HAUPTMANN CLEMENCY PLEA IS DENIED

Senate Leaders Seek Acceptable Bonus Bill

Through the

Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

I am glad that a project has been worked out whereby the Marine Corps Wonder Car, containing what are advertised as 1001 interesting and educational exhibits collected from all over the world, will be brought to Cisco for one day. The car went back to Dallas last week for a full week's stay after a previous visit. The person of today is more fortunate than those of other years who gained their knowledge of foreign lands from books and still pictures. Besides being able in this age to travel more swiftly, conveniently and economically and see life in other lands at first hand, we have highly developed, realistic motion pictures to show the distant wonders, and radios to bring strange voices to our ears. But we still like the feel and actual sight of things, and a personal experience with a tomahawk handled by a prehistoric Indian is of more educational value, in one sense, than a volume written by a historian. At least it complements the volume effectively.

Thus the sight of a human head shrunken by some strange and benighted art in the jungles of the Amazon to the size of an orange, its features perfectly maintained, should give a more vivid understanding of the ideals of the Jivarro Indians than what is written. The first electric light that the genius of Edison evolved should be a revelation in the slow evolution of the perfect from the crude. How man's ideas fumble toward expression by the trial and error route!

The approach of this "Wonder Car" recalls how the appearance of a world travel lecturer in high school stirred the romantic imaginations of we students. He had bolo knives and all sorts of other strange snicker-snees, bamboo tubes from which certain savages shot poisoned darts, gay and geometic patterns of weavings from the South Sea islands, and—I remember especially for some occult reason—a cord-like looped affair with which an Arab kept his headcloth on. He knew, or professed to know, the queer names by which each was called.

A child rarely forgets such experiences, and if they do not give him knowledge, they at least whet his appetite for knowledge by arousing his inquisitive instinct.

Rumor Declares Makale Retaken By Ethiopians

(By Associated Press)

Addis Ababa rumors said today that the Ethiopians had recaptured Makale, an important town in Northern Ethiopia.

The Italians announced that the Ethiopians had suffered heavy losses and fled into the mountains when trapped by the Italian forces south of Makale. They also claimed a victory at the confluence of the Gabat and Gheva rivers.

Italy announced that over 500 native soldiers have been killed in Ethiopia in the fighting between October 3 and December 31.

SECRECY IS KEPT ABOUT CONFERENCE

Measure That Roosevelt Will Sign Goal of Negotiations

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11. (AP)—Senate leaders negotiated today in the strictest secrecy in an effort to develop a substitute for the bonus bill, which passed the house Friday. The objective of the negotiations was to prepare a measure that the president might sign.

The senate finance committee meets Monday to consider the house bill.

Even as the measure sped unamended through the house on a 356 to 59 vote—more than enough to override a veto—efforts to change its form were in the making at the other end of the capital.

Democratic senate leaders, seeking some form that might find assured presidential approval, were reported to be negotiating for veteran support for bonus payment in bonds redeemable in cash on demand. Chairman Harrison, Mississippi, called a meeting of the Senate finance committee Monday to consider the bonus. The major veterans' organizations are backing the house bill.

The Vinson-Patman-McCormack measure passed yesterday provides no definite method of payment. It would declare veterans' adjusted service certificates payable immediately, but would offer 3 per cent interest until 1945 to former soldiers who refrained from cashing them.

JAPANESE TO TRY FURTHER CONCILIATION

Decision Made Not to Quit Naval Parley for Moment

LONDON, Jan. 11.—High officials of the naval office and foreign office at Tokyo decided today to instruct the Japanese delegation to attempt further conciliation before walking out of the naval conference.

The decision followed the receipt of a message from the chief of the delegates, Admiral Magano, who said the parley apparently could not succeed.

Authoritative sources said that the next meeting of the conference would be Tuesday, instead of Monday, in order to give more time for contact. It is believed the conference will collapse unless compromises are found.

KINCADE WELL IS DEEPENED

The Lone Star Gas company is deepening its Kincade No. 3, northeast of Cisco, in exploring further possibilities of the Lake sand. The well, a gas producer with about 3,000,000 cubic feet per day output, was drilling at 3,449 Saturday morning, after encountering a small increase in gas and a show of oil.

It was originally completed at 3,438 feet.

Robnett Word to Be Buried Here This Afternoon

Death of Robnett Word, 49, prominent farmer of the Word community, occurred from pneumonia at his home three and a half miles south of Cisco on Highway 23 shortly after noon Saturday. He had been ill for several days.

Funeral will be held at the First Presbyterian church at 3 this afternoon with burial in the family plot at Oakwood. Dr. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the church, will have charge of the services. Green Funeral home will direct arrangements for burial.

Mr. Word is survived by a brother, Kent, and a sister, Miss Willie Word. He was born August 27, 1886, in the community where he made his home until his death and was known as one of the most influential farmers in this part of the county.

The Woodmen of the World lodge, of which he was a member, will furnish a guard of honor for the services.

Norris Would Change System for Ruling

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11 (AP)—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, said today that the public does not realize the scope of the supreme court's decision, and proposed to take away from the lower courts authority to decide the constitutionality of legislation and vest this authority in a single court, to be created. Appeals could be taken direct to the supreme court, which could hold the law unconstitutional only by unanimous vote.

Seek One of Negroes Who Killed Landlord

BETHANY, La., Jan. 11. (AP)—Posses today scoured the river bottoms of Texas and Louisiana state line hunting one of a group of negroes who beat and shot to death Gordon Walton Harris, aged 37, son-in-law of a prominent oil operator, when Harris sought to evict them for non-payment of obligations from his farm, eight miles south of here, yesterday.

The escaped tenant negro is thought to have been wounded by Harris. Seven others are held in jail at Carthage, Texas.

Starting December 20, Wood county, West Va., children receive 16 days of Christmas vacation.

Randolph Takes First Conference Game with Ranger

Randolph College cagers, coached by H. R. Garrett, won their first conference basketball game against Ranger Junior college 43-16 before a large crowd that packed the Randolph auditorium here Friday night.

The Randy Badgers showed marked improvement in their playing form over the past games, as they played one of the season's best passing and intercepting games, according to the officials.

George Roberts, Randolph forward, was high point man, making eleven points. Red Blaylock, forward, and Horace Sneed, center, each made ten points. Clemo Ray and Norvel Barnhill guards, made 8 and 4 points respectfully.

There will be no game next week because of the examinations the coach said yesterday.

Colonial Culture Precedes Unrest In French View

PARIS, Jan. 11. (AP) — French opinion is divided as to how far the teaching of French should be extended among the 60,000,000 natives in France's widely-scattered colonial empire.

Many Frenchmen, especially in the literary field, think French culture should be extended to all persons under the French flag—no matter what shade their skins may be and no matter how far in the jungle they may live.

Such an undertaking, these protagonists of French institutions hold, could not fail to benefit both France and its colonial subjects and would weld the colonies to the parent country.

Many colonial officials, however, say that introduction of French among the general population in the less advanced colonies should be carried on cautionsly.

These officials attribute the unrest in British India in recent years partly to the widespread teaching of English in India and fear that a too rapid transition of the natives of such colonies as French Equatorial Africa, Senegal and Madagascar from thier old manner of living would bring difficult problems.

DECISION IS ANNOUNCED BY COURT CLERK

Ruling Fellows All-Day Session of Pardons Court

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 11. (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann lost his plea for clemency in the Lindbergh baby murder today. The New Jersey court of pardons, in session throughout the day, announced its decision through Clerk Albert Hermann:

"The application of Bruno Richard Hauptmann from conviction of the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., at Hopewell March 1, 1932, for clemency has been denied in accordance with the rules of this court. Members and all persons concerned with the petition are bound to divulge nothing that occured."

The announcement was made at 5:12 p. m. after deliberation of little more than an hour. A crowd of over 200 jammed the corridors of the state house and the governor's antechamber.

Denial of the clemency plea leaves as Hauptmann's last hope of escaping the electric chair Friday night a reprieve from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman who may under the law grant reprieves not to exceed a total of 90 days. The governor has questioned his own right to grant a reprieve, inasmuch as a 90-day period after the conviction has long since expired. The governor's recent showing of intense interest in possible new evidence gave strength to the belief that Hauptmann might get a stay.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, questioned whether he would comply with the request Hoffman had said he would make to have Dr. John F. Condon, ransom intermediary, detained for questioning, said, "I have been asked nothing about Dr. Condon and nothing will be done about Dr. Condon."

Condon sailed from New York last night on a South American cruise.

The only question before the court of pardons was whether to grant a commutation to life imprisonment.

These legal moves still remained possible:

A petition in federal court for a writ of habeas corpus based on the plea that Hauptmann's constitutional rights had been violated.

Application to Justice Tomas W. Trenchard, presiding judge at the Flemington trial, for a new trial on the basis of new evidence.

A second application to the United States supreme court for a review of the proceedings.

News of the decision reached the retreat of Col. Lindbergh and his family at Cardiff, Wales, tonight bringing from Lindbergh's brother-in-law, John Lewellyn Morgan, the statement, "There is no comment to make."

Laughing Around the World

With IRVIN S. COBB

What it Meant in English

By IRVIN S. COBB

A CERTAIN newspaper man in New York is fond of gathering up stories of metropolitan life. Once upon a time a Russian who furnishes him with tips on doings among his own people, brought word of a big wedding celebration that was going to take place in one of the Russian colonies over near the East River. The journalist expressed a desire to attend the festivities.

"Dass is easy," said his friend—"so you get a hajjek!"

"A hajjek, eh?" said the puzzled journalist. "But you see I don't even know the couple. Why should they send me an invitation?"

"No, no!" said the Russian, "no an invitation—a hajjek! So you get a hajjek, you go by the vedding; you dance mit the bride; you haf a fine time!"

"Say," demanded the puzzled American, "how in thunder do I get one of these hajjeks?"

"My friend," said the Russian, "listen! You go by the hall where is the vedding. You go in. You gif your hat to the boy und for fifty cents you buy a hajjek — und there you are!"

So the newspaperman spent half a dollar on a hat check and danced with the bride.

the Liberty Bell are there.

"We'll ring anew the Liberty Bell," shouted Mrs. E. G. Miller, Pennsylvania national committeewoman. "This time not only for political freedom but economic freedom."

High party officials said they expected President Roosevelt would go to Philadelphia to accept renomination much as he did when he flew to Chicago to address the 1932 convention.

Long before the "poker game" the national committee adopted a resolution endorsing President Roosevelt and the new deal. Only one loud, booming "no" marked the vote.

Governor Talmadge of Georgia, national committeeman from his state and an arch-foe of the Roosevelt administration, carried his antagonism into the meeting of refusing to approve the resolution reaffirming the party's "unanimous and unfaltering loyalty" to Mr. Roosevelt. His "no" killed the "unanimous."

Later Talmadge declined to attend a buffet luncheon served in the White House by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Georgia governor is sponsoring a convention in Macon, Ga., late this month of "constitutional" democrats opposed to the new deal policies.

County Agent to Close Office Part Time Each Week

EASTLAND, Jan. 10.—Notices advising 1400 Eastland county producers that the county agents office will be closed week-days with exception of Tuesday and Thursday afternoons were being prepared for mailing this week.

"Owing to the paralyzed condition of the AAA, it will be necessary to close this office during the week with the exception of Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, at which time the office will be open from one to five," stated the circular letters.

"If you have a check, you can call on those afternoons and receive same—otherwise it will not be necessary for you to visit the office unless notified.

"This order is issued and will be absolutely adhered to until further notified in order for the assistant and county agent to carry out their extension duties in the field. Under these duties demonstrations in the farm problem will be conducted and worked on."

The notices were sent by C. Metz Heald, county agent, and A. E. Arthur, assistant in cotton adjustment.

About 100 parity checks approximating $1500 will be given to producers for whom they have been issued when they call at the office on dates specified in the letter.

Invalidation of the AAA by the supreme court resulted in the dismissal Tuesday of three employes who worked on the five programs under the AAA. They were W. W. Kelly, who was in charge of the corn-hog program; Miss Connie Groves, in charge of the subsidiary division, general stenographer.

The AAA does not affect the work of the home demonstration department conducted by Miss Ruth Ramey.

Carson and Hutchinson, 12c increase from 81c for below 35 gravity by 2c increase per degree of gravity to 93c for 40 and above. NEVER MIND THE LADY NEVER MIND THE LADY NEVER MIND THE LADY Allaire West just has confessed the truth to the old minister who recently buried Terry Willett's father. The truth is that she loves Terry, and is kept from acknowledging the fact by her pride. She is on her way back to Washington; meanwhile her father and Terry, in New York, are negotiating with a blackmailer named LaMarr, who tells Ray West that Allaire killed a man in the tropics. Terry, who knows that LaMarr is lying, is with Ray.

Chapter 32

TENSE SCENE

Allaire drove back to Washington at a very reasonable rate of speed for her. Once or twice she seemed to twist her shoulders impatiently, and once she blew her horn for no reason at all—just banged the horn button with her gloved fist.

Another time she said "Damn!" in accents loud and clear, and frowned mightily. All of which might have pointed to an intense mental struggle.

But when she rolled into Washington in the early evening she knew perfectly well that she was going to see Terry Willett again.

Chasing after a man! She banged the horn button again and turned in at the entrance drive of her mother's home.

As she walked past the drawing room she heard a sudden incredulous exclamation and two strange men bounded out into the hall and looked at her as though she were a walking grenade. One of them said, "My God!"

"Miss West!" croaked the other.

"Why, yes," said Allaire, "What's the matter?"

"Matter? Your father has had us looking high and low for you the last two days and here you come walking in—"

Her mother was right behind them. She pushed them aside and looked at her daughter with an expression of relief mixed with amazement.

"Where on earth have you been?" she said weakly. "Hell has been popping in New York—"

"LaMarr."

That's all that Rayburne West had said. He looked strained, Courtney Rayburne West of Meadowbrook, Cannas, Del Monte, and Westlands.

So did George Fox of Harvard and the United States Foreign Service. Terry Willett threw his cigaret in the fireplace and stood by the mantel, his hands locked behind his back.

Lamarr. He was ushered in and stood near the door, his eyes glancing swiftly from one to the other. He was groomed as if he'd just come from a Fifth avenue tea and musicale. Tall, dark-eyed powerfully built and impeccably dressed—no wonder Nell West had been surprised at her Ramon.

"Why do we meet here?" he asked Ray suspiciously.

"Does that make any difference?"

"It does, Mr. West. Ah, yes. I do not go to strange houses that seem remarkably quiet and find myself with three men. Your plans, Mr. West?" There was a sudden peremptory ring of steel in his softspoken voice.

"Mr. Fox you know," said Ray steadily. "And Mr. Willett is also acquainted with the circumstances. Don't be afraid."

LaMarr's eyes flickered.

"Afraid?" he repeated, amused. "I am not afraid for myself. During negotiations of this sort I find it wise to carry—protection. Just let me advise then, Mr. West, discretion above all else."

His hand came part way out of the inside of his coat and they saw the blue steel butt of a revolver. "A mere matter of detail," he said politely, and slid the weapon back.

He sat down comfortably, nodding to George Fox.

Willett had been inspecting him keenly. He stirred in his position at the fireplace and LaMarr's quick glance was on him in an instant.

"This gentleman is acquainted with the circumstances, you say?"

"Yes," said Terry. "I'm plenty acquainted." He seated himself on the edge of the desk and folded his arms. His face as he regarded the urbane LaMarr was not too pleasant.

"Do you enjoy this matter of trying to hurt a woman?" he asked curiously.

"I do not believe I have had the honor—"

"My name's Willet. I happen to be interested in what you're trying to jam through here. You know, LaMarr, there are three ways of dealing with blackmailers. One is to call the police." He paused. "But Mr. West doesn't want that."

"No," smiled LaMarr. "Mr. West is wise."

"And a second is to pay up and like it."

"Ah, then, Mr. West would be wise."

"And the third," said Willett unemotionally, "is to beat hell out of the blackmailer every time you see his face."

LaMarr's black eyes swept him swiftly.

"That," he murmured, "I think I have shown you would not be so wise."

Fox felt that absurd little thrill he had felt several times before when Terry Willett prepared to act. He'd swung the lamp of reason before; he tried it again.

"Get to the point, Terry," he urged. "Tell him what you know."

"Sure," said Willett. "LaMarr, right now, the first way is out. No police. And so is the second, because you haven't any story that would hurt anybody. Allaire went to those docks because I took her there. She shot a man in self-defense to protect me. But that man didn't die. He lived. So there's your mysterious murder gone up in smoke. You haven't any facts, LaMarr, and your bluff is being called.

"So," he said thoughtfully, "here goes the second way of dealing with a blackmailer, a sneaky breed like a kidnaper."

LaMarr's face was inscrutable. There was a tightening of his mouth, but that was all.

"If Mr. West chooses to believe you, that is his affair," he said smoothly. "I know I don't."

"You don't have to believe me. You knew Hildez wasnt killed, but you took a chance on nobody else knowing it, and nobody is going to pay you a nickel for that fake yarn of yours.

"Now get out of here, LaMarr, while your skin is still safe. And if there's any further trouble from you I'll beat you into something crawly and shapeless and half blind. Maybe I'll do it now. I don't like you, LaMarr."

"A strong arm man, perhaps?" LaMarr said lazily, but his eyes on Willett were deadly and alert.

"No," said Terry, "just somebody who always tries to finish what he starts. I started the job of covering that girl and I'm going to finish it. You're not dealing with these two gentlemen here. You're dealing with me—and I've been called a roughneck. Well, all right, that's what I am. A roughneck."

LaMarr then pulled his master stroke. He turned cooly to Ray West.

"You are liberty to believe this man, of course," he said. "But I do not regard his word as any proof. I mentioned thirty thousand dollars before, I believe. Mr. West, the sum is now—forty thousand, or the story is released. You may take your own chances."

Ray West was helpless in situations of this kind. He looked at Fox. The attache was indecisive also. That Terry knew what had happened on the docks he was sure, but how could he know anything of Hildez' final fate?

That death angle gave the story spice, and Ray West seemed to be uncertain also as to how far to string along with Terry Willett. He might be bluffing, himself. LaMarr pressed his advantage.

"In five minutes," he said calmly, "I will take my leave with your answer. Consider quickly then."

His effrontery touched off Willett.

"Oh, hell,' he said suddenly, "why argue with the snake?"

He was around the corner of the desk, moving fast, coming for LaMarr.

"Terry!" shouted Fox. "He's armed."

LaMarr leaped to his feet like a cat. His revolver appeared in his hand, but he didnt get a chance to level it. He struck with it instead, clubbing Willett across the forehead and ripping a wide gash.

But that didn't stop Terry Willett. He was on top of LaMarr. The fighter was in action, the merciless, hardfisted fighter of the engineering camps and free-for-alls on docks at midnight.

A furious, slashing man who ripped into LaMarr with the venom of a striking panther. A human being going after another human being.

Ray West watched, his face white. And Fox, intercollegiate boxer that he was, champion of three-round boxing matches in college gymnasiums with referees and hand-shakes and points scored on little white cards, looked upon a fight that carried punishment and fury and savage strength.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The Lord is good unto them that wait on him. Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.—Lam. 3:25; Ps. 63:7.

Oh, God, thou art our shield
From every seeming wrong;
We look to thee and are healed.
Our grief is turned to song.
We know thy love and power,
We feel thy presence near;
Thy grace in every hour,
Thy truth, removing fear.
—HEDWIG BROWDE.

"For close to two thousand years we have been vowing allegiance to Christ, and trying, at the same time, to escape from the practical consequences of his teaching. We have been shutting him up in churches and behaving, in daily life and politics, and international relations, as if he did not exist. The time has come when we must let him out of the churches, and take him into our homes, our business houses, and into every walk of life."

The Soundest Unit

STILL the soundest unit in the commercial structure of the country today is the neighborhood store. Regardless of the financial power and magnitude of the large retail establishments which have been built upon service and prices, the fact exists that the man-to-man relationship of the customer and the merchant in the small town store is the most potent relationship in the maintenance of good character and credit that exists in business. A man may bring himself to cheat the distant merchant, especially if that merchant is impersonally represented in great sales rooms, polished fixtures, conventional clerks and decorously lettered doors. In fact, it may become a game, to which no opprobrium attaches, to match one's wits against the efficiency of the polished organization that is the big store. But the average man with any sense of decency and self-respect, cultivated by association with neighbors whose respect he instinctively desires and whose censure he dreads, cannot bring himself to look his neighborhood merchant in the eye and admit: "I cheated you." To him, the home merchant is a man and a friend. He thinks with him, appreciates his problems, respects his ideals. He goes to church with him, rejoices with him when a baby is born and weeps with him when his loved ones are buried. In the cultivation of their interests in common there is developed a brotherhood which nortures a fundamental mortality.

BUT he may even boast of having "out-witted" or plainly cheated the distant, big town merchant. The security of the latter depends upon laws and highly developed, cold-blooded systems of credit information and control. The very fact and presence of such organizations arouses an instinctive antagonism that impairs the sense of responsibility in men and women who normally would be sound and appreciative of character values which are essential to secure enterprise and good citizenship. The big establishment, trusting its security and success to the quality of the service it renders and the appeal of magnitude, depends in the ultimate upon the goodwill and the social morality that is cultivated in home-town relationships.

PEOPLE are, in a large sense not so much unappreciative as negligent of services rendered and responsibilities. But the secure fact is that they do, instinctively, realize these services and in the final analysis will admit them. Human nature is not so cold-blooded as the selfish or hard-bitten would have us believe. Individuals, unable to meet a bill, may take their trade elsewhere, ignoring the payments due. But they will not forget the obligation they have incurred and the fact that they must face the merchant to whom that bill is due is a constant reminder of remissness. In the end there will be a reckoning, at least of conscience, and after the bitterness a closer bond will be cemented in this home town relationship.

THE day of the home town merchant will never go. He is needed too badly. He is the merchant to whom the home-towner can go in need and receive a sympathetic hearing. He is a sort of "my brother's keeper," believe it or not, whose services cannot readily be dispensed with. He may take more profit on certain articles than does his big business prototype of the plate glass and the mahogany, but the type of service that he renders to his community cannot be compensated in coin. It must be paid for in community appreciation and the recognition of a service.

Who Started It, Anyway?

IT looks as if the bonus was at last on the road to immediate payment. A house majority that definitely removed any probability of a veto support in that body, Friday swept the issue into the lap of the senate whose membership now is faced with the dilemma of taking care of itself in the opinion of ex-service men whose influence at the polls cannot be denied, and taking care of their obligations to the democratic administration. The course to be followed by the senate leadership in this case is plainly indicated in newspaper accounts. It could easily have been guessed. The course is toward compromise. Out of the situation will come a measure, you may be sure, which will reconcile previous objections of the administration with the demands of the ex-service men, whose persistence in seeking immediate payment has chopped away a mountain. The compromise will be worked out, no doubt, in a conference committee-room.

THE soundness of the proposal to pay the bonus now is open to serious attack. But can one blame the veteran for wanting the payment? Of course not. Who is it, so unaffected by desire for money, that would magnanimously turn aside a preferred payment in behalf of the public welfare? He would be so unnatural a person that one would instantly suspect his motive or his human sense.

WHO is responsible for the demand for immediate payment? We think we can rightfully say that members of congress themselves and politicians are responsible. It is they, seeking office and an issue to gain support for that office, who framed and promoted the proposal. The critics should think of this before he points an accusing finger at the ex-service men, who are doing nothing more than the natural in seeking the promised payment.

Do You Believe in Dreams? Asks Veteran Druggist Who Has Another to Come True

Do you believe in dreams? Some years before I came to Cisco, I was in the Red Front Drug Store and met Mr. O. T. Maxwell. I went home and dreamed that I was working in the Red Front and afterwards owned it. I again dreamed in the last month that I again had charge of the Old Red Front. I don't know what it means. I guess it is like so many things in life we don't understand. You know Einstein spent most of his life in his attic and he came down with the forth dimension. Some other bird, not to be out done, came out with the fourth movement of the earth. So I come out with the fourth activity. When I came to Cisco it was my first year to vote. I had the job of prescription clerk, front man, soda boy and janitor. I don't suppose many of you know much about the oil lamp age. I had about six or seven to clean every morning, and this was done for the big sum of $35. month. Then to find something to do, I opened and closed. But I did have a few hours to sleep. Those were happy days. We did not get much, and needed less.

In 1900, Mr. R. A. St. John bought in with Mr. Maxwell, changed it to R. A. St. John in 1903 and I entered as part owner in 1904. Dr. W. P. Lee bought Mr. St. John's interest in 1908, and I became sole owner in 1916. In 1919 C. W. Lowery bought half interest, after being discharged from the army. We sold to Butler and Maxwell in 1922. I worked for them till about 1928. In the meantime Butler died, and it was the Mississippi bubble for me. Down went the curtain. You see where a fellow can write the Lord's prayer on a rice seed. For me, in the last few years, he could use a much smaller seed.

Any way, I am back again, and will be glad to meet my old friends and make the acquaintances of new, and hope to merit your business, on kind treatment and square dealing. Come to see me. Let's renew our acquaintance. I will have my two sons with me, Wightman and Joe Lea.
W. W. MOORE.

The Golden Text is: "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16: 33).
Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: . . . be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life" (Revelation 2:10).
The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sorrow has its reward. It never leaves us where it found us. The furnace separates the gold from the dross that the precious metal may be graven with the image of God." (page 66).

RECOVERS DAUGHTER
VALENCIA, Spain, Jan. 11. (AP)—When he arrested a group of gypsies for pilfering, something oddly familiar about a 15-year-old girl in the band attracted Juan Moron, a border patrolman. Questioning brought out that she was his own daughter, stolen by the gypsies 12 years ago.

Although Texas has repealed its dry amendment, several counties find they still are dry under the unrepealed "local option" law, in effect since 1898.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

"That Swift was ever happy is not certain," is the conclusion of Edmund Gossee in his History of English Literature about the author of Gulliver's 8ravels. Gossee also doubts whether Swift's "savage torturing nature was capable of contentment." "For a long period of years," Gossee continues, "he was wretched beyond the lot of men." He could hardly believe optimism possible. He was disappointed in love, in occupation and in social circles. His delight seemed to be to see the "corruptions and villanies of men" and hold them up to ridicule. All the time he feared insanity, and at last, perhaps wih his own gloomy as a leading cause, did die violently insane. He did some good in the world but it seems to have been unintentional, as it were. It would be hard to find a more striking example of human misery.

Most of us have enough trouble without shunning happiness. How can anyone ever get into a habit of gloom? And yet our states of mind are subject to habit. Charles Lamb had some tragical experiences and was himself a victim of mental trouble; yet he laughed cheerfully out of it all. He was as chronic an optimist as Swift was pessimist. We can always find enough of wrong that needs righting; but faith, not cynicism, is the most powerful corrective.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox gave the world one of its best songs of cheer. We will find evil if we look for it, according to her philosophy, which bids us rather

Look for goodness, look for gladness;
You will find them all the while
If you bring a smiling visage
To the glass, you meet a smile.

Old Ruse Works--- Gets Paid Twice

RANGER, Jan. 11.—A man who did some repair work on an adding machine in the Ranger chamber of commerce office got double pay for his work by using an old ruse, it was reported by directors of the organization.

A man who gave his name as J. R. O'Brian repaired the office adding machine, which had been broken for some time, and received a check for $8.50 for his services.

The check was cashed and the man returned a few minutes later stating that he had lost the check and another was issued to him. Payment on the first check was ordered stopped at the bank but the second check was cashed by a Ranger merchant without question.

The man has not been apprehended.

Short Suit Squeeze

Most squeezes are worked when the declarer runs a long suit, forcing the opponents to discard in a way that sets up cards for the declarer that would not otherwise take tricks.

Usually it is the last card of the long suit that hurts. But there are hands in which one high card of a short suit will wreck the damage upon the defense that the declarer seeks. The defender must be void of the suit when the declarer plays the one high card. Witness this hand:

NORTH
S—A J 10 4
H—A 10
D—10 5 2
C—K Q 5 3

WEST	EAST
S—7	S—K Q 9 8 2
H—8 6 4	H—J 9 7 5 3
D—K 9 7 4 3	D—J
C—A 8 6 2	C—10 9

SOUTH
S—6 5 3
H—K Q 2
D—A Q 8 6
C—J 7 4

North started the auction with one club. Vulnerable East did not care to mention a spade. South took a chance on the spade situation and bid two no trump, which North raised to three.

West opened the fourth best diamond, which was ducked North, East's jack being taken by South's queen.

In sight for the declarer, Lloyd B. Thomas, in a game at Bridge House, New York, were two diamonds, three hearts, two clubs, one spade, a total of eight tricks. Whence the ninth?

One possibility was that of finding the adverse spade honors split or both West and thereby making two spade tricks. So Thomas led a spade and finessed the ten-spot, which went to East's queen.

Unable to return a diamond, East led his top club, which was covered by the jack and won with the ace West. A diamond return by West would be to the declarer's advantage evidently, and so a club was led. The declarer won with the queen North and led the ten of diamonds, which was won by West's king.

West led a heart, the least unfavorable return, and the trick was won in the South hand with the queen. The declarer finessed the jack of spades, which was won East. The hope of a second trick in spades died. East returned a spade to knock the ace out.

Thomas now saw a way to make the hand. From North he led ace of hearts and then the last diamond to his ace. West at this time held the nine of diamonds and the 8-6 of clubs. South had the eight of diamonds, the king of hearts and the seven of clubs. North had the king-five of clubs and the four of spades.

The king of hearts forced West either to drop the nine of diamonds, making South's eight high, or to shed a club, in which case the last two tricks would be taken with the two clubs North. West discarded a club.

The end situation was:

S—4
C—K 5

WEST	EAST
D—9	S—8 2
C—8 6	H—9

H—K
D—8
C—7

Thomas took one spade, three hearts, two diamonds and three clubs.

The Judge's Corner

(Editor's Note—Opinions expressed in this column are the personal ones of the "Judge" and do not necessarily reflect the editorial policy of the Cisco Daily Press. "IN TIMES OF PEACE PREPARE FOR WAR."

Due to the civilization we boast to have attained, surely the caption quoted above must have been long since out-moded. Yet nations and peoples, professing allegience to the doctrine which Jesus taught, and boasting to be be Christian nations and people, still cling to this maxim of those barbarous times when every country was seeking to despoil its neighbor of its possessions—its territories, its material wealth, including its nationals, whom they took into captivity as slaves.

The nations professing allegiance to Christ and Christianity should paraphrase this quotation so that it would read:

"In the times of peace, prepare for Christ and Christianity," that love should supplant hate; charity replace greed.

With the close of the World war some progress was made along these lines when the League of Nations was formed—and, antedating the world conflict, the supposed Christian nations made some effort toward disarmament. A few of us believed that such a devoutly wished for state of affairs might materialize. But little was done about it.

Hope in the League

Still we did not despair, for the world had the League of Nations as a bullwark to adjust its grievances. And it seemed like it would be a refuge for the weaker countries against the avarice and greed of the stronger nations until the dictator of the Italian people, drunk on power and ambition, coveted the lands of the Ethiopian people. Then, the covenants of the League became a "mere scrap of paper."

The world was convinced when the armistice was signed that there would be no more war. Not that the world believed this huge conflict had reformed the hearts and minds of the ambitious war lords, but the world labored under the wrong impression that the war of wars had taught the nations a lesson they would never forget. But they "reckoned without their host," for the same ambitions are still rampant, and the same greed is being manifested in those stronger nations that are today attempting to despoil their weaker neighbors, and today the darkest clouds of war are menacing not only the invaders and invaded, but the entire world, and practically every country is racing to beat its neighbor to the "draw," by building the greatest war machines.

"Beat 'Em to the Draw"

When I think of the cost of every nation being compelled to maintain huge armies and navies, and fighting machines, I am reminded of those days in the far west—even as it was in Texas—when the six-gun was the law of the land. Their's was the slogan:

"Be prepared for war, and be sure to beat your opponent to the draw."

I fail to remember that the fact that every man carried a big six-gun—and sometimes two—that it lessened the mortality of those sections. In fact the disarming of the killer was the first step made to make the West a safe place in which to live.

So it is with nations. As long as every nation maintain huge armies and natvies, just so long will there be wars.

There was published in the Daily Press Friday a splendid editorial from the Brownwood Bulletin that bears somewhat on the subject, in which the Bulletin comments on the suggestion of the federal authorities to require every owner of a deadly weapon to register, giving the kind and make of the fire-arm. "Already," the Bulletin says, "machine guns and other modern murderous devices are required by law to be registered, but still machine guns are plentiful."

The Bulletin reminds us also of the Texas law against the sale of pistols, which are prohibited. But as that paper truthfully says one can own a pistol if he has the price. The dealers evade the law by making the purchaser sign a lease for the weapon, rather, get a bill of sale from the dealer.

As the editorial says, I don't think it will lessen the number of pistols owned by individuals to require them to be registered. Nor would it reduce the sale of small arms to prevent their sale or lease in the state, as long as mail order houses are permitted to sell them. Possibly a solution of the problem might exist for congress to place a prohibitive tax on every dealer handling firearms made for offense and defense, and augment this tax by making it a felony if the tax is evaded in any manner.

The killer is rarely ever a criminal until after his first killing. And he would probably never have been if he had not been armed when the provocation arose that caused him to kill a man.

The law against carrying a pistol, as we have it in Texas, is practically obsolete. But should it be enforced the outlaws would take a chance, and the law-abiding citizen would still have no protection against the thief, the burglar, the kidnaper or the murderer.

Rather a knotty problem is my verdict.

NEW COOK SAND POOL ON NEWELL

ALBANY, Jan. 11.—F. Craig Morton, agent-Groover & Rose et al No. 1, W. P. Newell showing for a new Cook sand pool with a 10 million foot gasser from 1445 to 1453 feet in the southeast corner of southwest quarter of section 114, E. T. Ry. has been cemented and waiting for setting before completing. The well ran wild and Halliburton, Inc. had to put 900 pounds pressure to kill the well, though no definite guage could be run on the volume and pressure the well was spraying some oil and the roar was heard a distance of 5 miles.

Dean Bros. No. 1, Y. P. Newell, is a new location 440 feet east of the Morton No. 1 and will start drilling immediately. South offset is held by Lonnie King and E. W. Moutray of Abilene, but they have not made any move on operations thus far.

Roeser & Pendleton, Inc.-Humble Oil & Refining Co. No. 2, J. P. Morris, proved a nice extension for the east side of the Bluff Creek pool, nearly one-half mile in advance of production the well was drilled 13 feet into Bluff Creek sand at 1595 feet and the well made 250 barrels on test flowing and pumping. The new well is located 660 feet from the north and 220 feet from west lines of section 191, E. T. Ry. and the same operator's No. 3 has been staked 440 feet south of No. 2 and will start drilling immediately.

Ray & Staniforth No. 3, J. P. Vickers, proved a light well in the Bluff Creek and gave the north end of the Mims-Vickers pool in section 207, E. T. Ry of western Shackelford a small set back.

Roeser & Pendleton, Inc.-Merry Bros. & Perini, Inc. No. 1, A. J. Swenson, has spudded a new wildcat test 660 feet from the north and west line of C. C. Bruff survey 22 about three miles north of the Bluff Creek-Mims-Vickers pool, searching a north trend from the Bluff Creek area.

Humble Oil & Refining Co. No. 1, T. G. Hendrick, is drililing at 1850 feet in center of west line of E. T. Ry., section 181 and is nearing the King sand for test of the shallow series sands of the county.

Condor Petroleum Co. No. 1, W. D. Reynolds Trust, has spudded a new wildcat test in the southeast corner of southwest quarter of section 44, block 12, T. & P. lands on a large block of leases acquired during the summer, twelve miles southwest of Albany.

Grisham-Hunter Corp. No. 2, W. D. Reynolds Trust, is testing a show of oil and gas in the upper Tannehill sand at 900 feet in center of north line of northwest quarter of section 37, block 12, T. & P., moving a half mile west of their No. 1, a failure through the Cook sand.

Kittery Oil Co. No. 4, Annie Eaheart, tested 45 barrels completion from 804 foot sand in southeast corner of survey 18 block 11, T. & P., and diagonal offset Weona Oil Corp. No. 7, Turie McCasland et al, is drilling at 450 feet in section 1, Blind Asylum.

Geo. Callihan No. 1, Geo. Callihan Fee, has been staked as a location in west corner of block 5, railroad addition to Albany, the first townsite well to be drilled within two years.

Roy Sharrock No. 1, L. H. Hill estate, is redrilling a plugged producer on the Lillian D. Hill lease in southwest Albany, and recent production discovered in the Bluff Creek sand southwest of Albany has caused considerable revival of interest in wells that drilled the Tannehill sand and failed to reach the lower Bluff Creek horizon.

Roeser & Pendleton, Inc.-Merry Bros. & Perini, Inc. No. 1, J. N. Moore et al., is drilling at 550 feet on the new Ordivician test in northeast corner of survey 25, block 8, T. & P. about ten miles east of Albany, which will go to 5,000 feet in event the Ordivician fails to pay off. This well is a mile west of the old Milham Corp. pool on the Sedwick - Moore ranches now owned by Letwin & Lippit and northwest of the old Ibex pool largely owned by Phillips Petroleum Co.

Pitzer & West-Humble Oil & Refining Co. No. 2, Geo. DeLafosse, is drilling at 3200 feet in center of southeast quarter T. E. & L. survey 1559, another deep test.

A. A. Michaels No. 1, Florence J. Whitney, is drilling at 2000 feet in G. Gregg survey 4, in Stephens county, nearing the Strawn.

STEELE HILL

Steele Hill Is Candidate for County Sheriff

Steele Hill, for eight years deputy sheriff of Eastland county, Saturday authorized the Cisco Daily Press to announce his candidacy for sheriff subject to the action of the democratic primaries next summer.

Mr. Hill issued the following statement:

To the Voters of Eastland County:

I herewith announce my candidacy for the office of sheriff of Eastland county subject to the primary election to be held in July. I was born and reared in Eastland county and have lived here all my life. For the past eight years I have been deputy sheriff and feel that I am fully qualified to be your sheriff as my experience has given me every advantage to give you the best possible service which my duties will require me to do. If elected, I pledge myself to enforce the laws of the state as required by the constitution under my oath of office. I shall do everything humanly possible to see that the laws are obeyed. I shall try and see every citizen in the county during the campaign and will appreciate your giving my candidacy your careful consideration. I will be grateful for your influence in my behalf.

Respectfully yours,
STEELE HILL.

TURKS PAINT STREETS RED

ANKARA, Jan. 11. (AP)—Federal laws providing that houses of each quarter of each city in Turkey must be uniform in color include, among other provisions, that certain streets in Istanbul must be painted red to indicate they are reserved for pedestrian traffic only.

An all-time record for motor vehicle registration in California was being written as the year drew to a close, with 2,195,600 vehicles listed in the first 10 months, compared with 2,107,275 in 1931, the previous record.

German Alps Are Snow Mantled for Winter Olympics

GARMISCM - PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Jan. 11. (AP)—Since there's snow in the mountains hereabouts, there aren't many worries left as the time for the winter Olympics draws near.

Officials are glad they need not plan to "import" snow for the skiing or bobsled courses, or move the runs to higher altitudes, as they were prepared to do if pre-Christmas snows had not whitened hills and valleys.

As it is, however, they anticipate a continuation of what has come to be known in Germany as "Hitler weather"—that is, the kind of weather needed for a particular occasion, be it sunshine for an outdoor mass meeting or, as in this case, crisp wintry days with enough snow for sports.

And with that concern seemingly taken care of, and the only outstanding matters those technical details that cannot be settled until the last few days, this mountain town is ready and eager for February 6-16, the winter Olympics period.

It's hard, in fact, to find a person throughout the Werdenfelser valley—where youngsters learn to ski and skate not long after they learn to walk—whose major thoughts and interests aren't centered on the winter Olympics.

Will Boom Trade

The games will give them many opportunities to see their heroes. The more practical minded think of the increase in trade—that will mean much even to a tourist center. Furthermore, preparations have been going on so long that thinking of Olympia has become second nature.

Preparations really have been carried on since the summer of 1933, when construction of the Olympic ski jump was started. It was finished in February, 1934.

The jump is perhaps the outstanding part of the Olympic scene here. Its tower is 142 feet high and it has a long, graceful incline enabling the contestant to gain great speed before he stearts his leap.

Then the skier sails nearly up to 300 feet through the air. The present record of 278 feet, set last February, is held by Randmod Soerensen of Norway.

For the jumps that form a part of the combination cross-country and jumping events, the "Little Olympic jumy," a few yards to one side of the bigger one, will be used. It is more abrupt than the latter, and flights beyond 180 feet are difficult. The record, however, is held by the Polish Marusarcz at 198 feet.

Also a part of the skiing arena are nearby pavilions for judges, reporters and radio, and a referee's tower from which results will be announced.

Flood-Lighted Night Events

One feature is the special illumination that will flood-light night contests.

Months of preparation, also, have gone into staking out the courses for the 18-kilometer cross-country ski race and the military patrol race. Officials declare themselves well satisfied with the results.

For the first time, on February 7, an Olympic contest will be held in the slalom—ski races over an irregular and curved course marked out by flags. These will be down the Hausberg or the Gudiberg mountain, depending on snow conditions.

Scientific sterilization was approved by 21 of 30 of Brazil's most prominent physicians and biologists who were circularized, Dr. Renato Kehl told the first Inter-American Conference on Mental Hygiene held recently.

Justus Dinkel, 88, of Traben-Trarbach, and his brothers, Hermann, 82, and Wilhelm, 80, estimate that together they have drunk 65,700 bottles of wine in the last 60 years.
