UT regents support diversification center

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification to be established for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin received resounding support from the UT System Board of Regents during a meetfng here Thursday.

The proposed center — agreed to in principle — would be located at the intersection of State Highways 1788 and 191 midway between Midland and Odessa. The 165 to 180 acre tract of land, valued commercially at more than $4 million, was donated by the Scharbauer family of Midland.

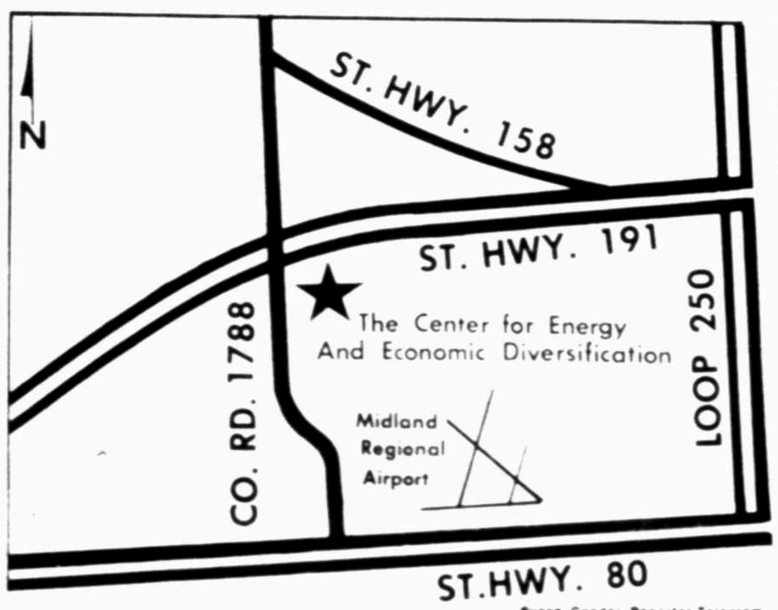

Jess Hay, chairman of the Board of Regents, said the center would be administered by UTPB, but that its resources would be drawn from other component institutions in the UT System. The center also would serve as host to a variety of other university centers, institutes, bureaus, laboratories and special units.

Regents authorized the Board's Executive Committee, in association with UTPB President Dr. Duane M. Leach and Executive Vice Chancellor James Duncan and Vice Chancellor and General Counsel James L. Crowson — both of the UT System — to continue negotiations with Permian Basin representatives related to the acquisition and or gift of real property for use and benefit of the proposed center.

Regents also accepted a $500,000 planning grant from the Odessa Industrial Development Corporation, payable at $8,000 per month over the next five years, to cover initial development and operational expenses of the center. The corporation changed its bylaws to make it possible to spend its funds outside Ector County.

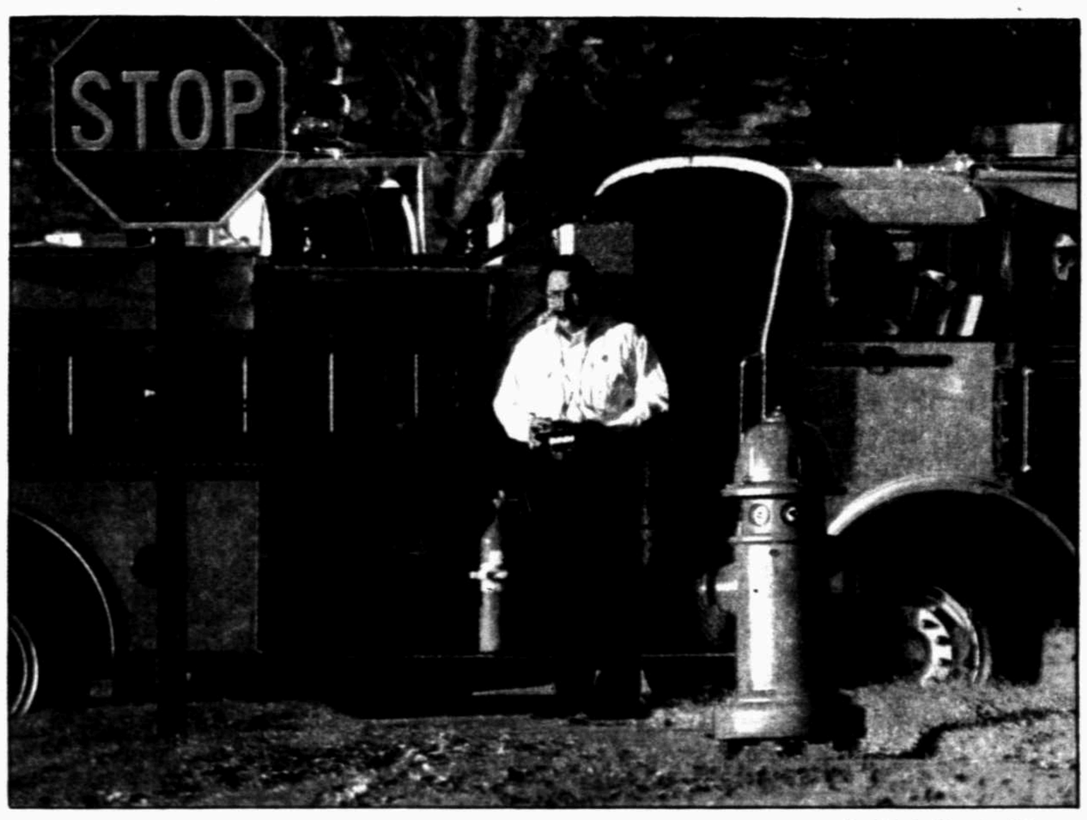

In addition to the anticipated gift of land for the location of the center, regents mentioned that negotiations are underway to secure cash gifts totaling nearly $5.5 million to provide for the initial building and equipment costs, to help underwrite initial operating costs for the first 36 months and to defray and or endow ongoing operating costs.

Hay explained the Regents completed agreements with two other communities interested in furthering high technology development through cooperative ventures with the UT System during the past two years.

Lon Dominguez, fire inspector with Midland Fire Department, "trains" the latest member of the crew — Pluggie the Fire Hydrant. Pluggie is a mobile robot designed to be used in fire prevention programs.

'Pluggie' practicing his fire prevention programs

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Pluggie, the talking fire hydrant, has found a home in Midland.

"This button here makes his eyes wink, this one makes him go forward, this one backward," explained fire inspectors Lon Dominguez and Eric Metzger, both at the same time.

Obviously excited, the two men who spend much of their time going to area schools teaching fire prevention, marveled over their new toy — a $3,500 robot in the form of a gleaming red hydrant — complete with water.

"Pluggie will be used in our fire prevention talks as a way to get the kids' attention," said Metzger. "It's equipped with a transreceiver which allows us to talk with the children from a distance, making it appear as though the robot is talking."

Dominguez explained that the unit also allows the two to hear what the children are saying to Pluggie and operate from a distance of up to 1,000 feet.

"It's bi-lingual," quipped Dominguez, who, coincidentally, speaks both English and Spanish.

Both men are currently "training" Pluggie for his first appearance 10 a.m. Dec. 10 at Midland County Library.

"After that we'll be taking him around to the schools and to any interested group," said Metzger, who estimated that he and Dominguez spoke with nearly 7,500 schoolchildren last year.

The idea to purchase Pluggie came last year when the two attended an arson conference in Odessa.

"It's manufactured by Robotronics out of Spanish Fort, Utah," said Dominguez. "One of the representatives from the company was there and we talked to him about buying one of the robots."

The kid-sized fire hydrant (roughly four feet high) is operated in much the same manner as a toy remote-controlled airplane, said Metzger.

"This seven-channel receiver is all it takes," he said, showing off a eight-inch square box containing numerous levers, buttons and dials.

With a furious flicking of the controls, he demonstrated Pluggie's many abilities.

Fully-mobile and mounted on wheels, Pluggie took off for a tour around the Midland Fire Department driveway under Metzger's careful guidance.

"Hello Mr. Reporter," droned Pluggie, making a sudden dash across the pavement.

Blinking his eyes, which also light up on command, the electronic extinguisher tipped his "cap," which when down, makes him resemble any other normal hydrant.

"He also has a water reservoir which allows him to put out fires through this outlet," said Metzger, pointing to where firemen would hook up their hoses on a genuine hydrant. Metzger guessed that in Pluggie's case, it would only be used "to squirt people."

The robot, which is equipped with two electric motors, can go backwards and forwards and emit a siren warning to grab the children's attention.

"If we can help to save one life, then it's worth the expense," said Metzger.

OPEC talks could end policy on fixed price for crude oil

By ROBERT BURNS

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers are beginning a round of talks that some analysts believe could bring the cartel closer to a final break with its long-standing system of fixed prices for crude oil.

A market monitoring committee of six ministers, headed by Mana Saeed Oteiba, the chief delegate of the United Arab Emirates, meets today to prepare for the cartel's year-end meeting of all 13 oil ministers on Saturday.

Most members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries already are undercutting the official price system based on $28 a barrel for Saudi Arabian crude. Many also are said to be selling more than their agreed share.

OPEC has managed to avoid an immediate crisis, however, because the world market has been strengthened this fall by factors the organization cannot control, including a seasonal surge in demand for heating oil in the Northern Hemisphere and reduced Soviet oil exports.

This has led many oil analysts, and some OPEC ministers, to conclude that nothing of note will be done at the weekend Geneva meeting.

But others say it could push OPEC closer to a formal decision to let its oil prices move up and down with open market trends. That is what most non-OPEC producers do, including Britain and Norway.

At their last meeting in early October, the ministers could not agree on a pricing plan, and Saudi Arabia said it was following its OPEC partners in selling oil at market-related prices.

Even so, some of the group's leaders, including Oteiba and OPEC President Subroto of Indonesia, have expressed hope that the organization could muster enough resolve to reaffirm the official price level at this weekend's meeting.

Oteiba was quoted as telling a Saudi newspaper earlier this week that a "price war is inevitable" unless all 13 member countries begin adhering to their production quotas and the official price structure.

He said they "must exert sacrifices and revert to OPEC's official prices" in order to pull themselves out of a market "calamity."

High school juniors' test results surprise officials

From Staff Reports

Texas' high-school juniors have surprised state education officials by passing a new graduation exam in overwhelming numbers.

Of the 191,556 eleventh graders who took the exit-level test in early October, 91 percent passed the English language arts section and 88 percent passed the mathematics segment, the Texas Education Agency reported Friday morning.

In Midland Independent School District, 84 percent of the juniors passed the mathematics portion of the test and 90 percent passed the English, or language arts, section, according to Becky Ferguson of the district.

There were 1,184 juniors who took the test locally.

Students who failed one or both sections will have three more times to take the test. They must pass both sections in order to graduate.

The scores will be reported to the board of trustees on Tuesday, Ms. Ferguson said. "We don't really have anything to compare them to in the past."

Based on results from field tests, Education Commissioner William Kirby predicted last summer that 25 percent of the students would fail the exam the first time around.

During the summer, the education agency made available to the schools the list of objectives the tests would measure. Kirby and other education officials said schools took advantage of those lists to prepare students for the exams.

"Since we let them know what was important to learn to receive a high school diploma, they have started remediation efforts," said Keith Cruse, TEA director of education assessment. "These are very teachable things, they're very minimum skills, and, in fact, youngsters can learn them."

Cruse said schools did not "teach the test," but rather the principles involved. "If you taught the test, they'd only be able to answer certain questions — the ones you taught them to answer."

The Legislature included the graduation test as part of the massive school reforms it passed in 1984. Lawmakers said such an exam would ensure that high school graduates could read, write and cipher at acceptable minimum levels.

Some observers wondered if the high marks came about because the State Board of Education "watered down" the passing scores last summer. Each test included 72 questions. However the board ruled that incorrect answers on eight English questions and 20 math questions would not count against students because they measured objectives included in a new statewide curriculum that not all students have had an opportunity to learn. To pass, students had to correctly answer 70 percent of the remaining question.

Still, 22,400 students failed the math exam and 16,900 did not pass the English test. "Our schools still have an important job ahead of them," Kirby said. "We must see to it that these students get the help they need so they can learn the skills in which they are deficient before the test is administered again."

Kirby said he expects the board to boost the passing mark for future test takers. "As more and more students begin to benefit from the more stringent academic requirements being placed on them, ...we will continue to expect more from them," he said.

Although male and female students performed almost equally well on both exams, a much higher percentage of Anglos passed than did black or Hispanic students.

On the math test, 94 percent of Anglo students passed, compared to 82 percent of the Hispanics and 72 percent of the blacks. While only 4 percent of the Anglos students flunked the English exam, 16 percent of the Hispanics and 19 percent of the blacks failed.

Kirby said minority students have shown continuing improvement in standardized tests. "We have a long way to go before we're satisfied," he added. "We must continue to concentrate on special programs to help our minority students."

More backing balanced budget amendment

By KATHRYN BAKER

■ Budget battle continues; Related story — 2A

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, a majority of the House is backing a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, say a group of about 40 congressmen, including eight Texans.

The congressmen, who held a news conference to call on the speaker to bring the measure to the House floor for a vote, released a list Thursday of 218 co-sponsors of the amendment. The group, including 43 Democrats, began signing a letter to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

"All we are asking is full consideration, fair consideration and prompt consideration," said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

A majority of the 435-member House can order a bill brought directly to the floor, but Stenholm said there was no plan to do that "at this time."

"Almost a year ago, the speaker assured me that when significant numbers of House members want to bring legislation to the floor, he would not block it procedurally," said Stenholm, who at the beginning of the Congress threatened to offer himself as a conservative alternative to O'Neill as speaker.

O'Neill's spokesman, Christopher Matthews, said the speaker and other House leaders had been focusing their efforts on the Senate's Gramm-Rudman measure, which would statutorily limit spending. He had no immediate comment on O'Neill's plans for the constitutional amendment, which has been bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee.

Supporters of the an amendment say they favor it because it would be binding on Congress, unlike a statutory spending limitation, which Congress could alter.

"Congress has had a very difficult time making the hard choices needed to balance the budget," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis. "It must be forced to do it and the only force which can bind the Congress is the Constitution."

Bond sales may be halted in debt limit controversy

By STEVEN KOMAROW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, turning up the pressure on Congress, said the Treasury will stop selling savings bonds and special securities for state and local governments unless the federal debt limit is increased today.

But the chance of speedy congressional action seemed remote, as House and Senate negotiators failed in closed-door meetings Thursday to agree on a five-year balanced-budget plan tied to the borrowing boost.

"We're just talking. No decisions," said Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., leader of the House negotiators.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, meanwhile, deleted $531 million for Israel while approving a $498 billion catchall spending bill to finance government programs through next Sept. 30. The measure could come to the Senate floor as early as today.

The Treasury will suspend savings bonds sales after today, at a time when many people want to buy them for Christmas presents, because a temporary extension of its already-exhausted borrowing authority expires at midnight tonight. That extension was granted last month by Congress to avoid a similar crisis just before Reagan left for the summit in Geneva.

The prospect of no sales of special state and local government bonds, also because of the borrowing limit, is raising fears in the municipal bond market. State and local governments buy the special Treasury securities as a temporary investment vehicle for money they raise in the market, but if the securities aren't available, the market sales would likely be canceled.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker on Thursday sent a letter to all 50 state governors warning them of this possibility. He said the action would immediately affect 50 governmental entities in 22 states that have sales of more than $1 billion scheduled from Monday through Wednesday of next week.

If Congress doesn't raise the debt limit by Dec. 12, the Treasury said it will run out of cash completely, and will have to default on its obligations.

The House and Senate have attached rival plans to the debt ceiling hike bills to cut the red ink now running at $200 billion a year. Statutory limits would be reduced each year until a balanced budget is reached by fiscal 1991.

To enforce the limits, the bills would impose automatic program cuts if Congress and the president failed to produce spending bills that meet the targets.

House Democrats have fought to exclude poverty and health programs from the cuts, but offered this week to come part way on health programs, allowing reductions so long as they didn't cut more than 1 percent from current expenditures.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., Thursday called the House offer "a pretty good package." But Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the original sponsors of the plan, said too many federal programs were being exempted, spreading the burden too thin.

The money bill approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee is needed because only three of the 13 regular appropriations bills have been signed into law, and a stopgap spending measure now in effect expires next Thursday.

The Senate measure would provide an estimated $15.5 billion more for defense and foreign aid, and about $2.5 billion more for domestic programs.

Republicans would prefer no tax reform to Democratic version

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — House Republican leaders, convinced a tax overhaul plan written by Democrats is worse than no bill at all, are prepared to abandon the No. 1 item on President Reagan's second-term agenda.

Unless the president can convince perhaps 50 Democrats to support a Republican tax bill, the GOP leaders say, they are willing to let the whole subject of tax reform die.

Even if Reagan launches one of his telephone campaigns for the Democratic bill, said GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi, "that would not influence me one bit. I'm not going to vote for it."

The Republicans want a plan that would cut individual taxes less than the Democrats favor but, more importantly, one that would preserve business tax incentives for modernization and expansion.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois said he, too, will oppose the Democratic bill when it is considered by the House next week. Whatever happens, he told reporters Thursday, he is convinced there are just too many competing interests for Congress to produce "true tax reform and true tax simplification ... the way I envision them."

Reagan has lent a less-than-enthusiastic endorsement to the massive tax bill approved by the Democratic-controlled Ways and Means Committee. It's better than the present tax system, Reagan said Tuesday, expressing hope that the House will pass it, warts and all, but strongly implying he expects the Republican-run Senate to improve it.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill has said there is no way any tax bill can become law this year unless Reagan can persuade at least 75 of the 182 Republicans to vote for it. Lott predicted the president won't even come close to that number.

If the bill dies in the House, Reagan said, that would "risk damaging, perhaps irreparably, an entire year's effort to achieve real tax reform."

Rep. Richard Cheney of Wyoming, chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, would not buy the president's arguments. "It is not reasonable for the president to expect me to vote for a tax bill that he himself would not sign,"

If the Republican plan is rejected, he added, it would be better to drop the whole issue for the year.

But Rep. Willis Gradison, R-Ohio, a Ways and Means member, said defeat of both bills by the House would mean that "any significant opportunity for real tax reform will be dead for years."

Plans were completed in June, 1984 to establish an Institute for Biotechnology in association with the San Antonio Health Science Center. The Board also completed agreements in August, 1984, to establish an Advanced Robotic Research Institute to be affiliated with UT Arlington.

"In each case these communities recognized the importance of high technology programs to their future economic/business development and recognized also the importance of strong university-related academic and research participation," Hay said.

The Permian Basin center — described as "a third such cooperative thrust" — will be designed to aid in the economic diversification of the region "by the application of research results, commercialization of technological developments, introduction of new technologies and various other entrepreneurial activities."

Construction of the 10- to 15-year project would not begin before the spring of 1987, according to Leach.

Hay said "We are extremely grateful to the leadership of both communities (Midland and Odessa) for their commitment to this proposed joint venture and to the Odessa Industrial Development Corporation for providing the seed money to enable us to move the concept to a reality.

"When these arrangements are complete, we believe they will prove tremendously beneficial to the economic deversification of this mineral-rich area that has been a primary source of wealth to The University of Texas System and the State of Texas in general."

Regent Bill Roden eluded to the Regents action, saying it is a "splendid opportunity for Midland-Odessa, as well as The University of Texas System."

John Landgraf, president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, said the City of Odessa is "very interested in working toward economic diversification and plans to do whatever is necessary to bring this into a reality."

Landgraf said the center "will go a long way to help encourage the relationship between Midland and Odessa and prove that the two cities can work together."

Furthermore, he said "We think that this center demonstrates the need and the interest for the University in this area."

Midland Chamber of Commerce President Joan Baskin said, "We are just thrilled to death. We are delighted to supply something that will be beneficial to the rest of the state.

"I think it will put us on the map in that we will have something that no one else has. We applaud the action of the University."

OPEC

But some analysts believe the chances of that happening at this weekend's meeting appear slim.

David Johnson, an oil analyst at the investment firm of Wood, Mackenzie & Co. in Edinburgh, Scotland, said Thursday he doubts the OPEC ministers will feel enough pressure to make difficult choices now.

"They never really make a decision until they're against a wall," he said in a telelphone interview.

Johnson added, however, that he thinks Saudi Arabia will indirectly push OPEC closer to formally abandoning its fixed-price system. It may do this, he said, by telling the others that Saudi Arabia's decision in September to "temporarily" sell oil at below-official levels will be continued indefinitely.

The Saudis abandoned the official OPEC pricing system in order to boost their own sales, which in August reached a 20-year low of about 2 million barrels a day. Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, said in Geneva on Thursday that his country's daily production was now near its OPEC quota of 4.35 million barrels.

Total OPEC output is believed to be about 18 million barrels a day, compared with its self-imposed ceiling of 16 million.

Because the Saudis are by far the biggest producers in OPEC and the world's largest exporter of oil, a decision to continue following the free-market price would, in time, force the other OPEC members to do the same.

Venezuela and some other OPEC countries apparently are preparing for this. Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi said last week that his oil minister would bring to Geneva a fresh proposal on pricing. He declined to explain it but industry reports have said it would tie OPEC prices to those in the free market, which currently are at a similar level.

Nigeria's oil minister, Tam David-West, said in an interview published Thursday by the Saudi Arabian newspaper Arab News that he believed OPEC would avoid a price war. But he did say he expected prices of oil to fall to as low as $20 a barrel.

Each $1 drop in the world price of a barrel of oil is the equivalent of a reduction of about 2½ cents a gallon in products such as gasoline, when entirely passed on to consumers.

OPEC members are Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

Opposition lawyer Lupino Lazaro adds books to a burning outside Supreme Court facilities in Manila, Philippines. The event was staged Friday to protest the mass acquittal of Armed Forces Chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, 24 soldiers and a civilian accused of conspiracy in the assassination of Benigno Aquino.

Opposition forming a united ticket

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition leaders say the two leading candidates to challenge President Ferdinand E. Marcos in a special election have agreed on a united ticket, and indications were that Corazon Aquino would run for president.

Salvador Laurel, a former senator who also announced his candidacy for president, apparently would be the opposition's vice presidential candidate in the Feb. 7 election.

Laurel said Thursday that he and Mrs. Aquino would announce Sunday "the official candidate of the united opposition." Opposition unity behind a single candidate is considered crucial to any hopes of defeating Marcos, who has been in office for 20 years.

Mrs. Aquino's campaign headquarters said she would attend the news conference on Sunday, but refused to say what would be announced. Mrs. Aquino, who accuses Marcos of responsibility for the assassination of her husband, opposition leader Benigno Aquino in August 1983, announced her candidacy Tuesday.

On Monday, a court placed blame for the assassination on Roland Galman, who the army said was a communist agent send to kill Aquino. The court aquitted 25 soldiers and a civilian charged with conspiring to kill Aquino.

A source close to Mrs. Aquino said "unity has been achieved" among the opposition, and Mrs. Aquino meanwhile told The Associated Press she definitely would not accept the vice presidential slot.

Laurel, asked if he agreed with Marcos that the country was not ready for a woman president, replied "I think Mr. Marcos is only referring to Mrs. Imelda Romualdez Marcos."

Other opposition sources said Thursday and today they believe there has been an agreement between the Aquino and Laurel camps, but they refused to comment further.

Mrs. Aquino has been endorsed by former presidential candidates Aquilino Pimentel, Jovito Salonga and Ramon Mitra, and leftist leader and former senator Lorenzo Tanada.

Marcos has said his politically powerful wife, Imelda, will not succeed him, but some observers have suggested she could be his vice presidential running mate.

Teachers observe student apathy

By TANYA BARRIENTOS

DALLAS (AP) — Twelve-year-old Monica Torres is failing five of her six courses at Edward H. Cary Middle School, and she says she doesn't care. Instead of attending class, she sneaks away to "hang around the 7-Eleven and a bunch of other stores."

Like Monica, three out of every four students at Cary are failing at least one course, and like her, many are apathetic about it.

Teachers and administrators say youngsters aren't motivated to learn and contend that is why the failure rate for Dallas secondary school students has hovered around 50 percent since the Legislature raised the minimum passing score from 60 to 70 last fall.

According to statistics released by the Dallas Independent School District, 55.9 percent of all high school students are failing at least one course, and 57.6 percent of all middle school students are failing.

Cary has the highest failure rate among Dallas' 52 secondary schools, with 76.7 percent of the students failing at least one class.

Cary's racial makeup is close to the district average, with a 749-student enrollment that is 40 percent black, 20 percent white and 31 percent Hispanic. About 40 percent of the students qualify for free lunches under the government subsidized program for children from poor families. Some of the students are bused in from West Dallas under the desegregation court order.

"I hardly care; I don't care," Monica said during her lunch period Wednesday. "I failed 'cause I was absent too much. I get my friends, and we leave (the campus) and go walking around. We go to the 7-Eleven and a bunch of other stores. We don't come back."

Monica said she hates school and would rather "be home watching cable (television) or going partying or having fun."

Marina Lara, 13, is failing homemaking because she doesn't do her homework.

"Oh it's easy; all we have to do is an hour of work at home, and our parents are supposed to sign this thing that says we did it," she explained. "I just kept forgetting. It doesn't matter. I don't care."

Marina says she's making good grades in all her other classes and suggests that many students continue to fail because "they don't think education is important."

"There's a lot of jobs you can get without an education," she says, when asked what she will do after leaving school. "You can be a truck driver. You can be a cashier lady. The people who want to have a job in an office or something, they want to get an education."

Luther Johnson, a science teacher at Cary, said parents no longer teach children to respect teachers.

"They are not taught how to behave in class. They (students) are not placing an emphasis on academics. They are interested in fun and games," he said, adding that television is one of his greatest adversaries.

"The only thing that keeps their interest is the things they see on TV," he said.

Johnson also said that teachers are seeing fewer parents at PTA meetings and are not getting the kind of support from families they used to receive.

Sandinistas say missile supplied by America

By FILADELFO ALEMAN

WORLD

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government claimed Contra rebels used a U.S.-supplied missile to shoot down an air force helicopter, and recalled its ambassador from Washington for consultations.

Fourteen soldiers aboard the helicopter died when it crashed Monday in Matagalpa province, about two miles from Nicaragua's border with Honduras. U.S.-backed rebels operate in the area from Honduran bases in their fight to topple the leftist Sandinistas, who took power in July 1979.

Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's acting foreign minister, said late Thursday that the government had sent protest notes to the United States and Honduras in the incident and is seeking an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council.

Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States, Carlos Tunnerman, was recalled to Managua to discuss "this delicate situation," Tinoco said.

State Department spokesman Pete Martinez said in Washington early today that he did not know anything about Nicaragua's announcement that it had recalled its envoy to the United States.

In a statement issued Thursday, the Foreign Ministry accused the Reagan administration of providing the surface-to-air missile allegedly used to shoot down the Soviet-made Mi-8 helicopter.

It said such activity by the United States was "irresponsible" and "elevates the Central American conflict to levels until now unknown."

On Wednesday, the Defense Ministry had said the helicopter had crashed because of mechanical failures.

Capt. Rosa Pasos, an army spokeswoman, read a report on Thursday issued by an investigating panel that identified the missile reportedly fired at the helicopter as a SAM-7. She said the surface-to-air weapon is also known as a Redeye.

SAM-7s are Soviet missiles, but Redeye is the name of a U.S.-made missile. There was no immediate explanation for the apparent contradiction.

The Foreign Ministry's statement claimed that, according to rebel leaders, "dozens of these missiles have been supplied by the North American government as part of the policy of aggression against Nicaragua."

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega said several months ago that the government had reports that anti-Sandinista forces had received surface-to-air missiles from the CIA.

Mulukuku, 165 miles north of the capital of Managua, is the site of a large camp established by Nicaragua's Marxist government to train army draftees and recruits.

Ms. Pasos said the helicopter was hit by the missile 10 minutes after it took off from the Mulukuku base with three other helicopters. It was taking soldiers to combat zones, and crashed about eight miles northeast of the base.

The rebel radio station, September 15, which operates from Honduras, claimed Wednesday that its forces had shot down two Sandinista helicopters. There was no immediate comment from Sandinista authorities.

The Sandinista air force has Mi-8 transport helicopters, as well as Soviet-made Mi-24 combat helicopters.

The Sandinista Workers Office, a labor group, said it would demonstrate today in front of the U.S. Embassy in Managua to protest "this new escalation of imperialist aggression."

U.S. hopes British action indicates 'thaw' toward Star Wars

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain today became the first U.S. ally to join in developing President Reagan's "Star Wars" program, beginning what American officials hope will be a thaw in the once-chilly reception the allies gave to the high-tech shield against nuclear attack, sources say.

U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and British Defense Minister Michael Heseltine signed the agreement in London, but terms of the accord were not immediately disclosed.

Word of the agreement came hours after Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle told a Senate Armed Services subcommittee that the Reagan administration still clung to hopes of winning western European support for the research program.

Perle said Thursday that "some of the skepticism has dissipated, but not entirely" about the Strategic Defense Initiative, as the program is formally known.

Weinberger had traveled to Europe to try to win allied support, particularly from West Germany and Great Britain.

When Reagan proposed the program in 1983, U.S. allies in Europe feared the United States would build its own defense against the Soviets and leave western Europe open to attack.

"The image of a dome over the United States is one reason why the allies are skeptical," Perle said.

But he added, "If we are successful, we will be putting a dome over the Soviet Union. That's the correct image."

Perle said the most promising element of SDI research involves destruction of Soviet missiles in the "boost phase," while they are under powered flight in the moments after launch. At that point, he said, the targets of the weapons are unknown, so knocking them down could mean saving European cities as well as those in North America.

While U.S. allies have refused to formally join the SDI effort, most nations have permitted their private companies to bid on SDI research contracts and there has been some discussion about a European-based, anti-missile research effort.

Perle said the United States would be happy to help support an effort to develop European-based defenses against Soviet missiles.

"We would view that with great interest," he said, while adding that the United States would not initiate such an effort for "political" reasons.

The United States has been criticized in Europe for going ahead with the deployment of new nuclear-tipped Pershing 2 and cruise missiles on the continent.

Defense secretaries sign agreement in London

LONDON (AP) — Britain signed an agreement with the United States today to participate in research on President Reagan's controversial "Star Wars" space-based missile defense program.

The agreement was signed by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and British Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine, who appeared at a joint news conference at the British Defense Ministry.

Weinberger said British participation in the program, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative offered a significant opportunity to expand the frontiers of scientific research.

"I am particularly pleased that the first of these agreements can be signed with the United Kingdom because I think that emphasizes both the closeness of our alliance and the special nature of our relationship which is a very vital thing, I think, to both our countries," he said.

Heseltine said the agreement offered "a very significant opportunity for British industry and for British research capability to be associated with a major and exciting program at the frontiers of human capabilities in many of the technologies of tomorrow."

Britain's enthusiasm for getting in on the ground floor of Star Wars research has not been matched by other U.S. allies.

Israel has expressed interest and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has promised a Cabinet decision by Christmas. But France, Norway, Denmark and Australia have refused to participate.

The United States and Britain had been negotiating the accord for several months. Britain had pressed for a definite commitment from the United States for substantial research contracts as part of the $26 billion U.S. program.

STATE IN BRIEF

Britain leaves UNESCO

PARIS (AP) — Britain's decision to withdraw from UNESCO a year after the United States deals another blow to the U.N. agency and indicates the British concluded the organization could not change under its present leadership.

The British move, announced Thursday in London, appears to push the 160-nation U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization toward further disintegration and to weaken what remains of the movement to reform it.

Pressure is also likely to mount on other Western member nations and Japan, which have been criticial of UNESCO programs and practices, to review their own participation in the Paris-based U.N. agency.

They have until Dec. 31 to give formal notice of withdrawal. Singapore has already said that for economic reasons, it will leave with Britain at the end of the year, reducing membership to 158 nations.

More gas leaks in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Gas leaked from a fertilizer factory in the capital today, two days after a spill from the same plant sent thousands fleeing in panic, police said. A man died after inhaling gas from the earlier spill.

No one was reported injured in the latest leak, which police described as minor. Police described the gas in both incidents as non-toxic oleum, which they said could cause throat and eye irritation.

Assistant Police Commissioner Sajan Singh, describing today's leak, said five tons of the gas leaked through a corroded valve of a cooling pipe at the Shriram Food and Fertilizers plant.

The leak was controlled in 25 minutes after police, firefighters and plant workers poured lime and water on the source of the leak, he said.

Some police officers suffered minor throat irritation, but no one was seriously affected or hospitalized, he said.

Blasts damage pipeline

OUDENAARDE, Belgium (AP) — Explosions in Belgium and France early today damaged a NATO fuel pipeline and the office of the civilian agency that manages it, police said. There were no reports of injuries in either case.

Belgian police said an anonymous telephone caller claimed responsibility for the pipeline blast on behalf of the Fighting Communist Cells, a leftist terror group.

That explosion occurred about 5:30 a.m. (11:30 p.m. EST Thursday) in Wortegem-Petergem, a community near Oudenaarge and about 37 miles west of Brussels.

Rail traffic on a line near the pipeline was disrupted, but the tracks were not damaged.

French police said they received no claim of responsibility for the other blast, which occurred about a half-hour prior to the pipeline explosion at the office of the Central Europe Operating Agency. That agency manages the pipeline.

The explosion blew out windows and doors in the office, which is located in Versailles, near Paris.

Belgian officials speculated the two blasts were linked. No damage estimate was available for either blast.

Meeting defies Pretoria

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Church leaders and white university students from South Africa said today they met this week with black nationalist guerrilla groups banned by Pretoria, which tries to prevent such contacts.

More than 30 South African church leaders, including Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, and nine white university students from Cape province were in the Zimbabwe capital of Harare this week for a World Council of Churches conference on South Africa.

They said they held a series of separate meetings with leaders of the African National Congress and the Pan Africanist Congress, both outlawed by the South African government.

Pretoria says such contacts are unpatriotic because those black nationalist groups are pledged to violent change.

China getting bear farm

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — A scientist says China has asked for financial assistance and advice from Alberta to set up a bear farm as a source of ingredients for traditional Chinese medicine.

Sherman Weaver, executive director of Alberta's Vegreville Environmental Center, said Thursday that the request was made during a visit last month by scientists from his center and the Alberta Research Council to Heilongjiang, Alberta's sister province in northern China.

The farm's main purpose would be to provide gall bladders and other organs used in traditional Chinese medicine, Weaver said.

Alberta scientists are experienced in the handling and physiology of large game animals, Weaver said.

Bonner meets with Craxi

ROME (AP) — Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner, in the West to seek medical care, met with Italian Premier Bettino Craxi in a session she later told reporters had renewed a friendship begun in Milan in 1975.

"The only thing that has changed since then is that he has become premier and I have become a criminal," she said.

Mrs. Bonner, 62, was detained in the closed city of Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, in the spring of 1984 on charges of anti-Soviet slander.

She later was convicted and sentenced to five years exile in Gorky, where her husband, dissident Andrei D. Sakharov, was banished in January 1980.

Mrs. Bonner, 62, came to Italy on Monday on the first stop of a trip to the West to seek treatment for eye and heart ailments. She spoke to reporters in the press room of the Renaissance Palazzo Chigi, the premier's offices, after meeting with Craxi on Thursday.

Bishops voting today

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops vote today on two documents that may reflect not only their assessment of the Second Vatican Council, but also whether the majority wants more power in running church affairs.

One of the two documents before the extraordinary bishops' synod is "a message to all Catholics," a general statement on the work of the two-week assembly. The final draft of the message, drawn up by a panel of five prelates led by Pakistani Cardinal Joseph Cordeiro of Karachi, was presented Thursday to the synod.

If approved, as expected, it will be issued Sunday when the synod closes with a pontifical Mass in St. Peter's Basilica.

However, the 160 participants have been arguing for days whether they should publish the second, more detailed document that contains their findings and recommendations for the pope, or keep them secret.

No previous synod has published anything beyond a simple message. Instead, it turned over its conclusions to the pope, who later issued his own document on the subject the synod considered.

Jaruzelski visits France

WARSAW, Poland (NYT) — While Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's reception at Elysee Palace on Wednesday continued to shake France's governing Socialists, his meeting with President Francois Mitterrand was being hailed by the official press here Thursday as a major triumph for the Polish leader and his proclaimed policies of normalization.

"And so the spirit of Geneva has finally arrived over Paris," declared the front-page headline of Trybuna Ludu, the Communist Party newspaper here.

The paper went on to say that the meeting — Jaruzelski's first official encounter with a Western head of state in a Western capital since martial law was imposed in Poland in December 1981 — had opened a new chapter in relations between the two countries.

The meeting came just two days before the scheduled arrival here of Willy Brandt, the former West German chancellor.

U.S. asks for troop reduction

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, testing the Soviet Union with the first arms control proposal since the summit, has offered a major concession on Warsaw Pact forces in Central Europe in an effort to break a 12-year negotiations deadlock.

The initial Soviet reaction to the proposal, made Thursday by the NATO allies in the Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction talks in Vienna, was cautious and cool. Nikolai Neiland, the Soviet spokesman, said it "does not give cause for optimism," but would be carefully studied during the long yearend holiday recess.

The White House and State Department went to unusual lengths to publicize the proposal, calling it "significant and forthcoming." They said it was designed to fulfill commitments made by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in their summit meeting last month in Geneva.

The proposal called for the removal of 5,000 American troops from West Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, and 11,500 Soviet troops from East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia as a step toward lessening East-West tensions.

Its main significance appears to be abandonment by the Reagan administration of a longstanding U.S. demand that the Soviets acknowledge that their troop strength estimate is low.

Through the 12 years of lumbering negotiations, the NATO allies have insisted the Warsaw Pact has more than 1.2 million troops in ground and air forces in Central Europe facing 990,000 NATO troops. The Soviets claimed its strength was equal to NATO's.

Now, in a switch, the Reagan administration and the allies are willing to proceed with reductions without resolving the dispute — but providing the withdrawals are carefully verified.

"It more than meets the East halfway," said Bernard Kalb, the State Department spokesman. "It clearly goes the extra mile. For the first time, we have removed our longstanding requirement for prior agreement on the number of Eastern forces in the reduction areas."

He said there would be 30 inspections a year, 25 on the ground and the five others combining air and ground surveillance. This would be apart from the customary checkpoints. The purpose is to make sure no additional troops were sent in.

The Soviets have rejected similar scrutiny proposals in the past.

CBS loses $5.05 million libel suit

CHICAGO (AP) — A $5.05 million libel award to the manufacturers of Viceroy cigarettes against CBS Inc. and a news commentator will tell the media they "cannot trample over people's good names," a tobacco company official says.

But Walter Jacobson, the commentator whose broadcast prompted the lawsuit said Thursday's award to Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. shows the cigarette industry "will stop at nothing to stop us from telling the facts."

"It's a sweet victory," said Ernest Peeples, senior vice president and general counsel for Brown & Williamson after the award. "I think it benefits the press as well. Because they know that if somebody strays out of bounds, they are responsible.

"The press cannot trample over people's good names without having to answer now and then."

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated about an hour and 45 minutes before levying the damages against Walter Jacobson, a commentator on WBBM-TV, and CBS Inc., which owns the station.

On Nov. 26 ruling, the jury found that Jacobson libeled Brown & Williamson in a 1981 commentary in which he said the cigarette maker was trying to lure children with advertising equating smoking with alcohol, sex and drugs.

"I'm very disappointed in the jury verdict," said Thomas Morsch, who represented CBS and Jacobson. "We're definitely going to appeal. Once you go to jury on a case like this...it's a roll of the dice."

Jacobson, an award-winning broadcaster who is one of the highest paid local anchors in the nation, stood by his commentary which accused Brown & Williamson of trying to "hook children to poison" by relating cigarettes to "pot, wine, beer, sex and wearing a bra."

He also called the company "liars" in the Nov. 12, 1981, commentary.

Jacobson's comments were made on his "Perspective," generally a mixture of reporting and biting observations aimed at politicians and other high profile targets.

Brown & Williamson asked for $7 million in actual damages as well as $10.1 million in punitive damages from the network and Jacobson.

The jury assessed $3 million in general damages against CBS and Jacobson, a figure that Peeples said both were jointly responsible for. Punitive damages of $2 million also were assigned to CBS and $50,000 to Jacobson.

"It is simply an attempt, in my opinion, by the tobacco industry to stop us from reporting the evils of tobacco," Jacobson said after the jury's award. "We will appeal it and we will win it."

Reagan praises National Review, 'force for change'

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan celebrated 30 years of conservative journalism by lauding William F. Buckley Jr.'s National Review as a "spirited, captivating little journal" that has been a force for change around the world.

"The man standing before you now was a Democrat when he picked up his first issue in a plain brown wrapper. And even now as an occupant of public housing, awaits as anxiously as ever his biweekly edition, without the wrapper," Reagan said to laughter Thursday night at a dinner at the Plaza Hotel.

The event was a birthday party for the National Review and an opportunity for conservative leaders to show support for the magazine, which its editors admit does not make a profit.

The evening cost $300 per couple or $175 for the unattached, and featured a cocktail hour followed by a dinner of smoked salmon, chicken potpie and chocolate cake.

Although the approximately 700 guests included arch-conservatives such as columnist George Will, Commentary publisher Norman Podhoretz and CIA Director William Casey, more liberal faces also were in evidence, including those of journalists Mike Wallace and John Chancellor and Osborn Elliott, dean of the Columbia School of Journalism.

Reagan praised the magazine for "the terminal damage those pages have done to modern statism and its unrelenting grip.

"You didn't just part the Red Sea; you rolled it back, dried it up, and left exposed for all the world to see the naked desert that is statism, and you did it without an environmental impact statement."

The president joked that Buckley sent him a message through the White House staff saying this was the 30th anniversary "and you should say something important, like announcing a new Marshall Plan."

He credited the National Review for its own "Marshall Plan of ideas," including "The value of personal freedom, the efficacy of the free market and the wisdom of representing the constitutional government of the rule of law under God."

Musical entertainment at the dinner ranged from jazz piano to Bach, Handel and Scarlatti played on the harpsichord — although not by Buckley, who is accomplished on the instrument.

Other speakers included Will; Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.; William Rusher, publisher of the National Review; and Priscilla Buckley, sister of the founder and the magazine's managing editor who is retiring at year's end.

First lady Nancy Reagan sat at a table between Buckley and Will. The president was at a separate table with former ambassador Clare Boothe Luce, among others.

Kemp, who spoke before Reagan, invited the audience to envision the National Review anniversary party 30 years from now in the "free city of Havana."

"Bill Buckley will be the only 90-year-old enfant terrible," Americans will file tax returns of 5 percent to 10 percent on postcards and the country will have tested and deployed Reagan's Strategic Defensive Initiative, Kemp said.

Buckley, the final speaker, founded the National Review in 1955 with $130,000 of his own money and other private contributions.

Cancer patients jam phone line asking for new treatment

Rosenberg

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The woman's voice on the telephone was soft, plaintive.

"I saw the television report last night about new experimental cancer therapy. My mother has lung cancer. We're at a crisis point with her. She had surgery, and conventional chemotherapy doesn't seem to be working. She's real depressed and refuses to continue chemo. She's given up."

And a young man:

"I have renal cell cancer. I found out this morning it's in my lung and spinal cord. I've had a kidney removed. (My doctor) said nothing could be done."

All day Thursday, the telephone lines at the Cancer Information Service here were jammed with calls from people desperate for a cancer cure. They'd heard or read about a new treatment developed at the National Cancer Institute.

Officials at the federal center caution the treatment is still highly experimental, carries toxic side effects and is very expensive. It is available thus far only at the institute in Bethesda, Md., a Washington suburb.

But it shows promise, the experts say. And for the millions of people with cancer, the treatment — however experimental — spells hope, maybe a last hope.

"My mother had a malignant tumor. She has less than a year to live."

"How do I sign up?"

"Is there any way he can go in as a research patient?"

In 11 of 25 patients with advanced cancer, doctors were able to shrink tumors by at least 50 percent and, in one case, apparently eradicate the disease.

Operators told the disappointed callers the program is filled, although there are plans to open more research centers around the nation. They were given more details about Dr. Steven Rosenberg's research, or referred to other clinical research programs, or told to have their doctors contact the National Cancer Institute.

The information service, which can be reached at 1-800-4-CANCER, had received more than 1,000 calls by midday Thursday, most triggered by news reports of the National Cancer Institute treatment.

Adoptive immunotherapy turns ordinary white blood cells into "killer cells" that attack malignant tumors. The procedure uses interleukin-2, a natural hormone of the immune system, to transform ordinary white blood cells into cancer warriors. These cells are treated outside the body and then injected into the patient, where they attack cancerous tumors throughout the body.

In 11 of 25 patients with advanced cancer, doctors were able to shrink tumors by at least 50 percent and, in one case, apparently eradicate the disease.

Rosenberg said his treatment, which was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, and which he discussed Thursday on NBC's "Today" show, "represents the first new kind of approach to cancer in perhaps 20 or 30 years."

Just as previous "breakthroughs" in the search for a cancer cure have spawned a huge public response, so has this one.

"What we're looking at are people searching for every possible cure for their loved ones. People are willing to go anywhere. They say, 'I have money, I'll do anything to buy my way into this,' " said Carol Case, the institute's chief of public inquiries.

She recalled that in 1978, when a cancer drug called thymidine was introduced, "We had patients calling from their death beds. They heard about this new drug and they wanted to take it. It's very reminiscent of those times."

Tests of the disease-fighting protein interferon in 1980 also brought a deluge of telephone calls. "Five years later, interferon is still very experimental," said David Lehmann of the American Cancer Society in New York.

But to some of the 462,000 people that the American Cancer Society says will die of cancer this year, the therapy means hope.

"We're encouraged by any new breakthrough, any new treatment that looks promising. But we don't want to give people false hope," Lehmann said.

"He (Rosenberg) is emphasizing the fact that it's a limited number of cases, he's having some success, but more study is needed. Whether people hear that or not, I don't know. If I had cancer, I would probably look for anything that might be helpful."

AIDS-infected women risk transmitting virus to unborn children, CDC reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Centers for Disease Control, in guidelines carefully described as "abortion-neutral," said today that pregnant women infected with the AIDS virus run a high risk of transmitting the disease to their unborn children and may also increase their own risks of developing the illness.

The CDC, in its weekly bulletin, cited one study indicating the risk to the fetus may be as high as 65 percent if the mother is infected. Another study suggests that pregnancy may make a woman more vulnerable to AIDS virus already in her body.

The federal agency recommended that women in high-risk groups who are pregnant or plan to become pregnant should be asked to undergo voluntary testing for the AIDS antibody, which indicates exposure to the virus.

Pregnant women testing positive for the AIDS virus should be counseled on the management of their pregnancy, the guidelines say. No mention is made of abortion, but Dr. Anthony S. Fauci of the National Institutes of Health said at a news conference Thursday, "I think it's naive to think it wouldn't come up."

Women who are infected but who are not pregnant should be advised to delay pregnancy until more is known about the disease and the vulnerability of the fetus and the mother, the CDC said.

"Based on what we know now, they need to be aware that they put themselves at risk and their infant at risk if they become pregnant," said Dr. Donald R. Hopkins, the CDC's deputy director.

The guidelines on pregnancy are part of a series being issued by CDC and the Public Health Service on AIDS precautions.

As of Monday, the CDC had recorded 217 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in children under age 13, of whom more than 130 have died. In 165 of those cases — 76 percent — the mother was the only risk factor.

While the risk of transmission is not firmly established, Hopkins said limited data "suggest a high rate of transmission — in one study as high as 65 percent." Hopkins also said researchers also have found one case in which AIDS appears to have been transmitted to the child through breast feeding.

The guidelines note that transmission to a fetus is not inevitable. In one case cited, a woman diagnosed with AIDS during pregnancy gave birth to a child who appears healthy and uninfected at the age of 4 months, the guidelines say.

Pregnancy may also increase the risk to a woman who carries the virus but shows no symptoms, the guidelines say.

Vet ends fast as Reagan promises meeting on MIAs

AP Laserphoto

Vietnam veteran Gino Casanova sips mineral water to celebrate the end of a 51-day fast in a bamboo cage in Seattle.

SEATTLE (AP) — A Vietnam veteran who battled "consuming hunger" during a 51-day fast in a bamboo cage says he has agreed to President Reagan's request to begin eating in exchange for a meeting about soldiers missing in action.

"I'm happy that the whole thing is over," Gino Casanova said Thursday night from his cage in a cow pasture near Kent, about 20 miles south of here. "It's a victory for the common folks, the Vietnam veterans who felt frustrated."

Casanova, 34, who entered the cage on Oct. 16, had planned to fast 61 days, with each day representing a Washington state resident still missing in Southeast Asia.

He drank only water with lime juice and lost 43 pounds since he began the fast at 185 pounds. He planned to leave his cage today and possibly enter a hospital.

Reagan called Casanova Thursday afternoon from New York City and agreed to meet with the veteran and a delegation including Rep. William M. Hendon, R.-N.C., within two months.

Hendon has introduced legislation calling for a congressional commission to investigate whether American soldiers still are being held in Vietnam.

"I would like you to end your fast and get yourself healthy again," Reagan told Casanova. "I have given my personal pledge to the families involved and you to do all we can."

White House deputy press secretary Albert R. Brashear said Reagan acknowledged there are "a lot of rumors" about American servicemen still being held in Southeast Asia. But he said no proof has been uncovered.

"This problem is in Hanoi," Reagan said during the three-minute conversation. "They need to know we're united."

Casanova, of Tacoma, said he spent much of his fast praying, talking to the more than 50 people who visited him every day and reading the hundreds of letters he has received from across the nation.

He also thought about food.

Mexico's troubles

Mexico's economic problems have been growing worse in recent months with a primary cause being that nation's inability to compete successfully in world markets.

It's no wonder. Mexico's industry — much of it government-owned or controlled, and often mismanaged — has been heavily protected for decades and, consequently, shielded from the rigors of foreign competition.

That protectionist response has spawned industries too backward and inefficient to compete outside their artificially sealed, domestic markets. It exports few manufactured goods and petroleum accounts for 70 percent of the country's export revenues. Mexico's ability to expand its export trade and earn more of the hard currency needed to service the country's $96.4 billion foreign debt is sharply limited by its weak, protected industries.

The obvious and unavoidably painful remedy has been apparent for years to observers in the United States, at least. Mexico must drop its protectionism and join the world trading system. One key to that is membership in the 90-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, known as GATT, an organization whose members pledge to reduce trade barriers and expand world commerce.

Mexico came close to joining the organization five years ago, but the government of then-President Jose Lopez Portillo yielded to protectionist pressure from industries and labor unions. That was a mistake.

Now, however, it appears the government of President Miguel de la Madrid may be prepared to override domestic political pressure and open Mexico's markets. Recently de la Madrid directed Commerce Secretary Hector Hernandez Cervantes to begin negotiations for joining GATT. The government still has not announced its timetable for negotiating membership and reducing its trade barriers accordingly. But de la Madrid appears to be leaning that way.

He surely recognizes that Mexico must sooner or later join the world economy or suffer further economic deterioration. And a decision not to join the trade organization would only lead to a continuation of strained relations between the United States and Mexico.

The trouble economically in Mexico only spells worse times ahead for the Western Hemisphere. With economic reforms in Mexico and the joining of the world trading system, Mexico could help itself and other nations as well.

Getting into the gold

President Reagan has legislation before him that will reduce the nation's trade deficit by $1 billion a year and at the same time give Americans something new and shiny to jingle in their pockets.

It is legislation the president should sign. The measure would give the U.S. Treasury authority to produce and sell U.S. gold coins issued in $50, $25, $10 and $5 denominations.

Of course, the coins will be worth much more than their denominations. The $50 coin, for instance, will contain an ounce of gold and its value will fluctuate with world gold prices — about $323 an ounce today.

Americans bought $1 billion in gold coins last year from foreign nations. About $400 million of that amount went to South Africa for Krugerrands.

Earlier this year, the president banned domestic sale of Krugerrands to protest South Africa's racial policies. The ban cut South Africa off from its biggest gold-coin customer and, at the same time, opened a market for U.S. coins.

Sponsors of the legislation, which is now before the president, believe the $50 coin will be "sensationally popular," rivaling similar coins minted by such nations as Canada, Mexico, Austria, Hungary, mainland China and Great Britain.

The U.S. coins won't cost our government a dime, because minting expenses will be included in the selling price. The gold used will be mined in the United States, or if it is not available at the world price, gold stored at Fort Knox will be used.

If the legislation is approved, the first coins will be offered for sale next October — in time for Christmas stockings in 1986.

Courtroom campaign

No smoker has ever won a product liability suit against the cigarette manufacturers, but still the tort lawyers pound at the courtroom doors. The current Santa Barbara, Calif., trial pitting flamboyant Melvin Belli, attorney for the plaintiff, against the R.J. Reynolds Co., is one of only dozens of pending cases seeking damages against cigarette makers for the harm their products have done to smokers. Public policy having failed adequately to come to grips with this social problem, the lawyers have filled the vacuum.

That smoking is among the worst threats to health in the nation only the cigarette companies any longer care to deny. According to a wide range of studies, smoking is responsible for 30 percent to 40 percent of all deaths from heart disease, 80 percent of deaths from lung cancer, the leading form of cancer mortality, and a significant proportion of deaths from cancer of the larynx, mouth, esophagus, bladder and pancreas. Researchers estimate five and a half minutes of life are lost for each cigarette smoked in this country.

But the liability suits such as the one in Santa Barbara are an inefficient way to advance the battle against smoking. Even if the plaintiffs win, it is uncertain that their victory will have any benefit for the tens of millions of smokers whose health is harmed by cigarettes but who have not sued. Even if they establish that cigarette companies should have given better warnings about the health risks of smoking, it will take years of litigation to establish what that warning ought to be. And who knows what unintended side effects such a stretching of liability law might have on other products and manufacturers?

The most striking thing about all of these court efforts is that they are so unnecessary. From 20 years of experience, we already know how, through public policy, to curb cigarette smoking and its health dangers. One major study indicates that federal anti-smoking measures since 1964 have decreased the amount of smoking by 40 percent over what it might otherwise have been. Other research suggests that higher cigarette taxes, smoking prevention campaigns, and bans on advertising could reduce it even more.

The expensive anti-smoking campaign in the courts would be superfluous if lawmakers were only bold enough to do what we know can be done to protect the public health against cigarettes.

Japanese outcasts target U.S.

WASHINGTON — The Immigration Service has warned its field offices to be on the alert for members of the Japanese "Mafia" trying to enter the United States. If they lie about possible criminal records, they can be prosecuted and deported.

Jack Anderson

"Although organized crime is not the primary jurisdiction of the officers of this service," the warning states, "each officer should be made aware of the difficulties the United States is encountering with organized crime .... The employee at a port of entry is most likely to encounter an organized-crime member applying for admission to the United States. His or her alert detection can sometimes preclude these individuals from entering."

The internal "strategic assessment," prepared by the Immigration Service's central intelligence office, was obtained by our associate Donald Goldberg. It provides a fascinating inside glimpse of the Japanese mob, or "Yakuza."

The document estimates that there are more than 2,000 Yakuza groups in Japan, with a total membership of 100,000. "Yakuza members trace their roots to Banzujin Chobei, a Japanese Robin Hood of the 17th century," the report states. "Chobei recruited his 'soldiers' from among social outcasts like himself, and many wore tattoos marking them as criminals."

The first gangs were known as "Machi-Yakko," and members adopted the charming custom of lopping off a finger tip to offer the "don" as an apology for a failed assignment. The gangsters' favorite non-violent pastime was a blackjacklike card game.

"If a player drew as his cards an eight, nine and three, which can be pronounced in Japanese as Ya Ku Za, he had a worthless hand," the report explains. "The Yakuza of today call themselves 'worthless' persons, social outcasts. The Japanese police refer to them as 'Boryokudan' or 'violent ones.'"

"It is estimated that only about 100 Yakuza members are operating in this country, but that they are paving the way for others to come," the study warns. "The Yakuza is becoming increasingly involved in gambling, prostitution, extortions and arms purchases on the mainland as well."

In Honolulu, San Francisco and Los Angeles a thriving tourist industry has developed to serve legitimate Japanese travelers. Tourist agencies, bus companies, hotels and souvenir shops, specializing in the needs of Japanese visitors, have been targeted by the Yakuza shakedown teams.

In Japan, the Yakuza is in the big time. Japanese police estimate the Yakuza's annual take at $5 billion, from activities that include prostitution, pornography and extortion of large corporations and their employees.

"Hence the Yakuza seems to have money to spend, and is coming to the United States to invest, launder (money) and set up new operations," the Immigration Service report warns. "On the West Coast, Hawaii and now New York, Yakuza members are investing heavily in legitimate businesses such as real estate, bars, nightclubs, export businesses, tour agencies and others."

In California, the report states, the Yakuza is "suspected of being involved in gun smuggling, gambling, the smuggling of amphetamines to Japan, pornography and recruiting young American women to sing in Japan but really to work as prostitutes."

SINKING SHIP FUND: An outrageous boondoggle overlooked by the House Ways and Means Committee in its tax-reform package was the Capital Construction Fund, a tax break for the ship-building industry that costs the rest of us $400 million a year. It lets ship builders put money into the fund tax-free, with the understanding that they'll be able to use it later to build ships in U.S. shipyards. Well, the companies have been making contributions during the fat years to avoid taxes, but making none in the lean years when there are no taxable profits to protect. In addition, $80 million worth of withdrawals was improper.

• • •

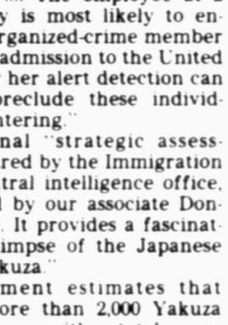

DIVESTMENT BONANZA: The removal of investment money from South Africa has become big business on Wall Street. Almost overnight, a huge market has been created for investment in companies that do no business in the racially torn country. Some analysts reckon that nearly $50 billion of investment funds will be pulled out of South Africa-related stocks and invested in less controversial companies. More than 50 universities, under pressure from students, faculty and alumni, have divested themselves of some $300 million in South African securities. Labor unions, pension funds and local governments are also pulling out.

Laffer throws GOP an oddball

LOS ANGELES — Pink-cheeked Arthur Laffer confronted the problem of his Senate candidacy and the Republican post-Reagan future when a woman approached him at a Hollywood glitterati campaign party in the Beverly Hills home of actress Deborah Raffin and producer-husband Michael Viner.

Rowland Evans

She asked the conventional political question: How can this country survive as an industrial power in the face of imports? Economist Laffer did not respond with the usual politician's soft soap. "Free trade is the only answer," he responded, making clear he thought the woman's arguments nonsensical.

Robert Novak

As a founding father of the supply-side movement and drafter of the Kemp-Roth tax cut, Laffer stresses free-market incentives and economic growth in his longshot campaign for the GOP nomination to run against Senate Democratic whip Alan Cranston. But so far he has attracted little attention from a Republican Party in danger of reverting to pre-Reagan austerity.

Months of campaigning have not pushed Laffer above the single-digit polling range in the 11-candidate Republican field. But that is not the problem. Nobody expects the nominal front-runner, State Sen. Ed Davis, to survive. The two prospects most often fingered by California insiders, television commentator Bruce Herschensohn and Rep. Edwin Zschau, are down there in polldom's Siberia along with Laffer.

Unlike Laffer, they are expected to attract big bucks. Zschau, a Northern California moderate who opposes much of President Reagan's foreign and defense policies, can dip into deep Silicon Valley pockets because he backs efforts to lower capital gains rates and open trade with the communist bloc. Herschensohn's articulate liberal-bashing, begun as a Nixon White House hatchetman, is expected eventually to harvest right-wing California money.

Laffer may be this field's most interesting thinker, most entertaining speaker and closest to Reagan in economic and foreign policy. But those assets have not moved California power brokers, unimpressed with his plea to "keep the dream" of Reagan's revolution. He could suffer the same fate as another innovative Senate candidate, Maureen Reagan, who never collected enough money to get on television in 1982.

Laffer is a veteran of Washington's and academia's tong wars, but his initiation into elective politics has been rough. He still can not abide the failure of his longtime supply-side collaborator, Rep. Jack Kemp, to endorse him. His relationship with one of California's canniest political pros, Bill Roberts, hired to handle his campaign, has not been a marriage made in heaven.

Roberts soon found Laffer not so pliable as a political neophyte whom he guided to victory in 1966: Ronald Reagan. At an early Laffer speech, a Roberts operative vigorously shook his head when the candidate attacked tariff barriers. He told Laffer this was a no-no, and was promptly handed his walking papers.

Laffer also balked at Roberts' plans to whistle-stop this immense state by addressing service and political clubs. He did let Roberts schedule him as the weekly breakfast speaker at the prestigious Jonathan Club in downtown Los Angeles on the morning after his Beverly Hills party.

The cherubic economic theorist gave the all-male, nearly all-WASP audience lots of supply-side optimism. He denounced the politics of "austerity, pain and sacrifice" and plugged for lower tax rates. "The dream is alive," he proclaimed. He called for free trade except when it augments Soviet military power — an indirect slap at Zschau.

This message did not seem to move the Jonathan Club's lawyers and business executives. But Laffer's longtime associates believe it could stir California primary voters — if money is found to spread his message via television.

Laffer has raised over $600,000 but poured nearly all of it into out-of-state fund-raising. Skeptical insiders refer to this as Laffer's political curve. Just as he predicted tax rate reductions ultimately would increase revenue, he banks on his political seed money to bring home the $1.5 million net minimum he needs next spring for a viable campaign.

That would be chicken feed for baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, who has not locked the door against a Senate campaign. His announcement would clear out all Republican opposition (including Laffer) and establish him as an odds-on favorite against Cranston — though nobody knows what Ueberroth really stands for. Art Laffer, present at the creation of Reaganomics, is written off by GOP leaders. The contrast suggests a Republican Party with identity problems.

CHARLEY REESE

Compassion not answer to hunger

No American should feel the least twinge of regret for eating a hearty meal because someone else is starving. Someone is always starving and they will starve whether you eat or not.

Charley Reese

No subject is more clouded by emotion than hunger. No subject floods the body of a do-gooder with adrenalin like hunger. Nevertheless, the problem of hunger is like bowling: it looks simple, but it isn't.

People do not starve because food is non-existent. Warehouses are full of food. They do not starve because there is not enough arable land. There is enough arable land to feed several times the world's present population. They do not starve because Americans are prosperous. They would starve if we were poor.

People starve when they cannot buy food or when they lack the means to produce their own. In every country in the world where people are starving, there are also people there eating very well.

Suppose then you decide to feed the hungry. As the Chinese writer, Lin Yutang, observed, God created man with a bottomless pit called a stomach. So you feed the hungry child today. Tomorrow he will get hungry again. And the day after, and the day after, and the day after until he dies. Unless you are prepared and able to take on a hungry person for a lifetime, charity is not the answer to the problem of hunger. If a child is going to die next week, when your charity runs out, then he might as well die this week.

Charity, you see, is not free. Before you can give food away, you have to buy it. Then you have to pay for its shipment and distribution. There are constraints on charity that have nothing to do with desires or good intentions.

The only answer to hunger is for most people to be able to earn their own food every day. The reason some people can't is mainly political.

Some governments, like Ethiopia and the Soviet Union, use starvation as a cheap method of execution. Other governments, because of greed, corruption, incompetence or a combination of those things, destroy the economies of their own countries. The only way to end hunger in the world is to overthrow a lot of bad governments and replace them with better ones.

Most people in America who want to end hunger, however, don't want to overthrow governments. The thought that the CIA, if authorized, could do more to end hunger with guns and explosives than the Agency for International Development is beyond their understanding.

That's okay. If people want to try to irrigate the Sahara by spitting on a sand dune, I don't mind. I do mind, however, when they try to lay guilt trips on honest, hard-working Americans.

America's prosperity was bought and paid for with sweat and blood. America's prosperity was not gained at other people's expense. Americans have always valued freedom and fought to preserve it. It is not our fault that others valued it less. Americans chose a free market economy, rather than socialism. It is not our fault if others preferred a less productive system. Americans sought and achieved, as close as it is possible, a classless society in which ability, luck and effort — not birth — determine a person's standing. It is not our fault that some countries chose to maintain an aristocracy by birth.

Compassion for the less fortunate is a fine quality, but it should not be allowed to drown common sense. Eat hearty and enjoy. And, if you really want to end hunger, send people guns, not food.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1790, Congress moved from New York to Philadelphia.

In 1917, more than 1,600 died when two munitions ships collided in the harbor at Halifax, Nova Scotia, setting off an explosion that devastated the city.

In 1921, the Irish Free State was established with the signing of an Anglo-Irish treaty in London.

In 1923, a presidential address was broadcast for the first time as President Calvin Coolidge spoke to a joint session of Congress.

In 1955, a New York psychologist, Dr. Joyce Brothers, won the top prize on the CBS-TV quiz show, "The $64,000-Dollar Question," by correctly answering questions about boxing.

Today's Birthdays: Jazz musician Dave Brubeck is 65. Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., is 37.

Thought for Today: "There are not enough jails, not enough policemen, not enough courts to enforce a law not supported by the people." — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey (1911-1978).

Circus buff carves tiny 'big top'

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ladieeees and gentlemen, and children of all ages: the circus is coming to town — in miniature.

It's arriving in the form of a tiny replica of the sprawling touring shows that thrilled the countryside in the 1930s, and it went on display behind glass Thursday in Explorers Hall of the National Geographic Society.

The life's work of 50-year-old Howard Tibbals of Oneida, Tenn., this "circus" features thousands of thumb-size bendable rubber figures of people, 28 prancing elephants in spangles, the bleachers and 7,000 folding chairs under a big tent that's the size of a ping-pong table.

There's also a lady sword swallower in the side show, a lion tamer with cracking whip, a dining tent with 8,000 doll house dishes to feed the 400 performers and 1,100 workers who traveled with the circus. Everything is here — even the cotton candy cones.

Tibbals carved the pieces in his basement and searched the globe for proper models. All told, he guesses he has more than a million pieces; he never counted.

His circus has been displayed only once before, at the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. It keeps growing.

It grew even in Washington, as its creator found a need, here and there, for an additional roustabout or other character. So he sat down and carved them.

"At the World's Fair, people who are 45 or so and who saw the circus and watered the elephants as kids — they believe it," Tibbals says. "But the kids, who have seen men walk on the moon, they can't believe such a thing ever existed."

Just as in the real circus, the parts all fit into railroad wagons of Tibbals' making. He packed the wagons and brought them to Washington in a truck on Columbus Day.

The parts are 1/16th life size — three-quarters of an inch to the foot. For authenticity, Tibbals has studied a half a million circus photos.

He is an executive in a company that makes parquet flooring and gives him enough time away from work to pursue his basement life.

"My wife doesn't think much of it," he says, though she has been prevailed upon to sew a costume or two. His six children don't much like it either: "Not enough daddy."

Extended forecast

Sunday Through Tuesday

West Texas: Partly cloudy, scattered showers and a slow cooling trend Sunday through Tuesday. Rain possibly mixed with snow late nights and early mornings across the Panhandle and South Plains. Highs 50s and 60s. Cooling to 40 by Tuesday. Lows upper 20s Panhandle, 30s elsewhere.

Warm days to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

It may not feel like Christmas to those doing some shopping Saturday as warm temperatures are expected to continue in the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight's fair skies and a low in the mid-30s are expected to become partly cloudy early Saturday with an afternoon high reaching in the middle 60s. Tonight's light southerly winds are expected to increase to less than 15 mph Saturday.

Thursday's high of 59 was 20 degrees below the record set in 1951. This morning's low was 21 degrees above the 1950 record of 8 degrees.

STATE

A high-pressure system over the Lone Star State kept skies mostly clear today but forecasters predicted some increasing cloudiness through this weekend.

A veil of high thin clouds spread across the High Plains and the mountain region of West Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Winds were light south to southwest across much of North and West Texas and light north to northwest across the south. Wind speeds were generally less than 10 mph.

The system pumped in cold air that kept low temperatures mostly in the 30s and 40s except for warmer readings in the 50s over parts of the Coastal Bend. Early-morning extremes were 29 degrees at San Angelo and 56 degrees at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi.

The weather service said some increasing cloudiness was expected tonight and Saturday. Highs should be mostly in the 50s and 60s except in the middle 70s over the Big Bend valleys.

It should be fair tonight in North Texas with lows ranging from 35 to 38 degrees. Cooler temperatures were expected in the extreme northwest sections.

Lows in South Texas under increasing clouds tonight and Saturday should range from the upper 30s in the Hill Country to the low 50s in the extreme south.

NATION

Snow spread from Michigan to New York today and much of the Pacific and Atlantic coasts had rain.

Skies were mostly clear over the Mississippi Valley and eastern Plains and fair skies prevailed across California and the Great Basin, from Alabama across Georgia and in interior sections of the Carolinas.

'Embarrassed' Spurs turn on Mavs, 120-116

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

An "embarrassment" in Seattle turned into a night of accomplishment in Dallas for the San Antonio Spurs.

"Tuesday night, we got embarrassed in Seattle, and tonight we knew we had to play hard and we did," said Artis Gilmore after keying the Spurs' 120-116 National Basketball Association victory over the Dallas Mavericks Thursday night. "We put it all together on defense."

Two nights before, the Spurs had suffered a resounding 123-103 defeat by the SuperSonics.

The 7-foot-2 Gilmore made two clutch baskets and three free throws down the stretch to ensure the victory. He also had a game-high 14 rebounds.

After the Spurs hit their first nine shots to take an 18-4 lead early in the first quarter, they had to stave off the Mavericks time and time again. In all, the game was tied six times, and the lead changed hands 26 times.

"We controlled the tempo tonight," said San Antonio Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons after the Spurs broke the Mavericks' six-game winning streak. "We bounced back from a tough defeat in Seattle."

Gilmore, who scored 25 points, and Alvin Robertson each hit clutch baskets in the closing minutes for the Spurs. The loss broke a six-game winning streak for Dallas, which has won eight of its last 10 games.

DALLAS HELD a 105-104 lead with 3:07 left in the game when the Spurs scored seven straight points to lead 111-105. After Marc Iavaroni hit two free throws, Robertson stole an errant Dallas pass and scored on a layup. Dallas didn't score on its next possession and Gilmore scored from underneath and made a free throw when he was fouled on the play, and the Spurs never relinquished their lead.

Mike Mitchell had 21 points and Robertson added 18 for San Antonio, while Mark Aguirre had 29 for Dallas and Derek Harper came off the bench for 26.

Bucks 105, Knicks 95

Terry Cummings scored 18 points and ignited a 14-4 streak in the first 4:37 of the fourth quarter to break open a close game as Milwaukee defeated New York.

With the Knicks ahead most of the game and holding an 81-80 edge after three quarters, the Bucks rallied to take a 92-85 lead at the 7:23 mark of the final quarter and never again trailed.

Cummings had a field goal to ignite the Bucks' game-breaking spurt and later added a pair of foul shots as Milwaukee put New York away. Sidney Moncreif had a game-high 19 points.

Cavaliers 100, SuperSonics 97

Mel Turpin scored eight of his 19 points in the fourth quarter to help Cleveland beat Seattle. Included among Turpin's points was a 15-foot jump shot with 4:25 to play that put Cleveland ahead for good.

The Cavaliers squandered a 17-point third-quarter lead, allowing Seattle to take its first lead of the second half at 89-88 on Jack Sikma's three-point play with 5:28 remaining.

Turpin, however, hit his next two jump shots, the second one giving Cleveland a 92-91 lead it never relinquished. Seattle missed three shots that would have tied the game in the final minute.

Pistons 113, Nets 111

Isiah Thomas scored 17 of his game-high 28 points in the second half, leading Detroit over New Jersey.

Detroit's John Long, who scored 21 points, broke a 108 tie with a layup with 48 seconds left in the game, and added a free throw with five seconds remaining when the Nets' Micheal Ray Richardson was ejected with his second technical foul for arguing with the referee.

Thomas hit two free throws with four seconds left before New Jersey's Mickey Johnson made a three-point field goal with two seconds remaining.

"I felt we had to play good defense down the stretch to win and that's what we did in the fourth quarter," said Detroit Coach Chuck Daly.

Warriors 121, Clippers 104

Purvis Short scored 31 points and six other Golden State players reached double figures as the Warriors ended a three-game losing streak by beating the Clippers.

Golden State held a 10-point lead after three periods and outscored Los Angeles 15-5 over the first five minutes of the last quarter to go up by 20 points. Short had five of the 15 points, and he totaled 23 points in the second half.

Eric Floyd was the Warriors' second-leading scorer with 18 points, followed by Chris Mullin with 16.

'Only on Thanksgiving' mistake costs Bulldogs

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

An oversight that Midland High principal Jimmie Kelly said "could only happen over the Thanksgiving Holiday" came at just the wrong time for the Bulldogs and basketball coach Jack Stephenson.

The result was the forfeiture of three games, the Tall City Tournament title and the chance at an undefeated season when MHS unknowingly played an ineligible player in three tourney games last weekend.

The player, whom both Stephenson and Kelly declined to name, became academically ineligible at 3 p.m. last Friday, right after MHS had defeated Morton 87-65 in the first round of the Tall City Tournament. But no one knew about it.

"After the six week grading period that ended on Friday (Nov. 22), there is a seven-day grace period for all the grades to come in," Kelly explained. "The grades come back in on Thursdays, normally that takes care of it, we can see who's ineligible.

"But this time, during the holidays, we didn't get the grades back in until Monday (Dec. 2). Coach Stephenson did a check on the student's grade in the fifth week of grading and he had an 82 (well above the passing mark of 70), so he didn't think there was a problem.

So rather than sitting prettily on top of pre-district standings at 8-0, Midland High is knocked down to 5-3 on the season and itching to get back to action during a week-long layoff. The Bulldogs, who played without the player and won 88-74 over Seminole on Tuesday, do not play again until Dec. 10 when they travel to Snyder.

"It's tough, sure it is," said Stephenson. "Anytime you lose a player it hurts, but we played without him on Tuesday. The kids are doing fine, they'll get over it. Everyone knows that (being ineligible) is a possibility. I'm sure there are more teams than just ours that will lose kids. That's why I carry 17 players so I have enough to make up for any losses you might have during the year."

Meanwhile, Midland Lee, the roundabout benefactor of the MHS blunder, becomes the champion of the Tall City Tournament, in name at least.

"We didn't win anything," commented Lee coach Paul Stueckler, whose team travels to Lamesa tonight for an 8 p.m. contest.

UT drummed in tough night for SWC

Associated Press

Southern Cal coach Stan Morrison said the strong play of freshman Tom Lewis, who poured in 30 points against the University of Texas, got the Trojans going.

"Tom Lewis got us off to a great start," the Trojans coach said after the 84-62 win over the Longhorns Thursday night in a nonconference basketball game at Los Angeles.

"He shot well and got out on the break. He got rebounds and made nice passes," said Morrison.

Lewis said he felt the pieces came together for himself.

"I was feeling good out there," the freshman said. "I worked hard in practice all week. You never know how you'll do out there. I just hope I go out there and be on. Tonight, I was.

The Trojans led 44-38 points early in the second half before scoring six unanswered points. Less than four minutes later, the Trojans added seven straight points to lead 64-47 with eight minutes remaining.

Southern Cal junior forward Derrick Dowell added 16 points and 10 rebounds for Southern Cal, which snapped a three-game losing streak and improved its record to 2-3.

Patrick Fairs scored 20 points and John Brownlee added 11 points and nine rebounds for Texas, which fell to 2-2 on the season.

Southern Cal opened a 19-10 advantage with a 10-2 spurt early in the first half but the Longhorns rallied to tie the at 22 with 6:52 left in the half.

Fullerton State 80, Texas Tech 67

Kevin Henderson scored 24 points Thursday night to lead Fullerton to an 80-67 victory over Texas Tech in a non-conference college basketball game.

After Fullerton State led 32-31 at halftime, Texas Tech tied the game at 38 when center Kent Wojcieschoski hit a short jumper with 16:23 to play.

Fullerton State took the lead for good on a basket by Richard Morton that sparked a Titans surge that saw them outscore the Red Raiders 18-12 to lead 56-50 with 7:28 remaining.

Morton contributed 15 points for Fullerton, which improved its record to 4-3.

Dewayne Chism scored 13 points and Mike Nelson added 12 points for Texas Tech, which fell to 3-1.

Fullerton State made 38 of 47 free throws, including a 14-for-14 performance by Henderson. Texas Tech made only nine of 14 free throw attempts.

Lamar 68, Texas A&M 59

Lamar forward Anthony Todd scored 18 points and center James Gulley scored 17 to lead the Cardinals. Gulley pulled down a game-high 13 rebounds as the Cardinals improved their season record to 3-1, while the Aggies fell to 2-2.

Aggie guard Don Marbury led all scorers with 28 points.

A&M grabbed a 10-6 lead with 14:24 to play in the first half. Texas A&M held its advantage until Lamar ran off eight unanswered points to take a 30-28 lead with 3:25 to play in the half.

The Cardinals seized a 40-37 lead with 15:25 to play in the game on a three-point play by Gulley.

Houston 104, Texas San Antonio 59

Houston's Rickie Winslow poured in 28 points in the Cougars' nonconference victory in San Antonio. Houston dunked nine times and handed the Roadrunners their worst loss in its five-year history.

The Cougars improved to 2-1. UTSA dropped its fourth straight to 1-4.

Alvin Franklin had 24 points and Greg Anderson 20 for Houston. Freshman Dion Pettus led the Roadrunners with 15 points and Tim Faulkner added 12.

From Staff Reports

HOBBS, N.M. — Perhaps feeling snubbed by national pollsters, the Midland College Chaparrals went to work on New Mexico Junior College Thursday night with a 90-81 conference win.

Tony Wright, 18 points, and Ricky Grace, 17, led the Chaparrals in scoring, but MC put five players total in double figures. Daron Blaylock had 14, Derrick Lewis added 13 and Chase Brown added 15 points in a balanced attack.

The win upped MC's Western Junior College Athletic Conference record to 2-0, and to 12-0 overall. Despite its unblemished record, MC is not ranked in the latest JUCO poll.

The Chaps started out quickly, taking an early lead, but went to sleep and fell behind by 10, 47-37, with two minutes left in the half. But the Chaps made one of their familiar charges with a full-court press to trail by only two, 49-47 at intermission.

Coach Jerry Stone recharged his troops at halftime and MC opened the final 20 minutes with a surge to go up by nine with 14 minutes to go. The Thunderbirds went cold from the floor, hitting just three of 18 in that stretch. MC widened its lead to as much as 20, 85-65 but the T-birds then scored 12 straight points to pull within eight, 85-77 with 1:10 to go. But Grace made five of six free throws to put the game out of reach.

New Mexico is 9-4, 1-1 in WJCAC play. In other WJCAC action, Odessa College nipped Frank Phillips, 75-74.

Midland College (90): Daron Blaylock 7-9 0-1 14, Lincion Minor 2-10 0-0 4, Ricky Grace 5-16 7-12 17, Todd Duncan 0-2 0-0 0, Chase Brown 6-13 3-5 15, Derrick Lewis 6-10 1-2 13, Mike Smith 2-4 1-2 5, Eddie Frazier 2-3 0-0 4, Tony Wright 7-8 4-5 18. Totals 37-75 16-27 90.

Tony Casillas, nose guard of the Oklahoma Sooners, holds the granite Lomardi Trophy, the 'Heisman Trophy for linemen' in a presentation Thursday night in Houston.

OU's Casillas bags Lombardi Trophy

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Whether it's in Texas or North Flatte, Neb., Oklahoma nose guard Tony Casillas has proved he's as adept at sacking awards as he is at sacking quarterbacks.

Casillas, who will lead the Sooners against Penn State in the Orange Bowl, received the 16th annual Lombardi Award Thursday night, given to the nation's top collegiate lineman.

Earlier, he ventured into the homeland of arch-rival Nebraska to be the guest of honor in North Flatte, Neb. for a Hispanic ceremony.

"There's not much more you could ask for," Casillas said. "When you win the Big Eight championship, have a chance at the national title and win the Lombardi award, that's a lot."

IN EARNING the honor, Casillas beat out Boston College nose guard Mike Ruth, Oklahoma State defensive tackle Leslie O'Neal and Michigan defensive tackle Mike Hammerstein.

Award officials refused to release vote totals.

The trophy, in the shape of a 40-pound block of granite, is presented in honor of the late Vince Lombardi, former coach of the Green Bay Packers and Washington Redskins. Lombardi died in September 1970 of cancer.

Casillas was invited to a Hispanic celebration in North Flatte as the guest of honor.

He accepted.

"There were about 100 people to meet me at the airport," Casillas recalled. "You don't picture yourself going back to Nebraska and to have the fans be so friendly.

"FOOTBALL IS a game to me and I don't hate anybody because of the team they represent. I'll never forget some of the Nebraska fans I met."

Casillas, a 6-foot-3, 280 senior, had 35 tackles, four tackles for losses and two quarterback sacks in seven games for the Sooners this season.

But a knee injury suffered in the Texas game almost wrecked Casillas' season. After first being told he'd be sidelined, six to eight weeks, Casillas said his wife Lisa, a medical student, helped him recover in three weeks.

"That first night after the injury, she kept ice on it all night and that kept the swelling down," Casillas said. "She also told me not to get down on myself."

Hammerstein, 6-3, 265, led Michigan in tackles for losses this season with 22 drops for 110 yards. The senior defensive end also added 73 tackles, had nine quarterback sacks for 53 yards in losses, one fumble recovery and one interception.

Proceeds go to the American Cancer Society for research. Officials said this year's proceeds will raise the event's contributions over the $1 million mark.

Party over for cage powers, tourneys set to begin

Associated Press

The party's over, says Iowa Coach George Raveling.

Now, the holiday tournaments begin, providing the first real tests for several of college basektball's big-name schools.

No. 18 Iowa, 5-0, will host its own tournament, the Amana-Hawkeye Classic at Iowa City beginning tonight with a game against 3-0 Arkansas State. The other game has No. 17 Alabama-Birmingham, 3-1, against Lehigh, 2-2.

"If good fortune shines on Iowa and UAB, you'd have two Top 20 teams matched up in the final game," Raveling said.

Saturday night's Hawkeye championship round could provide one of the most balanced title games of the major tournaments.

"The easy games are over — if there were any easy games," Raveling says. "But that's life when you've got a bunch of youngsters."

College Roundup

Other tournaments involving ranked teams:

— Carrier Classic at Syracuse, N.Y.: No. 4 Syracuse vs. La Salle, and once-ranked Navy vs. Ohio University.

— Illini Classic at Champaign, Ill.: No. 12 Illinois vs. Eastern Kentucky, and Murray State vs. Utah State.

— Lapchick Tournament at New York: No. 15 St. John's vs. Columbia, and Fairleigh Dickinson vs. Hofstra.

— Wendy's Classic at Bowling Green, Ky.: No. 19 Auburn vs. Kentucky-Wesleyan, and Western Kentucky vs. Chaminade.

All tournament finals will be Saturday night.

Both Syracuse and Navy boast high-powered centers. Navy Coach Paul Evans feels 7-footer David Robinson is "probably one of the top three in the country," while La Salle Coach Lefty Irvin was worried about Syracuse's 7-footer, Rony Seikaly, in his team's matchup with the Orangemen.

"Seikaly seems to scare me the most because we may be in trouble guarding the big guy low-post," Irvin said.

Two other ranked teams also play tonight: Penn State at No. 8 Oklahoma and No. 13 Memphis State vs. Texas-Arlington at Kaneohe, Hawaii. There were no ranked teams in action Thursday night.

Thursday's Games

Guard Troy Lewis scored 14 of his 21 points in the first half, and Purdue opened up a seven-point halftime lead en route to beating Morehead State 81-71. The Boilermakers, who led by as much as 79-66 with 1:09 left on Herb Robinson's dunk, went 5-1 going into next Saturday's game at 16th-ranked Louisville.

Len Bias scored 20 points, 14 in the first half, and Maryland outscored William & Mary 17-2 to take a 15-point lead late in the first half to win 77-48. Bias, who played only 29 minutes, broke the 20-point mark in the fifth straight game for Maryland, 4-1.

Ohio State remained unbeaten with a 91-73 victory over Akron, sparked by forward Dennis Hopson's 27 points. Rick Olson kept Wisconsin undefeated, scoring 20 points in the Badgers' 82-60 victory over East Texas State.

Oklahoma State upped its record to 3-0, beating St. Mary's, Texas, 66-63, with the help of 18 points from Nolan Richardson. Kevin Henderson scored 24 points as Fullerton State handed Texas Tech its first loss, 80-67.

Paul Fortier and Chris Welp each scored 16 points to lead Washington over winless Nevada-Reno, 70-66.

Brown returns home, accepts Vandy offer

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — For the third time in three years, Watson Brown pulled out his well-used resignation speech.

Brown stepped down Thursday night as head coach and athletic director at Rice University to accept the head coaching job at Vanderbilt and bring him full circle.

Brown, 34, resigned as offensive coordinator at Vandy in 1982, spent one season at the University of Cincinnati and then came to Rice for two seasons, where he renewed hopes of returning the Owls to a competitive role in the Southwest Conference.

The Owls finished 1-10 in 1984 under Brown but showed promise in 1985 with a 3-8 record. The Owls ended an SWC record 26 game league losing streak and won back to back games for the first time since 1981.

BUT IN emotional meetings with assistant coaches, players and then the news media, Brown announced that he was going home.

"Right now I'm sounding like somebody that's been fired," Brown said. "But I'll be excited when the time comes."

Brown, 34, grew up in Nashville, played college football at Vanderbilt and left his heart there while working his way up the coaching ladder.

His players understood.

"He said he had to do what he had to do," linebacker Danny Burgess said. "He said he had his life to live and he wanted to go home. None of us blamed him for that. There were some tears shed. People said what they wanted to say."

Junior quarterback Kerry Overton, who saw the Owl football program improve under Brown's direction, said the team knew they were going to get bad news when Brown walked into a team meeting.

"That was the worst part because he came in with his head down, and he couldn't say anything for about five minutes," Overton said. "The first thing that he said was that he loved us but that he was going home."

Brown said he had started a job but hadn't finished it.

"I feel good that I'm leaving here with the program in better shape than it was when I arrived," Brown said. "To say that it's done would not be right. It's disappointing that I can't say and see them get over the last hump."

AFTER ALL the moves, Brown said he hoped, he'd made his last.

"If I try to get my wife out of Nashville for a third time, I might have to go alone," he said.

Brown, who leaves four years remaining on a six-year contract worth $1 million, said he signed a multi-year contract with the Commodores but declined to name the terms.

Rice officials said a selection committee would begin a search for a new head coach.

"Watson got something going here and his departure is a setback, but I think it's only temporary," said Bucky Allshouse, a former Rice player and a member of the selection committee that chose Brown two years ago.

Rice has not had a winning season since 1963.

The Owls lost 13 seniors off the 1985 team and only three of those were starters.

Overton said the Owls were 100 per cent devastated Thursday, he expected the team to survive.

Brown had been rumored as a candidate for the Vanderbilt job throughout most of the season. But it wasn't until George MacIntyre resigned on Tuesday that the position became available.

Only rain slowing Wilander's defense

Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Mats Wilander appeared on his way to his third successive Australian Open final today when rain forced a halt of play and Wilander's momentum.

The 21-year-old Swedish star led unseeded Yugoslav Slobodan Zivojinovic 7-5 6-1, 0-1 when the rain that has been so mucn a feature of the two-week $1.5 million grass court event again began to fall.

Wilander, aiming to become only the third man to win three successive Australian open titles, completely outplayed his 6-foot-6 opponent in the first two sets.

The rain, however, set in for the day and the match will have to be completed Saturday along with the second semifinal between top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and fifth-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden.

Also slated for Saturday is the women's singles final between defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd and second-seeded Martina Navratilova.

Tournament officials fear that more rain over the next two days might result in the men's final having to be delayed until Monday.

Wilander, apparently unworried by a brace on his right elbow, looked likely to defeat Zivojinovic, conqueror of John McEnroe, in quick time.

The Swede blasted seven aces in the first set and made Zivojinovic appear overmatched.

Wilander, aiming for the fifth Grand Slam title of his career, played like an automaton in the second set.

Whatever 22-year-old Zivojinovic tried, Wilander was there to counter.

Zivojinovic appeared confused about what tactics to use to halt the deadly accurate Swede.

Hitting the ball deep and well, Wilander also advanced to the net when it was necessary.

He stylishly finished the second set with an ace.

By then the rain had started to make its presence felt and Zivojinovic was unhappy at being forced to play the first game of the third set before tournament referee Peter Bellenger called the players off.

"You want me to break my legs or what?" he called to the umpire.

Lawn Tennis Association of Australia spokesman Tony Peek said the tournament would have no scheduling problems so long as there was no more rain.

Arkansas 72, Samford 51

In Fayetteville, Ark., Razorback senior guard Scott Rose led a balanced attack with 11 points. Rose also led Arkansas with six rebounds and four assists and was the only Razorback in double figures.

Thirteen Arkansas players scored, with Rose's 20 minutes the most time anyone logged.

"When you use as many players as we did, you're going to lose some intensity," Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson said. "But I thought our effort was good at times. We only made 11 turnovers and we had 18 steals. That tells the story of this game."

Arkansas jumped to a 13-2 lead. The Razorbacks used a full-court press to increase its advantage to 18 at 31-13 with two minutes left in the first half.

Cowboys' video chips in for local charities

By SIMON GONZALEZ
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

DALLAS — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry is a familiar sight to football fans as he stands on the sideline — wearing a fedora hat and a stoic look.

But Landry in a Texas Rangers batting helmet? Or a golf cap?

Those are sights in the "Cowboy Christmas" video.

Landry changes hats in the video, but the stoic look remains the same as the players sing, "On the first day of Christmas, my true love gave to me, a new hat for coach Landry."

Producer Lee Martin said, "He played along with it well. He knew they wanted him to do a stereotypical coach Landry. I bet sometimes he wished someone would do something other than the hats."

The video and an album by the same name are the result of the pooling of the talents of Martin, Cowboys quarterback Danny White, and song writer Chris Christian.

Call it Cowboy Aid if you will. Proceeds from sales of the album (which sells for $8) and video cassette ($20) will benefit the North Texas Food Bank and the Salvation Army Christmas fund.

THE IDEA for the project was White's.

"It started long ago. Bob Breunig and I had talked about it for a long time conceptually. Then Christian came into the picture. He wrote the song. Then it was a snowball effect," White said.

"He mentioned it to some people and they got interested and wanted to know, 'When are you going to do this album thing?' From there, we were introduced to the serious people who were willing to back it," White added.

"We got to the point where it was now or never. So we threw it together in a week and it's continuing to snowball now."

Snowballing to the tune of 20,000 videos and albums sold and one projection for 50,000.

The recording was done at Lee Martin Productions at Las Colinas in suburban Irving.

"Not realizing what we were getting into, we said 'Sure.' Danny got as many Cowboy players together as possible and brought them in on their day off," Martin said.

White said several players quickly became enthusiastic about the project.

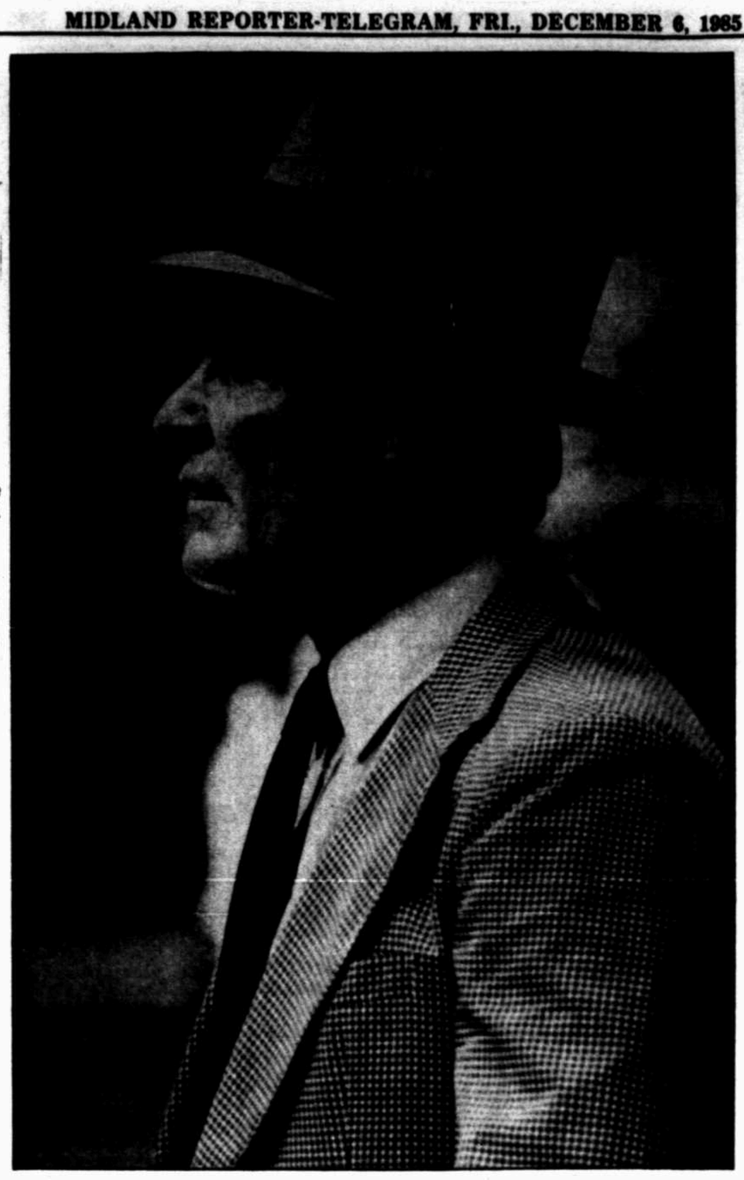

"Ron Fellows and Dextor Clinkscale were constantly on me, wanting to know when we were going to do it. I knew four or five would do it, but I had no idea that 30 something would show up. I was shocked to see the number of guys coming out on their days off, knowing they weren't really going to get anything out of it," White said.

TONY DORSETT was hesitant at first.

"Dorsett was one of the first there, but he took off the headset and said, 'I can't do this, man.' Danny had to go after him and put him back in the door," Christian said.

"But he was great once he loosened up. He was one of the last ones to leave."

The album and cassette are available at some stores. Telephone orders will be taken at 214-869-2931.

Backs figure to regain grip on 1985 Heisman

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The stranglehold which running backs held on the Heisman Trophy was loosened last year when Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie took the prize. This year, the runners figure to get their hands back on the award, courtesy of Bo Jackson.

Jackson, Auburn's stellar tailback, is the favorite to collect the Heisman on Saturday. The Downtown Athletic Club presents the trophy every year to "the nation's outstanding college football player." Since no interior lineman or defensive specialist has won it, and receivers rarely get any consideration, quarterbacks and running backs really are the only ones in consideration.

Jackson is the frontrunner thanks to a quick start in which he rushed for 1,233 yards and 11 touchdowns in six games. He was slowed by injuries, removing himself from losses against Tennessee and Florida with leg problems. But he finished the season in style with a 142-yard game against Alabama despite playing with broken ribs.

FOR THE year, Jackson ran for 1,786 yards on 278 carries (a 6.4 average) and scored 17 touchdowns.

If he wins, Jackson would be the second player from Auburn to win the Heisman. Quarterback Pat Sullivan took it in 1971, the last time anyone but a running back was honored until Flutie last year.

John W. Heisman, for whom the trophy is named, once coached at Auburn. Jackson went there partly because of a strong tradition at his position — he was preceded by William Andrews, James Brooks, Joe Cribbs and Lionel James.

"It is a great honor to be put in the line of those backs," Jackson said, "but I'm not trying to follow in their footsteps. I'm an independent person. I set my own goals."

IF JACKSON doesn't win, the only other running backs considered to have a chance are Lorenzo White of Michigan State and Thurman Thomas of Oklahoma State. White was the nation's leading rusher with 1,908 yards but is only a sophomore. Thomas was fourth in rushing, behind Jackson and Paul Palmer of Temple.

White and Jackson each had 17 touchdowns and 102 points, second in the nation.

The leading quarterback contenders are Chuck Long of Iowa, Robbie Bosco of Brigham Young and Vinnie Testaverde of Miami, Fla.

Long led the third-ranked Hawkeyes to the Big Ten title and a Rose Bowl berth. He completed 231 of 351 passes for 2,978 yards and 26 touchdowns, placing him third nationally in the NCAA's complex passing efficiency ratings.

TESTAVERDE AND Bosco were sixth and seventh in the ratings, respectively. Bosco threw for 28 touchdowns, seven more than Testaverde, but Testaverde has guided the Hurricanes to No. 2 in the rankings.

Long, who could have turned pro after the 1984 season but chose to return for his final year of eligibility, is the favorite among the quarterbacks. Coach Hayden Fry predicted before Long had ever played at the school that he was "destined for greatness."

"When he started saying things like that, I thought 'Oh, no, I've got a lot to live up to,' " Long recalled. "But I put a lot of time and a lot of work into it and it paid off."

Will it pay off in a Heisman?

Curry, McCrory to unify title

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Milton McCrory and Don Curry will get a chance tonight to step out of the shadows cast by the likes of Sugar Ray Leonard, Thomas Hearns and Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

McCrory and Curry, both unbeaten, will meet in a scheduled 12-round match for the undisputed welterweight championship.

"This definitely is the door opening ... the beginning of my career," said Curry, who is recognized as welterweight champion by the World Boxing Association and the International Boxing Federation.

"This fight is definitely for recognition," said McCrory, the World Boxing Association welterweight champion who fights out of the Kronk Gym in Detroit where Hearns has long been the star.

"EVERYBODY AT Kronk is overshadowed by Tommy," McCrory said.

But McCrory can achieve something Friday night that Hearns has twice failed to do — become an undisputed champion. The only one in boxing now is middleweight Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

Hagler's star rose dramatically when he knocked out Hearns, the WBC super welterweight champion, in the third round here last April 15.

The winner Friday night will succeed the flamboyant Leonard as the undisputed 147-pound-class champion. Leonard gained the undisputed title when he stopped Hearns in the 14th round here in 1981.

Hearns, here to watch the scheduled 12-round fight at the 9,000-seat indoor Hilton Center, would not predict a McCrory victory, but did say, "I don't see it going past four or five rounds."

The professional oddsmakers have established Curry as a solid favorite. "I think Curry has fought tougher fighters," one oddsmaker said.

WHEN THE odds favoring Curry reached 4-1 by midweek, McCrory said, "I think being a 4-1 underdog is a putdown to me."

The odds dropped to 3-1 Thursday afternoon.

The 23-year-old McCrory has a 27-0-1 record with 22 knockouts. Curry, 24, of Fort Worth, is 23-0, with 18 knockouts.

While the winner hopes to receive his due as a top fighter by equaling Leonard's achievement, neither fighter expects to gain the celebrity status of Leonard, who will be a commentator for the HBO telecast of the fight (9:30 p.m. PDT).

BOTH MCCRORY and Curry are quiet almost to the point of being withdrawn, but each talks easily and frankly with reporters.

While both are seeking recognition as fighters, both admit that they turned pro reluctantly.

"I don't have a deep passion for boxing," McCrory said. "I do it because I'm good at it and I'd be a fool to quit.

"In the summers I used to quit boxing and play baseball," said the former outfielder who took up amateur boxing in 1974.

He stuck with it because "I like the trips, flying and things like that. ... I wanted to be a pro baseball player," said McCrory, who became a professional fighter in 1980 after winning a world junior amateur title.

"I was more interested in football, baseball and track," said Curry, who found time to have more than 400 amateur bouts after taking up boxing at age 8.

IN 1980, after winning the welterweight title at the U.S. Olympic Trials, Curry turned pro, following in the footsteps of older brother Bruce, a former WBC superlightweight champion.

"I never thought I wanted to turn pro," Curry said. "Looking at my brother's career, I didn't want any part of the game. It's a cutthroat game.

"I wanted to go to college, but I guess boxing is in my blood."

Both McCrory and Curry became champions in 1983, but it took McCrory two tries.

The 6-foot-1 Detroit fighter fought a 12-round draw with Colin Jones of Wales in a match for the vacant WBC title March 19 at Reno, Nev. He then won the title on a 12-round split decision over Jones here Aug. 13, 1983, and has defended it four times.

Curry got off the floor to win the vacant WBA title on a 15-round decision over Jun Sok Hwang of Korea Feb. 13 at Fort Worth. He later was recognized as champion by the IBF.

In Curry's fifth, and last, defense he stopped Jones on cuts in the fourth round last Jan. 9.

Broncos, snowballs await Raiders

By MARK HEISLER
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Denver, the jewel of the Rockies and home of the Broncos, eagerly awaits the arrival of the Raiders for the settling of one division race and many old scores.

The Raiders have a lot of legitimate things to worry about: John Elway, Steve Watson, Karl Mecklenburg, Rulon Jones.

But every other question they're getting is about ... snowballs?

The Broncos don't throw snowballs. Their fans have fired one or two, though.

"When you were in the locker room, the people used to try to nail you coming in," Coach Tom Flores said last week. "That's why they put that big fence there. When I was still playing, you never took your helmet off.

Howie Long said: "I've been hit by water, soda; I've been spit at. I like being on the field. It's a lot less dangerous."

THE SNOWBALLS, at least, were considered harmless fun until one fell to earth near the San Francisco 49ers' Matt Cavanaugh during the Nov. 11 Monday night telecast and seemed to have something to do with his fumbling a snap from center. That cost his team a 19-yard field goal in a game it lost, 17-16.

In Denver, which is hypersensitive about its image, the affair was received variously:

—Civic embarrassment. Denver talk shows considered nothing else for a week.

The Tank McNamara comic strip did snowball jokes for a week.

Said President Rex Jennings of the Denver Chamber of Commerce: "It was unfortunate it happened. We have a high class of Bronco fan. We have a high class of season ticketholder. We don't want the image of Bronco fans as thugs and rednecks. It was a result of someone's enthusiasm. Sometimes a practical joke backfires."

49ER GUARD Randy Cross: "I hope Peter Ueberroth was watching the game. It's a good indication of why a high-class joint like this doesn't deserve a baseball team."

A San Francisco newspaper offered $500 for information leading to the identification of the launcher, and later said it found him. The paper said it was withholding his identity at his request, since he was properly contrite, and afraid that he was going to cost his parents their season tickets.

—What snowball?

Bronco Coach Dan Reeves: "I don't think it affected (Cavanaugh). I was looking right at it and never saw the snowball. I don't think (referee) Jim Tunney saw the snowball. I don't think that Cavanaugh thought it affected him because if he did, he'd still be standing there arguing with the official right now ..... It hit kind of behind him and about nine feet from him. It splattered. It looks a lot worse when you're shooting it from up high and look at it against that grass.

"I THINK if you shot me with a 30.06 when I was a holder — you've still got to catch that football."

—A new motif. The old Orange Crush label was getting a little tired, even if the soft-drink company just signed a formal deal with the Broncos. Now, there is a booming market in T-shirts bearing a picture of a snowball and one of two legends: "I threw the snowball," or "I didn't throw the snowball."

—A joke. The San Diego Chargers who were due into Denver next, enlivened their practices by tossing rolled-up socks at kicker Bob Thomas while he was practicing field goals. Thomas subsequently had two successive tries blocked in overtime, although the culprit was Bronco safety Dennis Smith, not some fan with a good arm.

Bosox in market for Seaver

BOSTON (AP) — A deal is reportedly in the works to bring veteran right-handed pitcher Tom Seaver to the Boston Red Sox from the Chicago White Sox.

"We have something we can do with the Red Sox," Ken Harrelson of the White Sox told The Boston Globe.

And Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman told The Boston Herald, "I would not say the Seaver deal was dead."

The two American League baseball teams had been working together to strike a deal earlier.

Harrelson told the Globe he has "something on the table" in the way of a deal that would send Seaver to Boston.

His plan would involve six players, including Al Nipper, Mark Clear and Jackie Gutierrez of Boston and outfielder Rudy Law and a minor league player from Chicago, the Globe reported.

Gorman declined to discuss details of any proposed deal, but said the idea of a trade that would bring Seaver to Boston was still alive.

"I've got to figure out a way to do it," he told the Herald.

The White Sox had offered Seaver to Boston the day after the Red Sox made the trade that brought Calvin Schiraldi and Wes Gardner over from the New York Mets. But the deal fell through when Chicago wanted one of Boston's young pitchers.

Gutekunst becomes head Gopher; Ross stays a Terp

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — John Gutekunst was asked how it felt being Minnesota's second choice as coach of the university's football team.

Before Gutekunst could answer, Minnesota President Kenneth Keller, displaying the quickness of Night Train Lane and hard-hitting style of Jack Tatum, intercepted the question.

"I can say I only made one offer," Keller said Thursday, when Gutekunst, for two years the Gophers' defensive coordinator, became Minnesota's 22nd head coach. "We did find we had the person right here at the University of Minnesota."

Maryland Coach Bobby Ross had reportedly been offered the job. However, Minnesota officials said all along that Ross had only been offered a chance to be considered seriously for the post.

When Ross elected to stay at Maryland earlier Thursday, it marked the second time he had effectively rejected Minnesota. The last time was in 1983, before the Gophers hired Gutekunst's predecessor, Lou Holtz, who left Minnesota last week to replace Gerry Faust at Notre Dame.

"We are here today beginning a new era in Gopher football," Keller said at a news conference introducing Gutekunst. "It couldn't have been a better thing for Minnesota."

Gutekunst, 41, immediately established himself as Holtz's punning equal, saying he wished that Keller could offer the kind of interference he displayed at the news conference when the Gophers play Clemson in their Dec. 21 Independence Bowl game at Shreveport, La.

However, he also said: "I am not Lou Holtz. I am John Gutekunst. I'll be the leader, I'm going to do it with my own personality."

Gutekunst, who signed a four-year contract at $85,000 a year, not including television and radio income, said he was "fantastically excited and tremendously pleased."

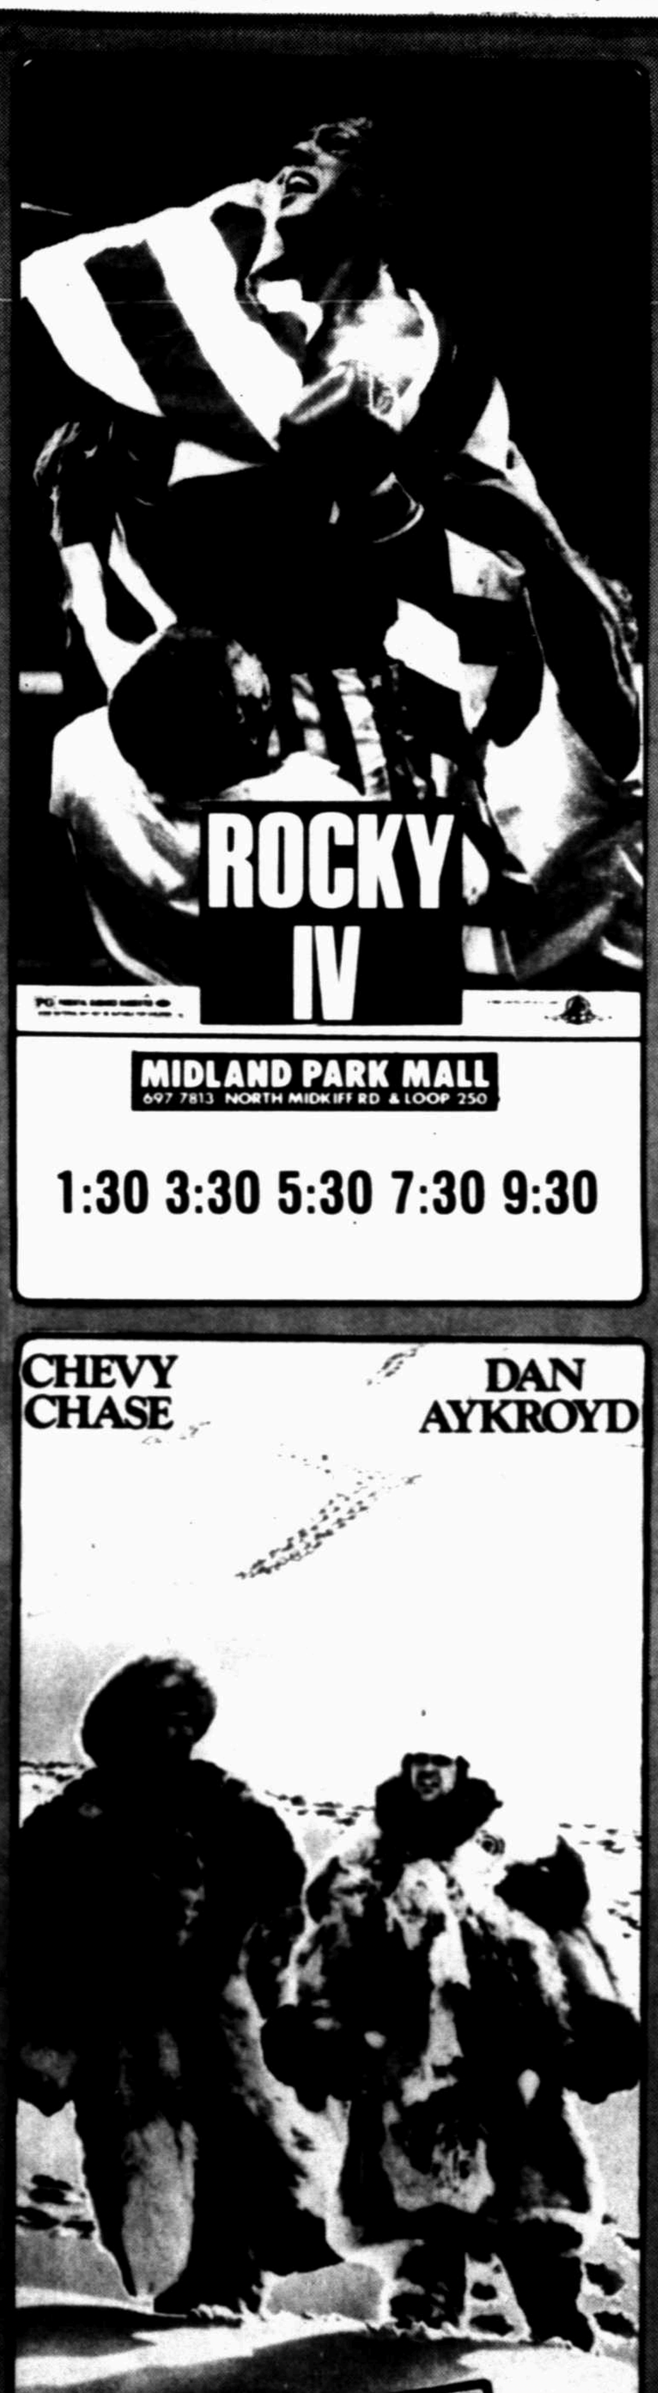

"We know we can be competitive for the Big Ten championship and, hopefully, the national championship," said Gutekunst, who served as defensive coordinator for Virginia Tech from 1979-83 before joining Holtz, who had come to Minnesota from Arkansas.

He placed a premium on getting Minnesota's recruiting process in high gear and on preparing the Gophers for their bowl game.

Keller said the university's three-member search committee "conducted a national search of great scope" that included 55 applicants, 44 of whom the school considered to meet the requirements for the job.

He said there were six candidates seriously considered and there was "substantial conversation with three individuals." But Keller would not elaborate on anyone besides Gutekunst and Ross.

Gutekunst was born in Sellersville, Pa., and attended Pennridge High School in Perkasie, Pa., where he was a standout in football and baseball. He went to Duke University, graduating in 1966 with a bachelor of arts degree in religion. He was also a captain in both football and baseball at the Durham, N.C. school.

'Pheasant Farmer' gets visit from curious Texans

OUTDOORS

An AP Sports Analysis

EDITOR'S NOTE: "The Freeman File" was with a group of Texans called the "Technimed Pheasant Shooting Association" that wandered into Kansas to meet a man called "The Pheasant Farmer" and experience wondrous wingshooting on opening day of the ringneck season Nov. 9.

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

LIBERAL, Kansas — Stan Boles looked at the 100 dead cock pheasants assembled in neat rows in his front yard and snapped a picture from a perch on the roof of his house.

"Gentlemen, you have just been on the pheasant hunt of this decade," Boles said. "I've never seen one like this and I'm a fourth generation on this farm."

In only four hours of tramping through just a portion of Boles' 2,000-cres of grain, grass and plum thickets, 25 hunters had bagged their limit of four cock pheasants each on Kansas' 1985 opening day.

It was no accident that pheasants seemed to lurk behind every bush and explode on the wing with their strange startling cackle from almost every row of milo stubble.

Boles had labored hard for this day, farming his pheasants as hard as he had his milo.

HE HAD started by improving his flock of birds, introducing such a hearty and fast-growing breed as Afghanistan pheasants.

"Here's an Afghan cross," he said, plucking a dead bird from one of the assembled rows. "Note the ring doesn't go all the way around the neck like it does on the American birds. The Afghan birds also tend to be a little larger."

Always thinking ahead, Boles had bought the Afghan birds in Wisconsin to improve his flock.

Boles, 46, tilled his 2,000 acres with the pheasants in mind. He let his grassy areas grow for cover. He would cut several strips of maize then leave rows standing for cover.

"If you cut your fields and plow them the birds don't stand a chance against our winters," he said. "One of the reasons I have so many birds (he estimated 4,000 wild pheasants inhabit his farm) is the cover and food we leave on the ground. The birds have to feed and be able to hide from predators.

"ALSO, WE run water out of our irrigation pipes every morning. Pheasants need a lot of water to survive. The water also helps keep them on my place."

Boles has a masters in agricultural economics but he says it doesn't take one to know times are tough for farmers. All you have to do is read the daily bank foreclosure lists in your newspaper.

"You have to diversify if you are going to make it," said Boles. "One way I do it is through my pheasant crop."

Boles has hunters on his place for 10 weekends during the season. At $200 per gun per day, it doesn't take a certified public accountant to figure Boles can make some big bread if he keeps his customers happy.

"Where else can I make money as enjoyably as going on pheasant hunts with a good bunch of guys?" asked the good-natured Boles. "It sure takes some of the worry out of how much milo is going to be a bushel. I know I've got some solid income every November, December and January."

ONE OF Boles' biggest assets is his wife, Sharon, who can whip up the best cakes and hot apple cider north of the Canadian River.

After Boles hauls you on a hay wagon behind a big tractor for several hours from field to field in 17-degree cold you're ready for "the kitchen."

That's an 11 a.m. stop at the Boles' home for warming cider, coffee, hot chocolate and Sharon's sweets. Boles' two daughters also help dispense the goodies.

It's an excellent public relations touch with the lovely Sharon seeing to it that each plate is filled. She also teaches at the nearby junior high and specializes in computers. The Boles' have a computer system in their basement and come up with programs for local businesses.

Always diversifying these Boleses.

THE BOLES' hunt began with a 5 a.m. wakeup call and assembly at a local restaurant for breakfast. The farm is only about three miles or so west of town. In fact, at one point during the hunt you cross "Second Street" to get to one of Boles' fields.

"We had plenty of moisture in the spring which made for good nesting conditions," said Boles. "There are tons of birds."

Boles lectured the hunters like Tom Landry giving the Dallas Cowboys a pregame talk: Guns were to be unloaded on the hay wagon. Keep your barrel pointed high at alll times. It' a $500 fine to shoot hens, which are distinguished by dull plumage and short tail feathers in contrast to the bright feathers of the male.

There is also strategy on a pheasant hunt. The birds are so smart a hunter could walk through a grassy field of 50 and never see one. They can sneak and run on the ground like a fox.

"We'll get a line with hunters 30 to 40 yards apart and walk a field to the end where we'll have blockers setup so the birds don't run out the other side," said Boles. "Just shoot high. We don't want any accidents."

Boles was still miffed about a Texas oil executive who dusted his pilot's britches with bird shot on a hunt last year. A doctor had to pick the shot out of the pilot's bottom before he could fly the group back to Houston.

"THEY WEREN'T invited back," said Boles.

"That's how our group got opening day," said Firewheel golf professional Jerry Andrews of Garland, Texas. "Stan likes us and we moved up the ladder."

The group composed mostly of doctors was put together by Bob Prentiss of Addison, Texas.

It was comforting to know that if you did get winged with some buckshot that such a good doctor as Walter Knight, son of Dallas Cowboys' physician Dr. Marvin Knight, would be on hand.

The birds were holding tight before they called upon their straight-up helicopter escape. Some made it. Many didn't.

The hunt ranged from short grassy areas to hay grazer which was over head-high. Most of the hunters carried 12-gauge shotguns with high velocity 6-and 4-shot. A four-pound pheasant can be tough to bring down.

THE HUNTERS found another hunter in one area. A big coyote loped out and Boles cut it down with his 12 gauge.

Wild pheasants are pampered on Boles' place. None is pen-raised but Boles has what they need to survive and thrive.

You can find him at Route One, Box 151 in Liberal, Kansas if you want to talk pheasants, agricultural economics, or high school football.

Boles has found a way to beat price supports and quit fretting about how much grain the United States is selling abroad.

His calling card calls it "Classic Upland Pheasant Hunting."

It is.

Army's 'bone' hoping for 11 year run over Navy

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jim Young has coached Army's football team to two straight winning seasons and two consecutive bowls. On Saturday, he'll try to make it two straight victories over Navy.

But all this success, Young cautioned, doesn't necessarily herald a long gray line of Army domination, as in the 1920s, '30s and '40s.

"I certainly don't anticipate that, because one year does not exactly equal 11," Young said. "We've got a long ways to go in that regard."

The 11 years he referred was the period from 1973 through 1983, when Army went 1-9-1 against Navy and managed just one winning season. Last season, Young's second, the Cadets' wishbone offense rolled to a convincing 28-11 victory.

THIS SEASON, Army is 8-2, earning a bid to play Illinois Dec. 31 in Atlanta. Navy, meanwhile, has lost seven of 10 games, including five by four points or fewer.

Young, of course, agreed that the record book can be thrown out the window for this game, but he'd probably prefer to run it out the door. The Cadets have run the ball 647 times this year and passed it only 71 times.

It is roughly the same offense that put together three 16-play drives last year against Navy, the kind of time-consuming marches that can demoralize a defense.

"They come up with those third-and-two's, those fourth-and-one's. It makes it tough," said Navy Coach Gary Tranquill, who knows how tough tough can be. His third straight losing season has prompted published reports that he would resign if the Middies lost to Army. He denied those reports Wednesday.

"I HAVE never mentioned nor have I ever contemplated resigning, nor will I ever," he said.

Young said the sellout crowd should not expect any more 16-play drives. He said his offense doesn't dawdle.

"It's the same offense, but we've been able to get bigger plays, so we're averaging more points per game (35.8)," he said. "We're not as powerful, because we're not as big on the offensive line this year. It's not quite as powerful, but we've gotten bigger plays."

Providing many of the big plays is quarterback Rob Healy, who has a 51-yard run and a 65-yard pass to Scott Spellmon this year. Healy has gained 522 yards while alternating with quick sophomore Tory Crawford, who has gained 628 yards. Young will start Healy, a senior, on Saturday.

LEADING THE trio of backs in the wishbone option is fullback Doug Black, who jumped from West Point's intramural program to the varsity last year and leads the team with 886 yards. He hasn't lost a yard this fall.

Halfbacks William Lampley and Clarence Jones average 5.9 and 6.8 yards per carry, respectively. The wishbone has worked like a dream this year, rolling up 350.8 yards per game.

"It's difficult to defense it, because you don't see it much and it's hard to imitate in practice with your scout teams," said Tranquill, whose squad lost to another wishbone team, Air Force, by 45-7. "When you see it the first two or three plays Saturday afternoon, it's a little overwhelming."

Trump to build dome in NY

NEW YORK (AP) — Developer Donald Trump will build a domed football stadium in Queens and find a National Football League team to play in it, the state Urban Development Corp. announced.

The arena, to be built in Flushing Meadow next to Shea Stadium and the National Tennis Center, will cost Trump $286 million. The city and state will advance an additional $150 million to acquire and clear the land and build or improve subway and road access to the 70-acre site.

History has place set aside for Steelers' Dungy

By Jerry Magee
Copley News Service

The footballs are tan. The players are black and white. The coaches are white.

Through its 66-year history, the National Football League never has had a black head coach, which can serve as an introduction to Tony Dungy. One day, precisely when is uncertain, an NFL team will appoint a black coach, and there has been speculation that his name will be Dungy.

At the age of 30, Dungy is the defensive coordinator of the Pittsburgh Steelers. He is the youngest coordinator, offensive or defensive, in the NFL, a bright, involved young man who is willing to wait for what many football people consider his destiny.

"I THINK it will happen some time down the road," he said of becoming a head coach on the professional level, "but I'm not sure when, and I'm not really in a hurry. I work for a good organization. I work for a great head coach. I have a good job right now. If I didn't, maybe I would be a little more antsy. But right now, the situation is a very good one for me, so there is no need to rush into anything."

Change, though, is something with which Dungy can be comfortable. He has taken what last season was a crowding, gambling, reckless Pittsburgh defense and given it a new personality. The defense that the Steelers have presented this season has become an orthodox thing, stodgy in comparison to what it once was. Three guys rush the passer, eight pursue coverages.

LIKE PITTSBURGH'S head coach, Chuck Noll, Dungy values consistency. A year ago, while the Steelers were showy on defense — they finished with 47 sacks — they too frequently surrendered the big play. This season, rival passers have completed 59.3 percent of their spirals against Pittsburgh, but Dungy's defense has yielded the fewest passing yards in the league, 2,203.

Pittsburgh's current sacks leader, defensive end Keith Willis, has only 5½ — and he hasn't had a sack in five games. In 1984, linebacker Mike Merriweather finished with 15 sacks; now he has four — and none in the last nine weeks.

Convincing his defenders that they should alter their approach could not have been easy for Dungy. "Yeah, it was a little bit tough," he said. "They still, I think, would rather play aggressively and go after people, and we still try to mix that in at times. But we don't live and die with it, as maybe we did last year."

Dungy said he began considering coaching as a career when he was growing up in Jackson, Mich. "I've always wanted to be some kind of a coach," he said. "I thought maybe I'd be a basketball coach."

IN COLLEGE at Minnesota, Dungy was a quarterback who is remembered there for his exemplary work habits. In 1977, the Steelers signed him as a free agent defensive back. During breaks between practices, he often studied film in his room, which didn't endear him to his teammates. His projector ruined the reception on the training camp's television, eliminating soap operas as a diversion.

Dungy's athletic ability was only marginal, but, playing as a nickel defender, he led the Steelers in interceptions in 1978 on a team that won the Super Bowl. Cornerback Dwayne Woodruff was drafted by Pittsburgh the next spring, and Dungy was traded to San Francisco. The 49ers traded Dungy to the New York Giants in 1980, and he was released during training camp. That fall, he became a defensive assistant under University of Minnesota coach Joe Salem, then joined Noll's staff the following year. He was a defensive assistant in 1981 and defensive backfield coach in 1982-83 before becoming defensive coordinator in February of 1984.

DUNGY IS younger than several of the Pittsburgh players. Veteran strong safety Donnie Shell was the best man at Dungy's wedding. But he said he never has encountered any animosity because of his youth.

"Most of the guys were pretty good friends of mine, and that made it easier," he said. "We have professionals here, and they want to win; they're not really concerned with who is coaching them. If you can help them win, that's all they're concerned with."

West Texas Sports

Soccer

The Midland Raptors soccer team will represent West Texas for the second year in a row in the Texas Tournament of Champions at Dallas Saturday and Sunday.

The team leaves Midland Friday for the 16-and-under age bracket competition.

Hendrickson has big night for MC

From Staff Reports

Lucas Hendrickson had a performance against Tuesday night he won't soon forget — neither will Grandfalls.

The 6-3 senior grabbed 16 rebounds and poured in 23 points to lead the Midland Christian Mustangs to a 53-32 win over Grandfalls. Hendrickson also blocked 13 shots to help scare Grandfalls out of the middle.

Senior Danny Sartain scored 10 points and sophomore Tony Corona added 11 for the Mustangs. The MC junior varsity also was victorious, edging Grandfalls 26-25.

The Midland Christian girls team was a 28-26 loser in overtime to Grandfalls. Kristi Grady led MC with 13 points.

The Mustangs are playing in the Anton Tournament through Saturday.

Boys

Rader inks with Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa says former Texas Rangers manager Doug Rader has been named third-base coach of the Chicago team.

Rader, 41, was fired last May after managing the Rangers since 1983. He replaced Jim Leyland, who was hired as the new manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the White Sox said Wednesday.

Rader, who played 10 years in the major leagues, had a 155-200 record in his 2½ seasons with the Rangers. He is known to White Sox fans for coining the expression "winning ugly" to describe the 1983 White Sox team that won the American League West title.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar edged forward on foreign exchange markets early today in thin trading. Gold bullion prices were steady.

A few hours after European markets opened, the dollar was being quoted at slightly higher levels against all major currencies.

Traders said that the market was dominated by year-end position adjustments by investors, and that the dollar was fluctuating within a narrow range.

They said another wave of dollar-buying by corporate customers trying to balance books by the end of the year could give the dollar a firmer tone later in the session, as it did Thursday.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with rates in Europe late Thursday:

—2.525 West German marks, up from 2.5235.

—2.1035 Swiss francs, up from 2.0985.

—7.703 French francs, up from 7.70.

—2.8423 Dutch guilders, up from 2.838.

—1,724 Italian lire, up from 1,722.50.

—1.3953 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3935.

The British pound fell to $1.476 from $1.43.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 202.97 Japanese yen, up from 202.93 yen. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 203.45 yen.

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $322.50 a troy ounce, unchanged from late Thursday.

In Zurich, the metal also was bid at $322.50, down 50 cents.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose 2 cents to a closing bid of $324.18.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at $6.07 an ounce, down 1.

Bid Resource Center opening announced

From Staff Reports

After three months of concerted efforts by representatives of both Odessa and Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Private Industry Council of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and the City of Midland today announced the incorporation of the Permian Basin Bid Center, the first satellite of the National Bid Resource Center in the country.

It will be directly linked to the National Bid Resource Center in Beaumont, Texas, and will be able to draw on its expertise, computer center and vast electronic library.

The main purpose of the Center will be to develop economic vitality for the existing businesses in the 17-county Permian Basin region by increasing jobs, profits and business diversity.

The primary function of the Center will be to help businesses tap into the world's largest market for goods and services, which is the $167 million in U.S. government contracts being awarded this fiscal year. This will be accomplished by simplifying the complex bid process by having the Bid Center profile the local businesses, matching their goods and services with available government contracts, and assisting in completion of the forms required for the bids.

First year operations for the Center will be funded by both Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce, the PIC, and the City of Midland. The goal of the center is to be self-sustaining within three years, by charging a slight fee for successful bids only. All proceeds over and above operating expenses will be plowed back into community economic development programs. The Permian Basin Bid Center will be staffed by a director/consultant and secretary-receptionist to be trained at the National Bid Resource Center in Beaumont. These people will be named next week.

The Center will be located in the Grand Slam Complex on LaForce Boulevard at Air Terminal, and operations will begin on Jan. 2, 1986. The 11-member board of directors which will oversee operations include acting chairman Hank Henry of Midland; Joe Kloesel, business consultant; Jim Brown with the City of Midland; Ron Schwisow with Teraco, Inc., Midland; Roy Allen, with Murphy & Rochester of Odessa; Bill Griffin, TESCO; Don Williams, Western Tank Co.; Gary Haner, West Texas Consultants; Dave Cox, of National Furniture Exchange; John L. Foster, KMID-TV; and Larry Briley, Motion Equipment, Inc.

Assistant Consulstants are Joel V. Locke, Locke & Shafer law firm; Steve White and Al Hale, Main-Hurdman; Steve Hardin, Midland Chamber of Commerce; and Chuck Bernhard, Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

The idea for the Center was brought to the Permian Basin by Jim Flowers, current executive vice president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, who recently relocated from the Beaumont Chamber of Commerce.

The Beaumont Bid Center has been in operation for just over two years, and in 1985 produced contracts of $25 million spread over 105 contracts ranging from cleaning services to jet engine parts. These contracts accounted for 250 new jobs and the retention of another 140 jobs in the Beaumont area. "The potential for the Permian Basin region is tremendous," said Steve Hardin, Midland Chamber of Commerce. "It has been extremely gratifying to see businessmen from two communities working together for the betterment of the area."

Selling wigs is serious business for Twila Lyles who sells chemotherapy wigs and hairpieces. She says the wigs, hairpieces give people a sense of confidence, which carries over in their business and hobbies.

Midland entrepreneur selling chemotherapy wigs, confidence

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business Oil Writer

ENTREPRENEUR

Wigs do more than just cover bald spots. Twila Lyles uses them in her business to help people adjust to the crisis of a disease which is often fatal and always painful.

Lyles, of Lubbock, has opened Twila's Hair Ways, a New Man-Any d'Avray wigs franchise, in Midland at Images, located at 1601 N. Big Spring. She sells hairpieces as well as wigs for chemotherapy patients.

"It's tragic enough to have cancer, anyway, but to lose all your hair in a week makes the shock even greater. I just thought there was something I could do for these people," she said.

Lyles plans to work with Midland cancer specialists in order to prepare people undergoing chemotherapy for the treatment's side effects, and to explain what she can do for them. She has worked with doctors in Lubbock, where she has another franchise, and the patients say it has been very helpful.

"If I can make a wig for someone undergoing treatment before the treatment starts, then they do not have to be seen without their hair. Then nobody will know they have lost their hair and it will give them a more positive attitude," she said.

Chemotherapy wigs are light weight and are designed to match a person's hairstyle and color exactly as it is before they start therapy, she said. Most other wigs are for fashion and many cannot match a person's hairstyle.

But the greatest difference is in the service. "Buying a regular wig, there's no privacy. You take it home and take your chances." Lyles offers private consultations and can service or change the wig if needed.

The price of the chemotherapy wigs are $125, while wig shops charge $300 to $400 for a custom-made wig. "Any d'Avray had to place the wig where people who just wanted to wear a wig could buy one. This makes the company more versatile," she said.

Lyles became interested in chemotherapy wigs and hair replacement when her husband started going bald several years ago. She worked for a hair replacement company in Lubbock for two years before buying a New Man-Any d'Avray wigs franchise in Lubbock.

She decided to open a Midland franchise when she had about 20 Midland customers that would travel to Lubbock to have their hairpieces and wigs serviced. Her customers still call her in Lubbock to set up appointments and she travels to Midland every other Monday.

"My dream is to have someone based here full-time. I've already had lots of calls since we opened here. People are real pleased with my products. I might be able to," she said.

"The hair industry has come a long way from the cheap-type toupee and heavy wigs. Now they can be put on where they won't pucker up or fall off or they can be put on permanently. They can be worn swimming or in the shower."

There are four ways to apply the wigs. They are clips, cable, or weaving the hairpiece on with a person's original hair, tape, or a sticky substance on the underside of the hairpiece, or permanent extended wear, which seals the hairpiece to the scalp. The permanent seal is the same type of seal used to graft skin on burn victims.

The hairpieces come in three units, allowing for varied amounts of hair. "Some people get the unit with the least amount of hair and wear it for a couple of months and then get the next one and then the next one. This gradually adds more hair and looks like the person is undergoing transplants or chemically growing hair," she said.

"There are all types of ways to have hair today, while at one time, if you went bald, that was it. Hair is a very personal thing. It's important to us to feel that we look good so that we can perform in our jobs or hobbies or anything well."

Texaco tells court it's fighting for its life

New York Times News Service

HOUSTON — Freshly armed with nationally known legal talent, Texaco Inc. pleaded for its life Thursday before a Texas state judge who must decide whether to uphold a $10.53 billion jury award against the company.

Gibson Gayle, a lawyer with Fulbright & Jaworski, a Houston law firm, said on behalf of Texaco that that the judgment would "threaten the very existence of a major United States corporation."

He characterized the company's prospect of posting a $12 billion bond as "an enormous economic threat" hanging over Texaco, its 55,000 employees and more than 300,000 shareholders.

But Joseph D. Jamail, the lead lawyer for the Pennzoil Company, which brought the suit accusing Texaco of wresting Getty Oil from its grasp, said that Texaco, by asking for a drastic reduction in the potential damages, was essentially saying that "if you steal big enough or get hurt big enough, corporate America, don't worry; you won't have to pay."

Judge Solomon Casseb, after listening to more than six and a half hours of arguments, recessed the hearing until Friday morning. At that time, the arguments will resume, and the judge indicated he would then question the lawyers for both sides. A ruling Friday is considered a good possibility.

A jury ruled on Nov. 19 that in January 1984, Texaco induced the Getty Oil Co. to walk away from an agreement in principle to merge with Pennzoil — with Pennzoil paying $3.5 billion for 40 percent of Getty's stock — and accept, instead, a $10.1 billion takeover offer from Texaco. Pennzoil was awarded actual damages of $7.53 billion, plus $3 billion in punitive damages.

Casseb must decide whether to uphold the jury's decision, reverse or reduce the $10.53 billion award, the largest in the history of U.S. civil justice.

Unless Casseb removes the requirement, Texaco would have to provide $12 billion in collateral to insurers in return for a bond of that amount. Texas law requires defendants appealing damage judgments to post bonds equal to their potential liability. The appeal process in this case could take as long as two years.

Texaco has said that it may have to consider filing for bankruptcy protection if it is forced to post the bond. That, and the prospect of two oil titans battling it out in court, has put the case firmly in the spotlight.

David Boies, representing Texaco, argued that Pennzoil had not proved the existence of a binding contract between Pennzoil and Getty before Texaco made its offer. "Whether it was a business obligation or a moral obligation does not matter," he said.

U.S. ends feud, lifts ban on European steel imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will lift its ban on steel imports from the European Community, ending a week-old feud that began when Britain objected to a new trade pact, American officials said.

Meanwhile, executives of five leading steel companies urged President Reagan on Thursday to expand his program of negotiating steel import agreements with other countries. The business leaders said Canada and other steel-exporting nations must be included if U.S. firms are to get adequate relief from foreign competition.

The ban on steel from the 10-nation EC, also known as the Common Market, was ended after U.S. officials learned Britain would go along with the other EC members on an import pact that extends through September 1989.

The agreement, reached Nov. 1, had been hailed by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter as a major step in Reagan's five-year program to help revitalize the domestic steel industry.

The pact bars the EC from capturing more than 5.5 percent of the U.S. steel market. According to its own figures, the EC held 7.3 percent of the market through the first nine months of 1985.

But the accord was placed on hold last week because Britain objected. According to European officials, the reservation centered on the nation's requesting assurances that it could ship about 300,000 tons of steel to an American plant in which it has an interest.

The United States responded by halting most Common Market steel imports until the matter was resolved.

After what Yeutter described as "compromises on both sides," Britain finally expressed satisfaction with the accord, and the United States said Thursday it would begin informing Customs Service officials that the ban should be ended. Details of the compromise were not provided.

The British decision "will take away any problems we have with the agreement," Yeutter said on a television program sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency. "It can go into full force and effect and certainly we'll now be able to withdraw those restrictions."

Jobless rate matches record low since 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate fell one-tenth of a percentage point to 7 percent in November, the Labor Department reported today, matching the record low rate of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

Payroll employment rose 180,000 in November, and the U.S. economy has now created 10 million new jobs in the three years of recovery since the depths of the last recession.

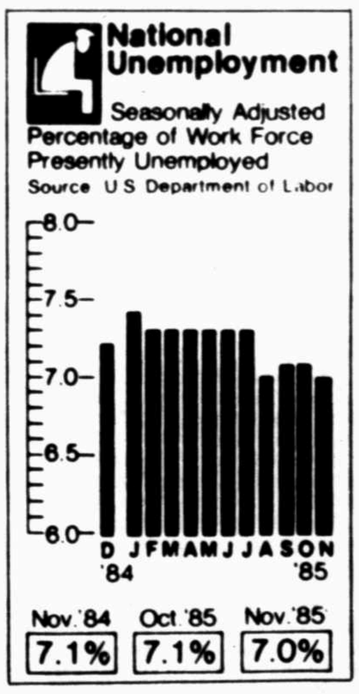

Manufacturing employment, considered by analysts to be one of the keys to continued economic growth, rose by 30,000 in November. It was only the third increase in factory job growth in the past 11 months.

Unemployment fell by 151,000 people as the total number of jobless in the United States fell to just over 8.1 million in November, the department said.

The 7 percent figure matches the rate reached in August of this year. Unemployment in October was 7.1 percent.

Most economists estimate that companies will have added about 200,000 workers to their payrolls in November, a level likely to just keep pace with the number of people entering the labor force and looking for jobs.

The nation's foreign trade deficit hit a record $15.5 billion in September, and lingering trade problems are expected to cause continuing trouble in the manufacturing sector.

Factory job losses so far this year total 300,000, and the manufacturing sector has regained little more than half the 2.3 million jobs it lost in the 1981-82 recession.

Refinery fire called worst in 20 years

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Two people were killed and 45 injured in an explosion and fire at an oil refinery that Los Angeles County fire officials said was the worst refinery accident in the area in at least 20 years.

Flames shot 500 feet into the sky after the blast Thursday at the Atlantic Richfield Co. refinery about 15 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

"Pipes were exploding and feeding the fire," said Fire Capt. John Maleta.

Fire Capt. Gordon Pearson said temperatures reached about 5,000 degrees.

"I saw a couple guys still standing up. Their clothes burned right off their bodies. They were still standing and then they hit the ground," said Kevin Murdock, a construction worker who was installing machinery at the refinery.

The blast occurred in a "reformer unit" where the octane of gasoline is boosted, said Arco spokesman Scott Loll.

Arco, which employs 1,100 workers at the refinery, said it was analyzing records of temperatures and pressures of the damaged unit in an attempt to determine the cause of the explosions.

Water and foam is sprayed on Atlantic Richfield oil refinery in Carson, Calif. Wednesday morning. Two people were killed in the explosion and 45 were injured.

NARO voices opposition to tax reform proposals

ADA, Okla. (SWN) — Two new tax reform proposals advocated by the U.S. House of Representatives are being opposed by members of the National Association of Royalty Owners, Inc.

However, NARO officials admit the two new plans are the first of four tax reform packages that would provide the nation's 2.5 million owners of oil and gas royalty interests some relief from proposals to totally repeal percentage depletion at their expense.

"The depletion allowance under the latest tax proposal from the Ways and Means Committee would retain the allowance only for marginal stripper production of oil and gas," said Jim Stafford of Ada, Oklahoma, executive director of NARO, today. "However, it would kill that time-honored allowance for lease bonuses and all healthier forms of production."

A proposal announced today, however, as a possible Republican alternative, would not only retain stripper production depletion intact for royalty owners, but also phase down other categories of production to five percent by 1987, and thereafter, according to Stafford, which is a slightly better break for royalty owners.

"We consider the most recent packages somewhat of a bargaining breakthrough, but in no way do we support them, although we have high praise for those Congressmen who worked with our Washington representatives to count us in on these recent exemptions," Stafford said.

Stafford said a bulk of news reports from Washington had indicated royalty owners would retain percentage depletion on all production, "which has lead to wholesale confusion.

"Neither the earlier White House tax plan nor the first version from the House Ways and Means Committee provided any relief for royalty owners–which would drain billions of dollars from the rural areas of our nation," he said. "This is a devastating attack on the royalty owner, who was stunned with the highest tax in history, the windfall profits tax, only five years ago."

Senator: ' Days of Oil and roses gone for good'

SHREVEPORT, La.(AP) — Once people realize that they — not the oil companies — must pay to run the state, they're going to demand honesty rather than entertainment from their politicians, says U.S. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston.

"The days of the embarrassment of riches, where the oil companies paid the bill while politicans had the fun, are gone," Johnston said.

"I'm not talking about the governor's office; I'm not talking about the superintendent of education. I'm talking about from the police jury right on up to the highest office in the land."

Louisiana's failing economy and budget crisis will force voters to change the way they assess politicians, Johnston, D-La., said Wednesday.

Johnston said that as lawmakers grapple with the state's projected budget deficit of $200 million during the next several months, the news from Baton Rouge will be of tax increases, spending cuts or both.

"Believe me, you get the attention of people when that happens," Johnston said. "They, therefore, are going to look at politicians in fundamentally different ways.

"They're not going to look for entertainment any longer. They're going to look for action tough, honest, hard-working politicians. And they're going to measure political conduct by that."

The Democratic lawmaker said Louisiana will survive the furor whipped up by Gov. Edwin Edwards' federal racketeering trial. Despite the fact that former Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton was convicted in 1981, Johnston said Tennessee is the "envy of the South" with its plans for new automobile plants there.

Retail chains hope holiday sales make up for slow November sales

Associated Press

The nation's big retail chains are hoping a good Christmas season will make up for slower-than-expected sales in November.

The top two retailers, Sears, Roebuck & Co. and K mart Corp., said Thursday their sales were down in November in comparison to a year earlier. The other big chains reported somewhat better results.

Some consumers, especially in low- and lower-middle income families, may have cut back on spending because of heavy debt, said Jeffrey Feiner, a retail analyst with the investment firm Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed briefly above the 1,500 mark for the first time, then slid and ended the day down 1.49 at 1,482.91.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange was the fourth highest on record, 181.01 million shares. Gainers outnumbered losers just slightly on the Big Board. Trading in the over-the-counter market swelled to a record.

The stock market had chalked up hefty gains a day earlier, with the Dow Jones industrials and an array of other trading barometers surging to record levels.

Investors flocked to the market again Thursday and professional buying programs were set in motion. But the sellers came, too, and seized the opportunity to take profits.

In other economic news, the Federal Reserve Board said the nation's basic money supply rose $4.4 billion in late November. That exceeded expectations, but analysts attributed it in part to technical factors.

The Fed said the measure of money readily available for spending, known as M1, increased to a seasonally adjusted $621 billion in the week ended Nov. 25 from $616.6 billion the previous week.

Occidental to sell Southland Corp. stock

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. officials say they intend to sell their 20 percent stake in Dallas-based Southland Corp., the world's largest convenience-store operator, in a deal valued at about $394 million.

Occidental said Thursday it was selling the Southland stock as part of Occidental's efforts to concentrate on its core businesses of oil and gas exploration, chemicals, agribusiness and coal.

In a two-tier deal designed to spread out its cash flow over a longer period, Occidental said it will sell warrants later this month to purchase the 9.5 million shares of Southland stock. Those warrants will be exercisable next July for $30 per share.

The combined cost of the warrants and the stock is expected to approximate the market value of Southland shares, Occidental said.

Southland stock closed Thursday at $41.75 per share.

Occidental acquired its stake in Southland in August 1983 when it sold the Dallas company the refining, marketing and transportation operations of Cities Service Co. of Tulsa, Okla.

In that transaction, Southland paid Occidental $575 million and issued the Los Angeles oil concern 9.35 million shares valued at the time at $258 million, or $27.625 per share.

Occidental bought the other 150,000 shares on the open market to keep its stake at 20 percent as the amount of Southland stock outstanding increased.

Current value of the 9.35 million shares, using the $41.50 per share price, would be about $388 million. The value of the 9.5 million shares would be $394 million.

Occidental's chairman and chief executive, Dr. Armand Hammer, said proceeds from the sale will be added to the company's working capital and used for general corporate purposes.

Underwriters for the sale of the warrants are Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., Goldman Sachs & Co. and Lazard Freres & Co.

Southland's business operations consist of convenience stores, food processing and gasoline refining and supply. It operates about 7,500 7-Eleven markets, many of them in conjuction with gasoline stations.

Slump strikes Silicon Valley

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The big, lavish parties of Christmas — Silicon Valley's annual tribute to success and excess — have all but vanished in this year of the big slump.

The theme this season is potluck. Tuna salads. Nachos and guacamole. Holiday songs on tape recorders.

Advanced Micro Devices Inc. of Sunnyvale, a big spender when times were flush, threw a $700,000 wingding last year for 8,000 employees and close friends. The rock group Chicago and six other bands entertained in what company spokesman Andy Rothman wistfully remembers as "a grand affair."

This Christmas, after sales plummeted by $212.6 million, to $278.7 million, in the first six months of the fiscal year, Advanced Micro Devices is spreading the cheer quietly with small office get-togethers.

The computer chip manufacturing company is among the few around the valley that has avoided layoffs, but it cut paychecks 10 percent to 15 percent in July and will shut down for two weeks at the end of the month in a second round of mandatory vacations.

Seeq Technology Inc. of San Jose is not bringing back entertainer Ray Charles this year, although the blues would be appropriate.

Seeq threw a $50,000 bash last Christmas to celebrate a tenfold increase in sales to $43 million from 1983. This year, sales are flat and so is the holiday spirit. Layoffs and attrition have trimmed the company from 700 employees to 400.

"We're not doing a Christmas party like we have in the past," said Seeq spokesman Dan McCranie. "We'll have some potluck office parties. No entertainment. Oh, maybe somebody will bring in a tape recorder."

The market for Seeq's memory devices shriveled along with other electronic products serving the sluggish computer industry this year. Companies trying to control expenses laid off more than 10,000 workers in Silicon Valley.

Industry analysts blamed the slump on a saturation of the home computer market, the cyclical nature of business computer sales, increased competition and a failure to develop more innovative products.

Semiconductor manufacturers were among the hardest hit as they got socked by a huge buildup of inventory from the 1984 boom, lower computer sales and intense competition from Japan. Industry forecasts of as much as a 25 percent boost in sales in 1986 have been greeted by skepticism.

Hewlett-Packard Co. does not have a tradition of throwing big parties, but this year even its more restrained celebrations will be tamer.

"We're toning down our activities," said Gene Endicott, a spokesman for the electronics giant. "We'll have some potluck-type get-togethers on a group by group basis. Based on the business conditions we've been experiencing this year, we're not going to be having any big parties."

Apple Computer Inc. of Cupertino has had another rough year, laying off 1,200 of its 6,000 employees, but the company's fortunes improved somewhat recently after the departure of former chairman Steven Jobs.

TEXACO—

"Under New York law, it must be a written agreement." Both sides agree that New York supersedes Texas law in the case; under Texas law the preliminary agreement might be considered binding.

Boies, a well-known courtroom lawyer with Cravath, Swaine & Moore, a Manhattan law firm, was brought him into the case after the jury award. He represented CBS in the libel suit brought by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, which was settled by the two parties.

Boies argued that the jury had not been properly instructed on how to conclude whether Texaco had "actual knowledge" of Pennzoil's agreement with Getty.

G. Irvin Terrel, one of five lawyers who spoke for Pennzoil during the hearing, argued that the biggest evidence against Texaco in the case was the company's willingness to indemnify all Getty officers and directors against any charges of wrongdoing that they might face in reneging on the Pennzoil agreement in favor of Texaco's offer.

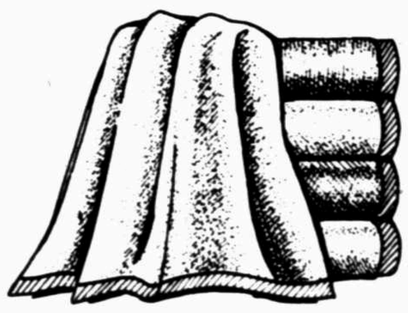

"An oral agreement is enough" in this case, he argued, saying that Alfred DeCrane, Texaco's president, was aware of the agreement.

He said that when Texaco issued the indemnities, it took on the legal responsibility for whatever injuries were committed by Getty officers against Pennzoil.

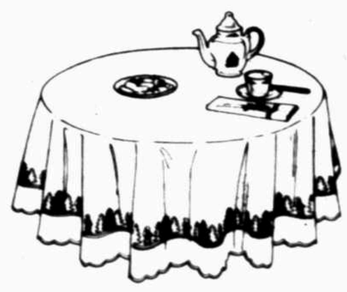

"They ought to have to pay the piper," he said. "And the piper in this case is the jury."

Prosecutors try to discredit woman's story

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Prosecutors put several of Dorothy Sue Inskeep's friends and associates on the stand Tuesday in an attempt to discredit her version of events, but what could have been the most damaging testimony against her was disallowed by Judge Vann Culp on the grounds it would inflame the jury.

The 23-year-old former Midland woman is being tried in 238th District Court for the murder of her husband, Jerry Dale Inskeep, who was found shot to death June 6 in his mobile home southeast of Midland.

Ms. Inskeep admitted shooting her husband in the head at close range with his high-powered rifle, but said she wasn't pointing the weapon at him and doesn't remember pulling the trigger. According to testimony she gave Wednesday, the gun went off when her husband, who was seating in a chair, reached for the barrel.

"I'd been living in intense fear for at least two weeks before that night," said Ms. Inskeep, who claimed her 28-year-old husband of two years had beaten her periodically throughout their relationship. She planned to file for divorce the next day, but feared what her husband would do if he found out.

"He wouldn't even consider it (divorce)," she said. "It was something I had to do on my own."

Defense attorney David Lashford seemed to be preparing a version of the "burning bed" defense, similar to that used in a widely viewed television movie. In the movie, which was based on a real incident, a battered wife sets her husband's bed on fire while he sleeps, then claims self-defense when charged with his murder.

Ms. Inskeep claimed she was "scared to death of the man" at the time of his death. She had gotten off work at Holiday Inn T-Dome, 3904 West Wall, where she was a bartender, had a few drinks, run some errands, and gone home, she said. Her husband wasn't there, and she became frightened and decided to leave that night. Then her husband, an oilfield worker, came home before her brother arrived to pick her up, according to her testimony.

But a Midland man whom Ms. Inskeep had met at the bar where she worked testified she was with him between the time she got off work at 7 p.m. and the time she went home about 10 p.m. Out of the presence of the eight-man, four-woman jury, the man said he and the defendant attempted to have sex in her Suburban four-wheel-drive vehicle before she went home. But Judge Culp disallowed that testimony, saying it would inflame the jury.

Ms. Inskeep portrayed her husband as a man subject to violent rages during which he would beat her, and other defense witnesses said they'd seen her at various times with a black eye or bruises on her throat.

But this interpretation of their relationship was disputed Thursday by prosecution witnesses who said Ms. Inskeep, not her husband, was the dominant spouse.

"She wore the pants," said James Woodall, who was a neighbor of the Inskeeps when they lived in Big Lake.

"I would say Dodie (Ms. Inskeep) was the more dominant of the two, that he more or less catered to her," claimed Pam Inskseep, the wife of Dale Inskeep's brother Joe.

Lashford referred to testimony given Tuesday by a Snyder police detective who once saw Dale Inskeep physically abuse his wife in public.

"Dale would not do something like that — he was too afraid of her," Joe Inskeep said.

Inskeep was variously described as standing about six feet tall and weighing 190-200 pounds. His wife is about five feet nine inches tall and weighs about 135 pounds.

Prosecutors put an Amarillo salesman on the stand who testified Ms. Inskeep had sexual relations with him on two occasions, once several days before her husband's death and once several days after.

"I really don't know how to explain that," said Ms. Inskeep, who claimed to feel remorse over her husband's death.

"He was basically a good person," she said tearfully. "There was just something wrong somewhere with both of us."

Lashford, District Attorney Al Schorre and First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado were expected to deliver their closing arguments this morning, and Culp told the jury he expected the trial to finish today.

Woman to be charged in drug bust

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

A Midland police officer leans against a house at 100 S. Adams where a Midland woman was arrested Thursday for possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver.

From Staff Reports

A 32-year-old Midland woman arrested Thursday was expected to be charged today with possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver, according to police.

The woman, who was being held in city jail, was arrested Thursday afternoon at 100 S. Adams by police detectives executing a search warrant.

Seized were two bottles of tablets, one containing 50 prelude (Phenmetrazine) tablets with a total value of $1,000, and the other containing 30 valium (Diazapam) tablets valued at a total of $300, police said. The drugs had apparently been delivered by express mail.

The woman was arrested as the result of a tip received by narcotics detectives, police said.

In other reports, a $329 John Deere blower was reported stolen by Sutton Place Apartments, according to police. The blower was taken from Apartment 84 Thursday, reports said.

Middle East peace can't be imported, Israeli consul says

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Peace in the Middle East cannot be imported from the outside, not even by the most well-meaning friends, says one Israeli official.

According to Israeli Consul Medad Medina, who spoke Thursday during a meeting of the Midland Rotary Club, "There are no shortcuts and no magic formulas...Clearly, patience is a vital pre-condition to Middle East diplomacy."

The Moroccan-born Medina who, in 1983, was appointed Israeli Consul for the Consulate General to the Southwest in Houston, said Israel is a "country peopled by a mosaic of religious and ethnic communities; a country small in size, but with great geographical diversity; a country with few natural resources, but with a wealth of sophisticated technology; a country of many different opinions, but one basic goal — to live in peace within secure borders alongside its neighbors in the Middle East."

Despite its intentions, Israel has faced the constant threat of war with its Arab neighbors during its 37-year history, Medina said.

In 1967 and 1973, according to Medina, it repelled attacks by Arab states; and in 1956 and 1982, Israel operated in its own defense against Arab terrorists who repeatedly struck at its population centers.

Medina said the conflict between Israel and its Arab neighbors "cannot be solved on the battlefield. It can only be resolved at the negotiating table.

"For years we maintained that dialogue is the only road to peace and that negotiations, however protracted and difficult, must lead to positive results."

Medina criticized Palestinian and Jordanian leaders who have repeatedly "rejected Israel's outstretched hand."

"In the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict, Israel was invariably prepared for compromise. On no issue was the Palestinian-Arab leadership prepared for any form of compromise," he said.

The net result, according to Medina, is that "Israel has invariably succeeded. The Palestinian cause has invariably failed."

Medina emphasized that the Palestinian and Jordanian issue is confined not only to borders, but touches all people in all states.

"Middle East archives are filled with negotiating plans," he said, "but its diplomacy is short of negotiating partners. Thus, this is the hour for decisions and for statesmanship."

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres in November spoke before the United Nations General Assembly and suggested a new initiative which calls for negotiations without preconditions.

Regarding American-Israeli relations, Medina said "These two peoples — Israel and the United States — are dedicated to the ideals which they have developed and to their way of life, and are prepared to defend them at all costs. Both our peoples have paid, and continue to pay, a high price for defending freedom and democracy whenever they have been threatened by tyrants and totalitarian regimes.

"One cannot imagine the U.S. or Israel as anything but democratic societies. In both our countries, democracy is not a passing phase or a convenience, but it is a vital part of our very makeup and substance."

Medina said "We still face many difficulties...We have many shortcomings and know our failings. But as a free, vibrant, multiracial society, we are conscious of a continuous effort to overcome them."

He added, "Our nation has sacrificed too much to be ready now to give up hope. At the same time, our commitment to peace is rooted in our tradition, our faith and our democratic way of life. It cannot be shaken."

Refinancing will save MC $200,000

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midland College expects to save more than $200,000 by refinancing about $4.6 million in general revenue bonds approved by the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees Thursday.

The bonds are being sold at slightly higher interest rates than when they were first issued in 1973 and 1976, said Bob Phillips, vice president of fiscal affairs for the college.

The college expects to make more money from the reissued bonds by investing the collected money in governmental securities at higher interest rates, Phillips said.

The bonds were issued at interest rates around 6.5 percent and will be reissued at new interest rates ranging from 5.7 to 7.6 percent.

The reissued bonds have a AA rating. The highest bond rating is AAA.

"That's about as high a rating as any entity like us would get," explained Phillips.

He said AAA ratings are very scarce and usually go to only large, stable corporations.

The $4.675 million general obligation bonds and $1 million in revenue bonds make up the college district's bond debt.

Rascher Pierce will sell the bonds, and the money collected from the bonds will be held in escrow by the Republic Bank First National Midland.

In other action, John Hendrix was sworn in as a new trustee to make up the nine-member board. Hendrix, an independent oil operator, is replacing Reagan Legg, who resigned in October. Legg said he resigned from his position, which expires in April, because he had been in that elective office too long.

Legg was elected to a Permian Junior College regent position in 1969 and became president of the Board of Trustees when it was formed in 1972.

The trustees also unanimously accepted a proposal to connect Rollick Avenue, north of the college, to Chaparral Circle. Rollick Avenue begins on Garfield and curves into the north side of the college's campus, running through the future neighborhood Silkwood Addition.

The board requested a four-lane connection, but the developers said they could only provide a two-lane connection, because parking is allowed on both sides of the 42-foot-wide street.

The connection will provide the college with a north exit into Garfield Street.

"I view that as a help, but certainly not a solution to our problem," said trustee Kenneth Peeler.

The college has one westside entrance and exit onto Garfield Street. A southside exit on I Street into Wadley was closed in November.

The next Board of Trustees meeting is at 4 p.m. Jan. 21 in the college's administrative board room.

GOP candidate attracts 'shoppers'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

'Tis the season to deck the halls with boughs of holly, be jolly and shop — not for Christmas gifts but for political candidates.

Since early summer some candidates for the 21st Congressional District seat in the Republican primary have been visiting Midland for private "showings" with local citizens.

Thursday night, Jeff Wentworth went on public display during a reception at Midland Country Club and about 300 Midlanders showed up to shop. A few indicated they had decided what they will "buy" when the primary is held in May; most said they were just "looking." A few weeks ago, a different model, Lamar Smith, came out for viewing at a reception hosted by Watson LaForce.

Both Wentworth and Smith are from San Antonio, and the 21st race is expected to draw at least six persons. Also indicating they will enter the race are Van Archer of San Antonio, Henry Gandy of Kerrville and G. Thane Akins of Midland.

One of the buyers extolling his choice was Deane Stoltz, who helped sponsor the reception for Wentworth. "What I really like about him is he's a little feisty," said Stoltz.

The message given by Wentworth, a former Bexar County commissioner, was one of support for President Reagan when issues coincided with what is needed by the district's constituents, but not when the proposals would harm the area.

"I don't support President Reagan on the tax reform proposal. If elected it would be my job to represent Texans," he said.

Elimination of the oil depletion allowance is a mistake, he said, "not just for us as Texans but for us as a country." The national defense arsenal can be built up but without fuel for the tanks and planes, that machinery is going nowhere, according to Wentworth. And passage of the tax reform bill in its current form will discourage production of petroleum.

Farming is another major issue affecting the 21st District, and Wentworth contended he's no stranger to that area. His credentials include his work for a congressman from the Panhandle who served on the House Agriculture Committee. He also said his grandfather was a farmer and Wentworth was conceived on a farm.

Although farmers really would prefer if the federal government got out of their lives, said Wentworth, there is no easy solution to today's agriculture problems.

And, the candidate added, a congressman must work on both sides of the political fence. "You have to get along with Democrats. That's a fact of life," said Wentworth, adding that he dealt with it when serving on the county commissioners' court.

The turnout of "lookers" was a good cross-section of people, said Wentworth's campaign manager, Bill Stinson.

Looking out over the room, Stoltz noted the large number of people in the 25-35 age group. "I came here in 1955 and there were hardly any Republicans. We used to go out and beg people to run on the Republican label. Now, Texas is a two-party state."

The May primary, Stoltz said, "will be the most amazing Republican primary I've been associated with in 30 years." Not only will the congressional race provide voters a wide variety of choices, but the governor's race with three candidates will be adding to the interest, he noted. In early summer, Stoltz hosted a reception for gubernatorial candidate Tom Loeffler.

Midlander pleads not guilty in case involving wild pet

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A Midland man, whose pet wolf attacked a girl in October, pleaded not guilty Thursday to violating a city ordinance which prohibits pets to run loose.

The city brought the misdemeanor charge against Mike Nickell, 25, 4618 Cherokee Drive, after his pet wolf allegedly mauled 18-month-old April Lamb while she was playing in her grandmother's backyard. She was bitten nine times and required 12 stitches to one leg.

Municipal Court Judge James Brazell set a $25 bond and scheduled Nickell's trial for Jan. 22.

If a jury finds Nickell guilty of the class C misdemeanor, he may violate the terms of his probation for a federal felony conviction, said assistant city attorney David Clyde.

Nickell is on a five-year probation for attempting to shoot wild sheep from a helicopter. Nickell also faces a fine ranging from $1 to $200 for violating the city ordinance.

Nickell was not charged with violating a city ordinance that prohibits wild animals within city limits because the city lost a key piece of evidence — the animal's skull, Clyde said.

The skull size is the only physical difference between a wolf and domestic dog, Clyde said.

The skull was lost after Midland Animal Control officials killed Nickell's pet in October and sent its head to a Texas Department of Health laboratory for a rabies test.

Only the brain is retained for rabies tests, Clyde said.

The test found that the animal did not have rabies.

The ordinance prohibiting wild animals on the city limits is also a class C misdemeanor carrying a $1 to $200 fine.

Nickell's probation officer Jack Swan declined to comment on the penalities Nickell may face if he is convicted of the misdemeanor charge.

Only the probation officer can decide whether or not to revoke probation, Clyde said. If Nickell's probation is revoked he could go to jail.

In May 1983, Nickell pleaded guilty to shooting a Barbado sheep from a helicopter in the western district of Texas around the Davis Mountains, said Larry Bick, U.S. Deputy Court clerk.

Nickell was originally indicted for two other counts that were later dropped. The other counts included, using an aircraft to hunt and use of aircraft to shoot a mule deer.

Nickell received a $2,000 fine and was sentenced to a five-year probation for the felony conviction by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius Bunton in October 1983.

Defense says woman's 'crime' lay in association

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Prosecutors claim Margaret Covington arranged the shooting of Corpus Christi lawyer Cage Wavell because he wouldn't admit fathering her child.

But Ms. Covington's husband, who is also her defense attorney, argued Thursday her only crime was associating with Wavell.

Jurors today continued deliberations in state district court. Ms. Covington is accused of hiring Terry Michael Noah, now an Arizona prison inmate, to injure Wavell, who was shot four days after he refused to sign an affidavit that would have acknowledged he was the father of her child.

Final arguments in her trial on charges of burglary with intent to commit aggravated assault began Thursday morning with Assistant District Attorney Elaine Stone for the state and Roberts for the defense.

The case went to the jury in the afternoon and deliberations continued into the night before the jury was sequestered without reaching a verdict.

Attorney Aubrey Roberts of Sweetwater said his wife "has made some sad mistakes, but her most grievous crime is being associated with that man (Wavell) any way."

Wavell was shot three times on Nov. 2, 1981, by two men who entered his Corpus Christi law office under the guise of seeking legal advice.

Authorities charged Noah with attempted murder in connection with the shooting. He testified in the case in a plea-bargain arrangement with the state.

In his testimony, Noah claimed Ms. Covington gave him a $500 down payment to drive from Houston to Corpus Christi to injure and sexually incapacitate Wavell.

Defense attorneys contend Noah was hired by Ms. Covington to watch Wavell but that he acted on his own in search of drugs when he attacked the lawyer.

Roberts told the jury that Noah, the state's star witness, conned law enforcement officials for his own reward. Roberts said Noah has an 18-year criminal history full of plea-bargains and deals with law enforcement.

Roberts, at the close of his argument, held a photograph of Ms. Covington's 4-year-old son before the jury and said the child is the real victim of the dispute.

"If you want to do this child further injury, you can take his momma out. Lock his momma up because his daddy (Wavell) said so and shame on him," said Roberts.

The trial followed civil actions filed by Ms. Covington and Wavell against each other. Ms. Covington filed a paternity suit against Wavell in 1981.

The paternity suit was settled, naming Wavell the father. He filed a suit against Ms. Covington and Houston criminal attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, saying they libeled him in their paternity investigation.

Haynes had been mentioned by Wavell as one of several other men who might have been the father of Ms. Covington's child, but Haynes testified Tuesday that he couldn't have been the father because he had a vasectomy years ago.

Ms. Covington, a psychologist and attorney now living in Sweetwater, worked for Haynes when he defended Fort Worth millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis in a murder-for-hire trial.

Helicopter blasts nuts from grower's trees

WEATHERFORD (AP) — Fred Tucker has been a pecan grower since 1931, but this week he harvested pecans in a way he never would have dreamed possible 50 years ago.

Tucker hired a helicopter to hover over the 50 pecan trees in his orchard west of Weatherford, using the blast from the blades to blow the pecans out of the trees.

The harvest, which usually takes two weeks when he uses a mechanical limb shaker, lasted less than an hour.

"I want to find out what will work and what won't work," Tucker told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The helicopter knocked about 70 percent of the nuts from the trees. Tucker said he considered the new method after mechanical limb shakers damaged his trees last season. Arthritis limits his ability to use a limb shaker, he said.

The pilot of the helicopter, Chuck King, said the downdrafts created by the Hiller 12E craft produce 80-mph winds that "act like a violent thunderstorm" to blow the pecans from the trees.

Harvesting pecans was not one of the uses he'd anticipated for his helicopter, he admitted. But Tucker's neighbor, Tom Tierce, said he had tried thrashing pecans when he worked for Southern Airways at the former Fort Wolters army base in Mineral Wells.

Tierce and his co-workers would fly low over native pecan trees north of the base, then come back later and collect the pecans.

King, who operates Sunbelt Helicopters Inc. in Mineral Wells, said the helicopter thrashing costs $225 per hour.

Tucker said the expense is worthwhile in time and trouble saved. Some of the larger trees produce more than 100 pounds of pecans, he said.

He sells the pecans at his home in the Greenwood community and at the Farmers Market in Weatherford for $1 to $1.75 per pound, based on size and quality.

TCU professor fascinated with Indian culture

By ANITA BAKER

FORT WORTH (AP) — As a kid, Texas Christian University history professor R. David Edmunds always found himself rooting for the Indians in movies.

He admits his heritage probably had something to do with that. He's one-eighth Cherokee.

"But for the most part, it was just the fascination (with Indians)," said the 46-year-old award-winning author and consultant on Indian affairs.

Edmunds doesn't call himself an Indian, even though by federal standards he probably is eligible to receive payments agreed upon for reimbursement of land taken from Indians in previous centuries.

TCU counts him as one on their racial and ethnic breakdowns of faculty.

But Edmunds considers his attachment to Indian life more "cultural than a blood thing," he said.

Blood ties have been diluted, yet the lives of past and present Indians dominate much of his.

When he isn't writing about Indians, he is working with universities or Indian tribes as a consultant.

His dedication has reaped many diverse awards.

One of his books, "The Shawnee Prophet," was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize and won the Ohioana Book Award of 1984.

Edmunds was presented the 1985 TCU Chancellor's Award for Distinguished Research and Creative Activity — an award that's sweetened with a $10,000 check.

He has been selected as an honorary member and honorary historian of the Citizen Band Potawatomi Indians of Oklahoma for his work with the tribe.

Along with general history courses at TCU, Edmunds has taught several classes relating to Indians, including one course designed to help future teachers understand the differences between ethnic groups.

Most American history courses are actually histories of white males, Edmunds said. The role of minorities and women is seldom mentioned.

But when he teaches his ethnicity class, American history begins much earlier than 1492 when Columbus discovered the New World. North America already had viable civilizations by then.

As Columbus landed, an estimated 35,000 people were thriving along the banks of the Mississippi in the city of Cahokia across from what is now St. Louis. It was far larger than London or any city in Germany at the time.

When Cortez moved into Mexico in the 1500s, Mexico City had a population of about 1.5 million. The Spanish city of Madrid in those days was no bigger than Mineral Wells.

"Inside North America, they had the rise and fall of civilizations just as they (Europeans) did the rise and fall of Greek and Roman empires," Edmunds said.

New research is showing the Indian population at the time Europeans arrived on this continent was much larger than historians had thought.

Experts used to say about 1.5 million native Americans were here then. Now they believe the figure was closer to 10 million.

Indians' numbers dropped dramatically because they were very susceptible to the Europeans' diseases.

Except for dealing with new diseases, Indians were far more advanced in health care and agriculture than Europeans when colonists landed on the eastern shoreline. But, unlike the colonists, they lacked skills in metallurgy and in organization of large numbers of people.

Until the 1930s, their numbers continued to decrease. At that time, health conditions for the tribes improved and the numbers changed directions.

"Now, they are predominantly young and are reproducing so fast that reservations no longer have opportunities for young people," Edmunds said.

About one out of two Indians live in metropolitan areas. Los Angeles has the biggest population, partly because many traveled there when Oklahoma was a part of the Dust Bowl in the 1930s and because of a last-ditch government attempt in the 1950s to assimilate Indians into society, Edmunds said.

But the experiment did not always work because many of the Indians were used to rural ways and ill-prepared for the big cities.

The Fort Worth-Dallas area has an Indian population of about 20,000.

Formerly, the major issue for Indians was the return of land taken by whites. Now that demand is giving way to protection of the remaining land base, Edmunds said.

What was given to the Indian as poor, arid land is becoming more valuable. Beneath some of it are layers of coal. Indian land in Arizona encompasses the upper sections of the Colorado River, which holds water sought after by California and Arizona.

Bilingual radio station offers unique music mix

"The thing that we were able to pitch to the business community was the fact that here's a station that was geared toward the vast bilingual audience...with a unique blend of Tejano and international hits in Spanish, a variety of adult contemporary and modern country and English.

— Manny Lopez
station manager

By DAVID SEDENO

MISSION (AP) — Yolanda Vela, headphones over her ears, leaned forward to the microphone and said, "Son las nueve con ocho minutos. That means it's 9:08 here at KITM, Star 105."

Welcome to bilingual radio.

Ms. Vela is one of eight disc jockeys at the FM station that began operating in November 1984 from a tiny office at a shopping center in this community just north of the Rio Grande.

Throughout the day songs from Spanish musicians such as Julio Iglesias, Juan Gabriel, Little Joe, La Mafia, Mazz, La Sombra, Miami Sound Machine and their counterparts are played. But so are songs from Lionel Richie, Wham, Madonna, Hall & Oates, Phil Collins and other English popular artists. And it doesn't stop there.

Country and western crooners such as Willie Nelson, Eddie Rabbitt, Barbara Mandrell, Janie Fricke and their colleagues also invade the airwaves from the Mission station, which has a broadcast range of 40 miles.

Manny Lopez, 43, the station manager, said he decided on bilingual radio because the market in the Rio Grande Valley was inundated with other formats.

He said the station plays the tunes because most Mexican-Americans in the 20-50 age bracket they are aiming at like a variety of music.

"It is a format in itself," said Lopez, who has been in the radio business 23 years. "We're in a different league, all together."

Lopez said the proximity to the border makes the Valley different from other parts of the state.

"The thing that we were able to pitch to the business community was the fact that here's a station that was geared towa l the vast bilingual audience...with a unique blend of Tejano and international hits in Spanish, a variety of adult contemporary and modern country and English.

"That's what this Valley is all about," he said. "It's all the inner-blending of both languages, music and culture that makes the Valley so unique."

Not only are the disc jockeys bilingual, but so are some of the commercials. They start in Spanish; English makes its way into the advertisement and it see-saws from there.

Lopez said the format seems to be paying off and ratings will be out in January. Lopez believes his hard work the past year will give the station a larger share of the market that includes 20 English radio stations and four Spanish radio stations.

Lopez, who is on the air between 6 and 9 a.m., said the only complaints the station has had are from elderly Mexican-Americans who want to disc jockeys to play either all English or all Spanish.

Most elderly Mexican-Americans, he said, prefer the traditional type of Spanish music. Teen-agers, for the most part, prefer Top 40 music.

Those in the middle can converse and feel comfortable using both languages, Lopez said, and that's why he decided there was a market to tap that market.

KITM's format has been carried over to radio stations in Houston and Corpus Christi and Lopez said he thinks the idea will continue to grow.

"It's just like if you try to listen to a station in Reynosa or Matamoros...you can't identify with that sound," Lopez said about most Mexican-Americans.

DPS says man charged in Brenham double murder

BRENHAM (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety says a 22-year-old man has been charged in the August slayings of a Brenham schoolteacher and her 11-year-old son.

A Washington County grand jury indicted Kevin Wayne Lincecum in the deaths of Kathy Coppedge, 36, and her son, Casey, said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

Authorities said Mrs. Coppedge and her son disappeared Aug. 11 after attending church services in Brenham, a town of about 11,000 located 110 miles northwest of Houston. Their bodies were found later that night in the trunk of their abandoned car off U.S. 290 near Burton, 11 miles west of Brenham.

Officials said the mother had been strangled, and her son had suffocated in the trunk.

Lincecum is from Ledbetter, a community about 15 miles west of Burton. He was being held without bond in Fayette County Jail in La Grange, said Cox.

Lincecum had given a statement concerning the murders, Washington County District Attorney Charles Sebesta said. Jewelry taken from Mrs. Coppedge was recovered and positively identified by her husband.

Domino's Pizza offers Christmas spirit to go

From Staff Reports

Domino's Pizza is sponsoring a canned food collection at area pizza stores, according to Randy Strickland, local supervisor of the chain. The stores will be giving $1 off the price of any pizza in exchange for a canned food donation.

The canned food collection will continue through Dec. 22 and the food will be distributed Dec. 23, Strickland said. "The donations will be collected by our delivery people in the normal course of their work. All customers need to do is advise us they want to participate when placing their pizza order by phone. We will also accept donations at our stores when customers place to-go orders."

The goal for Midland is 400 grocery bags of food. "Supported with contributions of major food items such as frozen turkeys and chickens from food retailers and distributors, we expect to make Christmas 1985 something special for a lot of needy people in Midland."

Company officials indicated the program has been adopted by other corporate and franchise stores in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas and Missouri. Strickland said more than 50 stores had indicated their willingness to participate. Goal in this region of the United States is to provide Christmas groceries to almost 5,000 needy families and over 200 charitable organizations.

"Once the food has been sorted and sacked, it will be distributed by Domino's Pizza delivery personnel on Dec. 23. Operating from lists provided by local charitable and welfare organizations, we'll deliver the food directly to the homes of those who need it most," Strickland said.

He noted that dented or bloated cans won't be accepted. The program this year is an extension of one started last year in El Paso where 800 grocery bags of food were collected.

Neighborhood group calls for closing of lead smelter

DALLAS (AP) — The attorney for a neighborhood group calling for the immediate closing of an Oak Cliff lead smelter says he is considering whether to appeal a court ruling allowing the plant to operate another five years.

District Judge Craig Enoch on Wednesday upehld an October 1984 order by the city's Board of Zoning Adjustment, which told Dixie Metals Co. to close the lead smelter by Dec. 31, 1990.

Area homeowners were disappointed with the ruling, said Joe Crews, attorney for the Neighborhood Committee on Lead Pollution.

"For the residents in that community who have been struggling with this problem for four or five years, they certainly don't consider it a victory," said Crews.

"They're going to have to put up with the plant for another five years and continue to live with that spectre of their children being contaminated and poisoned on a daily basis."

But Crews said no decision had been reached on whether to appeal.

The judge's order, although confirmed orally, has not been signed officially and Dixie was still considering options, said Dixie attorney Kenneth S. Beat.

"There hasn't been a decision made yet on whether that (Enoch's) decision will be appealed or not," said Beat.

Assistant City Attorney Don Postel said the zoning adjustment board ruled last year that Dixie did not comply with zoning codes and ordered it to close the plant by the end of 1990.

Dixie Metals and the neighborhood group have 30 days to appeal the ruling to the Court of Appeals in Dallas.

Odessa blast damages body shop

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An explosion at a westside auto body repair shop Thursday night caused only minor damage to the outside the building.

According to Odessa Fire Department investigator Ricky Cates, the cause of the explosion was not natural gas as first suspected but the result of "some kind of an explosive device."

Four fire units responded to the call at the Westside Auto Body & Fender Shop, 402 West County Road South, about 8:43 p.m. Thursday, Cates said, but no water was used because there was no fire associated with the explosion.

Cates said the explosion was heard for several blocks but broke only a few windows and damaged some shelving stacked outside the building occupied by Ruben Gonzalez.

The explosion is being investigated as a criminal act, rather than arson, Cates said, because no fire resulted from the explosion.

Investigators are trying to determine the nature of the device apparently used to trigger the explosion.

Odessa woman jailed in murder

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 25-year-old woman remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of $20,000 bond on a charge of murder in the fatal shooting of a 26-year-old Odessa man late Wednesday night.

Kattie Marie Dixon, 629 College, was arrested by Odessa police responding to a report of a shooting at the southside residence about 10:20 p.m.

Investigating officers found Miles Tracy Duffy, 706 Humble, who had been shot once in the upper right chest with a .22 caliber handgun. Duffy was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital about 12:30 a.m. Thursday by Peace Justice Jimmy Harris who ordered an autopsy.

Ms. Dixon was arraigned before Municipal Judge Otis Moore, who set bond on the charge late Thursday morning.

The shooting of Duffy apparently culminated an argument in a bedroom of the Dixon home, according to police reports.

Former mental patient gets 60 years for woman's death

SHERMAN (AP) — A former mental patient has been sentenced to 60 years in prison for killing a woman with a shotgun blast of fishing weights in belief she had cast a voodoo spell on him.

A seven-man, five-woman jury rejected David Joe Benson's insanity plea and deliberated three hours Thursday before returning the guilty verdict against the 24-year-old drifter from Marshall.

Benson was convicted in the death of Sueann Chapin, 50, of Sherman. Mrs. Chapin, the wife of a former Sherman city councilman, was shot in the back of the head on Oct. 17, 1984, while strolling along the Red River, east of the Denison Dam. She died Jan. 25.

Benson was arrested near the scene in a park area just east of Denison Dam a short time after the shooting. He did not know Mrs. Chapin, and apparently fired at her in a random act climaxing years of mental anguish, according to testimony.

Judge Joe Joiner said Texas law will require Benson to serve at least 20 years before he is eligible for parole. Benson could have been sentenced to life in prison.

Benson's court-appointed attorney, R.J. Hagood of Denison, said his client, a former mental patient, wants to appeal the verdict.

The defendant, who spent six terms at the Rusk State Mental Hospital, will probably be assigned to a psychiatric ward of the Texas Department of Corrections, the judge said.

Since 1979, Benson had been treated for a variety of mental illnesses, including paranoia, schizophrenia, hallucinations and inner voices that ordered him to commit suicide.

His sister testified he had been in and out of halfway houses and the state hospital. She told jurors he had tried to kill himself on at least three occasions, once by slitting his wrists and another time by trying to swallow his tounge on "orders of inner voices."

Broadcasting pioneer injured in gun mishap

DALLAS (AP) — Gordon B. McLendon, a broadcasting pioneer and millionaire who dabbles in movies and other enterprises, accidentally shot himself while cleaning a pistol and remained hospitalized early today, his son said.

McLendon, 64, was admitted to Methodist Hospital and was in critical but stable condition Thursday night, said night administrator Keith Guier.

McLendon shot himself while trying to clean a .38 caliber pistol at his ranch, Cielo, on Lake Lewisville in nearby Denton County, said his son, Bart McLendon.

"He broke his jaw and did some other minor damage," the younger McLendon said.

The accident occurred, he said, about 2:30 p.m. Thursday and "it was probably over an hour and a half before he was discovered...He lost a lot of blood."

Between 1947 and 1952, McLendon created and owned, with his father, B.R. McLendon, the nationwide 458-station Liberty Broadcasting System.

Calling himself "The Old Scotchman," McLendon did play-by-play sportscasting of baseball and football games.

His nationwide baseball "Game of the Day" and football "Game of the Week" were carried by the network, and he teamed with such greats as Dizzy Dean.

His family sold the last of numerous broadcasting properties in 1978 and invested the proceeds.

The family owned a string of drive-in motion picture theaters, and McLendon, a friend of the late actor John Wayne, produced several movies.

Guru's luxury fleet sails into Carrollton

CARROLLTON (AP) — Robert Roethlisberger gazed out over a sea of metal-flaked seafoam, flames and fantasy before nodding decisively and murmuring, "Looks good."

And then one by one, the 85 Rolls-Royces that had been trucked 2,000 miles from Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh's defunct central Oregon commune rolled off the auto carriers and into Roethlisberger's Dallas-area car dealership Thursday.

Lured by curiosity and a fascination for the Indian guru's connection to the immense fleet of luxury automobiles, Roethlisberger traveled to Rajneeshpuram last week to seal a $7 million deal for the cars.

Rajneesh, ordered out of the country after pleading guilty to two immigration violations last month, had amassed the glittering collection over the past few years as gifts from his disciples.

Besides epitomizing luxury, the cars upholstery gently accommodated the aging guru's bad back, said Veet Mano, a Rajneesh follower who Roethlisberger hired to accompany the cars to Dallas and answer questions about the Bhagwan.

The cars also brought the self-sating commune reams of publicity, and Roethlisberger said he "figured they could do the same for me."

He hasn't decided yet how he'll sell the fleet — whether by auction, by block, or individually — but he says thousands of inquiries have flooded his European Auto Group office in the last week. Four were offers for all 85.

The $7 million he paid breaks down to about $82,350 per car — not bad, considering that new Rolls start at about $110,000. And he says some of the far-out paint jobs alone are worth $20,000 to $30,000.

Some of the autos still bear sedate exteriors that are the hallmark of the dignified Rolls. But about 50 of them sport flames, fluorescent metal flake, flowers, seafoam, clouds, mountain ranges and lightning bolts that were added at the commune.

Roethlisberger figures he can reap between $8 million to $10 million from the exotic autos, one of which is an armor-plated stretch limousine whose front doors weigh 600 pounds apiece.

After all, he says, the cars are in superior shape — a full staff of Rolls-Royce-trained technicians babied the autos at Rajneeshpuram — and three-quarters of them have only about 500 miles on their odometers. The oldest, a 1981 model, has the highest mileage at 5,800.

The cars went up for sale after Rajneesh left the commune Nov. 14 to return to his native India. Mano said Rajneeshpuram is quickly disintegrating in the wake of the court judgment and that soon there will be fewer than 100 people left behind from the thousands who once lived there.

Jury acquits theater clerk

WACO (AP) — A Waco jury Thursday aquitted an adult theater clerk who had been charged with reckless conduct for pulling a gun on an Austin anti pornography organization leader.

Charlie Teague had been charged with reckless conduct, a Class B misdemeanor, following the July 23 incident.

Austin hospital to begin offering patients heart transplant surgery

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin hospital will begin performing heart transplant surgery, with doctors saying the procedure is a realistic option for some heart patients.

"This is now a very viable form of treatment for end-stage cardiac disease," said Dr. John Oswalt, chairman of the transplant team for Seton Medical Center.

"In the past year, over 400 transplantations were performed in the United States. It's an uncomplicated procedure, less so than those we perform in Austin today," Oswalt said Thursday.

Seton's program makes it one of a few hospitals in Texas and about 60 nationwide to perform the operation.

Seton officials say they expect to perform from three to six transplants a year, at a cost of $50,000 to $60,000 per operation.

"We are extremely fortunate in Austin to have a strong medical community that is committed to bringing the latest in state-of-the-art technology and medical procedures to this community," said Judith P. Smith, Seton president.

According to Seton officials, 81 percent of heart transplant patients survive for a year after surgery. The survival rate for two years is 76 percent, 71 percent for three years and more than 50 percent for five years.

Patients who are candidates for heart transplants generally aren't expected to live for more than six months with their own hearts, doctors said.

At present, the Seton officials said, other Texas hospitals offering heart transplants include St. Luke's Hospital in Houston, Methodist Hospital in Houston, St. Paul Hospital in Dallas and the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston. Nationwide, about 60 perform the operation, they said.

However, Oswalt said, many patients aren't being served by the other programs.

"There are people that are dying because we haven't started this procedure (in Central Texas). People that want to stay with their families during their illness, have their families' support, stay in their hometown setting...have actually turned down the offering of heart transplantation because it required moving to another city," he said.

More importantly, Oswalt said, "This is going to become a more commonplace procedure.

"We need to recognize that over the last four years, since the increasing use of some of the new anti-rejection medications, that the procedure now is no longer investigational, it's no longer necessary to perform it in your research institutes with the added costs that go along. We're taking it to the community."

One of the biggest problems is finding a suitable donor, Oswalt said, and that can cause waits of 24 hours to several months.

Seton patients seeking heart transplants will be screened by a team of experts.

Generally, the hospital said, patients must have advanced cardiac disease with little chance for survival beyond six months, be younger than 50, have no other active infections or chronic diseases, and be willing to follow a strict medical regimen for the remainder of their lives.

Hospital officials also said they have no current plans to try to use artificial hearts in their surgery.

Land commissioner seeks re-election, saying he made good on promises

AUSTIN (AP) — State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro officially is seeking re-election, saying he has made good on his campaign promises.

Since taking over the General Land Office, Mauro said, he has streamlined the veterans land program, efficiently implemented a veterans housing program and made better use of state lands.

"The days of sloppy management, unbusinesslike procedures, bloated bureaucracies, unproductive employees — those days are over as far as I am concerned," Mauro told supporters at an Austin fund-raiser Thursday.

"I think my four-year performance will stand the test of hard scrutiny," he said.

Mauro, a Democrat who first won election to the land commissioner's post in 1982, said he believes voters will appreciate improvements he made in land office operations.

"It used to take up to 18 months to close a veterans land loan. Today, it takes less than 90 days for regular loans and less than 45 days for our new subdivision program loans," he said.

"There used to be a waiting list with 14,000 names on it just to get an application. Now you can call our toll-free number or walk in and get an application on the spot," he said.

Garry Mauro

The land program is funded through bond sales, so taxpayers aren't charged, Mauro noted.

Mauro said he also followed through with the veterans housing program, something younger veterans need to help them cope with the high costs of buying a first home today.

"We created a blend of public and private sector in a government program that works, not just for veterans but for all Texans," he said.

"Nearly $500 million in loans have been committed under the housing program. It's created 25,000 jobs for Texans in the private sector. And because the veterans repay the costs of the loans and the administration of the program, it was done without costing Texas taxpayers a penny."

Mauro said 16,000 land loans and 26,000 home loans have been made to Texas veterans since he took office.

He also said he has modernized cash management in the land office, earning an additional $2 million annually for the state. And he said his administration has been responsible for innovative ideas in managing the state-owned lands the office oversees.

"The bottom line is that during the last three years, while oil and gas prices have decreased about 7 percent, revenues at the General Land Office from oil and gas production have actually increased," Mauro said.

That money goes into the state's Permanent School Fund. Mauro said interest from the fund now pays the first $145 in costs for educating each public school student in the state.

Almost two-thirds of inmates for death penalty, poll says

AUSTIN (AP) — While nearly two-thirds of Texas prison inmates favor the death penalty for some crimes, they aren't convinced that executions deter crime, says a survey conducted by the inmates' newspaper.

Only about one in four prisoners believes the death penalty generally deters criminals, the survey found.

But a slim majority of the inmates who responded said a death penalty threat for prison murders might help reduce the violence behind the walls of the Texas Department of Corrections system.

The Echo newspaper, published at Huntsville for state prison inmates, recently asked its inmate-readers to send in responses to questions about the death penalty. The results of the unscientific sampling were published in its latest edition.

"Similar to recent national surveys of the American population, the prison populace responded in favor of the death penalty by a 63 percent to 37 percent majority," The Echo said.

"Even though most survey answers indicate a disbelief that capital punishment slows down crime, a significant percentage of inmates think a death penalty threat would decrease prison violence," the newspaper added.

The paper also asked what crimes should be punishable by death. "Inmates in favor of death penalties think that murder, child abuse and sex crimes should top the list," it said.

Texas, one of a few states currently carrying out executions, has put six inmates to death by lethal injection this year. Ten inmates have been executed since Texas resumed carrying out death sentences in 1982.

Currently, there are more than 210 inmates on Death Row, and six of them have execution dates scheduled.

Although there was no indication of how many inmates responded, The Echo's poll said 63 percent answered yes to the question, "Do you believe in the death penalty for certain crimes?" Negative answers were received from 37 percent.

When asked whether they believed the possibility of the death penalty keeps people from committing crimes, however, only 26 percent replied yes. The other 74 percent said no.

And 57 percent said yes when asked whether a death penalty threat for prison murders would decrease TDC violence, while 43 percent said no.

Colleges must concentrate on human resources, panel told

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas colleges and universities must concentrate on training scientists and engineers in preparation for the high technology problems of the 21st Century, the Select Committee on Higher Education was told.

Human resources must become the primary aim of higher education in the state instead of natural resources such as oil and gas, said committee member Norman Hackerman, former president of the University of Texas at Austin and Rice University.

In stressing the need for research, Hackerman said Thursday the state has no choice but to push for advanced technology in Texas universities and colleges.

"We cannot wrest from the planet all the things we need," he said.

"In order for this region to remain viable we have to have very important resources, resources such as this state enjoyed for 70 years with oil and gas. The obvious problem is that these resources are not renewable.

"There is one resource that is renewable, which in technology is the leveraging proponent, and that is human resources," Hackerman said.

Hackerman said development of human resources should be the main interest of the committee "so that it in effect provides for this region those capabilities and technology which make for economic viability and competitiveness."

Hackerman said universities are the sole source of scientists and engineers "and that is why we must maintain an adequate supply of scientists and engineers.

Largest Jewish community in Latin America now dwindling

By DAVID BEARD

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's Jewish community, the largest in Latin America and fifth largest in the world, is dwindling in number. Jewish leaders attribute the decline to a lower birth rate and intermarriage with Roman Catholics, Argentina's dominant religious group.

Thirty-five years ago, an estimated 500,000 Jews lived in Argentina, said Richard Freund, rector of the Latin American Rabbinical Seminary here, and today they are believed to number 240,000 to 300,000. A Hebrew University demographic team has begun a survey to estimate the community's size, which has been ranked behind that of the United States, Israel, the Soviet Union and France.

"A lot of people, including some of my colleagues, say that the community will disappear within the next generation or so," Freund said. "I don't agree. I say this community is going to be here as long as any Jewish community in the world."

Although thousands of Argentine Jews have emigrated to Israel since its founding in 1948, Jewish leaders say the two main reasons for the decline are linked to the community's success in Argentina.

One is the lower birth rate, which is reflective of the community's shift from the lower and lower-middle class to middle and upper-middle class, said Manuel Tenenbaum, director of the Latin American Jewish Congress and a professor of Judaic studies at the University of Belgrano in Buenos Aires.

Another reason is a 50 percent rate of intermarriage, indicating an increasing acceptance of Jews in Argentine life and, conversely, a willingness of Jews to assimilate into the nation, which is 93 percent Catholic. Tenenbaum blames the drift on a loosening of religious ties.

"The majority of the community doesn't practice the religion," he said. "It's much more secular than in the United States."

The community revolves around Jewish social clubs and cultural centers rather than synagogue activities. Religion was so de-emphasized at many of the capital's 50 Hebrew schools that some held "fiestas" on Yom Kippur, the solemn Day of Atonement, Freund said. Since its founding in 1961, the seminary has tried to reverse the secular trend, training native, Spanish-speaking rabbis and introducing more religious courses in Hebrew schools.

Several Argentine Jews who do not attend services say they try to maintain their religious identity.

Enrique Rozwadovwer, a Buenos Aires architect, said history taught him not to deny his heritage. In the Spanish Inquisition and the Nazi holocaust "they never asked if you were a practicing or non-practicing Jew," he said.

Mina Fridman, a teacher, works on weekends to educate Jewish children who go to public schools. She reads stories by Yiddish writers and supervises literary and athletic contests.

"If we cultivate a culture that recognizes its roots, the heritage is not going to suffer," she said.

Her own roots illustrate the changes in Argentina's community, which was formed by Jews fleeing Russia from the 1880s to the 1920s, roughly the same time as the largest Jewish immigration to the United States.

Her father emigrated from the Ukraine in 1914, meeting his wife on the voyage. He became a successful grain merchant and a leader in the tiny Jewish community in the interior city of Rosario, maintaining Jewish customs in his home.

Mrs. Fridman became a teacher, married in a civil ceremony and moved away from the religion. Her daughter married a Catholic and has a son who was not circumcised, as is the Jewish tradition.

An overwhelming majority of Argentine Jews support the civilian government of President Raul Alfonsin which replaced a military dictatorship. The military regime, dedicated to restoring Western Christian values to the nation, excluded Jews from high government, diplomatic and military posts.

Jerusalem resident Limor Barazani practices shooting on a pistol range. The number of Israelis shopping for hand guns has more than doubled since October, following a wave of terrorists' attacks in Israel and the West Bank.

Frightened Israelis buying hand guns

By DAVID NORDELL

JERUSALEM (AP) — Frightened by a wave of terrorist attacks, Israelis are looking to their own security and are shopping for hand guns.

Since the start of the year, 16 Israelis have been picked off in ones and twos, some while hitchhiking and others while shopping in crowded Arab markets. In the most recent incident, a Jewish couple was murdered in the woods southwest of Jerusalem in October.

The attacks created a panic because of their unusual focus on individuals. Israeli authorities advised citizens to be armed when traveling in predominantly Arab areas such as the West Bank, and articles recommending which weapon to buy and how to buy it have appeared recently in newspapers and magazines.

Moshe Weiss, head of the interior ministry's gun licensing department, said requests for pistol licenses have more than doubled since October, to about 1,200 a month.

Many Israelis believe experience proves the value of carrying guns. When Palestinian guerrillas attacked the northern town of Nahariya in 1979, a resident gunned down one who burst through a door.

When Lebanese gunmen attacked civilians in central Jerusalem 19 months ago, wounding 48 people, a civilian shot one of the attackers and sent the others fleeing.

About 180,000 Israelis own weapons, Weiss said. There are also thousands of Israelis serving in the armed forces, either on active or reserve duty.

Thus it is difficult to walk down a city street without seeing an automatic rifle or pistol in the hands of a uniformed soldier or paramilitary volunteer. Ironically, getting a gun permit can be difficult.

"Hundreds came to this shop in recent months. But despite the hysteria, we don't make a living from this, because not everyone who wants to buy a weapon can," said Yitzhak Mizrahi, owner of the Mignan gun shop in downtown Jerusalem.

Until four years ago, Mizrahi said, there was no problem for anyone without a criminal record or psychiatric problems.

"There's a paradox: Whenever the security situation becomes worse, the demand increases, but they make the licensing rules tougher," he said.

About 500 to 600 licenses are granted each month, Weiss said, mostly to people who live in the occupied territories or on the Lebanese border. Journalists and bus drivers also qualify since their work takes them to Arab-populated areas. Jewelers and payroll carriers can get permits because of the risk of robbery.

Those who qualify still have to prove they know how to handle a pistol. Anyone who has done regular army service is assumed to be proficient, but most soldiers use rifles and machine guns instead of pistols, so Mizrahi insists on teaching his customers in the range attached to his shop.

The best-selling pistol, say Mizrahi and Weiss, is the German-made 7.65mm Walther PP or PPK made famous by James Bond. At about 260,000 shekels ($173) with ammunition costing about 33 cents a round, most Israelis can afford it.

Mizrahi said the Walther's killing power and 60-yard range make it suitable for the situations Israelis might encounter.

Avi Shalev, a professional security consultant who has owned a .22-caliber Beretta pistol for 16 years, said he doubts guns do much good in the face of danger, especially if their owners do not practice regularly.

"Everyone who buys a gun does so only for the feeling," he said in an interview. "I stopped traveling to West Bank about 18 months ago, because a pistol isn't worth much. Even armed, I'm still afraid."

Nearly all the guns are imported: Israel's arms industry has just started manufacturing pistols, but the .357 Magnum "Desert Eagle," at $900, is beyond most buyers' pockets. The 9mm Uzi pistol, developed from the famous submachine gun, is only sold to professional security companies.

Most buyers prefer discretion: Four who entered Mizrahi's shop during a half-hour period declined to be interviewed or photographed because they don't want people to know they own a gun.

The main reason is security. Although the regulations say guns must always be kept locked up and must never be left in unattended vehicles, Weiss said about 100 weapons are stolen each month.

Some Israelis have turned to knives. "When the movie Rambo was shown in Jerusalem, I sold 30 of the Rambo survival knives, costing 125,000 shekels ($83) each, in the first week," said Mizrahi.

Santa Claus called many different names

Copley News Service

Sinterklaas to the Dutch, Father Christmas to the English, Pere Noel to the French. The Germans call him Weihnachtsmann, while in Russia they once spoke of the Miracle Maker but now simply refer to him as Grandfather Frost. The Chinese have their Lam Khoong-Khoong, meaning Nice Old Father, and the Japanese have Hoteiosho, who has eyes in both the back and front of his head and carries a big bag of toys. On Jan. 5, Epiphany Eve in Italy, Santa Claus is a woman called Befana who comes down the chimney bearing gifts for good little girls and boys.

Who is this universally loved magical figure with the power to melt hard hearts and suspend doubts during the season of peace? According to the book "A Family Christmas," by the Reader's Digest Association, the story of Santa Claus begins with the birth of St. Nicholas, approximately 270 A.D., along the Mediterranean coast of northern Turkey.

According to one account, Nicholas was born to a childless couple after 30 years of marriage and was orphaned at the age of 9. Reared by guardians, thereafter, he developed a strong sympathy for the poor and needy and devoted a great deal of his time to providing food, clothing and money to the underprivileged. Much of his gift giving was accomplished in secret and, invariably, at night.

WHILE PERHAPS STILL in his teens, Nicholas became the bishop of Myra, subsequently to be identified in early manuscripts as a saint and miracle worker. Destined to become patron saint of children, Russia, bankers, sailors, pawnbrokers, vagabonds and thieves, Nicholas was well on his way to becoming universally revered as St. Nicholas of Myra when he died, probably Dec. 6, 340 A.D.

The practice of bringing gifts in the name of St. Nicholas probably began in France at the start of the 12th century. Dec. 5, proclaimed the Eve of St. Nicholas, was a time when nuns would leave gifts at the doorsteps for the small children of poor families. The custom spread rapidly into other parts of Europe and soon was being celebrated by both rich and poor alike.

But it was not until 1626 that St. Nicholas made his way across the Atlantic Ocean to North America. He came in the form of a figurehead on the prow of a Dutch ship filled with settlers bound for Manhattan Island. It was her that St. Nicholas's foothold in the New World was firmly established.

Popular pronunciation over the years managed to contract St. Nicholas into "Sinterklaas," which eventually was corrupted to "Sancte Claus." With Sancte Clause now on the scene, could "Santa Claus" be far behind?

THREE PEOPLE GENERALLY are credit ed with the further transformation of St. Nicholas from the gift-bearing bishop of Myra to the beloved gift-bearing Santa Claus. They are author Washington Irving, theological professor Clement Clarke Moore and political cartoonist Thomas Nast.

Under the name of Diedrich Knickerbocker, Washington Irving, author of such tales as "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," published his beloved "A History of New York from the Beginning of the World to the End of the Dutch Dynasty." Along with a great deal of gentle humor about the Dutch in New York, Irving also dealt with their enormous affection for St. Nicholas.

In Irving's physical descriptions of the beloved saint, the bishops robes are replaced by more traditional Flemish attire. And Irving spoke of the saint flying about in a wagon over the rooftops of New Amsterdam, dropping gifts into the chimneys of little children. The author describes him as visiting on only one night a year and making his entrance via the chimney.

This comes close to our own conception of Santa Claus, but it was not until 1822 when Clement Clarke Moore penned his timeless poem, "A Visit From St. Nicholas," that Santa took on the appearance of the familiar figure of today.

USING IRVING'S conception of St. Nicholas as a model, Moore created the "jolly old elf" with merry dimples and twinkling eyes. He dressed him in fur, gave him a pipe and provided him with a team of eight reindeer to draw a miniature sled. This poem established itself as a classic, appearing in hundreds of newspapers and periodicals.

During the mid-1800s in America, many embellishments were added to the evolving image of Santa Claus. This occurred particularly in the area of illustration. Toy workshops, elfin helpers and jingle bells for the reindeer team were but a few of the innovations.

It was not until the period of the Civil War, however, that political cartoonist Thomas Nast produced a figure that became affixed forever in the minds of people as Santa Claus. Nast drew his first Santa Claus for the cover of Harper's Weekly, a leading newspaper of the day.

BETWEEN THE YEARS of 1864 and 1886, Nast's drawings of Santa Claus, eagerly awaited by a large public, appeared annually. In these Santa generally appears as a portly, bewhiskered old gent, climbing in and out of chimneys with an enormous sack of toys on his back.

Up until 1886, Nast always had drawn Santa in black ink.

When asked to produce color drawings of Santa for a book, Nast had the inspiration of giving him a bright red suit with white ermine trim. Jolly, plump, bewhiskered and all in red, here, at last, was the Santa Claus we know so well today.

It has taken more than 16 centuries for the bishop of Myra to evolve into jolly old St. Nick. In an age of computers and interplanetary space travel, it is tempting to speculate on what changes the next 16 centuries might impose on this figure.

But even if Santa trades in his red flannels for a space suit and the reindeer for a glittering space capsule, the spirit of the gift-bearing bishop of Myra with his unfailing concern for the needy never will change. Sixteen hundred years from now or even for the next 100 millennia, of one thing you may be certain — on Christmas Eve, all over the world, eager children still will await his arrival.

Face it, a white Christmas just doesn't appeal to everyone. Some people would rather not shiver through the holidays. They'd rather just hum Bing Crosby's song while soaking up soothing sunshine.

If that sounds like your style, take a look at the following roundup of warm Christmas getaways.

If you want to stay close to home, consider the values of Mexico and Hawaii.

Just south of the U.S. southern border sits Mexico, a tropical paradise with stretches of sun-drenched beaches, gentle breakers and warm blue waters, ancient Mayan ruins and one of the world's great cosmopolitan capitals, Mexico City.

Big game fish and exotic fish abound in the water of Guaymas, the water sports capital of Mexico. And water skiers and skin divers will delight in exploring the secluded, calm bays that surround Guaymas.

The richness of the Mayan lore and culture is most evident in Merida, the starting point for visits to and exploration of ruins such as Uxmal and Chichen-Itza.

If you chose one word to describe the Big Island of Hawaii, it would have to be "contrast." Highlights range from sandy beaches to lava wastelands, from cattle ranches to fields of flowers, from peaceful bays to volcanic craters.

On any of the islands that make up the state of Hawaii, you'll find unparalleled beauty to capture your imagination — rugged mountains with twisted hiking and riding trails and verdant valleys, gently sloping hills covered with wild flowers, mile after mile of beaches, either bustling with activity like Waikiki or peaceful, unspoiled and unhurried like those on Kauai.

If you're willing to travel a bit further in your search for sun, try the South Pacific.

On Tahiti, the main island of French Polynesia, life is centered around the picturesque waterfront city of Papeete, one of the most romantic and legendary ports in the South Pacific. Away from Papeete, Tahiti's scenery turns to lush and colorful countryside, dramatic cloud-capped peaks and beautiful blue lagoons with activities such as big game fishing, water sports and cruises.

But no island in the world compares with the South Pacific's Bora Bora for snorkeling. The verdant volcanic island is surrounded by a calm lagoon full of brilliant coral gardens and colorful tropical fish.

And while you're thinking about that region of the world, how about Australia, the destination of the '80s. The Land Down Under is a land of both warm beaches, such as the Gold Coast, and sophisticated cities, such as Sydney, where you can attend the opera or ballet, dine in fine restaurants and enjoy great entertainment.

If you plan to follow the sunshine this holiday season, contact a travel agent for more details. Or hitch a ride south on Santa's sleigh.

Alaska attempts to change image

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaska is trying to change the image that its winter weather is uncomfortably cold, according to the state's Division of Tourism.

The department says that during most of the winter months Ketchikan is warmer than Boston, Anchorage is warmer than Quebec City, and Juneau is warmer than Chicago.

Fairbanks averages 10 degrees above zero during January, and Nome, closer to Siberia than anywhere else, runs 4 above during the same period.

The department says visitors should dress as they would for the upper American Midwest to be comfortable in most of Alaska.

DEAR ABBY

Tax dodge has wife worried

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been a housewife for all our married years, never having held a job outside the home. My husband owns his own business.

In the last six years, he has not filed state or federal income tax. It was not his intention to defraud the government, but actually a case of poor bookkeeping methods and his inability to afford an accountant.

If the government catches up with him, would I be equally guilty? Could I be arrested?

I dearly wish he would file his taxes, pay what he owes and get it over with, but I have no control over his business affairs, and I don't want to be a nagging wife. The business is in his name only.

If we were to be divorced, would I be held liable for his past taxes during the years we were married?

Please answer in the newspaper. Obviously, I cannot risk having your answer delivered to our home in a Dear Abby envelope. — JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: First, when a personal reply is requested, the writer sends a stamped, self-addressed envelope so there is no indication that the letter is from "Dear Abby."

Second, although I am not qualified to answer legal questions, I can offer some free advice. Tell your husband to see a lawyer immediately about his failure to file state and federal income tax. If he turns himself in before he is discovered, the penalty will probably be considerably lighter. Then, ask his lawyer (or another one) what your liability would be as a spouse or ex-spouse.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a family dispute. Is your mother's or father's new spouse your stepfather and stepmother only if you are living with them?

Your are the only one who can settle this, so please put your answer in the paper as soon as possible. — C.J. IN NEWPORT BEACH

DEAR C.J.: A stepmother is the wife of one's father by a subsequent marriage, and a stepfather is the husband of one's mother by a subsequent marriage. The relationship remains the same whether you live with them or not.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was recently married at a formal church wedding, which we arranged to have videotaped at a considerable cost to us.

I heard that several people were planning to bring their children (several under 3 years of age), so we made arrangements to have the church nursery opened, and we even paid two licensed nursery workers to look after the children during the wedding. The ushers were instructed to politely ask those who brought children to take them to the nursery.

I was astonished at the number of guests who pushed past the ushers, ignored their request and took their children to sit with them during the wedding. Some children became restless during the ceremony and started to talk and whine. Instead of being taken out of the church, they were "shushed" and scolded — all clearly audible on the tapes.

These same children were permitted to crawl around on the floor during the reception.

Now, Dear Abby, how can a situation like this be prevented? — WEDDING RUINED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR WEDDING: It can't — unless one hires "bouncers" to back up the ushers whose polite requests are ignored.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, after 55 years of marriage, I lost my loving wife. I lost my sweetheart, my gourmet cook, my nurse and my best friend.

In the 55 years we were married, I sent her flowers only twice. Now I put flowers on her grave twice a week.

I kiss her picture every morning and tell her how much I love her. Before she went away, my morning greeting was, "Is the coffee ready?"

Somewhere I read the following: "Carve not upon a stone the dirgeful words that mourners say at graveside, rather tell me while I live." I wish I had another chance. — A.R. IN N.Y.

DEAR A.R.: No one has "another chance," but because you took the time to put your thoughts on paper, somewhere just one thoughtless husband may see himself and show his young wife by word and deed how much he loves her. The "chance" you missed is still available to countless young men — and women, too. Thank you for a priceless reminder.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Hors d'oeuvres don't flush

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

About 20 years ago my husband and I were invited to an open house for about 200 people.

As open houses go, there was nothing really significant about it. We didn't meet anyone we later married and no one fell in the punch bowl. However, we did discover something on that day that we would remember the rest of our lives. Hors d'oeuvres do not flush. We would have to think of some other way to get rid of them.

The problem with these little before-dinner snacks is that there is no way in the world of knowing what you're eating until after it's in your mouth. Then it is too late. They cannot be chewed. Sometimes swallowing does it. Sometimes not.

It may be imagination, but those little babies have been getting more creative every year. There was a time when I could recognize the basic food categories. Now, heaven only knows what is heaped on those little crackers and dry triangles of toast.

In the beginning a hostess would set out a dish of nuts to stave off hunger. Then one day someone found a cute cracker and arranged it on a plate. The next hostess decided a cracker looked naked and put a slice of cheese on it. From that came the dips.

I'm a social outcast at dips. Some people instinctively know the stress factor involved in how much a chip will hold before it breaks apart. I never know that. When it breaks, my hand is thrust into the bowl and all night I have a white residue of garlic and sour cream under my nails.

What really frosts me is that a hostess will never reveal what she is serving on her hors d'oeuvres.

"What's this little brown thing on top?" I ask.

"What do you think it is?" she chirps.

I then get 20 questions to come up with the answer. "Is it living or dead?" "Is it American?" "Is it in politics or the arts?" "Would I be likely to find it in my house?" "Is it bigger than a breadbox?" "Is it considered to be a gourmet treat in this country but bait everywhere else?" "Does it run under a rock whenever there are bathers nearby?" "Did it look this bad when it was young?" "Will I throw up when you tell me what it is?"

As a woman whose casseroles wear name tags, I've never objected to a little mystery in cooking, but things have gotten out of hand. I have a whole month of hors d'oeuvres ahead of me, a whole month of strange little lumps of unidentifiable things being snatched from freezers and popped into the microwave to challenge my mind. Let us pray someone starts building a better hors d'oeuvre — or a better toilet.

It doesn't matter which comes first.

When changing jobs, resist temptation to blast bosses

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A favorite work fantasy is that delicious moment when you have landed a wonderful new job and get to tell your old bosses exactly what you think of them.

Paula Sendar, a dietitian in Norwalk, Conn., remembers the temptation well. She said she had suffered months of frustration over a stream of mistakes and insensitive actions she believed senior management had inflicted on a hospital where she worked. "I couldn't wait to ventilate my feelings," she said, recalling her departure last August.

Sendar was persuaded by a career counselor to avoid an outburst. One reason for silence is to avoid gossip about irresponsible and immature behavior. "In most industries everyone knows everyone else," says Neil Lewis, a corporate psychologist. "What you did at Company A will surely follow you to Companies B and C." Lewis works with Rohrer, Hibler & Replogle Inc., management consultants in Atlanta, Ga.

Lewis also warns that allegations made during an outburst can hurt the wrong person. Sendar, for example, realized her criticisms would make her immediate superior look bad. "And the problems weren't really her fault," she said.

Counselors warn that anybody who is made to look bad, especially unjustly, can harbor a grudge for years.

On the other hand, leaving in a responsible manner can have unexpected benefits. Lou Tharp, a 34-year-old advertising account executive, decided to leave a large Manhattan advertising agency last April to start his own firm. Rather than walk out after reciting what he regarded as his colleagues' shortcomings, he decided instead to stay on until a new person could be trained.

His consideration paid off. He became a consultant to his old agency for six months after leaving, which brought in money that helped him get his own firm off the ground. "It took the pressure off," he said.

Leaving gracefully also enhances self-esteem. "You feel very good about yourself and that's very important when you are about to start a new job," said James P. Smith, a psychologist who is director of the Vocational Counseling Clinic at Temple University.

Career counselors and industrial psychologists have several recommendations about cutting the cord, such as diffusing pent-up anger. Ilise Gold, a career counselor in Westport, Conn., encourages her clients to write down a list of their gripes. "Get it down on paper," she tells them. "Once they can see what is making them feel so bad," she said, "they can begin to think more clearly."

It may also prevent them from unloading those frustations on colleagues. "Many of us are unable to differentiate the sort of information we might share with a friend at the office and a personal friend," she said.

If a work colleague hears about the frustrations, she said, he or she may start angling for the job, especially if it is a choice one, and may pass along some of the charges to the boss. Further, Gold added, "you never know who might have overheard such idle chatter."

Rhoda Frindell Green, a psychologist and career counselor in New York City, said a person who is leaving should carefully pick the best moment to go, on the basis of both personal considerations and of what might be best for the company, such as waiting until a certain project is completed or a replacement is found.

It can be wise to approach the boss before accepting a new job. "He might just offer you a better deal," said Victor Vroom, professor of organization and management at Yale University.

Ronald Pilenso, president of the American Society of Personnel Administrators, suggested phrasing the reasons for leaving in a manner that stresses how valuable the time at the company has been rather than the negatives. "Explain that you need to move on because you have done all you can for that company," he said, saying this attitude could help keep the boss as a valuable professional friend.

Bad luck, 'busting' cause losses

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Blackjack players are three times as likely to lose by failing to draw a card as they are by busting, Dutch psychologists report.

Gideon Keren and Willem A. Wagenaar analyzed the play of 112 gamblers in more than 11,000 blackjack hands in an Amsterdam casino. They suggest that "losing by busting (accumulating a card total over 21) may seem psychologically worse than losing to a dealer's superior hand," Psychology Today reports. People would rather be able to blame their loss on chance than on their own decision to take one card too many.

A player can expect to lose about 1 percent of his or her money by following a set of rules called "basic," in which the decision to "stick" or be "hit" — accept another card — is based on the player's total and the dealer's exposed card.

But most players don't follow the odds, and unless they can remember which cards have been played, they will lose more money. The "illusion of control," however, keeps them coming back to the blackjack table, Keren and Wagenaar say in the Journal of Experimental Psychology.

If you hit and bust, it seems like your own fault, the authors suggest. But if you "stick" and still lose, you can blame it on bad luck.

Casinos using computer-operated slot machines

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Gamblers here may be in for a surprise when a popular casino-hotel begins operating 200 computer-operated slot machines.

Gamblers will buy "debit cards" with magnetically coded dollar amounts entered on their plastic strips.

The new machines are aimed at reducing cash security and cash handling — both expensive operations.

Excessive vitamins considered harmful

Associated Press

Consumers view as harmful the vitamin and mineral products that more than double recommended allowances, and they are also skeptical that the more ingredients a vitamin contains, the better it is, according to a Better Homes and Gardens Consumer Panel survey.

Almost half (45 percent) agreed with a statement that vitamin and mineral products containing over 200 percent of U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (U.S. RDA) are harmful. Only 15 percent disagreed with the statement.

Consumers were more tolerant of levels closer to U.S.RDA. Nearly 27 percent agreed that dosage in excess of 100 percent of U.S.RDA was harmful while 31 percent disagreed. Almost 35 percent were neutral or did not know.

Respondents were evenly divided on the benefits of multiple ingredients in a vitamin and mineral product. Asked if the more different types of vitamins and minerals a vitamin and mineral product contains, the better it is for a person, 32 percent agreed and 33 percent disagreed. More than 35 percent were neutral, did not know, or had no answer.

Consumers rely on several primary sources for vitamin and mineral information. More than 30 percent of respondents chose physicians as the single most important source, and vitamin labels were next with 21 percent. Pharmacists were named by 14 percent. The labels gain in importance on store shelves when almost 70 percent of respondents read the ingredients before they buy a vitamin product.

Consumers are clear, however, on the minerals they want a vitamin to contain. The top three choices were iron (82 percent), calcium (81 percent) and potassium (69 percent). They are less certain, and wrong in some cases, in their identification of water soluble vitamins and minerals. They correctly picked vitamins C, B-12, B-6, riboflavin, thiamin and niacin as water soluble and not stored in the body, but nearly 20 percent incorrectly picked vitamins D, A and E as water soluble. Those three vitamins are fat soluble. Only vitamin C scored better than 50 percent with a 57 percent rating.

Watery grave in store for Leaday, thanks to Stacy Dam

By HARRIETTE GRAVES

LEADAY, Texas (AP) — It's not a big town. It's just a tiny dot on a Texas map.

Large or small, it doesn't matter to the 50 or so people whose families have lived there all of their lives. For them Leaday is home.

But it may not be home for too long. Leaday is preparing for the inevitable day when water from the Stacy reservoir will cover most of the little town.

Though it could be years before the water rises high enough to flood the town, the final days seem closer as engineers complete their survey for the reservoir.

The Stacy reservoir, long in the planning, will have 200 miles of shoreline, according to Richard Knox, a surveyor from Howell Engineering of Odessa.

The engineering team headed by Knox has been on the outskirts of Leaday since May surveying the boundary lines of the dam site area for the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which will own the Stacy Dam.

"The purpose of the Stacy reservoir is to supply the growing municipal needs for additional water," said O.H. Ivie, general manager of the CRMWD. "Numerous cities in Central West Texas including Abilene and San Angelo (and Midland) will derive some of their water requirements from the Stacy reservoir," he said.

APPROXIMATELY 19,000 acres in Coleman, Concho and Runnells counties will be covered by the lake, most of it in Coleman County.

The reservoir's shoreline will pass around many cities in these three counties, but the only community to be topped with lake water will be the township of Leaday, which occupies 20 to 30 acres. Even the town of Stacy, from which the dam takes its popular nickname, is spared the watery fate of Leaday.

"Looks like they could have named the dam after us," said Mary Alice Stephenson, one of the townspeople whose home will go under water.

Actually, authorities note that the name of the reservoir has not yet been officially determined, nevertheless, the "Stacy" moniker is firmly planted in the minds of Central Texans.

Until it became apparent that Leaday was going under water, motorists passed through the small town with hardly a glance. But today it's different. People are stopping and looking.

For the people of the township, it's a time for remembering and planning ahead.

The assistant postmaster in Leaday, Mary Wilson, will noot be able to go to her job at the post office when the rising water of the Stacy reservoir floods the small town.

AP Laserphoto

Leaday's hub of activity is the post office. It's old home week every morning and the atmosphere is one of camaraderie and the good, old-fashioned love-thy-neighbor custom.

HOWARD STEPHENSON is one of the townspeople who enjoys community life at the post office. Often at night men gather "To chew the fat" and to play dominoes. "We play to midnight and then set 'er down," he said.

A table at the back of the post office is set up for the nightly games. When it's time to go home, the table is carefully pushed back against the wall until the next time. The post office is on land that will be under water.

Stephenson, whose home is going under water, laughed about what the future holds for him. "I've been here all my life, and don't really own much. But the water's gonna take everything. I've been around here 59 years. When I have to leave, I'll just take my hat and walk off," he said.

There's no telling when the town will vanish under a bed of water. One man said it might take a year for the lake to fill up. But then again, it may be five years or 25 years. No one in town is sure.

Once the water reaches Leady, the township will be gone. But there is land on higher ground that will be spared, where people can stay if they wish.

Randolph Wilson and his wife, Mary, who is assistant postmaster for the community, don't live in the heart of Leaday, but on higher ground. "It won't get what I've got," he said. "My place is above the water line. All of Leaday won't die; those who want to stay will just move up the hill," he said.

THE WILSONS live seven miles north of Leaday but attend the only church in the community, the Baptist church, which has stood in the town for more than 40 years. The church building, which serves a congregation of about 30, is on land that will be covered by the reservoir.

Mary Alice Stephenson, who lives close to the post office, knows that her house will be gone before too many years. "I'm 81 years old, and I haven't thought too much about it yet, but if I live long enough, I guess I will just move to Coleman when I have to," she said.

She spoke wistfully when she mentioned the little Baptist Church and its minister, the Rev. Jack Skelton. "He's been minister here for as long as I can remember," she said.

Mrs. Stephenson has lived in Leaday all her life, as did her late husband, Ike. Her parents, the W.O. Ganns, raised 10 children in Leaday. James and Howard Stephenson and their families still live in the city. James is postmaster. Lined up at the post office is a whole shelf of framed certificates awarded to Stephenson for his service to the community.

Frances DeLos Santos has a home on higher ground. Even though she won't have to move, she said all of her friends will be gone. But, Mrs. Santos is employed by Jane Padgitt whose land encompasses a significant portion of the land that will go under water.

AMONG THE places on higher ground that the water will miss is Leaday Cemetery. Two private cemeteries, the W.O. Gann and the Boot Hill, will go under water with the rest of the township. According to Ivie, the water district will work with survivors of those buried in the cemeteries to relocate the graves prior to the filling of the reservoir.

The homes and ranches that will eventually be covered by the waters from Stacy will be purchased by the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Shaky budget lays good odds for state lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Don't bet on it yet, but some legislators insist the odds are improving that Texans one day will be able to buy a chance on becoming a millionaire.

Contemplating an uncertain future of shrinking budgets and growing demands for state services, the lawmakers say a lottery is less of a long shot — especially if the only other choice is a tax hike.

In the last year, Texans have begun paying millions more in sales taxes, fuel taxes, state fees and college tuition.

"Folks in Texas are tired of having their taxes increased," says Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

"I don't think Texans are any different than New Yorkers, Californians or anybody else. They want the Legislature to find an innovative way of raising revenue — and that's a lottery," Uribe said.

State government, which derives a huge chunk of its budget from severance taxes on oil and gas, is in money trouble.

Lawmakers, once accustomed to oil-rich surpluses, in 1984 raised the motor fuel tax to fund highway repairs and boosted the sales tax to fund school reforms. That cost $4.8 billion over three years.

When the 1985 Legislature opened, lawmakers faced a $1 billion shortfall. In a gut-wrenching 140 days, they trimmed spending, raised fees by $146 million and tripled college tuition to make it all balance.

But legislative leaders say the future's not much brighter if oil prices stay down.

The state continues growing, federal judges give reform orders to the prison and mental health systems, and there's a new indigent health care program to be funded.

"The more people we have to deal with, the more problems we have, — prisons, transportation, health services, mental health. Any state service is going to feel the strain," House Speaker Gib Lewis said of the budget dilemma.

Lewis said 1985's penny pinching likely was only the start.

"I think this last session was a good indication of many sessions to come," he said. "We'll never see that (oil boom) time again. Our state is not in good shape right now."

So what can be done?

Pro-lottery lawmakers see the troubles as an opening to begin a state-run game, a "painless" tax.

"We've raised taxes, we've increased fees, we've accelerated the method by which the state gets money. We've done everything to make our money go farther," said Uribe, who offered unsuccessful lottery legislation this year.

"I think this (a lottery) is the next step to avoid a personal income tax or a corporate income tax or an increase in the sales tax," he said.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, agrees, saying voters aren't fooled by fee increases.

"A tax by any other name is still a tax. Sometime, we've got to come out from behind the rock and realize that," Wilson said. "I think the further and further we go into the red with our state budget, the more likely are chances of passage for a lottery bill."

With news stories telling of residents in other states winning millions with a $1 ticket, a lottery looks to some like a good deal.

Opinion polls show up to 66 percent of Texans favoring lotteries. Uribe said recent estimates indicate about $1 million monthly flows out of our economy into other states that do have lotteries."

But any proposal would be controversial.

Opponents argue that players have only a tiny chance of winning, the games encourage compulsive gambling, lotteries can be corrupted, they encourage the growth of organized crime and poor people will be more likely to gamble away their savings.

"We certainly wouldn't be surprised to see it introduced. But it's irresponsible tax policy," said Phil Strickland of Dallas, director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

"You're making it a vested interest for the state to create as many losers as possible. It's not going to bring in the kind of tax revenue needed to improve the state's fiscal condition," Strickland said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, December 7, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: There are no shortcuts to the top. Hard work will determine how high you rise at place of employment. Your family and friends will offer unstinting support if you are candid about your aims. A child could play a major role in a romantic decision. Home life becomes more relaxing. Even if you think someone is on the wrong track, hear him out. Showing respect for other people's opinions creates good will. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actor David Carradine, "Crazy Like a Fox" co-star John Rubenstein, Sammy Davis Jr., actor James MacArthur, Flip Wilson, fashion designer Adele Simpson, author James Thurber.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A special outing puts you in great humor. Take along someone who will really appreciate the experience. Make overdue household repairs. Procrastination could lead to additional expense. Get several estimates.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do what you can to encourage family members to show each other more love and understanding. Mending a rift now will make the coming holidays much happier. Forget past grievances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Check out a real estate venture with someone you trust. A child's education could prove more expensive than you anticipated. Build savings. A well-timed proposal meets with success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Request what you need but do not apply pressure. Generosity cannot be forced. Let romance develop at its own pace and it will last longer. Your warm-hearted manner wins you many friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Renew an old friendship and romance could blossom. Let go of ideas that you know are wrong for you. Do not despair if your good intentions backfire. You'll triumph later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Socializing will be good for both you and a close relationship. Travel should be seen as an adventure, not an escape. A strong romantic attraction could lead to a new alliance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A friend volunteers to help with a decorating or cleaning project. Accept with gratitude. Brighten your home with some artistic touches. You are more affected by your surroundings than you think.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A disappointing start will turn into a runaway success if you continue to work hard. Refuse to be discouraged by someone's initial reaction. Your loyalty will bring you rich rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Meet your obligations even if not in the mood. Others are counting on you to do the right thing. Borrowing money is not the solution to financial pressures. Review your options.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A newcomer finds you irresistible. A long-cherished dream could finally come true. A cash gift is part of the picture. You are delighted to be able to help someone!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to catch up on your rest. Take an afternoon nap if planning to be out late tonight. Listen intently to what others have to say. Valuable insights are possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take that special someone to dinner this evening and you'll set the stage for a wonderful weekend. The fault may be in your attitude, not in the stars, if something doesn't work out.

For club members, Christmas had come early. Trump Coup Tommy had been in his usual form right through November, going down in easy contracts and lining everyone's pockets but his own. True to form, however, whenever trumps broke badly he became transformed into a master technician. Witness this hand.

Once again, Tommy's bidding was as bad as his play is normally. His partner could easily have held the king of hearts, in which case there might have been play for a grand slam. This time, he lucked out.

West made his normal lead of the jack of diamonds, and no sooner had dummy hit the table than Tommy's bearing changed. Gone was the bumbler, replaced by the maestro of the green baize. He won in hand and immediately led a low trump to the jack. West had to play low and the knave won as East showed out.

To make his contract now, Tommy needed to reduce his trump length. To accomplish that he would have to ruff at least one club in hand, so West also had to hold at least three clubs.

He cashed the ace-king of clubs, crossed to dummy with the queen of spades and ruffed a club. When East showed out on the third club, a spade ruff became a danger but another club ruff proved to be safe. Tommy cashed his high diamonds and ruffed his loser on the board. A club ruff reduced his trump length to that of West, and the king of spades was cashed to extricate West's last exit card. Now as Tommy and West were down to nothing but three trumps each, Tommy simply led a low trump. West was forced to win, and then had to lead away from his king into Tommy's ace-queen tenace.

Anne Baxter remains in critical condition following a cerebral hemorrhage. Currently playing matriarch Victoria Cabot on television's "Hotel," Miss Baxter won an Academy Award for best supporting actress in 1946.

NEW YORK (AP) — Academy Award winning actress Anne Baxter remained in critical condition today at a hospital after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage.

Miss Baxter, whose 45-year career also included a starring role in ABC-TV's "Hotel," collapsed while walking Wednesday.

Her Los Angeles publicist, Joyce Wagner, said the actress was diagnosed as suffering a cerebral hemorrhage, and was admitted to Lenox Hill Hospital. She was in the intensive care unit.

Ms. Wagner denied a published report that Miss Baxter, 62, was brain dead, but said the actress was unconscious. She said doctors had run tests on Thursday, and were to perform more today.

Ms. Wagner said Miss Baxter's daughters had been at her bedside.

Merlene Parris, the hospital administrator on duty, said early today that Miss Baxter remained in critical condition.

Miss Baxter, who has three daughters from the first two of her three marriages, is the granddaughter of architect Frank Lloyd Wright. She joined the weekly series "Hotel" in 1983 when Bette Davis, who starred as hotel owner Laura Trent, became ill.

Miss Baxter's role is that of the wealthy widow Victoria Cabot, who runs the hotel.

Miss Baxter made her Broadway debut at age 13 in "Seen But Not Heard," and her feature film debut in 1940 in "Twenty Mule Team."

She went on to appear in such films as "The Magnificent Ambersons," "The Pied Piper" and "Five Graves to Cairo" while under contract to 20th Century-Fox Studios.

In 1946, she won the Academy Award for best supporting actress in the movie, "The Razor's Edge." She was nominated for an Oscar again in 1950 for her portrayal of the young actress Eve Harrington in "All About Eve," in which Miss Davis played the aging star Margo Channing.

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Norman Mailer recited poetry while performing a balancing act, poet Erica Jong made an entrance aboard an elephant and novelist Ken Follette juggled with a clown as writers became circus performers for a benefit.

"I know a town with sighs of sea, white with the tides of me, white as the spine of the sea," Mailer recited Thursday night as he teetered, to the cheers of the crowd, on a "bongo board" in the single ring of the Big Apple Circus.

"Passages" author Gail Sheehy performed acrobatics with the circus' Wozniak Troupe at the event, which celebrated the 15th anniversary of Poets & Writers, an organization that assists fledgling writers.

"I've never felt so humble in my life. The circus is the epitome of excellence," Mailer said before launching into his poetry-and-balancing act.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A production manager of a theater that's inaccessible to the disabled used a forklift to get violinist Itzhak Perlman inside.

Perlman

Perlman is partially paralyzed from polio, but when Frank Gardner suggested to Perlman's manager several days ago that they carry the violinist in, he got an unequivocal "no."

Later, Gardner spotted a forklift at a nearby construction project and operator Kurt Zwicker volunteered to do the job.

Perlman was lifted to the back door and performed Wednesday night for a capacity crowd of more than 1,400 people at the Capital Theater.

Gardner said he rode along with Perlman because "if anything happens to him, I might as well be dead, too."

CORALVILLE, Iowa (AP) — There was no room at the inn for The Amazing Kreskin, but the innkeeper said there might have been if the entertainer's staff hadn't insisted on free lodging for him.

"They said he's been on 'Johnny Carson' 71 times, so of course he should have a free room," said Elinor Hogound, who owns and operates the King's Inn with her husband, Bud.

After he was turned away Thursday morning, Kreskin checked in at the Holiday Inn. He called his publicist to say he'd been refused a room at the King's Inn because Mrs. Hogound thought he and his entourage in their Ford van were a rock band.

Mrs. Hogound said it was true the motel had stopped admitting rock bands because "we've gotten so many rooms ripped up."

Kreskin, who claims to have extra-sensory powers, was in neighboring Iowa City for an appearance.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Sherman, whose star rose briefly as a teen singing idol in the late 1960s, still maintains a kid's fantasy in his back yard: a scale model of Disneyland's Main Street.

Sherman, who sang "Julie, Do Ya Love Me" and starred in television's "Here Come the Brides," said this week he started the project as therapy soon after the end of his reign as teen heart-throb.

"At first, I thought it would take just three months," said Sherman, who intended the replica as a playhouse for his two sons. It ended up taking two years of work and $15,000 to $20,000 in materials.

The one-fifth size model features elaborate detail, down to gables and shutters.

Moon may have once danced rings around Earth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early in its life, the Earth may have had a giant ring formed by material slung from its surface, and the remains of that ring may be the moon, according to a new theory.

Astronomer Richard H. Durisen says a thick ring of material spun off from the early Earth by a giant disruption of its molten surface may have resulted in the planet's only satellite.

The Indiana University scientist said his results, obtained using supercomputers to do mathematical simulations of the young planet, indicate the moon was not ripped from the Earth as solid chunks after being rammed by another body, as many astronomers believe.

This widely accepted theory says an object the size of Mars struck a relatively solid Earth, flinging material from both bodies into orbit around the planet to eventually form the moon.

But the Durisen said the events he studied in computer simulations, culminating with years of work on the model, probably occurred during the first few million years of the Earth's more than four billion year history.

Primitive Earth probably was still molten and fluid when disrupted by a powerful force, such as a collision with a large, planet-sized body, he said.

The impact would have increased the earth's spin, throwing off material to form a thick ring of particles and rocks instead of a solid moon, he said in a report to the National Science Foundation, which supports his research at Bloomington, Ind.

"The moon could have formed from part of the ring of material that spun away from Earth while the rest of the ring material was scattered and lost," Durisen said.

The lost material, consisting of several times the mass of the moon, may have become asteroids, meteors and space dust that drifted off into orbit around the sun, he said in a telephone interview. Some of the material probably was later swept up by the Earth, he added.

The moon does not have enough angular momentum in its orbit to have been formed by a major impact on a rapidly spinning, solid planet, Durisen said, and loss of the remaining ring material could be an explanation. Angular momentum is a concept physicists use to measure the tendency of a rotating body to remain the same over time.

The missing momentum was in the part of the ring that vanished, he said.

'Ex Ex' extolled in exhibition of expedition

WASHINGTON (AP) — In this era of space flight, the thrill of sailing fragile wooden ships into the unknown is distant history, but it's history with an impact still being felt.

A century and a half ago, less was known about many parts of Earth than is now understood about the Moon and other planets, and seafaring nations launched their sailors and scientists to learn about this planet.

A pioneer among those efforts was the United States Exploring Expedition — known as the "Ex Ex" — which departed Hampton Roads, Va., on Aug. 18, 1838, on a four-year trip that, among other things:

— Established that Antarctica is a continent.

— Developed charts of hundreds of previously unexplored islands in the Pacific, some still in use in World War II.

— Explored much of the new Oregon Territory.

— And brought back massive scientific collections that eventually formed the basis of the Smithsonian Institution's Museum of Natural History.

It is the Smithsonian that is now recalling that trip with its "Ex Ex Ex," a year-long Exploring Expedition Exhibition at the Natural History Museum, which opened Nov. 14.

After a year in Washington, the exhibit will then go on tour for two years visiting museums in Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Tacoma, Wash., Anchorage, Alaska, and New York.

Entitled "Magnificent Voyagers: The U.S. Exploring Expedition, 1838-1842," the show displays more than 1,400 objects of the thousands brought back by Lt. Charles Wilkes and his sailors and scientists.

A strong and colorful character, Wilkes railroaded the expedition through to a successful conclusion, but subsequently received little credit — perhaps as a result of a controversial personality that eventually led to court martial and public censure.

Refused the rank of captain, Wilkes assumed it anyway once under way and led his naval vessels and nine civilian scientists around the world, covering 87,000 miles. Two of the six ships were lost en route.

Wilkes produced the first accurate charts of hundreds of islands, including Hawaii. He mapped Oregon and 1,500 miles of Antarctica and established the United States as a naval and scientific force in the world, historians conclude.

The vast collections of plants, animals, shells, rocks, fossils and other items brought back by the scientists were given to the Smithsonian Institution in 1857, permanently altering the character of the institution, which was then transformed from a research institute to a museum.

"The expedition was a scientific declaration of independence," commented Herman Viola of the Smithsonian, who organized the new exhibit.

That this first major American expedition has lacked wide historical notice stems from a variety of reasons, including Wilkes' personality and eventual conviction for excessive punishment of servicemen, as well as controversy surrounding some of the scientific findings.

How about giving true meaning of Christmas?

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — Faye Gregory's friends don't realize it yet, but they are giving vaccinations and livestock for Christmas to people they don't even know.

A church-sponsored variation on the Christmas shopping ritual allows Ms. Gregory to purchase items for the world's needy while sending cards to friends describing what they are giving.

Ms. Gregory did her shopping at the Garden Grove United Methodist Church, where six booths offered items for the world's poverty-stricken.

A dose of vaccine cost 50 cents, so did a chicken. Tree seedlings were a dime. Goats cost $100 and water pumps went for $280.

The markets began in 1979 at five churches of various denominations and have spread to more than 40 churches throughout Southern California. An estimated $170,000 was raised last year.

In Orange County, markets at five churches opened Sunday.

"It's really a joyful thing," said Hannah Lafler, one of the organizers. "I think people have gotten to the saturation point. They realize that people today already have so many things. This is a gift that extends itself."

Money raised will go to the Church World Service, a national foundation that distributes money and supplies to disaster areas and refugees and provides economic support in underdeveloped areas.

Block would go along with freeze on subsidy 'target prices'

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many farmers are going through the worst financial bind since the Great Depression of the 1930s, but Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says things may improve in the latter part of next year.

"There are some positive signs on the horizon," Block said this week. "First of all, the interest rates are down quite a bit from what they were. I think they will come down some more."

Further, he told a news conference, the move in Congress to help the beleagured Farm Credit System will mean improved service for many farmers. And new farm legislation awaiting final action by Congress "should make us more competitive in international trade" and help agriculture generally.

Meanwhile, he said, the Reagan administration will continue to oppose several features in the 1985 farm bill that could drive up government costs over the next few years, including attempts to delay reductions in crop payments.

Block said the administration is working very hard to hold crop program costs to $50 billion over the next three years. He said the Senate's bill would cost around $58 billion and the House version about $56 billion.

One sticking point, he said, is a freeze on target prices at current levels. Block said he would go along with a one-year freeze but not longer than that, as called for in the House and Senate bills.

Target prices determine the amount of crop subsidies farmers get. When market prices fall below the target, so-called "deficiency payments" are required to help make up the difference.

Block said dairy supports should be reduced beginning in 1986, not maintained until 1987 as the Senate bill now seeks. The House version calls for dairy farmers to be assessed to finance the purchase of surplus herds of cows as a way of cutting production.

The administration does not support the herd buy-out concept, Block said, adding that lower supports will discourage dairy farmers from producing surplus milk.

"We are going to be very aggressive in trying to achieve a reduction in dairy price support in 1986 inasmuch as the program is costing us more and more money all the time, and it would be irresponsible to wait until 1987 to send that kind of message to the dairymen of this country," Block said.

The administration also opposes provisions that would change the 1985 programs for several crops, including payments of $35 per acre to soybean farmers who take part in this year's program.

"We do not support changes or modifications in existing 1985 programs, those being sugar, rice, soybeans, a program for sunflowers and other new initiatives," he said. "We will be opposing those on the grounds that...they do create some inequities, but most of all they create more cost overruns."

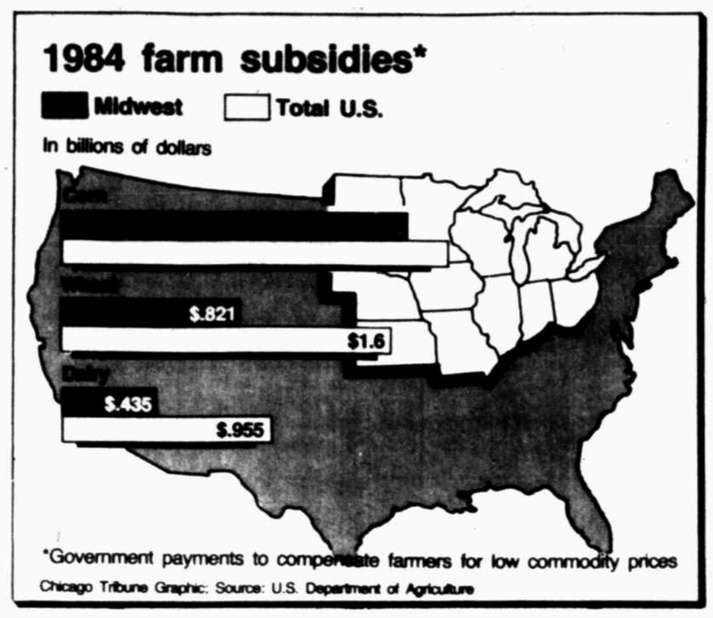

Block made no flat predictions when Congress might send a farm bill to President Reagan. But he noted a House-Senate conference committee was scheduled to meet this week and that a compromise might be reached "perhaps by the end of next week."

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in history, Americans are consuming more sweeteners made from corn than they get from sugar, according to an Agriculture Department report.

"Corn sweeteners in 1985 will be about 50 percent of U.S. caloric sweetener use, compared with nearly 49 percent for sugar," the report said. The remainder comes from honey and edible syrups.

The report was released Wednesday at the department's annual outlook conference. It was written by John L. Nuttall of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service and Robert D. Barry of the Economic Research Service.

Most of the corn sweetener is HFCS or high-fructose corn sweetener, which has gain popularity among soft-drink makers in recent years. It also includes glucose and dextrose mixtures.

According to the report, the total U.S. consumption of corn sweeteners this year is estimated at 7,669,000 tons, dry basis, up from 6,844,000 tons in 1984.

The use of refined sugar in 1985 was put at 7,477,000 tons, compared with 8,008,000 tons last year.

Of the 1985 corn sweetener total, HFCS is expected to make up 5,100,000 tons, up from 4,300,000 tons in 1984.

Next year, the report showed, total corn sweetener use could climb to 7,793,000 tons, including 5,200,000 tons of HFCS. Sugar consumption is expected to fall to 7,450,000 tons.

On a per capita basis, 1985 consumption of corn sweeteners was forecast at 64.2 pounds, up from 57.9 pounds in 1984. That could rise to 64.6 pounds in 1986. Per capita sugar consumption this year was indicated at 62.6 pounds, down from 67.5 pounds in 1984, and could drop to 61.8 pounds in 1986. from WASHINGTON (AP) — Algeria is having an egg shortage, apparently because of some wrong decisions by government planners, according to an Agriculture Department report.

"Algeria has been the largest egg importer in the world, taking up to a billion table eggs per year," although the country hopes to become self-sufficient, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

"During the spring and summer months, sharply higher production failed to find ready markets due to the normal downturn in demand during the hot season," the report said.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas now has 3,000 percent more livestock herds certified free of the brucellosis disease than there were five years ago, Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission, reported Wednesday.

"Thanks to the cooperation of Texas livestock producers, we have made more advances in control of brucellosis in this state during the past five years than has perhaps taken place in all years previous," Holcombe said.

These rules 'fir' those who 'pine' for a Christmas tree

Selecting your Christmas tree wisely and giving it proper care will help it last throughout the holiday season.

First, consider the tree species. Common species grown in Michigan, Minnesota and Oregon and sold in Texas include Scotch pine and Douglas fir. There are also some spruce, noble fir and concolor fir. All make acceptable Christmas trees. They are cut in October, then stored and shipped south as Christmas approaches. Generally, these trees are in good condition when they arrive in Texas.

In recent years, Christmas tree farms have sprung up in southern states, including Texas. Virginia pines are grown in these states and make desirable Christmas trees because they have a pleasing fragrance and relatively short needles and can be pruned readily to a desirable shape. They also have an advantage of freshness over trees shipped in from other states.

Buy your Christmas tree early so you can select the type of tree you want. Check for signs of needle shedding and brittleness, which indicate that the tree has become too dry. If a tree is too dry when purchased, it will continue to dry out even though it is set in water. Generally, trees available on retail lots in Texas are fresh and can be expected to remain usable in the home throughout the Christmas season.

When you get the tree home, cut one to two inches off its base on a slant. Stand the tree in water and store in a shaded area until you're ready to bring it inside. Keep water in the stand at all times and your tree will remain fresh.

In the home, place the tree away from all heat sources, such as a fireplace or heating unit. Check the water level often; a tree may use as much as a pint of water a day.

Keep you tree lighting system in good working order by inspecting and discarding wires with frayed insulation, broken sockets and loose connections. Use only lights and cords that carry the safety seal of Underwriters Laboratory.

Finally, remove gift wrappings and packing materials from around the tree once you have opened Christmas packages.

By selecting a fresh tree and following a few safety rules, everyone can have a safe and happy holiday season.

Weed and brush, both constant foes of ranchers, will be spotlighted Dec. 17 during the Trans-Pecos Weed and Brush Control Symposium in Fort Stockton.

The day-long symposium in the Large Community Building will run from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., according to Dr. Allan McGinty, Range Specialist in Fort Stockton with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

McGinty, a key coordinator, said the symposium is designed to update producers on new herbicides and application techniques available for weed and brush control in Far West Texas.

Among topics for discussion will be integrated brush management systems (IBMS), a new concept for integrating weed and brush control systems with the total ranch management program.

Also to be presented will be new data obtained recently concerning perennial broomweed's economic impact on livestock production and present and future herbicides and management techniques for its control.

Other topics to be covered include control and management of sand shinnery, prickly-pear, locoweed, creosotebush, tarbush, catclaw, acacia, whitehorn and catclaw mimosa. Information will also be given on what McGinty refers to as an "exciting new herbicide for mesquite control."

For more information about the program or registration costs, contact McGinty at 336-7542 in Fort Stockton or Zan Matthies, Pecos County Extension Agent, 336-2541.

Entomologists arming for battle of the bees

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Kern County has won the battle of the "killer" bees. Next comes the war.

Norman Gary, the entomologist from the University of California at Davis who found the first Africanized bee hive in Kern County last summer, isn't optimistic about the next round.

"Even with all the bee researchers in the country working on this problem, we're going to be hard-pressed to develop solutions in the time frame that we have left," Gary said.

That frame is about five years, when massive swarms of the feared bees are expected to cross from Mexico to Texas.

Kern County declared victory against the bee on Monday, and a state quarantine was lifted for a 1,088-square-mile area in the southern San Joaquin Valley.

However, a federal quarantine will remain in effect until January. That requires federal certificates for the movement of bees from the quarantine zone to any other state.

California paid for the majority of the $1 million eradication project, which involved 76 workers covering a 462-square mile quarantine zone and an additional 400-square-mile survey zone.

In Kern County, only a few Africanized bees invaded an area dominated by European honeybees and could not gain a foothold.

Colonies with Africanized traits were killed with pesticides, but that procedure cannot be used in a widespread attack because the chemicals kill both the unwanted Africanized and beneficial European bees.

So, the best hope is that Africanized bees will mate with European honeybees during their northward migration and lose some of their aggressive traits such as stinging en masse.

"We have hopes that, when the main front arrives, we will be dealing with a quite different bee than the highly Africanized variety," said Len Foote, who directed the Kern County attack.

No one knows how the killer bees arrived a year or two ago in desolate oil and farming region in western Kern County, about 150 miles north of Los Angeles, but it is thought the bees may have hitchhiked aboard oil equipment shipped from South America.

Their presence was discovered last June after an oil field worker noticed a swarm engulf a rabbit. Federal, state and county authorities launched a cooperative eradication project that shut down Monday after finding 12 Africanized colonies and inspecting about 22,000 samples of bees from the area.

Of the 12 Africanized colonies, seven were commercial and five were wild. Three were considered highly Africanized, and the remainder had varying degrees of aggressiveness.

Africanized bees, which are native to sub-Saharan Africa, became a threat in the Western Hemisphere when experimental swarms escaped in Brazil in the 1950s.

"When they arrive in an area by their natural migration, they build up populations very rapidly," said Howell Daly, a bee researcher at the University of California at Berkeley. "The history has been throughout Central and South America that European bees disappear as an entity for whatever reason."

Scientists believe experimental genetic management will be the answer to migration.

"By manipulating the genetics of bees, we hope to manipulate their range, the area they might infest," Gary said. "Furthermore, we hope to alter some of their behavioral characteristics, such as their inclination to sting, and we would like to control more effectively their reproduction," much like scientists alter livestock genes.

Africanized bees pose an economic threat to beekeepers and farming in general. Although a single Africanized bee's sting is no more dangerous than the bite of a domestic bee, the swarming behavior of the intruders multiplies the risk.

"The general public has to realize that bees basically are one of our best friends in agriculture," Gary said. "The bottom line being that one-third of the total food in this country requires honeybee pollination."

Africanized honeybees seem less inclined than their European relatives to pollinate some crops, such as almonds and tomatoes, which worries those growers.

"It's very difficult to make a legitimate comparison between what's happened in South America and what may happen when the bees reach the United States," Gary conceded. "The frightening thing about this whole scenario is that we really don't know the final outcome, and the stakes are so high."

The California bees are apparently the first swarms to be established in the United States. But they weren't the first to arrive.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the first Africanized bees were detected in the United States on July 6, 1979, when two colonies were found on a ship that docked at Corpus Christi.

Last year, some dead Africanized bees were found in cargo on a ship that docked in Oswego, N.Y., after sailing from South America.

In all, there have been six known landings of Africanized bees in the United States, according to the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, which watches the nation's borders and ports for bugs and blotches that might harm U.S. crops and animals.

NATION IN BRIEF

Cuban advisers in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban military advisers appear to be engaging in actual combat against U.S.-supported rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government, and some have been killed, a State Department official says.

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, said there are about 2,500 Cuban advisers in Nicaragua.

An unspecified number of those Cuban advisers were among the 14 people killed this week in the downing of a Nicaraguan helicopter by rebel forces, he said.

Cole executed in Nevada

Cole

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Carroll Edward Cole, who confessed to 13 killings he said were revenge against his abusive mother, was executed today by injection after rejecting appeals because "it would be unbearable to stay on here."

Cole, 47, was pronounced dead at 2:10 a.m. PST, six minutes after three deadly chemicals were pumped into his body. Cole was the first person executed in the state since 1979 and the 50th in the United States since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976.

Cole was convicted in Texas of strangling three Dallas women in 1980. He was extradited to Nevada where he was convicted of murdering Kathryn Joan Blum in 1977 and the 1979 strangulation of Marie Cushman, both in Las Vegas. He was sentenced to death for the 1979 murder.

Graham: 'My world' is NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — "This is really my world," said William R. Graham with enthusiasm, in his first interview as boss of the $8 billion-a-year U.S. space program. "I do feel comfortable here. They can understand what I'm saying and I can understand what they say."

Brave words from a man who had only 10 days on the payroll to learn the complicated running of an agency with 22,000 employees who train astronauts, fly space shuttles, launch satellites, develop new aircraft, study charged particles in space and manage hundreds of other projects.
