SHALL PERRYTON HAVE A JUNIOR COLLEGE THIS FALL?

This question has been on the minds of the people of Ochiltree county and the contingent territory since the erection of the present new high school building, which was built to meet the state's requirements as to organization, equipment, departments, etc. The building is adequate to take care of the college work at present and for some time to come. Many people have asked questions as to the requirements for the organization of a junior college and it is a difficult matter to explain in detail to everyone and for that reason we are giving below the information which we believe you will be most interested in.

have to take these examinations. Students over twenty-one years of age who are able to demonstrate their fitness to do college work, may be admitted to college classes as special students, but they can not be candidates for graduation until they have met the requirements for admission as regular students.

ORGANIZATION
The work of the junior college shall be organized as a college, as distinguished from a high-school basis, so as to secure equivalency in prerequisites, scope, and thoroughness to the work done in the first two years of a standard college.

Blanton Spoke Here

Large Crowd Heard Candidate at American Theatre on Last Saturday Morning
Hon. Thomas L. Blanton, Abilene, Texas, at present a member of the House of Representatives, addressed a large crowd at the American Theatre on last Saturday morning, in the interests of his candidacy for the United States senate.

"The Watchdog of the National Treasury", as he is called by his colleagues, made a very interesting talk and there is no question but what he made many a vote among those that heard his very modest presentation of his qualifications for the high office to which he aspires.

Blanton is the only man from West Texas in the senatorial race. He is absolutely without fear in conducting the affairs of his office. West Texas should give him an overwhelming majority. Blanton is the first candidate for the United States senate to ever visit the county.

$157.91 From Poppy Sale

Perryton Responded Nobly and Auxiliary Went Over Top For Disabled Boys

A total of $157.91 was realized by the ladies of the Perryton American Legion Auxiliary from the sale of poppies on last Saturday. These poppies were made by disabled veterans of the world war who are now inmates of government hospitals. One thousand poppies were purchased and practically all were sold.

A part of the proceeds goes direct to the boys that made the poppies, the remainder being divided equally between the state rehabilitation fund and the local unit fund. All money derived from poppy sales is used for the purpose of assisting disabled and needy veterans and their families.

The Herald has been requested by the Auxiliary to express their appreciation to the people of Perryton and vicinity who were so generous, so loyal and so patriotic in co-operating to put them over the top in this, their first poppy sale.

Will Visit Other Schools

Superintendent W. B. Irvin Will Leave Friday to Visit Junior College Systems

Superintendent W. B. Irvin of the Perryton schools will leave Friday on a months tour of the state making visits to a number of towns where they have Junior College work in their public school systems. The first town that he will visit is El Paso. There are no Junior Colleges in the northern part of the state, and Perryton is one of the very few cities that is ready for one.

Mr. Irvin expects to return here about July 1 and a definite decision will be made at that time regarding the establishment of a Junior College in Perryton this fall. He will obtain all possible information while on this tour. Prominent school authorities who have inspected the Perryton school plant, say that it is an ideal lay-out for a Junior College. The new high school building was planned with this in view.

Mr. and Mrs. Creed Walker were Liberal visitors Monday.

RED HAIR AND BLUE SEA

by STANLEY R. OSBORN
ILLUSTRATIONS BY HENRY JAY LEE
COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

After all these days and years and centuries of silence, they two, by the intervention of Dr. Crife, had been made articulate.

She learned that the brown man served Ponape Burke in a debt of gratitude; the saving of his life he had for this white rascal a sort of love, but no sort of respect. Great souls must, of their nature, suffer petty tyranny. And Olive—often, according to his lights regretting disapproving, always palliating—followed the deprecable little Ponape.

She learned that Olive had not known Burke meant to abduct her. And she found that in the beginning he had thought of it, not an abduction, but an elopement.

Only when the seaborner got under way did he perceive that this was no adventure of Palmyra's own choice. Only when she did not soon begin to smile through her tears as many a native girl might have done, did he realize how terrible to her the situation.

Olive's first thought was that the girl would feel safer with a weapon; also that she might possibly need one. As he dared not give her the knife in daytime he had dropped it through the skylight.

When the Japanese gunboat passed them so cruelly by, Olive had been as eager as she to attract attention. But he had known the distance too great.

As regarded Jaluit he had not gone there because it was obviously the place he should have gone. Burke was sure to try that lagoon first.

This much Dr. Crife could read for her:

Incarnate there before this islander's eyes on the Rainbow, she had been not unlike a goddess; a being—as indeed she was—from another world. A high white princess, called for the state life-giving Palm and crowned with hair of flame, she had condescended to him with blankets when a brown creature was in misery with that most terrible of things—cold.

Olive was not in love with Palmyra. One does not consider oneself privileged to fall in love with a goddess.

But from the deck at her feet, intimately yet afar, he had gazed up at her—fascinated.

If Palmyra now knew how Olive felt toward her, she was far from knowing how she felt toward Olive.

And if her only difficulty with Van Buren Rutger had been a reluctance to give him pain, she found every difficulty with John Thurston.

Van himself had made things easy.

Returning to the mission at a late hour the third night he had come upon Olive prowling about with a rifle "Ponape is not dead" the brown man had explained simply. But that which others looked upon as a touching manifestation of devotion, Van chose to regard with suspicion. "Sakamoto shall know this," was his comment.

Palmyra had been so incensed that, there and then, she had broken the engagement.

Van's dismissal placed him in that position wherein a weak man not infrequently lacks moral courage to turn upon his real rival. He must find an easier target for his resentment. Thus Van, without in the least perceiving why, remained amiable toward Thurston, but developed an ugly spite against this man of darker skin.

But if Palmyra had freed herself of Van, she could not free herself of that which withheld her from Thurston.

Back there in the canoe, in her moment of revelation, she had yearned to meet him once more, face to face, that she might tell him the truth. But now that, astonishingly, she had awakened into the old life, she found herself quite unready to step up to him with any such confession.

She would love John Thurston; she did love John Thurston. But between them was the brown man Olive, and leering from behind his elbow, the face of Ponape Burke.

Concerning Olive she tried to justify herself on the ground of gratitude. Never had a girl more reason to be grateful. Was it not natural she should be eager to take him presents, to sit in his house questioning, to find herself hour by hour more curious concerning him, more interested in him than in any other living being?

Oddly enough—or rather, naturally enough—it did come to her for some time to ask whether she might be in love with this brown man. Then the idea struck like an unexpected blow. She was stunned.

At first she put the thought from her in abhorrence. But in the still hours of the night it came back again and again. Could she indeed be in love with Olive? Was it possible for an American girl, under any circumstances whatever to fall in love with man of darker race? She shuddered to think others might believe this thing of her.

She avoided Olive, kept to her room. She struggled to analyze her emotions, to weigh them dispassionately. And, honestly striving, she was at last able to say of herself that, in no sense, could she be accused of loving him.

Not for long did she find the answer. Then it came like release from a prison cell. She was in love not with Olive himself, but with his attributes.

She wanted to love John for the true manliness that was his. But alas, those splendid qualities the two possessed in common had come to seem the personal qualities of Olive alone. She remembered how he had gone after the shark with the knife and conquered.

The sun was less than an hour high when Palmyra, as she had done for several mornings now, descended the winding stairway hewn in the hillside for the mission direct to the street of the town.

Island life was already afoot. The girl was addressed by an old woman.

"Pleasy you," said this crone in English, "you come for look for see very fine Pipelap mat. You like too much for buy."

She would have refused, but now she caught a glimpse of Van approaching. Several times he had trapped her into painful interviews. But this morning she could use the ancient dame, as a gaping listener, to keep Van silent.

"Where is your 'ouse?" the girl asked tentatively.

The thatch toward which the crone pointed stood conspicuously. Immediately against one side was the water and a small wharf of coral fragments by which the traffic of the town went to the anchorage, as close on the inland side was the road and, opposite, the trading establishment of a white man and the high concrete wall of the Japanese police compound. The house was quite by itself on the water side of the highway, yet immediately in the center of village life.

Van now came sauntering up and Palmyra indicated this place.

"Come on," she invited. "My old lady is taking me for look-see for ve'y fine Pungey-something mat."

Several drops of rain fell.

Van agreed. "But there's a squall coming," he said. "I'll run back first for umbrellas."

As he turned away she hesitated, unexpectedly afraid at being left alone.

But as she moved forward a Japanese policeman, saluting benignly, reassured her. And she saw every step brought her nearer those two representatives of the civil and the moral law, which lay at anchor beyond the wharf, the Okayama and that Iju Ran which is the latest, perhaps the last, of the Morning Stars in which the American missionaries have carried the Word.

The old woman's house was not only conspicuous in location but in appearance. The thatches of this island were rectangular, sharp roofed, sided with woven tat, narrow doored. But this hut was oval and open—vaguely the architecture of central Polynesia.

The girl stooped to enter, then drew back in one of those sudden apprehensions that still beset her. Who knew where Ponape Burke would strike? This house seemed safe; indeed it was safer than the mission. But yet...

She peered in; saw only three old women. No one could be in hiding, none approach without being seen.

Palmyra entered, advanced toward the central posts, glanced interestedly around.

Suddenly, something dropped past her eyes, and the three old women hurried themselves at her.

So unexpected the attack from such as these, in an open shed such as this, at almost the settlement's busiest and most public spot, that the girl was caught unready. And before she could move a muscle, cry out, her throat was compressed—a terrible, choking pressure. She fought for breath. Then, her arms pinioned, came relief and a fierce warning: "No 'peakey, no 'peakey!"

At the moment of the onfall her guide, still behind her, had dropped round her throat a fibre loop, a brutal tourniquet with which she could instantly be strangled into silence—or death.

The women, fearing Van might soon arrive, prepared to take their prisoner immediately away.

At first Palmyra thought this impossible.

But now she made a discovery. Though the thatch was so notoriously to the forefront as to seem above suspicion, the high wall of the police compound ended directly opposite, and turned inland, leaving between it and the blank wall of the trader's a three-foot lane.

This path, she recollected being told ran back half a mile, a mere passageway between the wall and the mangrove swamp upon which she had looked down from her mission window.

And the mouth of that hidden path was no more than twenty feet distance.

Until an alarm had been given the people would be unsuspecting. The French trader across the way had locked up his place and gone out to breakfast. The native passersby were coming in detached groups. Palmyra's captors need wait only until no one was near.

Then closing round her, they could whisk her across, screening her with one or two of the everpresent umbrellas, raised either against a shower or the equatorial sun.

But almost at the moment of the sortie there came an interruption. One of the old women, stooping down to glance out discovered the girl's father and mother and Constance Crawford approaching—already close. Panic ensued. If her captors had not been dangerous before, they certainly were now.

The prisoner would have screamed. Unconsciously, she extended her lungs to take in the necessary air. But, on the second, that fibre cord cut deep into her flesh.

Gasping, she was thrust under the mosquito net; thrown flat, head on bamba pillow. Two of the hags followed her into the netting sat pressed against her on either side. These snatched off her hat and veil, threw over her a covering.

Meanwhile the crone who had lured her here had taken a machete and seated herself on the patch of grass before the house.

Within the house, Palmyra's two guardians had begun a low-voiced singing. She perceived herself as a sick woman. These two kindly old souls sat inside the net to comfort her, while, before the hut, a third waited ready to answer solicitous inquiry.

And any commotion of struggle which might catch the transient eye would be taken for a round of that massage which is the native's cure-all.

The captors had taken impish advantage of that trait in human nature which causes man never really to look at a thing in plain sight.

She was intensely alert. At the slightest opportunity she meant to scream, to fight. Since her escape from Burke she herself had carried a small automatic pistol. At the first chance she'd use it.

Now, however, she saw Van Buren Rutger approaching, and sank back again. The others had not known. Van did know.

But just as the trio had strolled away and the newcomer almost reached the house, here, unexpectedly, was the man Martin. He ran up to Van. Excitedly he spoke.

"Say, mister—your lady friend. That red-headed girl."

Van drew back stiffly. Miss Tree is in this house," he said.

Martin was vehement. No, that she wasn't! Outlaw natives had her. Hurrying her away.

Van stared, incredulous, yet alarmed.

"I got it straight," cried Martin. "There's twenty of 'em or more—all with guns. And they're running her for the Puelika Rocks."

The Rocks were a noticeable formation not far inland.

All Van's suspicions of the brown man burst forth in the one cry: "Olive!"

Palmyra, seeing, hearing, burned with contempt.

The stranger now took the initiative. "I'll warn the Japs," he said. "I'll warn the Japs," he said. "You run for the mission. Remember—the Puelika Rocks."

But at this moment here came John Thurston. He was jumping up to the wharf from a boat. At sight of him Van's face began to relax.

Instantly, Thurston began to throw off his coat.

"Olive? Nonense!"

"I tell you," Van affirmed, "she's in love with the damn a-ka and he's got her!"

Now the famous John Deere Tractor Offers STILL GREATER VALUE

More Power - Longer Life Lower Operating Costs

When the John Deere Tractor was first put on the market it immediately met with the approval of farmers. Its great power combined with light weight; its extreme simplicity; its ease of handling; its low operating expense; its low maintenance costs—all those advantages made it more than a successful farm tractor—it was a real sensation.

And, now, with additional improvements, the John Deere Tractor offers you still greater value. Improvements that mean greater power without sacrificing its light weight. . . . added savings in its already low fuel costs. . . . even fewer parts. . . . greater strength—these make the John Deere the ideal power plant for the farm. It offers you still better service and longer life at low maintenance costs.

Increased Power

The power of the 1928 John Deere has been increased more than 25%. It gives you from 5 to 6 H. P. more than the older model. This improved tractor will pull three 14" stubble bottoms under difficult conditions and four under many conditions. It will handle a 28' separator successfully, and other machinery requiring power in proportion.

Note These Improvements

The John Deere gets its still greater power through a larger bore and a new carburetor which also supplies smoother operation at all speeds and loads and decreases fuel consumption.

Its well known strength and durability has been increased by the use of heat treated and hardened forged gears, a heavier crankshaft, heat treated rear axles and strong rear wheels containing 20 instead of 12 spokes.

Wider fenders give added protection to the operator. Longer lugs built of improved material last longer and give the drive wheels a more powerful grip on the soil.

An auxiliary inertia air cleaner has been added which removes 60 per cent of the dust and dirt before the air reaches the oil type of our cylinders. The air gets a double cleaning before it enters the cylinders.

The John Deere Tractor, already famous for its low repair costs and long life, now gives you even better and longer service at lower maintenance costs.

See This Money-Maker Before You Buy

Come in and see the 1928 John Deere at our store. It is to your advantage to know all about this cost reducer before you buy. Let us prove to you the remarkable performance of this great tractor on your farm by a demonstration.

The Livestock Situation

Junior activities carried on about the country cannot fail to be an inspiration to any one in touch with the progress made in educational work. The vocational training work being done has brought marvelous results in all branches of education, including industry, agriculture, animal husbandry and commercial activities.

endid illustration of what is accomplished along these lines is the live stock judging contests which are held throughout the country each year. There are contests of various kinds, sifting out the best junior team available usually a judging team is selected in each State, which is capable of competing in the national contests held each year in Chicago.

From all sections of the country the best states work earnestly to win these contests and it stimulates the faith in the future to see these earnest young men applying themselves so diligently to the end of becoming expert in the art of live stock.

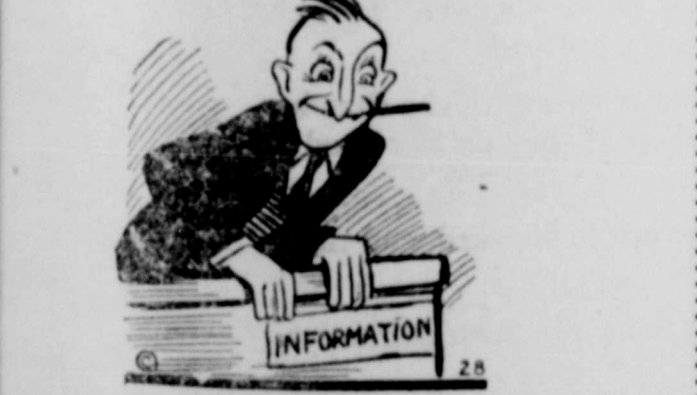

These juniors have the future of the live stock industry in their hands. When the present generation of stock men pass on to their successors these youngsters are ready to answer "here" and carry on one of the largest and most vital industries in the world. They will be found lacking in ability and to take their place in the perpetuation of the industry.

There is no more important action in the scheme of things to take than the training of these juniors. They are the leaders of tomorrow and the future would hold little if our educational system were lacking in a keen appreciation of the important work. Occasionally cynics shake their heads at the future of the younger generation and predict dire things, basing their attitude on the constantly changing modes and customs and the increasing rapidity with which things are moving. It is unlikely that any one might feel this way about the youngsters in this country could retain their feeling if they were to take time to visit a live stock contest and see the demonstration of the knowledge of live stock on the part of these students. They aren't headed toward the "show" but rather are earnestly preparing themselves for their future place in agriculture and animal husbandry.

OWN YOUR HOME

Every 40 seconds—
of every working day somebody buys a Buick - Year after year it wins twice as many buyers as any other fine car

Buy your Buick with the knowledge that the overwhelming majority of America's fine car buyers are making the same wise selection and enjoying the same wonderful satisfaction.

This most brilliant of fine cars enjoys two-to-one leadership in its field and has maintained its leadership, not for a week or a month, but year in and year out since the early days of the industry.

The minute you see Buick you'll know one reason for its popularity—it excels in beauty. The minute you drive it you'll discover a further reason—it excels in vibrationless performance. And when you compare values, you'll have the full story—for nowhere is there a car so fine and dependable at a price so remarkably low.

The judgment of America is mighty good judgment to bank on. And America, by a two-to-one vote, tells you to buy a Buick.

HAROLD LLOYD FILMS GREAT NEW COMEDY

Harold Lloyd, whose visits to the screen have been a little too infrequent of late to satisfy his host of followers, will be seen for the first time in more than a year when his latest Paramount release "Speedy" comes to the American theatre Friday and Saturday. This picture was about eight months in the making, a large part of which was spent in New York, where many of the exteriors were filmed at such famous spots as Coney Island, Yankee Stadium, the Subway, Times Square, Battery, and in fact, most of the show places of New York.

Lloyd has been making about three pictures every two years for the last four years. Comedies have become the most trying of all motion pictures to produce, for in no other field of entertainment has the competition been so keen, and so much demanded from the stars by the public. The bespectacled comedian has never been found wanting with any picture he has ever produced, and in "Speedy" he again rings the bell with a swift moving, highly amusing entertainment that ranks with his finest efforts in the laugh making line.

The Citizen and the Denizen

The Citizen

A CITIZEN is a person who lives in a community, enjoys its blessings, its opportunities and its comforts—but who also thinks of his duty to his neighbors. He works for the advancement of the community.

A CITIZEN realizes that he is a part of the whole community and that while he may have a legal right to live to himself and disregard conditions that effect his neighbor, he has no moral right to do so.

A CITIZEN understands that a cess pool far removed from his own dining table may breed germs that may be carried to his own luxurious home and give his child disease.

A CITIZEN pays his poll tax and votes for the men and the propositions which he sincerely believes, after thoughtful investigation to the best for the whole community.

A CITIZEN glories in the work of having a part in making his community better. He believes in the city where he is working and profiting.

A CITIZEN wants his city to be clean and makes efforts to keep it so.

A CITIZEN will obey the laws himself and will help see that others obey them.

A CITIZEN assists his chamber of commerce in accomplishing the things for the good of all.

A CITIZEN CARES!

The Denizen

A DENIZEN is a creature who merely inhabits a locality. He eats and sleeps and absorbs the nourishment and comforts of life, but gives no thought to the community or its upbuilding.

A DENIZEN wants to "get his" and get out. He does not care for the general condition of the city so long as he and his wife and his son John, are warm and well fed.

A DENIZEN might feel that an unsanitary condition in a part of the town several blocks from his home is no concern of his.

A DENIZEN takes no interest in local municipal affairs—drawing his skirts about him, he lets things run themselves.

A DENIZEN does not contribute time or money to the chamber of commerce. He accepts the benefits these institutions bring to the community without doing his part. He gets for nothing, by letting his neighbor carry his load.

A DENIZEN does not contribute time or money to the chamber of commerce and says: "I'll wait and see if they do any good or not."

A DENIZEN will maintain a garbage pile in his yard, and throw trash in the street.

A DENIZEN cares nothing about making the town attractive.

A DENIZEN DOES NOT CARE!

SINGING

Dr. Frank Crane
People spend a vast deal of money every year in listening to singing. But the trouble is they simply listen to it. They are auditors and not singers.

We like to crowd the bleachers, watch baseball and football and tennis games, and we like to go to grand opera and concerts and vaudeville and hear them sing.

But the best part of singing is the reaction upon the singer himself.

We are notoriously bad singers. We hire choirs in churches to sing for us when we ought to be singing ourselves.

Do it yourself, is the best advice in physical culture.

Let us not have so many things done for us, but do them ourselves, and we will be better off. It may be pleasant to have a masseur or a masseuse work at you, but the best form of exercise is automotive.

Get out and take a walk or play a game or do something that starts the sweat and thus improve the sewage system of the body, something that circulates the blood rapidly.

Exercise should be taken judiciously, of course, but the best form of exercise is mild exercise which you do regularly. Irregular exercise or exercise once in a while is about as good as none at all.

Many people are constantly making spurts toward physical culture, but spurts are not what we need. We require regularity.

Take any form of physical exercise, any system, for they all embrace about the same points, only adopt some system that will bring the unused muscles of the body into play.

There is no better healthful exercise than singing, provided we do the singing ourselves.

Public school teachers tell us that almost any number of youths can be taught to sing, and it is an art that we should all cultivate.

There is no better music than congregational singing.

The Germans, all of them, can sing their national hymn, and the British non-conformist congregations are vocal.

We alone are too much inclined to be mere auditors and not doers.

The cottage is equipped as thoroughly as any house on the ground might be, containing electric lights, dishes, stove for cooking, complete bedroom and living room suites and has porches on three sides. It is situated among the branches of a huge cottonwood tree

The cottage rests on beams supported by steel cables and is reached by a flight of steps leading up the trunk of the tree. Aside from its use by honeymooners, the cottage is also rented out for social functions.

Bride Yawns—And is a Bride No Longer!

Berlin.—In a village near Hannover, Cupid was badly cheated. During the preliminaries to a wedding, the bride yawned so prodigiously that her jaw became dislocated.

Her jaws were unlocked by a surgeon. She hurried back to the church, but found no bridegroom. He left a note saying he could not possibly marry a girl who yawned on her wedding day.

of old-fashioned flower prints—Can't you see these pictures dressing up the old familiar corners until they seem like entirely different rooms?

We need to remember that exquisite color prints of the world's best pictures are within the reach of all of us today. We are quite ready to invest in new slip covers and draperies when summertime comes. Let us not forget that fresh, colorful pictures are equally important in planning enjoyable summer homes.

Prevents Tarnish

If a lump of camphor is put in the chest or drawer where silver is kept it will prevent the silver from tarnishing.

If you scorch garments when ironing, just remember to lay the scorched part in the strong sunlight, and the discoloration will soon disappear.

Your Flower Garden

By Romaine B Ware

Keep a Garden Note Book

By all means have a garden note book to keep a record of all the things you want to remember in connection with your garden. You may think at first that you don't need it, but you will refer to it many, many times as the seasons roll by. You will find a book about seven and one-half by nine and one-half inches with stiff covers the most practical.

In this book make note of the things you want to do in your garden, the plants you want to add here and there. When you visit a friend's garden or a nursery, take it along with you and jot down the things that interest you. There is always some new plant being brought to your attention, and if you don't mark it down you will not remember it, and then when you wish to order it for your garden cannot do it.

In your garden note book make note of the pleasing color combinations you see in the gardens of others. Good combinations of plant material are always worth study, and it is by study that you will improve your garden. When you visit the flower shows take your note book with you and note the new things you see and wish to add to your planting. If you wish to keep your garden up to date, you must be on the lookout for the newest things. The space and time that we have to devote to our gardens is limited with the most of us, and only the better things are worthy of a place in our gardens. Your garden should be a selection of the most desirable things you can grow, not a collection of any and everything.

In your note book you should keep such things as recipes for spray solutions, notes upon liquid manures and similar things. You will find that you will refer to them many times. A garden note book becomes a regular mine of information, and you will not realize its value till you have one. My own note book has grown until today it has almost become a scrap book; in fact, in addition to my note book, I keep a very large scrap book of garden material, and am always adding to it. One never learns too much about gardens, and you must always be on the lookout for ear-ening information. Jot it down and you will have it when you want it.

Years of Service in Model T Fords

Expenditure of few dollars may enable you to get thousands of miles from your old car

THE Model T Ford is still a great car. It led the motor industry for twenty years and it is used today by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service in city, town and country, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer at very small up-keep expense.

The cost of Model T parts and of necessary labor is unusually low because of established Ford policies.

New fenders, for instance, cost from $3.50 to $5 each, with a labor charge of $1 to $2.50. Tuning up the motor and replacing commutator case, brush and vibrator points costs only $1, with a small charge for material. Brake shoes can be installed and emergency brakes equalized for a labor charge of only $1.25. A labor charge of $4 to $5 will cover the overhauling of the front axle, rebushing springs and spring perches, and straightening, aligning and adjusting wheels.

The labor charge for overhauling the average rear axle runs from $5.75 to $7. Grinding valves and cleaning carburetor can be done for $3 to $4.

A set of four new pistons costs only $7. For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. Parts are extra.

All of these prices are approximate, of course, because the cost of materials needed will depend on the condition of each car. They show, however, the low cost of putting the Model T Ford in shape for thousands of miles of additional service.

See the nearest Ford dealer, therefore, and have him estimate on the cost of re-conditioning your Model T Ford. He will tell you, in advance, exactly how much the complete job will cost.

THE RED RIVER SPECIAL LINE

CULTURE BEGINS IN THE STOCK YARDS OF AMERICA

A recent book of Katherine Mayo described civilization, as called, in India, as one of filth, cruelty, and abhorrent practices in a generally discreditable scheme of life which in addition is one of the world's oldest. Mrs. Annie Besant, who at eighty still goes to India for wisdom regarding this and the other world, said of Miss Mayo's book, "Mother India," that it might be true as to isolated cases among 500,000,000 people but: "If I were trying to give a true picture of American civilization today I could not begin with the stock yards of Chicago."

If Mrs. Besant did not begin with the stock yards she would not begin at the beginning. American civilization rests on the stock yards. They are the explanation of it as they are of any modern civilization. They explain Chicago, as they explain New York, London, Paris, etc. The cities explain the civilization and the stock yards explain the cities.

People who must be engaged day by day in providing their own meat by their own direct efforts have no time to do anything except to keep from starving to death and they are eminently successful in life if they can do that. In Chicago, as elsewhere, the universities, hospitals, laboratories, and museums, science, art, music and amusements, diversions, improvements, amenities, and accomplishments are derived directly from the fact that the stock yards provide meat without requiring all the time of the people who eat it in the effort to get it by going out after it themselves. If they had to do so they would have to go their own fiddling, their own teeth pulling, pollice themselves for rheumatism and get their education in the woods and along the banks and streams.

They might be a highly competent people in shooting animals and catching fish. They might even have some poetry and be able to cut deer and bear pictures in rock surfaces but a modern person would call them uncivilized. Bernard Shaw or a fellow vegetarian would say this was error but the same thing applies to another diet. Mr. Shaw writes plays and prefaces because some one else grows string beans and vegetable marrow for him and he gets them at the grocer's.

These conditions are the most obvious facts in life and they can be just as easily ignored as Mrs. Besant ignored them. The squeal of the pig in the stock yards is the birth cry of civilization and the highly organized conversion of life into meat products, whether sensitive nerves like it or not, is the beginning of independence for the production of things which sensitive nerves do like.

It may take a carload of beef cattle to make a symphony orchestra player. A civilization cannot be made without stock yards or their equivalent in food production. Mrs. Besant was trying to submerge what she regarded as the unpleasant features of East Indian life. Miss Mayo might report that the theological leader had hit the exact truth by inadvertence, that the unpleasant phenomena of India were as pertinent to its forms of life as the stock yards are to American civilization.

GEORGE W. BARRIETTE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF THE PERRINIA (ILL.) JOURNAL TRANSCRIPT, SAYS: THAT when the enigmatic Brownie wrote "truth never hurt the teller," advertising was little more than the casual use of painted signs, calling the wandering pedestrian's attention to what was sold beneath the shingle.

But when a serious minded advertising enthusiast scribbled the slogan "truth in advertising," the industry of which he was a part had grown until it gave employment to thousands of men and women, created a popular demand for hundreds of thousands of worthy products of man's industrial ingenuity, and educated millions of buyers to more thoughtful purchasing.

The evolution of advertising has been fascinating. Once merely a device to sell goods, it is now an agency for the promotion of ideas. Once merely a stunt to remind potential buyers of the location of the opportunities for their want-gratification, it has now become an economic force which creates and fosters buyers-demand as well as inspires buyer-confidence.

The successful newspaper seeks to guard most zealously what it terms reader confidence. The wise advertiser can afford to learn from the men from whom he buys space and guard, as zealously, buyer confidence. To this end, he must not only be truthful about his product; he must also be truthful about the ideas which animate his business and the ideals which inspire him to industrial or commercial enterprise.

Advertising is a thrift force, a home builder and a community preserver in direct proportion to the fidelity it preserves to the idea behind the product it seeks to sell. Truth in advertising is more than strict observance to the letter of the copy. It is also a contempt for equivocation and a determination to be true to the idea behind the business for which it is a mouthpiece.

THE WHOLE TRUTH IS AS IMPORTANT IN ADVERTISING AS NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH. Copyright 1927

STRAY DOGS A MENACE

Stray dogs are a menace to the life of children as well as adults. warns Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer who urges city officials to enforce laws pertaining to the pounding of stray dogs.

"A good dog is alright where he has a home and someone responsible for his welfare, but a stray mongrel, is not only a nuisance, but is likely to become infected with rabies, carrying terror and perhaps death in his wake," Dr Anderson stated.

"Hydrophobia is a horrible disease, and if once developed, is practically fatal to man or beast. The statistics of the state department of health show that five people died in Texas during 1927 from this malady. Statistics of the Pasteur institute, where patients are treated for rabid animal bites, show an average of thirty to fifty patients daily during the entire year.

"The germ of rabies is in the saliva of the rabid animal, and a dog is the only rabid animal showing much inclination to bite. It is the chief agent of transmission of rabies, the rabid animal whose saliva breaks in the skin or enters the wound, and keep the dog locked up for observation. The dog was suspicious in behavior. Beware of stray dogs."

Lament and Death

It opens with the kindness of some of the friends to Him, while the enemies and the saddest of the chapter are nearest to Him. Judas was invited to the supper as "the son of man" (Jn. 13:18). He was severely rebuked by Jesus (v. 6) and to Mary (v. 6) and to the other disciples (v. 10).

Judas had joined the party with the thought of announcing the Messiah to the ruler of the temple. He was not in the company of the disciples. He was not in the company of the disciples. He was not in the company of the disciples.

blood of Jesus Christ for all who have received Him as a personal Savior (1 Jn. 1:7). In the Lord's supper this fact is brought to the believer's consciousness and there is new appropriation of its cleansing power. Those who approach the communion with open hearts, never fail to go away with the glory of His presence shining out. What a loss it is to the church when the communion becomes a mere routine, or is robbed of its Scriptural meaning by false interpretations of Calvary's cross!

"I will not deny Thee in any wise!" It was Peter who spoke at the conclusion of the Lord's supper (v. 31). But he was not alone in his proclamation of fortitude. So said they all—Judas among them. Oh, how little some of us know ourselves! We flatter ourselves upon the possession of firmness of character. What reason have we for doing so? Many a man is in the depths of backsliding who fell there from the heights of self-confidence. Our only safety is in remembering that believers were never meant to be "self-supporting." If we will but reflect more on the Master's words—"Without me ye can do nothing," our boasting will give place to humble dependence and we shall walk in safety.

Taking Peter, James and John with Him, the Savior entered Gethsemane. Judas slipped away to do his dirty work. "Gethsemane" means "oil press." There, olives were crushed to get oil for food and light. There, Jesus was all but crushed in the grip of an unparalleled agony which should result in the issuance of spiritual food and light for believers. The olive was the symbol of peace, and under that great Passover moon knelt the One who was about to become "our Peace."

In this short space, we can but touch the surface of the meaning of the events in the garden. The writer is convinced that it was one of the most important events in our Lord's career and that it bore a prominent part in the working out of our salvation. Satan well knew that if our Lord went to the cross as God's Lamb, his grip upon the human family was about to be broken. Dare we say that Satan determined to block God's plan if possible? We believe there are clear evidences of it.

Jesus "began to be sore amazed" (v. 33). Luke tells us that blood began to ooze from the pores of His skin and run down His body (Lk. 22:44). To the three disciples He said plainly that the stinging of death was then and there directed to His very heart. "I am encompassed even unto death" (v. 34). Heb. 5:7 seems to state clearly that our Lord, as the result of His earnest prayers in Gethsemane, was "saved from death"—not death at Golgotha, but death in Gethsemane. Ponder these things!

It was an hour for Satan! It is the "wiles of the devil" that we are exhorted to "watch" (v. 34; cf. Eph. 6:11). Before entering the garden, He had said to Peter, "Satan hath desired to have you" (Lk. 22:31-34). The hosts of darkness were gathering for final assault to break the plan of God.

The Savior "FELL on the ground"—mark the words! (v. 35.) That the Son of God should implore in such a posture shows that the fearful darkness of the shadow of death was even then pressing Him down. "Oh, that this hour might pass (move forward). Take away this cup," He cries: "nevertheless—if this be thy will!"

What was the deliverance He was seeking? One says: "It was the first thought that human frailty suggested to Him in view of the cross—on the human side of His nature He temporarily weakened. He prayed that some other plan might be worked out." But He Himself had repeatedly affirmed that there was no other way (Jn. 3:14-15). Does He now pray contrary to God's will? (Jn. 11:42.) Must "this cup" be interpreted only of the cross, or may Gethsemane's cup have been a specific agony of itself? What means this blood, this weakness, this shadow of death—in Gethsemane? This was neither the appointed place or time for Him to die. The resulting of angel wings is heard (Lk. 22:43). He is "strengthened"—the blood stops. The powers of darkness were driven back. We believe hell's forces had been arrayed in a last attempt to defeat the purpose of God. This is the hour of the power of darkness. Thus He spoke to Judas as He came out of the garden (Lk. 22:53). Under "Suggestive Questions" note further proofs.

The battle was won. He moved forward to the ordeal of the cross, to die exactly as the Scriptures had foretold. It was through the cross that He should recover mankind from sin and extricate us from the terrible grip of Satan.

Pith And Point
Hypocrites crowd to the ordinances of the church to keep up appearances (v. 18). Presumptuous confidence in our own resolutions may cause us to be recorded for everlasting memorials of human weakness (v. 29). Instead of talking of dying for Him, let us learn to live for Him (v. 31; cf. Rom. 14:8).

If we turn praying time to sleeping time, we need not expect to be victorious when it is Satan's time (v. 37). To recover men from sin, involve ed the Son of God becoming the Son of man and laying Himself open to the fiercest assaults of the powers of darkness and the most desperate attempts to thwart the divine plan.

In a garden the first Adam met Satan and lost Paradise. In a garden the Second Adam had some terrific conflict before He went to the cross and won Paradise back for us. Learn at the gates of Gethsemane the true attitude toward suffering!—"Thy will, not mine, be done."

Suggestive Questions
Did our Lord Himself partake of the symbolical bread and wine? (v. 23; cf. Lk. 22:17; Mt. 26:27). Why? Did Satan desire to see Jesus offered on the cross in exact fulfillment of the Old Testament? Mt. 16:22-23; cf. 4:8-10.

Did our Lord ever entertain the idea that some other way than the way of the cross might be made possible for Him? (v. 36; cf. Lk. 24:44-47.) Is there any suggestion as to who might have been back of the Gethsemane experience in comparing the three prayers with the three assaults in the wilderness at the beginning of our Lord's ministry? (v. 41; cf. Mt. 4:1-11.) Did Satan indicate that he expected to have another round with Jesus, when he was defeated in the first one? (Lk. 4:13.) For a season—lit. "until a more favorable time."

What did Jesus say shortly before going to Gethsemane? (Jn. 14:30.) Who ministered to Jesus at the close of the wilderness experience? (Mt. 4:11; cf. Lk. 22:43.)

Golden Text Illustration
Not what I will, but what Thou wilt (Mt. 14:36). "Is it so, O Christ in heaven, That the highest suffer most—That the strongest wander farthest And most hopelessly are lost? That the mark of rank in nature Is capacity for pain—That the anguish of the singer Makes the sweetness of the strain?"

Affliction is not calamity to who bears it in yieldedness to His will, but a mine of wealth. Though you have a Gethsemane, the sun goes down and trusted friends go to sleep if you'll look up to the heavens at "the Morning Star," the night also will bring forth its joyous truths (Rom. 8:18). "Thus, Lord, in Thy mysterious was, Lead my dependent spirit on, And whereso'er it kneels and prays Teach it to say, 'Thy will be done.'"

GOV. MOODY.

FLEMING'S GUEST
Gov. Dan Moody recently drove nearly two hundred miles to spend a few minutes in viewing scenes being made for a wholly American picture, one that is bound up with the spirit of patriotism and the life of an immortal, Theodore Roosevelt.

He was invited by Director Victor Fleming to the camp where the original Rough Riders assembled and trained in 1898. The picture is scheduled for showing at the American Theatre on June 8 and 9. Hermann Hagedorn, Roosevelt's biographer, wrote the story. Part of the exteriors were filmed in Texas.

AT PERRYTON CHURCHES

CHRISTIAN CHURCH SERVICES

Martin T. Pope, Minister MORNING:
Children Day Program
The Bible school and church will be united in one service.

Vocal solo: Miss Dorsey Woods
Sermon: "Loves Law of Service and Reward"

EVENING:
We are dismissing at the evening hour for the Baptist revival and urge all members of this church to attend the splendid meetings now in progress at the Baptist church.

METHODIST CHURCH

10:00 Sunday school
11:00 Communion service
5:00 League meets at church
8:00 No preaching on account of the Baptist meeting

4:00 Monday juniors meet
8:00 Wednesday mid-week meeting
2:30 Thursday, women meet
8:00 Thursday Choir

We wish that the people could get to church in time on Sunday morning for all the classes to begin on time and save the confusion of people going into a class and creating disturbance. The less confusion there is in a class the better the interest. The recitation period is for worship and instruction and not for business discussions and social arrangements. Many people believe in giving that hour to Bible study and not waste it on other things.

A men's Bible class once was raising a crop of cotton to pay some on an old debt on the church. Every few Sundays there was a part of the class time taken from the study period to talk on the cotton patch and work. A man took a friend to the class one day, and the matter of the cotton patch came up. His friend said, "I thought you had a Sunday school class. Why, that seemed to me to be more of a cotton exchange."

The plans for the heads of the Sunday school boards in the Methodist church is for the Wesley Bible classes to have monthly business meetings in the week to clear the class' business and social slate.

The seniors league meets at the church at 5:00 o'clock with lunches and Bibles to go to the Springs for their services and return here for the services at the Baptist church. This is to be just as truly a service of worship as if it were held in the church.

The juniors had a good days outing last week and the pastor trusts that we may use this medium for holding and getting hold of other people. Any sort of legitimate bait ought to be used by the church to catch men for Christ. And remember big fish are usually in deep water.

There has come a little (disorganization reaction now with two weeks vacation in some parts of the work but let the people be as they were in the time of Nehemiah, "And the people had a mind to work."

This would be a good slogan for a church. "Every one with a place, and be in that place on time all the time."

WORKERS CONFERENCE

The Canadian Baptist Association Workers Conference will meet with the church at Notla Tuesday, June 5. This will be an all day service and everyone is invited to attend.
