirez shot the ball into the net for Costa Rica after two consecutive shots were deflected by U.S. defenders.

But a minute later Hooker got a pass from Rick Davis on the right side, came down the sideline and then crossed a shot to Kerr who, moving into the small area, kicked it past the goalie as a Costa Rican defender desperately deflected it but could not stop it.

Costa Rica had 16 corner shots as the U.S. defenders fought desperately, especially in the second half when the local team launched an all-out attack.

"We are still struggling because of our physical fitness," said Panagoulias, explaining that some of the professional U.S. players are used to the indoor soccer games with unlimited substitutions as opposed to the tougher demands of outdoor soccer with only two substitutions.

This was one of the reasons why the U.S. ocach decided to send youth and energy against the experience of the Costa Ricans.

There was a political touch to the event as a group of Costa Ricans rushed onto the field as the U.S. national anthem was being played carrying a banner that said, "Throw the military Yankees out of Costa Rica."

It was a reference to the presence here of a group of 20 military advisers sent to train the Costa Rican civil guard.

The protesters, booed by the crowd, were taken out of the stadium by police.

Arkansas survives Georgia Tech

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A home run by Jeff King in the fourth sparked a comeback by Arkansas Sunday, and the Razorbacks went on to win the NCAA South II regional baseball tournament with a 7-5 victory over a scrappy Georgia Tech squad.

The victory gives the top-seeded Arkansas team one of the eight berths in the College World Series in Omaha, Neb.

The loss ended the Jackets world series hopes after they had kicked and clawed their way into the final game with the Razorbacks. The Jackets had come from behind with two outs in the ninth to beat Eastern Kentucky Saturday, then knocked off No. 2-seeded Florida State on the Seminoles' home field.

Georgia Tech jumped off to a 3-0 lead against Arkansas, getting two of the runs on a homer by Jeff Distasio in the third, his fourth of the tournament.

The Razorbacks came back with two runs in the fourth on King's leadoff home run and a triple by Norm Roberts.

Then Arkansas took the lead in the fifth with two singles and a homer by Steve Clements, and added two more in the eighth which proved to be the winning margin.

The Jackets had the tying runs on second and third with two outs in the ninth when Arkansas relief pitcher Tim Deist got Georgia Tech hitter Pete Geist to ground out to third to end the game.

The victory raised the Razorbacks's record to 49-13, while Georgia Tech finished the season at 42-19-1. Fred Farwell rose to 10-1 with the victory, while loser Kevin Brown dropped to 10-6 for the season.

Gretzky holds Cup key

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Glen Sather, who admits he feels privileged to watch Wayne Gretzky perform each night, understood what his star center's masterpiece in the third game of the Stanley Cup finals was all about.

"That's why they call him 'The Great Gretzky.' " Sather said after his Edmonton Oilers grabbed a 2-1 lead in the National Hockey League championship series with a 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers Saturday night. All Gretzky did was score three goals in the first period and help set up the game-winner in the second.

"I guess I'm a little blase about him," Sather added. "But I think in the finals its one of the best he's played. It was obvious from the start of the game.

"He's the kind of hockey player who plays from inside. He's self-motivated, which is what makes him so great."

Gretzky's performance gave him 41 playoff points, breaking his own Stanley Cup mark of 38, set in 1983. He also moved into a tie with Stan Mikita for sixth place on the all-time list with 150. Gretzky, who has played in less than half the playoff games of most of the leaders, is tied with Jean Beliveau for third in assists with 97, but is only four behind leader Denis Potvin.

"I think I played a strong hockey game," he said in typical understatement. "I get rated on my goals and assists."

Gretzky felt he atoned for not producing more in the two games in Philadelphia, which the teams split. He had one goal in those contests.

"Last Tuesday, I was blanked and I said I wasn't even there. In the next game, I got the first goal but that was all.

"I felt good and had the extra jump tonight. It was a very satisfying game."

The best-of-seven series continues here Tuesday and Thursday nights.

"We've won 14 in a row at home, we're very strong here, we like the building and the atmosphere," Gretzky said. "We're two wins away from the Stanley Cup and can smell it."

But Paul Coffey, whose four assists gave him 22 for the playoffs, a one-season record for a defenseman, warned that the Oilers will have to work harder.

"We totally outplayed them for the first period and a half," he said. "They totally outplayed us for the last period and a half. We got away from our game plan.

"They didn't get to be the No. 1 team in the league during the season by a fluke. To win the Cup, we'll have to play 60 minutes each night.

"We got up 4-1 and I think we felt we had it wrapped up. But we've got two days to get back on the right track."

As do the Flyers, who held the Oilers to six shots in the last 40 minutes after allowing 20 in the first period, although Edmonton had good opportunities on which they shot wide or overpassed.

The Flyers must avoid another early breakdown.

"They definitely freewheeled for the first 10 minutes," said defenseman Brad Marsh. "It would have been easy for us to roll over and wait for the next game when it was 4-1, but we showed we have a good team regardless of the score. After it was 4-1, we smartened up."

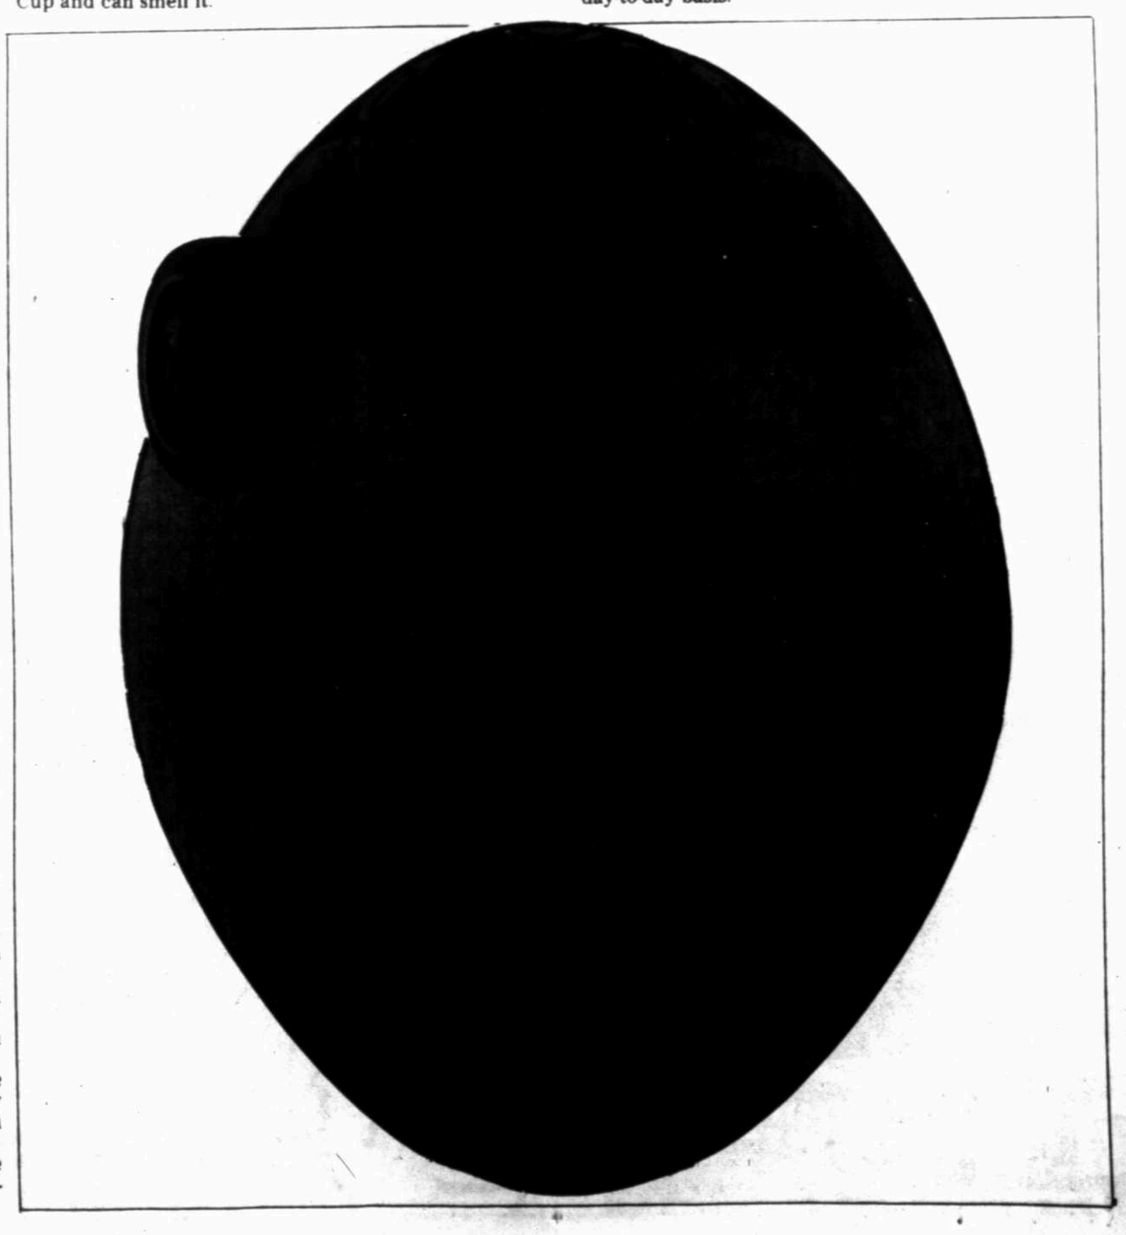

Pelle Lindbergh, the NHL's winningest goalie this season and spectacular during the playoffs, twice was lifted by Coach Mike Keenan. Lindbergh left with the Flyers down 3-1 and at a two-man skating disadvantage in the first period, then was replaced for good by Bob Froese after Mike Krushelnyski made it 4-1 at 6:58 of the middle period.

Lindbergh expects to start Tuesday.

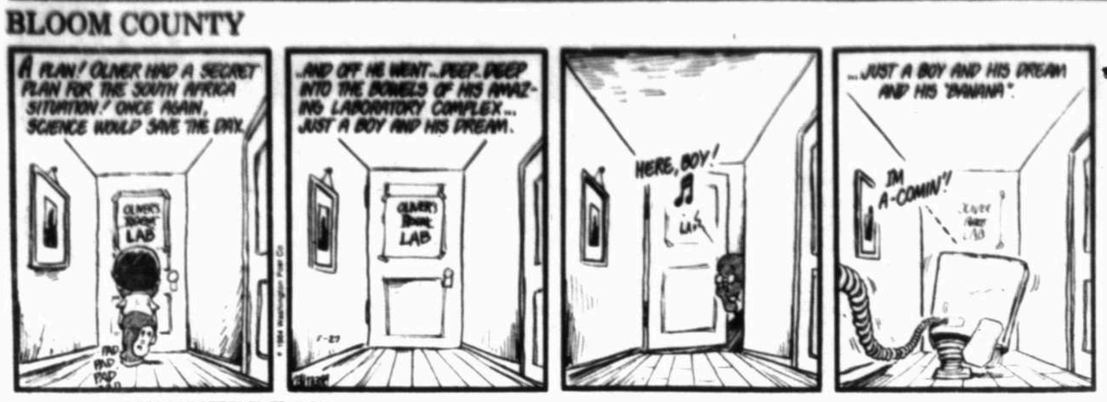

"Whatever is good for the team is OK by me," Lindbergh said. "We gave up an awful lot in the first period but I didn't think the goals were that bad. They really came at us, particularly the first two goals."

Keenan said he changed goalies "just to try to break up some of the momentum the Oilers had at the time. Froese played extremely well."

Philadelphia might be without right wing Tim Kerr, who reinjured his right knee in the third period. The Flyers say Kerr — a 54-goal scorer this season who led the NHL with 21 power-play tallies — is on a day-to-day basis.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK6 ♡AK8763 ◇A95 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Either four hearts or four spades could prove to be a better contract than three no trump, but how do you propose to investigate either possibility? You have already told partner that you have an unbalanced hand, so it is not prudent to override his decision. Pass.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1076 ♡A92 ◇J75 ♣J52
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Up to now, you have told your partner nothing more than that you have a minimum one spade response. Actually, you are somewhat better than that, because you have potentially useful honors in both of his suits. Cue-bid four hearts to see if that spurs him to slam.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠652 ♡KQJ7 ◇62 ♣KQ75
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Dble	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—West's preempt has achieved its purpose—you have got quite a good hand, but no convenient way to show it. About all you can do is bid four hearts. That is an underbid, but no other action is satisfactory. Adopt the conservative course, especially since partner's takeout double might have been made under pressure.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q98 ♡KQ73 ◇K92 ♣K76
The bidding has proceeded:

North	West	South
1 ♠	2 ◇	?

What do you bid now?
A.—An awkward hand. We would accept either a cue-bid of three diamonds or a bid of two hearts which would, of course, be forcing. The only action we don't like is three no trump—we would want two diamond stoppers for that.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ ♡762 ◇8543 ♣94
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You are clearly worth one move toward game, especially since partner almost surely has six hearts on this auction. With three-card support and a ruffing value, raise to three hearts.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A5 ♡A109542 ◇AK5 ♣Q6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—There is no question but that you have to make some sort of jump bid to show your strength, but no bid is perfect. Although your heart suit leaves something to be desired in the way of quality, a jump to three hearts is probably the bid that least distorts your values.

'Peanuts' will die with Shultz

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Cartoonist Charles Shultz says that when he dies, so will his classic comic strip, "Peanuts."

"That's what my children want," Shultz said during a recent visit to Hallmark Cards Inc., the Kansas City-based greeting card company that is celebrating a 25-year association with Shultz.

"They said, 'No, nobody else is going to draw Dad's strip.' I don't care what happens. It just makes me feel good about my children," said the cartoonist. "When I die, the strip dies."

Shultz, 62, has chronicled the adventures of Charlie Brown, his dog Snoopy, and friends since the strip made its debut in 1950. The comic began in 10 newspapers and now appears in 2,040.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone is fighting to cure his autistic 6-year-old son Seargeoh, whose disability helped break up his decade-long marriage, People magazine says.

"We both broke down" on learning of the affliction, which hinders Seargeoh's ability to learn language and deal with people, says Sasha Stallone, who filed for divorce six months ago.

Stallone, who is making "Rocky IV," is not contesting the divorce. He sees Seargeoh "a couple of times a week," the magazine says in its issue released Sunday.

"To have a child in this predicament is extremely sad," Stallone told People. "It's almost like a radio station — he fades on and off the signal."

"After he gets to the point where he trusts you, a little more communication can start. The primary therapy is repetition of words and instructions. He has shown an extraordinary memory, but he cannot apply what he has learned," said Stallone.

WASHINGTON (AP) — American men's attitudes toward women are changing, say women interviewed by U.S. News & World Report, but whether the change is for the better is a matter of opinion.

"There's a renewed sensitivity and a willingness to listen to women," San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein told the magazine.

But country singer Loretta Lynn said "women are taking the man out of their men.... A woman needs a man that she can't control."

Older men "don't accept the idea that a woman may have a brain," said Mary Kay Ash, founder of Mary Kay Cosmetics. "But younger men seem more accepting of women as equals."

But columnist Ann Landers said young single men have "taken advantage of the women's movement. They're letting women pay. They're not opening doors and they're not carrying packages. They're more macho and less considerate."

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — America's first woman in space says she is worried about "sometimes subtle, sometimes not so subtle" discrimination that may be keeping young girls out of the science fields.

"Parents might have a son and a daughter, and it occurs to them to get a computer for their son but they don't even think about their daughter," said Sally Ride, who was in Minneapolis to accept the Charles A. Lindbergh Eagle Award.

"We've got to break down those stereotypes," she said Saturday. "I think that is happening; I think it's happening slowly. I think I was very lucky. Neither of my parents could figure out why in the world I wanted to go into science. But they were perfectly willing to let me pursue whatever my interests were."

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho Gov. John Evans says he will lead a delegation of nine U.S. governors to the headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance in Belgium next month.

Evans said he was asked by the chairman of the National Governors' Association, Kansas Gov. John Carlin, to lead the tour to Supreme Allied Command headquarters in Brussels on June 9-15, his office announced Saturday.

The visit is at the request of NATO and will be paid for by the NATO Information Service.

Other governors planning to make the trip are William O'Neill of Connecticut, Bob Graham of Florida, Guam's Ricardo Bordallo, Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, William Janklow of South Dakota, Juan Luis of the Virgin Islands; Virginia's Charles Robb and Arch Moore Jr. of West Virginia.

PBS series examines Salem witch trials

By LAURA WILKINSON

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — When "Three Sovereigns for Sarah" starring Vanessa Redgrave begins Monday night on PBS, a historian and his former students will see their new findings on the Salem witchcraft horrors come alive.

The research by University of Massachusetts Professor Stephen Nissenbaum and hundreds of undergraduate students began in 1969 and resulted in the 1974 book, "Salem Possessed."

Scriptwriter Victor Pisano based his three-part American Playhouse series on their study of a power-hungry minister and local politics.

The other segments of the three-hour show will be aired June 3 and 10.

"What happened in 1692 was not simply an entire village gone mad persecuting a few deviants, but a rough continuation of the political divisions," Nissenbaum said.

Salem Village, scene of the witchcraft trials which resulted in 22 deaths, is now part of Danvers, where the movie was filmed last fall.

Nissenbaum's course, "New Approaches to History," chose the witchcraft episode to provide his students with a limited cast of characters to study in detail. They worked with previously unexamined primary sources, such as church records and tax rolls.

Nissenbaum's book, which he wrote with former colleague Paul S. Boyer, said most of the accusers were strict Puritans and poor farmers on the village's west side. They felt threatened by the east side merchant class allied with the port town of Salem, where they had to travel to receive communion, Nissenbaum said.

The west siders prevailed in founding a church for their village and in 1689 hired Samuel Parris as minister.

Parris, a Harvard dropout and a failed merchant, angered the businessmen on the east side with his sermons against the pursuit of wealth. When the east siders took control of the local government, they refused to pay taxes for his salary in October 1691, three months before the witchcraft trials began.

"On the eve of the witchcraft trials, Parris was preaching sermons in which he doesn't interpret this as a political issue separating the two parts of the village. He interprets it as a cosmic struggle between good and evil, between the forces of God and Satan. It's almost as if he had set the scene for the witchcraft trials," Nissenbaum said.

When some adolescent girls in the Parris household began acting strangely, uttering nonsensical speeches, they accused several eccentric local women of putting curses on them. Their accusations soon extended to members of the east side elite.

"Our book tries to show there were real issues at stake for both sides. The accusers were in risk of losing their power," Nissenbaum said. "What they did may have been irrational in its manifestations, but it wasn't crazy in its roots."

INDY 500

Despite having the fastest field in auto racing history and concern about increased turbulence in traffic, it was generally a safe race. There were no accidents and record speed for the first half, and there were only minor injuries in the crashes.

The race speed fell far below the record of 163.612 set last year by Rick Mears. It was slowed by nine caution flags but only three crashes in which drivers suffered minor injuries.

The last of those cautions occured with just eight laps remaining when Bill Whittington hit the wall in turn three and came to a stop against the concrete. Whittington was able to walk to the ambulance for the mandatory ride to the infield medical center, but that put the tenacious Andretti right behind Sullivan for the final green flag with just three laps remaining.

When the green flag dropped, however, Sullivan rocketed ahead, clocking laps over 205 mph on the way to taking the checkered flag in the $3 million race. He pulled steadily away over those three laps.

But it took an incredible combination of luck and driving skill to keep Sullivan, in his third Indy 500, in the race at all.

Sullivan ducked below Andretti in the first turn of lap 120 and, momentarily held the lead. But the rear end of his car suddenly slid out and he went into a wild, tire-smoking spin up toward the menacing concrete wall. Andretti braked hard, hesitating momentarily as he tried to figure out on which side to move past the spinning March.

The veteran of 20 Indy 500s chose to go below and got past as Sullivan amazingly kept his car out of the wall and, to the appreciative roar of the crowd, straightened it out, got back up to speed and raced on.

"I was just holding on," Sullivan said in Victory Lane. "I thought that (the spin) was everything."

The incident brought out a caution flag and both of them were able to pit, with Andretti coming out in front. But Andretti had problems with the new set of tires his crew put on and lost the lead to Sullivan. By the time he could change to another set of tires, he could not catch up.

Rich Vogler suffered a concussion and facial injuries and contusions in the second of the two incidents that came in rapid-fire sequence after an accident-free and fastest ever first half of the race.

Vogler, one of six Indianapolis rookies in the 33-car field, appeared to pinch down and touch tires with a car driven by Howdy Holmes as the two dived side-by-side into the first turn on lap 124, one lap after the green flag came back out. Vogler's March spun and pounded the concrete wall with its left side, then skidded into the infield grass. He was flown by helicopter to downtown Methodist Hospital, where he was admitted in satisfactory condition.

Tom Sneva, the 1983 Indy winner, was not far behind as Vogler tagged the wall. Sneva, running second to Andretti, braked hard to avoid flying debris, apparently got into some oil and wound up also skidding up into the wall. However, Sneva was able to jump from the car.

"I'm fine," said Sneva. "I got a little big of whiplash, but I'm in a lot better shape than the race car."

John Paul Jr., another rookie at Indy, although he won the 1983 Michigan 500, escaped with a badly bruised or fractured left hand after a wheel came off his March and sent him hurtling into the third-turn wall on lap 170.

The victory was the fifth for the elite Penske Racing team owned and operated by businessman Roger Penske. The team also won in 1972 with the late Mark Donohue, 1981 with retired Bobby Unser and 1979 and 1984 with Mears.

Mears, one of six former winners in the race, was in contention only briefly in the early part of the race, but went out with engine problems shortly after the halfway point.

The unofficial finish had Roberto Guerrero of Colombia, last year's runner-up as a rookie, in third, followed by three-time winners Al Unser and Johnny Rutherford, and Holland's Arie Luyendyk, the highest finisher among the rookies.

Johnny Parsons Jr. was listed seventh, followed by Michael Andretti, Mario's 22-year-old son and the youngest driver in the field; rookie Ed Pimm and Holmes. The standings are not official until the U.S. Auto Club posts them on Monday morning.

Sullivan led 68 laps, including the final 60, while Andretti led the pack for 107 laps. The only other lap leaders were Bobby Rahal, 14 laps; Emerson Fittipaldi, 10 laps, and Scott Brayton, one lap.

Sullivan and Andretti also battled it out in April in the Indy-car season opener at Long Beach, Calif., with Andretti coming out on top. This time, it was Sullivan, who picked up the fourth victory of his three-year Indy-car career.

Fittipaldi, who challenged most of the race, wound up 13th after late mechanical problems.

The three front-row starters, Pancho Carter, Brayton — both with experimental Buick V6 engines in their March racers — and Rahal, all experienced problems in the early going.

Record-setting pole-winner Carter, starting his 12th Indy 500, fell back to sixth at the start — a clean, quick beginning to the race.

At Fairview Cemetery, the marker for the Cowden family, one of the early settlers who helped shape Midland out of the flat plain, serves as a contrast to the high-rise city in the background.

Cemetery with character

Fairview Cemetery is teeming with life.

A resting place for the dead, they call it. But Fairview is different.

"It's the cemetery with character," one resident remarked.

The wrought-iron fence surrounding Fairview seems to enclose a special atmosphere that can be felt, and sometimes almost seen, from the moment one enters the area.

It draws the living from blocks around and looks more like Central Park in New York City on Sunday afternoons — the bicyclists, joggers, walkers with dogs, children playing tag, adults baring their sorrow at the loss of loved ones or silently meditating upon the future.

The cemetery came with the settlers — for no one lives forever and civilization at some point began dictating that bodies be placed in one area. For convenience, maybe. But Fairview is the soul of early Midland.

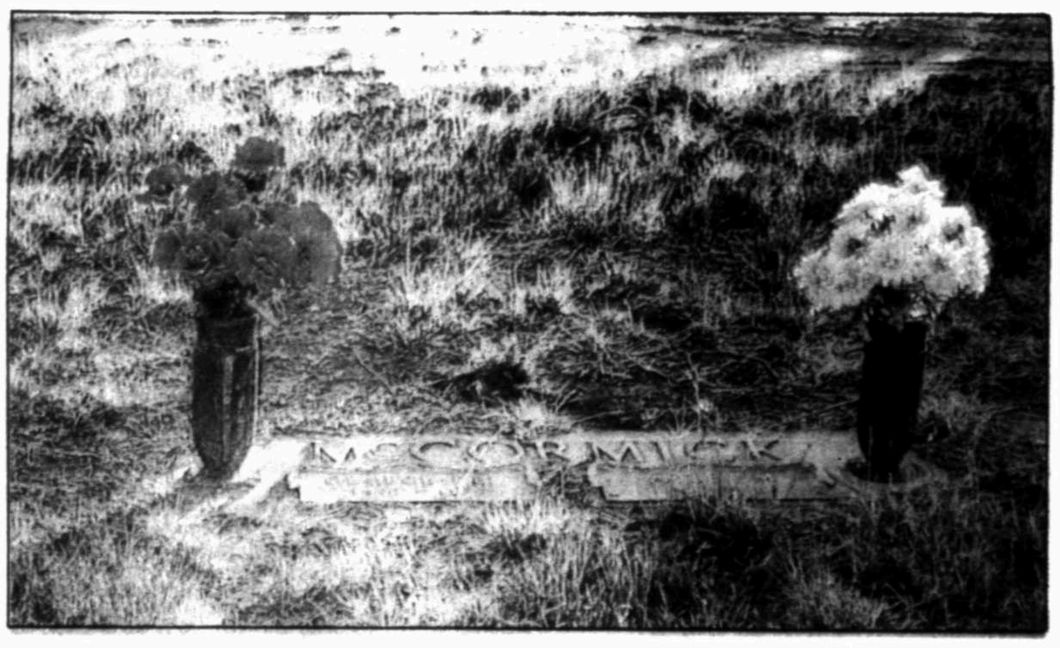

Once located far from town, Midland grew and surrounded the cemetery. Now, those old settlers only have to take a slight glance to the southern sky and see the multimillion dollar office buildings rising above the horizon of a city which they had begun sculpting like clay from the raw earth.

The evening sun is captured in those mirrored buildings and reflected down onto the cemetery, casting a hazy glow to the grounds.

Where once these settlers in their last homes were surrounded by flat prairie and heard the coyotes and felt the hooves of antelopes and heard the sandstorms and rains, they now are shaded by trees and bushes, which soften Mother Nature's fitful moods.

The marble stones, like wildflowers in an open pasture, turn yellow and then pink and then cold gray as the sun goes through its phases.

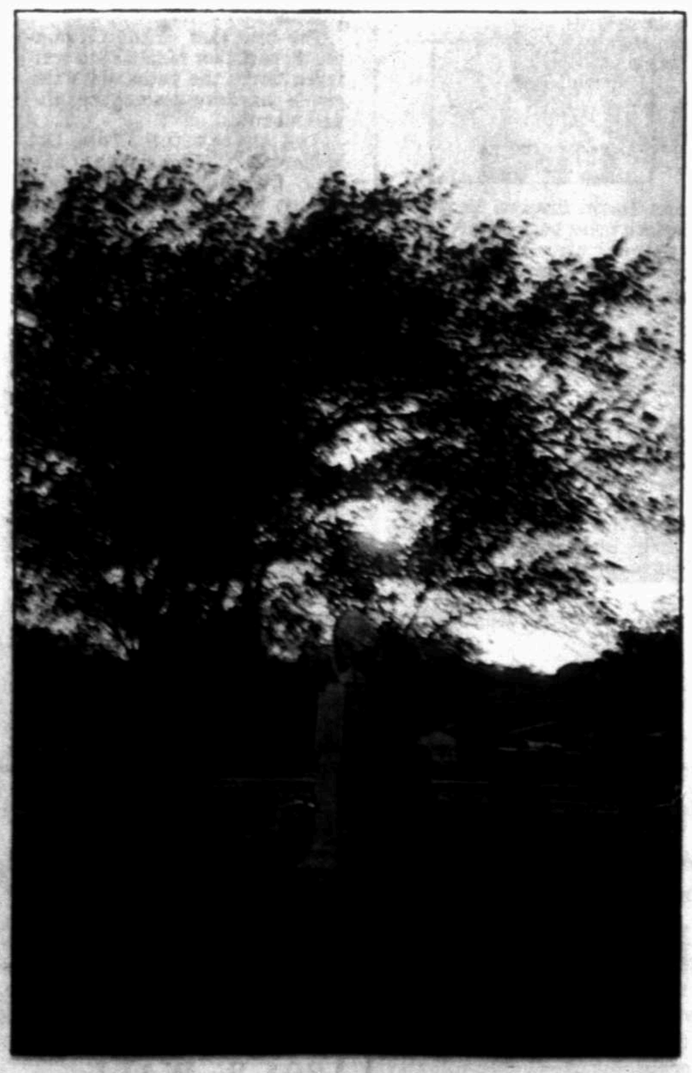

Please see FAIRVIEW, Page 2C

The evening sun lights up flowers on the McCormick grave.

Trees in the cemetery shade the gravestones from Nature's moods, but allow the sun's rays to warm the stones.

The sun eases down to the horizon, leaving a glow in the air.

Kika's newsletter: It's a real kick

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to know the history of birthday candles? What J.R. Ewing is really like? How to make a pecan pie?

Since he took office in 1965, Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, has been putting just such tidbits in a uniquely personal report to his constituents that the eschews the standard newsletter fare of photos, constituent polls and speech texts for a much more personal touch.

While a colleague might expound on the details of the president's budget proposal, de la Garza tells his readers of his weekly newsletter how much the budget document weighed.

He included an obituary when Chico, his Chihuahua, died.

"It's just a letter back home," de la Garza said in a recent interview. He said even his three grown children keep up with him through the newsletter. They used to be frequent subjects.

"We finally brought the children up and are half-way settled," de la Garza wrote on Feb. 4, 1965, shortly after taking office.

"The transfer was quite an experience. I told someone I had once supervised the moving of an artillery battalion and believe me, it was easier than getting three small bundles of energy moved from Mission (Texas) to Washington — but everything went well and we are here and hope that you all come and see us."

In his first newsletter, on Jan. 28, 1965, de la Garza told about watching Lyndon B. Johnson being sworn in as president and reported that the family had finally found an affordable house to rent in the Virginia suburbs.

"My committee assignment in the House placed me on the Agriculture Committee, where I rank seventh from the bottom on the Democratic side," he wrote.

"I realize there are many headaches connected with agricultural problems, but I certainly welcome the possibility that I can be of some assistance in working for a solution to those problems," the young congressman wrote.

De la Garza, who now chairs the Agriculture Committee, laughed when he heard those words read to him.

"But we've still got the same problems," he said. "Never would I have imagined I would have been here that long."

His newsletters may contain poetry, fables, history lessons, little-known facts and gossip, but they also give practical advice. He warned farmers that they would get bound up in red tape if they double-filed for disaster assistance loans with both the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration.

De la Garza said he has rejected new-fangled type-setting and slick paper, keeping the "poor-boy" mimeographing operation he has used from the start. He writes the items for the newsletter by hand, then turns them over to his staff for editing, he said.

Congressional newsletters are sent postage-free. Most members of Congress send masses of them addressed to "Postal Patron," so everyone in the district gets one. De la Garza said he can't do that.

"They would blast me out of the country," he said. "I have to personalize it. It has to say 'Dear Joe, or Dear John or Dear Juan or Dear Pedro.' I know everyone and everyone knows me and if they got a letter that said 'Dear Postal Patron,' they would think their congressman had gone nuts."

The newsletter is mailed only to those who request it, de la Garza said.

"Happy Anniversary — 1000th Newsletter," he began on May 9, 1985.

"For long-time readers of my newsletter, you know I keep all up to date on my doings as chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. But the personal touch will always be there," he wrote. "By now most South Texans know my recipe for 'Eggs Rio Grande' or 'Pecan Pie' — and I'll even run them one more time on demand!

"God bless — and hopefully I'll write another 1,000 newsletters. That would bring us into the year 2005. Now that'll be an anniversary!"

Austin cocaine traffic difficult to control

AUSTIN (AP) — Drug runners smuggle in almost half Austin's cocaine on daily commercial flights into the municipal airport, where a combination of factors makes it difficult to stop them, authorities say.

"It's a wide open place for it. They're using it, and we know it, but we just can't work the way we'd like." said Lt. Pete Taylor, police narcotics detail commander.

Police said a tight budget, too few narcotics officers and the narrow legal grounds allowed for searches prevent police from stopping the cocaine flow through Robert Mueller Municipal Airport.

Taylor estimated that 40 percent of cocaine in the city is hand-carried, undetected, by commercial airline passengers.

"I personally think there's a heck of a lot brought in that way, and a heck of a lot goes out that way. But with our limited intelligence reports, we just can't estimate it," he said.

Without a warrant or probable cause, officers can't search passengers or baggage, Taylor said.

Police do not have a drug-sniffing dog, and X-ray machines used to detect weapons only can spot metal and bulky objects in luggage.

Cases can be built by "profiling" suspicious passengers, Taylor said. But that takes time. With only 14 narcotics officers handling all the city drug cases, he can't afford to station someone at the airport just for surveillance.

Officers profiling suspects watch for a combination of suspicious actions that, added together, could form enough evidence to support a legal search, Taylor said.

"It's just a starting point for us to talk to people. Usually, they're nervous. A lot of times they are the last persons to board and the last ones to get off the airplane. They may be traveling under a false name.

"They have turnaround trips, they don't have any luggage, or they have a lot of cash. Sometimes, they break and run and then we can detain them on the spot. We can search a person then, but usually we try to get a search warrant for their luggage," he said.

Officers frequently watch passengers on flights from "source cities" such as McAllen and Brownsville, where police believe a large percentage of the smuggling originates, Taylor said. Police sometimes check flights to and from Florida and Dallas, he said.

Federal customs officials inspect only baggage and cargoes of chartered, international flights, which number from 75 to 100 a week, authorities said.

Texas bracing for arrival of South American bees

HOUSTON (AP) — Already reeling from an invasion of bee-attacking mites, Texas beekeepers are bracing for another, potentially more serious crisis — the arrival of so-called "killer bees" from South America.

Although the aggressive species is at least three years away by natural progression through Central America, some observers say the bees could arrive in the United States — likely coming in through Texas — sooner than expected.

"They could be here tomorrow," said Tom Rinderer, a scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Baton Rouge, La.

Pointing out that swarms of the species, known as Africanized bees, are often found on ocean vessels, Rinderer said, "All they have to do is jump ship."

Rinderer said the public danger posed by the bees is minimal but it could mean bankruptcy for many marginal beekeeping operations.

Honeybees are vital in the pollination of many crops. An estimated $19 billion worth of crops benefit directly or indirectly from bee pollination each year, he said.

"We could live without the honey, but not the pollination," he said.

Beekeepers in Texas are aware the state will likely be the entry point for the Africanized bees, and they are pressing for action from state and federal authorities before the crisis point is reached.

"They have only a few years to come up with something," said David Briden of Washington-on-the-Brazos, president of the Texas Beekeepers Association. "If they don't, it will make beekeeping very difficult to carry out."

Since their accidental introduction in Brazil in 1975, killer bees have forged a grim story of domination over the formerly prevalent European bee strain, which has been absorbed by the African species.

Texas wheelchair athlete makes POINT of achieving independence

UNCERTAIN, Texas (AP) — Randy Snow, a high school tennis star when he lost the use of his legs, hasn't let his handicap bring his athletic achievements to a stop — but he admits it took a while to accept his disability.

"A thousand-pound bale of hay fell on top of me," Snow recalled. "I was driving a tractor and it just fell on me."

Ten years later, Snow has won four consecutive National Wheelchair Tennis Championships. He was a silver medalist in the Los Angeles Olympics last summer and he has raced in the Boston Marathon wheelchair division.

But Snow told the Longview Journal-News that it wasn't until he met another paraplegic, Michael "Shorty" Powers, that he learned to live with his disability.

"I didn't really feel comfortable about being in a wheelchair until I met Shorty and came on one of these," Snow said.

Snow was referring to one of the outdoor activities Powers organizes for physically disabled people. Powers is president and a co-founder of POINT — Paraplegics On Independent Nature Trips.

Through POINT, Powers has organized outdoor events ranging from white-water rafting to mountain climbing. But on May 18-19 at Caddo Lake in East Texas, Powers held his largest event so far — the National Bass Championship for the Physically Disabled.

Participating in the event were 34 men and two women ranging from Vietnam veterans to accident victims such as Snow. They came from as far as North Carolina, Michigan and California.

"I would say probably this is the most important major gathering," Powers said. "What we're doing is, we're getting people introduced to or we're keeping their interest in the outdoors by creating this national bass championship."

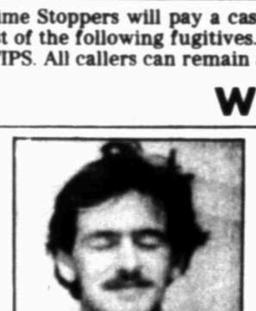

Tournament organizers began arriving in the fishing community of Uncertain on Friday. Powers supervised the building of ramps to make cabins accessible by wheelchair.

On Saturday, the anglers competed for a top prize of $1,000. Dickie Gould, a double amputee from the San Antonio area, took first place with a 5-pound, 7-ounce bass.

Some names still stand out like ink; others the weather has worn nameless. The older ones reflect imagination of their creators: tall sections of a fossilized tree, slender spheres or decorated obelisks.

The gravestones are old and tell a history: Philip Scharbauer, South Bethlehem, N.Y., died in Midland, Tx., Oct. 18, 1931. Dr. W.K. Curtis, 1853-1926. N.H. Ellis, died Jan. 20, 1912. Eugenia Ellis, Jan. 23, 1912. H.M. Pegues, Feb. 18, 1859; Feb. 1, 1911.

The branches of the Cowden and Scharbauer families are scattered down the paths, with the grave markers designating the various roots.

And there's O.B. Holt, Dr. McCormick, Scarborough, Caldwell, J.W. Draper, the Brunson family, N.B. Brown, J.T. Jowell, R.D. Heatly.

They were the life and breath of early Midland.

As the sun settles into the western horizon, the shadows grow longer and the glow lessens. But the calm air begins to stir and the imagination of the living can visualize the oldtimers sitting down under a tree — as they used to around the cattle trail campfires — for a philosophical look at today.

The battle of good times vs. bad times would be no news to these settlers, who faced this fight all their lives.

As their conversation livens, the cemetery's trees pick it up and carry it through the branches. To the living, it is only the wind blowing through the trees.

To the dead, these are the stories they took to the graves with them.

Bands will play for president

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Twenty high school bands which were frozen out of President Reagan's second inaugural parade will play a delayed salute to the chief executive on Memorial Day.

The 2,700 teen-age musicians — about half of those who were prevented from performing in Washington in January when the parade was canceled — will march during Reagan's two-hour visit to the Epcot Center at Disney World.

It's a grand payoff for Disney's publicity machine, which wasn't certain until Wednesday that the president and his wife were coming.

Several weeks after the second inauguration, Disney officials met to talk about a spring festival of marching bands, and company President Frank Wells thought of inviting the bands which didn't march in Washington.

"We all sparked to the idea," said Disney publicist Charlie Ridgway. "And we said, 'If they come, maybe the president would come, too.' "

A call was made to the White House, and Fred Ryan, deputy assistant to the president, thought it was a "fine idea," according to Ridgway.

"He gave very strong and official support to the idea...and indicated that the president would attend if it could be fitted into his schedule.... He liked the fact that it was a private-sector initiative," involving no tax money.

Birth control pill reaches 25th birthday this month

NEW YORK (AP) — It was embraced as the perfect solution to an age-old problem: unplanned children that tied women to the home, made poor families poorer and, in developing nations, sapped already meager food supplies.

The birth control pill allowed women to begin planning careers. It promised sexual freedom. And it offered a chance for poor women to escape the snares of constant childbirth and perhaps lift themselves out of poverty.

The pill was approved for sale in the United States 25 years ago, on May 9, 1960. Within two years, 1.2 million American women were using it. By 1973, that figure had climbed to 10 million, according to a report by the National Academy of Sciences.

"We're talking about exposure to a drug of unprecedented scope in human history," said Dr. Bruce Stadel of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

"THE PILL promised so much," said Susan Scrimshaw, a professor of public health and anthropology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"It did change women's sense of control, and the confidence with which they could embark on careers," she said. And it gave them "a real sense of sexual freedom."

But the initial enthusiasm was soon tempered with disturbing reports of side effects.

Within a few years of the pill's approval, reports began to appear that it could cause dangerous blood clots and even heart attacks and strokes.

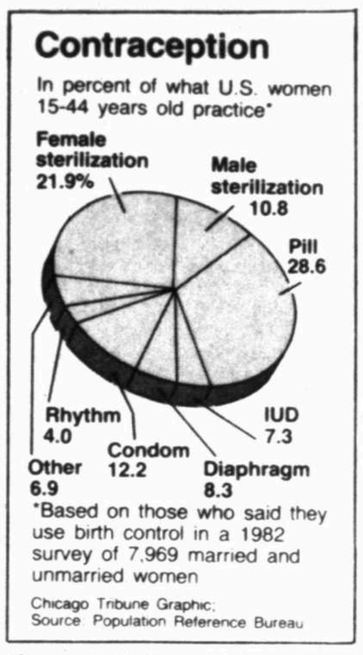

Disillusionment set in. At the same time, according to Ms. Scrimshaw, the growing women's movement fostered the sentiment that women were unfairly bearing the risks of contraception alone — while their male partners shared only the benefits.

"THE PROBLEM is that there's no magic bullet in contraception," said Richard Lincoln, senior vice-president of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a New York-based research affiliate of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

"There's no method that's totally safe, inexpensive, easy to use and acceptible to various groups. But for certain groups — particulary young people — the pill must be the best method we've got," he said.

Others agree. Much has been learned about the risks and benefits of oral contraceptives in the last 25 years, and the birth control pills on the market today are believed to be considerably safer than the first birth control pills.

It is also clear they have previously unsuspected benefits in addition to contraception. The female hormones contained in birth control pills appear to lower women's risk of cancer of the ovaries and the endometrium (the lining of the uterus) and their risk of some forms of pelvic inflammatory disease — an infection in the uterus and the Fallopian tubes that can, in serious cases, cause infertility.

STADEL, ONE of the leading experts on the risks and benefits of the various forms of contraception, said that in 25 years' experience with the pill, drug companies learned they could dramatically lower the dosages of the drugs in the pill without reducing its 99 percent effectiveness in preventing conception.

Not all doctors are prescribing the lowest effective doses for patients, however. "I encountered the other day a woman in her 40s who smokes moderately and is taking one of the strongest pills on the market," Stadel said in an interview. "I was very surprised, but it does occur."

Researchers have also learned that pills are safer for some than for others, Stadel said. "We've learned a lot more about who should and shouldn't use birth control pills," he said. "The cardiovascular risks — blood clots, heart attacks and strokes — are concentrated in older women and mokers."

The pill's benefits, on the other hand, seem to apply equally to all age groups, so young women can reap the benefits with less fear of the risks, Stadel said.

"THE INFORMATION about beneficial effects is only now beginning to be perceived," he said. "There's a peculiar thing about the beneficial effects. If a friend using the pills is prevented from getting endometrial cancer, you never know it. If she gets a stroke, you know."

Stadel and other have noted a swing back toward the pill among younger women. "Society is in the process of shaking it down. It started with complete enthusiasm, then there were problems, and now the pendulum is starting to swing back towards a balanced point of view."

After a dip in oral contraceptive use in the 1970s, the number of women taking the pill had climbed to 10 million again by 1982, according to figures collected by the Guttmacher Institute. The pill is the most popular method of birth control by far among women under 30.

An estimated 9,400 American women are hospitalized by pill-related illnesses each year, the institute said, but some 58,000 others avoid hospitalization as a result of the pill's protective effects.

AN UNANSWERED question with the pill is whether it increases or decreases the risk of cervical cancer and breast cancer.

"We can find no effect one way or the other on the risk of cancer of the breast," said Stadel.

Several studies have shown some increase in risk of cervical cancer, but the studies have been criticized on technical grounds, according to Dr. Solomon Sobel, director of the Food and Drug Administration division that regulates birth control pills.

"We certainly don't have a clear answer, but we are continuing our study," Sobel said.

The basic content of most birth control pills has remained unchanged since the pills were developed in the 1950s. The pills consist of varying amounts of two synthetic female hormones — estrogen and progestin.

THE HORMONES cause the pituitary gland — a tiny organ at the base of the brain that is the master controller of the reproductive cycle — to stop ovulation. If no egg is released by the ovaries, pregnancy cannot occur.

New contraceptive implants tested

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Officials at Research Triangle Institute say a timed-release contraceptive designed to be implanted under a woman's skin could be ready for public use in five years.

The implant, called Capronor, would work for a year and then disappear harmlessly.

"At the moment, there are no forms of sustained-delivery (contraceptives) being used in any substantial way," said Colin G. Pitt, the institute's director of physical sciences research.

Later this year, scientists are scheduled to start another round of testing on the device, Pitt said. The tests will last a year and involve 400 women at 20 different medical centers throughout the world, he said.

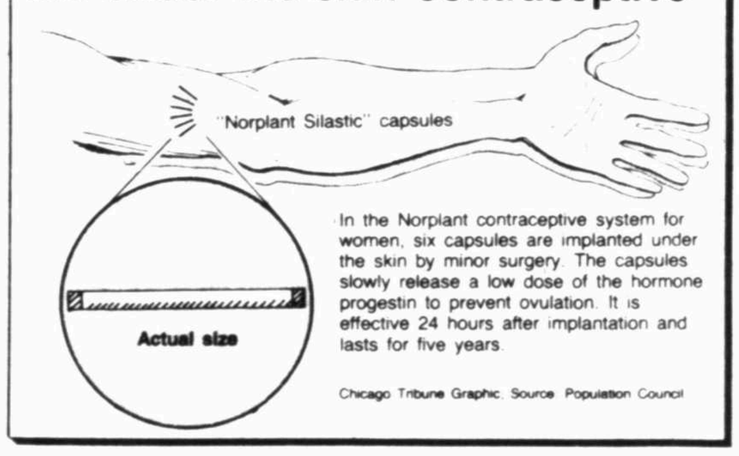

The first safety tests were completed using animals in 1979. In 1984, two years of additional animal toxicity tests were completed without signs of problems, Pitt said.

In 1980, the first limited human trials were done at Duke University. Those tests were designed to provide limited data on toxicity and bloodstream contraceptive levels, Pitt said.

Capronor was developed at the institute's Research Triangle Park campus under a contract with the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, officials said.

Pitt said Norplant, another implantable contraceptive that works for one year, has been introduced in several countries, but he said it must be removed after it stops working.

"They were slightly ahead of us," Pitt said of Norplant's developers. "We are working on the same approach, working with biodegradable material. Other people are working on variants of this method of contraception."

Norplant is made by Leiras Pharaceuticals in Finland.

Research Triangle Institute's contraceptive, on which it holds a patent, is a hollow, inch-long tube about the diameter of pencil lead that is injected under the skin of a woman's upper arm or hip.

Once under the skin, it is designed to deliver a constant dose of a synthetic progesterone called progestogen for a year. By the end of the year, the tube — made of a special polymer — has begun to decompose and is eventualy eliminated from the body.

So far, there is no evidence that wearing the device under the skin is uncomfortable, Pitt said.

Devices like Capronor are designed to deal with the body's tendency to rapidly excrete the contents of birth control pills that are taken daily, he said. Because they deliver their ingredients in a once-a-day burst, the pills must contain an excess of the hormones to keep enough in the bloodstream.

The preliminary tests with human volunteers have shown that the Capronor implant keeps a constant level of contraceptive in the bloodstream.

Search for male contraceptive continues

NEW YORK (AP) — In the 25 years since the pill was introduced, millions of dollars have been spent searching for a drug that would allow men to share the risks, routine and responsibility of birth control.

Researchers have proceeded along several avenues. Some have investigated drugs that disrupt a brain hormone which controls sperm production. Others are working with gossypol, a yellow pigment found in cotton seeds that causes infertility. Still others are working with vaccines.

Here are some of the directions the search for the "male pill" is taking:

—Doctors have found some drugs that disrupt the production of LHRH, or leutinizing hormone-releasing hormone, a brain chemical involved in reproduction. The drugs inhibit sperm production, but they also abolish sexual desire. Doctors are seeking ways to inhibit sperm production without affecting sex drive. Injections of male hormones may to do the trick.

—Doctors studying an infertility epidemic in rural China in the 1970s traced the problem to eating raw cotton seed oil. When the oil was withdrawn, fertility returned. Since then, more than 10,000 Chinese men have been involved in tests of gossypol, a pigment in cotton seeds that inhibits sperm production without destroying sex drive. It is taken in pill form.

Side effects of gossypol may include a drop in blood potassium levels, which can lead to irreversible muscle weakness and paralysis. Research is currently focused on whether smaller doses of gossypol reduce the toxic effects while still inhibiting sperm production. Chemists are also trying to produce a synthetic gossypol.

—Some researchers are seeking a vaccine that would inhibit sperm production. Research is still in preliminary stages, but doctors dream of a vaccine, maintained by periodic "booster" shots, that would maintain infertility until the boosters were stopped.

Whatever form the "male pill" takes, couples will have to cooperate for it to be effective.

"It will take a special relationship for use of the male pill," said Dr. Sheldon Segal, director of the Rockefeller Foundation's Center for Population Sciences. "It is the female who gets pregnant. ... If (the man) forgets to take his pill, he says, 'Gee, I'm sorry.' But she's the one who is pregnant."

Birth control methods have pluses, minuses

NEW YORK (AP) — The pill provides the most effective form of reversible birth control, but it also has drawbacks that make it the wrong choice for some women.

No birth control method is perfect. People choosing among the various methods must weigh the benefits and drawbacks and decide which is right for them.

The federal Food and Drug Administration reports in the May issue of FDA Consumer magazine that birth control pills have an estimated effectiveness of 97 percent to 99 percent, which means only 1 percent to 3 percent of women who use them can expect to become pregnant in a year of use.

But the FDA said the pill was particularly risky for those who smoke, are over 35 or have high blood pressure, diabetes or high cholesterol.

Risks and drawbacks include blood clots, gall bladder disease, non-cancerous liver tumors, water retention, hypertension, mood changes, dizziness and nausea.

Here are some other methods of contraception and their effectiveness, risks and benefits as provided by the FDA:

— Condoms, the only temporary contraceptive for males, are 64 percent to 97 percent effective. They provide good protection against sexually transmitted diseases. On rare occasions, a person may be allergic to them.

— Vaginal spermicides, when used alone, are 70 percent to 80 percent effective. They may give some protection against sexually transmitted diseases. They must be applied no more than one hour before intercourse.

— The sponge, a new contraceptive, is 80 percent to 87 percent effective and may give some protection against sexually transmitted diseases. In rare cases women may contract toxic shock syndrome.

— A diaphragm with spermicide is 80 percent to 98 percent effective. Some users may suffer bladder infections. The diaphragm can be inserted before intercourse and can be left in place 24 hours, although additional spermicide is needed if intercourse is repeated.

— The IUD, or intrauterine device, is 95 percent to 96 percent effective. It must be inserted by a physician and remains in place until a physician removes it. Some users may suffer cramps, bleeding, pelvic inflammatory disease and, in rare cases, perforation of the uterus.

— Sterilization, a permanent form of birth control, is more than 99 percent effective in men and women.

Male nurses bring strong responses

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You asked your readers how they felt about male nurses. Well, let me tell you. If I caught a male nurse tending my wife, he would leave her room faster than he went in. Men should stay in man's work, or confine their nursing to men only.

My wife goes to a woman doctor. She started going to a male doctor, but I wouldn't let her go back to him a second time. I made her find a woman doctor.

My wife had to see a specialist once, and he was a man, but I insisted on going into the examination room with her. If a doctor won't allow a husband in the room, he shouldn't be a doctor. I hope to see a law passed that says no male doctor can examine a woman unless her husband is present. — KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR KNOXVILLE: Would you hope to see a law passed that says no female doctor can examine a man unless his wife is present? Just asking.

DEAR ABBY: Are male nurses discriminated against? This is the way it is in Vancouver, Wash.:

Hospitals have nurses' lounges — but the males aren't allowed to use them. Female nurses are often provided with uniforms and laundry service — males aren't, unless they want to wear the "scrub" uniforms, which lack the crisp, professional appearance most nurses like to maintain.

A male's sexuality is always suspect. Many female nurses assume that a male nurse must be somehow "less of a man" — otherwise he'd be a doctor, not a nurse. It's amusing to see the slightly shocked expression with which one nurse meets another nurse's wife for the first time.

How do I know all this? I am a nurse, and so is my husband. — NURSE'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: I have given birth eight times and have had two miscarriages and then a hysterectomy. Fortunately I was never attended to by a male nurse. It is bad enough that I had to expose my body to a male doctor, but a male nurse? Never! — CALL ME OLD-FASHIONED

Computer keyboard technology advances

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Typists have become word processors, mice can manipulate blocks of text on the computer screen and modems allow an endless stream of information to flow into the computer over telephone lines. But when all is said and done, almost everything having to do with personal computing still begins with the keyboard.

The keyboard is the main gateway to computing, and it is the slowest common denominator, setting the pace for all that follows. As such, it is the subject of intense research directed primarily toward its replacement.

Voice-activated entry systems are increasingly mentioned as an alternative to typing. If the truth is to be told, however, computerized voice recognition will probably not be practical until the turn of the century — if then. A more promising technology for relieving the tedium of entering data into the computer is the scanner.

In theory, one should be able to pass printed material through a scanner and have it immediately read by the computer. In fact, the day when one will be able to clip, say, a column from a newspaper, feed it through the scanner and have it automatically converted into electronic impulses that a computer can digest is still some distance away. However, that event is now years, not decades, away.

Two separate approaches, optical character recognition, or OCR, and bit image conversion, are already sufficiently developed so that general purpose scanning machines based on these technologies are being produced in quantity. Though not yet for everyone — nor for every application — these print-to-digital converters have attained a degree of sophistication and a concomitant reduction in price to make them worth looking into for at least some specialized office applications.

The two technologies take very different approaches to the job of turning print into electronic signals. Bit imaging resembles serving alphabet soup to a young child who is incapable of handling a spoon and is bound to drink the whole bowl at once. OCR, on the other hand, parallels the predictable behavior of the older child, who will fish individual letters out of the broth with which to spell his name (or something else) along the edge of the soup plate.

Optical character recognition has been around for quite some time. However, the sci-fi typefaces designed to be read by machines are difficult for humans to decipher. Even if one ignores the human factor, something done all too readily in computer technology, OCR had two other counts against it until recently. First, it was very expensive, and, second, documents that were to be scanned had to be specially prepared, which offset some of the very labor-saving gains in data entry that personal computer users were striving for.

Jerry R. Junkins, above, has been selected to replace J. Fred Bucy as president of Texas Instruments.

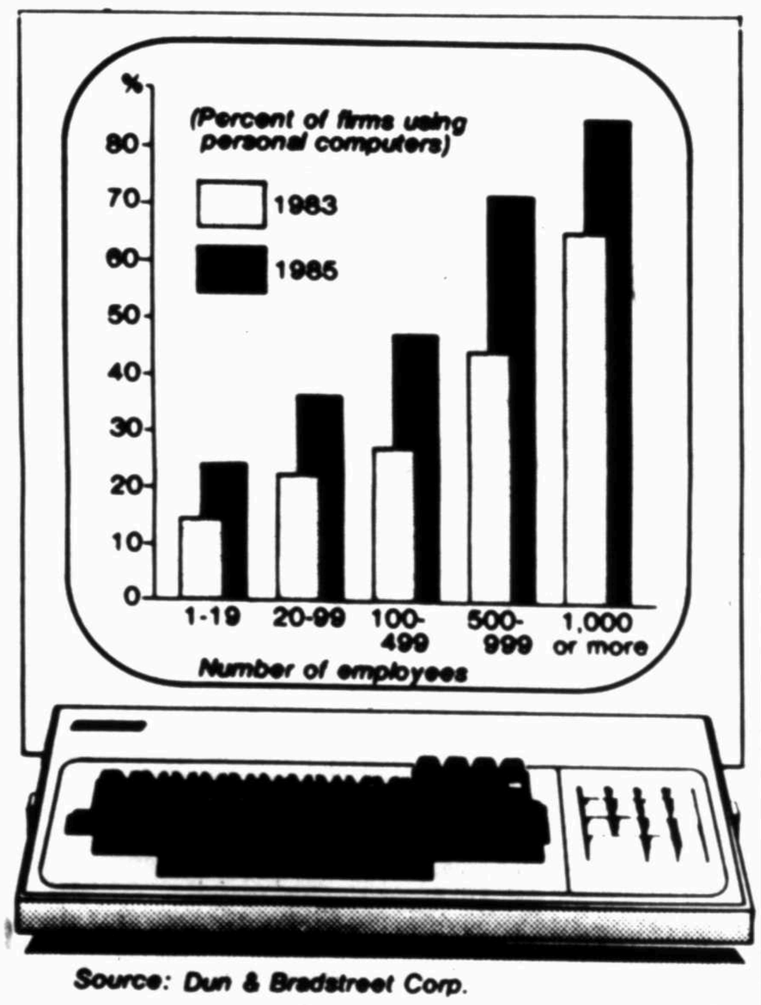

Texas Instruments Inc. names new president

DALLAS(SWN) — Texas Instruments announced today that its board of directors has elected Jerry R. Junkins president and chief executive officer. Prior to his election Junkins served as an executive vice president responsible for TI's business activities in government electronics, data systems, and industrial controls, and for the company's internal information systems and services organization. He was elected to TI's board of directors in 1984.

Junkins replaces J. Fred Bucy, age 56, who has resigned as TI's president and chief executive officer and from the TI board of directors, in order to pursue other interests. Bucy has elected to take advantage of TI's early retirement program, which became available to him at age 55.

In announcing these changes, Chairman Mark Shepherd, Jr., speaking for the TI board of directors, said that during Fred Bucy's 32 years with TI he has made major contributions to the overall growth and development of the company in both technical and managerial capacities. Shepherd also said that Bucy's services will continue to be available to TI as a senior advisor to the board of directors.

Junkins, who is 47 years of age, received a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from Iowa State University in 1959, and a masters degree in engineering administration from Southern Methodist University in 1968. He started work at TI in 1959 and has held numerous responsible management positions during his career.

Computer use jumps

According to a Dun's 5,000 survey of businesses in 1983 and 1985, the number of firms using personal computer work stations has increased nearly sixfold, almost twice the expected rise. The survey is based on a sample of U.S. firms that represent the full range of businesses in the nation.

Energy Forum seeks to educate Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dallas Energy Forum officials seeking to educate Congress about the oil industry are paying for a group of tax-writing committee staffers to visit the East Texas oilpatch this weekend.

Ten congressional aides were scheduled to spend the weekend in Tyler examining drilling rigs, a refinery and the oil museum in Kilgore, Texas.

"Our objective is educational. We're not a lobbying group," said Ed Beanland, a Dallas Energy Forum member with the accounting fire Arthur Young & Co. "We want to get these aides out of Washington and down to the oil patch, to let them see, touch and feel (intangible drilling costs), intangibles and tangibles. We just want to show them what the industry is about and let them make up their own minds."

The oil industry's coveted tax benefits came under attack last year when the Treasury Department issued a comprehensive reform package of the federal tax code that included proposals to abolish deductions for intangible drilling costs and the percentage depletion allowance.

Oil and gas industry representatives claim the changes would reduce the industry's cash by 40 percent and cripple exploration drilling and are lobbying against the Treasury's proposals.

The Dallas Energy Forum is a group of about 150 young oil and gas industry managers formed in 1981.

The group of aides visiting Texas this weekend is expected to include five aides working for the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee. Both committees will draft versions of the tax reform package President Reagan is scheduled to outline Tuesday during a televised address.

Four of the other aides are on the staffs of Texas congressmen with energy committee assignments.

Supermarket convention reveals food trends

Upscale foods, salads among the biggest

By STEVEN GREENHOUSE
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — Crabmeat salad, tortellini salad, oriental chicken salad, creamy cole slaw and more than two dozen other salads filled the sleek glass display cases at the Orval Kent Food Co. booth.

"Right now the biggest food trend is upscale food, and one of the biggest trends within that is upscale salads," said Michael J. McGrath, an Orval Kent regional sales manager.

It was the annual convention of the nation's supermarket industry, and swarms of executives pressed among the 1,000 display booths to catch the word that, in the food business at least, fast and fancy are in.

Today's two-career couples do not want to spend much time shopping or cooking, food executives say, but they demand quality. They want food fast, but they do not want fast food. They are of course looking for nutritious foods, too, and in response, many exhibition booths were pushing everything from fish to bars of frozen fruit juice.

The 25,000 visitors who crowded into the convention of the Food Marketing Institute, the Washington-based supermarket trade association, agreed that prepared salads are a fashionable hot item.

The salads are part of a trend toward delicatessen food that could be seen in dozens of other booths boasting exotic French cheeses, croissants filled with broccoli, and fancy curved-glass display cases that seemed to belong in a Parisian charcuterie.

"People are on the go, so they want better-prepared foods, which means they want expanded delis," said Albert Lees, owner of a modest supermarket in Westport, Mass. "Everyone is trying to transplant New York delis into their stores." The deli in Lees's store makes sandwiches, sells prepared salads and offers catering services.

Indeed, some Food Marketing Institute officials say Americans have become so time-conscious that many consumers are passing up restaurant fare in favor of prepared foods.

"Many people don't want to spend a lot of time eating at a restaurant," said Timothy M. Hammonds, the Food Marketing Institute's senior vice president for research. "So they buy prepared food at a supermarket deli or bakery and eat it at home."

Asserting that the eating-out boom may have crested, Mr. Hammonds cited government figures showing that restaurant sales were up just 3.5 percent in the first quarter of 1985 from the quarter a year earlier. By contrast, the 1984 first quarter experienced a handsome 10 percent jump.

The demand for haute cuisine salads has spawned a little business of its own since supermarkets have neither the time nor expertise to prepare them.

Orval Kent, for one, is trying to fill the gap with its new line of 19 so-called Signature Salads.

"A supermarket deli shouldn't have to worry about manufacturing everything," said McGrath of Orval Kent. "We can make salads in bulk."

Orval Kent prepares its Signature Salads at its Wheeling, Ill., plant and ships them to more than 2,000 of the nation's 29,000 supermarkets. McGrath said most of the salads have a 28-day shelf life. Although today's health-minded shoppers might worry about the wholesomeness of month-old salad, McGrath said his salads remain tasty because they have less than 0.1 percent preservatives.

Among other newly popular items, frozen juice bars are the hit in what food executives call "the frozen novelty market."

Dole is the acknowledged leader, with its Fruit'n Juice bar, while the Eskimo Pie Corp. has a license to make Minute Maid Orange Juice Bars and Welch's Grape Juice Bars. And at the Shamitoff's Natural Fruit Bar booth, two models were foisting pina colada bars and dark sweet cherry bars upon browsing supermarket executives.

"The juice bar category has grown more than 500 percent in three years," said Stanley L. Peeple, director of sales for Nutri-Foods International, which markets Guido's Ice Juice. Guido's bars are 82 percent natural juice and come in seven flavors, including tropical punch.

The industry boasts that the low-calorie bars have caught on with adults, helping to catapult the new product's sales to more than $100 million a year. While An ice cream pop will often have 200 calories, a frozen juice bar has fewer than 90, and often contains pieces of fruit.

"Consumers want a wholesome snack," Tama Greenberg, director of frozen dessert marketing for Dole, said of the frozen juice bars. "Parents like them because they know they're more nutritious for their kids than candy."

Fresh fish are also popular at the market. Eighty-six percent of American supermarkets carry fresh seafood, up sharply from five years ago. "Everyone is getting away from red meats," said Samuel D. Levy, president of Schwegmann's Giant Super Markets in New Orleans.

Probably the fastest-growing category is catfish, with consumption bounding ahead by more than 20 percent a year in the last three years.

"We are where chicken was 20 years ago," asserted Mark R. Engelhardt, marketing director for the Farm Fresh Catfish Co., a Mississippi-based division of Hormel. And Church's Fried Chicken has decided to sell catfish in its 1,400 outlets.

About three-quarters of the catfish raised are sold to restaurants and the rest go to retailers. But the industry is looking for much of its growth in supermarkets.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Federal Reserves votes monetary policy

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve's main policy body voted at its March 26 meeting to keep monetary policy essentially unchanged according to minutes of the session published Friday.

Reflecting an unusually ambiguous set of economic data at the time the Federal Open Market Committee voted, 12 to 0, to "maintain the existing degree of pressure" on banks' reserve positions, one consistent with a growth rate of 8 percent for the narrowly defined M-1 money supply for the following several weeks.

"Somewhat lesser reserve restraint might be acceptable in the event of substantially slower growth of the monetary aggregates, while somewhat greater restraint might be acceptable in the event of substantially higher growth," the committee said in its directive.

Market analysts said this decision showed the Fed was then neither worried enough about slow economic growth to ease credit nor inclined to bow to what the minutes described as "a few members" who indicated some preference for slightly more restraint.

Customers improperly assigned to AT&T

NEW YORK — The BellSouth Corp. said Friday that the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. had notified it that as many as 41,000 business customers might have been improperly assigned to AT&T long-distance service.

A spokesman for AT&T, however, said the actual number was substantially lower.

BellSouth has filed plans with the Department of Justice to correct the results of an AT&T computer program that erroneously assigned service under the equal-access program mandated by the breakup of the Bell System.

"We are checking the accounts of BellSouth customers, and we estimate the actual number of affected business customers to be about 10,000," said Kenneth Paape, district marketing manager for AT&T in Basking Ridge, N.J.

GM to spend $9 billion on development

DETROIT — The General Motors Corp. will spend more than $9 billion on product development and new factories this year, Roger B. Smith, company chairman, told shareholdersFriday at GM's annual meeting.

The total, which represents a 50 percent increase over the $6 billion GM spent on new plants and equipment in 1984. would be the second-highest capital spending figure in the company's 77-year history.

GM has several new automobiles under development, including the highly publicized Saturn, and has started construction of a new truck plant near Fort Wayne, Ind. It has also announced plans for a new plant to replace an old factory in Fairfax, Kan.

F. James McDonald, GM's president, said that 1985 spending would nearly equal the $9.7 billion the company spent in 1981, when it started construction of new assembly plants in Orion Township, Mich., Wentzville, Mo., and Detroit, and finished equipping a new plant in Shreveport, La.

"Hopefully, we're finished with our plant building cycle," said Smith, who acknowledged the capital spending could depress the company's earnings this year.

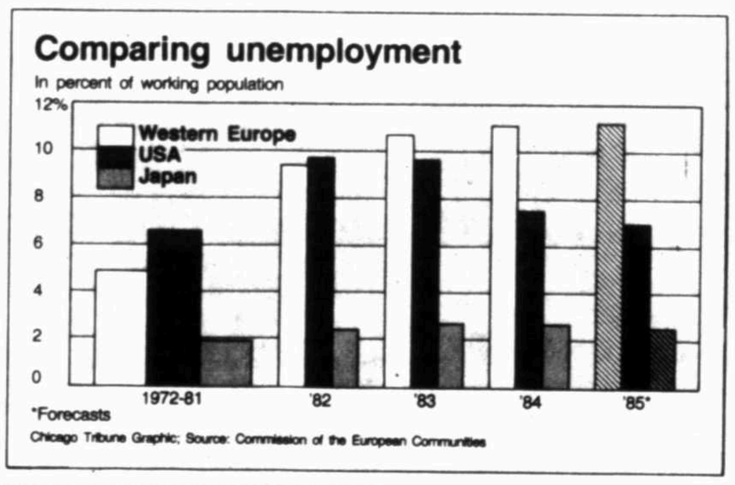

Smith also said GM would continue to shop for high-technology companies, but said any acquisitions would be financed out of GM's cash reserves of about $8 billion.

He refused to say whether GM had made a bid last week for Hughes Aircraft of El Segundo, Calif., but he left little doubt that GM's top executives were impressed with Hughes's high-tech potential.

E.F. Hutton movie limited partnership hit

NEW YORK — Daniel Bell 3d, deputy securities administrator for North Carolina, says the state has halted the sale by E.F. Hutton & Co. of a movie limited partnership because the offering was not properly registered. "I signed a stop order Wednesday based on the allegation of the unlawful sale of unregistered securities in North Caroli na," Bell said. "Our preliminary review revealed material deficiencies, including the fact that we never received a final prospectus. At least $2.5 million worth of units have been sold in North Carolina."

The offering of units in Silver Screen Partners II represents a joint venture with Walt Disney Productions to produce, distribute and own various motion pictures.

Woman makes good living as TV chef

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK — Her major childhood influences were food, word games and Broadway, so it's not surprising that Laurie Burrows Grad is now in the cooking business as a television chef and cook book author.

Mrs. Grad found a lot of food for thought growing up as the daughter of playwright Abe Burrows. It's not every girl who gets bounced on the knees of famous family friends, such as the composers Cole Porter and Frank Loesser.

"Our dinner-table conversation was a lot about studying, learning and words," Mrs. Grad said. "My father was a Latin scholar, and he liked to play word games. Every meal, we must have gotten up 10 times to check out the dictionary."

Meals were events in the Burrows household, and the pursuit of food often served as an intellectual stimulus. Mrs. Grad's own culinary career began as a 5-year-old making omelettes for breakfast.

"Food was very important," she said. "When my father was having trouble writing, he would go to the market and come home and cook. As a kid, I always went to good restaurants. I remember ordering fig leaves and snails when I was 9."

Sometimes, similar influences spur offspring in different directions. Mrs. Grad says her brother, Jim Burrows, has no interest in food. His branch on the Burrows' family tree will note that he was director-producer of a TV series in which people are only seen drinking: NBC's hit barroom comedy, "Cheers."

Jim is first and always a director, said Mrs. Grad. "At family gatherings, he's always directing the kids to recite the alphabet or say something."

At those get-togethers, Jim Burrows and his sister aren't the only ones knowledgeable about TV. Their uncle, Paul Alter, is a game-show director. Mrs. Grad's husband, Peter, is a vice president for 20th Century-Fox's TV division, and Peter's sister, Susan Baerwald, is vice president for miniseries at NBC.

Sadly, their most recent reunion came week before last in New York for the funeral of Abe Burrows. The co-author of the Broadway smashes "Guys and Dolls," "Can-Can" and "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," Burrows died May 17 at the age of 74 after a long illness.

Mrs. Grad's professional career began by displaying herself, not her food. She was an Eileen Ford fashion model in the 1960s, but was eager to return to her first love. "When I told my family I was thinking of a career in food, everybody just laughed," she said.

At a course in career planning, she listed the 20 things she wanted to do, and it began this way: "saute, braise, poach..." She broke into the business with a restaurant review for her neighborhood New York City newspaper, then moved on to food assignments with The Village Voice, Bon Appetit and New York magazine.

For five years, Mrs. Grad has been doing cooking and consumer spots on the syndicated TV show "Hour Magazine." She stresses easy recipes, both on the show and in her book, "Make It Easy Entertaining."

But Mrs. Grad has found that TV cooking is not always simple. It requires the various stages of main dishes for teaching and display purposes — an expensive proposition.

Host Gary Collins is her on-air food tester. "He has fairly broad tastes, except he hates peas," she said. "I'm always trying to make him eat peas."

Flies are the show's uninvited food testers. There's nothing less appetizing than insects swarming around her food, so next to the spatula and blender is a fly swatter that Collins brandishes freely.

Playboy Channel dumps raunchiest programs

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — You still won't confuse The Playboy Channel with The Disney Channel, but Playboy is jettisoning some of its raunchiest stuff for a more sophisticated image.

The pay channel, troubled by viewer defections and a lack of new subscribers, is revamping its programming starting in June.

"The buzzword now is entertainment," Michael Brandman, president of Playboy Programs Inc., said at a breakfast session at the Playboy Mansion in Holmby Hills.

Brandman previewed a new package of movies, specials and series, blue but not bawdy, aimed more at tickling the viewer's fancy than his libido.

"In the past the concept had been purely sex on demand," he said. "It was aimed at the lowest common denominator, morally and intellectually. It didn't reflect the philosophy of Hugh Hefner or Christie Hefner (chairman and president of Playboy Enterprises). The new programs are aimed at the lifestyles of the 1980s."

Some cable systems refuse to carry the channel on the ground that it's obscene. "We hope this will get us clearances on more cable systems," Brandman said. "We believe that a broader range of entertainment programs will overcome the resistance from the cable operators who refer to the programs as sleaze."

He emphasized that the channel is "not going soft" and would be "just as sensually oriented as in the past."

He said the Playboy Channel's target audience is "young urban professional men and women between 25 and 45," the group frequently called Yuppies. He estimated that 40 percent of the channel's approximately 800,000 subscribers were young married couples.

Brandman said most of the channel's cancellations were by women, and steps were being taken to make it more attractive to them. More segments of "Women on Sex" would be added, as well as a show featuring male strippers.

"The redesign of our channel is aimed toward reaching women," said Que Spaulding, president of Playboy Programing Distribution. "It's less exploitive of women, or it exploits men equally. It's done with a woman's perspective in mind."

Brandman said Playboy would spend $25 million in the next fiscal year on programming.

The channel will introduce at least one new program every day in its six hours on the air. In June, for instance, there will be 114 programs in contrast to 60 under the old monthly scheduling.

Film critic Arthur Knight, who has written on "Sex in Cinema" for the magazine since the 1960s, will be host of a new series by the same name. Another series will be "Playboy Comedy Theater," featuring such comedians as Alan King, Henny Youngman and Phyllis Diller. Upcoming comedians will be featured in "The First Annual Young Comedians Show."

Playwright's notebook shows developing skills

NEW YORK (AP) — A literary journal and notebook written by Tennessee Williams in 1933 shows the young playwright experimenting with different styles and developing his sense as a writer.

A second notebook provides notes on such writers as Ernest Hemingway, William Shakespeare and Edith Wharton. The pair is expected to fetch as much as $25,000 when they are auctioned May 22 at Sotheby's.

In the first journal, Williams has a series of vignettes describing people and events: "Professional-satyric looking fellow of 40 some looks through a mail-prohibited book on birth control, discusses wisely with shop owner and recommends to fat, obviously sexy wife when she enters..."

The life of the late playwright, who died in 1983, is richly chronicled in a collection of letters he wrote to family and friends in 1929-39 and 1940-48.

In a letter written to his mother in September 1941, he tries to reassure her about his career: "My work is hard to sell on account of not being written so much for commercial as artistic aims — always most profitable in the long run, even if posthumously — but you will see it is occasionally appreciated by the right people, in the literary world."

Williams' first work to become a major production was "Battle of Angels" in 1940. It folded on the road. "The Glass Menagerie" bought him success in 1945 and launched a rich, creative period: "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Summer and Smoke," "The Rose Tattoo," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Included at the auction of fine books and manuscripts are nine letters written by Walt Whitman to his friend, Abraham Leech of Long Island. Dated between 1840-41 when Whitman was teaching school in the Long Island towns of Woodbury and Whitestone, they represent the earliest correspondence of the American poet still in existence and have been unknown and unpublished. They are estimated at $25,000-35,000.

"I believe when the Lord created the world, he used up all the good stuff, and was forced to form Woodbury and its denizens, out of the fag ends, the scraps and the refuse: for a more unsophisticated race than lives hereabouts you will seldom meet with in your travels," the poet wrote in one letter.

Also on auction are a collection of musical and literary manuscripts, including a seven-page transcription by Beethoven of Mozart's "Don Giovanni." A letter from Beethoven complaining that a particular orchestra did not properly play his opera, "Fidelio," is valued at $35,000.

A proof copy of the first edition of the full score of Stravinsky's "Firebird" is expected to fetch $100,000.

Showing off oneof the homemade pies that attracts customers to the cafe she started in Ponder 34 years ago is Pete Jackson. Though someone else now manages the Ranchman's Cafe, she still visits every day.

Pete, like Ranchman's Cafe, a tradition

By NITA THURMAN

PONDER (AP) — "Hey, Pete. How does it feel to retire?" a customer, dressed in jeans and work boots, shouted across the restaurant tables.

"I don't know. I haven't started yet," 80-year-old Pete Jackson shot back as latecomers to lunch helped themselves to cobbler and coffee.

Mrs. Jackson — although her customers say Pete is more appropriate — is relinquishing management of the popular Ranchman's Cafe that has given the tiny Denton County town of Ponder a reputation as a mecca for steak lovers.

But Pete still remains a daily presence and has written an iron-clad "no-changes" clause into her lease with the new manager, Dave Ross.

That's how Ross wants it, too. A restaurant designer and consultant, Ross got his first resturant job at the Ranchman's in 1974.

"You don't change success," he said.

Pete stopped by the cafe one day last week before going to the beauty shop to have her gray curls touched up for a photograph to be taken later that day to hang in the Ponder museum.

She is brusque and all business — "a heart of gold encased by stainless steel," Ross said.

Pete started the cafe 34 years ago because there was no place to eat lunch in Ponder.

"We needed a restaurant in town, so I told my husband. 'I believe I'll get that building and fix it up,' " she said.

That Ranchman's now is listed in the European edition of a Berlitz guide to American restaurants and cited regularly as steak heaven by everyone who writes about food.

Millionaires, bankers, railroad workers and rodeo cowboys rub elbows with the home folks to taste Pete's 8- to 24-ounce sirloins and T-bones and rhapsodize over her homemade pies.

House favors fee hikes

AUSTIN (AP) — The House voted 94-53 Sunday in favor of a $146 million package of fee hikes needed to balance the 1986-87 state budget.

The Senate now must act on the compromise bill in order to send it to Gov. Mark White.

If approved, Texans would pay more to drive, file lawsuits, drill for oil, dump hazardous wastes and get license plates with their names on them.

The fee bill is a compromise between measures approved in the House and Senate. The compromise was reached last Thursday night as one way of financing the $36.8 billion state spending bill for 1986-87.

Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, complained that the compromise bill did not include a House provision saying the fee hikes would go in effect only if the Legislature approves a bill mandating a cut in state employees.

Geistweidt said he did not want to raise fees without an accompanying "economy in government" measure to show Texans that the state is trying to pinch pennies.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said, "I hope the appropriations bill will do that."

The new fee schedule would be effective Sept. 1. Included is a hike from the current annual $5.25 motor vehicle inspection fee for all cars to a $7.75 a year fee for cars two years or older.

Inspection of new cars would cost $15, but be good for two years.

Other fees raised by the bill:

— Drivers' licenses, good for four years, from $10 to $16.

— Filing a civil law suit in a district court would cost $75 instead of the current $25, except for no increase in filing child custody cases. The county, which handles the filing, would get $10 of the $75. They get nothing now.

— Personalized auto license plates would increase from $40 to $75 a set.

— Probation fees would increase from $15 a month to not more than $40 monthly, to cover administration costs of the service.

— Permits for fleets of emergency medical vehicles would increase from $500 to maximum of $2,000.

Strake feels GOP could control House

AUSTIN (AP) — Republicans could take control of the Texas House by 1990, giving them a big say in how the state redistricts for Congress and the Legislature in the next decade, state GOP chairman George Strake says.

"I think we have an outstanding chance of getting at or near a majority in the House of Representatives in Texas in 1990, and once we do that and we get some control over redistricting, then this will be a Republican state in my opinion," Strake said.

His comments were aired Sunday on the public affairs television program "Capital Eye."

After each 10-year federal census, state legislatures draw new lines for the districts from which congressmen, state representatives and state senators are elected.

Strake said the Republican Party has been hurt in the past by overwhelming Democratic control in both houses of the Texas Legislature and therefore, the redistricting process.

But after the big gains made in 1984, GOP lawmakers now make up more than one-third of the 150-member House, holding 52 seats. Continued success in local races could put the Republicans in the majority after the 1990 elections, he said.

"The area to watch is the House ... because that's our best chance to make significant gains in redistricting in 1990," Strake said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Most evacuees return

DUBLIN (AP) — Most of the 300 residents evacuated after a train derailment were back home Sunday as investigators attempted to find out why 14 cars tumbled off the tracks.

The accident took place Saturday about 40 miles southeast of Eastland, site of an explosive train-truck collision on Friday. The train, operating on alternate tracks because of the destruction of the Missouri Pacific rails in Eastland, was the third to derail in Texas in two days.

The cars derailed a quarter of a mile from the center of Dublin around 6 p.m. Saturday, destroying one bridge and damaging another. Nine of the cars were said to contain flammable benzene.

A small fire ignited at one of the derailed cars, but Dublin firefighters where able to douse it without incident, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Grass fires sparked by the derailment were also doused immediately.

Ralph Hall declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm offered Democratic Rep. Ralph Hall of Rockwall the post of U.S. attorney for the Northern District of Texas, but Hall says he turned down the proposal.

The move comes after Gramm, R-Texas, nominated Rep. Sam Hall of Marshall, another Democrat, to a federal judgeship. Hall plans to resign Monday to assume the bench.

Ralph Hall, whose district adjoins the one Sam Hall is vacating, described Gramm as "a good friend and I'm deeply appreciative" of the job offer.

The job in question is held by U.S. Attorney James A. Rolfe of Dallas. Rolfe's office reported Friday that Rolfe intends to resign the job he has held for four years in mid-June to go into private practice, but that no exact date has been set.

Seminary in controversy

FORT WORTH (AP) — Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, the world's largest school for training ministers, is embroiled in a controversy between fundamentalists who are trying to gain control of Baptist institutions and moderates who oppose them.

The controversy began last year when the seminary's president, Russell Dilday, joined in the interdenominational fray.

Since then, a few professors have banned tape recorders in class, while others have used them to record conversations with administrators and reporters, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

Next month, Baptists attending their annual convention in Dallas will elect as president either the Rev. Charles Stanley of Atlanta, a fundamentalist, or the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, a moderate.

Fundamentalists have elected four successive convention presidents in an effort to end what they call a "liberal drift" in Baptist institutions.

Dilday said he began speaking against the fundamentalists a year ago because they were coming close to taking over Southwestern's board.

Boundary bill vetoed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White said Sunday he has vetoed a bill that would remove the requirement that all health and human service agencies establish administrative boundaries that coincide with the health service area set by the governor.

"One consequence of the bill would be to eliminate the governor's oversight responsibility for assuring that agencies providing related health services would coordinate programs and data collections," White said.

White said the bill would have a negative effect on a standardized health planning system.

Constituent mail sealed

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to prohibit public scrutiny of letters state lawmakers get from constituents received final legislative approval from the House on Sunday.

The Senate-approved bill cleared the House without debate on a 134-4 vote.

Before the Senate passed it on Saturday, Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, accepted amendments sought by Common Cause and other opponents of the original bill.

Blake agreed to remove provisions that would exempt from the Open Records Act opinions, advice and information from the state auditor's office, legislative council and legislative budget aides.

Broken gavel creates stir

AUSTIN (AP) — House members scrambled to offer help when a gavel shattered by Speaker Gib Lewis flew from the podium.

"I've never seen so many lawyers respond so quickley," Lewis quipped. "One doctor and 10 lawyers were up here in 10 seconds."

Rep. Mike McKinney, a Centerville physician, was among those who checked for injuries. No one was hurt when the gavel broke Saturday afternoon.

The heavy wooden gavels wielded by House speakers occasionally break. In past sessions, flying gavel heads have caused cuts and bruises in the House.

There have been no injuries this year.

Retailers open Sunday

HOUSTON (AP) — Two of Texas' leading retailers — Foley's and J.C. Penney — jumped the gun and opened their doors to Houston-area shoppers Sunday, a benchmark in a national trend that has seen states all over the country discard closing laws.

States that have discarded Blue Laws have found that employment increases and retail sales significantly rise with seven-day shopping.

If the experience of other states is any indication, buyers and sellers in Texas can expect Sunday to become one of the busiest shopping days if Gov. Mark White signs the legislation — effective Sept. 1.

Computer bill forwarded

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature has sent Gov. Mark White a bill that would make it a crime to rummage through someone else's computer files without permission.

The measure would make computer snooping a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine and 180 days in jail.

Intentionally destroying or altering someone else's computer records would be a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

As talks close, United pilots prepare for long walkout

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines and its 5,000 striking pilots are settling in for the possibility of a long walkout now that contract talks have broken off, spokesmen for both sides said Sunday.

"I think we're prepared to hold out as long as we have to," said Dale Richter, a 17-year United employee and spokesman for the striking Air Line Pilots Association. "The morale is very high."

"We have no idea (how long the strike might last) at this point, and that's because negotiations broke off yesterday and no talks are scheduled to resume," said United spokeswoman Eileen Golab.

Two federal mediators left the Chicago area Saturday, when negotiations halted after 23 straight hours of bargaining on a back-to-work agreement.

Richter said the mediators indicated before they left that they would be available to help if the two sides wanted to get together again.

The 10-day-old strike began over a company demand for a two-tiered pay system that would put newly hired pilots on a much lower scale than their predecessors.

Helen Witt, head of the National Mediation Board, announced Friday night that the wage dispute had been tentatively settled and that the two sides lacked only an agreement on how employees would return to work.

But all-night bargaining on that point failed, with both sides rejecting federal mediators' "last-ditch" proposal and calling off talks with no new sessions scheduled.

"We've done our very best to settle our differences with ALPA," Mrs. Golab said. "And now the immediate job is to rebuild United Airlines to its position as the free world's largest airline. And that's what we're doing right now."

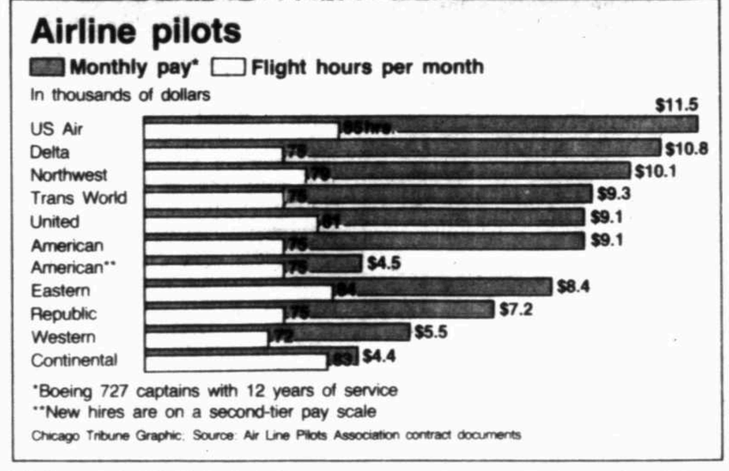

She said United had hired more than 100 new pilots since the strike's outset and is processing 100 candidates a day. Those hired are "fleet-qualified," meaning, in the case of a captain, the candidate has 3,000 hours of flying experience as the pilot in command plus 250 hours of experience in the type of plane United flies, she said.

United puts newly hired pilots through 30 to 35 days of training, she added.

Despite United's early predictions that it would have its flight schedule back close to normal soon after a strike began, Mrs. Golab said it would stick with its current level of running 14 percent of its normal 1,550 flights through June 15.

"Come July 1, we hope to build up to 25 percent," she said. Airline officials have said they hope to return to normal volume by the first quarter of next year.

Famine shipments costing more

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While world shipping costs declined over the past 17 months, American ship operators raised their fees to carry famine-relief cargo to Africa by $10 a ton, according to a report published Sunday.

The rate increases, when added to the high costs of using American ships, have required the government to spend $34 million more than it would have cost to send the African food aid by foreign ships, according to The Philadelphia Inquirer.

U.S. laws require that at least half of all government-sponsored cargoes be carried in American ships, a measure designed to ensure a strong merchant marine for commercial and national security purposes.

So far in 1985, the average cost of carrying emergency relief cargoes to Africa on American ships rose to an average of $115 a ton from $105 a ton during 1984. In comparison, average rates for foreign ships hauling the same cargoes dropped from $69 a ton in 1984 to $58.50 this year, according to the Inquirer.

Stephen Kearns, a vice president at Daniel F. Young Inc., a New York freight forwarder that books many relief cargoes, said one reason for the $56.50 per ton difference between American and foreign shipping costs is that shipping is in the midst of a worldwide recession.

Lava dome gives heat

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The lava dome of Mount St. Helens continued to give off heat but apparently had not grown significantly overnight, scientists said Sunday, one day after saying an eruption was likely within days.

Clouds prevented first-hand observations at the summit, but an airplane took infrared photographs of the 800-foot dome in the volcano's crater, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Thom Corcoran.

"We don't believe an eruption has begun," Corcoran said.

The number of earthquakes recorded at the mountain remained high on Sunday. Saturday's eruption alert was issued after scientists noted a change in the type of earthquakes to small, low-frequency temblors, which have long shock waves.

Such low-frequency earthquakes have immediately preceded and accompanied flows of molten rock in previous eruptions at the 8,364-foot mountain, said Chris Jonientz-Trisler of the University of Washington geophysics center. Their presence indicated magma had nearly reached the lava dome's surface, officials said.

State and federal officials also evacuated and closed the 47,000-acre restricted zone around the volcano Saturday, although Corcoran said any explosion of gas or ash was expected to be confined to the crater area.

Public viewing areas east of the volcano remained open.

Scientists said explosions were considered possible because the southwest Washington volcano had been dormant for eight months.

Reagan's tax plan 'starting point'

By CLIFF HAAS
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The chairmen of the congressional tax writing committees agreed Sunday that President Reagan's tax-overhaul plan will be a starting point for enacting sweeping legislation this year to streamline the federal tax code.

In addition, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, appeared to drop his earlier concerns and said he is "satisfied with what I think the...president's going to announce" to the nation Tuesday night.

Speaking on ABC's "This Week," Packwood said he had "worked extensively" with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III during the drafting of the plan, "and if it comes out as we've talked, I'll be very pleased."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was more circumspect about his views on the plan Reagan will unveil in a nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office. But Rostenkowski declared that Democrats are ready to work with the president on the issue.

"If the president is willing to work with us, I'm sure that there are Democrats certainly on our side of the aisle that are very enthusiastic about measuring up to what we feel is our responsibility of bringing fairness to the American taxpayer," Rostenkowski said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

When Packwood was tapped to become chairman of the Finance Committee late last year, he publicly questioned the value of a sweeping rewrite of the tax code that would not raise revenue to trim the budget deficit and would end various deductions and credits aimed at promoting social goals.

Reagan has said his aim is to streamline the tax system, close various loopholes, end some tax breaks and use the money to lower personal tax rates.

Last December, Packwood questioned "simplification for the sake of simplification."

He added, "To the extent that tax reform means taking away many of these incentives (deductions and credits)...I just don't agree with that."

Last month, Packwood declared that if the president's proposal called for taxing health benefits that employers provide for employees and other benefits, "I will do everything I can do to defeat the bill no matter what else is in it."

But on Sunday, Packwood's tone was different and he indicated his support.

"I think almost everything that the president recommends, almost everything, is going to be adopted," Packwood said "By and large, the president's bill will be the skeleton we work from and will be very close to what we pass."

Advance indications are that the president's plan will be less stringent than the one outlined by his own Treasury Department last November. That plan would have raised corporate taxes by about 35 percent to pay for slashing taxes paid overall by individuals by about 8.5 percent.

Packwood acknowledged, "There were some changes made in it...to attempt to mollify some of the opponents."

Packwood and Rostenkowski agreed that it will be a difficult task passing such legislation, but they also said it can be done this year.

Rostenkowski's panel, which will act first on the tax plan, is beginning hearings June 4. He said the full House can pass a bill by "the first or middle part of October."

Packwood, whose panel begins hearings June 10, said, "We can have a bill out of the Congress and to the president by the end of the year."

Rostenkowski said that the most important element in passing a package will be convincing the public that the legislation is fair.

Also appearing on the ABC program, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a member of the Finance Committee and the co-author of a tax overhaul plan, said, "The people have to understand that they have a choice, that they have to give up some loopholes in order to get a lower tax rate. And if they have a lower tax rate, that means that they're better able to protect themselves and their family from the uncertainties from economic life out there."

Also on the ABC program, Lew Lehrman, national chairman of Citizens for America, a group which promotes Reagan programs, said the president's tax proposal would be pro-family, pro-business, pro-growth and pro-middle income taxpayers.

Plan could cost families that itemize as much as $927

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's tax-overhaul proposal would cost the average family that itemizes deductions $927 if — as expected — it calls for repealing the writeoff for state and local taxes, a new study said Sunday.

The tax increase would vary according to the size of taxes imposed by states, cities and counties, and would range from $1,646 in New York to $322 in Wyoming, according to the study by the Congressional Research Service.

The study, done at the request of the Joint Economic Committee, was released as Reagan prepared to spell out Tuesday night his tax-overhaul plan. The president is expected to call for eliminating the deduction for state and local taxes.

The higher tax burden from repealing that deduction, however, does not take into account Reagan's desire to reduce tax rates for most Americans. In many cases, those cuts would offset any tax increase caused by loss of the deduction.

The Treasury Department advocates repeal of the deduction on the ground it is an unfair subsidy to residents of states with high taxes. City officials predict repeal would reduce state and local revenues by $12 billion a year.

The congressional study concluded that the combined effect of disallowing the deduction and reducing federal tax rates "provide an incentive for state-local taxpayers to lower their state-local tax payments."

That conclusion is based on the assumption that people who itemize their deductions for federal tax purposes control the political process in state and local government.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, who released the study, said it shows "some states have been very lucky in the opportunities available to them to export their tax burden."

He said, for example, that energy-rich states, such as Louisiana, Wyoming and Texas, are able through mineral taxes to shift some of their government costs to other states, which must buy their energy. Florida, he said, is able through the sales tax to shift the burden to tourists. Other states just export their responsibilities, he added.

Summer turns Congress' thoughts to teen wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Congress, talk about a subminimum wage for teen-agers is as much a part of summer as baseball and backyard barbecues, but it's doubtful the idea will become law by the first frost of autumn.

The ritual started in its usual way last week, with the chairmen of the House and Senate labor committees at odds over ways to help curb an 18.9 percent youth unemployment rate.

Senate Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, is sponsoring a bill that would allow employers to pay teen-agers $2.50 an hour between May 1 and Sept. 30. The current minimum is $3.35 an hour.

House Chairman Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., agrees that something must be done to curb soaring teen unemployment. But he told a news conference Wednesday that a subminimum wage would only "throw the youths to the wolves" and see them exploited in the job market.

As an alternative, Hawkins has introduced a $2 billion proposal that would provide federally subsidized jobs for youths who complete high school.

The fact that each lawmaker hopes to pass his own teen employment bill by mid-summer reduces the already slim chance that any measure will come out of Congress this year, most observers say.

"I'm afraid that what will happen is that the Senate will pass a subminimum wage bill, the House will pass its own very different measure and a conference committee won't be able to iron out the problems," Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said Wednesday at the Senate Labor Committee hearing on the Hatch bill.

"Then everyone will be able to go back to their constituents and say he did all he could to pass a teen employment bill and blame the fact that nothing happened on the other house," Simon said.

History supports Simon's view. The last time a subminimum wage proposal came to a floor vote in either chamber was 1977, when a Democrat-controlled Senate narrowly defeated it.

Kris Iverson, a top aide on the Senate labor panel, said Hatch would probably send his measure to the floor only if there was a clear sense the House also was seriously considering approval of a subminimum wage.

"We're not on a kamikaze mission," she said. "If the House would cooperate, we could pass it in short order."

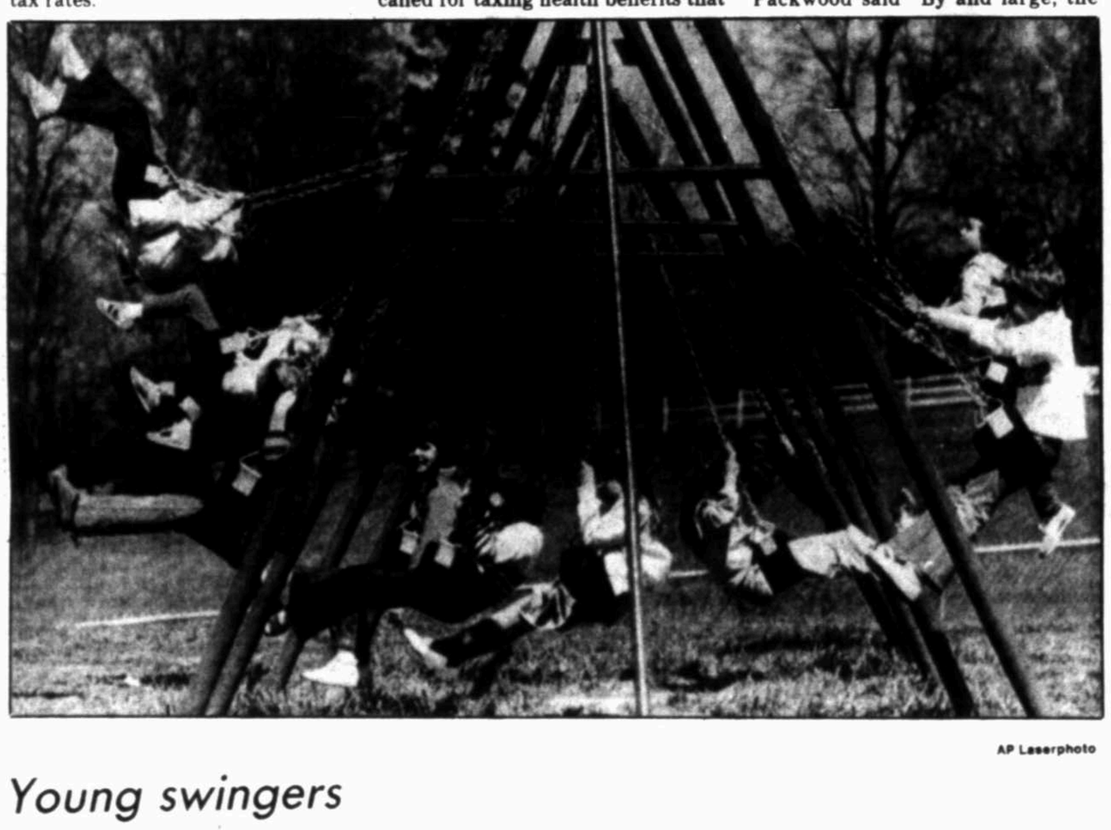

But Hawkins and other leading House Democrats say they will never allow passage of a subminimum wage bill.

"This proposal has been floating around in various forms since the 1930s, and it has never found acceptance as a way to cure the tragedy of youth unemployment," Hawkins said.

Rep. Matthew Martinez, D-Calif., chairman of the Education and Labor employment subcommittee, said he would prevent a subminimum wage bill from clearing his panel because it doesn't address a major cause of teen joblessness.

"The subminimum wage entirely discards the plight of minority teen-agers who are frustrated because no one will hire them because they lack skills and job training and experience, not because employers have to pay them the minimum wage," Martinez said.

The Labor Department says that teen-age unemployment is 23.7 percent for Hispanics and 42.7 percent among blacks.

NATION IN BRIEF

Mother visits septuplets

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Patti Frustaci, with intraveneous tubes dangling from her arms and towing a portable heart monitor, visited her five surviving septuplets and touched them for the first time, doctors said Sunday.

"She said a couple of them opened their eyes and seemed to respond to her touch," said Dr. Martin Feldman, Mrs. Frustaci's obstetrician. Before the visit late Saturday, the mother had touched only a girl who was stillborn at Tuesday's delivery, and a boy nicknamed Peanut who died Friday.

The surviving infants, three boys and two girls, remained in critical but stable condition Sunday, said Dr. David Hicks, a neonatologist at Childrens Hospital of Orange County.

The infants, born 12 weeks premature, continued to suffer from a lung disease common to premature babies, but treatments have nearly wiped out the skin-yellowing jaundice in two of them, said Hicks.

Salmonella germ strong

CHICAGO (AP) — The germ that caused the nation's largest salmonella outbreak and was spread in milk appears to be an unusually strong variety more potent than doctors had realized, health officials say.

"It is not a garden variety salmonella, and it raises a lot of concerns," said Dr. Russell Martin of the Illinois Department of Public Health.

The germ is resistant to five antibiotics, and can cause sickness at low doses, said Dr. Mitchell Cohen, a salmonella expert at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The recent outbreak sickened more than 17,000 people in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and Michigan. It was traced to milk from a dairy owned by Jewell Companies Inc. but the source of the bacteria is unknown.

Amputee reaches peak

TALKEETNA, Alaska (AP) — Sarah Doherty, the first amputee to scale Alaska's 20,320-foot Mount McKinley, says she hopes her effort will encourage those with similar handicaps to pursue their dreams.

"I wanted to climb," Ms. Doherty, 25, who lost her right leg 12 years ago in an auto-bicycle accident, said Saturday.

The Seattle woman and two other mountaineers reached the summit of the continent's tallest mountain on May 19. Ms. Doherty used special crutches outfitted with ice-axes and spikes for the climb that began April 30.

The expedition finished the trek Friday after braving winds of 80 mph and temperatures down to minus 40.

Residents report lights

POINT MUGU, Calif. (AP) — Mystified Californians and Arizonans called authorities after seeing bright green lights streaking through the sky in the weekend test of two unarmed missiles fired from a submarine off Southern California coast, a Navy spokesman said Sunday.

"We've had reports from Stockton and the San Francisco area," and as far east as Phoenix, Ariz., said Navy Lt. Cmdr. Don Lewis of the Pacific Missile Test Center at Point Mugu Naval Air Station, which is 50 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

Clear skies made the missiles visible for hundreds of miles after they were fired offshore about 9 p.m. Saturday, Lewis said.

Former mistress sought

NEW YORK (AP) — Claus von Bulow's stepchildren appealed Sunday to his former mistress to come forward to repeat her damaging testimony at the socialite's retrial on charges of twice attempting to kill his wife.

Princess Annie-Laurie "Ala" Kneissl and Prince Alexander von Auersperg addressed their statement to Alexandra Isles, 39, who is believed to be staying in Europe to avoid testifying at von Bulow's retrial in Providence, R.I., Superior Court.

"We are appealing to you on behalf of our mother to come forward and provide critically important testimony in the trial of Claus von Bulow," Mrs. Kneissl said in a prepared statement she read.

"We recognize that coming forward the last time was an act of courage on your part. We respected you then for what you did. We ask that you summon the same courage again."

Second blast reported

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The police bomb dropped on the roof of the MOVE rowhouse ignited a nearby gasoline can, according to an analysis by the Philadelphia Inquirer of a videotape of the assault and fire that gutted 61 homes.

The Inquirer reported in its Sunday editions that a frame-by-frame analysis of videotape shot by WCAU-TV showed two distinct explosions.

The second explosion occurred a half-second after the blast from the police satchel bomb and came from a spot where Inquirer photographs taken 90 minutes earlier had shown a gasoline can.

An Associated Press photo taken 11 days before the confrontation showed a MOVE member hoisting a can labeled "Gasoline" up onto the roof.

Issue 'shall return'

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary of Education William Bennett said Sunday that Congress' refusal to approve the administration's proposed cuts in student aid did not end the controversy.
