Residents share concerns over natural gas prices

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

The news that natural gas prices were expected to rise to more than one and one-half times the amount last winter's rates has some Pampans concerned.

"I just think somebody's making some money and ripping the people off," said Augusta Brown. "It's going to hurt everybody, but these people who have a set, fixed income are going to be hurt the worst."

"I guess we can just turn the thermostat down, wear our coats in the house and shut the house up except for the room we're in," she said.

Atmos Energy Corp. said in an Oct. 5 news release from Lubbock that "natural gas utility bills for an average West Texas residential customer could be approximately 55 to 65 percent higher than gas bills last winter because of the effects of two disastrous hurricanes in the Gulf of Mexico, the already-high demand for natural gas, and tight supplies of domestic natural gas production."

Hurricanes Katrina and Rita disrupted about 15 percent of the country's natural gas production, according to Gary Gregory, vice president of Atmos' West Texas Division.

"Reliable natural gas service for our customers is our top priority. We expect that natural gas supplies will be adequate this winter to meet our customers' needs," Gregory said in the release, which also cited the tight supplies of domestic production quoted above.

"Natural gas prices, though, will be much higher than last winter, and we are very concerned about their effect on our customers," he said.

The average Atmos residential customer in this area can expect to pay about $900 to heat their home from October through March, up from the average cost last winter of $500 for the same time period, according to the release.

"It's terrible," said Billie Williams. "We're planning on using our fireplace to heat our house this winter. It won't be as bad on us as it will on other people." The Williamses have a fireplace insert that makes more efficient use of heat generated by a fireplace fire.

Seventy to 80 percent of a customer's natural gas bill pays for the gas alone, according to the release.

"Customers pay only what Atmos Energy has already paid for natural gas, and not a penny more," Gregory

Nothing new in murder investigation

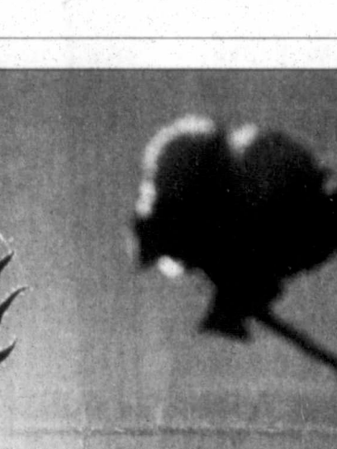

By BETSY BLANEY
Associated Press Writer

The small agricultural community of Pampa in the Texas Panhandle is typically a quiet place, with the upcoming harvest or Pampa High's latest football game often the talk of the town's 18,000 or so residents.

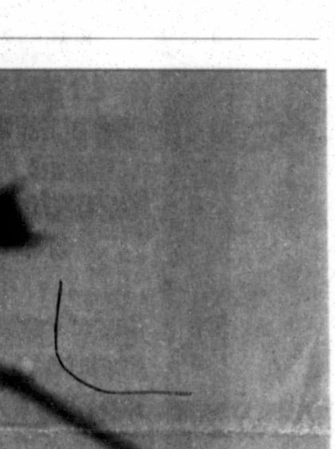

But that hasn't been the case the past few weeks — with residents fearful and speculation swirling since a farmer, his pregnant wife and her 14-year-old son were gunned down in their remote, modest one-story frame farmhouse.

"They're definitely scared and keeping their guns loaded," said David Haynes, who works at the Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau and deals with ranchers and farmers in the

Obituaries

Esther Littlefield, 78

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. – Graveside services for Esther Littlefield, 78, will be at 10 a.m. Monday, Oct. 17, 2005, at Fairview Cemetery in Pampa with the Rev. Bob Hudson, pastor of the Bible Baptist Church, officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Directors of Pampa.

ESTHER LITTLEFIELD

Mrs. Littlefield died Wednesday, Oct. 12, 2005, in Albuquerque.

She was born Oct. 30, 1926, in Santa Barbara, N.M. She was reared in Tucson, Ariz., and had been a resident of Albuquerque, N.M., for the past 10 years. She was a Catholic.

Survivors include her husband, Jerome Littlefield of the home; one son, Richard Littlefield of Pampa; four sisters, Angie Spencer of Benson, Ariz., Stella Delsid and Delfina Gomez, both of Tucson, Ariz., and Delores Zaragoza of Marietta, Calif.; and three grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by a brother, Nolberto Delsid.

Pernie Fallon, 80

ADDISON – Pernie Fallon, a long-time Pampa resident, has died from lung cancer. She passed away peacefully at home on Thursday evening, October 13, 2005, with her family by her side.

Born April 5, 1925, in Lubbock, Texas, to Charles Gore and Pérnie Clowdus Wagner, she grew up in Amarillo and graduated from Amarillo High School. She married Ben D. Fallon and spent most of her life in Pampa, where she raised her children and volunteered her time with Junior Service League.

PERNIE FALLON

Always ahead of her time, she was the first woman to run for the Pampa School Board. She loved the sun and being by the pool, the beach, reading and playing bridge. She traveled the world extensively. She was a member of the Pampa Country Club and St. Matthew's Episcopal Church. In 2003, she moved to Addison, Texas, where she was a member of the Brookhaven Country Club and the Addison Pace Setters.

Survivors are her daughters Pernie W. Fallon; Teddy Padden and husband, Noel; son, Ben D. Fallon, III, all of Addison; and three grandchildren, Taryn Fallon, Dak Fallon, and Lexi Padden.

The memorial service will be held at 3 p.m., Saturday, October 22, at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in Pampa, with the Rev. Linda Kelly officiating. A celebration of her life will be held in the Parish Hall immediately following the service.

Memorials may be made to St. Matthew's Episcopal Church Memorial Fund, 727 W. Browning, Pampa, Texas 79065, (806) 665-0701 (office@stmatt-pampa.com); the Greyhound Adoption League of Texas, Inc., P.O. Box 680, Addison, Texas 75001-0680, 972.503.GALT (info@greyhoundadoption-tx.org); or to a hospice or an organization supporting the arts of your choice.

Man found guilty of dousing officer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 43-year-old Harlingen man was found guilty Friday of dousing a city police officer with gasoline, which ignited and caused severe burns.

Jurors started deliberating a sentence after convicting Sergio Daniel Gonzales of one count of evading arrest and two counts of aggravated assault of a public servant.

They did not reach a verdict on his penalty and were deliberating Saturday.

Prosecutors said he could receive life in prison.

Carlos Ramos, 36, was splashed with gasoline and burned Oct. 4, 2004, while responding to a domestic violence call at the Gonzales home. A second officer also was burned, though not as seriously.

Derailment causes blast, evacuations

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Hundreds of homes were evacuated Saturday morning after a liquid propane gas tank was hit by a Union Pacific train car, exploding in a ball of fire and leaving a plume of smoke over the south end of the city, a police spokesman said.

Officers were going door to door, urging thousands of people to move to the north side of town, while firefighters worked to put out the blaze. The air quality was of most concern because a train car carrying vinyl acetate caught fire, police spokesman Chris Rankin said.

Rankin said fumes from the chemical are "most definitely poisonous."

Four hours after the accident, the evacuation was suspended about 9 a.m. when police were told the chemical fire was under control and they could check the area for safety. Rankin said the evacuation would resume if necessary. He did not know if anyone had been injured, and said he was told by police on the scene that several "structures" were destroyed by fire.

"This is without a doubt the largest incident we've seen around here in at least a decade," the officer said.

Union Pacific spokesman Mark Davis said he had no reports of injuries.

Next move in CIA leak investigation case is up to Fitzgerald

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now the waiting begins. With the criminal investigation into who leaked the identity of a covert CIA officer apparently nearing an end, Special Counsel Patrick Fitzgerald could seek indictments of top White House aides or quietly close up shop.

The grand jury that heard several hours of testimony Friday from President Bush's chief political adviser, Karl Rove, is set to expire Oct. 28. Rove's lawyer said Fitzgerald has "affirmed that he has made no decision concerning charges."

Even if Fitzgerald decides not to prosecute anyone, that may not be the end of the matter: The prosecutor could write a final report detailing his investigation. But unlike past special prosecutors, such as Ken Starr in the Monica Lewinsky affair, who operated under the now-expired independent counsel law, Fitzgerald is not required to produce a public report.

Nevertheless, some Democrats on Capitol Hill are pressing him to do so.

"Such a report would ensure Congress and the American people that the investigation of this serious matter has been undertaken with the utmost diligence and has been free of partisan, political influence," wrote Reps. Jane Harman of California, John Conyers of Michigan, Rush Holt of New Jersey and Tom Lantos of California, all members of the House Intelligence Committee.

area. "If you live in a big city, you expect a shooting like this. Not out here."

No one has been arrested and Texas Department of Public Safety investigators are releasing few details about the Sept. 30 deaths of Brian Conrad, 31, his wife Michell and her son, Zach Doan. Michell Conrad, 35, was six months pregnant with the couple's first child.

Her 10-year-old daughter called 911 to report the shootings early that Friday. Authorities have declined to discuss what she might have seen or how she survived, citing concern for her safety. They also are not releasing the tape of the girl's 911 call.

"To me, they intended to kill them all. How that little girl survived is a miracle," said Buddy Lowrey, a retired neighbor who lives about a mile north on Texas 70.

The farmhouse is just south of Pampa, which is located 55 miles northeast of Amarillo. It's set about 200 yards off the highway and has several large trees around it. Sorghum fields and empty livestock pens are visible nearby.

The family was well-liked and well-known around town.

"Brian, the family didn't have any enemies in these parts," Lowrey said.

Robbery is not considered a motive and the young girl is not suspected, officials have said. People identified as suspects early on have been cleared, and other "persons of interest" are being questioned, DPS spokesman Daniel Hawthorne said.

The case is not being investigated as a murder-suicide. Results of a preliminary autopsy showed Doan died of multiple gunshot wounds. The justice of the peace was admonished by investigators for releasing those results because they want to "maintain the integrity of evidence," Hawthorne said. Autopsies on the adults have not been released.

The last murder in Pampa was in July 2003. There was a triple murder in the county before, in 1993, when a mother and her two children were slain in Pampa. But still, residents aren't used to the thought of a killer in their town.

"I don't like to go into my house alone when no one's home," said Krissie Alexander, a senior at Pampa High School, where Doan was a freshman who ran cross country.

The murders are also a lunchtime topic for teachers, who said they've felt "spooked," especially at night.

"We all agreed we had," said Wanda Cotter, a single parent who teaches middle school.

Some who live near the Conrad house have had new locks put on their doors — and some are for the first time locking theirs. One rancher has purchased a motion sensor.

People were extremely anxious the first few days after the shootings but are still wary because there's so little information available, residents said. Even relatives aren't being told about the investigation, some said.

The dearth of details has fueled speculation, with several residents asking: Did the killers go to the wrong house? Were the slayings random? Did somebody see something they shouldn't have? Were the murders drug-related?

Some residents wondered whether the murders were retaliation for Brian Conrad reporting the theft from his farm of some ammonia, which he used for fertilizer.

Ammonia is an ingredient used to make methamphetamine, and most of the Panhandle 30 counties have a problem with meth manufacturing and trafficking, Hawthorne said. Ammonia thefts from farms in the region are "substantial," said Hawthorne. He said he has heard "six different variations" of the ammonia rumor.

The Texas Rangers, the investigative arm of the DPS that is handling the investigation, has also looked into those reports.

"And I've had the Rangers confirm none of them," Hawthorne said.

"I wish they would release a little information," Haynes said. "They certainly haven't said there's a crazy killer on the loose."

Brian was known for his upbeat personality and his willingness to help people fix things, according to friends and neighbors. He liked to cook and his wife was the organizer of barbecues with bureau friends. He served on the Farm Bureau board, and took part in 4-H activities.

Michell Conrad worked as a secretary for Farm Bureau for about 10 years before quitting her job in June in advance of the baby's birth.

For Haynes, the deaths reminded him of a high-profile 1959 murder of a rural Kansas family of four, a story detailed in Truman Capote's book "In Cold Blood."

"It's the first thing I thought of the next day," he said. "these were just normal, good people who by being at home ended up being in the wrong place."

Gas

said. "We buy the gas on behalf of the customers. We simply pass the cost of the gas on to our customers with no markup."

A gas utility such as Atmos Energy earns its income from fees for delivering gas to customers and for maintaining its utility distribution system, Gregory said. The utility's rates for delivering gas to customers are regulated by each city within the company's service territory.

Atmos buys natural gas during the summer months and stores it underground for use during the winter.

"We are doing everything possible to guy gas supplies or to contract for future supplies at as low a cost as possible," Gregory said.

The Williamses are not the only local residents to plan on using non-natural gas methods of heating for the coming cold months.

Garry Metts, owner of Flatlanders Services near Pampa, heats his business with a waste oil burning system and has done so for the past several years.

"I was paying $1,000-a-month gas bills at my shop before going to a waste oil burner," he said. Metts' business used to be located in Pampa.

"I don't even have a gas burner in the shop now," he said.

Metts heats a 40'x80' shop with a 21' ceiling by using the waste oil system. He plans to add a 24'x80' addition to his shop, and will heat it with tubing which runs beneath the floor and through which hot water will be pumped.

"I will probably use propane to run the water heater," Metts said.

The size addition he plans to build can be heated by the output from a 30-gallon water heater, he said.

June Thurman of Fireside Comfort has seen an increase in visitors to her business.

"There's probably been about a 50 percent increase, at least in lookers, over last year," she said.

"We normally have a good October, but this year we've had a lot more lookers and people contemplating what they're going to do," she said.

"Some of the stoves I sell won't be available until January due to demand," Thurman said.

Thurman said she had also seen an increase in pellet heating. Some fuel-burning heating systems burn pellets made of compressed sawdust.

Atmos Energy offers a budget billing program for its customers, which "evens out" the customer's natural gas utility bills over a 12-month period. For more information, call toll-free 1-888-363-7427 or go to the company's Web site at www.atmosenergy.com.

Atmos also offers an energy assistance program called "Share the Warmth." The program allows customers to donate $1 or more each month to help "those less fortunate" pay their energy bills, according to the news release. For more information, visit the company Web site.

Metts believes the continued rise in natural gas prices may have positive effects as well as a downside, by spurring development of alternative methods of energy.

"There are a lot of things that will come out of this," he said.

And in the meantime?

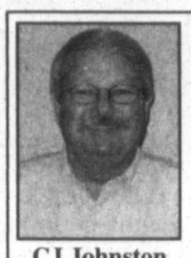

"They better make all they can out of it while they can," he said.

WT's Carthel has electricity flowing through WT campus

Don Carthel, head football coach at West Texas A&M University, has brought new excitement to the campus in Canyon. Not since the days of Joe Kerbel, Eugene "Mercury" Morris and Duane Thomas has there been so much electricity in the air surrounding Kimbrough Stadium.

That is a nice turnaround for WT, a university that has a lot to offer the Texas Panhandle and surrounding area. A lot of area high school seniors decide to take off for greener pastures, and that is fine for them. My daughters fled Amarillo for the bright lights and excitement of Austin.

But for those who stick around, WT offers a quality educational experience as a regional university.

One thing that the football team's success revealed is that some juvenile delinquents are apparently WT students.

Painting the mascot of an opposing team might seem like a fun thing to do at the time, but it is still vandalism. That is something one might expect out of a junior high or high school student. Those attending a university are supposed to be grown up and should be held accountable for their actions.

You may have noticed in your telephone bill a small flier about a "Tax on Talk." That's right, a tax to talk.

Dennis Spies
Editor

In 1898, President William McKinley imposed the Federal Excise Tax law, or "Tax on Talk." It was intended to be a temporary "luxury" tax on the very wealthy, who were the only ones who had telephones at the time.

This three percent "temporary" monthly levy was meant to help fund the Spanish-American War.

The war lasted about four months, but the tax is still around, 107 years later.

Unlike other excise taxes like the so-called "sin taxes" that are aimed at doing good by decreasing the use of tobacco or alcohol, there is no benefit to consumers from this tax.

The money from this tax goes to no particular purpose. It merely makes access to wireless and other telecommunications services less affordable for many Americans.

In 1987, the U.S. Department of the Treasury said the tax hurt poor and middle-class families more than those who are wealthy. It also said it hurt the nation's economy because it discouraged improvements in technology.

There is a movement to have the tax repealed. HR 1898 for U.S. Rep. Gary Miller, R-Calif., and S. 1321 by Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., have been introduced to repeal the tax.

But not everyone agrees. In January 2005, the Congressional Joint Committee on Taxation thought the Tax on Talk should be modernized to tax new services and even expanded to include taxes on services that have not been taxed before, such as Internet access.

So, if the tax is repealed, some pork-laden politician will come along with a new reason to tax something else.

Just another day in the antics of the great bureaucracy, where paper shufflers bump into walls and our taxes pay their salaries.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Oct. 16, the 289th day of 2005. There are 76 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 16, 1978, the College of Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church chose Cardinal Karol Wojtyla to be the new pope; he took the name John Paul II.

On this date:

In 1793, during the French Revolution, Queen Marie Antoinette was beheaded.

In 1846, dentist William T. Morton demonstrated the effectiveness of ether as an anesthetic by administering it to a patient undergoing jaw surgery before an audience of doctors in Boston.

In 1859, abolitionist John Brown led a group of about 20 men in a raid on Harper's Ferry.

In 1946, 10 Nazi war criminals condemned during the Nuremberg trials were hanged.

In 1962, the Cuban missile crisis began as President Kennedy was informed that reconnaissance photographs had revealed the presence of missile bases in Cuba.

In 1964, Harold Wilson of the Labor Party assumed office as prime minister of Britain, succeeding Conservative Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

In 1970, Anwar Sadat was elected president of Egypt, succeeding the late Gamal Abdel Nasser.

In 1984, Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu was named winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for his decades of non-violent struggle for racial equality in South Africa.

In 1987, a 58-and-a-half-hour drama in Midland, Texas, ended happily as rescuers freed Jessica McClure, an 18-month-old girl trapped in an abandoned well.

Ten years ago: A vast throng of black men gathered in Washington, D.C., for the Million Man March led by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

Five years ago: President Clinton launched a fresh effort to try to cool Middle East tensions at an emergency summit in Egypt that included Israeli and Palestinian leaders, as well as the leaders of Egypt and Jordan and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan. Missouri Gov. Mel Carnahan and his son were killed in a plane crash south of St. Louis while en route to a rally for Carnahan's U.S. Senate campaign. The New York Mets beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0 to win the National League championship series, 4-1.

The vast, inchoate pain of the deaths in Iraq has swelled the ranks of the anti-war movement to the dimensions of a politically viable force capable of capturing the Democratic Party. We briefly glimpsed their incipient power when Howard Dean, propelled by their outrage, almost upended John Kerry in the Democratic primaries of 2004. But now, fed by another year of a seemingly endless war and almost 2,000 American military deaths, the isolated pockets of anti-war activists are combining with mainstream voters, driven by the national angst over the war, to form a major political vanguard.

The most interesting aspect of this spreading political movement is that it has no leaders. All the usual suspects who might unfurl the banners and assume the position to which their political rank entitles them are, instead, learning the lessons of the last campaign and listing to the center, hobbled by their own records of backing the invasion in the first place.

Dick Morris
Columnist

Our current political situation resembles the '60s so strongly that even the years seem the same, with only the decade changed. Iraq, like Vietnam, started in the early years of the decade. Administration policy in each engagement was sanctioned early on by Congress and ratified in the fourth year of each decade by an electoral victory. Anti-war sentiment gathered in the fifth year both times but found no leaders among the establishment of the Democratic Party.

Back in the mid '60s, all the usual leaders of the left – Hubert Humphrey, Lyndon Johnson, Adlai Stevenson, Edmund Muskie and Nelson Rockefeller – were backing the Vietnam War. Today, Hillary Clinton stands behind the war.

Will Clinton lose her claim on the leadership of the left as Humphrey did? Her support for the war might galvanize the appearance of new leaders in her party, just as the political vacuum over Vietnam led to the emergence of Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern. Or will she switch and play the role of Robert Kennedy, discarding her backing of the war just in time to lead a crusade against it before the elections of 2008?

Does the New York senator understand the dimensions of outsider politics? Her advisers aren't helping: Pollster Mark Penn's dismissal of the idea of a left-wing revolt against Hillary as a "notion I would have to laugh at" may take its rightful place in the history of famous-last-words alongside those of Jim Jordan, John Kerry's early campaign manager, dismissing the Howard Dean surge: "There are no votes on the Internet."

Changing of the guard for the Constitution

At the beginning of October, John Roberts was sworn in as chief justice of the United States; and our nation witnessed a rare changing of the guard that protects the United States Constitution. In 1789, President George Washington nominated John Jay to be our first chief justice. In September, the Senate confirmed President George W. Bush's nominee, John Roberts. Our nation has witnessed 43 presidential administrations, but just 17 chief justices. Almost everyone is familiar with presidential elections, but many people have only a passing knowledge of our judicial confirmation process.

The Constitution does not set any particular requirements for Supreme Court justices. There is no minimum age, as there is for presidents, senators and representatives. And justices need not be citizens or residents of the United States. Instead, our Framers left the qualifications of justices up to the judgment of the president and the Senate.

Kay Bailey Hutchison
U.S. Senator

Over the years, we have had justices from a wide variety of backgrounds. Justice Byron White was a professional football player – the NFL's league-leading rusher for two seasons – before practicing law. Justice Samuel Miller trained as a physician. At the other end of the spectrum, before joining the court, Justice Earl Warren had been governor of California and Chief Justice William H. Taft had been president of the United States. The different experiences of the justices gave each of them a unique perspective to add to the court's understanding of its cases.

During our country's history, 140 people have been nominated to the Supreme Court and the Senate has confirmed all but 29. Since 1900, the Senate has voted against only four nominees. However, judicial nominees have come under a different kind of scrutiny in recent years. From 1789 until 1925, nominees did not testify before the Senate. It was not until the early 1980s that Senate hearings were first televised. In general, nominees have been confirmed expeditiously – over 43 percent of all justices were confirmed within a week after their nomination.

Court

For most of our nation's history, senators have voted to confirm judges primarily based on their qualifications. They had to be learned in the law and they needed to apply the rule of law in an unbiased manner. Consider the confirmation of Justice Antonin Scalia. Before his confirmation in 1986, Justice Scalia's judicial views were already well known. He had written extensively as a law professor at the University of Chicago and as a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. Many senators knew that Justice Scalia had political views starkly different from their own. Still, after just two days of testimony before the Senate, he was confirmed with a vote of 98-0. That Senate – controlled by Democrats who often opposed President Reagan – confirmed him because they looked to his qualifications as a judge, not on whether his political views aligned with theirs.

Over the last two decades, a disturbing trend has started. A number of senators have increasingly focused on the political views of judicial nominees. When these senators disagree with nominees' views, they vote against them – no matter how well qualified they are.

This partisan approach was set in relief when President Ronald Reagan's nominee, Judge Robert Bork, was rejected by a vote of 42-58. Politicization of the process continued during the confirmation proceedings for Justice Clarence Thomas, who was narrowly confirmed 52-48. By contrast, when President Bill Clinton sent two nominees to the Senate, despite their liberal beliefs, the vast majority of Republicans voted for them, and they were confirmed with votes of 96-3 and 87-9.

Since President Bush took office, some senators have intensified this political examination of nominees. Until a compromise was worked out last May, Democrats had taken the rare move of blocking a vote on many of the president's lower court nominees, despite the nominees' excellent qualifications.

The worst abuse was the four year filibuster of our fellow Texan, Judge Priscilla Owen's confirmation to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. She was extraordinarily well qualified, having served on the Supreme Court of Texas, and she had been endorsed by every major paper in Texas.

During the confirmation of Chief Justice Roberts, I was pleased to see the Senate move back toward its old mode of concentrating on a nominee's background and temperament. More senators seemed to acknowledge that Justice Roberts was undeniably well qualified for the position, whatever his political positions might be. He was confirmed by all Republicans and many Democrats with a vote of 78-22.

Now the Senate is taking up the confirmation of our fellow Texan, Harriet Miers. She has impressive qualifications. She distinguished herself as a lawyer in private practice, gaining 28 years of practical experience, culminating in her becoming the head of the firm Locke, Liddell and Sapp. She served as president of the State Bar of Texas. And most recently, she was the president's legal counsel in the White House.

Harriet Miers possesses important elements of diversity that promise to improve the court's ability to consider cases from disparate viewpoints. She would add the unique and pragmatic perspective of someone who has focused solely on the practical aspects of law, rather than from behind the bench. She will be just one of two women and just one of two southerners on the court. She will also be only the third Texas-born justice in the history of the court.

I hope to see senators from both sides of the political aisle concentrate on her ability to correctly apply the law. If they do, I expect the Senate will treat her with the same dignity that she, herself, has shown for so long, and make her our next Supreme Court justice.

Left

In fact, the left may have the last laugh on this one. The massive liberal backlash against the moderate center of the Democratic Party and the growing unease at Sen. Clinton's support for the war the grassroots hate will do much to shape the evolution of the 2008 presidential contest.

But the denouement might come sooner. This leaderless left may well find a candidate to field against Hillary in next year's Democratic senatorial primary. It might be an Elizabeth Holtzman or Mark Green – or someone further from the mainstream, like Norm Siegel. As soon as the left gets the point that Hillary is not with them, the retribution is likely to be swift and sure.

So why is Hillary so stubborn on the war? Perhaps she simply believes it's the right thing to do.

But, based on my experience with her, I'd suggest three other reasons: First, because she is always stubborn; it's Hillary being Hillary. Second, she knows that for a woman to win, she has to be perceived as a hawk – a Margaret Thatcher or a Golda Mier. And, finally, she is so enjoying the company of the establishment, the obeisance of men in uniform, the pats on the back from her clubmates in the Senate that it is hard to turn away and face the cold world outside the establishment.

Feed industry workshop set

COLLEGE STATION – Managing costs and improving profitability and product quality are the goals of the Feed Industry Profitability Workshop scheduled for Dec. 6-8 in Omaha, Neb. The workshop will take place at the Educational Service Unit #3, 110th and Harrison streets in Omaha.

The workshop will target plant and office managers, controllers, accountants and cost center supervisors, said Dr. Tim Herrman, director of the Office of the State Chemist at Texas A&M University and workshop instructor.

"The increasingly competitive feed industry necessitates managers, supervisors and controllers understand management principles that determine corporate profitability," Herrman said. "This workshop is designed for individuals who desire to sharpen their management skills."

Experience working in Excel is important, since most classroom assignments and case studies involve spreadsheets, Herrman noted.

This is the sixth course involving faculty from Texas A&M and Kansas State University. The workshop will address:

- Capital budgeting, including preparing detailed cash flow statements and assigning rate of return based on project risk;

-Interpreting financial statements and assessing feed mill competitiveness through financial ratios and benchmarking;

-Performing detailed cost analysis by shift and feed ration;

-Analyzing and managing variability using statistical techniques that improve feed quality, operating efficiency and profitability; and

-Learning to assess optimum operating conditions and identify economic efficiency.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I got the surprise of my life three years ago when my husband of 28 years asked for a divorce. Not long after the divorce became final, I ran into "Tim," an old high school classmate, and fell head over heels for him. He stays at my house every weekend and is on his own during the week.

Last week I used Tim's e-mail account to send an e-mail. When I pulled up the account, I discovered that for the past three years, the man I'm in love with has been seeing five other women! He reminded me that he has been a bachelor for 20 years and has many female acquaintances. He sees nothing wrong with going out with them, and sees one of them once a week

I am extremely uncomfortable knowing that Tim has been seeing other women and wasn't up-front with me about it. I was under the impression that we had an exclusive relationship. Are my feelings unreasonable? -- SHOCKED IN OHIO

DEAR SHOCKED: If Tim lied to you about having an exclusive relationship, then you have reason to be angry. However, if he did not -- and exclusivity was important to you -- you should have made certain it was discussed.

Surely, if Tim was deceiving you, he wouldn't have given you his password. Now that you know his feelings about monogamy, it's up to you to decide whether you will tolerate an open relationship, because it appears that's all he's willing to have.

P.S. At the risk of sounding like a broken record, I suggest that you be checked for STDs.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a disagreement my wife, "Angela," and I are having. We heard from some friends that Angela's nephew was being married. Angela saw her nephew on a couple of occasions, and he never once mentioned that he was even engaged. The wedding was held in July. We did not receive an invitation. Now an announcement has arrived in the mail stating that they are married. Angela has heard through the grapevine that the bride is registered for wedding gifts at a local department store.

I say we should send them a card since we were neither notified of the engagement nor invited to the wedding. Angela is very upset over this because she has always felt close to her nephew -- but apparently her feelings weren't reciprocated. She thinks we should send a nice gift. What do you think, Abby? -- CONFUSED AND SAD

DEAR CONFUSED AND SAD: You and your wife are in no way obligated to send a gift to her nephew and his bride. However, because your wife feels she would like to send something, a "token" gift would be suitable -- and very generous under the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 24 and find myself in a situation where my relationship with my boyfriend may be coming to an end. The breakup isn't the part I fear the most. It hurts, but time heals and I know I will be OK. What I'm dreading are the inevitable questions I'll be getting about why it happened.Why can't people -- especially family -- just accept things for what they are? Talking about it won't make it any better. How should I respond to people who ask me questions? I want to be polite but still make it clear that questions only make it worse. -- SAD IN CHICAGO

DEAR SAD: Here's the mantra. Say, "It's really too painful to discuss right now, and I'd appreciate it if you would drop the subject." And if the questioner is insensitive enough to persist after that, repeat it. Then change the subject.

UT engineer gets grant to continue research in nerve repair

AUSTIN, Texas - A biomedical engineer at The University of Texas at Austin has received a four-year, $1.05 million grant from the National Institutes of Health to begin analyzing a modified plastic for use to repair severed nerves in the body or to serve other medical purposes.

The plastic, called polypyrrole, is a man-made, electrically conducting plastic (polymer) with broad biomedical potential that has been successfully linked to a natural molecule so it can interact with nerve cells or other body components. Associate Professor Christine Schmidt and colleagues described this bioengineering feat in the June issue of the journal Nature Materials.

The study in the journal demonstrated that polypyrrole could attach to human cells grown in a container. That was possible because the polymer was first linked to a fragment of a protein that likes to interact with cells. The intermediary, linking fragment consists of 12 amino acids, and is known as the T59 peptide. The findings are important because Schmidt's laboratory has previously shown that polypyrrole can stimulate nerve repair in animal models through its unusual ability to conduct electricity.

With the new grant, Schmidt's laboratory will learn more about how polypyrrole and the T59 peptide interact, whether the polymer/peptide combination is harmful to body tissues and whether T59 can link large biomolecules to polypyrrole that could further stimulate nerve regeneration, prompt the release of signaling molecules between cells in the brain, or promote health in other ways.

Courtesy Photo

"There are many possibilities for what we can now do with this polymer that we didn't have in the past, and the question is, how can we really capitalize on its increased biocompatibility to create biologic/electronic materials that have good biomedical applications," said Schmidt, who holds the Laurence E. McMakin Jr. Centennial Fellowship in Chemical Engineering.

To study how well T59 clings to polypyrrole in the first place, researchers will attach copies of the peptide to the tip of an atomic force microscope at the university's Center for Nano- and Molecular Science and Technology. The tip of the specialized microscope usually is used to "map" the peaks and valleys on a surface it is passed over. Instead, Schmidt, postdoctoral student Joo-Woon Lee and graduate students Francisco Serna and Jonathan Nickels will use the microscope to see how well T59 coated on the microscope's tip clings to a surface coated with polypyrrole.

In a more detailed test of the strength of their interaction, Schmidt's laboratory will determine how well T59 containing a small amount of radioactive material attaches to other surfaces coated with polypyrrole.

The stability of the polymer/peptide interaction will also be investigated by seeing how much T59 peptide hangs around after injecting small amounts of the duo under the skin of animals at the Animal Resources Center. These same experiments will be used to evaluate whether the polymer/peptide incites inflammation or other signs that the animals' protective immune systems are reacting to the presence of the implants.

"We've already looked at chronic inflammatory responses to polypyrrole by itself, and haven't seen any long-term responses," Schmidt said, noting that the polymer produces less of an immune reaction than PLGA, another polymer that is used in humans for suture material and other purposes.

Schmidt's lab will also perform more detailed studies to understand which portions of the 12 amino acids that constitute T59 are important for its attachment to the polymer. An amino acid called aspartic acid is already known to be crucial for attachment, but others will likely be found.

The bioengineers also want to see how the two interact after changing the chemical analogs mixed with polypyrrole as a normal part of tweaking the polymer's electrical conductivity for biomedical purposes.

This conductivity has been important in preliminary experiments Schmidt has done on the regrowth of severed nerves in rats. For these nerve-guidance experiments, the polypyrrole is coated on the inside surface of a tube, or channel, that is sewn into the space between the two ends of a cable-like extension of a nerve that was cut. These cable-like extensions send signals between nerve cells, and polypyrrole's electrical activity is thought to stimulate healing of a cut extension.

To extend this effort through the grant research, Schmidt's laboratory will learn how best to use T59 to tether a large protein called nerve growth factor to polypyrrole.

In the future, this material would be coated inside nerve-guidance channels and tested in animal studies of nerve repair. The growth factor is expected to boost repair by stimulating nerve growth from inside the channel, while the polypyrrole connected to it stimulates healing when an electric current is applied.

Flu reconstruction might help scientists

ATLANTA (AP) — It sounds like a sci-fi thriller. For the first time, scientists have made from scratch the Spanish flu virus that killed millions of people in 1918.

Why? To help them understand how to better fend off a future global epidemic from the bird flu spreading in Southeast Asia.

Researchers believe their work offers proof the 1918 flu originated in birds, and provides insights into how it attacked and multiplied in humans. On top of that, this marks the first time an infectious agent behind a historic pandemic has ever been reconstructed.

The scientists involved in the project contend there's no real risk to public safety. The vials of this frightening germ — about 10 of them — are locked away at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, said Terrence Tumpey, the CDC research scientist who constructed the virus.

However, at least one ethicist thinks there should be a broader public discussion before scientists take such bold steps.

"There isn't much input from the public. I think there should be," said Dr. Arthur Caplan, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Bioethics.

Like the 1918 virus, the current avian flu in Southeast Asia occurs naturally in birds. In 1918, the virus mutated, infected people and then spread among them. So far, the current Asian virus has infected and killed at least 65 people but has rarely spread person-to-person.

But viruses mutate rapidly and it could soon develop infectious properties like those seen in the earlier bug, said Dr. Jeffery Taubenberger of the U.S. Armed Forces Institute of Pathology.

"The effort to understand what happened in 1918 has taken on a new urgency," said Taubenberger, who led the team that did the gene-sequencing for the project.

The research involved everything from excavation of human remains to application of the latest laboratory technology. "It's the sort of story you could tell high school students to get them excited about science," said Dr. William Schaffner, a vaccine specialist at Vanderbilt University.

"It is a big day for science," said Schaffner, who was not involved in the project.

The Spanish flu of 1918 was a worldwide contagion that in a few months killed an estimated 20 million to 50 million worldwide, including roughly 550,000 in the United States.

In severe cases, victims' lungs filled with fluid and they essentially drowned in a disease process that took less than a week. It was known for being particularly dangerous to young adults, a group usually less susceptible to flu complications than older people.

Some public health experts believe the virus was also devastating because of the malnutrition and poor living conditions that existed in that period at the end of World War I.

The reason the scientists believe their reconstructed virus poses no public health threat is that based on previous research, modern-day medicines are effective against the 1918 flu. And they think most people today are already at least partially immune.

The subtype of virus that caused the 1918 pandemic is now common, and so it would not be as unknown to the immune defense systems of people today. In other words, it would not be as deadly, said Adolfo Garcia-Sastre, microbiologist at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

"In each pandemic, it's been a new subtype of virus," not an existing one, said Garcia-Sastre who participated in the effort to reconstruct the virus.

In their research detailed Wednesday in the journals Science and Nature, the scientists explained how they reconstructed that 1918 virus.

Medical research tab high

CHICAGO (AP) — Total U.S. spending on medical research has doubled in the past decade to nearly $95 billion a year, though whether the money is being well spent needs much better scrutiny, a study has found.

The report in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association comes amid heightened public attention to medical research because of liability lawsuits over the painkiller Vioxx, political debate over stem cell research and the untapped potential of curing or preventing disease through mapping the human genome.

"If we're soon going to be spending $100 billion a year, we'd better have treatments that work over a long period of time against diseases that are important today and will be more important tomorrow," said Dr. Hamilton Moses III, co-author of the study and chairman of the Alerion Institute, which conducts studies on research policy.

"If we don't know those conditions are satisfied, we can't judge whether we're getting our money's worth," he said.

The study is part of a special issue of JAMA devoted to the state of U.S. medical research. What emerges from the issue is a picture of an amorphous, mostly profit-driven system, where industry research focuses on existing drugs and lets discovery-stage research lag behind.

The authors call on the medical industry, government and foundations to do better at investing in research on diseases with fewer effective treatments, such as Alzheimer's, and at translating basic research into new treatments and cures.

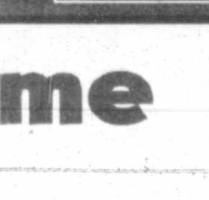

The authors have ties to the industry, medical schools and health companies, doing consulting work and sitting on drug company boards, according to financial disclosures published with the study.

Pampa, Chase Harris rout Hereford 41-14 Friday, setting up PD showdown

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

The Pampa Harvesters treated a packed house to a total-package, dominating performance against District 3-4A opponent Hereford Friday night at Harvester Field. The Harvesters manhandled the Hostile Herd, 41-14.

Pampa's Sharod Young (#1) is buried under a host of Hereford defenders Friday night.

And the way Pampa scored should send shock waves through the rest of the district.

The way the game started gave absolutely not indication of things to come as both teams fought for field position throughout the first quarter.

Hereford threatened a couple of times early, only to be turned away by an A.J. Manzanares interception and a fumble forced by Eric Kingcade on what appeared to be a sure Herd TD pass.

Pampa was forced to deal with a long field for much of the period.

Early in the second quarter, Chase Harris took the ball from quarterback Brody Smith and started to the right. He then cutback across the flow, ran through a hole opened by the Pampa offense and dashed more than 70-yards for a Pampa touchdown.

Keenan Davis was true on his extra point attempt, and at the 9:31 mark of the second quarter, Pampa led, 7-0.

They would never trail in the game.

The second half was a coming out of sorts for the Harvester offense.

The line gave Smith time to see the field and the backs plenty of chances to reach the Hereford secondary and more.

Much more.

If there is such thing as a 'zone', Harris was definitely in it Friday night. The junior running back took advantage of the holes created by his offensive line, scoring 4 touchdowns and rolling up more than 200-yards rushing.

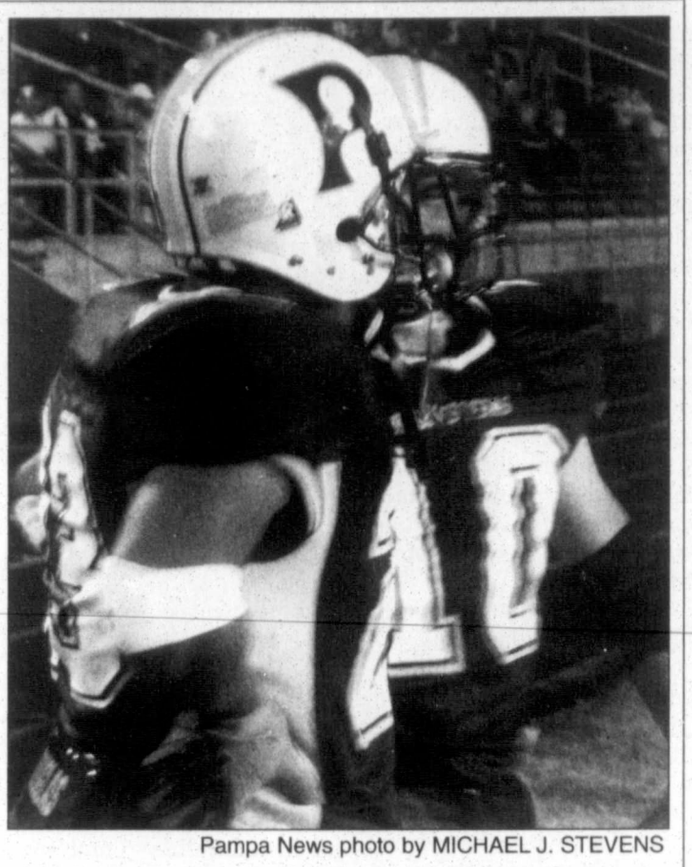

Smith added two touchdowns as well.

Not only did the Pampa offense dominate, it seemed to get stronger as the game went on. Pampa answered both Hereford scores with scores of its own.

The clincher, a Harris 40-yard TD run just minutes after the Herd found the end zone on a quick three-play, 70-yard drive that included a 69-yard touchdown pass.

All-in-all, the Harvesters attacked Hereford with a total team performance.

The win moves Pampa (3-4) into a tie atop the District 3-4A standings with Palo Duro (5-2). Both teams are 2-0 in district. As luck would have it, the two will meet Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo. That game is set for a 1:30 p.m. start.

Rangers OK Oakland interview of Hershiser

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers have given the Oakland Athletics permission to interview pitching coach Orel Hershiser for the A's managerial vacancy.

The Rangers gave the permission earlier this week, team spokesman Gregg Elkin said Friday.

The Rangers' American League West rivals are interviewing candiates to replace Ken Macha, who failed to reach terms with the A's on a new contract last week. Macha had been with the club for seven season, the last three as manager.

Hershiser, 47, was among baseball's elite pitchers from 1983 to 2000, compiling a career record of 204-150 record with a 3.48 ERA.

The three-time All-Star spent most of his playing career with the Los Angeles Dodgers, where he set a major-league record with 59 consecutive scoreless innings pitched in 1988. He won the National League Cy Young Award that year.

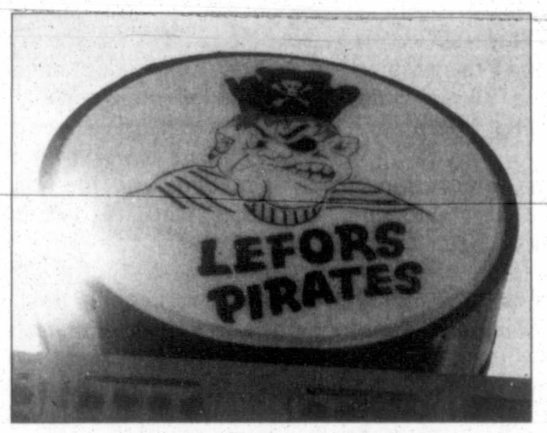

He joined the Rangers before the 2002 season as a special assistant to general manager John Hart and became pitching coach in 2003.

Trying to get back on track

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

It's the plight of small schools everywhere. There simply is not enough money to go around when it comes to sports. Take a careful look around the small town campus and it is easy to see who is getting the funding, and who is left to fend for themselves, provided funds are available at all.

While Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo draws accolades in the afterglow if its recent multimillion dollar upgrade, schools in small towns like Lefors are left to wonder how they can provide their student athletes the best opportunity to compete by maximizing what little they have.

Too often they are forced into lipstick and rouge tactics to help cover problem spots. But the Band-Aid only sticks for so long and eventually, the wound shows. Often worse than it was before.

The track around the Lefors Pirates' football field is littered with off-gray filler meant to hide countless cracks. In a few spots – primarily in the turns – there are pronounced dips that run the width of the track. In others, where the surface simply does not exist, weeds thrive.

School officials are taking steps to upgrade the track so that athletes today and for years to come can take advantage of a facility conducive to competition. However, where larger districts have pools to draw from, Lefors – like many small schools – is left to things like raffles and donations to generate upgrade and improvement revenue, which isn't bad really. Such efforts can also help promote 'community'.

Lefors is currently raffling off a new Toyota Tundra truck with all proceeds going to the complete removal and replacement of the Pirates' track. Said Superintendent Gary Jameson, "The money we get from the raffle, along with what we get from private and business donors is what will completely fund this project."

Jameson and School Board president Ken Miller aren't sure how old the current surface is, but both believe it to be more than 20 years old.

"It can't just be repaired," said Jameson. "It needs to be torn up and completely redone."

Raffle tickets can be purchased for $100 each. The drawing for the truck will take place Dec. 13.

Private and business donations are welcome. Call 835-2533 for additional information.

Former Dallas Cowboy told to begin serving prison sentence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Former Dallas Cowboys defensive back Dwayne Goodrich, who was convicted in the hit-and-run deaths of two good Samaritans in 2003, was ordered to start his 7 1/2-year prison sentence Wednesday.

Goodrich has exhausted his appeals since being convicted in August 2003, seven months after his BMW struck three men trying to free a trapped motorist inside a burning car on Interstate 35E.

The third man was seriously injured.

Goodrich, 27, was convicted on two counts of criminally negligent homicide and fined $20,000.

His attorney, Larry Mitchell, said in a story in Thursday's editions of The Dallas Morning News that the State Court of Criminal Appeals declined to review the case.

Witnesses said Goodrich, who was driving home from a Dallas topless club, was traveling more than 100 mph before he veered onto the freeway shoulder to avoid the burning car around 2 a.m.

Goodrich is scheduled to stand trial in November on felony charges for fleeing the scene, according to the newspaper.

Goodrich was the Cowboys' top pick in the 2000 draft, taken 49th out of Tennessee in the second round. But he played only sparingly in three seasons.

Bledsoe's rebirth, Eli's progress juice up Cowboys, Giants

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Drew Bledsoe and Eli Manning are perfect examples of how quickly perceptions can change in the NFL.

Bledsoe came into this season with the Dallas Cowboys supposedly on the tail end of his career, a 33-year-old quarterback who seemed more likely to get sacked or intercepted than to make a big play.

Manning came into this season, his second with the New York Giants, with skeptics wondering if the 24-year-old brother of Peyton and son of Archie would ever keep up the family's reputation. It was supposed to take at least another year or two to find out.

Look at them now.

Bledsoe is the NFC's top-rated passer and Manning is second. Their success has sent the Cowboys (3-2) and Giants (3-1) into Sunday's game battling for an important early edge in a division that's also surprisingly strong.

"It's gratifying, for sure," Bledsoe said, smiling. "I've always had great confidence in what I can do. Is it frustrating not having more people recognize it? Yeah, that's frustrating at times.

"But, ultimately, when it comes right down to it, I knew what was going on. ... Any speculation that my skills had dropped off is just not correct."

Bledsoe has had it rough the last four years, losing his job in New England after an injury opened the door for Tom Brady's emergence then trying to re-establish himself in Buffalo. He started strong, but failed to make the playoffs in three tries and the Bills cut him to go with an unproven youngster.

Being reunited with coach Bill Parcells and receiver Terry Glenn in Dallas has been, for Bledsoe, like finding the fountain of youth.

Of course, it also helps having an offensive line that's kept him from getting sacked by Washington or Philadelphia and having receivers like Glenn (NFC-best average of 22.5 yards per catch), Keyshawn Johnson (two game-winning, fourth-quarter touchdown catches) and Jason Witten (second among tight ends with 23 catches).

"I've got guys that are getting open for me and making plays," Bledsoe said. "When that happens, my job becomes pretty easy."

Parcells was slow to turn Bledsoe loose, but he did last week against the Eagles and the results were stunning. Giants coach Tom Coughlin tuned in during his team's bye week and was surprised by what he saw.

"They pretty much dictated to an outstanding defensive team exactly what they were going to do," he said.

With running back Julius Jones questionable because of a sprained ankle, the Cowboys might let Bledsoe fire away again Sunday.

For Manning, playing Dallas or in Texas Stadium won't cause his knees to knock. If anything, he might be excited to see the Cowboys considering what happened last time he faced them.

It was the final game of last season and Manning was 0-6 as a starter. Headed toward another loss, he marched New York 66 yards for the winning touchdown, the score coming with 11 seconds left on a run by Tiki Barber that Manning called for at the line.

What part of that stirring performance did Manning savor most?

"Not having to deal the whole offseason with answering questions of, 'When are you going to get your first win?'" he said. "I think it helped with my confidence in myself and the players in me also."

Manning has gotten better every week this season, at least according to a passer rating that's jumped at least 10 points each game. Two games ago he threw for a career-best 352 yards in a loss and he had a career-best four touchdowns last game.

Saints try to recover from embarrassing loss

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Just when they appeared to take a big step forward, the New Orleans Saints fell flat.

A week after getting a rousing win in front of a "home" crowd in San Antonio, the Saints went back on the road to Green Bay where five turnovers fueled an embarrassing 52-3 loss that seemed more like a huge leap backward than just an ugly pratfall.

"I was apologizing to my family for having to watch that," said tight end Ernie Conwell. "The pain that's in your stomach, it's like a broken heart. I don't ever want to feel that again."

Already stung by the score, the defeat felt even worse when the Saints learned that leading rusher Deuce McAllister, the centerpiece of the offense, was lost for the season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee.

So it would seem the worst time to have to face NFC South Division rival Atlanta and the Falcons' dynamic quarterback Michael Vick on Sunday at the Alamodome.

Then again, maybe it's the perfect time.

Although Vick returned to practice at midweek after sitting out the Falcons' loss to New England with a sprained right knee, coach Jim Mora did not immediately name him the starter. He was listed as questionable on Thursday's injury report.

A win over the Falcons (3-2) could do a lot to help the Saints (2-3) avoid having their up-and-down start to the season devolve into a desperate situation.

"We have to play like all that never happened," in Green Bay, said Saints receiver Donte' Stallworth. "We can't let things get to us and let it snowball. That's the biggest thing. We want to get to the top of our division. Right now we're at the bottom."

The Saints got there largely because of their own mistakes. Turnovers have come in waves — 15 in the three losses, including two interceptions returned for touchdowns last week.

Cotton farmers can go high tech with available CD ROMs

COLLEGE STATION – For cotton producers, it's everything you ever wanted to know about cotton production at your fingertips.

Two free cotton resource CD-ROMs are now available for the eastern and western regions of Texas.

"At this stage of the game, it's as close to one-stop shopping (for cotton information) as we can get," said Dr. Randy Boman, Texas Cooperative Extension agronomist in Lubbock. "Many of the common challenges that producers encounter will be addressed by various publications on this CD."

"It's all right here," said Dr. Robert Lemon, Extension state cotton specialist, demonstrating the eastern version on a desktop computer. "We wanted to be able to provide our clientele with a wealth of cotton information."

The CD-ROM is divided up into "logical key areas," Lemon said. Publications addressing general production, irrigation and insect management, as well as information on harvesting, fiber quality and ginning can be found.

"A photo gallery is also on the CD where individuals will be able to find out about insects, types of weeds, grasses, diseases, etc," Lemon said.

A grant from the Texas State Support Committee of Cotton Inc. made the CD-ROMs possible. Extension and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station partnered on the effort.

Boman originated the idea, first developing a western resource CD-ROM for Extension agents as a training document. Grant funding allowed the project to broaden its audience, which now includes Extension agents, producers and industry personnel.

"The CD is now available to ginners because we know gins typically have a lot of traffic in and out," Boman said.

A&M's Brown tapped to lead Wildlife Society

COLLEGE STATION – Dr. Robert Brown was named president of The Wildlife Society during its recent annual meeting in Madison, Wis. Brown is Texas A&M University wildlife and fisheries sciences department head.

The Wildlife Society is the professional organization and scientific society for 8,200 wildlife biologists and students.

Prior to coming to Texas A&M, Brown was Mississippi State University department of wildlife and fisheries head from 1987-93, Caesar Kleberg Wildlife Research Institute research scientist from 1981-87, and Texas A&I University in Kingsville faculty member from 1975-81.

A member of The Wildlife Society since 1975, Brown has served in various capacities. He recently chaired the society's 2-year endowment campaign, which raised $ 2 million.

CHECK THE FACTS

According to Robert Worley, director of Dumas EDC, 50% of the EDC taxes are spent for administration and expenses (such as flying forty people to Florida to "study" a project, impact studies, and other studies.) 25% (half of the administration cost) is for the salaries of the director and two assistants.

According to articles in the Moore County News Press on Sunday, January 13, 2002 and the Amarillo Globe-News on Saturday, January 12, 2002 Dumas voters tried to get rid of their EDC but failed to do so because of procedural errors and changes in the EDC rules.

Other towns in the panhandle have been discouraged from getting rid of their EDC because of changing rules, the work and the expense involved and the difficulty in obtaining proper legal guidance and information.

As with any disease, prevention is the best cure. If we never get a EDC we don't have to go through the agony of trying to get rid of it.

Pampa's denizens of the air

The sun descends from cloud cover for a brief burst of light just before setting. The view from an overpass on Loop 171 shows a water tower and the bell tower of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church in the distance. A variety of creatures flies the skies over Pampa, whether as year-round residents or just passing through on a spring or fall migration.

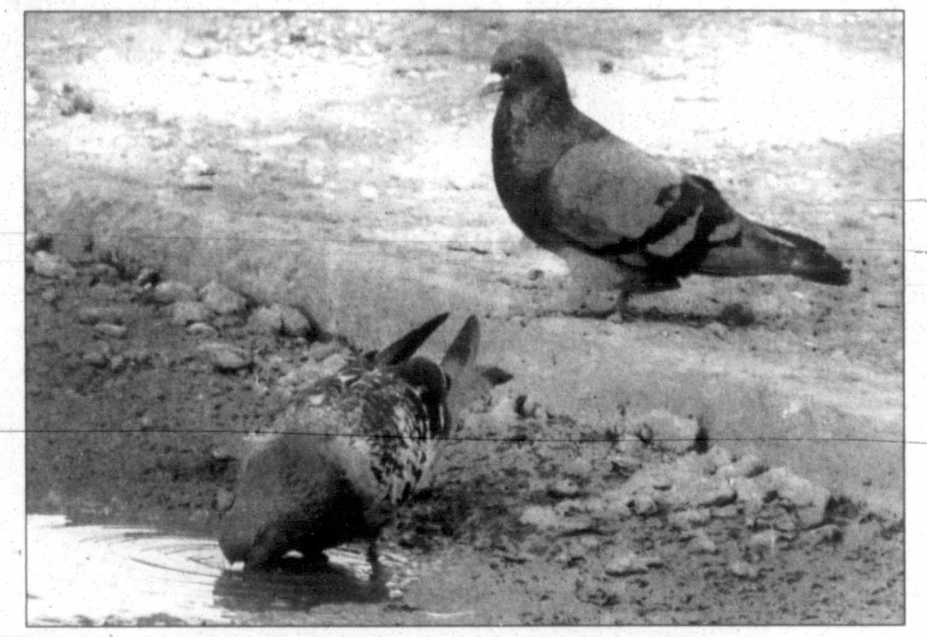

Storm clouds didn't keep this large bird from soaring over Pampa before rain began to fall.

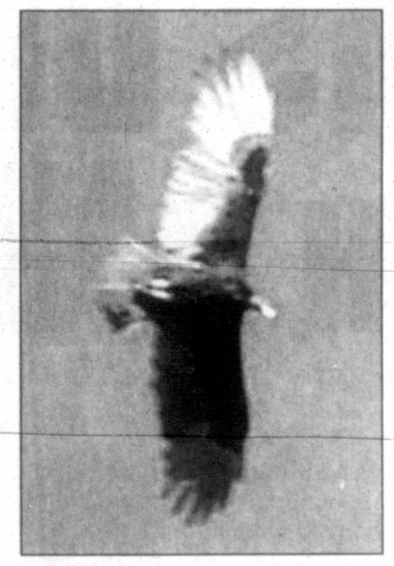

A Mississippi kite illustrates that it can be lonely at the top.

A shorebird in search of water landed recently near a puddle created by one of Pampa's most recent rainfalls.

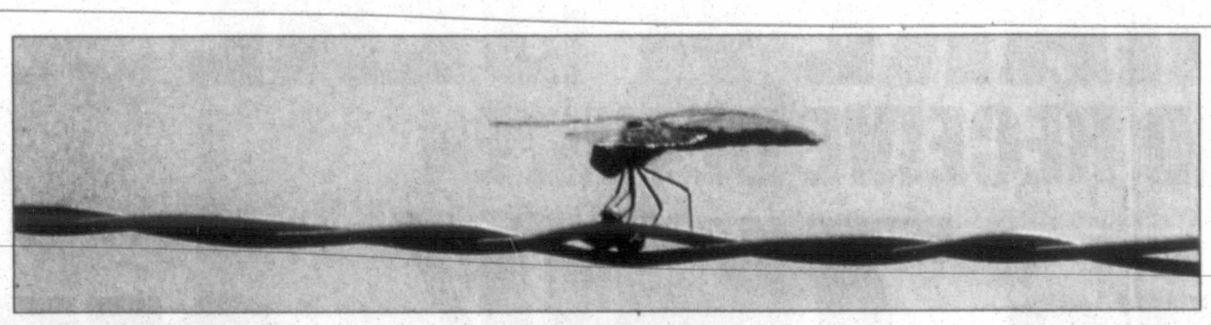

Pigeons come in a variety of colors, and are common to the buildings of downtown Pampa.

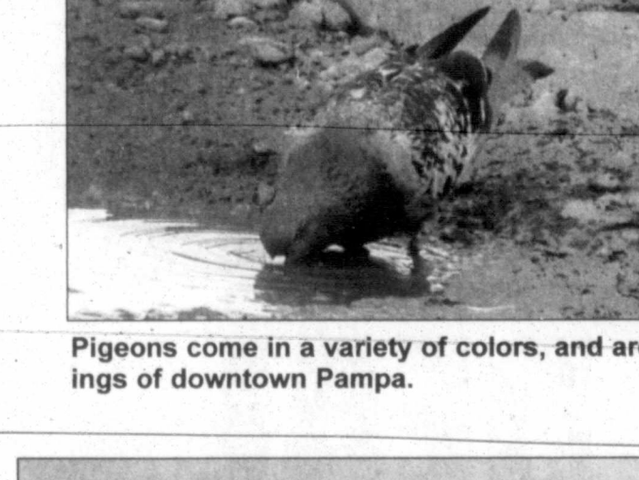

Turkey buzzards can often be seen hovering and gliding on currents of air without having to flap their wings.

A dragonfly perches on a strand of barbed wire fence for a few moments before a gust of wind forces it to move on.

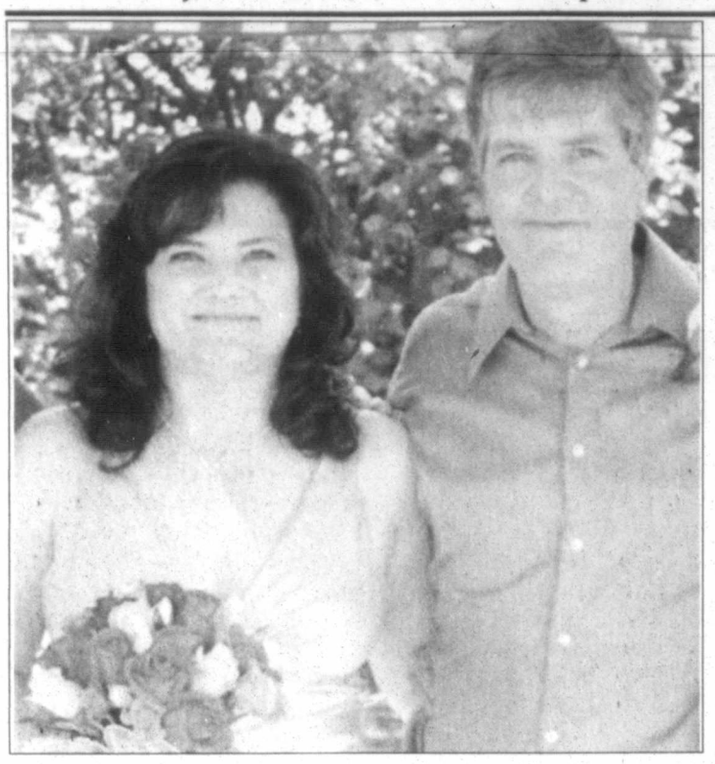

A caterpillar is a future butterfly or moth. Some say a caterpillar's "hair" can predict future weather.

Pamela Gibbs and Bradley Mathis

Pair exchange vows in garden ceremony

Pamela Renae Gibbs and Bradley Jay Mathis were united in marriage on August 6, 2005. The garden ceremony was held at the home of the bride's parents, Bill and Charlotte Gibbs in Lorenzo, Texas. The Rev. Ronald O. Valentine, uncle of the bride, of Sundown, Texas, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride, attired in a pink satin street length dress, carried a bridal bouquet of multi-colored roses. Samara Cummins and Kathlyn Cummins served their mother as bridesmaids. They carried small nosegays of multi-colored roses.

Dustin Mathis of Pampa served his father as Best Man.

A reception immediately followed the ceremony. The table featured an antique lace tablecloth, and an antique punch bowl and other appointments that belonged to the bride's maternal grandmother. The bridal bouquet served as the flower arrangement. About 75 guests were served cake, punch, nuts, mints, and chocolate dipped strawberries. Guests were served by the bride's nieces, Becky Joe Smith and Randi Nell Smith, both of Crowell, Texas, and Kelli Gibbs of Wills Point, Texas.

Special guests included Jess and Joyce Mathis, of Pampa, parents of the groom. Out of town guests attended from Pampa, Amarillo, New Deal, Graham, Crowell, Ralls, Sundown, New Home, and Ponca City, Oklahoma.

Following a honeymoon trip to Cottonwood Springs Guest Ranch, the couple are making their home in Pampa. The groom is Operations Supervisor for OMI in Pampa and the bride is employed by Pampa ISD.

Harvard picks fund manager

BOSTON (AP) — Harvard University on Friday named emerging market bonds specialist Mohamed El-Erian, a recent candidate to lead the International Monetary Fund, to oversee its nearly $26 billion endowment.

El-Erian, 47, is a managing director at Pacific Investment Management Company, a California-based firm specializing in fixed-income assets. He also was a candidate to be IMF managing director last year but was passed over for former Spanish Finance Minister Rodrigo Rato.

El-Erian will succeed Jack Meyer as head of Harvard Management Company, the quasi-independent body that manages the investments of the world's wealthiest university. The endowment stood at less than $5 billion when Meyer arrived in 1990 and reached $25.9 billion this year.

Friday's announcement came after Harvard interviewed several candidates about the position, an unusually high-profile investing job, and last month appointed a temporary chief investment officer. During Meyer's tenure, Harvard was criticized by some alumni for paying managers salaries and bonuses of as much as $35 million. Harvard said the managers earned billions for the school by beating benchmarks.

Dusty Reed and Clay Lee

Pampans say vows

Dusty Reed and Clay Lee, both of Pampa, exchanged wedding vows on July 31 at Reed's Money Pit. Bob Epperson of Skellytown officiated at the ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Jess and Doris Reed, and the groom is the son of O.K. and Carol Lee, all of Pampa.

Misty Payne of Pampa served as matron of honor. Bridesmaid was Sharon Ellen of Pampa.

Christian Pettit served as flower girl.

Best man was Mike William of Borger. Groomsman was Jim Lee of Pampa.

Ryan Lee of Pampa, son of the groom, was ring bearer. Ushering guests to their seats were Rusty Payne and Jaden Payne, both of Pampa.

Jaden Payne also served as candlelighter.

Savannah Pettit of Oklahoma registered guests.

The bride served as musician.

A reception at Reed's Money Pit followed the ceremony where Sue Atencio, Carol Cadenhead and Jerrie Thomas acted as servers.

The bride is the daughter of Jess and Doris Reed of Pampa. She is a graduate of Pampa High School and is employed at NBC Bank.

Parents of the groom are O.K. and Carol Lee of Pampa. He is a graduate of Pampa High School and is employed by Titan.

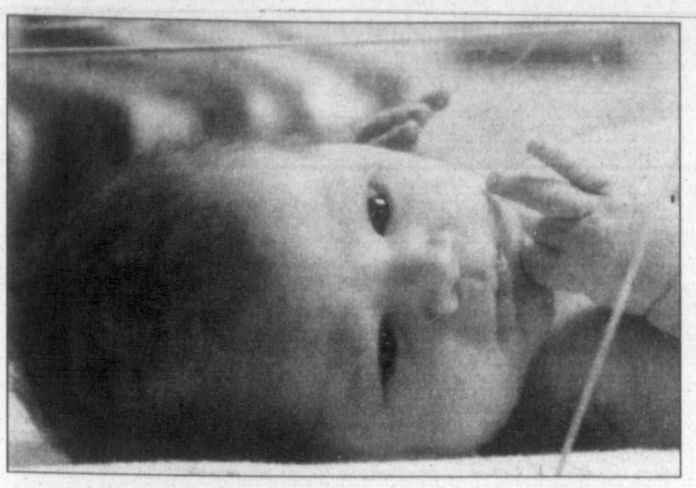

The couple honeymooned in Dallas and plan to make their home in Pampa.

Club news

Las Pampas

The Las Pampas Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met recently in the home of Donna Burger for a luncheon. Regent Nancy Coffee presided at the business meeting.

Reports given included the President General's message by Ruth McBride, the National Defense report by Louisa Britton, flag fact by Sudie Reeder, and constitution note by Billie Osborne.

Mary Cantrell reminded members to save soup and Swans labels and Betty Crocker coupons to donate to the DAR sponsored schools.

Club members voted to pay for the cost of printing books listing the Fairview Cemetery burials.

A collection was taken for contribution to the Veteran Hospital bake sale in Amarillo during the National Veterans week, Nov. 6-12. Darlene Birkes gave a program on stress, causes and remedies.

CattleWomen

Top O' Texas CattleWomen held their September meeting on Sept. 12 at Mel's Diner in Wheeler. President Berklee Clements presided.

Amy Brainard reported that there was a large crowd at the Chatauqua Celebration in Pampa Labor Day. Many were interested in beef information and recipes.

Julie Watkins reported on the style show. It was enjoyed by all with many reports that the food for the brunch was very good this year. Our own member Carolyn Buckingham won the travel voucher. She said she is having trouble deciding where she would like to go.

Berklee Clements reported that many other organizations are sending packages to the troops so it was suggested that the local 4-H Clubs be contacted to join up. It was also decided to contact other CattleWomen in Texas and join with them to send beef to U.S. troops.

Liz Austin has been appointed collegiate liaison for National CattleWomen.

Members present were President Berklee Clements, Amy Brainard, Carolyn Buckingham, Dianne Buckingham, Anita Brown, Sandra Christner, Christine Marett, Mary Mitchell, Kay Stiles, Melody Velasquez, Julie Watkins and Sally Wicker.

The October meeting was Monday in Canadian at the Filling Station. Sally Wicker reported on the Tri-State Fair where she and Berklee Clements manned the GO TEXAN booth. She reported the crowd was consistent but picked up during the Pie

State's pecan crop suffering from drought, not Katrina

COLLEGE STATION – A small portion of the state's pecan crop was affected by Hurricane Rita in a big way, but most of the crop is suffering from drought, said Texas Cooperative Extension experts.

William Ree, Extension integrated pest management agent in Bryan, said he received reports of downed trees in East Texas, but the economic impact on the state was minimal.

"There's not a whole lot of production in that area" Ree said. "If I had to guess, I'd say about 10 percent of the crop is located in that area."

Alan McNeill of Beaumont was one of those producers affected.

"We have a small orchard, about 60 acres," he said. "We had 34 out of 588 trees go over at the roots — that is to say: roots, tree and all. Then we had six that snapped at the trunk. All were bigger, older trees. One of those landed on my house. It hit the garage and didn't even hurt the car that was in it."

Many of McNeill's younger trees, those 10 to 12 years old, were severely bent.

"I'm going to have to straighten them back up," he said. "They're over — 20, 30, 40 degrees."

Surviving trees lost up to 60 percent of their nuts and nearly all their leaves.

"They're already putting out new growth," McNeill said. "You don't want that to happen, you want your leaves to stay on as long as possible. And when that happens, either through pests or whatever, they fall off early, then that messes up your cycle for next year."

Trees try to produce nuts when new leaves form in spring, he said. The new top leaves will be killed by frost. That means the trees' energy that is normally used to produce nuts will have made three leaf crops in 12 to14 months.

"We'll lose some production (next year), but if you fertilize and manage it right, it'll help," McNeill said. "We'll just have to wait and see on next year."

Cindy Wise, executive vice president of the Texas Pecan Growers Association, said most of the state's pecan crop had suffered from drought.

"This is the time of year when we don't have too many problems, but we did have an extended drought through the last part of the summer and through September," she said. "That's a real critical time when the trees need water."

Trees that received irrigation water should be all right, but those that didn't should see some problems with shuck split, she said.

Dr. Larry Stein, Extension horticulturalist in Uvalde, said the state's 60 million to 65 million pound crop entered the harvest season late.

"The hot, dry weather was slowing down the maturity and opening of the nuts," he said.

Jose Pena, Extension economist in Uvalde, said, "The pecan harvest, while two to three weeks behind a typical schedule, is gradually gaining momentum. The harvest is late, generally, because,

Peck, Harrison exchange vows in Arvada, Colorado Ceremony

Diana Peck and Joshua Harrison

Nuptials for Diana Peck and Joshua Harrison were held Aug. 13 at Arvada Baptist Church in Arvada, Colo. The Rev. Barry Layne, pastor, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Ed and Tracy Peck of Westminster, Colo. The groom is the son of Bob and Liza Harrison of Pampa.

Marcia Peck of Westminster, Colo., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Jessica Milligan of Plainview and Katie Olson of Lakewood, Colo. Male attendant was Jarrod Musick of Broomfield, Colo.

Best man was Christopher Harrison of Pampa. Groomsmen were Jason Hanna of Mansfield, Ryan Milligan of Plainview and Ethan Meyer of Santa Fe, N.M.

Nicholas Meyer of Santa Fe served as ring bearer.

Brett Musick and Aaron Musick, both of Broomfield, ushered guests to their seats.

Guests were registered by Katrina Cordova of Hamilton, Ohio, and Nathan Beck of St. Louis, Mo.

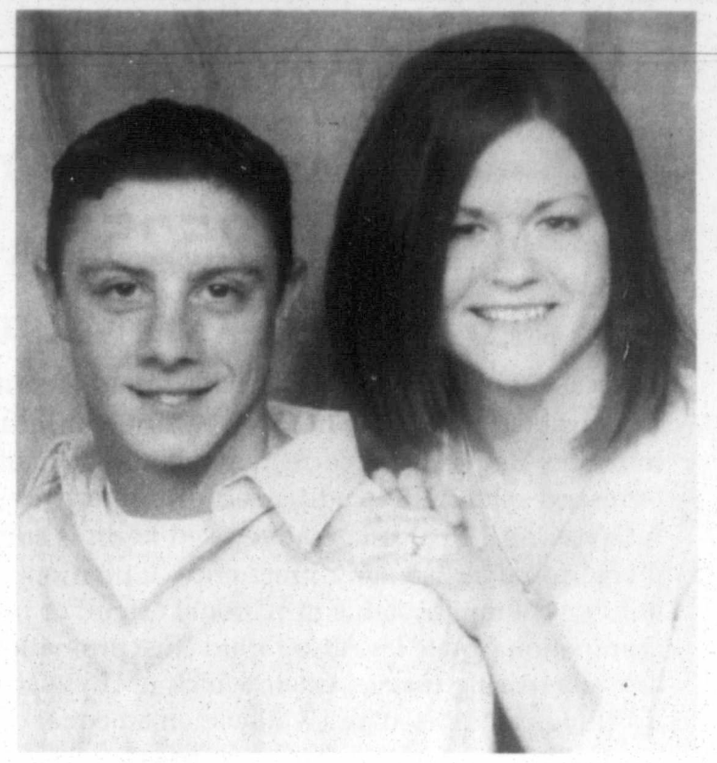

Providing vocals for the ceremony was Laura Saunders of Arvada. She was accompanied by Lisa Glazier of Arvada on piano.

A reception was held at Arvada Baptist Church with Nicki and Chris Erwin of Fort Collins, Colo., Brandon and Denice Anderson of Longmont, Colo., and Dan Olson of Lakewood acting as servers for the guests.

The bride is a graduate of Wayland Baptist University and works for Texas Tech University as a unit coordinator for the Dean of Engineering.

The groom is expected to graduate from Texas Tech University in 2006. He works for IT division at Texas Tech as a design team coordinator.

The couple honeymooned at Disney World in Florida. They plan to make their home in Lubbock.

Engaged

Chandra Nachtigall and Randy Freeman plan to wed Saturday Nov. 26 at First Southern Baptist Church in Hutchinson, Kan. The bride-elect is the daughter of Paul and Vicki Nachtigall of Pampa. She graduated from Wakita High School in Wakita, Okla. She is employed as a legal assistant to Bretz Law Offices in Hutchinson. The future groom is the son of Leonard and Janet Freeman of Livonia, N.Y. He graduated from Livonia High School in Livonia, N.Y. He is a specialist in the U.S. Army and is stationed at Fort Riley, Kan.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Oct. 17, 2005:
A Lunar Eclipse on your birthday could herald substantial changes the following year. Do not fight change. Do not look at any situation as bad, but rather transitory. How this stellar event impacts you will depend on your chart. If you are a woman, you might have a mini identity crisis and take another look at your emotional life. If you are a man, there could be a change in the emotional caliber of your life. Some will say hello to new homes. Timing and indications of where you are heading are 1 month, 6 months and 18 months from today. If you are single, your status will probably change as you learn to value closeness on a new level. If you are attached, work with each other, allowing transformation. ARIES can challenge you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ With an Eclipse in your sign this morning, your levels of energy could fluctuate dramatically. Don't push yourself, as you could be accident-prone. Go into slow mode; do more mental work involving finances and your bills. Tonight: Revise your fall budget.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You certainly hop out of bed on the wrong side this morning. Have you thought about getting back in bed and calling in, or at least making this a half-day? You will be all the happier if you move like a tortoise. The good news is, you end the day as a hare. Tonight: Whatever makes you happy.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ A change involving a friendship, meeting or goal happens quickly. You might ponder what has happened for quite a while. Take your time today, taking no strong actions. Your imagination finds solutions. Tonight: Take it easy.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Be ready to swing or adjust to a different professional or community stance. Be gracious, knowing that ultimately everything happens for the better. Meetings add to your resourcefulness. Tonight: Brainstorm away.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Information and news could rapidly change. Confirm what you hear with care, because your decisions and pending actions will be determined as a result. Others admire your resourcefulness blended with your leadership. Tonight: In charge, whether you want to be or not.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Someone close or key to your life could change his or her tune soon. Once more, take the high road and walk in others' shoes. Explore new ways of thinking and handling issues. Talk to someone more knowledgeable than you. Tonight: Read between the lines.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Others can upset your apple cart if you allow them to. On the other hand, you can swing with change and upset. Depend on a very important friend or associate. Together you can handle nearly anything. Tonight: Be a duo.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ If you are exhausted, honor the drain in your energy. Let others run with the ball. You always feel as if you have to do everything. You don't. Your friendly ways move others to see events through your eyes. Tonight: Flip through your messages first.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might expect changes with a romantic relationship, child or creative product — perhaps not immediately, but soon. Look at this phase as a transformation. Concentrate on each task you do right now, and tension will ease. Tonight: In your favorite chair.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Handle a personal or domestic matter first thing this morning. You will need to come to some kind of conclusion. Once you clear out this situation, your creativity will flourish, no matter what you focus on. Tonight: Bring others together.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Take your car in for a checkup in the near future. Also, become a more cautious driver. Are you considering a home office or remodeling a room or two? Aquarius adores the different. Tonight: Return a long-distance call.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Handle your finances with kid gloves today and for the next several weeks. You will find that others have many suggestions as to how to invest your funds, or what to do with them. Claim your power; make your own choices. Tonight: Chat with a friend.

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Oct. 16, 2005:
You might find that you alternate between being very serious and goal-directed, and being downright silly. You juggle your different interests. You won't be lonely, because people often seek you out. Sometimes others could be very blunt with you. Don't take it personally. Let your creativity flourish. If you are single, you could fall in love, but is it the person, or the idea of romance? If you are attached, your relationship needs to take a high priority as you work together to realize a life goal. ARIES has the same issues as you but approaches them differently.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ None of us like having serious talks, but avoiding a discussion could be even more difficult. In fact, you free up the wavelengths between the two of you. Do something that would delight you this afternoon. Tonight: Act like king or queen of the zodiac. You are right now.
This Week: Change will be inevitable. Don't fight it.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Taking some time off from everything will do you good. Even a well-loved family member (the cat?) seems to be draining you. Know when to clear out and take care of yourself. A family member could surprise you. Tonight: Make it early.
This Week: You have what it takes to make waves right now.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You might not be able to make everyone feel as enthusiastic about a get-together as you are. Know when to leave someone alone. Surprising news heads your way. Share with others. A celebration is in order. Tonight: Smile through the wee hours.
This Week: Rethink your recent goals, and old ones, too.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Knowing when to take a timeout could be important. Even if you have some must appearances, you can ease up and not make it a big deal. Listen and share with others. Careful with spending. Tonight: You try to fit in too much.
This Week: You might find changes in the next few months very pleasing. Don't think that anything is written in stone right now.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You could be harder on yourself than you need to be. Take a step back and see how others might view you. A new perspective lightens you up. Try to make time to visit with someone who might be a bit unusual. Tonight: Rejuvenate your spirit.
This Week: You might need to work a bit more behind the scenes. Get a new perspective.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Work with another person closely, and your mood will lift by the afternoon. Right now, you are hard on yourself and might not realize how much you are raining on your own parade. Listen to a friend or loved one. Tonight: Quality time with a quality person.
This Week: Your financial dealings might change in the next few months. Do check out alternatives.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ You cannot help it — others seek you out. Though you might have had a project you wanted to complete, your social life demands attention. Don't be too serious. Enjoy the moment and those you care about. Tonight: Where the action is.
This Week: Observe others right now. Insights can make or break you in the next few months.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You might need to slow down. Sometimes you are a whirlwind, hard to stop. Halt. Relax and do what you enjoy. Simply say no to additional requests and responsibilities. Do only for yourself. Tonight: Put your feet up.
This Week: Be adaptable. You might find some different attitudes surprising.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Though someone might be full of grim news, don't allow this information to dampen your mood or the moment. Act like a child again; let go and be carefree. Tonight: Don't try to hide that spring in your step.
This Week: Funnel your intelligence and creativity into your daily life.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Invite others over instead of heading out the door. You might want to throw a potluck dinner or get together for a game of cards. Enjoying those close to you makes everyone feel better. Tonight: Be the host or hostess with the most to offer.
This Week: Rethink some personal decisions. Take your time, as there could be far-reaching implications.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Though someone you care about could be quite down, you need to socialize and laugh. You can't change this person's mood, but you can have a good time. Get together with a neighbor or friend. Tonight: You could chat the night away.
This Week: You emphasize your personal and domestic needs. There could be an impending change on the home front.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Handle your finances with care. Ask yourself if you really want to splurge. Do some price-comparison. Be honest about whether you need this item. If you want it that much, get it. Tonight: Early to bed. Get some extra sleep.
This Week: Count on being very active and reaching out for others. You seem to be the motivator right now.

Contest. Drawings were held to give away various items, and recipes and brochures for school age children were handed out as well as the remaining brochures left over from the Style Show.

Sena Brainard reported on legislation that she felt was of concern to Texas CattleWomen. Sena also attended the national Beef Cookoff in Rapid City, S.D., at the Ramtoka Hotel. Linda Morton from Katy, Texas, had the winning recipe "Blazing Colorado Steaks." Part of the highlights was watching the lighting of Mount Rushmore. They also visited Kay Snyder and were entertained by Lakota Sioux children from the Indian reservation.

Amy Brainard reported that any high school senior who will attend a Texas university or college and major in agriculture needs to be working on applications to their school of choice so they will be accepted by February to be eligible for the Pat Grote scholarship of $500.

The discussion of sending beef jerky to some of the local troops in Iraq was tabled until further information is gathered.

Discussion centered on having a booth at the WRCA finals in Amarillo.

Attending were Lilith Brainard, Dianne Buckingham, Carla Norris, Berklee Clements, Sally Wicker, Glenda Adcock, Amy Brainard and Sena Brainard.

Century Club

The 20th Century Club met at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the home of hostess Vonna Wolf.

Myrna Orr, president, presided, and Faye Harvey led the collect.

Reports were made on community activities, science and technology, arts and literature.

This year's theme for the club is "First Ladies." Each member will present a program about a First Lady of their choice. Tuesday's program was given by Pat Terry, whose choice was Pat Nixon.

Next meeting is scheduled at Myrna Orr's home at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 25. Vonna Wolf will present the program.

Altrusa

Altrusa International, Inc., of Pampa met Tuesday at the Pampa Country Club for the monthly business meeting with President Billie Dixon presiding. Gayla Rigdon and Terri Williams served as greeters. Joan Gray-Soria introduced Renee Baggerman, 5th grade student from Wilson Elementary School and her mother, Heidi Baggerman who presented canned drink tabs from 4-H Club and Wilson Elementary to Kadda Schale. Schale is in charge of collecting the tabs for the Shriners to use for purchasing braces for the Shriner's Childrens Hospital.

Penni Pfitzner presented the Accent on "Make a Difference Day" which is set for Oct. 22. Altrusans will participate in a literacy-related project on that day to observe the special date.

The following business was conducted and announcements made:

A leave of absence was approved for Anne Stobbe from Sept. 1 through Dec. 31.

Altrusans will assist with Celebration of Lights with dates to be announced at the next meeting.

The Board of Directors will meet at 6 p.m. on Oct. 25 with Carolyn Rash, District Nine Governor and guest Beth McPherson, District Nine Secretary.

Judy Warner reported on the Make a Difference Day project which will include PISD and Altrusans working together to distribute brochures containing information on drug use to all students enrolled in PISD. Altrusans will also distribute the brochures at several local businesses.

Pampa High School Hall of Fame Luncheon is scheduled for Oct. 28 at noon at the Pampa Country Club which will serve as a make-up meeting for Altrusans.

Brenda Tucker announced that the pending Amarillo Altrusa Club members had been sent membership information and an invitation to attend the Oct. 25 meeting which will be the 53rd birthday celebration.

Birthday greetings were extended to Stephanie Jones, Ruby Royse, Betty King and Edna Hickman who celebrate birthdays this month.

The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. Oct. 25 at the Pampa Country Club.

Preceptor Theta Iota

Preceptor Theta Iota, a chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, met Monday at the home of Carolyn Smith. Janis Hubbard presided.

Plans were made to help at the Celebration of Lights and make it a social event for husbands and wives.

Price Smith gave a talk on safe rooms and gave a tour of the one he built in his home. Safe rooms can be built from blocks, wood or pressed wood which is strapped together, and can withstand destructive tornadoes.

The second half of the program, "Lawdy, lawdy, aren't we gawdy" took place as club members viewed new glitter purses which are popular now. Members also viewed jewelry and lingerie.

Next meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. and hosted by Monica Leonard.

Sorority to hold charity event

CLARENDON – The Clarendon College Iota Phi Chapter of Phi Theta Kappa will hold a charity event to benefit the victims of Hurricane Katrina on Oct. 20, at the Sandell Drive-In in Clarendon.

The drive-in will open for the event and will show "Urban Cowboy."

Admission is $2 per person with the donation of one item or $5 per person without a donation.

The group is asking for donations of socks, under garments, and hygiene products such as toothpaste, toothbrushes, hairbrushes, etc.

All items will be donated to City Church Outreach Ministry of Amarillo.

Pampa High School students who had perfect attendance for the first six weeks of school were entered in a drawings for prizes. The winners were awarded gift certificates from United Supermarket and Hastings Books, Music and Video. Front row from left are Lacy Barnett, senior, and Meagan Crawford, sophomore. Back row from left are Heath Henley, senior; Benjaman Griffin, freshman; and Josh Davis, senior.

Heart funds raised at Travis

JOSHUA ARCHIBALD

Students at Travis Elementary raised $3,880 for the American Heart Association during a Jump Rope for Heart event in September.

This year's top collector for Jump Rope for Heart from Travis was Joshua Archibald, a second-grader. He collected $151 and won a gift certificate from Hastings. His name will also be placed in a drawing for a trip to Walt Disney World in Florida.

Money raised by the students are used to help fund research, fight heart disease and stroke, and support the American Heart Association's public and professional education programs.

"This year's event was a huge success," said Donna Turner, coach of the event. "We're very proud of all the jumpers, and we all had a lot of fun."

AMoA to sponsor watercolor workshop

Elizabeth Yarrosz-Ash of Midwestern university will conduct a one-day workshop at the Amarillo Museum of Art from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Nov. 22.

She is past president of the National Watercolor Society and professional artist who exhibits nationally. She has given solo exhibitions at Denton Visual Arts Center, Ball State University Gallery and the Leslie Powell Foundation Gallery among others.

Students in the workshop will explore fascinating ways of applying and lifting pigments from their paintings to create rich, beautiful images. Demonstration and one-on-one instruction will magnify students' awareness of watercolor and help them find their own artistic vision.

Registration is limited. Call 371-5050 to reserve a space in the class. Registration begins immediately and ends Nov. 9 or when the calls if full. Participants must be at least 16 years of age.

The workshop is held in conjunction with "WATERCOLOR U.S.A.: 4 Decades" on exhibition at the Amarillo Museum of Art from Nov. 12 to Jan. 8.
