General found hanging in base stairwell

Ownby

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A note pinned to the body of a two-star Army Reserve general found dangling from a noose at Fort Sam Houston said he had been slain, but there were no signs of struggle and no one claimed responsibility, the FBI said.

Pentagon officials who declined to be identified said the note read: "Captured, tried, convicted of crimes by the U.S. Army against the people of the world. Sentenced and executed."

The body of Maj. Gen. Robert G. Ownby, his arms bound behind him with a belt, was found Wednesday hanging from the second-story stairwell of an Army headquarters building, the FBI said.

The Pentagon officials said a second note also was found, but it was indecipherable.

The Fort Worth Star Telegram quoted a friend of Ownby's as saying the general had left a note on his desk that read: "I hear some noises. I am going to investigate."

The officials said Ownby's death could have been suicide or it could have been murder, with the note indicating it was a terrorist act only a "diversion."

Ownby, 48, the commander of the 90th U.S. Army Reserve Command, was found about 6:40 a.m. by an employee coming to work, FBI Agent Pat Cowley said. Ownby was described as a hard worker who split time between his reserve duties and his full-time position as an officer of the Delaware Punch Co.

Cowley, who indicated he had read the note, said he knew of no reason to suspect the killing was the act of a terrorist.

"There was no apparent sign of a struggle," he said. "We've heard nothing from anybody since the body was found. No one claimed credit."

Fort Sam Houston spokesman Col. Robert McDonald said base police officers took no special security precautions after discovering the body.

"We didn't know what was going on and, at first, there was some concern," McDonald said. "We never went on any kind of military alert here, though."

Leo Soto, executive assistant to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service region commissioner in Dallas, said the service intially warned border stations of the possibility of a terrorist slaying, but later backed off.

"We put out a normal border alert and told our chiefs that there was an unconfirmed possible terrorist killing," Soto said. "We called them back later to say it didn't look that way. It's the same thing we would have done if a sheriff's office had called about a robbery."

The Washington Post reported that Ownby appeared to have been beaten.

Bob Butler, who described himself as Ownby's "dearest friend," said a note had also been found on the general's desk.

He said Ownby's wife, Ann Ownby, called her husband's office at 2 a.m. Wednesday, and when he did not answer, she went to the building and found it locked. He said she returned home and went back to the building an hour later.

"She ran into a security agent she knew and had him unlock the building," Butler said. "They went to his office, but he was not there and she came home."

Butler said he doubted Ownby killed himself.

"This was the most perfect husband and father in the world. In my own mind, somebody was waiting in there. I just feel like it was somebody he recognized and they made a martyr out of him," he said.

As for the typewritten note pinned to the general's civilian clothes, Cowley would say only that it "indicated he had met with foul play."

"The note basically said that he had been killed and hadn't committed suicide," Cowley said.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMiao ruled asphyxiation as the cause of death, but refused further comment.

Cowley said the general could have been killed as early as 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Annexation plan adopted for Scharbauer rangeland

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

After shooting northward for several years, Midland's growth may be taking off in a new direction once the City Council annexes a tract west of the longstanding boundary line.

What once was Holiday Hill Road and now is Loop 250 has stood as the immovable line that split cattle ranching from urban development.

But this week Scharbauer Brothers & Co. requested the council annex a 315-acre tract west of Loop 250 between Wadley Avenue and Andrews Highway. The latter street now is referred to as State Highway 191 and serves as the newest north link between Midland and Odessa. The rangeland will be developed into residential, commercial and office areas and will include two schools and a park.

The council agreed to the annexation procedures, which should take about six months. Once in the city's jurisdiction, development of that land will begin immediately, said Doug Henson, an adviser to the Scharbauer family.

The request for annexation west of Loop 250 "is a very important and significant development proposal," said Sam Listi with the city's planning department. "It recognizes the significant development potential that exists west of the city limits."

Because of completion of Highway 191, "it was just a matter of time for development to occur," Listi added.

Until the annexation is approved, the Scharbauers will continue using the land as pasture for cattle. They will be moved when development begins. "Instead of a Loop 250 dividing the community, it will be a barbed wire fence," said Henson.

Family ties

Wheelchair worries

Mother struggles for handicapped sons

BOURBONNAIS, Ill. (AP) — A 29-year-old divorced mother says she is more worried about her three sons outgrowing their wheelchairs than outgrowing their clothes.

Karen Newfarmer's 10-year-old twins Ryan and Bryan and 8-year-old Jamie are afflicted with a brain malady so rare that only about 20 cases have been documented in the world. It is called Pelizaeus-Merzbacher's disease, and it causes deterioration of the brain's myelin sheath and thus loss of motor control. There is no known cure.

It means the youngsters' simplest movements are accompanied by pain, and their speech is severely limited. Even swallowing can be difficult. And Jamie is already too big for his hand-me-down wheelchair.

But the family is getting some help.

The nearby Kankakee Elks Lodge, where Jamie was screened by an orthopedic surgeon, obtained some aid this fall through the Illinois Elks Crippled Children's Commission. That is to go toward a new wheelchair for Jamie.

"They have no insurance, because there's nobody to insure them," says Delbert Cantrell, an Elk who has served as liaison to the Newfarmers.

Last year, the family also found financial relief through the Shriners, whose Hospital for Crippled Children in Chicago accepted the boys for future operations not covered by the state Division of Services for Crippled Children.

At the time, Mrs. Newfarmer was unemployed and ineligible for Medicaid. Though she now works 20 hours a week at the Bourbonnais K Mart, she is still ineligible for Medicaid. The boys each get monthly Supplemental Security Income.

Despite astronomical medical bills, Mrs. Newfarmer is adamant about doing all she can to pay her own way. "It's not like we're having to scrape for the last meal," she said this week.

A few years ago, the brothers required surgery to relax ever-tightening leg muscles that twist their knees inward, one effect of their disease. Mrs. Newfarmer says doctors believe the surgery may be required several more times during their lives.

The boys were diagnosed as having the brain disorder shortly after Jamie was born.

"I thought something was wrong when the twins were 6 or 7 months old — they were unable to roll over," says Mrs. Newfarmer. "I had one of those doctors who thought I was a worried, neurotic mother.

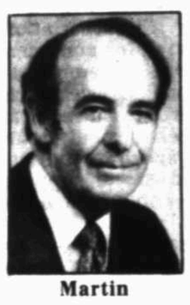

"He finally said the reason they couldn't walk was that they needed glasses," she adds. "Even I — at 19 — knew it wasn't kosher."

After consulting a string of doctors, the Newfarmers ended up at Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago. The initial diagnosis was a mild case of cerebral palsy, but multiple tests and a process of elimination led specialists to narrow their diagnosis to Pelizaius-Merzbacher's disease.

Since then, the boys have attended the multiple-handicapped classroom at the Kankakee Area Special Education Cooperative, where they are being taught to read, are learning practical skills such as counting money and enjoy physical education that includes hockey.

First City elects new CEO

Franklin

First City National Bank today announced the election of W.P. "Bill" Franklin as chief executive officer. Franklin has been president of First City since 1981 and will continue in that capacity, said Tony A. Martin, First City's board chairman.

Franklin takes over the the position from Martin who had been CEO since 1969. Martin will continue as chairman of the board.

In an interview with the Reporter-Telegram, Franklin called the change "a natural transition" and added it will not have a significant impact on the bank.

"I think First City is making this move in recognition of the fact that I've been with this bank 26 years and that it may be my turn," he said. "Plus the fact that Tony Martin, who has been CEO for a number of years, has assumed more responsibility in the bank corporation as regional director. He feels some need to devote certainly more time to that than the CEO of a half-billion dollar bank has time to."

As a regional director for First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc., Martin said he plans to devote more time and energy to that job. In this position he serves as a board member for four other First City banks in West Texas.

"Tony and I have been so close for so many years we feel like we're almost interchangeable anyhow," Franklin said. "It's a natural transition. As for the impact on the bank and its customers, I wouldn't predict that there will be any significant impact one way or another.

"This bank has been doing business the same way virtually ever since I've been here and I certainly don't intend to re-invent the wheel," Franklin added.

"I think any changes people see in this bank are going to be changes that they see in the banking industry in general. Simply because of the times that we're in."

Crime prevention unit formed

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Cobos

In an effort to coordinate with other law enforcement agencies in the area, the Midland sheriff's department has formed a crime prevention unit which will function in three primary areas, announced Sheriff Dallas Smith during a news conference this morning.

Sgt. David Cobos, a five-year-veteran of the sheriff's department, will head the unit. As designated crime prevention officer, he will oversee Midland Crime Stoppers (formerly Silent Witness Program), Neighborhood Watch and Operation I.D. programs.

The Silent Witness Program, in which anonymous citizens are rewarded cash for providing information that leads to the arrest or indictment of criminals, was renamed the Midland Crime Stoppers Program to coincide with other area programs, such as the Odessa Crime Stoppers Program. All four law enforcement agencies — Midland Police Department, Odessa Police Department, and both county sheriff's departments — will cooperate, Smith said.

Re-enactments of specific Midland crimes, similar to those used in Odessa's program, will be filmed for local television news broadcasts.

"Maybe we'll do it once week and they (Odessa) will do it the next," Smith said.

Pilot killed by 'hostile fire' from Nicaragua

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A U.S. Army pilot was killed by "hostile fire" from Nicaragua after his helicopter made a forced landing in Honduras near the border region where CIA-backed anti-Sandinista rebels are active, U.S. officials say.

It was the first reported shooting episode to cause a U.S. casualty since joint U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers began last August.

In Nicaragua, the leftist government's Defense Ministry said its forces along the border fired Wednesday on an "unidentified military helicopter" violating Nicaraguan airspace. The communique said the aircraft made a forced landing about 200 yards inside Honduras but did not mention the pilot's death.

The Pentagon identified the pilot as Chief Warrant Officer II Jeffery C. Schwab, of Joliet Ill., who had served in the 101st Aviation Group 229th Aviation Battalion at Ft. Campbell, Ky. Relatives in Joliet said Schwab about 27 years old.

The Pentagon said two Army engineers aboard the OH-58 observation helicopter were not injured and were released after being examined at the U.S. military hospital at Palmerola Air Base north of Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said in a CBS television news interview today that the helicopter was flying a course that would have taken it to an exercise area in Honduras.

"...and the indefensible thing is that the pilot was killed after he got out of the helicopter (and was) simply walking around...," Weinberger said.

President Reagan, asked about the pilot's death as he bid farewell in Washington today to Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, told a reporter it was "a great tragedy."

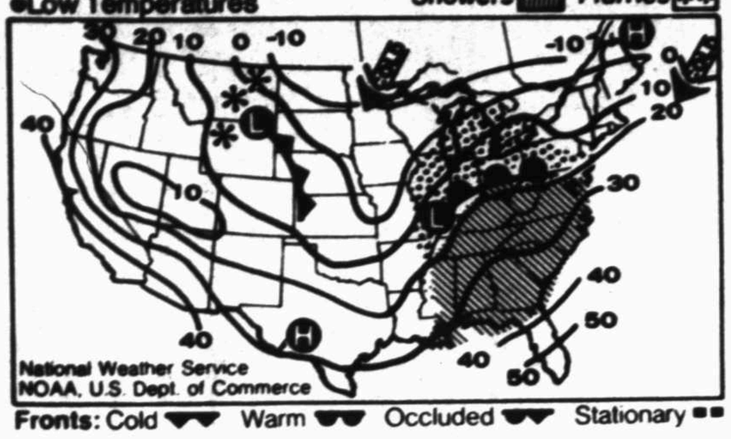

U.S. Embassy spokesman Chris Arcos said the pilot was killed about 155 miles southeast of Tegucigalpa on the Las Trojes-Cifuentes road, the same road where two American journalists died June 21 when a land mine exploded. Honduran authorities accused the Sandinistas of mining the road.

Reagan urges debate on policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, praising the Kissinger Commission on Central America for comprehensive and creative proposals, is calling for urgent discussions with Congress on a new effort to bring peace and prosperity to that region.

While stopping short of endorsing the commission report, Reagan said Wednesday it is "the most comprehensive and detailed review of the issues as they affect our national security that I have ever seen."

"I'm impressed with the depth of the analysis and the creativity of the recommendations," Reagan said as he received the 132-page document from panel chairman Henry A. Kissinger.

A more detailed response is expected in the coming days but the administration already is preparing to act on a commission recommendation to seek additional military aid for El Salvador. Tentative estimates range from $100 million to $140 million.

There is no guarantee the commission's recommendations on Central American policy will be sufficient, but "without a program of this kind, success is surely not attainable."

— Henry Kissinger

The centerpiece of the panel's economic development recommendations was an $8 billion aid proposal over five years starting in 1985 with multiyear appropriations. It also called for a supplemental appropriation of $400 million for this year.

To coordinate strategy on economic policy, the commission recommended a U.S.-Central American summit meeting.

The panel, known formally as the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, suggested the domino theory applied by previous administrations to Southeast Asia could be relevant to Central America unless the United States acts more decisively than it has.

The emergence of a series of Marxist-Leninist states in the region could lead to millions of refugees seeking haven in the United States, the imperiling of Caribbean shipping lanes, a worsening of political repression throughout Central America and large scale military outlays to defend the U.S. southern flank, the panel said. In addition, it said, U.S. allies would have doubts about American steadfastness.

In sum, Soviet-Cuban activities pose a "direct threat" to American security interests in the area, it added.

The tone of the report, however, was not despairing. "Our task now, as a nation, is to transform the crisis in Central America into an opportunity," it said.

If the endeavor is successful, "then the sponsors of violence will have done the opposite of what they intended: they will have roused us not only to turn back the tide of totalitarianism but to bring a new birth of hope and opportunity to the people of Central America."

At a news conference Wednesday, Kissinger said there was no guarantee the commission's recommendations would be sufficient, but "without a program of this kind, success is surely not attainable."

The commission made no attempt to assess blame for the administration's inability to make much headway in the region but it made clear that a far more intensified effort must be made if U.S. objectives are to be achieved.

"The crisis will not wait," the panel said, asserting that concerted action is required on all issues across the board — political, economic, social, diplomatic and military.

Tacitly criticizing congressional cuts of the administration's military aid proposals, the panel said there is "no logical argument for giving some aid but not enough. The worst possible policy is to provide just enough aid to keep the war going but too little to wage it successfully."

It proposed a "substantial" aid increase to El Salvador but declined to offer a specific figure. Last fall, the Congress trimmed the administration's request for $85 million in military aid to $64.8, then ordered an additional $20 million reduction unless El Salvador meets certain human rights criteria.

One hotly debated issue during the deliberations of the 12-member commission was the desirability of linking military aid for El Salvador to improved human rights performance. The panel agreed there should be a link but Kissinger and two panel colleagues said in a separate statement that conditionality should not be interpreted in a way that leads to "a Marxist-Leninist victory in El Salvador."

The panel criticized rightist death squads in El Salvador in the strongest terms, accusing them of methods "totally repugnant to the United States."

But, at the White House Wednesday, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said leftist insurgents were responsible for at least as many and perhaps more civilian killings than the right — a claim contradicted by some human rights groups.

Commission member Henry Cisneros, appearing on PBS's MacNeil-Lehrer news program Wednesday night, disputed Speakes' statement, claiming "a vast preponderance" of the killings in El Salvador have been the responsibility of rightest groups. "Any expert will acknowledge it," said Cisneros, the mayor of San Antonio.

Speakes said that an official estimate indicated that approximately 40 percent were committed by leftwing partisans, 30 to 40 percent by the right wing. Responsibility for the remainder could not be determined, he said.

He added that "the number of deaths documented and attributed to the right and left has shown a startling decline....dramatic might be a better word" over the past three years.

He said that political violence claimed an average of 444 victims a month in 1981; 219 a month in 1982, and 140 a month in 1983. This would account for nearly 10,000 death-squad murders during this period. Speakes' remarks appeared aimed at preparing public opinion for the expected military aid increase request.

On Nicaragua, the report said the commission did not try to decide whether, and how, the United States should support Nicaraguan rebels fighting the Sandinista government. But it said that a majority of the members believed that the efforts of the insurgents represent "one of the incentives working in favor of a negotiated settlement."

Two panel members, Cisneros and Yale University Professor Carlos Diaz-Alejandro, said the covert U.S. aid should be ended, at least temporarily.

Franklin elected First City's CEO

A native Midlander, Franklin received his undergraduate degree from Texas A&M University and a law degree from the University of Texas. He joined First City (then Midland National) in September 1958 as assistant trust officer. In 1970, he moved to the commercial lending division and in 1971 he was promoted to executive vice president.

Since joining the staff at First City, Franklin has seen the bank grow from about $40 million (in 1958) in total assets to more than $500 million in 1983. Employees numbered about 40 back then. Today, First City employs about 230.

Despite the fact that Midland's principle industry is energy, Franklin said First City's loan protfolio, which totaled about $280 million as of Dec. 31, 1983, has less than 50 percent in energy loans.

"We probably have a better mix than a lot of people would expect because we are characterized as an energy bank."

The rest of the bank's portfolio consists of about 15 percent in real estate-related loans, about 20 percent in consumer loans and about 15 percent in commercial loans.

Franklin prefers to describe the bank as one that is personal and professional.

"We've been characterized in the past as being a conservative bank and it's a name that we don't necessarily accept. We consider ourselves very professional bankers that are certainly willing to take legitimate credit risks. We will strive to meet all the banking requirements of the community, both business and personal. If trying to do things in the proper manner makes us conservative, well then that's what we are."

Increased competition in the banking community is one of Franklin's concerns. At the time he joined First City, there was only one other bank in town. Today there are 10.

"I've always felt like I've been in a very competitive business because all I was selling was service. My concern is that because of the intense competition, not only from new banks but other financial service-type companies, some folks will let the barriers down on what I certainly have considered traditional, sound banking practices. I think that would be very detrimental not only to the institutions involved but also to the community as a whole."

Franklin said his "continuing goal" is to have the "leading" bank in Midland and to become a "$1 billion bank."

"I want to have the best bank. Frankly, I'm convinced that we're in that position at the present time."

Franklin is very optimistic about the future of the energy business and Midland.

"I'm very bullish about the long-term future of the energy business. I'm very bullish about Midland. I think the assembly of talent and capital in this city is not equaled by any other city of our size.

"So I see nothing but a very, very bright future for Midland and for the West Texas area. We've got an awful lot of things going for us in addition to energy. The energy business will turn around. I can't tell you exactly when that's going to happen. I just hope it happens soon enough that we all remember that when those things do happen, they don't last forever."

City asked to annex tract of rangeland

The decision to develop this property and bring it into the city wasn't made overnight. Henson said Scharbauer Brothers & Co. have spent the last two years getting a master plan drawn for the property. "They are now ready to begin their first phase of development," said Henson.

"This master plan was based on years of knowledge by the family that as urban growth pushed up adjacent to these working ranches, it would become necessary to accommodate this growth by converting portions of their property from ranching to urban developments."

Historically, the Scharbauers have released parts of their ranches when needed, he said, citing the land that now makes up Midland Regional Airport and a large part of Midland Industrial Foundation.

URS Engineers of Dallas was hired to draw the master plan, which the family accepted in May. The firm has been associated with the Las Colinas development in Dallas.

Henson and some representatives of URS said Wednesday they see a future of growth in Midland, despite the slump that hit in 1983.

"Obviously, growth has been slowed," said Henson. "We just feel it's a cyclical happening. Midland is still encountering growth. We feel this half section is a supply of three to five years of growth."

George Hovey with URS added, "We look at a lot of different communities. You've slowed down to a point a lot of communities would love. It's down to a norm."

The master plan centers around a concept of self-contained neighborhoods connected by a transportation network which allows for non-interrupted cross town movements. Included are regional services, such as offices, commercial and medical areas "plus a full complement urban center including sports activities, convention facilities and support services," Henson noted in a news release.

Preliminary drawings show an internal road system with two school sites already under contract by Midland Independent School District. One site will be an elementary school with construction to begin this year after annexation. The second is being reserved for a junior high school.

The internal residential circle with a neighborhood collector streets allows the subdivision to develop its own identity, said Hovey. Williard Smith, project engineer, added, "We see schools as the focal point of neighborhoods."

Leading the medical complex could be Midland Memorial Hospital's center for chemical dependency treatment, according to Henson, who noted the Scharbauers donated land for that facility. The hospital has received state approval to build the center.

This half section is only a beginning, according to Henson. The master plan includes development of Scharbauer land as it stretches west to Andrews Highway that runs north.

Henson acknowledged the Scharbauer family owns most of the frontage land along Highway 191 in Midland County and will play a major role in how it is developed.

Odessa police hold suspects from early morning burglaries

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police are holding suspects from two early Thursday morning burglaries, with both alleged felons in the Ector County Jail awaiting arraignment.

A police officer on routine security patrol spotted a broken window at Goodall Rubber Co. at 6:03 a.m, Thursday. After calling for back-up, the officer spotted a 32-year-old Cuban transient inside the building.

The officer, Jan Merson, reportedly called for the suspect to freeze, at which time he dropped a $400 tool box and ran for the back door. He was apprehended at the back door by the back-up unit.

An 18-year-old Odessan is also being held on burglary charges stemming from his arrest Thursday morning inside Furr's Supermarket at 1613 W. County Road.

Police responding to a burglar-alarm call noticed the insulation around the air-conditioning unit at the store hanging loose from the ceiling. After securing the building, a canine unit was called to the scene.

While the canine and trainer were searching the back of the large store, the suspect attempted to escape through the front door. Back-up officers apprehended the man and took him to Ector County Jail.

Both suspects were expected to be arraigned today by an Odessa judge.

Odessans held on drug charges

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Crime Stoppers information aided Ector County Sheriff's deputies in arresting an Odessa couple Tuesday night for possession of controlled substances thought to be cocaine, hashish and marijuana.

Assisted by the Odessa Police Department, narcotics officers from the sheriff's department served a search warrant Tuesday at 5:50 p.m. at the home of Bobby and Patricia Houston, both 34, of 919 E. Monahans in Odessa.

Narcotics valued at more than $3,000 were found in the search, including between three and four pounds of marijuana, small quantities of substances believed to be cocaine and hashish and "turkey," the street term for fake narcotics, officers said.

Information from the Crime Stoppers informant reported Dec. 27, 1983 coupled with sheriff's department information led to the couple's arrest. Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford set bond at $18,500 for each suspect and the Houstons bonded out of the Ector County Jail Wednesday night.

Crime prevention unit formed

"It's fortunate that, between the two cities, I don't think just one or the other would have enough crime to qualify (running the re-enactments every week)."

The Midland Crime Stoppers program will continue to be run by the board of citizens who oversee the former Silent Witness Program. The board decides the amount of rewards for crime information.

The "reward bucket," which has a few thousand dollars in it, is kept full from donations collected by Smith from the private sector, he said.

The Silent Witness Program has been responsible for solving six or seven local burglaries and a few felony arrests. The only expense was a monthly telephone bill, Smith said.

Pilot killed after trading places with hostage

POLSON, Mont. (AP) — A pilot who had exchanged himself for a teen-age hostage was fatally shot while authorities negotiated with a gunman holding him inside a small plane, witnesses and officials said.

The gunman, identified by Sheriff Glenn Frame as David Cameron Keith, 27, of Columbia Falls, was shot twice by authorities, who had cordoned off the small airport in the city of 2,464.

Frame identified the pilot as Henry Lee Shryock, 64, of Polson.

Keith was undergoing surgery late Wednesday night in St. Patrick's Hospital in Missoula.

The incident began when police in Missoula, 66 miles south of Polson, reported that an armed man robbed a pharmacy there about 1 p.m.

The man was given some drugs, including a synthetic heroin chemical, and fled, Police Capt. Gary Lancaster said.

The man drove north to the Post Creek Store on the Flathead Indian Reservation where he seized Bill Crose Jr., 13, of St. Ignatius, said St. Ignatius Police Chief Wayne Mitchell.

The man fired a shot, missing the boy's father, then jumped into the Crose family's pickup truck with his young hostage, Mitchell said.

Authorities set up a roadblock along U.S. 93 about three miles south of Polson and negotiated with Keith, who demanded an airplane and a pilot.

Frame in his patrol car led Keith and the hostage to Polson's airport, where they arrived at about 5 p.m. Authorities, meanwhile, talked to the pilot, who volunteered to fly his single-engine P-35 Beechcraft, parked at the airport.

The pilot waited in the airplane while the negotiations continued. About 5:45 p.m., Keith released the youth, and jumped into the airplane, pursued by a police dog, said Dennis Jones, a correspondent for the Missoulian who was an eyewitness to the incident.

One police officer deflated a tire on the plane, and officers told Keith that the plane was disabled and couldn't take off, Jones said.

But, just after 6 p.m., Keith demanded to take off anyway, Jones said. At that point, Keith was holding a handgun against the pilot's chin and the eyewitness reported hearing one shot, then hearing a muffled shot from inside the plane.

Restaurateur seeking his teacher

HONOLULU (AP) — Charles A. Gareau, where are you? A local restaurateur, grateful that you rescued him from latrine duty and taught him to cook during World War II, wants to bring you to Hawaii for an all-expenses paid vacation.

"My dream has always been to repay him for what he did," said Shiro Matsuo, who lives in Pearl Harbor and operates a thriving Honolulu restaurant featuring saimin, a Japanese soup. "Now I can say with humble pride that I'm a success and can do it."

Matsuo was drafted in February 1942, taking him away from his $50-a-month job as a clerk-typist at Kodak Hawaii.

"At that time, they didn't give Americans of Japanese ancestry rifles when we were drafted," Matsuo said. "They made me a latrine orderly."

Matsuo said he met Gareau in either June or July of 1942. Gareau took him to the kitchen as a helper and taught him how to cook.

"After his unit got shipped out to the South Pacific, I was assigned to another mess hall," said Matsuo. "Then I became a company cook. I was discharged as a staff sergeant in charge of a mess hall."

Upon turning in his uniform, Matsuo went to work in restaurants, ending up as the chef to then-Gov. George Burns at Washington Place, the governor's mansion.

Matsuo eventually went into business for himself. In addition to operating Shiro's Saimin Haven, he has invented a combination spoon and fork device that can be used to wolf down saimin at record speeds.

"Now that I can afford it, the thing I want to do most is to find this guy and thank him for teaching me to cook," said Matsuo. "I want to give him and two-week, all-expenses-paid vacation in Hawaii and show him around."

From Mel Lepine, a lieutenant in Gareau's outfit, Matsuo got his mentor's serial number — 3708-9633. Another colleague, Don Agrimson, supplied a photo.

Mattox tells schools to check out ground meat

Jim Mattox

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas schools have been asked to check if they have bought hamburger meat from two national beef packers who are accused of providing 19 million pounds of adulterated ground meat to the federal school lunch program.

Attorney General Jim Mattox told a news conference Wednesday that Texas was allocated 465,000 pounds of the questioned meat. The meat has not been distributed and is stored in the federal cold storage warehouse in Dallas.

However, Mattox said, Texas schools get only about 25 percent of their meat for school cafeterias from the federal school lunch program and buy 75 percent elsewhere, often from national distributors.

"If any school finds it has purchased contaminated beef, then we will step in and try to get it off the market," Mattox said.

The attorney general said the U.S. Department of Agriculture has impounded 19 million pounds of ground meat from Cattle King of Denver, Colo., and Nebraska Beef Packers, Gering, Neb., but has made no decision what to do with the meat, which he said has passed two USDA inspections.

"The Texas Health Department found traces of dirt, hair, plant fibers, unidentified orange particle and blue and white synthetic fibers among other things," in eight rolls of ground meat tested, Mattox said.

He said he has written Secretary of Agriculture John Block urging him to make a public announcement that "this dangerous, adulterated meat will not be released for any form of human consumption, either to schools, nursing homes, prisons, hospitals or the general public."

"This is not the quality of beef the parents of Texas school children want or expect in our school cafeterias," Mattox said.

He said the school superintendent of a large Texas school system, which he would not identify, called Tuesday and said they had been purchasing meat directly from Cattle King.

In Mattox's letter to school superintendents, he asked that the attorney general's department be notified if any school is purchasing meat from either of the two companies.

Bell gives employees free phones

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell, in the midst of hearings on a record $1.3 billion rate hike request, gave its Texas employees almost $8 million worth of telephones.

Jim Boyle, the state-appointed counsel for Texas utility ratepayers, told The Dallas Morning News on Wednesday that he was "very bothered by their (Bell officials') failure to disclose that gift. It's very relevant factor affecting their rate base."

Boyle said the gifts are "another indication of their inconsistency — giving phones away at the same time they're crying for more money."

But Southwestern Bell spokesman Dale Johnson in Dallas said there was "no secret" about the gifts, which were handed out in November.

Johnson said the company traditionally has provided free phone instruments and basic service for management employees and 30-year company veterans. Other employees received phone service and equipment for half price, he said.

Johnson said the federal court order breaking up the Bell System from American Telephone & Telegraph and union contracts specified there would be no reduction in employee benefits after divestiture, which took affect Jan. 1. The company decided to give all employees their home phones in keeping with that requirement, he said.

LARGE OR SMALL YOUR BEST INVESTMENT MAY BE

ANTIQUES

Antiques and fine arts are rated by financial experts among the top three "best investments" today — along with real estate, precious metals, and precious and semiprecious stones. But only antiques have the distinction of being affordable by large and small investors alike. (Have you priced diamonds, gold, or investment real estate lately?) Antiques are available in every investor's price range.

The suggestion that "carefully selected antiques should double in value within three years" is an exciting one. And what other investment can you display, use and enjoy daily in your home or office while it grows in value?

Kerr-McGee attorney Bill Paul gestures during an afternoon news conference Wednesday following the Supreme Court's decision to reinstate a $10 million negligence award won by the Karen Silkwood estate. Paul said the Oklahoma City based company "most assuredly will challenge" the award.

Family expresses joy, relief at court ruling

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Companies should heed the Supreme Court's decision in the Karen Silkwood case and set better health and safety measures for employees, the father of the late nuclear safety activist says.

But an attorney for Kerr-McGee Corp., which had appealed the awarding of $10 million in punitive damages to Ms. Silkwood's estate, contended the nuclear power industry is already adequately regulated by federal laws.

The ruling Wednesday "sends a message to big companies that they ought to look at how their plants are run — like Karen was trying to do here — to get better health and safety measures," said Bill Silkwood, in a telephone interview from his home in Nederland, Texas.

Supreme Court justices by a 5-4 vote reinstated a jury's $10 million award won by Ms. Silkwood's children against Kerr-McGee. The jury found that Kerr-McGee's negligence led to Ms. Silkwood's radioactive contamination.

The court's decision was "wonderful news," said Merle Silkwood, Karen's mother, at a Nederland bank where she works.

The money will be held in escrow until the children — Beverly, 17, Dawn, 13, and Michael, 14 — come of age. They live with their father, William Meadows, in Ardmore.

Beverly Meadows said in an interview that she learned of the court's decision Wednesday when summoned to the Ardmore High School principal's office.

Parents testify in 'Twilight' case

Shyan Chen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The parents of two children killed in the filming of the movie "Twilight Zone" testified tearfully and angrily about the accident, and one said he heard the director shouting, "Lower, lower!" to a helicopter that crashed into the victims.

But director John Landis, charged with involuntary manslaughter, insisted outside the courtroom Wednesday that the crash was "an unforeseeable accident."

And his lawyers disputed Dr. Daniel Lee's recollection that Landis was shouting instructions to the helicopter pilot through a megaphone during the fatal filming of a Vietnam War sequence.

Lee remained steadfast in his recollection. "I heard someone saying, 'Lower, lower!'" he testified. "... It was Mr. John Landis' voice."

Moments later, he said, explosions went off and the helicopter crashed, decapitating his 7-year-old son, Myca Dinh Le.

His testimony came at a hearing to decide whether Landis and four others should stand trial on involuntary manslaughter charges in the deaths of the Le child, 6-year-old Renee Chen and actor Vic Morrow. They were killed on July 23, 1982, when the helicopter fell on them after a special-effects explosion.

Lee, a psychologist, and his wife, Kimyca, a social worker, who emigrated from Vietnam in 1975, testified emotionally about their child's death. Shyan Huei Chen, mother of Renee, also told her story in tears. The girl's father, Mark Chen, testified Tuesday.

All four parents said they were unaware the children should have had permits to work on the film, were not told helicopters and explosives would be used and were assured there was no danger.

Lee described the scene in the make-believe Vietnamese village in northern Los Angeles County, a scene he said was as frightening as real war.

Jackson urges meetings between world leaders

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, with memories still fresh of his peace mission to Syria, is chastising President Reagan for not meeting personally with world leaders to try to end conflict.

"How can Reagan and (Soviet President Yuri) Andropov be mad at each other when they ain't never met?" Jackson asked.

Jackson said if he is elected president, "my first order of business would be to meet with the head of the Soviet Union unconditionally and agree conditionally (on various issues)."

The Democratic presidential candidate met last week with Syrian President Hafez Assad in his successful effort to free captured Navy flier Robert O. Goodman.

During his campaign swing here Wednesday, Jackson also helped register voters at Morehouse College and ate dinner with about 20 residents of a city housing project.

"There must be a revived commitment to house the poor of this nation," Jackson said during the chicken dinner at Carver Homes. "We must measure our strength by what happens to children in these projects. Some of the greatest minds of our nation come from places like this."

Jackson told the residents that he grew up in a housing project, but "when we got to the projects, it was middle class. For us, it was moving up."

At predominantly black Morehouse College, Jackson called more than 100 unregistered voters to the front of the auditorium in revival meeting style and sent them off with deputy registrars to be placed on Atlanta's voting rolls.

Jackson arrived Wednesday morning for a fund-raising breakfast, but cut short his speech to accept a hastily arranged invitation to address the General Assembly.

Jackson took the well of the House chamber at the state Capitol moments after Gov. Joe Frank Harris completed his annual State of the State address.

"This legislature must resolve that there will be no hungry people in Georgia," Jackson said. "It must resolve that any child in this state with the mind ... and the will to work will never be turned away from college."

Teachers say Reagan wrong about school discipline problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Education Association, who says school discipline is improving, is accusing the Reagan administration of engaging in political "hype" about crime in classrooms.

NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell said Wednesday that surveys taken by her 1.6 million-member union show that teachers feel school discipline has improved in the past few years.

"The White House hype on discipline and violence is nothing more than an attempt to create a political gimmick at the start of a presidential campaign," she declared in a speech to the Capital Press Club.

Ms. Futrell said, "As a teacher I resent the fact that the Reagan administration is attempting to paint a picture that America's public schools are a blackboard jungle. They are using 1975 research when problems were worse than they are today."

President Reagan called last month for a return to "old fashioned discipline" in the schools, and on Monday the White House released a report on school disorder that called the problem "perhaps the most overlooked civil rights issue of the 1980s."

The Reagan report was also attacked Wednesday by Amitai Etzioni, a prominent George Washington University professor and director of the Center for Policy Research in New York.

Etzioni said the report was "an amazing concoction of figures whose interpretations are grossly overblown."

The Reagan report, prepared by a task force of officials from the Education and Justice departments, was based primarily on a 1978 National Institute of Education study called "Violent Schools — Safe Schools." It said that 3 million secondary school students are victims of school crime each month.

Etzioni said that although the NIE report estimated there were 2,794,000 incidents in high schools monthly, most involved petty thefts from student lockers.

The NIE report also estimated that 282,000 incidents of physical attacks occurred each month, but Etzioni said "most seem to be minor scuffles. In 58 percent, no injury resulted. Thirty-eight percent involved minor injuries and only 4 percent resulted in injuries requiring some medical attention."

Crime "obviously should be curbed" in schools where it exists, Etzioni said, "but to make curbing it the focus of our national educational policy is to deflect attentio from the real problems and cures: the need to develop character, self-discipline, motivation to learn and to behave."

Ms. Futrell said, "Our research shows that in 1979 over 74 percent of teachers said that discipline problems impaired their effectiveness to teach. In 1983, the figure had dropped to 45 percent."

Students comb 'underside' of New York for classmate

NEW YORK (AP) — Twelve days after divinity student Sam Todd stumbled out of a New Year's Eve party and vanished, his family was ready to abandon its hunt among soup kitchens and shelters — until another wave of classmates arrived to keep the search going.

About 30 to 40 students from Yale University's divinity school and from Vassar College, where the 24-year-old Todd did his undergraduate study, have traveled to the city each day to join the hunt.

They comb the seedy back streets and paste fliers on lampposts, hoping that the young man may still be alive, perhaps wandering in a daze from a head injury.

But by Wednesday, the Rev. George Todd and his wife, Kathleen, had tentatively decided to give up, said Sam's 29-year-old brother, John. Those plans were changed when 25 students and faculty members who knew Todd showed up, ready for more digging.

"The police said they had never seen such a sustained saturation of the city as we have been doing for the past week and a half," John Todd said, adding that Yale University and several anonymous donors had contributed money for the search.

The family's hopes have been by fueled by police, who point out that Todd's body would have turned up by now if he had been killed.

"We're all optimistic he is alive and warm and fed somewhere. We wish we knew where," John Todd said. "We're going to be continuing the search indefinitely as long as people turn out."

Sam Todd had been drinking on New Year's Eve at a party in the city's SoHo section, near Greenwich Village, before he disappeared about 2 a.m. on Jan. 1. He carried no money and no identification and wore only a sweatshirt, blue jeans and running shoes.

He and his 23-year-old brother, Adam, stepped outside for some fresh air, and Sam started to jog around the block. Adam went back upstairs, but Sam never returned.

"I believe that if there is a hope that Sam can be found that we should join the family and work toward that end," said Keith Green, 24, of Asheville, N.C., who entered Yale's divinity school 2½ years ago with Todd.

On Wednesday, Green and other volunteers spent the afternoon trudging through slush and snow in the Hell's Kitchen neighborhood, distributing fliers with the word "missing" above Sam Todd's picture and a number to call with information.

On Wednesday evening, Green headed to a shelter for the homeless to watch faces during the dinner hour, hoping to spot the Ivy League student among the indigents.

Todd's father, a Presbyterian minister, says the searchers have received tips about possible sightings of the missing man and that a few may have "some credibility."

Collins tops worst-dressed list

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Joan Collins topped designer Richard Blackwell's 24th annual list of the 10 worst-dressed women — which included male rock singer Boy George, he of the plucked eyebrows and Salvation Army garb.

Miss Collins, star of television's "Dynasty," drew Blackwell's scorn for being "barely, bizarrely Hollywood" in elaborate outfits that seem to change with every scene.

Boy George, lead singer of the British rock group Culture Club, earned the 10th spot for reminding the designer of "Victor-Victoria in bad drag."

In between on the list, announced Wednesday, were Barbra Streisand in second place, "a boy version of Medusa" in her pose as a male yeshiva student in her film "Yentl"; rock singer Joan Jett — "a Bronx Pocahontas in black goes porn" — in third place; and comedian Joan Rivers in fourth place because "in borrowed rags she proves the House of Pancakes still have the best."

Actress-model Twiggy took the No.5 spot for resembling "Lady Godiva dressed for a Roman orgy." Actress Kathleen "Koo" Stark, sometime girlfriend of Britain's Prince Andrew, was described as "a fashion Frankenstein waiting at the palace gate," while Lauren Tewes of ABC-TV's "Love Boat" was panned as "a shipwrecked Tugboat Annie."

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The press conference was meant as a promotion for a public television special on American art, but the limelight shone on the documentary's coordinating producer — Caroline Kennedy.

WNET, the New York City public TV outlet which invited Ms. Kennedy to Wednesday's press conference at the Century Plaza Hotel, urged reporters in vain to keep their questions to the scheduled topic.

But Ms. Kennedy, the 26-year-old daughter of the late President John F. Kennedy, said the extra attention was "not really a problem for me."

• • •

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, San Diego Padres outfielder Alan Wiggins and Teri Shields, mother of actress Brooke Shields, joined forces to help dedicate a new alcoholism treatment center at Scripps Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Ford, 65, said Wednesday's opening of the new McDonald Center means "people may come into treatment much sooner, before they get so ill."

Rush-hour walking

During recent days the Midland City Council approved a number of changes designed to make crossing streets around some of the city's schools a little safer. Few will argue with the need to protect youngsters as much as possible.

But there are others who may need a little more protection by the council, too. At the end of just about any workday, a drive home along Front Avenue where it passes the downtown area reveals the danger.

Numerous downtown workers park their vehicles south of the Missouri-Pacific railroad tracks, cross Front and walk to the buildings where they work. When 5 p.m. rolls around, those same workers exit their work sites and return, en masse, to their vehicles.

That creates a problem because the pedestrians not only slow traffic on Front, which is a main thoroughfare, but also are endangered by Front's high volume of traffic, particularly the same times of the day. Crosswalks are few and far between in the heavily traveled pedestrian traffic area where Front intersects Main, Loraine and Colorado streets, and groups of workers daily stand in the left-turn lane of Front while waiting to cross the street. It isn't difficult to imagine an accident occurring that would take one or more lives.

One can argue that the pedestrians are, for the most part, adults who know the risks and should exercise caution. Yes, they should. But people don't always do what they should.

The problem obviously calls for city council study, if such study isn't already under way. A number of downtown parking facilities currently are under construction and the city should determine how those facilities will affect pedestrian traffic across Front at peak times. That information could cause city officials to determine that, after completion of the facilities, further action will not be needed or to choose safety measures such as requesting additional police patrols of the region during peak times, requesting additional red lights and crosswalks along that stretch of Front or even construction of elevated crosswalks to carry pedestrians over Front.

One thing is certain: The pedestrian and vehicular traffic in the Main-Front region of the city is creating a dangerous situation that should not be permitted to continue as is. The city should study the situation further and take action to prevent loss of life.

War on the poor?

The strong economic recovery now in progress is putting the critics of Reaganomics on the defensive. Still, everyone knows the White House has savaged social welfare programs by cutting mercilessly at their budgets. Isn't that so?

We invite readers to decide for themselves. What follows are figures culled from the official federal budgets for the last budgetary year (fiscal 1981) of the Carter administration and the Reagan administration's just-completed fiscal year 1983.

Social Security: Carter, $138 billion; Reagan, $170 billion.

Food and nutrition assistance: Carter, $16.2 billion; Reagan, $17.8 billion.

Housing assistance: Carter, $6.9 billion; Reagan, $9.6 billion.

Medicaid: Carter, $16.9 billion; Reagan, $19.3 billion.

Medicare: Carter, $39.1 billion; Reagan, $57.4 billion.

Consumer and occupational health and safety: Carter, $1.04 billion; Reagan, $1.07 billion.

Aid to families of dependent children (AFDC program): Carter, $8.5 billion; Reagan, $8.2 billion.

The list goes on and on. The Reagan administration is also paying out substantially more than its predecessor for food stamps, supplemental security income (SSI), health research, unemployment compensation, and for federal employee retirement and disability programs, among others.

Overall, income-security programs increased from $225 billion in President Carter's last year to about $282.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. Health programs went from $70.3 billion in 1981 to $82.3 billion in fiscal year 1983. The entire federal budget increased from $657.2 billion in fiscal 1981 to about $795.9 billion in fiscal 1983.

So, you be the judge. Is President Reagan a heartless skinflint, starving the poor and robbing them of every federal benefit?

Another View:

Changing civil rights

As captured by the Reagan administration, the formerly independent U.S. Civil Rights Commission is well on its way toward ordering retreats on civil rights. Its new staff director, Linda Chavez, is diligently searching for "adverse effects" of affirmative action, racial quotas, school busing and bilingual education, all generally favored by the commission for a quarter century, and all denounced by President Reagan and his aides.

What the commission has done since its inception in 1957 no longer seems relevant. This is a new commission, resulting from the administration's double cross of an understanding with Congress in choosing new members. A majority of the new members were chosen for their loyalty to Mr. Reagan's ideas on civil rights, as was Linda Chavez earlier. And she has chosen as general counsel Mark Disler, who helped Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds on legal briefs harshly criticized by the old commission.

In recommending major changes in commission programs, Chavez does not flatly condemn busing for school desegregation, or affirmative action to overcome job discrimination. She only recommends studies to demonstrate what she wants to demonstrate: that these programs have adverse consequences. Having made up her mind against school busing, she urges a study of "voluntary" methods of achieving school desegregation.

The Reagan administration seems bent on undoing the nation's 30 years of progress on civil rights. If the administration's own, personal Civil Rights Commission follows that course, it surely ought to change its name.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Death squads form fraternity

WASHINGTON — Behind the violence in Latin America are not only left-wing guerrillas but right-wing assassins who belong to death squads. They have cast a dark specter over the peace process.

Jack Anderson

I have learned there's an international league of death squads, which operate from Mexico to Argentina. Ordinarily, they maintain the strictest secrecy about their operations. But through a contact in the Honduran secret police, my associate Jon Lee Anderson arranged a face-to-face interview in Honduras with an outspoken leader and founder of the Honduruan death squad.

He is a thin, fair-haired man in his 30s, who I will call El Lobo (The Wolf). By day, he is a doctor at the National Hospital in Tegucigalpa. By night, he is an assassin for ELA, the Spanish acronym for Anti-Communist Combat Army.

The ELA is a relatively new death squad, founded in 1979. Unlike its counterparts in Guatemala, El Salvador and Argentina, the ELA is not made up primarily of paramilitary security forces, according to El Lobo.

Perhaps it was his amateur status that made El Lobo indiscreet enough to brag to a Yankee reporter: "We are affiliated and in contact with similar groups in other countries."

The ELA had close ties, he said, with the Maximiliano Hernandez Marinez Brigade in El Salvador. This is the group that recently slaughtered nine members of a peasant cooperative, including two pregnant women, as part of a stepped-up campaign of terror.

Human rights groups estimate that 40,000 people had died in El Salvador since 1980; about half of those were civilians who were suspected of leftist leanings and were murdered by the death squads.

El Lobo expressed admiration for the Salvadoran death squad and the general whose name it took. Gen. Hernandez was a Salvadoran dictator who ordered the massacre of an estimated 30,000 Indians and peasants after a communist-backed uprising in the 1930s.

"He handled communists the right way," said El Lobo. "He killed every one he caught."

El Lobo gave this account of the international fraternity of death squads: "We go to annual conferences. I went to last year's. It was in Buenos Aires. The Triple A put it on."

He was not referring to an automobile association, but to the Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance. This is a clandestine confederation of police, military and paramilitary goons responsible for thousands of murders and other disappearances during the "dirty war" of the 1970s.

The overall umbrella group for the death squad network is CAL (Latin American Anti-Communist Confederation), based in Mexico. "CAL is our political front," said El Lobo. "We are all 'La Mano Blanca.'"

La Mano Blanco (The White Hand) is the name for the warning white glove or hand print left on or near a victim's body. According to a former CIA "dirty tricks" specialist, La Mano Blanco was set up by the CIA in Guatemala in the 1950s after the agency engineered the ouster of leftist president Jacobo Arbenz.

Although now a member of La Mano Blanco's network, the Honduran death squad organization was set up independently, El Lobo said. "Eighty-five of us, mostly graduate students, got together and formed ELA," he said. "We were tired of Marxist control of the student union and faculty, the labor union. We wanted to do what the militarty legally couldn't do to stop them."

With a laugh, the doctor-assassin said of his bloody work: "We call it environmental sanitation."

Footnote: The resurgence last autumn of right-wing squads in El Salvador led Congress to order a stop to U.S. backing for the Salvadoran security forces that control the assassins. But President Reagan vetoed the measure, and suspected leftists are still being murdered with impunity by goons whose salaries are indirectly paid by U.S. taxpayers. The White House, however, is pressuring the Salvadoran government to purge police and military officials who are known death squad members.

• • •

WAIVING THE RULES: In a long-overdue effort to make defense contractors at least as responsible for their products as manufacturers of automobiles and appliances, Congress has ordered the Defense Department to require warranties on weapons systems.

The Pentagon's procurement people were horrified at this business-like requirement intruding into boondoggle heaven. Congress actually expects weapons to work?

Recently resigned Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Thayer quickly responded with a 90-day reprieve. He authorized the temporary waiver of the weapons warranty requirement "in the interest of national defense to ensure there is no major disruption to the acquisition of goods and services which are essential in meeting our natonal security commitment."

Thayer's memo said the 90-day grace period "will provide the time required for the department to formulate and disseminate policy and guidance to implement the warranty provision."

This sounds suspiciously like Pentagonese for giving the contractors' lawyers time to find loopholes in the congressional requirement.

GEORGE F. WILL

Jackson's performance lurid

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jackson, who describes himself as a "human rights activist," probably has been too active to read Amnesty International's report on the policies (such as torturing children to get information about parents fleeing persecution) employed by the Syrian regime, with whose members he says he feels "kinship."

George F. Will

For example, there is Mustafa Tlas, minister of defense, who in 1974, was chief of staff and honored a soldier for slaughtering "like sheep" 28 "Jewish soldiers ... He killed three of them with an ax and decapitated them .. .He fought with one of them face to face, laid down his ax, broke his neck and devoured his flesh."

Explaining his kinship with Syria's mass murderers, Jackson says: Donald Rumsfeld, the President's Mideast envoy, "was uncomfortable and had to make cultural adjustments" when dealing with Syria's rulers, whereas he, Jackson, had "a certain kind of kinship" because "most of those in our delegation all (sic) had been touched either by occupation, slavery or colonialism."

The notion that he, the political entrepreneur from Chicago, and they, the despots, are similarly victims is as striking as his assertion, made in the White House Rose Garden, that "Syria had a right to kill" Lt. Goodman. It is hard to imagine what Jackson meant, which may explain why the media, normally so carnivorous, extended to him a courtesy that would not have been granted to any other candidate: That grotesque use of the word "right," by a man who has made a career of using that word, was not highlighted in the reporting.

When Jackson told the New York Times that the long list of weapons he would scrap includes the "B-1 missile," perhaps he really knew that the B-1 is a bomber. When he said the budget could be balanced out of Pentagon overruns, perhaps he was just being kittenish. His explanation of why he recently reversed his position on abortion ("We are God's creatures; we are free agents," therefore "we have the right to choose" abortions) may be just a lucky intersection of theology and his new political needs. And when, asked if he must attract white votes, he says, "You're right, and that's why someone like Ramsey Clark is a member of our steering committee," the comedy is irresistible.

But the fun ends when he gushes about a terrorist organization, the PLO, that takes whole cities (Beirut, Tripoli) hostage: "It's a spirit; it's bred in the children ... And it's not just a military arm — it's hospitals, it's industry, it's education, it's a way of life." Explaining his statement that Zionism is "a poisonous weed," he says: "Zionism is rooted in race." Again it is unclear what — or if — Jackson is thinking. But coming from someone who celebrates the alleged affinity of American blacks with the Third World, Jackson's careless talk sounds similar to the U.N. pronouncement that Zionism is racism. The U.N's Third World majority wants to deprive Israel of legitimacy by saying that Israel expresses only racial cohesion. In fact, Israel expresses the religious and cultural cohesion of a people who, having had a uniquely hazardous history, deserve a common future.

When Jackson says that in addition to him "many other people consider the West Bank occupation to be illegal: Nixon, Ford and Carter," he is handling important issues the way a child handles silverware: with a clumsiness that can be amusing — in a child. The Ford and Carter administrations asserted that Israel's West Bank settlements are illegal. No administration has said the occupation is illegal.

This and other Jacksonisms are on display in Lally Weymouth's interview with him in the Jan. 9 issue of New York magazine. His thinking is familiar. On March 1, 1980, the Carter administration cast a sordid vote in the U.N. Security Council for a resolution finding Israel guilty — the only nation ever found guilty — of violating the Fourth Geneva Convention. That Convention codified the Nuremberg judgment against Nazi conduct in occupied territories. The vote was lurid evidence of the mentality — of the contortions to placate the Third World — that got a Democratic administration repudiated.

Jackson travels fast because he travels light, not encumbered by information about many of the things he talks about, and not inhibited by any real hope of exercising presidential responsibility. But when are we going to hear from the other Democratic candidates. They are so terrified of him that they, normally so loquacious, remain silent about pronouncements that, made by anyone other than Jackson, would bring their blood to a boil.

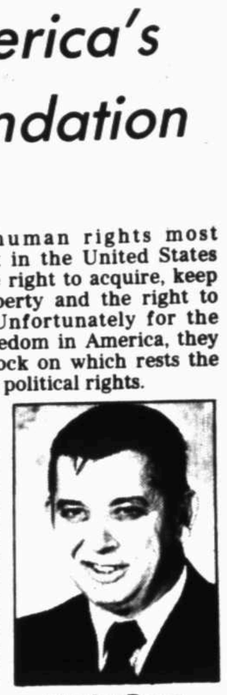

Jackson's improvised, reckless rhetoric would destroy any other candidate in a week. The uncritical, not to say swooning and trembling, reception of his performance is yet another form of condescension toward blacks.

CHARLEY REESE

Vital rights America's foundation

The human rights most under attack in the United States today are the right to acquire, keep and use property and the right to bear arms. Unfortunately for the future of freedom in America, they are the bedrock on which rests the remainder of political rights.

Charley Reese

If you could, you should ask a serf or tenant farmer how useful are the rights of free speech, free assembly and even the right to vote to a person who owns nothing.

You see, a person who is economically dependent cannot be, in the truest sense of the word, politically independent. That is so because we are mortal. Every day we have to feed the bottomless pit we call a stomach. We have to find a place to rest our bones and to keep our skin out of bad weather. Or else we die. Consequently, survival comes first in any place and in any language.

Some especially dumb Americans used to come back from Red China and remark on how clean the streets were and how docile the people were. It is a simple matter. No one in Red China eats without a ration card issued monthly by the Party. No one who displeases the Party gets a ration card. Therefore if the Party suggests that it sould be nice if you rise at 5 a.m. and swept the streets, you rise a 5 a.m. and sweep the streets or you risk not eating for a month. Disarm people, as all totalitarian governments do and as many American liberals want to do, then deprive them of the right to own property, and they are very easy to control.

The men who made the American Revolution were neither naive nor rosy-eyed idealists. They were realists. They had no illusions about government. They had no illusions about human nature. They knew that without economic independence, political independence would be meaningless. They intended for us to be a nation of property owners. They knew without weapons, people would be helpless to overthrow tyranny. They intended for us to be a nation of armed property owners.

Both of these fundamental rights — the right to own property and the right to bear arms — are under attack. We will be most unwise if we fail to defend them.

What makes the problem difficult is that the attacks are coming largely from benign people for benign, if mistaken, reasons. But if you get run over by the Pope's car, you are just as dead as if you were run over by a car driven by Yasser Arafat.

Many Americans today, for example, believe that property rights are secondary to human needs. In some places, owners of apartment complexes are compelled to rent to families with children. In some areas, rent control prevents property owners from charging market rates (and most often creates slums). In some areas, property is taken without compensation through zoning. Invariably, in these clashes between property rights and human needs or even human ideas about how a place ought to look or grow, the property owner is cast in the role of the villain because, it is asserted, his goal is only profit.

This attitude reflects the socialist bias which many Americans have today without realizing they have it. It is the result of decades of socialist propaganda via movies, books, newspaper commentaries, and education. This accumulation of socialist thinking has resulted in reversing the attitudes of most Americans from those of our forefathers. Our forefathers trusted the private sector and feared the public sector. Today, American liberals distrust the private sector and trust the public sector.

The same liberals fear their fellow citizens if they are armed and would like the government to have a monopoly on firearms. Of course they claim they are only concerned about handguns, but if they succeed in banning them, they will go after the long guns next, using the same arguments.

It's a sad state of affairs. Capitalism rests on the right to own property. Without that right, no one can hope to accumulate enough wealth to be independent. Freedom depends on the people holding the power, not their government, but a people without arms have no power.

Every American should think carefully about these two rights and actively oppose their curtailment. It is the private sector which creates the wealth which provides the means for the government to provide welfare and transfer payments. If he private sector is destroyed, the public sector will go bankrupt, too, and be forced to simply loot the remaining wealth created by private individuals.

Networks go on offensive against cable television

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS and NBC have been negotiating with several movie studios about getting theatrical films before they go on pay television — more proof that the networks have taken the offensive against cable.

Did you think that the business that produced such diverse success stories as "The A-Team," "60 Minutes," "Dynasty" and "Hill Street Blues" would be bullied forever by cable TV?

In the annals of TV history, 1983 was when the networks stopped losing ground to cable, while 1984 may be when the networks began their counterattack.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, said in an interview that NBC has had conversations with some movie studios, "but nobody has put together an economic formula that makes sense."

One movie bartered to NBC first was last year's best picture, "Gandhi." But those talks reached a standstill over money.

For such a movie to bypass pay-cable, a network would have to sign a big enough check to absorb the studio's loss of the potential cable revenue.

ENTERTAINMENT

An executive at CBS, who requested annonymity, said CBS' discussions with Universal were "on hold," but talks were continuing with other studios.

Through a spokesman, Lewis Erlicht, president of ABC Entertainment said the network "is not pursuing and has not been pursued by the movie studios." He said ABC's strategy against cable rests in miniseries and distinctive TV movies, such as "Something about Amelia," the tastefully treated film about incest that drew an enormous audience Monday night.

Although money remained an obstacle, Tartikoff said that an added benefit from playing footsie with the movie moguls was that, "at some point, the value in the endeavor goes beyond the business deal. By doing this, we'd be weakening a competitor."

Tartikoff was referring to Home Box Office, the nation's largest and richest pay-cable service. The networks have the major studios as allies against HBO because the movie houses are angry at what they consider HBO's take-it-or-leave-it attitude on film fees.

Man purchases 'African Queen,' berths steamer at Key Largo

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — "Every woman who goes on board feels a little like Katharine Hepburn," says Jim Hendricks, admiring his African Queen, the 30-foot tramp steamer Miss Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart piloted in the 1951 film classic of the same name.

A Bogart buff and a Hepburn admirer, this retired Lexington, Ky., lawyer bought the steel-hulled steamboat two years ago for $65,000. Now it's on display at the motel he owns in this island city where another Bogart classic, "Key Largo," was filmed.

"So many people associate Key Largo with Bogie. What would be a more natural home for the African Queen?" asks Hendricks, an avid sailer.

There's nothing luxurious on board the open craft, parked now on a custom-made trailer, and time has not sapped its sturdy appearance. Amidships, the thick, blackened boiler takes up half the vessel's 8-foot beam, and the single mast forward still carries the British ensign.

The African Queen, however, is not simply on display. Hendricks keeps it in running condition and, with little coaxing, he'll haul it around the country to boat shows or accept challenges to race riverboats of times gone by. It has been the "queen" of boat shows in New York and Washington, and Hendricks plans to show it during the World's Fair in New Orleans this year.

Although the single-cylinder engine was designed to burn wood, Hendricks uses charcoal.

"I'll burn 30 to 40 bags of charcoal whenever I take it out," he says, adding the African Queen can make 7-8 mph. "I might get up to 12 mph if I push it."

Archaeology course to be offered

Midland College and Odessa College, in cooperation with the Museum of the Southwest, are jointly offering a course in archaeology for their students and area residents.

"Introduction to Archaeology" will be taught at the Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., Tuesday and Thursday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. beginning Tuesday. Dr. Michael Collins, a native Midlander who has over 30 years of experience in the field, will teach this special class where theory is applied to practical situations concerning the future of the past.

The museum setting for the class will provide students a unique opportunity to work with local archaeological collections and delve into contemporary issues surrounding archaeology and the public.

Traditional classroom instruction will include discussions and readings about the history of archaeology from classical sites to New World excavations, the archaeological context, the science of archaeology and the nature of its research, the principles of field work as well as a review of the accomplishments of archaeology. A field trip to a local site and laboratory exercises will complement the lecture components of the class.

Collins is a veteran archaeologist and instructor. He has conducted archaeological investigations in the American Southwest, Southern Plains, Central and coastal Texas and the Ohio and Tennessee valleys. He has also worked in Central America and the Near East and has been a consultant in the analysis of collections from Southwestern Europe and South America. Collins has written numerous articles for publication. He has taught at the universities of Texas, Arizona and Kentucky. He is involved in a project researching the prehistory of West Texas and southeastern New Mexico.

The class carries three hours of credit and is listed as "Introduction to Archaeology," 2301. For registration information call either OC or MC.

Italian conductor presents 'Butterfly'

FORT WORTH — Noted Italian conductor Angelo Campori will conduct the Fort Worth Opera's production of "Madama Butterfly," Friday and Sunday at Tarrant County Convention Center.

Canpori's conducting "Madama Butterfly" was made possible through a $10,000 grant from the Anne Tandy and Charles D. Tandy Foundation. The Tandy Foundation gift inaugurates the opera's Conductors Podium Fund, designed to bring outstanding opera conductors to Fort Worth.

The performances will star soprano Diana Soviero in her newest role, Cio-Cio-San, the tragic geisha.

French stage director Bernard Uzan, whose staging of Fort Worth's season debut, "Les Pecheurs de Perles," thrilled audiences, returns to Fort Worth to direct "Madama Butterfly."

Campori, a leading opera conductor in the opera houses of Italy, is music director of the Verdi Conservatory and the Teatro Regio in Parma. He made his United States debut in 1976 at Avery Fisher Hall conducting Refice's "Cecilia" with sopramo Renata Scotto. His close association with Miss Scotto includes performances in Cincinnati of "Adriana Lecouvreur" and in Dallas of "Un Ballo in Maschera."

Campori has appeared in Carnegie Hall conducting a concert featuring Boris Christoff in his New York return. He recently made his New Orleans and Houston debuts. Upcoming engagements for Campori include a return to Philadelphia for "La Traviata" and a debut in Vancouver for "Nabucco."

"Opera Sampler" tickets for the three remaining productions in the 1983-84 season — "Madama Butterfly," Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" and the Verdi Requiem — are available for $20 through $60. Tickets for individual performances or "opera sampler" tickets may be purchased by calling 1-817-738-6509 or 1-817-429-1181.

Scenes put director to sleep

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some movie actors see all their rushes, the screening of the previous day's filming. James Stewart is not among them.

"Well, I did it a few times," said Stewart. "Then one day I was sitting there watching a scene, then I looked at Frank Capra sitting next to me. He was sound asleep! I figured that if the director couldn't stay awake in his own rushes, there wasn't much sense in me going to 'em."

Polish radio similar to Western station of 1970s

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Once it was Elvis, crackling his "Blue Suede Shoes" over Radio Luxembourg. Today, it's blaring, heavy metal rock groups like Led Zepplin that have Polish teenagers listening to the radio.

That's according to what may be Poland's first-ever list of "Greatest Hits," compiled recently by Marek Wiernik, a music columnist for the Roman Catholic newspaper "Slowo Powszechne" (Universal Word) and a disc jockey at state-run Polish radio.

The British rock band Led Zeppelin topped Wiernik's "Chart of All Time" with "Stairway to Heaven." With three hits in the top 10, the band was miles ahead of any other contender.

The hard-rocking band of the '70s placed 13 times on the list of over 100 hit songs, almost all of them from the West.

"The result reflects the line of music presented on the radio," said Wiernik in a telephone interview, "with the majority (of spaces on the chart) held by heavy metal bands.

"It strikes me that there is a lack of great heroes of rock 'n' roll on the chart," he said. "But it was done just for fun."

While Poland has seen the growth of a punk culture, whose nihilistic and hopeless lyrics have drawn official scorn and censorship, Wiernik's "Chart of All Time" is based on what teen-agers are hearing on state-run radio. It sounds like a good Western FM station of the '70s.

Wiernik compiled his list from the votes of listeners to his radio program, "Radio 3," a call-in show for young people with music, talk, counseling and information about rock concerts.

"The polling was carried out over two-and-a-half months and brought about 10,000 letters," he said. Most of those responding were ages 14 to 20, he said.

Poland's most popular group, Perfect, appears only four times on the list and a punkish local group, Republika, shows up five times — outnumbered and outdecibeled by their Western counterparts.

Next to Led Zeppelin, whose lead singer Robert Plant shows up twice on his own, the poll indicates teen-age preference for groups whose names read like the favorites of a motorcycle gang: Iron Maiden, with 11 hits, Deep Purple, The Rolling Stones, Queen, AC-DC, Judas Priest and Black Sabbath.

The Beatles are No. 5 with "Hey Jude."

Cuban-American actor changes name, ends up playing Cuban

NEW YORK (AP) — How can a Cuban-American actor make it big in Hollywood nowadays? By changing his last name to Bauer — to avoid typecasting — and then playing a Cuban opposite Al Pacino.

That's the story behind Esteban Echevarria Samson, now known to American moviegoers as Steven Bauer, who plays Pacino's sidekick in the new gangster epic "Scarface."

"I changed my name mostly because I found that I was running into a kind of limitation in terms of the roles I was considered for," Bauer says. "Not specifically because of my physical type, but because the Latin name preceded me.

"The irony about it is that when the dream role came up, it was a Cuban role. But I thought that in this case, the chance of playing a Cuban with an accent was not so risky because of the quality of the role and of the rest of the people involved".

Those people included director Brian DePalma, whose films include "Carrie" and "Dressed to Kill."

Working with Pacino was "an incredible experience, because I didn't even have any opportunity to have any fear or any nerves," says the 27-year-old Bauer. Even though he had considerable experience in television — his credits include "Hill Street Blues," the made-for-TV movie "Nichols and Dymes," and the mini-series remake of "From Here to Eternity" with William Devane — "Scarface" was Bauer's movie debut.

Pacino "welcomed me immediately," says the Havana-born actor who came to the United States with his parents after the 1959 Cuban revolution. "He helped me tremendously and was very generous with his time and ideas. And we soon became the friends that the characters are supposed to be."

Midland against Odessa

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Midland High and Midland Lee's girls basketball squads tip off against old foes tonight in resuming District 4-5A play.

The foes are Odessa High and Odessa Permian, respectively, and when the teams do battle, they will each be trying to stave off an upset defeat.

A loss at Odessa for MHS, 12-7 and 3-2 in district, would mean a tremendous upset for the Bronchos and for Bulldog coach Jane Young. OHS is the league doormat with a 5-15 mark, and a winless 0-5 in the loop.

"Our practices have been more intense," said Young. "Since we lost to Permian, we can't make too many more mistakes."

MHS LOST to Permian by five in overtime to get 1984 started on the wrong foot. But Young's team is just that: a young team. "Well, at least now we know not to call time outs when we don't have them."

Denise Lanz has been the MHS show to a large degree, but the junior called a time out MHS didn't have against Permian. Lanz voided the error at the foul line, but MHS still is just beginning to come together.

Lanz after 19 games has scored at a 14.5 clip with a season high of 25 in MHS' district opener against Abilene. Orvetta Johnson (12.2) is progressing well after an ankle injury forced her to miss a game. Johnson says her ankle is not yet 100 percent. Terez Robinson has shown steady improvement, raising her average to a season high 6.6 after two straight good efforts, 17 points against Big Spring and a dozen against Cooper.

Coach Shirley Stephenson's Lee Rebels find themselves in a position few expected them to occupy. District observers looked to Lee to be the favorite, since Stephenson's tenure at LHS has never produced a second-division finish. But a funny thing happened on the way to the title: Lee became a darkhorse.

Not that anybody has forgotten about the Rebs. But since Lee dropped a league game to San Angelo (11-6, 5-0), the Rebs have had to play catch up.

Lee sports the district's best mark at 15-5, and is in sole possession of second place at 4-1. When the Rebs host Permian tonight at Chaparral Center, they face an unknown quantity.

PERMIAN'S VICTORY over MHS should serve notice that the Panthers are capable of winning. Strangely, OP has a losing record on the year at 8-11, but Stephenson won't take Permian lightly. The Panthers almost did Stpehenson a favor, but could not manage San Angelo, losing 60-54.

Felicia Farias continues to be the mainstay in the Rebel offense at a 17.1 average. Farias' scoring has leveled off somewhat after a season high of 24.0 early in the year.

Following Farias for Lee is Tunya Mayberry (12.0) and Stacy Harmon (10.2). Mayberry has blossomed lately, and is averaging almost 18 points per contest in the district. Harmon is simply Lee's automatic 10 every night. Her average has varied by less than a point either way since very early in the year.

NCAA panel raises questions

DALLAS (AP) — Some time next month there'll be a new kid on the block in college athletics: The NCAA Presidential Commission.

There will be 44 college presidents and chancellors on the panel.

How much power will they have?

How much interest will they show?

Will they make a difference?

There were certainly more questions than answers Wednesday as the NCAA ended a tumultuous convention of its diverse, far-flung member schools. The American Council on Education was defeated in its drive to set up an an extraordinarily powerful Board of Presidents, able to set policy and put in rules independent of convention vote.

Approved in its place, after more than two hours of debate, was the idea several other presidents set forth — the 44-member presidential commission. It can submit legislation directly to the convention and commission studies. But its overall influence remains unclear.

"I think the presidential commission is going to be very effective and have a great deal of influence," Walter Byers, the NCAA's executive director, said at a news conference following the convention's adjournment. "This was an issue that commanded much public attention exposure in the news media. The presidents will take their responsibilities seriously."

Also, Byers noted, the presidents will be voted in by mail ballot by all presidents of NCAA-member schools.

"The presidential commission is going to include some of the most respected chief executive officers in the country, the heads of some of the nation's most prestigeous institutions," he said.

Byers said the commission could be decided upon as early as next month. He also agreed that its first meeting would no doubt take up the burning issue of Division I-A autonomy, an issue which for about 24 hours had many top football schools talking out loud about an NCAA pullout.

Talk of a split from the venerable NCAA fell almost completely silent, however, when smaller schools agreed to two of the major powers' three demands.

But the large football-playing institutions insisted that they will not rest until their No. 1 goal — legislative autonomy within the NCAA — is met.

"I don't think they knew what they were voting for," said Gene Corrigan, Notre Dame athletic director, after Tuesday's defeats for I-A. "I heard more talk about pulling out of the NCAA (after Tuesday's vote) than I've ever heard, and I've been coming to these conventions since 1967."

Delegates approved Wednesday two proposals whose defeat on Tuesday triggered an angry barrage toward the smaller Division I schools. By a wide margin, the convention agreed to let the 105 Division I-A institutions have a separate legislative meeting in June. By a smaller margin, it was agreed that needy students may receive federal assistance money along with a full athletic scholarship.

A move to reconsider the question on Division I-A autonomy failed by eleven votes.

"That remains the main issue facing Division I-A," said Georgia football coach and athletic director Vince Dooley, who startled many delegates Tuesday evening by declaring that Georgia and others should pull out of the NCAA "as it is presently structured".

"We are not seeking to leave the NCAA," said Tom Hansen, executive director of Pac-10 Conference. "And now I see this as an opportunity to work within Division I-A without taking any rash steps. We have two new avenues — the presidential commission and the new summer meeting."

Many schools seemed to fear that big-time powers would increase the size of their basketball squads and coaching staffs and eventually squeeze everyone else out of the lucrative NCAA basketball tournament.

There are 278 schools in Division I, the NCAA's top division, broken up into I-A, I-AA and "I-Other." The 105 I-A schools include the 60 members of the College Football Association, the Big Ten and Pac-10 conferences and 25 others. The 84 Division I-AA schools are those with smaller football programs. The other 89 are almost all basketball-playing schools, such as DePaul and Marquette.

UIL deals probation to 4 teams

AUSTIN (AP) — Class 3A football champion Daingerfield and three other high schools — Tyler John Tyler, Decatur and Gladewater — have been placed on probation in football next season.

The action, taken Wednesday by the University Interscholastic League, serves as a warning and does not disqualify schools from competing in district and playoff games.

Members voted 5-1 to place Tyler on probation because the coach was accused of recruiting Lindale athlete James McGowen to play football for Tyler. Recruiting football players from other districts is prohibited by UIL rules.

Lindale Superintendent David Montgomery filed the recruiting charge against Tyler, saying former Tyler football coach Bill Parks had talked to McGowen twice about playing for Tyler.

Affidavits signed by McGowen and his father said Parks visited McGowen at home in July and told him if he would come to Tyler he would help get him a job.

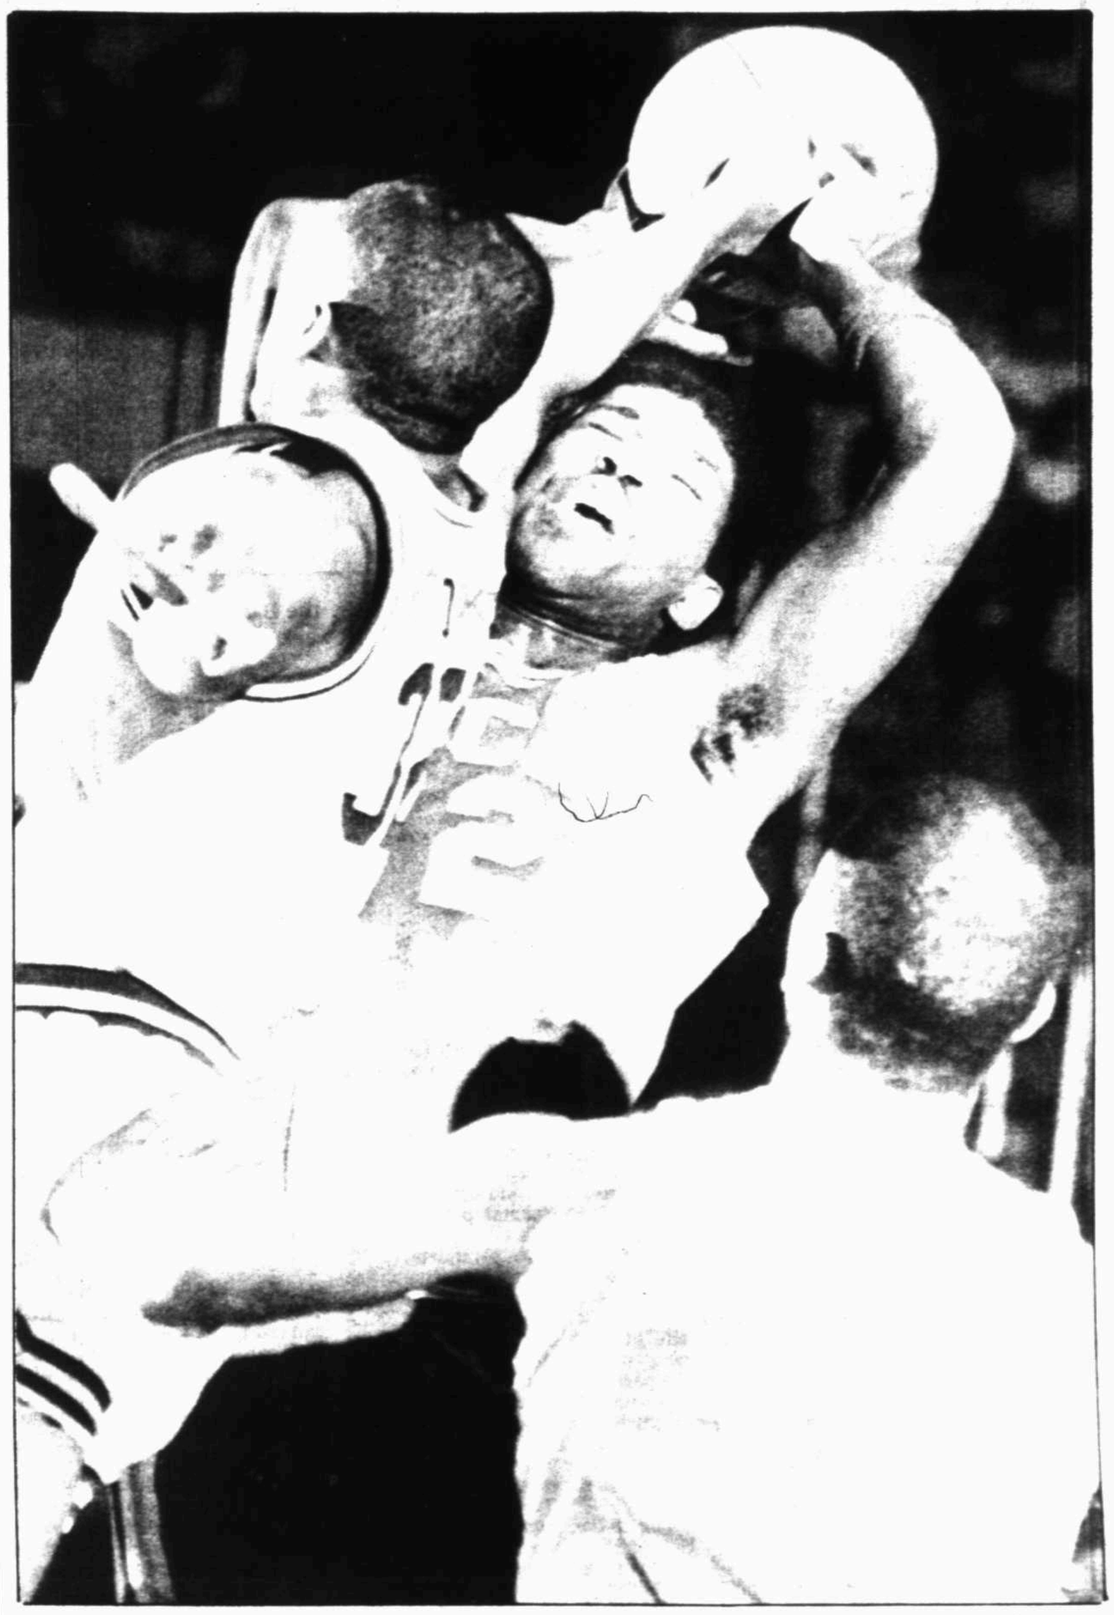

Tyler Superintendent Jack Davidson said that McGowen actually lived in the Tyler attendance area but was a legal transfer to Lindale.

"The mistake coach Parks made in visiting McGowen was a mistake in judgment," said Davidson. "He had no intention of doing anything to entice him away, to spirit him away or persuade him. He did want the boy to know he would be welcome at Tyler."

Parks later resigned. A replacement has not yet been named.

Daingerfield, Decatur and Gladewater were placed on probation for violating the Athletic Code, which "means to play the game in the spirit of fairness and clean sportsmanship" and "to accept decisions of officials without protest."

Committee member Betty Thompson argued in favor of disqualifying Gladewater from playoff competition in football next season, but her effort failed when she gained the support of only one other member.

Owls upset Killer Frogs

Aggies knock off Baylor, 63-52

By The Associated Press

The Rice Owls, victims of the "Killer Frogs" for the past two years, finally ended a reign of frustration against a youthful Texas Christian team in a game described by the Horned Frogs' coach as "a dribble contest."

Tracy Steele finally wrapped up a 43-42 victory for the Owls with a 21-foot jump shot with seven seconds left Wednesday night. In another Southwest Conference game, Texas A&M knocked off Baylor 63-52.

Steele's shot, which gave Rice its only lead of the second half, ended the Owls' five-game losing streak to TCU and also snapped a four-game Rice losing streak this season.

"It was a big win for us," said Rice Coach Tommy Suitts. "I don't know about streaks ... but we were due. We've had a number of games on the road that have come down to something like this and we've lost. It happened to us here two years ago."

TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said he doesn't know if he has seen his team play that flat all year.

"It looked like a dribble contest going on out there," said Killingsworth. "We couldn't get anything going offensively, anything. We forced everything and had no patience. And they played good defense, but you don't have to play much defense if the other team doesn't run an offense."

Mike Cunningham scored 10 points for Rice, which raised its conference record to 1-2 and its season mark to 5-7. The win was the first for Rice on the road in 17 games.

Carven Holcombe scored 15 points to lead TCU, which fell to 7-7 for the season and 0-3 in the SWC. It was the fourth straight loss for the Horned Frogs.

Todd Holloway scored 19 points against a Baylor zone defense to lead the Aggies, now 2-1 in SWC play and 8-5 for the season. Baylor fell to 0-2 and 4-9.

A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said the victory was a "good win" for his team.

"This is his fourth straight good game on the offensive end of the court for us," he said. "Baylor made it close — I thought when we went to a zone defense late it made the difference."

Baylor Coach Jim Haller said he thought the Bears could win the game, even though they weren't playing as well a they had in others.

We knew there would be some howling when Jack Tayrien was named as Midland Lee's football coach Tuesday.

After all, the name doesn't ring a bell like a Gordon Wood or Tommy Kimbrough would. Tayrien is not what you would consider a "Name" coach.

After the season that Lee had in 1983, it would have been easy to grab a big name for the Rebels. There were coaches on the outside looking in, just wishing for some hint of an open door. The reasoning is that it's much easier to go to a school that has had success than one that is struggling.

THE FOUNDATION appears set at Lee. The talent in the long term look just looks good on paper, despite one of the smallest enrollments in District 4-5A.

"It (Lee) is a plum job," one coach, who prefers to remain anonymous for obivious reasons, told me last week. "I think it is a job anyone would want. I hear that their teams from seventh grade up have some talent."

But when the smoke cleared Tuesday, Jack Tayrien still wears Maroon. It was the best unkept Midland secret in the last decade. The decision to replace the departed Spike Dykes with someone in the school system seemed set in stone from the very beginning.

Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, thought he had talent on hand to fill the position. He wanted to use that talent, and at the same time, keep the continuity that has already developed in place.

The Midland school board must be commended for sticking with that decision. If you were ever going to grab that big name, this might have been the excellent opportunity. It would have been easy to go on quick impluse.

In my opinion, the school board made the right decision. I don't know what pressures, if any, the school board faced in making this choice, but they ended up with a wise one.

TAYRIEN WILL not be a new face in the head coaching ranks, despite the fact that he has been an assistant coach under Dykes for the last four years. Tayrien's head coaching record at Lockney, Frenship and Bishop is 72-45-2, a .615 winning percentage.

When Tayrien took his first head coaching job at Lockney, he inherited a team that was 2-18 the previous two years. Tayrien produced a 14-6 record in the next two seasons. That's a turnaround, folks.

But you can throw all the records out of the window as far as I'm concerned. That doesn't even hint at why I feel Tayrien is the right man for the job.

Tayrien is a coach you would want your kid to play for. To me, that's important when you are dealing with Midland kids. I don't want just a good coach, but I want a coach who you can be proud of — on and off the field. Tayrien will become one in a long line of Midland coaches that fill that bill. In fact, he already has.

It was never any secret that Tayrien has a special place in the heart of Dykes. Dykes brought Tayrien with him to Midland. In fact, Bartosh claims that the major reason Dykes came to Midland was because Tayrien would leave Bishop as head coach in order to come back to West Texas.

Although Dykes guided the Rebels to its best record in history with a 13-3 record and a berth in the state finals, he hit rock bottom emotionally after a district loss to San Angelo. Dykes was feeling bad that following week. He knew this team had a chance to be a good one. But that loss, one in which the Rebels dominated the statistics only to lose 14-9, still stared Dykes in the face.

DYKES SAID that week, "They probably won't want me back next year. But I'll tell you something. If they gave this job to Tayrien, this program would really take off."

Of course, you must realize that the statement was made during the low point of the season. Dykes already had a contract and knew he could be back if he wanted. There was never any pressure on Dykes to leave. But it does show how he felt about Tayrien.

Dykes was always loyal to his assistants. Everytime you asked him a question about some team success, he always pointed out one of his assistants as the key.

Dykes was a great coach for Midland's kids. Tayrien is a step to keep that trait in the system. Welcome aboard, Jack. We'll never have to say that this one got away.

Harmon Killebrew, left, Luis Aparicio, center, and Don Drysdale were elected to the baseball Hall of Fame by the Baseball Writers Association of America this week.

Famers cross paths again

NEW YORK (AP) — They operated in different leagues, but occasionally pitcher Don Drysdale and slugger Harmon Killebrew crossed paths.

There was, for example, the 1965 World Series between Drydale's Los Angeles Dodgers and Killebrew's Minnesota Twins. The Dodgers won in seven games, and two old foes, named to the Hall of Fame along with smooth-fielding shortstop Luis Aparicio, recalled what it was like to face each other.

"Drysdale was mean," Killebrew said. "He never gave in. He'd always go right after you, always challenging the hitters."

"HE WAS a tough out," Drysdale said of the man who ripped 573 career home runs. "You couldn't make a mistake with him. I remember our strategy was don't let this man beat you. Give him the opportunity and you'd get beat."

There was one moment when Drysdale lapsed.

"I'm not sure Don will remember," Killbrew began, "but in Dodger Stadium, of course they had a good lead so I guess he didn't care, but he had two strikes and no balls and tried to throw a fastball by me."

Drysdale remembered.

"I snuck it," the pitcher said, "right in the sweet spot. Right in that bat, right over there."

The club in the corner was a giant-sized model and to some pitchers, it must have seemed the size Killebrew was using. He was one of the game's premier sluggers and stands fifth on the all-time home run list. No American League right-handed hitter had more.

Still, Killebrew bristles when he is described as a one-dimensional player. "With all the places I played — first base, third base, three years in left field — I tried to work at all the positions I played. Maybe I wasn't the fastest, but I caught the ball when it was hit to me."

And, Killebrew was quick to remind listeners, his first appearance in the major leagues came as a pinch runner.

"I was very young and there was a lot I had to learn," he said. "I was a good hitter but I had to learn the other phases. I had to learn how to throw. I threw a baseball like a football."

BUCKY HARRIS, his first manager, had a different description. "He throws like a girl," Harris said at the time. Killebrew said the manager's criticism didn't offend him, but it did surprise him.

"I thought I threw pretty well," he said, "for a girl."

With 403 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America voting, election rquired mention on 303 ballots. Aparicio, in his sixth year of eligibility, received 341 votes. Killebrew, passed over three times before, got 335, and Drysdale, who was a candidate for the 10th time, had 316. Relief pitcher Hoyt Wilhelm finished fourth with 290, 13 short of election.

Some baseball greats still waiting

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

They sit by the telephone and wait — old ball players who have paid their dues in work, sacrifice and often pain — and keep looking for the ultimate reward, induction into baseball's Hall of Fame.

For some, the super great, the Willie Mays and Hank Aarons, the call comes quickly and on time. Others, such as Hoyt Wilhelm, Enos (Country) Slaughter, Phil Rizzuto and Pee Wee Reese perk up their ears each year only to receive dead silence. Then there are the tragic ones for whom the bell never tolls at all.

HARMON KILLEBREW, the one-time small town kid from Idaho who could knock the ball a country mile but was said to "throw like a girl," was sitting with his wife by the telephone in Ontario, Ore., when he got the word that he was a member of baseball's Hall of Fame class of '84.

"I had been informed that I was among the leading candidates," he said. "So I waited for the phone to ring. No words can express my feelings. If I had to wait 40 years, it was worth it."

Don Drysdale, the tall, handsome right-hander of the Dodgers, was aware that he was high in the balloting but refused to believe the honor would finally come his way after being passed over nine times.

So he went out and played golf with his buddies, Sandy Koufax and Duke Snider, at Rancho Mirage, Calif.

"I guess I wouldn't let myself believe it," he said. "I pushed it out of my mind. Maybe it's superstition." He had to interrupt his golf game to take the important message.

"First thing I did was tell my mom and pop," he said. "A few tears flowed. It was a scene you couldn't put whipped cream on to make it better."

THE THIRD of the 1984 selectees, slick-fielding Luis Aparicio, was doing a baseball television commentary in Valencia, Venezuela. His boss refused to call him to the phone.

"Even when I impressed on him the importance of my message, the manager said he couldn't take Luis away from the microphone," said Jack Lang, secretary of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

So Aparicio, despite strong Hall of Fame pressure, could not be lured to Wednesday's formal press conference in New York.

So it's on to Cooperstown, N. Y., for slugger Killebrew, fireballer Drysdale and flashy Aparicio — called by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn one of the "most versatile classes ever — the perfect mix."

Aparicio ended a long drought for "glovemen" and Kuhn suggested it might herald a new look for defensive players. The last shortstop to be selected was Ernie Banks in 1978 and before that Lou Boudreau in 1970.

The major complaint against the Hall of Fame has been that it tends to favor "glamour guys" — home run hitters and shutout pitchers.

Killebrew and Drysdale fit neatly into these categories. Only the great Babe Ruth hit more home runs in the American League than Killebrew, now a plumpish, balding, gray-haired man of 47, who hit 573. Drysdale, 6-foot-6, sun-baked Californian, teamed with lefty Sandy Koufax as the mound terrors of the Dodgers in the 1950s and 1960s.

It was another year of disappointment for Hoyt Wilhelm, the renowned knuckleballer who pitched 1,070 games in a 21-year career with a variety of clubs in both leagues, starting with the old New York Giants. He missed by only 38 votes in 1983 and 13 votes this time.

While he took the news sportingly, the 60-year-old Wilhelm must have begun to feel the bitterness of other baseball men whose records seem to get lost in the passing of the years.

Country Slaughter is one of them. Twenty years after he became eligible, the old firehorse of the Cardinals, the Pete Rose of his time, is still waiting for the phone to ring.

"Nobody gave the game more than I did," he says. "I batted .300 for 19 years. I played hard. I put statistics in the books. But the kids voting today never saw me play.

"I'm eligible this year to be picked by the Veterans Committee. If I'm going to be elected to the Hall of Fame, I want it while I'm alive."

Football deaths go down

DALLAS (AP) — The number of deaths directly attributable to football fell to the lowest total since 1979 last year when four athletes, all high school students, were killed playing the game, according to a American Football Coaches Association survey released Wednesday.

The survey, conducted by University of South Carolina professor Fred Mueller, also found nine indirect deaths, seven of which were blamed on heart failure.

The number of direct deaths hit nine in 1980, 1981 and 1982 after falling to four in 1979, said AFCA spokesman Dick Herbert. The total of direct deaths reached highs of 29 in 1964 and 1970.

The 1983 survey was made public Wedneday during the third day of the AFCA's national convention.

Herbert said the number of direct fatalities has fallen over the years because of an emphasis on correct tackling procedures.

"It's unethical for members of AFCA to teach use of the head as the method of primary contact in tackling and blocking," he said. "Almost all direct fatalities involve tackling ... any fatality is a tragedy, but an improvement has been made over the years."

The AFCA convention will conclude Thursday when national coaches of the year for 1983 are announced.

Lietzke gets a scare during Hope action

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke stood on the practice tee at Eldorado Country Club, took his first swing of the day — a little flip with a wedge — then clutched his chest.

"I thought I was having a heart attack," he said.

"Then I realized it was the same kind of pain I've had before on numerous occasions — a pulled muscle. But anytime you get a chest pain, the first thing you think is 'heart attack'.

"I've pretty well ruled that out, but I think I'm going to a hospital to have it checked out," he said after shooting a 5-under-par 67, his first competitive round in this country in five months and an effort that was a single stroke off the first round lead in the five-day, 90-hole Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Former PGA champion John Mahaffey, rookie Willie Wood and Russ Cochran, a left-hander who won two events in the Tournament Players Series last season, shared the top spot with 66s.

Mahaffey, like Lietzke, played at Eldorado. Wood played without a bogey at La Quinta and Cochran spiced his effort at Indian Wells with an eagle-3.

In addition to Lietzke, the group at 67 included Johnny Miller, Curt Byrum, Ronnie Black and Bobby Wadkins. Black and Byrum played at Indian Wells, Wadkins at La Quinta and Miller, a winner of his last two starts, was at Bermuda Dunes.

"Nobody is paying attention, but me," said Miller, whose two triumphs have come in a new team event and an unofficial tournament. "But I'm on a roll." He paused, considered and smiled. "Make it a mini-roll.

"But I'm playing good. Really good. I wouldn't be surprised if I won this tournament."

The format requires the pros to play one round on each of four desert courses, each day with a different set of amateur partners, before the field is cut for the pros-only windup Sunday at Bermuda Dunes.

The big group at 68 was headed by PGA champion Hal Sutton, Fuzzy Zoeller and Craig Stadler, all of whom played at La Quinta.

Defending champion Keith Fergus — who had former President Gerald Ford, House Speaker Tip O'Neill and the host comedian as his amateur team — shot 71 at La Quinta. Ford, Hope and O'Neill, all with 18 handicaps, had a team effort of 66.

Lietzke, a former winner of this title, said the chest pains he experienced were similar "to pulled muscles I've had in the chest and stomach in the past. It usually occurs early in the season, the first couple of tournaments.

Noah makes quick exit

NEW YORK (AP) — French Open champion Yannick Noah won't be able to lay claim to the mythical "king of tennis" title bestowed upon the winner of the $400,000 Volvo Masters tournament.

Noah, who joined Wimbledon champion John McEnroe, U.S. Open winner Jimmy Connors, Australian Open king Mats Wilander and leading money winner Ivan Lendl in the elite 12-man field at Madison Square Garden, made a quick exit Wednesday.

He fell victim to Czech Tomas Smid, who pulled off the biggest upset of the tournament when he eliminated Noah 6-4, 6-4. It was only his second victory in 10 career meetings against Noah, the first Frenchman in 37 years to win on the famed red clay courts of Roland Garros.

"My strategy was to put a lot of pressure on his first serve and come in on his backhand, because I think that's his weakest shot," the steady Smid said of Noah, one of the most athletic players on the men's tennis tour. "I think today I missed three shots."

In Wednesday's other match, Andres Gomez of Equador ousted Eliot Teltscher 7-6, 6-2.

Sweden's Wilander, who came into this season-ending tournament as the No. 1 seed, took on Jose Higueras of Spain this afternoon, while third-seeded McEnroe takes the court tonight against Johan Kriek.

On Friday afternoon, Connors, the No. 4 seed, will face Smid, while two-time defending Masters champion Lendl will play Gomez Friday night.

Saturday's semifinals and Sunday's final will be nationally televised by NBC. Play on both days is scheduled to start at 12:30 p.m. EST.

The winner of the tournament will pocket $100,000, with the runner-up collecting $60,000.

Smid, the "other" player from Czechoslovakia — his more famous Davis Cup teammate is Lendl, who has taken over the No. 1 ranking in the Atari-ATP computer rankings — is considered tennis' "iron man," always playing more tournaments than any other player on the tour. But his game, while never flamboyant, is solid, both from the baseline and at the net.

"He was missing all the balls," Smid said of Noah, the favorite with the Madison Square Garden crowd of 13,076. "I just played steady. I fought in every point and I won."

Asked if he thought he was being overshadowed by Lendl, Smid, who is ranked 17th in the world, said:

Shriver eyes Navratilova

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Pam Shriver is Martina Navratilova's doubles partner and friend, but if anyone is going to stop Navratilova's bid to break the 56-match winning streak record, Shriver thinks she may be the one.

Shriver, the No. 3 seed at the $150,000 Virginia Slims of California, would have to get by some tough opponents if she were to meet the No. 1-ranked Navratilova in the finals.

Navratilova, who faces Pam Casale in a second-round match tonight after Hana Mandlikova goes against Bonnie Gadusek, has a much easier route to the finals.

The only low seeds in Navratilova's half of the draw, No. 4 Sylvia Hanika and No. 6 Wendy Turnbull, are both out. Hanika defaulted because of illness and Turnbull was upset 6-3, 1-6, 6-2 Wednesday night by Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, Calif.

In the final, Navratilova would be going for her 52nd straight victory.

Still no movement for NCAA playoff

DALLAS (AP) — A major-college football playoff may not be in the offing — and even some proponents are beginning to tone down their sales pitches — but there is no shortage of opinions.

Except perhaps for Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, the group that would have to approve any playoff proposal.

Asked whether he was in favor of a playoff, Byers replied, "I don't think what the executive director of the NCAA thinks about a football playoff is very relevant. That question should be decided by the Division I-A institutions. If they want it, they can adopt it, but to my knowledge there has never been a legislative proposal on the floor (of the convention). You can't play the game unless the people who'd qualify want it."

And, another convention ended Wednesday with the subject still only talked about.

One of the more prevalent objections to a playoff is that with 16 bowl games, 16 teams go home as winners. Why, then, does the NCAA have a basketball tournament, where all but the winner go home as losers?

"Every team that gets into the NCAA Tournament is a winner; the fans, players and coaches evaluate it that way," says Dave Gavitt, commissioner of the Big East Conference and chairman of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee. "Getting there is the big thing. I can't think of anything more exciting than seeing the top teams in the country playing for the national championship. I sure could make a good case for at least an eight-team (football) playoff."

Georgia Coach Vince Dooley has pushed for a postseason tournament in recent years, but now says that "the only practical way is a one-game playoff after the bowls — a college Super Bowl. That's the only possible chance any kind of playoff system has. I don't think anything else will work or be acceptable because the bowls won't allow it to happen any other way."

One opponent of a playoff is Roy Kramer, athletic director at Vanderbilt and former head coach at Central Michigan. However, Kramer's reasons have nothing to do with extending the season or lost classroom time.

"Those are legitimate reasons," he concedes, "but I happen to believe that what we've got now is the most positive thing going for college football.

"First, there are some 16 major bowls, with 32 teams participating, all of whom can go back to their respective constituents and use the fact that they went to a bowl to boost ticket sales.

"Second, a bowl trip can be an enjoyable way to end the season — win or lose. Probably the only team that didn't enjoy its experience this past season was Nebraska because they were playing for the national championship. In a playoff, you'd have a great deal of strain without the satisfaction of having enjoyed a bowl trip.

"And third, the controversy spawned by the type of thing that happened on Jan. 2 (the top five teams in the Associated Press poll all finishing with one loss) is probably the most stimulating thing to happen to college football in years.

"Drive around the country last week and listen to the talk shows or pick up a newspaper from one coast to the other and they were filled with who should be No. 1 almost to the exclusion of pro sports. It's great for college football to be arguing that in every drugstore and coffeeshop in the country.

"The bowl season is a reward for fans as well as the players — a holiday, festive-type event they look forward to. A playoff situation would destroy part of that because most fans can't afford financially to go to more than one postseason game. And unless you go like the NFL and play some games at campus sites you'd lose fan support.

"I'm old-fashioned enough to believe that you still play the game for the players and the fan sitting in the stands eating a hotdog and drinking a Coke."

Illini lose to undermanned Indiana

By The Associated Press

Despite outscoring Indiana 60-40 from the field and preventing the Hoosiers from taking a shot in overtime, ninth-ranked Illinois couldn't find a way to win.

The undermanned Hoosiers, with only eight players in uniform because of illness and injury, got 29 points from freshman Steve Alford and 20 more from Chuck Franz to beat the Illini 73-68 in college basketball at Bloomington, Ind., Wednesday night.

"Hard work and hustle won the game," said Alford, who had six of Indiana's 12 successful free throws in overtime and was 15 of 16 from the foul line in the game. "We've had great week of practice even though we had a lot of injuries. In order to scrimmage we had to use two student managers. But we had one goal. That was to put a team below us in the conference standings."

INDIANA'S VICTORY was its seventh in a row, improving its record to 9-3 overall and 2-0 in the Big Ten. Illinois fell to 11-2 and 2-1.

In other games involving Top 20 teams, Iowa State upset No. 17 Oklahoma 74-68, Providence tripped 18th-ranked Boston College 63-62, second-ranked Kentucky outlasted Mississippi State 51-42 and No. 12 Wake Forest bombed William & Mary 80-53.

Franz, a senior who had scored 56 points in his career before Wednesday night, topped his career high in the first half with 13 points. He said the Hoosiers weren't playing for one shot in overtime.

"We were just trying to see if they were in a zone or see what defense they were in," Franz said. "We wanted to either get a layup or go to the foul line."

"Franz just killed us, as did Alford," said Illinois Coach Lou Henson. "They really beat our guards and they did a good job on (Bruce) Douglas and (Quinn) Richardson."

Alford gave Indiana a 63-61 lead by making two free throws with 2:58 to play in the overtime. After Illinois missed a shot, the Hoosiers patiently held the ball, and hit enough free throws to stay ahead.

Doug Altenberger led the Illini with 23 points, including a jumper that tied the score at 61-61 at the end of regulation.

Top Twenty

Kentucky stayed unbeaten at 12-0 despite trailing Mississippi State 22-21 at halftime. But sophomore Kenny Walker scored 13 of his 16 points after intermission, including a jumper with 15:26 remaining to give the Wildcats the lead for good at 29-27.

Walker then scored six points in an 8-2 flurry by Kentucky that extended its margin to 39-31 with 8:08 left.

"The fact that we were able to compete against Kentucky does not change my opinion about them," Bulldogs' Coach Bob Boyd said. "I think they are the best team in the nation. I'm not just saying that to make our team look good."

Kenny Green hit all eight of his shots and finished with 18 points to lead Wake Forest in its rout of William & Mary.

The Demon Deacons, who broke open a close game in the first half with 10 straight points for a 31-18 lead, shot 62 percent from the field to improve their record to 11-1, while the Indians fell to 2-7.

Iowa State's upset of Oklahoma was built on Barry Stevens' 29 points for the Cyclones. Jeff Hornacek scored 20 points and David Moss 15 for Iowa State.

Stevens is the No. 2 scorer in the Big Eight behind sophomore All-American Wayman Tisdale, who was held to 22 points for the Sooners.

Brian Waller's jump shot from the top of the key with 22 seconds remaining lifted Providence over Boston College.

The Friars' only lead of the game came on Waller's shot. They survived three missed shots by Boston College in the final 11 seconds.

Otis Thorpe led Providence with 18 points and 16 rebounds.

Other Games

Elsewhere, Virginia improved its record to 11-1 and handed defending national champion North Carolina State its fourth straight loss with a 57-54 decision. Othell Wilson and Ricky Stokes combined for six free throws in the final 1:05 for the Cavaliers.

Steve Burtt scored 29 points, 20 of them in the second half, to lead Iona to an 86-76 victory over Manhattan.

Duke improved its record to 14-1 with a 73-60 victory over Appalachian State behind Johnny Dawkins' 25 points.

Clemson stayed unbeaten in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 79-69 victory over Georgia Tech.

In other games, it was Army 52, Fordham 47; LaSalle 98, Fairfield 85; Richmond 75, Navy 61; Syracuse 93, Seton Hall 65; Tulane 53, Southern Mississippi 38; Vanderbilt 69, Alabama 67; Kansas 101, Texas Southern 64; Missouri 80, Northern Iowa 65; Virginia Tech 70, Cincinnati 53; Texas A&M 63, Baylor 52; Loyola 94, Dayton 93 in overtime and Rice 43, Texas Christian 42.

Raider tackle is ready for Redskins' Manley

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Offensive tackle Bruce Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders won't have any problem gearing up to play opposite Washington's Dexter Manley in Super Bowl XVIII.

"I have Dexter Manley, the mouth of their defense," Davis said Wednesday. "He's a good defensive end, but I've played against better."

While Davis might not have the highest opinion of Manley, he expressed respect for the Washington defense as a whole.

"They have the No.1 unit in the league against the rush," said Davis. "That's a big challenge for us."

Davis and the rest of the Raider offensive linemen haven't achieved the reputation of their Washington counterparts, the "Hogs." But he believes the Los Angeles line doesn't have to apologize to anybody.

"We just have five large, powerful men," said Davis. "I don't care for a nickname. When you start getting a reputation around this league, sometimes it makes people play harder against you."

Davis was asked about the notoriety of the "Hogs."

"I'm thrilled to death for them; they're a good offensive line," he replied. "(But) there are other offensive lines around the league who don't have the name.

"They're a powerful unit. Their scheme allows them to be good. Their zone blocking allows (running back) John Riggins to find the holes."

Davis believes that the Raiders' offensive line — with Henry Lawrence at the other tackle, Mickey Marvin and Charley Hannah at guard and Dave Dalby at center — has come of age in recent weeks.

"I think that now we're playing as well or better than any offensive line in the league," Davis said. "Of course, there's only one other offensive line left now."

Davis acknowledged that the Raiders had some problems early in the season. Hannah came to the team in a trade from Tampa Bay last summer and replaced the injured Curt Marsh.

"Offensive line play is chemistry," said Davis. "At the beginning of the year, Charley Hannah and I were total strangers. It took us a while to get that chemistry."

Davis says he knows what the Raiders need to do to beat the Redskins in the National Football League's championship game at Tampa, Fla., on Jan. 22.

"In order to beat them, we're going to have to be able to run the ball very well and throw when we want to, not when we have to," he said. "I believe that the team that has the better running game will win the game.

"And I think turnovers are going to be a key. As long as we can stay even with them in turnovers, I think we'll be okay."

Davis had words of praise for Raider running back Marcus Allen and quarterback Jim Plunkett.

"Marcus is a quadruple threat," said Davis. "He blocks very well, a lot of people don't know that, and he's a great runner, passer and receiver. In big games, Jim plays his best."

Gretzky shakes mortal image

By The Associated Press

For 59 minutes and 58 seconds, Wayne Gretzky was merely mortal — for the first time this season.

But Gretzky managed an empty-net goal with two seconds to play to clinch Edmonton's 5-3 National Hockey League victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Wednesday night. In the process, the record-setting center extended his consecutive game points streak to 44 games.

"I'm not exactly proud of my performance tonight," said Gretzky, who has 53 goals and 79 assists for 132 points in the Oilers' 44 contests. It was the latest he has gone in a game this season without scoring a point — by far.

"I didn't have a shot on goal until the second period. In the third, I had two breakaways. But Tony Espostio showed me that, at 40, he's still a great goalie.

"I have to admit I didn't play 60 minutes of hockey. It takes a complete effort and I didn't do that tonight in my judgment."

But goalie Andy Moog, who stopped 32 shots as Edmonton won its eighth straight game and extended its unbeaten string to 13, said the game proved there is more to the Oilers than The Great Gretzky.

"A lot of teams like the Hawks make the mistake of thinking that if they stop Gretzky, they stop the Oilers," Moog said. "But nothing could be farther from the truth."

And continuing the scoring streak isn't exactly foremost in Gretzky's mind.

"I know it will end one day and I'll merely shrug my shoulders and look at it as a good experience, knowing that the longer I keep it alive, it'll be harder to break," he said. "But I'm not playing to see how many streaks I can attain.

"We still have to get to the finals of the Stanley Cup and if, by some miracle — and I say that honestly — we win it, I'll feel fully rewarded."

Elsewhere, it was Buffalo 6, Philadelphia 2; Boston 7, Detroit 2; Montreal 6, Toronto 4; Calgary 9, Winnipeg 5, and Washington 4, Los Angeles 2.

NHL Roundup

Sabres 6, Flyers 2

Buffalo, which has not lost at home to the Flyers in more than four years, got two goals from defenseman Mike Ramsey and built a 4-0 lead in coasting to victory. Ramsey beat goalie Pelle Lindbergh with a drive from the point in the first period and repeated it in the second session as the Sabres won their fourth game in a row and sixth in the last seven.

Bruins 7, Red Wings 2

Rick Middleton hit for a pair of power-play goals and Mike O'Connell chipped in a goal and two assists for visiting Boston, which has not lost to Detroit since Dec. 1, 1979. Bruins rookie Lyndon Byers, playing in only his third game, scored his first NHL goal.

Canadiens 6, Maple Leafs 4

Ryan Walter pumped in two goals and Bobby Smith set up three scores for the visiting Canadiens, who hit on three of seven power plays.

"It was the power play that got us into the game," said Canadiens captain Bob Gainey.

Flames 9, Jets 5

Three Flames — Kent Nilsson, Lanny McDonald and Dan Quinn — scored two goals apiece and Nilsson added a pair of assists to hand Winnipeg its fifth straight road loss. Tim Young scored twice for the Jets.

"We found a way to win instead of what it has been, a way to lose," said McDonald after the Flames blew open the game with four third-period goals.

Capitals 4, Kings 2

Dave Christian snapped a 2-2 tie with a 20-foot shot 6:33 into the third period and Alana Haworth provided an insurance goal for the visiting Capitals. Bryan Erickson scored his first NHL goal only 1:29 into the game for Washington.

Marcel Dionne, who earlier scored his 27th goal of the season, suffered a sprained ankle late in the game.X-rays showed no fracture a re-examination was scheduled today.

Nuggets, Spurs smash records

By The Associated Press

The natural question after the Denver Nuggets scored 163 points against San Antonio was, "Did they win?"

Denver, the highest-scoring team in the National Basketball Association, poured in 163 points Wednesday night to 155 for the Spurs. It was the second most points the Nuggets have scored this season — on Dec. 13, 1983, they scored 184 points . . . and lost. Detroit got 186 in a triple-overtime victory.

This time, Kiki Vandeweghe tossed in 50 points — one fewer than in the triple OT contest — and the teams combined for the most points in a regulation game in NBA history.

The previous top regulation total was 316 achieved twice — March 2, 1962, in Hershey, Pa., when Philadelphia defeated New York 169-147 and Wilt Chamberlain scored a record 100 points, and March 12, 1970, when Cincinnati and San Diego matched it.

The 99 points scored in the final period — 53 by San Antonio — also set an NBA standard for most points in a quarter, breaking the record of 96 by Boston and Minneapolis on Feb. 27, 1959, and Detroit and Cincinnati on Jan. 7, 1972. And the 172 second-half points set still another mark, eclipsing the 170 points scored by Philadelphia and Cincinnati in one half on March 19, 1971.

Vandeweghe, who scored on a variety of medium-to-long-range jumpers and spinning drives, admitted he "wasn't looking to pass very often once I was hot. I wanted to shoot the ball because I felt things were going well for me."

So well that he hit a three-point shot from downtown to finish off his big night.

"There were only six seconds left on the 24-second clock and I had nowhere to go, so I just put it up and prayed," said Vandeweghe, who hit 21 of 30 from the field and all seven free throws.

"A guy warming up can't make as many shots as Vandeweghe made," said Spurs Coach Bob Bass. "Every time he shoots, it goes in."

NBA Roundup

Alex English added 25 points for Denver, while George Gervin had 38 and John Lucas 23 for the Spurs.

Mavericks 117, Jazz 102

Mark Aguirre took over the NBA scoring lead from Adrian Dantley as he scored 41 points — 39 of them in the first three periods. Dantley had 22, dropping him to 30.1 points a game compared to Aguirre's 30.5

Celtics 135, Warriors 112

Robert Parish had 33 points and 14 rebounds to lead Boston to its ninth victory in 10 starts and 19th in 22. The win assured Celtics Coach K.C. Jones of coaching the East team in the All-Star Game. Boston was in such control that Parish sat down with 1:37 left in third period after hitting 16 of 20 shots.

Lester Conner paced the visiting Warriors with 23 points.

Nets 120, Bulls 105

Otis Birdsong scored 14 of his game-high 23 points in the third period as the host Nets took control for their third straight victory. Five Nets joined Birdsong in double figures, led by Albert King with 20. Orlando Woolridge put in 21 points for Chicago.

76ers 121, Bullets 99

At Philadelphia, Julius Erving returned to the lineup to score 21 points and Andrew Toney had 26 as the 76ers snapped a modest two-game slide. Erving was sidelined with a bruised forearm.

Pistons 112, Pacers 96

The Detroit duo of Kelly Tripucka, with 25 points, and Vinnie Johnson, with 24, held off a late rally by Indiana, which was led by Clark Kellogg (23) and Herb Williams (22). Williams also had 13 rebounds and seven assists, while Bill Laimbeer pulled in 20 rebounds for visiting Detroit and Isiah Thomas had 12 assists.

Suns 129, Clippers 104

Larry Nance scored a career-high 39 points and rookie Rod Foster also set his personal high with 25 as host Phoenix ended a five-game slide. Terry Cummings scored 32 points for the Clippers.

Former Longhorn coach dies

AUSTIN (AP) — Berry Whitaker, who coached the University of Texas to its first Southwest Conference football championship during his brief tenure in the early 1920s, has died at the age of 93.

Funeral services were scheduled today. Whitaker died Tuesday in San Antonio.

Whitaker started coaching at Austin High in 1914 following a collegiate career at the University of Indiana, where he was an all-state college halfback. In two years at Austin High, Whitaker won two unofficial state championships and had a record marred only by one tie.

Drug problems rock Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves outfielder Claudell Washington and pitcher Steve Bedrosian each underwent several days of drug counseling at the end of the 1983 season, according to a published report.

But while it was determined that Bedrosian did not need further care, Washington then volunteered for admission to a drug treatment center, where he completed 28 days of therapy for cocaine dependency, the Atlanta Constitution reported today.

Meanwhile, Braves pitcher Pascual Perez, jailed in the Dominican Republic on charges of cocaine possession, said Wednesday he was framed and that he expects to be with his team this spring.

But District Attorney Luis Coss said that Perez is being held without bail because of a previous record, including a 1982 arrest for marijuana possession and a 1983 arrest for possession of ammunition.

Perez, a 15-game winner with the Braves last year, was arrested Tuesday in Santiago. He was charged with possession with intent to distribute a half-gram of cocaine.

The newspaper said that Washington was admitted to a rehabilitation center in Oakland, Calif., in late October and was released before Thanksgiving.

His agent, Tom Baenziger of Palo Alto, Calif., confirmed that Washington had completed the treatment, adding that Washington and his family are out of the country on vacation.

"This is an extremely personal matter, and Claudell is a very private person," Baenziger said.

Bedrosian said he had experimented some with cocaine, "at parties here and there," but no longer used the drug.

Braves officials refused comment on the drug involvement of Bedrosian and Washington.

"It's a private matter, and the fact that they've both taken care of their problems means it's no longer a problem," Braves' spokesman Wayne Minshew said. "Our reaction is not to comment on anything like that. A player's involvement in that kind of thing is strictly a private matter."

The newspaper said Commissioner Bowie Kuhn was following the Perez case, but said no action would be considered until legal proceedings are completed in the Dominican Republic.

Speaking through an interpreter, Perez said: "People are just jealous here. Somebody told the police I had drugs. It (the cocaine) was put in my car. I have never been involved in drugs. I don't use drugs, and I am not involved in drugs."

Perez, who was nicknamed "I-285" after he got lost on Interstate 285 en route to a Braves game in 1982, also said, "Tell the people of Atlanta not to despair, and they will continue to enjoy I-285."

NFL says officials were right

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Films and videotapes of two crucial plays show officials made the right calls in the Washington Redskins' 24-21 defeat of the San Francisco 49ers for the National Football Conference title, according to the National Football League.

The films and tapes were reviewed by Art McNally, supervisor of officials, and NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, league spokesman Joe Browne said Wednesday.

"Both calls were very close calls, but after reviewing the tapes and films, we fell that both calls were justified," he said.

The 49ers argued that a pass intended for receiver Art Monk was not catchable and that no pass interference should have been called according to the rules.

Coach Bill Walsh said the ball could not have been caught by a "10-foot Boston Celtic."

"The rule states, that in order for the official to rule that a pass is 'uncatchable,' the ball must be unquestionably out of reach of the potential receiver, with no possibility of his being able to run under, leap for, or stretch for the ball," Browne said.

"With that in mind, we do not feel that was an uncatchable ball," Browne said.

"The official rule on the Ronnie Lott play that Charlie Brown was impeded off the line of scrimmage by Lott, who encircled his arms around Brown's shoulders," Browne said. "That was the reason for the defensive holding call. Defensive holding is called if this occurs while the quarterback still has the ball, and (Joe) Theismann still had the ball."

Wright's penalty was called by back judge Tom Kelleher, an NFL official for 24 years who heads a marketing company in the Miami area. Lott's penalty was called by field judge Ed Merrifield, a nine-year official who is the sales manager for a heavy equipment company in Kansas City, Kan.

Wright's 27-yard penalty moved Washington into field goal range, and Lott's 5-yard penalty enabled the Redskins to hold the ball for an additinal 1:20. Mark Moseley's 25-yard field goal with 40 seconds left won the game and sent the defending champion Redskins back to the Super Bowl.

Green wants more than barbecue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins cornerback Darrell Green says the last time he was in playoffs was in the seventh grade, and for the victory "all we got was a barbecue."

Green will get a lot more than that if the the Redskins win Super Bowl XVIII, to be played against the Los Angeles Raiders in Tampa Jan. 22. He'll get a diamond ring and about $35,000.

And the rookie from Texas A&I is already starting to acquire his share of fame, on top of a five-year contract which, including a $330,000 signing bonus, is valued at more than $1 million.

Green, 23, said that after the Super Bowl, win or lose, he's going to go back to his hometown in Texas and have a neighborhood barbecue.

"I'm going to have them block off a street. I know everyone at home. Even the winos. They are all my people. They support me now. They tell me how glad they are for me, and they mean it from their hearts."

The Super Bowl is a long way from Houston, where Green grew up, the fifth of seven children. His parents divorced when he was in fifth grade, and Green lived with his mother, a cook in a delicatessen.

Navratilova top female

NEW YORK (AP) — With the same ease and dominance she displayed on tennis courts all over the world last year, Martina Navratilova was a runaway winner as the 1983 Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year.

A native of Czechoslovakia who became an American citizen in 1981, Navratilova garnered 82 votes in nationwide balloting of sports writers and broadcasters announced today. Track star Mary Decker, the 1982 winner, was a distant second with 44 votes.

Finishing third was Tamara McKinney, a downhill skier, who had six votes. Distance runner Grete Waitz of Norway received two votes, while volleyball ace Rita Crockett, college basketball star Cheryl Miller of Southern California and golfer JoAnne Carner received one vote each.

Capturing The AP Male Athlete of the Year award on Tuesday was track and field star Carl Lewis.

Navratilova was magnificient in 1983, winning 15 of the 16 tournaments she entered and posting an 86-1 record in matches. Her only loss was to Kathy Horvath in the French Open.

The athletic left-hander has won her last 51 matches, just five shy of the record of 56 set by Chris Evert Lloyd. In 1983, Navratilova won $1,456,030, second only to male tennis star Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, while her career earnings of $6,384,089 are the most by any tennis player, male or female.

"I'm glad that I got it," Navratilova said when told she had won the award. "But to be honest, I thought I should have gotten it in 1979."

Tennis has dominated the Female Athlete award over the years, with Chris Evert Lloyd winning in 1974, 1975, 1977 and 1980. Tracy Austin took the honor in 1979 and 1980, while Billie Jean King won in 1967 and 1973, and the 1971 winner was Evonne Goolagong of Australia.

"I'm honored with the award," Navratilova said. "I'm really glad because it's people that vote on it."

For the second straight year, Navratilova has finished No. 1 on the Women's Tennis Association computer.

"I was lucky enough to have good year. But I had so many people helping me."

Among her victories in 1983 were Wimbledon for the fourth time, the Australian Open for the second time and the U.S. Open for the first time.

"My biggest thrill was winning the U.S. Open," she said, "because it had eluded me for so long. I put more sweat into winning the U.S. Open than any other tournament."

The dominance of her serve-and-volley game was so clear that at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open her matches took just minutes. In defeating Lloyd in the final of the U.S. Open, America's premier tennis event, fans applauded the loser because she forced the match to last more than one hour.

"Mental is a part of it when it gets close," Navratilova said. "But most of my matches are two-setters.

"A lot of it is physical. But mentally I'm tough because I put in the work. I work three-four hours a day."

Asked if she could go through an entire year without a loss, she said: "It's a possibility. But if I hadn't lost to Horvath, maybe I would have lost two more matches. You never can tell."

While she lost only once, she noted that there were three other players who almost beat her, including Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

Britain's Jo Durie was up 3-1 in the third set in the Australian Open, only to have Navratilova battle from behind to win. And Eva Pfaff of West Germany had two match points against Navratilova in the Canadian Open.

"You have to be so lucky to keep winning," Navratilova said. "But I've also worked hard, mentally and technically."

Producers win, treasury may lose

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The 5-4 Supreme Court ruling favoring independent oil and gas producers and their royalty owners could cost the federal treasury more than $21 million in lost revenue.

This is the total projected tax from not just the two cases that reached the court but from six similar ones pending.

The ruling Tuesday is not expected to have widening tax-loss consequences, however, despite the rebuff to the Internal Revenue Service by the high court.

The court, in a ruling by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, said that independent producers could claim tax breaks from the depletion allowance even in years when no actual drilling occurred.

The IRS contended that the 22 percent depletion deduction could be taken only in years when actual oil and gas production took place.

As the hundreds of thousands of royalty owners in Texas, Louisiana and other oil-drilling states know, the accepted procedure has been to deduct the depletion allowance from the bonuses and advance royalties paid them by the independent producers using their land.

These payments — and the immediate tax benefits — never had been tied to whether a dry hole was encountered, whether the drilling site was capped temporarily or whether production was undertaken at full pace.

The court ruling generally was applauded by aides to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., and others in the Texas delegation but was not expected to have a major impact on the energy climate there.

If the decision had gone the other way, however, it might have added to the investment woes of the industry, where production is at a standstill due to the worldwide oil glut. If the court had prohibited royalty owners from getting their tax breaks because the oil and gas wells on their land had been shut down temporarily, the investment would have been made even less attractive.

The 1975 Tax Reduction Act replealed the depletion allowance for the major oil companies but not for the independents, who comprise the vast majority of producers.

The act, sponsored in part by Bentsen, did not specify any change in treatment of the depletion allowance that was continued for small producers and independents — but the IRS put its own interpretation on the new law and began disallowing tax breaks for depletion allowances taken against royalties for years when there was no oil or gas activity.

Two cases were brought before the court, the families of Philip D. Farmar and A. A. Sugg, joint owners of 46,515 acres of land in Irion County, Texas, and Fred Engle and his wife who held oil and gas leases in Wyoming.

The Engles had gotten $7,600 in advance royalties for their leases in 1975 and took the 22 percent depletion allowance against that when paying taxes. The IRS, noting that no production occurred that year on their land, rejected the deduction.

The Farmars and Suggs families had contracted to receive as royalties 20 percent of all oil and gas produced and sold from the property or 20 percent of the value of all oil and gas produced from the leases — and they also were due annual cash bonuses escalating in size from 1975 through 1979 when the lease expired, whether or not there was any production.

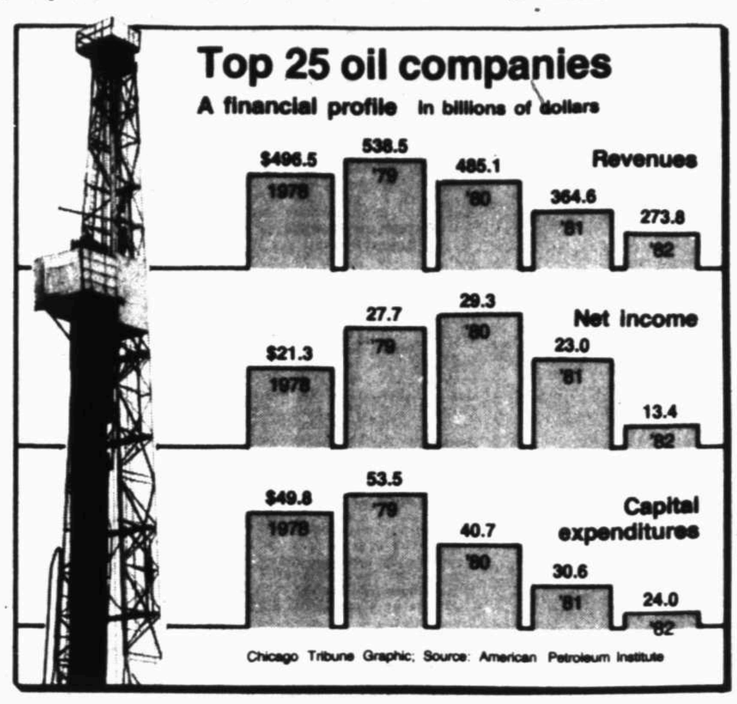

The IRS refused to allow the depletion allowances on the lease bonuses because they could not be proven to be tied to any "average daily production."

In her opinion, O'Connor said if the IRS ruling were upheld it would dramatically change the system of spreading the risks for underwriting oil and gas exploration.

If investment tax benefits were curtailed, because the depletion allowance could be deducted only from income tied directly to oil and gas production, rather than paid in advance and in evenly divided sums during the life of leases, she said landowners would demand other and possibly higher forms of production royalties.

This indirectly would steer investment dollars away from "development of the nation's energy reserves," O'Connor said.

In ruling against the IRS, O'Connor said Congress in the 1975 law wanted to increase domestic oil and gas production by small producers — and she said it would not at the same time have created "substantial economic disincentives" to that goal by undermining the depletion allowance tax break.

ENERGY BRIEFS

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — Americans could get more than $1 billion in refunds for overcharges on their natural gas bills over the past five years under new court-ordered government regulations.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, under a court order that the Reagan administration is appealing to the Supreme Court, said Wednesday it will return to a policy it had abandoned in 1980 determining the way gas is priced.

The effect of the 1980 policy change was to increase the wholesale and retail prices of natural gas by 1.74 percent retroactive to Dec. 1, 1978, when the Natural Gas Policy Act by Congress was enacted.

"More than an estimated $1 billion in refunds may be due to the pipelines (and ultimately to consumers) from sellers who have sold gas under the NGPA since that date," FERC said Wednesday.

The commission indicated it will wait 30 days for public comment before ordering any refunds. But FERC officials hope that the Supreme Court will have agreed by then to consider the administration's appeal that could negate them.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ordered the refunds last August, saying the commission exceeded its authority under the 1978 law in changing the basic formula for determining the price of natural gas.

In an effort viewed as perhaps the beginning of new pressure for lower oil prices, Standard Oil Co. of California Wednesday became the first major oil company to reject the high pricing policy of British National Oil Corp., saying it will no longer buy British North Sea oil.

Analysts said the action by itself is likely to have little effect. But they said other oil companies eventually may follow suit, which could pressure the British to lower their price later in the year and spark a drop in oil prices generally.

Cal Standard decided to discontinue "term purchases" of BNOC crude oil, which it would refine and then sell, because the British corporation insisted on keeping its price for the first quarter of 1984 at $30 a barrel, despite a worldwide oil glut. The British price is 50 cents a barrel more than the benchmark price agreed to by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

LOS ANGELES — In the hallways of Getty Oil Co.'s headquarters here, some employees are joking about where they will report to pick up the familiar cap of Texaco Inc., which last week bid a record $9.9 billion to buy the oil-rich company.

But there is little merriment in the quietly elegant executive suites located floors above.

"I feel like the two-headed economist," Getty Oil Chairman and Chief Executive Sidney R. Petersen says. "I'm pleased at the reasonable value attained for the shareholders. But I'm disappointed at the outcome. I would have preferred to see the company remain an independent entity."

"It's kind of sad, isn't it?" he comments.

Petersen still believes that he could have gotten more than the $125-a-share price Texaco is paying for Getty Oil stock if it had not been for the conflicts with Gordon P. Getty, 49-year-old son of late oil baron J. Paul Getty and the man who controlled 40.2 percent of Getty Oil's shares.

At the end, Saudi Arabians had expressed interest in buying Getty Oil because of its gas-station network in the United States, he said, and Standard Oil Co. of California and others also were interested in buying the company for other of its assets.

WASHINGTON — The Federal Trade Commission will investigate the planned takeover of Getty Oil Corp. by Texaco Inc. for possible violations of the antitrust laws, agency officials confirmed Wednesday.

The decision that the FTC, rather than the Justice Department's antitrust division, will review the takeover — considered the largest corporate acquisition in history — was reached after several days of negotiations between the top officials in both agencies. The FTC finally won because of its experience with oil industry matters, such as its investigation two years ago into the proposed purchase of Marathon Oil by Mobil, agency officials said.

Stephen Axinn, a lawyer representing Texaco, said the company would cooperate fully with whatever federal agency handles the case. But, he added, "Texaco and Getty are confident that there is no significant antitrust obstacle."

However, several antitrust experts contacted Wednesday said the takeover could pose a number of legal problems, mainly because of a huge overlap in the retail gasoline market. In addition, Pennzoil, whose merger proposal Getty spurned in favor of the Texaco offer, has threatened a private antitrust lawsuit to block the merger. In addition, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who was a key player in the congressional fight against Mobil's unsuccessful bid for Marathon, is considering asking for a Senate investigation into the acquisition.

While the gasoline marketing problems are not considered serious enough to block the acquisition outright, they might prompt the FTC to require Texaco to divest itself of some of its gasoline stations, some experts said Wednesday.

WASHINGTON — A Texas oil company has been accused by the Securities and Exchange Commission of illegally inflating the value of the firm's stocks "by creating a false impression of the value of the company's oil and gas leases and the identity of its management."

Major Exploration Inc., of San Antonio, "created the impression that Major's holdings were far more valuable than the actual drilling and production results indicated," the SEC said in a civil complaint filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court here.

Accused along with the company were its board chairman, Robert J. Tonachio of San Antonio; Thomas F. Murphy of Jersey City, N.J., a former Major treasurer and Lanny R. Freeman of Corpus Christi, Texas, who acted as a consultant to the firm.

The SEC alleged that all had violated anti-fraud provisions of federal securities laws.

DENVER — Despite a day without any new acceptable contract offers, a spokesman for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union said union officials are "not discouraged."

Just hours before a scheduled walkout of 50,000 refinery workers nationwide, OCAW approved on Tuesday a contract offer from a Gulf Oil Corp. refinery at Port Arthur, Texas, and said that offer would be used as a model contract to negotiate with other companies. A similar offer from Ashland Oil refineries in Kentucky was approved Tuesday night.

Workers strike if needs, wants, ideas ignored

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — A study of why workers strike has produced the tantalizing theory that most walkouts originate in matters having little to do with money or benefits.

That conclusion is certain to come as a surprise to many corporate chiefs, and probably to union leaders as well, because strikes inevitably seem to focus on the so-called dollar issues.

Woodruff Imberman, a consultant, claims the seeds of strikes are sowed when workers' "needs, wants and ideas go unheard, unheeded or unanswered," leaving them to see managers as adversaries.

Imberman's study, reported in the latest issue of the Harvard Business Review, is considered especially significant in view of the relationship of strikes to defense buildups, such as the one now under way.

Seeking to determine what breaks the peace, Imberman looked for distinctions in 28 "strike" companies and 28 unionized "non-strike" companies. He found quantitative differences in five areas:

—How grievances are handled.
—Third-shift working conditions.
—Frequency of and attitudes toward overtime.
—Use of seniority in consideration for promotion.
—Methods of disciplinary action.

In strike-prone plants, Imberman found that management stressed the letter of the contract must be observed and that managers took the position that the purchase of labor under the contract was the same as buying a ton of coal.

That position, he found, led to foremen making little effort to resolve problems, instead telling workers to file grievances. Moreover, management responded more slowly in the strike plants.

The "foresaken third shift," he found, was a source of much discontent that eventually developed into thoughts of strikes.

Attitudes on the third shift are considered a sensitive indicator of how rank and file feel about management, and hence of a plant's strike potential.

The reasons are many: Equipment, materials, parts and tools are often faulty, misplaced or scarce, and maintenance is often poor in strike-prone companies. Foremen are inexperienced. Personnel representatives are rare.

Research showed that companies not prone to strikes had far fewer complaints from the third shift than did the strike-prone companies, where irritations festered.

Overtime, Imberman found, provides a sometimes overlooked area of irritation. As expected, extra pay for working overtime is generally welcomed by workers, but "prolonged overtime is another story."

Too-frequent overtime, he found, tended to make workers increasingly irritable and led to their loss of control over children, household chores and personal business, as well as to general discord at home.

Nevertheless, Imberman found that strike-prone companies inclined to insist on overtime rather than hiring additional workers. In contrast, other companies periodically suspended overtime, enabling workers to plan outside activities.

"Grievances over seniority are a vexing source of anti-management sentiment," Imberman said.

In the 28 strike-prone plants, union leaders accepted no deviations from the seniority rule — applied to promotions, layoffs and recalls — because they distrusted management's motives.

Imberman found the non-strike plants operate differently, in part because labor and management were able to discuss matters. About three-quarters of the plants had job-posting rules, but union committees and management often were able to reach understandings rather than rigidly following the postings.

The study found that attitudes toward discipline also varied between strike and non-strike plants.

In 12 strike plants, the foreman could effectively terminate a worker's employment, although official firing was handled by the personnel department or plant manager.

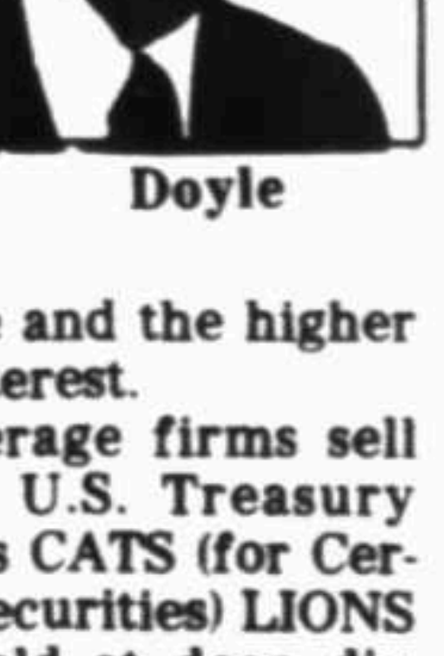

However, in only once instance in the non-strike plants did the foreman have such power. In the other 27 non-strike companies the foreman's hands were tied in one way or another on the matter of termination, Imberman said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Treasury doesn't issue zero coupons

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have $2,500 in an individual retirement account and will add another $2,000 this year. Could I invest that $4,500 in a "zero coupon" U.S. Treasury bond maturing in 12 years? If I can, where can I find a broker to handle the transaction and what yield will I get?

Doyle

A. You can't invest in a zero coupon U.S. Treasury bond for the simple reason that the Treasury does not issue such bonds. All Treasury bonds pay annual interest.

A "zero," as a zero coupon bond is nicknamed, does not pay annual interest. Instead, it is issued at a deep discount — a price well below its face value. The issuer pledges to pay off the zero at face value when it matures. The difference between the low issue price and the higher face value redemption price is interest.

However, a number of brokerage firms sell securities backed by pools of U.S. Treasury bonds. Those have such names as CATS (for Certificate of Accrual on Treasury Securities) LIONS and TIGRS. Because they are sold at deep discounts and pay no current interest, they work like zeros.

Clark may de-Watt plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary William Clark is considering major changes in one of James Watt's most ambitious programs — his push to offer virtually the entire U.S. coastline for oil and gas drilling by mid-1987.

While all final decisions have not been made, changes being discussed include slashing by perhaps 50 percent the amount of acreage offered in future sales, according to sources who spoke on condition they not be named.

Clark, who was to outline some of the changes today in a speech, said Tuesday that Watt's basic policy would remain and that his proposal would only modify the process by which the leases were offered.

However, sources who have been involved in the discussion say that more than simple fine-tuning will occur.

These sources said that among the proposals under consideration are the delay or possible cancellation of a few lease sales, perhaps in Alaska or California, where state opposition is especially strong.

Clark is also expected to promise much greater consultation with states before leasing decisions are made.

"He definitely is going to reduce the scope of Outer Continental Shelf leasing by saying it will be more selective than in the past," said one congressional source.

Clark's actions are coming just as the Reagan administration won a big court victory over its leasing program. The Supreme Court on Wednesday, in a 5-4 decision, gave the Interior Department a free hand to sell oil and gas leases beyond three miles of the nation's coast.

The court said that the administration may sell oil exploration leases without determining whether the sales endanger a state's environmental safety, ruling that states will have later opportunities to protect against oil spills and other hazards.

Gary Magnuson, director of the Coastal States Organization, called the ruling "devastating." Trent Lott, a San Francisco attorney with the Natural Resources Defense Council said, "This takes away from all of the coastal states a fairly important opportunity to have some impact on when federal leasing will take place."

Of all the changes Watt made in his three years in office, none was more controversial than the accelerated offshore leasing program he unveiled in June 1982.

Watt's plan called for almost 1 billion offshore acres to be offered for lease in 41 sales through June 1987.

The key part of Watt's program was the "areawide lease offering." Instead of limiting the acreage on which the industry could bid, Watt's plan offered large areas for possible leasing.

The program resulted in the richest lease sale in U.S. history when oil companies paid $3.47 billion for more than 650 tracts in the Gulf of Mexico last May.

But the program also generated heavy criticism from environmentalists and coastal states, who complained that their concerns were not being protected.

Rehabilitation center fosters independence

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Jack had always earned his way in life by physical labor. For 30 years, he'd carried heavy loads on a daily basis.

One day, he suffered a stroke. Forget earning his keep; Jack could no longer button his shirt or zip his pants due to a loss of dexterity in his left hand.

People needing help with this type of limitation can go to the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center, a comprehensive out-patient facility in Odessa.

Though Jack's case was fictitious, it is not uncommon. Through feats in rehabilitative engineering available at the center, people kept from productive lives can regain some independence despite their problem.

Special swiveling spoons, one-handed nail clippers and shoe-lacing contraptions lend the limited person a hand at functioning in society.

This service is only one in a long list available to residents of Midland, Odessa and a 17-county area around the two cities. Services are available for those in need, regardless of age or income status.

Everyone here receives help whether or not they can afford it, said Executive Director John W. Clarke, estimating that 150 Midlanders are presently taking advantage of center programs and that 500 deal with the center each year.

Youngsters up to 3 years old are screened for developmental problems in the Infant Development Program, the first of its type accredited in Texas. Physicians, hearing and vision specialists, and physical and occupational therapists team up to evaluate children entered in the program, then arrange and provide any treatment needed.

Local doctors delivering babies participate in the High-Risk Registry Program. Should the physician feel the baby has potential for problems, a checklist of possible afflictions is completed, which is referred to during evaluation of the child at the center.

From the most serious disability to the slightest limitation, the Odessa facility is equipped with the state-of-the-art equipment and staffed by necessary specialists.

"It's here if it's needed," said Jim Bromley, director of development and social services. Physical therapy facilities are available in Midland at the Midland Cerebral Palsey Center, but the Midland center specializes in cerebral palsey cases involving children, primarily from the Midland Independent School District.

A variety of equipment and techniques is used in the physical therapy units at the Permian Basin center. Pain relief, range of motion and transfer in and out of wheelchairs is taught by the staff.

Adapting to prostheses — artificial limbs — is stressed by the therapists, as is the effective use of crutches.

The therapy pool has several levels, simplifying the job of therapists when dealing with different-sized patients, while making the pool safer. Hydrotherapy is provided by three whirlpool baths of varying sizes. A Hubbard Tank, shaped to allow emersion of the entire body, anchors this department.

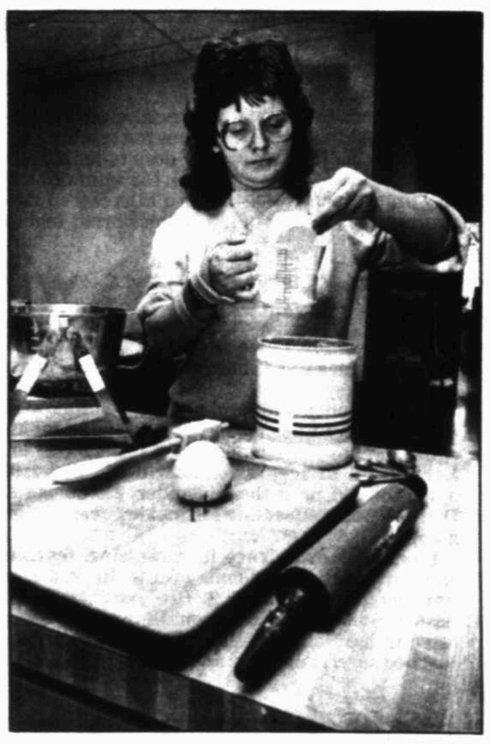

Moving patients in and out of these pools is simplified by an elaborate hoist in the Hubbard room and a lifting device, reportedly designed by an Odessa man, moves patients to and from the smaller whirlpools.

"We want to make it as easy as we can for the patient," said Bromley, noting that therapists are also saved many a heavy load.

Other equipment used in therapy measures the patient's progress as he or she exercises. "The most valuable equipment is the kind where you can see how the patient's doing," said Judy McGookey, director of physical therapy.

Furniture receipts evidence in former deputy's trial

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Jurors are expected to reach a verdict today in the trial of former Midland County deputy sheriff Joe Brownlee, who is charged in the disappearance of $6,500 worth of furniture from the Knorr Furniture Co.

Testimony Wednesday centered on receipts the 41-year-old Brownlee says prove he bought expensive but freight-damaged Drexel-Heritage furniture in factory cartons "at very low prices" from a Lubbock flea market in early 1982.

The receipts bore the hand-stamped names of John and Irene Owens. Brownlee contends they operated the flea market and sold him the furniture, which he in turn passed along to friends at cost as a gesture of "good will."

State District Judge Pat Baskin overruled Assistant District Attorney Janet Copeland's motion that the receipts be considered hearsay and disallowed as evidence because the Owens couple could not be located as witnesses in the case.

Brownlee, who could provide only a vague description of the pair, testified that he attempted to find them to testify in his behalf but "they were gone."

Copeland was quick to point out that Brownlee — who is appealing his conviction last spring in an unrelated auto theft case — was indicted August 31 on the furniture theft charges, yet didn't come up with the receipts until December.

Brownlee and his wife Jo Ann testified, however, that the receipts had been misplaced during the couple's move to DeLeon after his dismissal from the sheriff's department over the auto theft case.

"I had given them up for lost," Brownlee told the seven-man, five-woman jury.

Mrs. Brownlee testified that the receipts "had been stored with my personal things" at her father's house and weren't found until "a month or so ago."

Brownlee also testified that he told friends he could get them furniture "like Knorr's at a much cheaper price."

He said he obtained Knorr's catalogs and his friends used them to pick out what they wanted. Brownlee would then drive to Lubbock by himself and buy the furniture for prices "three or four times" cheaper than what Knorr's charged.

Brownlee, who worked as a Department of Public Safety trooper and a city police officer prior to joining the sheriff's department in the 1970s, patrolled Knorr's warehouse while he was a deputy sheriff.

Earlier testimony in the two-day-old trial disclosed that furniture had disappeared from the company over a period of time but that company officials were unable to determine how it was taken.

Both sides rested their cases late Wednesday afternoon and jurors were to start deliberations after final arguments this morning. Brownlee is being represented by attorney Homer W. Leverett Jr.

Last May, Brownlee was sentenced to three years in prison after being convicted of stealing a 1978 Ford Super Cab pickup truck from the Rittenhouse Oil Co. in 1982 and altering its identification numbers to match those of a title he held on another pickup.

Surge flow irrigation increases output, specialist says

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Limited water available to farmers, the need for uniform irrigation and the optimum interaction of soil and water is giving rise to surge-flow irrigation.

"For someone who wants to farm smart, surge is going to help him," Joe Henggeler, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) irrigation specialist, said Wednesday in a surge-flow irrigation conference in Midland.

Surge flow, primarily for furrow farming, is becoming an alternative to continuous flow irrigation.

In the Midland area, most irrigation is done via the center-pivot and siderow sprinkler systems, which require high energy costs. Surge flow doesn't. Continuous flow is used widely in the High Plains and upper section of the South Plains and in Trans Pecos, Henggeler said.

The surge-flow system operates on valves and gates. A given area of land is watered a desired amount, then the valve is closed, and rewatered later.

"There's a potential for misuse," said Henggeler, though with wise use the method can be profitable.

"It's a catch-22 situation. You've got too many variables," he said. Still, surge flow gives you "lots of options."

Employed conservatively, the surge-flow system could cut down on the amount of water needed for the type of soil and crop.

"You might need six or 10 inches (of water) to get one drop on the bottom," he said, for the root system to benefit.

"You're (possibly) wasting water," he said of the continuous flow system, "and you're already short of water out here."

However, used wisely, one system could be as effective as the other, he said.

"If you do a good job on either, it's the same difference."

Registered for the one-day conference in the Holidome of the Holiday Inn were 178 farmers, irrigation specialists and irrigation equipment representatives from Texas, Arizona, Utah, Kansas and California.

Phil Bales, cotton farmer at Stiles, noted an increase in his cotton production when he used the surge-flow irrigation method. He used less water with surge flow than he did with continuous flow, yet his production increased. Gauging his yield by inches of water put on the land, his yield per inch was almost 34 pounds to the acre under continuous flow but was almost 62 pounds under the surge-flow system.

"He's done a lot of tinkering with the thing (surge flow)," Henggeler said. "He's kind of like a boy genius. You get more bang for your bucks."

Bales' yield on the surge-flow acreage was 813 pounds of cotton; water use was about 13½ inches. His production under continuous flow was 663 pounds; water use was about 19½ inches.

Lubbock onion farmer Steve Jones said surge-flow is "really going to be a coming thing. I saved some energy costs."

Hub farmer Phil Johnson said he saved in energy costs by using the surge-flow method.

"It's going to work good in some applications," he said.

Charles Stichler, TAEX agronomist, noted there's far more to effective farm management than just watering.

"It doesn't do any good to grow cotton if it can't grow because there's no fertilizer under it," he said.

"For goodness sake, don't put any water on if you're not going to fertilize...Any additional water you put on is not going to do any good."

Stichler, who formerly managed a farm at Dell City, said the farmer should always know his soil moisture prior to watering. A meter for measuring soil moisture can be purchased for about $200. It's an inexpensive investment, he suggested. Larger farms may spend a million dollars or more a year on energy costs.

"I don't think a man should irrigate anything without knowing his soil moisture."

Life is for the living...Live it to the fullest

"You got that right," blurted the bloke. He took a drag off his cigarette, downed another jigger of whiskey, winked at the barmaid at the jukebox and lusted after the painting of the naked woman above the mantle. He envied the artist.

"Living it up is what it's all about, huh."

Sorta.

"Sorta? No half measures for me," the fellow said. "Life's to be lived. That's what I'm doing. It's over before you know it. Gusto's the thing. I'm for living it up before the play's over."

He sauntered out of the Night Life Bar, hopped over to the After Glow Cafe for a steak, medium rare, spuds and a couple of beers. He wondered about the pleasures on the beach of a Caribbean island. He cut into his steak, gloated over the flowing juices and was appalled that anyone would ruin a good steak with a load of catsup. He liked it on his potatoes.

Afterward, he dropped by the drug store, paid $3.50 for a girlie magazine, got into his car and headed for The Strip.

"It's a great life."

He passed a library, spa, health-food store, theater, art gallery, aerobics center, two churches, a school and a respectable neighborhood in his trek across town but saw them as only billboards along the highway. They really didn't exist, at least not for him. They were just fantasies.

He pulled into the Triple X Showplace, paid his $5.50, walked into the darkened gallery and lit up another cigarette. He hardly noticed the musky odor or the plastic faces fixed on the screen; they were all so familiar.

"It's a great life," he again murmured, thought of that island and watched the film.

He fell asleep. He had seen so many of the flicks that the mechanical sensuality they depicted bored him.

The bloke dreamed he died. His funeral was drab.

"He lived his life to the fullest he knew how," said the clergyman, who didn't even know him. "Today, as his soul rests in peace, he reaps the reward of living a good life. In his own way, he was a fine man."

He could hardly belief it. His funeral? He thought of the Poor Jed character in that "Oklahoma" movie. Jed was a good man, though it never showed it.

"May he forever rest in peace."

Then, he saw his casket being lowered into the grave. No one was there to throw flowers on the grave or to say a prayer. The gravediggers didn't seem to care whose grave they were closing. They were talking about football and how hard the ground was.

In his sleep, he wondered how he was going to forever rest in peace, since he figured the Day of Reckoning would get him.

Then the light hit him. The flick manager said the showing was all over, and the dreary look of the movie house, a former night club, startled him.

He hoped there was more to life and actually wondered if the Caribbean wonderland was really there or if it, just like his life, was a fantasy.

That thought bothered him. So, he drove to his flat, popped open a can of beer, guzzled it, halfway undressed and went to bed. The night would pass and so would his workday. He wanted to look forward to another night out on the town, but somehow, he dreaded it.

Lawyer announces district attorney candidacy

By ED TODD

Al Schorre

Al Schorre, who claims he "can do a better job," has announced his candidacy for Midland County's district attorney.

"I can organize it and get it to click," Schorre, 36, said of the office, held since 1977 by Vern Martin, 52.

"We're going to get aggressive, period," he said. "Across the board, there needs to be a big push in Midland against property crimes, which are related to drug offenses. You need to make a two-pronged attack".

Schorre, a partner in the Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder law firm, is seeking the Republican Party nomination for the four-year term of office. Martin has not announced his candidacy for re-election.

Schorre said he can discourage crime in Midland by aggressive prosecution. He is billing himself as "a working district attorney for the people of Midland County."

"If the DA is tough on crime," Schorre said, "the law-enforcement agents are going to get in line and get tough on crime. It's the domino theory."

Schorre, a former prosecutor in Bell County in Central Texas, said he wouldn't be seeking the office if it were being run efficiently. He said Martin's office is not well organized. "It's catch as catch can."

"The problem is not with the assistants," he charged. "It's with the captain of the team. They get discouraged because of lack of organization. I think we've had excellent assistants. The people (assistant prosecutors)...get more or less disenchanted, and I don't think salaries are necessarily the reason." The chief assistant prosecutor gets paid about $40,000 a year, while other assistants, depending on experience, are paid in the $20,000s and $30,000s. The DA's slot pays into the $50,000s.

"We've got a terrible problem here," said Schorre, who said the DA office here has a low conviction rate and too many dismissals. "To get that (dismissals) down, you've got to raise convictions."

"It has not been a well organized and managed office," he said. "The high dismissal rate is indicative of that."

Schorre said he wants to re-structure the DA office "to get it back where the left hand knows what the right one is doing."

"We have a high burglary rate in this town," he said. "We're blessed. We don't have a high armed robbery rate. We've got to concentrate on those. That's the real problem."

He cited Odessa's crime rate, which, he said, has dropped, due to "beefed up" law enforcement and to the hard stance the Ector County district attorney, Mike Holmes, has taken against crime. "The Ector County district attorney historically has been aggressive," he said.

"We could and should have the same thing over here."

Schorre has made a previous bid for public office.

While first assistant to District Attorney Arthur Eads in Belton in 1976, he ran on the Democratic Party ticket for Bell County attorney against the first assistant county attorney. He lost.

"It was a close race," said Schorre. "I got a lot out of it."

Schorre, a Austin native and a 1973 graduate of the University of Texas Law School, said he had supervised 10 assistant attorneys and four investigators for the 27th Judicial District in the Bell County DA's office, where he was first assistant from 1973 to 1978, when he joined the Midland law firm.

Were he to win the Republican Party nomination in May and then the general election in November, Schorre said he would reorganize the DA's office; set up a victim-witness program; send his assistant district attorneys to advanced training, such as to the National College of District Attorneys in Houston, and, among other measures, would not recommend probation on first-degree felony offenses, such as murder, rape, armed robbery, burglary of a habitation and certain drug cases. "The DA ought never to recommend probation (in those cases)," he said. However, he said the jury and the judge could grant probation "depending on the circumstances."

"The DA ought to be trying to get the streets cleaned up," Schorre said. "I think we've got some pretty tough courts. I think the judges here have been tough. The problem has been with the DA's office. We need to be aggressive on all fronts."

"The DA has got to have a gung-ho attitude. The captain of the team sets the pace."

Rehabilitation center fosters independence

Occupational therapy, which includes the rehabilitative gadgets already mentioned, helps people find ways around their limitation. The adult therapy room includes specially rigged weight sets and grip-strengthening equipment which help patients revive lost strength and movement.

Instruments of common daily use, from sewing machines to data processors, are available for people who want to return to previous areas of interest. Amputees and people with splints are counseled on functioning with the inconvenience.

Pointing to a picture of a woman using specially engineered utensils in the kitchen, Bromley summed up the units's aim. "Let her know she can do these things again."

Bright colors and games doubling as therapy equipment are used in the pediatric unit where disabled children are treated and screened.

"It's all geared for the kids," said Bromley, "It's all play for them and it's good, solid therapy."

Classroom experiences are also available, with teachers employed by the school system holding classes for students, 3-8 years old, that have different disabilities.

The audiology unit, which closely resembles a professional radio studio, can detect hearing defects before hard-of-hearing children become "socially retarded," noted Bromley. Hearing aids are also dispensed at minimal costs to those who cannot afford commercial prices.

Families can observe the disabled family member in therapy through two-way mirrors. Bromley pointed out this allows the observers "to take the therapy home with them."

Special classes show parents techniques for teaching their children to talk despite limitations and prepare them for situations that can arise with a high-risk situation.

Clinics bring together experts on cleft palates, orthopedics, spina bifida and vision impairments. Clubs are formed based on common interests in strokes and lost vocal chords.

An affiliation with the Warm Springs Rehabilitation Hospital south of Austin gives the hospital a place to send patients that qualify for release to the Permian Basin center.

"We work with everyone that comes through that door," said Bromley.

While the center deals with physical rehabilitation, the end result can also improve the patient's emotional well-being.

"It's emotional because they're independent again," said Bromley.

Rating system for tennis players will be introduced

From Staff Reports

Gary Pierce

A national rating system for tennis players will be introduced in Midland at a program sponsored jointly by the Parks and Recreation Department and the Midlander. Conducting the clinic will be tennis pro Gary Pierce.

The free tennis clinic will be held from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Jan. 24 at the indoor tennis courts at the Midlander. Participants should come dressed in tennis attire and bring their own racquets. No black-soled shoes will be allowed on the courts.

A buffet lunch and fashion show will follow the clinic. Fee is $7 per person. Reservations for the clinic and lunch are being taken at the Parks and Recreation office, 300 Baldwin St., 683-4281, extension 316, or at the Midlander, 225 Corporate Drive, 682-0813. Deadline for making reservations is Jan. 20.

Pierce has experience in organizing, teaching and participating in tennis events. He is a longtime member of the U.S. Professional Tennis Association with professional standing and is listed in the National Tennis Registry. Pierce has coached several national and state-ranked players along with such celebrities as Debbie Reynolds and her son, Kirk Douglas and his son and Jean Simmons.

He has participated in several exhibition matches and has served as head tennis pro and sports director in California, Minnesota, Florida and Washington.

The national tennis rating program, which Pierce will explain, identifies and describes levels of tennis ability on a number scale. This rating program allows players to achieve better competition on court compatibility, personal challenge and more enjoyment in the sport. Players can make arrangements with Pierce to be rated. The rating process takes about 30 minutes, and he will do it for singles and doubles players.

"The rating system really defines your skill to a fine line," said a spokesman with the city's recreation program. "It's a national rating and you can go anywhere in the United States and they will know what you can and can't do. They can place you better in tournaments."

The Parks and Recreation Department is planning a six-weeks tennis class with Pierce as instructor. The date will be announced later.

Amarillo man stabbed, robbed of about $1,000

ODESSA — A 44-year-old Amarillo resident remains in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital following an attack Wednesday night at the Lexington Hotel at 3031 E. Highway 80 in Odessa.

Electrical fire cuts off power to Supreme Court Building

AUSTIN (AP) — Justices reached a quick decision when a minor electrical fire set off alarms in the Texas Supreme Court Building Wednesday.

"We left the bench in the dark and went back to our robing room," said Supreme Court Chief Justice Jack Pope. "We decided by a majority vote that the fire alarm having gone off, we should get out of the building."

Firemen quickly located the problem, a faulty circuit box, which was doused with a chemical fire suppressant and removed. Parts of the seven-story building were without power for the rest of the day.

The justices reconvened their session in the original Supreme Court room on the third floor of the State Capitol. "We've had the hottest arguments we've ever had," said Supreme Court Justice C.L. Ray.

Convicted killer wants to die

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted killer Stephan Peter Morin, jailed under two death sentences, says he's tired of the appeals process and wants to die.

"I demand that your court set a date for my execution," Morin wrote State District Judge David Berchelmann, who said he could not set an execution date until he received a mandate from the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

Morin, a drifter wanted by authorities in several states, was convicted of capital murder in connection with two slayings that took place in San Antonio. He is presently incarcerated in the Colorado state prison awaiting another murder trial.

Arsenic detected in water wells in Knott

AUSTIN (AP) — State agencies have begun a ground water study to determine the cause and extent of arsenic found in wells around the West Texas town of Knott, the Texas Department of Agriculture says.

The TDA said Wednesday that water samples from 150 wells in the area showed 85 percent of them have detectable levels of arsenic, according to Bob King, director of the TDA Office of Natural Resources.

However, he said less than 10 percent showed levels above safety levels established by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

"Each of the well owners in that latter category have been notified," said David Davis, TDA district supervisor for the area.

"We are working with these people to see if we can find a way to help purify their drinking water."

Davis said a wider circle of samples, including Coahoma and Ackerly, did not show detectable levels of the chemical.

TDA was alerted to the potential contamination by State Rep. Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, after a farmer's cattle died of arsenic poisoning.

Poultry, eggs quarantined

AUSTIN (AP) — Poultry and eggs from eight states will be prohibited from moving into Texas in order to protect the state's poultry industry from poultry influenza, the Texas Animal Health Commission says.

The quarantine ordered Wednesday covers all poultry, other birds and hatching eggs from Pennsyvlania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Virginia, New York and West Virginia and any other state which might be suspected of being infected with the disease.

Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director of the commission, said the quarantine was to protect the Texas poultry industry against avian or poultry influenza, a highly contagious disease. "We have no evidence the disease is anywhere in Texas, but we feel that the pultry industry of this state must be protected," he said.

Beached pygmy whale dies

GALVESTON (AP) — Ground squid, vitamins, milk and the love of workers acting as surrogate mothers failed to keep life in a baby whale who beached himself New Year's Day.

LaFitte, a 125-pound, 6-foot pygmy sperm whale, died about 3 p.m. Wednesday, said Sandra Alexander, a spokeswoman for Sea-Arama Marine World.

Scientists had been hopeful LaFitte might become the first whale to survive beaching himself. Whales usually seek shallow water only when they are sick, but Sea-Arama officials thought the year-old LaFitte might only have been following his mother when he thrust himself ashore. His mother died three days later.

LaFitte began to eat on his own early this week, Ms. Alexander said, responding to the workers' attention. But he "just suddenly stopped breathing," she said.

Mobile home fire kills couple

ROCKPORT (AP) — Authorities were trying to determine the cause of a fire that gutted a mobile home and killed a couple.

The badly burned bodies of Alfred Dall Clifton, 53, and Eda Rush Clifton, 51, were found about 8 a.m. Wednesday by two employees of an ice and fuel company in Aransas Pass where Clifton was assistant manager, authorities said.

A sheriff's department investigator and an Aransas Pass police officer both smelled smoke while patrolling a nearby highway early Wednesday, but neither officer could see flames or pinpoint the source of the smoke, Fire Marshal Elva Mullinax said.

Deposition from handgun's first owners read in trial

DALLAS (AP) — An Amarillo couple say they bought a small handgun for use in self-defense, according to a deposition presented in a $20 million lawsuit filed by a man paralyzed when the gun was fired accidentally.

Defense attorneys presented the sworn statement Wednesday as part of their argument that self-protection is a legitimate reason for having a handgun and that gun distributors should not be blamed when guns are misused.

David Clancy, 21, of Amarillo is seeking damages from the designer, maker and seller of the .22-caliber Armsco that discharged in 1977 and left him paralyzed from the shoulders down.

Clancy's lawyer, Windle Turley of Dallas, says the potential hazards of small handguns greatly outweigh their social utility and that small handgun makers and distributors should be held accountable for damages the weapons cause.

The Dallas-based Zale Corp., which owned the Amarillo discount store that sold the gun for $19, is the chief defendant in the trial.

During the seventh day of the trial Wednesday, Zale lawyers Randal Mathis and John E. Phillips of Dallas read testimony from depositions given by several witnesses, including Rose Gonzales, the gun's first owner.

She testified that she and her husband bought the gun in 1971 because her husband often handled cash in his junkyard business.

Evidence indicates that the revolver had been owned by several people before it was obtained by Kenneth Hacker, Clancy's former schoolmate who was handling the gun when it fired and sent a bullet through Clancy's spinal cord.

In other testimony presented by deposition, witnesses said Clancy, then 15, was standing near the car in which Hacker was sitting when the gun discharged. Clancy has said he never saw the gun.

Mathis said he had to present testimony by deposition because some of his witnesses declined to come to Dallas. Courts gave him power to subpoena witnesses in Amarillo and take their depositions under oath.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas.

Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 1984, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates.

If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Copley News Service

To collect an elk or a deer or both in the mountains out of Gardner, Mont., you must ride a horse 10 hours just to reach the spike camp.

You hunt at 8,500 feet, in the snow, riding a horse to the jump-off spot each day. You leave camp in the dark and return the same way.

In daylight hours you're hiking and climbing across logs, through snow, hoping you'll see something worth rolling down the mountain and loading on a mule. And if you see something, you hope your breathing quiets long enough to get off an accurate shot.

You pay $3,000 for the privilege, if that's the word, and collect saddle sores and leg cramps and rope burns as easily as slipping in the snow.

Coni Sansome, wife of skipper Don Sansome of Qualifier 105, loves it. She and others like Ingrid Poole and Carol Lee Gillam and Terry Wade don't just listen to their husbands telling big-game stories, they go along and participate.

"Tell you the truth," Coni said, "I think I stood the horse ride better than Don and the other guys, Dave Williams and Steve Loomis and Mike Connolly. I've got my own horse and I'm used to riding. The others aren't."

Coni, born near International Falls, Minn., catches bass to 10.25 pounds from the stern of her husband's bass boat. That's the toughest position in the boat.

"Yeah, but I can get that plastic worm out faster than Don," she says. "He reads the meter better than me, has more intensity and has caught bigger bass. But we compete."

Anyway, Coni downed an elk and a deer on the just-concluded Montana safari, as did her husband and Loomis and Connolly. Dave, skipper of New Lo-An, was snakebit this trip, blanked. Connolly's deer was a whopper, a five-pointer. Coni's elk was a five-pointer, her deer a 3-by-4.

Dumb commercials are fun

By LINDA ANDERSON

One of the favorite boring-day pastimes at my house is "spotting dumb commercials on television." Two of my children are becoming expert at the game. (I admit it — I am a soap-opera addict. Some of the dumbest commercials are broadcast during soaps.)

Here are a few of our favorite commercials:

— Cereal described as being "full of plump, juicy raisins." We thought it was odd that any dried fruit would be either plump or juicy. As one of my teenagers said, "If a raisin was plump and juicy it would be a grape."

— Detergent illustrated in (A) adults still depending on Mama to show them how to wash clothes (if they are old enough to leave home or have full-time jobs, they are old enough to know how to do laundry); (B) children's clothes that, once washed, show no signs of ever having been worn; or (C) a wife being blamed and/or embarrassed because of her husband's "ring around the collar." It's his neck, why doesn't he wash it?

— Cologne described as "romantic," "daring," "how special you are," "rugged," "unforgettable," "sexy," etc.

— Any product advertised as an "Official (product) of the 1984 Olympics!" Some of the items will probably never be on anyone's training table, especially world-class athletes.

— "Hamburger wars" which show sandwiches from companies as being thicker, juicier, fresher and warmer any of them really are.

— Women's undergarments that improve a woman's figure if she buys a certain brand of bra or pantyhose. Instantly.

— Women who clean house in dresses, high heels and jewelry with their hair perfectly in place (the old "June Cleaver syndrome." Remember? Beaver's mom).

— Margarine and other bread spreads that are 1/2-inch thick on bread 1/4-inch thick. In the words of one teenager, "That's spreading it a bit thick (yuck, yuck)."

— Brands of peanut butter which have "half the sugar" of other brands. Why should peanut butter should have any sugar at all?

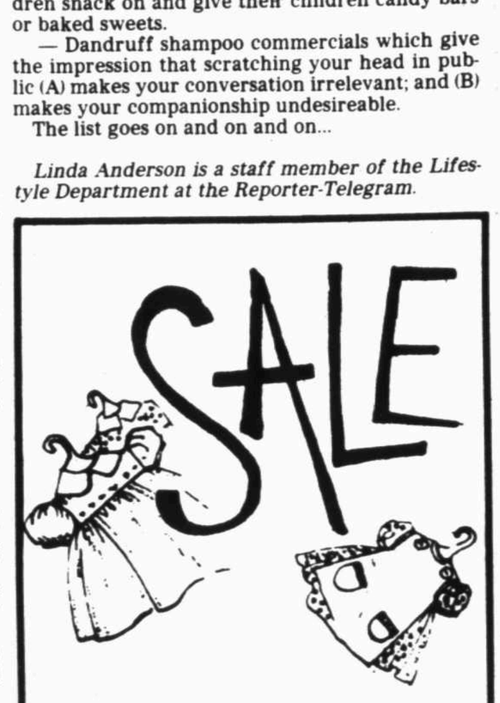

— Baked goods (made from white flour, sugar and other teeth-rotting and body-fattening ingredients) advertised as "wholesome."

— Mothers who worry about what their children snack on and give their children candy bars or baked sweets.

— Dandruff shampoo commercials which give the impression that scratching your head in public (A) makes your conversation irrelevant; and (B) makes your companionship undesireable.

Striped cars most visible

Copley News Service

Henry Ford made things simple when he began mass-producing Fords.

You could have any color you wanted, so long as it was black. Today, that's one of the worst colors possible if you want one that's safe.

These days, however, the rainbow extends from car maker (or body shop) to consumer, and you have a wide variety of hues to choose from, ranging from fire-engine red to lavender.

But which color is safest?

The National Safety Council reports that the safest color is the one that makes your vehicle highly visible under the various lighting, weather and perceptual traffic conditions (that is, will your car be set against a white sand or snowy background?).

So the type of driving you do, when and where, will have a lot to do with your color selection.

Following are colors considered best for overall visibility (however, you can have a variation of colors and still achieve safety).

— White is best in most situations. And in the hotter parts of the United States, white is a cool color, to boot. Some hot day, place your hand on top of a white top, then try the same on, say, a dark green or black. The darker colors will be so hot you may not be able to leave your hand on top while the white color may be cool to the touch.

— Bright yellow or bright orange colors are next. They are especially visible in sun-struck white sand or heavy snow. However, some consumers object to these colors since some utility vehicles have similar hues.

— Dark yellow and light gray are next on the list of visible colors.

— Others, in order of visibility, are light blue, light brown, light green and bright red.

Difficult colors to see under adverse conditions are cars of dark tones of gray, red, blue, brown and black.

Dark green is considered the least visible car color.

Richard Tippie, manager of the safety council's highway traffic safety department, said tests in Paris determined that the greatest visibility of a car was one that combined black on a yellow background (but it might look like a bumblebee).

The French engineers said that green on a red background was the worst possible combination, so a Christmas motif for your car is out as far as safety goes.

If safety is a primary concern, and you don't really care what the Joneses will say, here are some other suggestions for safety.

The most effective color combination for the rear of your vehicle in snow country would be a white or yellow background with black diagonal stripes across the back.

Sound a bit much? Safety engineers will compromise. The diagonal stripes need cover only the lower third of the rear end. The black stripes should not be less than six inches or more than a foot broad. The lighter stripes should be from one to two feet in width.

The stripes should be painted at 45-degree angles, which makes them less likely to be confused with roadside objects, the council reports.

Patients get free cigarettes

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — While agreeing that tobacco is a "vile and disgusting weed," the state health secretary has refused to stop the distribution of free cigarettes to mental patients.

"Persons of even temperament and otherwise impeccable lifestyle become frustrated, anxious and otherwise impossible to live with when they try to break their tobacco habits," Linda Reivitz said Monday.

Mental patients are even more "under great stress, and most often the least prepared to deal with a tobacco addiction problem," she said.

Miss Reivitz, secretary of the Department of Health and Social Services, made the remarks in a letter to state Sen. Fred Risser of Madison, who had demanded the state stop giving cigarettes to patients at the Mendota Mental Health Institute.

The secretary said she considers smoking "unwholesome, unsanitary, unhealthy and unnecessary," and added that she began crusading against smoking at age 7 "when I used to soak my mother's cigarettes in dishwater ... pack upon pack."

Although she wouldn't cut off the cigarettes, she told Risser she would consider providing fruit or gum as an alternative, assuming it is "dietically and clinically feasible."

Smoking can cause wrinkles

Copley News Service

You probably already know that smoking can cause more than its share of problems. But did you know it also can play a significant role in the formation of wrinkles?

According to skin care expert Vera Brown, author of "Vera Brown's Natural Beauty Book," smoking can affect the condition of your skin.

"First," says Vera, "smoking, if done over a period of time, causes lines to form around the mouth because every puff causes the muscles around the mouth to contract, taking the skin with it. That constant action can eventually turn to wrinkles and crevices.

"Also, because smoking reduces the level of oxygen, that loss in turn affects the circulation, which is the primary source of nutrition for all cells, skin cells included.

"Last," concludes Vera, "the smoke itself dries the skin and deposits a film of tar and oil on your face, which is harmful to the general health of your skin cells."

Vera's solution? Quit smoking.

But if you can't quit smoking, be sure to cleanse your skin extra thoroughly — after each cigarette, if possible, to remove the residue. Also, use a non-alcoholic freshener lotion and spray with a mist of mineral water. Then, be sure to cover your skin with a light moisturizer for extra protection against your next exposure to smoke.

Blood donors give gift of life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just donated blood to the American Red Cross Blood Center in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and I'm enclosing a piece that was handed to me on my way out.

I hope you will print it. So many people are not aware of how important it is to give blood — especially now that our blood bank supply has become critically low. Thanks! — NEW YORK BLOOD DONOR

DEAR DONOR: You gave more than blood. You gave me an item that will (I hope) inspire more blood donors. Bless you.

What Good is a Blood Donor?

A blood donor is good for people who go through windshields and red lights. For somebody with leukemia.

For people being operated on. For barefoot kids who aren't careful. For people into feudin' and fightin'.

For hemophiliacs so they can be as normal as possible.

For daredevils. For people undergoing dialysis while waiting for a kidney transplant. For people who fool around with guns. For little kids who manage to uncap a bottle of something poisonous.

For people who are burned pretty bad. For new mothers needing a transfusion. For new babies who need a complete change of blood supply. For people having open-heart surgery. For cancer patients. For people with a severe case of hepatitis. For kids who fall out of trees or whatever. For anybody any age with bleeding ulcers. For people in the wrong place at the wrong time. For the very tired with severe anemia.

For people who run into things. For people who are in a lot worse shape than most people you know.

A BLOOD DONOR IS GOOD FOR LIFE

DEAR ABBY: You recently had a letter in your column concerning a dog that barked continuously all day long (and many weekends) when his owner left him alone. Naturally, this disturbed the neighbors.

A man I work with had the same problem with a neighbor's dog, only this dog owner worked nights and slept days, and his dog barked all night long while he was at work. The neighbors complained but got nowhere. Finally they all got together and took turns staying up in shifts to tape-record the dog's barking. Then they placed the tape directly under the owner's bedroom window with the volume on "high" and forced the dog owner to listen to his own dog barking for eight hours straight. Of course, he didn't sleep a wink, but he got the message.

He apologized to his neighbors and sent his dog to dog obedience training school. — IT WORKED IN COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR WORKED: This "give-'em-a-taste-of-their-own-medicine" technique should work anywhere.

(If you're single and want to know how to meet someone decent, see page 20 of Abby's booklet for people of all ages, "How to Be Popular." Send $2, plus a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Collapsed star keeps accurate time

Hearst Feature Service

The most accurate clock in the world may be outside the solar system: an electromagnetic signal from trillions of miles away, sent out 16,000 years ago.

The clock is a pulsar, a star collapsed to planet size that spins at incredible speed — over 600 times every second.

Pulsars have been well known to astronomers for years (at first, with their fast, regular beats, they were suspected of being signals from aliens). But all previous pulsars were spinning only a sluggish two or three times a second.

Speed is only one of this "millisecond pulsar's" attributes; the other is predictability. Like all pulsars, its spin rate is slowing; but its rate of decrease, unlike its cousins', is regular.

"It's like having a watch that loses exactly one minute a day," says Princeton astronomer J.H. Taylor, who is studying the object. "As long as the loss stays even, it can be allowed for."

Taylor thinks the pulsar's spin is more regular, in fact, than the vibrations of atomic clocks. If that's true, scientists who demand perfect time-keeping may one day peg their clocks to the star. The rest of us may not notice.

Herpes pregnancy worry

A recurrence of herpes in a pregnant woman generally isn't a threat to her baby unless a flareup occurs near the time of delivery, according to a doctor

Dr. Kathryn Schrotenboer, a clinical instructor of obstetrics and gynecology at Cornell Medical College, said in a column in Family Circle that if a baby is exposed to the virus as he moves throgh the birth canal, he may develop a severe form of herpes that can cause serious, even life-threatening problems.

To prevent this a Cesarean section is recommended for women with an active herpes infection near the time of delivery.

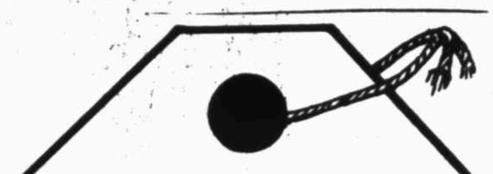

Most women do not have a flareup at this time and are able to deliver normally. To be safe Dr. Schrotenboer recommended that expectant mothers with herpes tell their doctors so they can be properly tested and checked during pregnancy.

Snack may help sleep

Having trouble getting to sleep?

Instead of pills or alcohol, which disturb the normal sleep patterns, you might be better off eating a cookie or drinking fruit juice.

According to a Family Circle magazine article which reports on how certain foods affect your brain, late-night sweets, fruits and other high-carbohydrate foods increase the body's supply of the slumber-inducing brain chemical called serotonin.

AT WIT'S END

Food now so light it floats out of can

By ERMA BOMBECK

In the beginning, there was food.

And it was good.

And then someone came along and took the caffeine out of my coffee because it made me jumpy and irritable.

I became so relaxed, I sat back and ate cookies. And they were good. But then someone took the sugar out of my cookies because the sugar made me fat.

With the sugar gone, I slimmed down and was able to snack again. So I ate pretzels and snack crackers, but someone said the salt in the pretzels and the sodium in the crackers were bad for me and gave me hypertension.

I decided to eat healthy so I drank milk and ate chunks of cheese. I poured butter over my vegetables and ate ice cream and steaks. And it was good.

Then someone took all the butterfat out of my milk and cheese and butter and turned my ice cream into some kind of ice like the kind you scrape off your windshield in the winter. They showed me pictures of what a steak could do to my arteries and warned me about making flaky pie crust out of animal fat.

I started to eat fruit and it was good.

Then someone said there was a possibility the artificial dye would make me sick and to be sure and wash it good because of the sprays they used while it was growing.

I became quite paranoid and decided to stick to the fish from the sea, but my tuna was packed in water and didn't taste the same and every day or so there were warnings of mercury and how some fish were not safe to eat.

Everywhere I went, there were labels on cans telling me what had been taken out. Fruit cocktail was so light it floated right out of the can. My applesauce was natural. All the flour sacks had a grain of wheat on them and even my bacon wasn't bacon, but was constructed.

For awhile, I thought about taking up smoking and drinking, but all the tars were gone from the tobacco and they took the alcohol out of beer and wine, so what was the point?

I have a houseful of food. None of it has a single calorie in it. Something has happened since the food industry took out all of those calories. It has taken away my will to live.

They tell me life is good. With planning and a watchful eye on what I eat, they tell me I can live to be 110.

Maybe it will just seem that long.

Baby's diet chosen before birth

If you are pregnant chances are you will decide whether to breast- or bottle-feed long before the baby is born, according to Family Circle magazine.

It cites a survey by Evansville, Ind. physicians of 976 mothers. More than 90 percent of the mothers decided to breast- or bottle-feed before the end of the first six months of pregnancy. Fifty-two percent planned to breast-feed, 43 percent to bottle-feed, while 5 percent were still undecided at six months.

Reporter hangs up microphone

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — After 50 years of reporting Hollywood's foibles to the radio public, Jimmy Fidler has finally hung up his microphone.

The reason is not entirely age. At 85 he's still vigorous enough to chastize misbehaving stars. What bothers him is the loss of glamour.

"I enjoyed reporting the movie world when stars were stars like Greta Garbo, Jean Harlow, Clark Gable, Humphrey Bogart," he says. "Now they dip into the extra ranks and pick three girls named (Farrah) Fawcett, (Kate) Jackson and (Jaclyn) Smith, put them in a series named 'Charlie's Angels' and call them stars.

"They aren't stars. There's no aura of stardom when you see the same person every week. It was different when you saw Joan Crawford or Bette Davis two or three times a year. The glamour is gone; it's a whole new scene. I don't hate it, but I don't like it. So I quit."

Until a month ago, Fidler left his condominium in this suburban community and made the half-hour drive to North Hollywood, where he recorded "Jimmy Fidler in Hollywood." The 15-minute show was syndicated to 190 stations, although it was not broadcast in Los Angeles.

Today's Hollywood knows little of the power that Jimmy Fidler once wielded over the film industry. Studio executives listened fearfully to his broadcasts, fearing their stars would be targets for his "Open Letter to..." or "Intimate Notes from My Little Black Book."

"When I broke the story that Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton were divorcing, Cary called me and said, 'It's a lie — you'd better get out of town,'" Fidler recalled. "Two days later, they announced the forthcoming divorce.

James Fidler was a Memphis boy who came west to seek his fortune — in Hollywood, of course. He worked as press agent for Cecil B. DeMille and was writing for fan magazines when he got the chance to interview Dorothy Jordan on the NBC radio network.

"Both of us were frightened, and we stumbled through the interview," he said. "I was amazed when I got 450 fan letters! I figured if I could get that much response from something so bad, there must be a future in radio."

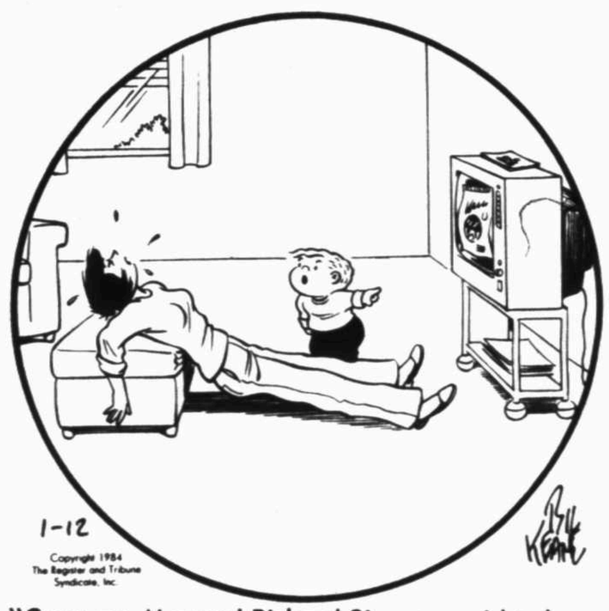

At first he did the show for nothing. Then NBC gave him the salary of $15 a week — "that didn't even pay for the stamps to answer the fan mail." He persisted, and within a few years he was following Walter Winchell on Sunday nights at $2,500 a week. At his peak he was appearing on the NBC, CBS and Mutual networks every week and earning $5,250. He employed a staff of 14.

There comes a time in every bridge player's life when he has to unguard a king. The wise course is to take the action as soon as possible — that way you might be able to conceal your distribution from the opponents. Watch "Bridge World Magazine" editor Edgar Kaplan in action.

From the moment North-South bid game, Kaplan realized that, because of his light opening bid, he would be marked with every outstanding high card. Note North's reopening double and subsequent raise to game on only 14 points; in the balancing position, his double might have been made on as few as 11 HCP.

West led his top spade and Kaplan overtook in case his partner was leading a singleton. Declarer won and drove out the ace of clubs. Kaplan persisted with spades to set up his suit.

Declarer then ran his clubs, and on the fourth round of the suit Kaplan calmly blanked his king of diamonds. Now declarer continued with the king and ace of hearts. East continued to befuddle declarer, following suit first with the eight and then the queen!

It seemed to declarer that East had started with five spades, two hearts, three clubs and, therefore, three diamonds, and that he was now down to three spades and the guarded king of diamonds. So declarer confidently threw East in with a spade. He expected that East would be able to cash three spade tricks, but that he would then have to lead a diamond away from his king into declarer's combined ace-queen tenace.

He was partly right. Kaplan did cash three spade tricks, but then he exited with his three of hearts to his partner's jack for down one.

Neither vulnerable. East deals.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Robert Stack, game-show panelist Charles Nelson Reilly, actress-dancer Gwen Verdon, St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Bob Forsch and the Houston Astros' Mike Madden celebrate birthdays today. Try not to worry so much about business. All you really need to do is stay alert and keep on top of your accounts. An April surprise makes you more confident than ever about romance. Try to be subtle about your long-term aims. Use the telephone to cut down on travel. Domestic harmony grows when you pay more attention to mate's concerns. A new approach works wonders at place of employment. Play a waiting game.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The return of an old favorite boosts morale at place of employment. Beware of someone who tries to get information he is not entitled to. Experimentation will increase profits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your credibility is questioned today. You win the debate. Look for ways to make extra cash. A new plan cannot fail. Make regular deposits in a savings account.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Something you achieve at work is a source of great pride. A small gift cements an alliance. Get at the heart of an old dispute. Devote your energies to reaching one special goal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Employment conditions improve. A mentor needs a favor. Be quick to respond. You enjoy discussing current affairs with someone who does not share your views. Avoid issuing challenges and ultimatums.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Mate plays a key role in a business decision. Investigate the source of a disturbing story. You will find that your fears are unfounded. Romance may be somewhat rocky. Be diplomatic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A trusted friend makes the best sounding board. You are surrounded by people who love you. Concentrate on a pending work project instead of reaching out for new responsibilities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Higher-ups are impressed by the way you help the company save face. An old friend does you a fabulous favor. Show your gratitude in tangible ways. A budding romance needs careful cultivation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel puts you in touch with fascinating people. Your social life begins to sparkle. A loved one is counting on your help. Do not let her down. Guard against being extravagant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Higher-ups are inclined to heap extra work on your capable shoulders. Be patient. A raise or promotion is in the wind. Avoid clashing with a strong-minded associate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Diplomacy helps you avoid becoming involved with difficult people. Curtail everyday spending if you want to take a vacation. Mate is supportive. Do not tell loved one even a little lie.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Intensify your efforts to get your life in order. You need to inspect, discard and reorganize. Listen to criticism from experts only. An older person needs more love and attention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Refrain from making elaborate plans. A last-minute change could throw a monkey wrench into your busy schedule. Communication is the key to greater success in business and romance. Speak from the heart.

Civilians killed, hurt in Beirut artillery fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Government troops traded artillery fire with Moslem militiamen today near the U.S. Marine base, and an opposition leader set new conditions, including an end to Beirut's curfew, for backing a proposed disengagement plan.

Police said one civilian has been killed and four others wounded since intermittent artillery exchanges began Wednesday in the capital's southern suburbs and in the Bsaba-Maroufieh hills. A Marine spokesmen said today the gunfire has not affected the U.S. base at Beirut's airport.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Israel might pull its forces in Lebanon closer to its border. Israel is "planning ways to leave Lebanon," he said Wednesday.

Shamir reaffirmed Israel's insistence that it cannot evacuate Lebanon unless Syrian forces pull out of eastern Lebanon. He indicated that Israel would not change its stand without the approval of the governments of the United States and Lebanon.

He said Israel was considering a pullback from its positions along the Awali River, 25 miles south of Beirut, to a line along the Zaharani River, seven miles farther south.

Anti-Israeli attacks in southern Lebanon have increased in recent weeks, including an incident today in which an Israeli armed personnel carrier hit a land mine in Sidon. Lebanon's state radio quoted witnesses as saying two Israeli soldiers were slightly injured in the explosion but the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said there were no casualties.

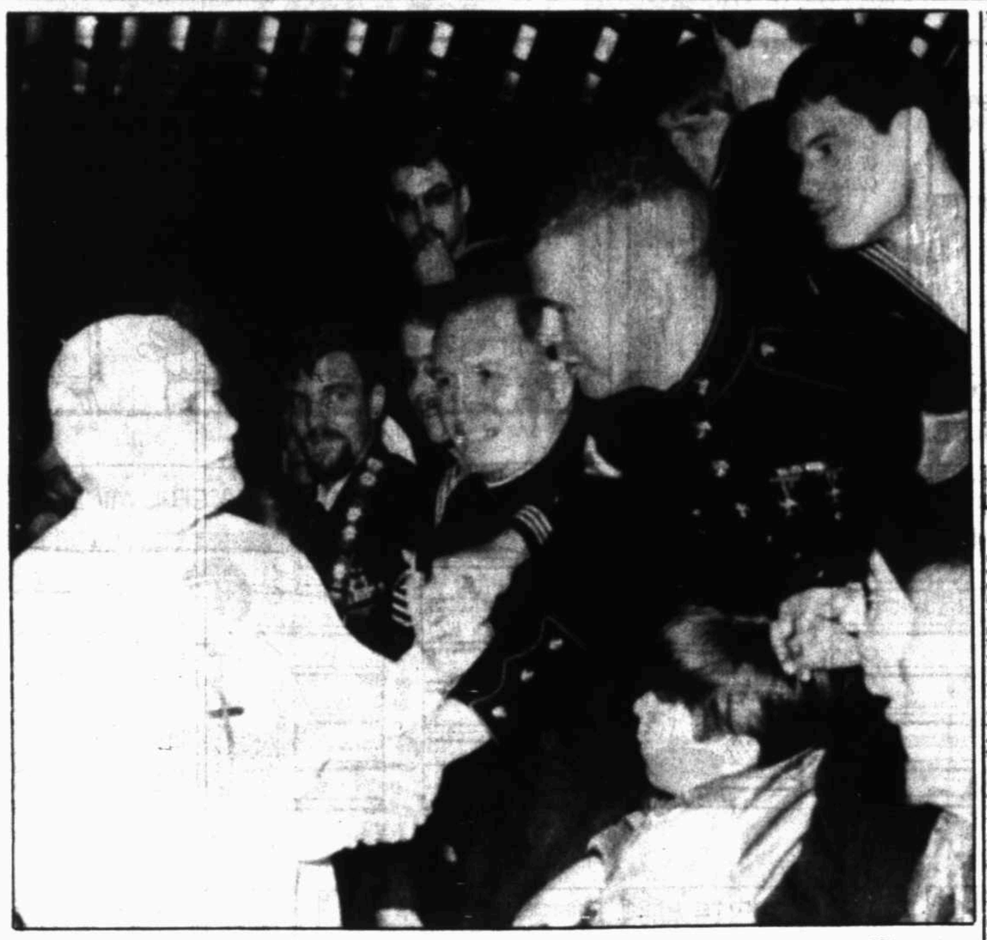

Walid Jumblatt, the leader of the Druse opposition in Lebanon, demanded the abolition of a night curfew and press censorship before plans could go forth to separate the country's warring factions.

Jumblatt has previously demanded an end to censorship and the curfew but this was the first time he tied them to the disengagement plan.

He said other "essential issues" were reinstatement and promotion of Druse officers and soldiers who stayed away from the army during last September's civil war and selecting foreign observers to patrol disengagement zones in suburban Beirut and the Chouf mountains.

Artillery exchanges Wednesday between government troops and Moslem insurgents in suburban Beirut and the neighboring hills disrupted plans to discuss ways to separate Lebanon's civil war antagonists.

A committee representing the Lebanese army, and Druse, Shiite Moslem and Christian militias instead wound up working out a cease-fire, state-run radio said.

Zhao, Reagan end talks on cooperative note

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang and President Reagan wrap up their talks today with a display of friendship and cooperation but with their differences showing.

After a Cabinet breakfast for Zhao at the White House, the two leaders were to participate in signing ceremonies completing bilateral agreements on exchange of science and technology and commercial and industrial cooperation.

After concluding three days of talks with administration officials, Zhao leaves later in the day for San Francisco aboard a plane Reagan has lent him from the presidential fleet for the premier's two-week, cross-country tour of the United States.

But despite much talk of warm and friendly discussions about matters of mutual concern, the two sides indicated they had made little progress in ironing out some of their fundamental differences.

On Wednesday, Zhao ruled out the possibility of forming a strategic partnership with the United States to present a united front against the Soviet Union.

China and the United States, he said, have too many disputes over foreign policy.

In an interview with American television correspondents broadcast by Cable News Network, Zhao said the United States and China do have in common their opposition to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and the occupation of Cambodia by Soviet-supported Vietnamese forces.

But China could never condone the U.S. invasion of Grenada, Reagan administration policy in Central America, its involvement in the Middle East or its policies toward the Third World, the premier said.

"In these circumstances, it is therefore impossible to establish any comprehensive strategic partnership," he said.

Zhao reasserted China's independent foreign policy as a non-aligned nation and said his country adopts its positions on world issues case-by-case and "on their own merits."

Zhao also said China has not been asked and has not considered taking part in a four-way conference with the United States and North and South Korea to stabilize the volatile Korean peninsula and lead to reunification of the two Koreas.

China announced its support Wednesday of North Korea's call for a three-way U.S.-Korean conference, but South Korea appeared to reject that proposal, charging the North Korean offer was insincere.

Reagan said Tuesday night that a four-way conference would be "just wonderful" in that it would pose the possibility of ending three decades of armed stalemate on the Korean peninsula.

The Chinese premier hasn't passed up any opportunity to make his point that continued U.S. support of Taiwan stands as "a serious obstacle in the way of Sino-U.S. relations."

At a dinner given for him Wednesday night by Chinese-American organizations, Zhao noted that "many of our countrymen present here have relatives both on the mainland and in Taiwan. Over the past three decades and more, a strait has separated the kith and kin, leaving a trauma on the body of our nation."

He restated Peking's offer to "hold talks on an equal footing" with Taiwan's leaders aimed at reunifying the country and establishing the island of Taiwan as "a special administrative region of China" that could maintain its social system, lifestyle and foreign investments.

"Our proposal is conciliatory, reasonable, realistic and feasible," the premier argued.

China supports Korean unification effort

PEKING (AP) — China says North Korea's proposal for reunification talks involving South Korea and the United States would help ease tensions on the Korean peninsula.

"China actively supports the proposal of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea for holding tripartite talks between the DPRK (North Korea), the South Korean authorities and the United States," the Chinese Foreign Ministry said Wednesday.

The proposed tripartite talks would be conducive to easing tension on the Korean peninsula and promoting the peaceful reunification of North and South Korea," the statement said.

North Korea made the proposal Tuesday. The next day South Korea said it would not begin any such efforts until its Communist neighbor apologized for a bombing in Burma Oct. 9 that killed 17 South Koreans, including four Cabinet members.

Two North Korean army officers have been convicted in Burma of involvement in the bombing. North Korea has denied any connection with the bombing, so the South Korean demand, in effect, rejected the proposed peace talks.

At a state dinner in Washington for Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, President Reagan said Tuesday he would welcome talks among the two Koreas, China and the United States.

The divided Korean peninsula is under a truce from an armistice that halted the 1950-53 Korean War.

North Korea and China signed the armistice on the one side and the U.N. command, led by the United States, signed on the other.

Book deciphers Sheffieldish

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — For years, English-speaking outsiders visiting this industrial center have been befuddled by questions such as "Nadenodagoon?" or "Othaoreight?" Now a phrase book of translations has come to the rescue.

Sheffield's city council thought there would be some interest in a booklet about the local dialect and printed 2,000 copies.

That was two years ago. The 32-page booklet, "Sheffieldish: A Beginner's Phrase Book," is now into a fourth edition and the total print run is up to 24,000 copies.

It contains a glossary of local words and phrases. "Nadenodagooin?" for example, means "Now then, are you going?" "Othaoreight?" translates as "Are you all right?"

"Demand has been fantastic. We have had letters from all over the world," said Philip Dent, the city hall spokesman for this Yorkshire steel city, which has about 540,000 residents.

Dent, who comes from Lincolnshire, confessed that he finds written Sheffieldish "incredible. But when people say it, it's much more meaningful."

In Sheffieldish, "You are a miserable person" comes out as "Thartreightmardy."

"What's the matter with you" becomes "Wasupwithi."

"I find it difficult to read," Dent said. "You have to read each phrase a couple of times to get the hang of it and that's probably the attraction. When Sheffielders speak, it's quite a sing-song."

Anyone asking the way in Sheffield may find the directions difficult, especially if they involve The Wicker, a downtown street.

"Where the water runs over the weir in The Wicker" comes out as "Tweertwaterrunsort weerin twicker."

A Sheffielder who lives in the Attercliffe district, when asked where he lives will reply simply, "Ont Cliff."

A classic phrase, which Dent asserts was taken for Chinese by one visitor, is: "Oowashiwi washiwithi orwashiwihersen?" which translates: "Who was she with, was she with you or was she alone?"

Dent said the council expected that Sheffielders who had emigrated would be interested in the book, but the curiosity has spread beyond expatriates.

"We have just been asked for two copies by the overseas languages section of the Sorbonne University in Paris, and there have been requests from Denmark and the United States," Dent said Wednesday.

"When it first came out, we did a news release. One or two papers reviewed it and they were very much tongue-in-cheek about it. I suppose the word has got round that it's unusual."

The booklet was compiled by Derek Whomersley, a Sheffielder born and bred but who now lives in Devon.

"The booklet was his idea and he worked out how to write down the dialect," said Dent.

"The demand surprised us. We printed 2,000 copies, then another 4,000, but we couldn't meet the demand so we did another 10,000.

Salvadoran bridge attacked

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A vital railroad bridge linking eastern El Salvador to the rest of the war-torn country was attacked by leftist rebels, who retreated after a two-hour battle, a military source in Usulutan province said.

The source had no details on casualties following Wednesday's encounter. He said the rebels also sabotaged a power line and blacked out the entire province.

The bridge over the Lempas River 50 miles east of the capital was converted for use by vehicles after rebels blew up the parallel Puente de Oro in October 1981. It has one lane of traffic and is one of only two links to eastern El Salvador.

On New Year's Day, guerrillas blew up the heavily fortified Cuscatlan Bridge, 20 miles upriver of the Puente de Oro on the Pan American Highway. The destruction of that bridge forced the government to reroute traffic over the nearby dam where traffic is limited to five hours a day.

Engineers say a temporary replacement for the Cuscatlan Bridge should be ready by February.

Nigerain coup makes arrests

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Military officials who took over the nation on Dec. 31 say they will arrest former government officials who have not turned themselves in by today and will place the fugitives on a wanted list.

There was no word on how many officials of the ousted government had turned themselves in by the deadline, which expired at the end of the day Wednesday. Nigerian newspapers said 229 political figures had reported to police in Lagos by Tuesday.

The new head of state, Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari, claimed that the former government mismanaged the country's economy and allowed widespread corruption.

Nigerian diplomat killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Trimi Jimoh, the Nigerian counselor and charge d'affaires in Beirut, was killed when his car veered off a curve and plunged 120 feet into the Mediterranean Sea, police said today.

They said the 35-year-old diplomat was driving and a woman passenger, who was not identified, also died in the crash.The Nigerian Embassy confirmed the death, but gave no details.

Police said the accident occurred Wednesday night when the car crashed through a concrete barrier on the seafront Corniche Boulevard and plunged into the sea.

Grenadian's letter published

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has published a letter it says is from an imprisoned Grenadian leftist accusing U.S. soldiers on the Caribbean island of torture.

The letter, printed in the government newspaper Izvestia on Wednesday, was signed "Leon Cornwall, member of the central committee of the New Jewel Movement."

The New Jewel Movement was the Marxist party of Grenada's prime minister, Maurice Bishop, who was killed Oct. 19 during a coup by a radical military faction.

Cornwall was a key member and spokesman for the military junta which ruled the island until U.S. forces invaded it on Oct. 25. A Grenadian army major, he was Bishop's ambassador to Cuba. Cornwall was arrested during the invasion.

Poland lowering price hikes

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Bowing to public opposition to food price hikes, the Polish government today announced scaled-down proposals to raise the cost of luxury foods more sharply than those for basic items.

The increases, originally announced in November, were expected to go into effect this month but will not occur before February, according to government officials.The Council of Ministers met today to discuss the proposal.

Communist authorities clearly want to avoid a repeat of the unrest which accompanied unannounced food price hikes in 1970 and 1976 and helped spark the creation of the now-outlawed Solidarity labor federation in 1980.

Shcharansky shrunken, in pain

MOSCOW (AP) — The mother of imprisoned dissident Anatoly B. Shcharansky said that during a recent visit she found her son emaciated and in constant pain.

Ida P. Milgrom reported on her son's condition Wednesday after returning from a meeting at the Chistopol Prison. She is allowed two visits a year under prison regulations.

Shcharansky is 35.

Earthquake rattles Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A medium-strength earthquake shook southwestern Greece today but there were no immediate reports of casualties or damage, the Athens Seismological Institute said.

An institute spokesman said the tremor occurred at 5:45 a.m. (10:45 p.m. EST Wednesday) and its epicenter was 140 miles southwest of Athens. Police in the southern town of Kalamata said the quake awoke residents, but there were no reports of casualties or material damage.

The Institute said the quake measured 4.6 on the Richter scale, capable of causing moderate damage in populated areas. The Richter scale is a guage of energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on an seismograph. Every increase of one number means the ground motion is 10 times greater.

Bignone wants military trial

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President Reynaldo Bignone, detained on charges he was involved in the presumed murder of two communists, will demand a military trial, court sources say.

The sources, who insisted on anonymity, said Wednesday the 55-year-old retired army general will argue that a civilian judge lacks authority to try him because the alleged crime occurred while both he and the victims were in the military.

Bignone, who headed the military government that turned over power to civilians last Dec. 10, was arrested Tuesday at the order of Capital District Judge Carlos Oliveri, who is investigating the case.

The ex-president is charged with illegal deprivation of liberty, false testimony, abuse of authority and covering up a crime. The case involves the August 1976 disappearance of Luis Garcia and Luis Steimberg, two army conscripts who were members of the Communist Youth Federation.

Galman claims questioned

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An air force intelligence officer testified today he knew of no intelligence reports to bolster the government's claim that the alleged assassin of opposition leader Benigno Aquino was a communist.

However, Maj. Ruben Alcantara, who took the mother and sister of accused assassin Rolando Galman into custody before he was publicly identified, challenged earlier testimony of Galman's mother that he was a simple farmer.

Testifying before a special commission investigating the assassination, Alcantara said he got the impression from Santurnina Galman that she knew her son had been involved in hold-ups and was a gun for hire.

Galman was gunned down by government troops moments after Aquino was shot in the back of the back of the head at the Manila airport Aug. 21. Aquino was in the custody of security forces removing him from the airliner on which he returned after three years of self-exile in the United States.

Birth utilized donated egg

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Scientists said today that the world's first test-tube baby produced with an egg donated to the mother has been born, offering new hope for infertile women who want children.

Dr. Carl Wood said the birth demonstrates that women who are unable to produce eggs or who suffer from hormone shortages can have children.
