Reagan's plans don't include sending troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is refusing to tip his hand on what steps he is contemplating for strife-torn Central America beyond renewing his declaration that he has no plans to send U.S. combat troops to El Salvador.

The president promised at his news conference Thursday to address some unanswered questions in a major speech on the Caribbean basin next week.

Reagan, ducking questions about Central America on six occasions, refused to commit himself on the United States' economic, political or security options in El Salvador to avoid "giving away things that reduce your leverage."

Much of the questioning at the nationally broadcast news conference, Reagan's eighth since taking office, focused on El Salvador, the small Central American nation whose U.S.-supported civilian-military junta is besieged by leftist guerrillas.

The speech next week, which Reagan said will be delivered to a meeting of the Organization of American States, is expected to unveil a development plan for the Caribbean area, including Central America. U.S. officials say it will emphasize investment incentives and trade preferences, and will include some $300 million in emergency aid for the region.

"There are no plans to send American combat troops into action anyplace in the world," he said when asked about his plans for El Salvador.

The president then was asked whether he could see any circumstances under which he would send troops to El Salvador.

"Well, maybe if they dropped a bomb on the White House I might get mad," he replied.

In response to a question about whether there was a secret plan to involve Americans in covert activities in El Salvador, Reagan said he saw no parallel between the U.S. roles in Central America and in Southeast Asia at the time the United States was becoming involved in the Vietnam war.

But he declined to say whether there was such a covert plan.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that U.S. military advisers in El Salvador may soon be allowed to carry M-16 automatic rifles into the field.

Defense plan aims at strength

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Reagan administration's planned defense buildup does not aim at superiority over the Soviet Union, only at enough strength to deter Soviet attack, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Thursday.

The administration's projected increases in the defense budget bring the "hopeful news" that the country is reducing "the great vulnerability we would have faced in mid-decade" from a 20-year buildup of Soviet forces, Weinberger said in a speech to the Los Angeles World Affairs Council.

The idea is not necessarily to be superior in strength to the Soviets, he said, but to have sufficient strength so that Russia would know it would suffer "unacceptably high damage" if it attacks the United States.

Weinberger said it would be desirable to maintain the balance between the United States and the Soviet Union through disarmament talks, if possible.

"But we can't go to the bargaining table with any hope of success without having sufficient strength," he said.

The main question in judging the defense budget, he said, will be: "Did we care enough about our children and posterity to defend liberty in our own time?"

Critics of the defense budget "haven't made too many practical suggestions" on how to spend less while re-arming the country, Weinberger said.

The secretary defended one budget measure already under attack from some critics in Washington, the request for authorization for two $3.5 billion nuclear-powered aircraft carriers in the budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The great bulk of that money would be spent in future years.

By ordering two carriers now, Weinberger said, the country will save $1 billion that would otherwise be lost by waiting until the ships are actually needed.

Patchwork patterns

Snelson outlines campaign for land commissioner

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Educating the Texas public about the State Land Office by explaining its relation to the public education funds boils down to the campaign technique outlined this morning by W.E. "Pete" Snelson during a news conference at his advertising agency here.

Snelson, a state senator, is seeking the Democratic nomination in the May primary in the race for land commissioner. Four other candidates are challenging him on the Democratic ticket.

The most outspoken challenger has been Garry Mauro of Austin, who has alleged Snelson may have a potential conflict of interest in that post since his family is involved in the oil and gas business with leases through the state land office.

During his news conference, Snelson claimed, "There is absolutely no conflict of interest. There is no decision a land commssioner could make that would affect" those leases belonging to the family firm, known as the 6-S Co. "I would never do anything to conflict with what is in the best interest of the people of Texas.

"The land office functions under a set of laws. The land commissioner is only authorized to do his job under those laws. Changing the terms of leases is not possible."

Never naming his opponent, Snelson said the conflict-of-interest charges "are a generally disguised attack on the oil industry. It's a misunderstood industry and it's such a vital part of the base of our state."

He added that persons in contact with the state land office have told him that a knowledge of oil and gas would be beneficial to whomever becomes the next land commissioner.

The campaign so far has been an educational process, said Snelson, explaining that most people in the state don't understand what the land office does.

"I find in traveling over the state there's not a widespread recognition of this office," as most university lands that are leased are located in West Texas.

But Snelson said he explains the monies "from royalties and lease bonuses go into the Permanent School Fund. That fund currently has $3 billion in it, and it's projected to have $9 billion by 1990. This money is invested by the State Legislature and the income is spread among all public schools."

While some legislators in recent sessions have talked about dipping into that fund, Snelson discredited that idea. "We shouldn't be spending any of the principle; that would be robbing the future."

In addition, money earned from leasing university lands goes into the Permanent University Fund, Snelson said. "My position is that the integrity of that fund should be kept as set up, except to spread it more equally over the university system," noting this means The University of Texas of the Permian Basin would be a recipient of more money if this change occurred.

He added that other schools, such as Texas Tech Univerity and Sul Ross State University, "are entitled to some kind of fund dedication and the State Legislature will have to come to grips with that."

Noting that his 25th Senatorial District covers West Texas and about a fourth of the state, Snelson said the population centers are located in east Texas. And that is where he has been working on his campaign.

"People will have a greater view of the role of the land office in relationship to funding of education in Texas," he said.

Pointing out that he prefers to run a "positive campaign" without criticizing his opponents, Snelson said he is running for the office on his qualifications — a strategy he has used in all his past campaigns for state representative and then state senator.

The best qualification a candidate can have is his proven record of performance, he said, citing his legislative and government experience for the past 20 years, his work with the Legislative Budget Board in drawing up budgets for all state agencies, including the Land Office, and experience as a businesman for the past 27 years.

During this race, Snelson said he expects to spend about $600,000.

Outlining some of the cities and activities involved in his campaign recently, Snelson noted he has been sending his wife, Susan, onto the trail on her own. Quipping, he said, "She's the secret weapon I have in this campaign. She gets more votes for me than I get for myself."

U.S. commander concludes fact-finding tour of El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Lt. Gen. Wallace H. Nutting, the senior U.S. army commander in Latin America, said Thursday there are no plans to send U.S. combat troops to help El Salvador's governing junta battle left-wing guerrillas.

Nutting, chief of the Panama-based U.S. Southern Command, spoke with reporters as he ended a 48-hour fact-finding visit.

He also said that while no options have been closed, "no active consideration is being given to the introduction of more (American military) trainers," and "this has not been suggested" at official levels.

"I do not at this point see (American military advisers) going into the field," he added.

His news conference was at the Ilopango military airport east of San Salvador where guerrillas destroyed a number of Salvadoran air force planes and helicopters in a daring raid Jan. 27.

In Washington, President Reagan told a news conference earlier in the day he has "no plans to send American combat troops into action" in El Salvador or anywhere else. But he said it would serve no purpose to discuss other options under consideration to assist El Salvador's civilian-military junta.

In battle action, guerrillas destroyed several transmission towers Thursday morning near Santa Ana, 30 miles northwest of San Salvador, leaving parts of the nation's second-largest city without electricity.

Iran's Khomeini to be replaced by ruling council

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini will be replaced by a ruling council to be chosen in a special nationwide election, the official Iranian news agency IRNA said Thursday.

There have been unconfirmed reports that the 81-year-old Moslem clergyman is in poor health, but Iranian officials called them "imperialist and Zionist lies." Khomeini canceled all his appointments last Saturday and went into two-week seclusion.

Government spokesman Ahmad Tavakoli was quoted by IRNA as saying the new council will have three to five members, but he did not elaborate on possible candidates. He said the council will be elected by May but did not specify a date.

Khomeini led a popular Islamic revolution in February 1979 that overthrew the government of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, ending 2,500 years of dynastic rule in the Persian nation.

In the three years since Khomeini took power, his government has tolerated little dissent, jailed and executed political dissidents and enforced a strict Islamic moral code.

He has also accused Western nations, notably the United States, of scheming to subvert his government, and he approved the seizure of U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran Nov. 4, 1979. Fifty-two Americans were freed after 444 days.

Tavakoli was quoted by IRNA as saying the new council will have the same ruling powers as Khomeini, whose supreme authority was written into the constitution adopted by his revolutionary government.

A Khomeini spokesman reached by telephone denied that Khomeini's two-week seclusion was due to declining health. Opposition groups operating outside Iran said last week that Khomeini was near death.

"This is a regular program that he takes a couple of weeks off to rest because of the many engagements and meetings he has with people," the spokesman told The Associated Press bureau in Beirut. He declined to be identified.

The spokesman said Khomeini "always takes vacations every now and then. He will speak to the nation after his vacations end."

Khomeini has a history of heart trouble and suffered a heart attack a few months after he came to power in Iran. Since then his doctors have reportedly advised him to limit public appearances to a few per month instead of daily meetings and audiences.

San Angelo man seeks Senate post

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Bill Sims, 50, of San Angelo stopped in Midland Thursday to announce he is seeking the Democratic nomination for state senator from the 25th Senatorial District.

To date, he is the only Democrat to file for the post. Ernest Angelo Jr. of Midland is the only candidate on the Republican ticket. The seat is being vacated by W.E. "Pete" Snelson of Midland, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for land commissioner.

"Philosophically," said Sims, "we the people of this state have to rule this state. I see it as a very important job and I know that I can do it. I also know the people of this district, what they want and how they feel."

He is stressing a "good, strong public education system, both primary and secondary; conservation and preservation of natural resources, especially water; and no new tax." He also is working with Gov. Clements on developing a "legal alien" plan.

A native of San Angelo whose grandfather brought the first sheep into the area, Sims explained that natural resources include oil and gas, agriculture and water. He sees a need for a water bill but feels many of the voters turned down the proposed bill last November because they didn't understand it.

"Almost anything we can do to preserve our natural resources we must do. And you can't live without water."

As a farmer and rancher, Sims said he favors the governor's actions in working out a legal alien program. "We would like to see an organized program to bring in aliens. It should be similar to the bracero program," which involved giving an alien a permit to work in the United States for a specified length of time and the employer was responsible for that person.

He owns and operates a 900-acre farm and a 2,500-acre ranch in Concho County.

Sims said he plans to run a positive campaign. "I hate negativism. I see that in a political campaign you have several people offering their services to the state and the public votes for the one they prefer."

He is executive secretary and general manager of the Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers' Association and serves as managing editor of The Ranch magazine. He holds a bachelor of science degree in animal husbandry from Texas Tech University and has completed work toward an advanced degree.

Included in his list of memberships are the Texas Agriculture Water Committee, Texas Natural Fibers & Fertilizer Committee, advisory committee on pollution of the Texas Water Resources Commission, Texas Agriculture Council, National Wool Growers Association and American Sheep Producers Council Planning Committee for Blueprint for expansion of the sheep industry.

Prison inmate files suit over treatment in Ector County Jail

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An inmate who suffers from an ulcerated stomach and aching ears testified in federal court Thursday that jailers in Odessa were slow in getting him medication for his stomach and that he was inconvenienced by not having proper bedding or tidy quarters during the six months he was in the Ector County Jail on a theft charge.

The prisoner, 51-year-old Norman Jean Sulaica of Hobbs, N.M., took his grievance to federal court in Midland in hopes of winning $200,000 in damages from Elton Faught, who was sheriff when Sulaica was jailed in Odessa in 1979 and 1980, and from Faught's jail captain, Robert Harris, who now is a jailer at Sonora.

Sulaica filed his grievance in April 1980 even while he was in jail and while he was awaiting transfer to the Texas Department of Corrections to serve a 16-year term for theft.

Sulaica told U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton that he was in jail five or six weeks before he was attended to by a physician who prescribed medication for his ulcerated stomach. But in the meantime, he said he was given milk and three-ounce bottles of Maalox, an antacid, by Jailer Harris to soothe his ailing stomach.

SULAICA ALSO complained about the jailhouse food, which was "quite spicy and greasy...and you can't hardly eat it" if you suffer from an ulcer such as his.

"Well," responded the judge, "there's just some food you can't eat — cabbage (and) hot, spicy foods."

The dialogue between Sulaica, who opted to represent himself, and Judge Bunton, who acted as plaintiff's counsel when questioning Sulaica on the witness stand, was amicable.

Faught and his former jail captain were represented in court by Odessa attorneys James E. Nelson and Carol Gregg.

Sulaica said he could not pinpoint the exact time the physician called on him in jail.

"Time sort of runs together in jail," he said. "You don't pay no attention to it."

He said his recurring earache did not crop up again until sometime in January 1980; he was given aspirin to alleviate the ache. Sulaica, who had been in the Odessa jail as a trusty in earlier times, had been in jail on the felony theft charge since the preceding October.

"MY COMPLAINT IS that it took so long to see a doctor," the soft-spoken convict said. The jailers would respond to requests for sick call, but would react: " 'Well,' they would say, 'we'll put your name on the list.' "

After he did get to "see the doctor," Sulaica was given prescriptions for the the medication Tagamet 300, which he was to take four times daily. However, Sulaica said the intervals between doses varied from four to six to eight hours.

The judge pondered Sulaica's complaints about his treatment in the Ector County Jail.

"Whatever way it (medication) was administered to you, your ulcer condition improved?" Bunton asked.

"Yes sir," Sulaica said.

Since he was transferred to the state penitentiary, Sulaica said he has been on a bland-food diet. And last June, Sulaica said he underwent ear surgery after an infection cleared up. He said he has been suffering from ear problems since his military days in 1956.

Early in his Odessa jail time Sulaica said he couldn't help but feel "there was a conspiracy" to keep him from the telephone which he could use to contact a lawyer for counsel. He agreed that he was allowed to use the telephone more than once in an effort to hire an attorney, but eventually ended up with a court-appointed lawyer.

He also complained that "legal" mail handed him by a jailer named "Yankee" had been opened.

SULAICA also complained about the overflowing toilets.

"The plumbing would stop up from time to time," he said.

"You're talking about inmates messing it up?" asked Nelson. Sulaica said, yes, he was. He also said that inmates would stuff paper and blankets down the commodes and would clog them up.

Sulaica also complained about his lack of a toothbrush, but Faught and Harris said that personal hygiene articles were provided inmates by the county.

On the witness stand, the former sheriff said that inmate-induced plumbing problems were "continuous." Faught said inmates would "stuff rolls of paper, blankets and everything else they could find to stuff in the commodes."

Faught said the inmates brought additional problems, such as the wintry outside air, on themselves by using boom sticks to shatter windows to the outside world "so they could whistle at the girls and talk to the girls on the street" in downtown Odessa.

Harris testified that Sulaica "never did complain to me, no sir." But on reflection, he conceded that "If he did (complain), I took care of it."

Judge Bunton is to rule on the Sulaica case after the court gets written testimony from former Ector County Jail inmates whom Sulaica said would help bolster his case against the ex-sheriff and his former jail captain.

Cockerham seeks re-election to House

MONAHANS — Jerry Cockerham, 36, of Monahans, announced Thursday he is seeking re-election to his seat in the State House of Representatives, which is District 69.

"In my 1980 race I knocked on over 20,000 doors and I plan to do even better than that this time," he said. "I believe in going to the people to hear of their concerns and priorities."

In redistricting last year, Cockerham's district was expanded from seven counties to 13 and now includes the area covered by Rep. Larry Don Shaw, who also is seeking re-election. Re-districting pits Cockerham against Shaw.

Under the new plan, District 69 covers Ward, Reeves, Crane, Winkler, Loving, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Howard, Borden, Culberson, Hudspeth and Jeff Davis counties.

Cockerham claimed he supports the right-to-work law, a hard-hitting program against crime and drugs, enhancement of family values, exposing welfare fraud, free enterprise, keeping taxes to a minimum and quality education with discipline.

Owner of a small oilfield service company, he serves on the Natural Resources and Higher Education Committees. He drafted, sponsored and passed a bill to protect citizens against unnecessary bureaucratic law suits. Other bills he sponsored included the "clear language" bill to remove jargon from regulations, contracts and insurance policies in the state; and a bill to limit the number of terms state officials may serve.

Additional bills he co-sponsored and supported included authorizing wiretapping to catch persons involved in drug trafficking, requiring triplicate prescription forms to further curtail drug dealing among young people, allowing oral confessions to be used in prosecuting criminal cases, mandating stiffer penalties for persons distributing controlled substances to minors and outlawing drug paraphernalia.

"The main issue in this campaign is who will truly represent the people of this district," said Cockerham. "I've been traveling, talking and listening to people throughout this new district. The feedback I've gotten from people in Shaw's old district is that he rarely listened to anyone from his district, but apparently sold out to the liberals for some unknown reason."

Jerry Cockerham

Cockerham said he holds a bachelor of arts degree and grew up working in the West Texas oil fields. He lives in Monahans with his wife, Pat, and 9-year-old son, Jerry.

Parker M. Humes, currently president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, today announced his candidacy for re-election to the Place 5 position on the board.

Humes, a 20-year resident of Midland, cited his interest and concern for the students of the Midland public schools as the main reason for seeking re-election.

"We must assure our students and teachers adequate space in a rapidly growing city without losing sight of the high academic goals we have established for our schools. I also feel a continuity of leadership and experience is especially important now with new administrative changes taking effect and the extensive on-going building expansion in the district," Humes added.

A graduate of Baylor University, Humes has served as chairman of the Midland Alliance and Leadership Midland, president of the Midland Rotary Club, vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and vice president of Junior Achievement. He has served as an Objectives for Midland conferee and a director of the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council.

Decision expected on placement offices

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Employment Commission could make a decision as early as today on whether to reopen some of the 65 job placement offices closed earlier this year because of Reagan administration budget cuts.

The decision could possibly affect the Lamesa TEC office which was shut down after the budget cuts were announced.

At its meeting Wednesday, the TEC decided to attempt to reopen job placement offices in as many areas of the state as possible using Texas' share of $2.3 billion in funds recently restored to federal job placement programs by Congress.

"(TEC) is going to try to go back into every area we left, if we can," said Retha Blakely, a TEC public information officer. She added, however, that those offices saved probably will have modified services and smaller staffs.

The TEC had scheduled to close 71 regional offices and lay off some 1,300 employees because of President Reagan's budget cuts, but Reagan now has signed the legislation restoring some of those funds.

Blakely said a total of 825 employees actually were lost through layoffs and attrition, with another 161 employees who thought they were going to lose their jobs vountarily finding other employment.

Blakely said the TEC "doesn't anticipate" any more layoffs, but no decision has been made yet on whether to recall some of those workers who lost their jobs or on which offices will be reopened.

The only TEC office closed in the Midland area was in Lamesa; however, the Big Spring TEC office staff was cut back, while Midland's office was forced to put a freeze on hiring.

Those decisions will be made after the commission receives the "bottom line" figures on how much of the $2.3 billion Texas will receive.

Those figures probably will be received today, and Blakely said the commission probably will meet immediately after getting the figures to determine which offices will reopen.

Gov. Bill Clements said last week that he was in favor of the original budget cuts, but TEC officials have blasted the Reagan administration for being more interested in handing out unemployment checks than finding people jobs.

Hearing on water plan set in Midland

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Governor's Water Task Force and the Texas Department of Water Resources will hold a public meeting at 7 p.m. March 18 in Midland to receive input on amending the Texas Water Plan.

The meeting is one of 13 meetings being held across Texas to gather input from individuals, water resources professionals, public officials and special interest organizations on issues that must be addressed in the water plan.

Among issues to be discussed at the meetings are water resources management for population and economic growth; water laws; water quality management; flood protection; water conservation; bays, estuaries, instream flows and fish and wildlife habitat; regionalization of water and sewage systems; research and development of new technology; and the state's role in financing water development and wastewater treatment projects.

"We must revise the water plan to meet the long-range needs of increasing population and economic growth in our state," said Louis A. Beecherl Jr. of Dallas, chairman of both the task force and the Texas Water Development Board. "Failure to provide adequate water resources and wastewater treatment facilities is to virtually guarantee putting the state's well-being, growth and economic vitality in jeopardy."

The water plan originally was drafted at the request of former Gov. John Connally and has never been significantly revised.

The Midland meeting will be held in the Conference Room, Region 18 Education Service Center, Laforce Boulevard and Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Government files suit

The federal government has filed a suit for more than $190,000 to recover a defaulted Small Business Administration loan made to the proprietors of The Upper Crust, an Odessa gourmet restaurant which has since closed.

Defendants in the civil suit are Steven E. and Cynthia Esmond.

The government is contending that the Esmonds borrowed the money through Western State Bank of Odessa in late 1978 and defaulted on making $3,270 monthly payments over a seven-year period.

The government says that the principal now due is $164,634.93 and that the interests amounts to $25,427.82. Interest is $74.31 per day.

The SBA guaranteed the loan.

Mayors' budget complaints same old story — with point

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a Washington tradition. Each year about this time, the president proposes a new budget. A few days later the mayors of America hold a news conference to say it will destroy them.

Last week they said President Reagan's budget for 1983 would cost them an additional $13 billion in federal aid, which would bring the total loss under his administration to $50 billion. That's a whopping figure representing nearly half the money they got from Washington just two budgets ago.

"We are trying to understand how cuts of the magnitude proposed can possibly be absorbed," said Mayor Helen Boosalis of Lincoln, Neb., president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

A year ago, Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind. sat behind the same microphones and said: "If this budget goes through, we will keep 1 million people from job training next year. We will kill the dream of an affordable decent home for more than 35,000 families. We will take food off the table of households one rung above the poverty line. We will erode the rail and bus systems that millions of people use to get to work, to school, to the doctor. We will get longer unemployment lines and welfare roles."

The year before that John Gunther, executive director of the conference, warned that former President Carter's last budget "would make it difficult to assure the cities' social and economic health."

This pattern goes back to the Depression era when the conference was formed to lobby Washington for help. Each year there were forecasts of doom and destruction, and a year later some president would observe that the world had not come to an end after all.

Like the lad who cried "Wolf!" the mayors have a credibility problem. Their complaints are anticipated before they are voiced, taken with a grain of salt even by their friends.

Nonetheless, it's not that easy to brush off their lament.

Cities have been crying regulary for more Washington money for the past 50 years. Most years they got it. Most years they needed it.

Federal money steadily made up a greater and greater share of city budgets, but the gravy train began to go off the track long before the newest Reagan budget hit print.

Federal money as a percentage of state and local expenditures peaked in 1978, not in the Reagan administration. Ever since, cities have been having to do more with less.

The doomsday predicted each year has been averted chiefly because city officials have been robbing Peter to pay Paul. They met the most pressing problems first, kept firefighters and policemen on the job, kept the schools open, the trash collected and helped the poor as best they could.

But there was never enough money to do that and look after long-range problems both without federal help. One of the most critical aspects of recent budgets has been the cutback in federal assistance for fundamental maintenance of cities.

Repairs have been delayed or done by patchwork until the patches are about to give.

Harassment suit filed

A former Odessa city secretary has filed a sexual harassment suit in Midland's federal court against her former boss, Joe Tant, who was the city's director of billing services, and against the Odessa mayor, city manager and City Council.

Complaining is Ester Navarrette, in her 20s, who is alleging that Tant "repeatedly harassed" her in October 1980 by "repeatedly asking her to engage in sexual acts with him," by causing contact between him and her, and by making "suggestions of a sexual nature which he did not make to his male employees."

Ms. Navarrett is seeking punitive damages and compensation for lost pay. Like Tant, she since has left the employ of the city of Odessa.

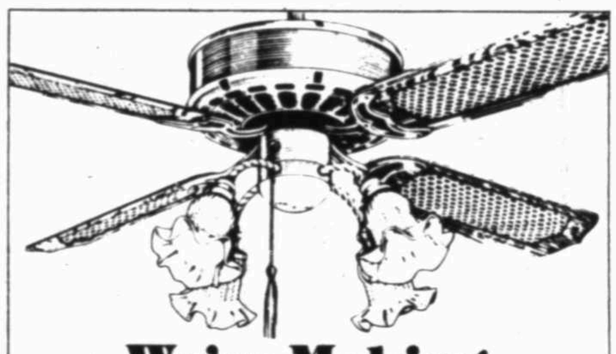

Tant resigned from his job at the time of the incident in Odessa. He is middle-aged.

Also named in the suit, which alleges violation of civil rights, are Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant, City Manager Chester Nolan and City Councilmen Houston Seabolt, Dick Sivalls, Keith Weddell, Margaret Burton and John Mason.

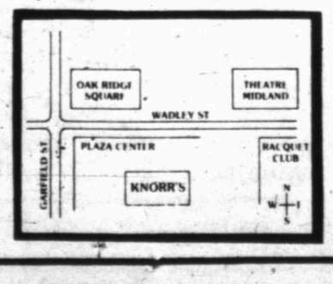

Ms. Navarrette's attorney is Tom Peterson of El Paso.

Rawlings' role unique in African history

By LEON DASH
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ACCRA, Ghana — Air Force Flight Lt. Jerry John Rawlings occupies a remarkable role in contemporary African affairs as perhaps only the second military man on this continent during its post-independence period to have taken power in two consecutive coups.

The strongman ruler of neighboring Togo, Gen. Gnassingbe Eyadema, at age 28, led Africa's first modern coup in 1963, handed power over to a civilian leader, then toppled that government in 1967 and reinstalled himself.

Rawlings, 34, who said recently that he "was slightly naive" the last time around when a junior-officer palace coup in June 1979 put him in power, also handed over power to a civilian government. He then brought it down, a little more than two years afterward with a predawn coup on Dec. 31.

In 1979, persistent reporters had little trouble getting to the gregarious leader for an interview. A champion of the common man, Rawlings' style then was a firm handshake and an informal "Hi, I'm Jerry" introduction. This time, interviews have been sparse.

At his one general press conference with foreign reporters recently, he said he "sincerely" wondered "how many of you here will give a deliberate distortion of what is going on in this country."

Rawlings remains, as he was in 1979, an immensely popular figure with low-income urban workers, but his standing is unclear in rural areas where more than 80 percent of Ghana's 14 million people live.

He has evaded setting a date for a possible return to elected civilian government, but has said his provisional National Defense Council is "interested in putting together a national team of people who are competent, committed and of faultless integrity."

Rawlings, who has made at least one public trip to Libya during the two years he was out of power, openly admires Col. Moammar Khadafy's revolution as outlined in the latter's Green Book and reflected in the country's official name, the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (State of the Masses). Rawlings has called Libya "a revolutionary dream."

Khadafy was the first leader to congratulate Rawlings on his successful coup and the two countries quickly re-established diplomatic ties broken in November 1980 by the deposed government of Hilla Limann. Limann accused the Libyans of recruiting Ghanaians for training to overthrow his government. The Libyans have reopened their "people's bureau," or embassy, in Accra and donated tons of badly needed food and medicine to Rawlings' government.

Eight of the band of ex-soldiers with Rawlings on the morning of the coup reportedly received military training in Libya. "We do not think that Libya was involved in the coup," said a well-informed non-Ghanaian source. "They trained some men but there are no indications that they were trained for a coup," the source said.

As Rawlings begins putting in place his own revolution, only weeks away from Ghana's March 6 silver anniversary of independence, he may be forced to call on Khadafy for more assistance. Domestic food supplies are expected to run out at the beginning of the rainy season in April.

"There is no excuse for our food crisis," said Rawlings in a speech outlining his reasons for the coup. "Why should people go hungry, when large tracts of fertile land lie idle and fertilizers also lie wastefully at (the) ports."

Ghanan leaders aim at 'moral decay'

'Revolutionary people's government' established

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ACCRA, Ghana — After a disruptive 25-year history of five Army coups, Ghana has retaken the leftist path with a coup-installed "revolutionary people's government" whose leaders predict they will reverse the society's moral decay, provide a stable democracy and restore economic health to a country on the edge of financial collapse.

The six-week-old government's leftist swerve has pushed beyond the socialist visions of the late Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana's first president, and borrowed from Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy's eclectic model of "direct democracy" through "popular committees" that theoretically will manage all aspects of the lives of Ghana's 14 million people.

The world's former leading cocoa exporter with a still-untapped agricultural potential, Ghana has been dragged down steadily from a relative position of affluence at independence in 1957 to virtual bankruptcy today by the visionary economic planning and venality of successive civilian and military governments.

Revelations in November of widespread corruption in the 2-year-old elected government of president Hilla Limann were a major factor in the acceptance by Ghanaian civilians of the bloody coup on Dec. 31 that overthrew him, according to Western and Ghanaian sources. The coup was carried out by a small band of former Ghanaian Army men led by Air Force Flight Lt. Jerry J. Rawlings. Most of the disgruntled regular Army joined in.

"I ask for nothing less than a revolution, something that will transform the social and economic order of this country," Rawlings said in a radio broadcast the morning of his takeover. "Let the world know that Ghanaians are determined to make democracy really work for the ordinary man, not just for a small group of people to exploit them and ride over their misery," he said later.

The 34-year-old Rawlings, an open admirer of Khadafy, is not unlike other African leaders who started out to create political systems that would eradicate elitist privilege and guarantee an equitable distribution of national income.

Numbers of like-minded African leaders, however, have presided over governments that degenerated into totalitarian regimes. It is too early to predict where Ghana's revolution will end, but early signs have been mixed.

Besides being corrupt, the Limann government proved weak in its efforts to pull Ghana out of a severe economic decline.

A black market flourished for the overvalued Ghana cedi and inflation was as high as 125 percent. A government effort to revive food and cash crop production was a total failure. Limann's officials also balked at the stringent conditions set by the International Monetary Fund to accompany its offer of a $1.4 billion recovery program.

By contrast, the ruling seven-man provisional National Defense Council, which Rawlings heads, has maintained momentum in a series of key moves including sending student volunteers to the countryside to help move the cocoa crop to the port of Tema. For the past two years, a good portion of the crop stayed on planters' farms because of bad roads or lack of transport.

Last week there were long lines of Ghanaians outside banks turning in their 50-cedi notes in exchange for vouchers as ordered by the defense council. "The exercise should reduce by 20 percent the approximately 6 billion cedis in circulation" and help bring down Ghana's inflation rate, a knowledgeable source said.

"People's defense committees" have sprung up in city neighborhoods, in rural villages and in industries to work out problems; they also act as watchdogs against corruption and black market dealings.

But despite nominal backing by the armed forces for the defense council, informed Ghanaians say they have become nervous about military discipline after a chain of rank and file mutinies recently among the 12,000 soldiers and 2,600 Air Force and Navy personnel.

On Feb. 4, sailors at Ghana's Sekondi Naval Base reportedly shot to death three of their officers before soldiers from a nearby Army camp intervened and rescued the remaining naval officers, who then refused to return to their base, sources said. Three days later, soldiers in the central city of Kumasi went on a two-day rampage after an Army major was stoned to death during an altercation at a church. The soldiers killed the pastor of the church, burned down four churches and wrecked four others, according to a local paper and independent sources.

"Orders for all troops to report to barracks have been greeted with mutinies," said one well-placed source. "There has been an unhealed split between officers and their men since 1979."

Rawlings first came to power in a June 1979 coup that overthrew the regime of Gen. Frederick Akuffo. The coup was carried out by junior and noncommissioned officers and Army privates against the corruption of their officers. Akuffo and seven other high-ranking officers were executed and a number jailed. Rawlings handed power to an elected Limann government in September.

Last month, unlike 1979, Rawlings' defense council immediately began to consolidate power by bringing most of the relatively independent press under its control. In mid-January, the local press reported a planned U.S.-supported invasion of 1,000 British commandos to be launched from Nigeria to return Limann (who is in detention with 200 other prisoners) to office. All three governments have vigorously denied the reports.

The defense council also has begun to bring the heretofore independent 500,000-member trade union congress under its control.

The defense council recently appointed 18 Cabinet-level department secretaries but has failed to agree on a secretary of finance or an economic recovery plan.

Mombasa becoming major liberty port of western navies

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

MOMBASA, Kenya (AP) — Like the Arab dhow fleets which have called here for centuries, Western navies are finding Mombasa a genial place for crews to unwind in the sun and reprovision after weeks at sea.

More than 9,000 sailors from 15 ships of the U.S., British and French navies sampled the pleasures of this East African harbor in January after extended patrols in the Indian Ocean, a focus of superpower rivalry since the 1979 Iran hostage crisis.

"Mombasa Welcomes the U.S. Navy" is imprinted on T-shirts for sale at a boutique near the Castle Hotel where several hundred American sailors guzzled half-liter bottles of beer one day recently.

The biggest ship in this sometimes somnolent port recently was the 84,000-ton aircraft carrier USS Constellation. Its 5,000 crewmen started coming ashore for liberty shortly after the ship dropped anchor Jan. 25 beyond the reef that constricts the entry of very large vessels into Mombasa's Kilindini Harbor. The crewmen had been at sea 51 days.

The other ships in Mombasa with the carrier for five days were the USS Truxtun, a nuclear-powered guided-missile cruiser; the frigate USS Bagley, destroyer USS Oldendorf, ammunition ship USS Santa Barbara and the USS Mispillion, a fleet oiler.

The U.S. battle group was preceded in port by a four-ship Royal Navy flotilla and by a five-vessel mine-sweeping convoy of the French Navy.

By conservative estimate, the liberty calls of the three Western navies pumped several million dollars into the economy of this city of about 371,000 people, Kenya's second largest after Nairobi, the inland capital.

The U.S. Embassy estimated that each of the 8,000 American sailors — 5,000 from the Constellation and the remainder from the support ships — spent about $300 in Mombasa for a total of $2.4 million to say nothing of the bill for the ships' replenishment.

The 20-year-old, conventionally powered Constellation, whose home port is San Diego, is the only U.S. carrier in the Indian Ocean.

The carrier battle group, with support ships and some 90 aircraft, including two squadrons of F-14 Tomcat jet fighters, guards the sea lanes used by supertankers to bring oil from the Persian Gulf to Western Europe, Japan and the United States.

U.S. Chamber of Commerce breaks with administration

By DAN MORGAN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post New Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, one of the main business voices in the country, has formally broken with hardliners in the Reagan administration over their effort to delay or block construction of the multi-billion-dollar Soviet natural gas pipeline to Europe.

In a letter sent to President Reagan on Feb. 5 and made public Wednesday, Chamber President Richard L. Lesher warned that the administration appeared to be on the brink of a "profound change in policy (that) could be likened to a strategy of economic warfare" against the Soviets.

Lesher, whose organization is a mainstay of support for the administration on most issues, noted that a policy of denying hard currency to the Russians by hampering their energy exports would raise a "new and unprecedented issue which goes to the core of U.S. policy on East-West trade" and he urged the president to consult the business community before adopting such a stance.

However, even as the Chamber was rallying in support of East-West trade, Reagan administration officials Wednesday were considering asking the Western allies to go along with a new kind of economic sanction against the Soviets.

Under a plan circulated in the administration, Western European governments would agree to cut off all new credits and loan guarantees to the Soviets — a step that probably would force Moscow to pay cash for any new Western technology and equipment, since private banks presumably would be reluctant to extend credit without government backing.

Officials supporting this option say it has several virtues.

It would allow the Western Europeans to go on selling non-strategic equipment and technology to the Soviet Union. Up to now the allies have refused to go along with U.S. requests to limit the sale of billions of dollars worth of equipment for the Siberian pipeline, arguing that too many jobs are at stake.

At the same time, however, it would force the Soviet Union onto a cash basis in their business dealings with the West. Some officials contend that this would, in turn, make the Soviets sacrifice resources such as gold and diamonds to pay for Western imports.

One European source said that while this plan would not end future East-West business deals it would slow them down considerably, since the Russians and other Eastern European countries count heavily on foreign credits to finance their trade.

Hermes, the West German government insurance agency, has guaranteed substantial amounts of the German bank loans for the Soviet pipeline project. And it has also guaranteed $1.8 billion of the $4.6 billion in West German loans to Poland.

An earlier proposal backed by hardliners in the administration would involve extending the Dec. 30 sanctions against U.S. exports of equipment for the gas pipeline to European companies that manufacture such equipment with U.S. licenses.

In his letter to Reagan, the Chamber of Commerce's Lesher said that such extraterritorial controls "will only aggravate further our already poor international reputation for commercial reliability."

The letter was the strongest sign seen yet of the business community's concern over the administration's East-West trade policy.

S.I.P.E.S. elects new officers, directors

Jerome J.C. Ingels, Dallas, president of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists (SIPES), has announced the election of new officers for the year 1982-83.

They are William L. Champion, Houston, president; Fred L. Oliver, Dallas, vice president; Joe H.E. Ward, Midland, treasurer; and Wilbur C. Bradley, Wichita, Kansas, secretary.

Ingles said, "The Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists is a world-wide organization of independent, experienced professional earth scientists. The purpose of our society is to certify the integrety and expertise of the qualifying independent earth scientist as well as to inform the public, government and our members about the earth sciences."

SIPES members have at least 12 years of experience in the professions of geology, geophysics, petroleum engineering, geochemstry, university teaching of geoscience disciplines, or a combination of these. The years of experience required for membership may be fulfilled by self-employment as well as by employment in industry, government, or university as an earth scientist, plus credit for degrees received from accredited colleges and universities. to be deemed independent, each member must be presently self-employed.

Existing highway safety groups protest relationship

By PETER BEHR
and CAROLINE E. MAYER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Stephen Jacobs says all he was trying to do was to get people to wear seat belts-an effort as American as apple pie.

Raymond Peck says all he was trying to do was to encourage any private venture that promoted the use of seat belts — his top priority program as Reagan's chief of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

But whatever their goals, the relationship of Peck and Jacobs has triggered sharp protests from established highway safety groups that have complained of favoritism and a possible conflict of interest on Peck's part.

Chief among their complaints is a $9,903 contract NHTSA awarded to Jacobs for a two-week study to determine the "feasibility of establishing a nonprofit foundation" to promote traffic safety.

Four days after the study was completed, Jacobs and two other lawyers set up a nonprofit organization called the Traffic Safety Foundation, and began seeking funds from major companies, including automobile manufacturers, to support their cause.

Another complaint deals with a conversation Peck had with a trade association executive who represents the auto companies Peck regulates. Some time around last Christmas, Peck says he approached James Aducci, president of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, to inquire about the association's procedures for giving contributions to nonprofit organizations. Composed of the nation's auto and truck manufacturers, the MVMA is a major contributor to the established highway safety groups — the National Safety Council and the Highway Users Federation.

"I was not hustling, not soliciting or supporting the foundation, or in any sense making an approach on behalf of any organization," Peck said recently, adding that one reason he decided to talk to Aducci was to counter numerous rumors that the NHTSA frowned on Jacobs' efforts and was discouraging contributions.

Yet Aducci recalled Peck asking whether he had heard about the foundation and whether it had been in touch with the MVMA, leaving the impression that Peck was putting in a good word for the foundation.

The discussion took place shortly after Peck found it necessary to decline a position on the foundation's board of directors. Although Peck wrote in a Dec. 11 letter to Jacobs that he applauded and endorsed Jacob's goals, he said "there could be an appearance of impropriety for the (NHTSA) administrator to serve on the board of trustees."

Peck and Jacobs contend their actions have been totally innocent and are being misconstrued by safety groups.

"I haven't been doing anything improper," Jacobs says. "This has been so damn innocent" that the criticism "seems ludicrous."

"We're not trying to help any one private foundation," Peck contends. "We are in favor of all efforts without any impartiality, any interference," to promote the use of seat belts.

Nonetheless, Jacobs is citing Peck's support — as well as White House approval — in his campaign for funding. For one thing, Jacobs prominently displays a quote from Peck's Dec. 11 letter of declination in his solicitation for funds, quoting Peck's endorsement of the group.

Jacobs also includes one of two letters he obtained from President Reagan that commend his "invaluable and admirable" service.

Informal discussions with officials at this office also led him to tell the Internal Revenue Service that his organization "has been reviewed and approved by persons in the White House" when he applied to the IRS for a special tax status that would make contributions to his organization deductible.

Stop the killings

The tragic murder of four American churchwomen in El Salvador more than a year ago gained considerable news media exposure in the United States. Yet the rape and murder of the four nuns was only one incident in a long series of murders of church representatives in Central America that, understandably, should be creating concern for all Americans.

Only last Saturday Brother James Alfred Miller, a 37-year-old missionary from Custer, Wis., was murdered in Guatemala. Brother Miller's death brought to 15 the number of church workers either kidnapped or murdered in Guatemala.

Numerous other church workers have been killed in Nicaragua, Guatemala, El Salvador and other Central American countries. Sadly, there appears to be no regard for the lives of church workers who are guests in the foreign countries while they attempt to make fuller and more enriched the lives of those countries' residents.

In the case of Dorothy Kazel, Ita Ford, Maura Clarke and Jean Donovan — the four nuns murdered in El Salvador — pressure by the Reagan administration resulted recently in charges being brought against five members of the El Salvador National Guard. That's commendable, but that case only scratches the surface and it's likely that little will change even if the five guardsmen are convicted of the crime.

El Salvador is much like the remainder of Central America — consumed in the flames of revolution. There is an inherent danger to missionaries entering such nations, but the Christian religion teaches that such areas are the ones truly in need of the church's work. To shy from danger is to avoid following the path of Christianity, many Christians believe.

And, of course, we realize that in some instances church workers become a bit too involved in revolutionary movements in the countries in which they are working and through such activity endanger their own lives. But that is not justification for the acts the world is now hearing about. Church workers can be expelled if they are found to be involved in unwarranted activities.

Yet the brutal kidnappings, rapes and murders of so many church workers in Central America causes us to question the wisdom of any church missions to that part of the world at the current time. And that is unfortunate since those they would be sent to serve become the losers.

At the very least, the Reagan administration should continue to speak our against violence in Central American countries directed at church workers. The bloodbath against missionaries must be stopped because it is they who seek to bring true peace and hope to those nations.

More shuttle diplomacy

Despite frustrations and failures, the Reagan administration continues to recognize its role in Middle East peace talks, and to play it with vigor. Recent evidence of this is President Reagan's appointment of Richard Fairbanks to be Secretary of State Haig's special representative in the area.

The 41-year-old Mr. Fairbanks, who has been assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, will have the rank of ambassador. The task ahead of him is a tough one, and he knows it, but during service for three administrations he has not shied away from formidable assignments. He said in a recent interview:

"This is a critical moment in the peace process. We aren't going to lose it."

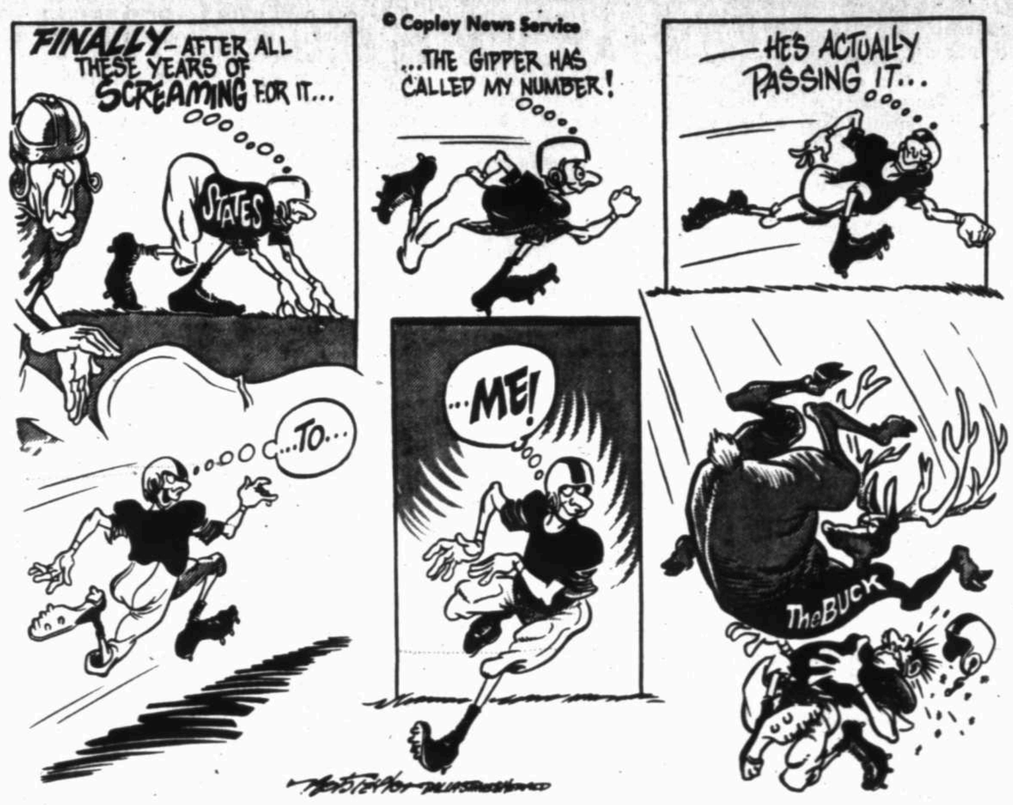

Mr. Fairbanks also knows that his appointment was criticized because of his lack of past concentration on Middle Eastern affairs. His record does not measure up to those of previous special envoys to the Middle East, like Alfred L. Atherton, Robert S. Strauss and Sol M. Linowitz. The appointee has responded candidly to that complaint.

"I'm not a Middle East expert," he said. "Everybody keeps pointing that out, correctly. But I am not doing this because I am a Middle East expert. I am the one who will look at the best way of tactically moving among the parties . . . There is only one peace process under way in the Middle East. We are engaged in it seriously and on the long term."

He was talking about shuttle diplomacy when he mentioned the importance of "moving among the parties." The term was used to describe Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's successful negotiations with leaders in Cairo and Jerusalem.

Variations of shuttle diplomacy have been going on ever since the Kissinger initiative.

Richard Fairbanks' mission is to build on the foundations established by these shuttling diplomats. The clear-headed manner in which he has accepted the challenge gives us confidence that he will add momentum to the Middle East peacemaking process.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Feds trying to discredit whistleblower

WASHINGTON — Four government agencies are ganging up to discredit a lone whistleblower. He is Ralph Sharer, the counterintelligence expert who uncovered shocking evidence that the Soviet KGB had obtained top-secret documents from the General Accounting Office.

Jack Anderson

Sharer's report on the KGB penetration obviously shook GAO higher-ups, who responded first by exiling him to a do-nothing job and then by arranging his transfer to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It wasn't long before the indefatigable Sharer found evidence of waste and corruption at NASA. The agency's reaction was to order Sharer fired on questionable charges.

The third federal agency embarrassed by Sharer is the FBI, which has spent two years in a vain effort to uncover the Russian espionage at the GAO. The G-men are now trying to pretend they never heard of Sharer, even though they earlier thought highly of him.

Most disturbing of all is the latest action by the Office of Special Counsel, the independent agency created specifically to protect government employees who blow the whistle on misconduct by their superiors.

When I first broke the story of Sharer's troubles, I praised the OSC for standing behind Sharer. The counsel's office did what it's supposed to do: It obtained an injunction forbidding NASA to fire Sharer until a thorough investigation of his charges had been made.

But now, I regret to say, the OSC has suddenly knuckled under and withdrawn its protection without having looked into Sharer's allegations against NASA.

Sharer will get his full investigation, however. The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee is already looking into the bureaucratic vendetta against him, and the Senate Intelligence Committee has been asked by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., to conduct a thorough investigation of the KGB-GAO scandal.

Sharer himself has provided an excellent map for Senate investigators trying to find the way through the jungle of bureaucratic coverup and obfuscation. It's a 200-page report, including substantiating documents, which details both his GAO and his NASA investigations, and the reprisals he suffered for his diligence. My associates Indy Badhwar and Dale Van Atta have seen Sharer's report, and it's a bombshell that could blow up a lot of high-level swivelchairs.

Sharer tells how, working first on his own and then with the FBI, he established that someone inside the GAO was feeding a known Soviet KGB official, Vladimir Kvasov, the publication numbers of extremely sensitive reports on military programs being audited by the agency. The Russian spy then asked for and obtained the reports at the GAO documents counter. He unwittingly gave the game away by requesting some reports before they had even been published.

Sharer recounts the attempted coverup of the spy scandal by top GAO officials, his banishment to a study of marine mammals, and his eventual transfer to NASA. There he discovered that his colleagues in the inspector general's office were guilty of the same kind of cheating they were supposed to be uncovering in other departments of the agency. In retaliation, NASA held up his salary; he has not been paid for four months.

The Sharer report then tells how his NASA bosses got another IG's office — the Housing and Urban Development Department's — to "investigate" his charges. Instead, the HUD team whitewashed its fellow IG office and delivered a personal attack on Sharer.

Footnote: In a curious Orwellian twist, a letter from an FBI agent commending Sharer for his help in an important investigation has apparently disappeared down the memory hole as far as the bureau is concerned. The letter, dated March 27, 1981, is included in Sharer's report. But its author, special agent Theodore Gardner, would neither confirm nor deny that he had written it.

WINDOWSILL POLITICS: Environmental Protection Agency boss Anne Gorsuch has revealed herself as a reader of "Doonesbury," the satirical comic strip. In a memo to agency employees, she made an oblique reference to a recent episode in which she talks a despondent EPA employee in off a window ledge — and then fires him.

The Gorsuch memo announced that there will be no more RIFs (reductions in force) this year or next, and adds: "Unfortunately, this will not be the end of rumors about the future of the agency and its employees. You will no doubt continue to be bombarded by stories intended to focus our energies and attention on 'windowsill' politics ..."

WATCH ON WASTE: The National Guard's 19 airlift units will hold their semi-annual planning conference next week in Hollywood. The 81 Air Guardsmen, whose wives are also invited, will stay at the Sheraton-Universal, with daily shuttle buses to take them to Restaurant Row, Beverly Hills and other Tinseltown attractions. Johnny Carson's sidekick, Ed McMahon, will be made an honorary brigadier general at the opening day's "Hollywood Gourmet Breakfast Buffet."

An internal memo from a National Guard airlift unit in California issued this sober warning to those who may try to emulate the hard-drinking fliers of old Hollywood movies: "CAUTION: California has enacted a new law ... that anyone apprehended driving a vehicle with only 0.10 (percent) blood alcohol goes directly to jail for 48 hours. No bail. You sit it out. Please use great discretion on this one."

CHARLEY REESE

'Get Watt' campaign being waged

There are two explanations for the nationwide campaign of character assassination which has been launched against James Watt, the secretary of the Interior.

Charley Reese

Watt is a traditional conservationist as were his predecessors prior to the Carter administration. A traditional conservationist believes in the concept of managing natural resources for the maximum benefit of all the people, including future generations.

This concept was written into our laws and is best explained by the practice of multiple use of public lands. The key task of wise management is to achieve a balance so that one use of a public resource does not work to the detriment of another.

An offshoot of the mindless revolution of the 1960s, however, was a new, more extreme approach. Actually, it was not new. It was a re-emergence of Luddism — a violent, revolutionary rejection of the Industrial Age. In the early 1800s, Luddites in northern England attacked factories and attempted to destroy the machinery. In our age, the new Luddites attempt, under the guise of preservation of the environment, to destroy the industrial machinery of the United States by disconnecting it from its energy source.

Thus, their three principal targets are coal, oil and nuclear energy. They are totally insincere in their public statements and positions. They have attacked nuclear energy by grossly exaggerating the dangers of low level radiation and accidents. They have succeeded in so encumbering the industry with regulations and lengthy permitting processes that for all practical purposes they have now denied the American people this alternative to oil.

To keep us from utilizing coal, they have pushed through strip-mining regulations which all but make it economically unfeasible. Their tactic against oil has been to set aside the most promising lands as wilderness areas and thus prohibit exploration and drilling.

Of the many foolish things Jimmy Carter did, one of the most damaging was to fill the Department of Interior with these modern Luddites. Thus, all balance was destroyed.

Watt has replaced these extremists with traditional conservationists and is returning the federal government to its traditional approach of multiple use of public resources and management. That's why the campaign against Watt is not characteristic of reasonable people who disagree but bears the stamp of revolutionary ideology. The goal is not to win an argument, but to destroy the opponent.

The second explanation is that Watt is a Christian. The bulk of America's intellectuals, particularly leftist intellectuals, are atheistic. They cannot abide a religious person for ideological reasons. If you wish to make the state supreme, you simply can't tolerate people who claim allegiance to a higher being.

I'll cite just one example to demonstrate the falseness and deceptiveness of the campaign against Watt. He has been ridiculed by many people, including Ansel Adams, the photographer, for allegedly having said there was no point in preserving natural resources because the return of Jesus was imminent. This is pre-meditated distortion of Watt's beliefs. He was asked at a Congressional hearing if he believed that resources should be preserved for future generations. Here is the answer:

"Absolutely. That is the delicate balance the Secretary of the Interior must have, to be steward for the natural resources for this generation as well as future generations. I do not know how many generations we can count on before the Lord returns. Whatever it is, we have to manage with a skill to have the resources needed for future generations."

There is no way on God's green earth that statement could be mis-interpreted by an honest person in order to back up an accusation that Watt cares nothing about the future.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Feb. 19, the 50th day of 1982. There are 315 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 19, 1963, the Soviet Union agreed to withdraw its troops from Cuba.

On this date:

In 1924, Shah Ahmad of Persia was deposed.

In 1942, Japanese bombers carried out their first attack against mainland Australia in World War II.

In 1959, an agreement was signed in London by Greece, Turkey and Britain for the independence of Cyprus.

And in 1979, Iran's new Islamic government severed all relaions with Israel and pledged support to the Palestinian war against Israel.

Ten years ago, President Nixon departed from a stop-over in Hawaii during his historic trip to China.

Five years ago, the Spanish government approved a package of measures to regulate the country's movement toward democracy.

One year ago, the Postal Rate Commission approved a three-cent increase in the price of a first-class stamp — to 18 cents. By year's end, the price had risen to 20 cents.

Today's birthdays: Former jockey Eddie Arcaro is 66 years old. Actor Lee Marvin is 58. Actress Mia Farrow is 36. And Britain's Prince Andrew is 22.

Thought For Today: Charity is the perfection and ornament of religion. — Joseph Addison, English writer-statesman (1672-1719).

A CHANGING WORLD

Finding a solution to U.S.-Japan trade fuss won't be simple

TOKYO — Japanese at all levels here are well aware of the increasing pressure in Washington to apply formal restrictions against imports of automobiles, electronic equipment and other products into the United States.

John Pinkerman

As a considerable oversimplification, both government officials and manufacturers would like to have a solution that cuts both ways — one that would mollify American critics but still would not do much to reduce the billions of dollars Japan makes by selling often superior products in the United States at prices lower than U.S.-made products bring.

However, a satisfactory solution will be a long time coming. Much depends on the resolve of each nation to protect what it considers its own interests.

Much depends on plain old toughness.

Much depends on evenhandedness in seeking a solution.

Much depends on higher productivity and higher quality in U.S. manufacturing plants.

Some of these factors are interrelated.

1. Japan, of course, is a nation that cannot survive without widespread foreign trade, particularly the export of manufactured goods — automobiles, steel, television sets, all kinds of electronic items. For that reason, it will delay, postpone, procrastinate and take every possible step toward cutting off exports to the United States and to other trading partners. The United States, on the other hand, wants a more enthusiastic welcome for its products in Japan. The fact is that there is a ready market for U.S. products in Japan. However, the big BUT is that the U.S. product must be of the highest quality and price competitive in Japanese markets. With the sad state of U.S. manufacturing today, that is a tough criterion to meet.

2. About toughness. The United States simply is not tough enough with the Japanese. The Common Market nations of Europe are tough and they have scared the daylights out of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and all the biggies of Japanese manufacturing by a threat to boycott Tokyo's products unless bilateral trade becomes more equitable. Suzuki is responding with concessions. He would do the same if President Reagan got tougher.

3. On evenhandedness. The Japanese would seem to have something to complain about. Four U.S. airlines fly to Japan. One Japanese airline, Japan Air Lines, flies to the United States. JAL has a long-standing request before the Civil Aeronautics Board for "beyond rights" — permission to use U.S. airports for flights that terminate elsewhere (examples are flights to Brazil and Mexico). The CAB has dragged its feet. Now Japan has frozen the applications of U.S. airlines for the same privileges. Japan has another point. One of its top firms, Fujitsu, was invited to bid by the Bell System on a new fiber optics telephone line from Boston to New York. Fujitsu was low bidder but Bell gave the contract to Western Electric, its own subsidiary. Japanese ask, very logically, why invite us to bid if you are not going to give the contract to the low bidder? Americans say national security was the reason a Japanese firm was denied the contract but U.S. behavior in the matter has been a bit on the stupid side.

4. On higher quality and productivity. Japanese, while joyous that the situation creates an ever-growing market worldwide for their own products, are astonished that the nation that crushed it in World War II cannot produce better products and reasonable prices in a peacetime economy. They might be advised that labor unions are a problem in America but are not in Japan. Teamwork is big in Japan; it is not in America. Big industry in the United States also shares some blame. Big business cried and cried for years that it needed tax incentives in order to capitalize new machinery and plants. The Reagan administration has granted the long-sought tax breaks. However, big business is extremely slow in getting on with what it said it would undertake — modernization that would produce better products at less cost and thus become more price competitive around the world.

Such are the problems. There is plenty of blame to hand around on both sides. Tough U.S. action is necessary to make Japan accept more American exports to Tokyo markets. But, the bottom line is that in nearly every category, the U.S. products for the most part cannot compete with Japan's in either quality or cost.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Early detection improves outlook

Dear Dr. Solomon: An uncle of mine found out he had lung cancer when he applied for a job and had to take a physical examination. Nothing was bothering him at the time and he still feels OK. Does that mean that the cancer was caught in time? — Paul, Wilmington, Del.

Dear Paul: Whether the cancer was caught in time is something only the physician treating him can say. Unfortunately, the prognosis for lung cancer is poor.

However, at least one study has shown that the outlook is best for those who are diagnosed before they begin to have symptoms. In this respect, the prospects of overcoming the disease would seem to be better for your uncle.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My granddaughter is 14 years old and has diabetes. She has always been an outgoing youngster and does not seem to be too upset over her condition. What I'm wondering about is whether she will have personality changes in the future. Has anyone ever studied this? — Mrs. K.G., Orlando, Fla.

Dear Mrs. G.: At least one study has shown that diabetic children are no different from nondiabetic children in regard to their degree of emotional disturbance, intellectual capacity or the social problems they may have. Your description of your granddaughter suggests that she is handling the situation in a positive fashion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The so-called experts say that people will live longer if they stop smoking. How can they be so sure? Maybe people who stop smoking exercise more, and that's why they live longer. Isn't it possible there are other reasons besides not smoking? — Ralph, Albany, N.Y.

Dear Ralph: It's not the so-called experts who say that giving up cigarettes prolongs life, but cold, hard data. To cite just one study, researchers at the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center in Oakland, Calif. studied about 10,000 smokers and ex-smokers. According to Dr. Gary D. Friedman, the decrease in mortality among those who gave up smoking was due to that fact and could not be explained by any other characteristic of those who quit smoking.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 32 years old and have been going for annual physical checkups for the past 10 years. At my last visit, my doctor suggested I come back in two years. Is he simply too busy to see me more often, or is this something new? Most of my friends either see a doctor every year or they don't go at all. — Pete, Miami

Dear Pete: The value of an annual checkup is being discussed among physicians with increasing frequency. Some maintain that, if a patient does not have a problem, the annual checkup is a waste of time and money. Apparently your doctor has accepted that line of reasoning.

Of course, where a problem does exist, early diagnosis and treatment can help minimize its effects. In any event, an annual checkup is much better than not seeing a doctor at all.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Rd., Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Miracle drug found in Mexican yam?

By WARREN FROELICH
Copley News Service

Maybe Juan Ponce de Leon looked in the wrong part of the New World.

Instead of exploring the Everglades of Florida for his miracle elixir of youth, maybe he should have been searching the jungles of Mexico instead.

If he had, he might have encountered a curious, yellow-brown yam whose chemistry yields a strange substance with a virtually unpronounceable name — dehydroepiandrosterone or DHEA.

A "fountain of youth" flowing in a Mexican yam? Or maybe just a fountain of old-fashioned snake oil dressed in formal nomenclature?

WELL, SCIENTISTS from several reputable research institutions around the United States are trying to find out.

Indeed, many are intrigued, if not impressed, by early test results.

So is Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who wants the federal government to sink tax dollars into a large investigation of the substance.

"I know it's difficult to undertake new projects like this in times of extreme budget cutting," Cranston said. "But we're pushing for both federal and private support."

To be sure, no one is quite ready to say that the secrets of perennial youth are locked in Mexican yams or even DHEA.

BUT SCIENTISTS who are studying the substance can barely restrain their enthusiasm. In several tests, DHEA not only has appeared to make older animals look younger, scientists say, it has shown abilities to prevent certain tumors and control obesity — without loss of appetite.

"This is a drug with a potential multimillion-patient constituency," gushes Dr. William Regelson, professor of medicine and microbiology at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

Such statements may be a touch premature, since humans don't work in precisely the same way as laboratory mice and rats — biologically speaking. Indeed, the opposite is often the case.

"Though the limited data with rodents is interesting," cautions Evan Hadley, an official with the National Institute on Aging (NIA), "whether it has any significance in man is as yet unknown."

Adds Dr. Aman Buzdar, a cancer researcher at the M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston: "We don't want this to end up as another Laetrile-type drug for desperate people. We only have a little data, and all of it's in animals."

BUT PLANS TO TEST the chemical with humans are on the drawing board.

Mexican scientists hope to begin some clinical work this year to see if the chemical works on persons with cancer, diabetes and hypertension. On Feb. 14, officials from Mexico and a private research foundation based in Washington, D.C., plan to sign a funding agreement that will outline proposed study plans.

The research will be set up to pass stringent FDA guidelines, officials say.

In this country, long-term studies have been proposed to see if DHEA can prevent breast and colon cancer among high-risk populations. Such studies could get under way later this year, pending the successful outcome of animal safety tests.

"It is imperative that we attempt to undertake clinical trials with DHEA," says Philadelphia biochemist Arthur G. Schwartz. "This substance appears to have broad anti-carcinogenic action with no apparent toxicity."

Controversy continues over feeding program

WASHINGTON — As Congress begins to do battle over President Reagan's proposed fiscal 1983 budget cuts, backers of the summer feeding program for poor children already have fought a skirmish over what they see as a move to kill the much-maligned program now.

Funding for the summer program was cut this year and the administration has recommended no funding for 1983.

But some supporters feel the administration has been trying to kill the program by also delaying regulations that sponsors say they need to run programs this summer. The final rules were due Jan. 1, but weren't published until this week, after a nutrition group filed suit over the delay.

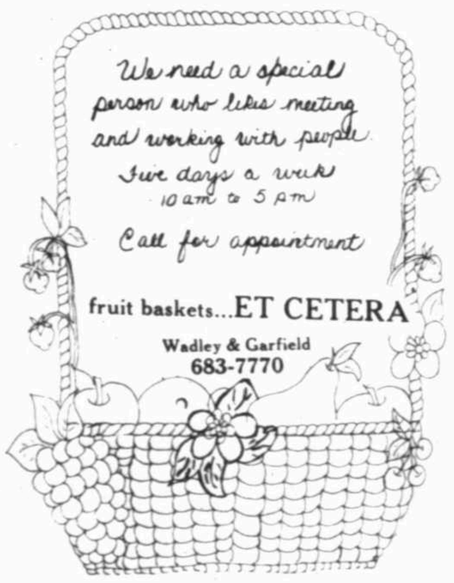

Rep. William F. Goodling, R-Pa., ranking minority member of the House Education subcommittee on elementary and secondary education, complained earlier this month that "the bureaucratic foot-dragging ... appears to be a deliberate and blatant attempt to 'deep-six' this program next summer."

Without lead time, he added, the program will be plagued by the same "shoddy operations" as in past years, with administration spokesmen "quick to say 'We told you so.' " In a Feb. 5 letter to Budget Director David A. Stockman, Goodling said the regulations were needed to spare the administration "unnecessary embarrassment and adverse national publicity. We don't need 'relish, ketchup or egg' on our face next summer."

He and several other influential members of Congress, including Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., and Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, criticized the first version of the regulations, published Dec. 11, as going too far in restricting the eligibility of groups to sponsor the program.

The summer feeding program started in 1968 and grew by 1980 to the point where it was serving 2.3 million children at an annual cost of nearly $120 million. Changes envisioned by new controls in last summer's reconciliation bill are estimated to cut the program to $60 million a year.

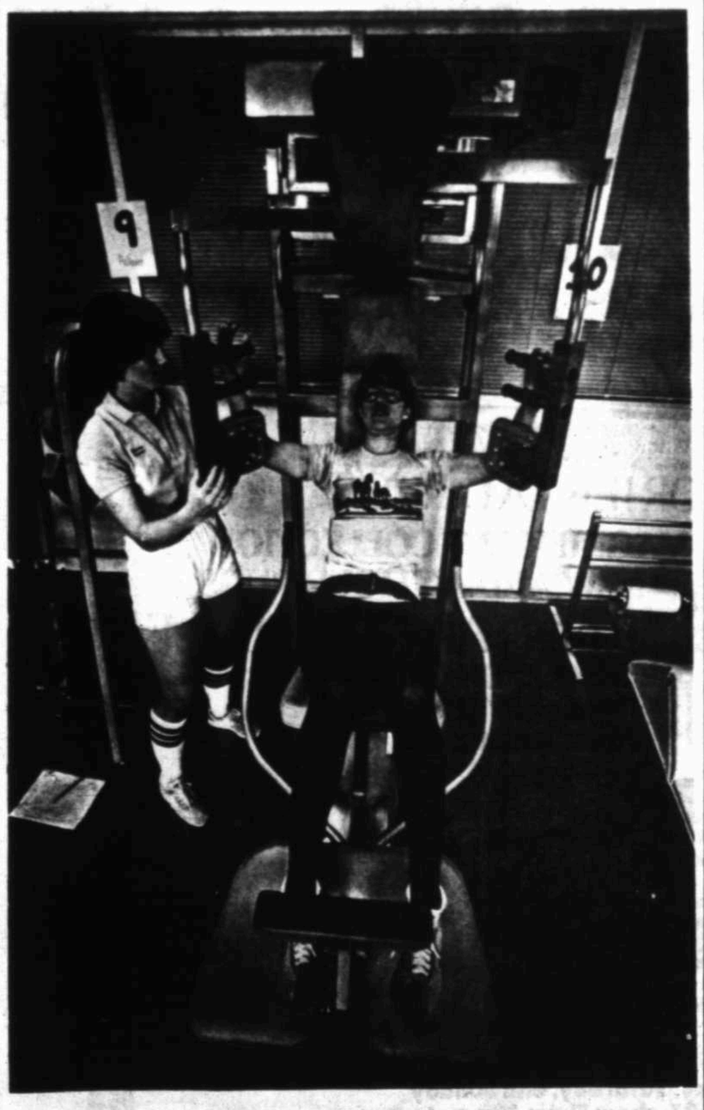

The program has been plagued in recent years by reports of fraud and abuse by contractors and private sponsors. Thomas McBride, the inspector general of the Agriculture Department at the time, uncovered kickback schemes, inflated meal counts and vendors serving children rotten food.

DEAR ABBY

Long distance mothering

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old female and a college senior. I have lived alone in apartments for four years and have been self-supporting for a year and a half. (My parents are now supporting me while I finish college.)

My problem is that my mom wants me to call home long distance every day. If I have a problem, she can tell it in my voice, and she pesters me until I tell her about it — in detail. Then she gives me a lot of usually good — but unasked for — advice.

I appreciate her concern, but the result is that I don't solve even minor problems myself.

Mom also wants a recap of my entire day, which doesn't leave me much privacy. "Where did you go? Who did you see?" Until a month ago when I blew up and refused to continue, she insisted that I call her when I got home from every date so she'd know I was "all right." (She'd wait up.) If I didn't call by 12:30, she'd call me every 15 minutes until she reached me. If she couldn't reach me, she'd call my apartment manager.

I've tried to cut down on the calls, using the bills as an excuse, but she insists her peace of mind is worth every penny.

I've never given her any reason to mistrust me. I lead a very wholesome, quiet life.

I love my mother very much, but I need more time between calls to learn how to handle my own life alone. Help! — SMOTHERED BY LOVE

DEAR SMOTHERED: The problem appears to be your mother's. She needs to advise, direct and control you. For the good of both of you, lovingly suggest that she get professional help and stop trying to live your life. Even though she means well, she is stunting your emotional growth.

DEAR ABBY: As most people know, women live longer than their husbands, but do you know why? My doctor has advanced an interesting theory based on his studies in the medical profession.

Men die younger because of tension caused by lack of sex. It seems that wives, as they grow older, find many excuses to deprive their husbands of sex. Lack of sex causes tension buildup, which leads to strokes and heart attacks.

If wives want their husbands to live long, they will give them lots of loving. I'm 68 and have already had one heart attack and I'm afraid it is my fate to have more. This letter may, however, cause some wives to have second thoughts. — LACKING LOVE AND HATING IT

DEAR LACKING LOVE: What about women who are also being deprived of sex? They are faced with the same "tension buildup" as men. There are many reasons why strokes and heart attacks occur in both men and women, and sexual frustration may contribute some, but I think your doctor's "theory" is too simplistic.

(Problems? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Ideas to help entertain with style

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Small families and small spaces — no less loving warmth, but certainly less room for the celebration — may be the hallmark of dinner parties in the '80s.

This shift in family size, and in lifestyle, has had a major impact on cooking in America. The authors of "The New American Cuisine" (Harmony Books, N.Y., $27.50), have traced those changes, and propose strategies for coping with them.

Not just survival of the singles, mind you, but doing things in style, entertaining with elan, capitalizing on the opportunities afforded by smaller scale.

The book was compiled by editors of Metropolitan Home magazine, a publication playing on the sophisticated tastes of this new population group. Carol Helms, one of the editors, talked about the book and the three major changes in cooking that it traces in an interview.

— Fresh ingredients. Consumers are willing to pay more for fresh food even as consumption of pre-packaged, frozen foods increases.

— Stylish presentation. From table settings to garnishes, these new cooks realize how important eye-appeal can be to cuisine. They also have the cash it takes to finance this spiffy look.

— Efficient use of time. While fresh ingredients are paramount, an increase in the number of working women has made popular such appliances as convection and microwave ovens, as well as other time-saving procedures to cut preparation time without sacrificing quality.

"We learned that rapid preparations — such as chicken with rosemary — could be as elegant as an elaborate all-day ordeal," she writes. "Eighties cooks are more knowledgeable, more relaxed and thus more stimulated and creative about food."

The cooks of the '80s are comfortable with techniques (the book explains such basics as poaching, braising and broiling in a nicely illustrated section), so they can choose what's plentiful and fresh and use it in deftly prepared dishes.

Our menu puts these techniques into practice with a smaller-scaled but very elegant feast.

WINTERTIME DINNER PARTY
Roast Goose with Sausage-Apple Stuffing
Wild Rice and Mushrooms
Julienne of Vegetables
Chestnut Mousse in Meringue
Chestnuts in Rum

Goose is the main dish, stuffed with a sausage and apple mixture and roasted to a golden crisp turn. It is served with wild rice and mushrooms and fresh vegetables (leeks, zucchini and carrots simply blanced and finished in butter) which play up the fresh food theme.

The goose roasts about 4 hours, and should stand another 30 minutes, giving you plenty of time to garnish the tray and get the side dishes out. Have the vegetables cut up and blanched well before serving time, then toss them in butter in a skillet to reheat right before serving.

ROAST GOOSE
1 (12- to 14-lb.) goose
Salt, freshly ground black pepper
2 lbs. bulk breakfast sausage
2 large onions, chopped
4 large tart cooking apples, peeled, cored and diced
1 (6-oz.) can frozen orange juice concentrate
½ cup port wine
2 tbsps. Dijon mustard

Thaw the goose completely before cooking. Remove the giblets and rinse the goose under cold water. Pat it dry. Rub it inside and out with salt and pepper.

Cover the giblets and neck with 3 cups water. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer the giblets until tender (30 to 35 minutes). Drain and chop the giblets and cut the meat from the neck. Discard the bones.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Fry the sausage until it is brown and crumbly. Drain the fat, push the meat to the sides and add the onions, apples and chopped giblets and neck meat. Saute over medium heat for 5 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat, blend the contents well and set aside until cool enough to handle.

Just before roasting the goose, lightly pack the sausage mixture into the cavity and truss it with string or skewers. Line a shallow roasting pan with foil and put the stuffed goose on a rack. Roast it for 3½ to 4 hours, or until the goose is tender (the legs will move up and down easily).

Defrost the orange juice concentrate and mix it with the wine and mustard. During the last hour of roasting, baste the goose every 15 minutes with the mixture. Let the goose stand at least 30 minutes before carving. Makes 8 servings.

Wild rice is a costly ingredient, and you may wish to substitute 4 cups of cooked rice for the wild rice in this recipe, using the Cointreau as part of the cooking liquid called for on the package. Proceed with the sauteed mushrooms, but stir them into less-expensive rice.

WILD RICE WITH MUSHROOMS
1 lb. wild rice
8 cups chicken stock
cup Cointreau or Triple Sec
1 tsp. salt
½ cup butter
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced

Rinse the rice several times in cold water, removing any foreign paticles. In a heavy, 4-quart saucepan, combine the rice, stock, Cointreau, salt and all but 2 tablespoons of the butter. Bring to a boil, lower heat and simmer the rice, covered tightly, for 30 to 35 minutes, until the liquid is absorbed.

Melt the remaining butter in a skillet and saute the mushrooms for 3 to 4 minutes. Toss with the cooked rice and garnish with parsley.

Korean food distinct

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Western influence has had a marked effect on the ancient culture of Korea, a diplomat from the southern part of that divided nation once told me. But, he added with pride, it has not changed the classic Korean cuisine.

Korean cookery has a distinctive quality that sets it apart, not only from the West, but from the kitchens of other Oriental nations.

China goes in heavily for pork and Japan is a nation of fish eaters. Koreans eat meat and fish, but the emphasis is on vegetables, both wild and cultivated.

There are other differences. Korea has never been a tea-drinking nation. In the old days, water had to be boiled in both Japan and China to make it fit to drink, but Korea has its own pure mineral water, so Koreans never acquired a taste for tea.

Today, Americans are becoming attracted to Korean food, as evidenced by the spread of restaurants serving the foods of that country.

"Ten years ago, there were probably only three Korean restaurants in the United States," I was told by Ross Kasian, a Korean who heads an international furniture company in the United States. "Today there are about three dozen."

"There are two reasons why I personally prefer the food of my homeland," said Kasian. "As a gourmet, I find that spices are used more judiciously than in other Oriental kitchens. And, as a health buff, I prefer Korean food because there is a balance between meat or fish and vegetables. Also we don't go in much for cream or starches.

Kasian drinks Korean mineral water because he claims it has healthful properties, as well as a pleasant taste.

"If you feel stuffy, or have indigestion, it will make you feel better," he declared.

Korea's best known vegetable dish is Kimchi, which is actually a sort of pickle mixture. Here is a recipe.

2 pounds mixture of cabbage,

yellow turnip and cucumber

2 tablespoons salt

1½ tablespoons minced onion

1 teaspoon minced garlic

2-3rds teaspoon minced

gingerroot

½ tablespoon ground red pepper

Wash and drain vegetables. Peel turnip and cucumber. Cut vegetables into small pieces. Sprinkle with salt and let stand 4 hours. Press out accumulated liquid. Mix vegetables with onion, garlic, gingerroot and red pepper. Place vegetables in jar and cover tightly. Leave jar in refrigerator 3 or 4 days. Serve with meals. Makes about 2 pints.——

Unusual ingredients add different flavor to chili

By BARBARA HANSEN
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Chili fans seem constantly in search of new twists to their favorite dish.

To aid in the search, here are recipes that add variety through unusual additions such as fruit or Italian sausage.

Pineapple may sound like an odd ingredient for chili, but the combination of meat and fruit is popular in Mexico and other Latin countries. And the ingredients of this dish are surprisingly close to Chinese sweet and sour pork — pineapple, green pepper, onion and cubes of pork — so the taste should be familiar.

Italian sausage and ground beef blend in a chili with more conventional seasonings. And for vegetarians, there's a chili that combines kidney and pinto beans with carrots, zucchini, green peppers, chilis and tomatoes.

Chili Southwest and Easy Beef Chili should please those with more traditional tastes.

CHILI WITH PINEAPPLE

1 1-2 pounds pork shoulder, cut in 1-inch cubes
1 tablespoon oil
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
1-4 teaspoon black pepper
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
1 (1-pound 4-ounce) can pineapple chunks in juice
1-2 cup beef broth
1 green pepper, sliced

Brown pork well in oil in large skillet over medium heat. Season with garlic salt, seasoned salt and pepper. Add onion and saute 1 minute. Sprinkle chili powder over all. Add tomato sauce and paste. Drain pineapple and add all juice to chili. Add beef broth and mix well. Cover partially and simmer 1 hour. Add pineapple chunks and green pepper. Simmer 10 minutes longer. Serve with rice. Makes 6 servings.

CHILI WITH SAUSAGE

1 pound mild Italian sausage
1 pound ground beef
2 cups chopped onion
1 medium green pepper, chopped
2 large cloves garlic, crushed
1 (28-ounce) can peeled tomatoes
1 cup water
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 tablespoon salt
1 bay leaf
1-2 teaspoon black pepper
Few drops hot pepper sauce
1 (1-pound 14-ounce) can kidney beans

Cut sausage into thin slices and brown on both sides in large skillet or Dutch oven. Remove from pan and drain off fat. Cook ground beef in pan, breaking into small pieces. Add onion, green pepper and garlic. Cook until meat is slightly browned. Stir in sausage, tomatoes, water, chili powder, salt, bay leaf, pepper and hot pepper sauce. Cook, covered, over low heat for 1 1-2 hours, stirring occasionally. Add beans and cook 30 minutes longer. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CHILI SOUTHWEST

2 pounds top round steak
3 tablespoons oil
2 cups chopped onions
2 cups thinly slivered green peppers
1 (15-ounce) can tomato puree
1 cup beef broth
1 1-2 teaspoons salt
1-2 teaspoon black pepper
1 1-2 to 2 tablespoons chili powder
2 teaspoons cumin seeds
3-4 teaspoon garlic powder
2 (15-ounce) cans pinto beans, drained

Trim fat from meat. Lay meat on board. With rim of saucer, pound meat to tenderize. Cut meat into 1-2 -inch cubes. Heat oil in heavy skillet or Dutch oven. Add onions and green peppers and saute 5 minutes. Add meat and brown, stirring often. Add tomato puree, beef broth, salt, pepper, chili powder, cumin seeds, garlic powder and beans. Cover and cook over low heat 1 to 1 1-2 hours, stirring occasionally. Thicken if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Outlook for 1982

By Merle Ellis

It's folly to predict, particularly in the meat business, but it looks as if 1982 might be an interesting year – if not an inexpensive one. The trend in meat prices, it is fairly safe to predict, will again be upward. Beef prices will lead the way, as usual, followed to a more modest extent by pork and poultry.

By far the largest percentage of case space in most meat markets has, until recently, been devoted to beef. That meat has been the choice of most Americans for years, but that seems to be changing.

Beef consumption in this country is on the decline. There are a number of reasons, among them the perceived health benefits of eating less red meat. For years, the beef industry has sat idly by, not openly refuting the false and misleading accusations being made against beef.

But, the major reason for its decline in popularity is price. The costs of production are rapidly pricing beef off the plates of many consumers and 1982 may be the year in which pork takes over the number one spot in the meat cases and on the tables of America.

Pork has recaptured much of its old popularity with consumers. When the price of beef went up, people turned to pork to keep meat on the table. They discovered that they liked it and per-capita pork consumption last year reached an all-time high. That trend is likely to continue. Poultry is gaining an increasing share of consumers' dollars, as well. Poultry has gone from two-pounds-per-capita consumption 40 years ago to over 50 pounds today. There are experts who predict that poultry will surpass not only beef but pork to become number one in the meat case before this year is out.

Beef, pork and poultry, with a smattering in some markets of lamb and veal, have always been the mainstay of the meat business. They still are, and while you may see less beef and more poultry, they will continue to be.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

The prize for the best-played hand at the Merit Team Championship in Amsterdam was awarded to Polish internationalist, A. Wilkosz for his dummy play on this hand.

North's jump to three hearts was a limit raise, showing about 10-12 points. However, we do not recommend that action with only three-card support—we prefer four trumps for our jump raises. Since South's opening bid was better than minimum he happily went on to game.

West got off to the good lead of a trump. Declarer won in hand and immediately led a spade. West hopped up with the ace and played another trump. Dummy's eight won, and declarer continued with the king of spades and a ruff, in the hope that the suit would break 3-3; naturally, he took the precaution of ruffing high.

It now seems that declarer must lose a diamond and two clubs in addition to the ace of spades, but Wilkosz proved how deceptive appearances can be. Declarer continued with a diamond to the queen and East's ace, and East could do no better than return the suit. Declarer won in hand, discarding a club from the board, and led a low club to the nine. East won the queen, but he was end played. A diamond would give declarer a ruff-and-sluff; if East returned a spade, declarer would ruff high, enter dummy with the king of trumps and discard a club on dummy's long spade; and a club return by East would be run to the jack.

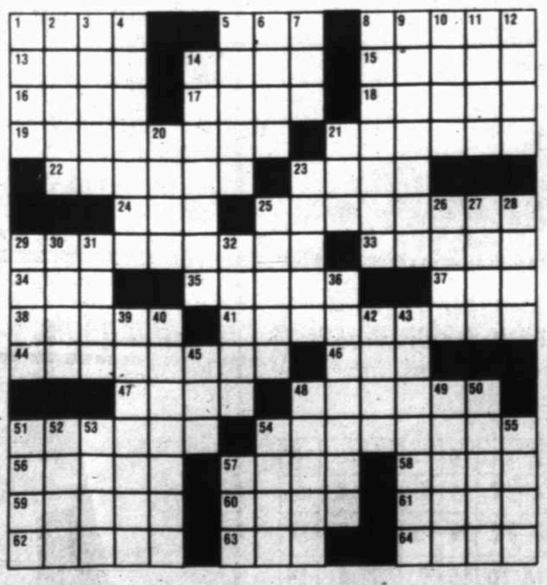

It might seem that West can defeat the contract by shedding a club rather than a diamond on the third spade. But declarer can maneuver to force East down to A-x in diamonds and K-Q-x in clubs. The same end play is then available in clubs.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? In Rapides Parish, school continues in prayer of defiance

By ART HARRIS
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PINEVILLE, La. — At precisely 7:45 a.m. Principal Robert Cespiva eyed the wall clock at E.I. Barron Elementary School and made the day's first official announcement over the intercom: "Will everyone please stand while Matt Bartlett leads us in prayer."

A fifth-grader stepped to the microphone, a pint-sized point man in Rapides Parish's (county) defiance of the U.S. Supreme Court. "Dear Heavenly Father," said Matt, 11, as students bowed their heads, "we are thankful for today. We ask that You let us live without committing any sins. In Your name we pray. Amen."

And with that, he was off to class, having sent a message from this Bible Belt of bayou rebels all the way to Washington, D.C., via the Lord.

Louisiana's law allowing voluntary prayer sessions in public schools was ruled unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court last month, but many schools are praying away. The people of Rapides Parish say God and President Reagan are on their side.

As for the Supreme Court, "To heck with them," said Ina LaBorde, who defied a federal busing order last year to send her daughter, Michele, to all-white Buckeye High School. "I'm not going to let anyone tell me when my child can pray. If we're breaking the law, so be it."

ALL ACROSS AMERICA, people like Ina LaBorde are interpreting Reagan's election and his vow to get government off the backs of the people as a license to do their will, even if it goes against the law of the land.

"I feel like Reagan is cheering us on from the sidelines," said school board member Arthur Martin, 63, a local real estate man whose white Cadillac sports a "My Nationality, American" bumper sticker. "He keeps making references to God on the TV. In fact, he's the most outspoken president, in reference to God, we've ever had. I figure if he had to take a stand, he'd come out for prayer in public schools.

"Just because the Supreme Court says it doesn't mean it's the law," he said. "The people are the law of the land. Our great nation was founded by a bunch of renegades who got tired of taxation without representation and rebelled against the British. This is our Boston Tea Party."

The Supreme Court ruled this tea party unconstitutional when it upheld a 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that Louisiana's voluntary school prayer law violated the First Amendment's provision for separation of church and state. But that hasn't stopped principals like Robert Cespiva from holding daily prayer, or students like Matt Bartlett from vying for the honor of saying it.

Cespiva, jovial, gray-haired, and an educator for 39 years, said his 525 students will keep right on praying until the Rapides Parish School Board orders him to stop. And the board has no intention of doing that.

"We're going to keep doing things the way we've always done them until our school prayer policy is challenged," said board President Terry Farrar. "We're closer than Washington to what the people in this community want. The courts have gone too far. They've reached the point where they're trying to regulate everything about our lives."

THE SUPREME COURT thought it settled the matter 20 years ago, in its 1963 ruling against organized prayer in public schools. In 1980, Louisiana went around the ruling, or thought it did, by making the prayer voluntary.

Each teacher could invite students to offer a prayer before classes began. If a student didn't want to participate he had the option to sit quietly or leave the room. If no student volunteered, the teacher could pray.

Rapides Parish and nearby Jefferson Parish were among several school boards that quickly adopted a voluntary prayer plan.

But Louisiana's American Civil Liberties Union challenged Jefferson Parish's one-minute school prayer sessions, and last August the Circuit Court struck down the state law and the Jefferson Parish guidelines.

The appellate court said the "unmistakable message of the Supreme Court's teachings is that the state cannot employ a religious means to serve otherwise legitimate secular interests."

In Rapides Parish, heavily Baptist, anti-busing, anti-abortion and pro-Reagan, school prayer is just the latest chapter in a history of resistance.

A local judge who countermanded a direct federal court busing order, finally backing down under threat of contempt charges, was last year's folk hero.

For the past decade the school board has dragged its feet over integration, spending well over $1 million in legal fees to fight forced busing. The board is still in court protesting a federal desegregation plan.

"Rapides Parish is the Old South," said school board member Jo Ann Kellogg. "It still has southern traditions and values that make it peculiar and attractive. Change is very suspect. Everyone says, 'Yes, ma'am' and 'No ma'am.' Men stand up when a lady walks in the room. They take her coat and open the car door. It's nice. People believe in common courtesy."

School board member Martin, the author of the parish's school prayer plan, said, "I'd rather be right with God than the Supreme Court." His plan calls for schools to allow "students wishing to enter into communication with any Supreme Being" to set aside time at the beginning of each day.

AT BARRON SCHOOL a student is picked each morning to deliver a prayer. Students have used the occasion to bless parents, teachers, Principal Cespiva, favorite bird dogs, even the people of Poland.

"I like it," said Holly Colle, 11. "It helps us on our tests."

At lunch time teachers select a student to say grace. "We really need it at lunch," the principal grinned, "especially when they serve canned beef."

Martin said he tried to word the guidelines so it would be impossible for any court to throw it out on constitutional grounds. The school board is holding its breath.

Board member Douglas Jenkins said he backed it because voting against it would have been tantamount to "voting against baseball, America, motherhood and Chevrolets."

The only vocal dissident was a Lutheran minister, the Rev. Tom Speidel.

"Prayer is very central to my life," he told the school board. "We are very much Bible-oriented. But my child does not go to school to pray. She goes to learn.... A public school is set up strictly to educate its students how to survive in this world. It has no responsibility to care for the soul."

At Bolton High School, Principal Jesse Doyle has set aside 30 seconds at the beginning of each day for "silent meditation," and most students don't seem to mind.

"It gives you a chance to get your thoughts together," said senior Terri Toomey, 17. "You don't have to pray. If you're an atheist, you can sit and think."

But a handful of students resent the sessions. The dissenters point out that the meditation period ends with, "Amen," giving it a religous flavor.

"It's called 'silent meditation,' but that's justa 7over-up for prayer in a public school," said school newspaper co-editor Laura Struck, 18. "If you want to 'meditate' or be quiet, you can always go to the library. If you want to pray, go to church or a parochial school. But leave God at home."

SEVERAL STUDENTS said they are reluctant to make a fuss because of peer pressure. And some say they are perplexed by educators who teach respect for the law then violate it.

"If it's against the law, why do it?" wondered senior Brent Caplan, 18, one of a handful of Jewish students. "I'm disgusted. If they get away with usurping the Constitution, what's stopping them from breaking another law?"

But Theta Pate, a fifth-grade teacher at Barron, defended the prayer:

"We are a nation governed by rules and laws. If you break them, you pay the penalty. The Supreme Court says I'm breaking the rules, but I'm working for the good of the majority. I'm willing to pay the penalty. We're not violating anybody's right here. What are we going to do next? Take God's name off our coins?"

Film traces writer's disappearance

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sissy Spacek remembers her trip to Argentina a few years ago:

"I was there doing publicity for 'Carrie,' and I really knew nothing about the politics of the country. I found out from people who told me of friends and relatives who had disappeared. Also revealing was the fact that I couldn't go anywhere without a bodyguard. Even when I went jogging in the park, two men with guns went along with me — and had a lot of trouble keeping up."

The actress' education in Latin American politics was furthered with her new film, "Missing," which she made in Mexico last year. Although the locale isn't specified in the movie, the story obviously takes place in Chile, during the 1973 overthrow of the Allende government.

The Polygram-Universal release uses real names in tracing the disappearance of Charles Horman, a Harvard-educated writer and filmmaker who was taken from his Santiago home by the Chilean military. His wife and father, played by Miss Spacek and Jack Lemmon, battle the country's new rulers — and their American co-conspirators — to learn of the young man's fate.

It is a powerful indictment of United States complicity with military oppression, co-written and directed by an expert in political melodrama: Greek-born Costa-Gavras, who also made "Z," "The Confession" and "Special Section."

"I met Costa eight months before the picture began," Miss Spacek recalls. "I had seen several of his pictures and had been impressed with them. He told me the story of the Hormans, which he had first seen as a tiny news item. Then he read the book by Thomas Hauser and was certain he wanted to make the movie.

"I figured I had to talk politics with Costa-Gavras, and he must have thought, 'She's a perfect fool.' I'll admit that what appealed to me about the story was the relationship between the daughter-in-law and the father-in-law," the actress says.

"I hadn't really been aware of what had happened in Chile, and I felt ashamed that I could be living in the United States and not be aware of what the government had been doing. If the story could affect me so strongly, I thought the movie might affect other people the same way."

Miss Spacek met Lemmon last year at the Academy Awards, where she was a nominee for best actress for "Coal Miner's Daughter." He told her: "I've got a thousand dollars on you to win." She did.

Next day, she left to begin filming "Missing" in Mexico City, where the film company greeted her with an eight-foot pinata in the shape of Oscar.

Trouble began at once. The Mexican army, which had been scheduled to portray Chilean forces, declined to participate. So did the Mexico City police.

"That was fine with me," says Miss Spacek. "I felt better knowing that the generals were actors and the guns were rubber. Even the tanks were cardboard."

The next crisis concerned Lemmon. The conclusion of "Buddy, Buddy" had been delayed because Walter Matthau had injured his back in an onstage fall.

"Costa was in shock when Jack didn't appear," says Miss Spacek. "We had shot two weeks and had no more scenes without Jack. Walter worked in the final scenes in Honolulu when he shouldn't have, and Jack himself fell and broke a rib. But he took a flight to Los Angeles and then to Mexico City, arriving just in time."

Miss Spacek and husband Jack Fisk, who made "Raggedy Man" together, are planning another movie, "Deep Ellum." First comes another production: Miss Spacek is expecting a baby in June.

Clark: 'Hooked on Classics' strange

By DENNIS HUNT
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Most pop music fans tend not to like their classical music straight. They prefer it with the symphonic layers peeled off, leaving only a hummable melody that can be served up in some trendy pop form.

Examples of "popped up" classical music from "A Fifth of Beethoven" and "Bumble Boogie," to the discoized "Theme From 2001." It's fun to hear these mostly stately melodies immersed in peppy pop rhythms.

The latest of these classical tampering is "Hooked on Classics," a Top 10 single on RCA Records that was assembled by arranger-composer-keyboardist Louis Clark and performed by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. On this one, familiar melodies from works like Rimsky-Korsakov's "Flight of the Bumble Bee," Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and Grieg's Piano Concerto in A Minor have been strung together and revved up to mesh with a bouncy disco beat. The surprise hit of the winter, the single has boosted the "Hooked on Classics" album into the Top 10.

To most pop fans, the single and album are merely cute diversions. Others, however, are fuming at what they consider a desecration of great works.

"Some of the high-brow newspapers in England were a bit uncomplimentary," explained Clark, who seemed amused by it all. "I haven't destroyed the classics. People don't have to listen to these records. The original versions and the original scores are still around for people to enjoy. 'Hooked on Classics' is just fun. It's not meant to harm anything."

All this had made Clark, a 34-year-old Englishman with a lazy, rather distant manner, an instant celebrity. He's still befuddled by it all.

Last year before the "Hooked on Classics" fanfare, Clark, who normally works behind the scenes, grew somewhat accustomed to being surrounded by media. However, in that situation, an Electric Light Orchestra tour, the focus wasn't on him. All the media representatives were hounding Jeff Lynne, the leader of ELO.

On that tour Clark was playing a synthesizer that simulated an orchestra string section. Though he had been arranging and conducting string parts for ELO albums since 1974, this was his first tour with that band — or any major rock band.

Clark, who hadn't been on stage since playing bass for an obscure '60s rock band, is well-known for arranging and conducting strings on rock albums. His most recent credit is Ozzy Osbourne's hit album "Diary of a Madman."

"I've done a lot of projects," Clark observed, "but 'Hooked on Classics' is probably the strangest."

The "Hooked on Classics" single and album were big hits in England last year. "We never thought they'd go over in America," Clark said. "The success here is a complete shock. With the music business in a slump the way it is, maybe Americans were ready for a diversion like this. When very little is selling, often something as different as this will sell."

Though he did most of the work of "Hooked on Classics," it wasn't Clark's idea. He was hired by Don Reedman, who co-produced this album. Reedman and co-producer Don Jarratt were working for K-Tel label famed for packaging greatest hits albums — which released the album in England. K-Tel was merely cashing in on a trend. Medley singles, featuring snippets of hits by the Beatles or the Beach Boys or the Bee Gees, were the rage in England last summer. So the producers figured it was a perfect time for a single offering bits of classical melodies pulsating at a disco tempo.

For Clark, the assignment was part fun and part nightmare. "In putting the single together," he recalled, "I had to do lots of research and go through tons of scores to find out which bits we wanted to use. We wound up using 17 or 18 bits. Then there was the problem of getting them to fit into that disco beat. Some of the pieces were originally written to be played at that kind of tempo, but a lot of them had to be adapted to that fast tempo.

"Some were never written for an orchestra in the first place so I had to orchestrate them and make them fit this format. In some of the older pieces the orchestration was very thin so I had to beef it up to make it fit in with everything else. There was also a problem with key. They were in different keys so it was hard to fit the end of one to the beginning of another. Changing keys created a new series of problems.

"But the biggest problem of all was just getting all the bits to flow from one to the other and sound natural and not disjointed. Putting this together was like putting together a jigsaw puzzle."

That was only the beginning. When the single became a hit, Clark was hired to do the album. He had to go through the whole process many more times to assemble pieces like "Hooked on Bach," "Hooked on Tchaikovsky" and "Hooked on Mozart."

Lana Turner is guest star on 'Falcon Crest'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Lana Turner recalls her self-inquiry upon returning to films: "Oh dear Lord, will I remember how to act in front of a camera?"

Television viewers can judge for themselves tonight when the long-standing glamor girl makes a guest appearance on the CBS melodrama "Falcon's Crest." She plays the wealthy Jacqueline Perrault, mother of Robert Foxworth, who stages a mysterious return to the California wine country for a confrontation with the imperious Angie Channing — Jane Wyman.

Apparently the producers of "Falcon Crest" were pleased with Miss Turner's return; they're already talking about bringing her back, perhaps as a semi-regular. "They're even suggesting a series for me," she said happily.

She has more immediate hope for the TV appearance: "I would like it to prove that I am not a recluse, that I am not retired, that I still look good and that I am an active woman."

Indeed she seemed in excellent form as she sat down for an interview in her Century City tower apartment. She is more slender than in her sweater-girl days, and still a beauty at 61.

The Lana Turner saga, among the most legendary in Hollywood history, continues despite enough setbacks to terminate a normal career. Her most recent struggle has been to regain her health, and she said that she has won.

The first problem she faced was drinking: "I drank, but I was never a slurring, falling-down drunk. Drinking never made me high or depressed. I simply used it as a habit. I was pouring that junk into my system without realizing what I was doing."

Miss Turner said she quit alcohol two years, then went on an herb diet. After finishing a play in Houston in 1980 she developed a loss of equilibrium. After months of medical tests — "I even tried a hypnotist" — her weight had dropped to 95 pounds and doctors still couldn't diagnose her problem. Finally they decided that the herbs "had knocked my nervous system out of kilter." Now she's on a normal diet and weighs in at 105.

The reason for her doubts about acting in front of a camera: "The last movie I did was in 1978, a picture called 'Witch's Brew' with Richard Benjamin and Teri Garr. It was a good part, something different; I played the queen of the witches. I don't know if the picture was ever released.

"In the meantime I've done stage work, which is entirely different from movies. I wasn't sure if I could go back."

Her fears mounted on the first day of shooting, when she found herself climbing a cliff in high heels on a Malibu location.

"Jane (Wyman) was smart; she wore her golf shoes," said Miss Turner. "But there I was, thinking, 'What am I doing up here on a cliff, falling all over the place?' I didn't know my head from my elbow — I cleaned that one up."

"They applauded and whistled," Lana recalled wonderingly. "We were both amazed."

DISAGREE, BUT DON'T BE DISAGREEABLE

Give a warm welcome to any brother who wants to join you, even though his faith is weak. Don't criticize him for having different ideas from yours about what is right and wrong. For instance, don't argue with him about whether or not to eat meat that has been offered to idols. You may believe there is no harm in this, but the faith of others is weaker; they think it is wrong, and will go without any meat at all and eat vegetables rather than eat that kind of meat.

Those who think it is all right to each such meat must not look down on those who won't. And if you are one of those who won't, don't find fault with those who do. For God has accepted them to be His children. They are God's servants, not yours. They are responsible to Him, not to you. Let Him tell them whether they are right or wrong. And God is able to make them do as they should.

Some think that Christians should observe the Jewish holidays as special days to worship God, but others say it is wrong and foolish to go to all that trouble, for every day alike belongs to God. On questions of this kind everyone must decide for himself.

If you have special days for worshiping the Lord, you are trying to honor him; you are doing a good thing. So is the person who eats meat that has been offered to idols; he is thankful to the Lord for it; he is doing right..And the person who won't touch such meat, he, too, is anxious to please the Lord, and is thankful.

We are not our own bosses to live or die as we ourselves might choose. Living or dying we follow the Lord. Either way we are His. Christ died and rose against for this very purpose, so that He can be our Lord both while we live and when we die. Romans 14:1-9

Hotel has attracted visitors for century

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Associated Press Writer

OKAWVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A weekend at the Original Mineral Springs Hotel in this quiet southern Illinois community has been curing "overwork and illness" for more than a century now.

"It's the water," says Ab Krohne, owner of the hotel and bathhouse.

The mineral waters flowing beneath a portion of this town of 1,200 residents have attracted vistors from all over the country for more than a century, according to Krohne.

Krohne, a local farmer who bought the mammoth white frame hotel in 1962, says business is as alive today as when the mineral springs were discovered in 1867.

"The springs are still flowing and the chemical content remains unchanged," Krohne says of the bathhouse, the mainstay of the business. Customers often wait in line to bathe in the water which is heated to 120 degrees in a boiler room behind the structure.

Water from the springs, which flow underneath the bathhouse, is pumped into the boiler and then piped into two tiled rooms — one for each sex — containing old-fashioned tubs with cast-iron legs. Bathers usually soak for about an hour at a time, but also can relax on couches and just enjoy the the steam.

The Original is the only one of five bathing establishments which has survived in this era of motel chains with fancy restaurants and heated pools. Krohne now has 40 rooms, an indoor pool and a basement restaurant — appropriately named the Boiler Room because it is built in the former boiler room.

A plain room "with the toilet down the hall" rents for $9.50. The best room in the house goes for $30, reservations preferred.

That goes for the restaurant, too, with a fried chicken dinner that is almost as popular as the baths. Live organ music is featured on weekends and the call of bingo numbers in the adjacent ballroom breaks the concentration of diners one night a week.

Krohne seats the guests, takes an occasional food or drink order, and rambles on nightly about the beautiful fixtures and the establishment's history.

"It gets crowded on weekends in the bathhouse. On Saturdays we have 60 to 80 people who drive in for just the baths and then go on their way." That drive can be up to several hundred miles for people who come from Chicago, St. Louis, or Evansville, Ind.

The mineral springs were discovered in 1871 by harness maker Rudolph Plegge who lived on the ground now occupied by the hotel. Plegge noticed his water differed from that of his neighbors.

Samples were analyzed in St. Louis where traces of magnesia and sulphuric acid were discovered. Later tests identified at least 14 minerals in the water.

Plegge and a local farmer, C.H. Kelle, who had worked in the famous baths at Baden-Baden, Germany, teamed up to build a bath house.

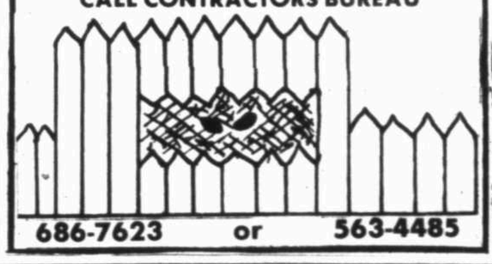

The business thrived and changed hands several times until the buildings burned in 1892, but were quickly rebuilt.

The hotel is listed in the National Register of Historic Sites, and tales of famous visitors are on the tongues of many who remember when there were four other bathhouse-hotels in town. Krohne grew up in Okawville and remembers the long lines of people waiting to take the baths and fill their drinking jugs with the waters.

Readiness for war in Mideast tested

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — In a region described as the "end of the world," thousands of U.S. paratroopers, marines and other troops, plus tanks, fighters and helicopters, are scheduled to conduct a realistic, $45 million exercise in the California desert, to test American readiness to go to war in a Middle East environment.

"Turn off at Barstow, Calif., and check your tires, water and gas," an Army officer said, in giving driving directions to Fort Irwin, Calif., a principal site of the exercise. "Keep going and after a while you'll think you've dropped off the end of the world."

The exercise, designated "Gallant Eagle," is one of the biggest in U.S. peacetime history. It is scheduled to begin on March 15 and to last about a month.

Most of Gallant Eagle will take place in the rugged, sunbaked area around Barstow, about halfway between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, Nev., and at the Marine Corps Ground Combat Center at Twenty-nine Palms, Calif., amid terrain similar to that of the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Gallant Eagle, which involves more than 25,000 Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps personnel, will include an unprecedented peacetime drop of paratroopers from 60 giant C-141 transport planes.

The exercise will also feature infantry and armored assaults and defense tactics, and low-level air support strikes.

"We're going to have a lot of people milling around out there and maneuvering against each other," the spokesman observed.

About $30 million of Gallant Eagle's overall cost of $45 million is for fuel and other elements in Military Air Transport Command aspects of the operation, the spokesman added.

The exercise is designed "to evaluate the Rapid Deployment Force and other multi-service forces in a desert environment." The Rapid Deployment Force, or RDF, is scheduled to comprise more than 100,000 men ready for action anywhere in the world, but principally the Middle East.

The RDF was initiated after former President Carter said the U.S. would not tolerate Soviet moves to dominate the Persian Gulf, the major source of the non-communist world's oil supplies, even if this meant the use of military force.

Since then the force has existed principally on paper, with a "Readiness Command" headquarters at McDill Air Force Base, Fla. Gallant Eagle appears to be the first indication that the RDF is assuming organizational shape.

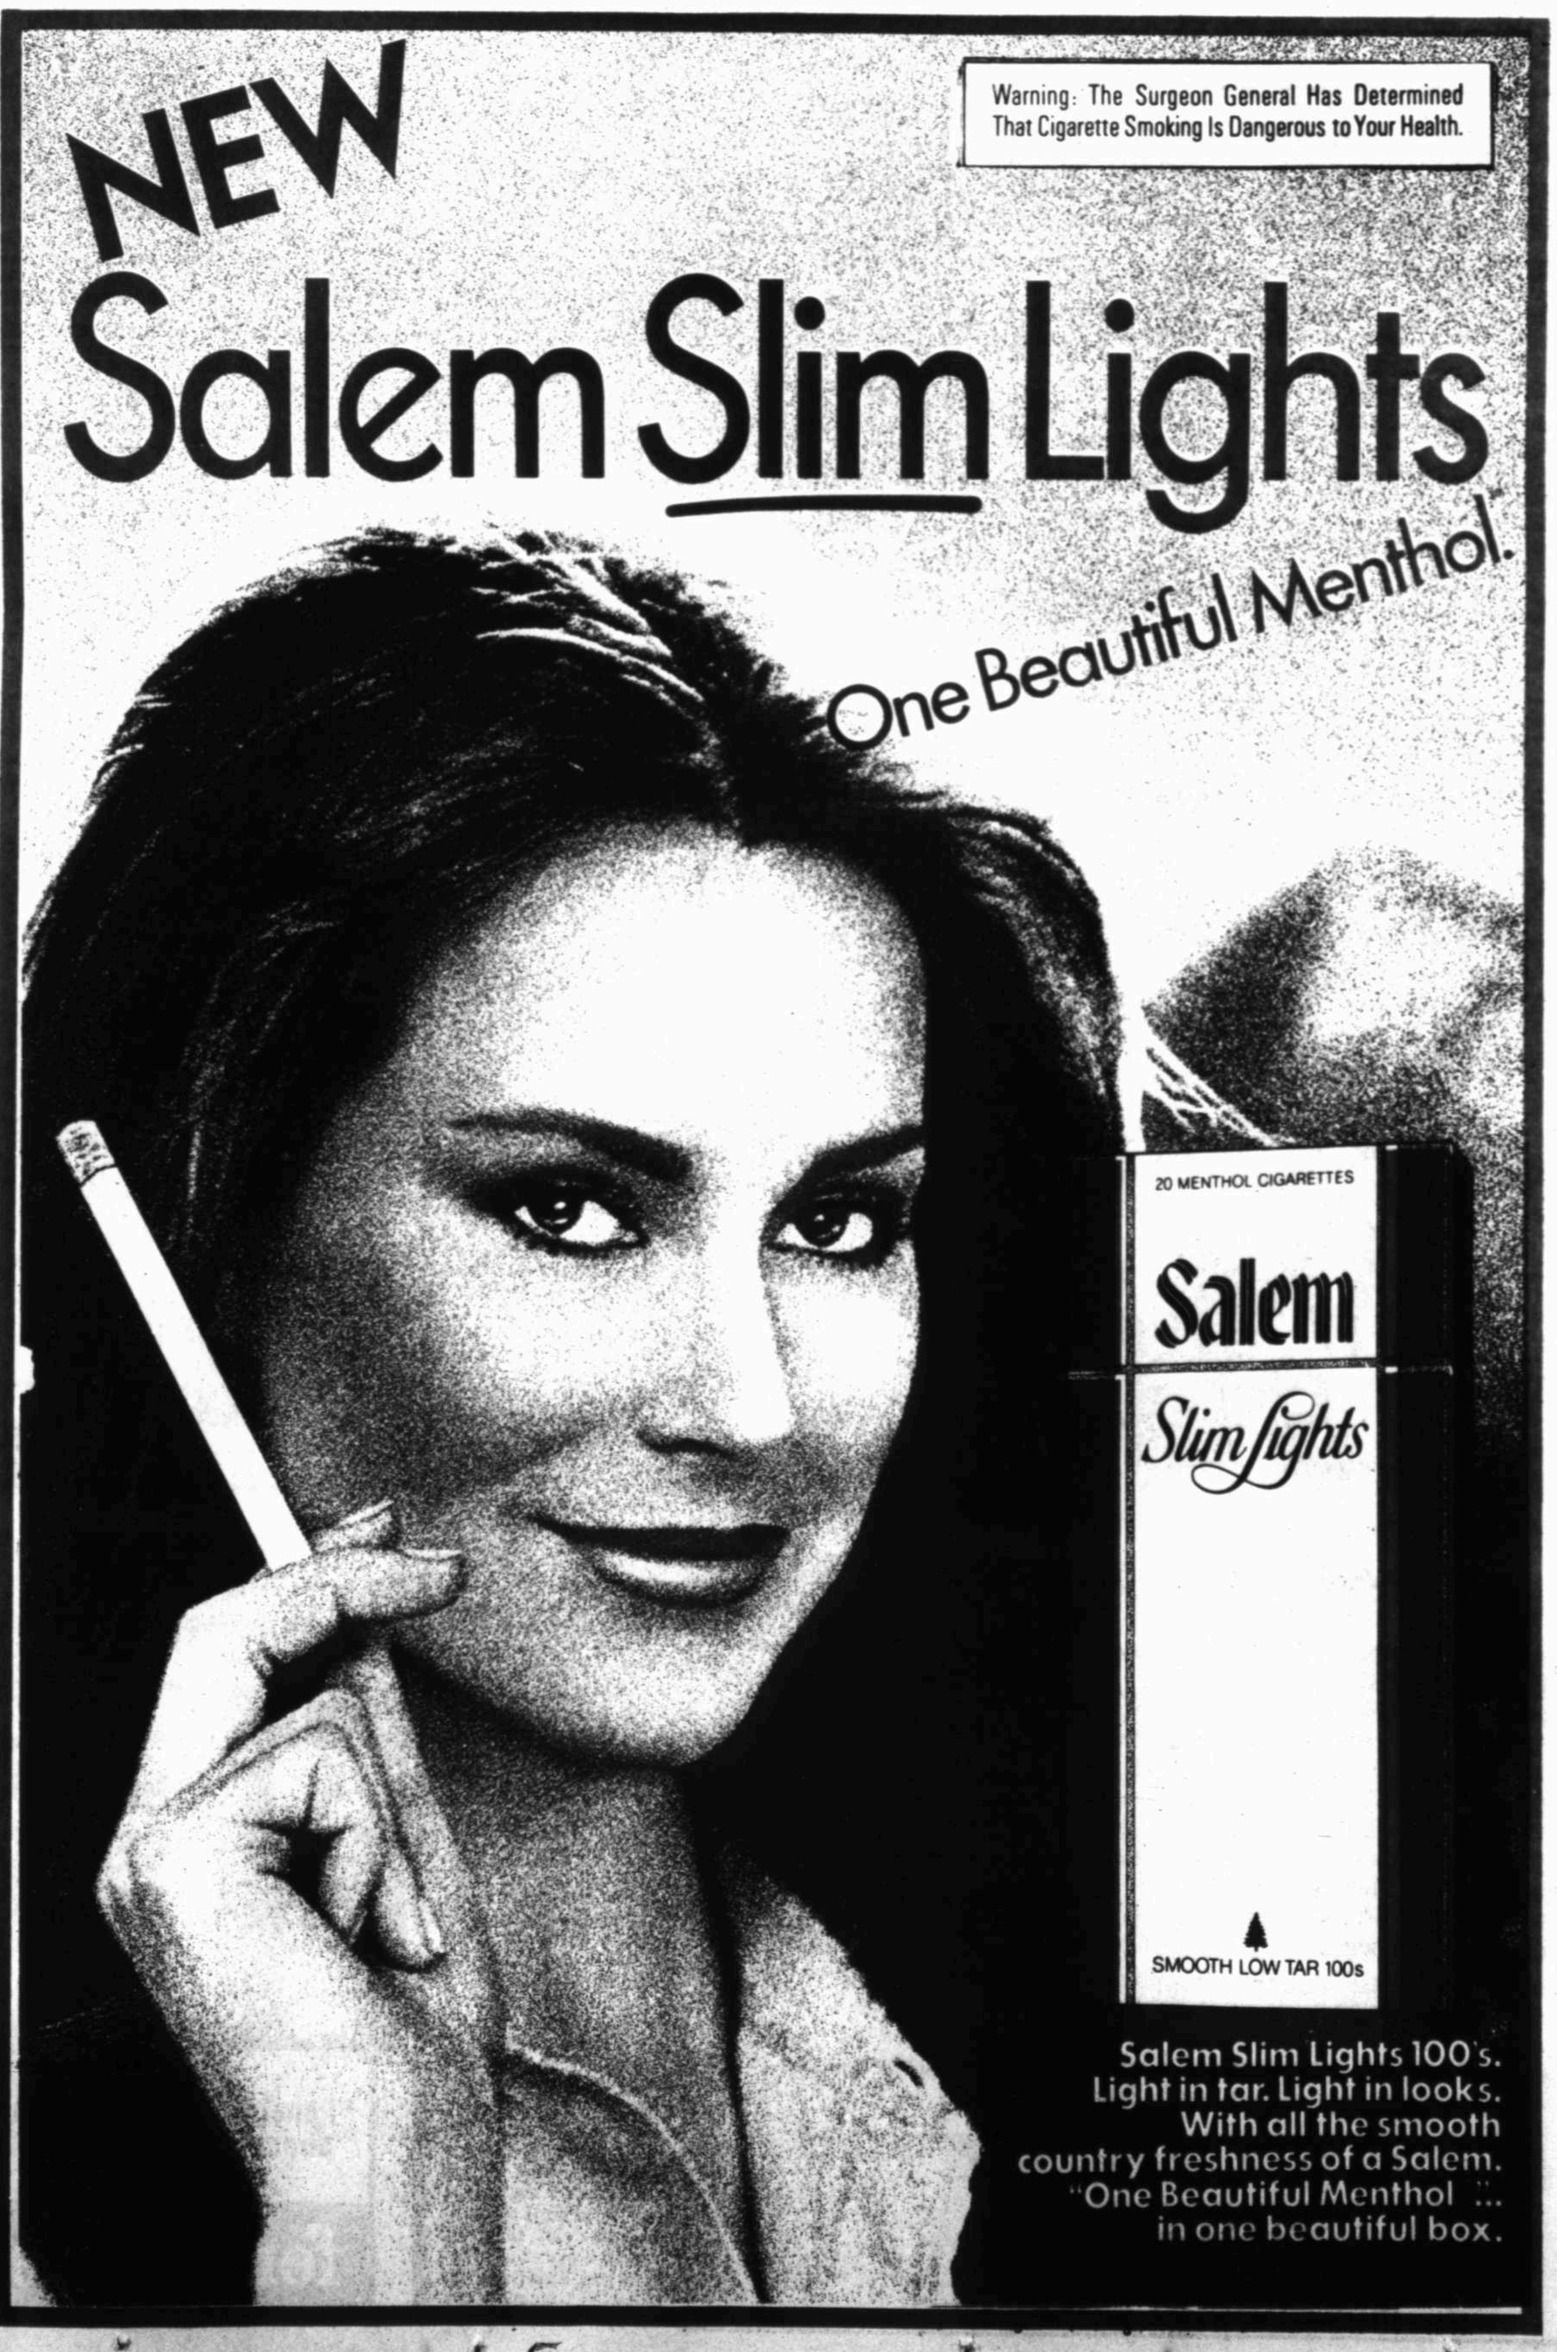

Fort Irwin, a dusty, bleak, former California National Guard base, has recently been designated as the Pentagon's "National Training Center."

In a new policy Army and Marine Corps "minus brigades," i.e. brigades of one infantry and one armored battalion each, are rotated through Fort Irwin for training that often involves the use of live ammunition and regulation Soviet military equipment.

This equipment is believed to have been obtained from Israel, which captured large quantities of Soviet tanks, armored personnel carriers and other vehicles from Soviet-supplied Arab forces during the Middle East wars of 1967 and 1973.

"We'll be using Russian personnel carriers in Gallant Eagle," the spokesman said.

Chaps wrap up 2nd WJCC title against OC

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

ODESSA—As time ran out, Spud Webb, towering an intimidating 5-6, provided the appropriate exclamation point to Midland College's second straight Western Junior College Conference basketball title by turning Justin Morrett's back court feed on a fast break into a slam dunk.

That made the Chaparrals final margin over Odessa College, 85-68, here Thursday night and before Coach Jerry Stone could escape from the OC gym's small floor he found himself host hand pumper in a congratulatory receiving line.

A large contingent of MC fans followed their heroes to Odessa and were faced with the remote possibility of seeing the victory celebration delayed, just when it seemed as though the Chaps were pulling away. A whistle, or disturbing facsimile thereof, from the MC section of the stands delayed the game, brought the police, gym officials to the area and a warning over the PA that if the whistle was heard again "the game would be terminated immediately."

AFTER a threat like that only an Odessa College fan would have dared blow the thing.

With the championship safely stowed away, Coach Stone was asked what he was going to do to keep his troops up for the season's two lame-duck concluders. "I don't know if I can keep them up. But they have been doing a pretty good job of keeping themselves up all year."

That's one reason the Chaps are 25-4, have a 15-game winning streak going and are on the threshhold of winning the WJCC with a better record than last year's 30-3 team, "the likes of which won't soon be seen again around here."

MC is 15-1 in conference. Last year's team finished 16-2.

PUNTUS WILSON, who provided the big input in Thursday's win with 27 points, is the only returning starter from last year's team, on which he was all-WJCC and all-Regional, so he treated the championship like old stuff.

"No, I knew we'd win it from the season's opening jump. Yes, even when we were 4-4." But that wasn't what was on the mind of the lean 6-2 forward from Dallas South Oak Cliff. "Regional is the important thing. That's the one that got away last year. I think this year, now that we've been there, we know what it's going to take to win."

Of course, Puntus and Lance McCain are the only ones on this team that actually been there. The rest are a bunch of freshmen, but they don't play like it, anymore.

However, the pressure of the championship in cramped, crowded, cruelly hot OC gym looked might it might get to them for a while.

Odessa spurted to a 39-34 lead in the final minute of the first half and MC didn't begin to open serious daylight until the final seven minutes of the last half, although a 10-point sprint at the outset of the second half put MC in front for keeps, 44-39. Six-six Chester Smith fueled the rally with a short jumper, a steal and layup before Wilson converted a couple of free throws and Webb scored on a fast break off a Jerome Crowe steal and pass, all in the first three minutes.

"We were making too big a thing of the game, the chance to win the championship, against Odessa College and in Odessa," Stone said. "We were doing everything wrong. We were shooting too quickly and not concentrating on defense, so we just sat down at half and talked it over."

"No magic the second half, we just started playing basketball."

THE DIFFERENCE was evident in the turnovers and shot chart. In the first half, OC outgunned MC from the field by hitting 17 of 30 while MC was 16 of 38. In the second half, MC was 18 of 31 and harried, badgered and bothered Wranglers were 11 of 33.

In the first half, Webb was two-of-seven from the field and Puntus was four-of-10. Only Smith was smoking with five-of-seven. In the second half, Webb scored 13 of his 17 points, Wilson was seven of 10 from the floor and Smith, who had 20, was five of nine. McCain had a 14 point night sinking five of six free throws in the second half as MC made 15 of 24 after going only two-for-three from the line in the first half.

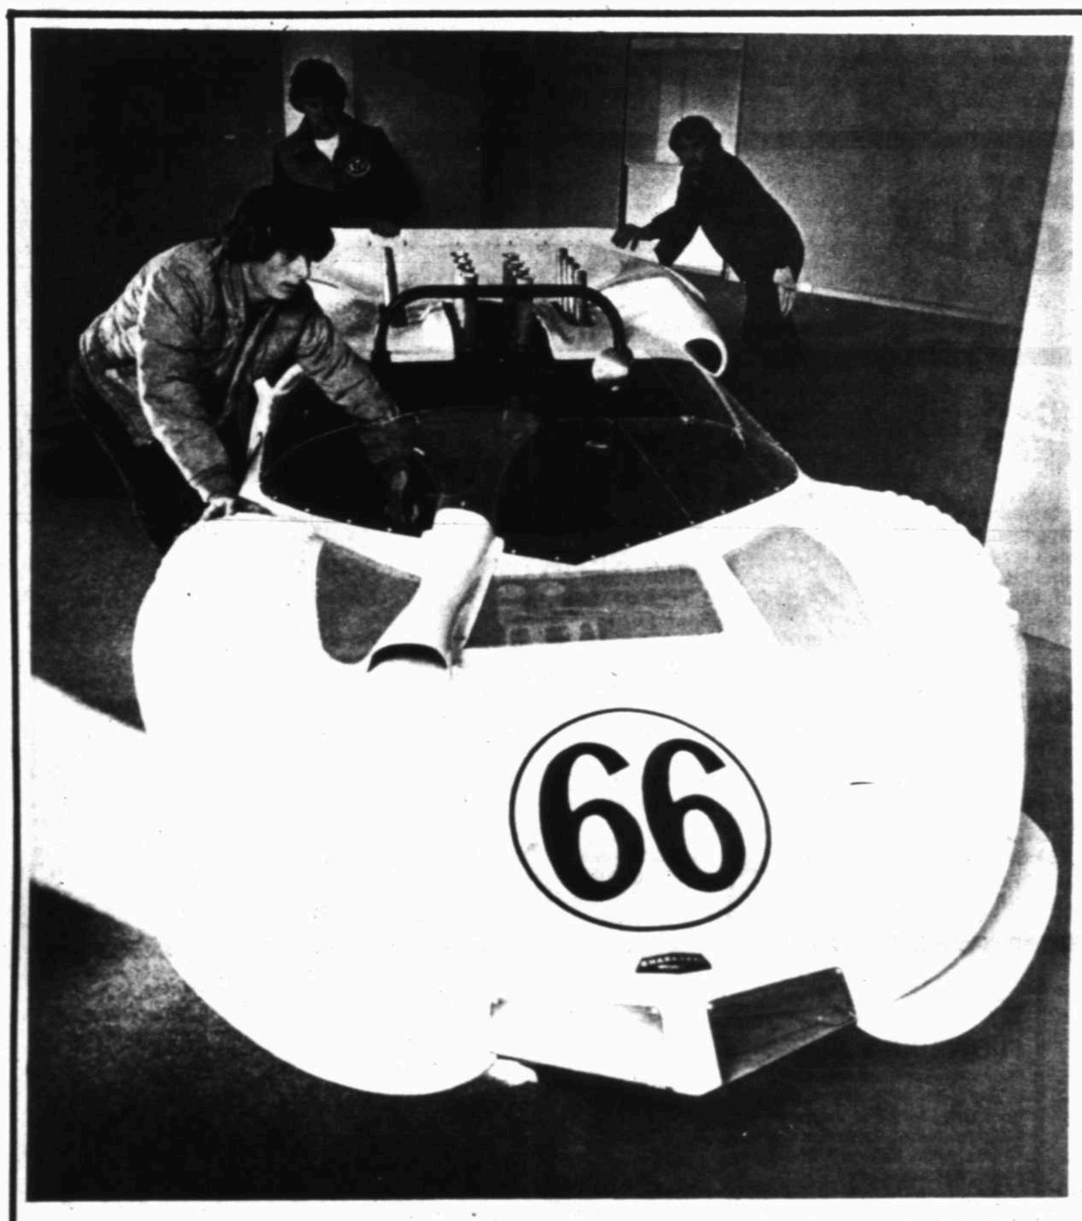

Of course, 6-8 Paul Hamilton was another factor in MC's first half problems. Like Mount Everest, he was there, under the basket, and no one could do much about him. Hamilton scored 12 of his 22 points, but was forced to sit down for awhile with a fourth personal. For the night Hamilton was 9-of-13 from the field. When he left, MC led 52-47. When he returned, MC led 66-56.

Hamilton actually had a 24 point night, inadvertently tipping in a missed MC shot by Morrett in the second half.

Midland College—Spud Webb 6-5-17; Puntus Wilson 11-6-27; Chester Smith 10-0-20; Lance McCain 5-4-14; Jermoe Crowe 0-1-1; Justin Morrett 1-0-2; Rodney McChriston 1-1-3. Totals 34-17-85.

Odessa College—Wayne Lister 7-2-16; Paul Hamilton 9-4-22; Steve Sully 5-2-12; Al Penny 2-0-4; Darrell Burwell 2-3-7; Gary Brown 3-1-7; Dave Bartholmew 0-0-0. Totals 28-12-69.

Fouled Out: Penny, Burwell. FG—OC 28/63, MC 34/69. FT—OC 12-19. MC 15/24.

We shoulda stayed home

Hall exhibit makes the blood boil

We took in the Jim Hall-Chaparral exhibit at the Museum of the Southwest last Sunday and wished we hadn't. All it did was start the blood boiling again.

After viewing and listening to the revolutionary effect Hall has had on Sports and Indy car racing, it's difficult to imagine what he's doing on the outside of the Texas Sports Hall of Fame looking in.

This guy is a giant in the sport. While it's true Hall doesn't drive any more, he determines what the Al Unsers, Johnny Rutherfords, Brian Redmans and Phil Hills drive, and how successfully.

HALL'S problem is that he's not the Willie Shoemaker of auto racing. He's the Jock Whitney. Abner Doubleday is in the baseball Hall of Fame and he's nothing more than a myth.

Even though Lew Alcindor and Bill Walton were more visible, the folks at Springfield didn't overlook John Wooden, just because he never sank a basket for UCLA.

George Halas is in the Pro Football Hall of Fame and he hasn't won anything in almost two decades. What would the Green Bay Packers have been without Vince Lombardi and Bear Bryant would never have been remembered for playing end on the 1934 Alabama Rose Bowl team. He wasn't even the best end on the team, and they only used two of them in those days.

SURE, THE tall, still trim Hall will get into the Texas Sports Hall of Fame eventually, but there's no reason why he shouldn't be in there right now. No one currently in the Grand Prarie shrine has had a more profound effect on his sport than Hall.

He started out racing other people's cars and soon discovered there was a better way. He built his own shop and racing track south of Midland and rolled his own.

By the mid 1960s, he was driving his Chevrolet-powered Chaparral on the world's sports car tracks and becoming a matinee idol every where in the world except the U.S.

We've still got an article we wrote for a Belgium racing magazine back in the mid-1960s. Every once in a while we take it out and try to read it...it looks like French, but it doesn't read like French should...and from some of the passages we can translate, we wonder how many liberties the translator took with the original text...It sounds like something out of an old pulp magazine.

THAT WAS just the beginning. By the early 1970s he had concocted a Chaparral that looked like of one of those snow-clearing locomotives in the yard of that narrow-gauge railroad in Chama. It prompted the slogan, "If you can't beat 'em, ban 'em."

Actually, 2J never won any of its 10 races, although it was easily the fastest thing in any race it entered. Trouble was it couldn't finish. Some little thing was always going wrong to foul up the works, but the racing fathers could see the handwriting on the wall if Hall ever got all the kinks worked out of his "vacuum cleaner."

The 2J featured an auxiliary motor driven fan to create a partial vacuum under the chassis to increase downforce and allow greater cornering speeds.

Over the years, Hall has come up with modified, acceptable versions of the original, but the Midlander has pioneered the aerodynamics involved in racing right from the start.

Of course, Hall had the racing world asking behind secretive palms, "Does he or doesn't he?"

San Angelo expels Lee girls from playoffs, 49-45

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING—San Angelo, which converted only nine of 26 free throws in the first half, canned 10-of-12 in the fourth quarter as the Bobcats edged Midland Lee, 49-45, in a District 5-5A girls playoff game at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Thursday night.

The victory earned the Bobcats, 20-10, a spot in the finals against Abilene High, the league's second half winner, at 6:30 p.m. tonight for the right to advance into state playoff action.

Lee, now loser of four straight to the Bobcats, ended the season at 21-11.

Winning Coach Rachel Beaver said, "I told the girls at halftime that we had to take advantage of our free throws. Out little talk on free throws at halftime must have helped because we shot with a little more concentration in the second half."

Senior Else Ornales was the principal culprit in the fatal fourth, connecting on two-of-four from the line and scooping up a loose ball at midcourt to score on a breakaway sortie to give the Bobcats their biggest lead of the night, 46-39, with 2:16 left.

Lisa Lisewisky also had a hot hand in the final eight minutes, canning eight-of-eight from the charity stripe. And while San Angelo enjoyed a hot hand from the line in the fourth quarter, Lee sank only two of six and compounded its misery by missing several key one-on-one opportunities down the stretch.

LEE OPENED the game in a man-to-man defense and held the Bobcats pointless for two minutes. San Angelo finally broke into the scoring column when Jeanne Bryant, who was to lead the Bobcats with 15 points, connected on a free throw. Suzanne McGaha had given Lee the early lead by converting a three-point play in the first 40 seconds of the contest.

The Rebs were forced out of their pressure defense in the second period as the fouls began to mount. Lee ended the half with Ludres Duran, McGaha, Shun Harris and Maudie Akins saddled with three fouls each. Still, Lee clung tenaciously to a 19-16 lead at the end of the first period and again 27-25 at half.

LEE COACH Shirley Stephenson said, "We play better in a pressure defense. We hustle better at both ends of the court. Getting into foul trouble hurt us, but the fouls we picked up were hustling fouls, not the silly reaching fouls."

The game was tied seven times. Lee's biggest margin was five, 19-14, late in the first quarter. San Angelo's only lead came in the fourth quarter and the Cats' widest breach was seven.

Harris led the Rebels with 16 while Yshun King chipped in with 12. Akins, who had scored 10 and 16 points for Lee in two previous bouts with San Angelo, was held to two points Thursday. Ornales with 11 and Bryant with 15 led the Bobcats.

Lee's problems in the fourth quarter began with 6:59 left when Duran was whistled to the bench with five personal fouls. The Bobcats immediately went into a slow down game and were able to handle the ball better without the pesky Duran to hassle them.

Stephenson said, "Losing Duran was a big blow. She is so quick and is able to force a lot of turnovers. Ellen Matson did a good job of replacing her and YoYo (Goodley) played very well, but San Angelo just took advantage of the situation."

WITH DURAN'S departure, San Angelo made some minor adjustments and was able to penetrate Lee's half court defense for a couple of easy baskets. "In basketball you must be able to make adjustments if you want to win," Beaver commented. "Tonight, we were able to make the right adjustments at the right time."

The Rebs were dismal from the field, sinking only 16 of 57 shots, but that wasn't what bothered Stephenson. "We don't pay too much attention to the percentage. What we look at is the number of shots. And 57 shots isn't very many for us."

She added, "I don't know why it feels so good when you win and so bad when you lose. I just feel sorry for the girls. They wanted to win this basketball game real bad."

Beaver said, "Our girls wanted it, too. They were aware we had beaten them three straight times, but they weren't overconfident—more of a positive attitude. They like to play here (Dorothy Garrett Coliseum) and they know when they play Midland Lee it will be a close game and they have a job to do."

When asked about tonight's San Angelo-Abilene tussle, Stephenson said, "A few breaks will make the difference. Abilene has Tracy Hubbard, but San Angelo has god height, so it should be an excellent game. Either team could win it."

Midland Lee—Duran 0-0-5-0; Goodley 0-3-2-3; McCabe 1-2-1-4; McGaha 1-1-4-3; King 5-2-5-12; Harris 5-6-5-16; Akins 1-0-3-2; Farias 0-0-2-0. San Angelo—Lisewsky 0-8-2-8; Ornales 3-5-4-11; Cole 1-0-3-2; Byrant 6-3-5-15; Champlin 3-1-2-7; Hogue 2-0-1-4; Hall 0-2-2-2.

Cooper, Angelo hold MHS, Lee fate

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

And so we finally come to the end of the wild and wacky District 5-5A basketball race tonight, but the ending, as Midlanders from both sides of town fear, may be all too sane to go with the script that has proceeded this final chapter.

As tradition has it, Midland High will end district play against cross-town rival Midland Lee at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center. However, this contest has nothing to do with the overall scheme of things in 5-5A. Neither team will be a second half factor and both MHS and Lee's playoff hopes will be decided on foreign courts in Abilene and Big Spring. That's the omen that doesn't sit well with the locals.

Oh, there are enough incentives to finish out this season with this game. Lee doesn't like to lose to MHS and vise-versa. MHS is still seething over the last meeting where the Bulldogs blew a nine-point lead with 1:58 left in the game to lose by two points. And there is the overall series to consider where the Bulldogs hold a narrow 24-20 margin over the Rebels. And both have had their fill of tough losses in the second half of play.

BUT THE hardening reality that is hard to live with from the Tall City point of view is that Abilene High is on the verge of taking an outright championship and a state playoff berth without having to go through the rigors of a district playoff that seemed almost certain after the first half of play.

In a nutshell, Abilene High can gain the playoff berth tonight with a win over Abilene Cooper. If Abilene High loses tonight, and San Angelo beats Big Spring then both Midland High and Midland Lee are alive and well and we will enter into another exercise of the macabre known as a four-team district playoff, which will be held next week at dates, site and times still to be decided.

All of those possibilities listed above, however, have nothing to do with tonight's outcome of the MHS-Lee confrontation. Both have fallen on hard times in the second half and enter the game with 3-3 second half records. Both posted 5-2 first half marks and neither will equal or surpass that mark in this half.

The 5-2 records in the first half gave both Midland High and Lee a share of the first half title with Abilene High. It looked like a district playoff of some sort was almost insured and in the bank. But neither Lee or MHS could handle AHS in the second half and the Eagles own a 5-1 second half record while San Angelo, who travels to Big Spring tonight, also stands at 5-1. If Abilene High wins the second half title outright or ties with a team other than Lee or Midland High, the Eagles are playoff bound. So the only hope left for the locals is a highly unlikely upset by Abilene Cooper over the Eagles and a San Angelo win over Big Spring.

IT'S A bit sad that this is the state of affairs at this point in time. Lee lost its second half hopes just last Tuesday when they fell by four points to Abilene High. MHS earlier lost to Abilene High on a shot at the buzzer.

After these stunning defeats and the reality now sitting in, it is wondered what kind of display will be in the offering tonight when the two teams meet. The battle will be raging, but all will know that the war is being decided elsewhere.

There are two things that could happen. Both teams could be loose and out to top the first half thriller that left a crowd of near 4,000 limp. Or the contest may be a letdown if both teams have been drained by all the emotion that has been expended in the second half.

Left in the back of the mind at MHS is the fact that if the Bulldogs had won the first half contest with Lee, the Bulldogs would have been the first half champions and assured of going on to a district playoff. Also they have had the burden of carrying with them last second defeats to Abilene High and Odessa Permian in the second half.

Midland, Odessa tied for lead in GG Open Division

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — After two nights of boxing in the Golden Gloves competition at Ector County Coliseum, Midland and Odessa are tied for first in the team standings in the Open Division with two wins and two losses apiece.

Both Midland Boxing Club victories came on Wednesday, the opening night of competition, both came by knockout, and both victories were over Odessa boxers.

Robert Ochoa, 132 pounds, and Benny Long, 147 pounds, were each able to overpower their opponents in the Open Divison.

Ochoa's knockout came at 1:12 in the second round and was the result of faster foot work and quicker hands.

"Robert had better speed and he just popped the kid's head around in the first round with straight lefts and left jabs," said Midland Boxing Club coach Rick Fleetwood. "The other kid was short and stocky and I told Robert to stay outside which is what he did. I wasn't about to let him stand toe-to-toe with that kid. He was as strong as an ox."

LONG TOOK a little longer to end his fight than Ochoa, but he got the same result, a knockout with 48 seconds gone in the third round against Steve Cosby of Odessa.

"I don't know where he came from, but he wasn't a boxer," said Fleetwood about Long's opponent. "He was strictly a brawler. He'd come in and throw an elbow, use laces, knees, whatever he could. A street fighter. Every time he'd come in, Benny would pop him with a left hook and buckle his knees and he'd keep coming back."

"It was a left jab as he was coming in," said Long about the knockout punch. He also commented on a punch that hurt him, or rather his right hand, when he tagged Cosby. "I guess I had my glove open a little bit when I bruised this," he said holding up a thickly taped hand. "It shouldn't be any problem on Saturday though (Long's next fight)."

THE MBC's first loss of the Golden Gloves also came on Wednesday night. Super heavyweight Willie Beeman found out the facts of the ring in the first round when he fell to the knockout punch of Ramsey Clark with 1:30 gone in the round.

"Willie found out real quick that you've got to be in shape to box," said Fleetwood. "Willie started off with a left and right and kind of rocked him, but the guy came back with a left hook to the body and Willie went down. Not enough sit ups."

The Midland Boxing Club was to have one fight in the Open Division on Thursday night, but 165-pounder Willie Vines dind't show up for his match and the result was a forfeit win for Rumaldo Falcon of Andrews.

Though there were no Open bouts for MBC fighters, there were two MBC boxers who won in other categories and there were also three Midland Lee High School boxers that won in the High School Football Division.

Gilbert Hernandez, a 79-pounder in the Junior Olympic Division, has the record for the quickest victory by an MBC boxer in the Golden Gloves Tournament. With 44 seconds gone in the fight, Hernandez won by a technical knockout over Frankie Rodriguez of Snyder.

HERNANDEZ tagged Rodriguez in the opening moments of the fight and was connecting with solid rights to the chin at will when the referee stopped the fight.

"It wasn't too tough," said Hernandez about his victory.

"Gilbert completely outclassed him," added Fleetwood. "He had the reach, had speed and had the power over him."

In the Regular High School Division, Jerry Collazo of MBC won a unanimous decision over Alfredo Porras of Grandfalls at 123 pounds. Neither boxer was able to connect on many punches, but Collazo out pointed his opponent to claim the victory.

Paul Cox, 139 pounds, was the only Lee fighter who made it into the ring Thursday night out of five scheduled to fight. Two won their bouts by forfeit while two lost in the same manner.

Cox had a rough time against his opponent and eventual winner of the fight, Dean Gartman of Big Spring. In the second round, Gartman stuck two quick rights into his face and Cox went down but was able to come back after receiving the automatic eight count.

After his brush with the canvas, Cox tagged Gartman with a solid right of his own and was immediately hit by a flurry of punches. In the third round, both boxers were exchanging punches, mainly rights, and when the bell sounded Gartman had the decision.

Lee's Kevin Phiffer, 130, and Nicky Tomlin, 145, won by forfeit.

The results of Thursday's fight's are as follows:

Gretzky's hockey impact awesome

By HAL BOCK

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The silence was stifling.

Here was Wayne Gretzky doing marvelous things on the ice, dazzling opponents with slick moves they had never seen before. And in the stands at the handsome Northlands Coliseum, home of the Edmonton Oilers, there was ... silence.

The fans here are proud of Gretzky and his accomplishments. He is on target for 100 goals and 200 points, unheard of accomplishments in the National Hockey League. He is hailed throughout the city by all, from cabdrivers to shopkeepers. And yet, at most home games, the 17,000 fans who pack the building sit back like so many theater critics, cooly passing judgment on their team and its star.

The building is one of the quietest in the league, very much like Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens. "It's like playing hockey in a cathedral," one visiting club official said.

Sometimes, Gretzky and his teammates admit, the quiet is unnerving.

To excite the crowd, the kid from Brantford, Ontario, must do more than score a couple of goals or assist on a couple. That's become almost routine for him, and the fans accept it in rather blase fashion.

Edmonton, you see, expects winners. The oil that lies below Alberta's vast prairie land has turned this city into a boom town. The Edmonton Eskimoes of the Canadian Football League have produced four straight championships, and although the Grey Cup isn't exactly the Stanley Cup in hockey-mad Canada, it has set a standard.

So has Gretzky. He was a unanimous choice for the All-Star game after winning four consecutive Player of the Month Awards. He reached the All-Star break with 69 goals and 152 points, and had scored at least one goal in 42 of his team's 58 games

FOR YEARS, the measure of scoring excellence in the NHL was 50 goals. Nobody had achieved it faster than Maurice Richard, who reached the plateau in 50 games in 1944, and Mike Bossy, who matched that pace last year. Gretzky got 50 in 39 games this season. In 50 games, he had 61 goals.

The records assembled over 65 years of NHL history are falling one by one to this curly haired wunderkind who plays the game as if he invented it.

Yet, in the dressing room, Gretzky is just one of the boys on a young, talented team. Most of the players, like the slender, swift-skating center who turned 21 last month, are barely out of their teens. They are maturing together.

"Everybody here is 20," laughs left wing Dave Hunter, who, at 24, ranks as a senior citizen on this club.

GRETZKY IS involved in the clubhouse humor that is standard for all sports teams. He is the target of his share of wisecracks and practical jokes, and gives as much as he gets in that department.

His teammates needle him about anything and everything, from the size of his narrow nose to the fact that he failed a stress test the Oilers administered to all their players last year. He is fair game and he knows it. It's hardly a one-way street.

Yet as much as he is part of the clubhouse patter, on the ice Gretzky is far removed from the rest of the players.

The way he covers the rink surface, with a sixth-sense perspective, is almost mystical. He seems to see the game differently, almost as though he is watching the patterns develop from high up in a press box and then is reacting to those patterns instantly on the ice.

It is uncanny.

At 40, Bruce MacGregor fools around on the ice now and then. MacGregor played with the best — Gordie Howe. MacGregor knows greatness. He is awed by Gretzky.

"Hockey is a game of where people should be and where people are going to be," said MacGregor. "Gretz anticipates those things so well he is two or three steps ahead of everybody."

Anticipation. It's a word many people use in describing Gretzky. Another is quickness."

"For a hockey player the stick has to be part of your body. It's really an extension of your body. You have to have that feel for it ... You seldom see him look at the puck.

"It's as if he belongs in a higher league. It's almost as if he's playing by himself. It's like a pro from the NHL going on the ice with a bunch of midget players."

GOALIE ED Mio of the New York Rangers, who played with him in Indianapolis and Edmonton, presents a netminder's view of Gretzky.

"He's very smart," Mio said. "He's not the biggest guy and his shot is not all that great. But he gets the goalie moving and he has the skill to put the puck in exactly the spot the goalie has left. His shot is very accurate.

"Anticipation is the first sign of a real good player. A guy who's one step ahead has an edge. Gretz is always thinking two or three steps ahead. It is a sixth sense.

"When you look up and see him with the puck, you get on your toes. You know he knows what to do with the puck."

Just as goalies are very aware of Gretzky when he has the puck, Gretzky is very aware of those he is skating against.

"I always look around to see who's on the ice," he said. "I've always done that ever since I was a kid."

Fired as umpire, Fields convinced...

He's paying for it now

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Fifteen years ago, Steve Fields was a young man with a steady railroad job. Sometimes, he earned extra cash by umpiring high school games, often on the same Alexandria, Va., fields where he'd played and dreamed of the majors.

Then one day, a couple of Washington Senator acquaintances- Moose Skowron and Ed Brinkman — told the big, husky guy that he worked a nice game, knew the sport and, maybe, ought to aim a little higher.

Steve Fields did. Now, he wonders if that was a mistake.

This summer, Fields, 41, plans to work those same Alexandria schoolboy games. This time, it won't be a lark. One season after calling strikes on Pete Rose, he'll do it because he needs the $33 a game.

"I've given the game 14 years of my life. Now I'm wiped out," said Fields, fired as a National League umpire this winter. After two months of being unemployed, he has found only one part-time job-driving an oil truck for a friend on snowy days.

OF HIS future, he says, "I feel like I've been 10,000 places for jobs. All I know is baseball. I ain't got nothing. I'm just that scab ump who got fired."

Fields, approaching middle age, finds himself with no job, no vesting in any pension fund, no hospitalization or life insurance, no education beyond high school and no practical work experience. When he returned to the post office and the railroad yard, hoping to pick up one of the modest careers he'd left behind, they looked at him like he was crazy.

Fields, who was hired as a replacement when major league umpires went on strike in 1979, has his psychic prop. He says he's going to sue the major leagues.

"Baseball used me when they needed me," he said. "Now they're discarding me. They told me I was fired for incompetence, but I think I know the real reason. Baseball's afraid of another umpires' strike this spring, so they decided to throw a bone to the umpires' union to appease them. I'm the bone.

"After what I've been through, I've got to do something. I may get squat, but I'm doin' it for the other seven nonunion umps. They can't exist like this indefinitely. They'll all go crazy."

"I DON T think Steve is going to be alone. By the end of the spring, I don't think there will be any scabs left," predicted San Diego pitcher John Curtis. "The union umpires have let the leagues know, 'Get rid of these guys or you'll have problems.' "

"That offends me. It's just not the case," retorted Blake Cullen of the National League office, the man who told Fields of both his hiring and his firing. "Our contract is out with the umpires this spring, and we're negotiating, but I don't believe what happened to Steve has any connection.

"I feel terrible for Steve. He's got a great temperament for the game, like a big cop on the beat. I couldn't sleep the night I learned he'd been hit in the face (by a foul ball) and bled the whole game 'cause nobody would go and help him ... Sure these (nonunion) guys come up short, 'cause of what they're up against ... Steve just had the lowest ratings in the league and we had to let him go ... We had 28 umpires last year and that's too many ... 26 or 24 works better."

"I don't blame Fields for what he's said about why he thinks he was fired. It's a reasonable position," said Paul Runge, president of the umpires' union. "However, I don't think that all of what we call 'The Class of '79' will be fired just because we want them to be.

" ... You can't tell me that the leagues didn't put the hammer to those guys' heads. I think it was made clear they either came up and broke our picket line, or else they'd never make the majors. Guys making $8,000 a year are offered two-year contracts in the majors at $18,000. It amazes me there were umps, like Randy Marsh, who refused to come up. Four of those guys are still in the bushes ... a guy's got to be nuts to go into this profession.

Since 1979, Fields has lived out one of the ugliest episodes in baseball history — the ostracism of the union umpires.

Since 1979, Fields has lived out one of the ugliest episodes in baseball history-the ostracism of the union umpires.

"All I've heard has been sarcasm and silence. They room in different hotels, take different airp,anes. Once, when I was stepping on a plane in Houston, the rest of my crew saw me, turned around and took another flight.

"I wouldn't lower myself to these guys' level. I swallowed so much . . .

"In Cincinnati last season, I was hit in the chin with a foul ball that required seven stitches after the game. But none of the other umps would take my place. They just let me stand there for three hours and bleed. Every inning, I'd go into the Reds' dugout and their trainer would put on butterfly stitches and patches. But every inning, from the sweat and moving your jaw yelling out pitches, it would all bust open and I'd bleed like a stuck pig.

"I had to completely change the way I umpired," said Fields, the oldest ump in the bushes when called up in '79, working the last seven of his 11 seasons in the International League. "Your hands are tied because you get no help. In the minors, I never took crap off anybody. I always tried to have fun. In the majors, you had to hide because once you did anything, both teams would eat you alive.

"I've known Steve Fields since I broke-in with Durham in '69," said ex-Phillie Bob Boone. "He's a good guy and a decent ump. What's happened to him sickens me. It's inhumane ... I'm sure his firing is because he's one of the so-called scabs. It's no coincidence."

TO SENSE Fields' predicament, the tangled choices he's faced, we must trace his history. He's lived out baseball's attitude toward all its arbiters: kill the umpire.

"You tolerate the minors because you dream of the majors," said Fields, who spent five years as a semipro player traveling up to 1,000 miles for big league tryout camps. "In my first year, in the Midwestern League, I made $500 a month. In Cedar Rapids, the other ump and I would share a $4-a-night room by the railroad tracks next to the Ralston Purina factory. No bathroom, no fan ... so hot at night, you had to keep the window open. The stink and smoke and whistles were unbelievable.

"Even in '78, when I was the highest-paid ump in the minors, I was making $1,600 a month. What kind of salary is that for a 37-year-old man with 11 years experience in his profession?" asked Fields. "That's about $10,000 a year, plus whatever you get in the off-season in winter ball."

Fields was bypassed repeatedly by the majors, even though younger umps, who were put under his crew-chief wing for tutoring, were called up. "Maybe I was a maverick, had a little too much fun with the game," said Fields.

So, in the spring of '79 in Miami, Fields didn't agonize over the broad moral question of working in place of the striking umpires.

The call came. "What could you do?" asked Fields. "I thought about it, but the answer kept coming up, 'Gotta go.'

"My first game was J.R. Richard against Phil Niekro. The best fast ball and the best knuckle ball in the game. I was so nervous, I couldn't throw the balls back to the mound. Gave 'em to the catcher all night. The next night, Ken Forsch throws a no-hitter.

Few things are more subjective than evaluating an umpire. Ironically, Fields' worst rhubarb, one he believes made him vulnerable, was with Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green, an offseason friend, last season. "Ask Dallas," said Fields. "I'd care what he thinks."

Green said, "Steve's a good man and, when he first came up, performed pretty well. But, each year, I thought he lost some enthusiasm. Maybe he just got tired of fightin' 'em . . ."

Ex-gridder Olsen discovers new game

By MAL FLORENCE
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The big man looked comfortable on a horse. And he held his rifle with assurance. He was the leader of a posse on this day and the casting seemed perfect.

But Merlin Olsen always adjusts to the role he is playing. More important, he has approached his many endeavors with a high degree of professionalism, his associates say.

On this day Olsen was on location near Los Angeles for his lead role in "Father Murphy," an NBC television series. Getting that part stemmed from his success as Jonathan Garvey on NBC's "Little House on the Prairie."

Each fall, he pairs with Dick Enberg as a television analyst for National Football League games. They're considerd one of the best broadcasting teams in the business.

Olsen, 41, retired in 1976 after a 15-year career with the Los Angeles Rams. Many retired athletes seem to flounder for awhile in the real world after their playing days end.

Not Olsen. He made the transition from All-Pro defensive tackle to actor and sportscaster seemingly as easily as he used to catch rival quarterbacks.

And it hasn't all been luck, or being in the right place at the right time. Olsen carefully planned his moves.

Olsen was recently elected to the Professional Football Hall of Fame, an honor enhanced by the fact that this was the first year he was eligible — five years after his retirement.

He played the game with dignity, grace and strength. The Great Dane from Utah. Don't trifle with him.

In an interview that was occasionally interrupted while he chased the bad guys, Olsen reminisced about his playing days, how he anticipated changing careers, the sadness he feels for his teammates who didn't and his new world.

Question: Some athletes don't know when it's time to retire. How were you able to work it so smoothly?

Answer: I think what saved me was that I wouldn't allow what happened to others to happen to me. I decided to have a place to go and make the decision (retirement) on my own. I didn't want anyone saying, "Gee Merlin, it has been nice, but we just put you on waivers."

So about 4 1-2 years before I retired, while recovering from an elbow operation in a hospital, I wrote out a mock contract that I wanted to sign. It involved broadcasting and acting, probably with a network. I knew their interest in me would be primarily in broadcasting. And, when it finally came down to negotiations, acting was just a throw-in.

Q: How did you implement your plan while still playing?

A: Part of my document was what I could do to make it happen. When I got out of the hospital, I arranged to meet with representatives of all three networks (NBC, CBS and ABC). I told them what I wanted and said I know that opportunity comes along at different times and, if you have a job available, I'll quit football right now.

That scared the hell out of them. They said they'd be accused of tampering with an active player. The idea was irrational, and the more I thought about it I was furious. I wasn't talking about bothering anyone else. This is my life, my career. I thought you had a chance in this country to do what you wanted to do. In essence, I found out they wouldn't deal with me until I was officially retired.

Q: What memories do you cherish from your 15 years in the make-believe world of football?

A: The thoughts I have are pleasant and they are mostly of people, only a few events. The games run together except for the last few seconds of the 1967 game here against Green Bay and the 1976 playoff game against Dallas, when we gave them the ball back about three times and still kept stopping them. Then, there was my last game at the Coliseum when we went crazy (the Rams won 55-0).

I kept thinking that I should feel differently about my last season. But even in my final game as a Ram, a playoff loss to Minnesota, I couldn't treat it any differently than any other game. The discipline was too ingrained. I wasn't disappointed that it was my last game, but only that we had lost the game (24-13) and couldn't go to the Super Bowl.

Q: What do you remember about 1962, your rookie year with the Rams?

A: I had come off winning teams at Utah State and I looked at the Rams roster and said, 'Boy, this is a great team.' But I had nothing to compare it to. It wasn't a great team. It wasn't even a mediocre team. It was a terrible team (1-12-1 record).

Q: Are the stories true that you were a rookie for about 10 minutes?

A: Well, they had this freeway drill — four pylons marking off an area — in which they put me on defense head-to-head against an offensive lineman. But no offensive lineman could handle me. I was also put on offense and I did quite well except against Deacon Jones. They were signalling him the snap count and he damn near took my head off.

Wreck puts Jim behind a desk

As it turned out, Hall in amazing the racing world by winning the 12 Hours of Sebring in 1965, did use a revolutionary automatic shift, something one of the big automobile manufacturers worked on for years without success.

"It was really very simple," Hall remembers.

Although he loved to drive, with his Cal Tech engineering background, Hall really had no business behind a wheel and it took a near fatal crash to send him to the designers board for good, although he still misses the driving end of it. Over the last 10 years he has left that phase of it to the Redmans, Unsers and Rutherfords.

IT WAS Hall who developed the ultra light aluminum and reinforced fiberglass chassis material. He was the first to use controlled downforce for improved performance. He developed the cockpit-controlled elevated wing. He developed the automatic transmission for racing. And he introduced the ground effects concept in the Chaparral 2J.

As a driver, he won the Sports Car Road Racing championship in 1964. He has won at Sebring, the Nurenburgring, Road America 500. Turning to Formula 5000 racing, he and Redman won the 1974-75-76 championships and he added four more titles in the revised Can Am series in 1977-78-79-80.

Of course, it wasn't until Al Unser piloted the Hall-prepared Lola to victory in the Indy 500 in 1978 that America really took notice. And that was in his first crack at the old brickyard. It was in '78 that he became the first team manager to win all three Triple Crown races, Indy, Pocono and Ontario 500 milers.

If it hadn't been for a transmission leak in 1979, the Hall team would have repeated at Indy.

And in 1980, Rutherford drove the Hall Chaparral to victory. What made this special was that it was a Hall creation, not a modified Lola.

The four-car display at the Museum of the Southwest depicts the evolution of the Chaparral over the years, the Chaparral 2, the 2F, dubbed the Yellow Submarine, the 2J and finally the Chaparral 2S.

It's so realistic you can hear the roar of the brickyard in the background...which, as it turns out, is a TV tape of Rutherford's Indy 500 win.

Drop by. The exhibit runs until March 28. And bring someone from the Texas Hall of Fame. It might turn on a light.

Pack, Rebs clash tonight

Lee is still reeling from a one-point loss to Abilene Cooper and a narrow defeats at the hands of Abilene High and San Angelo.

BUT THE first meeting was something to behold. Lee's Alvin Dunson poured in 27 points, including the last-gasp clincher in a 66-64 win. Kenneth Brown added 14 points and Andre Van Buren 10.

MHS is 21-9 on the season heading into tonight's game and Lee will be seeking its 20th win against 11 losses. With those kinds of records on the boards, it really seems a shame that this final outing has little meaning. Both teams' fate lies in the hands of Cougars and Bobcats because the Rebels and Bulldogs are helpless at this stage of the game, and the game is almost over.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Rental units not best investment

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. We are in our 70s, with retirement income of $1,500 a month. We have $175,000 in stocks and money market deposits and recently inherited $60,000.

We have an opportunity to buy a four-family house for $175,000. Rentals for all four units total $1,400 a month. If we buy the fourplex, we will move into one unit. Would this be a feasible investment at our age?

A. Good real estate, and I stress that word "good," has been and should continue to be among the best investments, for people of all ages.

But, from the information you provide, that fourplex doesn't look like such a good deal. Let's go through the numbers.

At $1,400 a month, the four units bring in $16,800 a year. With a price tag of $175,000, rental income yields 9.6 percent. That's low. You can get 12 percent or higher on your money, with little or no risk, lots of places these days.

If you buy that property, move in and collect three-quarters of the $16,800 total rental from the other three units, you would get $12,600 a year. If you put your $175,000 to work earning even 12 percent, you'll get $21,000 a year.

Think of $21,000 as the least amount of money your $175,000 should earn annually. Deduct $12,600 rental income from $21,000 and we see you would lose at least $8,400 of potential income by going through with the fourplex deal. That $8,400 — $700 a month — would be the price you would pay for occupying one unit in the four-family house.

Unless you live in a posh area, you should be able to find rental quarters for less than $700 a month.

My advice is to pass up the fourplex deal, unless you can buy at a lower price or raise the rents — perhaps a combination of the two.

Q. I own rental property valued at approximately $38,000, on which I have an 11.5 percent mortgage with a $21,000 balance and 13 years to go. My payment for principle, interest and real estate taxes come to $316. Charging $360 rent, I come out with $44 a month.

I am now buying a home for myself, taking on a $33,000 mortgage at 17.5 percent for 20 years. I am 23, make enough to pay my bills and live moderately. Would you advise me to sell the rental property, take out a smaller mortgage on my home and get back into property rental later in life?

A. No. My recommendation is to keep both properties.

The $360 a month rent on the first property totals $4,320 a year. On property worth $38,000, that's 11.4 percent. That's reasonable, assuming it's good property and can be expected to increase in value.

The 17.5 percent mortgage on your new home is in line with current interest rates. If interest rates drop and you're able to refinance that mortgage, do it. Meanwhile, stick with what you have.

You could save "out of pocket" money by selling the rental property and using the proceeds to get a smaller mortgage on your home. But the overall advantages of your real estate holdings outweigh that. Besides your rental income, you get income tax deductions for mortgage interest and real estate taxes on both properties and depreciation and other expenses on the rental property. Also, we'll assume the values of both properties will rise.

Q. I have a low-interest mortgage on my home. The bank has offered to discount the balance of the mortgage, if I pay it off early. My accountant tells me this would be treated as income, for tax purposes. Two Internal Revenue Service people tell me it would not be income. Who is right?

A. Your accountant. Let's say the present balance on the morgage is $20,000 and the bank accepts $16,000 as full payment to cancel your debt.

You're supposed to report $4,000 as "debt forgiveness" on the "other income" line of your federal income tax return — Line 20, on 1981 Form 1040.

'Senior Officials' seem to have Washington twins

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This may be the era of "new federalism," but it seems there is no way to cut down on the Senior Officials floating around the world. Where once there was one, now there are two.

From the plush interiors of jets like Air Force One they enunciate U.S. foreign policy to the rapt attention of the capital's press elite — in the safety of anonymity. That they do not always agree does not escape notice.

Friends and foes alike are confused and sometimes angered. But, no matter. The Senior Official, once he returns home, can strip off his mask and appear on national television to set the record straight.

Or if things get really messy, as they now are between the United States and Israel, the president can sit down and write a letter.

Only a few years ago, there was one Senior Official. He was a globe-girdling diplomat who looked exactly like Henry Kissinger.

He sometimes spoke one way on the plane and another way on the ground. If there was a conflict, it was between Henry Kissinger and his look-alike.

Last year, Son of Senior Official emerged. His resemblance to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was uncanny.

Last week, in the mystical Middle East, surfaced a second Senior Official. He and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger could be twins.

This struck some as ironic, because even while Haig and Weinberger were on competing trips abroad, reports were rampant in Washington that the two officials were pursuing competing foreign policy goals.

The Senior Official who closely resembled Weinberger spoke earnestly of Jordan's need for mobile Hawk missiles. He said serious consideration would be given to supplying the Arab kingdom with U.S. F-16 jet fighter planes. And he cited U.S. condemnation in the United Nations of Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights as evidence of a tougher line toward the Jewish state.

The point the Senior Official wanted to make was that the United States must have many friends in the Middle East besides Israel. The countries Weinberger visited — Saudi Arabia, Oman and Jordan — were offered as examples.

Talking constantly about a need for "balance" in U.S. policy in the area, the Senior Official alarmed not only Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, but Shimon Peres, the opposition leader, and virtually the entire Israeli parliament.

They were worried not just by the prospect of Hawk and F-16 sales to Jordan, but also by the inference that Israel is losing its special place in U.S. diplomatic and military calculations in the Mideast.

On Sunday, the Knesset overwhelmingly adopted a resolution condemning the proposed arms deal and expressing its concern over U.S.-Israeli relations.

But to hear Weinberger describe his Middle East venture on NBC's Today program the next morning, he was simply fulfilling his "statutory responsibilities" in discussing arms with the Jordanians.

"Talk of arms sales to Jordan, because we had discussions in Jordan about it, is, I think, really quite premature," Weinberger said.

He dismissed Israel's complaint as "a little preemptive action," and insisted that its "margin of superiority is very great" in the arms field.

But Weinberger also emphasized that "the United States has more than one friend in the Middle East and adding strength to other countries in the Middle East can only serve the best interest of all."
