Midland's 318th District Court Judge Barbara Culver almost made it to the Texas Supreme Court as chief justice. But she's not disheartened.

Deficit-reduction pact 'imminent'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Capitol Hill deficit-reduction negotiators said today an agreement is imminent. Nevertheless, President Reagan intended to order $23 billion in across-the-board cuts to kick in at midnight.

"The proper description is codeword 'imminent'," Democratic Rep. William H. Gray III, House budget committee chairman, said before today's discussions began.

White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. said Thursday night that, as far as the president was concerned, the clock had run out on the administration-congressional negotiations to find an alternative to Gramm-Rudman's across-the-board cuts. The cuts were to be imposed today.

A two-year agreement to cut $75 billion could be stillborn anyway, because large numbers of House and Senate Republicans oppose it.

"One problem is making absolutely sure what we want is indicated in the tax area and will be agreeable to the president, because that's where he feels very strongly," said House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, who appeared with Gray on NBC-TV's "Today" show. He said the plan must not increase tax rates set under the 1986 tax revision.

"If we can get that locked up very tightly later on today, then I think there are good prospects for the president to sign on," he said.

Gray, of Pennsylvania, said the agreement would not change the tax rates "of any individual taxpayer whatsoever in America." He said the plan would ask defense contractors to pay their taxes earlier, delay the lowering of estate taxes and take other "base-broadening" steps.

But one month after Wall Street's Black Monday gave new impetus to the deficit-reduction drive, Democrats conceded the GOP revolt against the plan could make it impossible to pass.

The administration and Capitol Hill bargainers ended their 19th session by saying they still had to complete details of how spending cuts would be enacted, and make sure Reagan, congressional leaders and committee chairmen were agreeable.

"It's going to be another tough day, and we're hopeful we can reach agreement tomorrow," Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, senior Republican on the Senate Budget Committee, said after Thursday's meeting.

The negotiators' work, however, left them eyeball to eyeball with the deadline established by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law. Under the legislation, the president must order the $23 billion across-the-board cuts today unless another way to trim an equal amount from this year's deficit has been enacted.

It is likely to take weeks before any accord stemming from the Capitol Hill negotiations could become law. And some federal agencies, under orders from the White House Office of Management and Budget, began cutbacks Nov. 10.

Legislative leaders had said for some time that if a budget agreement appeared near this week, they would ask Congress to approve a postponement of today's Gramm-Rudman deadline.

But on Thursday, with administration officials and numerous GOP lawmakers saying they would oppose an extension, Baker said the president would order the cuts.

"He says he won't go along with postponing," Baker said.

Lawmakers could partially or completely restore the withheld money with future legislation. In addition, because of government spending procedures, the full impact of the cuts will not be felt for weeks.

Bud and Cheri Hensley and their sons, from left, Brennan, Patrick and Gabe, recently were named Midland's Family of the Year. They reside at 2010 Princeton Ave.

Play time, togetherness essential to Hensleys

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A visit to the Hensley home in Midland is an adventure to the traditional past and what's viewed as the limitless future, with talk of family dinners and time spent together mixed with the aspirations of a future architect, physicist, or artist.

H.N. "Bud" Hensley, his wife Cheri, and sons Brennan, 12, Gabe, 9, and 7-year-old Patrick, this week were named the city's Family of the Year for 1987. The award is sponsored annually by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

"Sometimes you go through life thinking that you need to reach a goal," Mrs. Hensley said of her reaction to the award. "And you don't stop and appreciate what you have."

She spent some time recalling last summer at their house — when a pool had just been installed and porch swing was always nearby. "This is what we wanted," she said of her feeling about her family at the time.

"Children are a big part of this," Hensley, a third-generation Midlander whose grandfather came to the city — then a grassland — on horseback, said. "The boys contributed to a lot of what this means."

Both Hensleys prefer to avoid any use of the word "secret" in a discussion of the makeup of an award-winning family; their ideas for family simply are based on togetherness — and no television during the school year.

"It's my plug for education," Mrs. Hensley said. "It's when I get on my soapbox. We turn the TV off the first day of school, and turn it back on the last day of school. It gives the kids a chance to talk, to play a sport, to just play."

Jessica McClure expected to 'step out' at midday

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

It was hopeful Jessica McClure would take "a couple of steps" during her high noon exit today from Midland Memorial Hospital, spokeswoman Laurie Johnson said.

Hospital quality assurance standards mandate patient exits in wheelchairs but — as hospital officials have learned while handling the nation's most famous toddler — rules can be bent.

The 19-month-old toddler who fell down an abandoned water well Oct. 14 entered the hospital Oct. 16. She has spent the last 35 days there undergoing six surgeries and countless hours of oxygen and whirlpool therapy.

Jessica was taken to MMH late that Friday night suffering from dehydration, severely reduced blood circulation in her right foot and a deep wound on her forehead.

She will leave the hospital today with a walking cast on her right foot, and a small, vertical scar on her forehead.

Her little right toe was amputated in late October.

Vernon thrift rescue begins

DALLAS (AP) — Federal regulators are launching the costliest thrift rescue in the nation's history today, saying damage that former officers wreaked on Vernon Savings and Loan Association is beyond repair.

Despite the ouster of the thrift's past board and several months of management by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Dallas-based institution was hopelessly insolvent and getting worse, FHLBB chairman M. Danny Wall said Thursday night.

Vernon's 10 offices will be closed today while federal regulators embark on their $1.3 billion rescue plan by transferring Vernon's insured deposits to the newly created Montfort Savings Association, he said.

The FHLBB, regulator of 3,200 thrifts nationwide, said Montfort will operate as a mutual association owned by depositors under management by the bank board, FHLBB spokeswoman Martha Gravlee said.

The new entity will receive $200 million in cash and a $1.1 billion note from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which guarantees S&L deposits up to $100,000.

"We've done the best we could to salvage what we could out of that operation," said Tom B. Scott Jr., the chairman of the Vernon board of directors who will also be Montfort's chairman.

Scott, president of Unifirst Bank for Savings of Jackson, Miss., said he would be in Dallas today for a 1 p.m. board meeting at Vernon.

Vernon's net worth had sunk to negative $716.86 million by Sept. 30, and was projected to top negative $1 billion by next year. At the end of September, it had assets of $1.17 billion and deposits of $1.4 billion.

Local unemployment rate declines

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

■ TEC offers job-search workshop — 6C

Local unemployment rates fell substantially in October on the strength of rebounding oil activity and retailers gearing up for the Christmas season, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

A smaller percentage of Midlanders were out of work than at any time since February 1986, the first month after last year's oil price collapse.

Seven percent of the city's 51,700-person work force were unable to find jobs last month, down from 8.3 percent in September.

Odessa showed a similar pattern with a 7.9 percent jobless rate, the lowest since January 1986, and down 1.7 percent from September.

Midland TEC office manager Joe Hatcher said that in addition to increases in retail sales and oil field activity, improvement in construction, including the Loop 250 bypass project, is helping the employment picture.

During the month Midland saw total employment grow by 600 to 48,100. Compared to October 1986 levels, the pool of available workers has shrunk from 52,100 to 51,700 while total employment has climbed 2,100 from 46,000 a year ago.

Those factors combined to bring the unemployment rate down from 11.7 percent in October 1986 to 7.0 percent last month.

Net unemployment last month was 3,600, down from 4,300 in September and 6,100 last October.

Odessa's total employment has grown by 2,800 workers since October 1986 and the unemployment rate has been more than halved from 16.7 percent to 7.9 percent.

Consumer prices rise slightly in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a moderate 0.4 percent in October as a decline in energy costs failed to offset increases for food and a wide range of other goods, the government reported today.

It was the steepest gain since a 0.5 percent rise in August.

The report, following one last week showing that wholesale prices had dipped an unexpected 0.2 percent in October, was viewed by analysts as further evidence that inflation remains generally tame this year despite other economic problems stemming from the stock market crash.

Retail price gains for the first 10 months of the year amounted, on an annualized basis, to a moderate 4.8 percent, the Labor Department said, with much of that gain due to the sharp rebound in energy prices earlier in the year.

If October's 0.4 increase continued for 12 consecutive months, the annual inflation rate would be just 4.8 percent. September's inflation rate had been a subdued 0.2 percent.

By contrast, consumer prices last year rose a minuscule 1.1 percent, largely the result of the collapse in world oil prices.

Carlucci confirmed as defense secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 91-1 today to confirm Frank Carlucci as secretary of defense, replacing the retiring Caspar Weinberger.

Carlucci, 57, was nominated by President Reagan just 15 days ago after serving less than a year as national security adviser, a post he was given following the departure of Rear Adm. John Poindexter during the Iran-Contra affair.

Carlucci, a career government official with a reputation as a tough but pragmatic operator, was praised by the Senate Armed Services Committee chairman, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., as an effective leader "who's well aware of the tough defense budget decisions that will be needed."

Weinberger is retiring after seven years of presiding over the biggest peacetime miltary build-up in U.S. history. Pentagon spending doubled during his tenure.

Shultz, Shevardnadze will meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze next Monday and Tuesday in Geneva, where an arms control treaty continues to elude negotiators.

The announcement was made in Washington by the State Department and in Moscow by the Soviet news agency Tass.

The brief State Department announcement stressed they also would discuss regional conflicts and a "full range of issues" on the U.S.-Soviet agenda. A U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said Shultz would also go to Brussels on Wednesday to report to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers.

In the arms control field, the official said, Shultz and Shevardnadze would focus as much on hopes for an agreement next year to reduce strategic nuclear weapons as on the elusive treaty to ban medium-range missiles.

In the regional area, he said, the top two items for discussion are the Iran-Iraq war and U.S. efforts to persuade the Soviets to withdraw the Red Army from Afghanistan.

The announcement also listed human rights on what will be a busy agenda of the two foreign ministers' fourth round of talks in three months.

All these issues also are likely to be taken up by President Reagan with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev during their scheduled talks at the White House Dec. 8-10.

The treaty to ban nearly 1,000 medium-range U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles is simply not ready with less than three weeks to go before the Washington summit.

Privately, senior U.S. officials have set the end of the month as the deadline for reaching agreement on all outstanding issues. They calculate it will take another week to compose treaty language once there is a decision.

Publicly, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said confidently Wednesday that the summit would be held as scheduled and the treaty signed.

This will be Shultz's fourth round of talks with Shevardnadze within three months. The unusual frequency of their meetings points up the difficulty the two sides have experienced in finishing the treaty after 2½ years of negotiations.

Reagan wants to make it the centerpiece of his talks with Gorbachev. It would be the first U.S.-Soviet treaty to restrict nuclear weapons in more than eight years, and the first during Reagan's presidency.

A State Department official said Monday that if the treaty were not ready by the end of the month, the United States and the Soviet Union would face a "series of choices," including postponement of the Washington summit.

"Whether you decide to have the summit without the treaty, I don't know," said the official, who spoke to a reporter only on condition of anonymity. "You might end up postponing it."

Since then, U.S. and Soviet negotiators have resolved two issues and made headway on the two tough problems that remain.

The Soviets dropped their demand for follow-on negotiations, which the U.S. side opposed as an apparent attempt to restrict American aircraft in Western Europe. And there is virtual agreement on a provision to live up to the treaty's letter and spirit.

On the other hand, several U.S. officials said, the Soviets have not provided sufficient information about their missiles and are not opening their facilities wide enough for thorough U.S. inspection.

Shultz is expected to see Shevardnadze in Geneva on Monday and return before Thanksgiving. In the meantime, U.S. and Soviet negotiators will work through the weekend in the Swiss city.

The unresolved issues involve ways to verify compliance with a ban on U.S. and Soviet missiles in the range of 315 miles to 3,125 miles.

In a sign of progress Wednesday, Soviet negotiators provided U.S. negotiators in Geneva with some additional missile information.

But the data dealt mostly with deployed missiles and did not include all the specific data the U.S. wants on SS-20s and SS-4s that might be in storage and where they are being kept, administration officials said.

In the regional arena, the United States has been seeking Soviet support to impose a worldwide arms embargo on Iran and for a commitment to withdraw the Red Army from Afghanistan. The two governments also have been discussing prospects for Arab-Israeli peace talks.

All 553 of the SS-20 and SS-4 deployed Soviet missiles would be scrapped under the treaty. The Soviets also would dismantle 130 shorter-range rockets, while the United States would eliminate 364 missiles installed in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium.

Behind the U.S. demand for more data is a concern that SS-20s might be kept in reserve and out of sight while the deployed weapons were removed.

"We really have not gotten the kind of data we need before signing the treaty in terms of location and deployment," a senior U.S. official said.

Redman, meanwhile, said, "I don't believe you could get to a treaty unless you had all the data. But the Soviets say it will be forthcoming."

On another sticking point, the Soviets have agreed to allow U.S. inspectors to take up positions outside a plant where SS-25 missiles are assembled. That means they could observe any finished weapons as they were brought out.

But, two officials said, the United States was asking for continuous rather than occasional inspection, and the Soviets were holding back. A third official said, "What they have not agreed on is inside inspection of test, storage and maintenance facilities."

RELEASE

Jessica's ordeal received news coverage from all the major television networks and the country's largest newspapers. Many were expected to be on hand today for her release from the hospital.

KMID-TV General Manager John Foster said this morning there will be no announcement today of the amount in Jessica's trust fund at Texas Commerce Bank.

Foster said he and Pete Snelson, the advertising executive handling affairs for Jessica's parents, Chip and Reba McClure, have talked about releasing the amount.

The general manager, whose TV station helped in creating the trust fund, said today he wants to "move ahead" with the announcement, but is hesitating because the McClure family wants "everything to be coordinated" first.

But the trust fund is "absolutely not being touched for anything but Jessica," Foster said.

He added he didn't think the McClure family had made requests on the trust fund as of today.

Texas Commerce Bank President Ed Jones said today his bank cannot release figures of anyone's account.

VERNON

"The damage done to Vernon by the management before March of this year was irreparable," Wall said. The current management, appointed by the bank board March 20, inherited a portfolio in which 96 percent of the loans were not paying.

Under the direction of Donald R. Dixon, who acquired Vernon in January 1982, the institution increased its assets tenfold by making large, speculative development and construction loans, according to the bank board.

The FSLIC filed suit in April for $100 million against Dixon and other former officers, charging fraud and other breaches of the officers' duties.

"It's a massive problem," said current Vernon board member Thomas J. Hayman of Dallas. "It's a problem that has to be worked out."

Dixon was ousted in March when Vernon was converted from a state charter to a federal charter and a new board of directors was appointed.

The Vernon rescue is the biggest ever in terms of the cost to FSLIC, Ms. Graviee said. The earlier record was the $681 million bailout in 1986 of Sunrise Savings and Loan Association of Boynton Beach, Fla.

Those transactions are dwarfed only by the $4.5 billion bailout in 1984 of Continental Illinois Bank & Trust of Chicago by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., a separate agency that insures commercial banks.

Regulators hope to sell Montfort eventually, reducing the cost of the bailout, Ms. Graviee said. FSLIC also may reduce the size of the note over time by transferring healthy assets, such as paying loans, to Montfort.

Vernon's 10 offices will reopen Monday under the new Montfort name, honoring the same rates and terms on all certificates of deposit, she said. Vernon had been based in the North Texas town of Vernon, but was moved to Dallas in March.

Depositers with less than $100,000 in the institution will have immediate access to their money Monday. Depositers with more than that must apply for access in writing.

Ms. Graviee said a small number of deposits were above the insurance limit, but she said the bank board could not yet put a dollar limit on the amount.

INFLATE

Inflation this year is running more in line with the 4 percent levels that prevailed from 1982 through 1985.

As for last month, gasoline prices fell 0.3 percent after a 0.2 percent drop in September.

Overall, energy costs were down 0.9 percent following a 0.5 percent fall. Natural gas and electricty costs dipped 1.6 percent, after a 0.6 percent decline.

Home heating oil costs fell 0.4 percent following a 1.8 percent decline.

Food costs were up 0.3 percent after a 0.5 percent rise in September, and were paced by a sharp 1.3 percent drop in fruit and vegetable prices.

For goods other than food and energy, prices rose 0.5 percent following a 0.2 percent rise in September.

This included a 0.6 price increase for new automobiles following a 0.1 percent increase in September. Part of this higher cost reflects more expensive imports due to the declining value of the dollar against other major currenices.

The retail price gains of October were far above the 0.2 percent decline posted at the wholesale level. But some disparity had been expected by economists.

For one thing, the wholesale price index reflects prices of goods only from U.S. industries and farms. It does not include two categories in which prices have been rising more rapidly: imported goods and services, such as medical expenses and rent.

In fact, the recent sharp fall in the value of the dollar is expected to eventually drive up the cost of most imported goods. That would lead directly to higher inflation and give U.S. companies more latitude to raise prices.

So far, however, this effect has been muted, although prices of many imports were shown to be up in today's report.

Yet, companies in Europe and Japan have generally not raised their export prices to the same degree that their currenices have risen against the U.S. dollar — about 50 percent since mid-1985.

EMPLOY

Ector County's labor force has contracted to 56,700 from 59,300 last year. Net unemployment has fallen by a like amount from 9,900 out of work in October 1986, compared to 4,500 last month.

"The figures are looking good and it should continue provided oil prices stay in the $18 range. Projects like Amoco's 74-well infill program announced this week help sustain our improvement," Hatcher said.

Midland is tied with Abilene for the 10th lowest jobless rate in Texas, while Odessa ranks 18th among the state' 27 metropolitan areas.

Bryan-College Station continues to have the lowest unemployment level in the state at 4.6 percent and McAllen the highest at 16.7 percent. The unadjusted statewide average was 7.4 percent in October.

Rural West Texas counties participated in the month's major rate declines as well. The biggest improvement was in Dawson County, which saw a 2.2 percent drop in unemployment, to 8.4 percent. Not far behind were Pecos County, down 1.6 percent to 9.0; Reeves and Howard counties, down 1.5 percent each to 11.3 and 7.1 percent, respectively; and Andrews County, down 1.4 percent to 4.8 percent, the lowest rate in the region.

Lesser declines were seen in Winkler County, down 0.8 percent to 6.8 percent and Ward County, down 0.7 percent to 7.7 percent unemployment.

FAMILY

Saturday morning cartoons are now overlooked in favor of brotherly — and as several patched holes in the home's "recreation hall" indicate — unbrotherly play, but Hensley said the important thing is the play.

"A lot of people in this town have kids in every activity that they can," he said. "We don't really believe in that.

"We just turn the kids loose. It is a very unstructured thing."

"My only criticism of Midland is that you have to start your child in school at 2, then Suzuki violin lessons, then karate lessons, and on and on," Mrs. Hensley said. "And after a while you wonder what you are doing.

"Let your child make his mistake or his failure. Let them fail when it's home and OK."

"And let them know it's OK," her husband added quickly.

Hensley, who is in the oil business, and his wife, who recently sold a successful greeting card company because it was taking time away from the family, spent some time in the Denver area after they were married.

But, when the first child was expected, Midland was the only choice.

One of the resources the family depends on is the Trinity School, where the boys attend — and the parents know, very well, the other parents.

"There is a sense of family at the school, and we all feel that," Hensley said. "It has contributed to the sense of family that we have. It is a warm and secure feeling."

The Hensleys also depend on their faith, represented to them by the pastor of Our Savior's Lutheran Church, James Otterness, for their sense of family.

During a discussion by 7-year-old Patrick of a missed — or was it a caught? — ground ball during the past baseball season, and Brennan's mention of "acorn wars," seemingly a favorite activity, it became evident again that the Hensley boys are given time to be — well, boys.

Gabe, a 9-year-old fourth-grader, was named after "Cowboy Gabe," a friend of Lawrence Beauchamp, his great-grandfather on horseback. Gabe's goal is to become an architect, as he proudly shows off a pencil sketch of a columned house he has designed. Brennan, the oldest, surrounds himself with model rockets and airplanes — and a laboratory that sometimes has resembled a small scale fireworks factory. He wants to be a physicist, or perhaps a chemist.

According to Patrick, the youngest, least reluctant to chat, and owner of a terrific shell collection, he will be an artist.

Cheri, who sold Gooseberry Pie, her 5-year-old card company two weeks ago, said she plans to continue her service with Junior Achievement. Bud's favorite community service includes work with the YMCA. And each resists the idea that the award they were given is corny, that it means less than any other award.

"Not to us," Hensley said. "Especially looking back at people like the Baskins, Hunts, and Dodsons," some of the prior winners of the award.

Gorbachev probably won't meet Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is backing off a plan to ask Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev to become the first communist leader to address a joint meeting of Congress, administration and congressional sources say.

The idea all but died Thursday after House Republican leader Robert Michel joined 79 other congressmen in asking President Reagan to find a less formal setting for lawmakers to meet with Gorbachev during the Dec. 7-10 summit.

Faced with a GOP revolt, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater issued assurances that "we have not proposed or asked for a special session of Congress. ...The Soviets are considering what they want to do, and will let us know in a few days."

Another senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "I would be very surprised if he (Gorbachev) ever ends up addressing a joint meeting."

Michel, R-Ill., said asking Gorbachev to address a joint meeting of Congress "would be a terrible mistake and I have relayed my views to the State Department."

Aides to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said "a White House liaison officer" had requested that Gorbachev be invited to address a joint meeting of Congress, and that Wright and Senate Majority leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., had set the time for 10 a.m. on Dec. 9.

"A request for a visit by a leader is made by the White House and then the speaker and the majority leader come up with the time when it would be best to do this," said Charmayne Marsh, Wright's spokeswoman.

An aide to Byrd said the majority leader endorsed the idea in a meeting last Friday with the Soviet ambassador to Washington, Yuri Dubinin.

Three congressional sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the idea was discussed without any apparent objections Tuesday at a breakfast meeting attended by Wright, Byrd, White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and James C. Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Some Democrats said the dispute was between the White House and the conservative wing of the Republican Party.

"If they don't want Mr. Gorbachev here, all they have to do is pick up the telephone and say, 'We don't want it,'" said another Wright aide, Wilson Morris.

"Really, it's a fight between the president and his own party. When they settle it, they can let us know. There is no reason to point fingers."

The Democratic whip, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, endorsed the proposed appearance, saying that "giving Gorbachev the cold shoulder is no way to end the Cold War."

U.S., Soviets differ on treaty deadline

NATION

TOOELE ARMY DEPOT, Utah (AP) — A top Soviet arms negotiator has proposed a May deadline for an international treaty to reduce and eventually ban chemical weapons, but his U.S. counterpart rejected the idea.

Yuri Nazarkin made the proposal Thursday after he and five other Soviets arrived to visit the Army's chemical weapons disposal plant. The delegation was to tour the prototype plant 50 miles southwest of Salt Lake City today.

Despite U.S.-Soviet differences on verification and other matters, Nazarkin said in an interview that a treaty could be reached by late May, when the third session of the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva is scheduled.

"I think it is feasible if the other side takes a more optimistic approach," said Nazarkin, the top Soviet bargainer on chemical weapons.

Chief U.S. negotiator Max Friedersdorf said he would not accept an arbitrary deadline before all details were worked out.

Friedersdorf said in an interview that the Soviets want the deadline to put congressional and public pressure on U.S. negotiators.

"The Soviets are always wanting to set artificial deadlines," he said. "We don't deal with them on trust; we deal with them on making a treaty so tightly bound and ironclad that they can't cheat."

On Thursday, the Soviets tried on gas masks, and were shown live and simulated chemical bombs, rockets, mortar rounds and mines from the U.S. arsenal.

The weapons are filled with liquid nerve or mustard agents, which are vaporized and dispersed by explosives on impact. Nerve agents attack the central nervous system, while mustard agents blister the skin, mucous membranes and lungs.

A television crew stands in the foreground while taping scenes of the Chemical agents Munitions Disposal System (CAMDS), at the Tooele Army Depot Wednesday. A delegation from the Soviet Union will be visiting the depot Thursday and Friday to learn how the United States is dismantling some of its chemical weapons.

The Soviet Union refused to attend a United Nations workshop at the plant in 1983, but earlier this year accepted an invitation from the State Department's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Last month, Friedersdorf led a U.S. delegation that inspected Soviet chemical weapons. The Soviets have given no indication they have a disposal plant, he said.

Nazarkin and Friedersdorf also disagreed Thursday over the progress of the Geneva negotiations. At a breakfast meeting, Nazarkin said the talks were in the "final stages."

"I think that's overly optimistic," Friedersdorf responded. "There has been progress this year, but there remains an awful lot of detail before a treaty can be concluded."

He said the United States wants a verification agreement allowing either side to inspect any facility within 48 hours of a request. The Soviets have agreed in principle, but details remain to be worked out, Friedersdorf said.

In addition, the United States has provided details and photographs of where its chemical weapons are stored, but the Soviets have not reciprocated, he said.

Friedersdorf said the Soviets must agree to eliminate their stockpile at the same time the smaller U.S. arsenal is destroyed. The Soviets have a 10-1 advantage in the number of chemical weapons, he said.

Friedersdorf contends the Soviets are anxious to sign a treaty before the United States finishes modernizing its stockpile.

"They're afraid of losing their monopoly on chemical weapons. They can bully Western Europe with this huge monopoly stockpile," he said.

The newest U.S. chemical weapon, a "binary" 155mm artillery projectile, is expected to roll off the assembly line Dec. 17, and Friedersdorf believes that persuaded the Soviets to negotiate seriously.

Researchers find protein compound able to fight cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Institutes of Health researchers say an amino acid compound formulated in a laboratory is able to slam the door on cancer cells that attempt to spread through the body.

The compound, a peptide synthesized with five amino acids, proved in laboratory tests that it can keep cancer cells confined to blood vessels where they eventually die or are killed by the body's immune system.

"We characterize it as very, very promising," Dr. Hynda K. Kleinman of the NIH in Bethesda, Md., said Thursday. She said there have been other experiments with peptides, "but this is the most potent one we know of."

She said the peptide was able to prevent the formation of lung cancer tumors in laboratory rats and was effective against Kaposi's sarcoma, another type of cancer, in test tube experiments. It is being tested on still other types of tumors, she said.

A peptide is composed of two or more amino acids. A series of peptides form protein, the basic building block of the body.

Researchers have applied for a patent on the peptide, but Ms. Kleinman said it will require years of laboratory animal experiments before the new drug is approved for tests on human cancer patients.

Ms. Kleinman said the compound used in the experiment, called peptide-11, seems to have the ability to lock cancer cells inside vessels.

"The cancer cell when it is traveling in a blood vessel is really in a sealed pipe," she said. In order to leave the vessel and invade the cells of an organ, the cancer cell must first, somehow, penetrate the "pipe."

To bore through the vessel wall, the cancer cell first attaches itself to laminin, a so-called basement membrane that is part of the vessel wall. The cancer cell then erodes the basement membrane until there is a hole large enough to permit it to slip through and invade the organ beyond.

Ms. Kleinman said peptide-11 appears to be able to keep the cancer cell from sticking to the vessel wall and thus prevents it from boring through. This strands the cancer cell inside the vessel, where it circulates harmlessly until its short life ends, or until it is found and killed by the cells of the body's immune system.

In a laboratory experiment, the NIH research team injected two groups of rats with lung cancer cells. In one group, the researchers also injected peptide-11.

Three weeks later, the rats were killed and their lungs examined. Rats receiving high doses of the peptide showed no lung tumor development, and even small doses significantly inhibited tumor growth. The rats that received no peptide averaged 51 lung tumors each.

Ms. Kleinman said that although lung cancer cells were used in the laboratory test on rats, "it probably works in a variety of tumors. We are in the process of testing that."

She said the peptide has been shown in test tube experiments to be very effective on Kaposi's sarcoma. "It seems to block the Kaposi cell activity," she said.

Kaposi's, once considered rare, has become a commonly occurring cancer among patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.

Ms. Kleinman said the peptide is not toxic, as are the chemotherapy drugs now used to fight cancer. Chemotherapy drugs typically poison cancer cells, but also can damage normal cells and cause serious side effects.

The peptide seems to have few side effects, Ms. Kleinman said.

"It disrupts the formation of organs and tissues," she said. "So I would predict it will probably be non-toxic in an adult, but it may have some effects on pregnancy."

Pentagon spending bill awaits OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders say the $296 billion Pentagon budget bill sent to the White House should win President Reagan's signature and resolve a bitter, six-month dispute over arms control provisions.

The Senate approved the military spending measure on an 86-9 vote Thursday, sending it to the president for his signature. The House had adopted it Wednesday by a 264-158 vote.

Most of the opposition came from conservative Republicans. But GOP leaders said they expected Reagan to sign the measure, which was described as a bipartisan compromise.

Reagan had threatened to veto an earlier version, passed by the House last May, which would have cut defense spending more drastically and imposed harsher arms control restrictions. The administration feared that the bill would hamper the United States in arms negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Senate opponents repeatedly held up action on the bill in the ensuing months, with Republicans staging filibusters to prevent a vote.

But the Democratic and Republican leadership of the Senate united behind the compromise version approved this week by a House-Senate conference committee.

The Republican leader, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said that "the bill's strongest point is that it no longer contains obstacles" to the president's Strategic Defense Initiative to develop orbiting anti-missile defenses.

The bill, however, does bar the administration from spending money during the current fiscal year to produce any anti-missile weapons that would violate the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. It also pushes the administration into closer compliance with the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

It does so without mentioning either treaty, but by spelling out in detail how the money should be spent.

The bill authorizes spending of $3.9 billion on SDI, known as "Star Wars." Reagan asked for $4.5 billion for the program.

The bill forces the administration to stay close to the restrictions of SALT II by ordering demolition of a nuclear-armed submarine, the Andrew Jackson. The administration exceeded SALT II limits last year, alleging Soviet violations of the treaty.

Senate Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and the panel's ranking minority member, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., spoke in favor of the bill.

"I hope and I expect that the president of the United States will sign this bill," said Nunn.

Republicans said they had received indications from the White House that Reagan would not exercise his veto.

Several conservative senators led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., spoke in opposition.

"While the Soviets are violating the provisions of the ABM Treaty, the Congress is de facto binding the president to an excessively restrictive interpretation of the treaty," Helms said.

"This decision is unilateral disarmament in which international law is being misinterpreted and used as a fig leaf for appeasement of Russia," Helms said.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said that had the earlier House version passed, Reagan "would have exercised his veto" and it would have been sustained in the Senate. Wilson and another conservative, Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., expressed reservations about the bill, but voted for it anyway.

Audible engine surge may be one clue in crash

DENVER (AP) — A cockpit voice recorder aboard Continental Flight 1713 picked up sounds that may show the airflow through an engine was interrupted, and a vortex of air from a landing jet may have affected the plane as well, officials said.

National Transportation Safety Board Chairman Jim Burnett said Thursday night that investigators analyzing the recording think the sounds show "a disturbance of air flow through the engine compressor."

"In severe cases," he said, "it can result in substantial engine damage.

Continental Flight 1713 crashed during takeoff at Stapleton International Airport on Sunday in a snowstorm, killing 28. At least five of the 17 people still hospitalized remained in critical condition early today.

Earlier Thursday, Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said spinning turbulence, called vortex, might have been caused by a Delta Airlines 767 that landed on a runway next to the one Flight 1713 was using.

The turbulence may have contributed to the accident by making the Continental plane shake, officials indicated. The plane overturned in the accident.

Burnett said the centers of the runways involved are 1,600 feet apart. He also said equipment aboard the Delta plane indicated it landed at 2:12:59 p.m.

The Continental plane crashed at about 2:15 p.m.

Rudy Kapustin, a consultant formerly with the NTSB, told reporters that vortex remains in the air for several minutes after planes land and take off, and can be moved around by air currents.

Turbulence from one plane was enough to flip another on its back in an accident involving two planes landing simultaneously on adjacent runways at a Texas airport in 1972, he said.

In that accident, in 1972 at Southwest Airport in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, involved a DC-9 that apparently was closely following a DC-10 and crashed, killing a crew of three people and a Federal Aviation Administration observer, Burnett said.

Burnett said compressor stalls, or "burping," could be caused by water, slush or air disturbance, even from the plane's own wings if it was not in a proper flight attitude.

"A better term for compressor stall is engine surging," Burnett said.

"I emphasize that the (sound resembling) engine surging has not been correlated to the course of the accident sequence," Burnett said. "We don't know exactly when in the accident sequence we're hearing this."

He added that in a recent accident investigation an engine surge "did not cause the accident but occurred because of the attitude that the aircraft got into which affects the flow of the air into the engine."

He added: "You can't make too much of this although it's something we'll be looking at."

Burnett also said a Continental pilot awaiting takeoff looked closely at the DC-9 just before takeoff to see the condition of its wing surfaces, "as a means to determine what his own condition might be. He said there was no wing surface contamination."

However, Burnett said, several surviving passengers said there was ice and snow on the the DC-9.

Flight 1713 was de-iced 23 minutes before the decision to take off and Burnett said one passenger told investigators the plane was covered with more snow at takeoff than before de-icing.

He also said a surviving stewardess told investigators she had expressed concern to the plane's captain, Frank Zvonek, that first officer Lee Bruecher, introduced to her as a new first officer, would land the plane upon return to Denver.

Report shows North toyed with probes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North pushed the FBI to investigate opponents of the Nicaraguan Contra rebels and tried to stall other probes that threatened to reveal his secret Contra supply operation, the congressional Iran-Contra committees say.

In one instance detailed in the committees' final report, North encouraged the FBI in mid-1986 to investigate Jack Terrell, a former pro-Contra mercenary who had become disillusioned with the rebels. Terrell had begun to cooperate with a group that sued North associate Richard Secord in connection with alleged gun- and drug-running involving the Contras.

North, a top National Security Council aide until he was fired in November 1986, contacted FBI official Oliver Revell when he learned the bureau was investigating an alleged assassination plot against President Reagan by figures who favored Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

North offered the help of an associate, security consultant Glenn Robinette, as someone familiar with Terrell's activities. The FBI accepted North's offer of assistance but eventually terminated the investigation, concluding that Terrell wasn't a threat to Reagan.

The Iran-Contra committees also concluded that North and his boss, then-national security adviser John Poindexter, interfered with seven criminal investigations when the probes threatened to expose the Reagan administration's secret Contra supply operation.

The private supply operation was set up after Congress banned U.S. military aid to the rebels.

In one case, the U.S. Customs Service at North's request halted for six weeks an investigation into allegations that the Maule Aircraft Corp. of Moultrie, Ga., had shipped four aircraft to support the Contras in possible violation of U.S. export control laws.

NATION in brief

AIDS books distributed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Governors and state health officials will have access to information on what state and local governments are doing about AIDS as a result of books distributed by the Department of Health and Human Services.

One volume assesses problems created by the disease, another focuses on managing and financing care for those striken by it and a third is a resource guide which catalogues various studies done by the states and lists the person or agency to contact for additional information.

The fourth and thickest volume reprints essentially every major scientific study done on AIDS since the disease was identified in 1981.

GM recalls broken cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Motors Corp. is recalling nearly 600,000 cars and trucks from the 1983 model year to fix a broken switch in the pollution control system, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

Vehicles in Thursday's recall are the Chevrolet Impala, Caprice Classic, Malibu, Monte Carlo and El Camino; the Pontiac Firebird, Bonneville, Grand Prix and Parisienne; and the GMC Caballero. They are equipped with 3.8-liter, 5.0-liter and 5.7-liter engines.

The thermal vacuum switch in the evaporative control system fails to open and close properly, causing the vehicles to exceed federal limits for fuel evaporation and carbon monoxide emissions, the EPA said.

Ozone meetings urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six senators are urging the United Nations to convene emergency international meetings to respond to scientific findings this fall that chemicals are causing ozone loss over the Antarctic.

The lawmakers — the chairman and five members of the Environment Committee — made the call in a letter sent Tuesday to Mostafa Tolba, executive director of the U.N. Environmental Program in Nairobi, Kenya. The letter was made public Thursday.

U.S. scientists have told the committee that the hole in the ozone layer over the frigid continent had grown larger this year.

Train brakes required

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department says all freight trains must have automatic braking devices if they travel in the busy Northeast rail corridor. Amtrak passenger trains already have the equipment.

The department n Thursday said railroads will have until July 1, 1990, to equip all their trains with the automatic train control devices, which automatically stop a train if an engineer fails to obey a signal ordering the train to slow or stop.

Support for the equipment gained momentum after 16 people were killed and another 170 injured last Jan. 4 when a string of Conrail freight locomotives and an Amtrak passenger train collided near Chase, Md. It was the worst accident in Amtrak history.

Jessica's release closes her story

After more than a month of hospitalization and six surgeries, Jessica McClure went home today. She took the fond hopes of a multitude of well-wishers with her.

The 19-month-old child's ordeal after she fell into an abandoned water well Oct. 14th focused the attention of millions of people on Midland, her rescuers and the doctors, nurses and others who have attended to her recuperation.

Since the accident, literally thousands of cards and letters have poured into the Reporter-Telegram, Midland Memorial Hospital where she was hospitalized, to the McClure family, and to the Midland Post Office. Many extended gratitude for the work of the rescuers, to the doctors and therapists, and to the people of Midland in general. Many contained cash or gifts, boosting a fund for the little girl established at a local bank. All in all, the outpouring of concern and love has amounted to a tremendous gesture of human compassion. Literally, it has been a beautiful experience.

The resulting publicity has become a burden of sorts. It's uncommon for any community of Midland's size to experience this crush of attention — for this length of time. It's uncommon for any family so unaccustomed to the searching glare of publicity to bear up under the spotlights so well.

But Jessica's story was one that bore telling, as was the world's response. As a result, her life and the lives of her parents, Chip and Cissy McClure, will never be the same. A bond has been established between this child and much of the world; it's a bond that won't soon be broken.

The release of Jessica from Midland Memorial sets a new stage with a new challenge. Now the goal should be to allow Jessica to resume, as much as is possible, a normal life.

Honor the educators

This week, Nov. 15-21, has been designated as American Education Week — a time to honor educators in America. I feel that it is time to single out for praise and honor those persons who participate in the operation of the public schools of Texas in general and Midland in particular.

In an era where criticism of the public schools has become a favorite pastime for everyone who is looking for someone to dump on, it is time, at least for this one week, to say to those employees "A job well done." Somewhere amidst all of the criticism about what the system does not produce, we have neglected to note the good things we have produced. Texas, like other states in this great country, seeks to educate all of its children and not an elite few. The system which was spawned by a democratic society operates in a democratic way allowing freedom of choice; therefore, it has all of the pitfalls of any democratic institution. Instead of trying to copy other countries' systems, let us all pledge ourselves and our resources to see that our own system works.

Take time out this week to say thanks to those Midland schools and employees that work each and every day to educate our youth.

Arab moderation

Change is occurring in the Arab world, where politics were long dominated by anti-Americanism and hate for Israel. Participants in the 21-nation Arab summit meeting in Jordan not only endorsed U.S. policies in the Middle East and Persian Gulf but also opened the door to improved relations with Israel.

Reality appears to be catching up with the Arab leaders.

The pragmatism of Egypt's government, the steadfastness of the United States, and Israel's determination to survive have paid off.

Syria, which had emerged as Israel's most threatening neighbor in the 1980s, has been left relatively alone by the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and the de facto peace that exists between Israel and Jordan. The Syrians, once considered pro-Iranian, are seeking accommodation with Iraq and Jordan.

The commitment of U.S. naval forces in the gulf has won respect in moderate Arab circles. Moammar Gadhafi has been reduced to a minor figure. Egypt, which has been an outcast since it unilaterally made peace with Israel, is too important to ignore, considering the growing threat of Iranian extremism.

No Arab meeting of past years was complete without its ritual denunciations of Israel and its expressions of solidarity with Palestinian radicals.

But Israel cannot reasonably be considered the Arabs' chief threat. Iran with its warlike ways and its religious radicalism, poses a greater threat — not only to the peace of the region but also to the stability of Islamic society.

The Arab leaders wisely endorsed dialogue with Israel through the United Nations and acknowledged a back-door way to restore diplomatic relations with Egypt on a nation-by-nation basis.

Anti-American and anti-Israeli expressions did not play a large role in the meeting. Iran and Libya are now farther from the Moslem mainstream.

The Arab summit signaled progress toward the new relationships that the United States has firmly and quietly sought in the Middle East. It was a victory for moderation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Nov. 20, the 324th day of 1987. There are 41 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Forty years ago, on Nov. 20, 1947, Britain's future queen, Princess Elizabeth, married Philip Mountbatten, Duke of Edinburgh, in a ceremony broadcast worldwide from Westminster Abbey.

On this date:

In 1620, Peregrine White, the son of William and Susanna White, was born aboard the Mayflower in Massachusetts Bay. He was the first child to be born of English parents in present-day New England.

In 1789, New Jersey became the first state to ratify the Bill of Rights.

In 1910, revolution broke out in Mexico, led by Francisco I. Madero.

In 1925, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1943, during World War II, American forces landed on Tarawa and Makin Atoll in the Gilbert Islands.

In 1945, 24 Nazi leaders were put on trial before an international war crimes tribunal at Nuremberg, Germany.

In 1947, the interview program "Meet the Press" made its network television debut on NBC.

In 1967, just after 11 a.m., the Census Clock at the Department of Commerce ticked past 200 million.

In 1975, Spain's Gen. Francisco Franco died in Madrid, two weeks before his 83rd birthday. Franco's death ended nearly four decades of absolute rule.

In 1980, faced with disastrous reviews from New York critics, United Artists announced it was withdrawing its $44 million movie "Heaven's Gate" for re-editing.

CHARLEY REESE

'88 a bad, dangerous year for U.S.

I think 1988 is going to be a bad and dangerous year, perhaps the most dangerous for the country since the British burned Washington, D.C., in 1812.

Charley Reese

Here are the things that will be happening:

1. American patriots like John Poindexter and Ollie North will be indicted by the liberal political witch-hunters and Ronald Reagan, now surrounded by liberals in his own administration, will be pressured to let them hang.

2. The economy — ours and the world's — will be going down hill.

3. The Soviets, led by their new and cunning Stalinist, will be making an all-out attempt, masquerading as a peace offensive, to halt the strategic defense initiative and to cut America's already thin nuclear deterrent to non-deterrent levels. This gigantic disinformation campaign will be augmented by American communists and their idiot supporters. War is never more likely than when the Soviets are launching a peace offensive. The bedrock of Soviet strategic thinking consists of secrecy, deception, and surprise.

4. Central America will be on fire, especially if the communists succeed in decapitating the Nicaraguan democrats with this phony peace ploy so zealously supported by the leftists in the Senate and House.

5. Liberal Democrats and liberal Republicans who destroyed Judge Robert Bork's nomination will persist in their campaign to deny Reagan and the American people a Supreme Court justice who is not a judicial activist with a liberal agenda.

6. As a result of the foolish INF treaty, the NATO alliance will begin to unravel.

7. Communists, their plans already well underway, will increase their push to drive us out of the Pacific.

8. Terrorism will finally reach America itself in a significant way.

If ever there were tough times when it is time for the tough to get going, it is now. It is time for good Americans to take off the gloves and get into the political and public arena and fight to win with no quarter given or asked.

Good Americans are those people of whatever race or color or ethnic or religious background who believe in the Constitution, who are tired of supporting bums, who are tired of being taxed by hack politicians so they can buy votes to perpetuate themselves in office, who are tired of criminals being treated with more concern and compassion than their bleeding victims, who are not willing to sacrifice the lives and freedoms of others to appease communist tyrants, who are no longer willing to remain passive while leftist idealogues take over their churches and use their tithes to fund terrorists and use their good name to apologize for tyranny and attack America.

Good Americans are those who have had it with politicians and bureaucrats who seem to serve only the interests of big business, who seem more concerned about the welfare of foreign nations than about our own.

Good Americans are those who will no longer consent to their tax dollars building agricultural projects overseas while American farmers are being foreclosed and driven off the land.

Emigres and defectors have warned and warned and warned Americans that their lives and liberty were in imminent danger but anesthesized by moronic television and a left-liberal national news media that denies us the balanced and accurate coverage of the world to which, as consumers, we are entitled, we have too long remained sheep.

We have, consequently, seen America become a second-rate military power, a debtor nation, the world's greatest collection of drug addicts, a joke among nations. We have passively accepted crime lords, drug lords, porno lords. We have financed the world's most expensive public education system which produces the world's least competent graduates.

Well, there's no margin for error left. Fight for your future or kiss it goodbye.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Women really do call this activity 'shopping'!

When I shop for clothing, I keep it as simple as possible. I walk into a men's clothing store and say, "I would like to see some shirts, please." The salesperson points me to the shirts, and I say, "I'll take this one and that one."

Grizzard

I'm out of there in less than five minutes. Life is too short to spend much of it fussing over new clothing.

Recently it became my burden to accompany a young woman shopping. I won't bore you with the details of why I had to do this. Let us just say that no matter how hard a man tries to avoid going shopping with a woman, he eventually will be nailed.

It was a learning experience. I always thought women basically shopped like men. Not so. Women shop like they are on a mission from God.

"Banzai!" screamed the lady I was with when she entered the store.

What is this, I wondered: Samurai shopper?

The basic difference between male shoppers and female shoppers is that the latter group tries on everything in the store before they even come close to making a decision about a purchase.

I've bought houses in less time than it takes a woman to shop for a skirt and blouse.

I would like to see inside a dressing room in a woman's clothing shop. It must be bigger than a warehouse. The woman I was with took something from every rack in the place and then disappeared into the back with two salespersons and the stock boy, each of whom had their arms filled with apparel.

She was gone for a month and then reappeared wearing a new outfit.

"How do you like this?" she asked.

What am I going to say? "You look like Omar the Tentmaker in that thing."

Of course not. Say something like that and she will be gone another month.

"I love it," I said of her outfit.

"You really like it, or are you just saying that so I will be finished shopping?"

Cunning devils, these people.

"No," I replied. "I swear I really like it. In that outfit, you remind me of Gina Lollobrigida in one of those biblical movies."

That was the wrong thing to say.

"Gina Lollobrigida was a cow," she said tartly and disappeared back into the warehouse.

She must have tried on 30 more outfits. Each time, she asked my opinion. Each time I said I thought she looked great, except for the time she came out in something that made her look like one of the Fruit of the Loom singers.

"Which one?" she asked.

"The banana, I think," I answered.

What else takes a long time when a woman shops is that with each outfit she tries on, she must also find matching shoes, belts, necklaces and earrings. It's like trying to put together one of those picture puzzles of Mount Rushmore that come in a thousand pieces.

We were there for an eternity before she finally came out and said, "Let's go."

"You're not going to buy anything?" I asked in disbelief.

"I didn't like a single thing," she said.

I went home and took two Midol. In a couple of hours, I was fine.

EVANS & NOVAK

Reagan's INF pledge set verification trap

WASHINGTON — Despite President Reagan's pledge that the pending INF treaty will be based on "the most stringent verification regime" in history, an authoritative CIA study rules out any way to prevent Soviet cheating, at least during the first few years of the treaty.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

The intelligence study was completed a year ago and has been held under tight secrecy since. Senior officials at the State and Defense Departments and on the National Security Council staff who support the president's drive for the INF treaty have read the study — and wept. It flatly rejects the possibility of verifying compliance with any treaty that commits the Soviets to limit or destroy mobile missiles such as the SS-20, as the INF agreement nearing final agreement in Geneva will do.

Rather than heed this warning and modify his expansive guarantee of strict verification, Reagan has been persuaded by architects of the new detente to embellish his claim. But instead of repetition chasing away the verification nightmare, it promises to confront him on the Senate floor after the treaty is signed at next month's summit.

On Dec. 11, 1986, a high-level interagency "working group" reported to then CIA director William J. Casey in the careful words of the intelligence bureaucracy: "... our current capability to meet adequately the demands placed upon our resources to address effectively the mobile missile problem is limited."

Those words highlight the final report of Casey's super-sensitive Intelligence Requirements and Analysis Working Group. Set up to scrutinize verification in monitoring mobile missiles in the Soviet Union, the group struck at the heart of next year's INF ratification fight in the Senate. "Future requirements" for verifying compliance with a mobile-missile agreement such as the INF treaty, it warns, "are likely to be stringent and may involve accounting for non-deployed" (that is, hidden) "missiles."

There is no conceivable way today to account for non-deployed SS-20s. After the estimated 441 missiles in launchers are destroyed, senators and administration officials who endorse the INF treaty estimate the Soviets will have between 145 and 530 "non-deployed" SS-20s left. But defense hard-liners estimate there could be as many as 2,000. However many there are, the missiles are stashed out of sight, absolutely beyond discovery — unless the Kremlin chooses to uncover them.

The president has known ever since the CIA report was released how difficult it is to guarantee verification of the INF agreement. Nevertheless, Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz time and again have said signing the treaty must and will depend on U.S. ability to verify Soviet compliance. Reagan's promise of "the most stringent verification" in history was made Oct. 17 in his weekly radio address, when he pledged to "settle for nothing less."

A high administration official, worried about the effect on fence-sitting senators of inability to verify, warns privately that Reagan's blanket statements will be self-defeating when all verification shortfalls become known. "The president is saying iron-clad and airtight verification, but that's dangerous to say because it's impossible," he told us.

The "data base" of SS-20 missiles is supposed to answer these questions: How many SS-20s do you have? Where are they located? Can U.S. inspectors see them? With Mikhail Gorbachev due here in less than three weeks, the administration does not have the answers.

Instead, compliance cannot be assured for from five to seven years, when the hidden SS-20s not destroyed will begin to "wither away" as unreliable — and hence useless — for lack of testing. But even that surmise depends on Soviet compliance with a proviso in the INF treaty forbidding future SS-20 testing. Intelligence officials believe the Soviets might beat this by testing their unacknowledged SS-20 stockpile on launchers of long-range SS-25s, a new missile with similar characteristics but which is permitted under the treaty.

According to the CIA study, the U.S. is "hampered" by the lack of a "uniform data base of information" on mobile missiles, raising an ominous question about Soviet exploitation of hidden mobile missiles for possible surprise attack. "A true capability to locate, identify and track mobile missiles for the purpose of targetting is evolutionary," says the study, requiring "significant enhancement over present capabilities." That rules out any way today to knock out mobile missiles because their movement on the ground cannot be tracked.

The president's verification promise puts a weapon into the hands of anti-INF senators. No longer do they have to prove the dubious thesis that Gorbachev is secretly plotting a surprise nuclear strike with hidden SS-20s. Whether or not the vote is even close, those senators can embarrass the president by challenging him to prove the CIA wrong when it reported "stringent" verification procedures are impossible.

Catholic Bishops criticize Central American policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops says U.S. support of the Nicaraguan Contra rebels is a "morally flawed" policy, but some individual bishops strenuously disagree.

A broadside criticizing U.S. policy in Central America was approved by the bishops Thursday on a voice vote, just before they ended their week-long annual meeting.

However, the document won approval only after contentious debate that included assertions by some conservative bishops that the rebels are comparable to Americans in the Revolutionary War or to fighters against Nazi Germany.

The final document says there have been reliable reports of human rights abuses by Nicaragua's Sandinista government as well as the Contras. And it notes in particular "the extremely unfortunate conflict that has developed between the government and the leaders of the Catholic Church" in Nicaragua.

Still, the bishops conclude, "As troubled as we have been by aspects of today's Nicaragua, it seems to us far from clear that Sandinista abuses could merit such lethal response.

"We do believe the policy of support for the Contras to be morally flawed, however sincere the intentions of the persons who have crafted and implemented it."

Nicholas D'Antonio, the U.S. church's vicar for Latin America, decried fellow bishops' efforts to water down or even kill the document, arguing that withdrawing it would send the wrong message.

"If we say nothing," D'Antonio said, people would ask, "What happened to the bishops? Did the Contras get them, too?"

On the other side, Archbishop Philip Hannan of New Orleans said a view that the Contras were wrong to fight "would invalidate the American Revolution." Nicaraguan rebels, he said, "have much more reason to rebel than the American colonies had in 1776."

Retired Bishop George Lynch of Raleigh, N.C., said abandoning the Contras would "in the long run cause greater evil" than the violence of war itself, and that giving up to the Sandinistas would be akin to surrendering to Nazi Germany during World War II.

The pro-Contra bishops, unable to alter the document significantly, finally united behind an amendment by Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston. It proposed rejecting the entire document and substituting a brief statement backing peace efforts in the region but leveling no criticism at the U.S. government.

Law did not put his amendment forward as a pro-Contra effort but rather as an attempt to stop the bishops from injecting themselves into Central American controversy at "a very delicate moment" when hopes for peace have been raised by an agreement signed by Central American governments last August.

Law's amendment was turned down by voice vote, though supporters made up a sizable minority among the bishops.

The final document says, "We have long argued that a significant U.S.-Nicaragua problem exists but only a political solution can finally be successful in Nicaragua as in Central America generally. There is no politically or morally acceptable military solution.

Jim Bakker 'Bible scam' investigated

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal authorities are investigating reports that PTL founder Jim Bakker appealed to television audiences for donations to print Chinese-language Bibles, then used the money elsewhere, a newspaper said today.

The alleged scheme is being probed by a U.S. Justice Department and Internal Revenue Service prosecution team headed by special counsel Charles Alexander, the Chicago Sun-Times reported.

The team is presenting evidence about the financial affairs of Bakker and the PTL ministry to a grand jury in Charlotte, N.C., the newspaper said, without citing sources.

Bakker refused comment, but said through his lawyers that he remembered making the Chinese Bible appeals, the Sun-Times said. He said he did not know how much money was raised or if any Bibles were printed.

He disputed suggestions that as much as $4 million had been raised for the project, the Sun-Times said.

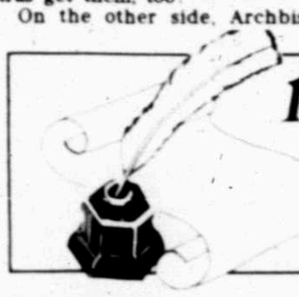
"I don't think it was that much, but I don't really remember, since things really got crazy after that," the newspaper quoted Bakker as saying.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy, relinquished control of PTL after he confessed in March to adultery with a former church secretary, Jessica Hahn. As many as 18 investigations of Bakker and PTL are being conducted by federal agencies, including the IRS, the Justice Department and the Postal Service, the Sun-Times said.

The newspaper said Alexander was told the Chinese Bible scheme began when Bakker approached Stan Cottrell, a man known for attempting to promote Christian fellowship in China.

Cottrell said Bakker asked him after an August 1986 appearance on the "PTL Club" television show to intervene with China's government so PTL could set up a distribution system for Chinese-language Bibles there.

Through his contacts in the Beijing government, Cottrell said, he secured preliminary approval for the printing of 10 million Bibles in China and their distribution at a cost of 16 cents apiece.



1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

Tuesday, Nov. 20, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Today was cloudy and warm — 56 at Springmill.

In an advertisement, merchants Young and McCullock at their store on Second and Chestnut streets, were selling Noah Webster's "Lessons in Reading and Speaking." The topics in these lessons included geography, history, United States politics, elocution, English grammar, and "Direction for expressing the principle Passions of the Mind." They also carried Webster's "English Grammar" and "The American Spelling Book." They even sold the ever popular "New England Primer." Young and McCullock guaranteed that all books were "neatly bound and gilt" and all were American editions. They added further that, "Large allowances made, when taken by the quantity."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

There was still no quorum in Congress. However, today Cyrus Griffin and John Brown from Virginia appeared and delivered their credentials.

RATIFICATION TODAY

Nicholas Gilman, waiting in New York for Congress to convene, replied to a letter from Pennsylvania congressman William Irvine with the latest news:

"I am honored with your obliging favor of the 9th instant and am very happy to hear there is so great a probability of the adoption of the new Constitution in your State — The Legislature of New Hampshire are called together on the occasion and I believe there is no reason to doubt of its being adopted in that State — it will go a little harder in Massachusetts but will finally succeed — I have seen a list of the Members chosen for the Convention in Connecticut and there appear to be a very large majority who are known to be in favor of the new plan."

"The Federalist, No. 8," by Alexander Hamilton, appeared in the New York Packet.

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) began today to take his meals at Columbia College. He attended prayers there, purchased a tea kettle for 23 shillings and something else, probably either a "shawl" or a "share" for 54 shillings.

George Washington noted the weather (warm and pleasant morning, "lowering" later) but no activities. Eight men came to dinner, but left in the evening. Corbin Washington had left after breakfast.

Thomas Mifflin (Pa.) dined at Erwins Tavern with Jacob Hiltzheimer, Richard Peters and a number of other members of the Pennsylvania legislature.

Caleb and Sarah Hooker Strong (Mass.) observed their 10th wedding anniversary.

LOOKING BACK

The Consequences of Disunion

In "The Federalist, No. 7," Hamilton had set out the forces tending to break up the Union and create enmity among the 13 states. In today's issue, he pictured the consequences of wars between the states. As a good propagandist, he did not understate his case.

First, he noted, wars between the American states would have more affect on the general population than European war. In Europe, frontiers were fortified, nations maintained standing armies, and a year could be spent trying to capture one or two frontier cities. In America, however, "conquests would be as easy to be made, as difficult to be retained. War therefore would be desultory and predatory. PLUNDER and devastation ever march in the train of irregulars."

Culver not unhappy to be passed over for court slot

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Judge Barbara Culver, presiding judge of the 318th Texas District Court for Midland County, was not disheartened that Texas Gov. Bill Clements did not appoint her chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

She had been among the top three statewide finalists for the appointment.

"I want you to know that I am a reject," said the judge, whose smile seemed to be her consolation. "I'm really relieved that it's over," she said Thursday.

"It was great being on the list; it's an honor being considered" for the chief-justice post. However, "I enjoy my job here," she said. "I like Midland, and my family is here."

Clements on Wednesday appointed a 38-year-old Houston-based state district court judge, Thomas Phillips, to the post. Like the governor, Phillips is Republican.

Phillips will replace Chief Justice John Hill, a former (1978) Democratic Party gubernatorial candidate, who is resigning amid his six-year term on the Supreme Court to return to private law practice and to campaign for changes in the current system of electing Texas judges.

"It was great being on the list; it's an honor being considered (for the chief-justice post)...I enjoy my job here. I like Midland, and my family is here."
— Midland County Judge Barbara Culver

In a way, Culver indicated that she was relieved. Had she been appointed, she would have had the expense of campaigning statewide next year for election to the two years remaining in Hill's six-year term. Now, that will be Phillips' chore if he wants to continue in the post.

"I was honored in being considered," Culver said, "and I'm not disappointed with the way it came out. I got up to the top three" from a "very long" list of nominees for the appointment.

Culver was the only woman and the only West Texan seriously being considered for chief justice.

"We'll have to wait some years before a woman gets on the court," she said, "and we'll have to wait a few years before a West Texan gets on the court."

Culver, a Republican, was appointed to the state judgeship in 1978 by Democratic Gov. Dolph Briscoe. Before that, she had been a Midland County judge since 1963. In her current role, Culver mainly presides over family disputes, such as divorces and child-custody cases.

"Personally," the judge said, "I'm happy being here."

Culver said that "quite a few" of her friends across the state had pushed for appointment.

"I did not stage an assault upon the governor for the appointment," said Culver, who was interviewed by the governor two weeks ago. "It's his choice."

Local farmers boll over co-op's gin with early harvest

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ervin and Jon Baumann, Midland County father-son cotton-farming partners, were among the first farmers here to plant last spring and were about the first to finish harvesting this fall.

"We were taking (cotton) strippers off when other people were putting strippers on," said 24-year-old Jon Baumann.

As a result, the Baumanns last Sept. 24 hauled to the Midland Farmers Cooperative cotton gin the first batch of Midland County cotton to be processed and baled here in 1987.

And the co-op ginned the Baumanns' first bale for free and topped that with a $100 check presented to them by co-op manager Charlie Wright.

The Baumanns' mainstay cotton variety this year was Earlycot-32.

"That's why we got it out early — Earlycot," Ervin Baumann said this week. "It's short-term cotton."

That particular batch of cotton was planted the first of May on dryland — non-irrigated — acreage.

The Baumanns finished stripping the last day of October. "As a matter of fact," said Ervin Baumann, who has been farming in the Valley View community southeast of Midland since 1959, "that's usually when we get started (stripping)."

But, he noted, "Every year is a different ball game." In addition to the Upland Earlycot-32 variety, the Baumanns planted "some experimental cotton to compare against what we are growing," the father said. They plan to plant Earlycot in 1988.

The normal planting season usually is mid-May after planting rains or in early June if the rains are late.

But this year, the land was visited by heavy 1986 fall rains and winter moisture and spring rains. And the spring winds were minimal. Heavy winds tend to blow the topsoil and rob the ground of moisture.

But the growing season was dry in July and August, "when we needed some moisture," said Jon Baumann, but still there was enough underground moisture to make a crop dryland farming.

"If we had had that rain the first of August this year," said Rick Minzenmayer, Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologist for Midland County, "it would have been amazing how much cotton would have been brought in." Minzenmayer noted that TAEX and the Baumanns "cooperated real well" in putting in research plots to observe new experimental cotton varieties and to test the efficacy of insecticides.

The Baumanns' crop was not beset by insects, such as the bollworm.

"We sprayed," Ervin Baumann said. "We had a good program, good insect-control program. Consequently, we didn't hardly have any (harmful insects)."

Baumann and his son farm about 400 acres of cotton — one-third dryland and two-thirds irrigated. The father-son farmers averaged a "little more" than a bale to the acre. The cotton industry's standard bale is 480 pounds, and the Midland co-op tries to keep bales between 480 and 550 pounds.

The fall harvesting season has been ideal for bringing crops in — no rains, no inclement weather, just sunny warm and cold days.

"We've had an excellent fall," said Earnest Kiker, Midland County TAEX agricultural agent. Harvesting is "probably" about 70 percent finished, he said. "As soon as we get the cotton in, we will sure need some rain" in readying the soil for the 1988 cotton season.

The Baumanns seemed pleased with their crop and with the upswing in cotton prices.

"It's really improved over what it has been the past four or five years," Ervin Baumann said.

Baled cotton this year is priced about 59 to 60 cents a pound.

"But to make money, we need to get it up to 70 cents," said Ervin Baumann. "The level it's up to now is about break-even."

Noted co-op manager Charlie Wright: "Some say they can make money at the price cotton is now. Some say they can't."

"I'd say most of these farmers will make money off of dry-land this year," Wright said. "But they won't get ahead, because they've had too many lean years."

Women A&M students burned up over bonfire

Hearst News Service

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University's annual bonfire won't be lighted until next week but it already has produced some smoke.

This year, the problem isn't the theft of outhouses and road signs to adorn the top of the 55-foot-tall pyre or the dangerous drift of ashes toward homes downwind. It is the makeup of the student work force that is building it.

Women say they are not wanted in the bonfire perimeter — where construction of the stack takes place — and are victims of an unwritten rule that keeps them from actively participating in the most pivotal social activity of the school year.

"It's not fair," said Robin Devin, shivering on the sidelines as she watched all-male work crews lifting

Columnist's best intentions go up in smoke as day drags by

Ott

Thursday was the Great American Smoke-Out. As honorary chairman, I had vowed to give up the nasty habit for 24 hours. My day went something like this:

— 6:30 a.m.: Alarm goes off.

— 6:35 a.m.: Alarm still going off.

— 6:36 a.m.: Shut off alarm and mumble a word I would never want my mother to hear me say.

— 6:37 a.m.: Suffer coughing attack. Reach for cigarettes on coffee table next to bed.

— 6:38 a.m.: Realize cigarettes are not in their regular place.

— 6:39 a.m.: Panic.

— 6:40 a.m.: Vaguely remember my incredibly foolish agreement to participate in the Great American Smoke-Out.

— 6:43 a.m.: Say to myself, "To hell with the Smoke-Out. Where are my Marlboros?"

— 6:45 a.m.: Reconsider. After all, a promise is a promise. Toss the cigarette pack aside.

— 6:47 a.m.: Crawl out of bed.

— 6:48 a.m.: Stub my left big toe on night stand. Scream out in horror and irrationally blame the pain on the American Cancer Society.

— 6:49-7:20 a.m.: Shower, wash hair, brush teeth, throw up, etc.

— 7:20-7:55 a.m.: Sit on couch, stare at the wall and fondle a cigarette.

— 8-8:15 a.m.: Do a public service spot on the radio, telling people I'm not going to smoke for 24 hours and neither should they.

— 8:16 a.m.: Feel like a hypocrite.

— 9-9:45 a.m.: Take a drive in the country. Get mad at the radio station because they won't play my favorite Waylon Jennings song, something about "my rough and rowdy days." Realize not smoking might tend to make me a tad irritable.

— 10 a.m.: Finally show up at the office.

— 10:15-10:45 a.m.: Inhale other people's smoke.

— 11 a.m.: Become dizzy and lightheaded.

— 11:15 a.m.: Receive a call from the mayor, who earlier had adopted me as his "smoker for a day." He encourages me not to yield to the temptation. "No sweat," I lie to him in reply.

— 11:35 a.m.: Sneak into the restroom and put a Marlboro to my lips. Suddenly overcome with guilt feelings. Place the cigarette back in the pack and return to my desk.

— 11:55 a.m.: Realize I haven't accomplished a thing during the first half of the day.

— Noon: Congratulate myself, nonetheless, for not smoking. "This isn't so tough," I tell myself.

— 12:30 p.m.: Go to lunch with three very attractive American Cancer Society representatives and another poor slob who is trying to quit.

— 1:15 p.m.: Conclude the meal, push the plate away and automatically reach for a cigarette.

— 1:16 p.m.: Have my hands slapped by the three very attractive American Cancer Society representatives.

— 1:17 p.m.: Realize violent women aren't all they are cracked up to be.

— 1:20-2 p.m.: Take another ride in the country. Think to myself, "I thought not smoking was supposed to save money. At this rate, I'll spend more on gas than cigarettes."

— 3:15 p.m.: Mosey back into the office. Discover that all the goodies — gum, suckers, mints, etc. — that were supposed to help me through my trying times have been consumed by my fellow workers, most of whom never smoked to begin with. "We were just hungry," they tell me.

— 3:30-5 p.m.: Do absolutely nothing around the office except field questions about how I am holding up under the pressure, which of course makes holding up under the pressure harder than ever.

— 5:15 p.m.: Feel incredibly good about myself as I arrive at my favorite hangout.

— 5:16 p.m.: A "friend" grins devilishly at me and waves a lighted cigarette under my nose.

— 5:17 p.m.: I smile in return, but decline his offer.

— 5:25 p.m.: Realize I am surrounded by people, all of whom are blowing smoke at me and laughing.

— 5:29 p.m.: Feeling weaker and weaker.

— 5:38 p.m.: Take one puff from someone's cigarette.

— 5:47 p.m.: Take two puffs from someone's cigarette.

— 5:59 p.m.: Take three puffs from someone's cigarette.

— 6 p.m.: Succumb to temptation and light up my own cigarette.

— 6:01 p.m.: Glance around and notice everyone is pointing at me and shaking their heads in disgust.

— 6:13 p.m.: Overcome by feelings of guilt.

— 6:14 p.m.: Try to convince myself I did pretty good. "You made it through most of the day. That's better than most."

— 6:15 p.m.: Call myself a liar. "You know good and well you slipped out of the office at 10:45 this morning and had one. So quit pretending, you spineless varmit. You're a disgrace."

Oh well, what else is new?.

logs and scaling the growing stack earlier this week. "I'd like the same chance as everyone."

A visit to the site seems justify the complaints. In the muddy ruts of Duncan Drill Field, amid the stacks of wood and roaring tractors where civilians and cadets work side-by-side around the clock, there were no women working.

The issue came to a head last month when two female photographers from the school yearbook claimed male work crews shouted obscenities and threw dirt on them as they tried to photograph the raising of the bonfire's center pole.

The male-dominated leadership, however, says there is no prohibition against women working on the bonfire.

Women have always been welcome as long as they pulled their share of the work and toed the ceremonial line, the leadership said.

Steve Cook, one of the eight senior bonfire leaders, who are called "red pots" because of the red helmets they wear, said the photographers were standing too close and were in danger.

The raising of the center pole is symbolic, prompting an outpouring of Aggie spirit, he said.

Leaders of a local women's rights group, which last week staged an ad hoc protest over the photography incident, applauded the news that women are welcome, adding that another wall in A&M's fortress of tradition has fallen.

They have scheduled a forum for this morning and have invited the bonfire's leaders to announce the policy.

JURY

Several Midland landmen are among those under investigation for their alleged roles in questionable mineral lease transactions involving possible illegal kickbacks which occurred during the five-year-period, officials have said.

Fish was a Getty landman from 1980-1985.

It was not discerned Thursday whether attorneys representing the other landmen would present defense arguments Nov. 30.

District Court Judge Vann Culp had no comment on the matter late Thursday.

Seen Wednesday outside the grand jury chamber were legal and internal security officials from Texaco Inc. in Houston and the Midland County Sheriff's Office oil field theft investigator.

Texaco turned findings of its in-house audit of the Getty land department — done after the Texaco-Getty merger — to the sheriff's department which later released information to the district attorney's office.

Odessan gets 35-year sentence for murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 20-year-old man found guilty of murder late Thursday night must serve just under nine years of a 35-year prison term before he becomes eligible for parole under current state law.

A 70th District Court jury of eight men and four women spent slightly more than 4½ hours Thursday deliberating on what penalty should be assessed Bertram Powell for his part in the March 17, 1986, fatal shooting of Fred Richardson, also known as Frederick Rose.

Jurors began deliberations about 10:50 a.m. Thursday, took an hour for lunch, returned and continued deliberating until 4:06 p.m., when they found that Powell had used a deadly weapon and should be sentenced to 35 years in prison.

Asked if he felt justice had been served, Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen said, "Not really." He noted that jurors could not be told Powell would be required to serve only about a quarter of whatever sentence they imposed if they found he used a deadly weapon, less if they found he did not.

Augesen had asked jurors to hand Powell the maximum sentence of 99 years and a $10,000 fine or not less than 50 years.

Powell is the third brother to be sent to prison for what the district attorney termed the brutal, execution-type killing of Richardson-Rose, who was shot at least six times, including three times in the forehead at point blank range.

Arthur Lee Powell Jr., 24, was convicted of the murder of Richardson-Rose in 70th District Court in November 1986 and sentenced to 50 years in prison. Carl Powell, 22, was sentenced in January to a 45-year prison sentence for his part in the killing of Richardson-Rose.

San Antonio lawyer Charles Campion, who with his brother Bernard, defended Bertram Powell, said he thought "the sentence is excessive," adding that Powell had indicated he intends to appeal the conviction.

The fatal shooting of Richardson-Rose occurred in the 300 block of South Hancock Avenue following a chase that began near the intersection of East Pearl Street and South Texas Street.

Cause of 5-month-old's death awaits final autopsy

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The actual cause of death of a 4-month-old boy who died Monday after being treated at Medical Center Hospital is still pending although a preliminary autopsy report indicates the child's body showed some evidence of physical abuse.

Simon Alejandro Sanchez, who lived at the Sunset Apartments, 9100 Andrews Highway, with his parents, was transported to MCH for treatment after being taken to Fire Station No. 8 by three adults, according to police reports. The child earlier had been in the care of a babysitter, police said.

Ector County Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford said Friday it may be two weeks or more before additional tests are concluded and the actual cause of the infant's death is determined.

The autopsy performed by MCH pathologist Dr. Sparks Veasey showed the child had multiple bruises on the buttocks, upper legs and feet, plus an apparent burn on his left leg.

According to Veasey, the child had a subsurface hemorrhage in the frontal neck area, marked accumulation of fluid and pockets of red blood cells in the lung area, and moderate accumulation of fluid in the main brain area.

Hungerford said Odessa police continue to investigate the infant's death, but he would not know if any charges would be filed until a final determination is made as to the specific cause of death.

MCT holds musical tryouts

From Staff Reports

The talent search is on for singers, dancers and actors to perform in Midland Community Theatre's opening musical of the 1988 season, "South Pacific."

"There is a tremendous amount of talent in West Texas," says Don Bachmann, MCT executive director. "We are engaged in an all-out search for the most talented to fill the parts in our major musical.

"One of out challenges is to find a baritone to play the love interest in 'South Pacific.' We also need a feisty soprano to play the part of Nellie, who wants to 'wash that man right out of her hair,' and an older woman to play the earthy Bloody Mary who sings 'Bali' Ha'i.' There's a part of a young, handsome lieutenant and the beautiful island girl who wins his heart."

Also needed are men who can do comedy and a full crew of singers and dancers. Roles are available for eight children. The cast will include a total of 22 men and 18 women.

Auditions are being held at 7 p.m. Sunday and Monday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., in the Davis Theatre One. Auditions for children will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Scripts and musical scores are available from MCT's box office, 682-2544.

The "Garage Free" includes clothing and small appliances, which are available at no charge. It will be held at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

Arbitrator reinstates homosexual police officer

EL PASO (AP) — An arbitrator has ruled that homosexual police officer who was fired from her job should get her job back along with more than $15,000 in back pay.

The ruling Thursday determined that the dismissal of Patricia A. Minton, 27, on Sept. 4, 1986, was unreasonable.

Minton was fired after a six-month El Paso Police Department internal affairs investigation stemming from her actions at a nightspot frequented by homosexuals.

She likely will be back on the job by the end of the month, authorities say.

Arbitrator Roberto Albertorio of Albuquerque reduced Minton's dismissal to a total of 45 days suspension without pay, 15 days for a charge of violating a Police Department gag order and 30 days for a charge of conduct unbecoming of a police officer. She also will receive 10½ months worth of salary.

Bill Ellis, a lawyer who represented Minton, said, "This is not a gay rights opinion. It is an opinion that does not permit the imposition of double moral standards, and it holds all officers to the same amorous contact in public."

Ellis said he hopes department officials will take the opinion as a message to stay out of their officers' private lives unless there is a compelling reason to become involved.

"The decision has been made, and we will abide by it," police spokesman Lt. J.R. Grijalva said.

Minton said she was pleased by the ruling and is anxious to return to work.

"Like I said from the first day, I enjoyed the job and I love it, and I'm ready to go back," she said.

Border retailers already feel effect of peso's drop

Related story Page 2D

EL PASO (AP) — Retailers in El Paso and Juarez are generally cautious about predicting the effects of the Mexican peso's steep devaluations, but some already have seen a drop in business.

"Look at this place," said Ignacia Vasquez, sweeping her hand across her deserted restaurant in downtown El Paso. It was 12:30 p.m. Thursday — lunchtime. "It's usually full right now."

She blamed the loss of business on the precipitous devaluation of the peso, which fell from about 1,700 to the dollar Tuesday to 3,000 in some border trading houses Wednesday. The peso recovered slightly Thursday in El Paso and Juarez, where exchange houses were buying dollars Thursday evening for 2,000 pesos and selling dollars for 2,800 pesos.

El Paso retailers such as Mrs. Vasquez, who relies heavily on customers from Mexico, say they probably will be hit hard by the devaluation. So will Mexican workers, who must struggle against the resulting inflation.

But the devaluation probably won't have much effect on owners of maquiladoras or on tourism in Mexican border cities like Juarez, officials say.

Inflation already had hurt Raul Perez, a Juarez street vendor who on Thursday was selling bananas, persimmons and limes from a grocery shopping cart.

Perez said the devaluation prompted him to raise the price of persimmons from 1,400 pesos Wednesday to 3,000 pesos Thursday.

"I try to sell the fruit on the street, but people tell me they don't have the money," he complained.

Employees of maquiladoras — American-owned factories that employ low-paid Mexicans — said they hoped wages would keep up with inflation.

"I can afford lights and gas now, but next month, who knows?" said Estela Leresma, who earns 14,000 pesos a week at a maquiladora. In terms of dollars, her wages dropped in two days from about $8.25 a week to about $6.65 a week.

Shelia Marie Toohey Beam, center, breaks out in tears at her arrival at Houston's Hobby Airport Thursday.

Supremacist's wife to be examined at hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — The wife of a white supremacist will be examined at a local hospital for injuries she apparently suffered when she and her husband were arrested by Mexican authorities, an attorney says.

Sheila Beam, the 20-year-old wife of Louis Ray Beam Jr., returned to Houston Thursday night for a tearful reunion with her mother, three brothers and friends. She had been released from a Mexican jail earlier this week.

"I'm OK. I want to see Jana," Mrs. Beam said referring to her friend, Jana Mears. "I can't say anything," she told a crowd of reporters at the airport.

Mrs. Beam was accompanied on the flight from San Diego by her father, Stanley Toohey, and another brother.

"Hallelujah! Hallelujah!," said her father, Stanley Toohey. "How am I supposed to feel? I mean, my daughter's free, you know."

"I'm glad she's home. I'm very excited," said her mother, Dorothy Toohey.

After arriving at Houston Hobby Airport, she was whisked away to a hospital for treatment, attorney Kirk Lyons said.

"She's apparently in a great deal of pain," Lyons said. She apparently has a fractured nose, bruises, possible internal injuries and a possible back injury, he said.

Mrs. Beam flew to Los Angeles from Guadalajara Monday night, two days after a Mexican judge stunned Mexican police by ordering her release and deportation.

Mrs. Toohey said her daughter was exhausted from the ordeal and had spent some time resting at a brother's house in San Diego before returning to Houston.

"She's feeling a lot better. She was ready to make the trip today," Mrs. Toohey said before her daughter's arrival Thursday. "We won't know her side of the story until she comes home."

Mrs. Beam's parents live in Santa Fe, Texas, southeast of Houston.

Mexican authorities had charged Mrs. Beam with possessing an illegal weapon and shooting a Mexican federal police officer during the arrest of her husband in a stakeout at their Chapala, Mexico, home Nov. 6.

The officer was shot twice, and Mrs. Beam contended she fired at him because she thought he was a burglar.

In a ruling issued Saturday, Judge Fernando Jose de Jesus Lopez dismissed the charges and ordered Mrs. Beam deported for entering Mexico without proper immigration papers.

The Beams were married April 4, just a few days before Beam was indicted by a federal grand jury in Fort Smith, Ark., on a charge of seditious conspiracy.

Railroad Commission posts transportation rule changes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has posted for public comment amendments to its transportation rules that would exempt certain farm, ranch and commercial vehicles from registration or insurance requirements.

To implement bills passed this year by the Legislature, the commission in September adopted rules requiring operators of commercial vehicles weighing 10,000 pounds or more to register them and to maintain a minimum of $500,000 single limit liability insurance coverage.

One rule change posted this week would exempt commercial vehicles with three or fewer axles, or those weighing 26,000 pounds or less, from the $500,000 insurance requirement.

Operators still would have to register the vehicles, pay a $1 registration fee and comply with state law requiring minimum insurance levels on vehicles.

The commission also posted a rule change that would exempt certain farm and ranch vehicles from both the registration and the $500,000 liability insurance requirements.

Exempt vehicles would include those operated by or on behalf of a farmer or rancher transporting his own poultry or poultry products, dairy products, livestock, livestock products or farm products for sale.

Alpine tundra plants revitalized after summer hikers banned

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona's only expanse of fragile alpine tundra is making a comeback after being trampled half to death by hikers, U.S. Forest Service officials say.

The 1,200-acre area of treeless tundra, located on the flanks of the 12,633-foot San Francisco Peaks north of Flagstaff, was closed to summertime hiking two years ago because hundreds of vulnerable alpine plants were being uprooted.

Among the ravaged species was the San Francisco Peaks groundsel, a delicate plant that is unique to the mountain range and listed by the government as a threatened species.

"Things are looking much better since we banned all off-trail hiking in 1985 and closed one of the peaks entirely to give these plants a chance to come back," said Paul Boucher, biological technician for the Coconino National Forest.

"The tundra area, which takes in the area from treeline at 11,400 feet to the summit, was being randomly destroyed by hikers going up that loose, gravelly soil in the summer months when there's no snow cover," Boucher said.

Boucher said flowering plants on the peaks include mountain avens, sandwarts, Parry's primrose and the groundsel.

"That species of groundsel is a plant endemic only to the San Francisco Peaks and thrives in gravelly, sandy soil real close to the ground," he said. "It has fleshy greenish-purple leaves and bright, showy yellow flowers about the size of a dime."

Boucher said life is hard enough for plants in the tundra zone without an added threat from hikers.

"It's an extremely harsh environment for any species to have to exist in," he explained. "There are freeze conditions almost 365 nights a year, there's a lot of soil movement and the growing season is very short, probably from about June 1 to Aug. 30."

Coconino Forest officials estimate that about 10,000 people a year hike on the peaks, though not all of them make it up to the tundra area.

Because of the popularity of the peaks, "just about everything up there was showing fairly severe damage," Boucher said. "So we banned all summer hiking on Agassiz Peak — at 12,356 feet, the second highest point in the range — and built a trail to the highest point, Mount Humphreys, and restricted travel to the trail."

Boucher said mountaineers who climb the peaks in winter or spring months, when the tundra is covered with snow, can go anywhere they want.

Southerners told to keep their accents

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southerners should learn to enjoy their special ways of talking and quit trying to change them to please other people, a literary critic says.

"I wish my Southern countrymen could live in the East for awhile. If they listened to the accents there, they might be a little slower to change. It's a rasping, unpleasant sound," said Cleanth Brooks, professor emeritus at Yale University and an author of several books on literary technique and rhetoric.

"If the Southern accent dies, it will be out of pure ignorance," he said at a recent writers' conference.

Police sergeant's indictment leaves town's force short

LA JOYA (AP) — This South Texas city's police chief had to hastily swear in six reservists to help keep the peace after the force's second-highest ranking officer was indicted on weapons charges.

Sgt. Jose Santos Villareal, 29, was arrested Wednesday because of an 11-count indictment that says he bought 10 paramilitary weapons between March 9 and April 20 and delivered them to a Mexican citizen.

The Mexican citizen named in the indictment, Juan Garza, remains at large, said Christ Heart, resident agent-in-charge of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Villareal was released Wednesday on a $50,000 unsecured bond after an appearance before a U.S. magistrate.

"It caught everybody completely by surprise," La Joya Police Chief Jesus Perez said Thursday. "No one had been approached by ATF. They came in and told me, 'We have a warrant for your sergeant.' "

Perez suspended Villareal without pay pending the outcome of the charges. Perez said Villareal has not submitted a letter of resignation.

City officials held an emergency meeting Wednesday night because Villareal's suspension left the four-person police force shorthanded. Perez swore in six basic reserve officers to assist.

"This definitely is going to reflect on the department," Perez said. "Many people are going to get the wrong idea about the officers that are here. We're going to have to face some criticism. We're going to have to hold our heads up high and continue doing what we're here to do, and that's enforce the law."

STATE IN BRIEF

Families of dead aliens sue boxcar maker for damages

EL PASO (AP) — A boxcar manufacturer is responsible for the deaths of 18 men who perished in an airtight railroad car in July, a lawsuit claims.

Families of six of the 18 men who died in the locked boxcar near Sierra Blanca, Texas, filed suit Thursday against the railroad and the boxcar's manufacturer.

The civil suit filed in El Paso state district court contends that Bellevue, Wash.-based Pacific Car & Foundry Co. is responsible because the car was "defective and unsafe" when it was built in 1969. The suit also named New York-based Missouri-Pacific Railroad as a defendant.

The 18 victims, all illegal immigrants who crossed the Rio Grande at El Paso, were found dead inside the boxcar July 2 during a routine search by U.S. Border Patrol agents at Sierra Blanca.

The men had been locked into the car at a switching yard in El Paso the day before. Only one of the 19 men trapped inside the boxcar survived.

FBI seeks missing $109,220

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI is trying to locate $109,220 in cash seized as evidence from drug traffickers and last used by an attorney in arguments before jurors.

Officials noticed the cash was missing June 4 when agents of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration asked that it be returned for deposit to the U.S. Treasury, The Dallas Morning News reported Thursday

The cash was last seen in U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer's courtroom on April 16, 1986.

Blacks, firm's officials meet

DALLAS (AP) — Top officials of Burger King Corp. were to meet today with local black leaders and a representative of a Chicago-based civil-rights group to discuss the corporation's commitment to affirmative action and minority economic development.

Peter Johnson, director of the Dallas chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Thursday told the Dallas Times Herald that several local black business and church leaders believe Burger King must be forced to hire more minority contractors and recruit more minority franchise holders.

FAMILY MATTERS

Visits from relatives often cause tension

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: I hesitated a long time before writing you about this. In fact, I have waited a whole year. But I can't go through another Thanksgiving and Christmas like last year. Every year my parents come in on Thanksgiving for the week and my husband's parents come in for a week at Christmas. I know that it doesn't sound very Christian, but we are all nervous wrecks by the time they leave.

I am not sure why I am writing to you. But I feel guilty for the way I feel about our parents. At other times, we all get along very well. Is there anything you can suggest that might make us feel better or get along better? — NO NAME PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Holidays can be stressful times for everyone. Husbands and wives often mysteriously become sons and daughters, or are expected to be. What should be a wonderful time of thanksgiving, love and peace can turn into a test of wills and endurance.

Often, we do not experience the same feelings we perceive others are experiencing. I think this is especially hard when our religion and society tell us we should be experiencing one feeling, when we are actually having another. This is called cognitive dissidence and it's not very pleasant.

Today, families often live far apart. This creates an increasing need to visit out-of-town relatives in order to maintain family ties. However, as you have experienced, it has its risks. A recent study from the University of Minnesota about visits from out-of-town relatives found that during such visits the activities seemed to center on eating and talking. This usually results in the females spending a great deal of time in the kitchen together. This can be good or bad — Sometimes too many cooks spoil the soup, as the old saying goes.

Although the study did show that tension was present during visits from relatives, overall, the tensions seemed to be "average." Study participates noted that they did experienced feelings of their space being invaded and of being treated like a child. They also felt that secrets were being kept from other members of the family and that they had to do things they really did not want to do. It was also noted that the offspring felt more tension than the parents. The parents all seemed to enjoy the visits more than the offsprings.

One of the study's findings may be helpful to you and your family. The largest variable associated with how everyone felt about the visit was the length of the visit. They noted that strain increased with length of stay. A long-term visit without sleeping privacy for the visitors was the most stressful. So you might consider reducing the length of your relatives' visits and ensuring that your parents have sleeping privacy.

DEAR FAMILY: My sister is in the process of getting a divorce. She has two young sons and I think that boys really need their father. What happens to kids that are raised by only one parent? It seems like to me that they would have lots of problems. — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: It's hard to raise children. A recent study compared a sample of young adults raised in single parent families with a sample of young adults raised in intact families. The study found that the young adults raised by a single parent generally had lower education and hence lower occupational and economic attainment than those raised by two parents. Those from single parent families tended to have their first child at a younger age, and to be separated or divorced rather than married. They also found that children raised in single parent families were at more risk of unmarried pregnancy.

Researchers felt that the data also indicated that there were other important differences in addition to the economics. They suggest that having a second parent in the family helped the offspring in terms of role modeling, providing guidance and counseling, and teaching practical skills for living with someone else. The other parent may help reinforce the importance of education to the child and help prevent the child from dropping out.

The net of all of that for me is that being a single parent is hard and we need to do all that we can as friends, relatives and co-workers to help. We can help by providing a sympathetic, non-judgmental ear, inviting the children over and, as males, spend some time with the children to provide a positive male role model. Also, continuing to include the single parent in social activities is important.

DEAR ABBY

Forgotten item reveals pain of departure

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, the woman I had loved for six years moved to another city. We lived together for the last three years. Finally, she said she needed to get on with her life, and she left me.

In the process of moving, she inadvertently left behind a gift I had given her last Christmas. It was a beautiful, expensive (not that the price matters), sexy, very revealing nightgown. Our relationship is over, but I can't bear the thought of her wearing that nightgown for another. I feel that I should mail it to her, but, as I have said, I hate the idea of her wearing it for someone else.

What do I do, Abby? — BEWILDERED IN LA CROSSE

DEAR BEWILDERED: You pack up the lady's property and send it to her, that's what you do. If it's any consolation, Freud said, "There are no accidents." Could she have left it behind because, unconsciously, she wanted to come back?

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Jeffrey's Mother" hit home with me. It seems that Jeffrey had been dating Karen exclusively for two years, a fact well-known to his mother, but in introducing Karen to her friends, she said, "This is my son, Jeffrey, and his friend, Karen."

Karen took offense, saying she should have been introduced as "Jeffrey's girlfriend."

Here's my situation: My boyfriend and I have been living together for six months. Although we are not formally engaged, we plan to marry next year.

Last month, at his sister's wedding, I had a chance to meet his whole family, who all live out of state. His mother, who is aware of our relationship and future plans, introduced me to all the aunts, uncles, sisters, brothers and grandparents as her son's "little friend"! — BELITTLED IN EL PASO

DEAR BELITTLED: The letter from "Jeffrey's Mom" sparked other memorable introductions. For example:

DEAR ABBY: Years ago when I was just a poor college kid, I was invited to spend the Christmas holidays with the family of a girl I'd been dating for about six months. We liked each other a lot, but I was in no position to make any kind of commitment. Well, can you imagine how I felt when her mother introduced me all over the place as "Jennifer's fiance"? — GIL (STILL SINGLE)

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'A LOVING MOTHER': So far you have given your son a car for his 18th birthday. He totaled it after three days. You gave him another car, which he totaled in two months. You gave him a chance for a college education. He dropped out in his sophomore year. You paid for the diamond ring that he gave his fiancee. He then broke the engagement, she returned the ring, and he hocked it and kept the money.

And now you ask me if you should borrow on your home to put this son in business.

My answer is an unqualified NO! Give him one more gift: a chance to prove that he is a man. Let him find his own job, stick to it, and learn how to stand on his own two feet.

Empress took whole day to wash her hair

Copley News Service

Empress Elisabeth of Austria and queen of Hungary, born in 1837, was one of the great beauties of her day. She bore three children before she was 21.

Obsessed by her appearance, she spent at least three hours a day tending to her hair, which eventually reached down to her toes; to wash it took a whole day.

Crocheted items 'dress' house

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left some of her favorite columns from the past.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I turned the page of a leading magazine recently and my heart skipped a beat.

There in full glorious buttercup yellow were 11 crocheted pieces for your bathroom. There were a crocheted cover for the toilet seat and the tank, a contour rug, an oval rug for use in front of the bowl, a cover for the toilet tissue and a tieback for the shower curtain.

There also were crocheted covers for the bar of soap, the nose tissue, cleanser can, facial tissue and a little hat to decorate the wall.

I pray my Aunt Mae will not read the article and crochet herself blind by next Christmas.

Don't bother to write and tell me that gifts made from the heart are the most beautiful gifts one can receive, or that I am a pile of worthless slime who doesn't deserve to be remembered in such a personal way. Don't you think I know that and feel rotten enough about it?

It's just that I have a whole house full of gifts from Aunt Mae's heart already.

Aunt Mae leaves nothing undressed. There is a Mexican serape and 10-gallon hat over my Tabasco sauce. Every bottle on our bar is dressed like a poodle. There's a costume for every door knob for every season beginning with a crocheted valentine and ending with a Santa Claus.

There are crocheted coasters, afghans, pillows, tablecloths, sachet holders, lamp shades, bookmarks, chair-back doilies, place mats and a cover for the phone book.

Poor Aunt Mae succumbed to the talents of her nimble fingers years ago. And who among us has not at one time or another nearly drowned in our handiwork? With me, it was a knitting class I joined back in 1973. By 1974, everyone who nodded to me within a 200-mile radius had a pair of knitted one-size-fits-all bedroom slippers. I was a woman possessed.

With my sister-in-law, it was seashells. She moved to a Florida beach a couple of years ago and worked the beach like a minesweeper. Shells became her life. Christmas ornaments, mirrors and lamps.

The last time I walked the beach with her, she only picked up two shells, thought about it, then discarded one. She's recovering.

They tell me amateur painters are the same way. At first, they fill up their own walls with their talents. Then when they run out of space, they start passing out their paintings like senior class pictures.

I know Aunt Mae will read this. I will understand if she crochets me a noose ... in buttercup yellow.

Soviet immigrant invents power rake for home gardeners

Copley News Service

What do you buy for the gardener who has everything? A power rake, of course.

Believe it or not, a Soviet immigrant living in New York has designed a rake that jiggles leaves without using batteries or electricity.

Inventor Boris Novoselsky's "power rake" has teeth that automatically wiggle from side-to-side as you pull the rake toward you. And when you push the rake away from you, the teeth change directions.

Novoselsky claims his power rake will scratch the itch of frustrated gardeners who often hurt their backs while raking.

In fact, he's so confident about his high-tech rake he had it patented.

Lee, Eastwood area football war heats up

Article gives Rebs incentive

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Despite Midland Lee's 56-0 regular season win over El Paso Eastwood in September at Memorial Stadium, the 2 p.m. area playoff football battle Saturday at the same site as the first carnage has developed into more than just "another" game on the Lee playoff schedule.

"After reading the El Paso newspaper, I guess I should be scared to death going into this game with Eastwood," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "They think they are going to win the game and they feel we have no defensive secondary.

"I guess we better hit the practice field a little harder this week."

Miller was referring to an article run in the El Paso Herald Post earlier this week that carried a headline reading "Ware: Eastwood has chance to beat Midland Lee."

In that article, Eastwood coach Todd Ware said that his Troopers "have the strength to beat the Rebels."

WARE WAS quoted as saying, "I'll tell you what. If we don't beat Lee, they will win the state championship. We've seen film of them against Permian, San Angelo and Abilene, and the only way any of those teams had success was by throwing the football. We're hoping to go to a lot of short passes and misdirection plays to try to keep them off balance."

Ware was also quoted in the article as saying, "Three of the six referees will be from El Paso. That helps us when we play down there. I think our officials will help to call a very fair, clean game."

The last part got Miller's attention in a hurry.

"I got the idea a flag was going to be dropped every time we break for a long run," said Miller. I checked out the El Paso officials, however, and everyone tells me they are the best ones in El Paso. I was assured that they could call a fair game.

"I guess Ware is no different than other coaches we play against. I guess everyone feels like they can throw the ball on us. Amarillo thought that and they did a pretty good job of it. Amarillo didn't throw real well all season, but that quarterback (Chad Hetrick) looked like a pro against us. He did a great job of throwing the football. Everything was on the money."

WARE TOLD the Reporter-Telegram this week that "Lee is the best team in the state, but we are a lot better team than the last time we played them."

Ware added, "We tried to go with our seniors early in the year and that just didn't work out. So, we went with our younger kids and we've won eight games in a row.

"Our future is probably ahead of us with this team since we are starting 10 underclassmen, but I'm proud of what this team has accomplished after losing our first three games. We're a better football team than we were when we played Lee."

Good enough to turnaround 56 points?

"I don't know about that," said Ware. "Maybe, about half of that. The only way to beat Lee is to control the football against them and no one has done that."

The biggest change the Troopers made this season is promoting Bel Air sophomore transfer Eric Jack from the junior varsity to the starting tailback position. Jack has averaged over 100 yards per game through Eastwood's eight victories.

"Jack is a little kid at 150 pounds and has a lot to learn, but he has made a big difference in our team," said Ware. "We put him in on defense late in the game against Lee, but he didn't play any offense in that first game."

Miller said of Jack, "He's a super good running back for a sophomore."

Eastwood is one of the few teams Lee has played that is larger, averaging over 225 pounds per man in the offensive front wall. Guard Willie Barry, a 235-pound senior and tackle Chad Glover, a 240-pound senior, are highly recruited athletes and both are starting defensive tackles.

BUT LEE'S offensive machine leads the state in total offense with fullback Waymon Goodley leading the way with 1,237 yards rushing in 10 games. Lee also features halfbacks Dennis Sterling and Joe Woodard, who have combined for 1,519 more rushing yards. The three backs alone have accounted for 38 rushing touchdowns this year.

Lee also showed an impressive passing attack against Amarillo High with quarterbacks Dudley Jordan and Geoff Rich hitting on five of seven passes for 137 yards and two touchdowns. Wide receiver Durian Jenkins caught all five completions.

Lee enters the contest with two starters out of the game. Safety Eugene Farmer will be out for the fourth week in a row after a knee injury in the game against Odessa Permian. Danny Elliott will again start in Farmer's place. Farmer may be back next week if Lee wins Saturday.

Lee defensive end Steve Brenner twisted an ankle against Amarillo High last week and was on crutches this week. It isn't known how long he will be out of the lineup, but junior Brad Hanlan will start this week. Brad is the brother of James Hanlan, a senior Rebel starter at linebacker.

Eastwood is scheduled to arrive in Midland this afternoon and the Troopers will hold a brief workout at Memorial Stadium at 6:30 p.m.

The winner of Saturday's game will advance to the region playoffs to face the winner of the Lewisville-Arlington area game. That contest is set for 5 p.m. Saturday in Texas Stadium in Irving. Both Lewisville and Arlington are district runner-ups and beat district champions in bi-district play last week.

Permian takes on El Paso Andress

Gaines compares Eagle backs to Palo Duro

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — If any districts in the state of Texas could claim "no respect," it's the two from El Paso.

It seems every time the playoffs roll around, no matter what kind of record an El Paso school has, it's hard for opposing teams to take them seriously. Take Midland Lee-El Paso Eastwood, for example. How serious can Lee take the Troopers, a team the Rebels beat early in the season, 56-0.

A similar situation exists this weekend at Ratliff Stadium, the site of Saturday's El Paso Andress-Odessa Permian 2 p.m. area battle. Members of the media, and fans are taking the Eagles lightly. After all, like Eastwood, they are from El Paso. It should be a walk.

HOWEVER, WHEN talking to Permian coach Gary Gaines, you don't get that feeling. Gaines has respect for any opponent and he wants his team to take the field with the same attitude.

"I think, from what the people out there say, Andress is the best team in El Paso this year," said Gaines. "They run the wishbone offense and have three backs that have speed. I think their backs are comparable to the Palo Duro backs."

There is also a measuring stick the Panthers can use to gauge the Eagles ability: Lubbock Coronado.

"Andress beat Coronado 35-7 and Permian beat Coronado 49-20," said Gaines. "That's our only common opponent. They're saying this is the best team to come out of El Paso in umpteen years."

While the Eagles could possibly catch Permian in a state of over-confidence, that advantage is negated by the site: Ratliff Stadium. The Panthers don't have a 300-mile, six-hour bus trip to make and are guaranteed a huge black-clad crowd on the stadium's west side. And, probably a flow over to the east side.

"We're excited about being able to play at home again," said Gaines, whose Panthers beat Amarillo Palo Duro at Ratliff last Saturday, 20-10. "It should be an advantage for us. They've got to make that road trip. But, I think it's going to be a pretty good matchup."

ANDRESS IS the District 1-5A champion and owns a 10-1 record, including a bi-district victory over El Paso Hanks, 20-0. The Eagles are on a nine-game winning streak with their only loss coming to non-district foe El Paso Bel Air, 27-24, in week two of the season.

The Eagles have a few things for Gaines and company to keep an eye on.

"James O'Quinn has rushed for over 1,100 yards this season," said Gaines. "He's a good power runner that also has some good moves. He's a quick-footed kid.

"They've got some giant offensive tackles, one at 298 pounds and the other at 280. They pretty much anchor each side of the offensive line. They're a running football team though their quarterback has thrown for 800 yards this year. And, they've got an excellent wide receiver named Derrick Brown, who is averaging 18 yards per reception."

Gaines is also impressed by the Eagle defense.

"They're giving up less than nine points per game and have forced 30 turnovers all year long," said Gaines. "I think quickness is their No. 1 asset defensively. They have their smaller kids on defense, but are very quick. They average 182 front seven defensively which is just a little bigger than we are."

Andress runs out of a 6-1 defensive alignment "with four good defensive backs," said Gaines. "They have good speed in the secondary."

For the Eagles to be successfull they have to stop one of the best one-two backfield punches in the state, fullback Shawn Crow and tailback James Miles. The two have rushed for more than 2,000 yards this season with Crow, 5A's No. 2 rusher, leading the way with 1,563 yards on 191 carries. In all, Permian has the No. 3 ranked offense with 422 yards per game, trailing Lee's 439 average and Mission's 424.

Midland Christian seeks first championship

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After four years, there are nine seniors on the Midland Christian six-man football team that can finally finish a season with a feeling of true accomplishment.

"I'm going to hate to see them go, that's for sure," said MC Coach Homer Jackson. "We've had some of them for a long time, and all nine of them have played a lot for us this year. They've done a super job."

Saturday at 2 p.m. in Balmorhea, the Mustangs will play Jesus Chapel of El Paso for the first NewTex Christian Football Conference title in the seniors' farewell. It will be the first championship of any kind for Midland Christian if it should win. Of course, it's the first year that Jackson and Co. have played in a conference.

"We've come a long way and we're excited to have a chance to play for the first championship," Jackson said. "We're very pleased with the way the conference has worked out this year. We wanted to organize and run it on a first-class basis, and the coaches generally feel like we've done a good job at it."

The Mustangs, 10-1, advanced to the NewTex finals after routing Northeast Christian Academy 59-12 last week. That was not unusual; Midland Christian has made a habit of routing opponents this season. But Jesus Chapel, 7-3, has also had some one-sided games.

So on paper, it looks like the league's two best teams will fight it out for the title. Just the way it's drawn up on the chalkboard.

But after that, you can throw out the chalkboard.

"I suspect we'll have another high scoring game," Jackson said. "They make a lot of big plays, and I may be wrong, but I think they're going to have a hard time stopping our offense."

And why not? No one else has stopped the Mustang offense, which averages 52 points per game.

Senior Tony Corona has led the stampede for the Mustangs, scoring 35 touchdowns and throwing for four more. But he hasn't been alone. Another senior, Kevin Wallum has kicked in seven touchdowns, 34 kicked extra points and three field goals.

Senior Shawn Capehart leads the team in tackles with 115, while seniors Wade Emmert, Ron Patteson, Ryman Peters, Joe Brewer, Tadd Dees and Travis Sturdivant have all played key roles in leading MC to a successful season.

"We've been a balanced team all season," Jackson says. "Our running game has been successful and so has the passing, when we've had to throw it. All our seniors have played a part in that."

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Is this really the state playoffs?

Williamson

El Paso Eastwood coming to Midland for the area playoffs against Midland Lee has generated about as much excitement as the first bale of cotton produced in the county.

That's not to say there isn't any interest, but it's not high on the priority list of events to attend.

Shoot, we can't even sell 10,000 tickets for crumbling Memorial Stadium in the second round of the state playoffs. Talk is of next week. That's all I hear. "Who will Lee play next week?"

You could see this coming. Anytime you beat a team 56-0 during the season and turn around and try to sell this game as a playoff format, something is missing.

Turn up the TV for Oklahoma and Nebraska and fill up the car for some Thanksgiving travel — when the real playoffs start. Surely, this Trooper team can't erase 56 points in the same season.

Also, playing in Memorial Stadium doesn't feel like the state playoffs. Playoff games are usually reserved for more exotic locales such as Jones Stadium, Texas Stadium, Amon Carter Stadium, the Sun Bowl or even Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

A trip to Memorial is like a regular season outing with a fight for a parking space. But I guess it beats traveling to El Paso to play a team you've beaten once 56-0. Now that's what you call a long trip. I'm sure Eastwood is thrilled with the prospect of coming back to Memorial Stadium. They played last week in the Sun Bowl. This week they get Memorial Stadium — and the Rebels again.

About the only difference is the emergence of sophomore running back Eric Jack and daylight. Eastwood has never played a game during the day.

This contest is almost a no-win situation for Lee. If the Rebels score less than 56 points, people will wonder what is wrong with the Lee offense. If Eastwood scores, people will wonder what is wrong with the Lee defense. How many times during a season is a team going to score five touchdowns in 11 plays during the second quarter?

For one thing, Eastwood coaches know much more about Lee this trip around and have had almost a 1½ weeks to prepare for the game.

And what about me? I have to pick this game. I have to figure out just how much Lee and Eastwood have improved over the season. And I have to figure out if any previous game has any bearing on a second game.

I wanted to see how close I was the first time. Checking back, I found out I picked Lee to win 55-7. Pretty close. I picked Lee to win 34-7 against Amarillo High last week. I got even closer. I keep this up, Las Vegas may be calling.

Midland Lee 42, El Paso Eastwood 0: The Troopers say they have improved and who am I to take exception? That was the halftime score in the first meeting. If Saturday is an instant replay, I beg Earl Miller to use the duplicate numbers. Bold Gold time and all of that. After all, my reputation is on the line.

Odessa Permian 38, El Paso Andress 7: Andress is being touted as the best team out of El Paso in years. I'm sure Eastwood loves hearing that one. But when District 4-5A meets any El Paso team, the margin is usually double-digit numbers. El Paso Coronado has been an exception in the last decade.

Ferdinand, Alysheba top Classic race

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Charlie Whittingham and his son, Mike, say there is no big deal about competing against each other in the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic on Saturday at Hollywood Park.

They run horses against each other on the West Coast tracks all the time. "In big stakes, 50 times or a lot more," the 41-year-old Mike said Thursday."How many, I really don't know."

Charlie, a 74-year-old Hall of Famer, will be saddling Ferdinand, the 5-2 early favorite, while Mike is back with last year's Classic winner, Skywalker, the 6-1 third choice behind Alysheba, who is rated at 7-2.

ALYSHEBA IS owned by Midland's Dorothy Scharbauer and daughter Pamela.

Pointing to winner's circle pictures on the walls of his office, Mike said of his father, "You put up big money, he'll be there."

Charlie is confident that Ferdinand, winner of three straight stakes in California, can win the 1¼-mile final event of Breeders' Cup Day, which consists of seven races and purses of $10 million.

"Alysheba is probably the horse to beat," the father said at his own barn. He added with a smile, "But I'd rather have him (Mike) beat me than somebody else. I might get a little money from him."

The Classic winner earns $1.35 million, with 10 percent going to the trainer.

Ferdinand (1986) and Alysheba (1987) are the first Kentucky Derby winners to meet since Affirmed (1978) beat Spectacular Bid (1979) in the 1979 Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park. Alysheba also won the Preakness, but fell short of the Triple Crown in the Belmont Stakes.

Mike, who worked as his father's assistant from 1970-76, is not as confident about Skywalker, a 5-year-old who was retired to stud in February after a saucer fracture of his left foreleg. Skywalker was a successful sire, putting 28 of 30 mares in foal, but recovered well enough to return to the track late this year.

He won a seven-furlong allowance race on Oct. 23 at Santa Anita, then finished third to Ferdinand in the 1⅛-mile Goodwood Handicap at Santa Anita on Nov. 7.

"His stud career had absolutely no effect on his racing ability," Mike said of Skywalker. "He's at a disadvantage because he came back so late. He could have used another race longer than a mile and an eighth.

"He's done a remarkable thing to come back. The Breeders' Cup being late this year helps a little."

While Mike got his first Breeders' Cup victory last year as Skywalker beat favorites Turkoman and Precisionist, Charlie Whittingham and Bill Shoemaker, Ferdinand's rider, will be looking for their first Breeders' Cup triumphs on Saturday.

In the previous three Cups, Charlie had seven starters but his best finishers were second and third.

Skywalker is Mike's only starter Saturday, while Charlie will have nine starters — almost all expected to be contenders — in five of the races.

"Now I'm going with a better hand," Charlie said. "I'm going with a club instead of a fly swatter."

Only trainer D. Wayne Lukas has more starters Saturday, 14, but he has none in the Classic, Turf or Mile.

Judge Angelucci, a winner in seven of 10 starts this year and also trained by the senior Whittingham, is a 10-1 outsider in the field of 12 for the Classic.

The rest of the Classic competition consists of Afleet, 8-1; Good Command, 10-1; Candi's Gold and Gulch, each 12-1; Cryptoclearance and Nostalgia's Star, each 15-1, and Bold Arrangement and He's A Saros, each 30-1.

Oklahoma vs. Nebraska

Welcome to Son of Game of Century

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Welcome to Son of Game of the Century.

The numbers are staggering — and not just because of the No. 1 and No. 2 rankings that Nebraska, 9-0, and Oklahoma, 10-0, will carry into Saturday's showdown.

First of all, the only other time these college football titans met as the nation's top two teams in the Associated Press poll was in 1971. Nebraska's 35-31 victory in Norman was voted the greatest game of all time.

Now, the Cornhuskers and Sooners will try to play "Can You Top This?" in a contest that is being billed as "Game of the Century II."

NEBRASKA DEFENSIVE end Broderick Thomas says it will be "like an 18-wheeler and a car colliding. It's something else. I really can't believe there's that much attention for one game."

How much attention is there?

"This is an all-time record. This is the most interest we've ever had in a game," according to Don Bryant, Nebraska's assistant athletic director for media relations, who issued approximately 900 credentials and turned down scores of requests.

"Nothing has changed," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer says. "We will play for the (Big Eight) championship and the Orange Bowl just like we always do."

Although Oklahoma struggled offensively against Oklahoma State and Missouri the last two weeks, the Sooners still lead the nation in scoring (46.2 points a game). Nebraska is second (43.6).

In total offense, Nebraska leads (524.6 yards a game) and Oklahoma is second (505.3). In rushing, Oklahoma is No. 1 (429.8) and Nebraska No. 2 (390.2).

Sounds like a wild offensive shootout, right?

Perhaps. But Oklahoma also leads the nation in scoring defense (7.5) and Nebraska is tied for sixth (12.1). Oklahoma is tops in total defense (205.4) and Nebraska eighth (249.1). Nebraska is second in rushing defense (67.9) and Oklahoma ninth (98.6). For good measure, Oklahoma is No. 1 in passing defense (106.8) while Nebraska is way down at No. 50 (181.2).

"People don't expect us to have any kind of air attack, but this week I think we will need to throw well," says Charles Thompson, the redshirt freshman who became Oklahoma's No. 1 quarterback two weeks ago when Jamelle Holieway suffered a knee injury.

When it comes to throwing the football, even though Steve Taylor has 13 touchdown passes, Nebraska is 79th among the 104 Division I-A teams (134.4 yards a game). Oklahoma is No. 100 (75.5).

For a team that has lost three games in a row to Oklahoma and 31 of the last 42, Nebraska is doing most of the mouthing.

Earlier this week, Taylor said, "The flat-out truth is Oklahoma can't play with us. They are not good enough. It might not even be close, and I mean that."

Taylor's comments made Oklahoma's bulletin board, of course, and also shocked some people around these parts, since Thomas usually leads the Cornhuskers in outrageous quotes. But Taylor wasn't about to retract his remarks, although he had some second thoughts about the choice of words.

"That's the way I feel," he said. "I don't want people to take it out of context, think I'm being too cocky. But I feel we're a much better team than Oklahoma is this year.

"I'm pretty sure Oklahoma is thrilled and excited to hear me say such a thing. I wish I could have stated it a different way."

THOMAS, HOWEVER, wasn't about to be outquoted, certainly not by Taylor.

"I'd rather have Jamelle and (injured fullback Lydell) Carr back," he said. "That way, we won't hear any excuses why we beat Oklahoma. I don't think about losing because it's not going to happen."

Oklahoma has been involved in four previous 1-2 shootouts, losing all of them. Although the Sooners failed to blow out three of their last four opponents after winning their first six games by an average score of 53-6, offensive guard Mark Hutson predicts that "our tempo and emotional level will be up this week and we haven't had that in a while. We feel this game is for the national championship."

ALMOST AS CHEAP AS POSSIBLE

Both vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ 10 9 2 ♡ K 10 7 5 ◇ A Q ♣ A 10 5 2
WEST ♠ 8 7 ♡ J 6 4 ◇ J 7 6 2 ♣ Q 9 6 4		EAST ♠ Q J 5 3 ♡ 9 ◇ K 10 9 4 3 ♣ J 7 3
	SOUTH ♠ A K 6 4 ♡ A Q 8 3 2 ◇ 8 5 ♣ K 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠

We have said it before: The average player watches the high cards; the expert notes every card. When the average player thinks of a finesse, he thinks in terms of an A-Q or a K-J tenace; the expert looks for any tenace. You can't go much lower than today's example.

Sitting in the South seat in a duplicate event was an old-fashioned player who liked to bid by the seat of his pants—we don't recommend Blackwood when you have two fast losers in a suit. However, the final contract was reasonable—only the duplication in diamonds and spades put the contract in any jeopardy.

West led the eight of spades, covered by the nine and jack and won by the king. Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, ending in dummy, then led the ten of spades, intending to let it ride if East played low. When East put up the queen and West dropped the seven, declarer noted that he had a finesse position in spades—his 6-4 were poised over East's 5-3. The ace of clubs provided an entry for a spade lead, and when East followed with the three spot, declarer confidently finessed.

When that held, declarer was able to discard the queen of diamonds from dummy. He made an overtrick, and a top score, as a result, because most declarers took the plebian diamond finesse and ended up with just 12 tricks. At rubber bridge, the overtrick would have yielded only personal satisfaction. At duplicate, the dividend was more tangible.

Patty Hearst says she doesn't dwell on her past as kidnap victim, revolutionary WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — Patty Hearst, who was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army nearly 14 years ago, says she doesn't dwell on the past.

"I think my life has gone back to what it would have been if this had never happened," Hearst, 33, said Thursday.

"I haven't forgotten...I think people have become more removed from the events of the kidnapping and what happened afterward," she said.

Ms. Hearst, a volunteer worker for the local chapter of the Leukemia Society of America, commented after serving as a waitress in a celebrity luncheon that raised $23,000 for leukemia research.

A member of the famed Hearst newspaper dynasty, she was kidnapped by the terrorist group in February 1974. She was converted to the SLA cause, and arrested in September 1975.

Hearst received a seven-year prison term for her part in a bank robbery, but President Carter commuted her sentence in 1979.

Hearst has lived in Westport for the past four years with her husband, Bernard Shaw, and their two daughters, ages 3 and 6.

The Bakkers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker, who co-starred with her husband on "The PTL Club" before their ouster from the television ministry, says she would like to advertise cosmetics.

"I think the makeup companies are losing a big thing by not asking me to do commercials for their makeup," she said in a taped interview for broadcast Thursday night and tonight. "You know, I mean, I'm worldwide known for my makeup. You know all the tons of stuff I'm supposed to put on my face."

Mrs. Bakker and her husband, ex-PTL leader Jim Bakker, were interviewed Wednesday for the syndicated program "Entertainment Tonight."

The Bakkers left PTL in March after he admitted a sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Burnett

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Carol Burnett is writing a book with her daughter Carrie, a former drug abuser, about the dark times the addiction caused in their household and what it took to overcome the problem.

Carrie, 23, who last month celebrated six years of freedom from drugs, came up with the idea of writing the book after talking to junior high school students about drug abuse, Miss Burnett said.

"We came up with the idea of doing the book separately," the 51-year-old actress-comedian said in a telephone interview from her home in Honolulu. "I would write my point of view as the mother, and she would write her point of view as the kid. We would alternate chapters. And we would write the last chapter together."

Carrie, a budding singer and actress, also just finished co-starring with her mother in a CBS-TV movie, "Hostage," in which she plays a troubled girl who forms a friendship with a widow portrayed by Miss Burnett.

Miss Burnett was in Hawaii to film an episode of "Magnum, P.I."

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomer Carl Sagan says this nation's chief failing toward its children is its shrinking interest in space exploration.

"Unhappily — astonishingly — the United States may become the first nation to back off from the exploration of space," Sagan writes in the Nov. 22 edition of Parade magazine.

The Cornell University professor says continued space exploration is needed so children will understand there is a future worth striving for.

"Our children long for realistic maps of a future they (and we) can be proud of. Where are the cartographers of human purpose?" Sagan asked.

L. Iacocca

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca and his second wife, Peggy Johnson Iacocca, put rumors of reconcilation to rest by signing papers to end their 1½-year marriage.

"These things happen, and you move on in life. What can you do?" Iacocca said Thursday afternoon after leaving the Oakland County courthouse, where Circuit Judge Robert Templin entered a divorce judgment. Neither Ms. Iacocca nor her lawyer, John Schaefer, attended the hearing.

Iacocca, questioned for about nine minutes, told Templin that he and Ms. Iacocca had signed an agreement under which neither could collect alimony.

The agreement also included a property settlement that would neither be made public record nor divulged by either Iacocca, said Lee Iacocca's attorney, Robert Z. Feldstein.

P. Iacocca

Iacocca, 63, and Ms. Johnson, 37, each wed for the second time on April 17, 1986, in New York. But she maintained her Manhattan apartment and seldom was in Detroit. She never lived in the Bloomfield Hills home Iacocca had shared with his first wife, Mary, who died in 1983 after 27 years of marriage.

NEW YORK — Christopher Wilmarth, a critically acclaimed sculptor whose works are on permanent display at many of the nation's best-known museums, apparently hanged himself Thursday in his studio-home in Brooklyn, the police said. He was 44 years old.

The artist's wife, Susan, found the body at 10:15 a.m. in the studio of the residence in the Red Hook section. No note was found. Wilmarth told the authorities her husband had been under treatment for depression. Pending an autopsy, the police listed the death as an apparent suicide.

In a career that spanned two decades, Wilmarth did not achieve the fame of more trendy artists, but his work — primarily creations of steel, bronze and etched glass that he said were inspired by poetry — drew raves from art critics, serious collectors and museum officials.

Hilton Kramer, in a 1978 review for The New York Times, called Wilmarth "one of the leading sculptors of his generation" and said he was "unquestionably in possession of one of the most original sculptural styles to emerge in the 1970s."

Utilities drive living costs up

From Staff Reports

A 4.2 percent increase in utility bills helped fuel a 1 percent rise in Midland's cost of living during October, according to figures released by ClayDesta National Bank.

At the same time, Odessa's cost of living fell 0.9 percent, due largely to a 4.7 percent drop in housing costs.

The jump in the Tall City's utility costs was led by an 11.2 percent leap in water rates, which broke a 23-month period of stability. Fuel adjustment charges rose 0.8 percent, and gas rates were up 0.1 percent.

Higher rental rates were responsible for a 1.6 percent increase in housing costs.

Breaking a two-month decline, food at home costs rose 1.5 percent, due to increases in meat, shelf item and alcohol prices.

A second month of higher price tags on men's clothing caused a 1.4 percent rise in last month's clothing costs.

For the sixth consecutive month, Midlanders are paying more for medical care, with a 0.4 percent rise coming in October. Higher prices for non-prescription medicines and slightly higher costs for a hospital stay were responsible.

It cost 0.3 percent more to eat out in October, due to higher prices for non-alcoholic beverages.

The only category to show a decrease was transportation, which fell 0.2 percent, thanks to a third month of generally lower gasoline prices.

Peso trade levels off after scare

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican peso currency leveled off against the U.S. dollar after a breathtaking fall brought on by the government's decision to pull out of the market and conserve its supply of dollars.

Private exchange houses in Mexico City were short of dollars Thursday, turning away customers who wanted to exchange their pesos for the U.S. currency.

Pesos were even scarce. Residents said some trading firms limited the amount of the national currency they could buy.

Some shopowners, especially those catering to foreigners, quickly raised their prices to make up for the peso's decline.

The stock market, benefitting from the peso plunge, soared nearly 18 percent in the second straight day of gains for the exchange, which had been badly shaken by investor nervousness in recent weeks.

Friday is a national holiday to mark the anniversary of the start of the Mexican revolution in 1910. Banks, the stock market and many exchange firms will be closed until Monday.

Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricioli defended the decision by the Bank of Mexico, the nation's central bank, to stop selling dollars to support the peso in the free market.

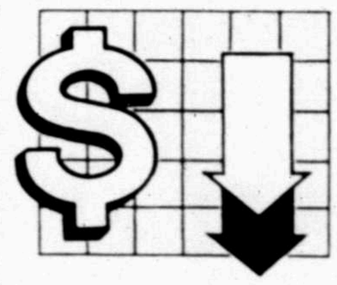
NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices retreated slightly in uncertain trading one day after posting a sharp gain.

On Thursday the December contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, fell 7 cents to close at $18.57 per 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Volume was moderate.

"The market was just kind of taking a breather after yesterday's strong rally. Traders are now a little less certain about future prospects of the market," said Andrew Lebow, an analyst for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

Dollar drops in sluggish trade; Gold up



LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in sluggish European trading early today against a background of continued uncertainty over efforts to trim the U.S. budget deficit. Gold bullion edged higher.

Traders in West Germany and Italy said markets remained pessimistic about efforts by the White House and Congress to reach agreement on a plan to cut the huge federal budget.

Selected European dollar rates at midmorning, compared with rates in Europe late Thursday:

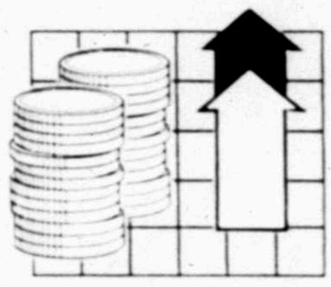
—1.6740 West German marks, down from 1.6800

—1.3750 Swiss francs, down from 1.3760

—1.3217 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3108

The British pound rose to $1.7855 from $1.7795.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 135.37 Japanese yen, up from Thursday's 134.85 yen. In later London trading, the dollar fell back to 134.95 yen.



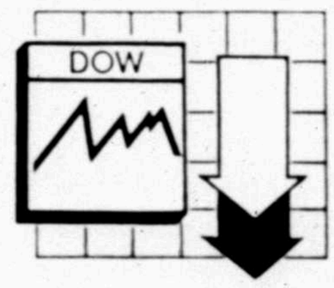
London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $466.25 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from $465 late Thursday. Dealers described trading as quiet.

Gold was bid at $465.75 in Zurich, up from $465.50.

Earlier, the metal closed in Hong Kong at a bid of $466.23, up from $465.49.

Silver bullion traded in London at a bid of $6.625 a troy ounce, up slightly from $6.60 late Thursday.

Market slumps in budget exasperation



NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks slumped Thursday in what market analysts called a show of exasperation with the failure of Washington negotiators to agree on a budget-deficit reduction one day before automatic cuts take effect.

The bickering between the White House and the Congress on an issue that played a role in the Oct. 19 stock crash dismayed investors and convinced some that any deficit reduction package would be superficial, analysts said.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 43.77 points to 1,895.39, putting the widely watched indicator under the 1,900 level for the first time in a week. Broader market barometers also declined sharply.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled a relatively light 157.14 million shares, an indication that many investors were simply waiting for a budget-deficit reduction pact before they decided their next move.

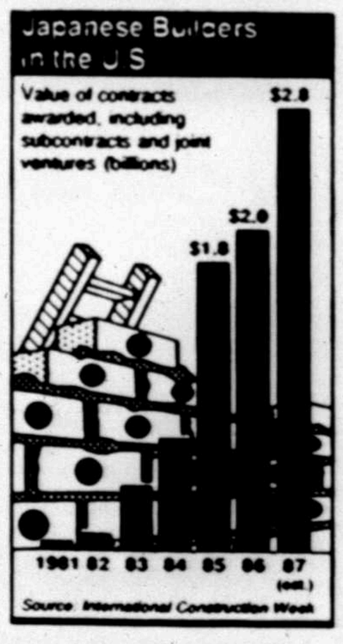
BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Japanese builders outbuilding U.S firms

NEW YORK (AP) — While the U.S. government presses Japan to open its market more to U.S. construction firms, well-financed Japanese companies are doing a booming business in the United States.

Japanese companies are combining Japanese financial muscle with hair-thin profit margins to underbid American companies on skyscrapers in Manhattan, hotels in Hawaii and auto plants in the Midwest.

The incursion, though still small, has been so rapid it already is being compared with Japanese successes in fields such as consumer electronics and automobiles, some experts said Thursday.



U.S. official decries Japanese strategies

TOKYO (AP) — U.S. Commerce Secretary C. William Verity told Japanese officials that their aggressive export strategies are wrecking foreign industries, according to the Commerce Department.

Verity told Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita that Japan must refrain from its "tendency to organize researchers to go after a key market by using government, industry and the banking system together to create an absolute domination of a foreign domestic market," spokeswoman Desiree Tucker said Thursday.

She said Verity stressed that Japan should assume more responsibility and work with the United States "toward mutual leadership in the world."

Texas finalist for semiconductor operation

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Twelve states have been named finalists in the hotly contested bidding for a $250 million-a-year semiconductor manufacturing research operation to be funded by private industry and government.

Sematech, which had been considering 34 states as its future home, narrowed the field to Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Texas and Wisconsin.

Canadian gas imports threaten basin markets

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The U.S.-Canada Free Trade Act could bring drilling activity in the Permian Basin to a halt, says a New Mexico legislator.

New Mexico State Rep. Robert Light of Carlsbad told the executive committee of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Thursday at Odessa Country Club that the act would destroy natural gas markets for Texas and New Mexico producers and prove and economic disaster for both states.

Light told the group that New Mexico opposed the trade bill, because it would make Canada the 51st state economically to the detriment of the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

"New Mexico traditionally has been the natural gas reserve of California. It is our market, but if cheaper Canadian gas is allowed into the U.S. without ratios or quotas it will take that market," said Light, who is involved in family oil and gas interests in the state.

He called the bill consumer-oriented and said the only thing consumers are interested in are lower prices and not New Mexico's economy.

He said New Mexico is currently shipping 70 percent of its natural gas to California, but Canada, which has abundant natural gas reserves, could become a tremendous competitor for that market if allowed to move as much natural gas as they wanted across the border.

He added that New Mexico capital funds for the purpose of building schools and public projects were 95 percent dependent on oil and gas taxation.

"Few in the Southwest realize the impact of the trade bill," said Light.

Light claimed that U.S. gas producers would be at an extreme disadvantage, because it would not be "a level playing field" for them. "The Canadian gas industry is subsidized," said Light. "They have sliding royalties, drilling subsidies and even royalty holidays. Free trade should be fair trade."

Light said it is imperative that the oil industry list their opposition with their congressman before Jan. 2, 1988, when the period for commend ends, and urged PBPA to join New Mexico in opposing the trade bill.

The Association did not vote on Light's proposal but did take action on three other critical natural gas issues.

The oil and gas association, which has 1,700 members, voted to aggressively oppose Federal Energy Regulatory Commission rules on pipeline transportation and contracts; remain neutral on Texas Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 31 which would implement gas balancing and agreed to support an amendment by Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association to TRC Statewide Rule 34 which establishes gas priorities.

JOB HUNT

TEC offers 'step up' to city's job hunters

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Despite improvements in the unemployment picture from 1986 levels, there are still significant numbers of Midlanders looking for work in a highly competitive job market. A new Texas Employment Commission program is helping job seekers equip themselves for the full-time task of finding new employment.

The commission's Job Search Workshop has been successful for nearly 40 percent of its 84 graduates in the past three months and is important for many reasons.

Consider Martin Grado's situation. After 16 years with Safeway, the grocery chain's change in ownership left him without a job. "I didn't have any real idea of where or how to start looking for a job," he said Thursday after completing the three-day workshop.

"The program taught me about putting together a resume, preparing for interviews and the different steps in looking for job opportunities," Grado said.

In addition to the technical considerations of compiling an effective resume and presenting the best possible image in an interview, the workshop deals with the important psychological effects of unemployment as well.

Changing attitudes, boosting morale and re-instilling self confidence are important functions of the workshop, particularly for those who have been in the job market for some time. "Changing your attitude about looking for a job will be reflected almost immediately in your approach to an interview," said program graduate Beverly Shattuck, who recently landed a job.

After more than 10 months out of work, Shattuck participated in the three half-day sessions of the seminar led by Chris Hammit and Terri Valero. "The change in morale and interview results was almost immediate," said the new receptionist for Reed & Co.

Nine of the 31 program graduates found their jobs within a week of completing the seminar.

"Virtually all of the people who completed the program and have since obtained employment stayed in their chosen profession," said workshop leader Chris Hammitt. Midland was not scheduled to be included in Phase Two of the statewide workshop program, but through the efforts of Midland TEC office manager Joe Hatcher, the local program was begun in September.

Pilot programs for the state were launched last year in Plano and Fort Worth. The copyrighted videotape program which is the backbone of the program comes in two versions — white collar and blue collar — with information tailored toward each audience.

The Midland program, although only three months old, is outperforming both the pilot project performance and the statewide averages for placement in the 12 TEC offices offering the program.

The program is not designed to provide direct job referrals but is intended to teach people to cultivate their own job hunting and landing skills, Hammit explained. But leads often grow out of the contacts made in the small group setting of the workshop, she added.

"Meeting new people and finding out you're not alone" was one of the important benefits of the program for Sergio Garcia, who completed the workshop this week. "Knowing what to expect in an interview and the right way to follow up after the interview were important lessons," Garcia said.

Demonstrating assertiveness, interest and enthusiasm for a job through by following up after the interview was a crucial lesson for D'nese Fly. After a year out of work and "two or three months of hard, daily looking," the TEC program was the boost in self-confidence and training in pointing out positive attributes that the geo-technician needed to get over the hump of landing a job in the oil and gas field.

SEC proposes allowing investors to sue insiders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission is proposing legislation that would give investors who lose money in the stock market the right to sue inside traders who profited at the public's expense.

That provision is part of a bill offered Thursday by the SEC. It also would legislatively define insider trading, an offense that has been developed through judicial and regulatory interpretations of fraud and securities law.

SEC Chairman David S. Ruder, in a letter to two senators, called for the creation of "broad private rights of action for contemporaneous traders and other persons injured in their securities transactions by insider trading violations."

Insider trading is sometimes seen as a victimless crime, but the SEC contends the true victims are securities owners who sell to or buy from those with undisclosed and improperly obtained knowledge of the securities' true value.

Legislators, in the wake of insider trading scandals on Wall Street, have sought to codify case law after complaints from securities businesses and traders that they had no firm guide as to what is a violation.

Judge slates creditor merger

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The two committees representing Texaco creditors have until the middle of next month to merge, but an appeal of the judge's order to merge could come next week by the industry committee.

Because of the high costs of maintaining the two committees, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Howard Schwartzberg last week ordered the industry committee, which represents oil industry companies, to disband and become part of the committee representing general unsecured creditors.

The committees were formed shortly after Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

George Weisz, lawyer for the industry committee, asked Schwartzberg on Thursday to either allow a reargument on the motion to merge the two committees or stay the merger pending the appeal.

In lieu of either ruling, Weisz asked that the committee be allowed to remain in existence amother month. That would allow the committee to participate in arguments on Texaco's motion that the company's rights to create its own reorganization plan be extended from Dec. 8 to June 30.

Those arguments were set for Dec. 2. Arguments on the so-called "tin-parachute" motions were set for Dec. 11 but were expected to be adjourned.

Weisz said his firm had already done 95 percent of the work to respond to both motions and that it would not save money to merge the committees now.

Texaco lawyer Harvey Miller said there was no reason the lawyers could not surrender their work to the general committee.

OIL AND GAS DIGEST

Dallas firm buys Howard County properties

DALLAS — Stratigraphic Petroleum, Inc., has announced the purchase of producing oil and gas properties in the Iatan East Howard field, Howard County. Total estimated oil and gas reserves net to Stratigraphic's revenue interest are estimated at 380,000 barrels of oil and 50,600 Mcf of natural gas. Based on the purchase price of $1.6 million, the acquisition cost per barrel of oil and equivalent amounts to approximately $4.15.

Stratigraphic will act as operator of the acquired leases, which are under waterflood and produce from 38 wells approximately 180 barrels of oil per day.

Space-developed technology aids Fiberflex

Technology developed by the space industry now enables Fiberflex Products to establish new standards of quality control for the fiberglass sucker rod industry, thus allowing them to extend their warranty period available to end users from 12 months to 18 months, according to Peter J. Sanger, Fiberflex president.

Fiberflex became the first and only fiberglass sucker rod manufacturer to use real time x-ray imagery to inspect the internal quality and integrity of the adhesive bonded steel end fittings on their fiberglass sucker rod.

Sun, Depco announce Williston Basin strike

DALLAS (SWN) — A Williston Basin discovery well that tested nearly 400 barrels of oil per day has been announced by Sun Exploration and Production Co. and Depco, Inc.

The Strombeck NBR 1, located in Section 31, T160N-R94W, in Burke County, North Dakota, tested both oil and gas in the Interlake formation. The well flowed at a daily rate of 368 barrels of oil and 88,000 cubic feet of gas through a 16/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 726 pounds per square inch over a 24-hour period. The nearest producers from this zone are more than a mile away. There are immediate plans to offset this well.

Enron posts net income for quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. posted net income of $9.6 million from continuing operations for the 1987 third quarter, compared to a $28.9 million net loss it reported in the same period last year.

After paying preferred stock dividends, a loss of five cents per share was reported for the quarter, compared to a loss of 91 cents per share for the 1986 third quarter, Enron announced.

As previously announced, Enron incurred a non-recurring charge of $85 million after-tax in the third quarter of 1987 as a result of unauthorized transactions in the company's speculative oil and petroleum productions trading operations.

Because of the non-recurring charges from the discontinued trading operations, Enron's consolidated loss for the third quarter totaled $74.7 million, or $1.92 per share, the company announced. In the 1986 third quarter, the consolidated loss totaled $27.1 million, or 87 cents per share.

Enron's speculative trading opertions have been discontinued, the company said.

For the first nine-months of 1987, net income from continuing operations totaled $65.6 million, or 67 cents per share, compared to net income of $9.2 million for the first months of 1986, which, after preferred dividends, resulted in a loss of 61 cents per share.

On a consolidated basis, Enron reported a loss of $1.3 million for the first nine months of 1987, compared to net income of $73.7 million in the same period one year ago.

"The charge reflected in the consolidated results, while extremely unfortunate, is nonetheless a one-time occurrence which can now be laid aside as we concentrate fully on our core businesses," said Kenneth L. Lay, Enron chairman and chief executive officer.

Enron, with nearly $8 billion in assets, is involved in natural gas transmission, oil and gas exploration and production, extraction and marketing of liquid fuels and the cogeneration of electricity and process steam.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mutual fund loss will offset capital gain

By BILL DOYLE

Q. A company in which we owned stock for 27 years was merged into another company six months ago. We had to tender our shares and received a large profit. The income tax on that long-term capital gain will be more than $25,000.

We used $50,000 of our stock sale profit to buy shares of two mutual funds, both of which have fallen in value. As of now, they are worth about $44,000.

We want to get out of the mutual funds and invest that money in certificates of deposit. Can we redeem the fund shares within the next two weeks or so?

Doyle

A. You can redeem mutual fund shares on any business day. By doing that, you turn your shares back to the fund and receive the per share value established at the next "pricing." All mutual funds are required to price their shares at least once a day. Some do it more frequently.

Redemption procedures vary a bit among different mutual fund organizations. You'll find the exact procedure spelled out in each fund's prospectus, which you were required to receive at or before the time you invested.

If you're confused by the gobbledegook found in some mutual fund prospectus, call those mutual funds at the phone numbers listed in their prospectus and shareholder reports.

The difference between the $50,000 you invested and the amount you receive when you redeem, which might turn out to be more or less than $44,000, will be a capital loss.

You can use that capital loss to offset some of the capital gain you took from the sale of stock earlier this year. That will reduce your net capital gains and your tax bill.

Q. Last spring, when the stock market was flying high, I bought into a mutual fund. The sweet-talking broker stressed there would be no commission load on my purchase. She never mentioned the "contingent deferred sales charge," which I learned about by reading the fund's prospectus and which you so rightfully call a "rear-end load."

That rear-end load is 6 percent if I redeem within one year after my purchase and declines by one percentage point a year after that.

Since the stock market crashed, my mutual fund has dropped like a rock. The broker won't take my phone calls. I'm mad and she knows it. I have redeemed my fund shares, but I need one piece of information. How do I account for the rear-end load when I report this on Schedule D of my federal income tax return?

A. The rear-end load will be deducted from the redemption proceeds, making the check you receive smaller than the value of the shares you redeem. You list the amount of that check as the "Sales price" in Column (d) Schedule D. In Column (e) "Cost or other basis," you list the amount you invested in the fund shares you redeemed.

The difference between the two amounts is your capital gain or capital loss. From the tone of your letter, it obviously was a capital loss.

This isn't meant to rub salt into your financial wound, but you should have read that prospectus before making your purchase.

Q. Which is the better time to redeem mutual fund shares --before or after a capital gains distribution?

A. It really makes no difference, when redeeming fund shares. The amount of a capital gains distribution and/or a dividend automatically is deducted from the value of the mutual fund shares on the ex-distribution or ex-dividend date.

It does make a difference, when buying. If you make your purchase before the dividend or capital gains distribution, you buy higher-priced shares and then have to pay tax on the dividend or capital gains distribution. If you buy after the dividend or capital gains distribution, the same amount of money will purchase more lower-priced shares and you have no immediate tax liability.

Never invest in a mutual fund shortly before a dividend or capital gains distribution is to be paid.

Area pecan shows are 'window' on state's pecan industry

Kiker

The 1987 Midland County Pecan Show is scheduled for Nov. 29-Dec. 1 at Delwood Mall.

County and regional pecan shows are a window on the Texas pecan industry. They demonstrate the superior quality of Texas pecans and play a major role in the evaluation of new pecan varieties.

Pecan shows are truly educational events in addition to being competitive. Growers get an opportunity to see how their entries compare with other pecans of the same variety. Proper management throughout the growing season shows up dramatically at pecan shows. Pecan producers, with one tree or a 1,000 trees, can measure the success of their management program by the way their entries compare with others. Poor irrigation, lack of zinc, improper insect control and disease prevention inadequacies can be pinpointed and corrected in subsequent growing seasons.

Pecan entries are judged in a very objective manner. Each entry is weighed twice to determine the size of pecans (number per pound) and what percentage of the pecan is actually edible kernel. Kernel appearance is important. The brighter and lighter the golden brown of the kernel, the better. A heavy, well-filled kernel is much more desirable than a hollow one. Pecans in the shell that are clean, not discolored and free of insect damage are also important.

The following guidelines for selecting pecans for county show entries have assisted winners in the past:

- Participants are limited to one entry for each named variety in the show. Growers may enter as many seedlings, known hybrids, or natives as they wish.
- Exhibitor must be the grower.
- A minimum of 40 pecans are necessary for each entry. This minimum sample should represent the variety and be uniform in size and shell color. Mixed samples — more than one variety in an entry — will be disqualified.
- The grower may wish to select the heaviest pecans by weighing individual nuts.
- A varietal entry may be composed of nuts from more than one tree. For example, if the grower has 10 Choctaw trees, each tree could contribute nuts in the one Choctaw entry.
- Nuts should be free of insect and disease damage.
- Discolored shells and kernels may result from peeling pecans from the shucks too early.
- Pecans exhibited must be from the 1987 crop.

Several pickup points have been selected where you can take your entries for the show: Midland County Extension Office, 2445 E. Highway 80, by 5 p.m. Wednesday; Village Barber Shop, 2-B Meta Drive, by 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 28; LaCasa Verde Nursey, 2615 N. Midland Drive, by 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 28; and Black Hawk Electrical Supply, 905 S. Garfield, by 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 28.

If you are unable to take your entries to either of these pickup points, you may have the entries picked up by calling Charlie Green at 684-8446, Dave Davis at 684-9744 or Earl Selman at 687-4349.

Midland County show winners will be entered in the regional pecan show, sceduled for Dec. 9-11 in Odessa.

The 1987 Midland County Extension Program Council's annual meeting will be Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the extension building. It will be a covered dish supper.

The program will review the 1987 extension programs and special recognitions. Jennifer Dryden, national 4-H recipient, will share her experiences in 4-H.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

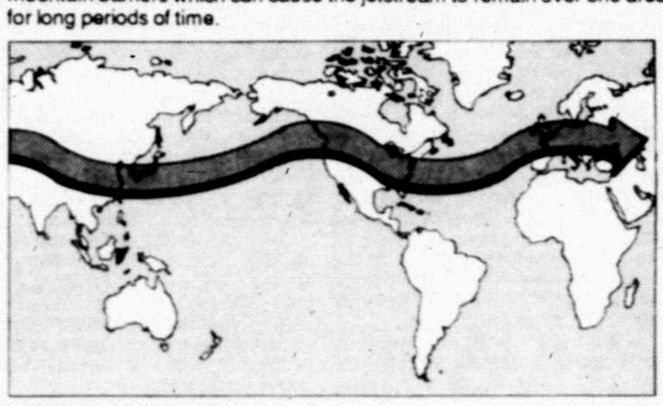
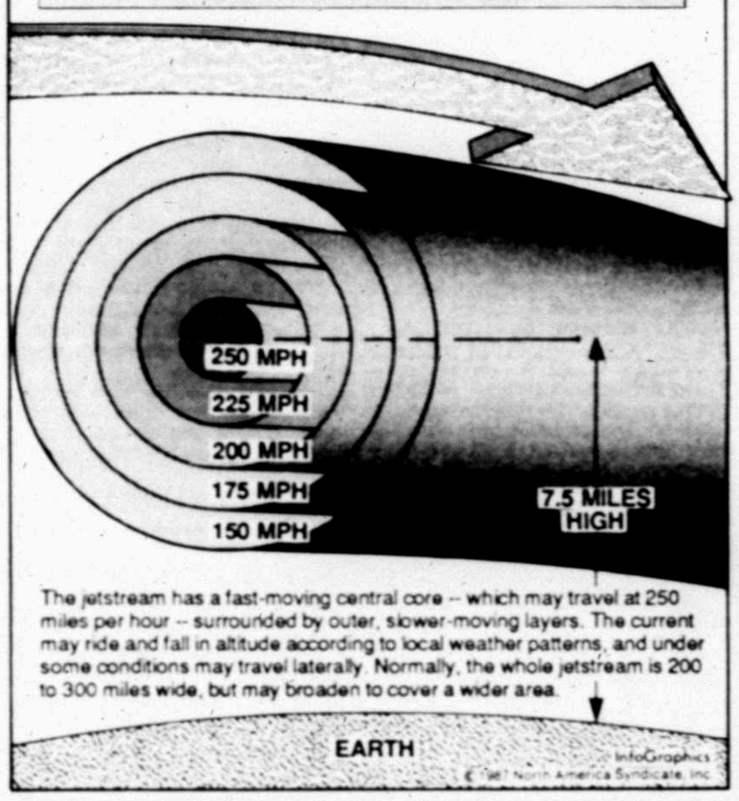
The jetstream

The jetstream is a high-altitude, fast-moving wind traveling west to east about midway between the north pole and the equator. Its position is approximately at the boundary between dense polar and expanded tropical air. It is affected by the heat exchange at the earth's surface (because the sea reflects more heat than the land) and by extensive mountain barriers which can cause the jetstream to remain over one area for long periods of time.





The jetstream has a fast-moving central core -- which may travel at 250 miles per hour -- surrounded by outer, slower-moving layers. The current may ride and fall in altitude according to local weather patterns, and under some conditions may travel laterally. Normally, the whole jetstream is 200 to 300 miles wide, but may broaden to cover a wider area.

USDA successful at cutting dairy surplus

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The barebones inventory of surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk in the government's food pantry may remain on the scant side for some time, an Agriculture Department official says.

James J. Miller of the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday the rapid draw-down of huge stockpiles held only a year or two ago was the result of greater utilization, including massive donations under the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program, or TEFAP, started after surpluses rose to record levels in the early 1980s.

Another factor in the reduction of dairy surpluses held by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. were large sales of non-fat dry milk to Brazil and Mexico.

According to the CCC, which controls the government-owned surpluses, the "uncommitted" inventories as of Sept. 30 included 82.3 million pounds of butter, down from 193.8 million pounds on Sept. 30, 1986; 98.5 million pounds of cheese, down from 558.7 million; and 63.1 million pounds of non-fat dry milk, down from 696.6 million.

"We could accumulate (surplus) stocks again if we decide not to fully utilize what we have ... by cutting back on donations and sales," Miller said.

The donations under TEFAP have given a major impetus to the reduction in surplus dairy stockpiles. Overall, he said, from 425 million to 450 million pounds of cheese a year has gone into TEFAP for donation to needy people, plus another 100 million to 125 million pounds into the national school lunch program.

Altogether, Miller said, the donated cheese alone has used up the equivalent of more than 5 billion pounds of milk, almost equal to this year's total milk surplus.

Production costs of crops, livestock down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most farmers have benefited greatly from sharp reductions in production expenses for crops and livestock the last two years, according to an annual study published by the Agriculture Department.

As most production costs declined in 1986, farmers' net cash income continued to surge. It climbed to a record level nationally last year and may be headed for another peak in 1987.

"The costs of capital replacement (investment in buildings and machinery) also fell for most farmers," said the report, which was released Monday. "Most crop growers and some livestock producers, however, received lower market prices."

According to USDA economists, the net cash income of farmers — the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses — rose to a record $52 billion in 1986. A further easing of production costs may help send net cash income up again this year to between $54 billion and $58 billion.

One big reason for the decline in total farm expenses has been acreage cutbacks in major crops under the government's various commodity programs. Last year, the report said, farmers planted 328 million acres in major crops, a decline of 5.6 million acres from 1985.

"Corn and rice yields reached record-high levels, but wheat yields fell to their lowest level since 1980," the report said. "Total crop production fell an average of 8 percent."

The report, part of an annual series on "Economic Indicators of the Farm Sector," was prepared by the department's Economic Research Service.

"Farmers paid less for feed, feeder livestock, fuels, motor supplies, fertilizer, chemicals, tractors, and building and fencing," the report said.

The cost of feed, which is produced by other farmers, declined 9.1 percent last year, following a 14.5 percent decline in 1985.

Analysts said that for cow-calf operations, feed accounted for 64 percent of total variable costs in 1986; for farrow-to-finish hogs, 79 percent; and for dairy, 63 percent.

Soviets buying U.S. soybeans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought large orders of U.S. soybeans and soybean meal, sales that could total more than $100 million, according to Agriculture Department price estimates.

Officials announced Tuesday that the sales included 400,000 metric tons of soybeans and 150,000 metric tons of soybean meal for delivery in 1987-88, the final year of a long-term grain supply agreement with the United States.

No prices or details of the sales were disclosed. The transactions are handled by private exporting companies, which then report sales to the department.

But at current prices, the soybeans would have an estimated U.S. farm value of about $73 million, and the meal would be worth around $30 million, based upon recent prices at Midwest processing plants.

There are about 2,205 pounds in a metric ton, which is equal to 36.7 bushels of soybeans or wheat, and 39.4 bushels of corn.

Soybeans recently have been selling for around $5 per bushel, and meal has been going for more than $200 per ton, according to USDA market reports.

On Monday, the department announced that the Soviet Union is eligible for an additional 2.4 million tons of wheat under a U.S. export subsidy progam. Earlier this year the Soviets bought 4 million tons of wheat under the Export Enhancement Program, or EEP, which allows exporters to sell commodities at reduced prices to meet foreign competition and then collect free government surplus grain or other commodities as subsidies.

The soybean announcement on Tuesday did not mention any sales of wheat to the Soviet Union, only that 65,000 tons had been sold so far for delivery in the 1987-88 year.

Onset of winter signals to moths it's time to pupate, become quiescent

Minzenmayer

Periods of dormancy are an intimate part of the metamorphosis cycle. Before a worm-like larvae transforms into a moth, it must spin a cocoon and enter a pupal state. In the northern states, this pupal stage is usually timed to get the insect through the winter months.

There are probably a number of different signals which "tell" the moth it is time to pupate. The onset of cold weather is a prime signal, but in some insects the changing length of daylight heralding a change of seasons has induced a dormant state. This form of dormancy is known as diapause. An insect enters a diapause because it has been exposed to environmental conditions which may or may not be adverse in themselves, like the amount of daylight. Insects in a state of diapause may not continue development and become active when the adverse weather breaks. Some entomologists believe insects such as butterflies, moths and beetles enter diapause as a necessary phase in their development.

When dormancy is used soley as an escape from adverse conditions, it is referred to as quiescence. An insect that has entered a state of quiesence with the coming of cold weather is able to resume development and activity when warm weather returns.

Quiescent carpenter ants are often observed in firewood during the winter. When the wood is brought indoors and becomes warm overnight, the ants revive and emerge inside. A virtual Pandora's box of insect pests can be unleashed from a quiescent winter state in this way, including wood boring beetles, termites and wasps. For this reason it is a good idea to stack firewood away from the house and bring indoors only the amount to be burned.

Insects generally enter a state of quiesence or diapause to get through unfavorable conditions, such as cold weather, lack of food, crowding, low moisture content in food and contamination of food by pesticides.

India announces 48-hour cease-fire

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India today announced a 48-hour cease-fire in its battle against Tamil militants in Sri Lanka. The action came one day after the Tamil rebels released 18 Indian soldiers and called for a cease-fire.

K. Natwar Singh, minister of state for external affairs, announced in Parliament that Indian troops in northern and eastern Sri Lanka would begin the cease-fire at 7 a.m. Saturday.

On Thursday, Tamil militants released 18 Indian soldiers held captive in the Jaffna Peninsula for more than a month. They were held by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the largest rebel group.

In freeing the prisoners, the Tigers urged a cease-fire and a pullback of Indian troops. India has demanded the Tigers surrender unconditionally.

More than 20,000 Indian troops are in Sri Lanka to enforce a peace accord aimed at ending the four-year Tamil conflict on the island nation.

Syrians storm university

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops stormed the American University of Beirut and beat up dozens of students with rifle butts at the dormitories during the night, witnesses said today.

Fifty students, most of them Lebanese, were rushed to the neighboring American University Hospital for treatment of "various head, leg and chest injuries," said one witness, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The witness said 14 students were discharged today and the others, whose injuries were more serious, remained in the hospital.

Iraqi planes hit tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes today bombed a tanker off Iran, the fourth vessel in about 24 hours, and the British navy said it found four mines in the central Persian Gulf.

The reported tanker raid raised to 20 the number of ships Iraq has claimed to have attacked in 12 days. Only four of those reported attacks have been confirmed by salvage officials and other sources in the gulf.

The British Royal Navy said its mine sweepers discovered the four mines in waters off the Qatar peninsula which had been marked out as potentially hazardous to shipping, according to Cmdr. Pat Gale, a Royal Navy spokesman.

Soviets set job service

MOSCOW (AP) — A government-run job placement service and greater unemployment benefits were approved by the Politburo to cushion the shock of job losses expected under economic reforms.

The actions were taken Thursday, the same day a senior Soviet official stressed that the modernization drive would not be slowed by the dismissal of prominent reformer Boris Yeltsin from a top Communist Party job.

Also Thursday, a Jewish physicist said he was being allowed to emigrate after a 12-year struggle. Yakov Alpert, 76, quoted Soviet authorities as saying he and his wife, Svetlana, 46, could leave the country.

The Politburo broadened its placement and unemployment benefits less than six weeks before Soviet factories must become economically self-sufficient and their managers will be allowed to set salaries and fire unproductive workers.

Nuclear device tested

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — France exploded a 65-kiloton nuclear device at its underground testing site on Mururoa atoll in the South Pacific today, Australian scientists said.

The explosion was the most powerful of seven tests this year, officials at the Seismological Center in Canberra said.

Michael Duffy, acting Foreign Minister, issued a statement condemning the test. He called it "a matter of regret."

There was no immediate confirmation of the test from France.

Navy seeks missing plane

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. Navy searched in the Indian Ocean today for a missing plane and four crewmen from the aircraft carrier USS Midway, officials said.

The plane, an EA-6B Prowler aircraft assigned to Tactical Electronic Warfare Squadron 136, was reported missing after "routine" operations over the Indian Ocean, said the U.S. Forces in Japan media liaison office.

The aircraft was launched from the carrier early Thursday evening, and was declared overdue when it did not return as scheduled about an hour later, the liaison office said in a statement.

Japan's unions link up

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's labor unions today formed a nationwide federation in a bid to stem decades of declining membership and to rekindle their drive to shorten the 48-hour work week and improve working conditions.

Sixty-two unions from four federations merged into a single united front to try to boost the clout of a movement hurt by the apathy of an increasingly affluent and white-collar worker pool.

The new labor federation, the Japanese Private Sector Trade Union Confederation, will at the outset represent 5.6 million workers.

Mexican peso recovering from record low

By ARTHUR GOLDEN and ERNESTO PORTILLO JR.
Copley News Service

WORLD

The Mexican peso rebounded surprisingly Thursday from an informal devaluation that had sent it plummeting to a record low against the U.S. dollar on Wednesday.

Exchange houses on both sides of the international border resumed buying the Mexican currency, after virtually shunning it only 24 hours earlier. In Tijuana, Baja Calif., hundreds of people bearing dollars lined up outside an exchange house, attracted by the prospect of purchasing 2,300 pesos for each dollar.

"We've recuperated everything we lost Wednesday — and then some," declared Fred Sobke, co-owner of the Baja-Mex exchange house in San Ysidro, Calif., who said he had purchased 40 million pesos earlier in the day.

The border-area financial community was plunged into turmoil Wednesday by the Mexican government's sudden decision to stop supporting the free market peso, a move that effectively devalued the currency by about 55 percent.

That decision came under fierce attack Thursday from the major newspaper Excelsior, which is normally a strong defender of the government. In a harsh front-page editorial, the Mexico City newspaper said:

"The country is falling once again into the monetary whirlwind ... It would have been difficult to have chosen a worse moment to let the parity of the peso against the dollar be fixed by the free play of supply and demand."

Defending that policy, Finance Secretary Gustavo Petricioli said in Mexico City Thursday that the government had acted in an effort to protect the nation's foreign currency reserves and to stem capital flight.

Mexico's hard currency reserves stood at a record $15 billion in September. Private analysts believe the Bank of Mexico, the nation's central bank, drained the reserves by $1 billion in recent weeks as it struggled to prop up the beleaguered peso.

In the last month, according to some estimates, $80 million a day has been taken out of Mexico to safer havens abroad, mainly in the United States. By allowing the free market exchange rate to rise, the dollar becomes more expensive for people holding pesos who want to convert their funds into the U.S. currency.

Petricioli told the Mexican Congress that the decline in value of the free market peso "should not necessarily translate into more inflation," which is now running at about 140 percent a year.

The free market rate, which is used in tourism and border-area business, accounts for around 25 percent of Mexico's currency transactions. The so-called controlled exchange rate governs the rest of Mexico's currency operations, which includes imports and exports and interest payments on the nation's $103 billion foreign debt.

Petricioli said the government will continue to support the controlled exchange rate, which stood Thursday at 1,723 to the dollar.

It was a different story for the free market rate, whose buy-sell quotes were in the low 1700s on Tuesday. On Wednesday, reeling from the impact of the de facto free market devaluation, exchange houses demanded as much as 3,500 pesos to sell a dollar, or refused to sell dollars at any price.

Thursday, as the panic eased, most exchange houses in San Ysidro were offering to sell a dollar for about 2,500 pesos. A dollar bought about 2,100 pesos in San Ysidro.

But at the Euromex exchange house in Tijuana, a dollar fetched 2,300 pesos — and crowds of people lined up on the sidewalk outside to take advantage of the rate.

"This is a good opportunity to make some money," said Rodolfo Arroyo, 62, who had been waiting in line for 15 minutes. But the Tijuana florist said that whatever profits he would make would be eaten up in a few days by an increase in the price of consumer goods.

Down the block, at a change booth installed in a liquor store, dealer Gilberto Ramrez was offering to buy a dollar for 2,000 pesos and sell a buck for 2,500 pesos. "Things are returning to normal," he said, counting out wads of dollars for a man who had pushed a fistful of pesos under the change booth's window.

But a few blocks away, at the Nacional exchange house, where a dollar cost 2,500 pesos, teller Juana Limon said that very few people were buying the U.S. currency, because it was too expensive for them to do so. By midday, Limon said, she had sold only $300, compared to around $1,000 she had sold in the same period on most other days.

Spanish police storm house, rescue kidnapped youngster

ESTEPONA, Spain (AP) — Police today stormed a home and rescued the 5-year-old daughter of a Lebanese millionaire who was held hostage for 11 days. Officials said shots were fired, and three kidnappers were arrested.

The girl, Melodie Nakachian, was unharmed, but one of the three kidnappers was seriously wounded, police said. No ransom money had been paid, they said.

No members of the elite police unit that rescued the child were injured in the 5 a.m. raid seven miles from Estepona on the southern Costa del Sol.

During the girl's captivity, her abductors had demanded millions of dollars in ramson money.

The father of Miss Nakachian told reporters his daughter's first words to him after being freed were "I'm fine Papa, don't cry."

Jose Maria Rodriguez Colorado, director of the national police, told Spanish National Radio three men were arrested in the raid and that police were searching for two other abductors who remained at large in the area.

Rodriguez Colorado said the suspects were from a gang of known criminals who had been active in France and Spain. He did not elaborate.

The radio later reported that police also had arrested a man and a woman in Malaga in connection with the kidnapping. The identities and nationalities of the arrested man and woman were not immediately made public, the radio said.

British government orders study of King's Cross subway disaster

LONDON (AP) — Commuters left flowers outside King's Cross station, and the government ordered an inquiry into the fire that killed 30 people in a subway system that had been criticized as unsafe.

Hospital teams on Thursday tended 21 badly burned survivors among about 80 injured in the Wednesday night blaze at King's Cross, a main line surface terminus as well as the busiest of London's 273 Underground railway stations.

Investigators went into the cavernous ticketing plaza of the multi-tiered King's Cross rail and subway station to search for clues.

Colin Livett, the Fire Brigade's deputy assistant chief officer, said the speed with which the fire spread was "a tremendous surprise," and that investigators had not eliminated any possible cause.

Today, the first civilian victim of the tragedy was identified.

The Reuters news agency said correspondent Sara Felicity Dearden, 32, had died in the disaster of smoke inhalation. The Bonn-based journalist had been in London for her grandmother's funeral, the agency said.

As Thursday evening's commuters made their way across the vast subway to the surface lines, bunches of violets, dahlias and carnations appeared at the cordoned-off subway entrances.

One bouquet bore the inscription: "To a brave firefighter from us all," in remembrance of 45-year-old Colin Townsley, who died while leading the first rescue efforts in searing heat and choking fumes.

The dead and injured were trapped by a sheet of flames on an escalator and in the ticketing hall above it. Thick smoke and fumes obscured the exits to the surface, and the quickly intensifying heat turned the enclosure into an oven, melting wall tiles and cracking concrete.

The movement of trains forced air through the rail tunnels and up escalator shafts, creating the upward draft of an efficient furnace.

Joe Kennedy Assistant, assistant fire chief, said fighting the flames was like "going down a roaring chimney."

Hospitalized firefighter Vernon Treffrey said the heat of the fire was "just incredible" in its intensity.

Some survivors said subway workers directed them to escalators moving up into the fire; others said the down escalators churned on, carrying people toward the flames.

London Transport, which runs the 124-year-old Underground system, acknowledged that several recommendations made in a highly critical 1985 subway safety report had not been acted upon.

The independent study was prompted by a serious fire in December 1984 at the Oxford Circus station that trapped hundreds of people but killed no one. The report found the subway system failed to meet minimum standards and made a series of recommendations.

A major disaster had been averted at Oxford Circus, the 1985 report said, but "luck has a habit of running out."

London Transport said that generally its stations have no smoke detectors, fire alarms, illuminated emergency exit signs or automatic sprinklers, which the report had recommended.

"We did see the report and implemented recommendations where we thought necessary," London Transport said in a statement Thursday. New precautions included high intensity portable lighting switched on Wednesday night in the smoke-filled escalator tunnels.

Opposition legislators quickly accused Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government of sacrificing safety in its zeal to wean the system from state subsidies and make it self-supporting.

Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons there would be a public inquiry, and Transport Secretary Paul Channon said: "There are a lot of questions to be answered."

Labor Party legislator Frank Dobson, whose constituency includes King's Cross, said on the day of the fire, station staff had been threatened with disciplinary action for issuing warning leaflets on alleged fire danger there.

Dobson said earlier that platform staff had been cut from 16 to 10 on each shift at the station, through which more than 200,000 commuters surge daily.
