Jury In Trial Of Duke Is Selected In Night Session

Questioning Of Attorneys Reveal Likelihood Of Unwritten Law Being Major Defense Of Minister

Room Is Crowded

Defendant Is Quiet During Examination Of Veniremen; Crenshaw Aids In Prosecution

AMESA, May 6.—After an all-day grind the jurors had been selected tonight for the trial of the Rev. W. E. Duke, about 45, in Judge Gordon McGuire's district court here on a charge of murdering J. A. Cox, 29-year-old married man and father, at Klondyke, about 15 miles southwest of here February 6.

Although attorney's couched their questions in mild terms throughout the day, barely indicating that the unwritten law might be pleaded by the defense, men and women crowded the court room throughout the day. The expectators expect Mrs. Duke, 38, the mother of five children, to take the stand in her husband's defense.

Spring housecleaning hint for Husbands

Radford paused in the upstairs hall. "What!" he exclaimed, "not through yet—"

From amid the chaos of housecleaning, Mrs. Radford looked up in exasperation.

"Get that coat off and help me put up this bed," she ordered, wearily shoving a stray lock of hair back beneath the towel about her head.

"How do you expect me to be through? I can't clean the upstairs, and spend the best part of the afternoon downstairs talking over the telephone, can I? I've been up and down those stairs forty times."

Radford had weathered many spring housecleanings. Wisely, he pulled off his coat and began to roll up his sleeves.

"I think," he observed sympathetically, "that an extension telephone up here in the hall might save steps and—"

"Then suppose," interrupted his wife grimly, "that you order one for me tomorrow."

Telephones where you need them save time, patience, housewife strength.

Few know that one or two additional instruments cost considerably less than the single telephone they now have!

Wing Being Made Back To Country

Dyer, Southern Editor, Cites Change From City To Rural Sections; Rail Rates Aid In Swing
(By Associated Press)
RYAN, May 6.—An industrial solution which will sweep industrial regions was forecast here today by Dr. Guy Dyer, editor of the Southern Agriculturalist, in an address before the opening session of third annual convention, East Texas chamber of commerce.
The swing of industry from the back to the country, Dr. Dyer said, was due to the standardization of rail rates, now in progress, which rates which enable it to compete with the larger cities for industry. The first industrial revolution, the speaker said, not only drew rural industry but drained a country of its leadership because those capable of being leaders fled to the city.

Flames Terrify Insane Hospital

MORRISTOWN, N. J., May 6. (AP)—Four thousand patients at the New Jersey state hospital for the insane at Greystone, near Morris Plains, were terrified by a fire that burned part of the main building early today.
From the right wing, which was destroyed, 1,400 men were removed to safety. For a time it seemed as if much more of the institution would be destroyed and plans were made to move 1,000 women in an adjoining wing.

Firm Keeps Pace With Lubbock's Growth

Lubbock Sash And Door Film Large

Hand in hand with the rapid growth of Lubbock during the past few years has been the development of the Lubbock Sash and Door company—an institution which has been here almost as long as the city itself.
The growth of this company's business has paralleled that of Lubbock for more than a score of years. Started on a very small scale in 1914, the establishment has experienced numerous additions and improvements from time to time. At the present time the company owns a modern up-to-date planing mill and a large warehouse which covers an entire half block. This plant is the outgrowth of the original equipment which consisted simply of a small mill and warehouse.
One of the mottoes of the company is "If it is of wood, we make it." The company is owned by the Higginbotham-Bartlett Lumber Co. W. B. Atkins is the manager.

Judging Specimens For Use Of Four-H Youths Handed Out Yesterday By County Agent
Specimens for practice in grain and poultry judging were yesterday given out by County Agent D. F. Eaton to boys and girls who will enter contests at the district and county Four-H club encampments, to be held on May 27 and 28 and May 28 and 29, respectively.
Both encampments will have their main program presented at the Tech college.
Between 125 and 150 youths from eleven or more counties in the Plains country are expected for the district meeting, at which S. C. Ebans, district agent for the A. and M. college extension service, will be in charge. Dean A. H. Leidigh, W. L. Stangel and other faculty members of the Tech School of Agriculture are to assist in the program. County Agent D. F. Eaton will also assist.
The county meeting is expected to attract between 150 and 200 boys and girls from the Four-H clubs of the county. An elaborate and educational program has been arranged for this event.

Furnish Market To Farmers Here

Serving as a market for the many small trade tributary towns of the South Plains, the Farmers' Produce Co., 1312 Avenue H has become an important factor in the poultry and produce marketing of this section. Not only has it become a medium for the farmer-producer but also for the home consumer.
According to officials of the produce company, virtually all of the produce bought here, consisting chiefly of poultry, cream, and eggs, is resold right in Lubbock. The Farmers' Produce wholesales to local grocery stores in addition to doing a good retail business.
This business was established in Lubbock little more than a year ago, and its growth has been extremely rapid. Formerly the company did both a grocery and produce business, offering exchanges of groceries for produce. The grocery line of the business, however, has been discontinued so that the officials of the company may devote their entire time to the produce business, which continually commands more attention.
Managers of the produce house are I. S. Furlong and C. R. White. They promise the very best in the way of prices for produce.

Keeps In Contact With Real Estate

Proof that T. W. Sawyer possesses a thorough knowledge of real estate values in Lubbock is given by the fact that five large major companies, doing a large volume of business here, have employed him as appraiser on all property in the city.
Mr. Sawyer knows the city like a book. Sitting in his office in the Brown building, west side of the square he immediately can tell you the value of any local property.
Having played an important part in the gigantic real estate boom in Florida several years ago, Mr. Sawyer came to Lubbock. He chose this city in preference to all others in this section because he sensed vast possibilities here. He predicts that Lubbock will make the largest and most metropolitan city in this section.
Since coming to Lubbock, Mr. Sawyer has dealt exclusively in city business property and knows this line of the real estate business as well as anyone in the city.

Pig Breeding Project Boomed

Approximately thirty female pigs are being placed with Four-H youths of the county in connection with a project which is to be boosted in the South Plains country this year.
The pigs will be fed by the youths during the year and will be bred probably next spring.

All Ready For Cow Test Plan

Arrangements are practically complete for starting of the cow testing-by-mail station that is to be operated in conjunction with Tech college. Participants in the testing scheme must be signed by County Agent Eaton and their fees must be paid. This is practically all that stands in the way of starting the work.

Nazarene Revival Progressing Nicely

The revival meeting at the Nazarene church, 14th street and Ave. Q, is progressing nicely, according to Rev. S. H. Erwin, pastor. The church was not large enough to hold yesterday's crowd and it is announced that there will be 200 extra chairs tonight.
The evangelist, Mrs. Grace Edwards, preached at both services yesterday, and selections were given by the Edwards quartet. Miss Alice Lewis gave a chalk lesson at the Sunday school hour.
Tonight is to be a high school night. The services will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

Watkins Will Not Conduct Revival

Due to illness of members in his family, Rev. R. S. Watkins, First Methodist church pastor at Lorenzo, will be unable to conduct revival services at the Asbury Methodist church here this week. Rev. G. P. McCollom reported this morning.
Rev. O. P. C. pastor of the First Methodist church at Sweetwater, will preach here in Rev. Mr. Watkins' place.

No "Whispering Campaign" can withstand the light of this truth: Lucky Strikes are made from the finest of fine tobaccos—the cream of the crop. Lucky Strikes alone are toasted because toasting is a secret process. 20,679 physicians definitely state that toasting removes impurities. Then, too, it adds to the flavor and prevents throat irritation. Therefore, without fear of contradiction, we can say truthfully: "No cigarette, regardless of price, is as good as Luckies whether manufactured by The American Tobacco Company or by any other company."

Bad Weather Hampers Yankee Golfers In British Open

IN THE REALM OF SPORE WITH ALLAN CARNEY

LOOKOUT LEADERS
Sunday was a stormy day for the leaders in the various leagues. In Boston, the Braves playing their first Sunday game at home before a crowd of 35,000 fans, were bowled over by the Pittsburgh Pirates. Shortstop Glenn Wright returned to the Buccaneers lineup and delivered two timely wallop. The sensational fielding of Rabbit Maranville, Boston shortstop, has played a leading part in the showing of the lovely Braves this season. The loss to the Pirates Sunday was the first in six games.

The St. Louis Browns, erstwhile leaders in the American League, hung up against masterful pitching in their game Sunday at Sportsman's Park. St. Louis, George Walberg holding them to one hit, a single by Mellino. Sam Gray likewise hurled a fair brand of baseball, holding the Athletics to 6 hits in eight innings, but Philadelphia scored a 2-0 victory and climbed into the league leadership. The stirring performance in Sunday's game indicates the tugmen are finding their batting eye and from here on out it looks like an old-time murderer row for the opposing moundsmen.

Dallas was the scene Sunday of a murderous attack on Waco pitchers by Steers, the league leading Cubs losing their second game in two days. The melee was featured by a hand-to-hand combat between the Dallas pilot, Milton Stock, and George Blackberry, Waco outfielder, occasioned by a collision between the two on a forced play at second. Players on both teams rushed on the field and according to dispatches, a battle royal was in the offing, but the spectators were sent home without it.

LOOKIN' GOOD
Coach Grady Hightbottom's Tech Matadors made an impressive start Monday at College Station in the first game of their jaunt through Central Texas. The crimson stockings outfit the southwestern conference slugger but failed to make needed in the pinches. Volney Hill held the Farmers to seven bings, while his mater were gathering 8 from the offerings of the Aggie twifers. The warmer climate down south is just what the doctor ordered for the snail and the Tech ace took advantage of the sunshine to make the Cadets swing wildly at his hooks. Except for his occasional spells of wildness, Hill pitched a wonderful game yesterday.

Red Howell is likely to start on the hillcock for the local collegians today. The Tech right-handed curve ball artist is hard to beat when he is right and today may be one of those days when he is unbeatable. Following the first game of the series today, Coach Hightbottom takes his aggregation down to Austin for a two-game series with St. Edwards university.

THE SHELLING STARTS
The performance of the Yankee big runs in the last few days indicates the slugging bugmen have at last struck their hitting stride. The Babe slammed a homer number three Saturday and followed with number 4 Sunday. Tony Lazari alone connected for a circuit trot in the same slugging. Bob Meusel's home run with the bases loaded Monday, was a pleasing contest for the world champions over the Chicago White Stockings. If the Yanks were afforded the pitching that compares with their offensive power, Miller Huggins could forget his worries and start on a pleasure trip to the mountains during the season's grind. But such is the power of a Hoyt is the only clincher that the mite manager can count on. For this reason Babe Ruth and Co. are going to have to get in enough runs for the Yankees to win.

Prizes Awarded In Sunday Shoot
Sid Carraway's perfect score of 25 out of 25 and his consistent marksmanship in the various shoots Sunday afternoon at the Lubbock Gun Club, gave the Lubbock gunner an edge over his mates and visiting marksmen. He was close followed by El Gooden, who broke 24 out of 25.

Gooden won high score in the match with the picked squad of ten gunners and was given his pick of the prizes offered by Lubbock merchants, but was unable to come up to the mark set by Carraway. Although gunner from Amarillo failed to arrive, Tabaka and Floyd were represented by small prizes.

Tol Carraway, with a 23 out of 25, was third high man in the day's shoot. Other high scorers were J. O. Dudley, Sid Carraway and F. H. Stanton.

Since the visiting teams were not large enough to make separate squads, mixed squads were formed for the various prizes offered by Lubbock merchants.

The list of prize-winners together with the donors of the prizes follow:

Cody's Home Run With Bases Full Gives Aggies Win

Matadors Outhit Farmers But Fail to Deliver In Pinches; Hodges Gets Circuit Smash

(Special To The Avalanche)
COLLEGE STATION, May 6.—Cody's home run with the bases full enabled Texas A. and M. to defeat Texas Technological college here today, 9 to 5. The game was one of the features of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce convention and over 3,000 people witnessed the contest. Rigney started the game off by walking. He was sacrificed to second by Walker and scored when Martin overthrew third base.

The Aggies tied the score in their half of the second when Hill started off by walking Cody. Pomell sacrificed him to second. Harris was hit by a pitched ball and Kasprovic walked Cody and scored on Bray's infield out.

The College Station boys scored two more in the third. Bell singled to right and Pompell's hit to the sea field got away from Brothers and went for a home run. Hodges, stocky catcher for the Matadors, put his team in the lead again when he hit a home run down the left foul line, scoring Marshall and Taylor ahead of him.

Kasprovic started the fourth off by a getting single to left. Bray forced him at second and then Bray stole second, scoring on John's single to center.

A. and M. put the game on ice in the sixth when John walked after two men were out. Conover singled and was hit by a pitched ball. Johns scored when Walker booted Martin's easy roller. Cody then followed with his long smash. Peterson made the last run for the Matadors when he tripped to right on the 9th and scored on Hill's infield out.

New Detroit Giant Making His Presence Felt

Contrary to some predictions that big league pitchers would silence the bat of Dale Alexander, early season games seem to indicate that the big Tiger first baseman from Toronto will continue to gather his accustomed quota of base hits.

Alex led the International league batters last year. He is a natural hitter to whom all pitchers look alike. How he looks to the pitchers is something else. He stands six feet three inches in height, has massive shoulders and weighs 215 pounds. All of this plus natural ability means trouble.

Some go so far as to say he hits as hard as Babe Ruth. But what is worse (for opposing infielders) he is a straight-away hitter. While Ruth uses his terrific power to raise the ball over fences and into stands, Alexander's hits are mostly line drives.

They asked Sir William why such a big pool was allowed to operate when shopkeepers in the back streets who ran Christmas raffles were prosecuted. But that wasn't hard one for Sir William. The home secretary said the law frequently was involved with contrasts and that could not be helped.

Sir William is right, thinketh O'Goofy. The O'Goofy bought $50 worth of stocks just before one of the recent market depressions. He feels that life is an affair not only of contrasts but of downright differences of opinion.

The American Ryder Cup players must feel that contrasts are not so uncommon, too. They found a big difference between the British practice and the British playing.

Young British Pro Leads Qualifier In Chilling Wind

Americans Find Weather Trying As First Round Qualifying Gets Under Way; Scores Mean Little

By FRANK H. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

GULLANE, Scotland, May 6. (AP) Fred Jewell, a young pro, this morning walked diffidently in the company of his elders as he went with some of the world's great golfers for the first qualifying round of the British Open. Tonight he has a right to approach these great golfers without apologies for his 72, good enough to lead the field the first day.

There may be trouble in store for the young Long Ashton pro if he barely missed selection for the British Ryder Cup team but for today there is no name above his. A stroke behind Jewell with were an American amateur, Scottish-American pro George Gullane. Gullane's 73 was the best score for 73 amateurs entered and Bob Cruickshank's 73 was the best of 73 professionals.

Wild Weather

The first round was played in the stiffest weather experienced in the British Open championship in a century and most of the Americans found it trying. On the whole, however, they played no worse than the sturdy natives.

Scores meant little and even greater were satisfied with a 70 in the pre-championship play. Only Ed. Dudley of the American Ryder cup team, who took an 81, was reported as in danger of being disqualified. Johnny Farrell, U.S. open champion, with a nine at 17th hole, turned in a card of 81 but Farrell's friends expected it to clip many strokes from that figure in the second qualifying round tomorrow.

Riding on a chilling east wind from the North Sea, a rainstorm burst over Eastern Scotland sooner than the play started this morning. Gathering force until mid-afternoon it ruined the great golf spectacle, even for the amateur cut-throat galleries who remained. The players in fairly large numbers until the downpour forced them to shelter.

Military chiefs of North Carolina are starting bus lines for revenue earning purposes.

A Colonial House "Built For The Future"

BY CORA W. WILSON
For NEA Service

GOOD architecture survives contemporary building style just as the paintings of old masters lose none of their value with the advent of the modernist schools.

The Colonial house pictured here is "built for the future."

Throughout it is of wood construction. The exterior is of white-painted cedar shingles. Shutters are blue and brick chimneys are painted white. There is an oaken front door, also white-painted, with leaded glass sides and an old brass knocker.

The house has eight rooms and two baths and adjoining is a garage for two cars.

The visitor enters a foyer hall. To the left is a well-designed living room with a Colonial fireplace and mantle. Glass doors on either side of the fireplace lead to the open porch.

On the right of the foyer is the dining room—a square room with one doorway opening onto the Porte Cochere and another leading to the kitchen. From the kitchen there is an entry to the garage.

Every inch of space is utilized on the second floor. There are four large bedrooms, two baths, numerous closets and in every room cross-current ventilation.

For additional information and cost estimate write to Mrs. Cora W. Wilson, 429 Madison avenue, New York City, and be sure to enclose the clipping from this newspaper.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

HOOVER'S TASK OF RINGMASTER IS TO MAKE CONGRESS PERFORM BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, May 6.—Jumping through the presidential hoop is a trick no congress likes to perform.

Congressional reluctance to respond to the crack of the executive whip is even more noticeable when the same party rules in the White House and on Capitol Hill than when the chief magistrate and the legislature's politics differ.

Of course—because the country expects one kind of a congress to show its teeth and growl at any other kind of president. Everything is supposed to be lovely when their labels coincide. If not, why not?—folks ask.

The truth is, the president's and congress' interests conflict on other than party grounds.

The president, if a man of any initiative, likes to develop his own policies uninterfered with. Naturally he expects them to win him credit or he would not sponsor them. He wants this credit for himself. Congress is liable to bother him and he is jealous of it besides.

On its part, when any credit is being dished out, congress wants its share. To see the president gobbling it all makes the lawmakers squirm.

Vice versa, if fault is to be found with anyone the president prefers to have it found with congress and congress prefers to have it found with the president.

This mutual modesty is exemplified now, in connection with farm relief.

Confidentially, nobody is very certain how pending agricultural legislation will turn out. The consensus seems that it is less likely to yield credit than blame.

Consequently congress asked President Hoover what he wanted done in order to wish theonus onto him. Recognizing the joker, Mr. Hoover replied that framing legislation is congress' job; not his. Score one for the president. Since then, however, congress has managed to tag the relief measure "the Hoover plan," which, 'tis rumored, makes Mr. Hoover boil.

Obviously, this buck-passing is riskier for the president than for congress, because if he finally is stuck with the responsibility, he is stuck with the whole of it; whereas if congress is stuck, it has 531 senators and representatives to divide the responsibility up among.

The longer the extra session lasts, the stronger the probability that good teamwork by the 531 lawmakers will maneuver the lone president into an awkward position.

The sooner they finish their program and go home, the better for him.

Such is the hoodoo it behoves Mr. Hoover to scare congress through as speedily as may be.

We shall see shortly how capable a ringmaster Mr. Hoover is.

Undoubtedly he can manage the house of representatives. The Democrats will try to balk, but they are far outnumbered and the majority will yank them right through the hoop.

The senate may prove less manageable.

The insurgent progressives are not in control of it, as in Mr. Coolidge's day. As an offset against the too liberal for them just as he is not liberal enough for the ultra-radicals.

Anyway, Senator James Watson of Indiana, the G. O. P. manager and a mighty experienced hand at the political circus game is on record as forecasting that the upper house of congress will shy at the hoop for a long time.

Let it shy just this once, and get the habit—and the chances are that Mr. Hoover is in for a peck of trouble ever making this congress mind again.

Another great American institution is passing. Once thought deathless, it is rejected by the rising generation. Only a decade ago it was indispensable to the American home but today it is almost foreign to it. For centuries it was more than an institution, it was a national tradition and an honored ideal. Today it is ridiculed, maligned, or what is still more ignominious, forgotten.

This tragic victim of progress is the front porch. No longer is it considered by architects in the drafting of their plans for the modern home and with the "new" home builder it is as obsolete as the wood-shed and out-kitchen.

While the solarium and roofless plaza which grace the modern home have replaced the old-fashioned front porch, they can never fulfill the ancient duties of it. Once the home was judged by its veranda. Formerly it was a coveted privilege to rock in a chair on the front porch to see and be seen, but in this revolutionary age it is considered very burgled to expose one's self in such an idle mood and relaxing posture to the curious populace. The porch has been abolished, so the household can not sit out to see the world pass by on parade and to perfect the conspiracy against the front porch high walls and hedges now prevent the "parade" from looking in.

There are those who through sentiment will miss the old front porch along with the hitching post, cigar store Indian, watering trough and bushing mailbox, but the victors—with alarm with their customary pessimism will see in it a confirmation of the report that people do not build porches because the modern home is only a place to sleep in and the report that the automobile has supplanted the porch as the great American perspective and rest-resort.

THE CONSUMER IS BENEFITED
In some of the recent complaints against the strictures of federal law that keep producers from combining to set prices or to curtail production, the attempt has been made to justify such practices by citing the freedom allowed buying combinations. The argument runs that if buyers are permitted to operate as groups in their purchasing, then it should not be unfair or illegal for sellers to transact their business together in the same way.

This notion less sight of the question of public interest on which the anti-trust law is based—the assumption being that combinations of sellers will act for their profit alone, whereas combinations of buyers are interested principally in serving the ultimate consumer through obtaining lower prices or higher quality.

The association of the two practices has been given point by an investigation of a group-buying combination now in progress. The authorities make it plain that co-operative buying is not to be placed on trial. That, in fact, such buying is not only legal but desirable.

It is entirely possible, of course, to imagine a buyers' group so strong that it would constitute a monopoly and dictate terms to the detriment of the public, but such a power in commerce seems a remote possibility, with competition in distribution what it is.

The trouble is that congress keeps making laws which are so infernally difficult to obey.

Women are urged to study taxation. Doubtless those who have to pay taxes do study about it.

USE OF WHISKY FOR COLDS ISN'T AS VALUABLE FOR COLDS AS IS THOUGHT
BY DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The belief that alcoholic drinks of one type or another have great virtue in the prevention of coughs, colds and even of pneumonia has persisted for many years.

It is not a superstition, since there are no magic rituals connected with this belief, other than are associated with the general use of wine in Jewish, Roman and Christian festivals. In practically every religion the drinking of wine is considered meritorious and is associated with the celebration of important events. No doubt, special virtues have attached to the use of wine for this reason.

Scientifically, it is known that the taking of alcohol produces in the human being a state called euphoria, a sense of well being, which has caused alcohol to be used for a variety of ailments since the beginning of time.

The empirical use of this substance proceeded until eventually special claims began to be made for whisky in the treatment of sepsis of one type or another, the idea being that the alcohol in the blood actually overcame the infection. Today there is a considerable amount of evidence available to indicate that in some instances the use of alcohol may definitely diminish resistance to infection.

When the great influenza epidemic swept across the country in 1918 there were tremendous demands for whisky on the part of hospitals and of physicians because this alcoholic drink was presumed to have special virtues in controlling that disease. A critical survey of the scientific evidence indicates that the morbidity and mortality rates were just about the same in those treated with and without alcohol.

The chief value of drugs and physical measures in such conditions is to relieve the patient from pain and depression while the tissues of his body muster themselves in their attack upon the disease. No doubt, some people find whisky exceedingly comforting under these circumstances but the whisky will not prevent pneumonia and according to some medical authorities, will even make the likelihood of pneumonia greater.

AIR MAIL GROWS
Statistics compiled by the federal department of commerce show that the average income from carrying the air mail was 94 cents a mile in 1928, as compared with 62 cents a mile in 1927, and 39 cents in 1926. The average mile cost for operating airplanes, based on reports from 15 operators and covering all sorts of aircraft, was less than 70 cents a mile.

Last year the average mail load carried in an airplane was 973 pounds, as against 543 pounds in 1927 and 182 in 1926. The average income from a mail flight was $1,979 in 1928 as against $1,307 in 1927 and $690 in 1926. These figures prove, what most of us already realized, that wonderful progress is being made in aeronautics in these days.

Since there is no sign that England's removal of the tax is to be made retroactive as of 1926, we probably shall have to go right on being an independent nation.

Shylock Up To Date

RICH GIRL & POOR GIRL
& RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MILDRED LAWRENCE, stenographer at the Judson Hotel, has her fox fur snatched from her in a crowd, but STEPHEN ARMITAGE catches the thief and returns the scarf. He asks to take her home. Not wishing to seem ungrateful, she invited him to dinner. Her evening is spoiled when PAMELA JUDSON, daughter of her employer, phones Mildred to return to duty. Stephen escorts her to the hotel where Pamela recognizes him as the salesman who had sold her a car. She snubs Mildred and tries to lure Stephen away by pretending she wants to buy another car.

Then Pamela meets HUCK CONNOR, who becomes infatuated with her, and she amuses herself by playing both men. When Stephen favors Mildred, the manager asks her to be careful or Pamela will have her discharged. But this may not be so easy as her brother, HAROLD, is in love with Mildred. He is a weakling and Mildred permits him to call on her to keep him from Huck's gambling crowd. However, he suspects that she cares more for Stephen than for him and refuses to stay one evening when Stephen comes to see Mildred.

As the weeks pass Mildred realizes that Harold is becoming hopelessly involved with Huck's gambler, and that Pamela is winning Stephen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIV
It came to Mildred as a distinct shock that Harold was looking like a ghost. She'd been to greatly preoccupied with her own troubles to notice the change in him before it became pronounced.

"But one day he stopped at her desk as usual and started his usual ending plea for a date and Mildred saw that the hand he put over the sheet of paper in her typewriter to make her stop working was decidedly unsteady.

She looked up at him then in swift alarm. His face confirmed her fear that something was wrong with him. There were shadows around his sunken eyes and his skin was devoid of color. But it was the haunted, desperate expression of his eyes that startled her.

"Harold," she cried, and then hastily lowered her voice. "What is the matter?"

Harold was surprised, taken off his guard. "Nothing," he stammered. "What do you mean?"

"The way you look! Mildred exclaimed. "Has anything happened to you?"

Harold had regained his poise. "Nothing has happened to me," he said doggedly. "Except that I'm in a fever over you, as always. If you have any desire to help me let's have dinner together tonight and"

Mildred put a hand on his arm in an entreating gesture. "You'd better see a doctor," she said pleadingly. "You look terrible."

Harold covered her hand with one of his own. "You're all the medicine I need," he declared. "If you give me a chance to tell you how I need you, Mildred."

"Please, Harold. People are looking."

"Let 'em look. Unless you're afraid

Stephen Armitage may happen along and get an eyeful," he said caustically.

"Don't be absurd!" Mildred retorted—too quickly.

"Still thrilling to that poor animal cracker's love song, are you?" Harold pressed, made unpleasant with his biting jealousy. "Well, from all the observation posts I've occupied, it looks like he's picked a balcony close to the dear old home sweet home for his love scenes. Thought he'd better judgment. Nothing but a Johnny, after all. Trying a girl like Pam."

"You're her brother," Mildred reminded him sharply.

"All the better to know her," Harold asserted. "But I'm not criticizing Pam. She can't help it if her aura is golden and . . . sticky. A man ought to know better than to get caught in it."

Mildred smiled wickedly. "But you spread the same lure in my way," she pointed out. "You'd buy what you want, too, if you could."

"Right! If you can't love me I'd rather have you love my gold than fall for someone else. And I'm glad to hear you say you think Pam has bought her man. Knowing you, I'm sure you won't continue to think much of him."

"I didn't say anything of the kind! But maybe I do think she would if she could."

"Then you believe Armitage loves her for herself alone?"

Mildred made a sudden broken gesture. "Let's not . . . talk about it," she said weakly.

She sat down again in her desk chair and Harold leaned over her while she furiously wiped her eyes. "I'm sorry," he said penitently. "and I honestly hope Pam will give him the gate, but I can't help loving you, Mildred. I know you won't have me just because my dad's money could make things easier for you but that's no reason why you should refuse to have anything to do with me. We could have a good time while we're being miserable."

Mildred tried to laugh and choked instead. Poor Harold! Well, at least he was braver than she. She looked up at him, about to say she would accept the invitation, when she saw that he had taken his eyes from her face and had fixed them upon the elegant figure of Huck Connor who was just passing.

When Harold looked at her again Mildred saw that the haunted expression had returned to his face. Huck had nodded a brief greeting and gone on without pausing in his stride.

He never came to Mildred's desk any more. In a heated argument with Harold, during which the boy had alternately threatened and begged, Huck had learned that Mildred suspected him—had suspected him from the first.

Harold had not mentioned Huck to Mildred after that, and when she herself brought the man's name into the conversation he was evasive. Mildred, absorbed in her own unhappiness, had not kept herself informed upon Huck's activities in the hotel.

She saw him frequently with Pamela, but so far as she knew, Pamela never went out with him alone. They danced together in the hotel and Huck often dined with Pamela. If Harold chanced to be present, he sat and glowered at Huck with hopeless venom, but Mildred knew nothing of that.

Pamela knew that Harold had turned against Huck for some reason—he would not say why—but she made light of it, and of her brother's half-hearted orders to keep away from Connor.

But Mildred was not thinking entirely of herself at the moment. Harold's expression revealed his hatred and his terror of Huck. Her mind, already half-filled with concern for the boy, instantly associated Huck with the change in him. But she was too sensible to let Harold know she had discovered even that much.

"Perhaps you're right," she said in answer to his last remark. "No use inviting 'Old Man Bloom' to come sit on your chest. Where shall we go for dinner?"

"Let's drive up to Westchester," Harold suggested happily. "The Bronx River Parkway is a regular stretch of fairland now."

"I didn't know you believed in fairies," Mildred teased, watching him closely. Already the strain had gone a little from his young features, and the sullen hatred from his sunken eyes.

"You'd better run along now and let me finish my work," she told him cheerfully to know she had the power to make someone happier.

"Be ready on the dot," Harold said before he left.

Mildred worked fast, compelling herself to put all thought of Harold and Huck out of her mind until she was free to concentrate upon them without interference.

Promptly when her day was done she was ready to go with Harold. There was just one thing she had to do—telephone to her mother. She picked up the instrument on her desk and gave the number.

"I'm going up to Westchester with Harold Judson," she said when Connie answered her call. "Tell mother I'll be home late maybe."

Harold came up in time to hear the last words. Mildred felt a little guilty over his eulogizing. She had made up her mind to get the truth about Huck Connor if she could and she was prepared to stay late to do it.

"Looks like the beginning of a happy evening," Harold told her. "I was afraid you'd want me to take you home when the curfew rang."

"It all depends upon you," Mildred warned him. "Don't make love to me and I'll be a regular Cinderella. Except that I haven't a dress."

"Want to stop at your place, change?" Harold asked.

"I'd like to, if you don't mind waiting, but there aren't any dresses in my wardrobe."

"You don't need fine feathers."

"That's a married man's line, Harold."

"But I'd like to dress you in . . . I know; it's sweet of you," Mildred interrupted. "Come on; know what's ahead of you before you get to Westchester."

"Policemen," Harold groaned, every corner.

"But in spite of the impediment to their progress they both edged the drive to Mildred's home. Harold got only one ticket.

"Wait down here; I'll be just minute," Mildred said as she tramped to her dwelling.

Her minute grew into 10, 15 then Harold went up to remind that he was waiting. At first one answered his ring at the door. He pressed the button again, giving to entertain a vague easiness. Presently he heard some fumbling with the double lock then the door was thrown open. Connie stood there in the hall with a white frightened face and shining hands that she put impulsively when she recognized him.

"Oh," she cried. "we forgot about you, come in, please. Mother's had an accident."

She stepped back and Harold entered the hall. "Where's Mildred?" he asked. "Have you called a doctor?"

Connie nodded. "Mildred did, told me to go down to you, but there was suffering so it slipped mind."

"Can I be of any service?" anything from the drug store Harold inquired.

"You might try. It's a very burn. We've put oil and flour on and Dr. Brill will be here soon, maybe the drugist could give something to relieve the pain a little."

Harold was turning away when Mildred cried out in terror from her mother's room.

Local Residence Raided; 7 Taken On Gaming Charge

Arrest of seven persons and ex-posure of an alleged organized gambling house, located in a local residence, resulted Sunday night in a raid by city officers.
After furnishing bonds of $20 each, six of the seven arrested pleaded guilty Monday morning to gaming charges and paid fines in city corporation court.

The owner of the alleged gambling house has been charged with permitting gambling in his residence, and considerable gambling paraphernalia, including cards, dice and specially covered tables, was confiscated.

Crop Reports Put Lower Levels On Southern Cotton
NEW ORLEANS, May 6. (P)—
More favorable views of crop progress coupled with increased estimates of acreage gains caused cotton prices to work lower today despite a rather unfavorable weather outlook. At the lowest active possibilities showed declines of nearly $2 a bale from Saturday's close. October contracts declined to 18.49 and closed at 18.33 or 32 points net lower. The general market closed steady at net declines of 26 to 32 points.

Liverpool cables were about as expected and the market here opened irregular. First trades showed gains of 3 points to losses of 4 points. A flurry of selling after the start on more favorable views of crops carried July off to 18.74, October 18.88 and December 18.80, or 12 to 18 points below Saturday's close.
The early gain was recovered towards the end of the first hour on an official forecast for showers and thunderstorms in the belt but the market encountered renewed selling around Saturday's closing levels due to a New York report giving a private estimate of 9 per cent increase in acreage.

Prices continued to work lower for the remainder of the morning and practically the whole afternoon session, reaching the low points of the day in late trading. A reported increase in fertilizer sales during April added to the easiness which ultimately carried July to 18.33, October 18.49 and December 18.42, or 32 to 36 points below the previous close. There was some covering at the end and final prices showed recoveries of 3 to 5 points from the lows.

Cotton Prices Are Moderately Stable
On Gotham Mart
NEW YORK, May 6. (P)—Cotton was moderately stable around the opening today but during the greater part of the session prices were on the down grade under renewed selling pressure. This was prompted largely by generally favorable week-end cotton belt weather which seemed to have dispelled some of the pessimism prevalent at the close last week relative to the progress of the new crop. Houses with New Orleans and western connections, as well as Wall Street, were conspicuous sellers and there was a general absence of buying power. July declined from 18.93 to 18.56 and showed a loss of 37 points from the early high. Covering produced a moderate late rally and the general list closed steady at net declines of 26 to 35 points.

The market for a time displayed some stability on moderate buying based on predictions of general showers over the belt with lower temperatures. The weather map, however, was considered favorable with temperatures as high as 100 in the interior of Texas over Sunday. Throughout the day there was a noticeable absence of complaints of crop losses and the necessity of replanting, which were largely instrumental in bringing about the upward movement late last week.

An Editorial
From
THE INSURANCE FIELD
A National Insurance Magazine DANGER IN TEXAS
A flock of newly organized companies in Texas are giving to the people of that State a cleverly devised scheme of speculation, at its best, or plain gambling, at its worst.
It is masked under the guise of life insurance and is potential with disappointment to the public interest and harmful to the well-established and solvent insurance companies of that State. Most of these speculative companies are using the term "Mutual" as the leading snare and yet are appealing to the cupidity of the public with issues of stock as a bait for future profit.
The ultimate opportunities behind such a scheme for the speculative interests that put it forward are man-ifold, but none is clear. That there are opportunities under both good and bad management may be figured out. Under the best management it will be a long and difficult road to travel to the day when (if possible) the mutual interest can be transformed to stock owning. But under bad or incompetent management the opportunities to leave the deluded stockholder-policyholder without either stock value or life insurance are many. A fine profit might be realized by the "insiders" while the outsiders—the sheared sheep—would feel the pangs of winter and be frozen out. It can be done.
The worst aspect of the situation at present appears to be the glittering promises which salesmen are making to the "prospects" for life insurance, making them believe that fortune is right ahead, with the implication that old life insurance companies are taking advantage of them.
The old-established companies of Texas and the board of insurance commissioners are worried and yet apparently helpless. We are not familiar with Texas decisions pointing to a way out, but a common law proceeding for injunction might bring the whole tortuous possibilities of the scheme forward and inform the public and the legislative powers.
According to Best's Life Insurance Reports for 1928, twenty-three legal reserve companies organized in Texas retired from business between January 1, 1910 and the date of the publication in 1928.
The policyholders of these organizations were protected, of course, but it is very questionable if the stockholders of the stock companies were satisfied with the outcome of their investments.
If you contemplate increasing your insurance, or, if you are interested in purchasing life insurance stock, see your local agent, he is well informed and prepared to give you good advice.

ance Field and endorsed by us.
