President Plans To Veto Strip Mine Bill Again

WASHINGTON (U.P.I.) — President Ford has decided to veto federal strip mining legislation because, it would reduce domestic coal production and force the United States to import more oil. White House sources said today Congress was expected to move to override Ford's veto later this week. Ford pocket vetoed a nearly identical strip mining bill last December after Congress had adjourned for the year, leaving it with no override possibility. White House sources indicated

Ford's reasons for vetoing the current legislation were almost the same as last time. They noted that a reduced domestic production of coal would force the United States to import more oil. Also with less coal available, utility prices might be increased as much as 18 per cent, the sources added. The White House had scheduled a morning briefing by Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb to announce Ford's decision but later delayed the session. There was no official word when the decision would be announced.

The sources said Ford also was concerned about the effect of provisions in the bill restricting surface mining on steep slopes of Appalachia, estimating that the bill could generate unemployment of 36,000 to 40,000.

The sources said the bill also was ambiguous in its language and would lead to many court suits.

Supporters of the bill have expressed optimism for a congressional override based on the 293 to 115 House vote on which the compromise bill won approval. Only 290 votes would be required for the necessary two-thirds to override Ford's veto should all members vote.

The bill received an equally lopsided approval in the Senate. The measure would set federal standards for extracting coal located close to the surface and require restoration of lands scarred by strip mining to their approximate original contour. It says certain lands, such as national forests, could not be mined, and it would charge a special reclamation fee based on tonnage from all operators to help abandoned mine lands.

Jury Selection Begins In 5-year-old Vandalism

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Jury selection for the trial of a three-year-old civil suit involving alleged vandalism acts by several Lefors youths five years ago began in 31st District Court here this morning.

A total of 125 Gray County residents were summoned as prospective jurors.

The suit was filed by J.E. Montgomery of Pampa, the now operates the Black Gold Restaurant. Filed in 1972, Montgomery seeks damages as a result of alleged vandalism to Buddy's Cafe in Lefors on Halloween 1970.

Lefors youths, most of them adults now, sat together — many with parents — on one side of the courtroom.

The case will be presented and you will need to decide what kind of people are on trial," said John W. Warner, Pampa attorney, who represents the Lefors group.

Montgomery is represented by Amarillo attorney Harris Lofthus.

Lofthus said he estimated damages would total about $4,000.

Named as defendants in the civil suit on trial today are David White and his father, James Eudy, Jimmy Galin and his father, Jim Galbraith and his mother, Richard Harkcom and his father, Lynn Shelton and father, Charles Shelton, Kaye Hollenhead and father and Walter Hughes.

Lofthus said other names were included in the original filing but some were deleted for one reason or another.

Presiding over the trial is Judge Richard Guntis of the 84th District Court in Spearman. Judge Guntis disqualified himself in a case in that district and Judge Grainger McElhany is sitting on the bench there in his place.

Lofthus told the Pampa News that the Montgomery building was vandalized to the extent that when sold its value was $1,600.

After questioning prospective jurors, Warner asked the group of youths named in the suit to go with him to assist in jury selection.

The trial is expected to continue through Tuesday, officials said.

Strong Winds Lift Roof At McLaughlin Hog Farm

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Houses trembled and shook in the Laketon area, between Mobette and Pampa, Sunday night as heavy winds removed a roof from a building at the Elmer McLaughlin hog farm.

Area rainfall reports varied from 20 of an inch in parts of Pampa to 70 of an inch in the southern part of the country.

Charlie Jordan of the Laketon Farm Supply said the storm broke his rain gauge last night, so he was unable to give a report. However, he said houses in that area trembled and shook.

McLaughlin was out this morning surveying storm damage. Jordan said the hog farm roof was blown onto another building and no one yet knew how many hogs may have suffocated.

The wind blew awful hard, Jordan said. He added that he lost another rain gauge last week due to hail damage.

An official 26 of an inch of rainfall was reported in Pampa. Heavy winds hit all directions, but the heaviest damages were reported in the Laketon area.

Paul Eakin, 14 miles southwest of Pampa, said that area received less than half an inch.

Farmers' comments today ranged from: "The rain was just right, it's just hope we can keep the hail away."

It is always good to see a rain," said Dean Burger, who lives 20 miles south of Pampa.

Mrs. Leon Daugherty, who lives five miles north, said that area received 20 of an inch.

No hail damage was reported there — only heavy winds.

Mrs. Curtis Schaffer, 22 miles south of Pampa, reported 70 of an inch of rainfall over the weekend along with heavy winds which left broken tree limbs.

Fred Haddock, 18 miles southwest of Pampa, reported light rain accompanied by heavy winds.

Tax Receipts Arrive Here

Pampa received a check for $43,461.47 today covering sales tax receipts through May 2.

It was the second check the city has received under the new monthly payment plan inaugurated by State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

The first check received last month for the period ending April 4 was for $25,992.58.

Stanley M. Chittenden, city secretary, said today there is no way currently to make comparisons with last year's receipts which were received on a quarterly basis.

We will have to wait until the end of the year to make comparisons that mean anything, Chittenden said.

Craig Won't Withdraw

By TEX DEWEESE
Pampa News Staff

Homer L. Craig, 59-year-old business manager and tax assessor, collector of the Pampa Independent School District for the past 18 years, is retiring from the school system June 30, but that doesn't mean he is withdrawing from the scene.

He will step down with a bit of nostalgia — and rightfully so. His entire 35 years of school experience all have been spent in Pampa and include everything from elementary teacher and athletic coach through grade school principal to business manager and school tax administrator.

When he leaves it all next month, Craig is looking forward to playing in the Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament here in July and the Top O' Texas tourney on Labor Day.

Inasmuch as he took only five of the 72 weeks vacation he had coming during his 18 years as school business manager, Craig plans to take a little time off between the July and September golf events.

What are his plans after that? Well, he says his health is good and he's physically fit, so he thinks he'll look for a job. In fact, he says he already has had three or four offers.

The daily hours for one of them, Craig said, are from 8 o'clock to 12. Right now, it looks pretty good to me on account of the free afternoons to continue my golf hobby out at the Country Club.

Craig admitted it sounded a bit unusual for a man to retire and then go job hunting.

I have to have something to do, he said about that. I know I couldn't stand being idle for any length of time.

Craig was born June 11, 1916, in Fort Worth. He was graduated from North Side High School there in January, 1934.

He went to work for Swift & Co. in Fort Worth after leaving high school. In 1937 he was transferred to the company's advertising department and his very first traveling job brought him to Pampa where he worked on an advertising display for a store that was where the Pampa Hardware Co. is today.

Young Craig entered Texas Wesleyan College in 1937 and was graduated from there with a B.S. degree in 1941.

Dick Livingston, Pampa Harvester basketball coach at that time and Terrell (Bill) Davis, a coach and teacher at Woodrow Wilson School, with whom Craig had played football at Texas Wesleyan, recommended him to Supt. L. L. Sone of the Pampa schools, and Craig reported for work as a 6th grade teacher, coach at Baker Elementary School here at mid-term in January of 1941.

After coaching an undefeated football team at Baker school in the 1941 grid season, Craig's teaching career was interrupted by a four-and-a-half year stint in the Army which he entered a private and was discharged as captain.

He was a bit reticent about talking of his wartime experiences which included two years in Europe that began when he went in with the initial invasion at Omaha Beach on the coast of Normandy June 1, 1944.

Craig was with U.S. forces in five major battle campaigns of World War II that included the Battle of the Bulge and the Rhine River campaign.

Three weeks before the war's end, he was transferred to General Patton's Third Army and was in Deggendorf, Germany on VJ Day.

Craig said his outfit knew in advance of the approaching end of the war.

We knew two weeks ahead of the announcement and the signing of the armistice that it was all over," he said, "and some strange things went on in those two weeks."

Following his discharge from the army in 1946, he returned to Pampa as a 5th grade teacher at Sam Houston school. That summer, he got his Masters degree from Texas Christian University. Knox Kinard was the Pampa school superintendent at the time.

In September of 1951 Craig was named principal of Baker Elementary School and two years later moved to Sam Houston School as principal.

In June of 1957 he was elevated to school business manager and tax assessor collector, the post he was to hold until his retirement next month.

During that time Craig became the 30th member of the exclusive group known as Registered School Business Administrators of the United States and Canada. That was in 1965. The year prior to that he had joined another exclusive organization as the 110th member of Certified Tax Assessors which today has a membership of only 243.

Craig says he was able to do that through the training he received from Aubrey L. Jones, now tax assessor-collector for the City of Pampa.

I had the honor of being trained by Mr. Jones who was the first chairman of the Education Committee for the Texas Association of Assessing Officers of which he also was first state president," Craig said.

During his career, some of the honors he received included:

President of the student body and captain of the football team in 1940 at Texas Wesleyan, listing in Who's Who Among College and University Students in 1940-41, listing in Who's Who in South and Southwest in 1958, president of Panhandle School Leaders Association in 1957-58, president Pampa Noon Lions Club in 1957-58, and selection for Who's Who in Texas in 1973.

Craig also is past chairman of the Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross and a past master of Pampa Masonic Lodge No. 966.

The retiring school business manager and his wife, Mary, observed their 32nd wedding anniversary, Monday, May 11.

They have two children, Jo Ann Joiner, whose husband, Gerre, is music director for Lamar Baptist Church in Wichita Falls, and Dan A. Craig, an army accountant at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C.

Craig considers three-year-old Julie Joiner, his granddaughter in Wichita Falls as the "apple of his eye."

Summing up his resignation, Craig said he was "getting out just in time."

You know the Pampa school system is going completely computerized in September," he said, "and that's something for which I am not prepared."

I'm already packed and ready to leave the office," he added, "but I will stay on through my successor who is due to report the first of the month."

Lake McClellan Claims First '75 Drowning

An Amarillo man was pronounced dead about 3 p.m. Sunday following an apparent drowning at Lake McClellan.

Justice of Peace E.L. Anderson said this morning that Gregory Lynn Luther, 22, of 1007 Hodges in Amarillo, became the first fatality at the lake this spring.

Lake McClellan, located 20 miles south of Pampa off U.S. 70, claimed three lives last summer, Anderson said.

Luther and a companion were swimming in the lake when the accident occurred. Anderson said the victim probably developed cramps and was unable to swim to shore.

Funeral services for Luther will be announced by Blackburn Funeral Directors in Amarillo.

Weather

The weather forecast calls for the possibility of severe thunderstorms in this area tonight. The highs today and Tuesday will be in the mid 80s, and the low tonight in the 50s.

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Alvin Toffler's World

Alvin Toffler made a name for himself a few years back by coining the phrase "future shock" in a book by the same title. His prediction that the dizzying speed of technological advance would have chilling and profound psychological impact on individual humans has been widely regarded as an important statement on the condition of modern times.

Toffler recently wrote another book predicting a rapid-fire rate of economic cataclysm including super-inflation, political terrorism and social breaches; he calls all this "eco-spasm," another handy book title.

Surely one of the most fascinating writers and talkers on the futurology circuit, Toffler was interviewed in a recent U.S. News & World Report. What he said is devastating to those who believe salvation lies in centralized planning; his remarks carry much cogency as a critique of bureaucracy and of "obsolete" political mindsets.

"We'll have to scrap our obsolete ideologies," says Toffler, "the old political labels like 'left wing' or 'right wing.' And we'll have to recognize that there is no such thing as economics in a vacuum. There is no 'economic fix' for our problems. Every time we try to fix something with economics alone, we make matters worse in our communities, our ecology, our family life, our global relation. What's needed is a whole new way of looking at the 'eco-spasm.' Unfortunately, we do not get around to telling us just what that new way is. But if he did, he recognizes, he'd be encumbered by the kind of messianism lesser writers incline to adopt.

Because "conditions vary wildly from one city or region to the next, from one industry or social group to the next," our national economic planners have been going about it all wrong.

Russia Still A Prison

Hardly a week seems to pass but that the iron grip which the Soviet government maintains over the lives of its citizens is not exposed in all its petty vindictiveness and viciousness.

Recently, for example, there was the touching story of actress Victoria Fyodorova, the love child of a World War II romance between an American admiral stationed in Moscow and a Russian actress. The girl's simple request for a visa to visit the father she had never seen was at first refused, then abruptly granted.

The other day, nuclear physicist Andrei D. Sakharov, who because of his international renown is one of the few Soviet citizens who dares to speak his mind, reported that the authorities had refused to let his wife visit specialists in Italy for treatment of a wartime eye injury that threatens to leave her blind.

"We can only appeal to the world now," says Sakharov. "There is nothing else."

If world opinion has any influence in the Kremlin, and it has in the past, perhaps Mrs. Sakharov will be one of the few lucky ones. How many other such stories must there be that no one ever hears about, of ordinary Russians who merely ask for the same basic human rights people in any decent country take for granted?

Greece Is Gambling With NATO

The decision by the new Greek government to deny home-port privileges to ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet at Eleusis, and to shut down a U.S. air base at Athens, is another serious setback for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It is alarming that both Greece and Turkey are gambling with their own security by severing their military ties with NATO as a result of the Cyprus dispute.

It is also ironic, for it was the security of Greece and Turkey that brought the concept of NATO into being. In 1947 Communist-led guerrillas were threatening the elected post-war government in Greece. The Soviet Union making territorial demands on Turkey and casting covetous eyes on the Bosphorus Straits offering access from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean. Neither country called for help. The response from the United States of America was the Truman Doctrine — President Harry Truman's policy of providing aid to countries in Europe which the war had left ripe for plucking by Moscow.

From the Truman Doctrine grew the Marshall Plan for economic recovery and eventually the NATO pact for mutual security.

Today, the Soviet Union is more powerful than ever. Turkey is still a barrier to its Mediterranean ambitions and the Communists are still a political force in Greece. Has anything really changed? Only the willingness of leaders in Greece and Turkey to ignore the Soviet shadow falling across their countries — Copley Newspapers.

SOVIETS BALK Salt II Talks In 'Recess'

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON — The much fanfared Vladivostok conference last November between President Ford and Communist boss Leonid Brezhnev is turning out to be far more hoopla than substance.

When they were "recessed" in Geneva several weeks ago, the State Department vaguely explained it was to enable the representatives of both sides to return home to "consult their governments" — with no hint about what.

It can be authoritatively reported that a principal reason is the Soviets' adamant balking at agreeing to any form of verification of multiple (MIRV) warheads on ballistic missiles. The Kremlin has flatly rejected all U.S. proposals on this crucial strategic arms control safeguard.

This isn't the only specific on which the Soviets are proving characteristically circuitous and obstructive. There are others of equal consequence.

Always the Russians shy away from spelling out in writing "clearly and explicitly what can or can't be done, and how, why, when and where. Always they finagle to leave things vague and indefinite, and subject to "interpretation" and "construction" — as suits their purpose, of course.

That's what they got away with in a large measure in the SALT I accord, which gave them nuclear parity with the U.S. and that's what they're after in SALT II — this time, outright nuclear superiority!

Achilles Heel
Fatefully, essential to watch is whether the U.S. again caves in, as happened in SALT I, in order to get an agreement.

Overshadowing of moment is that the mastermind who put over that treaty is also dominating in charge of the secrecy — shrouded SALT II negotiation — Secretary Henry Kissinger.

He ran the SALT I show, and he is running SALT II — just as completely.

In SALT I, Kissinger's overriding aim was an accord with lots of political glamor and voter appeal. In SALT II, his driving intent is even more so.

What he is intensely bent on is not only a treaty that can be effusively hailed and propagandized as an epic "peace" triumph, but one which also will go a long way to obscuring the ignominy of the tragic Vietnam shambles and the failure of Kissinger's personal diplomacy in the explosive Middle East — with its ominous consequences.

Also undoubtedly in the background is the hope that a glittering SALT II pact will ease the way for ramming through Congress a Panama Canal giveaway he is secretly arranging with General Omar Torrijos, Soviet-leaning dictator of the Republic of Panama.

Endlessly ambitious and supremely sure of himself, Kissinger is juggling a host of dire possibilities — and is firmly convinced he can manage them all.

Significantly, he apparently has President Ford's full confidence and backing.

On domestic problems, the President consults a wide range of officials, advisers, lieutenants and others, often in groups to insure exchange of views, ideas and suggestions.

But when it comes to foreign affairs, only one man has the President's ear — Kissinger. He alone is the one the President consults and heeds.

The dynamic Secretary of State may not be a man of destiny. But he very definitely thinks he is. And that's where the rub comes in. Clearly he is a man to watch, and no one knows it better than his increasingly numerous and suspicious critics in Congress.

SALT I won Senate approval only after long and strenuous deliberating — and incorporating a distinct safeguard by Sen. Henry Jackson, D., Wash., which Russia, incidentally, has never accepted.

A SALT II agreement faces even tougher scrutiny.

In other words, Kissinger irrepressibly and bombastically may propose, but it will be the Senate that disposes — and this time it will take more than charisma to turn the trick.

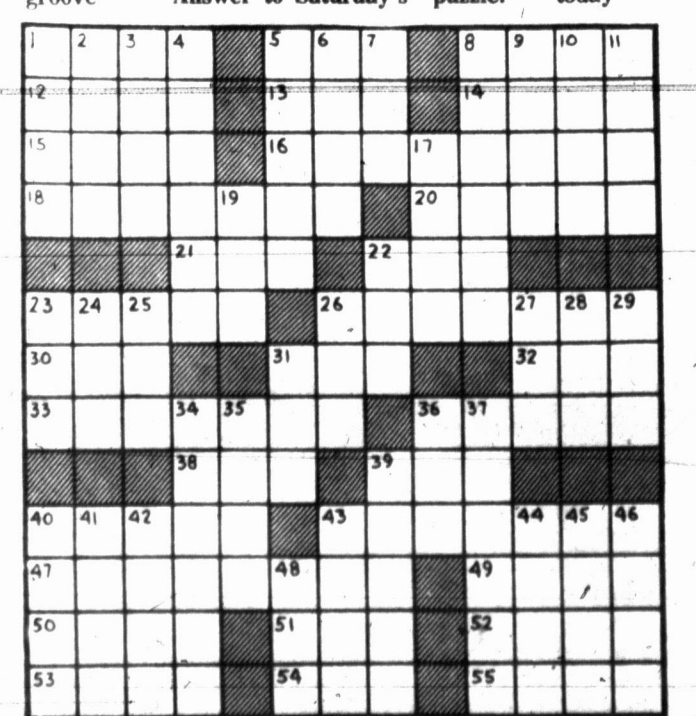

Other Side Of Coin
At the same time Sen. George McGovern was busily making grandstanding headlines for himself and Fidel Castro in Cuba, three other Senators were forcefully making it clear that "normalization" of relations between the two countries has a long and rough way to go.

Unlike the widely hooped McGovern — Castro hobnobbing, the blunt pronouncements of the three Senators were ignored by the media. But intrinsically they are far more significant and consequential than McGovern's posturing.

Calling the realistic turn were Sens. Harry Byrd, Virginia Independent; Jesse Helms, North Carolina Republican; Richard Stone, Florida Democrat.

Byrd pointedly cited Public Law 87-733, which states, "The present government of Cuba has identified itself with the principles of Marxist-Leninist ideology, and has established a political, economic and social system based on that doctrine and accepts military assistance from extracontinental Communist powers, including even the threat of military intervention in America on the part of the Soviet Union."

Sen. Helms, heartily endorsing Byrd's caustic views, pointed out, "There is little evidence that Cuba, at present, respects basic standards of human dignity and freedom. I have just returned from a brief trip to Latin America, and I found widespread concern about the problems of allowing a country such as Cuba to have full intercourse with nations which are struggling against internal subversion."

Sen. Stone declared flatly: "There are political prisoners in Cuba who are American citizens. For us to consent and passively acquiesce to a change of policy without immediately getting exit rights for those U.S. citizens, then we lose before we even start. When I return home to Florida, I find constituents urging that we not continue this self-defeating policy of unilateral concessions, and that we insist on being treated as we treat others."

Should U.S. Cut Back And Go Second Class?

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
Do the American people want the United States to cut back its armed forces and accept second-class status in the world?

They need to ask themselves that question as the anti-defense lobby in and out of Congress moves to reduce America's defense capabilities in the year ahead. The opponents of a strong national defense are doing this by attempt to prevent development of new weapons systems for the 1980s.

A case in point is the current drive to eliminate the B-1 bomber now under development. Early this month, a headline in the Washington Post told the story: "Groups Press Hill to Scuttle Bomber Fleet."

The news account told of "a coalition of organizations" that had launched a national campaign to knock out funds for the B-1. More than 25 liberal-left organizations are part of this effort, including Americans For Democratic Action, Common Cause, American Friends Service Committee, United Mine Workers Union, World Federalists, and the International Longshoremen's Union.

This campaign to reduce America's strategic capabilities comes on the heels of our country's disastrous reverse in Southeast Asia. It is as though the coalition wanted to signal to the world that America won't make a stand on any front, not even in the area of strategic defense. If the anti-defense lobby succeeds in killing the B-1, the Soviets will get a very clear expression of Americans' unwillingness to defend themselves.

The B-1, like the Trident missile-firing submarine, is a desperately needed new defense system. The U.S. Strategic Air Command is dependent on the aging B-52 bomber which has been flying since the 1950s.

Some people ask: why do we need bombers in an era of missiles? There are several answers to that question. In the first place, a manned bomber provides the nation with an instrument of graduated response under total control until the last second.

Second, the Soviets today have a huge lead in missile weapons.

The United States must develop types of weapons that provide a strategic advantage.

The B-1, utilizing America's advantage in aircraft technology, is one such weapon. The B-1 fleet sought by the Air Force would furnish the United States with another significant deterrent to nuclear war. It would give America more meaningful power for peace. Only military strength and technological superiority on the part of the U.S. prevents a surprise nuclear attack on this country.

The anti-defense lobby in Congress already has slashed $3.7 billion from the Defense Dept. budget request, including $1 billion needed for new naval vessels. The Soviet fleet today vastly outnumbers the U.S. Navy. Further cuts in defense appropriations must be prevented by an aroused citizenry.

Fortunately, the proponents of a strong defense, including the B-1, have the facts on their side. They can point to the decline in America's spending on new weapons, while the Soviets step up their spending. As Dr. Albert Wohlstetter wrote in Foreign Policy, "U.S. strategic budgets and the destructiveness of U.S. strategic forces have been going down, not up."

This spells grave danger for the future if new weapons are not added to America's arsenal. Paul Nitze, a former U.S. negotiator with the Soviets at the SALT talks, has warned that there is "a potentially critical period five, 10, 15 years from now."

The U.S. also has to reckon with inflation, which eats up funds allocated for new weapons. Defense planners can do nothing about the fact that 56 per cent of the defense budget goes for manpower costs. The Soviets, for their part, deny their people a decent existence in order to build armaments on a crash basis.

Unfortunately, the anti-defense lobby is very influential in an out of the Congress. Hopefully, the U.S. public will not permit this anti-defense coalition to have its way in Congress. If the coalition triumphs, and the B-1 is scuttled, the nation will be exposed to a new degree of danger.

DEAR ABBY: If I asked my doctor about my problem, He'd think I was a hypochondriac, "putting him on" or even making a pass at him to prove my point. So I'll tell you:

During my several marriages and all the romances in between, I continually contracted everything from sore throats to colds to serious illnesses. But when I'm without male companionship, I enjoy excellent health — although I nearly die of loneliness!

Is kissing really that "germy"? Could I be allergic to men? Or do fatigue and emotional excitement lower one's resistance?

I really do like men, Abby. But they seem to be bad for my health. What do you suggest?

KISSING BUG

DEAR BUG: People who are "in love" usually don't get enough rest. And they don't eat properly. Consequently, their resistance is low, and they're more susceptible to whatever is going around.

Your problem could be that you don't stay with one man long enough to build up an immunity to his "germs." Given a choice, most women would rather be sick in bed with a wonderful man than playing solitaire in the best of health.

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor and I are both young mothers, and our children, who are 5-years-old, play together.

This neighbor tells her little girl fairy tales all the time. She reads some out of books, and others she makes up as she goes along.

Abby, please don't think I'm weird, but I think fairy tales are unhealthy for children. It confuses them to the point where they don't know the difference between reality and fantasy or lies and the truth.

I read to my child, too, but I avoid all those fairy tales and stick to the truth. Somehow, I feel that when you tell a child the truth, it helps to develop honesty and truthfulness. What is your opinion?

YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I am not aware of children who have been harmfully "confused" by nonviolent fairy tales; but I know of some who have been traumatized by the shocking "realities" of modern life. Fantasy gives wings to young imaginations, and as long as the youngsters understand that it's all "make believe," there's no harm done.

DEAR ABBY: I am 26, and considered attractive and lots of fun. I met this man two years ago and have been seeing him ever since. He only takes me to motels and church.

The problem is that he loves me, but I don't love him. I want to stop seeing him, but I don't know how to go about it. He is 42, works six days a week, and he doesn't want me to go with anyone else. He has never been married, and he says I'm the first girl he has ever been serious about.

He doesn't drink or smoke. (I do.) He deserves a nice church-going girl who is more like himself, and I'm not it. How do I break it off without hurting him?

DOLLY

DEAR DOLLY: Tell him the truth. It's unfair and unkind to keep seeing him when you could set him free to find someone else.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, MAY 20

Your birthday today: You now cast about for ways to improve your daily living, start to balance things out and refine skills for future application. Later in the year you'll have better opportunity for creative expression, new employment and bigger ventures. As a rule, relationships survive complex circumstances. Today's natives are gifted with personal magnetism, apt to be proud, stoic.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Despite formal approval, you make gains at work. Cooperation is incomplete or lacking entirely. Take present conditions in stride, and observe all the rules for safety and courtesy.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Gambling, speculative moves or calculated risks go awry. You have tentative endorsement from important people, rivalry and dissent from lesser figures. Do it yourself where possible.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Family, in-laws and friends look on you for attention and help with their problems. They may want to borrow money for fancy enterprises. Say no and get on with the work you've agreed to do.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Keep negotiations at preliminary stages wherever you can until current discrepancies are ironed out. Time spent away from home base or in travel doesn't produce much.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Just because some VIP agrees with you doesn't excuse extravagance or make you immune to losses from impulse spending. Special care in handling vehicles or equipment is essential.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Today finds you thankful for precautions you took some time ago. Coax impatient people into working together. You've got nothing to lose by making a determined effort.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Decide what is most vital to your interests, then discover a way to concentrate on it. Confidential approaches don't bring the expected responses but do open further possibilities.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Where nobody asks for your opinion, keep it to yourself. When asked, you've got a clear field. Tell the facts as they are, but don't waste energy defending them.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Set priorities, assign definite hours to essential duties and postpone personal enterprises. You're in the doldrums about your social life and romantic adventures.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: If the day seems to drag, make good use of it to repair minor deficiencies. Attend to neglected details and long-delayed chores. Avoid off-the-cuff estimates or hasty decisions.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Your easiest solution is to forget routines and take the day off. The next best is to be so intensely engrossed in what needs doing that you don't notice external circumstances.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Count yourself out of joint ventures for the time being. That famous ground-floor type of investment hasn't changed. Be sympathetic to those about you; don't expect an immediate reaction

Malpractice Suits, Insurance Rates Up

Doctor, Lawyer...Malpractice Hazard

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the medical malpractice insurance uproar still on the front pages, the legal profession seems next in line for a wave of malpractice lawsuits and insurance problems.

Research Group, Inc., which has offices in Charlottesville, Va., Cambridge, Mass., Ann Arbor, Mich., and Berkeley, Calif., says legal malpractice suits already have begun to surge and insurance rates for attorneys have gone up about 35 per cent in the past two years on the average.

So far the insurance companies have not threatened to cut off legal malpractice coverage in any state as some companies have pulled out of the medical malpractice insurance business in some states.

And the 35 per cent increase in medical malpractice rates is modest compared to increases of 1,000 per cent or more in recent years in some localities in the price of medical malpractice coverage.

But Walter Morrison, president of the Research Group, said "the lawyers soon may be threatened by large insurance rate increases and potential termination of coverage."

Morrison did not make the point but if legal malpractice insurance costs do go up sharply there will be a certain irony. Many medical groups have criticized lawyers for contributing heavily to the rising cost of medical malpractice coverage by the way in which they handle malpractice suits.

Most medical malpractice suits are filed by lawyers on speculative contingency fees. A quarter to one-third of whatever is recovered. Often the attorney advances some essential initial court costs to his client.

Morrison said although the first legal malpractice suit on record in the United States was filed way back in 1796, malpractice did not become much of a bugaboo for lawyers until three or four years ago.

"Very few suits were successful in the past. Now an increasing number are successful, particularly if the lawyer is accused of mistakes or willful offenses in connection with violations of the federal securities laws," he said.

Undoubtedly, Morrison said, in addition to the impetus given to legal malpractice suits by the rise of suits against doctors, the Securities and Exchange Commission created a climate favoring such suits by its 1973 complaint in the National Student Marketing Corp. securities fraud case. In that case, the SEC named a prominent Wall Street law firm, one of the biggest in the country, as defendants along with National Student Marketing executives. For almost the first time, a powerful government agency challenged in the courts the right of attorneys to put their obligation to their clients ahead of virtually everything else. Thus the law firm was put in potential jeopardy of malpractice prosecution from both sides — its own client and the government agency opposed to the client.

But legal malpractice suits normally are filed by the lawyers' clients for such offenses as failing to bring suit in time, failing to file an answer promptly, failing to appeal promptly and effectively, making errors in deeds or contracts or failing to discover a flaw in a title deed in a real estate deal.

Morrison said a legal malpractice suit can ruin or harm a lawyer's reputation, even if he wins it, if local prejudice is sufficiently aroused.

Morrison estimated that in some communities 90 per cent of the lawyers carry malpractice insurance while in other places as few as 65 per cent do.

Groups Launch Drive Toward ERA Telethon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Various national women's organizations are launching a drive to win support for a telethon to raise money for final passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

ERA must be ratified by four more states to become part of the Constitution. Backers say it will cost a lot of money to win passage in those states.

Sandra Kramer, who co-chairs the new ERA Development Committee, said supporters will need "money and an overall strategy" in 1976. So far, she said, the pro-ERA forces have spent $600,000, while opponents have spent "much, much more."

Backers of ERA, she said, "have squeezed the blood out of the turnip to get as far as we have on that amount of money."

Ms. Kramer, the acting executive secretary of HEW's advisory committee on the rights and responsibilities of women, said a telethon is "one of the most creative and productive ideas we've had so far."

She said the committee was formed in Washington last week to put the idea in motion. An East Coast group headed by Ms. Kramer will contact various national women's organizations for support, while a West Coast group will explore the feasibility of a telethon.

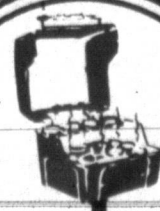

The West Coast group, headed by Liz Snyder, former California Democratic state chairwoman, will look for individual and corporate financial backing.

Ms. Kramer said initial estimates are the telethon would cost $2 million.

The telethon is the best of a number of fund-raising ideas being considered by the committee, she said.

PRESERVATION CLINIC
A Preservation Clinic will be held Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. in the Courthouse Annex meeting room. We will be presenting information pertaining to canning, freezing and pickling. Bulletins and handouts will be given to those attending.

To offset spiraling food costs, many people are turning to home grown fruits and vegetables. As more and more food begins to ripen, produce which can't be eaten or given away is usually canned. Home canning provides safe, inexpensive quality products—but only if the fruits and vegetables and especially tomato products, have been carefully selected and properly processed.

Improper canning may result in botulism, a food poisoning which may cause death. Botulism is caused by the toxin formed during the growth of the bacteria—Clostridium botulinum. This may result from improper processing which may be avoided by following these guidelines, which are recommended by the USDA.

1. When canning tomatoes, follow established recommended canning procedures. A recent problem in another state in home canning tomatoes is the acidity variation. This affects the quality and safety of the canned product. The problem is associated with a few tomato varieties and to some extent the climate and soil in which they are grown. We will cover information regarding processing of these different varieties Wednesday.

2. Don't take short cuts or experiment in home canning. Use only tested, currently approved methods, such as those described in USDA's Home Canning of Fruit and Vegetables, H&G bulletin No. 8. The extension bulletin is based on these recommendations.

3. Use only jars, cans and lids made especially for home canning. Never use ordinary jars such as mayonnaise or coffee jars.

4. Do not reuse sealing lids. The rubber ring deteriorates easily and prevents a tight seal. Get new rings for one-piece lids and new metal lids with sealing compound for two-piece lids.

5. Do not use overripe food. Products change in chemical composition with age and lose acidity. Make sure the food is of good quality—with no bruises or soft spots.

6. Do not overpack foods. Trying to get too much food into one jar may result in under-processing and spoilage.

7. Follow exactly the time and temperature specifications for foods and container sizes listed in instruction. Adjust processing times according to altitude. We are 3000 feet above sea level in Pampa. The bulletins mentioned above give instructions for adjusting processing time according to altitude.

8. Test the seal according to instructions.

9. Do not use canned foods showing signs of spoilage. Watch for bulging lids, leaks, off-odors or mold. If in doubt, don't taste. Destroy out of reach of children and pets.

10. Boil home canned vegetables covered for at least 10 minutes before serving.

Twenty-three members of Las Pampas Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution and guests Mrs. Claire Roane and Miss Mary Britton, met in the home of Mrs. Quentin Williams for a luncheon recently. Mrs. E.L. Norman was co-hostess.

The business meeting which was presided over by Mrs. J.B. White, regent, was opened by the Pledge to the Flag and the American's Creed led by Mrs. Louise Sewell, flag chairman.

Mmes. Frank Kelly, R.A. Keagy and D.V. Biggers were given the official DAR welcome for new members by Mrs. White.

Miss Patsy Kelly, a new junior member, was unable to attend.

The message of Mrs. Henry S. Jones, President General of the National Society DAR, was given by Miss Mary Reeve. Mrs. Jones said that President Lincoln once said, "Where there is freedom, there are those who have toiled and sacrificed for it."

Today, she said that liberty and freedom stand eroded and this has provoked warnings that "the purpose of government is to preserve order in society, not to order society."

Mrs. L.A. Barnes, defense chairman, in giving her report said that we think of defense in relation to enemies from without but we need to think of defense against enemies from within.

The Chapter was awarded a citation "For Outstanding Accomplishments in Attaining the Honor Roll of the National Society DAR."

Also, certificates of Merit were awarded the Chapter by the Texas Society of the NSDAR for Excellence in Radio and Newspaper Coverage for American History.

Arrondissement Chapter of Amarillo has invited members of the Chapter to a tea which will be held at 1511 S. Rusk from 2 to 4 p.m. June 9.

The following officers were installed by Mrs. Williams to serve a two year term: Mrs. P.R. Britton, regent; Mrs. J.S. Skelly, Jr., vice regent; Mrs. John McKnerney, Secretary; Mrs. E.L. Norman, treasurer; Mrs. Quentin Williams, chaplain; Mrs. L.A. Barnes, registrar; Mrs. J.R. Spearman, librarian; and Mrs. A.D. Hills, historian.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 6 at 2 p.m. in the Hospitality Room of the Citizen's Bank and Trust.

How satisfying it is to come into the possession of a book that moves the mind or emotions—then to look on the flyleaf and discover that its former owner is a person known to you.

An immediate feeling of friendship is generated that it would otherwise take months of contact to establish.

This kind of experience is only one of the many dividends received by the hundreds of people who bought books at the Friends annual secondhand book sale this year.

More than 3,000 books were purchased, enabling the Friends to provide the library with funds to purchase tape recorder, players and audio equipment.

The Friends are grateful to everyone who helped make this sale a success.

Enrollment for Lovett Library's summer reading program for children, "Cross-Country with a Hero," will begin May 27.

This non-competitive, "just-for-fun" program is open to all students from the first through the sixth grades.

At the close of the project on Aug. 1, certificates will be awarded to each child who has read 12 books of his own choice, with an emphasis this year on folklore and legendary heroes.

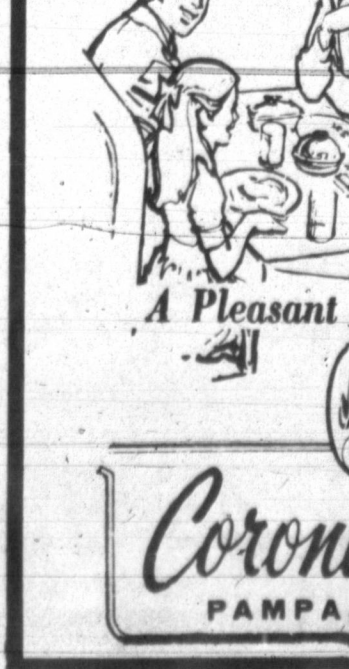

The purpose of the program is twofold: to help boys and girls become aware of the joys of reading—and to help them increase their reading skills.

The librarians will be happy to guide children in their book selections.

A free book delivery service to shut-ins, sponsored by the Friends of the Pampa Library, is being planned by the outreach committee, under the direction of Mrs. Buster Carter.

Anyone who is permanently unable to visit the library—or who is temporarily housebound—is eligible for this service. The only requirement is a library card, which can be obtained by requesting an application form from the library.

She presented a summary of the year's work, with additions by Mrs. Otis Nace, who gave special attention to the display called "We Did It Ourselves," which Mrs. Sprawls created for the district conference; the creation consisted of leaves on a tree, with each leaf describing, in writing and in a sketch, a particular project of the year. Mrs. Sprawls commended Mrs. Lee Harrah for her outstanding program on Americanism.

Mrs. R.W. Lane presented a scrapbook of the year's activities to Mrs. Sprawls and Mrs. Sherman White gave the president a gift from the club.

Mrs. Sprawls installed officers for the ensuing year, using a rhymed service written by Mrs. Nace. Installed were Mrs. J.E. Gibson, president; Miss Anna Pierce, vice-president; Mrs. Abel Wood, secretary; Mrs. R.W. Burden, treasurer; Mrs. W.H. Burden, parliamentarian; and Mrs. Otis Nace, reporter.

Ryan, Angels Tip Birds

United Press International
Manager Dick Williams and the California Angels aren't always referring to Nolan Ryan when they talk about speed. They haven't forgotten they have the fastest pitcher in the game's history. It's just that they've discovered they are one of the fastest running teams of modern times—perhaps even in the 75-year history of the American League.

It was that speed about which Williams talked Sunday even after Ryan had turned in a dazzling two-hit performance over 8 2-3 innings to beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-1 for his eighth win against one loss this season. Williams pointed to the fact that the Angels have stolen 67 bases in 37 games—a pace, projected over the season, which would surpass the AL season-mark of 288 set by the 1913 Washington Senators.

"This is the youngest club I've ever managed and the one with the most speed," said Williams. "As soon as it gets itself some confidence it'll be a better club."

Mickey Rivers leads the California "road runners" with 22 steals followed by Morris Nettles' 12, Orlando Ramirez' nine, Tommy Harper's eight and Gerry Remy's seven. It's the type of running which keeps constant pressure on rivals' defenses because it isn't concentrated in one or two players.

The "road runners" took a day off Sunday as the fitful Ryan pitched the night ball until Al Bumbry's bun' in the sixth inning and wound up yielding two hits in 8 2-3 innings. Williams summoned Don Kirkwood to get the last putout after Tommy Davis's double drove in the Orioles' run in the ninth and Ryan was obviously exhausted.

"It's the most I've walked in one game this year and maybe last year," said Ryan. "I usually try to execute better than that you go out there to win and that's what we did. With our speed, I think that if our bullpen jells and our starting rotation stays healthy, we have a shot at winning our division."

The Angels, leading 1-0, clinched the victory with four unearned runs off Mike Torrez in the eighth inning. Lee Stanton's three-run double was the big blow of the inning after shortstop Mark Belanger's error failed to take Torrez out of the frame.

The New York Yankees defeated the Oakland A's 9-1, the Boston Red Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 4-2, the Cleveland Indians topped the Chicago White Sox 7-6, the Minnesota Twins blanked the Milwaukee Brewers and the Texas Rangers scored a 7-6 triumph over the Detroit Tigers in other AL games.

In the National League it was Pittsburgh 7 Los Angeles 2, Cincinnati 6 Montreal 1, Houston 12 New York 7, Philadelphia Atlanta 1, Chicago 3 San Diego 2 and San Francisco 2 St. Louis 0.

Yankees 9 A's 1

Jim Hunter pitched a fourhitter against his former teammates, raising his season record to 4 behind a nine-hit New York attack which included a homer by Thurman Munson and two hits each by Jim Mason and Sandy Alomar. Glenn Abbott was routed in 1 2-3 innings and suffered his second setback for the A's.

Red Sox 4 Royals 2
Bernie Carbo drove in all four Red Sox runs with a pair of homers as Boston snapped a five-game losing streak. Rick Wise went the distance with a six-hitter for his fourth win while Nelson Briles, kayed in the sixth, lost his second decision against four victories.

Indians 7 White Sox 6
George Hendrick drove in three runs with a double and his sixth homer as the Indians dealt the White Sox' Wilbur Wood his seventh defeat compared to two victories. Gaylord Perry received credit for his fifth win although tagged for six runs and 11 hits in 5 2-3 innings. Deron Johnson and Boog Powell also homered.

Twins 6 Brewers 0
Rookie Jim Hughes pitched his second straight four-hitter for the Twins, who pressed the 23-year old right hander into starting service last week because of injuries. Steve Braun and Larry Hisle homered for the Twins. Hughes, now 4-1, struck out six and walked six.

Rangers 7 Tigers 6
Tom Grieve, given a "life" when rightfielder Leon Roberts dropped his pop fly in foul territory, singled home Willie Davis with two out in the 11th inning to give the Rangers' triumph. The Rangers came from behind three times in the game, tying the score at 6-6 with a three-run rally in the 10th inning.

In Track Meet

United States Controls China

KWANGCHOW (CANTON CITY), China (UPI) — A little more than that U.S. goodwill in track and field activities and the Chinese may suggest trying something else, like, say, ping pong.

For the first time ever, an American track and field team competed against one from the People's Republic of China here Sunday, with the idea being this would be purely a friendly meet with no points being kept.

It wasn't, because the U.S. team swept 14 of the 15 events despite the fact the 10,000 capacity East Stadium cinder track was wet and treacherous by rains which delayed the start of the meet twice for nearly two hours.

The Chinese team is composed of mostly second-string talents from their central and southern provinces. So, as far as the Americans were concerned, they felt like a big league hitter batting against little league pitching. They were competing more against their own teammates than against the over-matched Chinese.

"I was running just enough to win, and I was satisfied with that," said veteran Olympic hurdler Willie Davenport of Baton Rouge, La., who won his 110 meter event in 14.2 seconds.

The same two squads go at it here again today with the same basic concept—friendship first, competition second—and the same basic likelihood of achieving the same result they did Sunday.

Ou Wei Tan, coach of the Chinese team said he wasn't surprised by the one-sided superiority of the Americans.

adding he hopes the Chinese might be able to compete equally on an international level in three or four more years.

Bob Geigengack, the U.S. coach, naturally was happy over the American showing, but was almost apologetic over the meet turning out to be so lopsided.

"The less said about it, the better," he said. "When the rain finally let up enough so that the competition could begin, Fred Newhouse of Baton Rouge became the first U.S. runner ever to record a victory in the People's Republic of China by winning the 40 meters in 47.4 seconds. He wasn't aware he had made history with his victory.

"It never dawned on me," he said.

Two of the more impressive winners were Don Merrick of Deland, Fla., who ran the 200 meter in 20.8 seconds, and Charlie Maguire of Foxboro, Mass., winner of the 10,000 meters in 29 57.6 seconds.

The only victory the Chinese scored all day was in the women's discus where Asian champion Kao Yu-kun made a toss of 165 feet, 10 inches.

Apart from that the American women won all their events, with Kathy Weston of Reno, Nev., who celebrates her 17th birthday today, taking the 800 meters in 2:07 flat, Renaye Bowen, La., finishing first in the 100 meters run in 11.7 seconds, Francie Larrieu, La., capturing the 1,000 meters in 4:16.8 and Karen Moller, Warrington, Pa., led the high jumpers with a leap of 5 feet, 7 1/2 inches.

Following the meet here, a second one is to be held in Shanghai beginning next Friday and the third one is in Peking on May 27-28. No scores are being kept in any of the meets because all of them are supposed to be merely goodwill affairs, lacking any political overtones.

Toward that end, no American or Chinese flags were displayed at the stadium Sunday and neither were the anthems of either nation played.

Bucs Rout Los Angeles

UPI Sports Writer

When Ken Brett has his "best stuff" going for him, most National Leaguers agree he's tough to handle.

Brett's best stuff isn't an assortment of curves, fastballs and changeups but rather his bat, and when he's swinging it with authority as he did Sunday it seems to make him a better pitcher and thus double-trouble for opponents.

The Pittsburgh Pirates' lefthander was a big problem for the Los Angeles Dodgers Sunday as he collected three hits, including two doubles, and tossed a two-hitter while leading his club to a 7-2 triumph.

Brett, raising his season's batting average to .333, climaxed a four-run sixth inning outburst with a run-scoring double and also scored another run while limiting the Dodgers to just two hits—both by Dave Lopes. Lopes led off the game with a single but the Dodgers didn't get another hit until the ninth when Lopes homered.

Brett, now 3-2, walked five and preferred to talk about his hitting. He hit .310 last season and the three hits gave him 80—in 287 at bats—for his big league career.

"Actually, my bat was working best," Brett said. "I've been taking a lot of lip lately from the other pitchers on our club because I've been in a slump (he was 2 for 11 before Sunday). They won't have much to say to me now."

"It wasn't the best game I've thrown. I'm not in the groove. I'm walking too many guys but I can't put my finger on why. It's just something I'll have to work out."

"The Dodgers have always given me trouble," he added. "It was nice to reverse the trend."

In other NL games, San Francisco blanked St. Louis 2-0, Philadelphia defeated Atlanta 5-1, Cincinnati whipped Montreal 6-1, Houston topped New York 12-7 and Chicago edged San Diego 3-2.

California whipped Baltimore, Boston beat Kansas City 4-2, New York walloped Oakland 9-1, Cleveland nipped Chicago 7-6, Minnesota blanked Milwaukee 6-0 and Texas edged Detroit 7-6 in 11 innings in American League games.

Giants 2, Cardinals 0

Jim Barr allowed only two hits, both to Lou Brock, and faced only two batters over the minimum in pitching the Giants to victory over the Cardinals. Barr, boosting his record to 4-3, has now blanked the Cardinals for 24 1-3 consecutive innings dating back to last season.

Phillies 5, Braves 1
Rookie Tom Underwood tossed a four-hitter as the Phillies notched their seventh triumph in a row and 12th consecutive victory at home.

Indianapolis Qualifying Over

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — The American Eagles will have a 16-7 edge over the British McLarens in Sunday's million-dollar Indianapolis "500," with the second fastest lineup ever set for the holiday grind.

The 33-car lineup was completed late Sunday and although there was plenty of qualifying time available, only three cars were "bumped" by faster machines over the weekend.

Ten cars of makes other than the Dan Gurney-built Eagles or the racing McLarens also made the field, which averaged 18.057 miles per hour in the time trials, compared with a record 192.329 two years ago before engine and stabilizer wing restrictions reduced the speeds. This year's average is 2.2 miles faster than last year.

Mario Andretti became the sixth former Speedway champion to qualify for the 50th annual race, but his speed of 186.480 left him 24th in the lineup despite it being the eighth fastest overall.

Andretti, the 1969 race winner from Nazareth, Pa., missed the first weekend of the trials to race in Europe.

Other successful weekend qualifiers were veterans Steve Krisloff, Parsippany, N. J. & Dick Simmon, Sandy, Utah; Mike Hiss, Tustin, Calif.; Tom Bigelow, Whitewater, Wis., and rookies Larry McCoy, Langhorne, Pa., and Eldon Rasmussen, Indianapolis. Two other rookies qualified earlier—Bill Puterbaugh, Indianapolis, and Sheldon Kinser, Bloomington, Ind.

Jim Huetubise, Indianapolis, a former track record holder, made three futile attempts in two different cars. Rookie Billy Scott, San Bernardino, Calif., also made three attempts. New Zealand's Graham McTear, trying to become the lone foreigner in the field, made two attempts.

Scott was the last driver to attempt a 10-mile qualifying run Sunday and he shut down the famed oval when his car skidded into the outside wall. He walked away uninjured, however. Also early Sunday, rookie Jerry Seva, Spokane, Wash., nosed his racer into an inside wall after a slide. He, too, was unhurt and returned to the track for a qualifying run Sunday evening.

All four weekend qualifying days saw near perfect weather conditions.

Twenty-seven cars will be powered by basically identical engines — the four-cylinder Drake-Offenhauser. Only three are equipped with eight-cyl-der Foyt's, once known as the Ford V-8s. Three-time winner A. J. Foyt, for whom the engines are now named and who modified them, sits on the pole and will go into the 200-lap chase as the man to beat.

The starting field will get one final chance for dress rehearsal practice in Thursday's carburetor tests. Then the 2 1/2-mile oval will be closed until Sunday's noon (EDT) race start.

Jolley Blames Track For Foolish's Finish

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Foolish Pleasure, runner-up to Master Derby in the 100th Preakness Stakes, was shipped to New York today to begin preparing for the Belmont Stakes June 7, but not before his trainer, Leroy Jolley, took a parting shot at Pimlico Race Course officials.

Finishing second by one length in Saturday's Preakness cost Foolish Pleasure, the 1 1/4 length winner of the Kentucky Derby earlier this month, any chance he had of becoming only the 10th Triple Crown champion in history and Jolley blamed the condition of the track for only the second loss in the horse's 13-race career.

"Foolish Pleasure never ran on a track as bad as this," fumed Jolley while talking to newsmen Sunday just outside the horse's barn at Pimlico. "This track has been bad for 100 years and they're gonna leave it bad for the next 100 because it might cost money to fix it."

"The dirt was as loose as hell and should have been better cared for. There was no attempt made to tighten it up because everybody was working on something else and not on the track."

The centennial running of the richest Preakness ever ($210,600) attracted a record Pimlico crowd of 75,216, including some 35,000 people in the infield area.

In defense of the track, general manager Chick Lang called Jolley a bad loser and pointed out that the condition of the track was the same for all the horses.

"In sports you don't make excuses," Lang maintained. "I still think Foolish Pleasure is the best 3-year-old in the country. Jolley's upset because he lost. When he was beaten in the Florida Derby he also complained about the condition of the track. We spend a lot of time and money on our track."

Jolley said he would like to face Master Derby again in the Belmont Stakes but the trainer of the Preakness winner, Smiley Adams, said he wouldn't make up his mind about the Belmont until probably the end of this week. Adams shipped Master Derby, who returned a record Preakness win payoff of $48.80, back to Churchill Downs early Sunday morning.

Accompanying Foolish Pleasure in the van on his trip back to New York today will be Diabolo, who finished third in the Preakness as he did in the Derby, fifth place Avatar and sixth place Singh, all of whom will probably run in the Belmont along with fourth place finisher Prince Thon Art.

Humt To Play

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — David Humt, who led Nebraska to a 27-7-2 record in three seasons, will join coach Grant Teaff's West team in the 15th annual Coaches All-American football game June 21 in Jones Stadium.

Humt, a 6-2, 186-pound quarterback for the Cornhuskers, led the Big Eight in passing with 1,43 yards and 12 touchdowns.

During his career, Humt had one national record (15 straight completions), four Big Eight records, including 42 touchdown passes, and seven Nebraska records.

Texas Tech's David Knaus, a 6-3, 232-pound middle guard, also announced he is joining the West forces. Knaus was a three-year letterman for the Red Raiders. He injured his knee in Texas Tech's win over Texas in 1974, but returned to action in the Peach Bowl against Vanderbilt. Knaus is a graduate assistant coach for Texas Tech's Steve Sloan, who will be the head coach for the East team in the All-America game.

Tech Develops Disaster - proof Home

LUBBOCK — A fair-weather house is about as valuable as a fair-weather friend — just dandy until a day of trouble. For houses, disastrous winds or an energy crisis can spell trouble.

One civil engineer, Ernst W. Kiesling, has built an all-weather house with features which can add an estimated $3,000 to the initial cost but which will save much more than that in dollars, energy and anxiety.

The house opened for public inspection May 11, the anniversary of Lubbock's disastrous tornado of 1970. It is located at 7012 Nashville Drive, between Indiana and Memphis avenues just north of Loop 289 in southwest Lubbock.

Dr. Kiesling is chairman of Texas Tech University's Department of Civil Engineering. He also works with wind engineers in the university's Institute for Disaster Research. Results developed in that institute and design assistance from university students in architecture, landscape architecture, and civil and mechanical engineering contributed to Kiesling's home concept.

The house has two interior storm shelters; a fireplace which provides circulating heat as well as atmosphere; an economically practical use of solar energy for heating water; a well-anchored roof that should withstand even tornadic winds, and a concrete "stem" that forms the bottom two feet of the walls. This stem performs three functions. It helps shield the interior of the house from flying missiles. It reduces the wall area exposed to wind forces. It reduced the heat transfer through outside walls.

"Horizontal wind forces," Kiesling said, "are proportional to the height of the outside wall plus the roof."

The house is landscaped for wind and temperature protection. Its insulation is superior. Thermostatically controlled attic fans assist in summer cooling, pulling fresh air in through eave vents when attic temperatures become high. Special-venting relieves the pressure caused by sudden atmospheric changes which are possible in tornadoes.

The design is effective, Kiesling said, for areas that are hurricane prone as well as those where tornadoes are likely to occur.

"I decided to build this house," Kiesling said, "to introduce some of our concepts for wind protection and to get exact answers on costs involved in some of these concepts.

"I believe I have spent about $3,000 more for the special energy-saving and safety features," he said. "An owner should save that much on energy in five years at current rates."

Research on improving structures for wind resistance began shortly after the city of Lubbock was hit by a devastating tornado in 1970. Texas Tech engineers surveying the damage of this and subsequent tornadoes, discovered that often an interior hallway or small room was left standing while the rest of the house had been destroyed.

This led to the concept of a reinforced interior storm shelter. In the Kiesling model there are two of these — one suggested for homes already built and the second designed for new construction.

Bill Robbins, Pampa, was one of the civil engineers working on the project.

"The principal advantage of the above-ground shelter over a basement is the cost saving," Kiesling said.

The one designed for existing buildings serves as a bathroom in Kiesling's house. The plates forming the bottom of the wall framing were anchored to the concrete slab floor. An inner wall was built of three-fourths-inch plywood covering two layers of welded wire fabric and the wall studs. The plywood sheets replaced the traditional sheetrock. The space between the plywood sheets was filled with concrete. To protect occupants from missiles, the ceiling was covered with concrete. The door was strengthened with a steel plate.

The shelter designed for new construction serves as a 7 x 12 foot study. Like the bathroom shelter, it has no windows. Walls are 8-inch thick concrete blocks reinforced with steel bars filled with concrete. It has a concrete ceiling.

Both designs have been tested, using a 14-foot, 2 x 4-inch board, weighing approximately 17 pounds, as a missile striking on its end at a speed of 100 miles per hour. This is considered comparable to the impact of missiles hurled through the air during a tornado.

"Models of both designs easily withstood severe pounding by this missile," Kiesling said.

The house is topped with a mansard-style roof — flat with a shingle overhang. The combination of the short wall and the low profile roof reduces the cross sectional area subjected to winds to about half what it would be in a conventional house.

Walls of the house have diagonal steel braces to add stiffness and strength to the entire structure. Wall-to-floor and roof-to-wall connections are made with anchor bolts, metal ties, or by integrated framing of wall and roof.

A "stem" at the base of the house is of concrete and projects 18 inches from the level of the earth. A retaining wall of equal height was constructed near the perimeter of the lot, and the space between filled with soil. The house appears to be built atop an 18-inch terrace.

Uplift on the roof of a structure can be caused by straight winds and by sudden changes in the atmospheric pressure outside the structure. The combination is sometimes sufficient to lift roofs off houses. In the Kiesling model, the lift caused by pressure changes is relieved by two "blow-out panels" in the ceiling. The panels will be pulled into the attic when a sudden pressure drop occurs.

Skylights take advantage of the sun's heat to a limited extent, but a solar collector on the roof of the double garage will heat household water on warm days to 130 degrees. A water heater in the house can further boost the temperature — probably to 150 degrees, Kiesling said.

"Initial costs for solar space heating make it too expensive for single family houses, at this time," he said, "but it is well within reason for water heating."

Outside the house landscaping provides a windbreak of evergreens on the perimeter of the lot; plantings close to the house create "dead air" insulation between the plants and the exterior walls; some deciduous trees shade the house in summer and, shedding their leaves, let sunlight help heat it in winter. Trees are of ascending height, the lowest to the outside of the lot. The air flow pattern caused by this will carry the wind over the house.

Kiesling estimated that each in-residence storm shelter would cost about $500. The solar heating installation cost approximately $400. Other additional costs include double-pane windows, the skylights, forced-air fans in the attic, and high-efficiency air conditioning units.

Faculty and graduate students working within Texas Tech University's Institute for Disaster Research have studied the wreckage left by tornadoes and hurricanes in most regions of the United States and have contributed to the study of the cyclone that struck Darwin, Australia, last Christmas. Their documentation of wind effects includes more than 10,000 photographs, tape recorded reports of storm victims, and a catalogue of evidence and analyses.

"These studies and the special problems which confront anyone trying to come to terms with the energy shortage persuaded me to find some practical answers," Kiesling said.

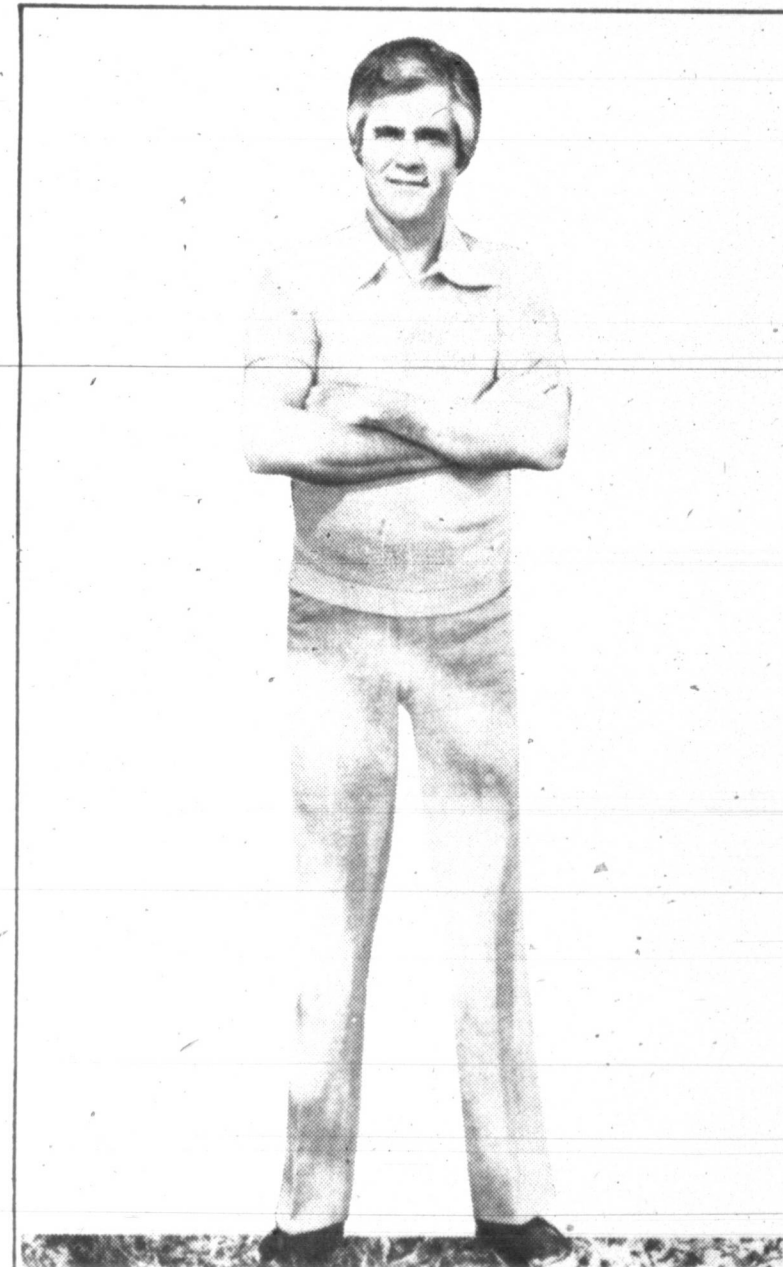

The house will be available for inspection by any with a professional interest in problems addressed by its construction.

Energy Saving - Storm Safe

An all-weather house opened for inspection on the May 11 anniversary of Lubbock's disastrous 1970 tornado has solar heating of water, a variety of safety features, and landscaping to save energy and protect the house in the event of high wind storms. The flat mansard style roof is part of its storm wind protection. A "stem" at the base of the house is hidden by the soil held within the retaining wall. It adds a sound anchorage of the house to the foundation. Interior, ground-level storm shelters are also safety features. The house was designed, with the assistance of Texas Tech University's Department of Civil Engineering, and it incorporates safety factors developed by departmental research.

Red Cross News

By LIBBY SHOTWELL, ARC Executive Secretary
Our annual meeting was a great success. Our own Betty Moody, guest speaker told many interesting things about the Lefors Tornado. Betty has worked for Red Cross as a Disaster Reserve worker for five years and during that time has worked in 30 disasters. Did you know that Red Cross has helped 298 people in the Lefors Disaster with an expenditure of $43,176 and several medical cases are still open. Mrs. Doris Teague, auditor and bookkeeper will be in Pampa on Monday and Tuesday of each week until we can close our books. Thanks again for all of the good help we have had during this disaster.

Please if you did not register your children May 15-16 wait until May 22 and 23 as we are registering on those days. Classes will be June 16-27, June 30-July 11, and July 14-25 at the City Pool. Pool fee is $1. Children who are five years of age or who will go to kindergarten this fall may enter our program.

Mrs. Jerry Carter and Rita Kretzmer have completed a class of beginner swimming at the Youth Center Pool with the following receiving their cards: Bob Ivins, Michelle Hill, Randy Federick, Karla Cooper, Jeffrey Gaines, Charmy Fellers, Vonda Winters, and Rebecca Winters. These boys and girls are now qualified for the advanced beginners class.

Libby Shotwell attended the annual meeting Saturday evening at Childress. The speaker for this event was Phil Cates, state representative. The program was geared to the history of Childress Red Cross and was very interesting. Doris Teague who worked in the Lefors disaster is executive secretary for the Childress Chapter.

Please if you did not register your children May 15-16 wait until May 22 and 23 as we are registering on those days. Classes will be June 16-27, June 30-July 11, and July 14-25 at the City Pool. Mrs. Junko Tabei, packing a limited stock of gear, braved bad weather to reach the top of 29,028-foot Mt. Everest at noon Friday to end a 22-year male domain. She was accompanied by Sherpa guide Ang Tsering, according to a message received Saturday by the Nepalese foreign ministry.

Mrs. Tabei, a housewife from Saitama near Tokyo, described by her 14 teammates on the all-female Japanese expedition as a "leader of housewives" lib, made the successful assault only 12 days after she was seriously injured in an avalanche.

The achievement was made more remarkable by the fact that she and her party was hit by an avalanche May 4 at their second high altitude camp pitched at 21,000 feet.

Mrs. Tabei and two Sherpa guides were injured while six other members of the expedition suffered more minor injuries in the avalanche.

On April 22, 1970, Earth Day rallies were held in several cities to draw attention to the world's environmental problems.

Career Contemplation

Fish Fry To Feature Banjo Picking Contest

BORGER — The World's Largest Fish Fry will feature some of the country's top banjo pickers who will compete for a $500 banjo June 7.

The fry, which annually hosts about 5,000 people from throughout the country, decided this year that it would return a festival atmosphere to the event. The Aluminum Dome is the site, once again.

John Griggs and Lou Cooley, both members of the Borger Chamber of Commerce, came up with the idea. They presented it to Fish Fry Commodore Tom Stone with the idea of putting the plan into effect in 1976.

However, the more the committee thought of it, the more it liked the idea.

So, Griggs and Mrs. Cooley set to work on the idea. They have gotten commitments from Dr. Charles Townsend, a recipient of the Grammy Award and the Wrangler Trophy of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, and Rip Ramsey, a former musician with Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys, to judge the contest.

The committee is also trying to obtain a similar commitment from Roy Rogers, who will be in the area making a movie during the fish fry.

The pickers will compete for a $550 Ibez Blue Grass banjo with a hard shell case. Second prize will be $75 cash. Third prize pays $50 and fourth pays $25.

Judging is based on four different areas including tuning, clarity of play, difficulty and originality with the piece. Entries must be received by June 3 with a $5 fee.

Other rules include a maximum time of 10 minutes for two selections and one accompanist. Four or five string banjos will be allowed.

Entry blanks are available from the Chamber of Commerce, Box 911, Borger, Tex. 79007.

In other fish fry developments, the food has been ordered and plans have been finalized for the event.

The fry, now in its 12th year, will use more than one and a half tons of fish for the festival. In addition, 1,000 pounds of cabbage and 1,500 pounds of french fries are being purchased.

Tickets for the festivities go on sale May 16 at a cost of $1.50 in advance and $2.00 at the door.

Acknowledges Plant Money

Acknowledgement of receipt of Pampa's Phase III application for construction of the city's $1.4 million sewage treatment plant was received today from the Environmental Protection Agency, according to City Manager Mack Wolford.

The city manager said indications are that final approval can be expected following several minor changes requested by EPA.

Pampa hopes to be the recipient of a 75 per cent federal grant to assist in constructing the plant.

City officials say that would leave the city's share of the cost at approximately $300,000 to $350,000, which they plan to raise with bond issue approval by Pampa voters.

The City Commission authorized at its meeting last Tuesday the employment of a

Texan Wins Poker Playoff

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Fortified by his $210,000 winnings from the World Series of Poker, Brian "Sailor" Roberts took his girl friend Bea Tudor show-hopping to celebrate his triumph in the winner-take-all game.

"It was one of the hardest tournaments I've ever played in," Roberts said, rocking back and forth in his chair after the match. Roberts said he misplaced his glasses before the game, but apparently the loss didn't bother him as he played the winning round without them.

Roberts, wearing a blue green shirt tucked into his black trousers, the button near the belt unbuttoned, sat with one foot curled up under him. A hole in the sole of the shoe stuck out as Roberts posed for pictures with his $210,000 winnings — stacked on a silver tray like a pile of coldcuts.

The final round in the smoke-filled Horseshoe Club casino began at 4:00 p.m. Saturday with only three of the original 21 gamblers who put up $10,000 each to enter the tournament left in play.

When the three Texans sat down, Roberts had $128,000, Bob Hooks had $54,000 and "Dapper" Crandall Addington had $27,400.

Hooks was fortified by a stock of his favorite $2 cigars, wrapped in a plastic baggie to preserve the moisture of the tobacco.

Addington tossed in the towel at 6:20 p.m.

After Addington's departure, all the black $100 chips were replaced by grey $500 marks, the remaining two players got up and stretched, and what turned out to be the final hand of "hold 'em, a seven card stud game popular in Texas, was dealt.

Roberts got two jacks in the hole, which turned out to be his winning cards. Hooks had a jack and a nine of clubs in the hole. On the "flop," the seven of hearts came up, followed by the six of clubs and a two of clubs. Hooks pushed his entire $59,500 stack of chips in the pot. Roberts matched, which left "Sailor" with a reserve fund of $91,000.

Hooks got a nine of spades, giving him a pair. Roberts took the 10 of hearts, and the two jacks in the hole won the game.

In the crowd of observers were former champion "Amarillo Slim" Preston, and "Puggy Wuggy" Pearson, who

Session Opens In Dismissal Of Judge Parr

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI) — Representatives from two utilities have been subpoenaed for today's opening session of an inquiry into the dismissal of Archer Parr as Duval County judge by his political enemy District Judge O.P. Carrillo.

Representatives of Coastal States Gas Co. and Central Power and Light Co. were subpoenaed for today's hearings. According to testimony during the trial in which Parr was convicted of perjury, Parr received retainers to represent the two utility companies at the same time he served on the county's tax-levying board.

The hearings were switched to Rio Grande City because of the Parr-Carrillo feud in San Diego, the county seat of Duval County.

The Texas 4th Court of Civil Appeals ordered the hearing because Duval County business has come to a standstill since Carrillo ordered Parr removed from the bench.

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Eliezer the elephant Wednesday threw a photographer out of his pen at the Biblical zoo.

"I'll never photograph another elephant again," said Mike DeCastro, who had offered Eliezer a watermelon.

The beast grabbed him by the arm with his trunk and tossed him over a spiked fence.

DeCastro landed in an empty moat but was only slightly hurt.

had been eliminated earlier in the game.

"You know, a man could go on doing that just about forever," said Roberts, a native of San Angelo, Tex.

"Could for a fact," Hooks agreed, adding, "We sure had us a game."

Roberts, who gets his nickname "Sailor" from a stint he did in the Navy where he first learned to gamble, used to travel with Amarillo Slim and Texas Dolly Brunson on the "poker circuit" in the Southwest. They played all comers and staked each other when someone's cards ran bad.

He shares an apartment here with Hooks, who comes from Edgewood, Tex. Hooks, a former football star at Southern Methodist University who turned down a draft by the San Francisco 49ers in favor of playing high-stake poker, is the cardroom host at the Golden Nugget, across the street from the Horseshoe.

The $10,000 stake each player put up to join the game doesn't seem quite real to the men, most of whom are professional gamblers.

"Once it starts, it's not money anyhow," said Pearson, a former champion. "Those checks on the table, they don't get to be money again until the action stops and someone's got 'em all."

"Until then they're like the marbles you played with when you was a kid, see? Once you start to play...it's The Game, and you been playing it forever, seems like..."

Kissinger, Gromyko Set Superpower Talks

VIENNA (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger made his post-Vietnam diplomatic debut today, going through the social niceties with his Austrian hosts before superpower talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Gromyko, a sour-faced veteran of Soviet-American negotiations, was flying in to Vienna as Kissinger munched sweetcakes with leaders of neutralist Austria.

The real business came at 5 p.m. — tea time in Austria. It was Kissinger's first face to face talks with a Kremlin leader since Communists captured South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Gromyko, an old diplomatic hand aware of American sensibilities, was expected to skirt the Indochina issue and sound out Kissinger instead on U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The foreign minister was said to seek word whether the United States would support the Kremlin's call for a resumption of full-scale Middle East peace talks in Geneva.

The Soviet Union has stepped up calls for new talks in Geneva since the collapse of Kissinger's step-by-step diplomacy in the region two months ago.

A senior U.S. official with the Kissinger party said the secretary would tell Gromyko little, wishing to wait until President Ford meets next month with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The senior official said, however, Kissinger would try to nudge Gromyko into winding up work on a Soviet-American treaty limiting offensive nuclear arms.

President Ford and Soviet Communist leader Leonid Brezhnev began discussions on the treaty last November at their summit meeting in Vladivostok.

Kissinger hoped his talks with Gromyko would speed up discussions in Geneva on the technical details of the treaty, the senior U.S. official said.

Bensten Gathers $1.4 Million

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd Bensten, D-Tex., says he has raised $1.4 million in his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, and will decide this fall which state primary races he will enter.

Bensten told a news conference Sunday he probably will choose Illinois for one of the primary races.

Bensten also said recession is a bigger problem than inflation and the only way to end it is to get people back to work.

"If you could get back to the 1973 unemployment level — 4.7 per cent — you would have a balanced budget. And you wouldn't be losing the growth in the national product, the increase in the standard of living in this country," he said.

Heath's Mens Wear

Mark and Floy Heath

Heath's Mens Wear began in 1930 by Frank Carter when the Combs - Worley building was first built. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Heath bought the store in 1955, changing the name from Waner's to Heath's.

The store always has been a men's store specializing in clothing for the man. "The only thing that this store does not handle is shoes," Heath said.

Heath had been working as a gas engineer outside Pampa when he decided to go into the clothing business. "I was looking for something to get into and this came along," said Heath. "I still enjoy my work too."

There is one other employee other than Heath and his wife, Floy-Jack Morgan says that things at the store are keeping him pretty busy.

Heath commented, "Things are kind of slow right now. Measuring with our Christmas sales they were right up there with the last couple of years."
