Reid trial continues in Lubbock

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A doctor who believes a former nurse probably killed her infant daughter 12 years ago after a series of suffocation episodes was to continue her testimony today in the woman's second murder trial.

The eight women and four men who will decide the fate of Tanya Reid, 38, spent only 30 minutes listening to Dr. Carol Rosen's testimony Monday afternoon after lawyers haggled over technicalities most of the day.

Ms. Reid's attorneys fought to limit further testimony from the prosecution's cavalcade of doctors who have told jurors they suspect she caused the series of breathing attacks that eventually killed 8-month-old Morgan Reid.

Calling Monday's slated testimony by Dr. Rosen a "needless presentation of cumulative evidence," defense attorney Dean Roper asked state District Judge David Wesley Gulley to keep her off the stand.

Since last Wednesday, doctors who treated Morgan have testified that they couldn't explain the breathing stoppages that haunted the infant until she died Feb. 8, 1984. Some pointed to Ms. Reid as the root cause.

Deaf Smith District Attorney Roland Saul countered that these episodes are key to building his circumstantial case against Ms. Reid.

Gulley sided with the state, and also struck down a defense motion to disallow Saul from using "Munchausen's syndrome by proxy" as a possible reason Ms. Reid may have harmed Morgan by repeatedly suffocating, then reviving her.

Parents with the syndrome injure their children in an attempt to gain attention or sympathy.

The trial is Ms. Reid's second related to Morgan's death. A Deaf Smith jury convicted her in 1993, but an appeals court cited Gulley's failure to consider a change of venue request in striking down the verdict.

At the time of the conviction, she already was serving a 10-year sentence in Iowa for endangering the life of her 3-year-old son, Matthew, in 1988. The case prompted Texas prosecutors to re-examine Morgan's death.

Clean-up time

Members of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society board were spotted on Monday working in the garden at the E.B. Black House, pulling weeds, sprucing up and performing regular maintenance to the flower beds at the historic structure. The Black House, which is part of the Deaf Smith County Museum, will host the Dining Etiquette for the '90s luncheon next week, and is booked for a variety of events throughout the summer. It is a favorite location for weddings.

Questions certain to be asked about Hillary's psychic friend

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - When the story about his wife's reliance on an astrologer surfaced in 1988, President Reagan felt compelled to say that none of his policies or decisions had ever been influenced by astrology.

The Reagan White House was especially skittish about the reports at the time because Nancy Reagan's influence over her husband was an accepted fact. If her decisions were guided by the stars, it was felt, so was his. President Clinton's staff can expect similar questions on the heels of a new book that reports Hillary Rodham Clinton consulted a psychic researcher who prompted her to hold imaginary conversations with Eleanor Roosevelt, and Indian independence leader Mohandas K. Gandhi.

Throughout American history, the people who advised presidents on policy were well known but not their spiritual advisers. Modern presidents have had evangelist Billy Graham to turn to in times of stress; Dwight Eisenhower enlisted him to help get racial peace in the South.

"To tell the truth, outside of Nancy Reagan and her interest in astrology, this is a very unusual phenomenon in the White House," said historian Philip Rulon of Northern Arizona University at Flagstaff, who worked for the Center for the Study of the Presidency for 25 years.

History books record at least one actual seance in the White House. After the death of Abraham Lincoln's 11-year-old son Willie in 1862, his wife, Mary Todd Lincoln, sought relief in spiritualism.

"She began consulting mediums and actually held a White House seance," wrote Carl Stierazza Anthony in his book, "First Ladies: The Saga of the Presidents' Wives and Their Power."

She later was committed to a mental asylum after Lincoln was assassinated.

Mrs. Reagan's reliance on a person she called "My Friend" was described by Donald T. Regan in his book "For the Record." The astrologer later was identified as Joan Quigley and she, in turn, contended she had a direct line to the president and gave him advice.

Regan did not go that far, but wrote:

"Virtually every major move and decision the Reagans made during my time as White House chief of staff was cleared in advance with a woman in San Francisco who drew up horoscopes to make certain that the planets were in a favorable alignment for the enterprise. Nancy Reagan seemed to have absolute faith in the clairvoyant powers of this woman."

Stanley Kutler, a professor of history and law at the University of Wisconsin, said the search for guidance by the two first ladies was far different.

"With Nancy Reagan there was a suggestion that it was influencing policy," Kutler said. "That, it seems to me, is a matter of some concern. No one has made a case that this is influencing policy."

Mrs. Clinton denied that researcher Jean Houston had any influential role other than providing "an interesting intellectual exercise to help spark my own thoughts."

She added, in the written statement, that "I have no spiritual advisers or any other alternative to my deeply held Methodist faith and traditions upon which I have relied since childhood."

She met with Houston from late 1994 until last March, according to a new book by Bob Woodward.

"These were not seances," said Neel Lattimore, the first lady's spokesman.

Fifty years ago, former vice president Henry A. Wallace, was damaged in his campaign for president on the Progressive Party ticket by a journalist's disclosure that he had written "Dear Guru" letters to an exponent of mystical beliefs.

Fireworks for sale, but can't be used here

Drought prompts ban on use anywhere in county

From staff, wire reports

Sale of fireworks has begun across Texas as residents of the Lone Star State prepare to celebrate the 220th anniversary of this nation's independence.

But wait -- before you hit the fireworks stand and stock up on things that go pop, whiz, sputter, bang, boom and whoosh in the night, remember a couple of important points.

Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain this morning issued a reminder that Deaf Smith County has not only banned the sale of all aerial fireworks, commissioners have also banned the use of all fireworks in the county.

In addition, there is a city ordinance prohibiting the possession and use of any fireworks inside the city limits.

The ban on sales of certain fireworks and use of any fireworks in the county was precipitated by the abnormally low rainfall recorded in the county this year.

As of this morning's rains, KPAN Radio has recorded just 2.58 inches of rain all year.

The county fireworks sale ban was issued by Gov. George W. Bush on request by the commissioners court.

It extends only to those items which fly and includes such fireworks as sky rockets, bottle rockets, missile-type rockets, helicopters and aerial spinners, Roman candles, mines or shells.

Those items excluded include firecrackers and sparklers.

The county could have established a safe zone for use of fireworks, but the extreme drought conditions caused commissioners to dispense with that provision.

In the city, the 1988 ordinance makes it illegal for residents to "possess, store, to offer for sale, sell at retail, or use or explode any fireworks" except by specific permit issued by Spain.

Under the ordinance, anyone caught possessing fireworks, or discovered using them, are subject to having those items confiscated.

The law provides that police, or fire officials, "shall seize, take, remove, or cause to be removed at the expense of the owner" any fireworks being sold in the city, or being held in violation of the ordinance.

In addition, city and county residents caught in violation of the bans -- either by possessing or using fireworks -- are subject to arrest and punishment that could include a fine and/or jail time.

The ban has claimed the annual fireworks display sponsored at Veterans Park by the chamber of commerce. However, a Fourth of July celebration is in the planning to be held at the Aquatic Center Park with music, watermelon and contests.

Across Texas, fireworks retailers say they will work to promote safety during the fireworks season.

"We understand local officials' concerns about this year's drought," said Royce Trout, spokesman for the Texas Pyrotechnic Association. "Texas fireworks manufacturers and retailers have already taken unprecedented steps toward ensuring the safety of the holiday season."

The Texas Pyrotechnic Association earlier this month removed dozens of aerial fireworks from sale statewide. The association said it also has developed public service announcements and brochures to instruct people on fireworks safety.

The fireworks selling season runs from midnight June 23 to midnight July 4.

Fire started by youths claims Nevada homes

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
GENOA, Nev. (AP) - Firefighters aided by a drizzle gained ground today on a blaze started by two boys playing with gasoline, but not before it burned across 4,000 acres, charred four homes and forced thousands to flee.

Lightning-sparked fires raged across the West, burning in Alaska, New Mexico, Utah and Arizona, where several fires ravaged nearly 30,000 acres and kept hundreds of people from their homes.

Full containment of the wind-whipped fire in Nevada was expected by early Wednesday, and the 3,000 to 4,000 people evacuated Sunday from upscale areas around Lake Tahoe were able to return late Monday - except for the four families whose homes were destroyed.

"You just have to live with the memories and go on from there," said Howard Herz, who lost his $750,000 house. "What you have to realize is that what you have as a person, like your integrity, stays with you."

Douglas County Sheriff's Lt. Ross Chichester said two boys, 13 and 14, admitted starting the blaze by accident Sunday at the base of Kingsbury Grade, 60 miles south of Reno.

"They were playing with fire, but it was not that they intended to set the mountain on fire," said Maple.

A man told Reno TV station KOLO he saw the boys start the fire.

"They lit some gas or paper and they tried to put out the fire," said the man, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "They tried to kick some dirt on it, but that didn't work. Then they got a bucket but it got way out of hand. Then we saw someone run across the back yard of the house yelling, 'Oh my God, oh my God, call 911!'"

Within a few hours, the fire moved into brush and timber toward the Heavenly Valley ski area that overlooks Lake Tahoe, and about three miles north toward Genoa, Nevada's first settlement.

"I had to turn out all the horses and all the cattle," resident Janice Sorenson said. "I could feel the heat and the noise was horrendous. I was running all over the place and the smoke was so black I couldn't see."

Firefighters said the fire was 45 percent contained and no longer threatened any houses.

"The weather has really helped us," said Forest Service spokeswoman Cathleen Thompson. She said a slight drizzle began falling early this morning, and temperatures were lower and winds calmer.

In Arizona, two fires around the Grand Canyon burned across more than 8,000 acres and forced the evacuation by helicopter of 10 hikers, though the main tourist area on the canyon's South Rim was not affected.

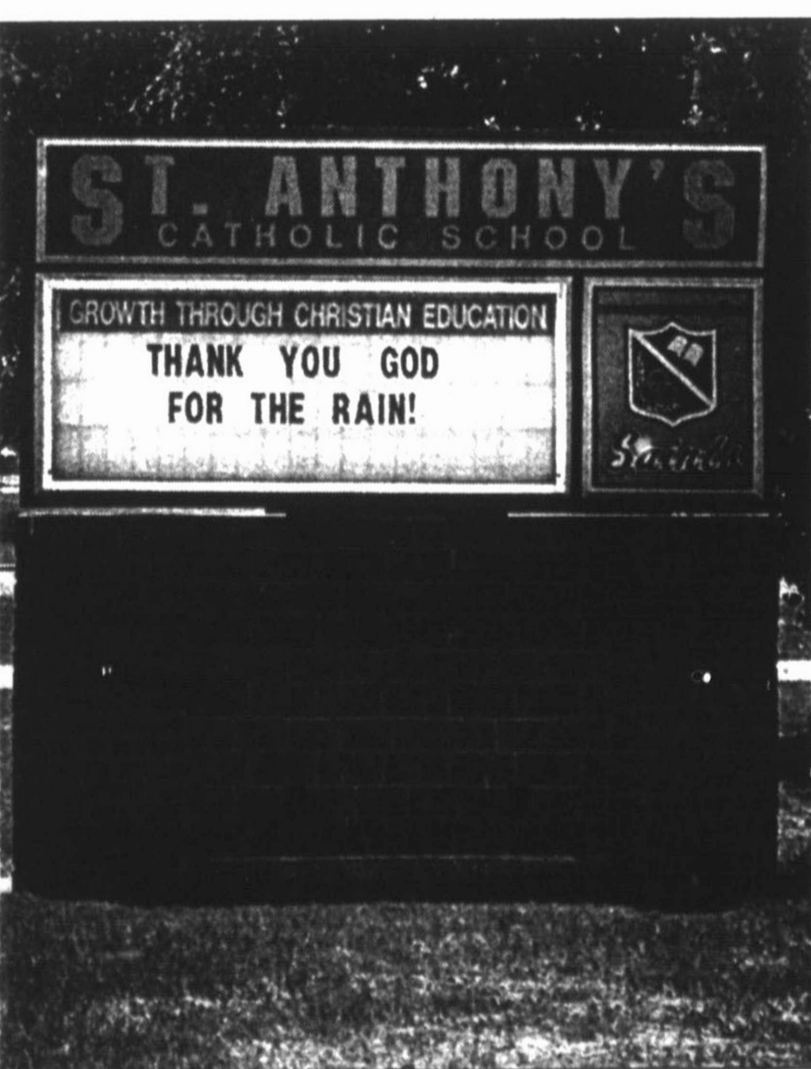

Another wind-whipped fire north of Flagstaff, Ariz., burned hundreds of acres of drought-stricken forests and a handful of homes and cabins over the weekend. It also ravaged a habitat for spotted owls, turkeys and goshawks.

Among dozens left homeless by the blaze was Dennis Forbes, who pulled his car over on a highway to watch the fire. "We're nomads now," he said, laughing.

A fire in the Coconino National Forest near West Clear Creek had spread to 7,000 acres, but was 90 percent contained early this morning. Some 80 homes were evacuated, but no structures were lost.

Hereford receives 0.23 of an inch of rain; total to date tops 2.5 inches

By The Associated Press
Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms dampened portions of the Texas Panhandle and South Plains during the night and early today.

In Hereford, KPAN Radio -- the city's official National Weather Service reporting station -- recorded 0.23 of an inch of rain from showers that moved through the city this morning.

The rainfall brings the accumulation this month to 2.43 inches -- more than 15 times the amount of precipitation recorded during the first five months of 1996.

Up until the beginning of this month, Hereford had recorded 0.15 of an inch of moisture, all from two separate snow storms in February.

For the year to date, KPAN has recorded 2.58 inches of moisture.

Forecasts call for widely scattered showers and thunderstorms to continue across some areas of most of the state tonight and Wednesday.

In West Texas, the showers and thunderstorms will be widely scattered. It will be clear to partly cloudy.

It will be partly to mostly cloudy over North Texas tonight with a chance of showers and thunderstorms in central and eastern areas. On Wednesday, there is a chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms.

Some rain is expected in South Texas tonight.

Answer to prayer

This sign at St. Anthony's Catholic School gives an answer to prayer, as recent rains have dumped more than 2 inches of moisture on the drought-stricken city. An additional 0.23 of an inch was recorded here this morning, bringing the month's precipitation to 2.43 inches, according to KPAN Radio.

Local Roundup

City gets more rain

A thunderstorm that moved through Hereford Tuesday morning dumped 0.23 of an inch of rain as of 9 a.m., according to KPAN Radio. The high Monday was 97 degrees, with the overnight low this morning 62 degrees. The forecast for tonight calls for partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms, a low in the mid-60s and southeast winds of 10-20 mph. Wednesday, look for mostly sunny skies and a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms. High will be in the low 90s with south winds of 5-15 mph.

Analysts see brighter future for cattle

Turn-around within two years forecast by market observers

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Analysts are somewhat bullish about the future of the cattle industry, which is currently suffering from high feed costs, low retail beef prices and a lingering drought in the Southwest.

Market conditions have hit bottom and should turn around within the next two years, industry analysts and officials of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association said at a news conference Monday.

Cattle prices are at their lowest levels in more than a decade, with the industry as a whole posting losses since 1993, retail prices down and feed prices driven up sharply because of reduced corn supply.

"We think this could be the low point," said Bret Fox, an analyst with the market information company Cattle Fax, who noted that the industry typically follows a 10-year cycle, meaning that turnaround isn't instantaneous.

"If history is any guide and if our production estimates are anywhere close, there's going to be a couple more years of challenging conditions" followed by a rebound, he said.

That would be good news for Texas' cattle producers, who account for a $6 billion annual industry. The Texas producers have lost nearly $794 million since March 1995 because of the lingering drought, according to a recent study prepared for the state.

The size of the nation's herd, estimated at 103.8 million cattle, probably peaked at the start of the year, Fox said. The herd has been declining ever since, with many producers in drought-stricken areas liquidating cattle to avoid paying high feed prices.

"We're seeing liquidation kick in earnest," he said. "We think this year could be the peak year for steer and heifer slaughter."

Despite some grumbling over beef imports from Mexico and Canada, imports actually are down, said National Cattlemen's Beef Association chief economist Chuck Lambert.

Imports accounted for 8.5 percent of beef production last year, down from 12.5 percent in 1991. "As a percentage of our total consumption, our total production, imports are accounting for less and less every year," he said.

At the same time, U.S. producers are exporting more, having cracked markets in Japan, Korea and other places. The United States has a $2.2 billion beef trade surplus with the rest of the world, posting an 18 percent gain last year over 1994.

Notwithstanding that brightening picture, producers are confronted with a stagnant market in the United States, with beef demand essentially holding stable after a sharp drop in the late 1980s.

The cattlemen's association is lobbying Congress for new legislation and administrative rules to help the industry, including improved reporting on market pricing, imports and meatpackers' pricing practices. The group also wants increased scrutiny of packers' mergers and acquisitions for possible antitrust violations and changes in the Agriculture Department's meat inspection system.

Long-term goals, said association lobbyist Chandler Keys, include estate tax reform, increased private property rights protections, grazing reform and help in cracking Europe's markets.

Report about IRS documents raises concerns about privacy

By MARCY GORDON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Raising new privacy concerns in the controversy over FBI background files, a Republican senator says one of his aides saw IRS documents among files the White House collected on hundreds of presidential employees from the Reagan and Bush years.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, asked FBI Director Louis Freeh in a letter Monday for a description of the type of Internal Revenue Service information included in what some White House workers called the "Update Project" files.

"A member of my staff who reviewed the Update Project files noted that one file contained" IRS documents, Grassley wrote. It wasn't immediately clear where the staff member saw the files.

According to another congressional aide who spoke on condition of anonymity, Grassley's staff member said the IRS file related to "several individuals."

Grassley said his aide got a glimpse of the IRS information in the files, but "because of the confidential nature" of IRS tax information, the aide did not seek a closer look at its entire contents. The senator asked Freeh to reply by Thursday.

A recent report by FBI General Counsel Howard Shapiro on the White House's gathering of 407 FBI files makes no mention of the IRS.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., in an interview on CNN's "Larry King Live" Monday night, said that if IRS files were provided to the White House, "that would be a clear felony violation."

White House spokesman Mark Fabiani said Monday that administration officials did not know whether the files included any IRS documents. "We returned the files to the FBI sight unseen" after their existence was disclosed early this month, Fabiani said.

The House Government and Oversight Committee subpoenaed former White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum and former associate counsel William H. Kennedy III to appear at a hearing Wednesday to tell what they know about the list of names sent to the FBI. Kennedy oversaw the personnel office that made the request.

Also scheduled to testify at the hearing were Craig Livingstone, who directed the office, and Anthony Marceca, who worked for him. Neither have commented on the matter publicly.

"All these individuals were working in the White House when the improper requests were made for the FBI files," committee chairman William F. Clinger, R-Pa., said.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that an FBI agent who worked in the White House has told Senate investigators Livingstone boasted that his mother knew Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The newspaper said the implication was this explained Livingstone's hold on the personnel office job. The Journal reported that the FBI agent, Dennis Sculimbrene, did not claim personal knowledge that Mrs. Clinton and Livingstone's mother actually were acquainted. The White House has denied the first lady knows Livingstone's mother.

Newspaper claims advertising honor

The Hereford Brand won a third place in advertising when the Texas Better Newspaper Contest winners were announced at the Texas Press Association summer convention in Dallas this past weekend.

Texas Lottery

AUSTIN (AP) - Calvin Luce of Tyler has claimed the $12.4 million Lotto Texas prize drawn on June 19.

Also on Monday, Janie Mitchell of Houston claimed the $3.6 million Lotto Texas jackpot drawn on Saturday.

Luce, who requested minimal publicity while representing the Luce Family Limited Trust, accepted a $624,305 check as the first of 20 installment payments.

The remaining payments of $620,000 will be paid every June 15 for the next 19 years. Luce used Quick Pick to select his numbers - 10, 17, 19, 21, 25 and 29.

One Stop in Tyler received a check totaling $124,043 - 1 percent of the winnings - as a bonus for selling the lucky ticket.

Mrs. Mitchell received $191,305.12 on Monday and will be paid $181,000 every June 15 for the next 19 years.

Mrs. Mitchell purchased the winning ticket while shopping with a friend in San Antonio. The winning numbers - 1, 10, 12, 30, 32 and 49 - came on a Quick Pick ticket.

Wednesday's Lotto Texas drawing is an estimated $4 million.

Newspaper questions claims made by psychic

NEW YORK (AP) - The first lady's guru makes questionable claims in her resume including a Ph.D. from Columbia University that was never finished, the Daily News reported today.

Jean Houston, the new age thinker who helped Hillary Rodham Clinton hold imaginary conversations with Eleanor Roosevelt and Mohandas Gandhi, acknowledged that she never received a doctorate at Columbia in the philosophy of religion, the newspaper said.

She told the newspaper that an assistant had mistakenly put Columbia on her resume. And she said the only reason she didn't get the degree in 1966 was that her professor died before completing some paperwork involving revisions to her dissertation.

She did earn a Ph.D. in psychology from Cincinnati's Union Institute in 1973, the newspaper said, describing the institute as an "alternative education program" licensed by the state to grant postgraduate degrees.

There are other questions about her background, the News said.

The University of Oklahoma said it had no record of her being a distinguished visiting professor there as she claimed. Hunter College in Manhattan also turned up no evidence of her having taught there. Houston insisted she did indeed teach at the two schools.

Houston is also not licensed in New York as a psychologist, although she bills herself on her resume as "an internationally known psychologist" and conducts $50,000-a-weekend seminars at the Foundation for Mind Research in Pomona, N.Y., where she lives, the News said.

Houston maintained that the license was irrelevant because she didn't need one. "It's a New York State bureaucracy thing that has nothing to do with what I do," she said.

"I don't practice psychotherapy. I've never claimed to call myself a psychologist. I consider myself a philosopher and a student of human capacities," she said.

She taught at Marymount College in 1965 and 1966, as an associate professor, despite the absence of a doctorate at that time. A Marymount spokeswoman said that having a doctorate was a prerequisite for the job.

Regarding her role-playing sessions with Mrs. Clinton that have raised so many eyebrows, Houston told reporters at her home Monday that she doesn't understand why everyone's so amazed.

"It was an exercise that is done in many business corporations," she said. "You imagine somebody that you'd like to talk to, and you focus your ideas. That is all," she said.

Mrs. Clinton met with Houston from late 1994 until last March, according to the new book "The Choice," by famed investigative reporter Bob Woodward.

Outstanding representatives of Deaf Smith Co. are recognized

Three outstanding representatives of Deaf Smith County 4-H were presented major scholarships during the recent State 4-H Roundup on the campus of Texas A&M University in College Station.

Cady Auckerman, daughter of Georgia and Rick Auckerman, received a $15,000 scholarship from the San Antonio Livestock Expo.

Auckerman plans to attend Texas A&M University with a major in agribusiness and speech communication.

Her list of 4-H accomplishments include the Gold Star Award, the William Danforth "I Dare You" award, first vice president of District I Council, member of the Texas 4-H Council, and winning first place in state competition in horticulture preparation and use, food show and record book.

While attending Hereford High School she was a U.I.L. state qualifier in extemporaneous speaking for two years, a member of the National Forensic League, president of the National Honor Society, three-year member of the Academic Decathlon team, field commander/president of the band and voted Most Likely to Succeed.

Her career goals include working in an agricultural lobbying position as well as in the international marketing sector of agriculture.

Recipient of a $10,000 scholarship from the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo was Amanda Sims, daughter of Aubrey Sims.

She plans to study food and nutrition/dietetics at Texas Tech University.

Sims has been active in 4-H work for four years. Her major projects have included food and nutrition, sheep, consumer decision, public speaking, livestock judging, record book, family life and food show.

The Hereford High School honor graduate was a member of the National Honor Society, vice president of Concerts and was voted Shyest Girl.

Her career goal is to become a dietician in private industry, hospital or consulting.

Ted Peabody III, son of Darliss and Ted Peabody Jr., was the recipient of a $4,000 scholarship from the Texas Farm Bureau.

Peabody plans to attend Hardin-Simmons University, majoring in management/Bible.

He has been a 4-H member for 10 years and has earned honors in method demonstration, fashion show, livestock judging and dairy judging. Peabody received the Gold Star Award and the Rookie of the Year award in record book.

In other areas, he was a state qualifier in the Southern Baptist Youth Speakers Tournament for three years, a Hereford High School honor student, a member of the National Honor Society and the National Forensics League.

After college he plans to go into vocational ministry as a pastor or youth minister.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, June 25, the 177th day of 1996. There are 189 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 25, 1876, Lt. Col. George A. Custer and his Seventh Cavalry were wiped out by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in the Battle of the Little Big Horn in Montana.

On this date:
In 1788, the state of Virginia ratified the U.S. Constitution.

In 1868, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina were re-admitted to the Union.

In 1888, the Republican National Convention, meeting in Chicago, nominated Benjamin Harrison for the presidency. (Harrison went on to win the election, defeating Grover Cleveland.)

In 1906, a love triangle came to a violent end atop New York's Madison Square Garden as architect Stanford White, the building's designer, was shot to death by Harry Thaw, the jealous husband of Evelyn Nesbit.

In 1942, some 1,000 British Royal Air Force bombers raided Bremen, Germany, during World War II.

In 1950, war broke out on the Korean peninsula as forces from the communist North invaded the South.

In 1951, the first commercial color telecast took place as CBS transmitted a one-hour special from New York to four other cities.

In 1962, the Supreme Court ruled that the use of an unofficial, nondenominational prayer in New York state public schools was unconstitutional.

In 1975, the People's Republic of Mozambique came into being, ending nearly five centuries of Portuguese rule.

In 1981, the Supreme Court decided that male-only draft registration was constitutional.

Ten years ago: In a victory for President Reagan, the U.S. House of Representatives voted 221-to-209 to approve his request for $100 million dollars in military and humanitarian aid to the Nicaraguan contras.

Five years ago: Following months of unsuccessful talks among Yugoslavia's six republics about the future of the federation, the western republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared their independence.

One year ago: Warren E. Burger, the 15th chief justice of the United States, died in Washington of congestive heart failure at age 87. Haiti held its first free election in five years. In an attempt to provide a more humanized view of their client, attorneys for Oklahoma City bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh released photos and videotape showing McVeigh smiling and relaxing.

Today's Birthdays: Movie actor Sidney Lumet is 72. Actress June Lockhart is 71. Rhythm-and-blues singer Eddie Floyd is 61. Basketball Hall-of-Famer Willis Reed is 54. Singer Carly Simon is 51. TV personality Phyllis George is 47. Rock singer Tim Finn (Split Enz, Crowded House) is 44. Rock singer George Michael is 33.

Thought for Today: "It is not depravity that afflicts the human race so much as a general lack of intelligence." -- Agnes Repplier, American writer and social critic (1858-1950).

Word has been received of the May 2 death of Dr. W. Harold Hicks, 90, a Deaf Smith County native, in Little Rock, Ark.

Services were held in Pulaski Heights Baptist Church of Little Rock with burial in Pincrest Memorial Park.

Dr. Hicks was a graduate of Baylor University and was manager of a grain elevator in Hereford prior to entering Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. He earned a master of the theology degree in 1932. He served churches in Wink and in Kansas and was pastor of Pulaski Heights Baptist Church Little Rock for 30 years before retiring in 1971. After retirement, Dr. Hicks and his wife went to Brussels, Belgium, where he was pastor of the International Baptist Church. He was active in work of the Arkansas Baptist State Convention and South Baptist Convention. He and his wife, the former Maurine Beyer, had been married 67 years.

Survivors are his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Catherine Hicks Lee of Baton Rouge, La.; three sons, Joe Hicks of Boston, Mass., Bill Hicks of Victoria, and John Hicks of Amarillo; two sisters, Lucille Hicks Burnside of Santa Maria, Cal.; and Gladys Hicks Newman of Albuquerque, N.M., 12 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Mavs angered by Kidd's ultimatum

By JAIME ARON,
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - No matter whether the Dallas Mavericks decide their backcourt isn't big enough for both Jason Kidd and Jim Jackson, the team's new management has proved a point with their handling of the situation.

By responding swiftly and strongly, they showed a backbone that was definitely missing during the days of Donald Carter and Norm Sonju.

Remember Carter's wife, Linda, baking cookies for Jackson during his contract dispute? How about all the second chances for Roy Tarpley until the NBA kicked him out not once, but twice? Or Quinn Buckner asking for a four-year contract and being given five years?

On Monday, the scene was set for the organization to once again pat on the back someone who should be kicked in the behind after Kidd told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that if he or Jackson wasn't traded, Kidd would sit out next season. Yet, in a bold move seemingly out of place at Reunion Arena, there was new ownership frontman Frank Zaccanelli telling Kidd he didn't want to hear it.

"No player or agent is bigger than the Dallas Mavericks organization," said Zaccanelli, showing the aggressiveness that helped him become the righthand man to Ross Perot Jr., the team's new majority owner. "This is not going to alter our direction one inch."

It wasn't so much what Zaccanelli said as the way he said it. After sliding into his podium seat, he didn't even wait for the cameras to begin rolling before digging into his sharp rebuttal.

His tone was sharp. His face showed he meant business. If he had pounded the table after giving that lay-down-the-law quote it would've seemed scripted. Instead, his disappointment - and fury - appeared sincere.

Same with the response of Jim Clemons, the new head coach who saw his share of personality squabbles during his tenure as a Chicago Bulls assistant.

"We're not going to allow this to fester and grow," he said. Clemons already had spent his first few days on the job - just last week - trying to smooth egos and seeing if everyone could work together. He thought everything was fine until he opened Monday's newspaper.

Jury selection starts in Irvin case

DALLAS (AP) - Jury selection was scheduled to begin today on drug possession charges against Dallas Cowboys receiver Michael Irvin, a trial that could keep him in court almost until his team begins its preseason camp on July 17.

On Monday, State District Judge Manny Alvarez denied a motion by Irvin's attorneys to throw out evidence from an early March 4 seizure of drugs from an Irving motel room because officers went in and confiscated marijuana and cocaine without a search warrant.

The judge's rulings ended a pretrial hearing that lasted as long as many murder trials in Dallas County. Alvarez heard six days of testimony and arguments covering much of what jurors are likely to hear during the trial.

Jury selection was expected to take two days, and the trial could last a couple of weeks.

Local boys win junior golf tourney

Hereford's Daniel Edwards and Jeremiah Baros won their age divisions when a junior golf tour made a stop in Hereford Monday.

Pitman Municipal Golf Course hosted the Haverty's Northern Texas PGA Junior Tour. The one-day tournament attracted dozens of young golfers from all over the area, including five from Hereford.

Edwards won the 14-15-year-old boys division, shooting 75 then edging Amarillo's Beau Burkett in a playoff.

Baros won the 16-17 boys division by shooting 72. Keith Riley of Hereford took second with a 74, and John Valdez III of Amarillo was third at 75.

Two other Hereford boys competed in this division. Greg Reinart finished ninth with an 85, and Heath Henderson was tenth at 86.

Texas Trojans win pool game

The Texas Trojans started off the national 12-under AAU basketball tournament by winning a pool-play game Monday in Memphis, Tenn.

The Trojans - a team which includes three Hereford boys - defeated the Central Illinois Lakers 67-50. The Trojans used a half-court trap early in the second half to stretch a 30-24 lead to a 14-point lead.

"Defense won it in the first three minutes after halftime," coach Steve Hodges said.

Hereford's Cody Hodges and Slade Hodges each had eight steals for the Trojans, many of which came early in the second half, said Steve Hodges.

Slade Hodges led the team with 23 points, while Cody Hodges scored 18 points and handed out six assists.

Chayse Rives, the third Hereford boy on the team, blocked five Laker shots. He also had six points and four assists.

The Trojans were to play two more pool games: against an Atlanta team on Tuesday and a Mississippi team on Wednesday.

Founder's Day 5K set July 13

The annual King's Manor Founder's Day barbecue and 5K Run, Walk and Senior Walk will be held July 13.

Entry fees for the 5K events is $12, if entering by July 1, and $15 after July 1. The fee includes a ticket to the barbecue.

Medals will be awarded the top three places in each age division, male and female, in the 5K run. Age divisions are 13-and-under, 14-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-and-over.

Medals will go to the overall male and female top three places in the 5K walk and Senior walk (55 and over). All participants will receive tee shirts.

Check-in and registration will be at 7:30 a.m. on race day, and events start at 8 a.m. The barbecue starts at 6:30 p.m.

Roman legions took the leek to Britain, where it became the national emblem of Wales, worn like a flower in buttonholes on Saint David's Day.

There were no Hereford golfers in any of the other divisions. Following are the top finishers:

12-13 boys--1, Robert Evans, Amarillo, 78; 2, Scott Bibb, Amarillo, 80; 3, Adam Weagar, Amarillo, 81.

10-11 boys--1, Coby Kygar, Olton, 41 (nine holes); 2, Chase Head, Borger, 43.

15-18 girls--1, Jennifer Beversdorf, Littlefield, 77; 2, Elizabeth Frazier, Amarillo, 79; 3, Channing Sparks, Amarillo, 81.

12-14 girls--1, Lara Sowers, Lubbock, 88; 2, Meredith Easley, Amarillo, 91.

10-11 girls--1, Madison Easley, Amarillo, 67 (nine holes).

Cards cool off Smoltz

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

One pitch into the game and it was obvious this might not be John Smoltz's night.

Dominant during his 14-game winning streak, baseball's biggest winner was in trouble from the start Monday. Ron Gant hit Smoltz's first fastball over the center-field fence, Brian Jordan later drove in six runs and the St. Louis Cardinals stopped the Atlanta Braves 9-2.

"They came out swinging," Smoltz said. "I've maintained throughout this whole streak that if a team was going to beat me, they had to get a lot of hits. They got 10 hits. So, it's that simple."

Smoltz (14-2) had not lost since his first start of the season, on April 4 against San Francisco. He also had not allowed a run in the first inning since that game until the Cardinals scored three times.

"We were aggressive, looking for the first pitch," Jordan said. "Ronnie got it all on the first pitch of the game and it carried us on."

The visiting Cardinals moved into first place in the NL Central and also stopped Atlanta's season-high six-game winning streak.

In other games, Montreal beat Pittsburgh 11-3, Cincinnati shut out Philadelphia 7-0, New York edged Colorado 2-1 and Florida defeated San Francisco 2-1.

Smoltz was trying for the first 15-game winning streak in the majors since Gaylord Perry in 1974, and the first in the NL since Steve Carlton in 1972.

Smoltz had given up a total of four earned runs in his previous three starts. But the Braves' string of two straight shutouts ended on Smoltz's first pitch, and the Cardinals quickly loaded the bases with no outs, setting up Jordan's two-run single.

Jordan, a former defensive back for the Atlanta Falcons, set a career-high for RBIs. He had a sacrifice fly in the third and finished Smoltz with a three-run homer in the seventh.

Smoltz struck out eight, increasing his major league-leading total to 141. He also fell to 4-9 lifetime against St. Louis.

"They've definitely got my number, if you want to talk about numbers," Smoltz said. "I've got a losing record against them. They've always been able to get hits."

"After the home run, they got some base hits on fastballs. I didn't have a great fastball, but I didn't make enough good pitches, either," he said. "The only frustrating thing is the way it ended, the last inning. I felt the whole time I've given the team a chance to win. Tonight, I didn't."

Andy Benes (5-8) won for the fourth time in five decisions.

Expos 11, Pirates 3
Henry Rodriguez hit two home runs, tying for the major league lead with 25, and Montreal scored nine times in the second inning.

Rodriguez went 3-for-5 with four RBIs, including a two-run double in the big inning that gave the Expos a 4-3 lead. His performance came on a promotional day for Oh Henry! candy bars at Olympic Stadium.

Reds 7, Phillies 0
Mark Portugal pitched his first shutout since 1993, holding Philadelphia to four hits in Cincinnati.

Mets 2, Rockies 1
Jeff Kent led off the eighth inning with a home run, helping Jason Isringhausen and the Mets win at Shea Stadium.

Isringhausen (4-9), who had lost seven of his previous eight decisions, slowed down Colorado for eight innings. John Franco pitched a scoreless ninth for his 17th save.

The Rockies were held without a home run, ending their team record-tying streak of connecting in 17 straight games.

Major League Softball Champs

The Phillies shared the regular season championship of the Kids Inc. Major Softball League with the Pirates and White Sox after all three finished the season with 9-3 record. The Phillies are: (front row, left to right) coach Sammy Davison, Abby Horrell, Jordan Davison, Marlena Vasquez, Erica Marquez, (back) Celeste Louder, Martha Ruiz, Tiffany Koenig, Emilee Williams and Crystal Ruiz. Not pictured are players Patricia DeLaCerde and Emily Sabo and coach Jerry Koenig.

Twins turn things around as Robertson shuts out Yankees

By The Associated Press
The Minnesota Twins were coming off three straight losses to Detroit, the American League's worst. The New York Yankees were coming off a four-game sweep at Cleveland, the AL's best.

When the Twins and Yankees met at the Metrodome on Monday night, it was Minnesota that looked like the sharper team, defeating New York 3-0.

"You can't change what happened in Detroit," said Marty Cordova, who extended his hitting streak to a career-high 18 games. "I just figured we need to win today and we need to win tomorrow."

Yankees manager Joe Torre missed all but two innings of Monday's game, arriving late after his brother's funeral over the weekend.

"No question we were sky-high leaving Cleveland, but I wasn't here early to get a feel of the team's mood," Torre said. "We couldn't string any hits together, we just didn't have it going offensively."

The Yankees showed all the signs of a team with letdown, getting at least one baserunner in every inning without scoring off Twins left-hander Rich Robertson, who is experiencing something of a turnaround himself.

After an 0-7 start, Robertson is 3-8 with two shutouts and four complete games, half of Minnesota's total of eight.

"It looked like the left-hander kept the ball down. He had good stuff," Torre said. "It was just one of those games we were not destined to score."

Elsewhere in the AL, Chicago and California split a doubleheader, with the White Sox winning the opener 4-2 and the Angels capturing the second game 6-4; Baltimore defeated Texas 8-3; and Oakland downed Detroit 4-2.

The Twins made the most of their six hits to knock out Yankees starter Andy Pettitte (11-4), keeping him from becoming the first 12-game winner in the AL.

Considering he pitched a shutout, Robertson had to avoid plenty of adversity. He allowed eight hits and three walks and was hit on the pitching hand with a batted ball.

"I was struggling, getting behind a lot of hitters; I would just lose it for two or three pitches," he said. "I did keep the ball down, but man, they made some plays out there. A lot of times it's better to be lucky."

The best example of Robertson's luck was the Twins turned the shot off his hand into a double play. It was one of several big defensive plays behind Robertson.

Paul Molitor and Pat Meares each stopped rallies with diving stops of hard-hit ground balls. Meares also caught a line drive by Ruben Sierra. The Twins scored their three runs on RBI doubles by Meares and Dave Hollins and on a throwing error by Pettitte.

White Sox 4, Angels 2
Angels 6, White Sox 4

J.T. Snow and Tim Salmon each hit three-run homers in the second game, giving California a split at Chicago, the ninth loss for the White Sox in 11 games and the 13th victory in 17 outings for the Angels.

In the opener, Darren Lewis' two-run double with two outs capped a four-run rally for the White Sox in the eighth inning.

Chicago scored a run in each of the first two innings of the second game on an RBI double by Harold Baines and an RBI single by Dave Martinez off rookie Ryan Hancock (3-0), making his first major-league start.

Snow, in a 2-for-17 slump, hit his homer off Mike Siroka (0-1) in the fifth to put California ahead 3-2. The next inning, Salmon hit his three-run shot, his 18th homer of the year.

In the first game, the White Sox had two hits off Jason Grimsley and trailed 2-0 through seven innings. With two outs and Milwaukee's Chad Kreuter in relief, pinch-hitter Chad Kreuter hit a two-run single, tying the game at 2. Tony Phillips then doubled, setting up Lewis' go-ahead hit.

Orioles 8, Rangers 3
Cal Ripken went 3-for-4 and knocked in the first two runs of the game with a homer and single at Texas.

Mike Mussina won his 10th game in 14 decisions for the Orioles, who beat the Rangers for only the third time in 11 meetings this season. Mussina allowed three runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Mussina retired 11 of 12 hitters from the third through the sixth after surviving a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the first.

Athletics 4, Tigers 2
Mark McGwire's 22nd home run sparked a four-run first and Oakland held on behind John Wasdin's seven strong innings.

The A's knocked Detroit right-hander Clint Sodowsky (1-2) out of the game in the first and were held scoreless thereafter by Greg Keagle, who pitched 7 1-3 innings of three-hit relief.

But the Tigers couldn't catch up against Wasdin (5-1), who also beat the Tigers 10-3 in Detroit on June 19. Billy Taylor got the final four outs for his sixth save.

Bobby Higginson's 10th homer gave Detroit a 1-0 lead, but the A's responded with a decisive rally in the bottom of the first against Sodowsky, keyed by McGwire's homer and RBI singles by Phil Plantier and Ernie Young.

Howe caught at airport with gun

NEW YORK (AP) - Steve Howe, released by the New York Yankees two days ago, was arrested Monday on charges of carrying a loaded gun at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Howe was found to have a loaded .357 Magnum pistol in his luggage at the first-class check-in for a Delta flight to Whitefish, Mont., at 4 p.m., said Tom Middlemiss, a Port Authority spokesman.

A Port Authority police officer spotted the unlicensed pistol in Howe's carry-on baggage, Middlemiss said.

Howe is being charged with criminal possession of a weapon and was to be arraigned Monday night or Tuesday in Queens Criminal Court, Middlemiss said.

Howe was suspended from baseball seven times for various drug-related problems. The 38-year-old left-handed reliever was cut before the Yankees' game against the Cleveland Indians on Saturday. He was traveling with his wife, Cindy.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: This is in response to the letter from "Seen Too Much in Baltimore," who couldn't understand why a woman would stay with a man who beats her. Unless you have been in an abusive relationship, you can't understand the desperation these women feel.

I was in such a relationship but too afraid to leave. My parents offered to help, but I didn't want my problem to become theirs. I had no self-esteem because of the physical and emotional abuse I had been subjected to for so long. My family finally told me to stop telling them about the beatings because it was painful for them to hear and they were upset with me because I couldn't bring myself to leave.

My boss and my friends knew what was happening and begged me to get out, but I refused. I thought I loved the man. Finally, I caught him cheating on me and I was devastated. It was a blessing, however, because it gave me the strength to leave.

Many abused women don't leave because they think they have nowhere to go. Tell them again that there are shelters for battered women and help is available there. That is where I went, and it saved my life.

I am now in a kind, loving relationship with a man who would never raise a hand to me. Please tell "Seen Too Much" if she wants to perform a valuable service, she should volunteer at a shelter and help those women find the self-esteem they need to get out of those self-destructive relationships. -- Moved On in Virginia

Dear Moved On: Excellent advice. Please read on for more on this subject:

Dear Ann Landers: "Seen Too Much in Baltimore" said a woman should never give a man a second chance to abuse her. She made a good point by saying it's the woman's responsibility to get out.

Now let's talk about the personal responsibility of the abusive fathers, husbands and lovers. These men need to be told that if they swing their fists at a woman, it is their responsibility.

It is not her fault because she "made you mad." They need to get help with their problem and stop the cycle of violence before they teach another generation that it's OK to beat up on someone you love.

Holding women responsible for their actions makes sense, but women aren't beating themselves up. Let's shine the spotlight where it belongs -- on the perpetrators. -- San Rafael, Calif.

Dear San Rafael: Experts in the field of spousal abuse (sometimes it's the male who gets beat up) tell us that often alcohol and drugs are a factor. Readers, is this so in your abuser's case?

I urge anyone in this situation to get counseling and insist that the abuser do the same. Let the abuser know you will not stay until he or she gets treatment. And make it stick. This could be a matter of life and death.

Dear Ann Landers: My uncle is dying of lung cancer. My mother and I visited him recently, and he smoked five cigarettes in front of us in his unventilated room.

Mother wants me to go with her to visit him again, and I refused because the toxic stench was killing me. Cigarettes are poison.

Now Mother is furious at me for not showing "family loyalty." Doesn't my health take priority? -- California

Dear California: Wear a face mask, and stay five minutes. You'll be glad you did. Trust me. I feel very sorry for your uncle. In addition to dying, he should not be rejected as well.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Survey finds that teens need practical information on sex

NEW YORK (AP) - A third of youths 12 and older say the media encourages them to have sex, and more than half the girls say they learn about birth control from television and movies, a survey says.

Seventy-four percent of youths questioned by the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation said at least one parent had talked to them about sex, but only 46 percent said their parents had talked to them about birth control.

Just over half (55 percent) in the survey released Monday said their parents had discussed sexually transmitted diseases.

Nearly a third (29 percent) said they had had sex and 4 percent said they had at least one child. A third also said they believed some teen-agers have sex because TV and movies make it seem normal.

"It's clear that if teens today are going to make responsible decisions about sex, they need more than the 'birds and bees.' They need practical information about how to use contraception and negotiate sexual relations," said Suzanne Delbanco, a spokeswoman for Kaiser.

Among the sexually active, 36 percent said they still don't know enough about birth control and 30 percent said they need more information about where to get contraceptives. Forty-seven percent said they wanted to know more about preventing AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Fashion magazines are an important source of information about sex, birth control and sexually transmitted diseases, more than a third of the girls said.

Fifty-three percent of girls said they got their sex education from the TV or movies.

The phone survey of 757 girls and 753 boys ages 12 to 18 was conducted for Kaiser by Princeton Survey Research Associates between March 28 and May 5. It has a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

The Menlo Park, Calif.-based Kaiser foundation is an independent, non-profit organization that studies health policy, reproductive health and the AIDS virus in this country and health and development in South Africa.

Library display

Deaf Smith County Library employee LaJuan Fowler is displaying her Miami Dolphins memorabilia at the library. Even though her husband, Roy, is a Raiders fan, LaJuan says she has been a Dolphins fan "forever" and is especially fond of quarterback Dan Moreno. Her display is in keeping with the Summer Reading Club sports theme, READY...SET...READ, now in progress at the library.

New officers installed for Ladies Auxiliary

New officers for the Ladies Auxiliary to Roy Wederbrook Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #4818 were installed recently.

Installed by Marie Goheen, past district president, were Linda Dutton, president; Betty Boggs, senior vice president; Pixie Forbus, junior vice president; Peggy Oakes, conductress; Erma Loving, chaplain; Dora Lea Howell, guard; Marie Goheen, treasurer; Anita Vardell, secretary; Terrye Rhyne, patriotic instructor; Marie Goheen, historian; Imogene Sweeney, three-year trustee; Terrye Rhyne, two-year trustee; and Ruth Morris, one-year trustee.

Lisa Boggs from Dumas was initiated as a new member while her grandmother, Betty Boggs, was still present.

Colleen Schaeffer from Canyon was a visitor for the installation. Members present were Mildred Clements, Derenda DeLeon, Essie Martin, Winnie Tyler, Lisa Boggs, Betty Boggs, Dutton, Goheen, Morris, Oakes and Sweeney.

The next meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. on July 1, preceded by supper at 6:30 p.m.

Grandson of local residents wins contest

Tory Roberts, son of former Hereford residents Larry and Kathy Roberts, won an Independence Day essay contest in Clovis and was recognized during a recent awards assembly at the end of the school year.

Tory was named the essay contest winner from approximately 1,000 fifth-grade entrants. The Clovis mayor proclaimed a "Tory Roberts Day" and presented Tory with a $100 saving bond and a plaque. He was also named "friendliest student" in his class.

Tory's father grew up in Hereford and graduated from HHS. Tory's grandparents are Willie and Jerry Roberts.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Some time ago, you answered a letter from a reader with achalasia, the problem of a constricted, malfunctioning esophagus. I mentioned it to my doctor, since I have been having the symptoms you listed, including difficulty swallowing. I was informed that achalasia is a psychological problem -- in the head, I guess you would say. I don't believe that, and I'd like your view. Have views on achalasia changed? You treated achalasia as a real illness, so far as I can recall. I need some enforcement on this matter. -- T.B.

ANSWER: Achalasia is a clearly defined dysfunction of the esophagus, and it interferes in a very real way with normal passage of food to the stomach. Somehow, nerve control has been lost.

A frequent companion problem involves the esophageal sphincter, a stout muscle arrangement that guards the esophagus-stomach gateway. The sphincter sometimes lapses into erratic behavior, resulting in an uncomfortable situation -- for example, food lodgment and stomach-acid backup. It can happen at any time and involve all foods, even liquids. It's painful.

You can confirm the reality of achalasia with X-rays taken after you swallow a horrible chalky liquid called "barium contrast." Special devices permit measurement of the esophagus pressures typical of achalasia.

Dilation of the sphincter or surgery to open the lower area of the esophagus tube are popular treatments. Medicines also are used for that purpose.

But we are getting ahead of ourselves. Confirm achalasia first -- with tests.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What lies behind recurring nosebleeds? -- A.B.

ANSWER: I can't match your brevity, for the answers are many and varied -- some obvious, some not so obvious; some serious, some readily corrected.

Certain straightforward physical forces cause nosebleeds. They include childhood nostril exploration, excessive rubbing, stentorian sneezes and explosive blowing. Long exposure to excessively dry air makes people more vulnerable to such forces.

One answer is a special nasal spray to keep linings moist. A light coating of petrolatum inside the lower nostrils can help.

I am sure you know of the more-involved problems. Clotting difficulty, for example, can precipitate easy bleeding.

Are you an aspirin user? That can play a blood-thinning role.

I must mention what might seem to be a jarring, if unlikely, cause: tumor. A rare tumor, juvenile nasopharyngeal angiofibroma, should be looked for in children who have recurring nosebleeds.

I'm often asked about the role of high blood pressure. It is frequently cited, I know, when nosebleeds are discussed. Blood pressure does not cause such bleeding. High blood pressure can, however, make a bleed more profuse than it otherwise would be.

San Antonio students radios space shuttle

By KEN DILANIAN
San Antonio Express-News
SAN ANTONIO
"KC7NHZ, this is KCSOPS.
How copy, over?"

Fourteen-year-old Drew Hendricks had been rehearsing the moment for weeks, and when the time came, he sang into the headset clearly and strongly.

But there was no response.
"KC7NHZ, this is KCSOPS.
How copy, over?"

A hush crept over three dozen people crowded into the cramped confines of a portable classroom at Eisenhower Middle School on Blanco Road. With the air conditioner turned off, the temperature climbed.

On a computer monitor next to Hendricks, a map of the world tracked the orbit of the shuttle Columbia, 150 miles above, as it flew into South Texas radio range.

Eight students crouched around a set of shortwave controls, using the computer coordinates to aim the 45-foot antenna jutting into the heavens outside. Nine others stood in line along the wall, waiting to ask written questions.

It was 2:27 p.m. - time for middle schoolers from San Antonio to talk to a shuttle astronaut in space.

But all they heard was static. Hendricks repeated the shuttle's call sign once more.

"KC7NHZ, this is KCSOPS.
How copy, over?"

Next to him, retired Air Force test pilot Ken Harwood coordinated by phone with the real Mission Control in Houston.

Hovering nearby was high-strung Walt Dubose, a Kelly Air Force Base computer guru. Dubose is one of many community volunteers who help run the North East School District Young Astronaut program, which offers after-school technology classes in rocketry and computers.

Static.
Hendricks tried again.
Nothing.
Again.

Finally, the speakers came alive. A scratchy, barely audible female voice repeated the call signs, concluding with the magic words:

"We copy it."
Twenty pairs of young eyes lit

up. Dubose threw up his hands in triumph.

And in the back of the room, Young Astronaut program director Calvin Best - who looked relaxed in a straw hat and lizard-skin boots but joked about his nervous nausea - was overwhelmed with relief.

The voice on the speaker was Astronaut Susan J. Helms, the shuttle mission commander, live from space.

The kids had done it. They had just seven minutes before the shuttle flew out of range, so they got right to the questions, which had been selected from among hundreds and screened by NASA.

Students asked Helms about weightlessness, lift-off, and fun in space. Brian Vranes and Tarry Logsdon asked about the current two-week mission, an effort to measure certain physical effects of space flight.

Jennifer Barnhill asked Helms if being in space was the highlight of her life.

"Yeah, I think this probably is the best thing that ever happened to me," the astronaut answered.

Lucky ham radio operators sometimes get to chat with shuttle occupants, explained Charles Thomas, a radio operator standing by to help the students.

And NASA often schedules air time for students. On this mission, the astronauts will try to contact nine other schools, including one in Australia and one in France.

The North East Young Astronauts learned in March they would talk to an astronaut and had been preparing ever since, Best said. He's particularly proud that his students, not their adult mentors, handled the radio equipment.

"We've got some real smart kiddos in this group," he said.

After Helms' voice faded into static, the youngsters milled about, talking excitedly to reporters and parents. For those minutes, they had held a forum unique on the planet: a dialogue with a space traveler.

"It was so cool," said 12-year-old Max Porterfield, who wants someday to follow in Helms' footsteps. "It was one in a million."

Artificial muscles seen as future for UNM engineering professor

By TIM KORTE
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - A laboratory skeleton named Mr. Bony is beefing up under the direction of a University of New Mexico researcher who says the future is coming soon for artificial muscles.

Moshen Shahinpoor, an engineering professor who oversees a robotics laboratory, got Mr. Bony to lift his skeletal arm recently, thanks to non-mechanized technology developed at the university.

The feat marked what Shahinpoor calls "a giant step toward bionic robotics." It was a high point in a 4-year effort to manufacture materials that act like human muscles.

"I was always interested in developing motors but also in mimicking human muscle systems," says Shahinpoor, who holds a master's degree in chemical engineering and a doctorate in mechanical engineering.

The research, featured in May's edition of Scientific American, is in its infancy, and it's likely to be years before it reaches the public.

Still, Shahinpoor says there are many potential uses - perhaps most obviously in prostheses for people who have lost limbs.

There are other possibilities. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is interested in applying Shahinpoor's research to spacesuits that would give astronauts greater mobility.

Graduate students are testing a lens that expands and contracts like the cornea in a human eye.

Another application could lead to so-called "soft flying," in which an airplane's wings would flap repeatedly like a bird's wings. Other tests may lead to noiseless propulsion through water for naval vessels.

Shahinpoor's research uses strands of manmade silk known as Orlan fibers, typically used in clothing or furniture manufacturing.

He says Orlan is ideal for his tests because it's a polymer - a substance made of chains of molecules.

The fibers are treated with an oxidizing agent, baked in an oven and boiled in a sodium hydroxide solution to harden them. Then the fibers are arranged into strands.

When stimulated either chemically or electrically, they move.

It was chemical activation that raised Mr. Bony's arm. Shahinpoor says the chemical activation process mimics how muscles behave.

First the fibers are sprayed with a weak sodium hydroxide solution - a base. That causes them to expand to almost double their usual size as ions repel each other.

"It looks like we're stretching a leech," Shahinpoor says.

When the fibers next are sprayed with an acidic solution, they contract to their original size as positively charged ions pull the molecules inward.

The experiment with Mr. Bony started with fibers sealed in latex and attached to the bone, with tubes running into the fibers to control the flow of the solutions. Researchers used latex because it's inert and won't react with base and acidic fluids.

With the researchers regulating the flow of acid, base and water to the skeleton's bicep and tricep areas, Mr. Bony raised and lowered his arm on computer command.

David Reynolds, a Wright State University associate professor of biomedical and human factors engineering, said he isn't familiar with Shahinpoor's work but that it sounds promising.

Reynolds said in a telephone interview from the Dayton, Ohio, school - which is widely recognized as a leader in prosthetic research - that Wright State is doing "more conventional things."

"We don't have anybody with expertise in polymer research, but I think something like that (New Mexico's project) is going to happen," Reynolds said.

To test their theories of electrical activation, the New Mexico researchers covered a layer of Orlan strands with thin platinum plates.

When a low-voltage electrical current is applied, the platinum-coated sheet bends toward the current's positive pole. If the frequency is greatly increased, the sheet flaps like a hummingbird's wing.

"We can control undulation by controlling frequency," Shahinpoor says. "It could revolutionize flying."

The platinum structure must stay moist to remain flexible but acids and bases aren't needed. In water it wouldn't become dehydrated, so Shahinpoor says it could become an excellent means of propelling boats.

In one experiment, a small battery ran an electrical current through the platinum strip attached to a toy boat. The craft moved along without a sound, Shahinpoor says.

Another electrically activated experiment involved a charge applied to an artificial lens. The current can make the lens bend concavely or convexly, adjusting its focal length.

As far as which applications are likely to be seen the soonest, Shahinpoor suggests Hollywood might be interested in using artificial muscles to make masks or other human models that "can laugh, smile or cry."

But in the long run, Shahinpoor predicts people may wonder one day how humans managed to live without artificial muscles.

"It's a very exciting technology," he says.

Drowsy drivers are nightmares

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
AP Medical Writer
CHICAGO (AP) - The secret killers on American highways are drowsy drivers and it's time for doctors to do something about it, a medical panel says.

Drivers who aren't fully awake cause more than 1,500 traffic deaths a year. In 96 percent of the cases, the accidents involve passenger cars, not commercial drivers. There are about 43,000 vehicle deaths from all causes each year.

"This is America's hidden nightmare," said Dr. William Dement, director of Stanford University's sleep disorders program. He said the vast majority of highway accidents are not properly investigated as fatigue-related.

A panel of the American Medical Association panel on Monday called on the AMA to suggest guidelines for drivers to avoid falling asleep at the wheel. The AMA's Council on Scientific Affairs said more research, enforcement and education are needed to keep drivers from becoming dangerously drowsy. The Council also called for guidelines to license commercial and private drivers with sleep-related disorders.

The council made no specific recommendations about the regulation of drivers with sleep disorders, which can range from sleep apnea, in which the momentary closing of an airway awakens a person repeatedly, to chronic fatigue caused by a lack of sleep.

"It's very poorly understood by the American public," said Dement, who also is chairman of the National Commission on Sleep Disorders Research. "The American Medical Association now has a chance to be a leader in this whole area."

The 430-member AMA House of Delegates, which sets policy for the 296,000-member group, will vote on the council's recommendations at the group's annual meeting this week.

The council recommends that: -The National Institutes of Health and other groups support more research on the prevalence of sleep-related disorders.

-The Department of Transportation study the links between crashes and operator alertness and sleep.

-The AMA urge federal agencies to improve enforcement of existing regulations for truck-driver work periods and consecutive working hours, and increase awareness of the hazards of driving while fatigued.

-The AMA urge physicians to learn more about sleep disorders, treat them more effectively and educate patients about them.

Commercial truck drivers must fill out log books verifying the number of hours they are on the road to prevent them from driving on too little sleep. But no regulation exists for passenger drivers.

Dement said if the AMA passes the council's report and recommendations, "it would just put this whole area right on the front burner."

AMA policy has no legal force, but it does direct the AMA's resources toward influencing legislators, doctors and the public.

John Collins, a senior vice president for government affairs of the American Trucking Associations, said his group supports the panel's guidelines.

Clintons joined Texas group during McGovern race

Presidential couple stays in close contact with new supporters as well as old friends

By KATHY LEWIS
The Dallas Morning News
WASHINGTON--El Numero Dos, the No. 2 special at Guero's Taco Bar in Austin, has become El Presidente in honor of the night President Clinton showed up with some of his Texas cronies.

Over iced tea and beer, tacos and tamales last October, the Texans chatted with the man some have known for almost 25 years.

Many of these same Texans had joined him in early 1994 for a late-night Mexican dinner at Chuy's in Houston when the talk was of movies and books and old times.

"I want you to know there wasn't a single person there that wasn't an old friend, and we didn't talk about anything except fun," Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said of that night in Houston.

The gang of '72, the group of Texans that Bill Clinton got to know during George McGovern's presidential campaign, forms the core of his Texas network.

It doesn't rival George Bush's Texas Kitchen Cabinet, drawn from decades of business and political ties. But even in a state where he has had political troubles, Clinton has a cadre of Texans he knows well.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton addressed the state Democratic convention last week. Clinton himself will be in Houston for a fund-raiser June 21 and is scheduled to visit Galveston as well.

The Clintons met the McGovern crew when, as young Yale law students, they came to Texas in 1972. They have some longtime Texarkana supporters who've had a foot in both Texas and Arkansas political camps.

They have the contacts gleaned through the centrist Democratic Leadership Council, which Clinton chaired when he was governor of Arkansas.

And there are relationships developed later as Clinton - with an eye on the White House - began to build a national base.

"There are people he genuinely likes, respects and trusts," said Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty, a senior counselor to the president.

The Clintons, Democrats say, stay in close touch with Mauro and Austin advertising executive Roy Spence. The president still sees Lloyd Bentsen with some regularity, even though the former senator and treasury secretary has returned to Texas.

Clinton plays golf with Truman Arnold of Texarkana, a longtime supporter turned major fund-raiser, and with Bob Armstrong, the former Texas land commissioner who's now an assistant secretary of the interior.

He consults with Bill White, Texas Democratic Party chairman, who was deputy energy secretary and an active 1992 fund-raiser and supporter.

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros, the former mayor of San Antonio, is among those invited to Wednesday night political strategy sessions in the White House's residential quarters.

"They both have this incredible affinity for Texas because they cut their teeth here," said Spence of the Clintons' 1972 experience. "We got a good lickin', but they built huge relationships."

Republicans scoff at the affinity notion, citing Clinton's low poll ratings in Texas during his first two years when his stands on issues such as gays in the military, gun control, health care and taxes were unpopular.

"If he had such a great affinity, he certainly didn't demonstrate it in 1992," said Ernest Angelo of Midland, a Republican National Committee member.

In Texas, Clinton received 37 percent of the vote, compared with 41 percent for Bush and 22 percent for Ross Perot.

As president, Clinton has visited the state seven times while making 23 trips to California. Except for an early Democratic fund-raiser in February, he did not campaign in Texas during the 1994 elections.

His Texas supporters say Clinton has improved his poll numbers. But many analysts do not view Texas as a battleground state, and it remains to be seen whether the national campaign - unlike 1992 - will target the state.

Clinton began developing his Texas political ties in Austin when the McGovern campaign sent him and writer Taylor Branch to work the state. From the Democratic National Committee came Hillary Rodham to work on a voter registration project.

To this day, Armstrong laughs about how he and the late John White, then the Texas agriculture commissioner who was co-chairman, put the "future Pulitzer prize winner," Branch, in charge of bookkeeping.

It may have been a losing campaign, but Clinton left with Texas connections.

Mauro and Spence later worked with Mrs. Clinton again in Arkansas. A member of Wal-Mart's board of directors, she chaired the environmental advisory board. Wal-Mart was a client of Spence, and Mauro became a member of the environmental advisory board.

In 1992, Mauro chaired the Clinton-Gore campaign in Texas, a post he holds again. More often than not, he is the Texas liaison with the White House.

A huge photo of three Fonzie-like guys in blue jeans, white T-shirts, black leather jackets and shades hangs in Mauro's office. Clinton is seated on a Harley-Davidson. All three - Clinton, Mauro and Spence - had shown up dressed alike for Mrs. Clinton's surprise "Let's Go to the Hop" birthday party in 1994.

Like Mauro, Spence was involved in the 1992 campaign.

He "prepped" Clinton before his Democratic National Convention speech, a task he also performed before the 1995 State of the Union address. His advice to keep focused on the "heart of heartland and not the belt of the beltway" is well-known around the White House.

For the last six weeks of 1992 campaign, the "Alamo Team" would fax daily memos to the Clinton plane, seeking money that wasn't forthcoming. In one, Spence wrote, "It's down to hand-to-hand combat."

"They would get them on the plane and laugh," he recalled.

"Like the Alamo, we knew what our role was supposed to be, to tie down the enemy and make him spend money," said Mauro.

The faxes were signed Garry "Maverick" Mauro, Roy "Renegade" Spence, Judy "Troubleshooter" Trabulsi, Bill "Bowie" Burton and Lukin "Longshot" Gilliland.

Ms. Trabulsi, a partner of Spence's, also was a 1972 veteran as was Gilliland, then a student at the University of Texas.

As a reporter and newspaper editor in Arkansas, Burton knew Clinton in the 1980s before moving to Texas. In the campaign, he specialized in energy issues and later worked in the White House.

Like Paul Begala, a key campaign strategist, and Jose Villareal, deputy campaign manager, Burton has returned to Texas.

Bentsen said it was during the 1992 campaign that he got to know Clinton well.

Democrats say Bentsen was given wide latitude as treasury secretary and that his advice was - and still is - sought on policy and politics. He was a guest at Clinton's birthday party last August in Wyoming.

"Somos simpatico," said Bentsen of their congenial relationship.

One of Clinton's longest-standing supporters is Bernard Rapoport of Waco. Rapoport, a 1972 McGovern campaign fund-raiser, has contributed to every single Clinton race. His phone calls, Democrats said, go straight through to the president.

Clinton supporters acknowledge 1993 and 1994 were tough years politically in Texas, but they are talking optimistically about 1996, just as they did about 1992. Mauro insists this time it will be different.

"We're going to be the San Jacinto team this year," he said. "No more Alamos."

Emergency Services

Weekend emergency services reports -- which are typically compiled at 7 a.m. daily for the activity during the previous 24 hours -- contained the following information.

HEREFORD POLICE

Tuesday

Criminal mischief was reported in the 600 block of Knight Street, where a chain link fence was damaged by what was believed to have been a car. Damage was estimated at $150.

An elderly man was reported roaming the streets in the 200 block of Ranger. He appeared disoriented. The person taking care of the man was located and made sure the man was given care.

A man and his live-in girlfriend got into an argument in the 800 block of South Texas. The man, who was intoxicated, was angry over the thought that the woman was having an affair with her ex-husband. No assault occurred and the man left the house for the night.

A 15-year-old girl was reported as a runaway from a residence in the 500 block of Avenue J.

Officers issued 15 traffic citations. There was one curfew violation citation issued.

Monday

A 45-year-old male was arrested in the 200 block of New York Street for DWI.

A 34-year-old male was arrested for public intoxication at Second and Lee after he was discovered talking very loudly. Police asked why he was yelling and the man said he was talking to a friend, although the officer could see he and the man were the only people on the corner. The man was determined to be drunk and was taken to Deaf Smith County Jail.

A 35-year-old male was arrested on Department of Public Safety warrants for speeding, expired motor vehicle inspection, and failure to maintain financial responsibility.

A 32-year-old male was arrested on outstanding DPS warrants for expired motor vehicle registration, no seat belt and violating promise to appear.

At a residence in the 300 block of Avenue C a woman and child were allegedly assaulted by the woman's estranged husband. Police were told the man came home drunk and was confronted by his wife. During the ensuing argument, the man was accused of hitting his wife, who was holding their 3-month-old child. No serious injuries were reported and the woman declined to file charges.

Domestic disturbance was reported in the 300 block of Union Avenue, where a woman and her mother were arguing about the custody of the woman's children. The woman, who was going to be booked into jail, wanted them in the custody of her husband. After deliberation with police, the children were released to the custody of their father.

Police were told that, during a verbal argument over custody of their children, a woman was slapped in the face by her husband. The incident occurred in the 100 block of Avenue K. No charges were filed.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 200 block of Ironwood, where words and letters were written in chalk on the side of a house.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 200 block of North Main, where vandals damaged a water tank in the women's restroom, causing more than $200 damage.

Aggravated assault was reported in the 200 block of Avenue H, where a 21-year-old male told police he was attacked by two other males, who were believed to have beat him with tire tools and baseball bats. The complainant was taken to Hereford Regional Medical Center for treatment of numerous lacerations and bruises. The cause is under investigation.

Officers issued 61 traffic citations.

Sunday

A 39-year-old male was arrested on outstanding Department of Public Safety warrants from Randall County for speeding, no drivers license and violating promise to appear.

A 33-year-old male was arrested in the 400 block of North 25 Mile Avenue for public intoxication.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 600 block of Irving, where a back car window was broken, causing damage estimated at $150.

Several items of clothing valued at $240 were reported missing from a home in the 500 bloc of Blevins following a party there. One of the partygoers is suspected of taking the items.

An incident was reported in the 900 block of South Miles, where an 11-year-old girl was struck in the back by a 36-year-old male who was wielding a baseball bat. Police were told the child was trying to stop the man from hitting her dog, which was fighting with his dog. An investigation of injury to a child is continuing. No serious injuries were reported.

A domestic disturbance was reported in the 900 block of South Miles, where a woman told police she did not want her husband in the house. The man told police she was made because he had been out all night and had just returned home. He dressed and left the house for the day. No assault occurred.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 300 block of Elm Street, where a window screen was damaged in the amount of $50.

A report was filed of a dog tied up in the back yard of a home in the 100 block of Avenue A, where it was determined the owner had left town without designating anyone to care for the animal. Police found the animal with no shelter and that neighbors were periodically feeding and watering the dog. An investigation of cruelty to an animal is continuing.

A homemade trailer was reported stolen from a residence in the 500 block of McKinley. The complaining party later reported it had been returned from a cousin who had not notified the owner he was using it.

Criminal mischief was reported in the 200 block of Avenue I, where someone threw rocks through two windows, causing damage estimated at $50.

Domestic disturbance was reported in the 100 block of Avenue E, where a man was walking across the street yelling at his wife. No assault occurred.

A 46-year-old male walked into the HRMC emergency room and requested treatment for a stab wound to his back. Police were dispatched to the hospital, but the victim left without being treated. It was unknown the name of the victim, who did not return to the hospital.

Theft of beer was reported in the 900 block of East Park Avenue, where the beer was taken by a male age 20 to 25 years.

An incident was reported in the 300 block of Avenue A, where two adult males were fighting over ownership of some stereo equipment. No serious injuries were reported and nobody wanted to file charges.

Officers issued 22 traffic citations. There were eight curfew violation citations issued.

There was one traffic accident with no injuries reported in the 400 block of Avenue D.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

No calls.

If your neighbor's house caught fire, wouldn't you want to do more than watch?

Of course you would. And we'd like to offer a suggestion: become a volunteer fire fighter.

It's a great way to do something important for your community, and for yourself.

But to be a volunteer fire fighter, you'll need more than just a desire to help people.

You'll also need courage and dedication, enthusiasm, and a willingness to learn new skills and face new challenges.

If you think you qualify for this kind of job, come down to the fire station and talk to us.

Watching can be a helpless feeling. We don't have to tell you what kind of a feeling you'll get from helping.

Your local fire department.
