PLO drafts statement on Israel's right to exist

Arafat answers reporters' questions at press conference in Algiers.

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — PLO leaders today drafted a historic declaration to be presented to the group's parliament-in-exile that implicitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

Several conference sources said they expected up to 85 percent of the 450 members of the Palestine National Council to endorse the document.

The council's political committee met behind closed doors to debate the wording of another part of the declaration, a commitment distancing the Palestine Liberation Organization from terrorism, conference sources said.

The sources, who are on the drafting committee, said they did not expect any differences over the draft, but would not elaborate.

They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The declaration sets out a new political strategy by endorsing U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 — which recognizes Israel's right to exist — thus satisfying one of Washington's key conditions for dealing with the PLO.

The resolution also calls for Israel's withdrawal from territories occupied in the 1967 Middle East war.

On Tuesday, the council is expected to end its extraordinary four-day meeting with a declaration of independence for the West Bank and Gaza Strip, where Palestinians have for 11 months been revolting against Israel's 21-year occupation.

In a radio interview today, PLO chief Yasser Arafat called the council meeting a "turning point in the course of the Palestinian struggle that will also influence events and developments in the Arab world."

The Radio Monte Carlo interview was monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

The independence declaration, PLO spokesman Ahmed Abdul-Rahman and other officials said, already has been drafted.

Arafat called the council meeting a 'turning point in the course of the Palestinian struggle that will also influence events and developments in the Arab world.'

Another draft document proposes the formation of a provisional government to negotiate peace.

The Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine faction, which had argued strongly against endorsing Resolution 242, agreed Sunday to go "with the rule of the majority," a spokesman said.

Omar Koteish, a member of the Marxist front's politburo, said: "We will voice reservations. Resolution 242 is inadequate and does not fulfill our aspirations for an independent state. But we will not withdraw from the conference if the majority votes for it."

'Unity is the priority and the minority is accepting the verdict of the majority without any hard feelings.'

PLO chief Yasser Arafat had hoped for a consensus on Resolution 242 to avert further splits within his guerrilla movement and in the national council, which first assembled in 1964.

The assurances that the Marxist front's reservations would not torpedo unity at this session appeared to satisfy Arafat.

Salah Khalaf, known as Abu Iyad and a co-founder of Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction, said Sunday: "Unity is the priority and the minority is accepting the verdict of the majority without any hard feelings. It is a healthy state of democracy."

President Reagan, asked if he was pleased with the PLO leaders' action, said Sunday in Washington: "We're still looking at that; that's all I can say."

Undercover operation snares alleged intimidator of hunters

HOUSTON (AP) — A man labeled the "bull of the woods" faces federal charges of threatening hunters after he was arrested by federal and state game wardens working undercover to halt incidents of hunters being ordered off public hunting lands.

Tommy L. Williams, 53, of Montgomery, was cited Sunday after he led a group of about a dozen companions who tried to take game from other hunters and eject them from the Sam Houston National Forest, Billy Ball, special agent for the U.S. Forest Service, said today.

Unknown to Williams, however, the "hunters" were federal and state agents.

"He confronted us and wanted to take part of our game," said Ball, who participated in the operation north of Houston in Montgomery County. "We ID'd him based on information from other hunters."

"We were hunting the hunters this weekend. Our concern is all these threats going on. There will be additional undercover operations."

Williams was ordered to appear in federal court in Houston on misdemeanor charges of threatening three hunters. Three other minor charges were to be filed against him, Ball said.

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of six months in prison and $500 fine.

Authorities say incidents of intimidation have increased recently on federal forest land as the number of hunters increases and the amount of open hunting land dwindles.

"Due to these threats going on, we're going to be utilizing other undercover operations," Ball said, adding that if a person insists on using intimidation to keep hunters off public land, "He won't know if he's encountering real hunters or not."

In the Sunday incident, Ball said authorities have been trying to build a case "but we just never were able to put something together."

"He's had a reputation for threatening and intimidating hunters for years," Ball said. "I think we dehorned the bull of the woods."

In other incidents over the weekend, the second firearms deer hunting weekend of the year, Ball said a hunter in a deer stand in the Davy Crockett National Forest escaped injury when someone shot out the legs of the stand while he was inside.

An area of the Angelina National Forest illegally was marked with signs designating the public forest as a private hunting area, he said.

In the Sam Houston Forest, some gates were torn down by hunters going into areas they were forbidden to enter and officials also found about 100 pounds of roofing nails on a forest road in an incident meant to deter people from hunting in the area.

School board members to consider budget amendment to buy two buses

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet in regular session Tuesday evening at 6 p.m. in the Pampa High School library. Among the items on the agenda is a budget amendment that would allow the purchase of two new school buses and possible action on new classroom construction.

Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools, said the board had already agreed to purchase one bus this year.

"We have not purchased a new bus in four school years. We are behind on our buses. We budgeted for one bus last year and one this year. There was a strike at the GM plant and it pushed both buses into this year's budget," Griffith said.

"Looking at our expenditures, we're recommending outright purchase of both buses to save the money we'd have spent on a lease-purchase of one of those buses," he said.

Griffith said an architect who had proposed several alternatives for new classroom construction will now present preliminary drawings for the board's possible approval.

"Frank Wilson was asked at our workshop to come back with a set of preliminary drawings of classrooms that will bring our district into compliance with House Bill 72. If the board is pleased... then he'll be instructed to move forward with a final set of drawings," Griffith said.

He added that the board would have at least three more votes to go through before any construction would begin. The board has previously expressed the need to have all construction completed by the beginning of the 1989-1990 school year.

Griffith said that during the Academic Spotlight portion of the meeting, a group of teachers and a school board member will be recognized.

"We're going to honor the 10 elementary teachers who participated in the NASA day and Dr. Keith Teague for the enormous time he's put in on our Pampa 2000 project," he said.

Recently the PISD hosted nearly 1,000 area fifth-graders for NASA Day at the M.K. Brown Civic Center. The event exposed the students to careers in space-related work and the possibilities of future space travel.

The Pampa 2000 project has been a communitywide effort to prepare the city and the public schools for the challenges that await them in the 21st century, now only a little more than 11 years away.

Quayle likely to be the odd man out in Bush's White House

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle is likely to be a "man on the outside" in George Bush's White House following a vice presidential candidacy that began in a furor but settled into obscurity, experts say.

Encumbered by his image as a political novice who needed a bevy of professional handlers to survive early campaign controversies, Quayle enters a Bush administration in which he has few intimates or allies.

Relegated in the campaign to small towns and safe GOP areas, Quayle as vice president is likely to be given a traditional ceremonial role — going to political gatherings and state funerals — rather than the advisory role that Walter Mondale and even Bush had, some scholars feel.

"Dan Quayle is going to set the vice presidency back about a decade or more. One thing that political scientists have been talking about is just how much the vice presidency has grown. ... With Quayle, it's just going to retreat to the old days of politics and funerals," said Ryan Barilleaux, a professor of political science at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, who studies the American presidency.

Bush rarely mentioned his 41-year-old running mate during the campaign. When asked, Bush employed the stock lines that Quayle would "make an outstanding vice president" and had been "tempered by steel" as he weathered the early furor over his military service, academic record and personal life.

The president-elect told reporters Quayle would have access to the same papers, information and intelligence that is available to the president. But he would go no further in describing what assignments he would give Quayle.

Quayle says Bush has talked to him about heading a space council, and that he assumes he'll have a role in the administration's anti-drug efforts. "I will be a very close adviser to the president," Quayle said.

But that's not the way everyone sees it. Both Bush and Mondale came to their vice presidential campaigns with substantial reputations and were able to place key staffers in important positions in the respective presidential campaigns, Barilleaux notes.

"Dan Quayle has contributed nothing in the way of staff to the Bush campaign. He doesn't have his own big reputation on Capitol Hill. ... Dan Quayle has no friends in a Bush White House except George Bush," Barilleaux says.

"They're going to give him a lot of window dressing, a space council, drug task force, but he's going to be a man on the outside ... not a man who's going to be consulted in a crisis, except on a pro forma basis."

But Eddie Mahe Jr., a GOP consultant who worked with the Bush campaign, says Bush is likely to give Quayle a more active role in the administration than he had in the campaign.

"Vindication demands that. Both of them will want to prove how right the decision was," Mahe says.

Norman Ornstein, of the American Enterprise Institute, says Quayle, while "not the world's leading intellectual," is not "a complete dummy." He was simply thrust into a situation for which he was unprepared, Ornstein says.

"I think he's immature. He's not stupid," Ornstein says.

But Quayle comes to the White House with "a very damaging stereotype that's developed about him that's widely believed in the political community and that's believed by a large segment of the electorate," Ornstein says.

Both Barilleaux and Stephen Hess of the Brookings Institution see parallels in Quayle's vice presidency and those of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew. The choice of Nixon was viewed as a move by Dwight Eisenhower to appease the party's right wing, and Agnew was seen as a political nonentity.

"The natural response is to use him (Quayle) sparingly, as Nixon did with Agnew in 1968," Hess says. "However, Quayle has four years to prove himself, and I think you're going to see stories in two years about how much he's learned, how much he's acted responsibly, how far he's come from the campaign of 1988."

Scientific spinoffs may come with super collider technology

DALLAS (AP) — After the "super collider" becomes operational, scientists believe many technologies will spin off from the multibillion dollar Texas project, and scholarly types can't wait.
 "Roll your thoughts back about 100 years," said Texas A&M physicist Peter McIntyre. "The progress of science and technology that has defined the fabric of our civilization has been paced by a quest for understanding the basic building blocks of matter."
 "The casual sequence of events that leads from a high-brow theorist through the point of an inventor who makes a better mousetrap is driven on the front end by the understanding of the fundamental things," he said.

Although federal funding still must be approved by Congress, a site in Ellis County, about 30 miles south of Dallas, has been approved as the location for the super collider, which will result in thousands of new jobs for the area.

Scientists said the project already has yielded several benefits, including better ways to kill fruit flies and detect human illnesses. Scientists involved in the groundwork for the project say they expect the super collider will pave the way for unheard-of marvels.

"We have to know how matter works in order to make progress in understanding how everything else works," said Austin Gleeson, chairman of the physics department at the University of Texas. "If we don't keep making progress on those frontiers, knowledge stops."
 The construction will require development of hundreds of technologies that can be applied to other fields, said K.W. Chen, director for accelerator science and technology at the University of Texas at Arlington.

'We have to know how matter works in order to make progress in understanding how everything else works.'

Just as the moon missions brought such seemingly unrelated scientific discoveries as non-stick cooking surfaces and heart pacemakers, McIntyre said the first work on the super-conductor at the Texas Accelerator Center near Houston already has yielded technologies that seem to have little connection to quarks and protons.

By the time the super collider is operating, perhaps 10 years from now, the annual sales from spinoff technology ought to be in the billions of dollars, McIntyre suggested.

Scientists at the center, a collaborative effort of nine universities, already have:
 • Developed supermagnets used in a medical technique called magnetic resonance imaging, which McIntyre said gives physicians "a 3-D road map of your insides."
 • Fabricated a small X-ray device that will quickly and safely kill fruit flies. The device could end quarantines that have cost growers millions of dollars and could be used to kill bacteria on chickens, oysters and shrimp.

• Started work with two private corporations to develop a superconducting magnetic storage device. It would be able to store electricity during off-peak hours and deliver it when needed. The end result would stretch the capacity of power plants.

The super collider itself will be a major invention: a super-powerful microscope through which some of the universe's smallest elements can be seen.

The world's most powerful atom smasher is at the Fermi National Laboratory in Illinois.

Pampa man injured in pickup accident

An 18-year-old Pampa man remained in serious condition in Northwest Texas Hospital of Amarillo early today after he was injured in a one-vehicle accident south of Pampa early Sunday morning.

Hospital officials said Samuel Gerald Shackelford, 18, of Rt. 2, Box 21, was in serious condition in the hospital's intensive care unit suffering from a pelvic fracture and fractures to the vertebrae. Shackelford was first treated at Coronado Hospital Emergency Room before being transferred to the Amarillo hospital, Coronado officials said.

According to Texas Department of Public Safety records, Shackelford was traveling north on Farm to Market 749 at 12:15 a.m. Sunday, five miles south of Pampa, when the accident occurred.

DPS reports state Shackelford was driving a 1981 Ford pickup at a high rate of speed while talking to a second northbound vehicle on citizen's band radio when he came upon an unexpected left hand curve.

Shackelford reportedly locked the brakes and the truck skidded off the road to the east. He then reportedly steered back onto the road, overcorrecting, and the vehicle skidded off the road again, flipped twice and dropped off an embankment before coming to rest on its top, DPS records said.

The injured driver was not wearing a seat belt and alcohol was involved, DPS reports state.

Shackelford was taken to Coronado Hospital by Rural/Metro Ambulance where he received initial treatment before being transferred to the Amarillo hospital. Citations are pending.

Corpus Christi uses HazMat team to prepare for disaster

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — With at least eight facilities storing huge amounts of highly toxic chemicals, and homes backed up to refinery fences in some areas, the potential for disaster in this coastal city is great, officials say.

The unit that will fight chemical accidents remains inadequate, but a chemical disaster arsenal is slowly being built, Assistant Fire Chief J.R. Guzman said.

His department could have a hot job real fast if something were to go wrong, Guzman said.

"It's a hot potato, but somebody has to handle it," Guzman told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

In mid-summer, the department's Hazardous Material response unit — known as HazMat — had only three disposable suits and a hodge-podge of homemade tools to work with.

W.C. Jones, another assistant fire chief, said at the time that the city's best defense was Mother Nature.

"The wind blows out of the southeast about 90 percent of the time, and that would take the chemical out over the water of the ship channel, away from people," Jones said in July.

The HazMat unit now boasts 12 dozen disposable suits and two completely encapsulated models, which were donated by Southwestern Refining. Valero Refining has also promised to contribute some gear.

Guzman and Jones both say they need at least six encapsulated suits to work effectively, but the new equipment has eased tensions among fire department personnel.

"I feel a lot more comfortable now than I did a year ago," Guzman said.

The current push to prepare for chemical accidents started in 1986, when Congress passed a federal law requiring community leaders across the country to formulate disaster plans to protect their citizens.

The legislation was passed in the sobering aftermath of the 1984 chemical disaster in Bhopal, India, where a Union Carbide plant let loose a lethal chemical cloud that swept through the populous countryside, killing more than 2,000 people and injuring nearly 300,000.

The law prompted local firefighters to begin looking at their options should one of the city's refineries blow up or have an accident that releases dangerous toxic chemicals.

They didn't like what they saw, they said. But city officials said there wasn't $2,000 to $3,000 available to buy needed protective suits and gear.

The HazMat unit, which houses the city's cache of chemical battle gear, is a renovated ambulance. Its floors are patched with a criss-cross of metal plates, and much of the paraphernalia it holds is homemade.

"When we first set it up, the guys called it 'Kitty Litter 9,'" Guzman joked. "They carried this absorbent — kitty litter — to soak up spills and that's about all they had. We do carry equipment other than kitty litter now," he quickly added.

Such budget consciousness is evident as the department prepares another unit. The most likely candidate? A revamped beer truck, Guzman said.

"A new vehicle would cost $50,000 to $60,000, and there's no way we could do that," he said. "So we just have to make due with what we can get."

Rather than look to allocations from the city for expensive, hi-tech gear, fire officials have largely turned to donations from the private sector.

The most significant additions to the HazMat team came in late summer when Southwestern Refining donated $10,000 worth of equipment to the department.

In addition to two encapsulated suits, the company donated communications headsets so firemen could talk to each other after they suited up, and also binoculars to put in the vehicles.

J.B. Toland, manager of human resources at Valero Refining, said additional gear for the HazMat Unit ordered two months ago finally arrived and will be given to the fire department.

"It's not the kind of stuff you find on the store shelf," Toland said of the encapsulated suit. The suits include a cover to protect against the heat of a fire, and a small chemical containment kit. The value of the gift is about $2,000.

A report by the Nueces County Local Emergency Planning Committee, which will update existing civil defense plans for hazardous chemical response, said the department now appears reasonably well equipped to respond to accidents involving known chemicals where fully encapsulated suits would not be needed.

However, a group trained and equipped to safely handle accidents involving unknown chemicals requiring fully encapsulated suits "currently does not exist," according to the report.

Adoptive parents want access to abused children's records

DALLAS (AP) — Seven adoptive parents of abused children say they will appeal a federal judge's ruling that the state has no obligation to disclose details of a child's past to adopting parents.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas ruled Wednesday there is no constitutional basis nor legal precedent to force the Department of Human Services to disclose all records about the children they adopt.

The parents, who filed the suit last May seeking records and help with staggering medical bills for their children's emotional treatment, say the children often have so much pent-up rage and other emotional problems that they become a danger to themselves and their new family.

"It seems irrational to say that the parents don't have the right to the background information," said the Rev. Bob Chandler, the adoptive father of an abused child. "If we had not gotten the records, Tina might still be a child without hope."

The state contends it shares all known relevant information with prospective adoptive parents through interviews and written summaries.

But medical specialists who treat adopted abused children say few states fully disclose details that can be essential to recovery.

The Chandlers had to obtain Tina's background information through outside sources.

Chandler and his wife, Cherry, of Dallas, adopted Tina from DHS a decade ago, after she had been taken from her biological parents.

The Chandlers knew Tina had been abused, but did not learn the extent of the abuse until earlier this year, after the girl's emotional problems had traumatized their home and cost them nearly $150,000 in psychological treatments.

"We were told if we'd be patient and give her lots of love, she'd be OK," Mrs. Chandler said of her adopted daughter, now 13. "We didn't know that we needed that information in the records, and we didn't know she would need it one day."

The Chandlers, like many families who adopt abused children, suffered through their daughter's violent rage without knowing how to help her.

When Tina joined the family in November 1978, the 3-year-old colored her new parents' walls and carpets with black marker. As her anger grew, Tina stole money and jewelry from the Chandlers and their two sons.

Knives disappeared from the kitchen, later to be found as Tina raced through the house, ripping up furniture in a rage.

"She was so full of hate," said Mrs. Chandler. "Every time she was angry another piece of furniture would be shredded or stabbed."

Fearing for their lives, the Chandlers later installed locks on their bedroom doors. They enrolled Tina in therapy when she was 10, including residential treatment in Evergreen, Colo.

The Chandlers sought more details of Tina's history at the urging of their daughter's therapist. When the Department of Human Services refused to provide the information, the Chandlers obtained horrifying details and photographs from an attorney who represented Tina's interests when the state revoked her biological parents' custody rights.

The Chandlers learned for the first time that Tina had been sexually and physically abused since she was 2 weeks old, at times held dangling by one foot and beaten by her father.

"We had been so naive," said Chandler, pastor of Highlands Christian Church in Dallas. "From the beginning, we would have had her in treatment. We didn't know what to look for."

Tina shook in January when her therapist showed her the police photographs her parents had obtained. Ten years of rage exploded when she realized she was the battered and bruised toddler in the photos. But her parents and her therapists say it was the breakthrough Tina needed.

"The records can be absolutely critical for the treatment," said Ken Magid, a licensed clinical psychologist at the Golden Medical Clinic in Golden, Colo.

Gonzalez seeks more thrifts aid

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The heir-apparent to the chairmanship of the House Banking Committee said he will seek a meeting this week with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady to press for more aid to the Texas savings and loan industry.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, said he will use the meeting to argue for a $50 billion emergency program to head off an impending crisis in the nation's thrift industry.

Gonzalez will urge Brady to extend a $50 billion line of credit to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. so it can move to deal with the nation's many insolvent thrifts.

"The alternative is chaos and a breakdown in our present financial system," Gonzalez said in an interview at the San Antonio Light. "The eventual cost to the nation will be incalculable."

Gonzalez, 72, has won the backing of House Speaker Jim Wright in his bid to succeed Banking Committee Chairman Fernand J. St Germain of Rhode Island, who

"We need an understanding of what happened to the child."

Many so-called "special needs" children, including Tina, suffer from an attachment disorder. Traced to abuse during the first 16 months of life, the condition prevents the child from forming close relationships or developing a conscience.

The children must learn to love and trust others, and to direct the anger at the person who caused the abuse, not their new parents, Magid said. But unless the abuses are detected early, the chances for recovery diminish.

"If we could correctly diagnose these children as infants, the treatment is so easy and so inexpensive," he said. "The clay hardens as the child grows, and the windows of opportunity to reach those children become fewer."

investors with the government assuming most of the risk.

"All they've done is stitch together six or seven dead corpses, and all they've done is produce a bigger corpse that stinks more," he said.

Gonzalez blamed much of the thrifts' problems on a 1982 deregulation bill he opposed.

As chairman, Gonzalez said he would move slowly and carefully in any further deregulation of the financial services industry, particularly as concerns the Glass-Steagall Act that separates commercial banking from investment banking.

"Glass-Steagall has eroded," he said. "You don't have an even playing field any longer. You have the law of the jungle."

The biggest American banks now are far smaller than many Japanese and European financial institutions, and Gonzalez hopes to reverse that trend, he said.

"I intend to bring back the primacy of the American banking system," he said.

Apples for teachers

Wilson Elementary School students are collecting register tapes from Safeway food stores to be used in obtaining Apple computers for school classrooms. Bringing in register tapes recently are, from left, Adam Davis, second grade; Aaron Allen, third grade; and Juan Silva and Stephanie Slate, both second-graders. The collection will run through April 15.

Another battle looming at Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Remember the Alamo? The Texas Legislature has indicated it will think about the historic monument often after it reconvenes in January.

Lawmakers already are firing questions at the Daughters of the Republic of Texas — stewards of the Alamo — about the monument's fiscal operation.

State Reps. Orlando Garcia and Jerry Beauchamp, both San Antonio Democrats, said they will battle to have the DRT and the state-owned mission placed completely under state oversight.

They want more information about a $1.8 million budget surplus, which was generated largely by souvenir sales to the 3 million people who visit the Alamo each year.

"This issue is not the No. 1 priority of state business next session," Garcia said. "But it will be brought up. We're serving notice that the Alamo isn't their exclusive shop."

For Majorie Hardy and Peggy Dibrell, officers of the DRT's Alamo Committee, the legislators' questions are a challenge to DRT stewardship of the Alamo. In 1905, the state made the DRT official custodians of the Alamo chapel and grounds.

Members of the DRT are descendants of the heroes and pioneers of the Republic of Texas. The key battle in Texas' war of independence from Mexico was fought at the Alamo in 1836, when a force of about 186 volunteers held the Mexican army at bay for 13 days.

"We don't quarrel with state oversight, since we've always been under the state," Mrs. Dibrell told The Dallas Morning News. "We've always filed an annual fiscal report to the governor's office and the Texas Historical Commission."

The DRT has paid for maintenance and renovation of the Alamo without state or federal funds since 1905. All proceeds come through sales to tourists and DRT members volunteer their work at the mission.

"If the governor wants to send someone down to check our books, we'll welcome him — but not every member of the state legislature," said Mrs. Hardy.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Whales are fun, but a lot of fuss

It as a whale of a media event, this tale of the trapped leviathans who apparently are now lumbering out to sea. Thanks to a tremendous effort and spirit of international cooperation that completely overshadowed the significance of the event, Crossbeak and Bonnet have resumed their annual migration to Baja California.

The two, along with a third who died, had been trapped in ice that had formed unusually early this year. They were discovered by a passing hunter for whom this time whales were not quarry. He alerted residents in the nearby village of Barrow, Alaska, who in turn alerted resident marine biologists. From there, an event snowballed, until by the end the media outnumbered the residents, with the whole world watching.

No cost seemed too great. Oil companies, no doubt eager to improve their image, lent high-tech equipment to environmentalists. Eskimos, who will return to hunting the aquatic oafs next spring, enjoyed the most success with the least technology. They cut breathing holes in the ice with saws.

After a skycrane lent by the Alaskan National Guard was unable to deliver an ice-cutting barge owned by an oil company, the Soviets one-upped the Americans and sent in two icebreakers. Eventually, at least $800,000 had been spent in a direct effort to rescue the creatures, perhaps even more to report on the efforts.

Barely mentioned in the reports was a pack of polar bears, who had earlier gathered around the trapped whales in hopes of dinner. Indeed, had not all the fuss been generated, the bears would have dined well and nature would have operated as it has since the beginning. The whales would not have been missed.

But humans have an affinity for whales. They provide entertainment (and employment) during their annual trips up and down our coast, and there is evidence that the creatures are one of the most intelligent life forms on earth, these three excepted.

We wish Crossbeak and Bonnet well, but we wonder at all the fuss they caused. Indeed, as the news cameras showed the pair swimming in the newly chopped channel through the ice, we half expected a flip of the tail and the pronouncement that they were headed to Disneyland.

ACTOR AND DIRECTOR WORK
ON THE FINAL SCENE

Don't come back anytime soon

WASHINGTON — Members of the House and Senate spent much of the day on Oct. 23 recovering from broken arms. These they had suffered from patting themselves on the back the night before. At 3:16 a.m., the 100th Congress at last had adjourned. Until late January of next year, the liberties of the people are secure.

During the closing days the Congressional Record bulged with tributes addressed by the members to one another. The list of accomplishments rolled on ... and on ... and on. Not since the days of Lyndon Johnson's Great Society, it was repeatedly said, had so much been accomplished for so many by so few.

At the risk of interrupting the flow of this fulsome Niagara, a few words ought to be said to clear the honeyed air. Taking one thing with another, and looking at the whole of the two years, this observer finds the record lousy. We are well rid of this Congress. Be gone! And don't come back any time soon.

Yes, there were a few constructive accomplishments. For the first time in 12 years, Congress lived up to an elementary obligation: It passed all of its appropriations bills on time. Hallelujah! It was Victor Hugo, or Edmund Burke, or someone, who said he knew of no greater insult than to praise a man for doing his duty. Well, the 1988 Congress did its duty.

What else? It is not easy to think of much else. The Senate ratified a treaty for the elimination of intermediate nuclear weapons. Both houses agreed on extension of the Endangered Species Act. They passed legislation to implement the Canadian trade accord. Yes? Yes? What else? Memory fails.

Much of the congratulatory arm-breaking dealt with insurance against catastrophic illness, reform of the public welfare program and adoption of a ferocious bill on the use and abuse of narcotic drugs.

The insurance bill has some merit, but it positively invites budget-busting sweeteners as the years go by. The vaunted achievement of "welfare reform" also has useful provisions — it may provide leverage to pry child support out of deadbeat parents — but it is neither welfare nor workfare. The first thing to be said of the drug bill is that there is no money to pay for it. When Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas offered a responsible means toward that desirable end, he went down to resounding defeat.

If we must look at the 100th Congress and be thankful for something, let us give thanks for the things that were not achieved. Both houses passed a textile bill that would have created new protections for the most protected of all domestic industries. President Reagan vetoed this miserable measure, and the House sustained the veto.

Other good deeds: Congress did not pass a monstrously expensive day-care bill. It did not pass a bill to compel employers to grant parental leave. It did not punish the underskilled youngsters by raising the minimum wage. It did not enact a well-intended but futile measure to impose a seven-day waiting period on the sale of handguns. In these areas the Congress splendidly performed.

What is most impressive about the 100th, in a backward sort of way, is the list of non-accomplishments. Congress naturally did nothing of any significance about the budget deficits; these are to be studied by the Bipartisan Commission on Passing the Deficit Buck.

It failed abysmally to tackle the burgeoning problem of failing savings and loan associations. It let three years of work on a banking bill slide down the tubes. It did nothing about a Clean Air Act, nothing about student loan defaults, nothing about uniform product liability. It threw the anti-communist fighters in Nicaragua to the Sandinista wolves.

But hold! The second session of the 100th was not entirely without positive accomplishments. Many of these commendable achievements came in the final hours on Oct. 21 and 22, when they were obscured by the backslapping tumult. As the clock ticked toward adjournment, Congress rallied its legislative strength.

Look at the record! Next September the nation will unite in observing Uncle Sam Day, honoring the original Uncle Sam, meatcutter Sam Wilson of Troy, N.Y. Thanks to the 100th Congress, we are even now in the midst of observing National Jukebox Week.

February will bring America Loves Kids Week, April will see National Earthquake Awareness Week, and May will bring National Asparagus Month. You sometime wonder, do you not, if we would be better off without a Congress than we were with the Congress that just left town.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Nov. 14, the 319th day of 1988. There are 47 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 14, 1889, New York World reporter Nellie Bly (Elizabeth Cochran) began her attempt to top the fictitious voyage of Jules Verne's Phileas Fogg by traveling around the world in less than 80 days. She would succeed — finishing the trip in 72 days.

On this date:

In 1832, the first streetcar — a horse-drawn vehicle called the "John Mason" — made its debut in New York City.

In 1851, Herman Melville's novel Moby Dick was first published in the United States.

In 1881, Charles J. Guiteau went on trial for the assassination of President James Garfield. (Guiteau was convicted and hanged the following year.)

In 1922, the British Broadcasting Corp. began its domestic radio service.

In 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed the Philippine Islands a free commonwealth.

In 1940, during World War II, German planes destroyed most of the English town of Coventry.

It's no so bad as it sounds

We're doing some things right! Your grandparents, born in 1990, had a life expectancy of barely 47 years.

A baby born today can look forward to 76 years of life.

In 1900 the leading causes of death were infectious diseases that affected the young — tuberculosis, pneumonia and diarrhea.

Today the leading causes of death are illnesses of middle and old age — heart disease, cancer and stroke.

But today the No. 1 cause of premature deaths for all ages is not a disease at all — it's accidental injury.

So — not only are Americans living longer, healthier lives but most of the diseases which are killing us are "preventable."

The American Council on Science and Health notes that we tend to worry most about the wrong things. Recently, for example, the scare headlines have been preoccupied with the menace of AIDS. While AIDS may, in fact, now infect 1.5 million Americans, it is not a disease that is going to come and get you; you have to go out and get it.

If we would keep our priorities in proper perspective we need to recognize the fact that the real and significant threats to our health are all preventable — accidents, cigarette smoking, venereal diseases, overdrinking and overeating.

We have made enormous strides in drugs for fighting off diseases. The Physicians Desk Reference, which lists prescription drugs approved by the FDA, has 2,354 pages.

Biotechnology holds even more exciting promise for the future.

Less appreciated is the fact that sanitation and water purification have virtually eliminated a whole category of "traditional diseases."

Again — don't let the headline writers rain on your parade. For all of the hazards that make the news, our health has never been better.

For all the new century's anxiety over atomic energy, pesticides, food additives and such — your odds for a healthy, happy life are better than ever and improving every day.

If you've made it to 65 you can count on living to 82.

My admonition that you not be misled by media preoccupation with health hazards is not without purpose.

For more and more, in our modern sardine society, we are seeing evidence that psychological stress can contribute to physical distress; that many diseases — including some cancers — may be "worry related."

It will be well if we can discipline ourselves to keep the "news" in perspective.

As Mark Twain said of the music of Richard Wagner, "It's not nearly so bad as it sounds."

Politics bringing democracy into gutters

By CHUCK STONE

"I happen to believe you've sold us out," said the candidate.

"You do not have a monopoly on patriotism," snapped his opponent.

George Bush and Michael Dukakis? No, it was two Canadian candidates for prime minister, John Turner of the Liberal Party and incumbent Brian Mulroney of the Tories.

"(The election) is a very strong repudiation of the two major parties," said a nationally prominent political analyst. "It's not because the electorate has grown more extreme. It's because the public has lost confidence in (the parties) after the last four years."

The U.S. presidential election?

No, Israel's national election, which resulted in a tie between the two major parties.

Democracy is not on trial in all three countries. But its civility is.

In Canada, the three major Canadian candidates have slung mud at each other with a venom surpassing even George Bush's campaign ads. If Bush has risen with black-criminal bashing and by questioning Dukakis' patriotism, Canada's Turner has soared in the polls with America bashing and challenging Mulroney's love of country.

In Israel, where national survival has become the election's litmus issue, neither party stooped to the gutter levels of America and Canada. They didn't have to. As one high-ranking Likud party candidate observed after a mother and her three children were killed in a West Bank terrorist attack two days before the election, his conservative party didn't need to do anything to benefit from the Palestinian violence.

"It helps us all by itself," he said.

But national elections that result in a national stalemate or are won by insidious exercises in bigotry do little to exalt democracy's civility.

For this month's national elections in America, Canada and Israel, a mournful observation of H.L. Menck- en has exquisite applicability: "Democracy is a form of religion. It is the worship of jackals by jackasses."

Of the three democracies, America probably reached the nadir of civility in a presidential campaign that has left this country racially polarized. Nurtured by race-baiting television ads and the subliminal Ku Klux Klan mentality of Bush's campaign manager, Lee Atwater, the standings of Bush and Dukakis flip-flopped in September after Bush's Willie Horton/soft-on-crime/black-people-are-bad television ads pummeled the electorate's consciousness.

While both Israeli parties were sensitive to the impact of Palestinian terrorism on their elections and Canada's Liberal party has been zinging the Tories' free-trade agreement with America, neither stooped to the gutter level that Bush's campaign manager did. Judge for yourself.

"There is a story about a fellow named Willie Horton who, for all I know, may end up being Dukakis' running mate," Atwater told a group of Southern Republicans in Atlanta just before the Democratic convention.

"And guess what? Monday, I saw in his driveway of his home Jesse Jackson. So anyway, maybe he (Dukakis) will put this Willie Horton on the ticket after all is said and done."

"The Horton case," Atwater told reporters last summer, "is one of those gut issues that are value issues, particularly in the South, and if we hammer at these over and over again, we are going to win."

In a breeze.

But the interludes of a Bush rise on the wings of racism, a stalemate in Israel and America-bashing in Canada don't indict democracy. They simply remind us of the truthful grandeur of Reinhold Niebuhr's wisdom: "Man's capacity for justice makes democracy possible. But man's inclination to injustice makes democracy necessary."

As the old Brooklyn Dodgers fans used to yell after losing a World Series, "Wait till next year." Make that the next election.

Police resume digging in yard where five victims located

By KATHLEEN GRUBB
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A landlady suspected of killing at least five people and burying them in the yard of her Victorian boardinghouse was on parole for drugging three elderly people, police say.

Detectives were seeking the manager of the rooming house, Dorothea Montalvo Puente, 59, for investigation of murder, said Homicide Lt. Joe Enloe.

Investigators said they believe seven or eight bodies may have been buried in the yard, based on the number of residents who are missing, Enloe said.

The woman apparently had been cashing some of the victims' Social Security checks for several months, he said. The motive in the deaths was believed to be robbery, he said.

Digging crews, directed by forensic anthropologists, would continue searching the front yard of the home today where neighbors reported a hole had been dug, Enloe said.

Puente was interviewed Friday by police after the first body was discovered but was released for lack of evidence.

Puente was convicted in 1982 of grand theft and imprisoned for drugging three elderly people and taking their possessions after meeting them in bars, police said. She served 2½ years of a five-year sentence before being paroled, officials said.

The boardinghouse is not a nursing home and did not require a license.

The first body was discovered Friday and was followed by the unearthing of two more bodies Saturday and two others Sunday.

After uncovering the fifth body, police arrested John McCauley, 59, on suspicion of being an accessory to the homicides. McCauley, a resident at the boardinghouse, was arrested after he gave conflicting information, Enloe said.

"We do not believe that this could have been done solely by herself," Enloe said. "We know she's had people help her dig the holes."

Police were unable to determine the identities of the victims or how they died because four of the bodies were wrapped in cloth or plastic, investigators said. They were able to determine the sex of only the first body, "wrapped like a mummy" and described as a gray-haired woman.

The bodies, all found in the fetal position, showed no signs of trauma, according to police, who said autopsies would be performed.

Enloe said evidence was discovered in the graves linking Puente to the deaths, but he declined to elaborate.

"Part of the reason we have probable cause (for her arrest) is because we've been digging for two days, and we've discovered things," he said.

An all-points bulletin was issued for Puente and she remained at large today. She had not been charged, but Enloe said an arrest warrant was being prepared for her for investigation of murder.

Investigators also were seeking access to her bank records.

"Until we get a search warrant, until we get in her bank account, find out what's in there, identify who these people are and try to show she changed their money, it's still guesswork," Enloe said.

For months, neighbors had complained of a stench coming from the site and were told a fish emulsion had been used there as a fertilizer, police said.

"The first time was about the middle of last May," said neighbor Will McIntire. "We couldn't stand it. It definitely was something dead. It had a sweet, sickly smell."

Police went to the house last Monday after neighbors reported former tenant Bert Montoya had been missing since August.

Police detectives and coroners move body of victim from Sacramento home.

Young gives ring to bride Grigsby as Rev. Reed looks on.

Housing project couples wed in marriage sweep

CHICAGO (AP) — It was the only alternative, make that altar-native, for 16 residents at a public housing project after police told the eight live-in boyfriends to get married or get moving.

So on Sunday, eight brides, dressed in pink gowns donated by a local dressmaker, and eight grooms, wearing black tuxedos provided by a formal wear store, tied the knot.

After a Sept. 20 police raid to combat gang violence in the Rockwell Gardens housing project, overnight guests were banned, meaning the boyfriends were forced to choose between walking down the aisle or walking out the door.

The blunt dictum became a big impetus for some couples.

"I just love it," said the former Tammy Grigsby, 20, who married Eugene Young, 54. "We had been planning to get married, but since they went on and pressed the issue, we was all for it."

The couples beamed as the Rev. Louise Reed pronounced their husbands and wives at a makeshift altar at the nearby Malcolm X College auditorium.

"I love it," said Theodora Bower, 36, who married Linda Jackson, 31. "It came out real beautiful — mighty fine."

Robert Johnson, 26, and Linda Hardy, 28, are the parents of seven children, but their wedding day was no less a cause for celebration.

"When they raided my house, that was wrong," said Johnson. "But today is the best day of my life. ... I'm ready to party."

Chicago Housing Authority Chairman Vincent Lane, whose agency arranged the wedding, said the nuptials represent a step in the right direction for the residents involved.

The agency also will work with the husbands, all unemployed, to help them find jobs, he said.

"These people are models and I have high hope for them," said Lane, who attended the brief ceremony. "I think a great deal of what happens in public housing in Chicago is riding on their shoulders. People will say the only reason they're getting married is because of (the raids)," he said. "I don't think that's true."

Environmentalists press Bush for action

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The environmental community is looking to President-elect George Bush to take action early next year to back up his campaign-trail claim to be an environmentalist.

"If he specifically proposes to Congress half of what he's promised in the campaign, he'll have a hell of an environmental record," says Gaylord Nelson, counselor to the Wilderness Society.

"Proclaiming himself an environmentalist is not enough," says Robert SanGeorge, the National Audubon Society's vice president for public affairs. "Now is the time for action. He's got a lot to prove."

Shortly after getting the Republican nomination, Bush moved to stake out the green ground, proclaiming "I am an environmentalist" and putting Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis on the defensive with ads about the filthy waters of Boston Harbor.

In what amounted to an indirect repudiation of Reagan administration policies, Bush pledged action on a variety of fronts, from convening an international conference on global warming to protecting this nation's disappearing wetlands and cleaning up its polluted air.

Both Bush and Dukakis ran as environmentalists, elevating the issue to a higher level than in previous presidential races. They played to an increasingly popular cause.

A Gallup poll released two days before Bush's election said that 65 percent of the respondents — Republicans and Democrats — said the top priority of the next president should be "proposing laws to increase protection of the environment."

Nancy Light of the Sierra Club said "the reason Bush got so many votes was because he did eliminate some of the skepticism about his earlier environmental stands."

She and other officials of national environment and conservation groups said in interviews with The Associated Press that the skepticism came from Bush's role early in the Reagan years as head of the effort to scrap federal regulations, including some sacred to the environmental lobby.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is heading for El Salvador, hoping to persuade Latin American foreign ministers to increase pressure on Nicaragua's leftist government to make democratic reforms.

After a pre-dawn flight to El Salvador, where Shultz was to address the annual meeting of the Organization of American States General Assembly, a return trip to Washington is planned for tonight.

State Department officials, who asked not to be identified, said Shultz planned to cite Nicaragua as an exception to what has been a trend toward democratic rule in the hemisphere over the past nine years.

He intended to ask his Latin American counterparts to use their diplomatic influence on Nicaragua to reverse what the administration regards as the Sandinista government's poor record since Congress cut off military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras last February, the officials said.

In an interview last week, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said the Sandinistas have been so unyielding on democratic reform that "they've disappointed people who are even moderately sympathetic to them."

He said there has been an increase in repression in Nicaragua this year, including the continued detention of about 40 persons involved in an anti-government protest last June.

The Sandinistas, meanwhile, contend U.S. efforts to destabilize Nicaragua are continuing despite the military aid cutoff to the Contras.

They cite a statement two months ago by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Tex., that the administration was trying to disrupt peace talks in Nicaragua by having the CIA "provoke" a clampdown by the Sandinistas.

Shultz has been a frequent visitor to El Salvador over the years, and the officials said today's speech was to include numerous expressions of esteem and affection for President Jose Napoleon Duarte, who is dying of cancer.

Duarte, who is in the last year of a five-year term, has been perhaps the closest ally of the United States in the hemisphere and his government is the biggest recipient of U.S. aid in the region.

Shultz also was planning a number of private meetings with his fellow diplomats during his brief stay. He is bracing for a barrage of questions about personnel and policy shifts President-elect George Bush will make.

At his news conference Wednesday, Bush did not say whether he will seek renewed military aid for the Contras but said the rebels will have "high priority" in his administration.

JOINT PROBLEM, MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of Chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

Great Britain's Prince Charles celebrates his 40th birthday

Prince Charles

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Prince Charles today celebrated his 40th birthday with a trip to Birmingham for an inner-city "street party" and the Defense Ministry promoted him to Royal Air Force colonel and Navy captain.

As he crosses into middle age, the heir to the British throne, who has no constitutional job, has carved his own role — as crusader for the underprivileged and protector of the environment.

On the eve of the prince's birthday, one of his close associates, Tom Shebbeare, said Charles is irritated by the news media's obsession with peddling what he called "title-tattle" and fiction about Charles' private life, which he said distracts from the prince's serious work.

Hundreds of well-wishers cheered and sang "Happy Birthday, Dear Charlie" when the heir to the British throne arrived in Birmingham.

Smiling, he received flowers and two birthday kisses, then met with about 20 young people who have established their own businesses with the help of his Prince's Youth Business Trust.

He also announced a new $72 million trust that will provide grants, loans and business advice to young entrepreneurs. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has agreed to match donations up to that level.

As Charles was en route to Birmingham, the Defense Ministry awarded him the double promotion. The ranks are ceremonial; the prince ended his active career with Britain's armed services in 1976.

Charles chose the Prince's Trust — which he established in 1976 to help disadvantaged youths find jobs — to organize his public birthday celebration in Birmingham, Britain's second-largest city.

Shebbeare, director of the Prince's Trust, said in an interview published Sunday in the Observer newspaper that the prince had decided not to give an interview himself because he didn't want to get involved "in the hype" surrounding his birthday.

"He is now pretty determined that he has departed on an interesting and useful role as the Prince of Wales, and that his interventions into areas of public life are things that he can do usefully for the nation."

he can do usefully for the nation," Shebbeare was quoted as saying. "The general problem is that what he spends most of his energy on doesn't get much of an airing."

After years of being picked on by the tabloid press, which has accused him of everything from eccentricity to failing as a husband, Charles has recently been lauded as "charismatic" and "a great communicator."

The new media appraisal followed a 70-minute television attack on modern architectural development — including central Birmingham, which Charles said had been turned into a monstrous concrete maze in which only cars could find their way.

"People didn't stand a chance," he said.

The prince has been expressing his views with greater determination on other issues as well: the creation of jobs and businesses, the building of homes that people would like to live in, the protection of the environment, and a united Europe where individual countries retain their own languages and culture.

"This man is deeply serious in the best sense, concerned with the quality of life," said Stephen O'Brien, chief executive of Business in the Community, another organization in which Charles is a very active president.

But there are other sides to the 21st Prince of Wales.

There's the action man who loves polo and skiing, who plummeted into the ocean in a tangled parachute, and who skied clear of an avalanche that killed one of his best friends.

There's the father who played at the seaside in the Spanish resort of Majorca with his sons, William, 6, and Harry, 4, and who took them to their first fox hunt on Saturday — enraging animal rights activists.

There's the husband whose relationship with his wife, Diana — repeatedly named one of the most beautiful and best-dressed women in the world — is chronicled daily in the tabloid press, regardless of any factual basis.

Charles' birthday ball was to be attended by 300 guests, including members of the royal family and King Olav of Norway. But it will be a non-royal whose presence is expected to delight the prince the most.

Patricia Palmer-Tomkinson, a close friend and skiing companion whose legs were shattered in the March avalanche, will be there.

Mansfield

Mansfield plans to resign from ambassador job

TOKYO (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield, one of Japan's best foreign friends, announced Monday he is retiring at age 85.

Mansfield, whose service to the United States started at 14 when he was an under-age enlistee in the Navy, told a packed news conference at the American Embassy that he and his wife Maureen had waited until after the U.S. presidential election to make their decision.

"We decided it was time for me to resign at the will of the president, and that has been done," he said.

Mansfield, a Montana Democrat, set longevity records in his 16 years as U.S. Senate majority leader and in his 11 years as envoy in the crucial Tokyo post under Presidents Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan.

In January, he had coronary bypass surgery, causing a renewal of speculation that he might retire, but he returned to the Tokyo Embassy last spring.

He said he would leave Tokyo before the first of the year.

Mansfield said he had waited for the resolution of the issue of U.S. rice imports to Japan, as well as the presidential election, before making his decision.

Washington has decided not to make an immediate attempt to force the opening of the Japanese rice market, a position endorsed by Mansfield, who has long touted the U.S.-Japan relationship as the most important to Washington — "bar none," he always says.

The situation is stable now between the two countries, he said, and he and his wife "can leave with our heads held high and our arms swinging."

Don't be an 'upside-down' antiques buyer

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Antiques

Antiques dealers who have booths at shows jokingly refer to "upside-down" buyers. These are the people who are interested only in the name on the bottom of the plate or silver teapot.

Keep your eyes open the next time you visit a show. You will see some pieces displayed with the mark showing to attract the upside-down buyers.

Be a right-side-up buyer. The bargains are pieces by still-unknown makers of talent. For example, most collectors of French cameo glass know the names Galle or Daum, but few recognize Delatte or De Vez. Yet pieces of great worth and artistic value were made by all four firms.

Learn to recognize the best of your type of collection. Then trust your own taste and buy the piece by the lesser-known maker.

Q. I am totally blind and want to collect tactile items with physically distinguishable differences. I have a coin collection but find it is not enough. I have been collecting small wooden replicas of historic buildings, but I would like to find something else.

I am in the industrial lumber products business. I am interested in antique automobiles, cabinetry and architecture.

A. We thought about this for a long time. You can find many antiques to collect that can be identified by touch. What about old woodworking tools such as planes or measures? You might even want to use them.

Toy cars and trucks of past years would also be good. A cast iron or potmetal car like Tootsietoy (first made in 1911) or Dinky toy (1924) or Hubley (1930s) often had a raised mark on the bottom. You must be sure that the paint on the toy is in good condition, but even that can be felt.

You might enjoy collecting tramp art, a type of folk art that dates from the early 20th century. The pieces are made from chip-cut cigar box wood. Forgeries are rare.

What about iron doorstops? You probably could tell the fakes better than most people, since the texture of the new cast iron is different.

Windmill weights, lightning rods, whirligigs, weathervanes, doorknockers and many other architectural remnants can also be found.

All this can be found at large antique shows. Visit and talk to the dealers. They will be glad to help. You will probably find other things that you like even better.

Q. At least a generation ago, I inherited a French curio cabinet my mother called "varnie." It has curved glass, two shelves, and is decorated with hand-painted flowers. On the lower part of the door are figures of a boy and girl.

A. You are probably referring to a cabinet finished with Vernis Martin, a type of French lacquer. In 1730 two brothers named Martin developed a varnish especially for use on furniture. It was made in many colors, including gray, lilac, yellow, blue and then their famous green. It was often used as a finish on narrow cabinets with curved glass fronts.

Many copies were made in the 1920s and 1930s, and some are still being made today.

Q. I have a low bowl with a separate flower frog. It is glazed blue with brown. The bottom is marked "The Ohio Pottery Co., Zanesville, Ohio, Petroskan."

A. The Ohio Pottery worked in Zanesville, Ohio from about 1900 to 1923. Petroskan was a trade name usually found on baking dishes. The factory was operated by the Fraunfelder China Company after 1923.

TIP: Rusty tin can be helped. Rinse the metal, scrub, dry, then coat with a thin layer of Vaseline.

For a copy of the Kovels' leaflet, "How to Refinish and Date a Trunk," send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Kovels, P.O. Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

CURRENT PRICES

Current prices are recorded at antique shows, sales, flea markets and auctions throughout the United States. Prices vary from place to place because of local economic conditions.

Matchbox toy car, Yesteryear, 1912 Simplex, green, with box, 1968: $32.

Jewelry, Illinois Bell employee, brooch, two diamonds, one ruby, bell symbol: $75.

Betty Boop doll, celluloid, movable arms, 8 inches: $95.

Bennington cuspidor, shell pattern, side vent, 8½ inches: $110.

Kerosene lamp, amber glass, Aquarius, original burner: $115.

Sterling silver yo-yo, Gorham: $125.

Rococo revival mirror, gilt-wood, elaborately carved grapevine leaf frame, circular glass plate, late 19th-early 20th century, 35 inches high: $352.

Arcade machine, "Poison This Rat," (Hitler), 1 cent, 1942: $475.

Cameo glass bowl, white, pink ground, flowers, leaves, butterfly, 4x3 inches: $1,800.

Criterion disc music box, floor model, carved oak, 15 original discs, 6½ feet: $8,000.

Quality is apparent in this glass and wrought iron vase with parrot handles. It was made about 1925 by Andre Delatte, a French cameo glass maker in Nancy, France. (Sotheby's, New York)

Being affectionate to children is a problem for some moms

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter from "Feeling Guilty" — the mother who couldn't bring herself to show love to her 15-year-old daughter. I know exactly how she feels.

For the first four or five years of my son's life, I simply could not show him any affection and I was miserable because I couldn't do anything about it. Deep down I really loved Tommy and would have killed anyone who tried to harm him. Yet I held him at arm's length. Why? Because I was crazy in love with his father, "Mike," who ordered me to get an abortion when I told him I was pregnant. (We were not married.) I considered an abortion, made all the arrangements, but couldn't go through with it at the last minute. That cost me my relationship with Mike.

I married someone else for all the wrong reasons, but that marriage didn't last long.

As time went on, I found myself being unreasonably hostile to Tommy. It got so bad that I actually gave him to a friend for a few days so I could get my head screwed on straight. After hours of soul-searching and praying, God finally spoke to my heart. He said, "You are blaming Tommy for being born and coming between you and Mike." When I finally admitted it to myself, it was as though a heavy weight was lifted from my shoulders.

Tommy is 11 now, and I'll never forget one day about three years ago, we were driving down the street, and I just felt like reaching over, giving him a pat and saying, "I love you." He turned toward me, his big brown eyes filled with tears, and said, "Mommy, I don't remember ever hearing you say that before." Abby, that just about broke my heart. Imagine being 7 years old and never hearing your mom say "I love you" before.

From that day on, I changed my ways and have said "I love you" every day. And you know what? I really do.

NO MORE GUILT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago you had a letter in your column from a man who wanted to go to medical school but hesitated because he would be "X" years old after 10 years of schooling. You asked him, "And how old will you be in 10 years if you DON'T go to medical school?"

Abby, I have always wanted to go to law school, but my then-husband discouraged me, so after we were divorced, I promised myself that as soon as I got on my feet again, I'd go back to school. The months, then the years, began slipping away, and I began to think that I was too old (early 30s) to pursue a law career. Your answer to the potential medical student was just what I needed to jolt me to my senses. I immediately enrolled in college part-time so I could continue to work. I attended classes evenings and summers. When I graduated (magna cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa), I was able to quit my job and attend law school full time.

Next May I will graduate, and although I am a bit older than my classmates, there are several who are even older than I am.

Thank you, Abby. You made my career!

BARBARA J. CLAIRE, WATERFORD, CONN.

DEAR BARBARA: Thank you. Your letter made my day.

A LOOK AT 4-H PHILOSOPHY

4-H is a distinctively American, non-formal educational, character- and skills-building youth program conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

4-H is keyed to the development of individual boys and girls so that they may become productive, contributing citizens. 4-H lays a broad and firm base for a lifetime of personal growth.

The purpose of 4-H is to develop young people through the involvement of parents, other adults and volunteers who organize and conduct learning experiences in a community setting. The focus is on human interaction designed to develop skills, abilities and understandings in youths and adults as participating and influential members of their community. The central aim is for youths to acquire a set of skills for perceiving and responding to life's significant events.

Through 4-H, boys and girls discover an active method of turning their time into productive projects, identify with others their own age and other ages, acquire an interest and understanding of the private enterprise system, participate in meaningful and often physical work, and build strong family relationships.

4-H is effective because its educational services relate to youth's needs. Through informal, practical, learning-by-doing programs, 4-H helps boys and girls establish real-life goals and skills and become competent, productive citizens. The home, local club and community are the training grounds in which 4-H participants develop knowledge, skills and attitudes.

4-H, as an ever-renewing movement, takes pride in its contributions to American society for more than 75 years. It is not easy for a youngster to develop a realistic sense of his own individuality and yet have an awareness of his social role and responsibilities.

Youths who participate in 4-H will develop some capacity to function as generalists, no matter how they may later choose to specialize. A pattern of success built upon hard work spawns inner resources which permit young people to cope with unforeseen challenges and to survive as versatile, capable individuals in an unpredictable world. Youths so educated will assure the necessary flexibility, adaptability and innovation for society.

Participation in the 4-H program is voluntary and open to all interested boys and girls who are between the ages of 9 (or in the third grade) and 19, regardless of race, color, creed, national origin or handicap.

Panhandle Piecemakers Quilt Guild

Panhandle Piecemakers Quilt Guild met at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 27 in the Hobby Shop meeting room.

President Starla Nicholson led the meeting, with 17 members and one guest attending. Nicholson reported that the Amarillo Quilt Show would be Nov. 5-6 at the Civic Center.

Nicholson also reported that Perryton is trying to form a quilt guild. They were planning their first meeting for 10 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 9 at the Perryton library. Nicholson was to attend the meeting, and invited anyone interested to go with her.

A logo for the Pampa guild was discussed, and two different patterns were displayed. Nicholson and Jean McCarley will work on trying to combine the patterns to form one logo.

Plans were discussed for possible projects for next year, including a friendship quilt or a similar project, and a fall bazaar.

It was announced that the deadline for the next newsletter is Nov. 18.

Jean McCarley presented a program on possible Christmas projects. She distributed patterns and showed samples of a Christmas tree wall hanging, Christmas tablecloths, table runners, placemats and napkins.

During Show and Tell, Mary Alice Curl showed a crazy patch quilt made by her sister, Leona Woods. Ferline Calvert displayed a Little Boy quilt top. Betty Baxter showed a string quilt top that is a nine-patch variation, and a Little Dutch Girl quilt that she received as a wedding present. The squares were made around 1932 and quilted in 1952.

Trudy Davis showed some crazy patch blocks that were pieced by her mother over 50 years ago and which she plans to make into wall hangings for her children. She also showed a crocheted table runner and doilies which came from India around 1943 or 1944.

The next meeting will be the November and December meetings combined, at 7 p.m. Dec. 8 in the Flame Room of Energas Company. Guests will be welcome. Members are to bring snacks and handmade items for a Christmas gift exchange.

Card sales aid cancer center

AMARILLO — Christmas cards designed by area students are still available from Circle of Friends, a non-profit Amarillo-based volunteer organization founded to help support the needs of Harrington Cancer Center patients.

The cards, which sell for $8.50 for a box of 20, have yielded more than $27,000 to needy patients over the past five years. The money has gone directly to providing necessities such as food, shelter and traveling expenses.

The cards, called "The Caring Touch Collection," are offered through Amarillo's Harrington Cancer Center, Nieman Marcus Department Stores and a number of civic groups. Also, exclusive cards are made available to businesses and other organizations.

One of the six designs available this year in the general collection was drawn by Lisa McNeely of Pampa High School.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In-laws or parents could be a trifle more difficult to deal with today. Try not to do anything that could divide your household into two armed camps. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might be associated with someone today whose methods and tactics are contrary to yours. Take care in this arrangement, because you could be bludgeoned by this person's mistakes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Opportunities that will be difficult to recognize could develop for you today through an unusual chain of events. If you're not alert and observant, however, they will count for little.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your image and reputation are rather fragile today, so be mindful of your behavior, especially where your career is concerned. Stains made at this time will be hard to eradicate.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your hunches and perceptions regarding ways to further your ambitions could be slightly off target today. Don't let your emotions override your logical evaluations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your desires are limited to material matters today, some disappointments are likely. Broaden your horizons and think about enriching your spirit as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Associates will assist you today because they want to, and like you, not because they feel obligated. In fact, being demanding could have an opposite effect.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to take yourself or your involvements too seriously today. If you let yourself get uptight, your behavior could be self-defeating.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you may prefer to do otherwise, it's best that you manage important matters for yourself today rather than look for someone to ease your burdens for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Associate today only with people with whom you are in harmony. If you get tied up with someone who is abrasive, small differences could lead to mammoth oppositions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you have a tough assignment confronting you today, analyze its problems in advance. Don't dive into a pool before you know the depth of the water.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be very careful today about handling business situations with risky elements. If you get reckless or careless, your impulsiveness could create serious complications.

Sweeney gets rude welcome

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Kevin Sweeney was welcomed to the "real" NFL on Sunday night by the Minnesota Vikings who inflicted the fourth worst loss in history on the Dallas Cowboys.

Minnesota cashed seven turnovers into a 43-3 rout and stayed alive in the NFC Central Division with a 7-4 record.

Dallas suffered its seventh consecutive loss and dropped to 2-9.

The Vikings intercepted Sweeney four times, sacked him five times, and recovered two of his fumbles in an experience he called "humiliating to say the least."

Sweeney was the hero of two strike replacement game victories last year and earned his first starting berth in a regular game last Sunday with three scoring passes against the New York Giants in the second half.

Wade Wilson threw three touchdown passes. Hassan Jones caught scoring passes of 26 and 64 yards and Steve Jordan shagged a 3-yarder as the Vikings put a damper on the crowd of 57,830 fans in Texas Stadium.

The Vikings held Sweeney to only 10 of 28 completions for 93 yards. They sacked him for a safety and one of his fumbles was picked up by Henry Thomas who ran 3-yards for a touchdown.

"I wish I had a yo-yo string on some of my passes," Sweeney said. "I did some stupid things but Minnesota has a great defense. I've been hit hard a lot of times but this ranks with the best."

Minnesota coach Jerry Burns said he was concerned about Sweeney.

"It was a tough deal for Sweeney going in like that with the pass rush we put on," Burns said. "Our people really swarmed him but I feel he will be a good quarterback."

Minnesota defensive end Chris Doleman said the game plan was to pressure Sweeney into mistakes.

"I was chasing him hard all day," Doleman said. "Even though he threw some interceptions and made his mistakes, I think they might have something in him. We did what we wanted to do and that was keep him off-balance."

Wilson hit 12 of 27 passes for 240 yards but praised his defense.

"Our defense is what won the game," Wilson said. "They put pressure on Sweeney. When we play like this we can play with anybody in the league."

Dallas coach Tom Landry didn't blame Sweeney for the loss.

"Sweeney just didn't have a chance," Landry said. "They just unloaded on him after they got an early lead. He tried as hard as he could but he just didn't have a chance. He got worked over because he had no protection."

Dallas offensive guard Crawford Ker said, "You can't get any lower than this right now. It wasn't Kevin's fault. He just never had a chance."

Dallas running back Herschel Walker called the loss "embarrassing. Nobody can blame Kevin for happened."

The Vikings remained two games behind the Chicago Bears in the NFC Central and in the race for a wildcard spot.

"It was great beating the Cowboys even if they are 2-9," said Minnesota wide receiver Anthony Carter. "You always want to keep a team down when they're down."

Strong safety Joey Browner said the Vikings are making their championship run.

"We are playing at our peak right now," he said. "The whole team played a complete game against the Cowboys. We just shut them down."

Sweeney agreed, saying "I gave it my best and it hurts."

Sweeney takes one of his frequent trips to the turf as Al Baker (79) sacks him for a safety in the fourth quarter.

Seahawks trip Houston, 27-24

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — For the time being at least, the Seattle Seahawks will go for Dave Krieg's floaters over rookie Kelly Stouffer's missiles.

"Once you get out there a little bit, you feel comfortable again," Krieg said after his triumphant return as the Seattle Seahawks' quarterback Sunday. "I still had confidence I could do the job."

Coach Chuck Knox decided to go with Krieg's experience over Stouffer in an effort to put some offense back in the Seahawks' game plan.

It worked, too.

The Seahawks' offense scored three touchdowns and Norm Johnson kicked a pair of field goals, including a 46-yarder with one second left, in a 27-24 win over the Houston Oilers.

"My shoulder feels great," said Krieg, who suffered a separated shoulder in Game 3 in San Diego when he was run over by defensive end Lee Williams.

"I got tapped a couple of times today, but nothing really serious. It's a game we needed to win to stay in first place in our division."

Held to a Johnson field goal in a 13-3 loss to Buffalo in the Kingdome a week earlier, the Seahawks got big days from Krieg and fullback John L. Williams.

Krieg completed 14 of 26 passes for 188 yards, including a 23-yard touchdown pass to rookie Brian Blades in the opening quarter. Williams rushed for 102 yards on 13 carries and tied the score at 24 with a 44-yard touchdown run with 8:17 to go.

Although Krieg doesn't have the velocity of the hard-throwing Stouffer, he has a way of coming up with points, something Stouffer was struggling to do. Krieg's return was welcomed back heartily by his teammates.

"I'm just excited about Dave coming back and playing," said Williams. "We can do some things we weren't able to do with Kelly. Krieg's experience allows us to open things up a little more."

The Seahawks, 6-5, drove 53 yards in 10 plays in 4 minutes, 49 seconds before Johnson kicked his game-winning field goal.

Knox let the time run down and called a timeout with four seconds left with the Seahawks on the Houston 28. It was only third down and he could have gotten closer with another running play, but he once lost a game when he was coaching Buffalo against Tampa Bay in 1982.

Johnson, in his eighth season with the Seahawks, remembered.

"Chuck lost a game once trying to run the ball and they fumbled," he recalled. "So I was ready because whenever he gets within my range, he goes for the field goal instead of the extra running play."

"You don't know what's going to happen on third down," said Knox.

On a day when all five AFC West teams won after all five lost the previous week, the Seahawks improved their record to 6-5 to stay in a tie for first place with the Los Angeles Raiders and Denver.

The loss kept the Oilers, 7-4, from moving into a first-place tie with Cincinnati in the AFC Central.

Houston had a lot of statistics — 419 total yards and 22 first downs — but it wasn't enough. The Oilers only had to punt twice.

Houston's second punt came in the fourth quarter with the score tied at 24 and went into the end zone. The Seahawks took over with 4:50 left and drove to the Houston 28 before Johnson kicked his second field goal of the game.

Warren Moon completed 13 of 22 passes for 182 yards, including a 57-yard touchdown pass to Drew Hill in the opening quarter, and put the Oilers ahead 24-17 with an 11-yard touchdown run with 3:13 gone in the fourth quarter.

Allen Pinkett scored on a 2-yard run and Tony Zendejas kicked a 52-yard field goal for Houston's other points.

Seattle also scored on a 40-yard Johnson field goal and a 3-yard touchdown run by Curt Warner.

The Seahawks made two big defensive plays in the first half that ended tied at 10 that could have seen two more Houston touchdowns.

Mike Rozier was stopped for a 1-yard loss by Ken Clarke on fourth-and-1 on the Seattle 6 with 1:30 left in the half. Alonzo Highsmith's 42-yard run had given Seattle the ball at the 26.

Houston's players refused to second guess their coach, Jerry Glanville.

"We think we can make a yard on anyone," said Moon. "Hindsight is 20-20. You can't look back that far in the game and say it was the turning point."

But Clarke saw it differently.

"That play gave us a lift and I'm sure it was a letdown for them," he said. "They pride themselves on physical play, but we shut them down when we had to."

In the second quarter, Houston moved to the Seattle 4-yard line after nose tackle Richard Byrd intercepted Krieg at the Seahawks' 9. But Moon was intercepted by Paul Moyer in the end zone just two plays after the Byrd interception.

"The blitz was on and I just stepped in front of my man (Hill)," said Moyer.

Steve Largent of the Seahawks extended his NFL receiving record to 163 consecutive regular-season games, catching two passes for 46 yards.

In his return to the playing field after a two-game absence following arthroscopic shoulder surgery, Brian Bosworth had four tackles as a starting Seattle linebacker.

The Oilers wasted an outstanding rushing performance by Highsmith, who had 80 yards on nine carries.

"There were so many things that could have happened," he said. "Whoever had the ball last was going to win this game and Seattle had the ball last."

Glanville wanted to talk about Knox, whose Seahawks are over .500 this season despite having many injury problems.

"Chuck Knox has never changed," Glanville said. "If he's not the best coach in this league, I don't know who is."

Sports Notebook

✓ In Pampa's 28-6 win over Borger Friday night, ball control was a key factor in the season-ending victory.

"Both teams had the same game plan, but we had very good movement in our offensive line. Those James Bybee to David Fields handoffs, as well as to other backs also, resulted in constant movement of the chains," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier.

Pampa had only one more possession (7-6) than Borger but big plays on offense and an aggressive Harvester defense made the difference.

Two roughing the punter penalties on Borger also aided Pampa's cause. One helped the Harvesters get out of a hole deep in their own territory and the other one kept a Pampa scoring drive going.

While Pampa's offense, led by Fields' 190 yards, churned out 446 total yards, the Pampa defense also did its job. Borger was limited to only 192 yards in total offense. Linebacker Brad Hinkle, nose guard Chris Didway, ends Jason Cameron, Jayme Farina and Chris Ickles, in addition to Michael Bradshaw and Kerry Brown drew special praise from Cavalier.

✓ Levelland edged Frenship 15-14 Friday night to win the District 1-4A football championship. Levelland meets Monahans at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Odessa in area playoffs. District runners-up Hereford goes against Sweetwater at 8 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

✓ Dumas defeated Pecos in the Region I-4A Volleyball Tournament Saturday to advance to the state tournament. It's the first trip to the state tournament for the Dumas girls, who are on an 18-match winning streak.

✓ The Pampa Harvesters open the basketball season this week and tickets go on sale today to the general public. Tickets are $30 and can be purchased at the high school athletic office. Both Pampa teams play at Dalhart on Friday with the girls' game starting at 6:30 p.m., followed by the boys at 8 p.m. On Saturday, Pampa hosts Perryton with the girls' varsity game starting at 5 p.m.

✓ The West Texas State football team finished the season with a 2-8 record. The Buffaloes lost to Abilene Christian 51-37 Saturday in the season finale.

Cards tied for NFC East lead

By The Associated Press

Phoenix reached the top of the NFC East, but if the Cardinals stay there, it probably will be without Neil Lomax.

Lomax threw for 353 yards and two touchdowns Sunday but injured his left knee in the fourth quarter as Phoenix beat New York 24-17 Sunday and tied the Giants for first place.

"The doctors tell me it's a partial tear of the ligament," Lomax said. "I've been told to keep the knee elevated for the next 10 days and I might be out anywhere from three to four weeks."

Lomax, who already has had problems this season with an arthritic left hip, twisted his knee on a 44-yard touchdown pass to Roy Green with 13:16 left that put Phoenix ahead 21-7.

Cliff Stoudt came in for Phoenix, 7-4, which won its third straight.

"Cliff can do the job if I'm not in there," said Lomax, who completed 23 of 35 passes. "We deserve to be in first place. We've beaten a lot of good football teams. We beat a great team today."

In other games, Chicago beat Washington 34-14, Kansas City beat Cincinnati 31-28, Indianapolis beat Green Bay 20-13, New England beat the New York Jets 14-13, Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh 27-26, San Diego beat Atlanta 10-7, Tampa Bay beat Detroit 23-20, the Los Angeles Raiders beat San Francisco 9-3, New Orleans beat the Los Angeles Rams 14-10, Denver beat Cleveland 30-7, Seattle beat Houston 27-24 and Minnesota beat Dallas 43-3. Buffalo is at Miami tonight.

Cardinals 24, Giants 17
New York closed to within 21-14 on Ottis Anderson's 1-yard run with 8:15 remaining, but Al Del Greco kicked a 28-yard field goal with 4:03 left.

"They made the plays they had to," Giants coach Bill Parcells said. "Green hurt us. He's their biggest weapon. He's a game-breaker."

Paul McFadden's 40-yard field goal with 1:50 to play cut the deficit to a touchdown but New York couldn't get the ball back.

Bears 34, Redskins 14
Mike Tomczak and Matt Suhey ran for first-half touchdowns as Chicago, 9-2, took a 20-0 halftime lead in coach Mike Ditka's return to the sidelines following a heart attack 11 days ago.

"I admit I got a little tired in the first half. I think it was the sun and the sweater," said Ditka, who left the actual coaching to Vince Tobin. "I felt terrific in the second half."

"He doesn't have to stand up and coach — he has a tremendous presence," Bears safety Dave Duerson said.

Doug Williams completed 6 of 19 passes for 68 yards for Washington, 6-5, before leaving early in the third quarter. Mark Rypien came in and threw two touchdown passes but was intercepted four times.

Chiefs 31, Bengals 28
Albert Lewis blocked a punt and recovered a fumble in the final six minutes as Kansas City, 2-9-1, overcame a 28-19 deficit. The Chiefs won on Nick Lowery's fifth field goal, a 39-yarder with two seconds left.

Lewis blocked a punt out of the end zone to pull the Chiefs to within 28-21 with 6:06 remaining. After Christian Okoye's 1-yard run tied the score 28-28, Lewis recovered a fumble by Cincinnati's Marc Logan on the kickoff at the Bengals' 28.

Cincinnati, 8-3, took a 28-16 lead in the third quarter on Stanford Jennings' club record 98-yard kickoff return.

Colts 20, Packers 13
Chris Chandler threw touchdown passes of 24 yards to Mark Boyer and four yards to Matt Bouza, both after Green Bay fumbles, and Harvey Armstrong batted down Don Majkowski's pass on the final play as the Colts won their fifth straight.

Green Bay, 2-9, pulled to within 20-13 with 42 seconds left on Majkowski's 3-yard pass to Aubrey Matthews, the Packers' first touchdown in 13 quarters. Green Bay then recovered an onside kick at the Colts' 49 and moved to the 4.

Indianapolis is 6-5.

Patriots 14, Jets 13
Doug Flutie threw a 19-yard touchdown to Stanley Morgan on the second play of the second half to give New England a 7-3 lead after Larry McGrew intercepted a Ken O'Brien pass.

John Stephens made it 14-6 when he scored on a 3-yard sweep with 6:48 remaining to cap a 58-yard, 10-play drive. New York, 5-1, made it close on Freeman McNeil's 6-yard touchdown run with 2:06 left. New England, 6-5, won its first road game this year in five tries.

Eagles 27, Steelers 26
Philadelphia's Luis Zendejas kicked an 18-yard field goal with 1:15 left as Pittsburgh, 2-9, lost for the ninth time in 10 games.

Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham ran 12 and 7 yards for touchdowns on broken plays, then passed 41 yards to Cris Carter to set up the game-winning field goal.

Reggie Singletary preserved the victory by blocking Gary Anderson's 57-yard field goal attempt on the final play. Anderson had kicked four field goals.

Chargers 10, Falcons 7
Rod Bernstein ran 57 yards with a short pass from Mark Vlasic to set up Barry Redden's 5-yard touchdown run with 4:32 to play that gave the Chargers a 10-point lead.

San Diego, 3-8, snapped a six-game losing streak. Atlanta, 3-8, had won two straight.

Bucs 23, Lions 20
Donald Igwebuikie kicked a 52-yard field goal with 10 seconds remaining as Tampa Bay, 3-8, crawled out of the NFC Central basement. Detroit and Green Bay, each 2-9, replaced the Bucs.

Lars Tate scored on a 5-yard run and Igwebuikie, who also had a 23-yarder in the second quarter, kicked a 22-yard field goal, putting the Bucs ahead 20-13 with 2:10 remaining. The Lions went 70 yards in seven plays and tied the score 20-20 on a 19-yard pass from Rusty Hilger to Garry James with 45 seconds remaining.

The game drew only 25,956, the Lions' smallest non-strike crowd since moving to the Silverdome in 1975.

Raiders 9, 49ers 3
Chris Bahr kicked field goals of 45, 50 and 19 yards as Los Angeles, 6-5, kept pace with Denver and Seattle in the battle for first in the AFC West.

San Francisco, also 6-5, trails New Orleans by two games and the Los Angeles Rams by a game in the NFC West. Mike Cofer kicked a 44-yard field goal in the second quarter for the 49ers' only points.

Saints 14, Rams 10
Bobby Hebert completed 22 of 37 passes for 249 yards as New Orleans, 8-3, took over first in the NFC West. Gene Atkins sealed the victory when he intercepted Jim Everett's pass in the end zone with 50 seconds remaining.

Dalton Hilliard ran for a 4-yard touchdown and Rueben Mayes rushed for a 3-yard TD.

Los Angeles, 7-4, rushed for just 64 yards and New Orleans ran for just 88.

Broncos 30, Browns 7
John Elway threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Orson Mobley and a 5-yarder to Steve Sewell as Denver, 6-5, took a 30-0 halftime lead and beat Cleveland for the 10th straight time.

Gerald Willhite ran for a 1-yard touchdown and Rich Karlis kicked three field goals. Earnest Byner scored on a 2-yard run for Cleveland, 6-5, which turned the ball over four times in the first half.

Notre Dame, West Virginia set SWC roundup for showdown at Fiesta Bowl

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Football Writer

For the second time in three years, the Fiesta Bowl has lined up what it hopes will be a national championship game.

On Jan. 2, No. 1 Notre Dame will play No. 4 West Virginia at Sun Devil Stadium in Tempe, Ariz.

"It's done," a high-ranking member of the Fiesta Bowl selection committee told the Associated Press.

He also said there are no conditional deals, which means the Fiesta Bowl could wind up with a couple of also-rans if Notre Dame loses either of its last two regular-season games against Penn State and undefeated second-ranked Southern California and West Virginia drops its finale to once-beaten No. 15 Syracuse.

That scenario, of course, is just what the other bowls are hoping for.

Like the Rose Bowl, which will have the winner of next Saturday's Pac-10 showdown between Southern Cal and No. 6 UCLA against No. 13 Michigan, the Big Ten champion.

Or the Orange Bowl, which will pair third-ranked Miami with the winner of Saturday's Big Eight shootout between No. 7 Nebraska and No. 8 Oklahoma. Miami won the 1987 national championship by defeating Oklahoma 20-14 in the Orange Bowl.

Or the Sugar and Cotton Bowls, one of which will have No. 5 Florida State, depending on the USC-UCLA game. If USC wins, UCLA will play No. 11 Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl. If UCLA wins, USC will meet the Southeastern Conference champion, either No. 9 Auburn or No. 12 LSU, in the Sugar Bowl. Florida State will go to whichever of those bowls does not get the Pac-10 runner-up.

There was a rumor on Sunday which proved to be unfounded that West Virginia had to beat Syracuse to get a Fiesta Bowl bid.

West Virginia athletic director Fred Schaus said Saturday following the Mountaineers' 35-25 victory over Rutgers that "we want a definite commitment."

The Fiesta Bowl decided to give him one, even though the official invitation can not be extended until next Saturday.

Notre Dame was No. 1 on every bowl's list and the Irish were expected to make an announcement today to the effect that they will accept the Fiesta's bid on an "if invited" basis.

"What bowl can we go to to possibly enhance our standing?" Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said, resorting to some fancy double-talk. "Winning the national championship is nice. It's not an absolute necessity and it's not something everyone's obsessed with, but if you are going to do something in tradition with Notre Dame's history . . . let's be the best we possibly can be."

Don Meyers, chairman of the Fiesta Bowl selection committee, told The New York Times in Monday's editions that the bowl would be rescheduled to Jan. 3 at 8 p.m. EST if Notre Dame and West Virginia remain unbeaten.

The bowls usually are set a week or so in advance of the official selection date and this year was no exception. The lineup looks like this:

Fiesta Bowl — Notre Dame-West Virginia.

Rose — Southern Cal-UCLA winner vs. Michigan, which defeated Illinois 38-9 on Saturday and captured the Big Ten crown.

Orange — Nebraska-Oklahoma winner vs. Miami.

Sugar — Auburn or LSU vs. Southern Cal or Florida State.

Cotton — Arkansas vs. Florida State or UCLA.

Citrus — Nebraska-Oklahoma loser vs. Clemson, which beat Maryland 49-25 for its third straight Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Hall of Fame — Auburn or LSU

vs. Syracuse.

Holiday — Wyoming-Oklahoma State.

Sun — Alabama-Army.

Aloha — Washington State-Houston.

Gator — Georgia vs. Michigan State, if the Spartans beat Wisconsin.

All American — Florida vs. Illinois, if the Illini beat Northwestern.

Liberty — Indiana-South Carolina.

Freedom — Brigham Young-Colorado.

Peach — Iowa-North Carolina State.

Independence — Southern Mississippi vs. Pitt, Wake Forest or Texas El-Paso.

California — Western Michigan-Fresno State.

Lions fire head coach

The Detroit Lions, who lost to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 23-20 on Sunday, have fired head coach Darryl Rogers. The Lions have posted a 2-9 record so far this season.

His interim replacement is Wayne Fontes, defensive coordinator of the NFL club.

The toughest could be yet to come, but Arkansas can at least go to the Cotton Bowl knowing it has taken no shortcuts after chalking up a victory over its last Southwest Conference opponent.

The Razorbacks on Saturday became the first team since 1983 to go through the SWC football race unbeaten when they beat defending champion Texas A&M 25-20 in Fayetteville on homecoming.

The probation-stained Aggies had claimed the best team wouldn't be going to the Cotton Bowl unless Arkansas beat them. Texas A&M is ineligible for post-season play because of NCAA probation.

"The best team in the conference is going after all," said placekicker Kendall Trainor, who kicked five field goals and now has 22 in a row.

The 11th-ranked Hogs (10-0) also could crack the Associated Press top 10 for the first time this season thanks to the Houston Cougars, who routed previously unbeaten Wyoming 34-10 in the Astrodome.

The Razorbacks won little respect from the Aggies on Saturday, however.

"Arkansas is not a top 10 team," said A&M linebacker Dana Batiste. "We played some top teams like Nebraska, LSU, and Oklahoma State and Arkansas doesn't match up."

Arkansas safety Steve Atwater said, "They did the talking but we let our actions talk for us."

The Razorbacks will play either UCLA or Florida State in the Cotton Bowl Classic on Jan. 2. But Arkansas' last regular season game is Nov. 26 against Miami, who whipped the Razorbacks 51-7 last year.

Houston manhandled the Cowboys, the previously unblemished Western Athletic Conference champions. The Cougars had 16 sacks, nine by defensive tackle Glenn Montgomery.

Houston's victory should earn the Cougars a bid to the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu Christmas Day against Washington State.

Houston (7-2) could make the top 20.

"I think we could jump up to number 15," said Houston coach Jack Pardee. "We should have some kind of respect now, beating the 10th-ranked team that was unbeaten on national television. If we had any proving to do, I think we did it."

Wyoming coach Paul Roach said "We were simply dominated by their defense. I don't think we were totally ready to play."

Houston Rockets drop Sacramento

HOUSTON (AP) — Otis Thorpe was traded a month ago from the Sacramento Kings to the Houston Rockets for Rodney McCray and the injured Jim Petersen.

In the first meeting of the teams since the trade, Thorpe and McCray provided a sub-plot in the Rockets' 129-127 NBA victory Sunday night.

Thorpe scored 18 points, grabbed 18 rebounds and had four steals, while McCray hit a career-high 29 points and added 12 rebounds and seven assists.

"I don't have to prove anything to them," Thorpe said of his old Sacramento team. "I had four good years there. They wrote me out of their book and it's a part of my past."

"They always say the guys you trade come back to haunt you," Houston coach Don Chaney said.

"I admire the way the Houston fans welcomed him back. No doubt that pumped him up. McCray was inspired and he was overdue for a good game," Chaney said referring to McCray's 0-15 showing against Utah four nights earlier.

But Chaney also felt Thorpe was primed for the Kings.

"Otis played extremely well and his concentration level was really perked up for them."

McCray said he did feel comfortable in the setting.

"Houston's fans made me feel like they appreciated what I did here for five years. I felt at home and I wanted to play hard and get a good game under my belt. We almost pulled it out and if you go around the room here and ask all these guys, they'll tell you we should have won."

The win was Houston's fourth straight after the Rockets lost their first two games of the young season. Sacramento was trying to win its first game after an 0-4 start.

Houston was down by as much as 17 points in the first half and didn't grab its first lead until early in the fourth quarter.

Akeem Olajuwon scored five of his game-high 34 points in the final minute to build a 129-123 Houston lead with only 12 seconds remaining.

But Sacramento still almost pulled out a win.

The Kings' Kenny Smith hit a lay-up with 8 seconds left, then stole the in-bounds pass and fed McCray for a lay-up that cut Houston's lead to 129-127 with 3 seconds still on the clock.

McCray missed the free throw on purpose, and Vinny Del Negro grabbed the rebound. But Houston's Mike Woodson blocked Del Negro's 7-foot baseline jumper at the buzzer that would have sent the game into overtime.

Woodson scored 26 points for Houston. Sleepy Floyd had 18 points and 15 assists, and Derrick Chievous had 21 points. LaSalle Thompson had 24 points and 11 rebounds for the Kings, while Derek Smith contributed 22 and Kenny Smith 21.

Judge, wife face off in courtroom

HOUSTON (AP) — George and Elizabeth Godwin face each other across the dinner table night after night, but now the two may face off in the courtroom, where George may have to pass judgment on his wife's work.

Godwin won election last week as judge for the 174th District in Harris County. His wife is the chief of the district attorney's juvenile division.

In his position, the newly elected judge may be asked to preside over trials of juvenile defendants for whom his wife has sought to be certified for trial as adults.

Godwin said he will disqualify himself in the event a case in which his wife has a special interest lands in his court. "I'm sure I can arrange a swap," he said. "We can handle it."

Mrs. Godwin agreed, saying, "I can't imagine him being influenced by the fact that I'd filed a case."

District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. acknowledged that having a prosecutor married to a district judge is a novel situation for the county.

"There are 22 district courts and only 25 certifications a year here, so I don't see it as that much of a problem," Holmes said.

Like most attorneys who work around criminal courts, the Godwins are outspoken, opinionated people who can be highly argumentative.

"My wife and I don't agree on many things," Godwin admitted. "But that's life, and our marriage will probably survive."

But at home, Mrs. Godwin stressed, they seldom discuss state and defense viewpoints on cases.

Godwin said he is a Democrat turned rabid Republican, while he said his wife is a Democrat he's trying to convert.

Corsicana librarian has musical alter ego as a 'Lone Tone'

By NANCY ASHBURN
Corsicana Daily Sun

CORSICANA (AP)—Hidden within us all there is a second identity, a second self that emerges as a complete surprise.

You have Clark Kent, who is really Superman. You have Dr. Jekyll, who is the clever monster, Mr. Hyde. And now, in Corsicana, you have Greg Hill, a librarian who really is ... a "Lone Tone."

With a reputation of doo-whaps and bee-bops, Greg Hill, director of the Corsicana Public Library, "gets a spleen full" of the show biz bug that bit him some eight years ago.

The legacy of the "Lone Tones" began in 1980, when after a hard-hitting soccer game in Austin, Hill and teammates "were just kicking around a ball" and playing a new game of sorts.

"We were thinking of all those old songs that 'everybody knows' but 'nobody can ever remember.' We started singing and a few of our voices blended," said Hill, who along with the five other Lone Tones is a member of the Men's North American Soccer League.

The entertainment director for the Austin Women's Soccer League heard them and asked them to perform at an upcoming banquet appropriately called "The Soccer Ball."

"We really didn't take it seriously until the week before, so we took some old 'bee-bop' tunes and rewrote the lyrics so that we sang soccer lyrics instead," said Hill.

According to Hill, the group donned soccer balls on their heads and stenciled soccer balls on their shirts for that first performance and have added a touch of theatrics to subsequent performances from time to time.

The name "Lone Tones" came from its beginnings in the capital of the Lone Star State and is based on the fact that the group uses absolutely no musical instruments or accompaniment.

"In fact, there are only a couple of the guys who know how to read music. We just listen to a song over and over again until a part comes to us, then we get together and sing," said Hill, who is the lead and tenor of the group.

From that night, the reputation of the Lone Tones grew in Austin and the surrounding suburbs. The group finally gained a professional status at the Paramount Theatre in Austin in 1981 as part of Esther's Follies.

"Our goal starting out was to get paid for performing at the Paramount and to cut a record. Well, we've gotten paid at the Paramount, so I guess it's time to cut a record," said Hill.

The six-man group is made of college graduates, ages 27 to 38 with occupations that range from waiter, salesman and public utilities analyst to, of course, librarian.

"My experience with the Lone Tones has opened up a world for me that I otherwise wouldn't have known, but it's a hobby, and it doesn't consume me," he said.

Hill, who plays right fullback for the soccer team, spends one weekend a month performing in an average of six shows and topping Sunday off with a soccer game with his cronies.

"My wife hates it. In fact, she started a 'I Hate the Lone Tones Club' a while back. That's why I only perform with the group once a month."

Born in Abilene, Hill and wife of 15 years, Clare, moved to Austin in 1975 after he completed graduate school.

"I heard about this soccer team that was forming ... and that's how it all began." Five years later, they were singing soccer stars.

The Hills have four young children, Hannah, 7; Gabriel, 5; Leah, 2; and Mariam, 6 months. He says they made the move to Corsicana to "put down roots."

"I prefer working in this size library," he said. Hill displays as much fervor for his 6,000-year-old profession as for his hobby.

"The library is really an untapped resource. Business can really get an edge by utilizing the data in the library, and anyone can come into town and find out all they could want to know about the town at the library as a resource. Used to be, librarians tried to keep people out of the library. I'm trying to get them back in," he said.

Hill said that he has talked with the Navarros Council of the Arts in regard to a possible Lone Tones performance in Corsicana. "We like to get paid, but we do a lot of free performances just because we love what we're doing and we have so much fun," said Hill.

Recently the group performed at the Laguna Gloria Museum in Austin and at the Pflugerville Pflugerville, a suburb of Austin. The group does many benefit performances and has even performed with Boz Scaggs at a wedding in Midland.

"You really have high highs and low lows in show biz but we never let it get to us the way that a lot of performers do. We just get up there and have a good time."

One of the "high highs" Hill refers to occurred when the group was in its second year and they "jammed" with their idol group, the Persuasions.

"We made the trip to Dallas just to hear the Persuasions, when the lead singer asked if anyone in the audience could sing like the Persuasions. We all got up and went on stage. At 2 a.m., we were still singing with them in the parking lot."

The Lone Tones started out using Persuasions arrangements and have since developed their own. "We primarily sing pop songs from the '50's but we sing country-western, gospel and reggae."

"We pick up the numbers we want to perform and listen to them over and over. A part will naturally come to us," Hill said.

Bishops say they won't stop speaking on issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Along with congratulations, the nation's Roman Catholic bishops are sending President-elect George Bush a reminder they will speak out firmly on national issues and not "only in praise and appreciation" of White House policies.

For starters, the bishops' own president, Archbishop John May of St. Louis, declared they would stand with Pope John Paul II "in denouncing injustices and actions which foster disrespect for human life, from abortion to the death penalty."

The reference is a pointed one since Bush campaigned for the presidency as a vigorous defender of capital punishment — portraying rival Michael Dukakis as weak for taking the other side — as well as a foe of abortion.

May made his comments in a speech prepared for delivery today at the opening of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' annual meeting.

In recent years, several of the bishops' major statements have stirred controversy outside as well as inside the church, particularly as they took issue with Reagan administration policies on nuclear arms, Latin America and the U.S. economy.

"We are sometimes criticized for being too concerned about the world, of pursuing an agenda that in the minds of some critics is secular, leftist or in some way 'ideological,'" May said.

But he said actions and statements by the pope have shown the bishops it is not possible to have "too much social consciousness."

The bishops this week will consider a number of seemingly secular proposals, including one calling on Congress to ease a 1986 law and give legal standing to many more undocumented Hispanic workers.

May indicated that if U.S. Catholics once kept quiet out of fear they would be accused of disloyalty to their government, such attitudes are gone.

"Catholics in America have long since passed the time when we must prove ourselves to this country which we love," he said. "Now is the time to translate our teaching into action, to build a more just nation and a more peaceful world."

May took a considerably more conciliatory stance on the main intra-church matter the bishops will debate and vote on this week — a proposal that they reject a draft Vatican document that appears to undercut the theological authority of bishops' organizations such as theirs.

The bishops' proposed response uses such phrases as "rigid and confusing" and "overly defensive and negative" to describe the Vatican draft and says it seems to be "pretending to be a study but with its conclusions already determined."

Still, May said the bishops' response has been portrayed incorrectly by the news media "as if it signaled some sort of struggle with the Holy See. With all due respect for the creative imaginations of certain writers, this is simply false."

May said the bishops were simply responding to the Vatican's invitation for comment.

The pope has publicly supported the bishops' national pastoral letters on nuclear arms and the U.S. economy. But there also has been criticism from top officials in the Vatican, who ask for whom the bishops were speaking, and on what authority.

Other critics have suggested the bishops were taking on issues that were none of their business.

But May said, "Our people need to hear that the work we have begun on 'social issues' — whether on nuclear policy, human rights or advocacy for the unborn, the poor and the homeless — will continue."

Britt Airways finds express ticket to commuting success

HOUSTON (AP) — A year ago, when Britt Airways started its Continental Express operation, it had 100 employees and served a handful of cities.

Now the commuter airliner serves 11 cities and has nearly tripled its workforce.

"It's been a pretty busy 14 months," said John Prendergast, president of Britt Airways. Continental Express is a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston-based Continental Airlines but is operated by Britt Airways.

The carrier, which started by using aging turboprop aircraft, also is contemplating a move into five more cities as well as maintaining its shuttle between Hobby and Intercontinental airports, Prendergast said.

The aircraft have been replaced by new planes with comfortable seating, rest rooms and enough space to permit a stewardess to serve drinks on the flight.

Over the past year, Continental Express' payroll has grown to 287 and is expected to jump to 350 next year, Prendergast said.

Last month, the carrier flew 44,000 passengers, up from 24,000 in October 1987, its first full month of operation. Over the last year, it has boarded 375,000 passengers and expects to significantly exceed that number next year.

Continental Express serves College Station, Laredo, Corpus Christi, Victoria and Beaumont-Port Arthur in Texas; Lake Charles, Lafayette, Alexandria and Shreveport in Louisiana; Mobile, Ala.; and the Hobby

Intercontinental shuttle.

Continental Express is among roughly 150 regional airlines in the United States that fly from smaller cities to metropolitan airports, where they feed passengers into the major carriers.

Like Continental Express, most have allied themselves with larger airlines, sharing computer reservation system codes, frequent flyer programs and even flying colors.

What makes the regional airlines attractive to a major airline, industry experts say, is not their equipment or earnings, but the high volume of passengers they feed into the route systems of the major carriers.

"A year ago, Continental did not have a feeder," Edward Starkman, an airline analyst with Paine Webber in New York told the Houston Chronicle. "And anytime you can scoop up passengers and bring them into your hub, it's a good idea. What it helps is the passenger flow, that those passengers coming in on Continental Express usually will continue on Continental."

Prendergast says his commuter airline is simply extending the Continental product.

"Before Continental Express, travelers in municipalities in Texas and Louisiana used a hodge-podge of different carriers, including Royale and Air New Orleans," Prendergast said. "Each served the various markets and had an agreement with Continental to provide service. But last year, Continental Express was formed."
