Ask Us

Q. — Thursday (June 6) was the anniversary of D-Day. What does the "D" stand for?

A. — "D-Day" was a term used by the military for a secret date and the "D" did not stand for a particular word. On D-Day, a military operation would begin. The most famous D-Day was June 6, 1944, when the Allies invaded Normandy.

JCAH team at Cogdell for accreditation process

Cogdell Memorial Hospital is once again undergoing an on-site survey through the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH).

Friday, a JCAH survey team was at Cogdell to review its equipment and procedures in the laboratory. Monday, the remainder of the facility will be scrutinized by the same survey team.

This team is comprised of three professional JCAH staffers, a registered nurse, a physician and an administrator.

The review process is one Cogdell has voluntarily solicited since 1960, when it first received its accreditation through JCAH.

The last visit from the JCAH team was in 1982, when Cogdell was granted a three-year accreditation. As it now operates, JCAH grants one or three-year periods based upon the hospital's evaluation, a three-year period indicating a greater degree of compliance.

The commission itself is a private, non-profit organization formed in 1951 by the five national health care organizations which comprise the membership of the professional staffs of most hospitals.

These include the American Medical Association, the American College of Physicians, the America College of Surgeons, the American Dental Association and the American Hospital Association.

By having a nationwide organization, hospitals which seek accreditation through JCAH are evaluated against nationally recognized standards.

The philosophy of JCAH is that "health care professionals should take responsibility for evaluating and improving the quality of care they provide."

After the on-site visit, the survey teams will consult with the staff at Cogdell, reviewing essentially every aspect of the hospital operation.

These consultations are now scheduled Monday.

A report is then written up and submitted to both Cogdell and the JCAH's central office.

The final decision regarding accreditation rests with the Accreditation Committee of JCAH's governing body.

A three-month period normally follows the on-site visit and the final accreditation decision.

In Brief

Bus wreck

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A class outing to an amusement park turned to grisly nightmare when a chartered bus carrying 71 sixth-graders crashed into the rear of a stalled milk truck, killing one child and injuring 30 others.

"It was just gross. Blood was going everywhere," said 12-year-old D.J. Rosenblatt after the crash Friday.

"The bus driver looked back and was going to talk to a girl and he turned around and we hit the truck," Rosenblatt said after he was treated and discharged from a hospital.

"It was frightening. It was like a war zone," said Gary Williams, 32, of nearby Newark.

Local

Art displayed

Beginning Sunday afternoon, the public may view the latest exhibit at the Scurry County Museum — a collection of the prize-winning paintings from the Texas Watercolor Society's 36th annual show.

The 33 paintings included in the traveling exhibit will be on display through June 25.

The museum will be open Sunday from 1 until 4 p.m.

Tryouts set

Whirlagig tryouts will be conducted Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Room A of the Scurry County Coliseum.

Locals are needed for dramatic parts as well as singing and dancing roles in the production, sponsored through the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

ISD meeting

The June meeting of the Snyder school board is Tuesday.

It will begin at 7 p.m. at the school administration building.

Court to meet

A report will be offered Monday from Western Texas College regarding the county's share of expense related to the Senior Center, Scurry County Museum and the veteran's office.

It will come during the regular meeting Monday of commissioners, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

Weather

Snyder Temperatures: High Friday, 92 degrees; low, 67 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Saturday, 69 degrees; no precipitation; total precipitation for 1985 to date, 15.20 inches.

Snyder Area Forecast: Saturday...sunny and very warm with a high in the upper 90s. Wind south to southeast 5 to 15 mph.

Traffic fatality suit ends

A compromise settlement was filed in 132nd District Court this week in a civil lawsuit filed in connection with a fatal traffic accident here in July of 1984.

The suit was filed last year in connection with the death of 23-year-old Anthony Dale Garvin.

He was killed in a near head-on collision near the intersection of Ave. A and the East Highway at 12:13 a.m. July 20, 1984.

Garvin was a passenger in a car driven by Scott Allen Maynard, which collided with a second vehicle driven by Teresa Moses of Trent.

Moses was arrested and charged with DWI and involuntary manslaughter following the accident.

She pleaded guilty to the felony manslaughter charge in September of 1984 and is now serving a 10-year probated prison sentence.

Under the terms of the agreement and judgment filed this week, the plaintiffs — surviving relatives of the deceased — will collect a one-time payment of $20,000.

The suit was styled Flossie Garvin individually and Yvette Robbins as next friend of Michael Garvin vs Scott Allen Maynard, Juanita Medrano, Teresa Moses, Dorothy Jean Lee and John Todd Line individually and dba Deep Creek Saloon and American States Insurance Companies.

The local private club was included in the lawsuit since it was alleged Moses had been drinking there prior to the accident.

FLUVANNA REUNION ACTIVITIES — These members of the Sparkle City Squares dancing club were the featured entertainment at the Fluvanna Old Settlers Tea held Friday afternoon at Edith McKanna's Rock Ledge Farm. The tea was the first major event of the two-day Fluvanna homecoming. The reunion of residents is conducted every five years. (SDN Staff Photo)

Museum programs aim at young learners

Two programs for elementary school students have been scheduled by the Scurry County Museum in June — the first slated this Tuesday and Wednesday.

A two-day nature study and safari is planned these two days, while a program about American Indians is planned on June 25.

Shirley Leftwich, museum director, said the nature study this week will have students exploring the world of insects and wildflowers, seeing wild game birds and waterfowl plus searching for traces of the prehistoric past in a local fossil bed.

This program is for students grades 2-5. The group will meet from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. both Tuesday and Wednesday. The children will be required to bring a sack lunch both days.

The fee will be $6 for children of members of the Museum Assocation and $7 for children of nonmembers. The class will be limited to 15.

Students in grades 2-4 may enroll for the Indian study. Topics covered will include what the Indians ate, their clothing and the games they played. Students will make their own warrior shield.

The class is to meet from 9 a.m. until noon. Children of association members will pay $5 and others $6.

Summer rec set to begin

The Scurry County girl's summer recreation program begins Monday with track, volleyball, gymnastics, basketball and other activities slated.

The program, scheduled to run through July 19 at Snyder High School, will be held Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until noon and from 2 until 4 p.m.

Girls age 16 and under may participate. General fee is $3 for each girl. Those participating in tennis will be charged $6.

Registration will be Monday at Snyder High School gym. Classes will follow.

Returning as director and instructor is Kellye Luera, owner of Kellye's School of Dance and Gymnastics. She will be teaching track and dance.

Kay Porter will return for her third year as instructor in gymnastics. Sabrina Sullivan will return for a third time to teach volleyball, track and basketball.

Also returning is Debra Quintela, who will teach volleyball, basketball and gym activities.

New instructors include Kathy Norris and Tonya Holladay. Norris, a drama major at Tarleton State University, will teach arts and crafts, Let's Pretend and outdoor activities. Holladay, a former student under Doug Fitzjerald, will teach gymnastics.

In addition to scheduled activities, swimming and other events will be offered on Wednesday afternoons.

Three guilty pleas bring probation

Three criminal defendants were granted probated prison terms after entering guilty pleas to charges against them in 132nd District Court last week.

Two of those — 33-year-old Paula Lytle of 317 34th St. and 34-year-old Joline Rhoades of 1805 40th St. — were among 17 defendants indicted in April in connection with delivery of dangerous drug charges.

Lytle was placed on probation for 10 years in exchange for her plea to a charge of delivery of methamphetamine on Feb. 12.

Six other similar indictments against her are still pending.

Rhoades pleaded guilty to the same charge in connection with an incident on Feb. 23 and was given a five-year probated term in exchange for that plea.

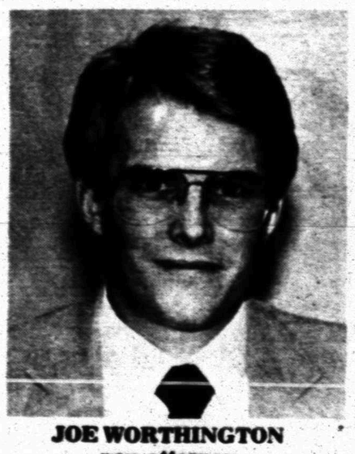

There are no other indictments pending against her.

Both women were arrested by Scurry County sheriff's officers in March at the conclusion of a two-month undercover operation directed by the sheriff's office and Texas Rangers.

The third defendant to enter a guilty plea in exchange for probated prison time was 17-year-old Melvin Stanley Alpha Jr. of 509 17th St.

He pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary of a habitation for a five-year probated term.

Alpha was indicted by the Scurry County grand jury Monday for the May 4 burglary of a residence owned by Jesse Faulkenbery of Snyder.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There are two kinds of fishermen--those who fish for sport and those who catch something.

John Cline, court reporter for the 132nd judicial district, immediately responded to our early week suggestion that the mayor proclaim TOYT (Take Off Your Tie) in Snyder.

The call was in response to a proclamation in El Paso that banned the wearing of neckties from now through Labor Day to promote comfort and productivity during hot weather.

Said John, "I certainly would like to go along with it. However, since Judges and court personnel are required to wear coats and ties in the courtroom, it might take some action on your part with the Presiding Judge of this Administrative District.

"I could see it now. At the next court session I would be reporting court in sandals, Levis and Six Flags T-shirt, while Judge Dulaney would be sitting on the bench wearing his red banlon shirt, white pants, argyle socks and white shoes.

"Or take it one step further. Imagine your local undertaker at your Aunt Matilda's funeral in the latest summer attire: tank top and Bermuda short. Or your minister at the next Sunday service in the latest punk look."

John has a point about needing some exceptions. But if we were the judge, during this steamy weather we'd wear cutoffs and a tank top under that judicial robe–sans tie.

Trim and slim is the word for summer, but those with a stout figure can still take heart. We received in the mail this week a request from a fellow in Ohio who wanted to place a personal ad in the classified section.

It read: "Lonely incarcerated man seeks correspondence with a woman of great size. Will answer your letter immediately."

He may not have much luck. In a footnote giving instructions he repeated the fact that he was in jail and added he didn't have money to pay for the ad.

Even girls with "great size" like a fellow with folding stuff in his wallet.

Bass fisherman Larry House counters the claim that fish are stupid. "No fish ever got a sunburn sitting in a boat trying to catch a man."

Attorney joins local firm

A new attorney has joined the local firm of Rosser and Armstrong — 25-year-old Joe Worthington.

He is a May graduate of the Texas Tech Law School and was officially sworn-in as a licensed attorney last week by District Judge Gene Dulaney.

The Seminole native is a graduate of Seminole High School and holds an undergraduate degree from Tech in addition to his law degree.

His wife Amy is a registered nurse. They have no children.

Worthington says he has no plans to specialize in a particular area of the law and expects to enter the same areas of general legal service — both criminal and civil — now offered by the firm.

Renew threat to kill peacekeeping force

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Members of a mostly Christian militia holding 23 Finnish members of a U.N. peacekeeping force renewed their threat today to kill "one every hour" unless Shiite Moslems released 11 of their comrades, a U.N. official said.

A U.N. source said officials were in radio contact with the 23 hostages today, and that they were in good condition.

Members of the South Lebanon Army militia, which is trained and equipped by Israel, abducted 24 Finnis soldiers Friday. It released two of them, both officers, "for negotiations to resolve the problem and one returned (to captivity) as it was agreed. Now they are 23," said the U.N. source, who spoke on condition he not be identifid.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, said, "The threat was renewed this morning. They said they will shoot the U.N. soldiers one every hour."

He said they gave no deadline for carrying out the threat, and he said he did not know whether the abduction reflected the official stand of the militia command or a decision by individuals.

Goksel said Finnish officers on Friday went to the village of Bedias to visit members of the South Lebanon Army seized by the Shiite Amal militia earlier in the day.

"The 11 men are in good shape and we have received assurances from Amal that they will remain in good shape," said Goksel.

Goksel said the South Lebanon Army accused the Finns of helping Amal militiamen in the Friday attack on a post of the Christian militia in Qantara, in which the 11 were captured.

However, he said the Finns had not taken part in any attack. He said the Finns were kidnapped by the South Lebanon Army from a U.N. post in Qantara, six miles north of the Israeli border, and from a bus outside the post.

Reinforcements from other U.N. units were moved into the 490-man Finnish battalion's sector on Friday, he said.

Qantara is within the buffer zone established by Israel after the pullout of its troops from southern Lebanon this week. Israel trained and armed the South Lebanon Army to patrol the area, which overlaps with the zone manned by the 5,600-man U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, known as UNIFIL.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar appealed for Israeli help in getting the peacekeepers released. In Washington, the State Department said it deplored the kidnappings.

The stand-off was one of the most serious confrontations between U.N. forces and the 1,500-man Christian militia.

Meanwhile, in the the besieged Palestinian refugee camps of Beirut, three armed women and a Shiite militia gunman forced U.N. relief officials and the Austrian ambassador into the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp to negotiate the release of Shiite Moslems reportedly held by Palestinians.

After nearly three hours, Robert B. Gallagher, Canadian director of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, Amassador Georg Znidaric of Austria and two Lebanese U.N. relief officials drove out of the camp unharmed. They would not discuss what had happened.

Check bones for link to disappearance

WEST POINT, Calif. (AP) — Investigators who pulled the bones of two adults and a child from secret graves are examining the skeletal remains for links to eight missing people and a survivalist who committed suicide in police custody.

The bones were found near a house in rural Calaveras County, about 150 miles east of San Francisco. Authorities said Friday the house was used by Leonard Lake, a federal fugitive and self-styled survivalist who swallowed a suicide pill on Thursday, four days after his arrest.

"There are piles of bones everywhere ... sitting with just a little dirt on them," said Calaveras County Deputy Sheriff Robert Mortimer.

It was unclear how many bodies were scattered around the three-acre tract, said Calaveras County Coroner Terry Parker. The cause of death was unknown and investigators would have to use dental charts to identify the dead, he added.

"We have nothing to go on, as they're very small bits of remains, but skeletal remains," Parker said. "There may be eight bodies there, maybe more. We're really just at the beginning of this thing."

Calaveras County Sheriff Claud Ballard said the case seems to be connected to the disappearance last year of a car salesman and a free-lance video cameraman, his wife and their child.

Printer and video producer Harvey Dubs, 29, his wife, Deborah, 33, and their 16-month-old son, Sean, vanished on July 25, while auto dealer Paul Cosner, 39, has not been seen since Nov. 2. The missing people lived in San Francisco.

Deputy San Francisco police Chief Joseph Lordan said both Cosner and Dubs placed newspaper ads to sell items before they disappeared.

In addition to the Dubses and Cosner, Calaveras County sheriff's deputies said four other people are missing from a house adjacent to the property where the bones were discovered. Sheriff's Sgt. Ron McFall refused Friday to name the missing family.

"We don't know if we have a single mass-murder or some kind of cult or what," San Francisco police Chief Con Murphy said on Friday. "We don't know how far it will go."

Lake, arrested for driving Cosner's stolen car, swallowed poison while writing a statement to police, investigators said. He was declared dead at 1:11 p.m. Thursday. Contents of the police statement were not disclosed.

Mortimer, who believes the property might belong to Lake's father-in-law, said the skeletons of the two adults were lying in a telephone cable trench, while the other bones had been burned and were scattered nearby.

Two brothers united after 45 years apart

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Nearly 45 years after suffering a combat wound that impaired his memory and left him apart from his brother, Manuel Ramos has been reunited with his family.

Before Wednesday, the last time Juan and Manuel Ramos saw each other was in 1940 in Los Angeles, just before they were put in separate rooms during their World War II Army physicals.

"The government accepted me," said Manuel, 65. "But they turned my brother down because he has flat feet. They sent me to one room and him to another. I never saw him after that."

While Juan, now 66, returned to El Paso, Manuel was sent to fight in World War II, where an injury affected his memory. He ended up staying in Los Angeles, where he had been sent by the Army.

The two brothers were reunited Wednesday after a long search for Manuel by Juan's daughter, Elsa Martinez.

"He would tell us about all the things he and his brother did," Ms. Martinez said of her father. "He'd say 'We did this, we did that, we went here and there.' But we never saw any brother. I didn't think he existed."

Things weren't any easier for Manuel: "I thought about my family, but I wasn't sure where they were. So I just kept on thinking."

The brothers' mother tried unsuccessfully to find Manuel and died thinking he was dead, Ms. Martinez said.

"That's when I decided to try and find him. I made it a dream to find my father's brother for him and to get him in touch with the family," she said.

It took three months and many visits to the Veteran's Administration, but the agency finally confirmed Manuel was alive and tracked him down, she said.

"Once I knew where my brother was I had to see him," said Manuel, who had been living in Stockton, Calif. "If I would have seen him on the street, I would not have recognized him."

But after five seconds, the brothers recognized one another, hugged and cried.

"I thought he was dead," Juan said. "I didn't think I'd see him again. I never expected this."

Rona Barrett on 3 new shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rona Barrett says she's looking forward to her return to television this September as senior correspondent for "Entertainment Tonight."

Miss Barrett, who pioneered entertainment reporting on television in 1966, also will do interviews for "Entertainment This Week" and the new show "America," it was announced Thursday.

District judge denies bail for alleged spy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A confidential Navy contingency plan for Middle East hostilities was among documents of "significant value to the Soviets" found at the home of a former Navy radioman accused of funneling secrets to an alleged family spy ring, the FBI says.

Jerry A. Whitworth, 45, was considering sensitive military jobs even after his 1983 retirement, testified William Smits, supervising agent in charge of Soviet counterintelligence, at Friday's bond hearing.

U.S. District Judge Frederick Woelflen ruled that Whitworth should be held without bail because he is a threat to national security.

"If I ever put a bail on this defendant, it would be substantially high," Woelflen said.

Whitworth surrendered to federal officials on Monday and has been charged with providing military secrets for the Soviet Union for the last 13 of his 22 years in the Navy, beginning in 1970.

Federal officials say Whitworth supplied sensitive Navy communications to John A. Walker Jr., another retired Navy communications specialist arrested May 20 in Maryland and accused of being the ring leader of a spy operation.

Whitworth and Walker have known each other and corresponded since both were instructors at a Navy school in San Diego from 1970 to 1973, defense attorney Louis Hiken said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William Farmer said that if Whitworth is indicted, he will seek a life prison term. Although a preliminary hearing to determine whether Whitworth will stand trial is set for June 18, Farmer has said he instead will seek a grand jury hearing that would be closed to the public.

During Friday's hearing, Smits said Whitworth's fingerprints were found on seven pages of documents seized from Walker's Virginia residence.

One page had fingerprints from Whitworth, Walker and Walker's son Michael Walker, a Navy seaman also charged in the case, the agent said.

Walker's brother, retired Navy Lt. Cmdr. Arthur Walker, was arrested May 30 and faces a preliminary hearing June 12.

Program planned Tuesday at center

Debra Rodgers will present a humorous account of "Life At The Bus Station" at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Senior Citizens Center. Members of the textile painting class are reminded that their meeting has been rescheduled for 9 a.m. on the second and fourth Tuesdays.

Thursday's activities will include an evening meal and games. The meal will be served starting at 6 p.m. and games, including bingo, follow.

A modified exercise class meets at 11:15 a.m. each weekday in the center and new members are welcome to join at any meeting.

The swimnastics class meets at 1 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Western Texas College indoor pool. Bowlers meet at 2:30 p.m. on Wednesdays at Snyder Lanes and miniature golfer play at 8:30 a.m. on Thursdays.

Senior citizens interested in participating in activities in the center and those sponsored outside the center are invited to go to the center any weekday to learn more about the programs. Persons who need transportation to the center can make arrangements by calling the office at 573-5035.

Test scores are said improved

AUSTIN (AP) — Test scores for third, fifth and ninth graders in Texas public schools rose from 1980 to 1985, Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said Friday.

Hispanic and black students continue to improve at a faster rate than white students — but minority scores were still significantly lower than those of white students, he told the State Board of Education.

Kirby made a preliminary report on the statewide averages of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests given in February to 225,000 third graders, 221,000 fifth graders and 235,000 ninth graders.

A full report on the reading, writing and mathemathics tests will be made next fall. School districts already have been told their average scores.

Kirby said statewide scores dropped slightly from 1984 to 1985 but the Texas Education Agency believed it was because the latest test was longer than earlier ones, particulary the reading portion.

"We are delighted that the gap between minority and majority student scores is continuing to narrow," Kirby said. "But we realize we have a long way to go to improve our efforts in educating Hispanic and black children."

"And despite the slight decline in overall scores from 1984 to 1985, we are convinced test results will improve in the future as recent education reforms are given time to work," Kirby said.

He said 77 percent of Hispanic ninth graders mastered math objectives and 65 percent mastered reading objectives in 1985 compared with 58 percent who mastered math and 52 percent who mastered reading objectives in 1980.

Police find new evidence in case of Josef Mengele

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Police say they found new evidence that a body exhumed near Sao Paulo is that of notorious Nazi doctor Josef Mengele, but an official cautioned that authorities may not be able to give a "100 percent positive" identification.

Romeu Tuma, chief of the federal police in Sao Paulo, said investigators Friday discovered a photo of Mengele's son Rolf at the house of a couple who told police they harbored the Nazi fugitive. Police also found handwritten notes believed to be Mengele's, he said.

Mengele, the infamous "Angel of Death" of the Auschwitz concentration camp, is accused of ordering the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Jews during World War II. If alive, he would be 74 years old.

"There are very strong indications that the remains do indeed belong to Mengele," Tuma said.

However, Jose Antonio de Mello, assistant director of the city morgue, said: "It is quite possible that we will not be able to give a 100 percent positive identification of the remains."

De Mello did not say why it may be difficult to provide a positive identification, but West German authorities and Brazilian police have provided different versions of what dental and medical records are available to help identify the body.

A West German prosecutor, Hans Eberhard Klein, said the dental records were not enough to identify the body.

Tuma said the dental records arrived Friday, and medical data on Mengele's bone structure, height and hair color was expected. However, Klein said authorities did not know what Mengele's bone structure was.

Nazi hunters and Jewish groups have expressed skepticism that the body is Mengele.

"We will not allow ourselves to be influenced by political or ideological feelings. There are some who would like us to say Mengele is alive and others who want us to confirm his death. All we want to do is identify the owner of the skull and bones," Tuma said.

Police discovered a book on evolution in German with 15 pages of handwritten notes believed to be Mengele's at the home of the couple.

Iron pills are the best bet

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — After having a blood test recently, I was told that I had low iron count and should take iron pills. The pills make me nauseated and lightheaded. Would it be sufficient for me to just eat more foods rich in iron so I can stop taking the pills?

DEAR READER — The iron in food is basically the same type as that in pills. The problem is amount. You would have to eat enormous amounts of red meat, a good natural source of iron, to equal the quantity of iron in one or two pills. Therefore, if you are iron-deficient, the pills are a quicker and more effective way to build up your iron stores. I advise you to take iron pills if iron is what you need. In the event that one kind of pill gives you an unpleasant symptom, ask your doctor to suggest another type. Keep trying until you find one that suits you.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A year ago I had a rash on my leg that increased in size, developing in a circular pattern. My doctor told me that it was a fungus and gave me medication that made the rash go away. Now it seems to be starting again. What causes this? Are some people more likely to develop this type of rash?

DEAR READER — Fungus infections of the skin can be very resistant to treatment, particularly in a diabetic. Even in non-diabetics, a fungus rash can come and go, depending on the skin's ability to fight the yeast. Some people seem to be more susceptible to superficial fungus. Your story is a common one. Your best bet is to use the medicine your doctor has given you wherever the rash appears.

Athlete's foot is a similar yeast infection, and its resistance is legendary. Fortunately for most patients with your kind of rash, the infection is seldom serious. It is, rather, a bother that usually can be controlled by topical preparations like Tinactin and Mycostatin.

If you are being driven crazy by the rash on your leg, ask your doctor to refer you to a dermatologist for another opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Although I have normal blood pressure and no known allergies, my face and ears frequently turn bright red — particularly after eating fats or turkey. What causes this?

DEAR READER — I don't know, but I'll make a guess. Commercially bred turkeys and chickens are often fed hormones to make them fatter and to cause them to retain water so they'll weigh more when butchered. Likewise, beef cattle are commonly fed hormones for growth and antibiotics to prevent bovine diseases.

Besides being stored in flesh, hormones are concentrated in fatty tissue. Therefore, your red face and ears may be due to an additive that you are inadvertently consuming in the turkey and fats. To test my hypothesis, try to eat no animal fat and restrict your poultry to organically raised birds.

Once upon a time, there was Boston doctor who was interested in curing a certain form of heart disease by using a delicate operation. No one had ever operated in quite this way before, but the surgeon was optimistic that his daring technique had the potential for saving many lives. So he began by working in the laboratory with dogs.

After two trying years, he had ironed out most of the wrinkles and he wrote a short report of his findings. The report was published by an obscure journal of experimental medicine. Other surgeons, who read of the experiment, attempted to duplicate the findings.

Meanwhile, the doctor continued to operate on dogs. He streamlined the surgery, defined the indications for it and made alterations that improved the success rate.

At the same time, a French surgeon — also working with dogs — verified the operation's beneficial effects. A Danish doctor reported that, in his hands, the procedure was a failure, and he discarded it. However, a group of scientists in England carefully reviewed the Danish data and concluded that the Scandinavian study had omitted a seemingly inconsequential step; this appeared to explain why their confirmation had failed. Once the British report was published, several surgical teams in other countries — notably Japan and South Africa — operated on monkeys and achieved conspicuous successes.

During this interval of about four years, the Boston surgeon perfected the procedure and performed it on more than 50 dogs; the last 40 animals lived and did well. An international surgical academy invited him to present his findings at a convention in San Francisco. This he did. In his paper, he acknowledged that he had incorporated several Japanese modifications so that his stunning success was due not only to his own skills, but to the alternatives developed by his Asian colleagues.

Upon his return from the convention, the doctor was asked to examine a hospital patient who was dying of untreatable heart disease. She had been given two months to live, and her physicians had concluded that although the new operation had not been performed on humans, it might save her. The surgeon agreed.

The patient was given a concise description of the surgery, its risks, expense and possible complications. After two days of deliberation, she signed a consent form, indicating her awareness of the experimental nature of the operation and her conviction to proceed.

There was no press release.

The surgery was unobtrusively carried out; the woman recovered uneventfully and was able to live a normal life. She was never interviewed on television news. In fact, she requested that her name not be publicized, to protect her family's privacy.

During the next year, the surgeon performed his new procedure on 10 other terminal cardiac patients. Eight lived, one died of pneumonia, one succumbed to kidney failure. The surgeon documented these cases in detail and the report was published in a well-known and widely read surgical journal.

Upon its publication, the media became aware of the breakthrough; as a result, the doctor enjoyed much recognition and fame. His hospital became a mecca for other surgeons who adopted the procedure and, after several years, the technique became commonplace and was accepted throughout the world.

I have invented this fictitious vignette to show how, in a general way, new treatments used to become available. In essence, they were tested and retested, checked and rechecked and — eventually — reported in reputable scientific publications. Then the news media were informed.

Not so now. Today, everything is backwards. A surgeon can, at a moment's notice, get full TV coverage — and relish it — while he performs a procedure that's neither fully tested nor safe nor expected to be successful. Hardly a day passes when you can't pick up a newspaper, thumb through a news magazine or flick on your TV to discover the novel things doctors are$doing to people. This hype really gets our hopes up — unfortunately, because these outrageous procedures rarely succeed. How could they? They haven't been thoroughly tested and their supposed benefits haven't been confirmed.

This whole crummy situation is not the fault of the reporters. After all, they're out there to gather news. No, the problem lies with publicity-seeking doctors and inhumane hospitals who can't wait to see their names in lights and make lots of money.

In my view, there ought to have been 10 ... 20 ... 30 Baby Faes before one word of baboon-heart transplantation was muttered to the press. Artificial hearts probably have a place in treatment, but the procedure should have been checked out rationally, quietly and privately — until the evidence proved it worthwhile. We don't know its benefits or whether it is an appropriate method.

We don't even know if coronary-artery bypass surgery is effective. We're beginning, at last, to learn — a little late, I'm afraid, now that thousands of patients have had it.

I believe we have to return to a process called "scientific scrutiny." It may take a little longer to decide which new treatments are best, but in the long run, the public will be better protected. To accomplish this goal, some doctors and hospitals need to develop a quality they demand of their patients: patience.

Good News Choir to perform here

The Good News Choir of St. Paul United Methodist Church, Midland, will be in concert at 7 p.m. Sunday at the First United Methodist Church.

The choir, made up of high school aged youth, will perform selections of contemporary Christian music made popular by such artists as Amy Grant, Sandi Patti, Michael W. Smith, the Imperials and Michael Card. Several soloists will be featured.

The group is directed by the church's minister of music, Tom Laney, the former director of music and education at Snyder's First United Methodist Church.

Admission is free,, but a love offering will be taken to help cover tour expenses. The public is invited.

One dead, three missing following flooding

By The Associated Press

One person was dead and three missing in the wake of flash flood producing rainfall that swept across much of Texas earlier in the week.

The three missing were being sought today by lawmen and volunteers who battled fierce currents to continue the search.

Meanwhile, some of six South Plains counties hardest hit by the drenching rains have begun applying for federal disaster designation, officials said Friday.

A Dripping Springs resident drowned in Barton Creek after his car washed off a low-water crossing, and a South Austin resident was missing Friday after he waded into Campbell's Hole, a popular swimming hole upstream from Barton Springs, and was swept away by swift currents.

The body of Michael Clyde Friga, 21, of Dripping Springs, was found Thursday night in Barton Creek after his car apparently washed off a low-water crossing, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

Firemen were forced to halt their search Friday for Ted Steve, 22, of Austin, who vanished Thursday night when fast currents were coming through the swimming hole, which is also on Barton Creek.

Barton Creek was swollen by heavy rains Wednesday night and Thursday as a storm system brought up to 16 inches of rain to the Hill Country and 1½ inches at Robert Mueller Municipal Airport in Austin.

Paul Delaney, 12, of Wichita Falls disappeared in Holliday Creek at about 6:30 p.m. Thursday while playing on an innertube, police said. And Steve Bitner, 19, of Archer City was swept over the Lake Kickapoo spillway in Archer County Thursday night.

In Wichita Falls, Red Cross officials estimated that 200 to 230 homes were evacuated during the flooding that began Wednesday. But a lack of rain all day Friday meant flood conditions would probably improve over the weekend, City Engineer David Zelenok said.

"Water coming across the spillway at Lake Wichita is neither rising nor falling, and Holliday Creek below is stabilized," Zelenok said Friday night. "The likelihood of increased flooding is dropping. This may be as much flooding as we'll see."

In Bexar County, officials say rescue operations throughout the two days of flooding saved about 60 people from rising creeks, and emergency officials believe they have accounted for everyone displaced by the high water.

"We've been kind of holding our breath," Carl Mixon, the county's Emergency Coordinator for Civil Defense, said Friday. "But now we have a real good feeling that everything's going well. (The creeks) are all receding. Everything's going down now, returning to normal status."

He added, however, that "we're looking at well in excess of a million dollars" in damages to homes, businesses, roads and other property.

Still missing from the Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation Inc. of North Bexar County is a female timber wolf that was not among several animals rescued by refuge employees and volunteers late Wednesday.

Refuge spokesman Pat Rogers said the wolf, while not an immediate danger to humans, should not be approached by anyone. He said that people who spot the animal, described as about 24 inches in height and silver-grey in color, should notify the refuge.

The National Weather Service said flood victims should get some relief over the weekend, with high temperatures expected in the 90s that would evaporate more standing water. No rain is predicted for the remainder of the weekend.

Meanwhile in the Lubbock area, some of the six counties hardest hit by the rains began applying for federal disaster designation.

"There is no question that this will cause a financial hardship," U.S. Rep. Larry Combest said after an aerial tour Friday of the South Plains counties. "This rain is going to cost.

As much as 500,000 acres of newly planted cotton were washed away by the intense, pounding rainfall this week.

Farm land prices plummet twelve percent for the year

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farm land plummeted 12 percent in value during the past year, a drop that was so precipitous it delayed release of the information while statisticians scrambled to double-check their figures, the Agriculture Department says.

The decline was the largest one-year drop in farm land values since the Depression, and it marked the fourth straight year of falling prices for agricultural acreage, the department said Friday.

Reasons for the decline included farmers' credit problems, low commodity prices, high interest rates and the large number of farms flooding the land market, USDA researcher Bill Heneberry said.

"There's an awful lot of land on the market right now," Heneberry noted. "There are auctions where the land doesn't sell because the seller isn't willing to take such a low price."

The 12 percent drop in the year ending April 1 followed declines of 1 percent in 1984, 6 percent in 1983 and 1 percent in 1982, which was a peak year for agricultural land prices. The steepest one-year drop on record was the 1933 figure of 19 percent.

With the effect of 4 percent inflation taken into account, the real value of land was off by 16 percent, the department said.

Hardest hit were the Corn Belt, Great Lake states and the Northern Plains, all of which suffered losses of 20 percent or more.

Six New England states — Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut — fared best, actually gaining 14 percent in value, a reflection of demand for residential or other non-farm land uses.

The annual assessment of farm land values is compiled through surveys of farmers, lenders, real estate agents, appraisers, farm managers and others involved in farm land markets.

Farm land nationally averaged $697 an acre on April 1, the report said, down from $782 last year.

The largest percentage decline came in Iowa, a center of the past year's farm financial problems, where values were off 29 percent. Nebraska was close behind at a 28 percent drop. Prices were down 27 percent in Illinois, and South Dakota saw values drop 26 percent.

Falling land values add to the financial squeeze on farmers because much of the money they borrow to operate is backed by their land.

WTTGA sets meeting here

The West Texas Turf Grass Association will meet at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Willow Park Inn.

The guest speaker is to be Steve Dolinak of Elanco Products Co. who will give a presentation on chemicals for turf grass management.

Following the presentation there is to be a general discussion of cost saving procedures for golf courses and other industries involved with turf grass management such as parks, cemeteries, apartment complexes, etc.

Anyone involved with turf grasses at the management level is invited to attend. There will be a nominal charge for the meeting and lunch.

The WTTGA is composed primarily of golf course superintendets from Abilene, Midland-Odessa, San Angelo, Lubbock, and a portion of the Panhandle.

All sides want changes in Reagan's new tax overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics and supporters of President Reagan's tax overhaul plan are urging Congress to tinker with the three individual income tax rates that are a major part of the president's proposal.

The conservative National Taxpayers Union wants the rates to be cut even lower than Reagan proposed, while the liberal Citizens for Tax Justice seeks a new, higher top rate to apply to the wealthiest Americans.

The two public interest groups joined a half-dozen others Friday in testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee on suggested improvements to Reagan's plan.

James D. Davidson, chairman of the National Taxpayers Union, said Reagan's plan is "an important step in the right direction — an improvement on the current tax system." The organization would probably support adoption in its present form, even though it thinks the measure can be improved, Davidson said.

Other organizations found less to like about the bill.

"Some of the provisions ... like the business depreciation system and the capital-gains preference ... are such bonanzas for profitable corporations and rich individuals that they almost defeat the whole principle of tax reform," said Joseph Goffman of Public Citizen, a Ralph Nader group.

Added Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause: "The president's plan contains a number of the major ingredients that are essential to comprehensive tax reform ... it also has critical flaws that undermine its fairness and reduce the prospects for obtaining public acceptance."

Common Cause and Public Citizen said Congress should throw out Reagan's plan and start fresh with its own.

Reagan's proposal would reduce tax rates for individuals and corporations, boost the personal exemption and pay for the changes by restricting or eliminating several deductions. The present maximum tax rate of 50 percent for the wealthiest individuals would be cut to 35 percent; moderate income people would pay 25 percent, and most people would pay a 15 percent rate.

Reagan faces tough test in House over Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, winning an initial victory in the Republican-controlled Senate in his campaign for backing for anti-government rebels in Nicaragua, now faces a bigger obstacle in trying to coax the House to approve aid of any kind.

The House, controlled by Democrats, voted several weeks ago to reject all spending in support of the anti-Sandinista guerrillas.

The $38 million Senate aid plan, which would repeal a strict prohibition against any U.S. involvement in military activities inside Nicaragua, calls for spending $14 million now and $24 million later to provide non-lethal assistance for an estimated 15,000 rebels known collectively as the Contras.

Supporters of the move called it "humanitarian" aid because the assistance would go for uniforms, food and medicine — not for bullets and guns. But at least one House member on Friday saw the issue differently.

"What the Senate has done is basically allow for funding of an army in the field to overthrow a government, which is in violation of a number of treaties" signed by the United States, said Rep. Davin Bonior, D-Mich.

"There's no way we in the House will accept that," he said.

The House is scheduled to vote on the issue Tuesday, and Republican leaders say they believe they have the votes to adopt a more restrictive plan that still will be acceptable to the White House.

On Friday, a coalition of Senate Republicans and conservative Democrats successfully defended the aid plan against dilution. They rejected attempts to bar either the CIA or the Defense Department from administering the distribution of the assistance.

They also defeated an amendment limiting U.S. support for military actions inside Nicaragua to "a specific operation aproved by the president ... to respond to an unforeseen specific and immediate threat to the United States or its allies."

And they refused to order the administration to lift its trade embargo against Nicaragua.

Judge upholds airline for firing employee

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines had the right to fire a flight attendant because he did not smile enough at passengers, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Robert O. Belew Jr. ruled Thursday against Robert W. Cox, 38, of Keller, who sued the airline in 1981 for alleged sex discrimination before his probation as a flight attendant had ended.

Cox, who worked for the airline from November 1974 to April 1975, contended in his suit that he was a good employee and met all requirements of the job except for the smile. He sought reinstatement as an American employee and back wages.

Belew said he was upholding American's policy of requiring a "friendly facial expression" because it is is essential in the competitive airline industry.

One of Cox's supervisors wrote following a flight, "Smiling is an integral part of the job, so concentrate on a friendly facial expression."

The supervisor also said Cox did not start conversations with passengers. Court papers show that Cox responded that he needed "more discretion on when to smile at male passengers, but that he would strive to smile more."

Belew said Cox was fired for violating company policy, not because of sex discrimination.

Some share in $1.4 million herbicide suit

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Dow Chemical Co. and three other firms will pay $1.4 million to five chemical workers who worked with an herbicide they said damaged their nervous systems.

A jury in U.S. District Judge Joe Fisher's court on Friday found the companies were negligent in failing to warn the workers of the possible hazards of exposure to 2,4-D, a commonly used herbicide.

The jury ordered Dow to pay $824,000 in damages to three of the men.

In addition, all five plaintiffs will share $600,000 that the other three chemical companies agreed to pay in an out-of-court settlement.

The three firms are Thompson-Hayward Agricultural and Nutrition Co. of California, Rhone-Poulenc Chemical Corp. of New Jersey and Vertac Inc. of Tennessee.

All five men began working at the Velsicol Chemical plant south of Beaumont in 1973 and left between 1980 and 1983.

According to testimony, their duties included mixing 2,4-D, a commonly used chemical produced by Dow and the three smaller firms, with other chemicals to make an herbicide called Banvel.

Until recently, Banvel also was made with the chemical 2,4,5-T. The deadly herbicide Agent Orange, which was used in the Vietnam War, is a combination of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T. Veterans recently settled a massive lawsuit over the harmful effects of Agent Orange against Dow and other makers of Agent Orange.

All five plantiffs in the Beaumont case were diagnosed by doctors as having peripheral neuropathy, a disorder that can result in nerve lesions, numbness, pain and weakness.

Expert witnesses for the four chemical companies testified they didn't think heavy exposure to 2,4-D could cause the health problems experienced by the plantiffs.

According to testimony, Dow completed its first study on the neurological effects of 2,4-D in 1984. The 15-day study examined the effects of the chemical on five rats.

The workers' attorneys argued the study was inadequate. They also presented evidence that no research into the health effects of 2,4-D was done until 1980.

Rebecca Redosh, a Dow spokeswoman in Midland, Mich., said the company stands by its belief that 2,4-D did not cause the workers' ailments.

"We would cite a lot of medical data that would contradict the verdict," Ms. Redosh said. "The chemical has been used in treating cancer patients who were injected with as much as 2,400 miligrams per day, without ill effects.

She said Dow may appeal the jury award.

However, Jeff Branick, one of the lawyers for the workers, said the verdict raises questions about the risks possibly faced by hundreds of thousands of people who work the chemicals used in herbicides.

"We don't feel industry takes necessary precautions to protect their workers from hazards that are scientifically known or knowable," Branick told the Beaumont-Enterprise Journal. "Industry holds the pursestrings of science, and they should be helping do more than the meager testing that has occurred on the thousands of chemicals in use today."

The jury awarded a total of $970,000 in damages to the three men, but found Dow responsible for only 85 percent of the award. The three other firms will pay the $600,000 agreed to out of court rather than the remaining 15 percent.

Dow was found liable for damages of $382,500 to Donald Broussard, 43, of Port Arthur; $314,000 to James Tindall, 43, Lumberton; and $127,000 to James Bennett, 56, Beaumont.

They will share the $600,000 out-of-court settlement with Albert McKinney, 54, of Hardin County and Raymond Westman Jr.,30, of Orange.

Warns Loeffler...

Hance rips Governor White

AUSTIN (AP) — While not confirming he will run for the job, former congressman Kent Hance is taking pot shots at Democratic Gov. Mark White and telling a fellow Republican to stay in Congress.

Hance also says he has talked with former Republican Gov. Bill Clements and doesn't believe Clements will take sides in a GOP gubernatorial primary.

"It's his personal feeling that he is not going to get involved in the primary," Hance said Friday. "That is the kind of decision each person has to make on their own, whether they are going to endorse in the primary or not."

Hance, who switched parties earlier this year after losing a bid for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination, is expected to seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination next year. He already has begun assembling a political staff.

The Lubbock lawyer appeared Friday in a Capitol news conference where state Rep. Gary Thompson of Abilene switched parties, joining the GOP.

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, has said he is seriously considering a race for governor, but Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, last week threw his support to Hance in that race.

Hance said Loeffler has a brighter future in Congress.

"I think he's got a chance of being (House) majority leader, speaker or at least minority leader some day," Hance said.

The great racehorse, Man o'War, had a 25-foot stride, one of the longest in turf history.

Federal appeals court delays restart of TMI

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal appeals court delayed the restart of the undamaged reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant Friday, just five days before it was to reopen for the first time since the 1979 accident at an adjacent unit.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, citing "the public interest involved," unanimously granted a stay of the restart approved two weeks ago by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The court scheduled a hearing June 27 for arguments on whether plant owner General Public Utilities, of Parsippany, N.J., should be allowed to resume producing electricity at Unit 1.

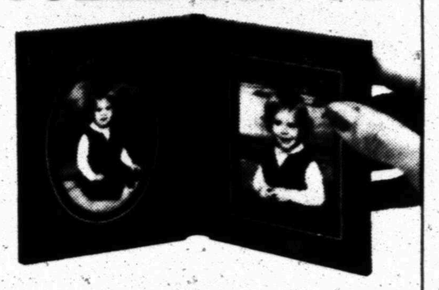

The unit has not operated for six years, since Unit 2 was crippled on March 28, 1979, in the worst accident in U.S. commercial nuclear history.

No other reactor has reopened after such a long hiatus, the NRC has said.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh, who has fought TMI's reopening on behalf of residents of the Middletown area near the state capitol, hailed the order signed by Judge Collins J. Seitz and supported by Judges Arlin Adams and Walter Stapleton.

Bollinger signs with Baylor

Charles Bollinger, three-time all-district pitcher and infielder for Snyder High School, has signed a scholarship with Baylor University.

"I'm real excited about playing for Baylor," said Bollinger, who had a career pitching record of 22-4 with the Tigers.

He was recruited by a number of colleges and universities, including Hardin Simmons, St. Edwards, Mary Hardin Baylor, Crowder, Mo., Oklahoma City, Butler, Kan., Panola and Texas Tech, but chose Baylor.

"I wanted the chance to play in the Southwest Conference. Baylor is looking for another good team next year and they said they thought I would be able to play soon," said Bollinger.

A four-year letterman for Snyder High School, Bollinger earned all-loop honors his sophomore, junior and senior years. As a sophomore, he was the winning pitcher in the Class 4A state championship game, culminating a season in which he fashioned a 6-1 record with a 2.76 ERA, hit .444 and was named all-district third baseman.

As a junior, he was all-district pitcher and short stop and took the 2-4A Most Valuable Player award. He had an 8-2 record from the mound with a 2.21 ERA and hit .528 with five home runs.

Last season, despite being hampered with a shoulder problem early, he was again named all-district pitcher with an 8-1 record and a 1.70 ERA. He hit .490 with three home runs and was chosen as the team's MVP.

He was signed by Baylor as a pitcher, but noted, "I think they'll give me a chance to bat, too. I hope they let me try some at third base and short stop. I really enjoy playing those positions, too."

Bollinger began playing baseball at age eight in the Pee Wee league. He went immediately into Little League and helped Snyder to the state tournament as an 11-year-old. His Junior Teenage League team won a state championship and as a Senior Teenage League player he aided teams to three state tournaments. Snyder finished second in the state when he was 16, fourth when he was 17 and second again when he was 18. He was named to the Senior League All-State Team both as a 17 and 18-year old.

"There's so many people to thank," said Bollinger. "All my past coaches and all the fans."

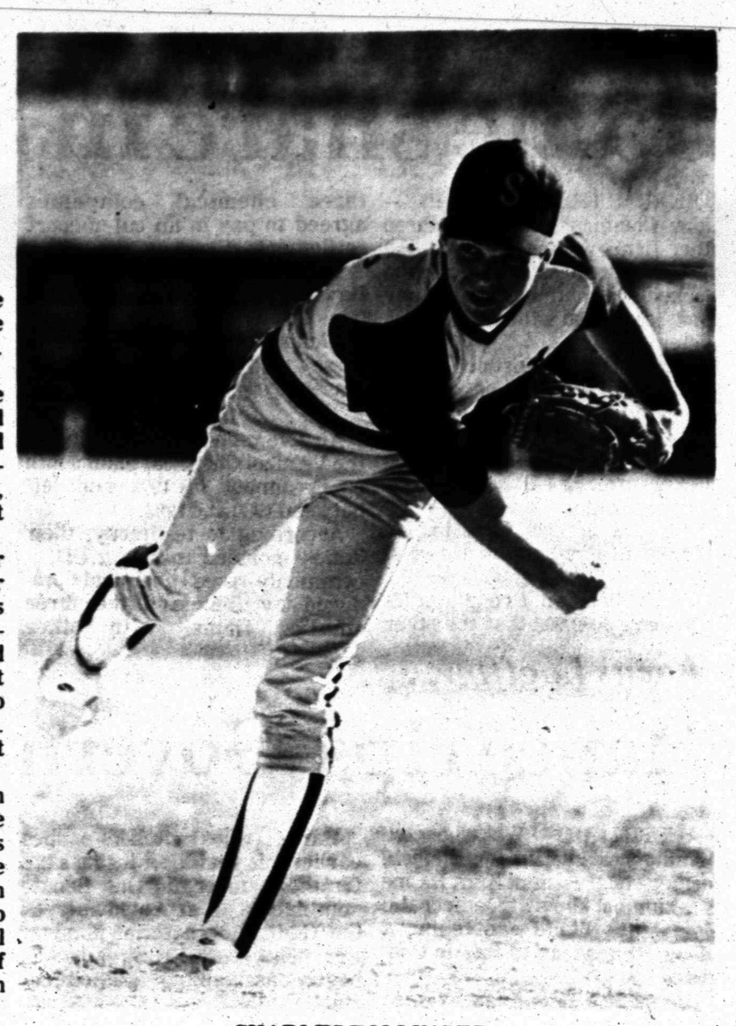

Among those are SHS coaches Albert Lewis and Roland Herrera, summer league coaches Charlie Freeman, Gary Davis and Wayne Hoskins and fans Brenda Otto, Mary Ann Sharrock, Janie Carter, Dee Dee Burke, Marshall Spence, Carlene Greene, O.D. Brewer and Mr. and Mrs. Phil Ragland.

"And my parents. They were always there, at every game and practice," said Bollinger. "I'd like to thank Coach Lewis for giving me the chance to play, especially as a freshman. He put in a lot of time with me."

Of Hoskins, a former summer league coach and strong Tiger backer, Bollinger noted, "He was the one who got everybody interested in me. He contacted most of those schools (that recruited him) and talked to them about me, including Baylor. I wouldn't be going to Baylor if it weren't for him."

Bollinger also participated in varsity football as a sophomore and a junior and in basketball as a sophomore and a senior. He was an academic all-American as a senior, named to Who's Who in American High School Students and was a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benny Bollinger.

Texas tops Mississippi State; will face Arkansas Saturday

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Texas came out of its 2½-game College World Series hitting slump with a bang.

Make that an explosion.

The Longhorns, who hit .194 in their first two series games and had two hits through five innings Friday against Mississippi State, walloped 12 hits and scored 12 runs in their final three at-bats to explode past the Bulldogs 12-7.

Texas, 62-12 and the only team without a loss in the double-elimination tournament, plays Arkansas, 50-14, at 7:10 CDT tonight. Mississippi State, 50-14, was to play Miami, 60-16, at 4:10.

Texas, last year's runnerup and the national champion in 1983, is guaranteed a berth in the finals for the third straight year.

The Longhorns, who were hitting .319 coming into the series, fell behind Mississippi State 4-0 before breaking out of their slump.

"I was beginning to wonder when we would, but I also realized we were facing an excellent pitcher," Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said. "It was an outstanding job of hanging tough and jumping on the situation when the opportunity presented itself."

Doubles by Dennis Cook, David Denny and Doug Hodo gave Texas its first two runs against losing pitcher Gene Morgan, 14-2. The Longhorns swatted six hits, including bunt singles by David Wrzesinski and Bill Bates, and scored six runs in the seventh to take an 8-5 lead.

A sharp grounder by Cook, which followed Bates' single, was mishandled by shortstop Frank Davis and allowed two runs to score, giving Texas the lead for good, 6-5.

Cook's two-run single highlighted the Longhorns' four-run eighth inning, which ensured the victory.

Winning hurler Bruce Ruffin, 13-2, pitched around 10 hits in seven innings.

Ruffin allowed solo home runs to Will Clark, his 25th homer, and to Dan Van Cleve. Texas' Michael Poehl gave up a two-run homer to John Mitchell but struck out four batters in two innings to earn his fourth save.

LA Lakers gain upper hand but series moves to Boston

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - Although the Los Angeles Lakers have gained the upper hand in their National Basketball Association championship series against Boston, the Celtics have history and the home crowd on their side.

The Lakers defeated the Celtics 120-111 in Game 5 Friday night at the Forum to take a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven championship series, and can capture the crown by winning either Sunday or Tuesday.

But, after three consecutive games at the Forum, the series now shifts back to Boston Garden, where the championship will be determined.

And Boston, 8-0 against the Lakers in previous NBA title series, has never lost the deciding game of the championships on their home court where 15 title banners hang proudly from the rafters.

Los Angeles forward James Worthy, who scored 33 points in Friday night's victory, was asked if the bad experiences of past Laker teams in Boston Garden might be detrimental to this team.

"If anything, it'll give us an edge," he replied. "We're playing for the Laker organization, for the guys who lost it those years as well as ourselves."

Worthy, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson led the scoring for the Lakers in the fifth game victory, as they built up a 17-point lead in the third quarter, then let Boston to within 99-95 with seven minutes remaining in the game before spurting away again in the final minutes.

Abdul-Jabbar had 36 points, seven rebounds and seven assists, and Johnson had 26 points, 17 assists and six rebounds for the Lakers.

Chadwick signs 13 new Dusters

Kelly Chadwick, women's basketball coach at Western Texas College, will be releasing information on 13 signees during the next several weeks.

The group includes Amarillo College transferees Pam Cox and Angela Jeans, all-Louisiana player Brenda Welch and Snyder's Carie Housden.

"Right now, I'm still looking for a couple of post kids," said Chadwick, who got a late recruiting start after being hired when Joe Cushing left for Panola Junior College. "I feel real good about our perimeter situation. I probably over recruited in the point guard position but I did that intentionally because I don't know as much about all of the players as I normally would. I felt like I was fortunate to sign some 5-11 kids. There just aren't that many girls, especially of the 6-0, 6-2 caliber, out there. The big question right now is in the post position."

Chadwick said he has "been talking to some other kids that we might sign later." He wants to sign 15 players and added that he might pick up one or two who walk on.

Those signed are:

- Angela Jeans, a 5-8 point guard from Hurst-Euless who played under Chadwick at Amarillo.
- Pam Cox, a 5-8 guard-forward from San Antonio who also played for Amarillo last year.
- Carie Housden, a 5-8, shooting guard from Snyder.
- Linda Stewart, a 5-6, point guard from Paducah.
- Brenda Welch, a 5-11 all-state forward from Jennings, Louis.
- Dee Ann Marr, a 5-10 point or shooting guard from Brock.
- Anita Davenport, a 5-11 quick-post from Meridan.
- Gi gi Robinson, a 6-1 post from Anson.
- Janyne Gravell, a 5-7 point guard from Slaton.
- Charlotte Carter, a 5-11 post from Anson.
- Julie Lyon, a 5-11 post from Morton.
- Anna Terango, a 5-6 point guard from Morton.
- Shelly Hayes, a 5-8, point or shooting guard from Rotan.

Low putters were Lou Wolf and Finnie Seale, tied with 14 in the A-Flight. Joycelyn Holder won the B-Flight with 14 while Mary Blackmon won the C-Flight with 15 and Joyce Epley won the D-Flight with 15.

The next playday will be Guess Your Score, to be held Tuesday. Tee time is 8:30 a.m.

Winners of the monthly couples tournament were Lance Leatherwood and Lisa Franklin. Second went to Betty and Larry Hildreth while Cloyce and Anita Talbott took third.

Second Flight winners were, first place, Rich Hall and Donna Stehley; second place, Britt and Tami Cresser; and third place, Mackey Greene and Becky Hataway.

Format was a two-person scramble.

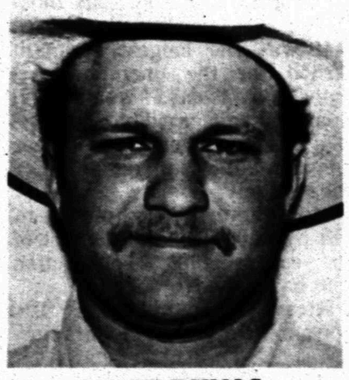

Though only a 'rookie...'

Snyder native set for CNFR

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

In baseball, he'd be called a rookie. In rodeo there's probably some other name for it. It really doesn't matter, though. Perry Echols performs like a veteran.

"We always had horses and cattle but I never rodeoed. I never really wanted to, plus with playing baseball and football and all I never really had the chance to start," said the Snyder native, who has only been competing in rodeo since March of 1984 - barely over a year.

PERRY ECHOLS

Nonetheless, Echols, an agriculture major at Tarleton State University, is getting ready for the June 17-22 College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont. He qualified by placing second in steer wrestling - bulldogging, if you prefer - in the Southwest Region this past season.

Tongue in cheek, bulldogging is a sport held in a dirt-filled arena in which a cowboy risks life, limb and Levi's jeans by diving headfirst off of the back of a moving horse in an effort to pin an elusive steer. The idea - and sometimes it is only just an idea - is to grab the steers' horns and wrestle him to the ground. The cowboys who win are the ones that turn the idea into reality. And Echols is one of those.

Now. But not back in 1982. Back when he graduated from Snyder High School and earned a baseball scholarship to Howard College in Big Spring. It wasn't long before rodeo overcame baseball, however.

"I'd go out with the rodeo team and rope with them. I had roped some, especially team roping, but never in a rodeo," explained Echols. "I got to noticing this guy, Greg Stovall, and he'd be bulldogging. It looked like fun so I just decided to try it. I enjoyed it right off the bat. And he (Stovall) taught me a lot."

Echols bought a horse "Pablo Tag," from Stovall and began concentrating on the sport. He competed in the final five rodeos of the 1983-84 season and by the time the 1984-85 season opened, he was ready.

As one of the most consistant bulldoggers in the Southwest Region, he compiled 275 points, earning region runnerup rights to champion Ken Browder of Sul Ross State University.

The sport suits him.

"It's an individual deal, not a team effort like baseball or football. You don't have a coach, really. You depend on yourself. Of course you depend on your hazer, too, but that's just one other person," said Echols.

But while he likes the individuality of bulldogging, he points out that the experience of high school team athletics is a valuable asset.

"I compare it to being at bat in a baseball game. You've got to concentrate to bulldog and you've got to concentrate to hit the ball," he said. "The experience in baseball or football will help you in anything you do - even bulldogging."

Rodeos in the Southwest Region are generally of two types. Some are single-go rodeos, were a contestant competes only once in each event he has entered. Other rodeos consist of two goes. In this format, a contestant competes in a first round and if his score or time is one of the top 10 in the event, he advances to the second round, or finals.

The NCFR is a three-go rodeo. Contestants will compete in two rounds and the top 10 will then advance to a final round. The total of all three rounds is called the average.

Echols likes the three-go format.

"It weeds out a lot of people. Sometimes a boy will get lucky on the draw and do real well on the first go-round. Then on the second go he won't draw as well and he can't handle it. It happens a lot. The main thing with a rodeo like this is don't break out (break the barrier coming out of the gate). If you do, you don't have a chance to make the average."

Echols realizes the national finals creates its own pressure ("It will be a lot different than any other rodeo I've been to."), but he remains philosophical about it.

"You've really got to have your mind on it. Some boys will make a run through their mind. Others try not to think about it at all. I've tried both at different times. A lot of it is reflex. You have to react real quickly."

Obviously he's done well, excellent in fact. But Echols accepts his rewards with little acclamation.

"A lot of it has to do with the luck of the draw. If you learn how to do it right, with a little luck it will all come together," he said.

What does someone who has reached the CNFR with only one year's experience do for an encore?

"I guess the ultimate goal would be to get to the national finals in the pros as fast as I did in college. But I doubt that could happen," Echols grinned. "The competition is strong in college, but it's a lot stronger in the pros."

However, Echols doesn't particularly see himself as traveling the pro rodeo circuit. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Echols, are teachers within the Snyder Independent School System and he is currently majoring in agricultire. He'd like to get his teaching certificate in agriculture education.

Governor apologizes for remarks he made

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has apologized for what he called a "misunderstanding" that caused him to say that the problems of the mentally retarded are caused by their families.

White also said Friday he had meant to say the mentally ill — not the mentally retarded — perhaps should live in halfway houses in "industrial" areas.

"To those who I have offended or potentially misunderstood what I said, certainly I apologize," he said.

The comments were made at a Thursday news conference, which came after federal court rulings this week in separate lawsuits challenging the state's care of the mentally retarded and mentally ill.

White expedited the signing of a bill Friday in order to explain his comments. The bill bars cities from using zoning and property laws to prohibit group homes for the disabled.

At the Thursday news conference, in response to questions about community homes for the mentally retarded, White said, "You don't just go out there and move them in next door to a stable neighborhood in which it would tend to diminish property values or endanger the stability of the neighborhood."

"Possibly an industrial section of the community might be an area where they can be placed," he said.

But he said Friday he was talking about homes for the mentally ill.

Reporters "were asking questions in one regard, about one case, and I was giving answers in another regard about another case," White said of reporters. "Maybe I didn't do as an artful job as I should have."

In response to Thursday questions about keeping the mentally re'arded in the community, near typical families, White said, "Probably the problem many of them has is they didn't have very good families to begin with in some cases. That may be part of the problem. To put them back in the area that created the problem is not going to solve their long-term situation."

He said Friday he was talking about some families of the mentally ill, not the retarded.

"There is no question that the families of mentally retarded children, by and large, are among society's most caring, concerned and nurturing individuals. Their efforts are often Herculean, giving more of themselves, unselfishly, than is usually thought to be humanly possible," he said.

White said he accepted "responsibility" for the "misunderstanding."

"Frankly, my words were not as clear as the feeling in my heart. Deep down I feel for the families and individuals who struggle daily with the problems of mental retardation," he said.

"I do apologize. I read the newspapers and said, 'I didn't say that, surely not,'" White told reporters.

He said he moved up the signing date of the bill "in order to set the record straight as quickly as we could and not leave questions in people's minds about our commitment" to care of the mentally retarded.

Carmen Quesada, executive director of the Association of Retarded Citizens, was invited to the bill signing.

"We were sure there must have been some misunderstanding and some confusion," she said of White's Thursday comments. "I think the governor has always shown concern for persons who are mentally retarded."

Final services held for Duncan ranger

DUNCAN, Okla. (AP) — A 34-year-old lake ranger who was shot in the head as he patrolled Clear Creek Lake "was faithful to his commitment," a priest said during funeral services for ranger Darrell E. "Jack" James of Duncan.

James, who had worked as a lake ranger assigned to the Duncan area for four months, died Monday. Police said he had been shot in the head and upper chest with a handgun.

Law officers from several agencies, including Duncan, Edmond, Chickasha and Oklahoma City police departments and the Oklahoma Highway Patrol, attended Thursday afternoon's funeral services.

The Rev. Paul Gillespie said during the services that life has meaning despite seemingly random, tragic events.

For a man of faith, he said there "is meaning in life and ... none of these seemingly random events is without purpose or without God being able to bring good out of it."

An Israelite sage who wrote about early death in the Scriptures concluded "there is nothing outside the wisdom and knowledge and the care of God, even what seems to us a violent and untimely death," Gillespie said.

"There are many things that you feel like you lost today, but some things stay on," he said.

"A loving heart, good memories, they'll feed you all your life. The ways of thought, the ways of caring, they stay and they grow stronger in you every year because someone who lived, loved and cared," he said.

James leaves a wife, Cheryl, and three children.

Jobless level stays the same for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employment levels in manufacturing continued to deteriorate in May, but the economy created 345,000 new jobs in service industries as the nation's civilian jobless rate remained at 7.3 percent for the fourth straight month.

It was the longest stagnant period for the unemployment rate in at least 14 years, and analysts said Friday that the May report from the Labor Department was mixed news for the economy.

Manufacturing employment fell by 28,000. Since the start of the year, some 163,000 production jobs have been lost.

After 30 months of the economic recovery, manufacturing has regained only about 60 percent of the jobs lost during the 1981-82 recession, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said in congressional testimony. Nine out of 10 new jobs created since May 1984 have been in the service sector.

"The economy is on two paths," Ms. Norwood told the Joint Economic Committee. "One path is the service economy, which is growing and growing fast. The other path is the industrial sector, which is continuing to lose jobs. As a result, there are (geographic) pockets of trouble that clearly need attention."

Meese: law enforcement summit possible

DALLAS (AP) — The United States and Mexico may have a "law enforcement summit" soon to hash out drug-combat strategy, U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III says.

Meese told the Texas Bar Association Friday that the Mexican government has made "considerable improvement" over the past two months in cooperating with the U.S. to fight drug trafficking.

Meese said he met 2½ months ago with the Mexican attorney general and that since then, there has been "nothing but complete cooperation on his part."

He said he expects to meet with the Mexican attorney general again and the two governments may have a "law enforcement summit" for its high-ranking law enforcement officials.

Meese said he could not comment, however, on Thursday's announcement of charges filed against Mexican drug kingpin Rafael Caro Quintero in connection with the abduction and death of a Fort Worth man and his companion.

As for the possibility of Quintero being tried in the U.S. on earlier charges that he killed a federal drug agent, Meese indicated that may not be necessary because of Mexico's recent efforts to cooperate.

"We are always keeping this as a possibility, if there is a reason to, but the emphasis is on the prosecutions going forward in Mexico and we're cooperating," Meese said.

On another front, Meese said "there may be some more arrests" in the spy case that officials already call the most damaging in the history of the U.S. Navy. But he followed that statement by saying that the FBI wasn't sure if there would be further arrests.

Questioned about the arrest of four former or present Navy men, all of whom were cleared to handle classified naval materials, Meese said he had talked to FBI Director William Webster about the case Thursday.

"It's possible there may be some more arrests," Meese said. "The investigation is continuing. Director Webster advised me yesterday that they're not sure yet whether there may be more arrests as they find more suspects."

Two weeks ago, the FBI said it expected more arrests beyond the initial father and son, John A. Walker Jr., 47, and Michael L. Walker, 22. Since then, agents have made two additional arrests — John Walker's brother, Arthur, 50, and John Walker's close friend, Jerry A. Whitworth, 45, of Davis, Calif.

Since those arrests, bureau officials have said their investigation is continuing but have not predicted additional arrests.

State's job growth lagging

DALLAS (AP) — Although Texas' job growth continues on an upward track, the state's economy, burdened by depressed oil and agriculture industries, probably will continue to lag behind the national recovery, a labor forecaster said Friday.

The Texas unemployment rate jumped slightly to 6.9 percent in May, a statistically insignificant increase from 6.6 percent in April, said Bryan Richey, a regional commissioner with the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The state's unemployment figure was 5.9 percent in May 1984, Richey said.

Nationally, the jobless rate held at 7.3 percent for the fourth straight month in May, the bureau said.

The latest figures painted a mixed economic picture in Texas, Richey said.

"In Texas, economic activity has been relatively flat for nearly a year," Richey said.

Although some areas of the state, such as Dallas-Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin and Bryan-College Station, continue to show gains in employment, the depressed oil and agriculture industries and bad economic conditions in the Lower Rio Grande Valley continue to nullify overall improvements, Richey said.

"In balance, the state is no better off than a year ago in terms of the total employment situation," Richey said.

Richey said only three areas of employment in Texas have made significant gains over the past year — services, government and finance, insurance and real estate.

"In marked contrast, the national figures are showing fairly impressive gains in the major industry divisions," Richey said.

Texas experienced a 2.1 percent increase in the job growth rate from April 1984 to April 1985 — compared with 3.6 percent nationally, Richey said.

"We're moving in the right direction, but at a slower pace," he said.

Richey said factors holding back the Texas economy probably won't show any sudden improvement.

"We've got these situations we can't work out of quickly," Richey said. "We're doing about as well as can be expected."

White okays death chamber relocation

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White signed a bill Friday allowing the state's death chamber to be moved out of downtown Huntsville, where crowds have gathered during some executions.

Also Friday, White signed the state's revised "Lemon Law," a measure aimed at protecting purchasers of cars that go sour.

The Texas Department of Corrections wants to move the execution chamber to the Ellis I Unit near Huntsville, the prison that houses Death Row.

The new location would reduce security problems faced in moving condemned inmates, and would get the executions away from sometimes-rowdy crowds that have gathered outside the downtown prison for executions, officials have said.

"We would hope to do it as soon as we can work out the arrangements," TDC spokesman Phil Guthrie said after the House approved the measure in April.

The Legislature approved the Lemon Law this year after a judge threw out the version of the law previously approved. Chrysler went to court to challenge the law, unhappy that auto manufacturers were not represented on the board that reviewed complaints.

Manufacturers are represented on the board created by the new bill.

The law allows consumers to seek a new car or a refund if the vehicle is out of service for at least 30 days.

WILL DO Yard Work: Mow, Edge, Etc. Call for Scott, 573-9819.

Thank You

I WANT to thank all my friends and neighbors who prepared and planted my land, the phone calls, flowers and visits. Also, to everyone who inquired about me during my surgery and stay at St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock. A person never realizes how many friends he has until he needs them.

All My Love & Thanks
Lowell Prince

Robbery, murder suspect is caught

ELMWOOD PARK, N.J. (AP) — A 33-year-old man wanted in connection with a robbery of a Houston bank and attempted murder of a guard was arrested by FBI agents Friday, said Special Agent Michael McDonnell.

Larry Lee Wells, 33, who had been living in Paterson, was arrested at the Marino Construction Co. here at 3:20 p.m., McDonnell said. He was unarmed and offered no resistance, the FBI said in a release.

A federal warrant was issued for the arrest of Wells and Sylvester J. Brown on July 31, 1984 for the July 27 robbery of the Texas Commerce Bank in Houston.

Obituaries

Bess Johnston

Services for Bess Johnston, 81, are pending with Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

She died at 6 p.m. Friday at Snyder Care Center. She has been a school teacher.

She was born Feb. 17, 1904 in Parker City, Tex.

She is survived by a sister, Merle Williams of Snyder and two brothers, Pat Johnston of Snyder and Joe Johnston of Big Lake.

Final approval expected

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education was scheduled to give final approval today to an unprecendented testing of 200,000 Texas teachers to determine if they should be in the schoolhouse.

The historic examination, ordered by the 1984 Legislature in passage of the public school reform bill, will be the week of March 10, 1986.

The board also was scheduled to make important decisions today on social promotions, which were outlawed in the reform act.

Statewide teacher testing on their basic reading and writing was approved Friday by the board's Committee on Personnel.

"No one has ever done anything near like this before," said Rebecca Canning, Waco, vice chairman of the statewide appointed board.

State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said it would take at least 250 to 300 people just to give the test, which will be given under a contract with a private firm. None of the test givers can be students or kin to any teacher or school administrator.

"It would take 1,000 people to give it in one day," Kirby saud.

The committee approved a plan calling for examinations to be given in three different regions of the state.

The Texas Education Agency will announce later whether the tests will be given on three days or two days. All classes and school-related activities will be dismissed the days of the testing.

Any teacher, or school administrator, who fails the test in March will be able to take it over the last week in June.

"I am hopeful we will have very few for the retake," Kirby said.

"We want to stress this examination is on the reading and writing skills of a teacher, not just on reading and writing," said John Mack Prescott, College Station, chairman of the committee.

The test plan calls for teachers to identify main ideas and details in reading, to distinguish between facts and opinion, to use reference sources, to "draw inference" from reading and to understand job-related words.

The "draw inference" requirement was returned to the test despite TEA recommendations, which said many teachers didn't know what it meant.

"That would be like us telling them not to think about what they read," protested Ms. Canning.

On writing skills, teachers must show they can capitalize, punctuate and spell, "recognize the English usage," identify errors in sentence formation and write a brief story or essay.

Teachers and administrators must pass the examination next spring if they want to retain their teaching certificates. Those who will take the test include about 175,000 classroom teachers; 35,000 administrators; counselors and librarians; 500 college faculty members; 500 service center staff members and 350 TEA employees.

Summer program to begin Monday

Police work dog shooting

Police are investigating a cruelty to animals complaint filed Friday morning.

Thelma Gardener of 1908 Scott St. called police at 8:13 a.m. to report her Doberman had been wounded. The dog had apparently been shot in the head with a shotgun.

It was taken to a local veterinarian for treatment and investigation of the case is continuing.

In other action, officers arrested a misdemeanor theft suspect following a call to a local furniture store at 3:57 p.m. Friday.

According to reports, a 20-year-old man was jailed after employees of Pioneer Furniture in the 2400 Block of College Ave. called to report a suspect in custody.

Also, police jailed one woman for driving while intoxicated Friday night.

Stacy Keach returns home

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Stacy Keach, reformed and repentant after six months in a British prison for cocaine smuggling, says he's learned something about freedom — "how much you miss it when you don't have it."

"I can't tell you enough how great it is to be alive, to be home and in New York City," said Keach upon arriving Friday at Kennedy International Airport. "It was great to fly in and see that lady with the torch."

The star of "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" on CBS-TV thanked fans for the letters they wrote him while he served his time at Reading Prison, working in the library. He smiled, blew kisses and flashed the thumbs-up sign for photographers.

He said he would devote much of his time to anti-drug efforts. "I'll take a little rest and then I'll be going out. (I'll) talk on campuses. I'll be talking more about that later. Today is not the day. I'm whacked," he said.

Keach, 44, was arrested at London's Heathrow Airport on April 4, 1984, carrying 1.3 ounces of cocaine. Also arrested was his secretary, Deborah Steele, 41, who had a small quantity in her pocket; she was later sentenced to three months in prison, but given a suspended sentence upon appeal.

Fence struck by motorist

A local's fence was struck Friday in the day's only minor traffic accident investigated by police.

Involved in the 11:47 p.m. mishap in the 3700 Block of 23rd St. was a 1984 Dodge driven by Tonya Paige Holladay of 4504 Houston Ave. The fence is owned by Kelly Williams of 2107 KSNY Dr.

Von Bulow jury is deliberating

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Jurors on Friday began deliberating charges that Claus von Bulow tried to murder his wife, with the defense complaining that the judge favored prosecutors in her instructions about reasonable doubt.

"Use the same tools you've always used to size up people, to judge whether they're worthy of belief," Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande told the eight-woman, four-man jury when she gave them instructions.

After three hours, the jurors were sent back to the hotel where they have been sequestered and ordered to return Saturday morning.

Defense attorneys said they were optimistic because jury members asked to reconsider testimony and requested statements of three medical witnesses. The defense based its entire case on doctors who said Martha "Sunny" von Bulow's two comas were not caused by insulin injections.

Grande said the jurors, who deliberated only briefly in the morning before going to lunch, would have the testimony read to them Saturday.

The 75-minutes of testimony covers state and defense physicians giving their reasons for Mrs. von Bulow's first coma.

The jurors must weigh six weeks of testimony from 42 witnesses in a complex and largely circumstantial case.

Scurry County Folks...

By Linda Baylor

Tim changes not only things, ways and attitudes, but it also changes people. When America was young and struggling with various difficulties, the motto was "Make it do. Use it up. Wear it out. Do without." Today, the attitude is more along the lines of replacing items as the season changes. The advent of the little plastic cards has helped to change America's outlook on material possessions.

"We never did buy anything we didn't have the money for. Except for one time when we bought a car, but we had a good crop and we paid it out," said Mrs. Agnes Sorrells, long time Scurry County resident.

"I guess they (the people) think just because the government can go so deep into debt, they can too. But it's not good."

When Mrs. Sorrells and her husband first set up housekeeping, they bought six cain bottom chairs, one heater and a wood burning cookstove. "That stove wasn't nearly as good as my mother's was, but it was good enough for us," said Mrs. Sorrells. "We didn't need anything else we didn't already have," she added emphasizing the word "need".

As the young couple started buying land, their farming operation began to grow. According to Mrs. Sorrells, they did not make a good crop the year before the depression, but they had purchased one-quarter section anyway at 10 percent interest.

"We could sell the cows to the government for $6 a head and the bulls would bring $12 a head. Eggs sold for 6 cents a dozen and fryers were 50 cents each," said Mrs. Sorrells, adding that this was shortly after World War II.

"I didn't like Roosevelt. I feel like he did the country dirty, but he did help the farmers by guaranteeing the banks. Before he did that, when a man couldn't pay for his farm, the government would just take the place over. Roosevelt stopped all that," she said.

"I never did like being in debt and the longest time we ever were was for five years for some land." She added that the couple had purchased some land from her mother and paid that out over a long period of time because her mother did not want the cash at one time.

Life wasn't easy even aside from the financial problems and worries the people encountered. "Blue bugs would get on the chickens. They're like ticks," she explained. "They suck blood and you just can't get the chickens fat, and if they're not fat, they won't sell.

"The blue bugs would start on the chickens and then get into the wood of the hen house. In order to get rid of them, you had to scald the wood or put gasoline on it. Then we got Kresote, a wood preserver that really killed them."

Laundry was another problem. There was no well water on the place because the water was salty, so the clothes and the wash pots had to be carried to the tank.

When the Sorrells decided to build a new house in the early 1940's, there was no electricity, but they got it in 1945.

"We used part of the lumber from Mama and Papa's house and tore the existing house down and added the new lumber.

"While we were building, we lived in the barn. The mice were bad out there," said Mrs. Sorrells.

When folks came for a visit in those days they stayed anywhere from three days to three weeks. During the house building project, Mrs. Sorrells stated that some cousins wanted to come visit. She explained the situation but they wanted to come anyway, and, so they did. The three women stayed for three days before they gave it up and went home to houses.

The Home Extension Club was started in the early 1930's in Scurry County and Mrs. Sorrells figured she became a member in 1937.

"I've always enjoyed it. Even now though we don't do much any more. But I always enjoy getting together."

When the club was new, they learned things that would help them with daily living; things for survival. Now, the clubs study as many different and important subjects but it is no longer necessary to place the need on survival.

Iron-on whimsies

Letting go with one's creativity is one of the key reasons so many like to sew. Anybody can make a plain skirt or shirt. Whipping up a garment with the extra touch of a monogram or a bit of embroidery is more challenging and the result is often unique. No one else has just the same thing.

When automatic zigzag machines were invented, we spent hours stitching rows of multicolored machine embroidery around the hems of our skirts. We used the satin stitch for applique work, stitching around the outline of a design and then trimming away the extra fabric.

Then came programmable sewing machines that could write, monogram and create certain designs. Creativity was speeded up.

Now, you can express yourself instantly, with a fascinating new line of iron-on appliques which are quite different from traditional appliques. Expressions by Dritz appear to be embroidered like the relatively costly packaged appliques currently available. However, they are made of a non-toxic polymer which is colorfast, washable, fuseable and appealingly low-priced.

You can brighten a child's summer by applying selected motifs to plain shorts and T-shirts. Numbers and letters identify uniforms and possessions such as tote bags or cassette cases. There are cute animals for the younger set, musical and sports motifs for teens and designs that look like hand-embroidered lace for all ages. The motifs can be fused to just about anything, including sneakers and towels.

To apply an Expressions design, preheat an iron to about 300 degrees, or low-medium. Preheat surface area where the design will be placed with iron. Position the design, cover with a press cloth and press firmly with iron for 10 to 15 seconds. Do not glide the iron. Turn the item and press on wrong side for an additional 20 seconds. Allow to cool before touching; allow design to set for 24 hours before laundering.

Gift-stitching can be easier and faster than before, with monogramming and unusual decorative designs possible with just the touch of an iron.

A CHILD'S name on a slumber bag, a teddy bear on a T-shirt and a sunflower on a book cover — all are appliqued with just a minute's worth of ironing.

BETROTHED— Mr. and Mrs. James W. Knowles of Tyler announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Deborah Jan, to Randall Jay Cook, son of George Jones of Snyder. The couple will exchange vows Aug. 3 in the Marvin United Methodist Church in Tyler.

Personal air conditioning

Sportswear looks cool when it's not

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — When a heat wave sets in and you're not on vacation, it's hard to feel cool and look pretty. Here's where sportswear designers are at their best, with colorful, airy separates that don't break the budget.

Fabrics to look and feel cool in include poly-cotton blends that resist wrinkling, cotton or cotton-ramie blends for knits and linen blends that add a handkerchief feel to skirts and shirts. Color is important because it turns a simple skirt and T-shirt top into a summer glamour look.

An example can be seen in the Folio by Fire Islander separates, which feature basic poly-cotton dirndl skirts and sleeveless cotton knit T-tops. They come in theme groups, such as an abstract landscape pattern in a mix of turquoise, gold, brick red and black, with white accents suggesting clouds. Add some colorful summer jewelry and you have a cool, attractive costume.

At Ms. Sero a light poly-cotton seersucker is used for an airy dirndl striped in soft green, purple, red and blue. The short-sleeved purple top with openwork neckline banding is knit in ramie-cotton blend. A shawl matches the skirt. Wear it as a wrap when the air-conditioning is on or as an accessory over one shoulder with the ends tucked under a belt.

At Anne Klein, designer Louis Dell'Olio likes handkerchief linen for simple but pretty summer dressing, such as a wrap skirt with the blouse in cotton-linen gauze, all in soft gray. This kind of basic duo takes particularly well to colorful summer jewelry, which this year includes lightweight plastic bracelets and necklaces of bubblelike beads.

Stripes enliven many summer separates, such as Sue Wong's tank top blousons in black-and-white cotton jersey. A plain one looks sophisticated when it's teamed with her black cotton skirt. Some sport a red anchor for a fun effect.

If the tank neckline isn't quite right for the office, Susan Hagen does a bateau-neck sleeveless top striped in sand and white, with a white skirt. At Chetta B, designers Peter Noviello and Sherrie Bloom use big, loose sleeves and white shoulder yoking to broaden the top of their navy-and-white-striped cotton knit with easy knee-length skirt.

Stripes also turn simple chemises into summer glamour dresses, such as Kasper's button-front sundress look in green and white linen, with a breeze-catching skirt and white banding around the cool V-neck. Cool and short is Jackie Rogers' wide-shouldered untrimmed chemise, in pencil-striped navy and white jersey, with cap sleeve. Wear it loose, with colorful necklace and bracelets, or belt it boldly and loosely on the hips.

In youth-geared sportswear the short dress is meant to be worn alone or to go over pants as a top. Camp Beverly Hills does it in pink pima cotton, loose and slouchy, with push-up sleeves and snap closings. Vesna Bricelj's turquoise cotton knit dress has a scoop neck, loose drop-shoulder sleeves and above-the-knee hem.

Newest of the youthful sportswear tops is the swallow-tail shirt, sometimes cut in one piece with back vent, 18th-century style. Anna Sui offers this look in a sheer Big Shirt to go over a brief skirt. At other designers it's more like a modern evening tailcoat, with the two long, slim tails, as in the Apawe' collection of separates. This shirt can also go with pants.

Thrust and riposte

South liked his hand. What he didn't like was West's four-heart overcall of his opening bid of one club. Still, South wasn't going to sit back and just tamely defend when he could easily make game. So he bid four spades. That was a bold and dangerous decision, but we've all done the same thing many times. Sometimes it works, and sometimes not.

Declarer trumped the second round of hearts and, happy with the dummy he caught after his aggressive bid, played the spade ace. That drew the nine from the West hand, and that looked very suspicious. What if that nine were a singleton? It was highly likely in light of West's immediate jump to four hearts. If South played the spade king now, he would lose control of the hand. But what could he do? Finally inspiration set led upon our brave declarer. If he played the eight of spades out of his hand, retaining the king, what then? East might take the queen, but South could still trump another heart with his spade king and get to dummy with the club queen to draw trumps. Suiting his action to his thinking, he played the low spade.

West discarded a heart and South smiled triumphantly at East. East returned the smile and played low on the spade eight, and down declarer went. Nothing could prevent East from trumping in on the third club and playing still another heart to set declarer.

South had a good plan, but so did East.

Kelly Ann Scott, Neal Douglas Paige repeat vows in double ring ceremony

Kelley Ann Scott became the bride of Neal Douglas Paige at 7 p.m. June 1 in the First United Methodist Church. Sam Kitching of Lovington, N.M. officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Scott and the groom is the son of Mrs. Jerry Paige and the late Jerry Paige.

A 15 light brass rainbow candlelabrum defined the altar. A large arrangement of white gladoli and white mums centered the altar with the pulpit and lectern flanked with matching nine light candletrees accented with greenery. Pulumonsis fern and baby's breath lined the communion rail. The aisle was marked with leatherleaf greenery accented with baby's breath and white pom-poms gently secured with ivory satin bows.

A 7 p.m. Brad Robertson played the Westminister chimes then struck the hour. Jane Womack played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" while the grandparents were being seated. Then she played "Nocturne" as the mothers were seated.

Sue Lyon sang "I Love Thee" and "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony. Mrs. Womack played "Andante" for the processional, but as the bride entered, she played "King Williams March".

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose a formal length gown of ivory satin fashioned with a fitted bodice.The round neckline was encircled with a combination of Alencon and Venise lace. Matching lace insets on the long, tapered sleeves which ended in petal points fashioned of Alencon lace added interest. Seed pearls were scattered across the laces on the bodice and sleeves.

The full skirt tumbled from the natural waistline forming a chapel length train. Lace appliques were scattered across the train. The hemline was highlighted with matching lace appliques and seed pearls.

A wreath of white silk roses and other silk flowers gracefully gathered the two tiered fingertip veil.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a bouquet fashioned of silk candlelight orchids and roses with accents of fresh Galax leaves and baby's breath. Stephanotis and dendrobium orchid sprays were caught to the cascading bouquet with streamers of bridal pecot satin.

In keeping with tradition, the bride carried a lace handkerchief which belonged to her grandmother. She wore the blue garter which had been worn by her mother and her sister when they married.

Blinda Fagin of LaFayette, La., the bride's sister, served as matron of honor. The bridesmaids included Brenda Bewley of Lubbock; Lynn Robertson of San Angelo; Barbie Paige of Tulsa, Okla., sister-in-law of the groom; and Pam Smith.

The bride's attendents were attired in matching gowns of French blue taffeta. The bodice featured a square neckline enhanced by scallopes which formed a "V" in the back. Puffed sleeves added interest to the bodice.

The waistline formed a "V" in both the front and back with the floor length skirts gathering at the waist. Garlands of fresh baby's breath adorned their hair.

Each attendent carried colonial nosegays fashioned of peach carnations, dendrobium orchids and accented with baby's breath. Streamers and loops of French blue, peach and candlelight gently secured the bouquets.

Dee Paige of Tulsa, Okla., brother of the groom, was best man. The groomsmen included Greg O'Dell of Lubbock; Paul Fagin, of LaFayette, La., and the bride's brother; Gary Waller and Mark Cypert, both of Snyder.

The groom was attired in a black tuxedo with tails and his attendents wore matching black tuxedos accented with white shirts.

Ushers and candlelightes included Doug Wright of Vernon and Stephen Ham of Abilene. Jim Crawford of Dallas also served as an usher.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in Wesley Hall at the building.

The bride's table was covered with a cloth of ivory lace and enhanced with peach colored bows accenting the corners of the table. Matching ribbon defined the hem of the cloth. An arrangement of peach colored silk flowers nestled in a crystal bowl centered the table. The three tiered cake was decorated with carnations of peach and French blue, baby's breath, starburst mums and leatherleaf fern.

A silver punch bowl and crystal appointments completed the setting.

Jennifer Ham of Abilene and Rhonda Head of Snyder presided at the bride's table.

A blue cloth covered the groom's table. An arrangement of peach carnations accented with fresh greenery served as a centerpiece. A German chocolate cake accented with the letter "P" in dark chocolate was served to the guests by Glenda Scott of Austin, cousin of the bride, and Cathey Cypert of Snyder. A copper coffee service and crystal appointments completed the setting.

Tracey Williams of Gail assisted the guests at the registration table which was covered with a peach cloth accented with a crocheted piece made by Jane Scott, the bride's aunt. A pillow with the names of the newly wedded couple and the date of the marriage lay on the table flanked with a bouquet of flowers. Belinda Fagin, sister of the bride, designed and made the pillow.

Members of the house party included Mmes. Norman Mayes, Charlie Chrane, Don Head and J.D. Smith.

Following a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will make their home in Houston.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and Texas Tech University. She holds a BBA in accounting and will be employed by Ernest and Whinney, CPA firm in Houston.

The groom is a graduate of Snyder High School and Texas Tech University. He holds a BBA

MRS. TIMOTHY MARTIN HOLDER

Karen Jean Gravitt, Timothy Holder wed

Karen Jean Graveitt and Timothy Martin Holder were wed at 7 p.m. June 1 in the Golf Course Road Church of Christ in Midland with Robert Parham officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. W.V. Gravitt and Mr. and Mrs. C.O. Holder Jr., all of Midland.

Dana Runyan served as matron of honor. The bridesmatrons included Jo Beth Boyer of Lubbock; Cherry L. Rusk; and Rayne Tubbs of Abilene. The bridesmaids included Cathie Parsley and Trayce Thomas, both of Dallas. Valerie Gravitt, sister of the bride, served as the junior bridesmaid. The flowergirl was Saige Holder.

Steve Holder, brother of the groom, served as best man. The groomsmen included Scotty Sullivan, Snyder; Edward Haar and Brice Alexander, both of Houston and Robert McCommon and Van Gravitt, brother of the bride, both of Midland.

Ushers were Lee Porsley of Austin, cousin of the bride; and Ed Runyan of Midland.

Candlelighters were Somer Holder and Heather Newman of Shallowater.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will make their home in Midland.

A large, self-closing plastic bag is perfect for rolling crackers into crumbs, according to Family Circle magazine. In another household hint, the magazine says that if you are making a layer cake and are in a rush you can speed up the cooling-off process by turning the cake pans upside down on plates and rubbing ice cubes over the bottoms. The layers should come right out.

Romance novels are new cottage industry

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Encouraged by publishers like Simon & Schuster which sponsors "how-to" seminars from coast to coast, nearly a million women in America are trying their hands at romance writing, the new cottage industry of the 1980s.

From Atlanta to Jackson to Seattle, Silhouette Books, which Simon & Schuster created in 1980, is crisscrossing the country this year to promote what it calls "contemporary brandname romance" and to pick up new authors.

In Jackson, where B. Dalton Booksellers reports sales of 144 romance books a week in its store in Northpark Mall, the number of books sold is leveling off, but the number of writers is increasing.

According to Betty Ruth Hawkins, who promoted a Silhouette "How to Write a Romance Novel" workshop for the recently opened Northpark shopping center, about 40 of the 250 participants had submitted manuscripts to publishers, and 20 were in print.

"People who read romance novels believe they can write them," she said, despite a 90 percent rejection rate by some publishers. "Everybody in Mississippi thinks they can write, that they have a little Faulkner in them."

Silhouette Books publishes 28 new titles or about 7 million volumes a month. It sells anywhere from 250,000 to a million copies of each book — at $1.95 to $2.95 a copy. Its stocks in supermarkets, drugstores and variety stores don't include releases by its once-rival line, Harlequin Romances. Harlequin bought Silhouette, but both are now marketed through Simon & Schuster.

The books stay on display for a month, before being shipped back to warehouses. According to Bud Egbert, who introduced Canada's Harlequin Romances to America 25 years ago, and who heads mass market distribution for Simon & Schuster, women generally clear most new titles from the shelves within 10 days of release.

The romance book market, which comprises about 35 percent of the mass market paperback industry, is like the magazine market, he explains. "Readers know precisely when they go on sale."

The production and marketing is done by formula.

"Boy meets girl, there's a conflict and they solve their problems. It's like producing Campbell's Soup," Egbert says.

The demographics indicate that the average romance reader is 32½ years old with one or two children. Sixty percent of them work at least part time and most have a year of college education, Egbert says.

Dear Abby

Date Is Blind to Her Charms When Smoke Gets in His Eyes

DEAR ABBY: I had a blind dinner date with a man I'd been hearing about for ages. We clicked immediately. I liked his looks, personality and everything about him. After we talked for 15 minutes, it was as though we had known each other all our lives.

During cocktails, I took a cigarette out of my purse and instead of offering me a light, he said, "You may as well know up front, I hate cigarette smoke."

I told him that I enjoyed smoking, but if it bothered him, I'd go to the powder room to smoke, which is what I did. After I returned, we had a wonderful dinner, then I took out another cigarette, excused myself and went to the powder room for a smoke. I was back in less than five minutes.

When he took me home, he said, "Thanks for a wonderful evening. I think you're a terrific woman, and I'm very much attracted to you." Then he hugged me affectionately. (I was on cloud nine!)

"Not even a goodnight kiss?" I teased, whereupon he replied, "I don't think I'd enjoy kissing a woman who smokes as much as you do." (Abby, two cigarettes in four hours?)

It's been 10 days and I can't get that man off my mind, we seemed so right for each other. I'd really like to see him again. Any advice?

J. IN JERSEY

DEAR J: Where there's smoke there's not necessarily fire. You blew it. If you really want to see him again, quit smoking. Then call him and tell him you don't smoke anymore.

DEAR ABBY: A woman in our office is expecting a baby in a couple of months. She is not married. The father of her expected baby is a married man. We were wondering if this makes the wife of the baby's father a stepmother?

The wife of the man who is fathering this child knows nothing about the baby.

We're taking bets, so hurry your answer, please.

SAFELY ANONYMOUS

DEAR SAFELY: The definition of a stepmother is: "The wife of one's father by a subsequent marriage." Since there is no marriage, the expectant father's wife is simply a woman who is married to a no-good, two-timing so-and-so.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Recently you printed a true-false quiz titled "How Much Do You Know About Homosexuality?" You said all the statements in the quiz were false.

I believe one statement is true: "If a person is gay, no amount of therapy or motivation can change him."

My own study of bisexual or homosexual husbands (to be published soon) is the only study of married gays with a six-year follow-up. Not one of the married men in our sample, despite years of "normal" married sex, has overcome the desire to be with men.

If you have information with which I am not familiar, I would like to see it. If not, please eliminate that question, as it encourages homosexuals to seek useless therapy from counselors who have not carefully reviewed the research, and perhaps because of their own homophobia, or just from ignorance, try to "help" the homosexual. The effect is (besides loss of time and money) to delay accepting (hopefully affirming) a gay identity.

DAVID MATTESON, PH.D.

DEAR DR. MATTESON: You are correct. The statement in the quiz should have read: "If a person is gay, with the proper therapy and motivation, he can be changed." That statement is false. I apologize for the confusion. I know better.

Kenny Loggins donates time

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Rock star Kenny Loggins will donate his services at a concert in Erie on Sunday to help the victims of last week's tornadoes, a promoter says.

Ed Traversari, promoter of the concert, said Thursday that Loggins will donate his fee to the American Red Cross. The sum could exceed $20,000, depending on ticket sales.

Loggins, who had been scheduled to appear for some time, told Traversari he had heard about the tornadoes and wanted to know how he could help the victims. Last week's tornadoes killed 64 people in Pennsylvania, 12 in Ohio and 12 in Ontario, Canada.

Traversari said about 3,000 of the center's 7,000 seats have been sold.

Black lung sufferers appealing decisions

CHARLESTON , W. Va. (AP) He came home each day marked with the fine black coal dust that meant he made a living. She soaked the black out of his clothes until the wash water was as dark as the phlegm he coughed from his lungs.

In 1970, he applied for black lung benefits and was refused. He appealed eight years later under the Black Lung Reform Act of 1978.

Last month, the coal miner's appeal hearing with the Department of Labor's Office of Administrative Law Judges came up.

He was unable to attend — he died three years ago.

"It's not uncommon for them to die while they're waiting in the system," says Charleston attorney John Taylor, who specializes in black lung cases.

"What's even more common is for them to cling desperately to life long enough to get their benefits. They wait to die until they know their wives are taken care of."

If the miner's wife is denied black lung benefits by the AJL office and she decides to appeal, it probably will be at least three more years before a hearing is scheduled before the Benefits Review Board, federal officials say.

United Mine Workers union District 17 is pursuing the widow's claim. If she, too, dies during the process, the UMW will try to find heirs that could receive the benefits due the dead miner.

UMW attorney Tom Zerbe says he handled five cases in less than two years in which the miners died before getting through the backlog.

"I represented one case where the miner died and then the widow died," Zerbe said. "Sure, we won the case for him, but the guy died and there's no way we can send him the money. It's a dark victory."

The backlog, from Taylor's perspective, is a deliberate attempt to suffocate the black lung program.

"From here it looks like there's been an attack on the black lung program by the federal government," he said. "To us, it looks like strangulation."

Congress has wrangled with the Department of Labor over the growing number of black lung appeals since the program was "reformed" in 1978. The number of cases waiting for ALJ hearings rose from 484 in 1979 to 20,967 at the end of February.

Last October, the U.S. General Accounting Office estimated that at current staffing levels, it will take administrative law judges more than 35 years to cut through the backlog. Appellants will wait an average of 3.5 years for a hearing at each step of the appeals process.

Several congressmen have complained about the backup. The GAO report was made at the request of Rep. Don Pease, D-Ohio, who was frustrated after unsuccessfully trying to get action on the appeals of two constituents.

Congress passed a bill last year, introduced by Rep. Alan Mollohan, D-W.Va., increasing the size of the Benefits Review Board from three to nine members (including five temporary members). But so far, the most direct solution, hiring more administrative law judges to hear more cases, has been left on the shelf.

"I'm disappointed that the DOL (Department of Labor) hasn't asked for more funding for ALJs," Pease said.He thought Congress, even under pressure to deal with the nation's budget problems, would approve additional funding for the Labor Department to clear up the backlog.

As it is, the expanded review board will cost another $1.6 million on top of the office's 1984 budget of $2.9 million, the GAO says. And the ALJ office expects to decide an extra 1,600 cases this year, at a GAO-estimated cost of $2.8 million added to its current $7.2 million budget.

Those increases come with the program already deeply in debt. As of Sept. 30, 1983, the black lung program owed the Treasury more than $2.1 billion.

"We're very cognizant of cost in this program," said a DOL administrative law judge in Washington, who asked not to be identified.

"Sure, if you could hire another 20 judges, the backlog would decrease, but no one's saying here's X number of dollars to do that. That won't happen in the atmosphere here in Washington right now."

A former lawyer for the Benefits Review Board expressed similar pessimism that the Labor Department will allocate much additional money.

"It's never going to happen under this administration," said the lawyer, who still works with the black lung program. He, too, asked not to be identified.

"The backlog is no one's fault, it really isn't," the lawyer said. "And, it isn't a surprising backlog. This was an expected bump in the road."

The long waiting list of cases appeared when Congress loosened eligibility requirements for the black lung program. Overnight, the law allowed miners who had previously been denied benefits to appeal under liberalized standards.

"It was funny," the lawyer said. "Here we were with almost nothing to do and all of a sudden we couldn't keep up. It just mushroomed."

Like the fable of an elephant swallowed by a python, the backlog has, in seven years, started to move slowly through the black lung program. Just this year, the tail end has reached the first step of the program — the claims examiners offices.

French fries are facing new crisis

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — French fries — which are eaten in Belgium around the clock in huge quantities, with or without meals — are in the midst of a credibility crisis.

Test Achats, a respected consumer magazine, found last fall over a third of the greasy potato sticks served here were "unfit for consumption." The headline read appropriately "National Honor At Stake."

Gilbert Van Houtte, a retired army officer and lifelong lover of french fries, saw the crisis looming well before the consumer report made front-page news.

Last year he founded the National League of "Frituristes," which now includes 12 percent of the operators of the 8,000 or so french fries stands that dot — some might say "mar" — Belgian land and cityscapes.

Whoever thought up the name French fries, clearly never traveled to Belgium: they are the ultimate Belgian food.

"When a Belgian goes abroad, he is always confronted with jokes about french fries," said Van Houtte in an interview.

To improve the image of Belgium and its tradition of french fries, known as "frieten" in Dutch or "frites" in French, he created a spritely cartoon character of a two-legged, pointed paper bag chockfull of fries.

Known as "Fred Friet" to Dutch speakers or "Fred Frite" in French-speaking Belgium, its aim is to restore Belgium's name in french fries.

Van Houtte blames the economic crisis for the deterioration of French fries which are so popular here the government includes them in the consumer price index.

As unemployment rose in recent years to 14 percent, vending french fries was a cheap way to start your own business.

"Anyone can open a fries stand ... just like that, no experience required."

Since 1978, he said, the number of French fries stands has doubled in Belgian to about 8,000.

They sell fries in bulging quantities with a sprinkling of salt and more often than not smothered in a variety of dressings from simple mayonnaise to spicy sauces.

In its survey of 55 French fries stands and 20 restaurants, Test Achats found in many cases fries had twice the normal fat content and half of the vendors used "inadequate" frying oil.

"A total of more than one-third of the samples were in fact unfit for consumption, which can hardly be termed a reassuring result," it concluded. It called for strict quality norms for French fries vendors.

Enter "Fred Frite" who made his promotional debut at the Belgian pavilion at the current high-technology world fair in Tsukuba, Japan.

Van Houtte said his group hopes Fred can become a national symbol as well as a mark of quality as a sticker on fries stands.

Frying potatoes is an art, he added.

Who wants to be called a Yuppie?

Most folks have heard the term and gotten its message without having to explain it to them. But, for the record, "Yuppie" stands for Young Urban Professional, and it has come to represent a whole bunch of our old college classmates.

By that, we mean folks in their mid to late-thirties who have gone on to professional careers and the good old American dream of a middle-middle income lifestyle.

For most of these, life, it would seem, is finally clicking.

Assuming they had the good sense to locate and stay in one place after graduation; find a good job and likewise stay with it; begin a crop of kids simultaneously with both; and under no circumstances have considered divorce as a viable alternative or solution to life's ills.

The net effect of these four items would be:

—Theoretically they purchased a home prior to the late 1970s, when inflation and interest rates blew the roof off of existing housing, changing $25,000 homes into $70,000 monsters or worse.

—Theoretically they have enough tenure in their jobs to have risen up the management ladder, dragging behind them a subsequent comfortable pay increase.

—Theoretically they and their children are past bed wetting and late night crying jags, the nervous rigor of finding babysitters (perverts need not apply), and the nagging question which plagues young parents, "Am I fit to raise a child?"

—Theoretically they have never suffered at least one total economic and emotional wipeout.

So following the legend of Yuppiedom, they are now ready and able to purchase a Volvo stationwagon; grow a beard to compensate for a thinning topside; buy expensive running shoes to lose the expanse of their waistline; buy the wife that "big" diamond rather than the one they settled for when they married; and begin thinking about vacations that involve air travel rather than staying with relatives.

Press folks have had a lot of fun at Yuppie's expense lately — centering around the nagging contention that the values they seem to pursue are suspect.

They also remind the generation of Yuppies that 20 years ago they were preaching from the cover of Time and Newsweek that material things had no lasting value.

Critics would argue because they supposedly stood for something back then, they have bartered away their ideals.

We'll just say wait and see.

Remember that most of our Yuppies now looking at 40 are also finally getting their nose and their checkbooks above red ink for the first time in their adult lives.

And finally getting out of debt doesn't mean you want to run whole hog into wasteful consumption for the rest of your life.

Nothing makes you want to spend money more than not having it. But reasonable folks stay reasonable, and after so many beans, even a starving man can get full.

Who wants to be called a Yuppie? Let's give those suckers 10 more years, then decide.

It's complex, all right

By Don Graff

Item: Defense appropriations for the past four years total more than $1,007,900,000,000 (one trillion, seven billion, nine hundred million dollars). Every hour of every day, the Pentagon spends on the average $28 million.

Item: The defense industry includes some 20,000 prime contractors and 150,000 subcontractors and vendors, but is dominated by a few large suppliers. In fiscal 1984, the 15 largest received 41 percent of all military contracts.

Item: The profit rate of the 10 largest military contractors averaged 25 percent in 1984, compared with an average of 12.8 percent for manufacturers of all types.

"They start chuckling and they look around to see if the office is bugged. And they say, 'It's like shooting fish in a barrel.'" — Lee Iacocca, chairman of Chrylser, on the reaction of suppliers when asked if defense contracting is easy money.

Item: General Electric, pleading guilty to defrauding the government on a missile contract, has been fined $1.04 million.

Item: The Pentagon withheld $244 million in payments to General Dynamics as restitution for overbilling. The company has also been fined $676,000 for improper gifts to Adm. Hyman Rickover.

"I took the company line." — Panagiotis Veliotis, former manager of General Dynamics' Electric Boat Division, interviewed in Greece where he is a fugitive from indictment on kickback charges.

Item: Pentagon buying is supervised by 54,000 military and civilian officials.

Item: In the three-year period ending in 1983, at least 1,900 high-ranking officers retired from the military and went to work for defense contractors.

"Without question, it's the biggest thing that afflicts us... the vastness of this bureaucracy. The problem just gets worse and worse and worse every year. Unfortunately, what it creates is the ideal environment for monopoly relationships." — John F. Lehman Jr., secretary of the Navy.

Item: In February, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the Senate Budget Committee that a freeze in the defense budget would necessitate deactivation of military units and the closing down of weapons production lines.

"We hope and we believe that we have eliminated any fat." — Caspar Weinberger

Item: In May, Weinberger reported that $4 billion in unspent appropriations from previous years will permit continuation of weapons programs in fiscal 1986 despite a budget freeze approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

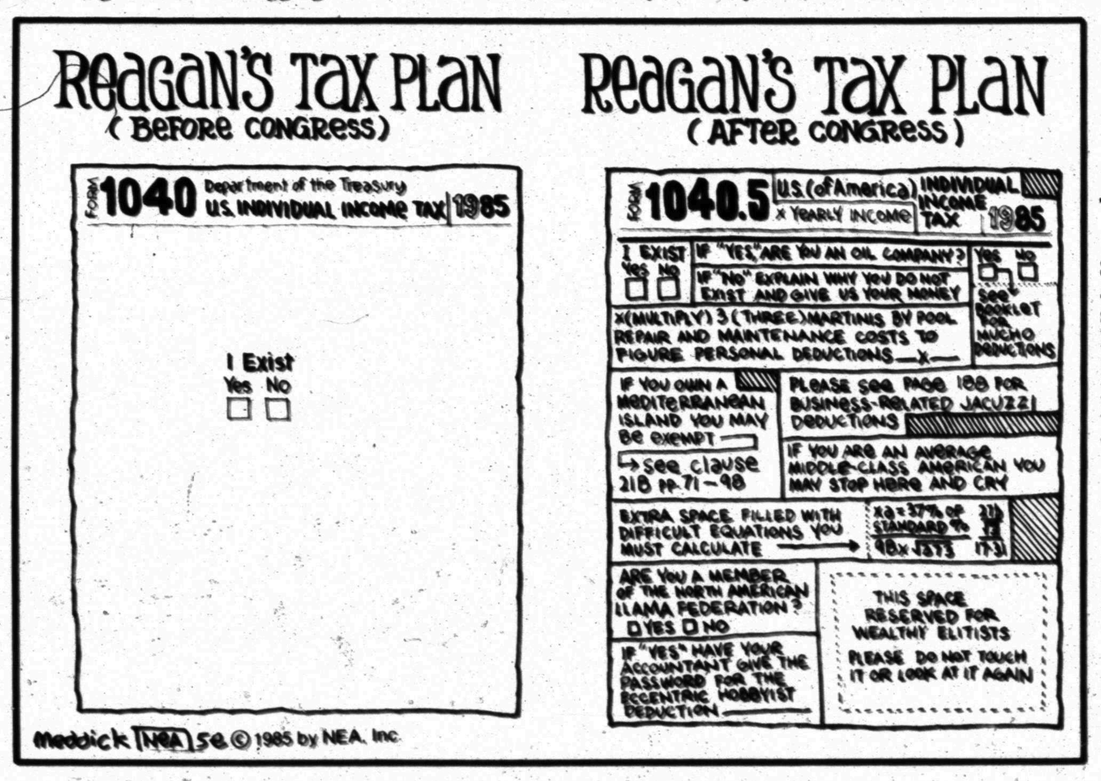

Item: The backlog of unspent Pentagon funds will grow to $280 billion by October of 1986, according to a report by the Washington Analysis Corp.

"The problem is a federal system that rewards high costs. The bureaucrat gets promoted by raising a larger budget from Congress. And the government contractor, whose profit is a percentage of costs, has an incentive to raise his costs." — Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, member, Senate Budget Committee

"When you go home, and your wife says, 'What about this $600 toilet seat?' and you can't explain it, you're in bad shape." — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman Senate Armed Forces Committee

"In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist." — Dwight Eisenhower, Farewell Address to the American People, Jan. 17, 1961

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
June 2

The new unit superintendent for SACROC has been named — John Daniel, who will officially report to work here June 10, it was reported Sunday.

Daniel will be transferring to Snyder from his current post with the Chevron Oilfield Research Company in La Habra, Calif., near Los Angeles.

A feature story Sunday outlined the latest creation of local artist Robert Taylor entitled "Master of the Sky," a bronze sculpture of a female golden eagle in a "stoop" or attack stance.

Some 500 persons toured the newly completed facilities housing the Snyder Daily News and its related printing operation Sunday.

A 1½ hour open house was observed by the SDN and its staff.

MONDAY
June 3

As of May 15 Scurry County as a political entity completed the pay cycle for all its long term bonded indebtedness, it was reported Monday.

This situation mirrors other local taxing entities with only one — the college district — reporting any significant long term commitment of debt.

Lillie Sullivan, a Snyder school trustees for place 1 the past six years, informed school officials Monday she will be resigning her board post.

She will be moving from the Snyder district to reside in housing made available for Ira teachers there. Under state law, a school trustee must be a legal resident of the district they represent.

Three protests from Snyder financial institutions were read into the record Monday related to an application to open a branch office in Snyder submitted by First Western Savings and Loan of Colorado City.

These were offered by Snyder National Bank, Snyder Savings and Loan Association and West Texas State Bank.

Ten defendants were ordered to stand trial Monday by the June session of the grand jury.

Further study was directed Monday for a possible city ordinance specifying what would be required before a local wrecker service could be placed on the "rotation" list for local wreck calls.

A three-member committee was formed by Mayor Rod Waller to study the proposal after comments were aired by the owners of the two local wrecker services now providing this service.

Western Texas College trustees — meeting Monday in the first budget study session for the coming year — heard the good news that drastic state funding cuts initially feared apparently will not materialize this year.

State appropriations for the coming year are projected at $1,452,650. This figure is down somewhat from the current figure of $1,493,807.

TUESDAY
June 4

The Scurry County Coliseum was the site for an out of the ordinary photo "shoot" Tuesday as a California-based world-class photographer brought his patented lighting techniques to Snyder.

The subject was the recently completed "Master of the Sky" bronze eagle creation of local artist Robert Taylor. The photographer was Dean Collins.

Snyder and Scurry County received a general rainfall of 2 inches Tuesday night, although up to 3 inches was reported north of the city. Rain was continuing to fall Wednesday morning.

THURSDAY
June 6

Two new townhouses are now being built in addition to those already constructed in the area of Firestone Drive adjacent to Snyder's Cedar Creek addition, it was reported Thursday.

The townhouse project were listed among the city's building permit applications for May which totaled some $418,000, bringing the year's amount to near $5.3 million.

A new group of optometric services will be offered here with the addition of new optometrist Gary N. Sisson to the local practice of Jack Nesbit, it was reported Thursday.

FRIDAY
June 7

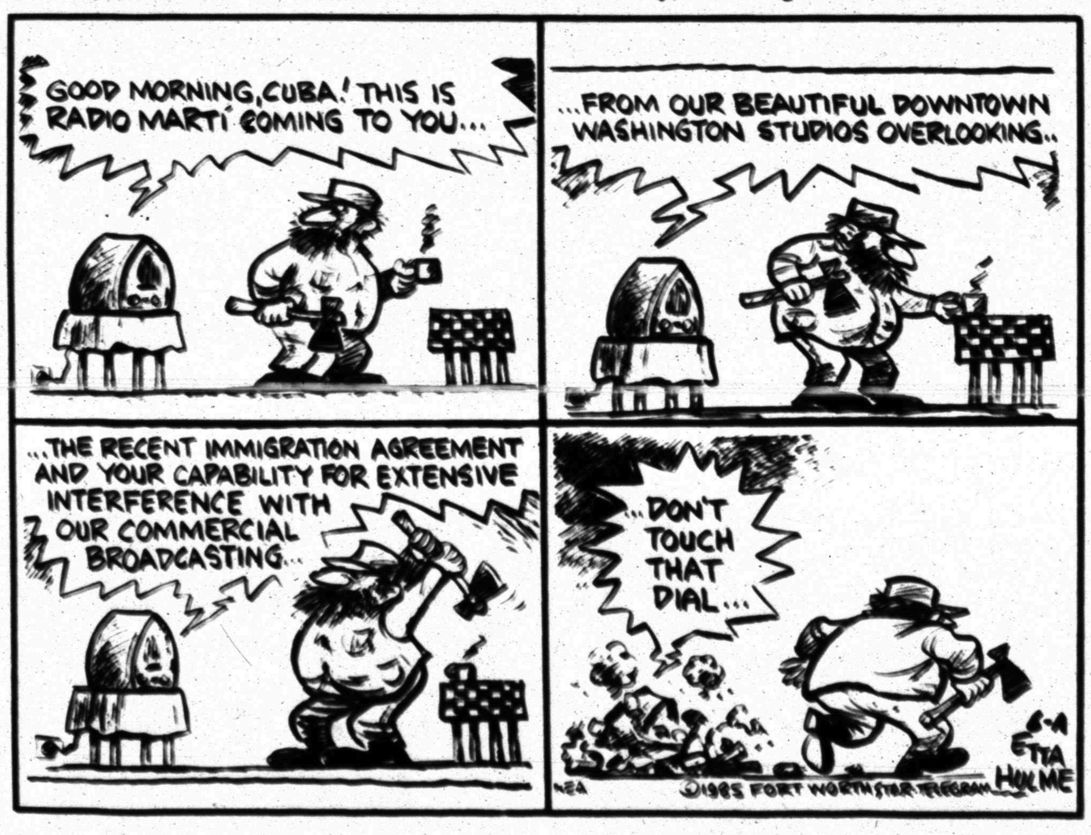

The current estimate of 3.9 percent from the Texas Employment Commission has Scurry County posting its lowest unemployment rate of 1985 — a percentage that also closely reflects county job's figures for the same period last year.

The latest figure reported Friday indicated a full percentage point drop from the previous month, when unemployment estimates rose to 4.9 percent.

Snyder High School junior Alex Brice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Brice, has been chosen to attend the 45th observance of Boys State in Austin, it was reported Friday.

He was selected by the membership of the Snyder American Legion Post 181.

Bush pilot spends lifetime hunting wolves

McGRATH, Alaska (AP) — The lone wolf must have chased the moose up and down the frozen river for days, never daring to close in for fear of being trampled.

Lucky Egrass, studying the animals' tracks from the cockpit of his skiplane, could only guess at that part of the story. But the end was marked clearly by a bloodstain on the snow.

The exhausted moose had fallen in open water and drowned, Egrass says. Half its body stuck up through the ice, and the wolf was gnawing off shreds of flesh.

At the sound of the airplane, the wolf bolted. Egrass says he tracked the wolf for miles, finally landing beside it on a frozen swamp. He leaped out of the plane, grabbed a rifle and killed the fleeing animal with a single shot.

Lucky Egrass hunts wolves, and he does it very well. This past winter, he shot 18.

What he does is legal. In every other state, wolves are rare or non-existent. The remaining few are protected by law and cherished as symbols of wilderness that used to be. But in Alaska, there is yet enough wilderness to hide 6,000 to 10,000 of the predators.

Government officials here allow, even encourage, the killing of wolves. Sometimes they participate in the activity themselves, shooting the animals from airplanes and helicopters. Since 1975, Alaska has spent nearly $1 million on "aerial wolf control" and has killed about 1,300 animals.

This pleases many rural Alaskans who see wolves as vermin, killers of moose and caribou that might otherwise live to be hunted by humans. But the killing enrages others. They say Alaska's wolves must be protected to keep them from meeting the same fate as wolves elsewhere.

The controversy, one of Alaska's hottest, has made Egrass wary.

"You anti-wolf hunting?" he asks bluntly when approached for an interview.

"I don't really like to talk about wolf hunting in town. You don't know who's sitting around, who's listening, who's checking on what."

Things have changed since the 1950s, when a dead wolf was worth a $50 bounty. Wolves were poisoned, shot, trapped, snared, and even strafed by planes with guns mounted on the wing struts. Egrass remembers watching local men return from wolf-hunting flights. One winter they killed nearly 350 wolves.

Egrass was a child then. Now, at 27, he sometimes rues not being born two decades earlier. "Back in the old days, in the '60s, the wolf hunter was the hero," he says. "Now the wolf hunter is a bad guy."

Poisoning was banned first, because of danger to other animals. Then, in 1968, the bounties were stopped. In the 1970s, aerial hunting by private pilots was banned.

That leaves conventional hunting, trapping, and the method Egrass uses: "land-and-shoot trapping." Hunters in Alaska may not shoot animals on the same day they fly over an area. But licensed trappers may track animals from the air and start shooting as soon as they land and stop the airplane.

Opponents of this method say it is slaughter, violating all tenets of sportsmanship. But Egrass says it is a difficult, dangerous way to kill wolves.

Land-and-shoot trapping demands two abilities especially useful on the modern frontier: straight shooting and skillful flying. Lucky Egrass is adept at both.

He grew up in this Kuskokwim River town, population 500 and the largest settlement for 150 miles around. There are no roads out of town — just miles and miles of spruce forest, winding rivers, muskegs and mountains.

At 13, Egrass hunted alone for moose. At 15, he bought a used airplane with money made from trapping and odd jobs. At 16, he flew his first solo flight. At 17, he shot his first wolf.

Today he works as a public safety officer, one of McGrath's two policemen.

In his spare time, he flies his Piper PA-11, a single-engine mosquito of a plane good for quick landings and takeoffs. His hunting range covers 18,000 square miles, an area larger than Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island combined.

He shares this rugged territory with 11 wolf packs, each containing 7 to 17 members. Egrass knows where the packs are and where they are likely to go. He even has names for some — the Folger Gang, the Untouchables, the Dillinger Gang.

Winter is wolf-hunting season, when snow and ice turn swamps into landing strips, and tracks in snow betray the wolves' passing.

Egrass follows the tracks until they connect to wolves, then trails the animals from about 1,000 feet up. He waits for them to enter an opening in the forest, then quickly points his plane downward, trying to land before the wolves regain the safety of the woods.

"There are so many things to watch for. You don't want to fly into anything. You've got to watch how fast the animals are moving. You've got to have your landing spot picked out. And you've got to land your airplane right on that spot when they break."

In good conditions, the plane skids to a stop within 250 feet. From the back seat he grabs a .25-caliber bolt-action rifle with a telescopic sight. There is also a smaller .22-caliber rifle to finish off wolves that aren't killed instantly. He rarely uses the smaller gun.

Within seconds, Lucky Egrass can kill as many as three wolves as they streak for cover at speeds approaching 30 mph.

This year's take of 18 wolves was a good one. The snow was deep and the wolves were slow. Even so, the economics hardly justified the effort, he says.

Private investigator finds missing people

GUILDERLAND, N.Y. (AP) — In the spirit of Sherlock Holmes, the primary weapon of private investigator Marilyn Greene is a scientific mind. In finding more than 200 missing persons nationwide and chalking up an 80 percent location rate, Ms. Greene has proven her weapon to be a formidable one.

Her basement is her office, and there is nothing about Ms. Greene's yellow, raised-ranch home standing in a housing development in this Albany suburb to suggest that within is a woman who has cracked cases that for years seemed unsolvable.

Earlier this year, it took Ms. Greene five minutes to locate a boy whose mother had illegally kept his whereabouts secret from the father for seven years.

In a 1984 case, two New York state children had been missing for 12 years. Without any sign of boasting, Ms. Greene states in a strictly informative tone, "I found them in a day."

Ms. Greene — 35, auburnhaired, Irish-looking and inconspicuous — attributes her success to investigative thoroughness, persistence, a zeal for her job, and what she jokingly calls "a slight birth defect:"

"I see things if they're out of place. If it doesn't belong there, my eyes will be drawn to it. But I can't find my car keys if they're on the kitchen table."

Ms. Greene handles about 20 clients a year, charging from $1,000 to $5,000 a case, depending, among other considerations, on how long she expects the investigation to take, anticipated travel expenses and the duration of the disappearance.

Her detective practice is a highly specialized one: searching for children who are snatched in parental custody cases, runaways, murder victims, children who are lured right off the street or kidnapped in other ways, and people who disappear accidentally.

Ms. Greene has found that she is especially adept at recovering missing children, and for the past three years she has volunteered large chunks of her time and resources to help parents who contact Child Find, the New Paltz, N.Y.-based national clearinghouse for missing children.

Last year she spent three months and $7,500 of her own money before she located a 6-year-old boy in Texas. The boy's baby sitter had refused to give him up, and moved away. The fact that the baby sitter had a common name made locating the boy especially difficult.

"I was getting up in the middle of the night, reviewing my notes, making phone calls. An awful lot of hours went into this case," said the investigator.

Extensive interviews revealed that the baby sitter had once been arrested for driving while intoxicated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) To advance your self-interests today, you may have to be a trifle bolder than usual. Don't let timid thoughts restrict your movements.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Regarding minor domestic concerns today, you might be unreliable. However, this will not be true if a serious issue is at stake.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Important decisions that could affect your career should not be left up to others today. Let everyone involved know that the final judgment rests with you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you carefully analyze your expenditures today, you should be able to find ways to get greater mileage from the dollars you spend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) People you associate with today may be a trifle intimidated by you, so be careful how you conduct yourself. Don't come on too strong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Favors you request from others are apt to be granted today, but they could have strings attached. You may be better off doing without.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to use your head today instead of your checkbook, especially if you are involved in a new venture that requires seed money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The boss won't pay off for conversation today but he will for performance. If you hope to be rewarded, keep your muscles in motion and your mouth shut.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful about offering advice today where it is not explicitly requested, even if you think your wise words could solve another's problem.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A curious associate may try to nose into a private matter today pertaining to you and another. Guard your replies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be stingy in your dealings with friends today but, by the same token, don't let yourself get maneuvered into a position where you pay an unfair share.

CATARACTS - VITAMIN E

"It's possible that vitamin E could stop the growth of and possibly reverse the damage caused by cataracts. We've found this true in test animals," says Kailash C. Bhuyan, MD of NYC, Mt. Sinai. That vitamin E prevents formation of cataracts in test animals is also noted by John Trevithick, PhD of U. of Western Ontario. Consult your doctor or pharmacist about Vitamin E supplements.

LAFF-A-DAY

"I must be getting old — the prunes look less wrinkled every day!"

DENNIS THE MENACE

"IF MY BIKE DIDN'T HAVE A FLAT TIRE, I'D LEAVE HOME."

Man spends life studying all about flags

WINCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — Looking back it seems inevitable, like death, diapers and mail-order catalogs in September.

Whitney Smith would grow up to be a vexillologist.

Age 5. A budding geography nut is looking at an atlas, one of those Mercator map distortions that make Greenland look like a glacier atop a world of ice cubes. Every nation is identified by a flag. Except humongous Greenland. Curious, the 5-year-old writes the Greenland Chamber of Commerce: how come no flag? Eventually he gets a letter from the governor of Greenland himself. The island is part of Denmark.

Age 8-10. Every Patriot's Day, the anniversary of the first bloodletting of the American Revolution at Lexington, Smith's hometown, and nearby Concord, the boy goes down to the village green to watch the highway department unfurl the flags of the then 48 states. He plays a game with himself. How soon can he identify the flags as they're pulled out of the bag? "No, that's Missouri," he advises the men. "Get lost, kid," they reply.

Age young teens. Smith learns of an American who is traveling in remote Bhutan in the Himalayas. He writes him asking about Bhutan's flag. The adventurer, in time, replies. He says the boy's letter was carried through the mountains for four days by a barefoot messenger. The flag is a dragon on a red and saffron field.

"Some kids collect baseball cards, some stamps ..." an adult Smith muses years later.

By now Smith is hopelessly wrapped-up in flags, their history, their design, their symbolism. Such passion, such scholarship must have a name. They don't. All of 17, he coins one. He picks the vexillium, the ancient banner of the Roman legions as a root. He lets the world know. Whitney Smith is a vexillologist, a student of vexillology: flags.

An elder Briton writes Smith. Why not call it something simpler, like "flaggery"? Smith reponds: what would you call someone who studies it, flaggerist?

"Once I coined the word, everybody said: 'Why, of course.'"

Smith had discovered a truth. Give something newly born a name — Debby, Upper Volta, vexillology — and it takes on a significance of its own. People begin to pay attention.

Still age 17. Smith learns Guyana, beginning a tumultuous path to independence, wants its own flag. He submits a design. His name gets lost. Years later he sees the Guyanese flag. It's his! He writes claiming parenthood. "We've been looking all over for you," Guayana replies and sends a check for $300.

Age 45. Whitney Smith, a Ph.D. from Harvard and Boston University, is today the self-proclaimed — and uncontested — leading expert in the world on flags. He gave up teaching political science at BU 16 years ago to run the Flag Research Center here. He has put out the bimonthly magazine The Flag Bulletin since 1961. Nineteen books about flags he has ordered. Some flags have been run up the flagpole. Not all the world has saluted.

"If you say you're a writer, people know what you do. But what do you say to your mother when she asks how a vexillologist makes a living?"

For an answer, a closet vexillologist who owns some 100 flags himself, visits the Flag Research Center. It has no flagpole. Only a weathered nameplate by the front door of a comfortable shingled house in this leafy Boston suburb.

The curator and staff of the Center and resident of the house, all in the person of Dr. Whitney Smith, ushers the pilgrim inside. Vexillology in the form of immaculate file cabinets, flag kitsch in the form of Old Glory and the Union Jack imprinted on telephones, beer cans and ashtrays as well as an assortment of folded gonfalons, banners, vexilloids, guidons, streamers, pennants and other various ensigns take up one-and-a-quarter rooms downstairs and two on the second floor. There are many books, ten times more than any other flag library in the world, says the curator.

Leafing through his stunning volume "Flags" — 125,000 copies sold at $75 per — Smith almost summarizes World War II in two pictures. One is Joe Rosenthal's famous AP photo of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima, the other Adolf Hitler being heiled beneath a panoply of swastikaed banners.

"My education as a political scientist (Smith's Ph.D. thesis was on symbols in politics) gave me some idea how things work regarding nationalism.

Ship's visit stirs up old memories

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Her decking is new and her navigation equipment is radically different now, but the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Eagle still holds a familiar fascination for the Danish seaman who brought her to the United States after World War II.

"There's a house up on top of the poop that wasn't there in my time, and of course many of the instruments in the chart house we didn't have, but the ship hasn't changed much," Capt. Knud Langevad said as he stood on board the squarerigger during his first visit to New London in 39 years.

Langevad, 77, of Copenhagen, came to this country in 1939 as first officer of the Danmark, a Danish navy sailing vessel assigned to attend the New York World's Fair.

The Danmark then sailed for Washington, D.C., and was homeward bound by way of Jacksonville, Fla., where a reporter told Langevad that Denmark had fallen to Hitler's forces.

After a 20-month layover in Jacksonville, the Danmark was brought to New London in January 1942, and her permanent crew of Danish officers spent nearly four years testing Coast Guard cadets for their seamanship and navigation abilities.

"The best half got commissioned and the rest were tested for 14 days" under sail aboard the Danmark, Langevad said. He said 300 cadets were taken on board each month, and of the 5,000 cadets tested over the years, about 2,000 failed to make the grade.

The war ended in Europe and finally the Danmark sailed for home in September 1945, but before his departure Langevad visited Adm. James Pine, commandant of the Coast Guard Academy, who lamented the fact that the United States would no longer be able to train cadets under sail.

"The day before the Danmark left the academy, I went up on the hill and showed him pictures" of five German sister ships taken as prizes of war.

Ultimately, Pine selected the Horst Wessel, and Langevad was dispatched to Bremerhaven, Germany, where he and an American Coast Guard officer, Cmdr. Gordon McGowan, readied the ship to sail to the United States, renamed as the Eagle.

Pine inspected the ship when it reached Bermuda, but en route to New London the Eagle encountered a hurricane and "we lost quite a few sails."

"Commander McGowan didn't want to lose a man, so he said, 'No, we're going to keep the sails up.' Then 10 minutes later there were no topsails left," Langevad said.

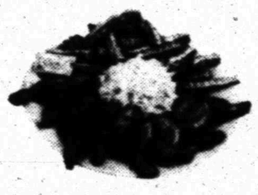

Langevad described the figurehead of the Eagle as "... a big German eagle with big wings. In fact, it looks better as it is now. It had that big swastika in her feet. That isn't there anymore."
