"There are numerous basic points within the framework of the agenda on which agreement must be reached and on which there are presently a wide divergence of views."

- 1. Adoption of the agenda. (Already completed.)
2. Fixing a military demarcation line between both sides as to establish a demilitarized zone as a basic condition for a cessation of hostilities.
3. Concrete arrangements for a cease-fire and an armistice, including the composition, authority and functions of an organization to supervise the carrying out of the terms.
4. Arrangement relating to prisoners of war.

The UN announced said that following the approval of the agenda, the negotiators began a preliminary discussion of the other items "in order that a potential for halting bloodshed in Korea may be realized as soon as possible."

This indicated that the delegations talked on the question of the demilitarized zone to be established between the opposing armies.

Prolonged debate was anticipated on this item. The UN wants the demarcation line fixed along the present fighting front, which extends 26 miles north of the 38th Parallel in the east.

The Communists, on the other hand, want the Allies to fall back across the 38th Parallel, pre-war frontier between South and Communist North Korea.

The Communists broke last week's stalemate on the agenda yesterday by removing their demand that the withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea be considered at the armistice talks.

In its place, they submitted a compromise proposal which was accepted today by Chief UN Negotiator Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy. Its details were not disclosed.

Communist newsmen in Kaesong predicted that it would take two to three weeks to work out an armistice, and an additional two weeks to put it into effect. Thus a cease-fire might not be reached until September.

Announcement of the agreement on an agenda followed one of the shortest meetings yet held in Kaesong—an hour and 15-minutes, including a 15-minute recess requested by the Communists.

As first business, Chief UN Delegate Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy apparently accepted the Communist compromise proposal on the question of withdrawing foreign troops from Korea.

Chief Communist Negotiator North Korean Gen. Nam Il originally had demanded that the withdrawal be placed on the cease-fire talks agenda apparently as a condition of an armistice.

This the UN delegation refused to do. It contended the withdrawal was a political question which could be considered only as part of a general peace settlement.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

Is Administration for It? Then Congress Is Agin It

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—It's a completely unpredictable, run-away Congress. More so than perhaps ever before. Trying to figure out why the Congress is doing some of the things it has done in extending price control legislation is a completely frustrating experience.

Only one general observation can be made. Anything that President Truman or any of his officials recommend is opposed, by a majority of the congressmen, even if the recommendation is obviously good. Relations between the White House and Capitol Hill are that bad. It is a completely chaotic situation.

What is coming out of Congress now seems to be entirely the results of individual lawmakers' own convictions. A healthy majority of them seem to be thinking pretty much alike and viewing the world through the same window. This majority is composed of nearly all the Republicans and Southern Democrats.

VETERAN observers of congressional high jinks shake their heads and admit they have never seen anything like it. There is no leadership worthy of the name in either house of Congress.

Power of the Republican-Southern Democrat combination is best illustrated in Minnesota Republican August Andresen's amendment to bar importation of foreign butter, fats and oils if there are U. S. surpluses.

On its face, this looked like a dairy lobby job. But what was not emphasized is that the Andresen amendment also included bans on imports of rice, peanuts and soybeans. They were put in to get the southern farm bloc vote. It is old-fashioned legislative log-rolling and mutual back-scratching. Incidentally, it was passed without a recorded vote.

One of the main arguments in its favor was that there was no sense in having the government pay support prices on U. S. fats and oils production if foreign imports were cheaper. This makes sense as far as it goes.

The obvious remedy, however, would be to repeal the whole farm price support program, to save the taxpayers money and reduce prices to consumers. If farmers and farm product processors want free markets, without artificial controls, the place to begin would be to abolish all price supports, which are artificial controls to keep prices up. But nobody mentioned that.

What you have here, therefore, is an artificial, international trade barrier. It is a virtual high tariff written into a price-control law. As a legislative monstrosity, it probably has no equal.

IN about the same class is Kansas Republican Rep. Cliff Hope's amendment banning livestock slaughtering quotas. This is also a pick-up from the Senate-passed price control measure, so it will probably stick.

Office of Price Stabilization officials say that what this amendment will probably do is guarantee black markets.

Essence of the quota system is the licensing of all slaughterers. In World War II the number of slaughterers rose to 26,000. Half of them were black market. OPA didn't move in to license them till late in the war. This is a principal reason why the black market got out of hand then.

This time, Price Stabilizer Michael V. DiSalle moved in early to license slaughterers and keep out the black marketeers. OPS thus held the number of licensed slaughterers to 12,000 legitimate operators.

What the quota system is intended to do is merely to see that available supplies of meat animals are divided equitably among the licensed slaughterers. It would prevent livestock raisers and feeders from selling to the black market slaughter houses.

American Meat Institute, the packers' trade association, said the quota system is necessary, if there are any price controls. Mr. DiSalle has said often that price controls could not be effective unless there were quotas and licenses.

Disregarding this pressure from the meat industry and the Price Administrator, Congress banned the quota system. So what you have is a black market built into the price control law.

KILLER'S PACE

THE STORY: In order to save Rose Bidault from the electric chair, Star Williams, her lawyer, tampers with the evidence and is exposed after Rose is acquitted. The only thing that can save Star from dishonor is to prove that Rose was innocent. But a few hours after Rose's release she is murdered. Jim Marshall, Star's lie-man, have turned up some leads involving Larry Stone, playboy pal of Rose, and others, including Carl Prater, who conspired to burial vaults and who was a partner of Barney Bidault, before Barney, Rose's husband, was murdered.

XIV
I WENT straight back to the office and got in touch with Paul Waltz at the World Wide Detective Agency and hired him to put a nail on Carl Prater, the manufacturer of the hermetically sealed burial vault. I arranged to meet him around 8 that night.

When I told Star Williams he asked me to phone Smiley Wertheimer and have him make an appointment for a demonstration of the sealed vault with me as a spectator.

I didn't know what Star expected me to find out from a demonstration of a burial vault, but I didn't argue. Star was running the show, not me. I found Smiley at the funeral parlor this time, and he agreed reluctantly to phone the Prater firm.

"I'll give the sales manager an excuse to pester us to death from now on," he complained.

I was there a little before five, and Smiley was a couple of minutes late. Wertheimer, the sales manager, was waiting, and he fell all over Smiley. Smiley introduced me as a cost-accountant, and Wertheimer shook my hand with an excess of cordiality. He led us back past a pretty receptionist, who had also been held overtime, though I couldn't figure out the reason for that.

Off from the main offices was a special room about 20 feet square. I was special because it had the most special equipment I had ever seen.

"This is our demonstration room," said Wertheimer proudly. "This glass tank is what we use to demonstrate the principle of the hermetically sealed vault. As you can see, it is half-filled with water. The vault is suspended above the tank on a hydraulic hoist. The little platform just above the water is also operated by the hoist, but it is not lowered into the water until the vault is lowered over it.

"There is no bottom to the vault, nothing to prevent the water from filling the interior of the vault save air-pressure. Thus is the principle of its hermetic seal graphically illustrated. I want you to note that the Prater vault is all in one piece with no welding to become defective and permit a loss of air pressure."

"Okay, Wertheimer. I know about vaults. How about putting on your show?" Smiley said.

Wertheimer smilingly nodded. He reached for a suspended wall cord and pulled it. Then he walked over to a portable bar close by and opened it.

"It will take Miss Mayhew, our receptionist, a few moments to prepare for the demonstration."

I noted that Wertheimer made his own mixed drink very weak. He was a little man with a deeply lined face, and I figured him for four ulcers.

THE door opened. Smiley and I turned, and our eyes almost popped right out. It was Miss Mayhew in a yellow satin midriff bathing suit. She had a beautiful tan to go with the suit, and I'd never dreamed when I'd seen her seated at her desk out there that her body was that perfect. She smiled demurely.

"Miss Mayhew," said Wertheimer with great dignity. "This is Mr. Wertheimer and Mr. Marshall. Miss Mayhew was good enough to stay after hours to demonstrate the vault. All ready, Clara?"

Clara's smile indicated that she was quite ready. It was a pleasure to watch her climb the ladder and step onto the platform into the tank. She'd evidently made the course many times, for she balanced herself on the narrow platform in a supine position on her back, turning her head the while to give us another smile. Her blonde hair almost fell to the water but not quite. Wertheimer pushed a lever, and the vault began to descend over her. She continued to smile until she was completely out of view. Then the platform Mayhew was lowered, and the vault was completely submerged.

"See for yourselves, Gentlemen. Miss Mayhew lies perfectly dry on the platform, the vault hermetically sealing her from the tankful of water! And mind you, there is not even a bottom to the vault!"

"What's to keep her from smothering to death?" asked Smiley.

"Oh, there's quite enough air in the vault to sustain Miss Mayhew for many minutes. Of course we keep the vault covered only long enough to illustrate our point."

HE moved the lever again, and the vault and platform began to rise. Finally the vault was again aloft above the smiling Miss Mayhew, who gracefully rose from the platform and descended via the ladder. Mr. Wertheimer was there again to take her hand.

"You will note, Gentlemen," he said proudly, "that Miss Mayhew is completely dry!"

Miss Mayhew smiled in the professional manner of a magical assistant. "I caught Smiley's eye and gave him the high-sign."

"Well, I've certainly appreciated your performance," he said. "And you stayed after hours, too! Could I show my appreciation by taking you to dinner?"

Miss Mayhew evidently knew her lines well. Wertheimer did not have to prompt her as she replied, "I'd be delighted, Mr. Wertheimer."

Ford Surpasses Sammy Baugh

ABILENE—John (Model T) Ford, three-time quarterback star for the Hardin-Simmons University Cowboys superseded Sammy Baugh's major college record of 267 pass completions last season the 1951 NCAA Football Guide reveals.
Ford's 311 completions last fall brought his four year total for the Cowboys to 291, not counting some post-season performances.
The Breckenridge, Texas, star, who is signed to play with the Philadelphia Eagles this fall, helped pass Warren E. Woodson's Cowboys to the number two position in the nation last year in pigskin throwing.
The Cowboys were listed second behind another Texas eleven, Southern Methodist University.
Ford was second in overhead yardage in 1950 with 1,777 yards, which ranks as the third best passing figure of all time.
Ford's 11- completions last fall was the sixth best effort in the nation and enabled him to rank fifth nationally in total offense with a mark of 1,720 yards.
The 23-year-old, 160 pound star completed 26 touchdown passes in the 1949 campaign, an achievement that surpasses anything on record. While at the Cowboy school, Ford pitched five touchdowns in three games, against Wichita, Loyola (Los Angeles) and Trinity.
His best effort in single games was established against Arizona State of Tempe, 1950 top offensive team, when he completed 22 of 25 passes, and against Trinity University, 1949, when he passed for a total of 339 yards.

Luke Easter Has Trouble

NEW YORK, July 26 (UP)—Luke Easter, who picked on Allie Reynolds for the first home run of his major league career, has been bothered by the Yankee right-hander ever since.

"There's no better guy off the diamond than Allie, but whenever I see him warm' up to pitch I start frettin'," Cleveland's luscious Larrupet said as he waited his turn in batting practice. "Allie's the toughest pitcher I ever came across in this man's league, or any other. He pitches me tight and is just wild enough to keep me loose. I just have too much trouble with that boy."

But Hal Newhouser is Luke's cousin.
"Hal's a nice boy to bat against. I hit 'em most of the time only I don't see him around as much as I used to."
Easter, a towering 230 pounds of black dynamite, carries most of Cleveland's pennant hopes in his bat. Casey Stengel calls him the "Big guy" the Indians must have to win. And their "big guy" missed 14 games earlier this season when his left leg went dead after he injured a muscle stretching for a bad throw.
"You can feel the brace right down there," he said, his big hands guiding the way to a section above his knee. "It still hurts some and slows me down on the close ones but I'm all right. I got a be, boy, because we're goin' right into the world series, don't fool yourself."

And Luke figures that if the leg holds up he can get 30 homers out of the season. He had hit 16 in games played through Tuesday, July 24.
"This is a nice park for hittin' even if we're havin' some losin' troubles in it," Luke said. "That's a nice little place out there to pop 'em." And he pointed toward the 295 foot sign in right field.
But Easter, who was the rage

Bearden Wants to Join Yanks; Thinks Stengel Can Help Him

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Henry Eugene Bearden hoped to be traded by the Tigers to the Yankees.
"Casey Stengel knows I can pitch," said the handsome lefthander who fell away to practically nothing after being the Cleveland handoff king in 1948.
Gene Bearden believes Stengel could straighten him out. He tells best why O' Case was Del Webb's rather surprising choice as manager of the New York Americans.
Bearden strikingly illustrates what happens to a trick pitcher once he loses the touch with his pet pitch.
Pitching the Indians to their first pennant in 28 years, winning the only play-off game in American League history and continuing his mastery in the World Series, Bearden could break his baffling knuckle ball down and in at the knees all afternoon or night.
Bearden's trouble started when he pulled the sciatic nerve in his right leg in the spring of 1949. The injury recurred. He didn't stay off the leg long enough, couldn't run and get the leg out where it should have been. He shortened his stride, lost control.

WITH Lou Boudreau rotating Lemon, Feller, Wynn and Garcia last season, Bearden was relegated to a relief role and whatnot until the Senators picked him up on waivers in August. The Tigers took him in on May.
Red Rolfe believed he was coming back.
"Rick Ferrell got him to change speeds. He has very fast arm action, and got set-up balls over the plate. He still lacks control of the knuckler and is not quite as swift as he was."
Bearden credits Stengel with putting him where he was.
"I had kicked around the Yankee chain for five years and spent two in the Navy," he said, "but didn't know how to pitch and think until the old professor got hold of me in 1946. He saw me work in a winter exhibition game in Hollywood between minor and major leagues, told me he'd like to have me in Oakland."
"Casey saw that I didn't have enough in what passed for my fast ball and the curve and slider, helped me develop the knuckler. He built my confidence until I had them hitting my kind of pitch, not theirs. I threw the knuckler at any time, especially when I was behind the hitter."

of the coast league two years ago, has popped 'em a lot further than that.
Roy Campanella of Brooklyn recalls a 500-footer that Easter smashed eight rows back into the remote centerfield bleachers at the Polo grounds. That one occurred when Easter was with the Homestead Grays, a Negro club. And last season the luscious one hoisted a clout 447 feet into the upper deck in the Indians' municipal stadium. The blast brought out a surveying party the next day, which decided that it was the longest hit in that cavernous park's history.
With all his power, Easter chokes up about an inch on the bat. Then, deceptively relaxed, he crouches and lets go.
Luke got his share of razzing and was knocked down plenty when Bill Veeck brought him on to Cleveland from the coast in 1949. He might rate to carry a few chips on his broad shoulder but he thoroughly affable and seemed to enjoy himself as he waited to hit.

Farmers Warned To Save Seed

COLLEGE STATION, July 25—In view of the short oat and wheat crops this year, farmers should save all possible seed for planting, particularly of the approved varieties, says E. A. Miller, agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Enough oats were produced to plant the 1952 crop, but Miller warns that there will be a shortage if farmers use all their oats for feed. The situation is a little better for wheat than for oats.

"Save good planting seed," Miller advises. "There will be a demand for seed where no oats were made."

He recommends saving all the Mustang oats and Quanah wheat produced. Most of the seed of these two new varieties planted last year were lost because of the drought and insects.

According to the June USDA crop report, the 1951 Texas oat crop is estimated at 12,576,000 bushels. This is about half of the 1950 production. The 10-year average for Texas is approximately 30 million bushels.

Mustang, New Nortex, Fultex, Ranger and Stanton are the recommended varieties of oats for Texas. Recommended wheat varieties are Quanah, Wichita, Triumph, Commanche and Westar.

Detroit man, explaining why he burned down his home: "I didn't like the neighborhood."

NOTICE!

We, the members of Dulin Daniel Post No. 70, the American Legion, would like to make the following statements regarding the unfortunate event that occurred last week involving the carnival sponsored by us.

The Post entered into an agreement with the Shafer Amusement Co. to sponsor a carnival at Eastland for one week. Shortly after the show opened Monday night, the Sheriff assisted by the highway patrol closed all concessions, including bingo, doll racks and similar booths leaving only the rides, a shooting gallery and a picture taking studio, stating that they were all games of chance.

Before making this contract we checked with De Leon on the type of carnival and reliability of the management. They stated that their contracts with the show for the past seven years had been satisfactory. We also went into detail with their representative on the type of games they had, stating that we did not wish to promote anything that would be considered gambling or that would be objectionable to the general public. Bingo and doll racks were mentioned but we did not consider them objectionable. As a result they agreed not to set up their penny pitch board which is played with coins and another game played with dice. They further agreed that after opening, any other games that proved objectionable would be closed on request. We had hoped to bring a show here that would meet with the approval of the public in general.

The Legion, as a service organization, spends a considerable amount of money each year in promoting and assisting civic projects. Sufficient money for these projects cannot be raised with the seventy-five cents from each member which is kept by the post. Our purpose in sponsoring this carnival was to furnish entertainment that the people would enjoy and at the same time acquire funds for future worthwhile purposes.

We are not of the opinion that the show was closed because of gambling as charged. Also the closing could have been handled differently, eliminating the inconvenience to all concerned. The Legion stands willing to cooperate with all city, county and state officials and law enforcement officers. All that we ask is the opportunity.

June Bride Has New Troubles

The June bride, so recently concerned with getting her man, is now returning from her honeymoon with concern of a different sort; how best, through all the years ahead, to keep him.

Understanding sympathy and kindness play an important part in continuing compatibility, but of equal importance is the degree to which a house or an apartment can be made a Home, Sweet Home, instead of merely living quarters.

A recent survey shows that the so-called average bride chalks up a bill of $1,750 to set up her home, and knowing that the shortest cut to a man's heart is through his stomach, she concentrates a good share of this sum in the kitchen and diningroom.

Any husband will be tolerant, at least for awhile, of imperfections in such specialized fields as baking and roasting, but woe to the blushing bride if she serves him a poor cup of coffee. He feels, and rightly so, that while his wife can't immediately measure up to "mom's cooking," she certainly should be able to serve a good cup of coffee.

Since many of today's brides are apt to have been working girls right up to the date of the wedding some will be inept housekeepers, even in so simple a department as coffee brewing. So take heed, young madam: here's a checklist of general recommendations for winning the everlasting approval of that Coffee-Loving Lovable Guy.

First, keep your coffee maker immaculately clean by washing it thoroughly after each use and rinsing with clear hot water. Always scald it before using.

Measure coffee and water accurately to guarantee consistency of flavor. Use one National Coffee Association standard measure of coffee—or its equivalent of two level tablespoons—to each six ounces of water (3-4 of a standard-measuring cup). For best results, start with freshly drawn cold water, brew at full capacity of your coffee maker, and serve as soon as possible. Coffee that has been allowed to cool can't be reheated without loss of flavor, and boiling it imparts a bitter taste; so hold it at serving temperature by placing the pot in a pan of hot water or over a low heat on an asbestos pad.

Never allow cloth filters to become dry and never wash them with soap or chemical cleaners. Keep the filter clean and sweet by immersing it in cold water and leaving it there until needed again.

A delicious cup of coffee, a good-morning kiss, and a sunny smile—the combination is guaranteed to lend special enchantment to the crucial breakfast hour that sets the tenor of each day.

Legion Chief Plans To Stay

EDITOR'S NOTE: The assassination of King Abdullah of Jordan shocked—and provided a source of possible danger—to his close friend and military adviser, the almost legendary Maj. Gen. John Bagot Glubb Pasha, British commander of Jordan's Arab legion. Glubb seldom gives interviews but he spoke freely in the following dispatch to a veteran United Press Correspondent in the Middle East who covered the legion's activities during the Palestine war.

By SAM SOUKI
United Press Staff Correspondent
AMMAN, JORDAN, July 26 (UP)—Maj. Gen. Bagot Glubb Pasha sipped a cup of bitter Arab coffee and spoke huskily about his affection for the late king Abdullah of Jordan.

He was visibly affected by Abdullah's assassination in old Jerusalem last Friday. But the slight, blue-eyed Briton said he had no intention of resigning as Commander of Jordan's Arab Legion because of the tragedy—no matter what lies ahead.

(Recent unconfirmed Middle East dispatches said an attempt had been made on Glubb's life a few weeks before Abdullah was assassinated.)

"Although I served Abdullah for 21 years and felt I lost a personal friend, I also feel my greatest obligations are towards the entire Hashemite family," Glubb said.

"Before coming here, I served under Faisal of Iraq for 10 years—so today I feel my obligations are greater than ever before. I have no intention of retiring."

The 54-year-old commander, whom the Arabs call affectionately "Father of the Little Jaw," pledged to serve under Abdullah's successors with the same devotion "unless they dispense with my services."

Quiet, unimpressive Glubb received his Arab nickname because of World War I injuries while serving with the British Army in France. Thrice-wounded he was shot through the jaw in one encounter. Surgeons were forced to remove part of his jaw bone.

Ft. Worth Has Traffic Death

HOUSTON, July 26 (UP)—Arvil Thomas, 34, of Fort Worth, died yesterday of a head injury he suffered in a traffic accident at Willis Sunday.

A truck driver for the Trinity Lumber Company, Thomas had gone to Willis for a load of lumber. He was backing into a driveway when an automobile struck his truck, tossing him to the pavement.

His wife, Vera, 38, escaped with minor head cuts.
