Officials say Soviet disaster under control

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials of the U.N. atomic energy agency said Friday that the Chernobyl disaster is by far the worst nuclear accident in history, but Soviet experts are getting it under control.

They said radiation still leaks slowly from the nuclear power plant's stricken No. 4 reactor, but the fire in its graphite core has been stopped and the Soviets will "entomb" it in concrete for a years-long cooling process.

Based on their observations and Soviet data, "It's clear...that the radioactive consequences of this accident are far more serious than in any accident so far, also that the radioactive releases to the environment are much more serious," Hans Blix, chief of the International Atomic Energy Agency, told a news conference.

Blix and his deputies said temperatures in the graphite core were dropping and uncontrolled downward burning of the nuclear fuel, commonly called the "China syndrome," is not an immediate threat.

tor at the Ukrainian plant April 26 spewed an invisible radioactive cloud over Europe that gradually has been working its way around the world.

No other governments reported health-threatening levels of radiation Friday.

After his group returned to the IAEA headquarters in Vienna, Austria, Friday, Blix said the Soviets had agreed to provide daily radiation readings from seven stations along their western border from the northern city of Leningrad to the Black Sea. These are to be relayed to national nuclear authorities, but not made public.

About 84,000 residents within an 18-mile radius of the plant were evacuated beginning 36 hours after the disaster. About 250,000 children are being let out of school early so they can leave Kiev, the Ukrainian capital of 2.4 million people 80 miles south of Chernobyl.

Journalists from Eastern Europe said a Soviet official told them a third person had died as a result of the accident. Official reports have said two people were killed and 204 hospitalized, 18 in serious condition.

An American bone-marrow specialist leads a team of doctors performing marrow transplants in Moscow on victims of severe radiation exposure.

The Kremlin made its sixth official statement on the disaster Friday evening, which consisted of three paragraphs and gave no new information.

All but one statement have been brief. The first, reporting the accident, was issued two days after it occurred, when high radiation levels had been detected in Scandinavia and Sweden demanded information.

Man dies when car washed from road

From Staff and Wire Reports

Severe thunderstorms continued to hit widespread portions of Texas Friday, causing one death and prompting flash floods, hail and tornado warnings, authorities said.

Finis Clay Bratcher, 39, the publisher of the Schleicher County Leader, died Friday morning after high waters washed his car from a farm-to-market road near Eldorado in Schleicher County, which is south of San Angelo, said Schleicher Sheriff Orval Edmiston.

His body was found about six hours later about a fourth of a mile from his car in two to three feet of water, authorities said.

The highway department closed Highway 163 in Val Verde County, and said that six inches of water fell. The department also said other minor roads were probably impassable in the northern part of the county.

The National Weather Service said 4 1/2 inches of rain fell in the northern part of Val Verde County.

However, sheriff's departments in several other counties said the turbulent weather caused no major injuries or damages. From 2 to 3 inches of rain fell in the Hill Country in a two-hour period Friday afternoon.

A funnel cloud was sighted by Concho County deputies about 3:40 p.m. but they said it went back into the clouds without causing any damage.

A tornado watch was in effect until late Friday night for a portion of Central Texas and a flash flood watch for most of the night for parts of North and South Texas.

More than two inches of rain fell within an hour in Young County in South Texas, causing road flooding, the weather service said.

At least three inches fell in western and central portions of Kerr County in South Central Texas. Additional heavy rainfall was expected while under a flash-flood warning.

As storms moved east, flooding covered portions of Denton County and the Dallas-Fort Worth megalopolis. In Denton, high waters stranded several autos and many had power outages, a police spokesman said.

Far West Texas, on the other hand, had clear skies while cloudiness covered most of the state.

Patches of fog and haze continued along the upper half of the Rio Grande River Valley.

Southeast winds prevailed over the state ahead of the frontal zone with southwesterly breezes over the area behind the zone. Speeds were mainly in the 10 to 20 mph range.

Midland will have clear skies and borderline hot temperatures today according to the National Weather Service. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport forecasts a temperature reading near 90 degrees today, and a nighttime low in the mid-50s. The high Sunday is to be in the low 90s.

Winds are to be southwesterly at 10 to 20 mph today.

Friday's peak temperature was 88 degrees, which didn't rival the record high of 101 degrees for a May 9 in 1967. The overnight low was 51 degrees. The record low of 40 degrees was set in 1981.

The forecast for the rest of the state called for thunderstorms to continue on today in North Texas and South Texas, with clear skies prevailing through Sunday in West Texas.

Highs should range from the 80s into the 90s, with lows tonight from the upper 40s in the West Texas mountains to the mid 70s in far South Texas.

Well-done beef may be carcinogenic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hamburgers that are broiled or fried well-done contain six chemicals that may cause mutations, chromosome damage or cancer in rodents, scientists said Friday.

The $2 million, six-year study at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory found the well-done ground beef contains three newly discovered mutagens and three known mutagens. Two other mutagens also were found, but they have not been identified or tested in animals.

Two of the three previously known mutagens are known to cause malignant tumors in mice and rats, said senior biomedical scientist James S. Felton.

The risk to humans from any of them remains unknown, the scientists said.

Mutagens are compounds that change genetic material in cells and sometimes can cause cancer in animals, said Felton, who presented his findings here at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research.

Sperm and egg cell mutations and damage to chromosomes, which determine inherited traits, can cause birth defects.

Arthur J. Miller, head scientist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture research laboratory in Philadelphia, said previous studies have found traces of unidentified mutagens in other well-done muscle meats, including other beef cuts, pork, chicken and fish with spines, although not in shellfish or organ meats like liver.

Felton said the compounds "could be a factor in the high colon cancer rates in this country, because of the high amounts of meat we eat. But we really need to do more work to understand how potent as carcinogens these might be."

"If people want to hedge their bets, just don't cook the meat to shoe leather," he added. "Don't cook it well-done."

Lawrence Garfinkel, the American Cancer Society's vice president of epidemiology and statistics in New York, said eating well-done meat "may increase the risk of (human) cancer, but so far we have no evidence that it does."

"Overcooking has not been implicated in any human health problem at this point," said George Wilson, vice president for science at the American Meat Institute, a trade group in Arlington, Va.

Wilson said avoiding well-done muscle meat "seems to be good advice, both from a safety standpoint and a palatability standpoint." But he warned that eating undercooked meat can result in meat-borne diseases such as trichinosis and salmonellosis.

Felton's 15-member research team detected eight mutagens in well-done broiled or fried hamburger, and identified six as aromatic amines, including three never seen before. All were present at parts-per-billion levels.

All eight triggered mutations in bacteria in a standard test meant to suggest a substance's cancer-causing potential, Felton said. Four caused mutations and chromosome damage in Chinese hamster cells and live mice, and Japanese scientists previously showed two induce the malignant tumors in rodents, he added.

"We're talking about frying and broiling. If you cook your meat at lower temperatures and make it well-done, like stewing, braising, microwaving or baking, you don't seem to get the degree of mutagens you do when you cook with a hot flame or hot surface like a frying pan," Felton said.

Increased calling may lead to reduced rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to a projected increase in calling, local telephone companies can reduce by $200 million a year the charge they make for handling the initiation and completion of long-distance calls, the government was told on Friday.

The reductions in the price paid by AT&T, MCI, Sprint and other long-distance companies is expected to lead to lower long-distance rates.

AT&T, which has the bulk of the long-distance business, has in the past passed these savings to customers.

Although only four-tenths of a cent per minute, the reduction would be substantial for big business users of long-distance. Separate long-distance price reductions, announced earlier, could go into effect June 1, if the FCC approves a proposed new AT&T pricing formula.

The companies that compete with AT&T have promised reductions, but have not announced their precise plans.

On May 2, The National Exchange Carrier Association, the clearing house for money collected from long-distance companies to help pay for switching equipment at each telephone company central office, was ordered by the FCC to recalculate the share that should be figured into the cost of each long-distance call.

Recalculations show computer error made in state spending estimates

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Whoops. A computer coding error led Comptroller Bob Bullock to overestimate April spending in the state's general revenue account by $65.2 million, Bullock's office admitted Friday.

Recalculations show that general revenue spending in the second month since Gov. Mark White ordered his austerity plan exceeded the average for the six preceding months by just 0.9 percent. The erroneous report, distributed to reporters Wednesday, maintained that April expenditures ran ahead of the September-through-February average by 24.6 percent.

"Uh-oh, haste makes waste," White said of the correction and the original report, which had cast further shadows on the possible effectiveness of his austerity plan. One week after White announced the plan, an analyst in Bullock's office called it unrealistic and said it could save "about $557 million under the most optimistic assumption...probably not much more than $200-300 million."

Bill Hamilton, White's top budget officer, said earlier this week that spending reduction plans agencies have filed with him indicate the state could save about $600 million by the Aug. 31, 1987. And of the current fiscal period.

The faulty computer program at the comptroller's office involved April accounts at the Department of Human Resources, the state's biggest spender. The mistake led the computer to include the agency's $95 million March expenses along with April's $81.1 million.

"Bullock has ordered corrective action to be taken, including dismissals," said Tony Proffitt, director of tax information in the comptroller's office. Proffitt said one supervisory employee at the agency is now out of a job.

Panel grants funds for restitution center

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

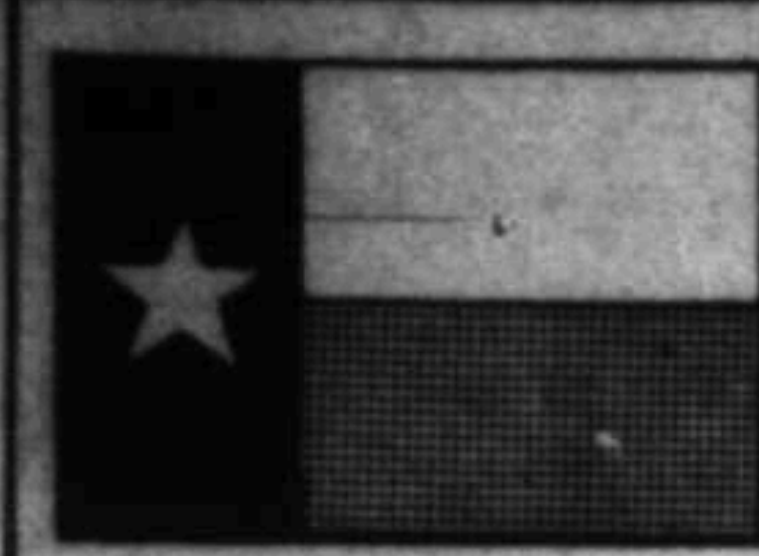

AUSTIN — The Texas Adult Probation Commission Friday gave Midland most of what it requested to upgrade the city's restitution center.

The Adult Probation Department in Midland asked the commission for an additional $20,386 to increase some salaries and improve equipment. The commission, after negotiating with Midland officials, awarded Midland $17,417 for its restitution centers, where convicted criminals can live, work and help compensate their victims.

Commission spokesman Rick Lewis said Bill McCay, who took over as director of the restitution center last November, started a major improvement plan at the center. To comply with the new overtime rules, the Fair Labor Standards Act and to perform work on the center's vans, McCay told the commission the center would need more money.

The center houses 40 people. Also Friday, the commission agreed to ask the Legislature next year for $167.2 million for the 1988-89 fiscal year. The Legislature cut the commission's budget last year down to $94.7 million, but Lewis said the cuts led to increased prison populations and ended up costing the state more money.

Mother, boyfriend held in boy's death

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston authorities are calling the choking death of a 2-year-old boy, who police say was forced to swallow finely ground pepper by his mother's boyfriend, one of the worst child abuse cases they have ever seen.

Patty Ann Kalmbach, 20, and her boyfriend of two months, Raymond Edward Coffey, 26, were being held Friday in the Harris County Jail on murder charges, a jail spokeswoman said.

Coffey's bond was set at $200,000, while Ms. Kalmbach, charged with murder by omission, was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond. If convicted, each would face up to life in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Ms. Kalmbach was charged because "she was there when it happened and she didn't try to stop it," said Harris County prosecutor Jim Larkin.

Ms. Kalmbach and Coffey took the child, Christopher Kalmbach, to a hospital near their Houston trailer home Wednesday evening when he lost consciousness, police records show. He died at the hospital.

In addition to the forced feeding, the child was found to have suffered a multitude of bruises, a scalded arm and two black eyes during the past two weeks, police said.

An autopsy was performed on the boy Thursday, but results had not been released.

Preliminary reports allege the boy choked to death following a "lesson" Coffey wanted to teach the mother on how to take care of her child, Larkin said.

The little boy was crying and acting "rebellious like a 2-year-old can," when Coffey arrived from work Wednesday evening, said Houston police homicide Sgt. D. A. Osterberg.

While the mother watched, Coffey repeatedly hit the boy's buttocks with a paddle made out a bed slat and then ordered him out of the home, police say.

Briscoe says he'll help party win election

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas businessman Andrew Briscoe, runner-up in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Friday called for party unity and left open the prospect that he will seek public office again.

"Keep those Briscoe for Texas bumper stickers on so we can get more good years of advertising, just in case we get serious in 1990 or 1992," Briscoe said in a statement.

Briscoe, who received 22.6 percent of the vote in a six-way race, stopped short of formally endorsing Gov. Mark White. But he said he looks forward to helping the party win in the fall.

In a written statement distributed personally by Briscoe, the former candidate said:

"In an effort to unite all energies, Briscoe clarified that even though he disagrees with Mark White on several policies, he looks forward to the opportunity to work with the Democratic Party to achieve victories in the months and years ahead."

Briscoe declined to answer questions. "Read the press release," was his only response when asked if he would endorse White.

"I will extend an invitation to Gov. White to utilize my services and what knowledge I have gained over the last several years," the statement said.

Briscoe said that since Saturday's election, he has talked with Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk, Texas party chairman Bob Slagle and White's office "to review alternatives for helping the Democratic Party cause."

In other political news Friday, Democratic Railroad Commission candidate John Sharp accused his runoff opponent of trying to deceive Texans by adopting a nickname that reminded some voters of a former U.S. senator.

Sharp received 45.2 percent of the primary vote May 3. Second place went to a Dallas oil and gas consultant who listed himself on the ballot as P.S. "Sam" Ervin. His real name is Percy Sprother Ervin.

"We were concerned when we found out a few weeks ago that his name's not Sam...that he's never been known by Sam prior to the time he ran," Sharp said.

"I think the voters will see that as a deception. It will not be unnoticed by them nor appreciated by the voters," Sharp added. "I think he shouldn't have done it."

Ervin received 20.5 percent of the vote, earning a runoff spot by just 4,400 votes over Dallas lawyer John Poulard.

Critics have said Ervin sought to capitalize on voter confusion over his name.

Ervin has never addressed the name issue, and Friday his wife said he was out of town and not available for comment on Sharp's charges.

Sharp noted that the late U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin, D-North Carolina, headed the Senate Watergate Committee investigation during early 1970s and gained considerable prominence from those nationally televised hearings.

STATE IN BRIEF

Doctor: Statistics show nurses not quitting smoking

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas School of Nursing plans to do something about nurses who smoke because despite increasing numbers of lung cancer patients and a link to tobacco use, fewer nurses are giving up smoking than members of other groups, said Dr. Craig Stotts, who teaches community health courses.

Most nurses started smoking during their training, according to statistics compiled by Stotts.

In 1979, 36 percent of the nurses in the United States smoked. By 1983, the number was 25 percent. But the number of physicians who smoked shrank from 40 percent in 1973 to 14 percent by 1983.

UT Austin School of Nursing officials plan a smoking prevention campaign that will focus on workshops for coping with stress, becoming a role model and how to improve the image of nursing as a profession.

Stotts said the public looks to nurses as health experts and a nurse who smokes does not project that image.

Inmate's execution set

HOUSTON (AP) — A 50-year-old Texas death row inmate is scheduled to be executed by injection for killing a Houston narcotics officer in 1978.

State District Judge Patricia Lykos on Thursday set the execution date for Rudy Ramos Esquivel, who was convicted of killing 28-year-old Timothy Hearn as he tried to arrest him.

"This is probably the end of the line for him," his attorney, Will Gray, said. "I'll have to look at the (trial) record again, but I don't think we can do anything further."

Esquivel's case has already been through the federal and state appeals process, Gray said.

Esquivel, of Houston, was free on bond and awaiting trial on a charge of possession of heroin when Hearn and his partner, Murry K. Jordan, tried to arrest him. In an ensuing shootout, Hearn was killed. Esquivel and Jordan were wounded.

Police identify one of Lucas' alleged victims

CONROE (AP) — A three-year mystery was solved when Montgomery County authorities identified the burned body of a woman Henry Lee Lucas claimed as a victim of his serial murders.

Montgomery County Sheriff Joe Corley said the body found in March 1983 off Interstate 45 near Conroe was that of Laura Marie Purchase, 26, of Traverse City, Mich.

The FBI identified the body through fingerprints taken by the Harris County medical examiner's office, sheriff's spokesman Bob Morrison.

Deputies discovered the body after it had been set fire, he said. It was determined that Ms. Purchase had been strangled.

Lucas pleaded guilty in the woman's death in October 1984 and received a life sentence. He also pleaded guilty and received a life sentence in Montgomery County for the 1984 murder of 16-year-old Laura Doney of Houston. Lucas also claimed responsibility for the slaying of a 28-year-old Pasadena woman but the indictment was dismissed in exchange for the two guilty pleas.

The one-eyed drifter is awaiting lethal injection in Texas for the slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker known only as "Orange Socks" outside of Georgetown. Once he claimed to have killed more than 300 people in a nationwide crime spree but has since recanted in all but three of the killings.

Corley stood by Lucas' guilty pleas in the cases, even though Attorney General Jim Mattox on Wednesday released a report that contended Lucas had perpetrated a hoax.

Vegetarians want paper diplomas over sheepskin

HOUSTON (AP) — Two vegetarian Rice University students will receive paper diplomas during graduation ceremonies today instead of the traditional sheepskin diplomas because of their vegetarian beliefs, officials said.

Sarah Duck and Jennifer Kavinsky said they asked school administrators for the paper diplomas instead of sheepskin ones.

Ms. Kavinsky, an English major from San Antonio who has been a vegetarian for three years, said, "When I found out the diploma was on a sheepskin, it didn't seem right to me. Since I hadn't eaten any red meat in three years, it didn't seem right that the record of my achievements at Rice should be on a sheep's skin."

Rice remains one of the few universities in the country that still awards the more expensive sheepskin diplomas, a school spokesman said.

More than 900 sheepskins will be handed out by Rice President George Rupp during today's ceremonies. The school pays about $28 per diploma, compared to $6 or so for a high-quality paper diploma, the spokesman said.

Ms. Duck, a political science major whose father teaches at Rice, said she realizes her request for a paper diploma may appear silly to some.

"I don't participate in eating meat," she said. "If I draw the line there, why not draw it one step further?"

Inmates' escape thwarted

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Two Texas prison inmates hid in a trailer leaving a Texas Department of Corrections prison unit Friday, but their hopes of freedom were thwarted when the trailer's next stop was another prison.

Inmates Hercules Gann, 49, and 32-year-old Billy Battenfield had been loading furniture Friday morning at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ellis I Unit outside of Huntsville and were discovered missing about noon, prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

The inmates got off to a good start but were shocked when their getaway trailer stopped at the TDC Wynne Unit — 15 miles away.

Guthrie said officials at the Ellis unit alerted officials at the Wynne unit, where guards discovered the two inmates had used a six-inch knife to cut a hole on top of the trailer.

Gann, serving a 35-year sentence for theft over $20,000 in Dallas County, and Battenfield, serving 50 years for passing a forged instrument and murder in Collin County, were returned to the Ellis unit by 2:30 p.m., Guthrie said.

Ex-executives must pay

HOUSTON (AP) — Two former Hermann Hospital Estate executives must pay $1.2 million for selling stock to the charitable institution at inflated prices, a jury ruled Friday after three days of deliberations.

The judgment, signed by 10 jurors, said former trustee John Coffee and Neill Amsler Jr., former estate executive, improperly acquired stock. Coffee was ordered to pay $1 million while Amsler must pay $200,000. The jury said Coffee's wife, Dorothy, was not guilty of any improper transactions.

The estate was seeking $2.8 million from the Coffees and Amsler alleging they conspired to sell stock from two corporations affiliated with Coffee.

The estate claimed in their civil lawsuit that the stocks were bought without the full knowledge and consent of the trustees.

Businesses may be zoned

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin City Council will hold a hearing May 29 on a plan that would broaden the definition and regulation of sexually oriented businesses.

Under the proposed amendment to the city's zoning ordinance, topless clubs and modeling studios also would be regulated and zoning districts for such businesses would be created.

City staff members have been studying incidents of increased crime and traffic problems near the businesses in Austin and other cities.

CALLS

Now it is 8.66 cents per minute. It was scheduled to drop to 7.77 cents per minute, but the commission said it can be "well below" that level.

The new NECA proposal would drop it to 7.37 cents. In a letter to the FCC, NECA said it expected AT&T to reduce its rates still further.

The difference in the amount paid to local companies will be made up by a doubling of the $1 per line "subscriber line charge" on residential and small-business monthly local phone bills.

In a separate filing with the commission, GTE Sprint Communications Corp. asked the FCC to reject AT&T's proposed $1.5 billion rate reduction because it "unfairly favor business subscribers over residential subscribers."

The AT&T reductions would be greater on a percentage basis during the business day, but AT&T spokesman Herb Linnen said the night and weekend discount is still 56 percent. "That's still a very robust discount," he said. It is now 60 percent.

Further lowering the night and weekend rates would mean that AT&T would not be meeting a requirement that charges cover the cost of providing the service, Linnen said.

"We'd get in trouble and we're not going to do that," Linnen said.

In the past, the FCC has postponed approval for other AT&T rate reductions that target specific markets until AT&T provided statistics proving that they were not offering below-cost service.

He said the chemicals are formed by frying or broiling hamburger until well-done with the temperatures of the pan surface above 300 degrees Fahrenheit, a medium-high stove setting.

They are different than a known carcinogen found on charred, barbecued meat, he said, adding that barbecuing produces fewer aromatic amines than frying or broiling.

Miller said several aromatic amines cause cancer in animals, and in higher doses have been implicated in human cancer among people who work with industrial dyes, which contain the compounds.

Felton conducted the study with funding from the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences and the National Cancer Institute. Hundreds of pounds of hamburger were cooked by University of California at Berkeley nutritionists under contract to Lawrence Livermore.

NUCLEAR

Western governments have criticized the Soviet government for slow and incomplete reports on the disaster.

The first foreign journalists allowed to visit the Ukraine were escorted to a farm 31 miles west of Kiev where 1,000 evacuees are housed. They were shown medical checks being given and allowed to speak with a few evacuees, all of whom appeared to be in good health.

"I took some things, two or three little blankets and pillows," said Marina Ilichenko, 80. She began to weep as she related that she and her children had just moved into a new house.

The people evacuated took their livestock along.

Blix and his associates spoke to reporters in Moscow after five days of meetings with Soviet officials.

Asked if he was satisfied with information the Soviets provided, Blix replied: "Emphatically, yes."

Morris Rosen, an American who is the U.N. agency's nuclear safety director, described the Soviets coordinating the cleanup as "competent and well-qualified."

Blix, Rosen and the U.N. agency's Soviet deputy director, Leonard Konstantinov, flew half a mile from the damaged reactor Thursday.

"There are relatively little radioactivity releases now and the temperatures (in the No. 4 reactor) are decreasing. The situation appears to be stabilizing," Rosen said.

He said there had been no meltdown in the reactor's core, which contradicts the view of many American nuclear authorities.

Robert Avery, a senior scientist at Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois, said in an interview Friday: "It would be unreasonable to imagine a huge amount of (radioactive) material getting out — as it apparently did — without there being a meltdown."

Rosen said his view that a meltdown had not occurred was based in part on an analysis of the radioactive materials released.

He said the conclusion that the core fire was out was based in part on declining temperatures reported by Soviets after infrared measurements.

During the flight Thursday, he said, they saw a small amount of light grey smoke coming from the tons of sand, boron, lead and dolomite now covering the reactor.

A Soviet videotape of the plant made a few days after the accident showed dense, black smoke coming from the graphite fire, Rosen said, and the lighter smoke appeared to come from smoldering material in the "shield" dumped by helicopters.

Soviet engineers are working under the reactor, pouring concrete that "eventually will form a foundation to entomb the structure," he said.

Rosen said the engineers could get under the reactor by tunneling or entering through the building housing the adjacent No. 3 reactor, which he said was not damaged and is shut down like the other two at the plant.

Rosen called the concrete encasement "probably a reasonable approach" that will allow the reactor to cool "as the years go by, and eventually to a level which should cause no concern."

The agency's safety director was asked repeatedly whether there was danger of a meltdown or uncontrolled downward burning.

"As a matter of physics, it is not completely excluded," he said. "However, the chain reaction (in the reactor) stopped immediately after the accident and never started again."

Possible resumption of the chain reaction "is not considered a problem," he said.

He would not speculate on what caused the accident, and said he did not have enough data to say how much of the reactor's radioactivity was released.

Rosen did say, however, that most of the radioactive particles had short half-lives, the period required for half of a radioactive substance's atoms to disintegrate and make it less dangerous.

Edmond residents sift through what's left of their homes

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Beth Wilson paused in her straightening up Friday and looked at the overcast sky.

"They say we're in for more tonight," she said quietly. "I hope not."

Mrs. Wilson, 27, was standing where her entry hall used to be. To see the clouds, all she had to do was look up — there was no roof.

Her home was one of 80 that were destroyed or heavily damaged when a tornado sliced through two subdivisions in this northern Oklahoma City suburb early Thursday night.

Another 63 homes suffered less serious damage but there were no fatalities or serious injuries.

Gov. George Nigh, who toured the two-mile-long area of destruction by helicopter and car, praised the residents for responding to storm warnings and taking cover in bathtubs and interior closets.

"We were lucky," Mrs. Wilson said as she stacked her few undamaged belongings in the driveway. "We were at church when it hit."

Throughout the area, residents, their friends and relatives carried debris to the curbs. Workmen helped home owners nail plastic sheets over ripped roofs. Back-end loaders gobbled up piles of boards and bricks and dropped them into dump trucks.

Even those who had lost virtually everything still kept their sense of humor. Nigh said one resident told him he was planning on having a garage sale "if I can find my garage."

And another told a newsman who was going in his home to look at what little was left: "Don't worry about wiping your feet."

Three blocks away, mothers pushed baby buggies and children rode bicycles in front of unscathed homes.

"I've seen pictures of war areas on television and in the newspapers," said Mrs. George Popp, 66, who declined to give her first name. "That's just what this reminds me of."

The front of the home Mrs. Popp shared with her 76-year-old husband looked almost normal. But all the windows were blown out of the back section and the interior was soaked.

"Those heavy drapes are what saved us," Mrs. Popp said.

The drapes were ripped from flying glass, but pots of African violets in front of the window rode out the storm unscathed.

Across the street, a pickup truck, its roof smashed, tilted crazily. A few houses away, the rear end of a car poked out from beneath the collapsed brick wall of an attached garage. Splintered boards, pieces of shingle and other debris littered the sidewalks and streets. Neil Eddins and his wife found plastic fruit in their living room — they didn't have a plastic fruit arrangement — and Mrs. Popp gingerly stepped over a string of Christmas tree lights that had been blown into her yard from someone else's house.

Greg Sadler, 32, and his wife Rhonda had gone to Norman for a wedding anniversary dinner Thursday night.

"When we came out, we heard that a tornado had hit near where we live," Sadler said. He said they rushed to the home of friends, where messages were waiting to tell them their house had been destroyed.

"We weren't allowed back in the area last night," Sadler said. "We didn't get back in until this morning. I got to see my destroyed home and car on national television."

The Rev. Dale Drane, pastor of Calvary Temple, and his family and went to Dallas on Thursday for a vacation.

"He doesn't know he doesn't have a home any longer," said Tammy Datin, 23, one of his church members who volunteered to save what they could.

Mike Beck, 32, was watching television when he saw the warning. "I ran outside to take a look," Beck said. "I saw the funnel just over on the next block."

Beck said he ran to the bathroom and jumped into the tub.

"I heard popping and breaking," Beck said. "It lasted only about 30 or 45 seconds. When I opened the bathroom door, I could look right up and see the sky."

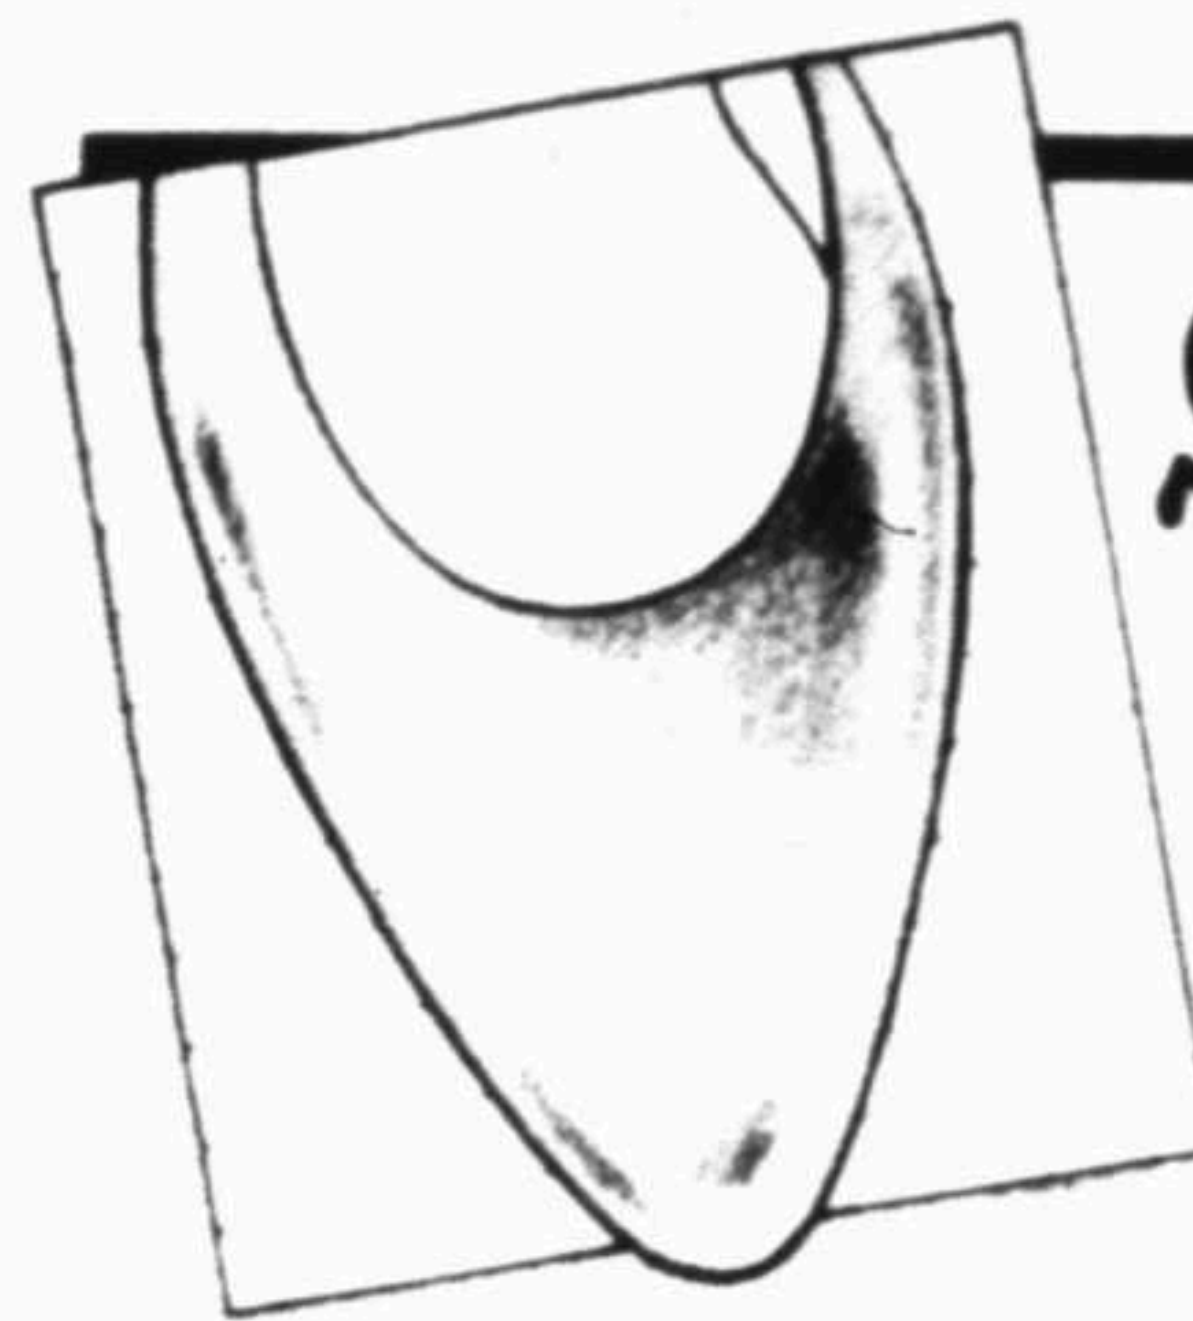

The bathtub was the place of refuge, too, for Ray Hutchinson, 27, and his wife. The huddled there under a baby bed mattress while the storm swirled around them. When they emerged, the area containing the bathroom was the only part of their home still standing.

"We were lucky though," Hutchinson said. "We had taken my 2-year-old son into Oklahoma City last night because we were supposed to leave this morning on vacation. We were going to Las Vegas, where I was supposed to get a number of sales awards."

NASA says another of its research rockets failed April 25

WASHINGTON (AP)—A NASA research rocket that had flown successfully 120 consecutive times misfired over the New Mexico desert two weeks ago — the fourth U.S. space launch vehicle to fail this year.

The government, whose space program is under pressure because of the recent explosions of the much larger Titan and Delta rockets and the space shuttle, did not announce the April 25 failure of a Nike Orion rocket carrying a pollution-sampling device.

In response to questions from The Associated Press on Friday, the malfunction was described by Debbie Bingham, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Army Missile Range in White Sands, N.M., and by Edward C. Zipf, a geophysicist of the University of Pittsburgh, who was conducting the experiment for NASA.

"This was very rare. I think this particular series of rockets, the so-called Orion family, had flown 120 times and this was the first failure," Zipf said. "This system of rockets has been flying for about six or seven years."

The Nike rocket dates back to the early 1950s when it was developed as a ground-based missile against aircraft. It was used in different military versions until the last one was retired last year from Nike Hercules batteries in Europe.

The rocket was supposed to deliver Zipf's experiment to an altitude of 50 miles, but he said it got no higher than 6,000-7,000 feet — a little more than one mile. There, the burned-out Nike first stage failed to separate before the second stage Orion ignited.

The rocket veered off erratically and deployed the parachute that brought the $40,000 payload back to earth with only a few scratches but no data. All the rocket debris and the payload fell in the desert of the White Sands range.

"We are going to fly again in August, this is just a momentary problem...It went largely unnoticed because it is such a small thing in the overall perspective of things and because the payload was not lost," Zipf said.

Detailed investigations followed the explosions of the shuttle, the Titan and the Delta, which are much bigger and much more expensive launch systems.

Zipf's payload, weighing 800 pounds, had been used 14 times previously.

Mayor has advantage for first time since election

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Harold Washington spoke softly Friday but for the first time in his three-year tenure wielded a big stick in the City Council, taking advantage of his newly gained majority to push through dozens of appointments.

The session was marked by unusual civility, contrasting sharply with the bitter battles that had been the norm since Washington's election as the city's first black mayor in 1983.

An aide to the mayor, however, said he fully expected opposition council members to go to court to challenge Washington's use of his own vote to break the Council's 25-25 deadlock.

Washington clearly enjoyed holding political advantage for the first time and smiled through much of the session.

Previously, his opponents, led by Alderman Edward Vrdolyak, had used their 29-21 majority to stall matters ranging from appointments to the disbursement of millions of dollars in federal grants and contracts.

But the election of four new aldermen increased Washington's bloc of allies to 25 in the 50-member council, and he used his tie-breaking vote several times Friday to defeat objections and block procedural maneuvers.

Perhaps the most crucial vote of the day — and the one most likely to be challenged in court — challenged Washington's right to use his tie-breaking vote.

Mayoral spokesman Alton Miller said the administration expects a court challenge on the issue.

Mrs. Reagan comes to aid of dying baby

BOSTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan told a Massachusetts couple Friday that Air Force jets are available if needed to transport a donor liver for their 9-month-old son, who has been given only days to live without the transplant.

The first lady, who was at Camp David for a three-day weekend, telephoned Paul and Ellen Girard at Children's Hospital where their son, Alex, has been since May 1. The infant, whose liver was destroyed by severe hepatitis, is in critical condition.

"She told us that her prayers and thoughts were with us and she wished there was more she could do," Mrs. Girard said.

Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said the first lady added: "Be sure and give Alex a kiss for us."

"She wished them well and hoped there would be good news over the weekend for the baby," Mrs. Crispin said. "Her voice sounded very tearful and emotional."

The couple said White House officials told them that President Reagan sent a telegram with a similar message of hope and the promise of Air Force jets. The Girards said they had not seen the message because they had not been home.

Hospital spokeswoman Sandy Judd said the Air Force jets probably would not be needed because the quick transportation of donor organs usually is not a problem.

But the increased media attention brought by the involvement of the Reagans could help to find a donor, she said.

The couple have been pressing the media for attention, and Mrs. Girard said they only leave the hospital to do interviews.

As she spoke in a hospital conference room, her 41-year-old husband returned from filming a segment with Boston Celtics Coach K.C. Jones, who pleaded for help for the child.

"Maybe there is a mother who is going to see or read about this and she'll get the strength to let the life-support systems go" on a dying child, Mrs. Girard said.

Alex is first on the list of the New England Organ Bank.

The Girards, who live in Sharon, also have a 4-year-old daughter.

CZ-A GIRL'S BEST FRIEND

There has never been a better simulated, less detectable alternative to diamonds.

The CZ has more fire than a diamond and nearly equal in hardness and refraction. They are cut and polished with the care and precision only skilled craftsmen can supply. The result is perfection not even diamonds can match, at a fraction of the cost of diamonds.

We handle only the very finest Russian Cubic Zirconia, placed in mountings of 14K gold in earrings, rings and pendants. That's why this unique gem is replacing the diamond as "a girl's best friend."

Student wolfs down 15 hamburgers to win contest

NEW YORK (AP) — Scott Gibson wolfed down 15 hamburgers in 2 minutes, 26 seconds to become Queens College's hamburger king.

The 20-year-old junior outlasted 19 other students earlier this week to win the crown.

The last to drop out, sophomore Mike Liss, said he waved the white flag after 12 burgers.

Liss said he's not looking for a rematch because he doesn't think he can stomach another burger for a while.

Will Bahrain regain luster as 'Pearl of the Gulf'?

By NABILA MEGALLI

MUHARRAQ, Bahrain (AP) — If Bahrain's oil income drops off too much, will it mean a comeback for pearl divers, the men who gave this Arab island the name "Pearl of the Gulf?"

That possibility excited a group of old pearl divers sipping tea with a reporter recently in a small wooden shack, Muharrag's equivalent of a cafe. The oldest was 90-year-old Ahmed bin Jassem and the youngest had just turned 60.

The men had heard that Bahrain's crown prince, Sheikh Hamad, had sent out a small group to check for pearls in the Persian Gulf off Al-Hidd, a fishing village east of Muharrag.

"He says if oil ceases, we want the pearl industry again," said 65-year-old Ghanem Hamed. "Diving is in my blood, and if they give me the chance, I yearn to go back."

"I want to dive and I do not want the oil, and anyway pearls are more valuable than oil."

Bahrain's pearl-diving industry came to a standstill about 30 years ago with the exploitation of oil and competition from Japanese cultured pearls. Although oil reserves are down, the island looks ahead to many more years of exploiting it, but income is falling, Saeed Alloush, a Bahrain researcher, has said the government is considering pearls as a new source of income.

This conjured up the old days for Bin Jassem, the group elder. He recalled spending two months at a time on a wooden dhow under a traditional lateen sail out in the gulf.

"The Arabs were then friendly," he said. "They helped each other. It was lovely."

He played a tape recording of the equivalent of a pearl divers' chantey and the men listened to the booming voice of a "naham" — the highest paid crew member because it was he who kept the oarsmen and the diver pullers going with his chants.

The recording ended, and the nostalgic mood of the group changed. "We sleep in air-conditioned homes now brought to us by the wealth of oil," one of the men said.

"We are not exploited anymore by the dhow master who used to pay us miserably, always keep us in his debt," said another.

"We are not eaten up by sharks or bitten by the sea creatures."

They also realized that being older, they could do no more than teach the young — "if we can now pull the boys away from videos and football (soccer)," said Isa Abdallah Tamhize.

They all agreed pearl diving would be different these days: — The pay would be much higher: If they averaged 30 dinars (about $80) in a summer, a diver now would get at least 10 times as much.

— Divers today would be given oranges to combat beriberi, a vitamin-deficiency disease. In the old days, they had only cheap oasis dates and water during the day, and rice and perhaps bread and fish at night.

— In place of tortoise-shell clamps to put on their noses for a five-minute dive, divers today would have oxygen tanks.

— Modern divers would not be forced to dive again if they were injured, and if they drowned their families would get good insurance money.

— Scuba-diving flippers would replace the stones they used to attach to their feet to keep them down, and motor boats would be used instead of dhows.

But gone would be the fun of trying to become the "Hero," the diver who could stay down the longest, or win the "Prize" if they turned up with the most pearl-bearing oysters — a pat on the head from the master, a special cheer and a roasted fish. "The master might give me five rupees (about $1.30) secretly," Hamed said, "but he was ready to tell me off if I complained about debts, and that was the only work we knew for a living in those days."

When the pearl industry died, the old divers went to work ashore for five dinars ($13) a month, about three times what they made on the water. They didn't like it.

"It was the worst work, having to unload heavy sacks of cement from trucks, and how I hungered for the days in the open sea with the coffee and the cigarette in between diving; the skies and water, our group, and above all the peace of mind," Hamed said.

Abdullah Ibrahim Boudahi brightened at the prospect of it all starting up again.

"Oh, there's bound to be plenty, plenty of pearls in the waters," he said.

Foreign reporters talk to evacuated residents

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story is based on a pool report filed by the first Western reporters allowed to go to Kiev since the Chernobyl nuclear power plant accident. The English-language press was represented in the pool by Reuter correspondent Charles Bremner.

KOPELOVO, U.S.S.R. (AP) — "I took some things, two or three little blankets and pillows," said 80-year-old Marina Ichenko, who was evacuated from the area of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster and temporarily housed at this state farm.

"We had to leave our dog," she said.

Mrs. Ichenko was in the second wave of those moved from the vicinity of the April 26 nuclear accident that sent a cloud of radioactivity over Europe and portions of the Soviet Union.

The number of those evacuated eventually reached 84,000 people and 34,000 head of livestock, officials told the first group of foreign reporters allowed into the area since the accident. They were guided by the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Those evacuated were said to be staying in Ukrainian villages, sharing homes and worker dormitory rooms with local residents.

The journalists were not taken near the disaster site, 80 miles north of Kiev. Nor did they approach the "danger zone" area of radioactivity in an 18-mile radius of the plant.

"There's no point in going to the zone," said Ivan Plyusch, a local government official for a region that includes Chernobyl. "Just empty countryside."

Reporters instead were taken to this small town, a state farm community of 2,000 workers 31 miles west of Kiev. Kopelovo took in 1,060 people evacuated from the Opachichi collective farm, which is 17 miles from the crippled reactor.

The Opachichi residents were told on May 2, six days after the accident, that they had to leave with their livestock. Ukrainian authorities said that at first the scope of the disaster was underestimated.

"They came and explained on Friday (May 2) and took us here," said Mrs. Ichenko. "We had just built a new home," she continued in Russian with a heavy Ukrainian accent. Then she started weeping.

"We came willingly," said teacher Svetlana Boloshenko, who left with her three children. An 18-year-old woman who only wanted to be identified as Antonia said she knew there had been an explosion at the plant but that she could not believe the dimensions of the accident were so great.

"If the radiation had been strong, they would have taken us away," she said.

"We've been evacuated before," shrugged an old woman, alluding to upheavals during Nazi Germany's invasion during World War II.

The Kopelovo state farm's beauty salon has been turned into a makeshift clinic with technicians taking blood samples from evacuees. Orderlies in white coats and high army boots check peasants for radiation nearby at an army tent put up in the shade of a chestnut tree.

Dr. Ivan Vishnevsky said that so far three of the evacuees from Opachichi were ordered hospitalized because of high radiation exposure.

Those who spoke with reporters did seem concerned. "We have thought about it, but what can we do about it?" asked Antonia.

Officials at the state farm said they could accommodate those evacuated for several months, but there was no indication when anyone would be able to return home. Most of those evacuated were already on new jobs at the Kopelovo state farm, the officials said.

Plyusch said life in the danger region had been normal immediately after the accident because the full consequences were not known.

"When I got there," he said without specifying the location, "people were fine..."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Tanker in no danger of sinking, official says

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico (AP) — A U.S. supertanker carrying 845,000 gallons of crude oil Friday was taking on water in its engine room but was in no danger of sinking off Mexico's Pacific coast, a port official said.

"The situation is under control," said Manuel Barron, chief of staff of the naval zone of this port, about 420 miles northwest of Mexico City.

Barron said no fuel was leaking from the 889-foot Prince William Sound and the 28 American workers on board were not in danger.

"The removal of the water is controlled by means of pumps," he said. U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer James MacPherson said several ships and an H-25 Falcon jet and a C-130 aircraft were headed for the vessel to offer assistance.

Barron said two ships of the Mexican navy were near the disabled vessel and ready to provide any assistance necessary.

Spain expels Libyan

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain expelled a top Libyan diplomat Friday and arrested a Spanish army colonel who asked Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy for money to finance extreme right-wing activities, a government spokesman said.

Saad Ismail, identified by Spanish authorities as the consul general, left Madrid for Casablanca, Morocco, on Friday afternoon. He was the fourth Libyan diplomat expelled from Spain since December.

Socialist government spokesman Javier Solana claimed the Libyan diplomat arranged a secret meeting between Khadafy and Col. Carlos Meir de Rivera, the arrested Spanish army officer.

The Libyan embassy issued a statement Friday afternoon rejecting the Spanish government statement about Ismail's activity as false.

Solana said that Meir de Rivera, 56, until Friday the military governor of the province of Avila, was arrested and taken to a military prison outside Madrid.

Solana did not specify the charges against the officer, but a government statement said he and Ismail met with Khadafy in Libya several months ago.

Islam's Ramadan begins

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Moslems in most Arab countries began their annual month of dawn-to-dusk fasting at first light Friday as religious leaders proclaimed the beginning of Ramadan, the holiest season of the Islamic year.

Religious leaders in Egypt, Libya, Syria, North Yemen, Saudi Arabia and most Persian Gulf countries announced Thursday night that they had sighted the new lunar crescent, which heralds the start of the Ramadan.

In Iraq and Oman, however, Moslem sheiks did not sight the crescent and announced instead that Ramadan would begin in those countries today. Fasting also begins today in Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco. In Asian countries such as Bangladesh, Moslems are expected to start observing the holy month on Sunday.

Until the new crescent appears in about 30 days, Moslems are expected to abstain during daylight hours from food, drink, cigarettes, sex and other worldly pleasures.

Moslems are free to eat and drink after sunset, and in most Islamic countries Ramadan takes on a festive atmosphere at night.

Soviet emigration up

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union allowed 72 Jews to emigrate in April, an increase of 19 from the previous month, the agency helping them resettle said Friday.

Twenty-one of the emigres went to Israel and the rest were bound for other countries, said Nuno Decamp, spokesman for the Intergovernmental Committee for Migration, which has helped Soviet Jews resettle since 1974.

The number of emigres in March was 53, the lowest monthly total since August, when 29 Jews left the Soviet Union.

Last year, 1,140 Soviet Jews were allowed to emigrate, up from a record low of 904 in 1984. The highest annual total was in 1979 when 51,330 Jews left the Soviet Union.

China to open peaks

PEKING (AP) — China will open 12 more Tibetan peaks to foreign climbers during the next five years, the official Xinhua News Agency reported Friday.

Nine peaks in Tibet have been opened to mountaineers since 1980, including Mount Everest, the world's highest.

Five of the new peaks will open this year, including Mount Cho Oyu, the world's sixth highest peak.

Chinese authorities earn large sums from foreign expeditions, which are charged fees for permission to climb the Himalayan peaks in China's Tibet Autonomous Region.

Ex-emperor's niece in post

PEKING (AP) — A niece of China's last emperor, Ching Dynasty child-ruler Puyi who was overthrown in the 1911 revolution, has received a local political post, the official Xinhua News Agency reported Friday.

Wan Shuying, 44, daughter of one of Puyi's sisters, was elected to the Shenyang city committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, the report said.

An engineer at Shenyang pump factory in northeast China — formerly Manchuria — Wan is a model worker who has won national awards for technical research, Xinhua said.

The late emperor's brother, Pu Jie, 79, lives in Peking where he is an adviser on history and occasional judge of cooking contests. Puyi died in 1967.

Town still called Gene Autry even though namesake lives in California

GENE AUTRY, Okla. (AP) — There's Gene Autry, he, and Gene Autry, it. And n'er the twain shall meet. Well, at least hardly ever.

That's the whole problem. Autry is a native of the Bryan County town of Achille, about 30 miles southeast of the Carter County town that now bears his name.

Before he headed west, appeared in more than 90 films, and made his fame and fortune — including a vast broadcasting empire and the California Angels major league baseball team — Autry had plans for a rodeo in the 1940s.

He purchased land just west of Berwyn and established his Flying A Ranch and the town renamed itself Gene Autry.

According to a pamphlet, on Nov. 16, 1941, Autry broadcast his radio show from the town and drew a crowd estimated at 35,000.

Once World War II began, however, Autry went into the service. When the war ended, he sold the ranch and moved to California.

According to the pamphlet, "Gene had every intention to broadcast his radio show from here and continue producing rodeos, but WWII came along."

All of which left Gene Autry, Okla., in the dust, where it still stays today, a small bog surrounded by the lush greenery of the Red River valley, by the side of the railroad tracks, in the shadow of the Ardmore Air Park.

Bobby Newton, president of the town's Chamber of Commerce says

Gene Autry once was a booming town, with a business district along Main Street.

But not any more. A large black-and-white town sign still straddles the tracks, indicating the town's location. A post office still processes mail from curious people wanting the canceled post mark.

The only business is the Gene Autry General Store, in an old white-washed building that also includes an adjoining bar. The bar is a small room dominated by a pool table, where the lights are dim and beer signs adorn the drab walls. It's an old storeroom, and is reachable through a dusty corridor from the side of the market.

Both establishments are run by Ken Shelton, who grew tired of the boom-and-bust cycles of lumbering in the Northwest and came back to live near his parents and run the businesses last year.

The atmosphere in his store is relaxed: a young child peers his head in the screen door, past the sign urging "Don't Even Ask For Credit," and inquires as to the whereabouts of his mother.

"She's died," retorts Shelton, who with his red beard looks like a milder version of Chuck Norris. Then he smiles sheepishly as the child flees. "He comes in here all the time, asking about his mom. She's somewhere around here. But I tell him he's only allotted 20 questions a day."

The smell of homemade chili steaming from a crock pot accentu-ates the stifling humidity of an unusually warm spring day.

Shelton sells videotapes and T-shirts and other memorabilia, hoping to capitalize on the town's notoriety.

He has expanded the store to include a large freezer area, but he's also realistic about the limited financial success he may achieve.

"I'm not in this for the money. Nothing ever happens in this town," Shelton says, laughing. "The biggest thing to happen recently was six railroad cars jumped the tracks."

The chamber pamphlet mentions the possibility of a Gene Autry museum "to interest the thousands of tourists who come to see the town."

"They are the fans and curious who want to see the place where Gene decided he would like to stay if things had been different," the pamphlet says.

The film "Dillinger," filmed entirely in Oklahoma, used Gene Autry for some of its scenes.

There are also Gene Autry film festivals in nearby Ardmore, as well as a new Cowboy and Indian Celebration on the 4th of July. Newton talks about getting some big-name stars to appear at the show, and perhaps starting an Oklahoma country music hall of fame.

"Yeah, Bobby can talk quite a game," says Shelton. But he says "quite a few people, maybe around 400" came to the town for last year's festival.

Snow falls on Rockies

Associated Press

A storm system brought snow to the northern Rockies and up to 7 inches of rain to the northern Plains. Rain continued to fall in soggy Utah, raising the swollen Great Salt Lake to its highest level ever recorded, an estimated 4,211.6 feet above sea level, breaking the previous record set in 1873.

In central and northeastern South Dakota, 5 inches to 7 inches of rain fell. Kennebec lost its water supply after flood waters tore a 200-foot gash in the dam that held the water in reserve.

In Wyoming, there was 12 inches of snow on the ground Friday morning at Moorcroft, 11 inches at Gillette and 10 inches at Burgess Junction. A travelers' advisory was issued for northeast Wyoming and the Big Horn mountains of north-central Wyoming.

Elsewhere, fair weather prevailed from New England and the mid-Atlantic states into the Southeast, and from much of California through the Southwest. There were scattered showers and thundershowers over northern Florida, and the middle and upper Mississippi Valley. A few showers were also found over coastal sections of the Pacific Northwest.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT included about a half-inch at Williston, N.D., Salt Lake City, and Dickinson, N.D., and a quarter-inch at Des Moines and Moline, Iowa. Heavier snowfall during the same period included 2 inches at Havre, Mont.

The forecast for today called for scattered showers and thundershowers, some heavy, from the upper Mississippi Valley and the western Great Lakes across the middle and lower Mississippi Valleys through eastern portions of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. Scattered showers should occur across northern New England, North Dakota, the northern Intermountain region and the Pacific Northwest. Rain with snow should fall in the mountains of Montana.

Highs in the 50s were forecast from the Pacific Northwest and the northern Intermountain region across Montana, northern Wyoming and North Dakota to northern Minnesota. Temperatures in the 50s should also be found over northern New England.

Highs in the 80s should occur from central California and southern portions of Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico across the southern Plains, the lower Mississippi Valley and the Tennessee Valley through the Southeast and Florida. A few 90s were likely across the desert Southwest and southwestern Texas.

TCU coach Jim Wacker disappointed with NCAA penalties.

TCU upset with NCAA sanctions

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian University lost 35 football scholarships and the right to compete for the conference championship this year as part of sanctions imposed by the NCAA Friday because seven players had accepted cash and other improper benefits from boosters.

University officials reacted bitterly, saying the Horned Frogs deserved a bigger break because the school had disclosed the infractions and had dropped the players from the team.

Coach Jim Wacker called the penalties "a setback for self-disclosure."

TCU will lose 20 scholarships in 1987-88 and 15 in 1988-89 and will not be allowed to compete for the 1986 Southwest Conference title or play in a bowl game after the 1986 season ends.

The school will be allowed to play on television because it is surrendering $343,203 in television revenue from the 1983 and 1984 seasons.

The university informed the NCAA in September 1985 that the seven players — including All-American running back Kenneth Davis — had been accepting cash.

The NCAA, calling TCU's self-policing a landmark, cited the Horned Frogs for 68 violations from 1979-1985, including cash payments, the winning and dining of recruits and the use of prostitutes.

Some Frogs consider redshirting

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian football players said Friday they were glad the NCAA's investigation of the Horned Frog program was over, but the 1986 seniors will have to pay a price.

"It will hurt the seniors," said Ricky Stone after the NCAA announced its sanctions which include no bowl game this year and the loss of 35 scholarships over two years. "Other than that, we can live with it, I guess."

Defensive end David Spradlin, a junior, said he might redshirt next season.

"I'll think about it," Spradlin said. "I don't guess I'm surprised by anything anymore. I didn't think they would take the bowls away from us."

Spradlin said he'd hate to see the senior class redshirt en masse.

"We don't want to blow off next year by just going through the motions," Spradlin said.

Dave Caldwell, another senior-to-be, said, "I guess I'll have to give redshirting some thought. I just don't know right now."

Sophomore Jarrod DeLaney said, "This is really going to hurt the seniors. But this team still has a great attitude. This isn't going to break us apart. We're just glad it's over."

TCU loses 35 potential scholarships over a two-year period but Coach Jim Wacker said, "We wouldn't have had that many to give."

"We're still going to be pretty tough next year," said Spradlin. "Tough times make tough people. We're not going to play like we're in the sandlots or something. We'll be competitive."

PITTSBURGH — Pinch-runner Tony Walker scored the winning run in the ninth inning on reliever Jim Winn's wild pitch as the Houston Astros edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 Friday night to end a four-game losing streak.

Reliever Pat Clements struck out Jose Cruz to start the ninth. Winn then replaced Clements and gave up an infield single to Glenn Davis. Walker ran for Davis and moved to third on pinch-hitter Danny Walling's single to right.

Winn then bounced a 2-0 pitch in front of the plate that eluded catcher Junior Ortiz, allowing Walker to score standing up from third.

Charles Kerfeld, 30, pitched 1½ innings in relief of starter Mike Scott to earn the victory. Dave Smith got the last two outs for his ninth save, which leads the major leagues.

The Pirates gained a 2-2 tie in the sixth when Trench Davis, recalled Thursday from the minors, bunted for a single, moved to second on Mike Scott's errant pickoff throw and scored on Sid Bream's single. Davis' hit was his second in the major leagues.

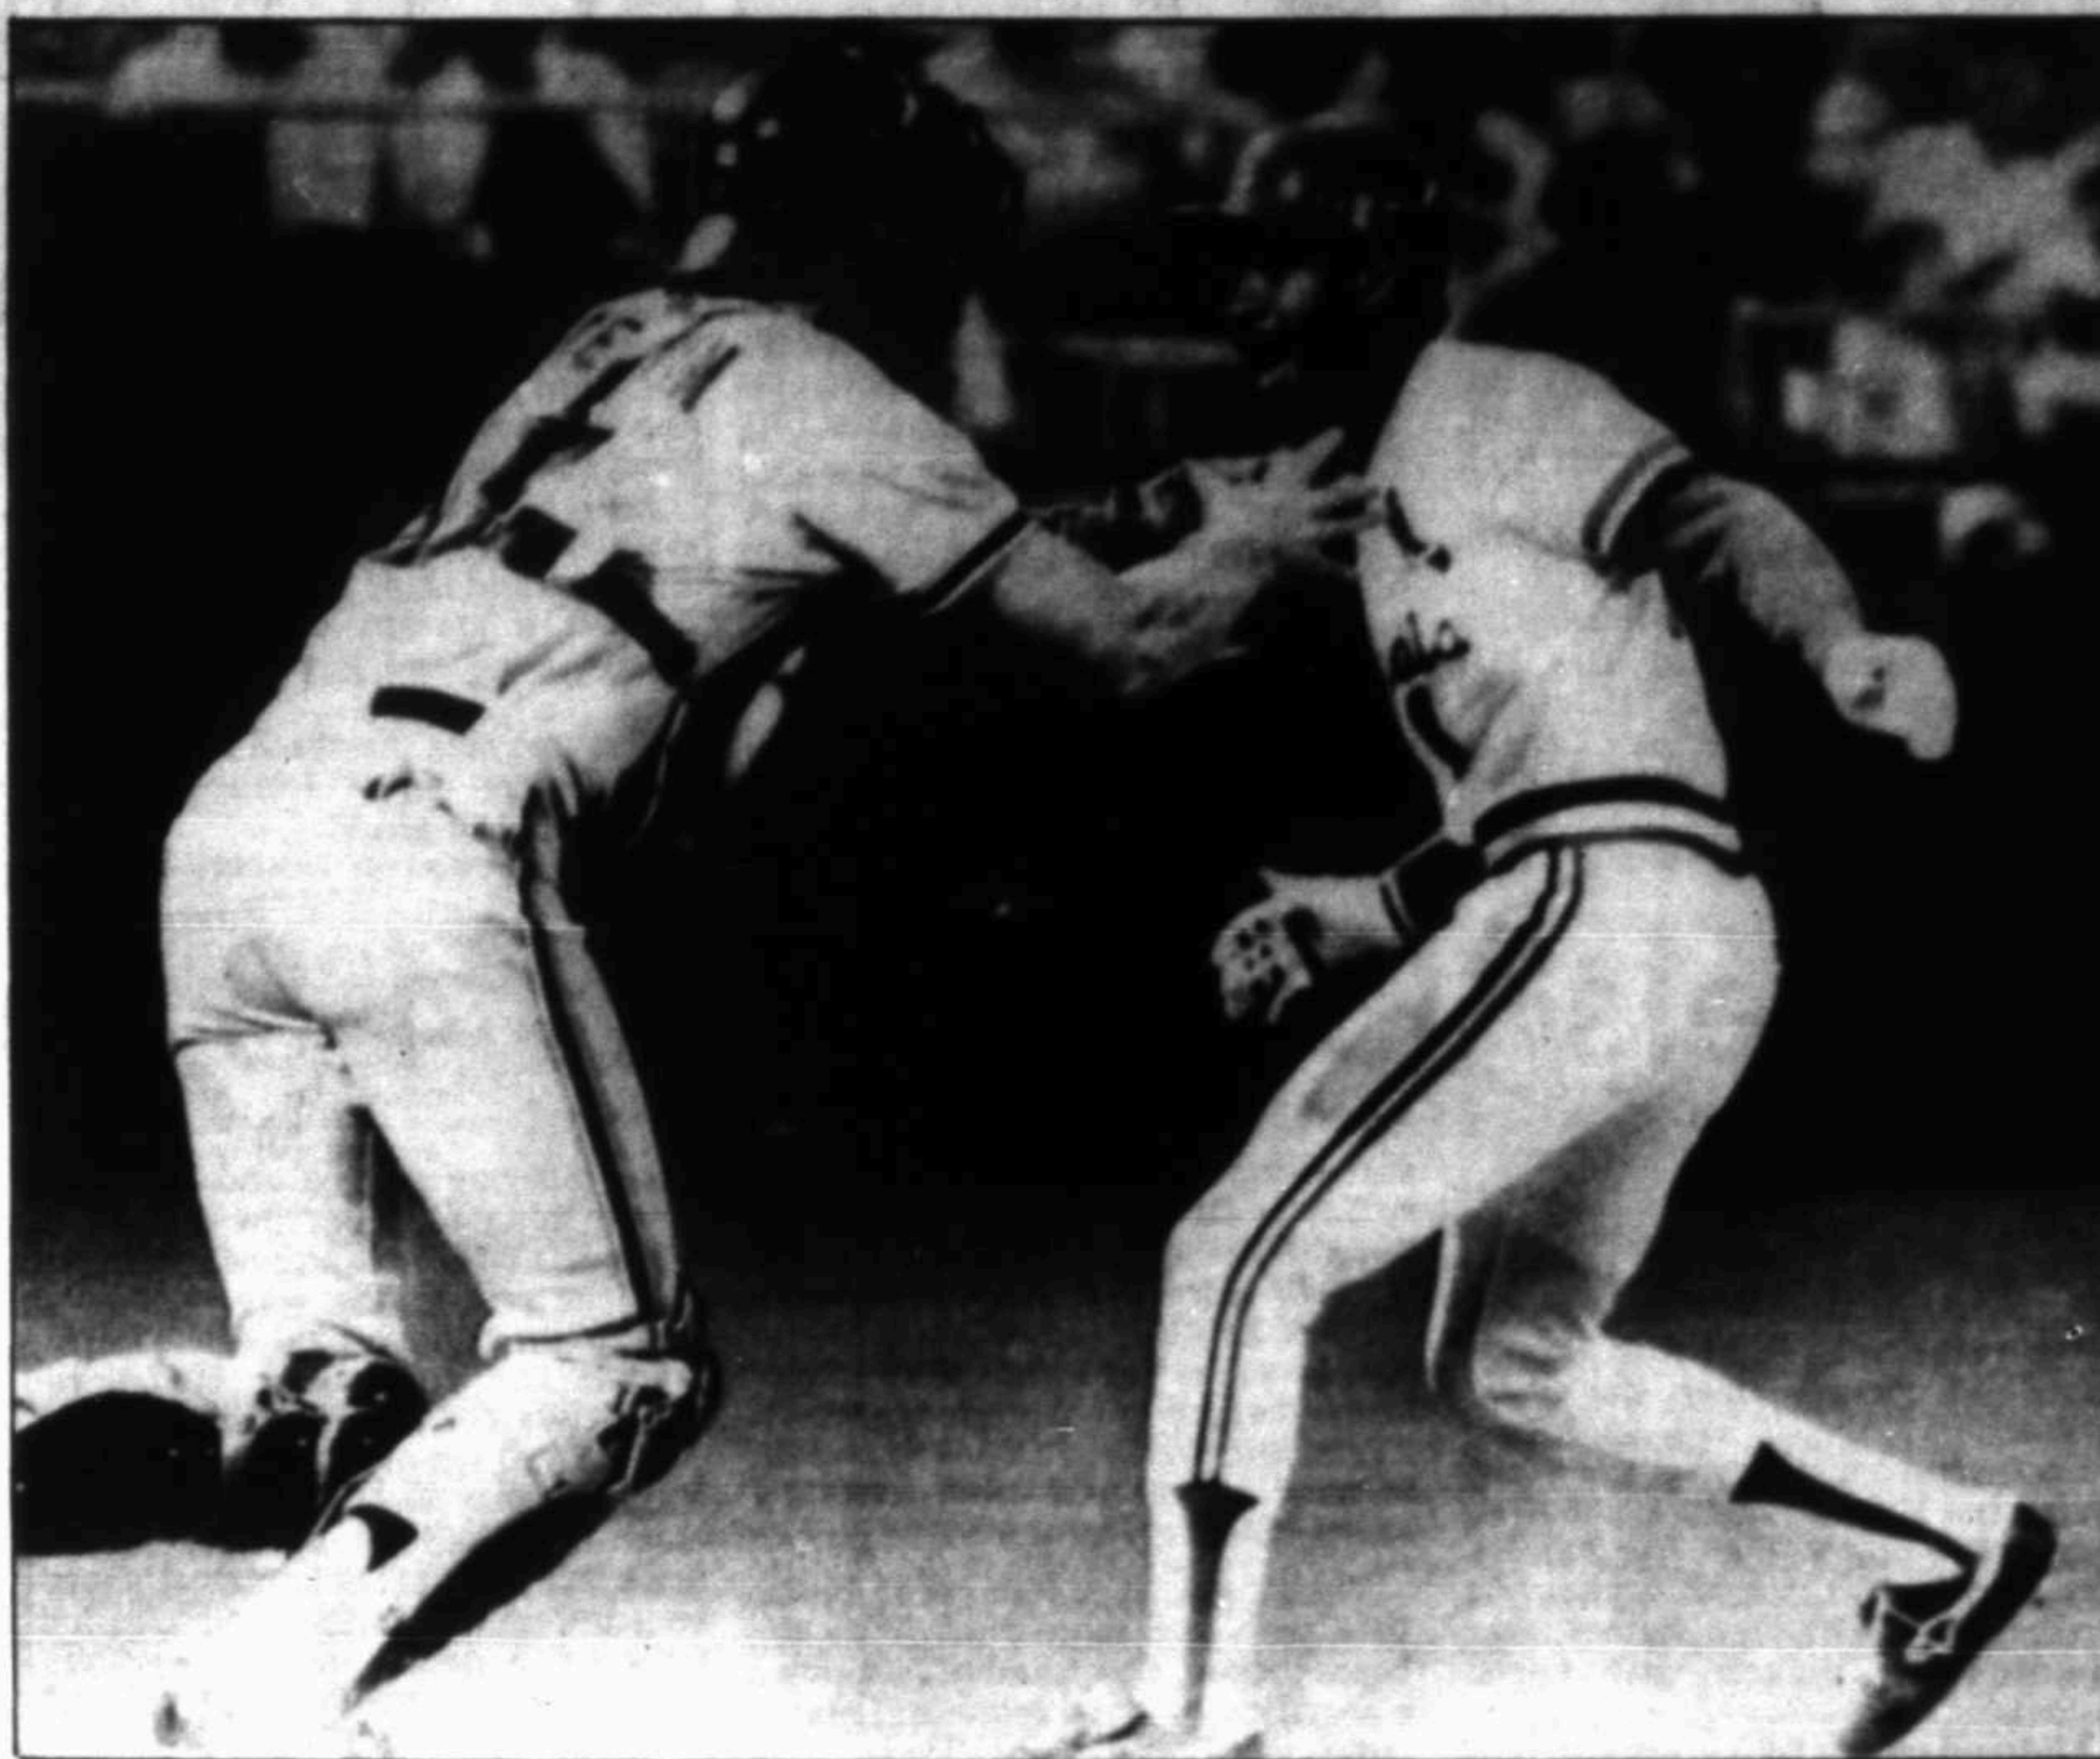

Bream had led off the second with a homer over the right field fence, his fifth of the season. Houston's Marc Bailey made it 1-1 in the third when he hit a 3-1 Bob Kipper pitch over the left field wall, his first of the season.

Billy Hatcher singled to lead off the Houston fourth, stole second and took third on a balk before scoring on Phil Garner's two-out single.

Scott had a career-high nine strikeouts in seven innings before being lifted for a pinch hitter. He allowed six hits and walked none.

Ojeda, 5-0, pitched eight innings, allowed six hits, walked one and tied his career high with 10 strikeouts. He gave up the only Cincinnati run in the fifth when Buddy Bell led off with a double and later scored on Ron Oester's sacrifice fly.

Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his third save.

Soto, 2-4, took a one-hitter into the sixth. The only hit off him to that point was an infield single by Danny Heep in the second inning. Strawberry's sacrifice fly produced the go-ahead run.

Youth prevails: MHS varsity defeats seniors

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's 1986 varsity went up against the wily outgoing veterans at Memorial Stadium Friday night in a spring scrimmage session and youth prevailed, 20-12.

Actually, it was news that 1986 Bulldog fans wanted to hear. The bad news would have been if the crusty guys saying goodbye for other things had come out on top.

The oldsters, who are probably feeling a few pains this morning, didn't do too bad for themselves, keeping things respectable with little practice time.

The Bulldog varsity never trailed in the game after speedster Tyrone Oliver broke open a 74-yard draw play of the first score of the game and Richard Triplett added the PAT.

However, outgoing senior quarterback Matt Marcum came back with a 79-yard TD pass to Mark Johnson to narrow the gap to 7-6. Varsity quarterback Jeff Somers hit tight end Clyde Govan with a 40-yard TD bomb and Triplett's PAT made it 14-6.

In the third quarter, Marcum connected with Johnson again for an eight-yard TD strike, but the varsity answered as quarterback Jamie Madrid scored on a seven-yard run for the final margin. Neither team scored in the final period of play.

THE GAME ended the second week of spring training for coach Doug McCutchen's Bulldogs and McCutchen liked what he saw.

"The seniors came out and threw a lot of looks at us that our kids haven't seen and I was glad to see that. That gave us a chance to look at how our young kids would adjust," said McCutchen. "This game gave us some varsity experience against some guys who have gone to war with us."

"The varsity made a lot of mistakes and we have to get a lot better, but I have to feel good about playing well enough to come out on top."

Rebel basketball coach honored for 500 victories

From Staff Reports

The Texas Association of Basketball Coaches recently awarded Midland Lee head basketball coach Paul Stueckler a special plaque for passing the 500-win plateau in his 32-year career.

Actually, Stueckler has a career record of 652-363 as a varsity basketball coach at three schools. He coached one year at Presidio, six years at Austin High and the last 25 years at Lee. He is the only head basketball coach Lee has ever had.

The TABC awards the plaque on a one-time-only basis after 500 career wins. "They are just now getting around to me," noted Stueckler.

Six state coaches, including Stueckler, with 600 or more victories were awarded the plaque at the Waco basketball clinic this year. Nine others reached the 500 plateau.

To get the award, the victories have to be documented by seasons. The TABC gives a framed certificate when the 300 and 400 varsity victory marks are passed.

Receiving plaques for 800 victories were Bill Krueger of Clear Lake and Dean Weese of Levelland.

Joining Stueckler at the 600 and over victory mark were Ken Loyd of Avenger, C.L. Nix of Whitehouse and the retired Bob Derryberry.

Also passing the 500 victory mark were current coach of the state champion Amarillo High Sandies Allen Simpson, Jim Eddins of Seagraves, Ray Debord of Hurst Bell, Carl Irlbeck of Plainview, Gayno Shelton of Bowie, Billy Lawson of John Tyler, Ed Messbarger of Angelo State, Kerry Garmore of Saltillo and Brooks Dozier of Henderson.

Stueckler actually passed the 600-victory mark early in the 1984-85 season.

To reach the 652 win mark in 32 seasons, Stueckler has had to average 20.4 victories per season. That is a high average of per season victories at any level of play, especially over a career spanning 32 years.

Stueckler also had a team four years ago that won only three games. That would be enough to dampen the spirits of any coach, but Stueckler has come back with back-to-back playoff teams. Seven hundred career victories isn't that far in the future. Two good years could do it.

TED BATTLES

Life in review: Bests and worsts

Bests and worsts...

Best room - The library at the Biltmore House on the Vanderbilt estate in Asheville, N.C. I know one guy who was so impressed that he was going to drive his girl friend 500 miles to Asheville, N.C., and propose there.

Best domestic airline - Piedmont, closest thing to what airlines used to be.

Best international airline - Swiss air.

Most beautiful college football stadium - McCarren Stadium, Chapel Hill, N.C. The field house looks like a country club. I've never been to the stadium at the University of Washington where the view from the stands overlooks Lake Washington.

Worst college scorekeeper - The flip over cardboard scorekeeper in the new $39 million Dean Smith Center at the University of North Carolina.

Best scorekeeper - A tie between Wrigley Field's relics and Fenway Park's updated relic. Both give the inning by inning scores of out of town games, not to mention the batteries.

Best spring minor league baseball park - it used to be Mesa's wooden Goodtime park, but then they went and tore it down.

Best spring training scoreboard - the board at Goodtime Park in Mesa, at least they moved it to the new park.

Best spring training ball park still in use - Scottsdale, Ariz., with Tucson's Hi Corbett a close second.

Best major league park - That's so easy, let's talk about the runner-up...2. Wrigley. 3. Tiger Stadium. 4. Comiskey Park.

Best of the modern era baseball parks - No contest. Chavez Ravine, although I've never been to Kansas City. Best fight song nobody ever rates with the Notre Dame fight song, On Brave Old Army team or the Princeton Cannon Song...Yea Alabama.

Best ski area - the one I happen to be skiing.

Best city - Don't get me started on that, Midlanders from western Pennsylvanians still haven't forgiven me. But for kicks, Boston, New Orleans, San Diego...haven't been to Salt Lake City lately, in that order...all, of course, after the Smoky City.

Worst city - Miami, right after the Smoky City, of course.

Best basketball conference - ACC, which may have a Clemson, but doesn't have a Seton Hall or Providence or Connecticut. But after NCAA's, SEC ranks right up there.

Worst delivery - Sports Illustrated swim suit issue. It arrives so many weeks after publication that by the time it arrives, I've already conceded that someone swiped it on me.

Worst track event - The pole vault...make 'em bring back the bamboo pole and make 'em get their three jumps off in a 15-minute time span.

Best sports names - It used to be hockey back in the days of Yvan Cournoyer, Jean Beliveau, Rocket Richard, Boom Boom Geoffrion, Jacques Plante...

Today it's the PGA tour...Fuzzy Zoeller, Lance Ten Broeck, Curtis Strange, Hale Irwin, Bruce Lietzke, Barry Jaekel.

Best setting for a Texas football stadium - Jackson Field on the Sul Ross campus in Alpine. Where else in Texas can you shoot a football game with a mountain backdrop, except the Sun Bowl.

Best atmosphere for a minor league park - Asheville, N.C., although Midland Angel manager Joe Maddon casts a vote for the old park at Shreveport.

Best mountain - In the east, Camel's Hump. In the west, any of the San Juans. Best pitching form - Warren Spahn.

Worst pitching form - Ewell Blackwell...just ask anybody who had to hit against him.

Best left-hander ever - Warren Spahn. 363 career wins with some terrible teams and an early career advice from Casey Stengel, "Give it up, kid, you're never going to make it and after three years in the service he had to wonder if old Casey might be right."

Best baseball announcer - Red Barber. Worst baseball announcer - Vin Scully, just to start an argument.

Best football announcer - Ray Scott.

Best basketball color man - Al McGuire.

Coaches I'd root for if their broadcasting careers had come first...McGuire and John Madden.

Best restaurant - Dorius, Amsterdam; the Golden Adler, Innsbruck, and biggest surprise restaurant, Vienna's Rathaus, located in the basement off the City Hall, the expectation a cafeteria and it turned out to be so formal that one felt guilty entering without coat and tie even at noon.

STAT

The Cincinnati Reds had been outscored 25-6 in the first inning in their last 14 home games.

STREAKS

The St. Louis Cardinals beat San Diego 13-3 Thursday, marking the first time the defending National League champions had won consecutive games since April 19.

SWINGS

Cincinnati reliever Ted Power had an 0-3 record with no saves and a 7.36 earned run average in his first 11 games this season. Last year, Power was 8-6 with 27 saves and a 2.70 ERA.

SEASONS

1909 — Pitching for Winchester of the Blue Grass League, Fred Toney worked 17 no-hit innings before winning 1-0 over Lexington.

1934 — First baseman Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees played five innings before removing himself from the game because of illness. By that time, he had hit two home runs and two doubles and drive in seven runs against the White Sox.

1970 — Atlanta's Hoyt Wilhelm pitched his 1,000th major league game, but the Braves lost 6-5 to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Streaks end, White Sox nip Tribe

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Pinch-hitter Tim Lincecum's two-run single with two outs in the ninth inning capped a three-run rally Friday night and the Chicago White Sox snapped a six-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory over Cleveland, ending the Indians' 10-game winning string.

The White Sox trailed 3-1 entering the ninth, but Wayne Tolleson walked and Harold Baines singled him to third to start the inning, finishing relief pitcher Ernie Camacho.

Reliever Scott Bailes, 4-2, then gave up a one-out RBI single to Carlton Fisk. After Bobby Bonilla singled, pinch-hitter Reid Nichols singled to lead the bases for Lincecum, who lined a single to center off Rich Yet.

Gene Nelson, 2-1, pitched 1 2/3 innings of relief for the victory.

A crowd of 48,146, the largest in Cleveland since Opening Day last season, saw the Indians fall out of first place in the American League East, one-half game behind New York.

The Indians had snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth when Joe Carter scored from third on a two-out single by Tabler, who had left runners stranded at third in both the first and third innings.

Carter had singled to lead off the Cleveland fifth against starter Joel Davis and moved to second and third on consecutive groundouts.

The Indians made it 3-1 in the seventh against reliever Dave Schmidt. Carter led off with another single and scored on a double by Andre Thornton.

Royals 7, Orioles 4
BALTIMORE — Darryl Motley hit two home runs and George Brett, Willie Wilson and Jim Sundberg also homered, rallying the Kansas City Royals past the Baltimore Orioles.

Winner Bud Black, 2-3, and Steve Farr allowed two hits in 8 2/3 innings of relief after starter Mark Gubicza was chased in the first on a pair of two-run singles by Cal Ripken Jr. and Larry Sheets.

Motley led off the sixth inning with his fourth home run of the season, snapping a 4-4 tie and chasing Baltimore starter Ken Dixon, 3-2.

American League

Motley hit another solo homer in the seventh against Rich Bordi.

Wilson, who had four hits, led off the game with his second home run. The Royals forged a 4-4 tie in the fifth on a solo homer by Sundberg, his first, and a two-run shot by Brett, his sixth.

Twins 8, Tigers 7
MINNEAPOLIS — Gary Gaetti drove in four runs with a homer and a single and scored the go-ahead tally in the sixth inning on Chuck Caray's wild pitch Friday night, lifting the Minnesota Twins to a victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Bert Blyleven, 3-2, won the game despite surrendering Harry Spillman's grand-slam home run, which capped a six-run uprising in the third inning and gave Detroit a 6-3 lead.

The loss was the third straight for the Tigers, their longest losing streak of the season.

Gaetti's two-run homer, his seventh, pulled Minnesota within 6-5 in the third. The homer knocked out Detroit starter Walt Terrell in favor of Randy O'Neal, 0-2.

Consecutive doubles by Dave Collins and Lou Whitaker gave the Tigers a 7-5 lead in the top of the sixth, but Gaetti's two-run single keyed a three-run rally in the bottom half of the inning.

Roy Smalley and Kent Hrbek drew walks and moved into scoring position on a passed ball by Lance Parrish and a wild pitch. With two outs, Gaetti singled to right, tying the game and finishing O'Neal.

Cary gave up a hit-and-run single to Mark Salas and then threw a pitch in the dirt that Parrish could not handle, allowing Gaetti to score from third base.

Rangers-Yankees rained out
ARLINGTON — The New York Yankees at Texas Rangers game was rained out. It will be made up Sunday as part of a doubleheader.

The game was halted by rain after New York's Rickey Henderson drew a leadoff walk in the first inning. The game was called after a delay of 1 hour and 25 minutes.

Angels' Cook finds 4-3 recipe

From Staff Reports

TULSA — Midland pitcher Mike Cook may have taken the pressure off the Angels' overworked relief corps here Friday night with a route-43 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

Cook spun a nifty four-hitter while giving the Midland bullpen a needed night off. Cook walked five batters, but struck out a season high eight Drillers to gain his first victory after opening the season with three defeats.

Midland took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Mark McLemore doubled to open the game and scored on a single by Glen Walker. Walker stole second, moved to third on a passed ball and scored when losing pitcher Jerry Taylor struckout Billie Merrifield, but the ball got away as Merrifield went to third and Walker scored.

Tulsa knotted the score at 2-2 in the second as Cook walked the bases loaded before Bob Gergen scored on a grounder by Greg Bailey and Mike Stanley later scored on an error by Angel catcher David Heath.

The Angels won the game in the fifth with two more runs. With the bases loaded, Sap Randall laid down a sacrifice bunt to score McLemore from third and Raul Tovar later scored when Tulsa shortstop Jerry Browne mishandled a grounder by Merrifield.

Tulsa tried to get back in the game when Browne singled and Dan Van Cleeve doubled to narrow the gap to 4-3, but Cook was almost untouchable the rest of the way.

A fielding move paid off for Midland in the ninth. Mike Madril replaced Walker in right field. Tulsa's Javier Ortiz led off the inning with a single before Madril made a diving catch on a ball hit by Gergen. Madril's relay to Jeff Schaefer at shortstop and on to Randall at first nailed Ortiz for a double play. Cook then struckout Stanley to end the game.

The victory was the opener of a 10-game road trip to Tulsa and Arkansas. It was the first meeting of the year between the two clubs.

Rinaldi rallies from brink of defeat

HOUSTON (AP) — Second seeded Kathy Rinaldi, two points away from losing the match in the second set, battled back to a 3-6, 7-6, 6-3 victory over fifth seeded Wendy Turnbull Friday night to reach the semifinals of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament.

Top seeded Chris Evert Lloyd had a tougher time than in her first two matches, but rolled to a 6-4, 6-1 victory over seventh seeded Kate Gompert to complete Saturday's semifinals bracket.

Rinaldi, who has battled the flu throughout the week, was down 4-5 with Turnbull serving for the match in the second set.

Turnbull took a 30-0 lead but double-faulted the next point and Rinaldi rallied for the break and eventually won a 7-2 tie-breaker, forcing the third set. Gompert's biggest challenge came in the eighth game of the opening set when she broke Lloyd for the only time in the match after two deuces.

The break point came when Lloyd hit a forehand wide after a drop shot by Gompert.

Lloyd served for the first set in the 10th game and held after three deuces. She broke Gompert in the first and third games of the second set and coasted to victory.

Lloyd, charging the net more than in previous matches, won it at the first match point with an overhead smash.

In earlier matches, Pam Casale was stung by a bee in the first game of the second set but kept her game steady to defeat erratic third seeded Zina Garrison 7-6, 6-3 and Laura Gildemeister, Peru, defeated Wendy White, Atlanta, Ga., 6-2, 6-4.

Garrison led 4-2 in the first set before Casale rallied for force the tie-breaker and then won the overtime game 7-3.

Then in the first game of the second set Casale, Fairfield, N.J., was stung on the left shoulder by a bee, causing a seven-minute delay in the match.

When play resumed, Casale was broken in the first game and fell behind 3-1 in the set before rallying to upset the fading Garrison.

Casale held in the fifth game after six deuces and broke Garrison in the sixth and eighth games. Garrison lost it at the first match point in the ninth game with an unforced forehand volley error.

However, Wacker's staff was given a clean report except for two minor violations, one involving the loan of a $100 pair of work boots. Wacker replaced F.A. Dry as TCU coach in 1983.

David Berst, director of NCAA enforcement, called the TCU case "unique" and said investigators would have had nothing but rumor to go on if the university had not come forward.

"We had heard rumors of improper benefits but we had no direct information and no ability to investigate," Berst said. "The findings are the result of TCU's admission."

The NCAA made a special effort to pat TCU on the back by sending Berst to Fort Worth for Friday's news conferences announcing the penalties and the school's reaction.

"The sanctions imposed were not as severe as they could have been. They were measured and tempered," Berst said. "It would be unreasonable of TCU not to expect to pay a price for the violations."

"I have nothing but the highest regard for how the matter was handled by the institution," he added.

But TCU Chancellor William E. Tucker said he was "deeply disappointed."

"No implicated players remain on the TCU team. Not one. If the NCAA sensed a compelling need for good models across the country, why take dead aim on an exemplary program?"

He said some of the penalties were "totally inappropriate. They tend to make victims of innocent players and honorable coaches."

At the center of the furor was booster Dick Lowe, a Fort Worth oilman, who last September admitted administering a slush fund and making cash payments to players, including Davis, the 1984 hero who led the team to victory in eight of its first nine games.

Wacker kicked Davis and six other players off the team after they confessed their involvement. TCU went 3-8 and didn't win a Southwest Conference game.

Davis, commenting Friday on the loss of scholarships and other penalties, said, "I never thought that a penalty would be that stiff."

Low said, "It just makes me angry. I'm glad I told them the truth. I didn't really have a great deal of confidence in their good judgment and apparently that lack of confidence was justified."

The NCAA had considered taking scholarships away from TCU for and later scored on Hayes' double. The victory went to Kevin Gross, 3-3, who gave up nine hits and six runs in 5 1/2 innings. Steve Bedrosian, traded by Atlanta during the offseason, earned his fourth save when he got the last two outs with a runner on second.

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood singled through a drawn-in infield with one out in the tenth inning, scoring Rob Thompson to give the San Francisco Giants a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Youngblood, pinch-hitting for Giants' starter Mike LaCoss, 3-0, singled off reliever Todd Worrell, 2-2. Mark Davis set down the Cards in the bottom of the tenth for his second save.

Thompson drilled a single to left with one out in the tenth, raced to third on Jose Uribe's single to center and scored on Youngblood's hit.

Ozzie Smith doubled home Vince Coleman to stake the Cards to a 1-0 lead in the first inning, and the Giants tied it in the sixth on Chris Brown's RBI single off St. Louis starter Bob Forsch.

Forsch pitched the first eight innings for St. Louis, allowing five hits, before Worrell came on in the ninth. LaCoss surrendered seven hits in his nine-inning stint, striking out three and walking one.

Forsch retired 13 straight batters before walking Chili Davis with one out in San Francisco's fifth. Bob Melvin followed with a hit-and-run single through second baseman Jose Oquendo's vacated position, sending Davis to third. But Forsch escaped harm when Thompson grounded into a double play.

In the sixth, Dan Gladden doubled over the third-base bag and scored on singles by Will Clark and Brown, tying the score 1-1.

The Cardinals had a chance to do some more damage in the first, but Will Clark threw out Smith at the plate after the first baseman caught Jack Clark's foul fly down the first-base line.

three years plus bowls and television appearances. "These penalties reflect one adjustment following TCU's second appearance before the Committee on Infractions less than two weeks ago," Tucker said. "They also take into account TCU's self-disclosure and as well as our full cooperation."

As a result, Tucker said, the NCAA kept the one-year ban on a bowl appearance but agreed that the current innocent players should be allowed to appear on TV.

Wacker said the NCAA by its action "missed a great opportunity for self-policing. By limiting scholarships and taking away a bowl game, they victimized innocent people."

Wacker said he felt proud that after the NCAA put its microscope on his program no coach on his staff was found guilty of recruiting violations.

"It was the most thorough investigation, ever," Wacker said. "We did what we had to do. I would do it again if I had to."

Wacker said the NCAA did not decimate this team. Not close. It will be tough this year but look out next year. We just have to keep our attrition down."

The sanctions include a three-year probationary period that will require annual in-person visits to TCU by the NCAA and an audit of expenses and income of student-athletes in football.

Six unnamed representatives of TCU's athletic interests will be disassociated from involvement of any kind in the school's athletic program.

The NCAA charges included an incident in January 1982, in which two TCU boosters arranged overnight lodging and prostitutes for several team prospects.

In February of that year, a booster offered to establish a $25,000 trust fund for an athlete to come to TCU.

Other inducements included as much as $3,000 for a car down payment, $10,000 cash to a student-athlete's mother, cash bonuses, money for spare automobile parts and monthly cash payments.

TCU is the second SWC football team to receive sanctions in less than a year. SMU was slapped with a three-year probation in September that included the loss of scholarships, bowls, and television appearances.

Texas, Houston, Texas A&M, and Texas Tech are also under NCAA scrutiny.

Sometimes these things are cyclical, Berst said.

Expos 8, Dodgers 4

MONTREAL — Hubie Brooks third extra-base hit of the game, a two-run double in the eighth inning, broke up a tie game and helped the Montreal Expos to their sixth straight victory with a victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Brooks, who also homered and tripled, hit a one-out pitch from Dodger left-hander Fernando Valenzuela, 4-2, over third base to score Tim Lincecum and Andre Dawson. Andres Garragay followed with his fourth home run of the year into the right-field seats.

Jeff Reardon, 5-2, pitched the final two innings for Montreal.

Padres 6, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Kevin McReynolds hit a tie-breaking, three-run home run in the seventh inning to help Andy Hawkins and the San Diego Padres to a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

McReynolds' homer, his fourth of the season, was the third of the game for the Padres, all off Chicago starter Rick Sutcliffe, 1-5.

Tony Gwynn opened the seventh with a single and Terry Kennedy drew a one-out walk before McReynolds homered into the centerfield bleachers for a 5-2 San Diego lead.

Phillies 7, Braves 6

ATLANTA — Rick Schott homered and Mike Schmidt and Von Hayes each drove in two runs as the Philadelphia Phillies edged the Atlanta Braves.

The Phillies built a 5-1 lead in the second inning when they batted around, scoring four runs on five hits and one hit batsman.

The runs came after two outs on consecutive RBI singles by Darren Daulton, Juan Samuel, Schmidt and Hayes. The Phillies had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on Samuel's two-out double and Schmidt's single.

Schu hit his third homer of the year in the third and the Phillies added another run in the fourth when Samuel beat out a bunt single

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department agreed Friday to ask dairymen to voluntarily delay the slaughter of their herds and to take other steps to minimize the impact of a subsidized herd reduction on the beef industry.

The National Cattlemen's Association announced the agreement, declaring victory in a lawsuit it had filed in U.S. District Court in Lubbock.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department agreed Friday to ask dairymen to voluntarily delay the slaughter of their herds and to take other steps to minimize the impact of a subsidized herd reduction on the beef industry.

The National Cattlemen's Association announced the agreement, declaring victory in a lawsuit it had filed in U.S. District Court in Lubbock.

agreement essentially satisfies the industry's three concerns: that dairy cows being slaughtered go to market in an orderly fashion; that the department step up its reporting of slaughter data; and that the government purchase enough beef to offset the additional purchase being slaughtered.

Department officials will ask dairy producers who have signed up for the program and are marketing their cattle between now and September to voluntarily shift to one of the later two periods, Butler said.

The department also will impose penalties on dairymen who do not meet their marketing schedules, he said.

In addition, the department will survey program participants by May 15 to find out how many cows already have been slaughtered and exported, and to get a more precise picture of when the remaining cattle will go to market.

The department will publish weekly reports on the numbers of cattle slaughtered and exported, as well as the amounts of red meat purchased by the government to offset the increased slaughter, he said.

"The dairy whole herd buyout is a clear example of the folly of government subsidy programs and the havoc wreaked when government interferes in free markets," Butler said in a statement. "The beef cattle industry has been irreparably damaged by the dairy termination program. We cannot and will not tolerate future government programs that damage the beef cattle industry while supporting another commodity."

The National Cattlemen's Association announced the agreement, declaring victory in a lawsuit it had filed in U.S. District Court in Lubbock.

Under the 18-month, $1.8 billion program, the government is paying farmers to sell 1.5 million cows, heifers and calves for slaughter or export.

Don Butler, the association's president, said the agreement essentially satisfies the industry's three concerns: that dairy cows being slaughtered go to market in an orderly fashion; that the department step up its reporting of slaughter

BOWLING BEAT

Kelley scorches lanes with 714

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Dave Kelley bowled a 247-714 to highlight the men's class and Lois Preston rolled a 235-625 to top the women in series rolled at Dellwood Lanes.

Barbara McCranie posted a 245-623 while Christine Rodriguez had 246-623; Rosie Urias 235-611; and Mary Jo White 221-603.

In other results Melissa Poe had 219-597 and Debra Szczawinski 213-582.

Other top scores at Dellwood: Jeff Von Rosenberg 245-690; Leo Rodriguez 257-688; Tommy Gutierrez 233-681 and 278-669; Tommy Gutierrez 233-681; Craig Thames 240-665 and Ken Robey 256-665.

Ty Bowling rolled a 300 in the World Class Bowling Centers doubles at Dellwood and finished with a 714. Bowling and Terry Bowling placed 11th in the tournament won by Bob Burns and Betty Clark.

Loren Trenhaile rolled 248-695 while Bill Arnold, the smooth swingin' righthander who always keeps his game together, rolled a 237-673 in the Sun-Tex League. Ray Memer had a 650 in the Wednesday Evening Mixed.

Darrell Boen led bowlers at Fairmont with a 278-662 and Jerry Tilley was 101 pins over his average with a 252. Elaine King posted a 226-548; Gail Pool 207-541 while Patsy Lewis, Betty Redden and Cliffa Hogue all had 590s.

Gloria Truesdale rolled seven straight strikes on the way to a 241 in a Learn To Bowl class at Fairmont.

Top men's scores at Fairmont: Henry Brem 256-643 and Steve Pool 245.

Steve Evans is a past World Bowling Centers tournament champion, winning at Dellwood in March. At the time, Steve was averaging around 140. Now he is averaging in the 160s in this league and 180 in the tournament. That is quite an improvement and not every bowler develops their game at the level that Steve has. Before Evans won the March WC, he had undergone surgery to remove a tumor from his skull.

In upcoming events: May 10: Fairmont is hosting the World Class Youth tournament; May 17: Dellwood's All-Star team travels to the state all-star tournament at Grand Prairie; May 9-11 Dellwood hosts the WCD and begins a No Tap Doubles

May 11 at 8:30 p.m. Dellwood and Fairmont will conduct the Most Over Average finals May 30-June 1 and Summer League bowlers at both lanes will have a chance to win a seven-day, six-night trip for two to St. Thomas in the Virgin Island.

Bean yo-yos way to one-shot lead

Byron Nelson

DALLAS (AP) — Andy Bean managed a 68, which he said "was like a yo-yo," and took a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $600,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

"It was a day that I could have shot a 63 or 64 and turned it into a 68," Bean said after he reached the tournament's halfway point at 134, six under par for two trips over the new Tournament Players Club at Las Colinas and one shot in front of Mark Wiebe and Jim Gallagher.

Tom Purtzer did manage a competitive course-record 63 that included nine birdies. He is in a large group three strokes off the lead.

But Bean, a 6-foot-4, red-haired power-hitter called "Li'l Abner" by his fellow pros, said his lead should be larger.

"I feel like I should have a four-shot lead, and I have a one-shot lead. But, shoot, one shot is better than nothing," Bean, who scored six birdies and also three-putted three times — once for par, said.

"Overall, I played pretty good. I can't complain about anything," Bean, who is seeking his second victory of the season, said.

Tom Watson is still looking for his first and he will have to wait at least another week to get that.

Watson, a four-time winner of this title, could do no better than match par at 70 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 144, four over par. It marked the first time he missed the cut in this event.

Wiebe, winner of the Anheuser-Busch Classic last summer, shot a 66 moved into a tie for second at 135 with Gallagher, who had a 67 Friday.

Payne Stewart, who double-bogeyed the 72nd hole and eventually lost this tournament in a playoff last season, also had a 66 and moved to within two strokes of the lead.

He was tied with first-round leader Mark Hayes, Ed Fiori, Scott Simpson, and Charles Bolling. Fiori and Bolling had 65s, Simpson 66 and Hayes slipped to a 72.

Bean, who won at Doral and finished second in two other tournaments earlier this season, birdied three of the last four holes on the front nine and reached the turn in 32.

Then his adventures began. He three-putted for bogey on the 10th, then got the shot back with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 11th.

He three-putted for bogey on the 12th, then got the shot back with a 30-foot birdie putt on the 13th.

"It seemed like every time I made bogey, I got it right back," Bean said. But he three-putted for a par 5 on the 16th and couldn't get it back. Instead, he bogeyed the 17th after missing the green.

"I feel like I threw away a couple coming home. I just got a little careless out there," he said.

Andy Bean drops his putter after missing a par attempt during Friday's second round of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic in Irving.

Two rookies among five players who break par

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP) — Rookie Deb Richard and veteran Bonnie Lauer each fired 3-under-par 69s Friday to share the first-round lead in the $250,000 LPGA United Virginia Bank Golf Classic.

Only three other women in the 144-player field were able to better par as cool, windy, overcast conditions made play difficult on the 6,151-yard, par-72 Sleepy Hole Golf Course.

Pam Allen, a rookie from Billings, Mont., who has made the cut once in nine previous starts this year, shot a 70 and was alone in third place, one shot ahead of Janet Coles and Betsy King.

Kathy Whitworth, winless since recording her 88th professional victory last year at the UVB Classic, birdied the 18th hole to finish at 72, along with Allison Finney, Cindy Hill, Lynn Connelly and rookies Cathy Johnston and Jody Rosenthal.

Another 12 players, including former United Virginia Bank champions Amy Alcott and Jan Stephenson, were at 73.

Richard, whose $20,559 leads all first-year players on the tour, played the back nine first and made the turn in par 38. She then had an eagle 3 on the par-5 fifth hole and a birdie on the seventh.

UVB Golf Classic

"The eagle on the fifth hole really got me going. I made a downhill 18-footer," said Richard, a 22-year-old former U.S. Women's Amateur champion from Abbeville, La., whose best finish as a pro was a tie for fifth three weeks ago in San Diego.

"The wind and cold weather made play difficult in the early morning," Richard said. "I came to the course wearing a short-sleeved shirt and sweater, but rushed back to my room for warmer clothing."

Lauer, a two-time winner whose last victory came at Costa Mesa, Calif., last year, carded an eagle 3 on the second hole. She also had two birdies on the back side and a saving par on the 18th after she took a penalty stroke for putting her drive in a hazard.

Sox retain LaRussa, tell 'Hawk' to keep hands off

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony LaRussa was retained Friday as manager of the Chicago White Sox and will have more freedom to call the shots without interference from Ken "Hawk" Harrelson, chief of the team's baseball operations.

At a hurry-up news conference at O'Hare Airport as the White Sox departed for a weekend series against the Cleveland Indians, Harrelson made the "air-clearing" announcement following a tumultuous week in which LaRussa was close to being fired.

"Tony LaRussa is going to remain the manager of the ball club with a couple of modifications," said Harrelson. "If there have been any mistakes made, I made them."

LaRussa said: "I'm going to get my shot and do it the way I do it."

Among Harrelson's changes was to shift last year's starting catcher Carlton Fisk into left field. Fisk, who was a catcher throughout his 15 seasons in the big leagues and whose production has dropped dramatically from last year's pace, was expected back behind the plate sometime during the Cleveland series.

The team is off to a 7-18 start and was on a six-game losing streak, fueling speculation all week that LaRussa would be replaced by either Billy Martin or Jim Fregosi.

"I came in with new ideas," said Harrelson, who replaced Roland Hemond as general manager last October. "They have not worked. The players have not responded and we are making a couple of changes."

Missing: Baseball's .328 hitter

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

As he settled into the batter's box one night during the 1977 season, Rod Carew noticed Toby Harrah, the Texas Rangers' third baseman, moving in on the grass.

"Bunt on me," Harrah called. "I dare you to bunt on me."

Always obliging, Carew bunted down the third-base line and beat it out for a hit. His next time up, he noticed Harrah had moved in even closer on the grass.

"Try it again," Harrah said.

On the next pitch, Carew squared around, holding his bat in front of him as if to bunt. But with a quick downward swing, he chopped a high hopper over Harrah's head. Another hit. Standing on first base moments later, Carew glanced across the infield to see Harrah staring at him. Without a word, Harrah tipped his cap.

All of baseball tipped its cap to the Minnesota Twins' first baseman that year. He batted .388 for the sixth of his seven batting titles. He was voted the American League's Most Valuable Player.

All of baseball tipped its cap to Carew again last year. He finished the season with 3,063 hits, 13th on the career list. He batted .280 for the California Angels, which put his career average at .328, the highest among active players; Pete Rose, in contrast, has a .304 career average. And even as a 40-year-old free agent, Carew was ready for another season or two as a designated hitter, perhaps longer. In recent seasons several older players, notably Rose and Phil Niekro, had continued to perform effectively beyond that age.

BUT NOW baseball has tipped its hand at Carew, not its cap. Million-dollar free agents are no longer being courted, especially aging free agents.

The Angels decided to go with the rookie Wally Joyner at first base. Of the other 25 teams, only the Twins seriously considered signing the batting artist who was once their "franchise" player. As the season opens, Carew is baseball's missing person.

"And the way teams are releasing guys lately, I don't see anything happening," he was saying now from his Anaheim, Calif., home. "I'd like to play, but it's out of my hands."

Even so, Carew still has a bat in his hands. He supervises clinics for Little League and high school teams. He's also searching for a building to house a batting school. But mostly he's a softball-hitting instructor for his three daughters — 12-year-old Charryse, 10-year-old Stephanie, and 8-year-old Michelle.

"Charise is a slugger, she's hitting over .400," he said proudly. "Stephanie is like her daddy. She hits the ball all over. She runs like me. She even thinks like me — everything has to be perfect. She's hitting over .380. Michelle is just starting, but she'll be a good hitter, too. I bought them a hitting machine for our backyard."

Carew acknowledged having thought about playing in Japan, but quickly added: "I don't know if I'd want to leave my family to play over there." He and his wife, Marilyn, often drive their daughters around California in their motor home.

"We've been up to San Francisco and Santa Barbara, down to San Diego, and over to Lake Mead," he said.

"And when we went someplace, I didn't leave a phone number where I could be reached. That makes me think I'm adjusting to not playing."

But with the pitchers getting more and more ahead of the hitters each season, Carew would seem to be an ideal batting coach for any major-league team. He's written a new book about the "art and science" of hitting. Teammates always sought his advice. Sparky Anderson, then the Cincinnati Reds' manager, once asked him to tutor Joe Morgan, George Foster, and Ken Griffey on bunting. And, during the 1976 season, when Thurman Munson was the American League's Most Valuable Player, the Yankee catcher asked Carew a favor.

"Watch me when I'm up there hitting," Munson said. "Tell me what I'm doing wrong."

Unlike most hitters, Carew seldom guessed at what type of pitch was coming next.

"I wait to see what the pitch is going to be," he once said, "then I swing at it."

PREFERRING TO flick his bat as if were a baton, Carew hit 112 homers without swinging hard. But he once took a hard swing, as Jim Frey, now the Chicago Cubs' manager, attests. At the time, Frey was the Baltimore Orioles' first-base coach. Like opponents throughout the league, he was searching for a way to pitch to the perennial batting champion.

"I saw him strike out in Venezuela with a dinky little swing at a soft curveball," Frey recalls. "Watching a softball game on television later, I saw him take that dinky little swing at a slow pitch and strike out. I figured I had it."

"The first time we played him the next season, I told Scott McGregor to throw Carew the slowest curveball he could throw, the slower the better. Sure enough. Slow curveball, strike one. Fastball, strike two. Slow curveball, Carew took that dinky little swing and struck out. When he came out to first base the next inning, he told me, 'Tell McGregor to stop throwing me that slow stuff or the next one is going into the bullpen.' I figure, hey, he knows he can't hit it, that's why he's telling me this."

"His next time up, first pitch, McGregor throws that slow curve again. Crack, he hit it into the bullpen, right where he said he would. That was the last slow curve he ever got."

BUT NOW Carew is watching the slowest curveball he's ever seen — being ignored by 26 teams when he knows he is still capable of batting close to .300 as a d.h. or part-time first baseman. What hurts is his impression that Gene Mauch, the Angels' manager, who also managed him in Minnesota, has abandoned him.

"I've read where Gene said he was embarrassed to offer me a $200,000 salary," Carew says. "But why not see if I'd take it. Money was never a major problem with me. All those years in Minnesota, I never worried about what other guys made."

Some of his former Angel teammates have phoned, notably Reggie Jackson, Doug DeCinces, and Devon White, a young outfielder. "Reggie's called several times, he knows what happened to me this year could happen to him next year." But there's a bronze lining to the clouds over Carew's future. By not playing this season, he would be one year closer to his Hall of Fame plaque at Cooperstown.

"That's right," he said, laughing. "I could get my speech written, and put it in a safe."

Sixers force seventh game, pound on Bucks, 126-108

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley and Bobby Jones scored 23 points each and the Philadelphia 76ers, triggered by a 24-8 third-period rally, routed the Milwaukee Bucks 126-108 Friday night to force a decisive seventh game in their NBA Eastern Conference playoff.

The 76ers and Bucks meet Sunday in Milwaukee to determine the Boston Celtics' opponent in the conference final. The Celtics advanced with a 4-1 victory over Atlanta in the other semifinal.

In addition to Barkley and Jones, point guard Maurice Cheeks helped the 76ers stave off elimination with 16 points, 10 rebounds and 13 assists.

Craig Hodges led the Bucks with 22 points, including five three-point goals. Terry Cummings collected 16 for Milwaukee, who played for the second straight game without all-star Sidney Moncrief, who has an injured left heel.

But even Moncrief might not have helped against the hot-shooting, fast-breaking 76ers.

Philadelphia led 62-54 starting the third period, but Milwaukee got within five with 9:03 left in the quarter.

MILWAUKEE (1986) Cummings 7-14 2-8 16, Fields 4-8 2-4 11, Brown 1-3 0-2 2, Hodges 7-15 3-4 22, Price 4-12 5-7 13, Pierce 2-11 0-4 4, Davis 2-7 2-3 5, Lister 6-8 5-17, Glass 2-4 3-4 7, Muehle 1-2 0-0 2, Reynolds 3-7 2-6 8, Totals 36-60 20-37 108.

Texas loses Division II football championship game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Four small towns in northern Alabama have formed a partnership and persuaded the NCAA to move its Division II football championship game out of Texas.

An NCAA official confirmed

Wednesday that Florence, Ala., will host the Division II title game Dec. 13. The game has been held the past five years in McAllen, Texas.

"We received bids from McAllen and from four towns in Alabama which went together in their bid," said Dennis Pope, assistant director of men's championships. "We were not unhappy with McAllen at all. But we just received a better bid from the Alabama group."

Pope said the communities of Florence, Tusculumbia, Sheffield and Muscle Shoals had formed the successful alliance in getting the game.

"Besides this being a better bid, it also came from an area which is more Division II football country," Pope said.

Mariners feel Williams has right formula

SEATTLE (AP) — Members of the Seattle Mariners who met for the first time Friday with new manager Dick Williams said they know their ball club can win and perhaps Williams has the "right formula."

The 57-year-old Williams brings a reputation for toughness and an emphasis on the fundamentals with him to his sixth major-league managerial job in a career that began with the Red Sox in 1967.

"We know we have a good team," pitcher Matt Young said. "We know we can win, but maybe he has the right formula. His track record speaks for itself. He's a proven winner and maybe he can turn things around."

Williams took three teams into four World Series.

The Mariners interviewed after their get-acquainted session described the meeting as amiable.

"It was a very friendly meeting," second baseman Danny Tartabull, whose father, Jose, was an outfielder on Williams' 1967 Boston team, said. "It was an introduction and I think it was the right way to do it."

"He just told everyone to relax and go out and start the season over again," designated hitter Ken Phelps said.

Williams takes over a club that leads the league in walks allowed and strikeouts by their hitters.

Seattle, which has never had a winning season since joining the American League in 1969, fired its fifth manager, Chuck Cottier, on Thursday.

"You're going to see a team that goes back to the fundamentals, throwing strikes, catching the ball, throwing the ball, making contact and doing the little things," Young said.

"He told us that some players didn't like him but he indicated that he's not that way (difficult) at all," Tartabull said. "You have to take the man at his word."

Young noted Williams was known for his "love-hate relationships" with his players but said he didn't see any problem for the Mariners.

"I'm a conformist," Young said. "I feel like I can pretty much adapt to anybody's style and there's not too many rebels on this team."

Going into Friday night's game with Toronto, Seattle has lost 17 of 21 games, including the last five.

"I've got to go out and play the game even if President Reagan is the manager," Tartabull said. "I still have to go out and do my job."

Canadiens tip Rangers, gain Cup finals

MONTREAL (AP) — Bobby Smith broke a tie with a power-play goal in the second period and the Canadiens went on to a 3-1 victory over the New York Rangers Friday night and moved into the Stanley Cup finals for the 27th time in their illustrious history.

The Canadiens, who have won a record 22 Stanley Cups, will play in the final round against the winner of the Campbell Conference final between Calgary and St. Louis. That series resumes Saturday night in Calgary with the teams tied 2-2.

In winning the Wales Conference championship, the Canadiens got another solid game in goal from rookie Patrick Roy, who made 19 saves.

The Canadiens went ahead 2-1 on Smith's power-play goal at 4:41 of the second period. New York's Bob Brooke was in the penalty box for hooking when Claude Lemieux shot from the slot. Rangers goalie John Vanbiesbrouck made the save on Lemieux, but was on his stomach when the puck popped out to the slot and Smith banged it over the fallen goaltender for his fifth goal of the playoffs.

Montreal sewed it up when Bob Gainey scored his fourth goal of the playoffs at 9:54 of the third period. Chris Chelios took a shot from the slot just inside the blue line. Vanbiesbrouck made the save, and the puck squirted out to Gainey, who put the puck in from the edge of the crease.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead at 3:50 of the first period when Tomas Sandstrom scored his fourth goal of the playoffs. Sandstrom connected from the slot, about 30 feet away, after taking a pass from Mark Osborne, who was standing just inside the left-hand faceoff circle.

Sandstrom's shot beat Roy on his stick side, the puck skidding between his pad and the post.

The Canadiens tied it at 18:21 on a power-play goal by Lemieux, his ninth goal of the playoffs. Gaston Gingras fired a 40-footer from the slot and the rebound came out to the edge of the crease, where Lemieux beat Vanbiesbrouck on the glove side.

Montreal was given the man advantage when Rangers defenseman Tom Laidlaw was penalized for hooking.

Earlier in the first period, the Rangers lost the services of Kelly Miller for the game when he was decked by an elbow from Montreal's Craig Ludwig at the 14:25 mark. Miller lay on the ice for several minutes after the collision before he was helped off. A team spokesman said Miller suffered a concussion.

Pagel gets okay to look around

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Quarterback Mike Pagel of the Indianapolis Colts said he doesn't expect to participate when the National Football League team holds a mini-camp next week.

The Colts, hoping to shore up their weak passing game, acquired Gary Hogeboom from Dallas and drafted Illinois' Jack Trudeau last week. This week, the Colts granted Pagel and his agent permission to talk with other NFL clubs about a trade and the 25-year-old quarterback will visit the Cleveland Browns for a weekend tryout.

"It would basically be a waste of my time and everybody else's time for me to be there," Pagel said of the mini-camp. "What they're going to try to do is give Hogeboom and Trudeau most of the work. Having me there would take away one more turn from them."

The Browns are looking for an experienced, but young, quarterback. They already have Bernie Kosar.

Gary Danielson and Paul McDonald. They also drafted Mike Norseth of Kansas in the seventh round. Ernie Accorsi, Cleveland's executive vice president, was the general manager in Baltimore when the Colts drafted Pagel in 1982. Accorsi also was the main man behind the Browns acquiring running back Curtis Dickey when the Colts waived him last season.

A year ago, Pagel wanted to move on to another team but since then he has become engaged to an Indianapolis woman and wants to maintain his current home.

"Isn't this just typical?" said Pagel. "Last year, I ask to be traded and they say, 'No, we won't trade you.' This year, I want to stay here and it looks like I might be gone."

Pagel has started 47 Colts games in his four years and has a 50.8 career completion percentage. Last year he completed 199 of 394 passes for 50.5 percent and 14 touchdowns.

Mall hero to become police academy cadet

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Jack Laufer isn't haunted by nightmares of the October day he stopped a woman's shooting rampage that left three people dead and seven injured in a suburban shopping mall.

er: Jack Laufer, hero, is about to become Cadet John Laufer III of the Pennsylvania State Police.

"I have a strong sense of right and wrong," said Laufer. "I'm confident it will carry through as a police officer."

The trial of Sylvia Seegrist, 25, the Crum Lynne woman accused of the shootings, is to begin July 2. She is charged with three counts of murder, seven of aggravated assault and one of recklessly endangering.

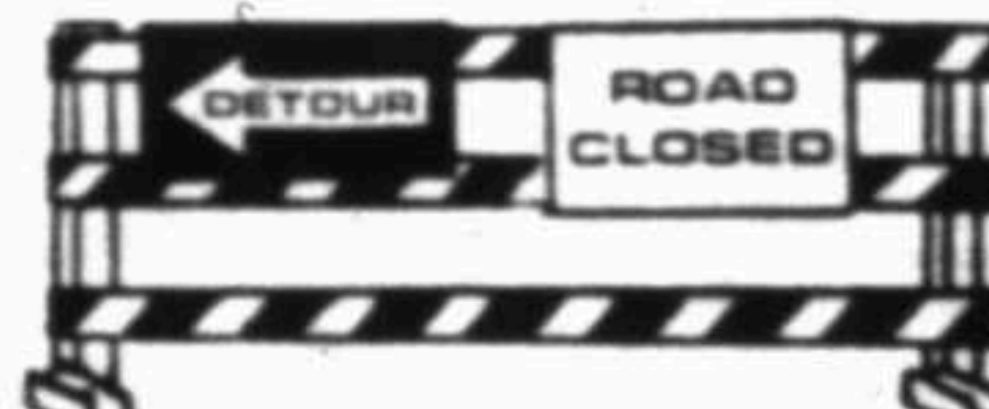

Police said the death and injury toll would have been higher had Laufer not acted. Among the dead was a 2-year-old boy.

It was the day before Halloween when Laufer and his girlfriend were strolling through Springfield Mall. They heard shots and saw shoppers ducking for cover.

Then Laufer spotted a woman in combat gear firing a semi-automatic rifle.

Don't let the detour sign at Cardinal Lane and Midkiff Road detour you from worshiping with us. The city is putting in a water line to bring fresh water to this part of the city. Jesus said, "Everyone who drinks of this water shall thirst again; but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst." John 4:13-14 (NASB)

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Choirs to be honored

This Sunday evening, the ministry of music of First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois, will present its annual Choir Recognition and Awards service at 5:30 p.m. in the sanctuary of the church. The service, under the leadership of Brad and Jane Kiser, Directors of Music Ministries, will feature the five singing and five handbell choirs of the church.

First United Methodist is a member of the Choristers Guild, an international organization formed in the early 1950s to promote the use of children's choirs and for many years this local congregation has presented Choristers Guild awards to choir members who excel in attendance, leadership and participation.

To earn an award, a choir member must be in attendance 80 percent of all rehearsals and performances of the choir during the choir year, September through May. This year, more than 150 persons will receive an award for meeting this challenge. Ten persons will receive awards for perfect attendance, and two youths will receive a choir cross for top consecutive years in the choir program of the church.

Following the service, the Worship Work Area will host a reception for all those attending in the fellowship hall of the church. The public is invited to attend.

It won't stop us," commented the pastor of one of the United Church congregations, the Rev. J.L. McDonald of Temple Church in Philadelphia.

That congregation voted unanimously last Sunday, following the convictions May 1 of eight sanctuary workers in Tucson, Ariz., to continue participating in the movement.

Bishops stand assailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unofficial, conservative group has assailed the recent stand by United Methodist bishops against the policy of nuclear deterrence and any use of nuclear weapons.

The group, United Methodists for Religious Liberty and Human Rights, says the bishops ignore "the threat of Marxist-Leninist totalitarianism" and criticized them for advocating Soviet-style steps — a comprehensive test ban, nuclear weapons freeze and ban on space weapons.

Gathering postponed

COLLINGSWOOD, N.J. (AP) — A leader of opponents to major ecumenical organizations of Christians says his group has postponed a world congress in South Korea in June because of "terrorism and the targeting of Americans."

The Rev. Carl McIntire, president of the International Council of Christian Churches since its founding in 1946 by mostly small, fundamentalist groups opposed to mainline ecumenical bodies, said in calling off the meeting:

"Libyan threats have led Americans to stay home. Perilous times are here."

'Conspiracy' blamed

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — An official of the American Jewish Committee says right-wing extremist groups have stepped up campaigns among Midwestern farmers to blame their economic difficulties on a falsified international Jewish banking conspiracy.

Rabbi A. James Rudin, the committee's interreligious affairs director, told a seminar at North Dakota State University that "the radical right is making significant inroads in the Middle West." He urged major farm organizations to "publicly condemn the extremist groups."

Lutherans fear unity

NEW YORK (AP) — Recent criticism by Lutheran Church in America leaders of a plan to unite it with two other Lutheran denominations represents "fears of the established hierarchy," says the head of a joint commission planning the merger.

William Kinnison, president of Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio, says the criticism may be "poisoning the mind of some people," but was to be expected as the merger planning moved into its final stages.

"We're coming down to the crunch period," says Presiding Bishop David W. Preus of the American Lutheran Church, one of the three bodies involved. "But we're expecting a favorable response to the merger."

Bishop Will L. Herzfeld of the third denomination, the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, also said he was "quite confident" the three denominations in August will approve the plan for constituting the unified church next year. "I think it's God's will and the will of the people," he said.

Glamour studies religion

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of 25,000 readers of Glamour magazine finds that 87 percent feel that God helps them, 77 percent pray and 79 percent read the Bible.

Eighty percent say they are just as religious, or more so, than they were five years ago, and 56 percent feel they are more religious than their parents. A majority, 54 percent, attend church or synagogue regularly.

Johnson earns degree

FORT WORTH — Timothy Scott Johnson received the master of divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary during commencement ceremonies Friday.

President Russell H. Dilday awarded degrees to 442 students in Southwestern's schools of theology, religious education and church music.

Johnson is the son of Mrs. Margaret Johnson of Midland.

Southwestern, one of six seminaries affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention, is the largest theological school in the world. Each year more than 5,000 men and women train for ministry at Southwestern.

Mysticism lessons set

Lessons in "High Mysticism," based on Emma Curtis Hopkins' scientific Christian mental practice will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays beginning May 22. The series lasts six weeks and consists of 12 lessons.

"A pioneer among modern teachers of Truth, Mrs. Hopkins was called the 'teacher of teachers' as so many of her students became teachers," said the Rev. Nina Douglas, minister of the Permian Church of Religious Science. As a young man, Ernest Holmes, founder of Science of Mind, studied with her.

"Mrs. Hopkins' lessons present a point of view and breadth of vision that inspire with a unity of spirit yet freedom in expression," the Rev. Douglas, who is offering the course, said.

Cost of the course is $50. It will be held at the Science of Mind Center, 4410 N. Midkiff, D-217, The Courtyard, above Schwartz.

Revival begins Sunday

The Cuthbert Baptist Church will have revival services Sunday through Wednesday.

The Rev. Don Warren of Houston will be the evangelist.

Services will begin between 7 and 7:30 p.m. each day and continue until 8:30 p.m.

A nursery will be provided.

Sanctuary supported

NEW YORK (AP) — Mirroring assertions of sanctuary laws that the movement will go on despite convictions of some participants, a survey in the United Church of Christ found solid support for that position.

Of 14 congregations in the denomination that have declared themselves sanctuaries to refugees from Central America, checks found that all of them affirmed their continued activity in that cause.

They are among about 300 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish congregations involved in the movement.

Religion defends educational ideals

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — American higher education had its origins in religious impulses, a wellspring that continues to bolster a big share of U.S. academic life. The task sometimes requires warding off interference.

Under accrediting standards, the church-related campuses have to offer full-orbed teaching, unbound to religious prescriptions — a scholarly ideal the schools generally espouse as their own.

Only occasionally do difficulties arise about it, as in recent Vatican proposals to put church reins on Roman Catholic educational centers — a move so far held back by objections from their presidents.

Although many of the oldest, Ivy League institutions — Harvard, Yale, Brown, Princeton and others — have dropped their founding Protestant ties, more than 800 U.S. colleges and universities remain related to denominations.

About 550 are Protestant, 235 Catholic and 24 Jewish.

They grew out of religious regard for learning, and make up half the 1,600 private higher educational institutions in the country, whose number surpasses that of the 1,400 such state institutions.

It's a proud strand in U.S. religious endeavor, but under no doctrinal restraint other than the broad pursuit of knowledge.

That purpose, expanding the horizons of human understanding in all fields without being limited to any group's particular concepts, is the yardstick for U.S. higher educational institutions, including those born of religion.

They honor their heritages, whether Methodist, Catholic or Presbyterian. But they aren't limited to any creed, nor ecclesiastically controlled by it, an openness essential for accreditation as centers of higher education.

The distinction may have been obscured in recent news reports about U.S. Catholic educators resisting Vatican-proposed regulations for their institutions, asserted to assure their "Catholic character."

That "character," however, is not an issue, the educators say, emphasizing that safeguarding it — something they prize whether Catholic, Lutheran or otherwise — lies with their elected boards of trustees, not with any denominational agency or the Vatican.

The best way for upholding such character, the heads of the Catholic institutions say, is for them to stick to their central aim — the "full development of persons through education."

"For just as the gospel focuses on the human person, so too the Catholic college/university makes the good of the person its central concern."

The key threat raised by the Vatican proposals is "outside ecclesiastical control" of the institutions, their presidents pointed out in a 6,500-word summary of their criticisms of the plan.

They said it would undermine the schools' academic freedom and autonomy, endanger their accreditation and eligibility of students for government loans, force many of the institutions to close and "jeopardize the rest."

"Such accreditation, as well as the federal and state funding that accompanies it, requires that institutions respect academic freedom and that the curriculum not be used for proselytizing on behalf of any religion," the educators said.

While the institutions are free of ecclesiastical regulation, they honor their "Catholic character," and are publicly so identified, the educators say, even though a big share of their students are of other religious affiliations.

The presidents note they have a six-member committee to keep communications open with a counterpart committee of six U.S. bishops, who generally, however, have no jurisdictional controls over the institutions.

That kind of non-binding comity typifies the links between religious bodies and their higher educational institutions, which cherish their religious roots and concerns, but without being under ecclesiastical constraints.

They also teach their own and other traditions in religious departments, but as probing academic disciplines, not to mold particular beliefs and with no limits on the full, free search for truth.

Counselor to present seminar here

An all-day seminar, entitled "Where to Go From Up," will be held May 17. Host lecturer, Robert P. Merkle, is the executive director of Christian Counseling Service, Inc., with the Robert H. Schuller Ministries of the Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif.

The seminar will make practical suggestions regarding how each individual can contribute to "tapping the resources that are available, free of charge, to serve all humanity."

"Never before in the course of human history has it been realistic for a majority of ordinary individuals to commit their lives to doing something effective to make the whole world work for everyone," says Merkle. "Every one of us makes a difference in our world — either beneficial or destructive."

This seminar is a summons to exceptional individuals who, having attained high levels of personal success, want to do more with their lives," the counselor says.

Scheduled in the Ramada Hotel, the session begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 5 p.m. The fee is $30 per person for $50 for a couple. Sponsor is the Permian Church of Religious Science. Merkle received his doctor of ministry from Andover Newton Theological Seminary in Maryland. His bachelor of divinity is from Eden Theological Seminary in St. Louis and his BA is from Elmhurst College in Illinois. Clinical training was performed at City Hospital and Homer Phillips Hospital in St. Louis; Fulton State Mental Hospital in Missouri; and the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry, New York, a psychotherapy and counseling center affiliated with a ministry of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's Marble Collegiate Church.

Singers, ringers to present special concert in Andrews

Nationally recognized Celebration Singers and Inspiration Ringers will perform in concert at Lakeview Christian Church.

The Celebration Singers is a group of 38 vocalists directed by Jon Seccrest, professor of music at Manhattan Christian College, Manhattan, Kan. Performing with the Singers will be the Inspiration Ringers, a six-member English handbell choir, directed by Professor A. Edward Wolfe. The handbell choir will be playing gospel arrangements and novelty selections. Choral literature ranges from Renaissance to 20th century, from spiritual to inspirational, and from old-time hymn arrangements to the latest Christian music.

The Celebration Singers and Inspiration Ringers have been received in churches across America and Canada. Their appearance in Andrews is part of their annual spring tour, which this year includes Louisiana, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado. The Singers and Ringers have recently appeared at the Kansas Christian Convention, in the Old North Church Philadelphia at the Mark Twain Sesquicentennial Celebration and the North American Christian Convention.

Manhattan Christian College is a four-year school for ministers, missionaries, church educators, and church musicians. Various programs of studies in cooperation with Kansas State University, adjacent to the college, also offer students the opportunity to combine Biblical studies with other types of professional education.

The Celebration Singers and Inspiration Ringers can be heard at Lakeview Christian Church, located in Andrews, May 26 at 7:30 p.m.

MAKING CONNECTIONS

Are you ready for a bigger challenge? Do you know why you want to be personally successful? What is the connection between creativity and self betterment? Enterprise depends upon the art of making connections, an art that nature has perfected. These, and other important issues in your life, will be addressed and connected for you by DR. ROBERT MERKLE, head of counseling at the CRYSTAL CATHEDRAL, California, in a one day seminar CONNECTIONS.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Smart money management will lead to a complete financial recovery. Make wise use of the cash you have on hand. Higher-ups show their satisfaction with your performance in the form of a raise or promotion. New job offers are forthcoming. Do not be too quick to change firms. Romance plays a major role in the decisions you make now. Stay in touch with adult offspring. An inheritance or trust raises questions.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: dancer-choreographer Martha Graham, artist Salvador Dali, Detroit Tigers pitcher Walt Terrell, comic Mort Sahl, actors Phil Silvers and Denver Pyle, composer Irving Berlin, Vice President Henry Wallace.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The phone could ring often today. Socially, you are in great demand! Your sense of humor helps you defuse a tense moment at a family get-together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A sense of humor opens important, new doors. Enjoy the attention you receive from children. Your social plans are subject to change. Attending a religious service makes you feel more optimistic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Resolve a dispute within the family circle before a breach grows any wider. Exposure to a fresh point of view helps you achieve success. Be considerate of mate's wishes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pace yourself this weekend. Too many activities will leave you exhausted. A busy week lies ahead. Get in touch with those who share your goals. A concerted effort launches a pet project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to catch up on the latest family gossip. Offer your loved ones encouragement, not criticism. Your love life will soon improve. Travel and romance go hand-in-hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Luck helps you solve a money problem. Communicate openly with loved one and your relationship will soar to new heights. Be flexible. Make a special effort to get along better with relatives, neighbors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be more accessible to loved ones. An open display of affection will both surprise and please. Accept presents as graciously as you give them. A promising opportunity will arise sooner than expected.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Home improvements boost property values. A child or grandchild alters your plans for the day. You enjoy getting outdoors for a while. Short trips are favored. A change of scenery boosts your spirits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A dream vacation could become reality. Explore some of the ways you can make travel more affordable. Romance is in the air!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money from a special source puts you in a generous mood. Good news comes in a small package. Marriage or a profitable partnership is yours for the asking. Know your own heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An excellent time to form a partnership. An item you thought lost forever resurfaces. Some cost-cutting may be necessary in order to build savings. Be loving to someone who feels dejected.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take things easy this weekend. Get together with friends who let you be yourself. Today's events could prove lucky for romance. Remain optimistic about a child. Your encouragement means more than you know.

A cartoon illustration of a man and a woman looking at a large trophy. The man, on the right, has a large nose and is wearing a suit. The woman, on the left, has dark hair and is wearing a dress. They are both looking at a large, ornate trophy that sits on a pedestal. The trophy has a wide base and a narrow neck leading to a bowl-like top. The background is a simple, light-colored wall. The entire illustration is enclosed in a rectangular frame.

Brother Joe: He isn't ready to leave Sudan

BY DALIA BALIGH

Wau, Sudan (AP) — Brother Joe is staying. He's too busy planning a new science building for his school to be frightened off by rebels here in southern Sudan.

The Rev. Joseph Shubitowski, 51, a Jesuit priest from Detroit, stands out in Wau, a city virtually surrounded by anti-government rebels. He is tall, muscular, has fair skin, white hair and twinkling blue eyes. He has lived in Sudan for six years, the last three in Wau.

Locals call him Brother Joe. He started building his secondary school shortly before the Sudanese People's Liberation Army took up arms against the Moslem-dominated government in the capital Khartoum three years ago for economic and administrative reforms and for autonomy in their southern region of mostly Christians and animists.

German, Canadian and Italian relief agencies have pulled out of Bahr el-Ghazal province, where Wau is situated, because of rebel encroachment. The rebels control several major towns in the province.

Brother Joe says it's too early to leave.

"There were lots of missionaries here," he said in an interview. "They pulled out except for us and the Indian Carmelite sisters. I think it is premature at this point to move out. This is a war between the Sudanese and themselves, it does not affect me as a foreigner. Should it become dangerous for me as a foreigner, then I might reconsider."

He and five other American Jesuits run the school, but because of the summer recess, only Brother Joe and the Rev. Richard Cherry, 49, of Toledo, Ohio, are in Wau. The others are home on vacation.

Even with a generator and regular supplies from Khartoum and abroad, life is far from easy. The city has had no electricity or running water for more than a year because of rebel activities.

"We have a generator, and we have not yet run out of gasoline," Brother Joe said. "Our diet is rice, pasta and Dinka beef bought from the local market."

The Dinkas, the largest single ethnic group in Sudan, populate most of Bahr el-Ghazal and make up most of the rebel army.

The Jesuits named their institution Loyola School after St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of their Roman Catholic order, the Society of Jesus. The hill on which the school sits was once known as Gabal Kheir (Mountain of Goodness) is known now as Gabal Loyola.

Brother Joe said the decision to build at Wau was made before the rebellion began in 1983, and in three years of construction, six classrooms have been finished.

The classrooms and the living quarters of the Jesuits stand neatly in one corner of the mountain top, while the rest of the fenced-in area is a messy construction site.

Getting construction and other supplies, including British textbooks from London, has been a nightmare, Brother Joe said.

"There have been no trains from Khartoum for two years. The only way to get supplies is through Nairobi (in neighboring Kenya)."

"Now with the rebel conflict, it looks like all the roads to Wau will be closed. If not, the rainy season will pretty much close any roads the rebels leave open."

Most of his pupils are teen-agers but some are as old as 40, he said.

"I have just finished the library. We have 6,000 volumes, which were donated."

He said he had hoped to have the science building well under way by now, "but the situation is a bit tight, and I don't know when it will all be finished."

The Jesuits planned a school for 250 pupils, but that goal remains far off. Brother Joe said school began last year with 87 pupils and ended with 57.

Some left because they could no longer afford to stay in school and had to go back to their home towns, while others were pressured to go into the bush and join the rebels.

Brother Joe said the Detroit province Missionary Order of Loyola started its work in Sudan after Jesuit missionaries in India were ordered by the Indian government to stop their work there.

When the Vatican sent them to Sudan, he said, his first post was in Busari, a village near Wau, where three other American Jesuits remain. He helped in a seminary there for three years.

"Then just as I was about ready to leave, the bishop asked if we would be interested in starting a school here in Wau," he said.

Wau's population has grown from 40,000 to 100,000 because of the influx of refugees from drought and insurrection. Bishop Joseph Nye-Kindi runs a Roman Catholic coeducational primary school in the city while the government operates three secondary schools.

Poisonous toads become plague in Australian cane fields

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Poisonous toads the size of dinner plates have turned the tables on Australian sugar cane farmers who brought them from South America more than 50 years ago to combat a beetle plague.

They've become a plague themselves.

Colonies of ugly cane toads have sprung up across Australia's eastern seaboard and no one knows how to get rid of them.

"Nobody has done much research on them but everybody agrees it's something we must plan to get rid of," said Dr. Robert Floyd, of the Department of Entomology at the Commonwealth, Science and Industrial Research Organization, a government-funded body of scientists.

Imported in 1935 to control the grey-backed cane beetle, the cane toad has since been replaced by chemical sprays.

But they have become an ecological disaster because they have no natural predators.

They eat virtually anything that moves — from frogs, snakes and lizards to rodents and insects — and when cornered, they squirt a toxic poison that kills dogs and cats.

Even humans have died from the sticky white substance, which is squirted from neck glands. There are no accurate figures available, but Floyd said he knew of at least six human deaths.

They are now found across 45 percent of Queensland, but are not restricted to this northern tropical state, which occupies a quarter of the country.

They also have marched southward into New South Wales, and westward to the Northern Territory, Australia's remotest area.

"There's no stopping them," Floyd said in an interview. "It's a nasty animal. It will attack anything."

"We have found that as toad colonies increase, our native fauna — lizards and snakes and small marsupials — decline. For us it's a major ecological problem."

The toads, which grow up to nine inches in diameter, are covered in a brownish wart-like skin. They live about 16 years. Adults weigh about a pound and females spawn twice a year, laying 30,000 eggs each time.

A number of proposals have been made to combat the toad, but none proved successful.

Efforts to create an export market for toad skins also failed. U.S. businessman imported 120,000 skins two years ago to make wallets, purses and shoes, but the fashion world ignored them.

In Brisbane, a sub-tropical city of 1.1 million on the east coast, cane toads seem to inhabit every backyard. A new sport, cane-toad busting, is popular among schoolchildren.

"Kids come round all the time with metal spikes asking if they can clear the garden," said Ann Nakano, a writer. "For two bucks ($1.40), you can't go wrong."

Amarillo woman Debbie Chandler has written a book about her life as a victim of Down's syndrome.

Woman who has Down's writes book

AMARILLO (AP) — Debbie Chandler has written a book about her life. That doesn't seem particularly surprising, except that she has Down's syndrome, a form of mental retardation.

She has mosaic Down's syndrome, a form not easily recognizable because she has a higher range of intelligence and none of the characteristic facial features associated with other versions of the syndrome.

Ms. Chandler says having a mild form of the handicap is a blessing, but it can bring on its own problems. "I keep them guessing," she said. It's difficult for people to understand why she needs help sometimes, she says, because she has no visible sign of a handicap.

Her book, which she began in high school, describes the positive and negative aspects of her life and her feelings about having a handicap, she says.

Ms. Chandler has had some nibbles at her book from the National Down's Syndrome Association and a Christian publishing house.

Her mother, Ruth Chandler, said she and her husband didn't notice anything wrong with their daughter when she was a baby. But they began to notice Debbie was late in picking up all the small skills children learn as they develop.

So Mrs. Chandler began her shuttle between doctors trying to find out what might be wrong with her child, she said. Finally, one doctor diagnosed Debbie as having Down's syndrome. A battery of blood and chromosomal tests confirmed it.

Mosaic Down's syndrome affects about 1 percent of all people with Down's syndrome. In this form, the extra chromosome that causes Down's syndrome, is found in some of the body cells, not all.

"We were devastated," Mrs. Chandler said. But the Chandlers took the attitude that their daughter had great potential, and she has proved them right, Mrs. Chandler said.

Her parents were told not to expect their daughter to receive a high school diploma, but she always assumed she would graduate from high school, and she did, receiving her diploma in Marfa.

Ms. Chandler said she had a mix of special education and regular classes. She had few problems in elementary school but became aware of how difficult classes were becoming in junior high school, especially math and science.

"I just like to learn," she said, so she would ask for extra work in school.

She also is a voracious reader, devouring all forms of literature. And this love of books led her to write one herself.

"I always said I wanted to be a writer," she said.

Her personal concerns at this stage of her life are finding congenial friends and a job that fits her abilities and needs, she says.

"The worst thing is not having a friend," Ms. Chandler said. She said she usually turns for friendship to people who have physical handicaps.

Ms. Chandler is also trying to find her niche in the workplace, she said. She has had some assembly-type jobs and currently volunteers as a supervisor at an Amarillo State Center workshop.

Ms. Chandler and her mother believe she may have found her niche in speaking and writing on behalf of the handicapped.

"Debbie can articulate what it's like to have a handicap," Mrs. Chandler said. "Maybe this is her way to speak out."

Ms. Chandler said she would like to continue to write more non-fiction. She likes to write about children and teen-agers and subjects they might not like to discuss such as death and shyness, she said. She has also written some short stories and poems.

Will effective action follow tough words on terrorism?

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan got the tough words on terrorism he wanted from the Tokyo summit, but whether effective action will follow remains an unanswered question.

There is precedent for believing that the statement agreed to by the leaders of seven industrialized nations will fade from memory, its provisions largely ignored as individual governments find national self-interest outweighing any desire for international cooperation.

Such was the fate of the agreement reached by the same nations in 1978 when they met in Bonn, West Germany, and declared their joint concern over "terrorism and hostage-taking."

They addressed some of the same issues treated at the 1986 summit. For example, they said that "where a country refuses extradition or prosecution of those who have hijacked an aircraft and/or do not return such aircraft, the heads of state and government are jointly resolved that their governments should take immediate action to cease all flights to that country."

"Nobody ever did anything about it," said Thomas M. Ashwood, security analyst for the Air Line Pilots Association. Ashwood said France "blocked every attempt to my knowledge, every attempt to invoke the provisions of the Bonn agreement."

Is there any reason to believe then that the call from Tokyo for "improved extradition procedures" to bring terrorists to trial will prove workable? Had this statement been a part of the record, would Italy have detained Mohammed Abbas, the radical Palestinian leader the United States wanted held in connection with the hijacking of the cruise ship Achille Lauro and the murder of one of its passengers, Leon Klinghoffer.

Is it realistic to expect the Tokyo signatories to impose "stricter immigration and visa requirements and procedures in respect of nationals of states which sponsor or support terrorism?"

The statement from the Tokyo summit certainly was greeted in Washington with some skepticism by authorities on terrorism.

"It's all very nice and I hope we can live up to some of it," said Robert Kupperman of the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies.

Robert Hunter, who served on the National Security Council under President Carter, said one problem was getting some understanding of "what we mean by terrorism."

An Analysis

Both Hunter and Kupperman cited as an example the support the Irish Republican Army receives from Americans.

The British are as concerned about what they consider terrorist acts of the IRA as the Reagan administration is about actions it says are spawned by Col. Moammar Khadafi.

"We'll be pushed further and further," said Kupperman "especially if there's some embarrassment such as an IRA murderer here and we refuse to extradite him because we call it a political crime."

Such steps as increased police and intelligence cooperation and a reduction in the size of diplomatic and consular missions, specifically those of Libya, already were under way when the leaders agreed to their statement.

But there was no sign in the summit statement or in the words of anonymous briefers that the United States could expect any more cooperation for military strikes than it received when U.S. planes bombed Libya on April 15. In fact, French officials made a point of publicly stating that their government's stand against allowing U.S. planes to use French air space would not change.

Reagan used the U.S. military strike as a lever to get cooperation from the European countries. He told them one reason they must act was "so that the crazy Americans won't take matters into their own hands again."

But the Europeans continue to believe that terrorism can't be dealt with so long as it is isolated from the Arab-Israeli conflict that has provided a cause for radical groups. Reagan disagreed and told his summit partners "just people with just grievances do not use terrorism as a weapon."
