Clinic doesn't feel delay to hire doctor is due to pro-lifers

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Although Planned Parenthood of West Texas was unsuccessful last year in its search for a doctor to perform abortions in Midland, officials with the nonprofit organization are confident the service will be in place this year.

"It has been a delay but not something that caused us great concern," said Karen Hildebrand, executive director of Planned Parenthood of West Texas.

The local Planned Parenthood has had three doctors express interest in the job since the decision to provide abortion services was made, she said. In addition, a Florida doctor offered to fly in to perform abortions, but his services were declined, she said.

Ms. Hildebrand said she was "certain" a doctor will be hired this year.

The women's health clinic had hoped to have a doctor by the end of last year.

In light of the search, since last February anti-abortionists have made public — through protests, advertisements and other strategies — their dissatisfaction with Planned Parenthood's intentions.

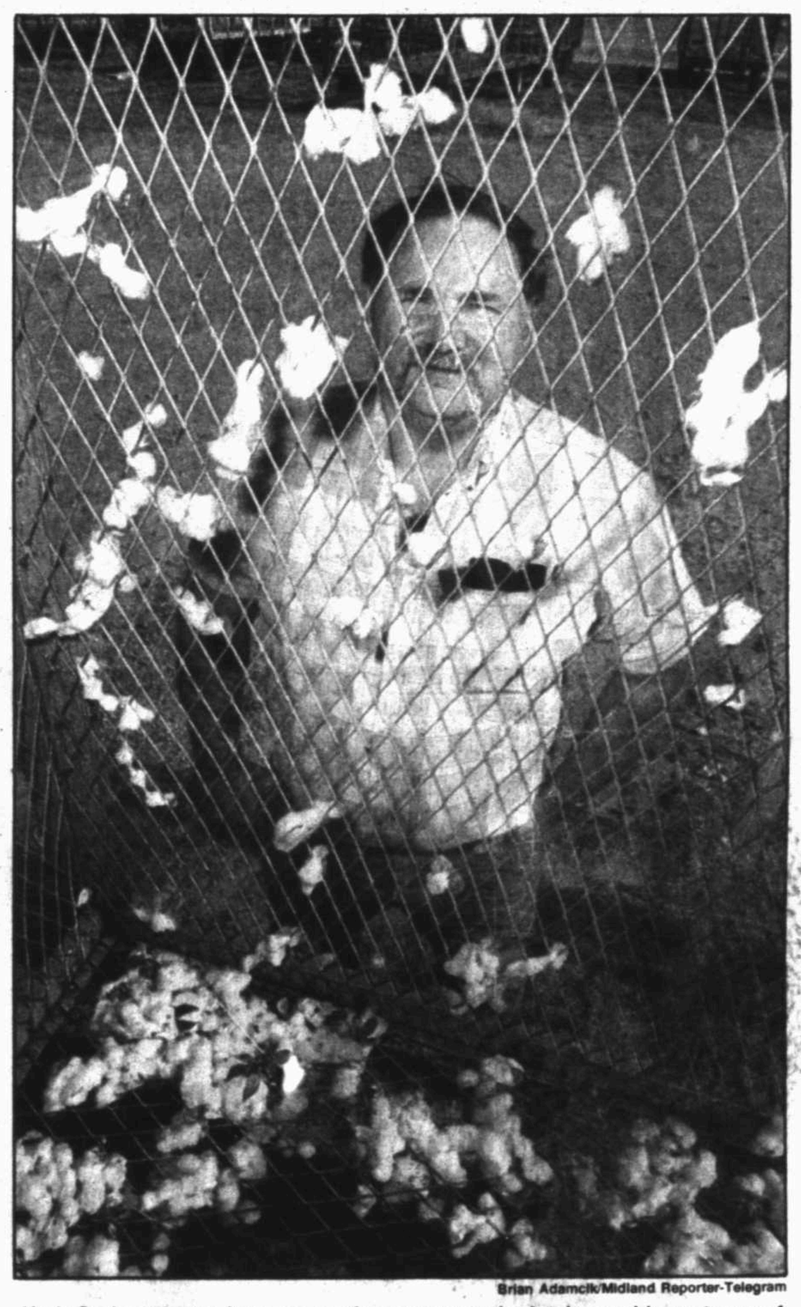

In turn, an abortion-rights group formed in the fall to counter the anti-abortionists' effort.

Planned Parenthood of West Texas officials don't think local anti-abortionists have affected their search for a doctor.

"Absolutely not," Ms. Hildebrand said.

The setback has been attributed to terrorist threats

Herb Sorley tries to impress on the consumer the basics and importance of agricultural products from cotton to beef.

Official: U.S. can't depend on imports due to agriculture's impact on economy

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

In good times or hard times, agriculture reigns supreme. It is the foundation for the basics of life: shelter, clothing, food.

"We seem to forget that food and fiber come from the farm and ranch — not the store around the corner," said Herb Sorley, county executive director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Sorley said that research indicates that although less than 2 percent of the nation's 253 million people live on farms and ranches, American farmers and ranchers produce 15 percent of the world's feed grains, 25 percent of the world's beef, 11 percent of the world's food grains, 15 percent of the world's pork and 16 percent of the world's cotton.

American farmers and ranchers are the world's largest exporter of agricultural products, Sorley said.

In 1990, the United States exported $40.2 billion in farm products.

"Every dollar in agriculture exports generates another $1.59 in economic activities such as transporta-

Survey: Half Texans keep guns in home

■ Number of adults owning guns for protection in state increases to 56.5 percent.

Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Almost six of every 10 adult Texans keep guns in their homes for protection, according to results of a survey released Saturday by criminal justice researchers at Sam Houston State University.

Some 56.5 percent of respondents in a Texas Crime Poll said they keep the firearms for protection. Of those asked the same question a year ago, 54 percent said they had guns.

More dramatic, however, is that the gun-for-protection question asked by Sam Houston pollsters in 1982 drew an affirmative response from only 38 percent. Every year, the number has grown.

"There's been a big increase," said Margaret Farnworth, director of the poll, noting the survey also found 20 percent of those who did not own guns for protection said they would purchase firearms for that purpose in the coming year.

"That's pretty dramatic," she said.

The question, one of 100 in the survey, specifically asked if the gun was for home protection, as opposed to merely owning a gun.

Area firearms dealers decry proposed fee

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Local firearm dealers say the federal government is cutting its own throat by trying to raise fees for dealer's licenses to almost 1,000 percent of their current rate.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen proposed the increase, from $66 to $600 a year, to eliminate the thousands of Americans with federal firearm licenses who are not heavily involved in firearm retailing.

Bentsen predicts these fee increases and strengthening background checks on applicants for dealers' licenses would shut out 70 percent of the current 284,000 licensed dealers.

The purpose of the proposed legislation is blocking the low-volume dealers from purchasing handguns at wholesale prices. The fee increase is part of an $81 million anti-crime initiative aimed at establishing task forces to study gun-

Local service goes national

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

Realizing the ever-increasing need to provide services and assistance to senior citizens and caregivers across the country, Midlanders Steve Edwards and Ann Dunbar are taking an idea born locally and watching it grow on a national scale.

Asten Inc., according to Edwards and Ms. Dunbar, is "an outgrowth" of the work the two accomplished in their years of work at Community and Senior Services of Midland, as well as the weekly "Community Concerns" segment on KMID-Channel 2.

Edwards and Ms. Dunbar, who for years were paid employees at the nonprofit CSS, resigned their positions last week to further establish their for-profit venture.

Edwards and Ms. Dunbar, who together form Asten Inc., will produce the weekly "Family Concerns" — a televised segment patterned after the locally produced "Community Concerns." The weekly program will deal with issues and concerns of both the elderly and the caregivers.

Lure of easy money

Growth of gambling spawns teen 'epidemic'

By Pam Schmid
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Jay Faherty's gambling habit began innocently enough, watching a church bingo game from his mother's side at age 12. It ended nearly a decade later with a trail of bad checks and maxed-out credit cards.

Like many gamblers, he was drawn by the lure of easy money.

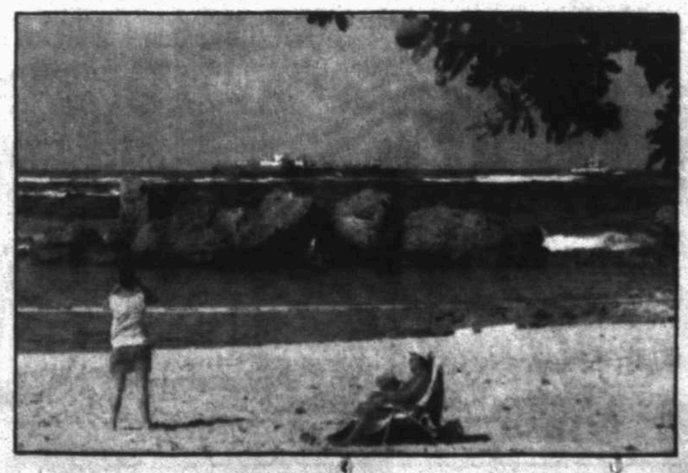

"Whether you play 15 minutes or three hours, it's the same adrenaline rush," he says. "But the second you get away from the table, it's gone."

And, like a growing number of compulsive gamblers, Faherty was hooked on betting before he was old enough to buy a drink.

"We have an epidemic in America, a little-noticed epidemic," said Dr. Durand Jacobs, a clinical psychologist in Redland, Calif., and a pioneer in treatment of compulsive gambling.

Experts say compulsive gambling among teens is growing along with the gambling industry in the United

TEACH: UTPB assistant art professor 'makes his own path'

(From 1G)

"I wanted to do something — make stuff," said Stanley, a native of Iowa City, Iowa, who played ice hockey in high school. "I didn't want to read. I got frustrated with what I perceived to be the lack of ability to really immerse yourself in what college should be about.

"It shouldn't be about getting on track early and main-streaming through a program just to get a degree."

Stanley paused to answer a UTPB student's question about the kiln, then said, "There's two theories of learning. You know exactly what you want to do when you get to college and head on that line.

"The other is you weave in and out and find your niche. Weaving in and out was something I learned in high school. That provides a broader-based education, and it was something I was looking for when I went into college."

So, for the first two years of college, Stanley studied English and took art courses "here and there," until the university required him to declare a major. His solution was to declare a double major and, he said, "make my own path."

He realized that if he chose to simply get a second teaching field in ceramics, the work would not be as intensive as if he earned a second bachelor's degree.

Thus, between 1982 and 1988, Stanley completed a bachelor of fine arts in ceramics and a bachelor of science degree in secondary English education.

"By this time I'd been married and it became very important to figure out how I was going to earn a living," Stanley said.

"The practical things in life, I have always put secondary. Having a very loving, understanding wife is probably the only thing that has helped me survive the last seven years."

Stanley married Annie Seeley in May 1988, two years after they met. By utilizing her linguistics degree from the University of Kansas, she became, Stanley said, "the primary bread winner."

While Stanley was pursuing a master of fine arts degree with a major in ceramics and a minor in drawing from Washington State University, his wife taught English as a second language at the university.

He had applied at seven graduate schools and was accepted at five. He chose WSU at Pullman because it was not as traditional as some of the other schools.

"If you got accepted in the program, you were given free rein and not pigeonholed into a medium. It was a wonderfully creative environment. The people that were there teaching were all nationally known artists.

"That was about the first point that I considered teaching: when I got there and saw that you could be an artist and be inside the university system."

During his years in school, Stanley supplemented his income through his third passion — cooking.

"Throughout undergraduate school and graduate school, I had been cooking, too. That became a third option. If the teaching and art didn't pan out, I could go to chef's school.

"I always knew I was going to be making art. From the point that I started studying for my BFA, nothing was going to stop me from making stuff. But it was one of those situations you have to do what you have to do to survive."

Creating "stuff" is mandatory in Stanley's life for him to survive.

"If I ever have to stop making art, I'm not surviving. (Sculptor) Louise Nevelson once said, 'If you stop making art, you die.' I've always lived by that. I've been accused of having no middle ground. Always black and white, which is funny because that's the way I paint."

He was attracted to UTPB because the school was moving into four-year status and the two-dimensional part of the art department had strong leadership.

"This was a place it felt like you could build. The fact that it was kind of untouched territory and especially in ceramics, that was real intriguing.

"And we've got all these ceramics people like Kevin Van Winkle at Odessa College and Carol Bailey at Midland College.

"There's an opportunity to have lots of fun. Ceramists usually congeal into groups in order to accomplish monumental tasks, and that's what I'm hoping for in this area. The same applies for sculpture.

"Having a very talented artist in Pam Price is another saving grace. The two-dimensional side of this department is very strong. It's fun trying to build the three-dimensional program up."

After 18 months here, he's still excited about building the program at UTPB and is looking forward to the spring semester.

"It's a real exciting time for everything in art, not just three-dimensional, but two-dimensional, too. Any time you have the option of coming to a school in a place where you're building, the students are going to get an initial experience that is very hands-on with things like equipment building and kiln building, and it's going to carry with them the rest of their lives."

The students are a major factor in Stanley's pleasure with being in West Texas teaching at UTPB.

"I look for students' eyes to light up," Stanley said. "...That's when it's the most exciting, when the students get the fire in them."

Hungary accepts U.S. proposal on NATO

BUDAPEST, Hungary (NYT) — President Clinton's offer of a new defense partnership between Eastern Europe and NATO that could eventually lead to full membership in the alliance inched forward on Saturday when Hungary became the first to tell the United States that it had formally accepted the proposal.

The U.S. representative to the United Nations, Madeleine K. Albright, who is leading a delegation to Eastern Europe to explain the initiative, announced at a news conference that Hungary had assented to the American offer at a Cabinet meeting.

Foreign Minister Geza Jeszenszky said that Hungary did not share "the cynicism" of some Eastern European governments that see the American plan as a substitute for NATO membership, not a step toward it.

But, he said: "In the long run, there are no valid historical, political, or strategic reasons that should keep Hungary out of NATO. I am convinced that one day, I hope soon, we will become full members of the organization."

On Thursday, the Czech prime minister, Vaclav Klaus, told reporters that his government had accepted the Americans' "gradual approach to NATO cooperation with Eastern and Central European countries."

Many in the former East bloc see NATO membership as vital protection against possible Russian aggression. But NATO members are reluctant to extend such guarantees now, in part because they are reluctant to strengthen the position of nationalist extremists in Russia and weaken President Boris Yeltsin.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. John M. Shalikashvili, said that once NATO has approved the compromise relationship at a summit meeting in Brussels, Hungary would be invited to send officials to NATO headquarters to work on "joint planning, joint exercises, and joint operations if that comes about."

Weather helps firefighters contain Sydney fires

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Cooler weather eased forest fires close to central Sydney early today, giving firefighters a chance to contain some of the 125 blazes raging across southeastern Australia.

Huge forest and bush fires roared to within 5 miles of downtown on Saturday, when a fourth person died in the firestorms that have destroyed up to 150 homes.

The sky over Sydney glowed a sinister red early today, sirens wailed constantly and huge columns of smoke rose on the city's edges. Television networks broadcast footage from helicopters of whole streets burned out in some southern and northern suburbs.

Unexpected windshifts today fanned fires which earlier had been contained in suburban Sydney. A renewed blaze at Oxford Falls in Sydney's north forced the evacuation of scores of residents and 300 people from a retirement home.

Families were also forced from homes threatened by fires near Menai in the city's southern outskirts.

Helicopters were dumping water on the flames. Fire crews were backburning forest litter and vegetation to stop the advance of the fires.

More than 1.2 million acres of forest and grassland — 1½ times the size of Rhode Island — have been consumed by the flames.

The Bushfire Services Department is most concerned about huge fires in a tinder-dry forest in the Blue Mountains, 50 miles west of Sydney, as well as near Gosford, 18 miles north.

Hundreds of soldiers have joined more than 7,000 firefighters.

The forest fires flared a week ago, fanned by gusty 60-mph winds and summer temperatures of over 104 degrees.

Temperatures dropped to about 78 degrees this morning and the winds also abated in many areas.

Department spokesman Bruce McEwan said firefighters used the cooler conditions to burn back acres of forest litter ahead of fire fronts as a means of checking the advance of some blazes.

"The worst, I suspect, is over," said Bushfire Services Commissioner Phil Koperberg. "We have seen unprecedented fires in this country. We have never seen the nature of it before."

Fire officials said it's the biggest fire emergency since European colonization 206 years ago.

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be cloudy, near 60

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for variable cloudiness with a high near 60 and southwest winds 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland National Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be fair with a low near 30.

Monday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high between 60-65, the NWS said.

Yesterday's high was 81, set in 1969. The record low for today's date is 7, set in 1967.

STATE

Clouds swished across Texas on Saturday, covering most of the state as temperatures remained slightly higher than normal for this time of the year.

The western part of North Texas enjoyed temperatures as much as 20 degrees warmer than usual Saturday thanks to a trough of low pressure.

Skies were partly to mostly cloudy in the mid-afternoon as some mid- and high-level clouds moved into the region. Temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from 43 degrees at Paris to 62 degrees in Killeen.

Some strong winds were felt, prompting a caution statement for area lakes. Gusts as high as 25 miles per hour were reported at Abilene with a sustained speed from 15 to 20 miles an hour.

The forecast calls for clear and not as cold overnight with lows from the middle 20s northeast to the upper 30s west. Today, highs will be in the middle 50s to the lower 60s.

In South Texas, high pressure over the area was slowly moving east and weakening as clouds blew in from the west.

Partly to mostly cloudy skies were reported across the north with clear skies reported in the deep south.

Afternoon temperatures were in the upper 40s along the upper coast and in the 60s in the south.

Skies were to become partly cloudy today with lows in the 30s in the north and in the 40s in the south. Highs today will reach the 60s to near 70.

NATION

One storm moved out of New England on Saturday after spreading thick ice and snow up to a foot and a half deep, and a new storm moved into the Northwest.

The heart of the latest storm in the Northeast had moved into southeastern Canada and the northern Atlantic by Saturday afternoon, but winter storm warnings remained in effect for northeastern Maine, the National Weather Service said.

Sleet and freezing rain created thick layers of ice in places along the East Coast and southern New England.

Snowfall included 17 inches at Stoneham, Mass.; 15 at Belmont, Mass., and Hartford, Conn.; 14.5 at Boston; 14 at Stephentown, N.Y., and Canterbury, N.H.; 12 at Stillwater, N.Y., and Sutton, Vt.; and 11 at East Boothbay, Maine.

On the backside of the storm system leaving New England, a cold northwesterly flow of air across the Great Lakes produced lake effect snow, fed by the lakes' moisture. Seven inches of snow fell near Big Bay, Mich.; 6 inches feil near Hurley, Wis.; and 5 inches fell at Copper Harbor, Mich.

DELAY: Planned Parenthood continues search for doctor and acts that plague abortion providers, Ms. Hildebrand said.

"I think that it's evident everywhere in the United States that doctors are giving up abortion services because their lives have been in danger by the radical right," she said.

Ms. Hildebrand said that when a doctor is hired she anticipates an increase in local anti-abortionist activity.

Cindy Walton, a member of Concerned Citizens of the Permian Basin, said her organization will continue to raise public awareness for the "pro-life" cause whether or not a doctor is secured.

Although there has been "a lot of prayer," Ms. Walton said she could not say whether local anti-abortion sentiment has affected Planned Parenthood's prospects for a doctor.

"It doesn't seem that public pressure matters to them," she said.

Nevertheless, "thousands" of Midlanders are concerned and upset about the prospect of "children being killed in our town," Ms. Walton said.

Meanwhile, Planned Parenthood of West Texas receives several calls daily from clients and concerned citizens asking about abortion services, Ms. Hildebrand said.

A similar search for a doctor was being made by Planned Parenthood of Central Texas' Waco clinic.

That Planned Parenthood had hoped to have a doctor in 1992 and as of last August was still without.

Sue Havens-Drake, executive director of Planned Parenthood of Central Texas, declined to say whether a doctor has been hired.

"I have a new policy on this issue because of the increased violence (against abortion providers, clients and supporters).

"I'm not making any further comment on abortion services. I have to protect my staff and clients," Ms. Havens-Drake said.

CARE: Midland service grows to national scale

(From 1A)

The program will not only deal with issues pertinent to the aging segment of America, but will also provide referral information for caregivers who may realize that help existed.

"The series is an outgrowth of our work at Community and Senior Services," Edwards said. "The needs that we have found locally, they are also needs on a state level."

Asten Inc., has already broken into a television market it was assured it couldn't crack: Philadelphia. At No. 4, experts said the eastern Pennsylvania market was too competitive to enter.

Hosted by Cindy Kuykendall, a former news anchor in the Dallas-Fort Worth television market, "Family Concerns" is also seen in Cleveland, Detroit, Dallas and San Antonio, all of which are Top 20 television markets, as well as the mid-sized and smaller markets of Tulsa, Okla., El Paso, Waco, Corpus Christi, Amarillo, Wichita Falls and Laredo.

The Visiting Nurse's Association of Dallas requested that Edwards and Ms. Dunbar work on a fund-raising video for its new office building in Dallas.

Through that work, Edwards and Ms. Dunbar then formed an association with Phillips Co., which produced the pilot video for "Family Concerns."

The Phillips Co. is headed by Bob Phillips, host of "Texas Country Reporter."

"We credit all this to Community and Senior Services," Ms. Dunbar said.

"The pilot series we did (for "Family Concerns") was funded by non-community money. That is one of the things people haven't understood. We've had some other funds available to us."

Edwards said that in addition to the television segment, Asten Inc., will also provide care-giving training and seminars.

What was created first at Midland's CSS would be "used as a model for other things in the future," Edwards said.

"We've learned to use the media effectively in different ways, tying this into services that non-profit groups provide," Edwards said.

"The needs (of the elderly and caregivers) are almost invariably the same around the country in terms of both education and non-profit needs.

"We credit the board of Community and Senior Services for their farsightedness and their initial support of this project."

With one out of every three caregivers not knowing where to turn for assistance, "Family Concerns" will provide at the end of each segment a phone number and address of a local agency for caregivers or the elderly to contact.

Edwards said the needs of the elderly and care-giving public continue to become more critical in today's world, citing the following numbers:

- One out of every four working Americans is a caregiver of an older adult.
- Ninety-five percent of those over the age of 45 has at least one surviving parent.
- The average corporation loses $2,500 for each care-giving employee a year due to absenteeism caused by care-giving needs.

"For instance, a company that has 1,000 employees, 250 of those would be caregivers," he said.

"But only 3 percent of major corporations have care-giving programs in place.

"We are just now beginning to address aging in this country. Parent care is becoming as much an issue as child care," he said.

Asten Inc., Edwards said, "will provide a service to reach millions of people. We will then be able to position ourselves to make money to provide more opportunities for community and senior services or other non-profit groups around the country."

Added Ms. Dunbar: "With the show, what we're really doing is not only presenting issues. We're trying to give answers and the resources for those issues."

As Asten's success continues to grow, Edwards and Ms. Dunbar said they would target markets in New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Miami, Kansas City, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., and Houston, as well as smaller markets around the country.

During their years with CSS, Edwards was executive director and founder of the organization; Ms. Dunbar served as director of community awareness.

INCREASE: Area dealers denounce fee increase trafficking patterns in major cities.

Although these hobby dealers do not sell as many guns as other dealers, they are required to fill out all forms and questionnaires when selling a gun, and must comply with all other laws involving gun sales, according to area gun dealers.

The $600 fee will drive out most of these marginal gun dealers, but will create more private-citizen sales where no paperwork is maintained or filed with the federal government, according to Tommy "Hoss Fly" Atchison, a Midland firearms retailer.

Furthermore, the fee increase will do nothing to halt the flow of guns through blackmarket-type operations, selling stolen or undocumented guns to minors and criminals, Atchison said.

The National Rifle Association and other hunting and shooting rights groups have denounced the plan as an unwarranted assault on law-abiding citizens.

"Like a bootlegger will sell alcohol to a minor or anyone, they will sell a gun to anyone. A licensed dealer will not," said Nancy Pace, who along with her husband, Gene, owns The Sports Armory at 2515 W. Industrial Ave.

Most dealers agree that the $66 fee was too low, but the proposed increase is too high. "If they'd raise it to $200, that'd be all right," Mrs. Pace said.

This is yet another example of legislators with no practical knowledge of firearms making firearm laws, Atchison said.

Mrs. Pace cited the "Black Talon" case where legislators expressed horror over Winchester's new Black Talon bullets.

The bullets, however, are merely a better-engineered version of the common hollow-point bullet, a Midland shooting enthusiast said.

Law enforcement agencies use hollow point bullets because of their property of "mushrooming" when striking, according to Midland gun experts. This mushrooming reduces the risk of a bullet penetrating a criminal and striking an innocent person. The chance of ricochet injuries are diminished as well.

"Winchester did a good job of hyping that ammunition," Gene Pace said. The manufacturer touted the bullet as a good law-enforcement round because of its lethality. Lawmakers used the same advertisements in their anti-gun arguments.

"They're using it as a vehicle to turn people away from guns," Mrs. Pace said.

Raising the fees to reduce the number of licensed firearm dealers is unnecessary, Atchison said. "They have enough laws already. If they wanted to, they could take 60 to 80 percent of gun dealers out of business today," he said.

The hobby dealer selling guns out of his home is often breaking zoning ordinances and often not paying sales taxes, Atchison said. These laws could be enforced to force the casual dealers out of business, he said.

The recent increase in anti-gun legislation appears to be having an effect opposite of what lawmakers intend. All gun dealers interviewed say gun trade is booming.

But Atchison views this growing number of sales warily. "A lot of people are buying guns who don't know anything about guns. They don't know gun safety. They don't even know how to load a gun.

"Anybody and everybody should know gun safety, it's the first thing kids should be taught," he said.

Other proposed gun legislation now circulating through Congress includes banning weapons with greater than 10-round capacity, and any shotgun with greater than five-round capacity. Also, increasing taxes on handguns 200 percent, a five-fold increase on ammunition tax.

IMPACT: Agriculture is foundation for basics of life

tion, financing and production."

Income from American agriculture represents 16 percent of the Gross National Product (GNP), which in 1992 was $6,000 billion.

"Agriculture provides one out of every six jobs in the United States and generates an estimated 21 million jobs, or about 17 percent of the entire U.S. workforce," he said.

Approximately 90 percent of those jobs are off the farm and ranch and would include jobs in feed stores, clothing and grocery stores, and farm-and-ranch hardware, implement stores and factories.

There are an estimated 341,480 national jobs that are created through the cotton industry, which generates revenues of more than $28.3 billion annually, Sorley said.

In Texas alone, the cotton industry creates approximately 66,000 jobs and generates $4.4 billion in revenue.

"There are so many people dependent on cotton to make their living," Sorley said.

He said agriculture "works hand in hand with many businesses," such as clothing and groceries stores, and with the petroleum industry.

"Agriculture is one of the, if not the, largest consumer of oil and gas as well as byproducts of the oil-and-gas industry."

Due to the impact of agriculture on the economy and on the quality of life, Sorley said the United States cannot be allowed to "become dependent on imports of food and fiber from other countries."

The American family on the average spends far less on food than families in other countries, such as Russia, Mexico, China and India.

"If we allow ourselves to become solely dependent on imports of food and fiber, we could be in the same situation as China or India," in which the cost of food constitutes about 50 percent of a family's income, he said.

"Put this on top of 35 percent of your income going to taxes and we in the United States would not have much left to live on," he said.

"The last three things that we are going to do without if times get hard are a roof over our head; fiber, such as wool, mohair and cotton, for clothing; and the last thing that you are going to absolutely do without is food. Everything else can fly into the wild, blue yonder," he said.

"When you're out of food, when you're out of fiber, the party is over. Turn out the lights. The fat lady is singing."

OWN: 56.5 percent of Texans keep guns in homes

(From 1A)

"What I continue to see in these poll data not only from Texas but nationwide is almost universal public perception that the justice system is incapable of protecting them," said Timothy Flanagan, director of the school's Criminal Justice Center.

"That cuts across all elements of the justice system — police, courts, prison, parole. Its collective security measures are incapable of keeping people safe, and much of what we're seeing in the rise in gun ownership is a consequence."

Flanagan said it was partially correct to view the findings as an indication that Texans were more paranoid about crime.

"We're inundated daily with reports of ever more frequent gratuitous and unpredictable violence in our cities," he said. "Decisions people used to be able to make 10 years ago to keep themselves safe — for example, avoid certain areas and avoid certain places after dark — that no longer seems to matter."

He pointed to a fatal shooting in Houston the week after Christmas in which a woman was gunned down and her husband seriously wounded during a robbery attempt at a crowded restaurant at lunch time.

"It sends a message that no place is really safe, that even people out to lunch can't be assured of safety," Flanagan said.

Sam Houston University researchers mailed questionnaires to some 2,000 Texans selected from Department of Public Safety driver's license and identification rolls. Nearly 60 percent were returned, a figure considered statistically significant and accurate for the state, Ms. Farnworth said.

Guns ranked third as household security measures. The top two security devices were door bolts, installed by 71 percent of the respondents, and outside security lights, cited by 61 percent. Other measures mentioned were extra locks, window guards, guard dogs or burglar alarms.

About half — 49 percen — believed crime was worse now than three years ago. Of those living in cities of more than 50,000 population, 54 percent believed crime was worse.

Only 7 percent expected the crime problem to decline in the next three years while 51 percent believed it would get worse.

Illegal drugs was cited as the worst problem, named by 38 percent of those polled. Burglary was the next most serious crime problem, cited by 33 percent, followed by robbery or assault by 9 percent and vandalism by 7 percent. Two percent blamed gang activity for crimes, a low figure that somewhat surprised researchers.

"But keep in mind that for most people in the state, gang violence remains a mostly urban problem, and even in urban areas it is isolated to certain areas," Flanagan said.

LURE: Legal gambling spawns 'epidemic' of betting by youths

(From 1A)

States. Lotteries are operating in 37 states and the District of Columbia. Greyhound tracks have sprung up from Texas to Wisconsin. And in the past five years alone, casinos have spread from Nevada and New Jersey to 15 additional states.

The amount of money wagered legally in the United States has also grown dramatically — to an estimated $330 billion in 1992, an increase of 162 percent in a decade, according to Gaming & Wagering Business Magazine.

While gambling becomes more accepted and accessible, experts say little is being done to warn teens about its hidden perils. Some researchers say youth run a greater risk of getting hooked than adults.

"Some of these kids are going to wind up having disastrous gambling careers, and it's preventable," said Henry Lesieur, chair of the criminal justice department at Illinois State University. He has spent two decades studying gambling's effects.

Statistics are scarce, but experts say anecdotal evidence is building that more teens are becoming problem gamblers. Valerie Lorenz, executive director of the Compulsive Gambling Center in Baltimore, has seen a regular increase in the number of calls from teens since its national hotline started in 1987.

"The percentages are still small, but the point is, five years ago they weren't calling at all," she said.

Jacobs says the rate of problem gambling among youths who gamble is at least 10 percent, twice that of adults.

"We're finding that the very young are far more affected by the changing scene of gambling in America than are the adults," he said. "As you come down the age brackets, we're finding more and more problem gambling among the younger and younger."

Minnesota is a prime example of the growth of legal gambling. In the past three years, the state began a lottery and signed compacts with Indian tribes that opened the way for video poker, slot machines and blackjack. Today, 16 Las Vegas-style casinos dot the state, and spending on legal gambling has more than doubled — from $1.6 billion in 1990 to $3.4 billion in 1992.

Although gamblers must be 18 years or older to enter most Minnesota casinos, some teens boast about the ease with which their friends have been able to sneak past security guards.

"Just go with a friend who's old enough, and walk in while he's showing his ID to the guard," said one teen who was playing blackjack — and losing — recently at Treasure Island Casino in Red Wing.

Specialists say the constant barrage of casino advertisements has seduced teens into thinking gambling is as harmless as a Nintendo game.

Billboards promoting Treasure Island boast of "more ways to play and win." Television ads for Mystic Lake casino in the Minneapolis suburb of Prior Lake tell viewers, "You're a lot luckier than you think." The Minnesota Twins even had a tie-in with casino gambling last season, promising a chosen few a free turn at Treasure Island's "cash tornado" if the home team won.

And because gambling has all the properties teens love — instant gratification, blood-pumping excitement — some experts believe they're more liable to get into trouble once they start.

"Teens who win just get an enormous ego boost from gambling," Lesieur said. "A teen can hope to work at maybe $4.50 an hour if they're lucky. Here, they gamble and can win $80 on a pulltab. That's big money."

Faherty knows that lure all too well. While attending college at the University of Minnesota-Duluth, it drew him regularly to the Fond du Luth Casino, just a few miles from his dormitory.

During his sophomore year, the same year he started supporting himself, live blackjack made its debut at the casino — and his gambling habit spiraled out of control.

"Now I'm thinking, 'I can turn $20 into $100,'" he recalled. "It got to the point where I would take an entire paycheck with me and lose it and fall behind on rent. The cards just weren't falling."

There was no catching up. By the summer of 1992, he was broke and constantly lying to his parents. One fateful weekend, he decided to win some of it back during a road trip with friends. But he ended up losing so much money at a Hudson, Wis., dog track that his rent check and several others would have bounced if his parents hadn't bailed him out.

"Without their understanding and help, there's no way I would have survived," he said.

Gambling counselors cite common examples of high schools holding mock casino nights to keep students from drinking, and lottery tickets stuffed in youngsters' Christmas stockings.

"Adults don't realize it's any more dangerous than spitting on the sidewalk," said Betty George, executive director of the Minnesota Council on Compulsive Gambling.

A Minnesota study has found that young gamblers are increasingly raising their sights — from sports and other informal betting to lottery playing, scratch tabs and video gambling.

"It's a trend in an uncomfortable direction. . . . There's the lure of big-time winning," said Ken Winters, who conducted the study for the University of Minnesota's Center for Adolescent Substance Abuse.

Workers pump oil out of crippled barge; spill blackens beaches

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Hundreds of workers Saturday night began pumping oil out of a barge that ran aground and broke open, fouling beaches and leaving a nauseating odor in the heart of San Juan's tourist district.

Although the leak continued, it was slower than in the early stage of the wreck Friday morning, when the barge hemorrhaged about 750,000 gallons of heating oil — half its cargo of fuel. The barge went aground on a reef about 300 yards offshore as it was being towed to the Caribbean island of Antigua.

"There's a danger of it breaking up. There is no two ways about it," said Coast Guard Cmdr. Jerzy Kichner, leader of the Coast Guard strike team sent in to drain the crippled vessel.

By Saturday afternoon, the spill stretched over 20 square miles of ocean and sullied three miles of beaches lined by high-rise hotels and apartment buildings.

With the tourism season at its peak, hoteliers scrambled to placate inconvenienced vacationers, busing tourists to other beaches on the island and feeding them free lunches.

Laboring late into the night with the help of floodlights, workers pumped oil from the crippled barge onto another barge equipped with rubber containment devices, said Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Jerry Snider.

Up to 500 people, including Coast Guard personnel and workers from private companies, were working on the pumping and containment effort. Officials hope to complete the pumping by Monday.

The workers used pumps, engines, rubber bladders, hoses and other salvage equipment. Divers assessed the damage from below, while helicopters roared overhead.

Rear Adm. William Leahy, commander of the 7th Coast Guard District which includes Puerto Rico, said pumping out all the oil would take about 36 hours.

"Our plan is to remove all of the oil and leave the barge there with just water in it," he said. "At least the source of pollution will have been stopped."

He said the owner of the barge would be responsible for its safe removal.

Gov. Pedro Rossello said that Puerto Rico, a U.S. commonwealth, was planning to sue the owners for an unspecified amount, seeking compensation for economic and environmental damage.

There was conflicting information about who owned the barge, the Morris J. Berman.

U.S. Coast Guard Cmdr. Robert Ross said the barge was owned by New England Marine Services.

But Bill Preusch, a manager at Standard Tank of Bayonne, N.J., said the barge belonged to his firm but had been chartered to another company, which he refused to identify.

Meanwhile, crews were working to remove oil from the water in a nearby inlet with booms, suction vacuums and skimmers.

San Juan grappled with the economic impact as hotels were forced to close their beaches. Those worst affected, including the Caribe Hilton, the Radisson Normandie, the Condado Plaza and the Regency, were also forced to close their swimming pools, open-air bars and restaurants, and curtail activities because of the fumes.

"If I wasn't leaving today I would move out," said Laurie Wiland of Orange, Conn. "Because of the smell! And you can't use the facilities, no gym, no tennis, no swimming pools. They're all closed off. The ai makes you nauseous."

Initial reports said a line broke between the barge and its towboat. The Coast Guard, the FBI, the Environmental Protection Agency and Puerto Rican government officials all launched investigations.

Serbs ignore own cease-fire, bombard city

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs sent out a statement declaring a cease-fire in Sarajevo, then continued to send an intense barrage into the besieged Bosnian capital Saturday.

The shelling closed Sarajevo's airport, blocking vital aid flights and prevented Bosnia's president from leaving for peace talks in Germany.

A fax sent overnight to Western news agencies from the Bosnian Serb military information center said the Serbs had "proclaimed a unilateral cease-fire at the Sarajevo war section."

The announcement followed U.N. Security Council condemnation of a weeklong Serb bombardment of Sarajevo.

Although shelling eased somewhat Friday and Saturday, the boom of artillery and crackle of small-arms fire continued to echo across the city.

The city morgue reported at least five dead Saturday. A general alert, warning people to stay indoors, remained in effect.

In other fighting Saturday, 15 Serb soldiers were killed by Muslim-led government forces who repulsed a Serb tank and infantry attack near Lipovac in northern Bosnia, according to Sarajevo radio.

Two people were killed in the outskirts of Srebrenica in eastern Bosnia by Serb artillery fire, said the radio, monitored by the BBC in London.

It also said a child was killed and two other people seriously wounded by Croat shelling near Mostar in southwest Bosnia.

The closure of Sarajevo's airport kept Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, from flying to Bonn, Germany, for planned talks with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman.

They were to discuss ways to curb fighting between Bosnian Croats and Muslims in central Bosnia and proposals for a settlement with Serbs at full peace talks Jan. 18 in Geneva.

John Mills, a spokesman for the Geneva talks, said Izetbegovic was expected to travel to Germany today.

Marines shoot orderly thought to be armed

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. Marines shot and seriously wounded a medical orderly in what Somali hospital officials said was an unprovoked attack on the man as he prepared for bed.

U.S. Army spokesman Col. Steve Rausch said that the Marines, stationed on the grounds of the U.N. compound, saw a man placing a machine gun on the roof of a building Friday night at Benadir Hospital.

The Marines fired first, which is permitted under U.N. rules if the man is armed with a machine gun, rocket-propelled grenade or other heavy weapon, Rausch said.

Witnesses, however, said Saturday the orderly, 23-year-old Omar Abdulle Isaq, was unarmed and was preparing his bedding on the roof, a common sleeping spot for hospital staff.

"Omar was going to sleep," said head nurse Bashir Sheikh Abdullahi, the other person on the roof at the time. "He was making his bed."

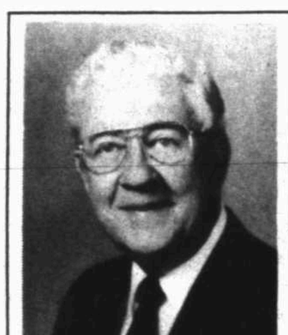

"Even the doctors could have been one of the victims," said Dr. Abdi Rizek, the hospital director. "I myself have slept there."

The shot tore through Isaq's upper arm, staining his bedsheets and pillow with blood and leaving chunks of bone on the hospital roof.

It wasn't possible to verify whether a weapon had been present when the shooting took place. Isaq was in surgery Saturday afternoon and couldn't be interviewed.

School to host 6 environmental health seminars

Staff Report

Six seminars on environmental health and safety are being offered by Midland College this spring in cooperation with the UTPB Small Business Development Center, the Petroleum Industry Alliance, the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, and Eco-logical Environmental Services.

The first seminar begins Jan. 18. All seminars are being held at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, located at the intersection of Highway 191 and FM 1788. Participants must pre-register and pay fees at least two days prior to the beginning of each seminar. Registration and fee collection are being handled by the Midland College Continuing Education Department, located in college Administration Building. Phone is 685-4518.

Safety and Health Decision Making for Managers and Supervisors begins Jan. 18 and ends Jan. 21. The 32-hour seminar is for personnel responsible for developing, implementing, or managing safety programs. It is an advanced courses designed to complement other basic safety courses and provides a forum for information and idea exchanges on safety topics relative to 29 CFR 1910.120 and related regulations. Among the topics to be covered, in addition to 29 CFR 1910.120, are: personnel protective equipment programs, confined space entry, air surveillance, medical monitoring, and information sources and utilization. Course fee is $375.

A seminar on First Responder Awareness is eight hours in length and is being offered on Feb. 8. Course fee is $145.

On Feb. 9-10 is a First Responder Operations Level seminar which will cost $145.

A 24-hour training course on Hazardous Material and Hazardous Waste is scheduled for March 7-9. Cost will be $450.

The final spring seminar is March 7-11 and is a 40-hour program on Hazardous Waste Operations and Emergency Response. Cost is $550.

Midland College cites short courses

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 15 short courses beginning the week of Jan. 17. Courses are as follows:

"Air Conditioning/Controls" will be taught by Wayne Young on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-8 p.m., Jan. 18 through May 12. The student will begin with basic electricity and progress through the study of transformers, power distributions, electric motors, motor controls, starters, relays, contractors, capacitors, and various control circuitry. The student will learn the operation of various electrical meters and test equipment. Course fee is $119.

"Computer Applications" will be taught in three different sections as follows: Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:30-6:50 p.m., Jan. 18 through May 12; Mondays and Wednesdays from 7-8:20 p.m., Jan. 19 through May 11; or on Mondays and Wednesdays from 8:30-9:50 p.m., Jan. 19 through May 11. The student will use commercial software packages such as word processing, electronic spreadsheets, and database managers to solve consumer and business-oriented problems without writing programs. President buries his mother; thousands of mourners pay respects

By James Jefferson
Associated Press Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — President Clinton bid farewell to his mother for the last time Saturday at a funeral where she was remembered as "a celebration on the way to heaven."

Thousands of mourners, from neighbors and friends to top administration officials and entertainer Barbra Streisand, paid their respects to Virginia Kelley. Clinton's 70-year-old mother died in her sleep Thursday after a battle with breast cancer.

The service was held just hours before Clinton was to leave on a scheduled nine-day European trip.

At the end of the day, Clinton held back tears as he said goodbye to his stepfather, Richard Kelley amd his half-brother, Roger, who held a single yellow rose and wept openly.

The president gave his stepfather a bear hug before departing for Washington aboard a presidential aircraft.

All Hot Springs residents were invited to what the Rev. John P. Miles, the Clinton family pastor, called a "celebration of Virginia's life."

Hundreds waited outside the city convention center in 18-degree weather for an hour before the doors opened at 7:30 m. local time. Nearly all 3,000 seats inside were filled by the time the service began at 9:25, about 25 minutes late.

"I wanted to get a glimpse of Mr. Clinton," said Dorothy Peoples Bennett, a Hot Springs native who now lives in San Diego. "I'm proud that he's our president, and that she (Mrs. Kelley) had a great influence on his life."

Clinton, his wife, Hillary, and their daughter, Chelsea, sat somberly in the front row as soloists sang hymns, including "His Eye Is On The Sparrow" and "Just A Closer Walk With Thee." Clinton did not speak.

Miles, pastor of St. James Methodist Church of Little Rock, called Virginia Kelley "an American original" during a light-hearted eulogy.

Miles recalled how Mrs. Kelley said she once told her husband, "There's no telling what I could have accomplished in life if I had just been born with eyebrows."

Mrs. Kelley stood out with her arched, pencilled-in eyebrows.

"She was filled with the essence of life. She was a celebration on the way to heaven," he said. "She loved her sons unconditionally. And she needed to at times. Both of them."

Mrs. Kelley had two sons — the president, 47, and Roger Clinton, 37, who wore a red jacket to the service.

Miles also praised Mrs. Kelley for bravely facing her illness and other adversities throughout her life.

"She faced one tragedy after another. But she was like a rubber ball. The harder life put her down, the higher she bounced," he said.

After the hourlong service, Clinton left the auditorium with his half-brother and stepfather. The president and his family joined a 28-car funeral procession for the 90-mile drive to his birthplace in Hope, Ark., for burial.

O'Leary wants to end secrecy at Energy Department

By William J. Broad
New York Times Writer

The Energy Department, the nation's keeper of nuclear arms and enigmas, is seeking to revamp or dismantle the legal machinery that has amassed at least 32 million pages of secrets, a stack that would rise three miles high.

Energy Secretary Hazel R. O'Leary says the legal framework behind decades of nuclear secrecy, the Atomic Energy Act, which was enacted in 1946 and revised in 1954, is dangerously obsolete and should be overhauled.

"It's clear to us, with the Cold War behind us, that the act needs revision," she told reporters last month. While its authority was once needed in a "struggle for survival" against Soviet communism, Mrs. O'Leary said, the power it gave officials has also seriously damaged American life and institutions, chiefly by undermining trust in government.

One significant change being debated would scrap a practice of automatically labeling all data on certain subjects as classified. The system is known as born secret or born classified.

In interviews last week, Department officials said a wide range of options for overhauling the law had been assembled in a draft study, "The Atomic Energy Act in the Post-Cold War Era: Restoring the Balance."

If many of its 18 recommendations are authorized, they said, a new legal framework for nuclear topics would be built that was based on a federal commitment to openness rather than secrecy.

The Energy officials added that the changes could also save hundreds of millions of dollars in costly but needless security precautions. Any change in the law would require congressional action, which is likely to take many months or possibly years given the sensitivity and complexity of the issues.

Mrs. O'Leary described the initiative on Dec. 7, but the announcement was eclipsed by other departmental actions that day.

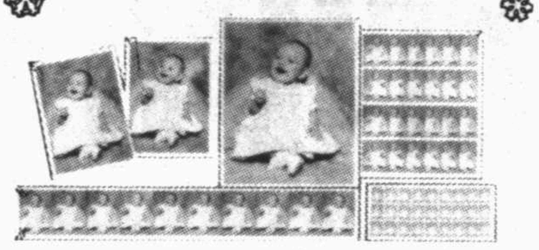

While ordering hoards of secret documents to be made public, the department disclosed that it had conducted 204 clandestine nuclear blasts, that it had more stockpiles of weapons-grade plutonium than previously thought and that it had conducted some 800 radiation tests on human subjects over the decades.

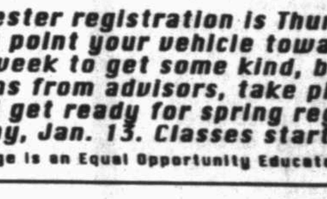

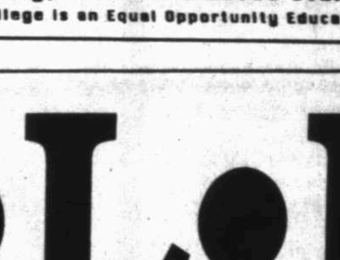

The classification process mandated by the law, Mrs. O'Leary said, was currently saddling the Energy Department with at least 32 million pages of secret papers.

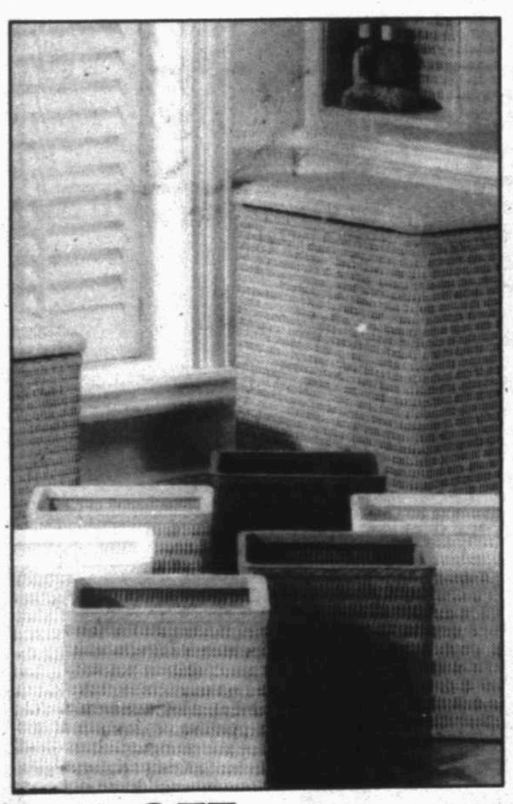

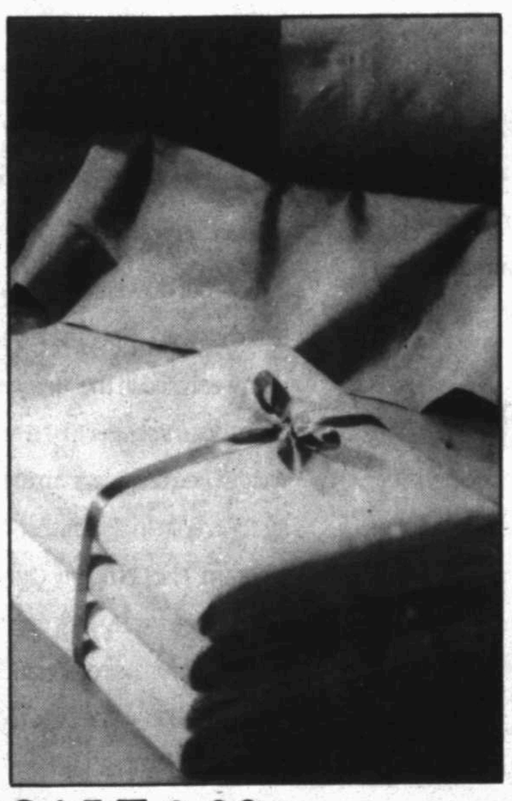

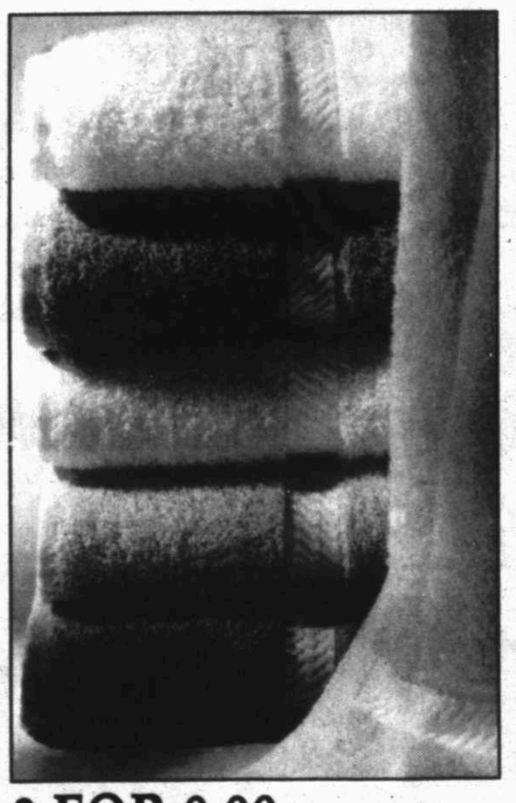

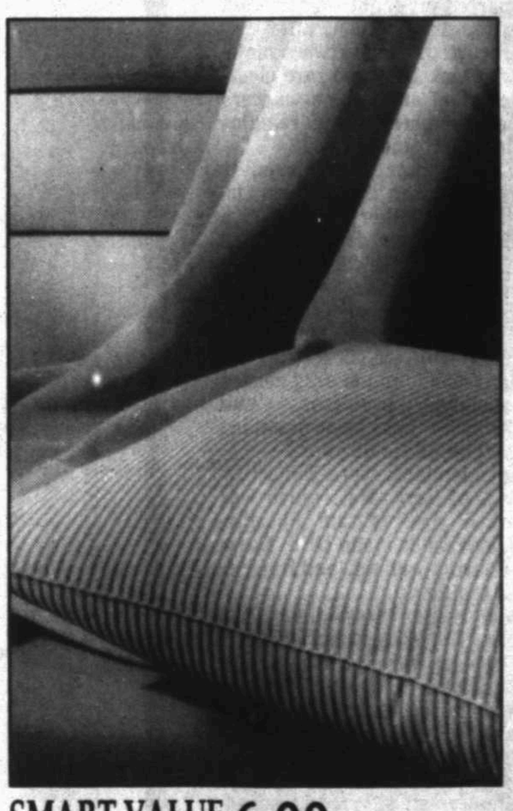

"To put that in some perspective, it's 32 Washington Monuments," she said. "It's three miles worth of data." She has ordered a sweeping review of the basis on which such papers had been classified to speed their release.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — James McDougal — the reclusive, key figure in an Arkansas real estate partnership that has embroiled President and Mrs. Clinton in controversy — has emerged to emphatically defend his business dealings, and says they "in no way benefited" the first family.

During a 2½-hour interview Friday with The Associated Press, McDougal supported the Clintons' position that they did nothing wrong. The real estate partnership has come under federal investigation, and has drawn Republican fire.

McDougal told AP that he believes the Clintons may have lost far less on the Whitewater Development Corp. partnership with him than the $68,900 the presidential campaign claimed in 1992.

"My records don't reflect they did, although I don't wish to get into an argument about that," he said. Later he acknowledged that his "records" were his memory.

Whitewater has become a focus of the federal investigation into McDougal's Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan. Under a negotiated subpoena, the White House last week began turning over the Clintons' Whitewater records.

Senior presidential adviser George Stephanopoulos defended the Clintons late Saturday on CNN's talk show The Capital Gang, saying Republicans were seeking to score partisan points even though there was no evidence of wrongdoing.

"This is about political payback. This is about politics," Stephanopoulos said. "Even though there is no evidence of wrongdoing, the political attacks are still going on."

Among things federal investigators are reportedly trying to determine is whether S&L funds were used during a fund-raiser to pay off Clinton's gubernatorial campaign debts and whether Whitewater funds were used to pay off personal debts of the Clintons.

McDougal said no Whitewater funds were used for that purpose. He said it would have been impossible to divert S&L funds to pay off the campaign debts without them showing up on the books.

"The Clintons in no way benefited from my handling of Madison Guaranty," McDougal said.

He also said he gained nothing from them. "I think that if you will search with every investigator and every lie detector or whatever that you'll find that what I got from my entire association with him is absolutely nothing," McDougal said.

McDougal, 53, bald and rosy cheeked, was dressed casually in a green plaid sports shirt and slacks. During the interview, his mood varied from a loud defender of his honor to a fatigued man trying to gather his strength.

McDougal, who now lives on $723-a-month in Social Security disability, said the allegations of mismanagement at his S&L are being recycled from a 1990 federal fraud trial in which McDougal was acquitted.

His relationship with the Clintons dates back to 1968, when they were campaign volunteers for the re-election campaign of Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark. McDougal, six years older than Clinton, assigned Clinton to be Fulbright's driver.

He said he has not talked with Clinton since 1990, when Clinton called him after his acquittal.

McDougal confirmed that in the mid-1980s he authorized a $2,000-a-month retainer for the law firm that employed Hillary Rodham Clinton, but said he saw it as "giving a friend's wife some work."

Asked if that might be inappropriate, he replied: "I'm not teaching ethics this semester."

McDougal called the investigations of his business dealings a Republican "witch hunt," as much against him as against the Clintons.

The Clintons first entered into the Whitewater venture with McDougal and his wife in the late 1970s. It was a 50-50 partnership. During the presidential election, an accounting firm hired by the Clinton campaign to review the Whitewater deal concluded the Clintons lost at least $68,900 on the 230-acre real estate development in the Ozark Mountains of northern Arkansas.

McDougal said he only could recall the Clintons investing about $9,000.

Family survives plane crash

GAHANNA, Ohio (AP) — A family of three walked away with only minor injuries from a fiery plane crash that killed the other five people on board.

The British Aerospace Jetstream 41, which can carry up to 29 passengers, crashed Friday night about a half-mile from the Port Columbus International Airport, where it was preparing to land. The plane was coming from Dulles International Airport near Washington, D.C.

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating Saturday. The FAA recovered the flight recorder from the wreckage of United Express flight 6291, but would not comment as they left the crash site.

All three crew members and two passengers were killed.

The survivors were 5-year-old Yee Sun Lai; her father, Ki Ping Lai, 45; and her mother, Siew Chew Ling, 43, all from Taiwan, said Mark Hopkins, spokesman at Mount Carmel East Hospital in Columbus. All were treated for minor injuries and released early Saturday.

DES daughters win $42 million in case against drug companies

NEW YORK (AP) — A jury awarded $42.3 million to 11 women whose mothers took DES during pregnancy, including eight who were the first to go to trial claiming the drug caused reproductive problems not related to cancer.

"It's a great victory for the women's health movement," said Sybil Shainwald, the lawyer who filed the lawsuits against three small drug companies.

A lawyer for one of the companies said that because of the way the judge set up the trial, jurors haven't determined whether DES caused the women's health problems or whether the three companies were liable. He said he would fight the damage awards.

But a lawyer for the plaintiffs, Leroy Hersh, said the judge made the jury rule on damages first "because the rest is practically a given." Judges have handled asbestos trials the same way, he said.

The state jury Friday awarded one cancer sufferer $12 million and two others $10 million each. Damages for women with reproductive problems other than cancer ranged up to $2 million.

Among the plaintiffs was Deborah Shaffer, an Academy Award-winning documentary maker ("Witness to War: Dr. Charlie Clements," 1985), who is infertile and was awarded $2 million.

DES, or diethylstilbestrol, is a synthetic hormone manufactured by an estimated 300 drug companies. It was prescribed to 5 million pregnant women between 1947 and 1971 in an effort to reduce miscarriages.

The Food and Drug Administration barred pregnant women from using the drug in 1971, after doctors reported a link between mothers who took DES and rare clear-cell cervical and vaginal cancers in their daughters. DES remains available for other uses.

DES also has been linked to breast cancer in the mothers, infertility and other reproductive problems in their daughters, and infertility and possibly testicular cancers in their sons.

A handful of the cancer sufferers have won jury awards. But the latest case was the first trial for women who claim the drug caused reproductive problems, said Hersh, who has been handling DES litigation for 15 years.

The defendants were Emons Industries of York, Pa., which was known as Amfre-Grant Pharmaceutical when it made DES; Carnrick Pharmaceutical; and Boyle & Co. of California.

Trial Judge Ira Gammerman split the trial into two parts. In the first part, he ordered the jury to assume that DES caused the plaintiff's health problems, and to determine what damages they deserve. Lawyers on both sides objected.

Gammerman planned to schedule a trial next month on whether DES caused the problems and whether the three companies are liable.

Grand jury to decide if charges will be filed in Scotsman's killing

HOUSTON (AP) — A grand jury ultimately will decide whether to charge a homeowner who killed a Scottish businessman because he feared the man was trying to break into his house.

Andrew Peter DeVries, 28, of Aberdeen, Scotland, was shot to death as he shouted and pounded on the back door of Jeffrey Agee's home early Friday morning.

Agee, 40, told police he thought the man was trying to break into his house when he fired his gun through the back door, but DeVries and his companion were just lost and going door to door seeking assistance.

Police have not filed any charges against Agee, but a grand jury will hear evidence in the case and decide whether to issue any indictments. Some legal experts say an indictment is unlikely because Texas law is rather generous when it comes to people who are trying to protect their property.

"In the homeowner's mind, it was a home invasion," said Larry Hoffmaster, a police investigator at the scene.

Agee, 40, has declined to talk about the incident, saying only, "This have been very upsetting."

Neighbors in the upscale west Houston neighborhood where the shooting occurred expressed their sympathies for both DeVries and Agee.

"I'm upset for the victim and upset for the guy who shot him," said one woman who called police Friday morning after the man rang her doorbell about 10 times.

"The circumstances with all the crime we have, we have to go to such measures to protect ourselves. I'm sorry innocent people got hurt, but I also can't blame (Agee) at all because what can you do?"

Murder trial of Branch Davidian followers to begin in San Antonio

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — The confrontation that ended last spring in hellish fire and the deaths of religious leader David Koresh and more than 80 Branch Davidian devotees moves Monday into a federal courtroom.

Eleven surviving followers are left to defend themselves against murder charges stemming from the botched raid on the Waco compound by agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms last Feb. 28. Gunfire killed four ATF agents and six Branch Davidians.

A 12th follower charged with the others last August in a 10-count indictment pleaded guilty to a lesser charge in exchange for her testimony in the murder trial.

Prosecutors will try to prove the defendants murdered the agents as part of a conspiracy to fulfill Koresh's doomsday vision that the world would end after a cataclysmic clash with the government.

Defense attorneys intend to show the government was to blame for the gun battle by going ahead with a poorly planned raid even after losing the element of surprise. The defense plans to call U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno, former ATF director Stephen Higgins and former FBI Director Williams Sessions as witnesses.

What remains to be seen is how the legacy of Koresh, the 33-year-old rock singer-turned-prophet, will influence the trial, which is expected to last two months.

Judge orders abandoned infant's return to mother

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin woman who gave her 2-week-old son, along with some diapers and infant formula, to an animal control officer on New Year's Day has been reunited with her child.

State District Judge Scott McCown ordered the infant returned to his 25-year-old mother, Terri DeGraffe, on Friday. He also ordered intensive in-home counseling for the woman and the child's father and county-paid care on a half-day basis.

Ms. DeGraffe, who was not charged with a crime, handed the baby to an animal control officer at a gas station on Jan. 1, saying she could no longer care for him, police said.

She asked the officer to make sure the baby was adopted, and she provided a supply of diapers and baby formula, according to Austin police Sgt. John Hardesty.

Ms. DeGraffe has three older children who are well cared for, said officials with the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

In a hearing before McCown on Friday, authorities noted that a protective order was issued against the child's father in March, prohibiting him contacting the mother.

Since then, there have been numerous family violence calls to their residence, police said.

Ms. DeGraffe said she and her husband have fought frequently over finances and other domestic matters.

She said that said when she became pregnant, her husband was pleased. She, however, was unhappy because she didn't want to rear another child. Ms. DeGraffe said she didn't believe in abortion, so she carried the child.

McCown said, "It seems to me that you were in a very stressful situation in the immediate midst of family violence with your husband, and in frustration you turned to this animal control officer."

Dallas County child dies of meningitis

DALLAS (AP) — A rare and serious form of meningitis has hit two Dallas County children, killing a 10-year-old Mesquite girl and hospitalizing a 6-month-old Dallas girl, public health officials say.

The two cases are not related but are causing concern among doctors because of a rash of recent cases in East Texas, where two adults and three children contracted the disease. None of those cases were fatal.

About 100 Texans catch the disease each year, said Dr. Kate Hendricks of the Texas Department of Health in Austin.

Meningitis is caused by bacteria that invade the bloodstream and nervous system, causing the membranes around the brain and spinal cord to swell.

The disease can be treated with antibiotics, but it's fatal in about 10 percent of the cases. Children are more susceptible because adults tend to become immune over the years.

The Dallas cases are more serious because the two girls had meningococcal meningitis, a strain that is contagious and can be deadly within hours or days of being contracted.

"This is more worrisome because it can be rapidly fatal," said county epidemiologist Charles Haley.

Ten-year-old Lauren McDonald of Mesquite died Thursday evening.

A 6-month-old Dallas girl, whose name was not released, was in critical condition Friday at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Third trial to begin in 16-year-old unresolved murder case

DALLAS (AP) — Accused killer Kerry Cook will be returning to the courtroom, trying to prove for the third time that he didn't murder Linda Jo Edwards more than 16 years ago.

Cook, now 37, was convicted of the June 1977 slaying the following year. He spent 13 years on death row, finally getting the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to order a new trial. The appellate court ruled that prosecutors had used illegally obtained evidence in the punishment phase of the trial.

His second chance for freedom ended last year in a deadlocked jury.

Lawyers hoping to resolve the case began jury selection Friday. They expect to take a couple of weeks before finding a 12-person panel from 208 prospective jurors. Only 19 people were eliminated Friday.

Cook, who has been incarcerated since 1977, is being held without bail.

On Monday, Judge Robert Jones is expected to rule on the Smith County prosecutors' request to move and delay the trial yet again. The crime and first trial were in Tyler, but too much media attention led a judge to move the 1992 retrial 180 miles southwest to Georgetown.

David Dobbs, Smith County's chief felony prosecutor, and Houston lawyer Paul Nugent, who represents Cook, both have declined to discuss their trial strategies.

However, the list of witnesses who may be subpoenaed by the state indicate that prosecutors will stray little from the script of the 1992 retrial.

The state's theory in 1992 was that Cook was an unemployed hustler who had window-peeped on Ms. Edwards and then was driven to kill her after watching a movie in which a young man kills his mother's lover.

The defense argued that someone else killed Ms. Edwards, pointing suspicion at James Mayfield, her married lover and former boss, and his teen-age daughter, who had threatened to kill Ms. Edwards.

Mayfield and Ms. Edwards, a 21-year-old secretary at what is now the University of Texas-Tyler, had an 18-month affair that had ended in May 1977.

Following the breakup, Ms. Edwards tried to kill herself and later moved into the apartment of her former co-worker, Paula Rudolph.

On the night of the slaying, Ms. Rudolph entered the apartment and caught a glimpse of a man standing in the doorway of Ms. Edwards' room. Ms. Rudolph originally told police and co-workers she thought it was Mayfield, her boss for the past two years.

The next morning, June 10, Ms. Edwards' dead body was found beaten in the head with a 5-pound plaster statue and stabbed and cut repeatedly with scissors and a 10-inch vegetable knife in the face, neck, back, breast and lower abdomen.

Mayfield, who was seen with Ms. Edwards at least four times on the day of the murder, was questioned by police the next day. He told them he was at home with his wife and daughter.

His wife never was questioned and only later was it learned that his 16-year-old daughter, Luella, repeatedly had threatened to kill Ms. Edwards because of the affair. The threats were made less than a week before the murder, according to a police report.

"I told her to stay away from my father or I would kill her," the daughter testified in 1992. She said she wasn't serious, however.

Cook became the prime suspect by chance after officers learned he had been living in Ms. Edwards' apartment complex. His fingerprints matched those found on a sliding patio door, although he looked nothing like the man Ms. Rudolph described and he was wearing different clothing.

But Ms. Rudolph testified at both trials that she saw Cook.

A big factor in the 1978 conviction was the sworn testimony of a Tyler policeman who said the fingerprint that matched Cook's was left at the time of the murder.

That officer has since admitted his claim has no scientific basis, and fingerprint experts called by both the prosecution and defense said it was impossible to determine the age of a fingerprint.

Cook did not testify in either of his trials.

Peaceful rally shows support for town's gays

TYLER (AP) — Several hundred people united in support of East Texas homosexuals and called for tougher penalties against persons committing hate crimes at a peaceful rally here Saturday.

The emotional, two-hour rally was held in response to the killing of Nicholus West, a 23-year-old Tyler resident who police say was murdered because he was gay.

"People have accused us of using this death as a cause, and if we are using it to prevent other deaths of gays and lesbians, then so be it," said Dianne Hardy-Garcia, executive director of The Lesbian-/Gay Rights Lobby of Texas.

"Not all of us agree about homosexuality, but people should not have to die over this disagreement," she said.

West, an openly gay medical records clerk, was slain Nov. 30. In videotaped confessions, three men admitted to killing West and boasted that, for months, they had sought out homosexuals to assault and rob, police said.

The killing is the first in Texas to fall under a hate-crime law that went into effect Sept. 1. Under the law, punishment for a crime can be enhanced if the victim was singled out by bias or prejudice.

The bill's author, Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, attended the rally.

Smith County District Attorney Jack Skeen has said he will ask for the death penalty for Donald Aldrich, 29, David Ray McMillan, 17, and Henry Dunn Jr., 19.

A grand jury indicted the three men Dec. 16 on murder charges. They pleaded innocent and were jailed on $1 million bail each.

Saturday's event was held in Bergfeld Park, where West encountered the men believed to have killed him.

"It's better after today," Wesley Beard, a 21-year-old auctioneer and gay activist in nearby Jacksonville, said after the rally. "This touched my heart; it's just what I wanted."

Beard said he had feared many local homosexuals would not show up.

"Hundreds of gay and lesbians (from Tyler) stepped forward," Beard said.

DAY WATCH

School board agenda

The Midland Independent School District Board of Education has announced its agenda for Tuesday's regular meeting. Trustees will meet at 4 p.m. in the board room of the main administration building, 615 W. Missouri Ave. The public is invited to attend.

Agenda items scheduled prior to the 6:30-7:15 p.m. dinner break include:

■ Approval of personnel to receive stipends for bachelor's degrees, plus 18 hours of additional education.

■ Consideration of the 1994-95 school calendar.

■ Summary of the results of the exit-level TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test, which was administered in October.

Agenda items scheduled for after the dinner break include:

■ Consideration of Andrews Independent School District's request to purchase delinquent County Education District tax accounts from MISD.

Trustees will meet in executive session following the meeting to discuss pending litigation in the lawsuit MISD vs. RWC Construction.

They will also meet in closed session to discuss the superintendent appraisal process, appointing individuals to counseling positions and an individual's request to lease district property at Loop 250 and Highway 349.

College short courses

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer two short courses beginning the week of Jan. 10. The courses are as follows:

"Mature Student Orientation" will be taught by Terry Clemmer on Monday, Jan. 10 from 1:30-2:30 p.m. Thinking of going back to school? Tips for getting started and succeeding in college will be covered in this workshop. Students will learn about pre-registration, costs of college, course offerings, and sources of financial aid. The workshop meets in the Vocational Career Center, located in the Student Center. The course is offered free of charge.

"Deep Water Training-Water Aerobics" will be taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11-11:45 a.m., Jan. 11 through Jan. 27. Each class is a 45-minute aerobics and toning workout, using hydro-fit buoyancy belts. This is low impact and no swimming skills are needed. The class is taught by a certified instructor and is held at the Mabee Aquatics Center (3003 N. "A"). Bring a towel; "water shoes" are optional. Class limited to 15 students. Course fee is $40.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses, go by the Office of Continuing Education located in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

Police: DWI ads made city safer

■ Midland-Odessa authorities report zero highway fatalities, relatively quiet New Year's Eve weekend.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

It was a relatively safe New Year's Eve weekend this year for the Midland/Odessa area, with only one alcohol-related accident between the two cities and no fatal accidents, according to officials.

"This was a fairly safe and quiet year," said Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia.

"Even the calls involving disturbances — like fights outside of bars — were relatively low. Two years ago, it was really bad. Not only were we working a lot of accidents, officers were getting called all over the city for shootings and fights due to people getting drunk.

"We probably had 15-20 calls holding at any given time during that evening. And, on top of everything going on, a really dense fog rolled in."

Garcia said during a 60-hour period beginning Dec. 31, 29 driving while intoxicated (DWI) arrests were made and one minor alcohol-related accident was reported.

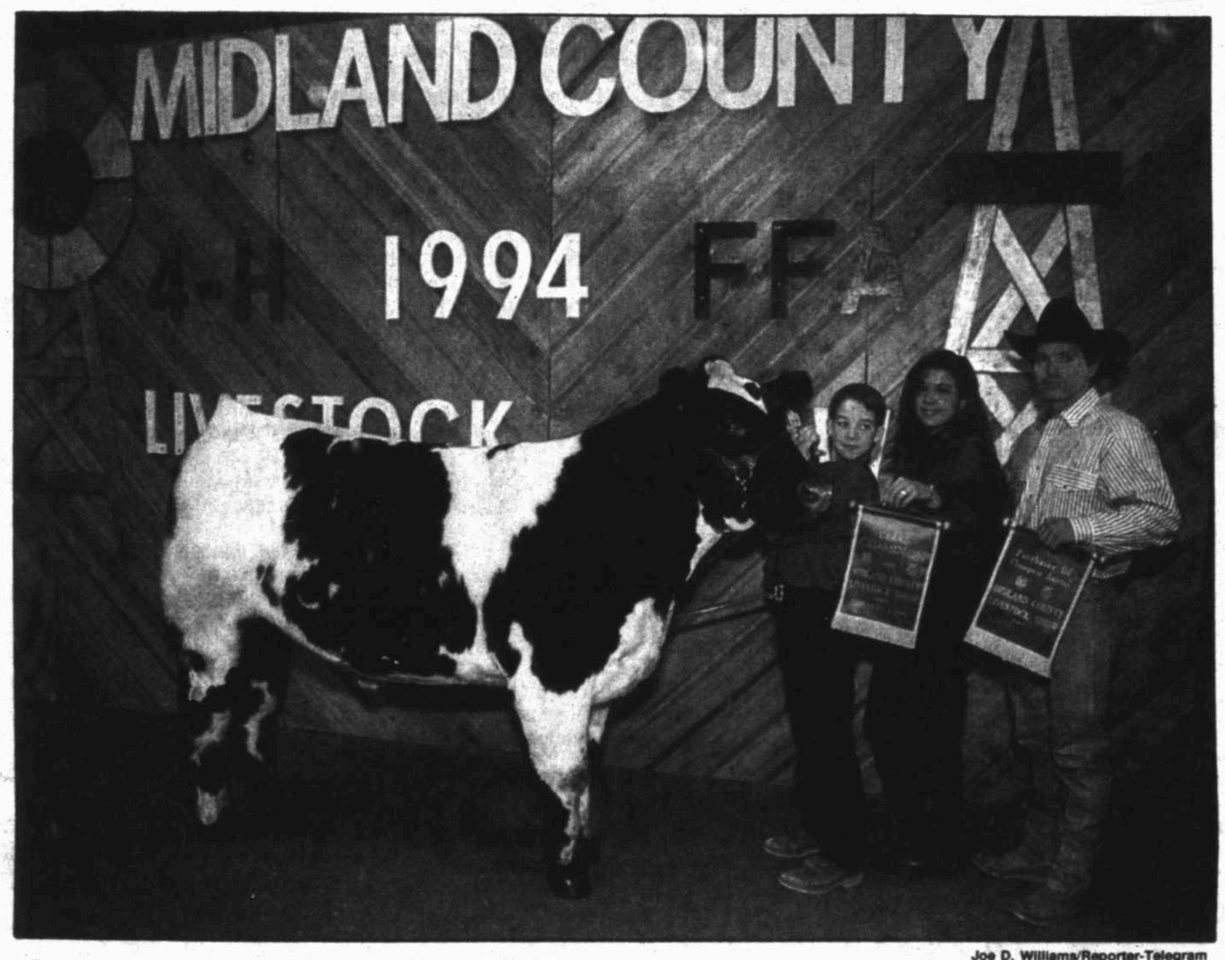

In Odessa, police reported no alcohol-related accidents and six DWI arrests,

Jim Prince seeks GOP nomination for county judge

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland businessman Jim Prince, who is highlighting his successful experience in "both controlling expenses and increasing opportunities," is seeking the Republican Party nomination for county judge in the March 8 primary.

Prince

"The county judge is the person most singularly responsible for how the taxpayers' money is spent . . ." he said.

Prince, 57, is among four candidates for the judgeship on the Republican Party ticket. There is no announced Democrat for the post, which pays about $60,000 a year.

Vying with Prince for the nomination are Jeff Norwood, a former political consultant; Ray Moudy, a Midland lawyer, and Teresa Clingman, a prosecutor in the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, who is seeking the judgeship of Midland County Court-at-Law Number 2, is serving out his first four-year term as county judge.

The county judge, the county's chief administrative officer and fiscal manager, is presiding officer of the Commissioners' Court, which controls the county's $21.5 million budget and sets

Brooks to run for Commissioners' Court

Brooks

James Brooks, a Midland County farmer, independent businessman and trustee on the Greenwood Independent School District board, is announcing his Democratic Party candidacy for Precinct 2 commissioner on the Commissioners' Court. Brooks said he would be bringing a "wealth of experience and knowledge to bear on problems confronting local governments."

Those problems would include preparing and monitoring budgets, financing capital projects, and "dealing with required but expensive unfunded state and federal mandates," he said.

Brooks is seeking the Democratic Party nomination for the post in the March 8 primary. He is opposed by Democrat Marvin Manning, a 57-year-old Midland automotive businessman.

In the Nov. 8 general election, either Brooks or Manning will be challenging the winner of the three-way race for the commissioner's job in the Republican Party primary.

Candidates for that nomination are incumbent Guy McCrary, who was first elected to office in 1987; Pat Bostick, a Midland County deputy sheriff; and Audie L. Porter, a Midland salesman.

Perry cites ways to bring billions into Texas

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Texas Agricultural Commissioner Rick Perry was in Big Spring Saturday to discuss ways to bring billions of dollars into the Texas economy.

Joining Perry for the presentation, made to crowds at the annual West Texas Ag Expo, was U.S. Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Rominger, U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm and Texas Rep. David Counts.

Texas is missing out on a gold mine, especially in light of the new North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), Perry said.

By increasing the amount of "value-added processing" to 20 percent, Texas would inject another $26 billion into its annual economy, Perry said.

Although Texas is the second-largest agricultural state, far less of the raw product is used for manufacture in Texas than in most other states, he said.

"All of our agricultural products are going out of state to make somebody else rich," Perry said.

Texas ranks in the top-10 producing states for 15 of the top commodities, Rominger said. No other state can match that record, not even his native California, he said.

GARY OTT

Losing your voice might be blessing or curse

There have been times, of course, when we have all wished for our voices to go silent.

Ott

It might be when the boss is shaking a finger in our face and demanding to know why we failed so miserably at a particular job.

Or it could be about the time we tell a tasteless ethnic joke and suddenly realize the person we are telling it to is married to a member of that particular group.

Or perhaps it is when we have been daydreaming throughout a conversation with a co-worker and then he abruptly says, "Well, what do you think?"

In each case it would be convenient to be able to point to our throat and whisper, "I'm sorry, my voice is gone. I can't talk."

Silence can indeed be golden.

But as with life in general, a good thing can be taken too far.

Indeed, there are times when an inability to be heard can be terribly frustrating. Believe me, I know. I have just spent 72 hours pointing at my throat and whispering, "I can't talk."

How it occurred, I'm not sure. One minute I was chattering away on a whole range of subjects, the next minute I couldn't be heard. My lips would move in an up-and-down motion, but no sound would result.

OK, that's not quite right. There was noise, you just couldn't figure out what it was. Rather than words spewing forth, the sounds more closely resembled a series of grunts and groans, not unlike those made by hogs gathered around the food trough.

It's funny how we take our ability to speak for granted. If, for example, the telephone rings, our first reaction is to answer it. It's an automatic reflex. But if we can't speak, the phone will do us no good.

Likewise with routine inquiries around the office. If someone asks a question, our initial inclination is to provide an answer. But, again, if we can't be heard, then our expertise is of no value.

And that's where the frustration settles in. We want to speak, but we can't. It is as though we have been bound and gagged against our will.

So we shrug a lot and point to our throat.

As mentioned before, that's not all bad. But, somehow, the longer you go without speaking the more irritating it becomes, especially if you happen to be one of those people who is loud, obnoxious and opinionated.

POLICE REPORTS

Pedestrian dies

A Midland man, dressed entirely in black, was hit by a car and killed early Saturday morning, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Asa Wayne Grizzard, 22, of 4030 Andrews Highway, #22, was walking down the middle of an eastbound lane of Highway 191 when he was hit by a car driven by Geo. Clarence Quinton McKee of Midland, according to a DPS report.

McKee was driving eastbound on Highway 191 on an unlighted section of the road, ¼ mile east of the Odessa city limits — within Midland County — when he approached Grizzard, according to the report.

McKee, traveling with low-beam lights on, didn't see Grizzard until it was too late to avoid hitting him, according to DPS.

A DPS spokesman said Grizzard wasn't visible in the dark because of his black jacket, pants and shoes. The victim was walking facing away from the car when he was struck by the left portion of the vehicle, the spokesman said.

McKee went to the nearest phone to contact authorities.

Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe pronounced Grizzard dead at the scene at 5:40 a.m. Grizzard was transported to a Midland funeral home.

McKee was not injured, according to the report.

The accident was investigated by DPS troopers Herminio Santiago of Midland and Chris Becker and Denny Maxey of Odessa.

Felony escape case

Two Midland women were still in custody late Saturday night in connection with facilitating a felony escape, jail officials said.

Maria Esquivel, 24, and Rosa Galindo, 44, remained in jail with bond set for $10,000 each, officials said.

Juanita Gonzalez, 35 — the third woman who was arrested for allegedly helping in the escape of Alfredo Chagolla Martinez, 25 — posted bail Thursday.

Martinez, who escaped from the Midland County Detention Center Jan. 2, remains at large, officials said.

Fatal fire inquiry

Midland County Fire Department officials said the cause of a blaze that took the life of a child Friday night was still under investigation Saturday.

One-year-old Kevin Blakemore was trapped in the house at 100 S. Madison after a fire broke out about 7 p.m.

Four other children escaped from the residence safely, and several adults were treated for smoke inhalation.

The bedroom where the child was trapped was the most heavily damaged and appeared to be where the fire originated, according to Midland County Fire Chief James Roberts.

Friday

Burglary: Karen Cook of 402 E. Dengar reported, at 10:22 p.m., that two videocassette recorders and a portable stereo taken. Entry may have been gained through kicking in the back door.

Saturday

Vandalism: James McIlroy reported, at 10:38 a.m., that an unknown subject threw a rock through the window of 3915 Gaston.

Burglary: Nan Jones reported, at 12:22 p.m., that a warehouse storage shed at 1902 W. Florida had been burglarized. Taken was a television, piano and other assorted furniture and items valued at $6,500.

ALCOHOL: Police cite DWI-STEP program

said Odessa Police Cpl. Sherry Sparks. No DWI arrests were made on Dec. 31, she said.

Garcia said Midland had eight officers working in the DWI/STEP program during the evening hours of Dec. 31 into the morning of Jan. 1.

The program was implemented in October 1992 through a grant — the Selective Traffic Enforcement Program (STEP) — from the Texas Department of Transportation to cover overtime pay for officers working on DWI calls and arrests.

The number of arrests in Midland was an increase over last year's three arrests, Garcia said. Police also worked three alcohol-related accidents last year.

"I think what happened was the officers went to work those accidents and found someone DWI," Garcia said. "That's probably the way we arrested those three people."

Garcia said the increase in arrests was due to the DWI/STEP officers who were specifically looking for DWI cases. He attributed the lack of fatality or major accidents to increased awareness among residents about the dangers of drunk driving.

"Those public service announcements that aired that showed a picture and gave the person's name and when they were killed by a drunk driver really got to people, especially those showing children," he said. "When you put a name with a face, it makes the dangers a reality."

A person's first and second DWI offenses are considered misdemeanors. The first offense is punishable by a fine of $100-$2,000 and/or 72 hours to two years in jail.

The second offense carries a penalty of a $300-$2,000 fine and/or 15 days to two years in jail.

After the second offense, a DWI charge becomes a felony, punishable by a fine of $500-$2,000 and/or 30 days to two years in jail or 60 days to five years in a state penitentiary.

If a person is caught driving while intoxicated and an open container of alcohol is found in the vehicle, up to $100 will be added to the appropriate fine and three days will be added to possible confinement.

If a person does bodily harm to another while under the influence of alcohol, up to $500 can be added to the appropriate fine and confinement will be increased by 60 days.

The charge jumps to involuntary manslaughter, a third degree felony, if someone is killed during the DWI offense and is punishable by a fine not to exceed $10,000 and two to 10 years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

OTT: Silence might bring various reactions

(From 1B)

The desire to be heard can be overwhelming.

Picture this scene, for example:

You're sitting around the office on a Tuesday morning and one of your co-workers makes a particularly tacky remark about your favorite politician. Under normal circumstances, you would immediately leap to your feet, call your co-worker a neo-Nazi and unleash a 10-minute tirade on why everything that is wrong with America can be blamed on people like him.

Then you would smugly sit back and await his reaction.

Unfortunately, when you can't speak, the quick-striking "neo-Nazi" approach is not available. Instead, all you can do is pound your fist on the table and make scratchy noises with your voice. When you point at your throat in a desperate attempt to explain your inability to speak, your co-worker merely shakes his head and smiles.

He knows he got you.

It's the same with sports.

Say it's Monday morning following the big game. Your favorite team lost by two points because your quarterback threw an interception late in the game deep in enemy territory. The point of controversy, of course, is whether or not the team should have run out the clock and kicked the game-winning field goal instead of trying a last-minute pass.

Everyone in the office has taken sides. One group says, "It was a gutsy call; just a lousy pass." The other group says, "Why take the risk? Kick the field goal."

On and on the debate rages. Neither side is willing to concede. Suddenly, the entire group looks to you and asks, "What do you think?"

You point to your throat and whisper, "I can't talk."

But what the others don't know is that inside you are giggling loudly.

After all, you had $200 bet on the other team.

Losing your voice doesn't necessarily make you stupid.

DOLLARS: Mexicans buy more goods, Perry says

(From 1B)

The Texas Agricultural Finance Authority has been established to provide start-up capital for value-added processing for Texas agricultural products, Perry said.

Last year the TAFA saved 4,600 Texas jobs with an 18 percent return on its investment capital, he said.

Mexico is buying greater and greater amounts of high-quality American-made goods. This number will increase as NAFTA is implemented, Perry said.

"Texas is in a primary position to grab a major share of that market," he said.

A new Wal-Mart store in Monterrey, Mexico, is said to be doing tremendous business, Perry said. "A lot of those labels say 'made in the U.S.A.' They should also say 'made in Texas,'" he said.

Perry also spoke about the need for farmers to band together to write the rules regarding the Endangered Species Act and other environmental issues.

Too often, farms are forced out of business because of environmental litigation when solutions could have dealt with the concerns, while leaving the farms in operation, he said.

"The agricultural community has been slow to take up the battle cry," Perry said.

Rominger presented new developments in international trade negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland. These agreements will lower the impact of protectionist legislations on U.S. farmers, he said.

Protectionist measures in Europe precipitated the agricultural recession of the early to mid-1980s, he said.

"Those were dark days as you all can remember," he said.

With more open European and world markets, agriculture should see better returns in the coming years, he said.

policies in county government.

Prince said it is past time for people, particularly those in business, to get involved in government and "to strive for progress rather than only complaining in personal conversations."

Prince said it is "not necessary to be a lawyer" to be a county judge in Texas.

Few county judges in Texas are lawyers, which "is a compliment to the Texans drafting the election requirements," Prince said.

"Makes sense to me and I hope it will (make sense) to enough of the registered voters," he said.

Prince said "control of the taxpayers' money is best handled by a successful and experienced business person," especially one who "sincerely believes Midland County has a brighter future through diversifications, which equates to more industry, more jobs, and less spending by county government."

Prince cited his past experience as chief executive officer and chairman of the board of major regional commercial real-estate firms.

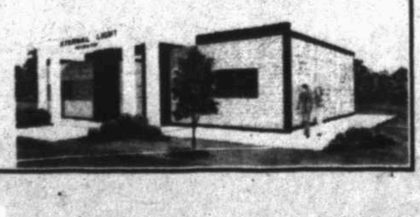

Should he be elected county judge, Prince said he would work with the Chamber of Commerce and city officials in "creating more jobs."

Prince said he and his wife, Jean, are not politicians and "don't know how to run a 'slick' campaign."

Trinity School admits students of any race, color, disability, gender, and national or ethnic origin to all rights, privileges, programs and activities generally accorded or made available to students of the school and does no discriminate on the basis of race, color, disability, gender, or national and ethnic origin in administration of its educational policies, admission policies, scholarship and loan programs, athletic and other school-administered programs.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

An Open House at Midland College's South Facility is scheduled at 10 a.m. Friday with the public invited to attend.

Located at 201 West Florida, the extension center has been operating for just over a year. Extensive remodeling is nearing completion at this time.

Special guests for the Open House will be representatives of Meridian Oil Company, whose parent company, Burlington Industries, provided a substantial grant to help pay for remodeling costs. Bill Rodriquez was the plumbing contractor and also supervised much of the construction project, along with MC maintenance director John Hohenberger, who served as general contractor.

Camille Duchesne serves as Dean of the South Facility in addition to her assignment as Director of Continuing Education. She and her staff will serve as guides for informal tours of the facility following the brief ceremony at 10 a.m. Friday.

Refreshments will be served during the Open House from 10 a.m.-noon. The public is invited to attend.

"I've lost more than 5 lbs in my first week! No wonder it's called Superstart."™ KATHLEEN SULLIVAN

It's wonderful news for people in a hurry to start losing weight. It's the remarkable new Superstart program and you'll find it only at Weight Watchers.

Former network anchor Kathleen Sullivan had this to say after just one week on Superstart.

"For me getting started has always been the hardest part of losing weight. But with Superstart, Weight Watchers has created an incredibly simple and easy to follow weight loss program that lets you see dramatic results really quickly.

"After just a week I've lost more than five pounds. But what's really remarkable is that I did it eating terrific food, and plenty of it.

"And the recipes were good. I mean how many weight loss programs let you eat roast beef with a baked potato?

"I can't wait to see how much I've lost in my second week. And there's no question for me that I'll stick with Weight Watchers after I've completed Superstart. I intend to reach my goal."

The two-week Superstart program works. If you want to see results quickly, then you'll love Superstart.

As Kathleen says, "What are you waiting for? Come and do Superstart with me. If it works for me, I promise it will work for you."

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College outlines Thursday's registration

By H.A. Tuck

Formal registration day for the spring semester takes place Thursday in the Student Center. Hours are noon until 2 p.m. and 5-8 p.m. Those who took the time to obtain a permit to register prior to last Thursday have been assigned specific 15-minute periods in which to report to begin processing. If you want to attend Midland College this fall, and haven't already registered or obtained a time permit, you need to report to the Student Center beginning at 7 p.m. The helpful faculty and staff will process your application as quickly as possible. Be warned, however, that some classes may already be closed.

Tuck

The spring semester begins on Tuesday, Jan. 18, since Jan. 17 is being observed as a holiday in honor of Martin Luther King. There is a short period of late registration which starts on Jan. 18, but a late fee is imposed for those who wait.

Chaparral Center holds almost 5,000 spectators for basketball games. We expect almost all of those seats to be filled with fans on Thursday when Odessa College comes to play Midland College. It's an early-season conference game with big implications. The Wranglers are ranked first in the nation and the Chaparrals are sixth.

MC opens its Western Junior College Athletic Conference action at Borger on Monday, playing the Frank Phillips College Plainsmen. For that action, you can listen to KCRS Radio, 550 AM. For some in-depth viewpoints about the Chaps, watch the Steve Green Chaparral Basketball Show on KMID-TV at 12:30 p.m. each Saturday.

Winning or losing this early in the WJCAC round-robin doesn't necessarily determine who might win the conference. In fact, it could be another team. But winning at home certainly is a requirement if you expect to be a contender.

Reserved seats for the game, located in sections H, J, and K, go on sale tomorrow at Chaparral Center. They are priced at $5 each and may be obtained at the office, through Door Three. Tickets also may be purchased at the Odessa College Sports Complex.

As usual, the WJCAC members are playing for one of four spots allocated to the conference in the Region V tournament that's held annually in Waco the first week in March as part of the big Texas-New Mexico Junior College Championship.

In just slightly more than a year, the Midland College South Facility has gone from a possibility to a reality. To show off the renovations, explain what is happening now, and talk about the future, there's going to be an Open House on Friday, Jan. 14, starting at 10 a.m. You are cordially invited to attend, since MC belongs to you.

The South Facility is located at 201 West Florida in what had been two buildings that were connected this fall. Housed at the facility are the college's Business and Economic Development Center, plus several classrooms. Among the credit classes being offered are those in English and math, plus non-credit classes in computer information systems, Adult Basic Education for GED students, and English As a Second Language.

Camille Duchesne, Dean of the South Facility, and her staff have really made a difference in that area. They would like to share that with you during the Open House and some informal tours which will follow a brief ceremony.

It's always delightful to report that one of our new faculty members is "home-grown". With the retirement last month of Celia Harris from the Associate Degree Nursing faculty, an opening was created. Employed as a new faculty member for the ADN program was Doro Flores, who is a 1988 graduate of the ADN program at MC. He later earned his BSN degree from the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

In a shuffling of responsibility, ADN faculty member Clarice Rowland will become curiculum coordinator and Flores takes the duties formerly held by Rowland.

One of the intriguing new programs at MC is the one in Environmental Technology, which has wide-ranging applications both in the petroleum industry and in many other fields. There are four classes and a lab being offered this spring, all of them in the evening and with no overlapping so it would be possible to enroll for all the classes being offered.

Substance Abuse.
Often It's Not The Only Problem.

Quite often substance abuse is a symptom of depression. And depression is a serious illness. Unfortunately, many people choose to 'treat' their depression themselves, often leading to:

- Excessive drinking
- Use of illegal substances, such as cocaine or marijuana
- Abuse of prescription drugs
- Overeating

If you or someone you know is experiencing any of these problems, call us 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Our experienced staff and innovative treatment programs can help over-come the obvious and not so obvious problems - the right way.

Custom Security Systems Jim Rockwell, Owner

Home security used to mean a good deadbolt lock. But today, homeowners are giving more serious consideration to electronic alarm systems to protect their homes from burglaries and fire. Changing lifestyles have influenced the need for home security systems. The FBI reports one in four homes will be burglarized in the next two years. With more two career families, a greater number of homes are vacant during the day. Good home security requires an overall plan. You begin with good locks and lighting and then move to electronic security.

Custom Security Systems, located in Midland at 2620-B SCR 1257, phone 563-5472, can recommend what you need, what is most compatible with your lifestyle, and which system will minimize the number of false alarms. The majority of their systems are hooked into their own monitoring station. This allows testing and alleviates the burden of false alarms. It also gives you 24-hour fire and burglar protection.

If you are considering an alarm system for your residence or business, but you're not sure what you really need, consult with the security specialists at Custom Security Systems. There is never a charge for a complete security survey and cost estimate. They will custom design the security system that is just right for you at the most affordable price. When you contact Custom Security Systems, you can be assured that your security is their business.

Miracle Ear Center

In America, there are more people with hearing impairments than any other handicap. Some people are born with hearing defects, others sustain hearing damage, and many suffer hearing loss with age. Of the five senses, hearing is the most easily damaged. Loud music, noise in the workplace and high volume sounds such as gunfire, auto racing and power tools can damage your hearing.

If you or a loved one feels you should have your hearing checked, contact Miracle Ear Center At Sears, located at Midland Park Mall inside the Sears store, phone 694-2511. Their specialist, Kay Scroggins, can give you a no-charge electronic hearing evaluation to determine the extent of your hearing loss. They offer both in-the-ear and behind-the-ear hearing instruments, and will work with you to help you adjust to your new hearing device. They also offer repair, batteries and accessories for hearing aids.

The professionals at Miracle Ear Center At Sears have been working closely with the hearing problems of adults and senior citizens for many years throughout the area. They have a special interest in the effect of age on hearing, and will recommend medical treatment when needed. Once you are fitted with the proper hearing instrument, you will realize your old hearing problem was much more noticeable than your new hearing aid.

O'Leary correct to raise testing issue

Energy Secretary Hazel R. O'Leary was correct to come forward with the startling revelation over the Christmas holidays that as many as 800 people may have been subjected to radiation testing during the 1940's and 1950's in this country, some beyond the acceptable levels of medical guidelines and without their consent of those tested.

What's even more repulsive, many of the patients may have been mentally retarded. That is at least the case with 19 mentally retarded teenagers in Massachusetts who were fed radiation-enriched cereal and other food during a 10-year period.

Perhaps it is true that Americans are more sensitive to abuses of human rights today — for whatever reason — than they were a half century ago, but even during the earlier era when scientific knowledge was less astute, the basic line between right and wrong was still present and the tests obviously were not acceptable. In fact, a report on the revelation published in The New York Times asserted that in 1950 Dr. Joseph G. Hamilton, a top biologist for the Atomic Energy Commission, issued a warning to Dr. Shields Warren, a senior commission official, to use chimpanzees in the tests to avoid comparison to Nazi experiments at the Buchenwald concentration camp that killed at least 600 people who were exposed to typhus bacerteria.

The fact that the experiments were carried out without the knowledge of some of the individuals tested is reprehensible. Even the Cold War tension of that era does not justify that kind of abuse.

Credit should go to O'Leary for bringing the matter to the attention of the American public. She noted, "My view is that we must proceed with disclosing these facts and information regardless of the fact of whether it opens the door for a lawsuit against the government. And many have suggested, and I tend to agree personally, that those people who were wronged need to be compensated."

That is the only course for a government that accepts the obligation to operate on the basis of truth, compassion and honor.

Congressional Record should not be 'phony'

Most people with any interest in the Congress of the United States know that the Congressional Record is, at least in part, phony.

It is supposed to be an accurate account of the proceedings of Congress, but it isn't. It is in part, what members want their constituents to think was said to a packed chamber.

It works this way: A member seeks consent to "revise and extend" his remarks, a request that is routinely granted. The clerk is then given copy — usually written by a congressional staff member — that goes into the record.

This is done so often that printing the Congressional Record is a monumental and expensive job.

Now there is hope this foolishness may come to an end. Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., wants the rules changed so that no House member may alter or add to what has been said on the floor. His proposal has preliminary committee approval and will be acted upon when Congress reconvenes. . . .

The record should be truly verbatim. The history of legislation and of positions taken by members of the House is a matter of importance.

Besides, Congress has a duty to its institutional integrity. It can scarcely win public respect by maintaining a record soiled with pretense.

Twins' relationship special but legal claim unjustified

Identical twins often have a special bond born of shared physical characteristics and life experiences. But that doesn't mean twins, by definition, are so close that death or disfigurement of one should entitle the other to special legal compensation.

Unfortunately, that's the spurious argument being used in a number of court cases across the country. Even worse, juries have been receptive to compensating twins for losses based solely on their relationship as twins.

That twins are inherently closer than others is not only an unprovable generalization — there are plenty of twins who aren't close — it also devalues the relationships between non-twin siblings, parent and child, and husband and wife.

Assigning special victim's status to twins is only the latest in the legal profession's never-ending quest for new ways to milk big bucks out of corporations and insurance companies.

It's a form of "double jeopardy" our legal system can do without.

JACK ANDERSON
Poland pleads for NATO membership

WASHINGTON — If there is one country that has paid its dues for membership into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, it's Poland. Yet President Clinton this week will offer only a sop and spare change to the country with so much blood equity in eliminating the Iron Curtain.

Anderson

Polish President Lech Walesa's plea for NATO membership is based on a healthy fear that the Russian bear is not dead. Walesa is warning of the re-emergence of communism and wants Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic included in NATO. President Clinton is spurning Walesa primarily because he is worried about the political impact Russian President Boris Yeltsin's endangered democracy.

The Clinton administration is pinning its hopes on what it calls the "partnerships for peace," which would strengthen security ties between NATO and the former Eastern bloc without extending the guarantees of full NATO membership. The administration hopes this plan will mollify the Poles and other East Europeans without creating political trouble for Yeltsin. President Clinton tapped Gen. John Shalikashvili, the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to advance the idea at the upcoming NATO summit.

Walesa, who has staked much over the years on NATO membership, is skeptical about this "partnerships for peace." He must also wax nostalgic about his triumphant visit to the United States in 1989 when he became the first non-head of state to address a joint session of Congress since 1824. Walesa, the one-time unemployed electrician, was interrupted 25 times by applause and standing ovations.

We have visited with Walesa several times since then. He sparkles with wit and humor despite the difficulty his country has had being the first state-controlled economy to transform itself virtually overnight into a capitalist system. Based on our previous conversations, it's clear that Walesa's recent criticism of NATO's failure to embrace Poland is not a summit-eve gambit.

As Clinton struggles to define a U.S. policy for the former Eastern bloc, Walesa's mind remains unchanged from three years ago. He believes that NATO membership is crucial to the development of lasting democracy in Poland, yet realizes that geography binds him to the Russians.

"We are condemned to be together," Walesa said. "Neither Poland nor Russia can be placed anywhere else on the map. So let us develop our relations to the point that we have a good, comfortable relationship. Let us leave the matter in the open, because we are both going through our own reforms."

We pointed out that he had ample reason for animosity and suspicion of then-Soviet leaders who were part of the government that had suppressed his Solidarity movement and imprisoned him. He agreed, but said that his reaction was only short-lived.

Since the Iron Curtain fell, Walesa has felt short-changed — in terms of NATO and increased trade — by those who were quite happy to see him serve as surrogate soldier during the Cold War.

Poland and its 50-year-old leader continue to struggle with rebuilding a country ravaged by the Germans in World War II and the Soviets for four decades afterward. Walesa can be forgiven if after his talks with President Clinton this week he doesn't conclude that he will have to chart Poland's strategic future without Western "allies" that are keeping him outside NATO.

GEORGE WILL
GOP ignores damage of independent counsel

WASHINGTON — His enthusiasm having dethroned his judgment, Newt Gingrich, that highly carbonated congressman, has joined the Republican clamor for an independent counsel to investigate whether the Clintons did serious wrongs regarding the Whitewater land development in Arkansas.

Will

Gingrich adopts the egalitarian cant normal when politicians express synthetic altruism: He says an independent counsel is needed lest adolescent miscreants in East L.A. think presidents are above the law. But in addition to being concerned about the civic sensibilities of wayward youths, Republicans are seeking vengeance, albeit tarted up with pieties about "the public's right to know."

Republicans think it is the Democrats' turn to experience the fangs of independent counsels. And in fact when President Clinton's man George Stephanopoulos says no independent counsel is needed because Whitewater "has been looked at by newspapers and is being looked at by the Justice Department," he speaks words that would be roundly ridiculed by Democrats in Congress, and by journalists, were he a Republican.

Congress created the independent counsel apparatus as a "Watergate reform" in 1978. It was accepted by President Carter against the advice of his attorney general, Griffin Bell, who rightly considered it unconstitutional.

It unleashed against the executive branch people performing the purely executive function of prosecution yet uncontrolled by the chief executive. This conflicts with the Constitution's creation of three and only three separate branches. Unaccountability has frequently bred irresponsibility, and when the independent counsel law expired last December sensible Republicans and others said good riddance.

Republicans now calling for revival of the law are ignoring its constitutional dubiety and the damage it does to the civic culture. But today the word "Watergate" still serves as an argument for the law. That is absurd.

In the summer of 1973 Republican prosecutors mounted devastating cases against the Republican president and his vice president. When the U.S. attorney for Maryland found that Spiro Agnew had taken bribes as governor, and that payments continued to him as vice president, a grand jury indicted him. He plea bargained and resigned.

He was allowed to bargain because Attorney General Elliot Richardson knew that Nixon was trapped by an investigation already far advanced before Archibald Cox became special prosecutor. The U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, a Republican, already had most of the information that filled the 90 pages he soon gave to Cox, sketching the conspiracy.

Today some Republicans, making use of their time out of power to prove that they deserve to be there, try to put a patina of seriousness on their intellectual somersault regarding an independent counsel law. They say such a law is needed now that both political branches are controlled by the same party.

Supporters of an independent counsel apparatus say it is necessary to bolster confidence in government. However, enactment of such a law announces the premise that the highest levels of government are usually staffed by people without integrity. Another premise is that other relevant institutions, including Congress and the media, are impotent or corrupt.

Regarding Whitewater, yes, the Clintons have proven themselves to be less than forthcoming and even misleading. But this is not a news bulletin about the pair who promised a middle-class tax cut and authored the proposed health care reform which does not read as it is advertised.

RUSSELL BAKER
'Superhighway' sounds great, but will it fly?

The promises being made for the "information superhighway" are reminiscent of the oversell of atomic energy in the late 1940s.

Baker

With the atom's energy, we were told, it would cost only two or three cents to pay the monthly electricity bill. A few pennies' worth of atomic energy would power the Queen Mary across the Atlantic, making luxury travel available to millions.

To find how it came out, glance at your last electricity bill. Ask a travel agent to book you on the Queen Mary for the luxurious five-day voyage to Southampton. You'll take the wretched overnight flight to Heathrow and like it, wise guy.

What's more, you'd be ill advised to annoy the atomic-energy wizards by asking what ever happened to the miracle of incredibly cheap travel. This crowd has ways of making you regret sarcasm, like experimenting on you so subtly that you won't even know your glow is artificial until the doctor asks if your will is in order.

The oversell on the "information superhighway" exploits the same public gullibility that true atomic-energy believers exploited decades ago. It's a gullibility that flows from a touchingly credulous eagerness to believe that new miracle ages are constantly lurking just around the corner.

Even the most ponderous newspaper reporting on the "information superhighway" breathes hints of a new age of magic soon to flow out of fiber-optic wire.

The papers suggest the individual will never again have to leave the house, or the car, or whatever cocoon he chooses to inhabit. With a computer he will be able to sit tight and move happily through the universe, communicating and playing games and "interacting" with both the arts and the schlock, and watching movies or hundreds of TV channels that provide gossip and game shows and instruction in calculus and woodworking, while phoning up Burundi or Osaka or the corner deli for fast-food carry-out delivery.

The point of the miracle seems to be that humanity will never again have to go out on real superhighways, or even mere highways, or even byways or sidewalks. You settle down on your fiber-optic wires and cruise the "information superhighway" to total communication.

I am making it sound singularly nightmarish and silly, which is unfair because there will probably be some real advantages to be had from the thing, at least for those who can afford it. What advantages these might be I can't guess, any more than I could have guessed in 1946 that atomic power might someday enrich our poorer states with federal money for letting their land be used as dump sites for radioactive waste.

I have seen it said, for example, that a person on the "information superhighway" will, while driving home from work, be able to tell his kitchen oven to start cooking the roast. This is as much progress as anybody ought to expect of a new technological miracle, and I applaud it, though not as joyously as I would applaud a low-priced Atlantic crossing on an atomic-powered luxury liner.

Nobody is talking much about what it will cost a customer to get on the new superhighway. This is probably because nobody has the faintest notion about costs. It's at this stage — when enthusiasm, vision and dreams of big killings prevent everybody from thinking much about real money — that the oversell of new technological miracles tends to be fiercest.

Television, which was the most commercially successful technological miracle since the automobile, quickly became so vital to Americans that people who couldn't even afford shoes bought sets in the millions. Automobiles still sell robustly though the cost of the average car would have bought one of the best houses in the neighborhood 40 years ago, back when we were dreaming of the atomic miracle taking us to Europe dirt cheap.

The question is whether we will be as desperate for total communication as we once were for television and still are for wheels. The financial types who play Wall Street Monopoly For Big Boys seem to be betting that we will, or else what's all the merging, acquiring and hostile takeovering about in the communications world?

Personally, while I wouldn't mind being able to get in touch with my oven while sitting in my car I'd rather put the money into a new car. Pay no attention to this mossback killjoy, however. I'm still sulking about the atomic-energy flop.

Coach clarifies photo of soccer enthusiasts

I am writing in regard to a recent photograph that appeared in Section B of Local and Lifestyle in the Dec. 30 Reporter-Telegram with the caption "Soccer Skill" which implies that this was a scheduled organized Midland High School Soccer Team practice.

Jared Richardson is one of the three goal keepers for the Midland High School Soccer Team; however, me nor my assistant, Chad Peterson, was involved with the soccer enthusiasts who were playing on the Midland High School Soccer Field the day that Curt Wilcott photographed Jared Richardson. At the time of the photo, no school equipment had been issued.

Jared and the other soccer enthusiasts from the community should not be construed as Midland High School's Soccer Team. The official day for soccer team practice was Jan. 3, 1994.

Grieving family gets hang-up phone calls

Recently we had a death in the family, and as a result, we received numerous "hang-up" phone calls.

It all started after the death certificate was signed and we left the hospital at approximately 11 a.m.. Within two to three hours after arriving at home, we received our first phone call that hung up after we answered (not very unusual). However, after two to three hours, another "hang-up" call came. Then another two to three hours later. The next day, Saturday, we had numerous "hang-up" calls at two- to four-hour intervals. Sunday was more of the same until 10:30 p.m.. Then on Monday, the day of the funeral which was scheduled at 1 p.m. in Midland with burial at 4 p.m. in another West Texas town 100 miles distant, the calls started at 8:30 a.m.. The "hang-up" calls on Monday kept coming at one-hour intervals until 4:30 p.m., then increased to 30-minute intervals until 8:30 p.m.. Tuesday, after the funeral, only one "hang-up" call was received. Fortunately, we had provided for a house sitter on the day of the funeral to answer all calls. Do you think someone wanted to know when our house would be unoccupied?

I want to commend the Midland Para-Medics Emergency crew for their swift arrival and concerned care for our family member. Also, the Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Emergency Room for their concerned care in the death of our loved one.

Keep in mind that our "hang-up" calls started coming the day before the death was published in the Reporter-Telegram!

Resident agrees with Larkin, shuns Perry

Bill Larkin, a resident of Midland, expressed in his letter of Dec. 26, his concern regarding the employment of Jana King as a consultant to the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance. I, too, share the concern expressed by Larkin. Charles Perry, a resident of Odessa, entirely missed the point of Larkin's letter, regardless of who is paying the bill. The employment of Jana King reiterates the entrenched history and impression given to Midland taxpayers that those at Midland City Hall "take care of their own." Jobs have been created for former mayors when they leave office. The example cited in Larkin's letter has to do with the appointment of former mayor, Carroll Thomas, to a job created for him at Midland International Airport by Mayor J.D. Faircloth and former members of the Midland City Council. Larkin and other residents of Midland have the right and obligation to express concern when they feel taxpayer dollars may possibly be expended in a questionable manner.

Pat Schneider and I (Pat was not on the City Council at that time) "took on the establishment" of Mayor Faircloth and others at City Hall in an attempt to eliminate the VIP parking stickers which granted free parking to numerous citizens at Midland International Airport. At that time the list consisted of approximately 250 individuals (some deceased), and we were somewhat successful in that a portion of the free parking privileges were eliminated. I continue to be of the opinion that all VIP parking privileges should be eliminated, which would result in parking being run on a business basis. Only individuals conducting business at the airport for the City of Midland would have their parking tickets validated. Operating the parking facility as a business would increase revenue, however slight, to the Airport Operations Fund.

The citizens of Midland are facing the construction of a new terminal facility: therefore, it is imperative that the city look toward generating the maximum income from its assets (i.e., parking, etc.) without placing an undue burden on businesses operating at the airport. I personally support the construction of the new facility at Midland International Airport as it is our vital link to the outside world in serving and attracting residents and businesses to the entire Permian Basin. We cannot wait to experience an increase in passenger traffic prior to constructing the new terminal as the time involved in initiating the construction process to completion is approximately four years. Support for the construction of the new terminal facility is requested from all citizens of Midland. A sound business decision was made to move forward and replace the 35-year-old facility. In addition to the normal maintenance required, approximately $100,000 per year is being expended in a band-aid approach to operate the old facility. Furthermore, it would be necessary to immediately spend approximately $700,000 on the old facility in order that it be brought into compliance with the Federal Disabilities Act.

Analyst cites theory about local gas prices

Recently, I made a test run to ascertain if my theory relative to prediction of gasoline prices at various geographical locations was accurate. It was, and I feel because of its importance, it should be shared.

The price of gasoline is with few exceptions, inversely proportionate to the distance from Midland. The exact formula is quite complex and varies slightly with the magnetic compass direction, but in general, it can be stated that gasoline prices (in dollars) decline the further one travels (in miles) from Midland.

To test the formula, prices recently were found to be $1.09.9 in Midland, Westbrook 99.9 cents, Abilene 88.9 cents, San Angelo 79.9 cents and Fort Worth 87.9 cents. I did not know if the formula would be accurate across state lines but apparently it is. Alamogordo was 81.9 cents and Boston was 99.9 cents (but this was for full service before oil prices dropped).

Having been in the oil industry for many years, I know that many will question the reason for the relationship of price geographically. After careful study, I have concluded that there has to be a centroid for the formula and Midland being directly in the middle of the oil field is the appropriate location. Simply put, Midland is too close to the supply of oil and refineries to expect low gasoline prices.

I suspect that others have observed this phenomenal relationship but have chosen to keep it to themselves so as to judiciously plan fill-ups. It is too important not to divulge.

Readers' views on: Erosion of freedoms

Kirwan should find set's on-off switch

In reference to John Kirwan's letter in the Jan. 2, Reporter-Telegram, I don't know where he bought his television, but mine has an on-off switch. If there is something on TV that I don't care to watch, I simply turn off the set or switch the channel.

I do not appreciate KMID deciding what I should or should not watch on television. I believe the whole philosophy of America is the freedom of choice and as long as my choices do not infringe on anyone else, I am allowed to make that choice for myself. As to Kirwan using the word "dung" in describing "N.Y.P.D. Blue," I would like to know how he knows that since the show has never been broadcast in the KMID viewing area. I suppose he is for censoring books in the library also.

We as a country are slowly losing our right to choice. The seatbelt law is a perfect example. I am told what I must do inside my car that I pay for. Now the government is going to work on firearms. What next?

When is KMID going to start censoring the news that is full of violence and obscenities? It's time we stopped sitting on our hands and spoke up or we can change our country's name to the U.S.S.R.

Let parents, not TV stations, be censors

I was taught by my parents and teachers that what makes America great is the Constitution which guarantees everyone certain freedoms and rights. I was also taught that even if someone disagreed with my beliefs, I was still to respect their rights, for example, to speak freely, to choose their own religion and to bear arms.

Radical, liberal steps are being taken to socialize health care, regulate guns and the Fairness Doctrine is slowly being forced on conservative radio talk shows. Now people are becoming angry because their constitutional rights are being attacked, yet a minority group decided that it was all right for them to violate my freedom of choice by deciding for me what I can or cannot view on my television set.

In an article in the Nov. 24 edition of the Reporter-Telegram, a federal court in Washington handed down an interpretation of the First Amendment to the FCC stating that censorship was unconstitutional and that television stations do not have the right to take programming off the air. The court ruled that parents should take responsibility as to what is viewed by their children, and if you do not like what is on the television, you have the choice to turn the set off.

Media shows arrogant, partisan approach

Clarence Thomas' character is assassinated by a woman whose own character and mental stability are suspect at best. The media provides full-blown coverage of every titillating detail. Sen. Bob Packwood is set upon by the feminist dogs of war and the media demands access to his 20-year-old diaries. Ed Meese and John Tower are deemed unfit for public office because of the "appearance of impropriety." (Read that as the inability of a spiteful media to unearth evidence.)

Meanwhile, the Clintons rack up scandal after scandal: The failure of the Madison S&L and the Clintons' involvement in the Whitewater real estate deal; the use of Arkansas state money and personnel for the facilitation of Bill's extramarital affairs; Vincent Foster's suicide and the subsequent removal by Clinton staffers of Whitewater documents and diaries from Foster's office; the Gestapo tactics that led to the Waco debacle; slush funds in the Arkansas governor's office, the list continues to grow.

And where is the media that exhaustively researched even the silliest rumors during the Reagan-Bush years? The same pack that struts and preens when a conservative victim is mauled is curiously disinterested when the White House occupants are Democrats. Not only is there a lack of interest, the dominant media's mission appears to be damage control. Bill unleashes his First Lady attack dog on the gutsy little conservative journal which broke the stories and she's treated as a victim by a sympathetic press corps. The New York Times sends a reporter to do a hatchet job on the Arkansas lawyer who urged the troopers to go public with their stories. And the spin that emerges? The lawyer has always been jealous of Bill and he was raised in a strict Assembly of God family. (Apparently an abomination by The New York Times' standards.)

A recent poll indicates that 85 percent of journalists voted for the Democratic party in the last election. While that by itself should not be a statistic to judge them by, the arrogance and partisanship they display is.

If the residents of the White House were anything other than committed Marxists, every motel in Arkansas would be filled with investigative journalists.

Americans must be patient with Clinton

When President Clinton undertook the enormous task of rebuilding America, I don't believe he was aware that his predecessor lacked a blueprint for the task. Immediately every American expected quick fix-it-all results.

Now I believe Americans realize that President Clinton's task is similar to that of a builder; there are so many permits and inspections one must obtain it is a wonder if anything is ever built.

Clinton finally has his foundation in place after replacing all the remnant plumbing and wiring and has set forth to frame the structure. The plumbing and wiring (budget proposal, cabinet appointments) were meticulously inspected yet passed the test.

It seems his first frame wall (NAFTA) was lacking some anchors, but after adjustments were made, the wall was up and holding strong.

There have been setbacks and fabricated embarassments but as any builder knows, you must have a sturdy foundation or the structure built will deteriorate and fail.

The point is Americans must be patient and allow the rebuilding of America to take its course and stand sturdy. Recall the early 80's boom housing built here, most were prefabricated and built in a day; consequently, they were not very sound structures. It's your choice America.

Some businesses treat teen-agers like dogs

Over the past few years, I have heard teens (people aged 13-19) comment concerning the treatment they receive from local business establishments. For instance, at a local hamburger establishment, an older person (I can't say she was an adult) gave the incorrect change to a teen-age male. When the teen-ager informed the older person of her error, she turned to the manager and said, "Shall I slap him, or do you want to?" The teen-ager calmly pointed out the error to the manager and was given his money. The manager then told the teen-ager, "Don't you be spraying ketchup on the walls." Of course, the teen was embarrassed and humiliated, but why does that matter? We all know how teen-agers are! They're not REALLY people. They are ALL troublemakers and do not have feelings.

In a local electronics store, a teen-ager waited for quite some time to make a purchase. He was totally ignored by the older salespeople in the store. Several customers came into the store and were greeted and assisted with their purchases. However, the teen-ager was never greeted and was unable to receive any assistance in making a purchase. Of course, he was not important anyway. He was nothing but a teen-ager. Who cares?

To these people who are intolerant of teens and do not want them coming into their places of business to eat or to make purchases, I suggest that they make a large sign (similar to the signs used for dogs) — NO TEENS ALLOWED. This will allow the teens to spend their money in places where they are appreciated and are treated like people. It will allow real adults in the city to know where NOT TO SHOP when we BUY THE BASIN. We will shop and eat in the places where ALL people regardless of sex, color, creed or age are treated with respect and courtesy by adults who remember what it was like to be a teen-ager. Hopefully, our teen-agers will learn from these real adults that we must all try to, "Do unto others, as you would have them do unto you" and when the teens of today become real adults — not just older people — they will continue to pass this tradition to their teens.

New spy satellites, moon rocks probably create weird weather

Back before color radar and television meterologists who wear hairspray, we relied mostly on older people to tell us about the elements.

Then, forecasts were amazingly reliable. Miss Inez Puckett was the weather person in my hometown. Her forecasts were based mostly on her right big toe.

Grizzard

If her right big toe showed any signs of swelling, she predicted a warming trend.

If she developed a painful bunion, that usually meant high pressure out West, high winds in the Plains states, snow in the Northeast and thunderstorms in the Southeast.

If her big toe turned blue, Miss Inez would forecast the world coming to an end.

The fact that she always bought her shoes one size too small controlled the weather and the future of the planet in my hometown for 30 years.

Miss Inez is dead and gone now, and I'm glad she didn't live long enough to see how technical predicting the weather has become.

She would have been skeptical of today's television meteorologists, with their radar and styled hair.

"How could that man know anything about the weather?" she would have said. "You can look at him and tell he hasn't been outside in weeks."

Miss Inez also could have explained the strange weather we've been having. It's been 50 below in Alaska, but I don't feel sorry for people who live there. What did they expect when they moved to Alaska? Palm Springs? And while Alaskans have suffered from incredibly low temperatures, January in the South and other parts of the country has been incredibly warm.

It was in the 70s in Atlanta. That's 20 degrees above normal for January.

Miss Inez would have known the problem. Older people have been warning us about it for years.

"It's them satellites," Miss Inez would have said.

Indeed. Think of all the machinery we have launched

So now we've got a hole in the ozone layer. One of them satellites probably was what made it. And they are warning us about the greenhouse effect, and how we're all going to be burned to a crisp in a few years.

Satellites probably did that, too. And man has even walked on the moon.

"If God had intended man to be on the moon," I've heard my seniors say, "he'd have put one there to start with."

I agree. And if God had intended us to fly, he'd never have given us the Greyhound bus either.

Men have walked on the moon, and that probably messed up the tides, and that caused the ocean temperatures to get warmer, and that's why springtime showed up in January.

And we brought those rocks back from the moon, too. Who's to say they aren't causing some of the rare weather patterns we've been having?

And rocketships and weather balloons and fornicating on cable television and high-altitude spy planes and aerosol cans and hard-rock music and salad bars and men wearing earrings and laser beams and my right big toe is turning blue.

You were right, Miss Inez. The end must be near.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Jan. 9, the ninth day of 1994. There are 356 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 9, 1788, Connecticut became the fifth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

On this date:

In 1793, Frenchman Jean Pierre Blanchard flew in a hot-air balloon between Philadelphia and Woodbury, N.J.

In 1861, Mississippi seceded from the Union.

In 1861, the Star of the West, a merchant vessel bringing reinforcements to Federal troops at Fort Sumter, S.C., retreated after being fired on by a battery in the harbor.

In 1945, American soldiers led by Gen. Douglas MacArthur invaded Luzon in the Philippines.

SELTZER: Judge competes with 3 others for nomination land County Republican Party and a licensed attorney since 1973, is one of five Midland lawyers seeking the $88,417-a-year judgeship.

Competing with Seltzer for the Republican Party nomination are Jack Chappell, John D. Roosa, and Marvin Moore, who is a county prosecutor.

The lone Democrat seeking the nomination is George Patterson.

The general election to seat the presiding judge of County Court-at-Law Number 2 for the next four years will be Nov. 8.

Seltzer said he would "promise only two things" if elected to the judgeship: "that I will administer the law in a fair and impartial manner" and "I will move cases as expeditiously as possible."

Seltzer said he would bring to the judgeship his "courage of conviction, legal expertise, and personal integrity.

"As a candidate, I can also draw upon 20 years of legal experience ranging from military lawyer to felony prosecutor; from independent petroleum landman to oil-and-gas lawyer; from a general practise concentrating in wills, probate, and contracts to domestic-relations" disputes, including divorce and child-custody cases.

Seltzer said he, too, would draw on his background as the constitutional county judge for the past three years.

In his role as a felony prosecutor in the District Attorney's Office from 1978 until 1980, Seltzer said he was a "good felony prosecutor" who was the "lead counsel in the first three cases in the history of Midland County in which defendants were sentenced to 99 years" for aggravated rape and murder.

Before serving as prosecutor, Seltzer — who has a law degree from Texas Tech University — served as a prosecutor and defense counsel in court martials in the U.S. Air Force and later was a staff attorney in the Texas Secretary of State's Elections Division.

Following his 2½-year tenure as a district attorney's prosecutor in Midland, Seltzer had a private law practice for most of the 1980s and into 1990, when he was elected county judge.

"I'm not leaving the office of county judge because I am running away from any fights," Seltzer said. "I happen to be a very strong believer in the term-limitation movement" for governmental representatives.

Seltzer reasoned that "the more citizens you can get involved in governmental affairs, the better" and the "more cost-effective government is going to be.

"The more business experience you get into government, the less government is going to cost."

Seltzer cited his experience in the oil-and-gas business.

"In the community, the people will be looking for, and should be looking for, someone who knows the ins and outs of the oil-and-gas business both from an investor's and a litigator's standpoint and who has experience in oil-and-gas contracts, oil-and-gas leases, and oil-and-gas exploration — all of which I have, all of which I've done."

Seltzer said he has been active in Republican Party politics for more than 10 years.

"There is not another candidate in this race who has the Republican credentials that I do."

He said he repeatedly has served as precinct chairman and county chairman and as a Midland County delegate to Texas State Republican Party conventions.

Seltzer cited his "proven leadership qualities," said his involvement in party politics, his roles in civic affairs, and his role as the incoming president of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Air Force Association.

In 1986, Seltzer said he helped organize the Taxpayer Awareness Group (TAG) in Midland "and personally proved my fiscal-conservative credentials by helping to hold down local ad-valorem taxes.

TAG lobbied Midland County taxing entities and thereby "saved the taxpayers of Midland County millions of dollars," he said.

In focusing on county courts-at-law, Seltzer said they primarily handle misdemeanor offenses, juvenile cases, and civil cases up to $50,000 in dispute.

"The two county courts-at-law are just one step beneath the district courts in terms of importance," Seltzer said. "And with the rewrite of the Texas Penal Code — which will become effective Sept. 1, 1994 — and with the ever-increasing caseload on the civil docket, the two county courts-at-law are going to become pivotal in the Midland judicial system."

The revised penal code is increasing the range of what constitutes misdemeanor theft from $750 to $1,500, he said.

"That is going to increase the misdemeanor caseload significantly," Seltzer said.

Theft of property valued at more than $1,500 would constitute felony theft and could mean a prison term for the convicted criminal defendant. Misdemeanor offenders are punished by fines, jail terms or both.

BROOKS: Candidate talks about 'tough choices'

(From 1B)

Brooks — whose father, J.C. Brooks, was a county commissioner who died in office in 1968 — said his goal as commissioner would be "to keep county finances efficient and conservative.

"Declining oil prices will force Midland County to face tough choices in county government," Brooks said. "I think we need to deal with those issues with fiscal responsibility and common sense."

Brooks was elected to his ninth term on the Greenwood school board in 1993. He was school-board president for 12 of his 25-plus years on the board.

Brooks, a Midland County native, and his wife, Linda, have three children and 10 grandchildren.

The five-member Commissioners' Court is the policy-making body of Midland County government, which this fiscal year is operating on a $21.5 million budget.

The commissioner's annual salary, including a yearly $4,200 travel allowance, is $31,000.

Chiefs know way to Joe

■ Joe Montana throws a late touchdown pass in an AFC wildcard playoff game and helps Kansas City beat Pittsburgh 27-24 in overtime.

By Timothy W. Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo.— A few of the 74,515 Kansas City fans started heading for the exits Saturday after Joe Montana was dropped for an 8-yard loss on third and 15 at his 17 with 3 minutes to play and his team trailing the Steelers, 24-17.

Perhaps they weren't aware of the Montana mystique, which the quarterback carried over with him from San Francisco, where he was 14-5 in the playoffs and 4-0 in Super Bowls. Perhaps they were trying to beat traffic. But they were most certainly out of their minds.

When tight end Keith Cash blocked the punt of the Steelers' Mark Royals and the ball was picked off in the air by the Kansas City receiver Fred Jones and returned 31 yards to the Steeler 9 with 2 minutes 29 seconds to play, the Montana mystique was completely intact and operating at Arrowhead Stadium. And when Montana hit receiver Tim Barnett at the back of the end zone on a 7-yard touchdown pass — his 40th in the playoffs — on fourth and goal

Harding wins 2nd

DETROIT — Tonya Harding skated to her second national championship as the injured Nancy Kerrigan watched from a luxury box Saturday night.

Both were named to the U.S. team for next month's Lillehammer Olympics.

Kerrigan was forced to withdraw from the event, which she won last year, after being attacked by an unidentified man on Thursday. She suffered a severe knee bruise and doctors told her not to compete.

After Harding, skating last in the free program, hit four triple jumps and skated intelligently to win the title, the U.S. Figure Skating Association's international committee said both of them would go to the Olympics.

The vote to send Kerrigan was unanimous.

"I'm on my way," Harding said.

Michelle Kwan, a 13-year-old rising star from Torrance, Calif., finished second, but was bumped from the Olympic team for Kerrigan, the 1992 Olympic bronze medalist. Kwan was named as first alternate.

"I tried to do my best and whatever comes out of it, I'll be happy," Kwan said. "I think it's fine that Nancy goes to the Olympics. What I got is pretty incredible, anyway."

The USFSA said Kwan might accompany the team to Lillehammer in case Kerrigan can't compete.

Kerrigan has been told by doctors that she can return to skating next week and begin jumping in two weeks. The women's Olympic competition is scheduled for the last weekend in February.

A USFSA review panel will watch her skate on Feb. 6, then will decide if Kerrigan will be in good enough shape for the Olympics.

Harvey Schiller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, praised the decision to send Kerrigan.

"She has been the victim of a senseless and brutal act," Schiller said, "but she has demonstrated toughness and the competitive spirit that only an Olympian would have."

Harding nailed a triple lutz at the outset of her program, then popped a triple axel. She is the only American woman to complete one in competition. But Harding had a big smile on her face when she did only a single axel, as if to say, "Well, I tried."

Pack looks Sharpe in late playoff win

■ Brett Favre finds Sterling Sharpe for a 40-yard, last-minute touchdown to give Green Bay a 28-24 NFC wildcard playoff win.

By Thomas George
N.Y. Times News Service

PONTIAC, Mich. — When the ball left the quarterbacks' hands on Saturday afternoon in this wild-card playoff matchup between the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions, all anyone not involved in the play could do was hold their breath.

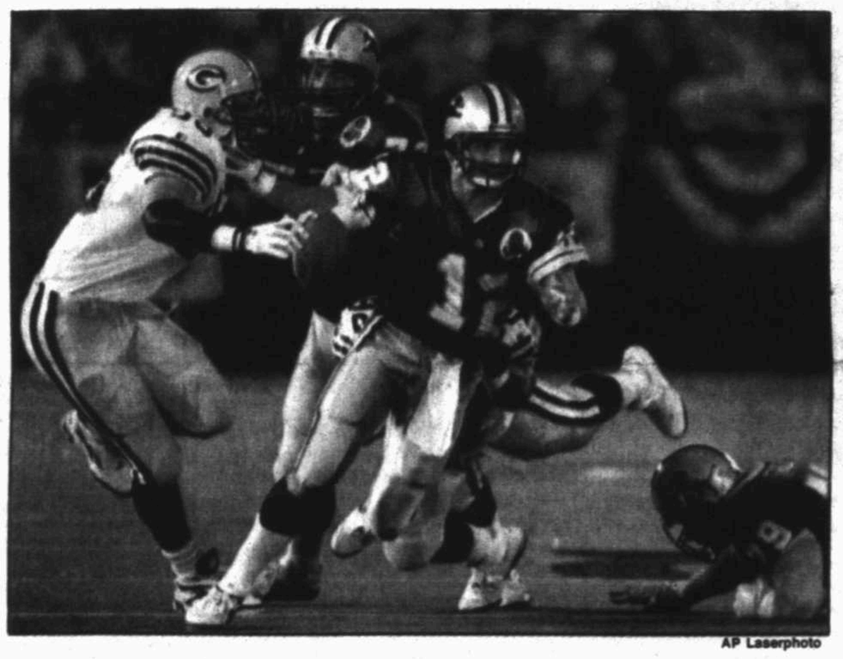

A football pumped with air has never been more lively.

A forward pass has never been more bewildering.

The ball flew all over the Silverdome, but by the time the final pass had landed, Green Bay prevailed with an incredible 28-24 victory over Detroit before 68,479 stunned fans. Green Bay, which had lost by 30-20 here last week, won on a sensational 40-yard pass from quarterback Brett Favre to receiver Sterling Sharpe with 55 seconds left.

Green Bay (10-7) advanced in the Super Bowl derby and will play the Cowboys in Dallas next Sunday. The winner of this Sunday's Giants-Vikings game will play the 49ers in San Francisco next Saturday. The Lions (10-7) are done.

This game had everything: Barry Sanders's return to the Lions after missing the last five games because of a knee injury, the league's longest interception return for a touchdown in a playoff game, and the Favre-to-Sharpe drama at the finish.

Welcome to the 1994 Southwest Conference men's basketball season.

The season tips off Tuesday and the first key game comes Wednesday when Texas travels to College Station to play Texas A&M.

Don't laugh. In just three seasons, coach Tony Barone has pulled the Aggies from the shame of the Kermit Davis-era. With all five starters returning this season, A&M is one of the conference's teams to watch.

The team to beat, however, is Texas.

"I think it's going to be a competitive race, but you still have to look at Texas as the favorite," said Texas Tech coach James Dickey.

Chaps race by Bacone

■ Midland College stays unbeaten with a 124-86 win over Bacone College and remains on a collision course with top-ranked Odessa College.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

It was what has turned into another typical night at the Chaparral Center. This season the question is not whether Midland College will win, but by how much. Not if the Chaps will score 100 points, but with how much time left on the clock.

Saturday night Midland College answered all of those questions and more early as Midland blew out Bacone College 124-86.

Midland, which has won 21 straight dating back to the 1992-93 season, improves to 17-0 on the year while Bacone drops to 4-12. The Chaps open Western Junior College Athletic Conference play Monday at Frank Phillips College.

Early on Bacone made a game of it. Midland led 51-40 at the half, although the game was never in question. Midland coach Steve Green cleared his entire bench within the first 10 minutes of the game, which proved to wear down the eight-man rotation of the Warriors.

"What we have is nine starters," said Green. "The rules say that you can play only five at a time, but we have nine

'Bama shocks No. 1 Arkansas on upset day

Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Alabama, which had lost to Tennessee-Chattanooga and the College of Charleston, pulled off the biggest upset of the college basketball season Saturday, stunning No. 1 Arkansas 66-64.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The Razorbacks, who had won their first 10 games by an average margin of 32 points, failed to hit a field goal in the final three minutes and didn't even get off a shot when they had a chance to tie or win it at the end. Arkansas (1-1 in the Southeastern Conference) was held 40 points below its season average of 104 points per contest.

No. 2 N. Carolina 75, Maryland 70

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — North Carolina held Maryland to one field goal during an eight-minute stretch of the second half and pulled away to a victory.

Eric Montross and Dante Calabria each scored 14 points for the Tar Heels (12-1, 2-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference). North Carolina has won 10 straight since its only loss, in overtime against Massachusetts.

Freshman center Joe Smith led Maryland with 25 points, and Duane Simpkins had 18. The Terrapins (8-3, 1-1) were coming off an upset of No. 12 Georgia Tech on the road.

No. 3 Duke 88, No. 12 Ga. Tech 71

DURHAM, N.C. — Antonio Lang scored a career-high 23 points and Duke erased a 13-point deficit in the first half as it beat Georgia Tech.

Duke (9-0, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) started the game cold, allowing the Yellow Jackets to gain early control. However, the roles reversed and the Blue Devils mounted their challenge. Georgia Tech still shot 64.3 percent in the first half, but its shooting went into a tailspin for the final 10 minutes of the period and never got sharp again.

Georgia 94, No. 4 Kentucky 90

ATHENS, Ga. — Reserve Steve Jones scored Georgia's final four points and had a key steal and dunk in the last five seconds of overtime as the Bulldogs upset Kentucky.

Jones hit one of two free throws with 24 seconds left to break a 90-90 tie. Kentucky's Chris Harrison was guilty of a lane violation on the missed free throw, and Jones, given another chance, converted for a 92-90 lead.

Jones, who finished with seven points, then stole a pass and raced downcourt for a dunk as time ran out.

No. 6 UCLA 104, Oregon St. 71

LOS ANGELES — UCLA got 22 points from Tyus Edney and Ed O'Bannon, and used two first-half spurts and a huge rebounding edge for a victory over Oregon State.

After trailing 7-4, unbeaten UCLA scored 15 straight points in a stretch of 2:34 to take control. O'Bannon had five points and Shon Tarver four of his 20 during the surge.

UCLA's defense asserted itself again later in the half. The Bruins (9-0, 2-0 Pac-10) outscored the Beavers (4-7, 0-2) 15-2 to take a 43-18 lead en route to a 47-24 halftime edge. Edney had seven of his 22 points in that stretch.

No. 7 Temple 80, No. 23 George Washington 64

PHILADELPHIA — Aaron McKie scored 23 points and Temple hit 13 of its first 17 second-half shots in defeating George Washington in an Atlantic 10 game.

The Owls rebounded from a 49-47 loss Thursday to West Virginia, in which they missed 15 consecutive shots, to post their 1,400th victory.

Temple (6-2, 1-1) built a 67-53 lead on its second-half shooting, finishing the run with a McKie 3-pointer with 3:58 remaining. The Owls started the half with an 11-1 run to lead 56-43 on an Eddie Jones jump shot with 8:32 remaining.

No. 8 UMass 70, Duquesne 53

PITTSBURGH — Massachusetts turned to defense with scoring star Lou Roe in foul trouble, forcing 26 turnovers and shutting down Duquesne's outside game for a Atlantic 10 victory.

Roe, averaging 23.3 points per game, drew his third foul with 11:04 remaining in the first half and Massachusetts leading 12-8. The Minutemen promptly went on runs of 7-2 and 7-0 and by the time Roe finally scored with 14:37 remaining, Massachusetts was up by 15 at 44-29.

No. 9 Arizona 94, No. 25 Marquette 80

TUCSON, Ariz. — Damon Stoudamire scored 19 points and five teammates also were in double figures as Arizona's 3-point shooting and defensive quickness sank Marquette.

Arizona drew ahead 84-59 with 10:21 left, but Marquette (8-4) outscored the Wildcats 21-10 the rest of the way. Damon Key had 34 points and 12 rebounds for the Warriors.

Earlier, St. Louis ran its unbeaten streak to 12-0 by outlasting Arizona State 77-75 in the first game of the 7UP Shootout.

Va. Commonwealth 93, No. 11 Louisville 89

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Kendrick Warren made the go-ahead basket in overtime and followed with driving dunk off a steal as Virginia Commonwealth upset Louisville and snapped the Cardinals' 10-game winning streak.

Warren, who finished with 25 points, slipped inside for a layup with 1:51 left, giving Virginia Commonwealth (8-3, 1-0 Metro) an 88-87 lead. On the next play, Warren stole the ball in Louisville's backcourt and drove up the middle for slam 22 seconds later.

Louisville (10-2, 1-1) closed to 90-89 on Clifford Rozier's layup with 1:05 remaining. Virginia Commonwealth's Kenny Harris missed a driving layup with 28 seconds left, but Louisville's Greg Minor misfired on a long jumper 12 seconds later.

No. 13 Michigan 71, Iowa 70

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Michigan came from behind twice after it appeared Iowa had control of the game and beat the Hawkeyes on Jimmy King's 3-pointer with 7.3 seconds left.

Iowa led by 19 points in the first half and was up 68-59 with less than four minutes left before Michigan (10-2) rallied for its second Big Ten victory in as many games.

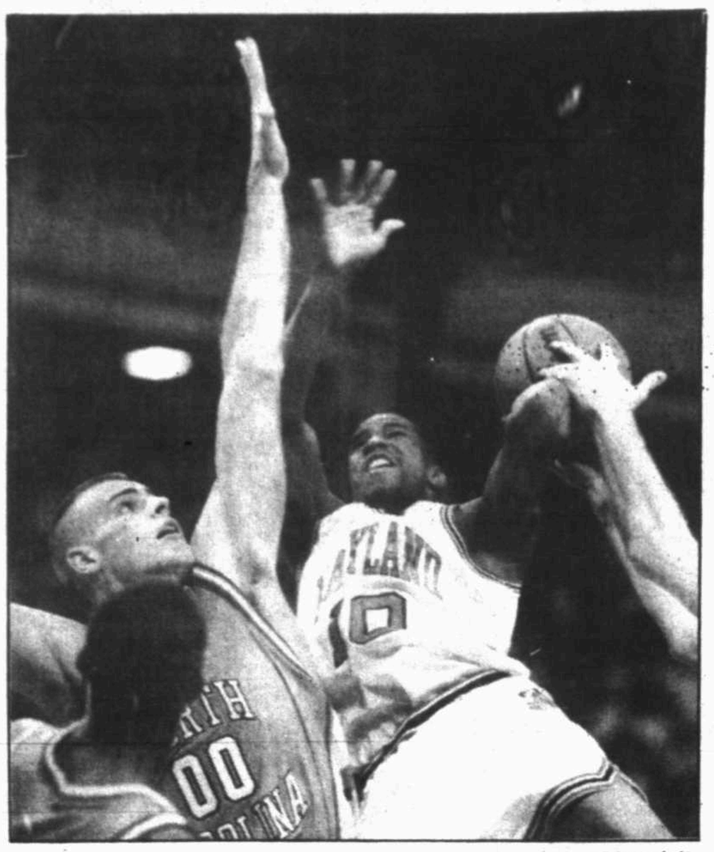

The Hawkeyes (6-5, 0-2) outplayed Michigan for most of the game but faltered down the stretch, giving the Wolverines the opening they needed by missing two free throws and turning the ball over against the press.

No. 14 Indiana 80, Penn St. 72

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Damon Bailey scored 25 points and Pat Graham added a career-high 24 as Indiana used a flurry of second-half foul shots to hold off Penn State.

The Hoosiers (8-2, 1-0 Big Ten), who scored their last 11 points from the line, set a school record with their 36th straight home victory.

Michael Jennings had 18 points, including four 3-pointers in the last five minutes, to lead the Nittany Lions (7-4, 0-2).

University of Maryland guard Duane Simpkins (10) has the ball stripped away by North Carolina center Kevin Salvadori, right, as he tries to shoot over Eric Montrose Saturday in College Park, Md.

No. 15 Wisconsin 69, Ohio State 55

MADISON, Wis. — Michael Finley led a second-half charge with 19 points as the Badgers erased their first halftime deficit of the season and routed Ohio State.

Finley, averaging 19.5 points but held to two in the first 20 minutes, scored the first six points of the second half and finished with a game-high 21.

Rashard Griffith and Tracy Webster added 16 points each for the Badgers (11-0, 2-0 Big Ten), who are off to their best start since the 1915-16 team won its first 12 games. Griffith also had a game-high 13 rebounds.

No. 16 Connecticut 77, No. 20 Boston College 71

STORRS, Conn. — Donyell Marshall scored 24 points and matched his career-high with 16 rebounds as Connecticut scrambled to defeat Boston College.

Danya Abrams, who had a career-high 21 points to lead the Eagles, hit a layup with 2:21 left to cut it to 71-70, but that was the last field goal for Boston College.

Marshall, who rebounded after Abrams missed a three-point conversion, was intentionally fouled with 1:17 to go and made a free throw to make it 72-70.

No. 18 Syracuse 79, Pittsburgh 75

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — John Wallace hit two free throws with 1:22 to play, then blocked a shot to set up a three-point play by Lawrence Moten as Syracuse held off Pittsburgh in the final minutes for a Big East victory.

Moten and Adrian Autry each sank a pair of free throws in the final 30 seconds to ruin Pittsburgh's comeback attempt.

Syracuse (9-1, 2-1 Big East), which staged a 24-point turnaround in the first half, defeated Pittsburgh for the fifth straight time and dealt the Panthers (7-3) their first conference loss in three games.

No. 19 Minnesota 73, N'western 65

EVANSTON, Ill. — Voshon Lenard scored 23 points and Townsend Orr added 18 to lead Minnesota to a victory over Northwestern, the Gophers' 10th straight win over the Wildcats.

Lenard scored his team's first nine points after halftime to help the Golden Gophers (10-3, 1-0 Big Ten) go ahead 45-35, but the Wildcats (9-2, 0-2) rallied on their long-range shooting and tied the game 57-57 on back-to-back 3-pointers by Todd Leslie and Matt Purdy.

Ernest Nzigamasabo, an African from Burundi, broke the tie with a layup, Arriel McDonald scored and Nzigamasabo added another basket to give Minnesota a 63-58 lead with 1:50 left.

Michigan St. 79, No. 21 Illinois 74

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Shawn Respert made five of six free throws following an intentional foul and two technicals called against Illinois coach Lou Henson as Michigan State beat the Illini.

Respert converted the five-point play with 2:38 left to give Michigan State (10-4 overall, 1-1 Big Ten) a six-point lead. The play began with an intentional foul committed by Illinois center Shelly Clark.

The ejection for the two technicals was the first for Henson in his 19 years at Illinois.

No. 22 Vanderbilt 97, S. Carolina 83

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Frank Seckar scored a career-high 23 points, including seven 3-pointers, as Vanderbilt beat South Carolina and former coach Eddie Fogler.

Fans in a sold-out Memorial Gym divided evenly between booing and cheering Fogler, who left for South Carolina last April after leading the Commodores to the NCAA tournament and a Southeastern Conference regular season title.

South Carolina (4-6, 1-1 SEC) led for nearly three minutes to start the game before the Commodores (8-3, 1-1) took control behind a school record 16 3-pointers, breaking the previous mark by one.

No. 24 California 79, Washington 64

BERKELEY, Calif. — Lamond Murray scored 26 points and freshman center Michael Stewart tied a school record with five blocked shots, helping California extend its winning streak to eight games with a victory over Washington.

Cal jumped out to an early lead and held onto it, allowing its reserves to get more playing time than usual. Murray played just 24 minutes, going 9-for-12 from the field

Kansas routs SMU

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Richard Scott scored 22 points and led a 21-0 first-half run Saturday night as No. 5 Kansas rolled to its 11th consecutive victory, a 91-59 rout of Southern Methodist.

■ SWC Roundup

The Jayhawks (15-1) defeated SMU for the second time in 10 days and ran their all-time record against the Mustangs to 24-4.

Mo.-Kansas City 78 Texas Tech 70

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tony Dumas scored a career-high 44 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to lead the University of Missouri-Kansas City to a victory over the Red Raiders.

Dumas, a 6-foot-6 senior guard, scored his 2,000th career point at 15:21 of the second half. He became the first player in UMKC history to reach that plateau as the Kangaroos improved to 5-9.

Texas Tech (4-6) tied the score at 32-32 on Mark Davis' basket just into the second half. UMKC then outscored Texas Tech 28-7 to open up a 21-point lead, 60-39, with 9:15 remaining. Texas Tech rallied to come within five, at 71-66 with 1:10 left, on 10 points from Jason Sasser, nine from Lance Hughes, and eight from Koy Smith.

Montana 79, Rice 70

HOUSTON — Matt Kempfert scored 24 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, leading unbeaten Montana past Rice.

Shawn Samuelson added 16 points and 7 rebounds for the Grizzlies (13-0), while Travis DeCuire had 13 points. Rice (7-4) was led by Torrey Andrews with 27 points and Adam Peakes with 20 points and 11 rebounds.

Rockets win fourth straight

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon had 23 points and 17 rebounds and Mario Elie scored 19 points in relief of Vernon Maxwell, leading Houston to a 100-93 victory over Philadelphia on Saturday night.

It was the Rockets' fourth straight victory and stretched their streak to five in a row over the 76ers, who haven't beaten Houston since Jan. 2, 1992.

Maxwell was hospitalized on Thursday night, complaining of an irregular heartbeat. He was released Saturday after medication corrected the condition, but he won't accompany the team to Orlando for Monday night's game.

Elie, making his first start of the season, also had four assists, almost covering Maxwell's 5.2 average. Rookie guard Sam Cassell scored 16 points.

Bulls 100, Mavericks 81

CHICAGO — Scottie Pippen scored 20 points and Chicago rolled to a victory over Dallas after starting the game with a 21-6 run.

The loss was the sixth straight for the Mavericks, whose record dipped to 2-29. The victory was the Bulls' 13th in 15 games overall and 12th straight over Dallas.

Jim Jackson scored 25 points for the Mavericks while B.J. Armstrong had 17 for Chicago, which never trailed and led by as many as 17 points in the first quarter, which ended 31-16.

Hornets 102, Knicks 99

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Dell Curry scored 30 points and hit six of eight 3-point shots as Charlotte erased a 20-point deficit and held on in a wild finish to beat New York.

Despite shooting just 40 percent, the Hornets rallied largely on the efforts of Curry. Four other Hornets scored in double figures, including Mike Gminski with a season-high 14 points.

Magic 112, Bullets 101

ORLANDO, Fla. — It was a typical game for Shaquille O'Neal, who had 29 points, 19 rebounds and more complaints about the officiating as Orlando beat Washington.

O'Neal was whistled for two flagrant fouls trying to block shots in the fourth quarter. He also got slapped with a technical foul for encouraging the Orlando Arena crowd of 15,291 to voice its disapproval after the first call.

Nick Anderson and Dennis Scott each had 19 points for Orlando, which led 84-76 after three quarters and began the fourth period with a 10-0 spurt to open a 94-76 advantage.

Don MacLean hit 10 of his first 12 shots and led Washington with 31 points.

Heat 109, Clippers 90

LOS ANGELES — Reserve center Matt Geiger scored 23 points and fellow backup Rony Seikaly had 11 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter as Miami beat Los Angeles.

The victory marked the first time the Heat has started a month 4-0 in the team's six-year history. It was Miami's second-best defensive effort in its 13 meetings with the Clippers, who are 3-10 against the Heat, including 1-6 at the Sports Arena.

Pacers 101, Pistons 92

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Byron Scott, starting in place of the ill Reggie Miller, scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half, carrying Indiana to a victory over Detroit, the Pistons' ninth straight defeat.

Scott's 3-pointer and 15-footer at the start of the fourth quarter helped the Pacers build an 85-78 advantage with 9:31 left. The Pistons rallied to 92-88 at 3:42, but Indiana outscored the Pistons 9-4 to close the game.

Sean Elliott scored 26 points and Olden Polynice had 25 points and 15 rebounds for Detroit, which has lost five consecutive home games. Pistons forward Terry Mills also sat out the game with the flu.

Vern Fleming scored 18 points and Rik Smits 15 for the Pacers, who finished the third quarter by outscoring the Pistons 18-8 to take a 77-74 lead. Scott had a layup and a short jumper in the run.

Hawks 102, Cavaliers 89

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins scored 30 points, including 15 in a stretch that erased a 10-point deficit, as Atlanta posted its fifth consecutive victory, 102-89 over Cleveland.

It was the 21st victory in 24 games for the Hawks, now 14-1 at home this season.

The victory came in Mike Fratello's first game at The Omni as a coach since directing the Hawks for seven seasons. He resigned after the 1989-90 season.

Gerald Wilkins, Dominique's brother, led the Cavaliers with 19 points, and Brad Daugherty had 17 points and 10 rebounds. Kevin Willis scored 21 points and Stacey Augmon 16 for Atlanta.

Nuggets 104, Kings 98

DENVER — LaPhonso Ellis scored seven of his 22 points in the last three minutes, lifting Denver to a victory over Sacramento.

The Nuggets had lost three straight at home after winning nine consecutive games at McNichols Arena, where the Kings have lost 14 times since their last victory on March 2, 1987.

SuperSonics 108, Jazz 87

SEATTLE — Seattle got 16 points each from Sam Perkins, Gary Payton and Kendall Gill and improved their NBA-best record to 26-3 by handing Utah its third straight defeat.

The Sonics notched their sixth win in a row for the second time this season and improved their home record to 15-1. The Sonics also have a 10-game winning streak this season.

Karl Malone had 20 points and John Stockton 18 for the Jazz, who came to Seattle after back-to-back defeats at home against Phoenix and Miami.

Nets 90, Bucks 87

MILWAUKEE — Kevin Edwards had 19 points and Kenny Anderson 18 as New Jersey continued Milwaukee's home woes with a victory.

The Bucks beat the Nets 100-91 at the Meadowlands on Wednesday night, but New Jersey turned the tables by handing Milwaukee its 11th loss in 14 home games.

Todd Day had nine of his 17 points during a 14-6 spurt midway through the final period, closing the Bucks, who trailed by 11 in the third quarter, to an 82-81 deficit with 5:47 left.

Anderson responded with a 3-pointer with 3:57 remaining, giving the Nets an 87-83 lead before Eric Murdock hit a pair of free throws with 2:33 left to pull the Bucks to 87-85. Anderson's two free throws with 32 seconds to go made it 89-85.

Timberwolves 108, Celtics 90

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Person came off the bench to score 20 points as Minnesota beat Boston, the Timberwolves' most decisive victory in more than a year.

Micheal Williams added 15 points and 11 assists and Luc Longley 13 points and 11 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who lost eight of their previous nine games and six of seven at home.

PGA seniors keeping pace with 'juniors'

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Pro golf's old folks are still hanging in there, matching stroke for stroke with their younger counterparts on the PGA Tour.

■ Mercedes

"I don't think they quite know what to make of it," Dave Stockton said Saturday after he and another senior, Bob Murphy, matched the leading totals of the younger players, the ones they call "the juniors," in the Mercedes Championships.

Murphy and Stockton, playing from the same tees as the younger players, finished three rounds at 208 and tied for the lead in the seniors section of this winners-only event.

Phil Mickelson and Fred Couples had the same 8-under-par, 54-hole aggregate and shared the lead in the separate but simultaneous competition for 1993 tournament winners from the regular PGA Tour.

Of at least equal interest in the event that previously was known as the Tournament of Champions is the completely unofficial but positively intriguing competition between the juniors and the seniors, playing on the same course and from the same tees.

"No matter what happens," Stockton said after his round of 69, "it's sure going to show some people we can still play."

Murphy, who had a bogey-free 67, took a more conservative view of the junior-vs.-senior confrontation in Sunday's final round.

"I'd like to think we can win tomorrow, but I expect somebody to come out and dust us off pretty good," Murphy said.

And Jack Nicklaus, third alone in the senior competition at 69-211, said the relatively high standing of seniors is more attributable to lack of success by the juniors rather than over-achieving by the seniors.

"It's more surprising that the other tour isn't doing better," Nicklaus said. "I just don't think the regular tour is playing that well. I think the senior tour is playing about what you'd expect."

Couples, still weak from a bout with flu, had a third-round 69 to gain a share of the regular-tour lead while Mickelson. The 23-year-old left-hander who led all scorers after two rounds, shot 70.

David Edwards had the best round of the tournament, a 66, and was a single stroke back in the regular tour's chase for a $180,000 winner's share of a $1 million purse.

PACK: Sharpe wide open on TD

were going to toss a short pass to a back in front of him and then wheeled and heaved the ball on the fly into the right corner of the Lions' end zone. Sharpe had run 10 yards down the right sideline, slowed, and then sped up again. Cornerback Kevin Scott lost Sharpe on his slow-down move. Sharpe was wide open in the end zone for the catch.

CHIEFS: Lowery redeems himself with 1:43 to go to help tie the score at 24-24, it all seemed preordained.

The Chiefs' defense held the Steelers to four plays in 15 seconds, and Montana guided Kansas City down the field in the final 1:14, with no timeouts, to help set up Nick Lowery for a 43-yard field-goal attempt with 12 seconds to go to win the game. But the kick was wide right and the game went into overtime.

Guess what?

Kansas City won the coin toss for overtime. Everything was falling into place for Montana and the Chiefs. And though it took them two shots, the Chiefs came away with a 27-24 victory on a 32-yard field goal by Lowery with 3:57 left in overtime. They rallied from a 17-7 halftime deficit to do it.

And Montana was on his way to proving that he can work playoff magic in two conferences.

But in the first half, it was a tale of two sets of gloves — actually three gloves total. Montana wore a gauche pair of red gloves — the first time he had ever worn gloves in his career. And the Steelers' quarterback, Neil O'Donnell, wore a single black glove on his non-throwing hand, opting for the Michael Jackson look.

SWC: Texas 7th in league last year

(From 1C)

seventh in the SWC last year at 4-10, they've reloaded with a healthy and drug-free B.J. Tyler, transfers Tremaine Wingfield, Roderick Anderson and Rick McIver, and freshman Reggie Freeman.

Texas opened the season 6-5 (entering Wednesday's game vs. UTSA), a good record considering UT played No. 4 Kentucky, No. 16 Connecticut, No. 21 Illinois, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Utah, Florida and LSU.

The harsh schedule is typical for Longhorns coach Tom Penders, who tries boosting his chances for an at-large bid into the NCAA tournament by playing non-conference games against teams he expects to be in the tournament.

Judging by the opinions of most SWC coaches, Texas doesn't have to worry about an invitation into the tournament because it will likely get the automatic bid that goes to the league champion.

At least, that's the opinion of most everyone except Penders.

"I don't think it's going to be Texas and a bunch of other teams," he said. "I think we're going to have to play at the level we're at and better."

John Shumate's SMU Mustangs also were severely tested early this season.

Their non-conference schedule is so tough, Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson called it a "fire-the-coach" schedule because of a six-week, nine-game road stretch that included games against the No. 1 Razorbacks, Missouri, Arizona State and two against No. 4 Kansas.

Shumate laughed off Richardson's statement, saying he's looking forward to hosting most of those teams next year. Besides, his team has faced up to the challenge pretty well despite being 2-7 entering Saturday's rematch against the Jayhawks.

"Playing Arkansas prepares us for Kansas and Kansas prepares us for the opening of conference play," Shumate said. "I think all these steps are going to help us in the long-term and will make us a better conference team.

"We've been acquiring mental toughness. We've been competitive. We know what we have to do to get to the level where those teams are."

The Mustangs better learn a lot. Conference coaches picked the defending champs, who have only one returning starter in Chad Allen, to finish last.

The way things have gone so far, that dubious distinction may go to Houston, where first-year coach Alvin Brooks' cast of unknowns began the season 2-8.

"Going into this year, nobody could tell you who was on our roster other than Anthony Goldwire," Brooks said.

Stars' Modano has surgery to repair knee

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Stars center Mike Modano will have arthroscopic surgery Monday to repair torn cartilage in his left knee and will treat a torn ligament in the knee with rehabilitation, the team said Saturday.

Even with both injuries, Modano is expected to return in four weeks, said team spokesman Larry Kelly.

The injury will keep Modano from playing in the All-Star game Jan. 22. He was the team's lone selection and will be replaced by the league next week, Kelly said.

KENT OIL, INC.

KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

DO YOU WONDER WHAT COMPANY NAME WILL BE ON YOUR PAYCHECK NEXT WEEK?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a stable West Texas-based company, thirty six years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 Credit Union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. Most of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland. Pre-employment drug test required.

Ford Outsells Chevrolet For The 7th Consecutive Year with FIVE of the TOP TEN BEST SELLING VEHICLES In America the 3rd Year In A Row!

Ford Division and its dealers again set numerous sales records during the 1993 calendar year. The F-Series Trucks remains the #1 Vehicle (and truck) in the industry and Taurus is again the #1 Car. In fact, Ford Division was the industry's combined Car and Truck Sales Leader for the 7th Consecutive year, outselling Chevrolet by 580,029 units, the widest margin of victory ever. Ford Dealers again dominated the competition.

• Ford Division was the Industry's Total Car Sales Leader, OUTSELLING CHEVROLET BY 242,609, the greatest leadership magin since 1930.

• Ford Division OUTSOLD CHEVROLET BY 337, 420 TRUCKS, the largest margin of victory by any division in history

Other Notable Accomplishments:

• Ford was the leader in ten of the fifteen market segments in which it competes

• Taurus (1), Escort (5) and Tempo (8) were three of the top ten best selling cars in America

• Taurus, Thunderbird, Escort, and Mustang all led their respective market segment

• F-Series (1), Ranger (3), Explorer (4), and Aerostar (10) were four of the top ten best selling trucklines in America

• Bronco, Explorer, Club Wagon, Econoline Van, Ranger, and F-Series led their respective market segments

• Ranger sales of 340,184 represented the best calendar year volume on record for any compact pickup nameplate

• F-Series was the best selling vehicle, car or truck, for the 17th consecutive year

ADD THE NUMBERS AND YOU GET 580,029

That's 580,029 units more than Chevrolet sold

As we enter 1994 we will be celebrating our 30th Anniversary. Since 1964 we have been dedicated to offering the public the best products and services available anywhere. At Rogers Ford we believe the Ford Motor Company is committed to building the finest cars and trucks on the market today and to support their dealers with the latest service technology and customer assistance. The Rogers Ford family is proud to be an exclusive Ford dealer today and representing the #1 Selling Vehicles in America.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Text by Kes Gilhome

A cottage with character

Country Club Heights in Old Midland is full of old, charming houses that are full of character and originality, and this lovely cottage-style home at 720 Storey is no exception.

It has many features that one doesn't find in more modern houses such a wealth of detail in mouldings, glassed in bookshelves, two fireplaces and internal French doors.

In the last few years, the house has had an extension built onto it which has increased the size of the property to just under 2,000 square feet.

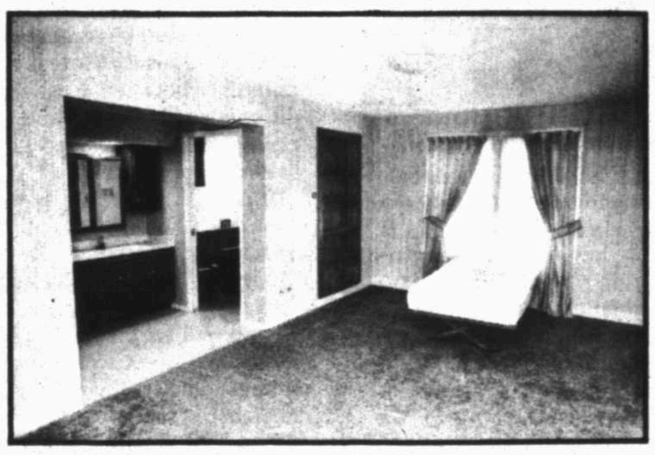

This three bed-roomed house has a unique floor plan which maximizes useable floor space whilst creating an open flow which seems to make the house bigger

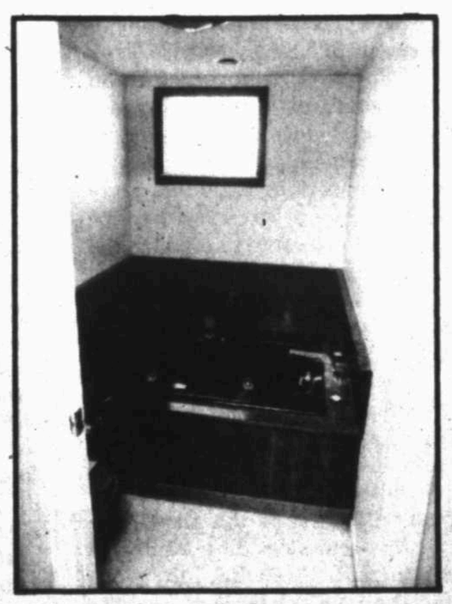

The original house dates back to the 1930's, and all of the original floors are high quality hardwood which gives a wonderful feel to the house.

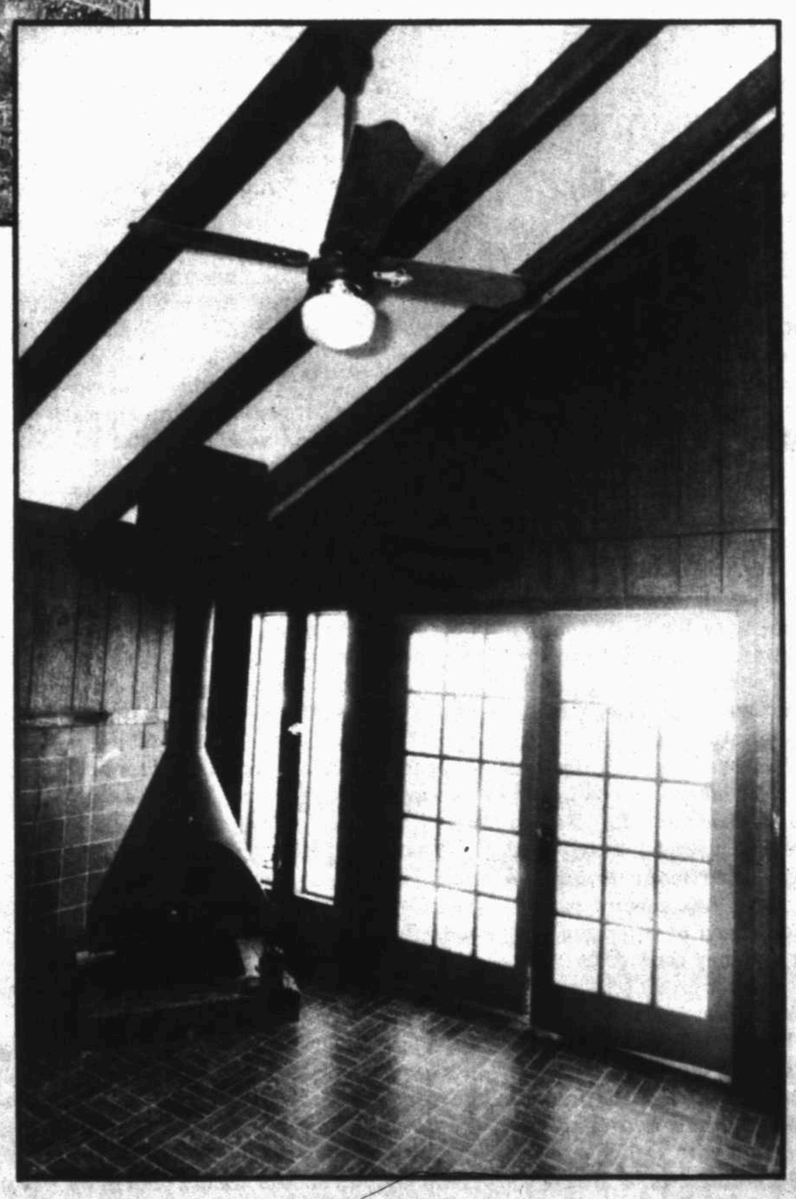

For a small family or first time buyer this house would be dream come true: not only because it is affordable (at $43,500), but also because it is very much a blank canvas in that it needs some modernization.

Unlike the traditional Midland home, which has already been molded to somebody else's taste, this home presents a unique opportunity to create a dream house to suit the buyers own taste.

For more information about this lovely property, or to arrange a viewing, call Nell Scott at Langston Realtors, (915) 682-9495.

DON'T BE ALARMED: Choosing a security system may be easier than once thought

Pat Orseth
President/Midland
Association of REALTORS

Nearly 7 million homes are burglarized each year according to the National Crime Survey, sponsored by the U.S. Justice Department. The Justice Department also estimates that 80 percent of urban households, 70 percent of suburban households and 64 percent of rural households will be likely victims of burglary over a 20 year span. Traditional methods of home security include locks on doors and windows, flood lights, and dogs to scare off would-be burglars. Another method of home protection is electronic security.

"Homeowners who are considering electronic security for their homes, need to be aware of guidelines to consider when choosing an alarm company," says Pat Orseth, president of The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc. "To help you make an informed decision we recommend the following guidelines." Contact the Better Business Bureau, neighbors, and local police and fire departments to see who they recommend. Ask several companies for the names of previous customers that you may contact for references. If they won't provide this information, look elsewhere. Is the company a member of a local, state, or national alarm association? These non-profit trade associations promote professionalism, ethics and education to remain current with technology and practices of the industry. Check with your state or local government to see if licensing is mandatory in your area. If licensing is mandatory, ask the company to show proof of their licensing as well as proof that the installer is licensed.

Once you have found three or four companies that meet these criteria, have each survey your house and offer written, detailed quotes on the equipment and installation of an alarm system. There are many different types of alarm systems. One should consider a system which protects the entire perimeter of a home -- meaning every door and window through which a burglar could enter -- and the areas inside. Also, consider an alarm that will ring a bell or sound a siren or buzzer on the premises. Many companies install central reporting alarms which also silently signal the alarm company's headquarters to dispatch police and perhaps alarm company agents. If permitted by local law, some companies offer direct alarm connection to the police or fire department.

It is a good idea, and very economical, to have a fire alarm system installed along with your burglar system. Have the company give you price estimates for both. To protect your alarm system from a power outage or from a burglar who may cut the power current to your house, it is necessary that you have an auxiliary source of power, usually a battery pack. Remember, burglary theft holdups and fire happen 24 hours a day. The company you choose should offer a 24 hour monitoring service.

Once you have chosen a reputable company which has given you a detailed quote on an alarm system that fits your needs, you are probably ready to sign a contract. The contract should cover warranty, service, and monitoring. Alarm systems can be bought or leased. It is not recommended to buy or lease a system from a company that does not offer a contract for continuing maintenance and service. There are usually two costs involved: the installation charge and monthly service charge. Such a service charge may include not only costs for maintenance, but also the cost for special telephone lines (if leased) and response to alarms by an alarm company agent.

The installation should be warranted for a minimum of 90 days. If you are purchasing the equipment, you may consider a service contract. Review the contract in detail or ask your lawyer to do so. "Keep in mind that you will play an important role in the success of the system," says Orseth. "For it to be successful you must understand how the system works, what it does or does not do, and what you must do to keep the system in proper working condition. Have the alarm company give you written instructions for testing and using the alarm system. This will cut down on the number of false alarms and maintenance calls."

"An investment in an alarm system is an investment in the security and safety of your loved ones," says Orseth. "Take the time to familiarize yourself with the company you are working with and exactly what protection you will get from the alarm system you've chosen. The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc., is one of more than 1,800 boards of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association and the voice for real estate.

Langston Realtors talk about . . .

New law requires seller to disclose home's condition

Joanne Langston
President/Langston Realtors

Optional Sellers' Disclosure forms have been in use by Texas Realtors for approximately 5 years but a new state law, effective January 1, now requires home sellers to furnish a detailed statement on the condition of their home. And there are 'big teeth" in that requirement: a purchaser who has not been provided a copy of the Seller's Disclosure Form prior to making an offer on a property may withdraw the offer for any reason up to 7 days after receiving the disclosure.

The disclosure form was designed to inform buyers of pre-owned homes about any hidden or less obvious defects in a property as well as to protect sellers and Realtors from potential law suits by disgruntled purchasers. "It is quite a comprehensive form - a check list of over 95 items," Joan Langston, president of Langston Realtors said. "in our firm's 27 years of experience, we have seldom seen sellers who intentionally misled buyers (and the Realtor!) about the condition of their home. In fact, most sellers are eager to point out every little detail. However, it is easy for a seller to forget the many normal, and usually small, problems that occur in every day living in all homes, especially if it occurred 3 or 4 years ago! This form helps the seller remember previous maintenance and alerts the purchaser to future maintenance that may be expected," Langston added.

"The disclosure should also assist in preventing miscommunication between seller, buyer and/or Realtor. After all, there is a vast difference between a "new air conditioning compressor" and a "compressor with new parts," Langston said.

"It is most important, however, that buyers not view the disclosure as a warranty or guarantee on the property," according to Langston. "On any offer to purchase, buyers should still request the right to have the property inspected by licensed inspectors of their choice and should totally satisfy themselves as to the condition of the home prior to purchasing. They should also consider obtaining a home warranty policy; these are relatively inexpensive for the type of coverage afforded."

"We will be displaying copies of the seller's disclosure on the properties listed with our firm and will be encouraging all potential purchasers to review the report prior to making an offer on the home," Langston said "In our experience, use of the disclosure has been a win-win situation for everyone. Similar forms are in use in approximately a dozen states; we are delighted that Texas has taken a progressive step in real estate transactions."

HOW TO GET RICH SLOWLY
You can build a small fortune farming snails.
The escargot-hungry French eat 50,000 tons of them a year. The affluent Western World can't find enough of them and must import them. One "Farmer" with a few "Gathers" can earn $100,000 a year. A small garden plot is all the land you need. Part-time. Full-time. Small investment. Write or call for free details on this "sleeper" today.

BRIEFING

A West Texas lease struggles against low prices.

Crude recovering

Crude oil prices moved above the $15 level this past week, boosted by a sharp drop in U.S. crude supplies and reports OPEC members may move up their scheduled March meeting in order to try to cut production.

Late in the week, futures prices for West Texas Intermediate were $15.42 a barrel. The posted price had risen to $13.75 a barrel.

Natural gas prices also received a boost, with February contracts for delivery of natural gas rising to $2.09 per thousand cubic feet.

Higher gas prices

WASHINGTON — Higher gas prices may be on the horizon in light of a report released Wednesday by the American Gas Association. In its first weekly survey of the amount of natural gas in storage, the data indicates that the nation had 2.37 trillion cubic feet of gas in storage, a decline of 7.6 percent from the previous week. In the gas-consuming states, generally east of the Mississippi River, inventories declined 10.1 percent.

Most traders had suspected that gas inventories were declining because of the winter storms that have swept across the country.

When the weekly report confirms supply drawdowns, gas prices are likely to rise in anticipation of the next cold snap. When the reports show that local gas utilities and industrial users have not dipped into inventories, the price is likely to fall.

Rig count falls

Drilling activity continued to fall sharply during the last week of 1993, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In a holiday-shortened week ending December 29, the company reported that the Permian Basin rig count fell 13 rigs to 99 from the previous week and is well below the year-ago count of 125.

Nationwide, the rig count also showed a sharp drop, falling 29 rigs to 814. A year ago the rig count was 922.

Among major producing states, Texas showed the sharpest decline, 15 rigs, while the sharpest increase was in Louisiana, four rigs.

Horizontal hit

STAVANGER, Norway — Phillips Petroleum Company Norway (PPCoN) has successfully completed the testing program of its first horizontal well in the main Ekofisk field reservoir, and is expected to drill more.

The 2/4 A-21A well, which was drilled to a total measured depth of 18,135 feet, or true vertical depth of 10,500 feet, has achieved an initial stabilized production of approximately 11,000 barrels of oil and 11 million cubic feet of gas per day.

PPCoN, as operator of the eight Ekofisk area oil and gas fields on behalf of the Phillips Norway Group, completed the first horizontal well in the Ekofisk area, the Tor 2/4 E-6, in 1992.

"We are very encouraged by the initial production results from this new horizontal well," said Knut Am, president and managing director of PPCoN. "As a result, we are planning additional horizontal wells to improve recovery from the flanks, or edges, of the main Ekofisk field."

The photo composite right of maps of North Texas and the Permian Basin is symbolic of how an industry group now being formed could facilitate the exchange of oil and gas properties and the merger of different producing areas. Like-kind property exchanges are not new to the industry, but a database and organized effort to promote them is new. Efforts to organize the exchange program are being coordinated by the Petroleum Industry Alliance at CEED.

Oil property swap meet studied

■ Program would allow oil companies to swap properties for tax and consolidation purposes

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A new industry "swap meet" group now in the process of being organized could speed up the rationalization of oil and gas assets and stimulate development activity in the Permian Basin.

Almost 100 members of the oil and gas industry, including representatives of major oil companies and large independent oil companies met recently at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification (CEED) to take the first steps toward forming a trade group to exchange oil and gas properties.

"If oil companies can make like-kind exchanges that will allow them to consolidate and increase their position in fields in which they already have an interest, the improved ownership could stimulate oil companies to launch more development drilling and capital projects in those fields. More projects would equate to more employment," said Steve Melzer, director of the Petroleum Industry Alliance, headquartered at CEED.

Like-kind exchanges, in which oil companies simply trade interests in fields have been around for many years and have been very popular, but the hangup has been the lack of a clearing house, database, or association where oil company representatives could compare interests and initiate trade proposals with other companies.

"This is a very popular concept in the industry, because it allows a company to trade properties of equal value tax free. It allows oil companies to consolidate and put their eggs in the best basket possible without tax penalties," said Keith Seanard, engineering advisor for Fina Oil and Chemical Co. and one of the organizers of the first like-kind meeting.

Seanard said that in the past two years Fina had executed seven like-kind exchanges, ranging from $250,000 to $10 million in value

TRC initiates electronic filing

■ Computer filings will ease paperwork load for operators and Commission.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Texas Railroad Commission is following in the footsteps of the Internal Revenue Service, slowly entering the world of electronic filing.

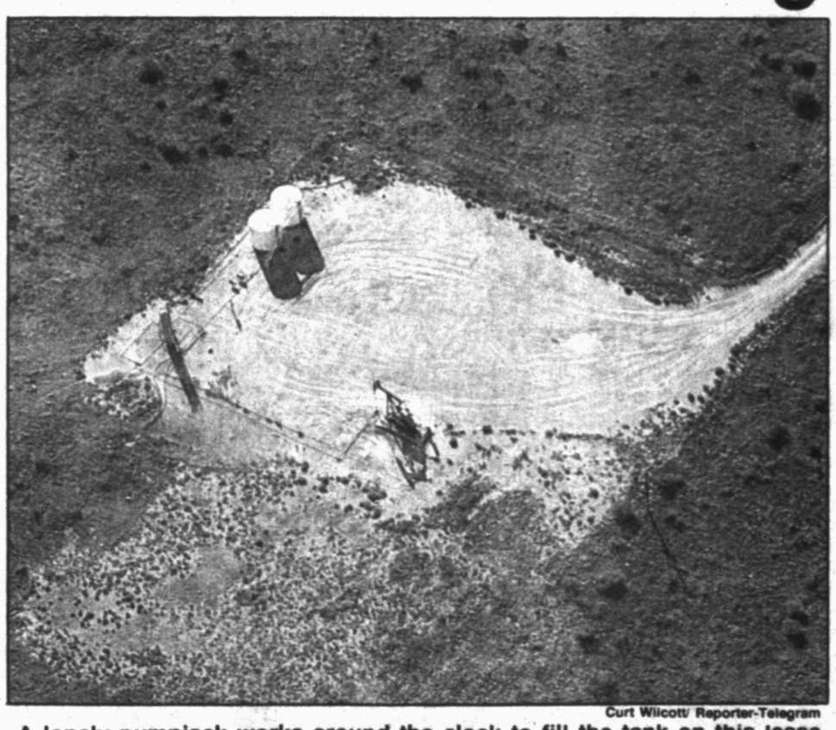

Brian Schaible, a spokesman for the Railroad Commission in Austin, said the program began this past fall and the commission is gradually expanding it to include additional forms as the system gets up and running.

He said it amounts to a electronic bulletin board system.

"It's pretty easy for the operators to use. They dial up from their computer into our system, fill out some basic information and we open them an account. They do some test filings to make sure their system is working with ours, then they can start filing."

Currently, operators can file two forms electronically — the MD-1, used by gas well operators to tell the com-

A lonely pumpjack works around the clock to fill the tank on this lease. Soon, operators will be able to reduce the number of man hours required to report on lease activity with a new electronic filing system at the Texas Railroad Commission.

Software will assist small producers

By Mella McEwen

With oil prices hovering at five-year lows, it has become even more imperative for oil and gas operators — particularly the small ones — to be more efficient and productive.

Paperwork is one of the most time-consuming tasks producers have, but computers and new software packages are drastically reduce the time spent filling out forms. Now an Austin firm says it has developed a software package that will help operators save time and money in reporting.

Developed DataConcepts the software, which is entitled "Oil and Gas Forms - Texas", is a database manager and form generator that includes over 50 Railroad Commission-required forms.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

The way things were supposed to be

Pitts

In his newest book, See I Told You So, Rush Limbaugh, the conservative radio host, has assailed President Clinton's veracity. He accuses him of pretending to be a moderate Democrat with new ideas and values while he was in reality an ultra liberal with old liberal ideas and old New Age values.

The mince-no-words Limbaugh further charged that Clinton said whatever it took to get elected and made campaign promises he had no intention of keeping. He then takes several chapters to document and make his point, and takes Clinton to task for his empty promises.

Now, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA), is not mincing any words as it compares Governor Bill Clinton's energy promises to President Clinton's energy policy. With documentation in hand, PBPA is taking Clinton to task for his "empty" promises on energy.

In a recent letter to the Chief Executive, following the announcement of his energy policy, Harry Spannaus, executive vice president PBPA, makes this charge: "You have personally made campaign promises relating to crude oil price stability and foreign imports, but it appears evident by the text of your recently released Natural Gas and Oil Initiative that you have drilled a 'dry hole' when it relates to domestic crude oil enhancement and fair, stable crude oil pricing."

Spannaus said it was "shameful" that Clinton had offered such a do-nothing energy policy for crude oil in light of his campaign promises and especially in light of the recent crash in crude oil prices that threatens to put even more producers out of business, and take more marginal production off stream making the U.S. even more reliant on foreign oil.

Like Limbaugh, PBPA has its charge against the campaigner turned president well-documented — perhaps even better than the portly prognosticator. In PBPA's case, however, it is solid documentation — a list of direct quotes from Clinton. Before the election the oil and gas association sent out an energy questionnaire to all the candidates, including presidential candidates.

"We still have that questionnaire and candidate Clinton's response," said Spannaus, "and we are sending him a copy to refresh his memory. The questions we asked were very direct and left little wiggle room. His comments were very direct. Now we want to see if he will try to duck, dodge, rationalize or side step his pre-election answers on energy," said Spannaus.

Asked if he favored a strong domestic oil industry, price stability, environmental sensibility and limiting imports or creating incentives to insure the survival of a strong domestic industry, here is what Clinton had to say:

On oil imports — "It is desirable to cut our dependence on foreign oil...It is clear to even the casual observer that our domestic oil and gas industry, particularly independent oil and gas producers have been neglected by Republican Administrations...The United States is the only advanced nation without a serious plan to encourage conservation and reduce dependence on and that each one had been a win-win trade for the participants. "We got what we wanted and they got what they wanted," he said.

SWAP: Like-kind group organizes

The reasons for wanting to trade are many. One company may own a large interest in a field and want to increase that interest to institute a waterflood. The options are to trade for properties within the field or buy properties within the field. For some independents, it may be a matter of trading out of an expensive CO_2 project operated by a major oil company. In other situations operators may want to accumulate enough interest in a field to control their own destiny and operate the field.

"The advantage to like-kind exchanges over selling properties," said Dale Brown, president of Petroleum Strategies Inc., "is that tax savings allows a company to keep 100 percent of its money for development rather than just 65 percent."

He noted that Petroleum Strategies Inc., which serves as a escrow agent for like-kind exchanges, has participated 18 trades involving over $300 million over the past two years.

"We feel a group, such as the one proposed by Fina and CEED, will be a great service to the industry in that it will allow oil companies to more efficiently consolidate properties," said Brown.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) said he was greatly encouraged at the first industry meeting on like-kind exchanges.

"In discussions with participants, I found the attitude to be positive. We intend to work hand-in-hand with CEED and Steve Melzer to get the exchange program off the ground."

Spannaus said the exchange program — whatever it will eventually be called — would provide a foundation of friendship and data to make it easier to trade properties.

The present task in getting the project off the ground according to Melzer is to form a core group of oil-company representatives and establish a private database that would allow not only one-on-one trades, but more complicated three-way trades.

Eventually, the program could extend nationwide, but for the moment the database will cover only the Permian Basin.

The database geared to working interest owners only will contain state, county, field, operator, owners and royalty percentage, and working interest owners. It will also ask if they want in or out of a field or either.

Melzer said there was an overwhelming conviction on the part of the participants that there was a need for a database, but that it should be kept private for the time being so that those listing exchanges would not be over run with offers to buy production.

He said that the database would be initiated as a pilot project with CEED and Fina taking the lead, but that it might later be managed by a commecial listing company such as PLS in Midland.

The next meeting of the like-king exchage group will be held in six months and will be centered around lunch, said Melzer.

"All of the participants agreed that it was time for something like this to happen," said Melzer.

Ukranian oil industry leaders met recently with Railroad Commission Chairman James E. (Jim) Nugent (center) to learn more about how the agency regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas. The representatives included Nikolai Popov, Chairman, Industries Committee, Supreme Soviet of Ukraine (parliament); his assistant, Alexander Matvechuk; Evgenny Sukhin, First Deputy Chairman, Ukraine State Committee for Crude Oil and Gas; Dr. Vladimir Artyomov, Director General, Poltava Gas Industrial Authority; and Pavel Melnik, Manager, New Projects, Ukraine State Committee for Crude Oil and Gas.

Ukranians study TRC regulation

AUSTIN — A delegation of high-ranking Ukrainian oil officials has visited the Railroad Commission to consult on a regulatory framework for oil and gas production and conservation, according to Commission Chairman James E. (Jim) Nugent.

Nugent said the Ukrainian delegation came to study the Commission's oil and gas regulations, including crude oil and natural gas exploration and production and the protection of the environment.

"I believe the people of Ukraine, like those of Texas, have a vital stake in the orderly production and conservation of our precious natural resources," Nugent said. "Their industry has been suffering under decades of neglect and antiquated production methods. We were pleased to share with them the Commission's 60 years of experience in petroleum regulation," he said.

Nugent said the Ukrainians were particularly interest in the Commission's environmental programs. The discussion included how the Commission regulates disposal of oil and gas wastes and prevents pollution of fresh water from oil and gas operations. Further, the agency plugs abandoned oil or gas wells that are leaking or pose a threat to the environment.

Nugent also said oil reserves in the former Soviet Union are rapidly being depleted, resulting in a sharp drop in oil output in recent years. He said the Texas oil and gas industry has developed sophisticated enhanced recovery technology that can maximize ultimate oil production in mature reservoirs.

"Texas is the world's leader in oilfield service expertise, equipment, and technology, and is uniquely positioned to supply them to Ukraine," Nugent said.

The Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas, is recognized in the United States and worldwide a technical resource for energy production. In the past year the agency has received oil ministers and delegations from Russia, China, Canada, Venezuela, and other nations, and advised them about petroleum regulation. Created in 1891, the Commission is one of the oldest regulatory agencies of its kind in the United States.

SOFTWARE: Boosts producers' efficiency

forms generated by the software package are virtually identical to those printed by the commission, and have been approved by the commission.

He said operators benefit from using software to generate commission forms because "up until this point, the main way operators fill out these forms is to type in the data on a typewriter. Very often the operator might be drilling two wells in the same field on the same lease and has to fill out two forms with essentially the same information but has to repeat the whole process just to change some information. Now he can input the data once, call the form up, make the changes and it only takes a fraction of the time."

Secondly, he said, his package makes sure the operator files the correct data, performing calculations for the forms that require them and "has on-line help; in some areas it's sometimes obvious what the commission wants, and sometimes it's not so obvious; this includes that information and tips on filing the forms and what to include with the forms."

And the software includes a "project manager," a flow chart for operators working in unfamiliar areas detailing what forms are needed and when or how to file them.

Suhler noted that one of the most labor-intensive tasks producers have is reporting production — how much oil and gas was produced and how it was disposed of. One of the features of his company's Oil & Gas Forms - Texas package is that, within six weeks it will have the capability of taking a producer's run tickets, make needed corrections and reconcile the tickets with the purchasers' statements at the end of each month.

In addition to making the operator work more efficiently, Suhler said that using software to generate the commission forms saves taxpayer a few dollars, because the state prints the forms at taxpayer expense. "This way, all you need is a stack of blank paper."

He said his company spent over two years developing the software package and has been marketing it since August 1993.

"The interesting thing is, while we thought the drop in prices would hurt, things have been stable, because people have to be better with their dollars now, and they find a package like this can save them time and make their employees productive."

He acknowledged that other software firms offer similar software packages but said that "usually they're not just production but include a whole range of accounting packages, accounts receivable and accounts payable, and all those sorts of things; we just focus on the reporting side."

mission what they think market demand is going to be; and the H-10, a report dealing with injection or disposal wells.

Schaible said that the commission plans, over the course of this year, to add seven or eight other forms to the system, including some of the most important forms. One form to be added this year is the P-1, used by operators to tell the commission how much oil and gas they produced from each well every month.

"Apparently it's easy enough to set up the PC bulletin board that we use to accept these filings from the operators; but we have to do some programming of our mainframes to take the information once we get it, and that requires some preparation time on the mainframe; that's the only thing that's really the determining factor as to how fast we get things ready to go," he explained. "Hopefully operators can look forward to receiving notices from us periodically throughout the year as to what new forms can be filed electronically."

He noted that response has been growing since the program began.

"At first the larger companies took advantage of it; in essence, we've been doing electronic filing for the big companies for quite some time," he said. "They have mainframe computers and they've been sending us their data on magnetic tapes that we just plug into our computers. With the opening of this personal computer system, it means even the smallest operator can dial in and take advantage of our system."

The main advantage of electronic filing, for both the operator and the commission, is reduced paper work, Schaible said.

"When we get data in paper form, we have to give it to our data processors who have to rekey the information into our computer system. With electronic filing, we don't have to do that rekeying. It saves us time and means reduced paperwork and manhours on our end.

"On the operator's side, they can file the forms a lot more accurately this way than they can on paper, once they get the basic information into a form, the company name and particulars that never change, they simply have to put the new numbers into the existing format. It's easy for them, reduces the number of typographical errors. In essence, it puts the forms in a database and the operators doesn't have to worry about ordering forms or having to rekey information month after month for a recurring report."

Yet another benefit of electronic filing, he said, is it makes it easier for the commission to store its records more securely. He said they maintain copies of all their computer files away from the headquarters building, in a safe place, so that in case of a fire or other disaster to the headquarters building, the commission still has access to its records.

Schaible predicted that "1994 should be a great year, I would think, for computerizaton and electronic improvements in the way operators do business with us. This is a good indicator of hopefully some advanced computer technology we're going to be able to use to make both the operator's job easier and our job easier."

PITTS: Clinton promises

foreign oil."

On reviving the domestic oil and gas industry — "Before Reagan and Bush took office drilling rigs were counted in the thousands, now it's in the hundreds...Critical to reducing our dependence on foreign oil is increasing the strength and vitality of our domestic oil and gas producers... We need to examine ways to build the industry back up."

On reducing extreme pricing volatility in the petroleum industry — "Pricing is one of the biggest problems facing the domestic oil and gas industry...President Bush's strategy — if one can characterize it as such — appears to be cheap oil...While this strategy may have resulted in increased profits for major oil companies and others involved in foreign oil, the policy has been deadly for America's long term economic interest and domestic oil and gas producers. We need an energy policy that promotes domestic sources and energy efficiency."

On incentives for marginal wells — "I understand the problems of those producing marginal wells and would consider a number of solutions, including tax credits, research and more efficient operations...I will be more responsive to the problem than the current administration. It is shameful that the President (Bush) would wait until the eve of the Republican primaries to announce a program for cutting royalties on wells on federal lands. While this plan has merit, it does nothing for wells not on federal lands and is not enough incentive to keep many marginal wells operating."

On reducing petroleum imports — "My first energy priority as president will be to start the process of weaning America from foreign oil. Foreign oil dependence subjects us to the unpredictable pricing whims of OPEC and embroils us in the volatile Middle East...I will implement an energy policy that to cut our dependence, based on energy conservation, efficiency and increased use of natural gas.

On sensible environmental policy — "One of the biggest problems of the current administration is lack of a coherent policy that harms not only the energy industry but the environment. A national energy policy which focuses on conservation, renewable energy sources and natural gas will be environmentally superior. Good environmental policy does not equate to bad economic policy...We need a president who will develop a partnership between economic and environmental interests."

Said Harry Spannaus: "That's what he said. Those are direct quotes. But that is not the way things are."

One year later, excessive and unnecessary environmental regulation remains one of the biggest expenses of the oil industry, accounting in some cases for up to 40 percent of drilling costs. Oil prices are lower and more volatile than at any time since 1986. Oil imports are above 50 percent and U.S. domestic production is in a tailspin.

Meanwhile, the Clinton Energy Initiative addressed none of the problems. It offered no plan to reduce foreign oil imports nor incentives to stop the decline in domestic production. Moreover, energy research projects proposed in the plan may crash because of low oil prices. "It is very unlikely that any reservoir research projects will go forward at these prices," said Spannaus.

In short Clinton has not lived up to his promises. But, despite the alarming gap between the campaign rhetoric and presidential policy, PBPA is not overly alarmed. Said Spannaus: "I don't think it is all that unusual for a politician to fall far short of his promises."

He said the energy policy was a blending of the Carter and Reagan-Bush energy policies, in that it favored cheap foreign oil at any price and domestic energy conservation over production. He said the policy was unique in that it had almost no respect for oil as a component of the national energy mix, giving preference to natural gas.

"We have been had again,"

Horizontal drilling slows

AUSTIN — Horizontal drilling activity lagged as the year wound down, according to the Texas Railroad Commission. TRC granted 56 permits for horizontal wells statewide in November, reflecting a slight decrease in activity from the previous month.

By comparison, 62 permits for the advanced technology wells were issued in October, 56 in September and 47 in August.

November was also a relatively slow month for horizontal completions as drilling was concluded on just 33 of the advanced technology wells, raising to 2,881 the number of horizontal wells completed in Texas since 1984.

Altogether, the commission has granted an even 600 new permits for horizontal wells so far in 1993.

There are no new horizontal permits issued to operators in the Pearsall (Austin Chalk) field in November.

By comparison, 31 were issued to those drilling horizontal wells in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) last month.

Brock reports net earnings

NEW ORLEANS — Brock Exploration Corp. reported net income of $177,000 or 5 cents per share on revenues of $3.1 million for the quarter ended September 30, 1993.

These results compare with net income of $242,000 or 6 cents per share on revenues of $3 million for the same quarter in 1992.

For the six months ended September 30, net income was $613,000 or 16 cents per share on revenues of $5.9 million, compared to $413,000 or 11 cents per share on revenues of $5.76 million.

Included in the six month period is a $186,000 benefit from the cumulative effect of a change in method of accounting for income taxes. The change is the result of the adoption of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 109. Earnings before the effect of this change were $427,000 or 11 cents per share.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Crockett reentry nets dual producer

Staff Report

A recompletion project in Crockett County has netted a dual producer in the Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) and Ozona Southwest (Strawn) fields, 12 miles southwest of Ozona.

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. reentered the No. 2304ST Henderson Trust "DD", completing it in the Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) field for a calculated absolute open flow of 155 Mcfd. The well flowed from perforations 7,048 to 7,125 ft. The interval was treated with 40,126 gallons of acid and 146,500 lbs. 20/40 sand.

The well will be dually produced with existing production from the Ozona Southwest (Strawn) field. Enron completed the well in this field in February, 1993 for a calculated absolute open flow of 340 Mcfd from Strawn perforations 8,977 to 9,076 ft.

Location is 2,022 ft. from north and 2,278 ft. from west lines of Section 23, Block ST, GC&SF survey, Abst. 3295.

Two firms complete Sutton producers

Two companies have each added two new producers to the Sawyer (Canyon) field of Sutton County.

AMERICAN EXPLORATION CO. tested the No. 9 Fields "17" for a calculated absolute open flow of 580 Mcfd from perforations 5,182 to 5,974 ft.

The well was drilled to 6,100 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 6,034 ft.

Location is 2,000 ft. from south and 2,300 ft. from east lines of Section 17, Block B, HE&WT survey, Abst. 353.

American also potentialed the No. 10 Kelly "124", for a CAOF of 1.57 Mmcfd from perforations 5,040 to 6,451 ft.

Total depth was 6,700 ft., and the well was plugged back to 6,601 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,658 ft.

Location is 500 ft. from north and 375 ft. from west lines of Section 124, Block C, HE&WT survey.

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. tested the No. 13 Jones "119" for a CAOF of 805 Mcfd. The well flowed from perforations 5,143 to 6,253 ft.

Drilled to 6,350 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 6,347 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 600 ft. from east lines of Section 119, Block C, HE&WT survey, Abst. 439.

Enron also completed the No. 11 Sawyer "145", testing it for a CAOF of 420 Mcfd from perforations 5,525 to 5,960 ft.

Total depth was 7,100 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,822 ft.

Location is 500 ft. from north and 1,800 ft. from west lines of Section 145, Block C, HE&WT survey, Abst. 452.

Amoco adds eight to Yoakum field

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO. has added eight new wells to the Prentice (6700) field of Yoakum County, approximately 12 miles northeast of Plains. All eight are in the Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit.

The No. 1612 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit was tested to pump 528 barrels of 30.8 gravity crude, 85 Mcfd and 45 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,458 to 6,841 ft.

Total depth was 6,841 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,458 ft.

Location is 440 ft. from north and 1,720 ft. from east lines of Section 25, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1559.

On potential test, the No. 1614 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit pumped 191 barrels of 30 gravity crude, 38 Mcfd and 283 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,481 to 6,850 ft.

The well was drilled to 6,850 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,481 ft.

Location is 1,340 ft. from north and 2,520 ft. from east lines of Section 25, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1559.

Amoco tested the No. 1615 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit to pump six barrels of 31 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 571 barrels of water from perforations 6,550 to 6,850 ft.

Total depth was 6,850 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,545 ft.

Location is 1,500 ft. from north and 1,320 ft. from east lines of Section 25, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1559.

The No. 1616 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit was finaled to pump 281 barrels of 30 gravity crude, 56 Mcfd and 77 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,566 to 6,851 ft.

Total depth was 6,851 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,566 ft.

Location is 2,160 ft. from north and 1,845 ft. from east lines of Section 25, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1559.

On potential test, the No. 421 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit pumped 50 barrels of 30 gavity crude, 8 Mcfd and 175 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,370 to 6,838 ft.

The well was drilled to 6,838 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,370 ft.

Location is 2,490 ft. from south and 1,740 ft. from east lines of Section 21, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1480.

Amoco completed the No. 423 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit to pmp 157 barrels of 30 gravity crude, 27 Mcfd and 30 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,396 to 6,839 ft.

Total depth was 6,839 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,396 ft.

Location is 1,880 ft. from south and 1,680 ft. from east lines of Section 21, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1480.

On potential test, the No. 425 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit pumped 92 barrels of 30.1 gravity crude, 17 Mcfd and 355 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,457 to 6,843 ft.

The well was drilled to 6,843 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,457 ft.

Location is 1,880 ft. from south and 300 ft. from east lines of Section 21, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1480.

The No. 427 Prentice (6700 Clearfork) Unit was finaled to pump 191 barrels of 30.7 gravity crude, 34 Mcfd and 80 barrels of water from open hole interval 6,464 to 6,845 ft.

Total depth was 6,845 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,464 ft.

Location is 1,050 ft. from south and 1,090 ft. from east lines of Section 21, Block K, PSL survey, Abst. 1480.

Texas firms get Russian leads

AUSTIN — Houston-based Ultraflote Corp. received 39 trade leads at the U.S.-Russia Oil and Gas Trade Show and negotiations are underway for a distributor/agent agreement with five Russian entities.

Another exhibiting firm, Deltex International, reported 25 trade leads and projected sales of $2 million.

These businesses were among 27 Texas companies represented at the trade show in Moscow Nov. 30-Dec. 3. The delegation of Texas businesses selling oil and gas technologies and services was organized by the Texas Department of Commerce Office of International Trade. Fourteen businesses exhibited and 13 companies were represented by Commerce.

The Financing Conference addressed the topic of how Russian firms would pay for American products. The U.S.-Russia Exim-Bank Oil and Gas Framework Agreement, a cooperative program of the U.S.-EximBank and Russian Ministry of Fuel and Energy, will provide at least $2 billion in credits and loans to Russian oil and gas production associations and Russian businesses for the revitalization of existing oilfields in Russia. The only stipulation is Russian companies must purchase American technology from the loans, secured by the oilfield reserves. Projects backed by the U.S.-Russia EximBank Framework Agreement are expected to get underway as early as Spring 1994.

Smith buys A-Z/Grant

HOUSTON — Smith International Inc. has completed the acquisition of A-Z/Grant International and Lindsey Completion Systems from MASX Energy Services Group Inc., a subsidiary of Masco-Tech Inc.

Doug Rock, chairman and chief executive officer, said that "The acquisition of the A-Z/Grant and Lindsey combined with our present Drilco and Servco product lin s makes Smith a world leader ir downhole tool segment of oil-fi drilling and completion services."

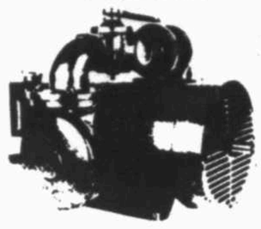

Dick Werner, vice president and general manager of Smith Drilling and Completion Services will be responsible for this new product group.

Loren Carroll, executive vice president and chief financial officer, states that "Revenues from these new operations approximated $30 million in 1993 and it is anticipated that earnings from this acquisition in 1994 will be non-dilutive."

Headquartered in Houston, Smith International is a worldwide supplier of premium products and services to the oil and gas drilling and mining industries.

Russia still plans to open oil industry

By Bill Mintz
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Russian energy officials are proceeding with plans to use U.S. technology and money to modernize their decrepit oil and gas industry despite the strong showing by nationalists in recent elections, U.S. officials and industry observers say.

The new constitution approved by voters in the Dec. 12 election gives Russian President Boris Yeltsin expanded powers, but it remains to be seen whether Yeltsin will be able to cobble together a coalition in the reorganized Parliament to push through needed legal changes.

While many officials believe the pace of activity will accelerate in coming weeks, they acknowledge that many of Russia's institutional problems that have stymied progress for the last two years remain.

Some longstanding impediments, however, appear to be crumbling.

For example, a recent World Bank decision means that the U.S. Export-Import Bank will be able to start making loans within the next few weeks from a pool of $2 billion set aside for U.S. oil-field equipment sales.

The U.S. and Russian governments also signed an important tax treaty during Vice President Al Gore's recent visit to Moscow. Officials in both countries hope to announce some multibillion-dollar deals to develop Russia's huge untapped oil fields when President Clinton and Yeltsin meet in Moscow in January.

Yuri K. Shafranik, Yeltsin's minister of fuels and energy, said that two projects — a Texaco project in Siberia and another deal in the Sakhalin Islands —.were nearly ready for a final announcement, according to one U.S. official who attended the meetings held during Gore's Moscow trip.

Once the world's largest oil producer, Russia's production has fallen precipitously because of a lack of investment during the post-communist economic collapse. Two U.S. administrations have pressed Russia to revive its oil and gas production as a way to earn hard currency to finance other economic reforms.

To be sure, the strong showing by the nationalist Liberal Democratic Party led by Vladimir Zhirinovsky in the Dec. 12 election threw a scare into the U.S. government as well as oil industry officials trying to do business in the Russian oil patch. Zhirinovsky campaigned against foreign investment and for a revival of an imperial Russian state.

"The election scared the heck out of me," said Wes J. Spincic, president of Houston-based Avanti Consulting, who was in Moscow at the time of the election to sign an engineering services contract with Varyagannefteqas, a large Russian production association. "But people said it was not going to affect their business."

Rep. Greg Laughlin, D-Texas, co-chairman of the Congressional Former Soviet Union Energy Caucus, said the election "will make everyone take a close hard look before they go forward with investments." "The key will be Yeltsin's ability to build pro-reform coalitions in the Parliament," Laughlin said.

Meanwhile, U.S. companies still must overcome the Russians' lack of knowledge of free-market business concepts, Spincic said. Several U.S. executives were disappointed with the results of a recent conference in Moscow at which U.S. officials were supposed to explain the $2 billion loan program.

Zapata reports higher net income

HOUSTON — Zapata Corp. reported net income of $9.4 million for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1993, compared with net income of $2.4 million for fiscal 1992, Zapata Chairman and Chief Executive Officer R.C. Lassiter announced.

AGA: Northeast must cut emissions

To help curb pollution in the Northeast, the region should adopt stringent requirements for the sale of clean vehicles, similar to California's standard but with certain modifications, the American Gas Association said.

Because the California program contains so-called zero-emission vehicle (ZEV) mandates, which focus only on tailpipe exhaust and the promotion of electric vehicles, the natural gas vehicle (NGV) industry believes it "unnecessarily precludes t : use of other clean vehicles, such as NGVs, and may offer no real benefit due to the serious technological and economic hurdles that are facing electric vehicles in the short term," said Scott Kaye, senior product manager at Brooklyn Union Gas Co., testifying before the Ozone Transport Commission (OTC) on behalf of his company, A.G.A. and the Natural Gas Vehicle Coalition.

Kaye urged the OTC, and other states considering a clean vehicle program, to expand the ZEV definition to include other types of clean vehicles, or to provide vehicle manufacturers with credits toward any California-type ZEV mandate, provided they produce vehicles that are at least as clean as electric vehicles in terms of their total source, or power plant emissions.

RODNEY B. DAVIDSON has joined the Midland office of Carter & Burgess Inc. as a project manager.

He has 10 years experience in the oil and gas industry, including design, construction and management of various projects involving production facilities, salt water disposal systems and natural gas processing plants. His design work includes surface and sub-surface oil and gas production equipment. He has also prepared multimedia environmental and OSHA compliance audits, storm water pollution prevention plans and OPA-90 spill response plans.

EBCO U.S.A. has named DENNIS W. WEISGERBER director of sales and marketing. He will be responsible for the company's nationwide sales efforts through district offices located in Denver, Oklahoma City, Dallas, Houston and Hattisburg, Miss.

Davidson Weisgerber

He brings nearly 20 years of industry experience to EBCO, most recently having been general manager of sales and marekting for Houston-based Production Operators Inc.

TOMMY SAGER has joined Holloman Construction Co. as the company expands to include an experienced engineering division.

Sager comes to Holloman from Arco Oil & Gas Co. where he had 11 years experience in diversified fields of engineering.

All Chevron employees receive bonus, watch

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — After suffering through rounds of cutbacks, Chevron Corp. employees learned they will get a bonus of 5 percent of annual base pay, and even a new watch, to celebrate the oil giant's financial gains.

Chevron will take an estimated $70 million charge after taxes against fourth-quarter earnings to pay for the bonuses.

"This accomplishment, which puts Chevron in the forefront of the competition, is something we share together," company Chairman and CEO Ken Derr told employees. "It involved a great deal of hard work, sacrifice, and, in many cases, changes in the way we viewed our jobs and ourselves."

Chevron has shed nearly 8,000 jobs during the past five years. Oil prices remain persistently low, but Derr said in an interview Tuesday that no new significant downsizing is expected this year.

In 1989, Chevron set a goal to have the highest stockholder return (stock appreciation plus dividend payments) among major oil companies for a five-year period.

It has met that goal. Chevron said its stockholder return now stands at 18.9 percent per year over the 1989-1993 period — higher than Mobil, Texaco, Amoco, Exxon and Arco.

Wall Street analysts didn't seem to mind letting employees share in the gains, despite the charge to earnings.

"I think it's terrific," said Constantine Fliakos, who follows the industry for Merrill Lynch in New York. "The employees should be rewarded for a job well done."

With the bonuses, an employee who makes $60,000 a year will get $3,000. The Asian-made, gold-toned watches — carrying the company motto "better than the best" — cost about $30 each.

About 500 senior managers who participate in a management incentive program are excluded from the bonus program. They are expected to be well rewarded for Chevron's financial gains.

Derr's salary and bonus, along with other officers, will not be reported until the company's proxy statement is issued this spring.

Gas stations look to pump up sales

N.Y. Times News Service

When Shell Oil Co. wanted to build a gas station in Pembroke Pines, Fla., residents of a retirement community balked. They insisted that the huge new station could not go in unless Shell included a post office in the plans. Three years later, the residents got their way.

Shell was not wild about the idea. Indeed, in Houston, it is ripping out a post office from one of its new gas stations. "People did not buy enough," explained William Heyd, Shell's national manager of marketing and advertising. "We're taking the post office out and putting in fast food."

Change is sweeping the gas station industry with such intensity that station owners, oil company executives and local distributors seem to have lost their way. Struggling with shrinking profits in their core gas station business, they are trying to mix and match their way to profitability, creating some odd hybrids: gas stations that sell flowers or offer dry cleaning services and stations where customers can get tacos but not a tire change.

"People are experimenting to try to find the best combination," said Jack Howe, the vice president of marketing for Phillips Petroleum Co. "What we're all looking for is to offer a better package of services."

What they often end up with, however, are combinations that are taking the industry into unfamiliar businesses while blurring its traditional role of selling gas and servicing cars.

The Mobil Corp., for example, is experimenting with a combination gas station and McDonald's in Naples, Fla., and is planning to do the same with Burger King in Chicago. The company said it was also talking with Taco Bell and Pizza Hut.

Other companies are experimenting with service counters, where customers can use a copier or fax machine, drop off a parcel for United Parcel Service or Federal Express, rent a video, get clothes cleaned, wire flowers, have a gift wrapped, send a money order or have business cards printed.

Many of these new services are included in superstations, where there are scores of gas pumps and a convenience store stocking thousands of items.

Ashland Oil Inc. is one of the biggest operators of superstations through its Superamerica subsidiary.

Because the company no longer explores for oil and buys most of its oil on the market, Ashland has tied its fortunes to its retail operations. Ashland has built 626 of the huge combinations in the last 20 years. But are these still gas stations?

"We prefer to call them retail profit centers," said John Pettus, who runs the Superamerica unit. Even the superstations have had to pull in their horns, however, selling 51 stores in Florida and 26 in Montana this year because the stores were not close enough to buy their gasoline from Ashland refineries.

Changes in environmental regulations, technology and buying habits have prompted the shift by gas stations to new retailing combinations. But the recent sharp drop in crude oil prices, which has pushed down prices at the pump, has accelerated the move.

"I've seen gas prices at 86 cents a gallon in Tulsa," said Wayne Allen, president and chief operating officer of Phillips, which is based in Bartlesville, Okla. "It's a tough, tough business."

Bargain-basement gasoline prices could not have come at a worse time for the nation's 170,000 stations. Stringent environmental regulations, which must be in effect by 1998, are forcing many stations to replace storage tanks and often pumping equipment.

In some metropolitan areas, stations must also add new hoses and nozzles to control fumes emitted during pumping.

A recent survey by the Petroleum Marketers Association of America, which represents about 40,000 distributors, found that the average cost of compliance is about $133,000 for a station this year. Stations in metropolitan areas face additional costs of about $40,000 each for the new hoses and nozzles.

"These are enormous costs for a small business," said Phillip Chisholm, the association's executive vice president.

Bob Edgar, who owns Service Oil in Colby, Kan., with 20 stations, said, "It's very difficult."

Edgar, who has been in the business for 40 years, has spent about $500,000 a year for the last five years to renovate his stations. He has gone heavily into debt and has already shut six stations because they were too small to renovate. Yet his company earns only about $200,000 a year, he said.

"I'm happy to turn this over to someone else," he said. He plans to retire in 1994.

Many stations cannot get loans to finance the cleanup because banks have been reluctant to lend money to an industry that can face major liabilities from leaks and spills. Many smaller stations facing conversion have also found it difficult to get insurance because of potential cleanup costs.

Most states, however, now have insurance funds to help finance cleanups when stations discover leaks from old tanks and contaminated soil or underground water. The state generally pays off if station owners can show they were not negligent and were in compliance with earlier regulations.

All of this makes it tougher for station owners to sell their businesses. And even closing up is costly, averaging about $36,000 a station, mainly for cleanup.

Clearly, the economics of the gas station industry have changed sharply. As gas stations offer more bells and whistles, many are cutting back on the basic services that used to be routine, like checking the oil or doing a minor repair. Full-service stations, where attendants pump gas, look under the hood and clean the windshield, are a dying breed.

"The old person-to-person relationship has changed," said Trilby Lundberg, publisher of The Lundberg Letter, which tracks gas stations. "Everyone is trying to roll with it."

Specialized chains, which install mufflers, change the oil, take care of tires and perform tuneups, have stepped in to fill the void.

Heyd, who oversees marketing at Shell's 4,000 stations, says the gas station business is undergoing fragmentation just as the medical world is.

Stake in Goldsmith-Adobe Unit bought

National Energy Group Inc., a Dallas, Texas-based oil and gas company, plans to purchase from Bligh Petroleum Inc. a 63.83 percent interest in the Goldsmith Adobe Unit (GAU), an oil and gas field, for $4 million.

National currently operates and holds 12.8 percent of GAU, which is located in Ector County, Texas. The company believes the fields contains 3 million barrels of oil and 2.5 billion cubic feet of gas in reserves, according to its filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The company has also developed a plan to exploit GAU, including the drilling of 14 infill wells in 1994 and 24 wells in each year from 1995 to 1997. The company will require additional funding to implement the plan, which will cost about $20 million, according to a spokesman at National.

El Paso refinery operating at capacity

DALLAS — Border Refining and Marketing Co. is now operating at current capacity of 25,000 barrels a day on refining operations in El Paso.

On May 6, Refinery Holding Company L.P., a unit formed by a lender group, acquired the refinery assets formerly owned by El Paso Refinery L.P. and entered into a long-term operating and crude processing agreement with Chevron U.S.A. Border Refining is exclusive agent for all supply and marketing activities related to the agreement.

Border buys WTI crude oil from numerous suppliers on both spot and term contracts and ships to the El Paso refinery by means of several West Texas-New Mexico pipeline systems. The company markets all grades of gasoline, diesel and jet fuel to rack customers in El Paso, Albuquerque, Phoenix and Tucson. Additionally, Border markets directly to other shippers on the SFPP pipeline to Tucson and Phoenix and the Chevron pipeline to Albuquerque.

RHC's owners include CIT Financial, John Hancock Life and New York Life. With this financial strength and the long-term relationship with Chevron, Border Refining is positioned to be a reliable and competitive supplier in El Paso, New Mexico and Arizona markets for many years.

S&P upgrades Tidewater debt rating

NEW ORLEANS — Tidewater Inc. has announced that Standard & Poor's has raised its debt rating on the company's 7 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2010 from double-'B'-minus to double-'B' plus. The implied senior rating is triple-'B'-minus.

"Since S&P reinstated coverage of Tidewater in April, we have continued to aggressively reduce total debt. We are pleased that Standard & Poor's has reviewed Tidewater's financial picture and recognized our increased strength and flexibility with an upgraded rating of double-'B'-plus," said Tidewater Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer John P. Laborde.

Tidewater owns and operates the world's largest fleet of vessels serving the international offshore energy industry and owns and operates one of the largest fleets of natural gas and air compressors in the United States. The company also owns a shipyard in south Louisiana.

Indresco Inc. names new chairman

DALLAS (AP) — Indresco Inc. said that J.L. Jackson had been named chairman of the board, replacing R.W. Ytterberg, the Dallas company's original chairman and chief executive, who retired at yearend.

Jackson was elected the company's new chief executive officer and vice chairman in October.

The company said he was one of the initial outside directors of the company when it was spun off from Dallas-based Dresser Industries Inc. in 1992. Jackson was president, chief operating officer and director of Diamond Shamrock Corp. from 1983 to 1987.

Indresco supplies mining equipment, refractories for high-temperature processes and specialized air tools. The company reported revenues of $540 million in 1993.

DOE to discuss recovery program

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — The Department of Energy will hold a public information meeting dealing with its Class III Demonstration Program for Slope and Basin Clastic Reservoirs January 19 at the Radisson Plaza Hotel in Manhattan Beach, Calif.

The meeting is intended to familiarize interested parties with the technical, business and environmental aspects of this DOE program, which solicits near- and mid-term oil recovery research projects that can increase domestic production and prolong the life of reservoirs.

Preliminary drafts of pertinent sections from the Program Opportunity Notices are available from the Pittsburg Energy Technology Center. Material reviewing slope and basin clastic reservoirs in the U.S. will be available after January 12 from the Bartlesville Project Office. This information will also be available at the January 19 meeting.

A second pre-proposal meeting is planned for early March in New Orleans.

The Class III program is part of the administration's newly released Domestic Natural Gas and Oil Initiative. This meeting will provide the opportunity to plan a proposal and offer input into the process prior to final release of the solicitation packages, as well as establish contacts for teaming arrangements between participants and make connections for technology transfer, both of which are major components of this initiative.

Berry Petroleum board member resigns

Berry Petroleum Co. the Taft, Calif.-based oil and gas company, announced the resignation of one of its directors and the subsequent appointment of two new board members.

As of Dec. 31, John Hagg, the chairman and president of Northstar Energy Corp., replaced John Hawkins as a Berry director. Hawkins had served on Berry's board since 1985.

In addition, Thomas Jamieson was appointed to Berry's board on Dec. 3. Jamieson is the president and founder of Jaco Oil Co. and the majority owner and founder of Wholesale Fuels Inc. and Instant Storage.

Mitchell suffers $2 million net loss

The Woodlands — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. reported a net loss of $2 million, or 4 cents a share, on revenues of $287.1 million for the third quarter of its current fiscal year. In the same period a year ago, the company earned $16.1 million, or 34 cents a share, on revenues of $250.7 million. Chairman and President George P. Mitchell attributed the decline mainly to a one-time, non-cash tax provision and to weak natural gas liquids prices.

Colorado Interstate Gas sets dividend

HOUSTON — Colorado Interstate Gas Company has declared a regular quarterly dividend on its outstanding 5.50 percent series preferred stock.

The dividend is payable Jan. 1, 1994, to stockholders of record Dec. 15, 1993. The dividend will be $1,3750 per share. CIG is one of the largest transporters of natural gas in the Rocky Mountain Region, which is estimated to contain about a fourth of the remaining reserves in the lower 48 states. The strategic location of the CIG system and its recent expansions into Utah and other production basins have positioned the company for growth into the next country.

Petroleum Heat files offering with SEC

Petroleum Heat and Power Co. Inc., a Stamford, Conn.-based home heating oil distributor, has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission for an offering of up to $75 million of subordinated debentures through Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp., Kidder Peabody & Co., Chemical Securities Inc. and Morgan Schiff & Co. Inc.

Proceeds will be used to repurchase $50 million of the company's outstanding notes and for general corporate purposes, according to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

With total sales of $548.9 million for the year ended Sept. 30, Petro said it is the largest retail distributor of home heating oil in the U.S. It serves the metropolitan areas of Boston, New York City, Baltimore, Providence and Washington, D.C.

Santa Fe Energy, Bridge Oil sign purchase agreement

Santa Fe Energy Resources announced the signing of a Purchase and Sales Agreement with Bridge Oil (U.S.A.) Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Bridge Oil Limited, of Australia, whereby Bridge Oil (U.S.A.) will purchase certain Mid-Continent and Rocky Mountain oil and gas producing properties as well as undeveloped acreage from Santa Fe Energy.

Proceeds from this transaction will be a minimum value of $51 million, subject to adjustment, either in the form of cash plus 10% of the outstanding shares of Bridge Oil (U.S.A.), following the comtemplated public offering of that stock in the first quarter of 1994; or $51 million cash.

The transaction includes substantially all of Santa Fe Energy's assets in the Anadarko Basin of Oklahoma and Texas as well as its interests in the Rocky Mountain states including its holdings in the Canyon Creek natural gas field in Wyoming. Current daily production from the properties to be sold is approximately 1,500 barrels of oil and 14 million cubic feet of gas. The undeveloped acreage position includes approximately 1.7 million mineral and leasehold acres with up to 13 year exploratory options on an additional 7.5 million acres. The transaction is expected to close during the first quarter of 1994 and is subject to various conditions including approval under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Anti-trust Act.

James L. Payne, Chairman and CEO of SFR said "This transaction is the final large property disposition element in our Company's recently announced major restructuring program that is aimed at significantly improving earnings and cash flow growth while increasing production and reserves in the long term. Our domestic operations are now tightly focuses in the offshore Gulf of Mexico, the Permian Basin of Texas and New Mexico and the San Joaquin Valley of California. We have a large inventory of high return projects in each of these areas that we now plan to more aggressively exploit."

Since it became a public company in 1990, Santa Fe Energy has extensively restructured its operations to strategically position the Company for future growth. Key elements of that restructuring have been the 1992 merger with Adobe Resources, the monetization of certain non-strategic properties through creation of Santa Fe Energy Trust, the redeployment of its under-utilized natural gas processing assets in a transaction with Hadson Corp., the November, 1993 sale of non-strategic assets in southern California and the onshore Gulf Coast to Vintage Petroleum, and today's announced agreement to sell remaining non-core properties to Bridge Oil (U.S.A.)

Santa Fe Energy is an independent oil and gas exploration and production company with headquarters in Houston, Texas. It has production in the United States, Argentina and Indonesia with additional exploration activities in several other regions of the world. Its common stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol SFR.

Cross Timbers makes acquisitions

FORT WORTH — Cross Timbers Oil Co. has announced two acquisitions which will increase its working interest in the Prentice Northeast Unit in Terry and Yoakum counties of West Texas to 91.5 percent from 48.9 percent. Cross Timbers expects to be elected operator of the unit this month.

Cross Timbers executed a purchase and sale agreement to acquire a 29.4 percent working interest in the unit from a subsidiary of Amoco Corp. The transaction also includes a lease which produces oil from a non-unitized horizon. The transaction became effective January 1, 1994 and is expected to close on January 10, subject to regulatory approval.

Additionally, Cross Timbers recently completed the purchase of a 13.2 percent working interest in the unit and interests in other properties from a private company effective July 1, 1993. The aggregate purchase price for both transactions is expected to be $28.4 million, subject to customary purchase price adjustments. Cross Timbers' internal engineers estimate proved reserves at the respective effective dates of the acquisitions to be 4.1 million barrels of crude oil and condensate and 1.1 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Bob R. Simpson, Cross Timbers' chief executive officer, stated that "These acquisitions complete a major strategic objective for Cross Timbers. We have transformed a non-operating minority interest in our most important oil producing property into a 92 percent interest which provides direct operating control. The unit covers 6,900 acres with 142 producing and 116 water injection wells. It currently produces 3,700 barrels of oil and 1.3 million cubic feet of natural gas per day from the Glorieta and Clearfork formations between 5,900 and 7,100 feet."

Simpson further stated that "We will devote substantial technical and financial resources to exploit this strategic, long-lived property and expect it to be an important part of the company's future."

Cross Timbers Oil Co. is engaged in the acquisition, exploitation and development of producing oil and gas properties and the marketing and transportation of oil and natural gas.

Tucker results 'mixed'

Tucker Drilling Co. Inc. officials say results for the first half of the company's fiscal year "were somewhat mixed, yet stability and improvements in several operational and financial areas were registered."

Total revenues rose 5 percent to $7.4 million from $7.1 million for the first half of FY 1993. Contract drilling revenues rose 6 percent to $6.7 million from $6.3 million a year ago while rig utilization remained steady at 44 percent, virtually unchanged from the prior year.

For the quarter ended September 30, Tucker posted a net loss of $87,000 on revenues of $4,221,000, compared to a loss of $96,000 on revenues of $4,636,000 for the same quarter a year earlier.

Oil and gas sales were up $1,000 to $799,000 as oil volume increased 12 percent to 130 barrels daily, while gas volume fell 18 percent to 935 Mcfd. The average price for oil was down 13 percent to $17.88 per barrel and the average price of gas rose 26 percent to $2.06 per Mcf.

The net loss fell to $282,000 from $600,00. Tucker officials said the result would have shown even greater improvement if not for an unusually high loss of $190,000 on a drilling contract plus an expense of $75,000 for a dry hole in which the company participated.

Work on the Dawson County project continued, resulting in the recently announced completion of a Fusselman discovery well which tested for 210 barrels of condensate daily. The company owns a 6.25 percent working interest in this well and additional acreage.

Officials say they are encouraged with the contract drilling, and exploration and development potential in the company's areas.

EIA releases Asian basin oil survey

Staff Report

The Energy Information Administration, in cooperation with the U.S. Geological Survey, has prepared an "Advance Summary" report on the recoverable oil and gas resources of the Fergana basin in south-central Asia.

This oil and gas province is part of the former Soviet Union Republics of Uzbekistan, Tadzhikistan and Kyrgystan. Most of the Fergana basin is covered by five licensed blocks which were offered for exploration and development by Uzbekistan in August 1993. Bidding on these blocks closes on January 17, 1994. Bidding interest has been shown by U.S. oil and gas operating companies of various sizes.

The estimated quantity of discovered and undiscovered oil in the Fergana basin is 4 billion barrels, which is roughly equivalent to 18 months of oil production in the U.S. Of 1 billion barrels of oil discovered, .7 billion barrels are estimated as remaining proved and probable reserves. The Mingbulak field accounts for about 25 percent of these remaining proved and probable oil reserves in the Fergana basin. Mingbulak was the site of a large oil well blowout in 1992, which focused Western explorationists' attention on the basin. Oil and gas have not been successfully produced from Mingbulak field. This field is not part of the five licensed blocks offered by Uzbekistan.

The estimated quantity of discovered and undiscovered recoverable nonassociated gas in the basin is 4.8 trillion cubic feet. Of 1.8 trillion cubic feet of discovered nonassociated gas, roughly 1 trillion cubic feet are estimated as remaining proved and probable reserves.

As a feature of the "Advance Summary" report, a computer diskette is available which contains spreadsheet files of reservoir parameters and resulting volumetric reserve analyses. These data are for 177 reservoirs in 53 Fergana basin fields discovered by the end of 1987. Reservoir-level data on the diskette promise to be the most useful feature of this report.

The report addresses basic results, assessed categories, data sources, basin setting, general observations, discovery history, potential of Mingbulak area, comparison of reservoir parameters by structural area, and comparison of discovered oil and gas by Republic areas.

OPEC's pre-Christmas decision changed world history

■ OPEC's decision just before Christmas, 1973 to double oil prices sent shock-waves throughout world economies.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON - The year was 1973. The Pentagon had called it quits in Vietnam, most people were still watching "The Waltons" on black and white televisions and the broad and brawny Chevrolet Impala was the most popular car.

As the year wound to a close, however, Americans were rudely awakened when a pudgy young Saudi sheik named Ahmed Zaki al-Yamani announced two days before Christmas a doubling of world oil prices.

Life was about to change and Washington couldn't do a thing about it.

"The industrial world will have to realize that the era of their terrific progress and even more terrific income and wealth based on cheap fuel is finished," Shah Mohammed Riza Pahlevi of Iran crowed from Tehran. "They will have to find new sources of energy and tighten their belts."

Twenty years ago this Thursday, Yamani's pronouncement changed the world. It drained the United States and its wealthy allies of hundreds of billions of dollars over the coming decade, tilted the global balance of trade and ushered in heady golden years of high influence and startling wealth for members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — OPEC.

What followed was nothing less than a global reordering of the strategic, political and economic facts of life, a reordering that very quickly reached deep into the lives — and pockets — of every American, rich or poor.

Consumers quickly learned that everything they bought, from tires to tomatoes, required oil either to produce or to deliver, or both, and as OPEC's prices rose, so did inflation at home.

Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, became a household word, as news reports fixated on the meetings and machinations of OPEC. American reliance on "foreign oil" became a national security buzzword.

While gasoline lines, heating oil shortages and an unnatural proliferation of subcompact Japanese cars on Interstate highways quickly came to symbolize the new order, the actual changes OPEC forced were even more profound.

International oil companies and U.S. drillers suddenly found that the value of their crude oil holdings had skyrocketed. Oil industry profits doubled to $10.7 billion in 1974 and from there quadrupled to $39 billion by 1981.

The boom renewed drilling and exploration activity across the United States. It sparked a real estate and construction boom across the Texas-Louisianna oil patch, caused the trans-Alaska pipeline to be built and sent oil companies plunging to previously unimagined depths from spindly offshore rigs across the oil rich North Sea.

But OPEC's precipitous rise would soon lead to world recession, an epic financial collapse and, eventually, a war that pitted half a million U.S. troops against Iraq after Baghdad invaded Kuwait following a long oil-centered dispute.

From the shape of geostrategic alliances to the energy-efficient homes, factories, cars and light bulbs largely taken for granted today in a world once again flush with cheap oil, it's hard to imagine almost any aspect of modern life that wasn't affected by OPEC's rise.

"The international order had been turned upside down," energy analyst Daniel Yergin wrote in "The Prize," his award-winning history of the international oil industry. "Those who seemed to control oil prices were regarded as the new masters of the global economy. . . .OPEC's members would determine if there was to be inflation or recession. They would be the world's new bankers."

For a time, at least, they were also its villains, blamed for high unemployment, curtailed growth and double-digit inflation across the industrialized world.

"In a sense, it's only now, in the mid-'90s, that we're finally overcoming the problems that were associated with the oil price shocks of the 1970s," said John Lipsky, chief economist for the New York investment firm Salomon Brothers.

As OPEC states flooded the financial centers of New York, London and Tokyo with massive surpluses of petrodollars, banks went on a lending spree across the developing world, laying the groundwork for a Third World debt crisis that would cost those banks billions of dollars in the years to come.

The unforeseen oil price collapse of the mid-1980s, which helped bring on the real estate crash that in turn triggered the half-trillion-dollar savings and loan collapse, was a nightmare for lenders who had concluded that oil prices would defy gravity forever.

"I, among others, can remember when institutions as serious as the World Bank were making plans based on assumptions of $100-a-barrel oil prices," said Lipsky. "Projects financed on that basis did not have a happy fate."

For more than a decade, OPEC thoroughly bedeviled Washington.

President Jimmy Carter blamed "the skyrocketing cost of OPEC oil" for driving inflation to 13.3 percent — a 33-year high — during his term.

Carter was so caught in OPEC's grip that by 1977, less than a year after being elected, he warned the nation that "strict conservation" was needed or "we could use up all the proven reserves of oil in the entire world by the end of the next decade."

Today, the world is awash in oil that, adjusted for inflation, fetches roughly one-fifth what it cost when Carter left office. His dire prediction that, "Unless we act, we will spend more than $550 billion for imported oil by 1985," turned out to be high by a factor of 10.

World crude oil prices now hover near $15 per 42-gallon barrel, well below OPEC's official target price of $21. Many analysts believe the price could fall even lower.

"The drop has put dollars into consumers' and business' pockets," reported Salomon Brothers. Indeed, cheap oil is the main thing that's kept inflation, hence interest rates, from rising in recent months, despite increasingly bright economic activity in the United States.

Barring a surprise spike in oil prices, the New York investment house Merrill Lynch & Co. reckons inflation through early next year will be roughly 0.4 percentage points lower than it would have been if oil were bringing $21 a barrel.

But if cheap oil is a boon to this country, it may also pose a danger.

"We're going to be overly-dependent on foreign energy, in particular oil, making us vulnerable as the remaining superpower," said oil analyst Dale Steffes, who heads Planning and Forecasting Consultants in Houston.

The United States currently imports nearly half of the 17 million barrels of oil it uses each day, up from 36 percent just six years ago. The low prices for oil are encouraging an increasing U.S. reliance on imported crude, said Steffes, who predicts "It's going to be 66 percent of oil in the year 2000."

OPEC's rise and fall

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Here are key dates in OPEC's history over the last 20 years:

1973 - Dec. 23: Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki al-Yamani announces that OPEC will raise oil prices to $11.65 per barrel effective Jan. 1. The hike, amid an Arab oil embargo against the United States, represents a fourfold increase over six months. Within days, the Nixon administration drops the national speed limit to 55 miles per hour and orders gasoline rationing coupons printed as a standby measure. They are never used.

1974 - Jan. 23: The Interior Department grants a consortium permission to build the trans-Alaska oil pipeline. OPEC rises as a financial giant. Members post a combined $65 billion trade surplus, $60 billion above the 1973 level, and become major lenders and aid providers. World economic output contracts and inflation among developed countries hits 13 percent.

1975 - August: Sales of fuel efficient Nissan automobiles double over the previous year's levels, as imports grab 22 percent of the U.S. auto market and sales of American cars skid 17 percent. By year's end, Nissan overtakes Volkswagen as top importer of autos to the United States. U.S. unemployment is 8.5 percent as economic output contracts 0.8 percent.

1977 - President Carter builds domestic policy around energy conservation. In an April speech, he calls the United States "the most wasteful nation on earth," and says citizens face "the moral equivalent of war" in their need to cut energy use to avoid a "national catastrophe." Carter offers tax credits for homes and businesses that install energy-saving gear.

1979 - Nov. 4: Iranian students seize the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, taking some 60 Americans hostage. Oil prices surge to $40 a barrel on U.S. intelligence reports, later denied, that Iran had quit shipping oil. U.S. inflation hits 13.3 percent, a 33-year high.

Dec. 27: Soviet troops invade Afghanistan.

1980 - Jan. 11: With some 200,000 American auto workers idled, Honda Motor Co. announces it will build an auto assembly plant in Marysville, Ohio.

Jan. 16: The shah flees Iran amid domestic turmoil.

Jan. 25: Carter calls 1980 "A year of energy conservation" and blames "the skyrocketing cost of OPEC oil" for inflation that threatens his presidency.

1982 - U.S. economy plunges into recession, output contracts 2.2 percent, inflation tumbles to 3.8 percent and world oil glut builds.

1983 - March 14: Amid continued weak demand, OPEC cuts prices for its first time ever. Its output has fallen to 14 million barrels per day, less than half of its 31 million-barrel-per-day peak four years earlier.

1985 - Jan. 4: World crude oil prices plum a 6-year-low.

Oct. 4: OPEC concludes the latest in a series of emergency meetings aimed at buttressing prices by controlling supply, but members aren't holding to output limits.

1990 - May 3: Hoping to arrest a 25-percent price drop over five months, OPEC fails to control output. Saudis, Kuwaitis and United Arab Emirates are blamed for overpumping.

Aug. 2: Iraq invades Kuwait, giving Baghdad control of 20 percent of the world's known oil. Prices surge, but President Bush sends a massive force of U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia, vowing that Iraq's aggression "will not stand."

1991 - Feb. 27: U.S. forces run Iraqi troops out of Kuwait and suspend military operations against Iraq.

March 11: OPEC calls for 5 percent output cuts, but prices continue a long slide downward.

OPEC at a glance

N.Y. Times News Service

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, OPEC, was founded in 1960 by oil ministers Abdullah Tariki of Saudi Arabia and Juan Pablo Perez Alfonzo of Venezuela. OPEC's goal was to secure for its member states some measure of control over crude oil prices that, until then, had been dictated chiefly by huge U.S., Dutch and British oil companies.

OPEC members currently produce 25 million barrels of oil per day, about 40 percent of the world's total output, according to the American Petroleum Institute, an industry trade association.

OPEC's member nations are: Algeria, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

Economic sanctions imposed by the United Nations prohibit Iraq from exporting oil.

US SEISMIC CREW COUNT

INTERNATIONAL SEISMIC CREW COUNT
(The leading indicator of oil and gas exploration activity worldwide)

Seismic activity

According to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists, the number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and its waters rose in November. The number of land crews fell one to 65 and the number of marine crews rose by two to 17 for a total of 82 crews. The number of worldwide seismic oil and gas exploeation crews on and offshore fell in March 1993. The land crew total fell 13 to 258 and the marine vessel total fell nine for a net decrease of 22 crews and a total of 340 crews and vessels active around the world.

Duff & Phelps rates Apache debt

CHICAGO — Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. has initiated rating coverage of Apache Corp. by assigning a rating of 'BBB' (Triple B) to the company's senior debt. About $410 million of debt is outstanding.

The rating reflects Apache's solid financial protection measures and management's commitment to maintain a strong balance sheet. Apache has a balanced and focused exploration and production program with operations concentrated in the Gulf of Mexico, onshore and offshore, Permian Basin, Rocky Mountain and mid-continent regions of the U.S. The company has more than doubled its reserve base since 1990 through a combination of acquisitions and moderate-risk drilling. Apache manages a balanced and controlled oil and natural gas production mix with natural gas comprising 60 percent of its equivalent production.

Growth through acquisition is a key element of Apache's strategy. However, with the acquisition of Amoco's MW subsidiary in 1991, the company demonstrated that it can make sizable debt-financed acquisitions and restore financial strength relatively quickly. Through sales of non-strategic assets and strong internal cash flow, Apache reduced its debt leverage from 53 percent at the end of 1991 to 49 percent at the end of 1992. Financial strength was improved further in 1993 with the sale of $132 million of common equity, the conversion of subordinated debt, continued disposition of non-strategic assets and internally-generated cash. By the end of the third quarter of 1993, the debt ratio had fallen to 35 percent.

The rating assumes that Apache will continue to use acquisitions to grow. While the debt ratio may spike to over 50 percent given a sizable acquisition, Duff & Phelps said it would expect management to bring the debt level down relatively quickly.

Midland Resources recompletes well

Midland Resources has announced the successful recompletion of the State 96-7 well in the Ha, Lower Frio Sand of the South Copano Bay field near Corpus Christi.

In a 24-hour potential test on a 17/64 inch choke, the well produced at a stabilized daily flowing rate of 242 Mcfd of gas and 153 barrels of oil with a flowing tubing pressure of 600 psi. The well was placed on continuous production on Jan. 4.

The Ha, Lower sand is one of 14 productive Frio sands in Fault Block A of the South Copano Bay field in which the company holds interests in seven producing wells.

This recompletion follows the successful February and September 1993 recompletions of the State 96-3 and 96-2 wells in the H, Lower and the J-3 Frio sands. The State 96-3 well continues to produce approximately 275 Mcfd and 75 bopd and the State 96-2 well continues to produce 2.1 Mmcfd and 75 bcpd.

The company will proceed immediately with the recompletion of the State 113-10 well and will conclude the initial phase of the Fault Block A project with the recompletion of the State 96-8 well in early 1994.

Headquartered in Midland, Midland Resources is involved in exploration, development and production of natural gas and oil. The company owns producing properties and undeveloped acreage in North Dakota, Colorado, Kansas, Illinois, Oklahoma and Texas. The majority of the company's activities are centered on the Permian Basin of West Texas.

RRC inspects Upper Colorado

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission's recent month-long inspection sweep of oilfield activity along the Upper Colorado River Basin uncovered only minor pollution-related problem, Railroad Commissioners said.

The sweep covered a one-mile wide area on either side of the river between the corner of McCulloch, San Saba and Brown counties near Winchell, and the headwaters of the Colorado River in Dawson County near Lamesa. Results of the sweep are being provided to the Lower Colorado River Authority, the Upper Colorado River Authority and the Colorado River Municipal Water District to assist their efforts in identifying potential pollution threats.

Altogether, field inspectors from the commission's San Angelo, Abilene, Midland, Lubbock and Wichita Falls district offices covered 11,356 miles by air and ground, logging 1,045 hours during the course of inspecting 2,658 wells on 604 leases along the Upper Colorado River. They found a total of 106 wells that were inactive and unplugged, but posed no immediate pollution threat, and discovered 41 open pits which had not been backfilled as required by commission rules.

In addition, inspectors identified 81 open top tanks greater than 8 feet in diameter which were not netted, covered or otherwise rendered harmless to migratory birds.

Aided by the use of Department of Public Safety helicopters ferrying two inspection teams on aerial surveillance missions along the north and south banks of the river, Railroad Commission inspectors pinpointed 29 oilfield sites which could be contributing to pollution, most of which were immediately corrected. Problems encountered ranged from the overflow of an estimated 10 barrels of saltwater from a lease tank in Scurry County to an eight barrel crude oil spill in Mitchell County.

Other infractions detected as a result of the sweep included 118 wells and or leases in which proper identifying signs were not posted; seven instances of oil pollution resulting from oil leaking from wells; seven cases of inadequate firewalls surrounding tank batteries on various leases; five instances of failure to post hydrogen sulfide warning signs as required; one case of a well operating without a proper control valve; and one instance of junk left on location at a well site.

MEETINGS

WTGS hosts Amoco representative

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

James L. Coleman Jr. of Amoco Production Co. in Houston will speak on "Controls on Variability of Depositional Style in Carboniferous Submarine Fan Complexes of the Ouachita Basin of Oklahoma and Arkansas."

The Paleozoic stratigraphic succession of the Ouachita Basin is dominated by deep water siliciclastics, carbonates and chert. This study illustrates the influence of eustasy, climate and tectonics on basinal sedimentation on four sequential stratigraphic units.

Coleman has been with Amoco since 1978 and has worked in the Appalachian Basin, Arklatex and Gulf of Mexico, Mid-continent and the Middle East.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations should be made by Monday afternoon by calling 683-1573.

SPE computer users schedule meeting

The Computer Users Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Jeffrey Jackson, owner of HTLP, will present "CD-ROMS for Personal Computers." He will cover hardware specifications, system requirements and software applications. Representatives have been invited to demonstrate the SPE's SPE Master Disk, the Society of Exploration Geophysicists' Geo. ROM and Reservoir Inc.'s Rock catalogue CD-ROM.

There will be a drawing for a door price and free software on 3-1/2 inch diskettes.

Reservations should be made by 9 a.m. Tuesday by calling 686-7329.

Future of well analysis topic for group

The Reservoir Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Thursday at the American Legion Hall beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Dr. Alain C. Gringarten of Scientific Software-Intercomp will present a paper entitled "Well Test Analysis in the 1990s." The paper examines changes that have occurred in well test analysis since the early 1980s and discusses the likely evolution of well test interpretation in the future. The paper stresses the importance of finding an interpretation model applicable to the test data. Gringarten says that the need to improve the process for identifying and verifying the interpretation model explains the evolution of analysis techniques to date and provides a clear direction for the future.

He is a senior vice president at Scientific Software-Intercomp, in charge of the exploration and production products division.

Cost is $8 per person.

Unit Corp. announces better results

TULSA — Unit Corp. posted net income for the third quarter of 1993 of $886,000, compared to net income of $771,000 for the same quarter of 1992.

Net income for the first nine months of 1993 was $2,920,000 or 14 cents per share compared to net income of $1,340,000 or 6 cents per share for the same period of 1992. The increase in net income is largely due to the improvement in the company's contract drilling operations.

Unit Drilling Co. operations showed improved overall results due to an increase in rig utilization. The company averaged eight rigs working in the third quarter of 1993, compared to an average of five rigs in the same quarter of 1992. Higher spot market natural gas prices helped fuel the increase in rig utilization. Operating margins seen by the drilling company were 10 percent for the quarter compared to 4 percent in the same quarter last year, while drilling revenues increased 34 percent for the comparative quarters.

Unit Petroleum Co. operations maintained steady growth in production. Oil and natural gas production increased 18 and 14 percent, respectively, for the comparable quarters, due primarily to development drilling the company completed subsequent to the third quarter of 1992. Oil and natural gas revenues were also higher for the comparative quarters with an increase of 4 percent in the face of declining oil prices.

BUY THE BASIN ASKS:

Why shop at local stores?

Becky McCraney , co-owner of Miss Cayce's Christmas Store, 3323 N. Midland Dr.

Here's Why...

Everytime you shop out of town or order from a catalog you impact the selection of merchandise available in your local stores.

Becky McCraney and Kathy Harrison, owners of Miss Cayce's Christmas Store, 3323 N Midland Dr., explain how this happens.

Becky says, "A viscious cycle starts when residents shop out-of-town while local merchants are purchasing inventory to stock shelves. When inventory does not sell and then must be sold on sale or liquidated, new merchandise can only be purchased at lower quantities thus reducing selections and variety."

Kathy adds, "The selection that we can provide relies upon the amount of business we do. If residents don't support us locally then we in turn are not able to supply the same quality of selection, and customers then must rely on outside sources for variety and selection. All we ask of residents is to see what is available locally first before ordering from a catalog or shopping out ot town. We have a diverse selection of unique items that residents often buy elsewhere."

Both Becky and Kathy have been Midlanders for over 30 years. They have operated their business for nine years. Becky says that although they shop the world markets to bring the largest selection of Christmas merchandise possible to the Permian Basin, they also practice finding local recources for other specialty items and business needs.

Becky explains, "It is frustrating for merchants to want to supply the best selection to only have people purchase them elsewhere. Merchants want to supply what Permian Basin residents want - let us know what you can't find."

So remember - shopping locally guarantees the variety of selection available in your own backyard. Buy the Basin encourages you to make a resolution to shop locally this year.

Father Figure

The Rev. Charles J. Larue stands by one of the stained glass windows at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Stanton where he is the fulltime acting pastor. Larue is one of a growing number of men who has chosen to enter the priesthood later in life as a second career.

"I know what the problems are when they come to me with problems, whether it's between the husband and wife or the parents and kids. I've been through it ... In general, I can feel and understand what Papa and Mama are going through — it's not all theory I got out of a book. I've been through the mill. I know what it's like to be up and down in life; to worry about where your next meal or house payment is coming from."

— The Rev. Charles J. Larue

The Rev. Charles J. Larue, assistant pastor at St. Ann's Catholic Church in Midland and fulltime acting pastor at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Stanton and St. Isadore's Catholic Church in Lenorah, is a Roman Catholic priest with all the rights and responsibilities that come with the profession.

But Larue is different from most priests in one respect — at age 63, he has been an ordained priest for less than one year.

Larue, a June 1993 graduate of Sacred Heart School of Theology in Hales Corners, Wis., is part of a growing number of men who are entering the priesthood later in life. The seminary he attended is one of three or four in this country that "specialize in second-career vocations," Larue said. "The average age (of students at the school) was 43. We had some in their late 20s all the way up to 70."

The seminary is "run by priests of the Sacred Heart, but fellows who go there don't belong to any particular order, but can be diocesan priests or order priests," Larue added.

The students themselves don't come from any specific backgrounds either. Larue said in his years in the seminary, his fellow students included a former FBI agent, a West Point graduate, an ex-CIA agent, former career military personnel, a doctor who used to teach at the medical school at the University of Washington, former salesmen, engineers and a man who had worked all his life at his family's dairy.

Some of the students are women who are working for their master of theology degrees. "You don't have to studying for ordination (to be a student at the seminary)," Larue said. "And it's not just for Catholics." Male and female, Catholic and non-Catholic students make up an average number of about 160 students in four grades at the seminary.

The teachers are as ecumenical as the student body, Larue said. "We have a (Jewish) rabbi teaching Old Testament Literature; there's a Lutheran minister teaching ..." and Episcopalian ministers teach some courses.

Larue himself was an accountant for 33 years. Born and raised in New Orleans — "I spoke French before I spoke English," he said — Larue served in the U.S. Army 1948-49, "right after high school," and graduated from Louisiana State University in 1954 with a bachelor of science degree in accounting.

He moved to Dallas in 1954 and went to work for a small independent oil company, and eventually went to work for Steck-Warlick Printing Company. He married in 1959 and started his family. "I lived in Dallas until 1972, when the company transferred me to Austin," Larue said.

About two years later he was transferred back to the main office in Dallas by the company's new management. "Some of us could see that the company was going to be sold, and we started looking" for new jobs, Larue said.

He was offered a job with Area Builders and Clyde Construction Company in Odessa, and moved there in 1974. "At the same time, I still had a private tax business" which he operated out of his home, Larue said. He remained with that company until 1986.

In the meantime, his marriage ended in divorce in 1977, and was annulled by the Roman Catholic Church in 1978. His family had grown to include four daughters — now all adult — and today has expanded into a third generation with the births of his two granddaughters, ages 1½ and almost 2.

Larue has been active in church functions since he was a boy. "I've been an altar boy all my life; even as an adult, I used to serve Mass," he said.

Because the church has always been so important to him, and because his friends knew this, Larue began hearing from others that they thought he would be ideal for the priesthood and how he should check into the possibility of ordination.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Midlanders offer seasonal hints

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Only 350 more shopping days until Christmas! If that thought tends to bring on an Excedrin headache, we thought you might find it helpful to hear how a random sampling of Midlanders have coped with the yuletide stress of the previous season and what they intend to do next year.

McKnight-Harrison

Mary Jo (Mrs. Tom) Sawyer, a teacher at Quanah Parker Elementary School, says "getting an early start" is the key. This year, she had the impetus of her daughter, Michelle's, graduation from Texas A&M University on Dec. 17 to prod her. She was determined to have all her gifts bought, wrapped and mailed, cards addressed and in the mail and the house decorated prior to that date. That gave her the week before Christmas to enjoy friends, church activities and even doing some "elective" baking.

John Slyker, a regional accounts representative in technical sales with Exxon Chemical, finds a slowdown in pace essential when life gets too stressful. He will take time out to watch an old movie (his favorites are inspirational ones that deal with sports, "The Hoosiers" and "Field of Dreams" are two that come to mind), or pick up a book for some motivational reading.

Betty (Mrs. Wylie) Basham, an employee of Anadarko Petroleum Corp, learned that being a working wife and mother, which was something new to her, meant rearranging her schedule to get everything done. Shopping early in the fall helped, as did the "Wish Lists" with which she asked her family to supply her. "Also," she says, "with the extra income this year, I could spend more without worrying about it."

Warren Gardner, vice president of academic affairs at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, and his wife, Alicia, have chosen for years to take time off from work between Christmas and New Year's. "We make it a point to stay away from our offices completely during that time, and it really makes a difference in our lives. We are able to thoroughly enjoy our children and extended family that way." The Gardners got a head start on their Christmas shopping last year during a trip to England and Scotland in October. Although they won't be repeating the trip next fall, they feel their experience will inspire them to shop early here at home.

Meanwhile, Nell (Mrs. Don) Furgeson is one of those persons who has Christmas in her heart all year long and dos not restrict it to one month out of the year. A teacher at Carver Cultural Center, she says she is always on the lookout for Christmas gift-giving. When she sees something that reminds her of someone, she will purchase and store it. She enjoys holiday traditions, which have been a part of their family so long that they do not contribute to stress. Her daughters are now adults, and she realizes how much they appreciate all the little things they have grown up with that made the season so much fun.

Steve Harper, a senior credit officer with Bank One, relieves stress by going deer hunting during the holidays and taking his son, Scott, 11, along. "Getting away from the telephone is a big stress reliever," he declares. Meanwhile, his wife, Eleanor, and 15-year-old daughter, Rebecca, stay behind and enjoy other pursuits.

Debra Westmoreland, who has been a career woman for years, is celebrating her first wedding anniversary with Fred this weekend. She now has the best of both worlds — twice-a-week substitute teaching, which allows her to keep her hand in the professional world, and being a homemaker. She relieves stress by buying ahead, beginning in July and finishing by October. Her goal for next year is to get cards addressed and ready for mailing in November. She did not accomplish that this year and is sorry because of her new name and address. She has already invited Fred's family for Christmas next year, but will not allow herself to look at it as increased stress — rather a way to add to her repertoire of talents — in this case, cooking.

In addition, Joan Pace, a counselor at Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas, has offered some suggestions for making not only the holidays but all year long as stress free as possible.

1. Take some time for yourself every day to do something you enjoy (suggestions being a relaxing bubble bath, movie, hunting, and so on).

2. Breathe — the most available. One of the best stress reducers is to breathe rhythmically and regularly. "You can do this with your eyes closed twice a day for 15 to 20 minutes, and it works as well as a nap," Ms. Pace says, "or for a minute or two each time you recognize feeling stressed."

3. Prioritize what needs to be done (shopping, wrapping, mailing, decorating and cooking), and don't try to cram it all in at once.

4. Take time to enjoy the season — sitting quietly and looking at the Christmas tree, listening to Christmas music, spending time that doesn't take a lot of preparation with friends, and engaging in spiritually meaningful activities.

5. Pay extra attention to basic things, such as eating properly, plenty of rest and exercise.

THE MIDLAND-LEE Youth Centers, Inc., board of directors has established a new tradition in Midland. The group sponsored the First Annual New Year's Eve Dance at ClayDesta Atrium to benefit the two centers. The event was doubly festive, marking the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the first Youth Center in the city.

Continuous music by two local bands, "Double Shot" and "The Pulsations," kept the dance floor crowded.

A delicious midnight breakfast was served by Backdoor Caterir . The menu included Huevos Rancheros, black-eyed peas, mixed fruit, assorted muffins, bacon, orange juice and coffee.

Decor featured a black and white musical theme. The tables were decorated with balloon bouquets, old 78 rpm records, party hats, streamers and noisemakers. Guests made their entrance through a wall hanging of a tuxedo, and a "50" was spelled out in gold balloons over the ClayDesta Entrance.

Youth Center members made and hand delivered the invitations, which were simulated 45 rpm records.

Skeet Doss was chairman of the event. William Howard is president of the board, and Janet Swallow is executive director of the Youth Centers. The planning committee included Theresa (Mrs. Bill) Woodruff, invitations; Jane Kaufman and Johnny Carter, decorations; LaNell (Mrs. Les) Honeyman, food, and Vicky (Mrs. Toby) McWilliams, who was in charge of beverages.

PRIEST: Former accountant has second-career vocation

(From 1F)

The time was right, he said, and all his excuses were gone. "I always had a reason to say 'no' (to a vocation as a priest) ... but now I didn't have anyone depending on me ... I had no logical 'out'."

After making his decision to see about entering a seminary, Larue said the school in Wisconsin was recommended to him by the diocese. After filling out all the forms and shuffling through all the paperwork necessary to enter any college or university and going through some screening, he was accepted by Sacred Heart and started classes in September 1989.

GOING BACK to school was something of a revelation to him. "I hadn't been to school since 1954!" he laughed. Essay questions can be an especially difficult concept for an accountant to grasp. "When it said 'answer at length,' to me that was three lines!"

Some of the classes he took during his years at the seminary included the History of the Church (in three segments: the beginning to A.D.600, 600-1400 and 1400 to the present); spiritually courses, theology courses — "I took about eight courses in theology," he said — and courses on the Sacraments and ritual.

Students also do some work out in the community. "I worked with a black church in the inner city for years," Larue said.

Students attending the seminary are working for a master's degree in theology, which Larue said is "a professional degree, not an academic degree.

"You have to have a college degree to enter the School of Theology," he said, adding that people without college degrees who want to enter the school can work on their bachelor's degrees at a school in Milwaukee and their theology degrees at the seminary at the same time. "It takes more time."

LARUE'S ORDINATION took place in San Angelo, and was attended by most of his family. His daughters think having a father who's a priest is wonderful. "They call me Father Daddy, amongst other things," he said.

As a Catholic priest with a second-career vocation, Larue said he has a different perspective than younger men who graduate from the seminary in their early 20s. "I know what the problems are when they come to me with problems, whether it's between the husband and wife or the parents and kids. I've been through it ... In general, I can feel and understand what Papa and Mama are going through — it's not all theory I got out of a book.

"I've been through the mill," he said. "I know what it's like to be up and down in life; to worry about where your next meal or house payment is coming from.

"I've been there, and I know you will survive if you look to the Lord — He'll always supply you with everything you need. It may not be a Rolls Royce or a castle, but you won't starve to death and you won't freeze to death," Larue said.

"No matter how bad things seem to be, you will survive. The Good Lord will see you through, and afterwards it won't look near as bad as it did at the time."

AFTER A LIFETIME as a Roman Catholic, Larue also is seeing the priesthood from the inside out for the first time.

"Priests are human beings," he said. "Just because we are priests, we are no better than anybody else. We have our faults, we have weaknesses. We may have a better education, but we don't belong on a pedestal. That's the last place we want to be."

Being a man of God hasn't made Larue any less a man of the people. He has enjoyed photography for years — in fact, he was a photographer during his four years at LSU in the '50s — and he enjoys stamp collection.

And don't expect to find him at home on Friday nights during the fall — he made sure Friday is his day off because "I have season tickets to the Permian games," he said with laugh.

He expects to become a fan of all the area high school football teams. "I've loved high school football since I was in high school."

Faucets can be pricey

Associated Press

Why are some faucets $50 and others over $500? Here are the facts on faucet pricing from Kitchen and Bath Ideas magazine.

Four factors dictate the price of a faucet — construction, stem mechanism, functional features and finish.

Construction includes the material the faucet is made from and the method by which the faucet is made. Most faucets are typically made from brass and plastic. In a lower-price model, there is more plastic than brass. Higher-price models are all brass.

The valve, or stem mechanism, is the part of the faucet that prevents drips and leaks. These include simple rubber washers, plastic "washerless" systems that work off a spring and a gasket, metal washerless systems and ceramic cartridges.

Functional features include dual levers, pullout spray spouts that are mounted to the side of a faucet, top- and side-mount single levers, gooseneck spouts, and so on.

The material in which the faucet is finished has a significant impact on the price. Chrome faucets are the least expensive and by far the most popular choice.

Color finishes, such as white, black, red and almond, are either enamel or epoxy-powder coated and baked onto a brass underbody.

Make gardening New Year's resolutions

By Deborah A. Benge

Most New Year's resolutions have to do with diet, exercise and money management, but gardeners can make new year resolutions too. Some resolutions that will make for a successful gardening year include the use of planning, good horticultural techniques and proven plant varieties.

Benge

Planning is probably the most important step in any project and gardening is no exception. The garden project chosen will determine just how critical a plan is. Landscaping and orchards are certainly more critical than a home vegetable garden because of lifespan and initial costs. Any project involving long-lived perennial or woody plant material could cost you dearly in terms of money and time if a mistake is made in the planning phase. Poor planting sites, wrong varieties, wrong plant spacing can all make for regrets.

Even if the gardening project is a vegetable garden, poor planning can make for a mid-summer mutiny. Time, money and sometimes back-breaking effort go into a vegetable garden, and all of that can be lost if there isn't a proper plan.

Take advantage of the winter to begin plans for your vegetable, flower, perennial garden or other gardening projects. Planning should begin with some research. Use gardening magazines, books, Extension publications developed for the area.

This is the gardening year to make the commitment to use better horticultural procedures in all of your gardening efforts. Employing soil improvement, mulching, proper watering and recommended variety techniques should never be overlooked. Gardening is difficult enough in West Texas and every step for better gardening should be utilized.

At the risk of sounding like a broken record, planting in gardens should never be done without soil improvement. This will make a big difference in how your plants perform. Using a four-inch layer of mulch will also make a big difference in how plants perform and how much work is required of you, since mulches slow water loss and inhibit weed growth. Once plants are established, deep, infrequent watering is the practice that will help your plants excel. Not mentioned above but definitely important is the addition of nitrogen to sustain good plant growth.

These horticultural techniques may sound simple, but you'll be surprised at the difference they can make between a pleased gardener and a frustrated one. Don't garden without them in 1994.

Planting proven plant varieties will make a big difference in plant performance as well. If you want flowers that flower, vegetables that produce, fruits that fruit and trees that really grow in the Permian Basin, be sure to plant varieties that are recommended for the area. Lists of recommended landscape plants, vegetables and fruits can be picked up at the Midland County Extension office, 2445 E. Business Loop 20 (next to the Midland County Exhibit Building).

Part of planning is further education, so take advantage of educational programs and services available through the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, which is your educational link to the land grant university of Texas, Texas A&M University. Here are a few of the proposed 1994 horticulture educational activities available in Ector and Midland counties through the Extension Office:

- Jan. 12: 1994 Master Gardener Program begins.
- Jan. 25: Don't Top It pruning seminars at 1 p.m. for professionals and 6:30 p.m. for home gardeners
- Feb. 1: Spring Vegetable School
- April 19-21: Home Landscape School
- May 12: Landscaping With Color

These are just a few of the horticulture educational programs that will be offered during 1994 by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for Ector and Midland counties. Whether it is a resolution or not, determine to incorporate planning, good horticultural techniques and recommended plants for successful gardening year.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Pet's death heartbreaking

EDITOR'S NOTE — They bat their tender noses when they mess the carpet. They tug them along by their leashes in busy city streets. They choose their food with care from grocery shelves. They turn them out at night to do their own thing. But they never think of the day when their pet will be gone.

By Kay Bartlett
Associated Press

When a special pet dies, no one can measure the profound grief suffered by its owner. Gone is the gentle look of recognition, the softness of unquestioning trust, the curious chemistry of companionship that comes from the co-mingling of two lives.

That grief has driven people to suicide, caused others to lose jobs, devastated families and marriages.

To deal with it, the majority of the 27 veterinary schools in the United States, plus four in Canada, are now devising new ways — hotlines for emergency emotions, support groups and even therapists — to handle the singular grief of a lost pet.

Not even the vet escapes the emotional weight.

"Unlike doctors," says animal doctor Kelly Palm, 29, now in private clinical practice in Vacaville, Calif., "a vet may have to deal with two euthanasias a day, maybe up to 300 a year, and that takes a toll.

"We are like family practitioners; we must take care of what's on the other end of the leash."

THE ENGLISH have been more attuned to the importance of that special bond, a bond that in some cases is the only one an individual can make.

The movement to treat grieving pet owners began in the United States about 15 years ago when a psychiatrist at the University of Pennsylvania received a grant for an experiment on whether there was a relationship between bereavement toward humans and bereavement toward animals.

"That opened a better window into human bereavement and within the last 15 years, the movement just gained momentum," says Dr. Alan Beck, director of the Center for Applied Ethology and Human Animal Interaction at Purdue University. Although some of the original premises proved to be incorrect, it kicked off a tidal wave of research into the devastation brought on by the loss of a pet.

The loss — be it a horse, a dog, a cat, a ferret, even that very special calf or heifer that 4-H youngsters raise — can be as traumatic as the loss of a mother or father.

"I have some colleagues who think what I do is ridiculous," says Bonnie Mader, a family, marriage and child counselor at the University of California in Davis. She and her then student, Kelly Palm, were the first to establish a pet hot line, similar to a suicide hot line.

In February, it will be 5 years old. It is manned from 6:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday by vet students to give them training in what they will face when they begin their own practices.

There are six to 10 other hot lines, either at vet schools or at animal shelters.

Although there are more support groups and therapists on the two coasts, it is widespread throughout the United States, but not as extensive as the founders of the movement would like.

Jennifer Saver, 43, a vet school senior at Michigan State, hopes to start a hot line with her students by February.

In her first year at school, she lost a cat she had had for a long time and did not know how to handle her own grief. Tubbs, or Tubbo, or White Rat, as she variously called him, was somehow just "special."

"SPECIAL" SEEMS to be the adjective that all pet owners tend to use.

They frequently can't explain why.

"Now there are books, pamphlets, videotapes available so people don't need to feel so alone," Saver says. "Maybe I'm just going through my second childhood.".

One of the biggest resource centers is the Animal Medical Center in Manhattan, a teaching hospital where vets come for postgraduate work.

The center employs a full-time social worker, Susan Cohen, who runs a support group and counsels individuals who have lost pets.

Randi Greenberg of Piscataway, N.J., lost Cinnamon, a "special" ferret and attended two of the groups. She found them helpful and now has two more ferrets.

"I met my husband at the law firm where I work and when he first came into my office he saw my sign: "Love me, love my ferret." she says. Now, he, too, is a lover of ferrets, which, unlike their wild relatives, weigh only 2 pounds.

Greenberg's friend, Lori Atkin, lost a dog, "Ralphie," whom she found when she was a 17-year-old college freshman in Troy, N.Y.

"He was starving, had worms, mange and was terrified," she says. "He had obviously been abused. I took him to a vet and had him all fixed up and I guess he was symbolic of my venture into adulthood. It was my first time away from home and he went everywhere with me."

When Ralphie died, sitting next to her on her sofa on a Christmas Day, she did not even call family and friends.

"Why should I spoil their holiday?" she asked.

Ralphie had attended all of her law classes. One professor tended to ramble at his seminars and at precisely 4:30 p.m., the scheduled quitting time, the husky mutt went up and put his head on the prof's knee.

He said, "What's the matter Ralphie, am I going on too long?"

Atkin kept his portrait in her office, then brought it to her home in Mendham, N.J., after his death.

WHEN THE GRIEF is beyond the norm, Susan Cohen often refers the patient to Dr. Carole Fudin, a psychotherapist who says 50 percent to 75 percent of her clients are people who have lost pets.

"Sometimes I'm the first person to tell them they are not crazy. If that is the only bond they have, then I say 'Thank God for that bond.'

"Sometimes it stirs up layers upon layers of grief. A person may not have mourned the loss of a parent, or a spouse, or even a child, and that animal brings it all back."

She says she has had couples who were fighting over custody of a pet, and she had to counsel them just as she would if they were squabbling over the custody of a child.

"I've talked to people who have lost lizards, cats, dogs, snakes, even a Galapagos turtle named Kelso," she says.

Where did they get the turtle?

"I don't know and I didn't want to know."

Fudin has a psychiatrist she calls upon when medication is needed, but she says that is rare.

"Sometimes a pet is symbolic of a lost spouse or a marriage," Fudin says.

Dr. Suzanne Hetts, an animal behaviorist in Colorado, says that even cowboys often come in for therapy or help in making the decision to euthanize an animal.

Hetts works at the Denver Dumb Friends League, founded in 1910. The League has a voice mail system open 24 hours a day and calls have come from Australia, England, and practically every state.

In Colorado, there are several programs. One is at the University of Colorado in Fort Collins and is called CHANGES: the support for people and pets program, sponsored by vets and run by licensed therapists.

IN DENVER, there is a program at an animal shelter where people bring animals they can no longer keep to be put up for adoption.

They have 24 hours to change their mind, but if the pet is not able to be adopted, it must be put to sleep to make room for more adoptable pets.

It is estimated that somewhere between 2 million to 3 million unwanted pets are put to sleep each year. Some put the estimate as high as 10 million.

Death, animal or human, remains one of the deepest problems human society must deal with.

AT WIT'S END

At the sound of the beep, please get lost

By Erma Bombeck

I don't want you to think the Bombecks sold out, but we got an answering machine. This is a big step for two people who still use carbon paper and a typewriter with white-out droppings on the keys.

Bombeck

When we positioned the box on my husband's desk, it inspired the same feelings of apprehension that cavemen must have felt when they saw fire for the first time. We kept inching in for a closer look, not daring to touch the buttons, afraid of what they would do.

First, we had a discussion about who would record the message.

"I want no part of it," I said. "I freeze when I'm being recorded. It's your machine. Say what you want. I'm out of it."

My husband grabbed a piece of paper and scribbled, "We're not home now ..."

"They know that," I interrupted. "If the callers have any sense at all, the moment it rings and no one answers, they'll know that! You're just wasting tape."

"I thought you wanted nothing to do with this."

"I don't. It's your machine. You call the shots."

"We are unable to come to the phone," he continued, "because we are out or away from our desks."

"It's none of their business where we are," I said. "I suppose you're going to tell them when we're in the bathroom or watching the last three minutes of a game."

He started again. "You have reached Erma and Bill. If you will just leave your name and number at the sound of the beep, we'll get back to you."

"Speak for yourself," I said. "There are some people I don't want to talk to."

"Then don't call them."

"After you told them I would?"

That night at dinner, the phone rang. "Don't bother to answer it," he said. "I have the machine on."

We sat there in silence through six rings before it stopped.

"Who do you think it was?" I asked. "Everyone knows we eat at 6."

"Could be long-distance," he said.

"Could be the police asking us to identify someone."

We left our hot food and raced together to push the message button. It was a guy offering us a free chiropractic examination.

"You're the one who said you'd call him back," I said and returned to the table.

TUNNELL-SCHRAER

TYLER — Green Acres Baptist Church was the setting for the 7 p.m. Saturday wedding of Kelly Karene Tunnell of Tyler and Stephen Martin Schraer of Miles. The Rev. Dr. David Dykes officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Tunnell of Tyler. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Dennis J. Schraer of Midland.

Kim Caylor of Tyler was matron of honor for her sister. Maid of honor was Tara Paul of Waco. Bridesmaids were Alison Becker of College Station; Becky Schraer of Lubbock, sister of the bridegroom; Kristie Stone of Midland, sister of the bridegroom; and Jennifer Venable of Nacogdoches. Andrea Shoffstall of Boardman, Ohio, was flower girl.

Nelson Book of Rowena served as best man. Groomsmen wre Jim Caylor of Tyler; Ricky Gamblin of Miles; Brad Hickerson of Denton; Jeff Lyssy of Highlands Ranch, Colo; and Wesley Schraer of Rowena. Ushers were Rick Grothues of San Antonio, and Brian Kirk, Michael White and Chris Wise of College Station. Caleb Gamblin of Miles was ring bearer.

Other attendants were Mande Marshall and Misti Marshall of Nacogdoches, and Roger Clark of Tyler.

The bride graduated from Robert E. Lee High School in Tyler, attended Tyler Junior College and graduated from Texas A&M University. She is a nutritionist with Texas Department of Criminal Justice. Her husband graduated from Miles High School and Texas A&M. He is attending graduate school at Texas A&M University.

After a wedding trip to Dallas, the couple will live in Palestine.

Get organized when doing home decorating

By Ava Van de Water
N.Y. Times News Service

A few months ago I saw an advertisement for a home planner. A spiral notebook, it had sleeves for photos, grid paper for floor plans, and lined paper for your wish list and necessary purchases. Interesting, I thought, but no one really needs that.

What I'd do to have that planner now. We moved into our house four months ago. I've lost track of the number of times I've measured windows and rooms. Just last week, I fished through my purse hoping I hadn't thrown out that scrap of paper with measurements for my "dream" hall bench. I've made priority lists but ignored them when a "real deal" came my way.

I have a five-year decorating plan, I assured my husband who reminded me of my promise not to go crazy furnishing our house.

Actually he's right. Home decorating decisions shouldn't just happen. Planning ahead can save you time and money.

Even if you don't plan on buying new furniture, it helps to make to-scale drawings of your rooms and furniture. You don't have to be an architect to do this. First measure your rooms and draw their outlines on pages of graph paper (available at most grocery and drug stores). Find a to-scale measurement that works for you — for example ½ inch equals 1 foot; or ¼ inch per foot. Don't forget to indicate windows and doorways.

Next make cardboard cutouts of your furniture, using the same scale as your room.

Now, to keep track of all that work. Buy a three-ring notebook with tab dividers and get clear plastic sleeves that hold 8½-by-11-inch sheets of paper.

Divide your notebook by rooms. Each room should have a floor plan with accurate measurements, to-scale furniture cutouts, a priority purchase list (i.e. blinds for privacy), a wish list (i.e. fancy drapes), and measurements of every window.

The plastic sleeves can hold floor plans, furniture cutouts and "ideas" pages torn from decorating magazines. Priority lists can be written on notebook paper.

Challenge over charging

Females generally pay higher bills with less pay

By Shelley Emling
N.Y. Times News Service

A man and woman enter Carter/Barnes Hair Artisans in Phipps Plaza, one of the swankiest salons in metro Atlanta. Both have short hair, and neither has ever been there before. What are they likely to pay? The woman about $35, and the man about $25.

Co-owner Mitchell Barnes explains why: "A woman's haircut is usually more detailed. To cut your basic IBM haircut for a man who comes in every 21 days is nothing. Men get their hair cut at closer intervals than ladies."

A check of more than 50 salons and barbershops throughout metro Atlanta reveals that women generally pay 20 percent to 50 percent more than men do at the same establishments, even when they have short hair.

Studies reveal that women generally pay more than men for other services and products as well, such as for dry cleaning and alterations. Experts say that's because women often are afraid to challenge the differences.

"Women are usually more concerned about being liked and pleasing people and figure that if they challenge the hairdresser, he's not going to like them anymore," said Pauline Rose Clance, a psychology professor at Georgia State University. "Some women still don't want to be thought of as nonfeminine or as rabble-rousers."

"It is costing American women and their daughters millions of dollars every year at a time when women are earning less than men, so we're getting it coming and going," said Gloria Allred, a Los Angeles attorney and women's rights advocate. "I think if salons charged more for African Americans than for Caucasians, there would be an outcry and it would be a practice not permitted to continue."

Hairdressers defend the price differential this way:

"Haircuts for men take about 10 to 15 minutes, and for women they usually take 30 to 40 minutes," said John Pastean, owner of Hair Europa.

"Men usually come in every two to four weeks, and women come in every six to 12 weeks, so men usually end up spending more than women anyway," said Dawn Anderson, a designer at Christopher Roberts Salon in suburban Smyrna.

"It takes longer to do even a short haircut on a woman because there's more detail to the cut. Men's cuts are basically the same, while women's cuts reflect many different styles," said Michelle Hebert, assistant manager at Daniel's Hair Salon.

But according to Kat Barber, coowner of William's Salon, the main reason isn't time or difficulty, but that salons use cheaper prices to lure men away from barbershops, most of which charge about $8 in metro Atlanta.

"The high-class salons figured some time ago that if they were going to tap the male market, they'd have to offer a cheaper haircut to attract men from the barbershops and the $7 haircut," she said.

"It's a real dilemma in that we can either be fair and bring up the price or keep our clients," Barber said. "Leaders in the industry have to do something together, or otherwise nobody's going to make the move first."

Some salons are starting to get away from male and female pricing. At Fugi's, a stylist said they have two different prices for basic and design cuts, and no difference in prices for men and women. "Apprentices" at Van Michael's New Talent Salon charge men and women the same price for cuts, between $15.50 and $25.

"I've always had to pay more than a man so this set price thing really attracted me to Van Michael, and both myself and my husband go there now," said customer Kellie Anderson-Picallo.

At established cut-rate chains, the costs of cuts for men and women usually come up about the same. For example, at Great Clips for Hair, men and women both pay $10 for a cut, and at the Hair Cuttery and Supercuts, men and women both pay $9.

Still, at Precision Great Cuts, both men and women pay $9 for a cut, but women pay $12 for a blow-dry and shampoo, while men pay $10.50. Managers say women usually have longer hair, so more work is involved. The same reasoning holds true at Choice Cut Hair Salons, where women pay $14 for a trim and shampoo, while men pay $12.

Be a smart shopper

Ask questions, and arm yourself with information about your home and car — that's the advice consumer advocates offer women who are concerned about getting ripped off in the marketplace.

If a woman feels she's being taken advantage of, she should speak up. If she doesn't get a satisfactory response, she should take her business elsewhere.

Here are some tips for women from consumer advocates and from the book "Why Women Pay More":

If, after reviewing the estimate for any sort of repair, the price sounds too high, tell the person you want to shop around for a lower price. Usually, the person will come down.

Ask the Better Business Bureau or the Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs if they've received complaints or have any information about certain companies before you do business with them.

Comparison shop when you're buying a car, and always test drive the cars in which you are interested. Read reviews of cars published in Consumer Reports, available at newsstands.

Get written estimates on costs and make sure they include all labor and materials and any promises that the contractor made orally. Also be aware that written estimates are just that — estimates.

Look upon your doctor as an employee, not the ultimate authority. Inquire about a diagnosis or prescribed drugs even if you like your physician.

"Why Women Pay More," published by consumer advocate Ralph Nader's Center for Responsive Law, is not available in bookstores. It can be ordered for $10 by sending a check or money order to: Why Women Pay More, P.O. Box 19367, Washington, D.C. 20036.

From cars to cleaning; The tab keeps adding up

N.Y. Times News Service

A study done by a Northwestern University law school professor in 1990 found that white women paid $150 more than white men for the same car after they had both gone through a rehearsed process of bargaining. African- American men fared worse, paying $400 more, and African-American women suffered most, being offered a price that on average was $800 higher than what white men paid.

Women undergo more medical exams, laboratory tests and blood pressure tests than men reporting the same symptoms.

Women are overcharged for auto insurance, including liability, medical and collision coverage. The overcharge has been calculated, on average, to be about 30 percent. However, the average woman drives less than the average man — about half as many miles per year, at all ages, and has about half as many accidents — factors not calculated in the cost of auto insurance.

Atlanta hairstylists charge an average of 20 percent to 50 percent more for women's haircuts than men's haircuts.

Local dry cleaners usually charge twice as much for women's blouses, mostly because women's blouses have more design, different sleeves and a variety of buttons.

Area department stores often do alterations free for men purchasing clothes, but charge for altering women's clothes.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published for winners only, not runners-up. These annoucements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after one month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Wedding & Engagement Announcements

Thank you for your interest in sharing your special day with the Midland Reporter-Telegram. We offer you the opportunity to celebrate in two ways.

The first option provides you with a complimentary listing about your engagement or wedding. Forms for complimentary announcements are available from our Lifestyle Department.

Our second option gives you the opportunity to publish a larger photo and provide more detailed information about your engagement or wedding announcement by purchasing space. There are a variety of sizes for you to choose from and information on how to order is available by calling us.

Ordering your special paid announcement is easy. Decide which size you wish to purchase (keep in mind that there are approximately 30 words per inch of space for your copy). Third, decide how much you want to spend. Finally, bring your completed write-up and your photo to the Midland Reporter-Telegram's advertising department. Your announcement will be edited to fit the space you request. Remember to bring payment or your charge card when placing your order.

If you have any questions or would like more information on our engagement and wedding listings, please call Mary Hardin at (915) 687-8887 or the retail advertising department, (915) 682-5311.

Christmas is year-round event at this Texan's home

By Jim Hutton
N.Y. Times News Service

'My wife of 36 years died 10 years ago. I wanted to make something in her memory, and I thought of Christmas because we loved it. My children and grandkids — three granddaughters and a grandson — in past Christmases have come here, and I do all the cooking.'

— Ed Clark

SAN ANTONIO — Ed Clark never dismantles his Christmas decorations.

Instead, the 70-year-old Army retiree adds ornaments, keeping the Christmas spirit year-round outside and inside his Northeast Side home — and on his head.

His front yard, with its red and white latticelike fence, has about 2,000 flicking lights and standing displays, including Santa and his sleigh with reindeer on rollers and another Santa with a dog pulling down his pants to reveal Christmas tree-patterned briefs.

There's even a gazebo for children featuring a Christmas tree complete with gifts, a replica of a town on a table and people playing in the snow, stockings ready for stuffing and a ceiling fan — in red, of course.

He even has the front of his home painted red and white in candy-cane colors.

Inside his home, Clark has the ceiling of his entryway, living room and an adjacent room filled with more than 1,000 Christmas bows and dangling ornaments.

The walls also are covered with more than 2,000 decorations, the couch is filled with stuffed animals, the end tables hold platters chock-full of candies and a small artificial Christmas tree sits on another table with gifts at its base.

Clark also has designed 55 Christmas hats, some with blinking lights and weighing more than three pounds with batteries. All feature Santa Claus, with red and green sequins and multiple decorations.

"I have one hat with 36 blinking lights among five that have Christmas lights," said Clark, who was wearing a gray western style coat with Santa, sleigh and poinsettias outlined in bright sequins on the front and back shoulder areas.

"Once I was at the mall when a woman said all my hat needed was lights," Clark recalled. "I flipped the switch on, and she said it was the prettiest hat she'd ever seen."

The Christmas spirit has been a part of Clark's life since he and his late wife, Frances, started their family in the late 1940s.

"Christmas always was the favorite time of the year for us," said Clark, whose three daughters and a son live in San Antonio, Fort Worth, Austin and Killeen, Texas.

"My wife of 36 years died 10 years ago. I wanted to make something in her memory, and I thought of Christmas because we loved it. My children and grandkids — three granddaughters and a grandson — in past Christmases have come here, and I do all the cooking."

In the last four years, Clark has turned his house into the permanent "North Pole South."

"I was a maintenance NCO but never was a carpenter before I did this and built the gazebo without any pictures," said Clark, who also has videotaped the construction of his Christmas wonderland.

Most of his displays and ornaments have been bought at discount stores or flea markets. Some of his hats, for example, cost as little as $3.

With all the glittering lights inside and outside his home, visitors probably suspect Clark's electricity bills are astronomical. But that isn't the case.

Clark said he keeps the outdoor Christmas lights on a couple of hours each night this month, turns them on periodically throughout the year and flips on the switch for special requests.

"The neighbors love it," Clark said, standing in his driveway as another car slowly passes by to catch a glimpse of his Christmas extravaganza.

Of course, after Christmas and about every other month, Clark has to dust more objects than any homemaker could ever imagine in her worst housekeeping nightmare.

"There's only one way to dust — very tenderly and with loving care," he said.

Even after all that work, Clark said he still hunts for more decorations and displays to add to his perpetual Christmas paradise.

"I put this up to give enjoyment to people. It keeps me young."

DEAR ABBY

Family with funny name hears 'ho-ho-ho' all year

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more story about funny names? If so, you are welcome to use mine. It's Ho. Around Christmastime, our family has always been greeted with "Ho-Ho-Ho!"

Van Buren

In 1960, when I married my husband, there were only six Ho's in the Los Angeles telephone book. Apparently no one had heard of a last name with only two letters, so when I'd give my name over the telephone, I was asked, "Is it HOLE?" I'd repeat, "No, it's HO .. just two letters, H and O."

We have received letters addressed to "The Holes" and "The Halls." My husband's first name was Garrett, so some mail came addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. H.O. Garrett."

When I got pregnant with our first child, here are some of the names the people in my office suggested: "If it's a girl, name her 'Ida,' then her name would be 'Ida Ho.'" "If it's a boy, name him Ivan, Westward, Tally, or even Gung ..."

Also, some people added an "e" to our name. We explained we are not the garden tool.

Now, with the influx of Asians, there are many Ho's, and I'm sure some of them have had the above experiences. — AMY C. HO

P.S. My maiden name is Chow. When I was a girl, someone inserted an "r" in my first name, and I was called "Army Chow"!

DEAR ABBY: We are a military family stationed in Germany. On the day before Thanksgiving, your column read: "Why not invite a friend who lives alone to share a Thanksgiving meal?"

We acted on your suggestion and invited the elderly widow across the street to join us for a traditional Thanksgiving meal. She accepted gladly and suggested that a few others in the neighborhood were also alone, so we included them.

The pleasure of our traditionally American feast was enhanced by the addition of these neighbors, even though they spoke practically no English. Thank you, Abby, for enriching our holiday. — THANKFUL AMERICAN FAMILY

DEAR FAMILY: Thank YOU for picking up on the suggestion. Inviting others to share your holiday meal is what Thanksgiving is all about.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I went to visit our daughter in Mississippi for Thanksgiving.

She prepared a traditional Thanksgiving dinner that she served on PAPER plates! She had plenty of porcelain plates in her cupboard.

Am I old-fashioned, or is this tacky? — HOLIDAY VISITOR

DEAR HOLIDAY VISITOR: Before passing judgment on a hostess for using paper plates, one would have to know how many guests she had for Thanksgiving dinner. Does she have small children to take care of? Did she have anyone to help her clean her house and prepare the holiday dinner?

In my view, the epitome of tackiness is criticizing the hostess who fed you.

DEAR ABBY: A quick response to the jaundiced view of sex, expressed by Lord Chesterfield ("The price is exorbitant, the pleasure is transitory, and the position is ridiculous"): The best is free of either payment or guilt, one may protract or re-experience the pleasure, and imaginative partakers may vary the position. — SMOKED OUT BY CHESTERFIELD IN PINE MOUNTAIN, GA.

DEAR ABBY: My next-door neighbor and I are close friends. We've exchanged house keys for years so that when either of us is away on vacation, we have access to each other's house to water the plants, pick up the newspapers and mail, and turn lights on and off — thus diverting attention from the occupant's absence.

During a recent three-day absence, I returned home to discover that several pieces of my jewelry (mostly of sentimental value) worth about $2,000 were missing from the jewelry box on my dresser.

What are some logical scenarios to explain such a mysterious disappearance? And how should it be handled? — LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

DEAR LOVE: Perhaps the neighbor had some visitors (possibly light-fingered children who were tempted by the easy accessibility of the jewelry) who accompanied him or her when the chores were being done at your house. Or, the key was placed on a key ring and some dishonest person had the keys duplicated. Or, someone else knew that you would be out of town and somehow entered your dwelling in a manner that has yet to be discovered.

Next time, place your valuables in a bank vault or a closet with a deadbolt lock. And take the key with you. The person you should be asking for possible scenarios should be your neighbor.

DEAR ABBY: I have a delightful friend I'll call Sarah. We see each other only once in a while because of our hectic schedules. Last August, I gave Sarah $85 to purchase something for me in a store next to her office building. It's been nearly four months, and I still haven't received what she promised to pick up — and she did not return my money, either. I have a feeling that she spent it.

Well, six weeks ago Sarah loaned me $80 because I ran short and payday wasn't for another week. When she handed me the money, she said I could pay her back later. Can you believe her nerve? My question: Should I "forget" to give her the $80 and not mention it again? Or should I remind her about the money I gave her last summer? We have both been busy, so I haven't seen her since the latest incident. What do you think? — WAVERING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR WAVERING: On the chance that it slipped her mind that the $85 you gave her last summer was not returned to you, you should remind her — or ask for $5 and call it even.

'If you stop making art, you die'

Louise Nevelson, sculptor

Above, University of Texas of the Permian Basin art instructor Chris Stanley holds two of his pieces. Stanley teaches ceramics, sculpture and art history. Left, Stanley and student Becky Haynie peer under a trash-can lid to look at Ms. Haynie's ceramic piece, which they had just removed from the kiln. The ceramic bowl is placed in sand and leaves in the process of bringing out colors in the ceramic. Bottom left, Haynie gets hot hands as she removes a ceramic piece from a new kiln built recently by UTPB students.

UTPB art instructor 'makes his own path'

Christopher John Stanley credits the Jesuit priests at Rockhurst High School with instilling him with a passion for living, learning and work.

"The Jesuits were a very volatile bunch of educators, scholars of the Catholic Church," said Stanley, remembering his days at the all-boys high school in Kansas City, Mo.

"They all had advanced degrees in theology and the subject matter they were teaching, coupled with very strict discipline.

"Some people have never experienced what it's like to have an instructor or teacher who has immersed themselves in the formality of being. It was the best situation for learning. We were expected to work. College was almost a piece of cake compared to high school.

"You don't walk out of an experience like that and not perceive life to be a lot more important than most people think it to be — I mean just living," said Stanley, who is assistant professor of fine arts at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and is in charge of the ceramics and sculpture departments. He teaches ceramics, sculpture and art history.

"We were taken to places and shown things in that experience, which I don't think most people (have experienced). It's hard to accept the status quo. It makes you more serious about what you perceive to be your life's work, and you take that with a passion."

Although Stanley's first opportunity for a hands-on experience with art didn't arrive until he was a high-school senior, his interest in art had been triggered years before.

"I always had an interest in art," said Stanley, who never attended structured art classes in elementary or junior high school.

"I would hang out at the Nelson Adkins Museum in Kansas City, Mo. I've always had an interest in Asian art because that's primarily what that museum collects."

Not until he was a senior did he think seriously about a possible career in art.

Then, while at the University of Kansas at Lawrence where he was studying English, Stanley took a ceramics class. From that point on, he began "bouncing back and forth," yet not getting "serious with the fine arts" until the end of his sophomore year when he began to get frustrated with school.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

KCRS to air Verdi

Giuseppe Verdi's "I Lombardi" will receive its Texaco-Metropolitan Opera radio broadcast premiere at 12:30 p.m. Jan. 15 over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera International Radio Network.

The opera will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House and will be heard locally over radio station KCRS.

Aprile Millo will be heard as Giselda, Luciano Pavarotti as Oronte, Bruno Beccaria as Arvino and Paul Plishka as Pagano. James Levine will conduct. The announcer will be Peter allen.

Bank shows painting

Mary Tucci's painting "Serenity" is hanging at Bank One through January.

The painting was inspired by a photograph taken near Ruidoso, N.M., by Ronnie Brunfield. The work includes two deer not in the original photograph.

Ms. Tucci, who is currently taking oil painting classes with Judy Morrison Griffin and Bill Hagerman, is a member of The Palette Club and Midland Arts Association. Her "most enthusiastic viewers" are, she said, her husband, two sons and five grandchildren.

Each month the bank offers a member of The Palette Club the opportunity to have one of their paintings on display.

Gallery stages exhibit

An exhibition of the clay sculpture of Amy Brower Gleason and the pottery of Diana Thomas will open at Gallery 1114 Saturday with a 7 to 10 p.m. reception.

The show runs through February 24.

Ms. Brower's salt-fired and raku forms suggest eggs or shells or horns.

Ms. Thomas' vessels are salt and reduction fired porcelain. The work is characterized by expressive but classical form and pristine and striking color.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative contemporary art center located at 1114 N. Big Spring. Hours are 1-5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.

Violas to showcase

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc. announces its MasterWorks III Concert featuring Sally Chisholm and Igor Fedotov, who both play viola.

This concert will be performed Tuesday at Lee High School in Midland and Thursday at Bonham Junior High School in Odessa.

Performances will begin at 8 p.m. Concert co-sponsors are Dr. and Mrs. Michael Miller, Dr. and Mrs. Roberto Spencer, Drs. Terry and Elvira Burns and Dr. and Mrs. Bart Mayron.

Sally Chisholm is an original member of the Thouvenel String Quartet. She currently resides in Madison, Wis. She will be performing with Igor Fedotov, principal violist of the Symphony and currently a member of the Thouvenel String Quartet.

They will be performing "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B-Flat" by J.S. Bach and "Italian Serenade" by Wolf. Also featured during the performance will be "Il Guarney Overture" by Gomes and "Symphony No. 6 in B-Minor, Op. 74 Pathetique" by Tchaikowsky.

Tickets may be purchased at the Symphony Office at 563-0921 or at the performance.

Players offer 'Corpse'

"Corpse" a murder mystery that combines the elements of Sleuth and Deathtrap in one exciting production, will be presented by Permian Playhouse at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and Jan. 21-22.

Set in London in 1936, "Corpse" tells the story of a shabby British actor, Evelyn, played by David Kloesel, who hires a genial Irishman with a shady past, Powell, played by Bill Sibley, to murder his twin brother, also played by David Kloesel.

The plotting is punctuated by the visits of a delightfully theatrical landlady, played by Lynn Schofield and a tenacious British "bobby" played by Victor Lopez.

"Corpse" will be the first Playhouse production directed by Barbara Robinson, the new artistic director.

Call now for reservations at 362-2329. Box office hours are Monday-Friday 10 a.m.- 5:30 p.m.

Museum internships

HOUSTON — The Museum of Fine Arts is to offer summer internships to five minority college students.

Now in its fifth year, the program encourages students to consider future careers in museums by providing them with practical experience in the museum field. The Houston museum is one of the few art institutions in the nation to offer a minority internship program.

Five interns, selected as Lisa Wallace-Reader's Digest Fellows, will receive a stipend of $2,500.

The internship will begin June 6 and continue through Aug. 12. the fellows will work full time under the guidance of experienced professionals in a variety of departments including curatorial, education, grants, graphics, library, public relations and publications.

The deadline to apply is Jan. 24. To apply, candidates must submit the following materials: an official college transcript including fall 1993 grades; a letter of recommendation from a college professor in a field related to the internship; a resume; and a one-page typed essay describing the applicant's interest in an internship at the museum and his department preference.

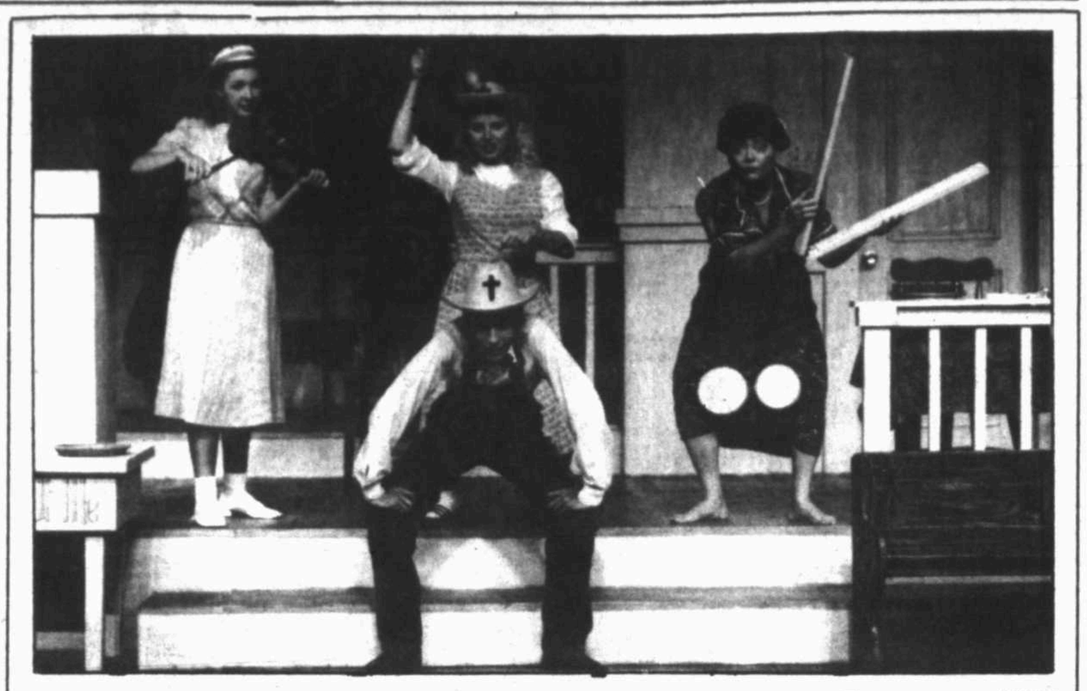

The materials need to be submitted to the Education Department, Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, P.O. Box 6826; Houston, 77265.

Applicants will be notified by April 1.

Spielberg casts Texan

FORT WORTH — A former Casa Manana Theatre School student was recently cast in Steven Spielberg's new film, "Little Rascals."

Brandon "Bug" Hall, 8, will portray Alfalfa, the ringleader in the original "Our Gang" movies, which were made in the 1930s. Filming is scheduled to begin Tuesday in Los Angeles.

The Yucca Theatre's presentation of 'Smoke on the Water' which is to run through Jan. 22 features from top left Tiffiny Owens, Charlotte Martin, Trudie Thomason and Will Coombes.

Yucca Theatre to offer musical comedy

Staff Report

"Smoke on the Mountain," the musical comedy, is being presented for an encore run by Midland Community Theatre through Jan. 22 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

The Sanders family has been invited back for a down-home return engagement. The play takes place on a Saturday night at the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church during its Saturday Night Sing.

Cast members include G. Thomas Harlow as pastor Melvin Oglethorpe, Loree Fitz-Gerald as Vera, Bert Bostic as Burl, David Lindemood as the wayward Uncle Clyde, Charlotte Martin and Will Coombes as the twins Denise and Dennis, Trudie Thomason as Burl's sister June, Tiffiny Owen as June's fiddle-playing daughter Pearle and John Bates as Pearle's intended, Stanley.

Tickets are $10 and MCT members will receive a 20 percent discount. Discount rates are available for groups of 30 or more. For reservations call the box office, 682-4111.

Co-producer for the show is Parker & Parsley.

Annual bird watching event features cranes

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — Bird watchers are invited to attend the second annual "Cranefest" Feb. 4 and 5.

Festivities begin with a gathering of birders at 7 p.m. Friday at Garret Hall, First United Methodist Church, for dinner and a talk by Ed Kutac, author of "Birder's Guide of Texas."

Breakfast is set for 7:30 a.m. Saturday in the Crestwood Hall party room at RV Park of Texas, followed by a guided bus trip to view crane feeding areas.

The morning session includes a stop at Big Spring State Park to view birds and study historic rock carvings.

Comanche Trail Park is the final morning stop for hiking along flora-and-fauna rich trails.

Guests return to Crestwood Hall for lunch and program, then board buses for lakes at nearby Knott to view cranes and waterfowl feeding.

"Cranefest" coincides with the annual "Around the World in 80 Bites" gastromical fund-raising event beginning at 4:30 p.m. Saturday at the Heritage Museum, adding further variety to the weekend.

"Cranefest" promoters invite bird-lovers statewide to submit designs for anew logo for the annual event. A $300 prize will be awarded to the artist who submits the winning sketch. Art will become the property of "Cranefest" and if no entry is chosen, the competition will continue the following year.

Information about "Cranefest" activities and costs, as well as information on lodging, may be obtained by contacting Marae Brooks, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, (915) 263-7641.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JANUARY 9, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Do not allow yourself to become discouraged if professional jealousies seem to slow you down at times. Eventually you will emerge on top, receiving the accolades of friends and competitors alike! Good luck favors the efforts of those involved with real estate or farming. The financial picture reflects steady progress.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: novelist Judith Krantz, folksinger Joan Baez, actor Bob Denver, football player Bart Starr.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family relationships receive a welcome boost, thanks to today's events. You are ready to take a more assertive role in romance. All should go well if you avoid issuing an ultimatum.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tending to an older person's needs makes you more aware of your own. Devote more time to the personal side of your life. A romantic interlude will be the highlight of the day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Heads up! Exciting news is coming your way. Group travel holds more appeal than previously. Learn from your mistakes without dwelling on them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sometimes you can have the most fun by just leaving things to chance. Romance or a reunion provides all the excitement you could wish. Careful reading of the newspaper will provide job leads.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money alone will not soothe your conscience. If you feel sorry for the way you treated someone, say so. Your change of attitude will be deeply appreciated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could be feeling more hopeful about a romance. Go ahead and accept a last-minute invitation if you have nothing else planned. New people will give you fresh insights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try not to feel envious of those who are wealthier than you; you have a lot of other things going for you! Guard your health and reputation. Choose quality over quantity in romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Welcome a chance to widen your social horizons. Curb a tendency to judge people by appearances; get to really know those you encounter. Your popularity grows; you almost have a fan club!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A long talk with a loved one helps you reach a decision. You must be tactful when trying to convince this person to change behavior patterns. Confide in other family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A message you receive now makes you feel like a new person! Avoid acting self-satisfied now that you have gotten your way. Make a special effort to show someone a good time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be cautious when sharing good news with family members. Older relatives may feel jealous if they do not hear it first. Spend some time going through your wardrobe; new clothes may be necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Refuse to get into an argument with someone older than you. Being too outspoken could cause a rift. If invited out for the evening, wear something special.

Since nine tricks at no trump or 10 in a major suit score as much or more than 11 tricks in a minor, clubs and diamonds are all but forgotten in duplicate bridge for game purposes. Partscores or slams in the minors are still bid, but the feeling is you might as well bid a slam in a minor rather than settle for a pedestrian game.

That is not always correct. When this hand was dealt in a major national championship, those pairs who tried four hearts (the vast majority) met with their just desserts because of the bad break. At a few tables, South reached five diamonds and even that contract needed careful play.

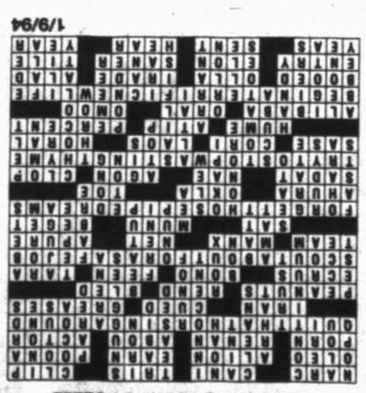

West did well to refrain from leading spades, instead choosing a low club for the initial salvo. The defenders quickly banked the book, then continued with a third club for declarer to ruff.

Those declarers who view life through rosy spectacles wasted no time in going down. They drew two rounds of trumps, then started on hearts. When West showed out on the second heart, two of declarer's losing hearts could be ruffed on the table, but declarer was still saddled with a heart loser.

The better technicians drew just one round of trumps, then cashed the two high hearts. Had both defenders followed, the last trump would have been drawn and the hearts established with two ruffs. As it was, when West showed out, but could not ruff, declarer was able to ruff all three heart losers on the table and bring home the contract.

Country singer's struggle finally pays off

By William Kerns
Associated Press

TAHOKA (AP) — Decked out in his high school football jersey and jeans, Daron Norwood could pass for any small town graduate returning home for the holidays to look up old flames and discuss old dreams.

Rather than reliving high school glories, however, the 28-year-old Tahoka native is enjoying national airplay received by his first country single, "If It Wasn't For Her."

And though Norwood had predicted in interviews a full decade ago that he'd someday become a national recording artist, even he never dreamed that he'd have to endure ridicule, emotional strife, guilt and depression before the right people finally paid attention.

After all, Norwood spent most of his early years traveling with his family, Baptist evangelists giving concerts in churches and on outdoor stages across the Southwest. He acknowledged that his family put a ukelele in his hands when he was 2, that he was harmonizing to "Jesus Loves Me" when he was 3 and that he began writing songs when he was 10.

But when he turned 17, he decided to return to the Lynn County town of Tahoka, a community of approximately 3,000 located south of Lubbock, to live with his grandparents and finish high school.

"I wanted to be a normal kid. I'd been moving every six months, and I wanted to just come home," he said. "The last time I played with my family was in Hobbs, N.M. But 55 people were saved at that concert; I still remember that."

Norwood became a starting guard on the Tahoka High School basketball team and was a backup quarterback and All-District wide receiver for the football squad. But he never stopped playing music — and he hasn't forgotten how much it hurt when other students made fun of him in school.

"They had a nickname for me," he recalled. "They called me 'Hollywood' because I'd play sports and then leave and play music. I didn't like it. I never understood why they called me that."

Dreams of a music career had to be placed on hold when he fell in love. "I was Mr. School Spirit in school. The girl was Miss School Spirit. We got married on July 26, 1986, and, the thing was, she wanted me to have a regular job and maybe sing on the weekends somewhere.

"And I tried."

Norwood took a job at the Tahoka Co-Op where, he said, he "busted (fixed) flats" and did anything else the boss told him to do. One day he was ordered to erect a flagpole on an area of ground covered with asphalt. "It was 102 degrees, and I cussed every minute, but I did it," he said, adding that he became upset years later when he discovered that someone had run into "my flagpole" with a car.

But he'd never before been that unhappy and now realizes that, had it not been for a co-worker nicknamed Conoco, he might still be laboring at that same Co-Op.

"Boy, you sing pretty good," the man told him. "You ought to go on up to Lubbock and sing in those honky tonks.

Norwood recalls: "He held his palms up and said, 'Look at my hands. They're all used up. Boy, you don't want to end up like old Conoco.'

"I thought about what he said, and I quit that very day. I went home, left my wife a note saying I'd gone to Lubbock to look for work as a singer and told her, 'Don't tell anybody.' "

Easy money was accompanied by guilt.

Norwood found work immediately, singing in one bar from noon to 3 p.m., driving to play at another Lubbock bar from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. and then joining Rex Thomas at the Honky Tonk from 9 p.m. until 2 in the morning. He soon was clearing more than $1,000 a week — not bad for a 19-year-old, fresh out of school.

But Norwood had wanted to succeed without playing in bars.

He wanted it kept a secret because, without even hearing from anyone, he considered himself the black sheep of his Christian family.

Musician Joe Stephenson finally threatened to "disown" Norwood if the latter didn't give Nashville a shot. So it was on to Tennessee — and more pressure.

He talked to producers with West Texas ties and a record deal was in the works in virtually no time, he said. But Norwood also had a pregnant wife and pretty soon, as he put it, "Boom. The Big D (divorce). So I went home and tried to work it out."

Divorce proceedings were initiated more than once; each time the couple got back together. Norwood tried playing in other bands, but being a sideman was never satisfying. His daughter was born; he still wasn't happy at home.

Finally, his grandfather, J.T. Miller, bought him a GMC Pickup and advised him to give Nashville another try. In 1988, Norwood's life was filled with stress. He was back in Nashville but, he said, "It ain't happening this time. You usually get only one shot and, if you run back home, they think you're not committed or not stable.

". . . I showed the same fellows a picture of my daughter, and I said, 'This is why I went back to Tahoka, so I could live with myself.' But nothing seemed to be working out."

That same year, he flew to Tahoka and drove to the courthouse. "I was divorced five minutes later," he said.

Before long, he added, he'd hit rock bottom.

"I was playing at a bar called Tapper's in Florence, Ala., for $30 on Thursday and $30 on Friday. I just felt like it was right to get out of Nashville, because they don't take you seriously if they see you every day, see every desperate move you make. But I was totally disgusted with myself."

He met his second wife, Karen, in Alabama. But he still remembers the days when they were happy to scrape together 79 cents for a cheeseburger at a Florence pool hall — and the moment he lost all of his motivation, put away his instruments and stopped playing for two months.

So with his grandfather occasionally sending him enough money for food and bills, Norwood pretty much stayed huddled up in a deer stand.

He'd never before fired anything with more power than a BB gun. And he never did manage to bag a deer.

Pictured to the left is the Project Dare van entertaining teenagers this summer on the corner of Midkiff and Cuthbert streets.

By Jeffrey McDonald

In an earlier issue of NuevaVista, we brought you the comments of several Midland teenagers, regarding the curfew that has been proposed for the city's young people.

Many of those interviewed believed that the curfew was not a good idea. And interviews with community leaders in government and law enforcement show that the merits of such a curfew are still being debated.

"I feel like everyone has mixed feelings about it, I myself have mixed feelings about it," said Claudia Egan, a member of the Midland City Council, and a leader of the city's Project Awaken. "The split is almost fifty-fifty over whether curfew would be good, or whether it would be bad."

"Those who don't want a curfew feel like we don't have the manpower to enforce it, while those who do want it believe that young people should be off the streets. And there are those who believe it takes away the rights of the kids."

"Every time there's a plus, there's a minus."

It was partly due to these many various opinions held by citizens, that the Midland City Council postponed it's consideration of a proposed curfew ordinance.

"Actually, the curfew has been tabled. The council tabled it at our last meeting," explained Egan. "We actually have just thrown it out there for whoever wants to comment upon it."

Another consideration behind the city council's decision to table the proposed curfew, was whether or not such an ordinance is needed in Midland.

"We're looking at some facts and figures that would support it, or would not support it," said Egan. "Dallas, for example, has the statistics that would support it."

A similar curfew, proposed for the city of Dallas has been overcoming a series of legal challenges in recent months. Officials and concerned citizens in many communities have been watching the progress of the Dallas ordinance, and others, as they pass through the various levels of America's system of courts.

But while Dallas may have the criminal and juvenile delinquency statistics to support such an ordinance as a curfew, other communities may not. The decision on Midland is still out, pending analysis of statistics for the last quarter of 1993, which are not yet available.

"I have seen the statistics up through the month of September, and those statistics do not really support the need for a curfew at this time," said Egan, adding that statistics for the last quarter of 1993 would not be available until later this year.

Deputy Chief John Urby, of the Midland Police Department, already has an idea of what those statistics for the remainder of the year may show. As head of the department's Operations Division, Urby has been keeping in touch with those who experience, first-hand, exactly what occurs on the streets of the city.

"What I've done is, I've been in touch with my patrol sergeants," said Urby, adding that particular emphasis was placed upon the opinions of those who work on the department's midnight watch. "The preliminary studies show the patrol sergeants and the patrol officers don't feel it would be backed real solidly by the statistics."

"After eleven at night, the streets pretty much die down, except for those over sixteen years of age. And they're pretty much adults, and the ordinance doesn't address them. The general feeling is that the kids on Midland necesita el toque de queda?

Por Jeffrey McDonald

En una primera edición de Nueva Vista, nosotros le trajimos los comentarios de algunos adolescentes de Midland, concerniente al toque de queda que a sido propuesto para los jovenes de la ciudad.

Muchos de los entrevistados piensan que el toque de queda no es una buena idea. Y las entrevistas con lideres de la comunidad en el gobierno y los de la ley de justicia enseñan que los méritos de tal toque de queda permanece en debate.

"Pienso que se a mezclado sentimientos acerca de esto, yo mismo e mezclado tales sentimientos," dice Claudia Egan, miembro del Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland y líder del projecto de la ciudad "Awaken" (Despertar). La división es casi cincuenta - cincuenta sobre si el toque de queda es bueno, o si será malo."

"Aquellos que no quieren el toque de queda se sienten como si nosotros no tuvieramos el poder para hacerla valer, mientras esos que quieren creen que los jovenes deben estar fuera de las calles. Y estan esos que creen que se les esta quitando los derechos a los jovenes."

"Cada vez que hay un mas , hay un menos."

En parte se debe a estas varias opiniones retenidas por ciudadanos, que el Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland haya pospuesto su consideración de la propuesta de la ordenanza del toque de queda.

"Actualmente, el toque de queda a sido puesta en la mesa redonda. El concilio puso a consideración en nuestra última reunión," explica Egan. "Nosotros actualmente la hemos propuesto para cualquiera que quiera comentar al respecto."

Otra consideración detras de las desiciones del concilio de la ciudad para proponer el toque de queda, es si si o no tal ordenanza es necesaria en Midland.

"Estamos biendo algunos aspectos y figuras que la puedan apoyar, o que no la puedan apoyar," dice Egan.

"En Dallas, por ejemplo, tiene las estadisticas que si la apoyan."

Un toque de queda similar, propuesto en la ciudad de Dallas a sobresalido en una serie de competencias legales en meses recientes. Oficiales y ciudadanos en muchas comunidades han visto el progreso de la ordenanza en Dallas, y otros, así como pasa entre los varios niveles del sistema de las cortes de America.

Pero mientras Dallas tenga las estadisticas criminales y delincuencia juvenil para apoyar

Honrando a los líderes de hoy y preparando a los líderes del mañana

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Una organización de Odessa esta honrando a los líderes de hoy de la comunidad Hispana, mientras prepara a los líderes del mañana.

Esto es exactamente lo que pasara cuando SALSA, the Student Alliance of Latinos Succeding Academically (Alianza de Estudiantes Latinos Prosperos Academicamente), presente su Cena y Baile Anual, el Sábado, 22 de Enero, a las 7:00 pm, en el Ballroom del Hotel Hilton en Odessa.

"Tenemos uno cada año. Lo que hacemos es que honramos a alguien de la comunidad Hispana, al que nosotros conocemos y que sabemos a servido como modelo de un papel positivo," dice Cindy Ramirez, secretaria del Colegio de Odessa, y voluntaria de SALSA. "Y lo que hacemos es, tenemos un banquete, y tenemos invitados que hablan de esta gente. Y tenemos una presentación que expresa nuestro agradecimiento por todo lo que han hecho por nosotros.."

"SALSA lo a estado haciendo por los pasados tres años. Hemos honrado a Richard Abalos, el abogado, y a Elvia Hernandez, la pasada Directora Ejecutiva de la Camara de Comercio Hispana. Y un año honramos a todos los oficiales Hispanos electos, pasados y presentes, en ambas ciudades de Odessa y Midland."

Este año, Gilbert y Adela Vasquez seran honrados por sus servicios a la educación, y a la comunidad. Gilbert Vasquez es director de la Escuela Hood Junior High, en Odessa. Adela Vasquez es supervisora de la Escuela Independiente Distrital de los Servicios Asistenciales para Estudiantes del Condado Ector.

Ambos han estado activos en educación, y

Honoring today's leaders, and preparing tomorrow's

By Jeffrey McDonald

An Odessa organization is honoring today's leaders in the Hispanic community, while preparing tomorrow's leaders.

This is exactly what will happen when SALSA, (Student Alliance of Latinos Succeeding Academically) presents it's annual dinner and dance, January 22nd.

"We have one every year. What we do is we honor somebody from the Hispanic community, who we know has served as a positive role model," said Cindy Ramirez, a secretary at Odessa College, and a volunteer with SALSA. "What we do is, we have our banquet, and we have guest speakers come in and speak about these people. And we have a presentation to express our appreciation for everything they've done for us."

"SALSA has been doing this for the past three years. We have honored Richard Abalos, the attorney, and Elvia Hernandez, the former Executive Director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber. One year we honored all Hispanic elected officials, past and present, in both Odessa and Midland."

This year, Gilbert and Adela Vasquez will be honored for their service to education, and the community. Gilbert Vasquez is principal at Hood Junior High School, in Odessa. Adela Vasquez is supervisor of the Ector County Independent School District's Student Assistance Services.

"They have both been active in education, and we've seen a lot of positive things come from them," explained Ramirez. "They've had a lot of positive influence on a lot of students."

Providing positive influence for students is a cornerstone of the mission of SALSA.

"What we do is we try to have a variety of people, not just Hispanic students," said Ramirez. "Basically it's an organization to help people be aware of what Hispanic culture is all about. It's a community service-based organization, because we really want to be involved, and get everybody helping each other."

"Recently, we helped deliver food baskets over the holidays. And one thing we do every year is go to Austin for the Hispanic Business Student Leadership Conference, a workshop at the University of Texas at Austin."

In fact proceeds from the dinner and dance will benefit this year's trip to Austin. Live music will be provided by recent, Battle of the Bands, winner, Andy Roman & the Roman Brothers.

"It's going to be a real nice dinner and dance," said Ramirez. "So just come out and have fun, and help us show these people how much they influenced us, and other people's lives."

Nueva vereda une a México, Estados Unidos y Canadá

(NUH) - Excursionistas están abriendo una nueva senda desde México hasta Canadá, uniendo así a los paises de América del Norte mas estrechamente que nunca

El 5 de Junio, el trecho final de la Vereda de la Cresta del Pacifico («Pacific Crest Trail») fue oficialmente inaugurado cerca del Canon de Soledad en California, y completa así una vereda continua de 2,638 millas desde la frontera de México, a través de California, Oregon y Washington, hasta Canadá.

Aunque los caminantes han utilizado partes de la vereda desde su fundación en 1968, no fue sino hasta la apertura de la ultima sección en Junio que tuvieron un camino ininterrumpido que une a los tres paises.

«Esta vereda ha unido a la gente,» indico el Secretario del Departamento del Interior, Bruce Babbitt, en la ceremonia de inauguración de la sección final de la vereda.

A pie o a caballo, el viaje a través de las 2,600 millas de la vereda no es para los débiles de espíritu. La vereda atraviesa 19 cañones principales, pasa por 1,000 lagos y 57 pasos de montañas. La Vereda de la Cresta del Pacifico simboliza la diversidad de la belleza del continente de América del Norte al dirigir a los caminantes desde desiertos candentes hasta montañas cubiertas de nieve - a veces en un mismo día.

Si el excursionista anda un promedio de 15 millas diarias, le tomaría 176 días (alrededor de cinco meses y medio) el recorrido por toda la vereda. El viaje incluye maravillas de la naturaleza tales como el Desierto de Mojave, el Monte Whitney, el Lago Crater y el Pico Glacier. La mayoría de las personas prefieren viajar una sección de la vereda a la vez a través de varios años.

La Vereda de la Cresta del Pacifico es aproximadamente 500 millas mas larga que su antigua y mejor conocida contraparte, la Vereda Apalache («Appalachian Trail»), que se extiende desde Georgia hasta Maine.

La vereda para caminantes no es lo único que une a los Estados Unidos, México y Canadá. Las tres naciones han negociado el Trato de Libre Comercio de América del Norte (NAFTA, siglas en ingles), que eliminara las barreras comerciales entre los paises. Se espera que el Congreso vote para la aprobación final del acuerdo este año.

Making A Golden Life for Our 'Golden Years'

By Jeffrey McDonald

We all have a favorite relative, someone who - among the entire family - was particularly special to us. In some ways, that special relative may influence the path we take in life. This was exactly the case for Isabel Gonzales, of Midland.

"I think it may be because my grandmother was so special to me," said Gonzales. "Now I have a lot of grandparents! But it's more than that. They're also my friends."

Gonzales is not exaggerating. After all, she is Director of Senior Citizen Activities at Midland's Casa de Amigos. A program and a position that has continued to grow over the years, both in the number of people served, and the services offered.

Beginning this month, Casa's program has officially merged with Citywide Community Services, a program that promotes clean, safe living quarters for the elderly.

"Our family keeps growing and growing," said Gonzalez. "Coming together and combining our resources will greatly enhance our already existing services to the elderly."

"Well, I tell you what, I just finished going over our reports. In 1993 we did get up to 493 people served. Of course, we also have Citywide Community Services, and they serve 100 people."

The phrase "Senior Citizen Activities" covers a broad range of topics, interests, and events. But they all share the goal of helping senior citizens live fuller and more active lives.

"My goodness! So many things! The first part, there are the activities. These are the people who are able to move around, and they come here and participate in the program," explained Gonzales. "We have the meal program, of course, where they enjoy a meal. We have a ceramics program, crafts, and sewing. And games like pool, dominoes, cards."

"We celebrate all kinds of holidays. There's a trip that we take each year, and we have field trips we take around the city."

There's also a serious side to the services offered by Casa's Senior Citizen Activities Program.

"Our other part is the social services," explained Gonzales, who is a state certified Associate Social Worker. "This might be translating, or helping with filling out forms. We help them with the medical services, and understanding the prescriptions. Also with transportation, when we can. But we do bring them to the program, or take them to the doctor."

Gonzales credits a childhood spent growing up in a small town, part of a family that was active in the community, as another important influence in her life.

"I moved to Midland in 1968. I was born and raised in Fort Stockton," recalled Gonzales. "My family was involved in the church, and my dad was very involved. They were always involved in other groups. So I think that had a lot to do with my always working with people."

"I started even before there were meals being served at Casa. They were being served at Guadalupe [Midland's Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church], before moving to Casa. I was looking for a job, and it was a part-time job. Then this position, Director of Senior Citizen Activities, became available, and I applied for it."

In addition to her work at Casa, Gonzales also keeps busy raising six children, and is active in religious education at her church, Midland's La Virgen de San Juan Catholic Church. But it is her work at Casa de Amigos that brings Gonzales some of her greatest satisfaction.

"I myself have been here approximately twelve years, and I just love it! They're my friends," she explained. "I love working for Casa. The whole place is very a wonderful place to work. To help the senior citizens who are my friends, my family? That is my favorite thing to do."

"I'd like to work more with families, to help them with their older relatives, so the families won't get so frustrated. At the same time, we want to help them [senior citizens] become independent, so they learn to help themselves."

Gonzales believes that the importance of her work, and the work of others in the program, will continue to grow as America's population continues to grow older. Especially as that older population expands it's horizons, long after the age when senior citizens once settled into quiet retirement. It's a task that Gonzales hopes will appeal to others, and she invites volunteers of all ages to become a part of Senior Citizen Activities, and other programs offered at Casa de Amigos.

"I certainly would like to invite our older persons as well as our younger persons," she said. "We have so many activities. I especially want the younger community to become involved."

"We want to hear from people in the community. We would like to know what could make our program work. We would like their input!"

To find out more about Senior Citizen Activities, or any of the other programs offered at Casa de Amigos, you may visit their center at 1101 E. Garden Lane, in Midland, or call them at 682-9701.

the street, from seventeen to twenty, are the ones that give us the trouble. And this ordinance wouldn't address them."

Urby is quick to point out, however, that should the ordinance be considered and passed, his department is prepared to make use of it, and has adequate resources to address it.

"We don't feel like the call load would go up significantly," he said. "Of course, if you add ordinance after ordinance after ordinance, it comes to a point where you have to say, Whoa! But just this one, in itself, wouldn't be a problem."

"We would look at this ordinance as another tool the force would use, allowing us probable cause to speak to a young person, to say, Hello, what are you doing? It would be another tool for the force to use, that might head off vandalism, for example."

For now, the proposed curfew is just that, a proposal being considered by the Midland City Council. For now, at least four months will pass before it is considered again. Four months during which criminal and juvenile delinquency statistics will be studied, and input from the entire community will be sought.

But whatever the outcome of the current debate, most agree that it will increase the awareness and the concern people feel for the safety of the city and it's young people. And that, they agree, is a good thing.

"There's a lot of questions, a lot of concerns," said Urby, who stresses that positive communication between the community and the police force is absolutely essential. "But at least the city is looking at it, and working on it."

Egan also believes that communication from all segments of the community, young and old, will play an important role in the consideration of the proposed curfew.

But in the meantime, with or without a city ordered curfew, young people and their parents could be taking a more active role in policing themselves, and their city.

"Obviously, by enforcing their own curfew with their own children," she said. "Establish their own rules, and live by those rules."

"We welcome any kind of input, anything like that," she added. "I would encourage anybody to contact their city councilperson, or any law enforcement person, or any public official, and express their opinion!"

Those wishing to learn the names of their representatives on the Midland City Council, and those of other concerned leaders, and wishing to provide their input on the proposed ordinance, are urged to call the City of Midland, at 685-7203.

It's something you can do not only for yourself, but for your city, and for the young people who represent the city's future.

'Serving' in the Legal System

By Amarante Cordova

In our modern society, where differences are settled in the courtroom, Billy and Manual Valles are among the first to act when it's time to initiate legal proceedings.

What began as a small Odessa business, serving the local legal industry, has grown in six years to an established firm, with clients across Texas, and beyond.

"We serve civil papers, domestic divorces, criminal and civil subpoenas? Evictions, you know, a little of everything," explained Billy Valles, owner of Professional Legal Process Services, in Odessa. "We work in all the courts, Midland, Odessa and statewide, there's a lot of counties where we can serve."

"What we thought was going to be a regular small business is doing pretty good. We're pretty well known throughout the state, we take service from other companies, and we do out-of-state service."

Serving papers upon parties in legal proceedings offers special challenges to the Valles brothers, especially considering the fact that they must deal with people who are at the beginning of a long and demanding process.

"To a lot of people, we're referred to as the messenger. All we do is give them the papers," said Valles. "A lot of the people are cordial. A lot of these people know that they're going to be sued, and they're expecting the papers."

"It's few and far between when you get people who are kind of nasty. And we treat them as we would treat anybody else. With the same professional courtesy."

Valles admits that there are times when it takes more than courtesy to serve a paper. It's at times like these that his experience as a private investigator is used.

"Some people play hard to get," he said. "But in the process business, if you're trying to avoid service, there's always a way you get served."

"Mainly the job is a lot of P-R. Because the people that we serve, some are very prominent people, some are just regular Joes, regular citizens. So we meet the public a lot in this job."

It was almost exactly six years ago that Valles went into business for himself.

"In the process business? I've been in it since January 1, 1988. I worked as a private investigator, and there was lots of times where there were subpoenas that needed to be served," said Valles. "My father, Manuel Valles, Sr., is a Justice of the Peace. He told me they were passing legislation for process-servers. He kind of encouraged me and said, "This might work for you."

Valles was later joined by his younger brother, Manuel, Jr. Together, they have worked to make their business grow. Valles admits that there are both good points and bad points to being your own boss.

"Well, some of the good things are, you don't have to rely too heavily on other people. If you need something done, you do it right then and there," he said. "I'm always on top of things. I know exactly what goes on. Me and my little brother, we've done a lot in six years."

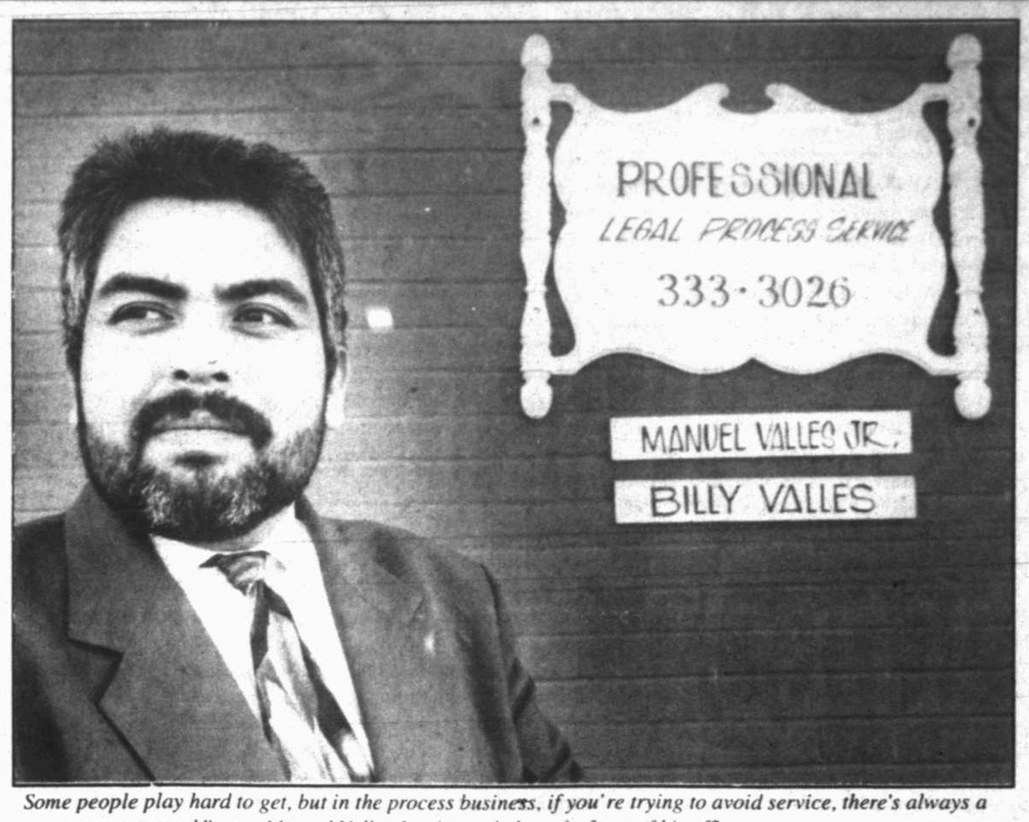

"And drawbacks? Well, drawbacks just like any other business. You've got to make payroll and overhead, and sometimes things get hard. But that's when you work your hardest. When business is slow, you have to take care of it. Being your own boss, you have to keep positive."

Valles believes that these are the same no matter what business you are in, just as he believes all business ventures need the same combination of spirit and determination in order to succeed.

"If you want to be your own boss, you have to have the heart and the tenacity to do what you're going to do," he advised. "It's a lot of work. If you don't work at it, well, you might get by, but that's all you'll do."

"If you're not tenacious, and keep after people, you wont stay up with the big boys. But if you work hard at it, the rewards are good. You've got your independence!"

Sirviendo en el Sistema Legal

Por Amarante Cordova

En nuestra sociedad moderna, donde las diferencias son determinadas en la corte, Billy y Manuel Valles estan en medio del primer acto cuando es tiempo para iniciar procedimientos legales.

Y lo que comenzó como un pequeño negocio en Odessa, sirviendo a la industria legal local, a crecido en seis años a una firma establecida, con clientes a traves de todo el Oeste de Tejas, y mas alla..

"Nosotros servimos con documentos civiles, divorcios, ordenes criminales y civiles, evicciones, usted sabe un poco de todo," explica Billy Valles, dueño swl Proffessional Legal Process Services, en Odessa. Con trabajo en todas las cortes, Midland, Odessa. En todo el Estado, hay muchos condados donde podemos servir."

"Lo que pensabamos que iva a ser un pequeño negocio, ahora esta muy bien. Somos bien conocidos a traves de todo el Estado, tomamos servicios de otras compañías, y hacemos servicio fuera del Estado."

Sirviendo docuimentación sobre grupos en procedimientos legales ofrece competencia especial a los hermanos Valles., especialmente considerando que ellos tienen que negociar con gente que estan al comienzo de un proceso largo y de demanda.

"Para mucha gente, nosotros somos referidos como los mensajeros. Todo lo que hacemos es darles la documentación," dice Valles. "Mucha de la gente es cordial. Mucha de la gente sabe que va a ser demandada y esta espera la cocumentación."

"Es poca y se da de vez en cuando la gente que es grosera. Y nosotros la tratamos como cualquier otra gente. Con la misma cortesía profesional."

Valles admite que algunas veces toma mas que una cortesía para servir un documento. Es tiempo que su experiencia como detective privado sea usada.

"Alguna gente juega muy duro para obtener," dice el. Pero en el proceso de negocio, si usted trata de evitar servicio, simpre hay maneras de que usted sea servido."

"Y principalmente el trabajo es mucho de P-R. Porque a la gente que servimos, alguna es gente muy prominente, alguna es solo gente sencilla, ciudadanos regulares. Así es que nosotros nos reunimos con el publico."

Es casi seis años que Valles entro al negocio el solo."

"En el negocio de proceso? Estoy desde el Primero de Enero de 1988. Trabaje como investigador privado, y huvo muchos tiempos donde había muchas ordenes que necesitaban ser servidas," dice Valles. "Mi padre Manuel Valles, Sr., es de la Justicia de Paz. Y el me dijo que ellos estaban pasando una legislación para servidores de proceso. Y el mas o menos me animo, y dijo, 'Esto Tal vez trabaje para ti.'"

Valles mas tarde se le unió su hermano mas chico, Manuel, Jr. Juntos, ellos han hecho que el negocio prospere. Valles admite que hay ambos buenos y malos puntos por ser uno su propio dueño.

"Algunos de los buenos puntos es que uno no tiene que depender mucho en otra gente. Si uno necesita hacer algo, usted lo hace," el dice. "Siempre estoy encima de las cosas. Se lo que esta pasando en esos momentos. Mi hermano y yo hemos hecho mucho en los últimos seis años."

"Inconvenientes? Bueno inconvenientes solomante los normales como cualquier otro negocio. Tienes una nomina y gastos generales y algunas veces se complican. Pero eso pasa cuando uno trabaja lo mas. Cuando el negocio esta lento, uno tiene que responsabilizarse de este. Ser uno su propio jefe, tienes que mantenerte positivo."

Valles cree que esto es lo mismo en todo sin importar que negocio uno tenga, solo como el cree todos los negocios arriesgados necesitan la misma combinación de espiritu y determinación para el buen éxito.

"Si usted quiere ser su propio jefe, usted tiene que tener el corazón y la tenacidad para hacer lo uqe tiene que hacer," el aconseja. "Es mucho trabajo. Y si usted no trabaja, bueno, no obtendra su objetivo."

"Si usted no es tenaz, y no se mantiene con la gente, usted no estara con los grandes. Pero si usted trabaja duro, la recompensa es buena. Usted obtendra su independencia!"

FOCUS ON HEALTH

Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas

HOUSTON—No longer is penicillin or other antibiotics a sure cure for a variety of illnesses — from middle ear infections to meningitis — caused by the common bacteria Streptococcus pneumoniae or pneumococcus.

"There are 'hot spots' all over the world where resistance to antibiotic treatment is increasing," said Dr. Sheldon L. Kaplan, a professor of pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "We don't know why this is happening, but it is affecting how we treat these diseases."

Kaplan, chief of infectious diseases service at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston and Dr. Edward O. Mason, a professor of pediatrics at Baylor, are involved in an eight-center study of resistance to penicillin treatment for pneumococcus.

Mason cites as an example an unexplainable three-vear increase in penicillin resistance among Houston-area children suffering from otitis media or middle-ear infection.

"Until 1989, we reported at the most two or three cases of penicillin resistance in these children," he said. "Then the number of cases began to escalate. In 1992, we recorded 45 cases of patients with bacteria that were either highly or relatively resistant."

Kaplan and Mason are concerned the figures could be just the beginning.

"Certain areas of the world — Spain, Hungary, South Africa — have seen antibiotic resistance in up to 70 percent of the time in some cases," Kaplan said.

He is especially troubled about children with meningitis, an inflammation of the membrane that covers the brain and spinal cord.

"We're struggling with what to do if the current antibiotic treatments should no longer work," he said. "The children have responded to antibiotics called cephalosporins, but there have been a growing number of cases of cephalosporin failure."

Mason said resistance to antibiotic treatments has been successfully overcome before.

"Prior to 1974, there was no such thing as antibiotic resistance to Haemophilus influenzae type b. But by the 1980s nearly 30 percent of all cases were resistant to treatment," he said. "However, a vaccine was developed, and today the disease has been nearly eradicated."

The battle against highly resistant pneumococcus strains may not be so easily won, since there are 80 varieties of the bug versus only one of the Haemophilus type b; however, Mason said, only 7 or 8 versions of pneumococcus are responsible for most related illnesses.

Both Kaplan and Mason suspect one culprit of increased antibiotic resistance may be the cure itself — the antibiotics.

"The inappropriate and excessive use of antibiotics has probably contributed to this," Kaplan said. "People sometimes expect antibiotic treatment even when it may not be necessary."

In one study, they compared a group of children who had penicillin-susceptible strains of pneumococcus to another group whose bacteria were resistant to penicillin.

"The two groups were similar in most cases as far as type of illness, prior hospitalization, socio-economic standing, day-care experiences and other factors," Kaplan said. "The only difference was that in the previous month, three-fourths of the group with resistant strains had been on amoxicillin clavulanate, a common antibiotic. Only 30 percent of those who were susceptible to penicillin had been on this same antibiotic in the previous month."

Kaplan believes that it is important for physicians and parents to be aware of the problem, since a new way of treatment may be necessary such as adding antibiotics not normally used.

He cautions, however, that there are no firm answers for this disturbing trend.

"I think resistance to antibiotics will continue to grow," he said. "We hope that there will be a vaccine or some other therapy developed, but it will take time."

TOQUE continua de la pagina 1

tales ordenanzas como el toque de queda, otras comunidades tal vez no tengan estas. La desición en Midland esta todavía fuera, pendiente de analisis estadisticos del último cuarto de 1993, los cuales no estan disponibles aun.

"He visto las estadisticas del mes de Septimbre, y estas estadisticas no apoyan la necesidad para el toque de queda en estos momentos," dice Egan, añadiendo que las estadisticas del último cuarto de 1993, no estaran disponibles hasta finales del año.

John Urby Jefe Diputado, del Departamento de Policia de Midland, ya tine una idea de cuales son las estadisticas de lo que queda de este año. Como cabeza del departamento de la División de Operaciones, Urby a estado en contacto con esos con experiencia, en primera mano, exactamente con lo que ocurre en las calles de la ciudad.

"Lo que he estado haciendo es que he estado en contacto con mis sargentos de patrulla," dice Urby, añadiendo que a puesto especial enfasis sobre las opiniones de los que patrullan en los turnos de la media noche. "Los primeros estudios enseñan los sargentos y los oficiales que no sienten necesario por las estadisticas."

Despues de las once, las calles se vacian, excepto por aquellos mayores de diez y seis años de edad. Y casi todos son adultos, cuya ordenanza no es aplicable a ellos. El sentido general es que los muchachos en las calles, de diez y siete a veinte años, son los que en verdad dan problemas. Y esta ordenanza no es aplicable a ellos."

Urby es rapida en apuntar, que sin embargo, dicha ordenanza debe de ser considerada y debe de ser aprobada, su departamento esta preparado para ponerla en uso, y tiene recursos apropiados para aplicarla.

"Nosotros no sentimos como el llamado ira hacia arriba significativamente," ella dice. "Claro que si hay ordenanza tras ordenanza, llega a un punto que usted tendra que decir, 'Hey!' Solo esta por si sola, no tiene ningun problema."

"Nosotros vemos en esta ordenanza como otra herramienta para usar en la fuerza, dejandonos una causa probable de hablar a la juventud, diciendo 'Hola que estan haciendo?' Sera otra herramienta para el uso de la fuerza, que tal vez ponga fuera de combate al vandalismo."

Por ahora, la propuesta del toque de queda es solo eso, una PROPUESTA considerada por el Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland. Por ahora, pasaran cuatro meses para que esta sea considerada de nuevo. Cuatro meses en los cuales seran estudiados las estadisticas criminales y las estadisticas de delincuencia juvenil.

Pero cualquiera que sea el debate, todos estan de acuerdo que aumentar la conciencia y la preocupación que la gente siente por la seguridad de la ciudad y de la juventud. Y eso, ellos estan de acuerdo, que es una buena cosa.

"Hay muchas preguntas, muchas preocupaciones," dice Urby, quien da a copnocer esa comunicación positiva entre la comunidad y la policia. "Pero cuando menos la ciudad esta viendo esta posibilidad, y trabajando en esta."

Egan tambien cree que la comunicación entre todos los segmentos de la comunidad, jovenes y viejos, juegan un papel muy importante en la considración de la proposición de toque de queda.

Pero mientras, si o no la ciudad ordena este toque de queda, los jovenes y sus padres pueden tomar un papel mas activo en patrullar ellos mismos, y a su ciudad.

"Obviamente, reforzando su propio toque de queda con sus propios muchachos," ella dice. "Estableciendo sus propios reglamentos, y viviendo con esas reglas."

"Nosotros le damos la bienvenida a cualquier opinión, algo como esto," ella añade. "Yo animare a cualquiera para que contacte a su consejero de su ciudad, o cualquier persona de la fuerza publica, o cualquier persona oficial, y exprese su opinión!"

Aquellos que deseen saber los nombres de los representantes del Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland, y aquellos que les interese los nombres de líderes, y que deseen de dar a conocer sus opiniones en la ordenanza propuesta, se les insta para que llamen a la Ciudad de Midland, al 685-7203.

Es algo que usted puede hacer no solamente para usted mismo, pero para su ciudad, y para la juventud que representa el futuro de la ciudad.

ENFOQUE A LA SALUD

Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas

HOUSTON—Ya ni la penicilina ni otros antibióticos son curas seguras para una variedad de enfermedades — desde las infecciones del oído medio hasta la meningitis — causadas por la bacteria común, «Streptococcus pneumoniae» o neumococo.

Kaplan, jefe del servicio de enfermedades infecciosas del Texas Children's Hospital en Houston y el Dr. Edward O. Mason, profesor de pediatría de Baylor, están participando en un estudio de la resistencia al tratamiento con penicilina para el neumococo que se está llevando a cabo en ocho centros.

Mason cita como un ejemplo el aumento inexplicable en la resistencia a la penicilina entre niños,» dijo Mason. «Luego el número de casos empezó a subir. En 1992 registramos 45 casos de pacientes con bacteria que era altamente o relativamente resistente.

Kaplan y Mason se preocupan de que las cifras puedan representar solamente un principio.

«Ciertas partes del mundo — España, Hungría, Africa del Sur — han visto un aumento de hasta 70% en la resistencia a los antibióticos en algunos casos,» dijo Kaplan.

Kaplan se preocupa especialmente por los niños con meningitis, una inflamación de la membrana que cubre el cerebro y la médula espinal.

Mason dice que la resistencia a los tratamientos con antibióticos se ha superado antes.

«Antes de 1974, no habia tal cosa como resistencia antibiótica al organismo llamado Haemophilus influenzae tipo b. Pero en los años de los 1980 casi 30 por ciento de todos los casos eran resistentes al tratamiento,» dijo Mason. «Sin embargo, se desarrolló una vacuna, y hoy la enfermedad casi ha desaparecido.» La batalla contra el tipo de neumoco altamente resistente puede que no se gane tan fácilmente, puesto que existen 80 variedades del microbio en comparación con solamente un tipo de Haemophilus tipo b; de todos modos, dijo Mason, solamente siete u ocho versiones del neumococo son responsables de la mayoría de las enfermedades causadas por neumococo.

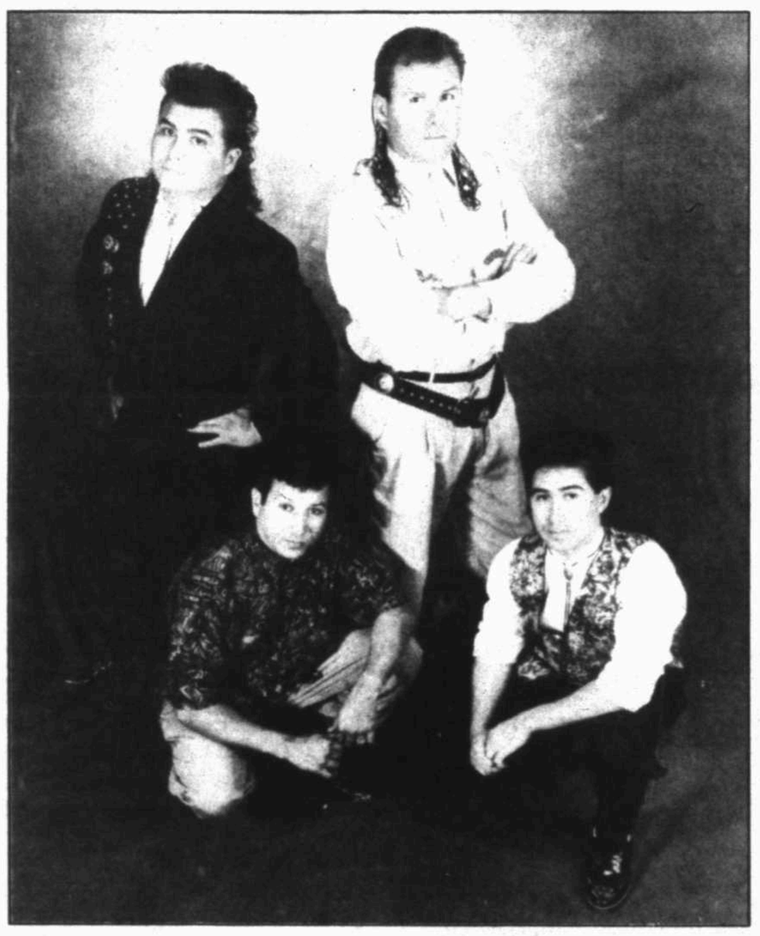

Tanto Kaplan como Mason sospechan que le culpable del aumento de la resistencia antibiotica puede ser el tratamiento mismo — los antibióticos. «El uso inapropiado y excesivo de antibióticos probablemente ha contribuido a esto,» dijo Kaplan. «Las personas a veces esperan recibir tratamiento antibiótico aun cuando no sea necesario.»

En un estudio, compararon un grupo de niños que tenían infección con un tipo de neumococo susceptible a la penicilina con otro grupo cuya bacteria era resistente a la penicilina.

«Los dos grupos eran semejantes en la mayoría de los casos en cuanto a tipo de enfermedad, hospitalizaciones previas, nivel socioeconómico, experiencia en guarderías, y otros factores,» dijo Kaplan. «La única diferencia era que en el mes anterior, tres cuartos del grupo con organismos resistentes habían tomado con antibiótico común llamado amoxicilina clavulanate. Solamente 30 por ciento de los que eran susceptibles a la penicilina habían tomado este antibiótico el mes anterior.»

Kaplan cree que es importante que los médicos y los padres estén enterados de este problema, puesto que es posible que un nuevo modo de tratamiento sea necesario, tal como agregar un antibiótico que normalmente no sea usa. El advierte, sin embargo, que no hay respuestas seguras para este fenómeno inquietante.

hemos visto muchas cosas positivas de ellos," expica Ramirez. "Ellos han dado muchas influencia positivas a muchos estudiantes."

Proveer influencia positiva para los estudiantes es importante en la misión de SALSA.

"Lo que nosotros tratamos es de tener una variedad de gente, no solamente estudiantes Hispanos," dice Ramirez. "Basicamente es una organización para darle a a saber a la gente de que es lo que se trata la cultura Hispana. Es un servicio a la comunidad basada en organización, por la razón que realmente queremos estar involucrados, y poner a todos juntos para que se ayuden mutuamente.

"Recientemente, ayudamos a la entrega de canastas de regalos durante los días festivos. Una cosa que hacemos cada año es ir a Austin para la Conferencia de Estudiantes Líderes Hispanos de Negocios, en la Universidad de Tejas de Austin."

En realidad lo que se saque de la cena baile sera para los gastos del viaje a Austin. Musica en vivo se presentara por la reciente batalla de las Bandads ganadoras, Andy Roman & the Roman Brothers.

"Va a ser una gran cena, bail," dice Ramirez. "Así es que vengan y disfruten, y ayudenos a enseñarle a esta gente que tanta influencia tienen sobre nosotros, y soble las vidas de otras gentes."

IF FINDING MISSING CHILDREN WERE THIS EASY, WE WOULDN'T NEED YOUR HELP.

Missing children don't advertise themselves. In fact, since the majority of them are abducted by a parent, they might not realize they're "missing" at all. That's what makes our job tougher, and why we're asking for your help.

In your professional capacity, you might be able to identify an abducted child, or a parent who may have abducted a child. If so, please contact Child Find of America. Or ask the parent to call us for confidential mediation. Our toll-free hotline is 1-800-A-WAY-OUT. It could just be the way out they're looking for.

Making records in West Texas

By Jane E. Paredes

The 14th Annual Tejano Music Awards are coming up in San Antonio and it's time to make reservations, buy tickets, save money and ask for time off.

The top recording artists for the past year will be honored and recognized for their achievements in the music industry. Their most requested songs of the year will win awards in all types of categories.

What the artists and recording companies perceived as beautiful and moving were just that in the songs they produced.

New talent is always being discovered and their songs played on the airwaves for all to enjoy. Thank goodness for recording studios and companies who give unrecognized talent a chance to record their music with nothing but top quality sound.

Recording companies give young talent the opportunity to record what they enjoy doing and are trying to perfect.

Recording studios are in all parts of the United States, from New York City to Nashville, California to Florida, and some are even in Texas, south and east Texas that is.

The Tejano music industry is said to have originated in 'El Valle' which just might be true if one is talking about the opportunity to record the music. Record companies are more readily available in that part of Texas. People from West Texas have travelled miles to record their music with quality recording companies located there.

Even 'Little Joe' Hernandez has his own recording studio and label, he recognized the need for a recording company in his area of Texas. Recording companies such as his and Joey Discos have helped the Tejano music industry tremendously. The service they provide have allowed people to express whatever type of music, commercial or announcement they prefer on the airwaves or in their car anytime they want with records, cassettes, and CDs.

The wheels were in motion for eight months when the founders of SAMA Recording Studio came together and filled a void in the West Texas area. A void that had gone unnoticed except by those in the media and entertainment fields. The opportunity to record your child's first song, a commercial for your company or the latest song a local band is proud of, is here.

A genuine, full fledge recording studio has just opened its doors and is ready for business! It's here, in West Texas, Odessa to be exact.

Alvaro Marufo, Carlos Samaniego, Jose Samaniego and Pedro Samaniego are the heart and soul of this recording studio and what a team they make. Each partner brings in his own special touch and experience to the business. Each has a purpose to fill.

Alvaro Marufo shares his business and common sense with his SAMA partners. He is the financial advisor of the team, the one who makes decisions concerning its finances. With Marufo to back it up, SAMA and its clients will go far and on budget.

Carlos Samaniego, with his charismatic personality is the salesman for SAMA. He is the voice on the phone and your host at the door when you first enter the SAMA studio. Carlos will make sure you get what you want and need, just come on in and say 'Hi'. The studio was built with the customer's comfort in mind. "We welcome any band that wants to come in and talk to us about recording," said Carlos. "We have the time and personnel to give them all the attention they want."

Pedro Samaniego, with his experience as a musician and composer, knows what bands look for and need in a recording studio. He will make sure every musician that comes in is completely at home and surrounding by the best of equipment when they record that future hit.

Jose Samaniego is the sound engineer for SAMA. He is in charge of the technical and recording quality of SAMA. Having his own studio at home, Jose has acquired the experience sound engineers need to keep the sounds in tune. With his engineering experience, SAMA will ensure nothing less than top quality recording with the latest in updated recording equipment.

The recording system being used currently is a 16 channel digital with plans for a 24 channel digital in the works.

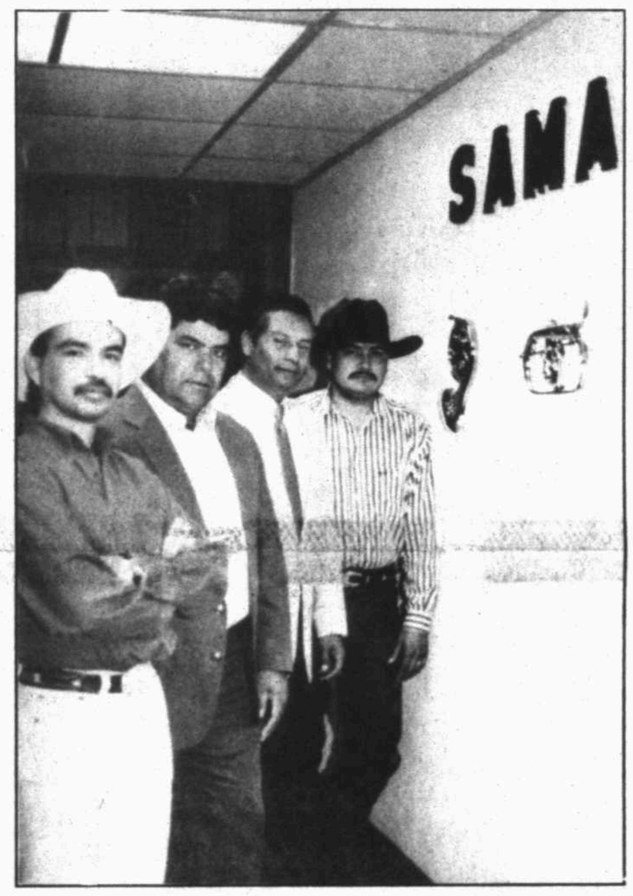

The SAMA studios are big and beautiful. They are located at 2304 E. Pearl St. in Odessa. It has a comfortable atmosphere in which anyone recording will feel at home and be able to concentrate solely on what they are recording.

Thanks to quality recording studios and companies, with qualified people who really care about sound, we can enjoy music at its best whenever we want, through cassettes and CDs.

With SAMA Records now at our disposal, the opportunity to record thoughts and ideas is available. One never knows, the next person who decides to be recorded just may be the next top entertainer at the Tejano Music Awards, a genuine West Texas Artist!

SAMA Recording Studio can be reached by calling 915-580-98.

Sama Recording Studio founders (L-R) Jose Samaniego, Pedro Samaniego, Alvaro Marufo and Carlos Samaniego have filled a void in the music industry of West Texas.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

Take a deep breath.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

The Telltale Signs

Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.

Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.

Wholesale changes in friends.

Stealing.

Deteriorating relationships with family members.

Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.

Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.

Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline – 800-662-HELP – for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now.

No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.
