Hold speed to double nickels ... or face fine

Department of Public Safety Troopers Steve Ward and Tony Arnold advise the public that "strict enforcement of the speed limit compliance" will begin immediately.

The Floyd County DPS troopers stress that greater emphasis is being placed on speed violators across the state. The order has come down from Austin for "all troopers in the State of Texas to start strict enforcement action."

"Citizens should be cautious about their speed," Arnold and Ward note.

A motorist's speedometer may indicate that the vehicle's speed is within legal limitations and the driver believes this is his/her true speed, however, if the DPS radar indicates a higher speed that motorist will receive a citation.

"Saying your speedometer is off is no excuse," they warn.

"We are looking for a zero accident rate in Floyd County," explains Trooper Ward.

Residents also are advised that all "all Floyd County highways" still have a 55 MPH speed limit. The 65 MPH which was recently implemented for interstate highways does not affect any highways in this county.

Local crops destined for foreign markets

With an influx of news about massive imports and the trade imbalance, learning of area crops being earmarked for foreign markets is a welcome change.

Most of the South Plains' cotton and some milo are shipped abroad.

Now, several Floyd and northern Crosby county producers are growing another commodity which will primarily be shipped abroad: "seed" sunflowers. They are well adapted to the local area.

Widespread area destruction this spring and summer has focused attention on hail.

"It has to really be a devastating hail to ruin sunflowers," says Doug Galloway, one of the local seed sunflower producers. He points out, however, that wet soil can lead to root lodging after plants bloom and high winds can blow them down.

The Floydada farmer emphasizes that sunflowers are a "non-program crop, so they can be grown on extra acres outside of the farm program."

Galloway, who has 80 acres devoted to seed sunflowers this year, points out that "in the last few years seed companies have concentrated in our area" for seed sunflowers, because "our area is 'clean,' meaning that not many wild sunflowers are growing here."

Triumph Seed Co., headquartered in Ralls, has production in the commodity spanning from southeastern Floyd to the northern portion of Crosby County.

TWO VARIETIES

"We're growing two different varieties this year, and they are destined for both commercial and foreign use," Galloway says. "Primarily the seed sunflowers that we grow in our area are intended for foreign markets."

Since sunflowers are an extremely competitive commodity, firms do not divulge their foreign outlets.

A portion of the hybrid sunflowers produced on the South Plains is shipped to Kansas, where commercial sunflower production is more common.

Following the supply-and-demand formula, seed sunflower acreage has been "cut quite a bit this year," Galloway mentions. "In Floyd and northern Crosby counties there are approximately 500 acres that I know of," he adds. "This is about half the production that we normally have."

NOT 'FAIRY TALE CROP'

Although this is the fifth year for Galloway to produce seed sunflowers, he quickly points out that "it's not a fairy tale crop. There are risks involved with seed sunflowers just like any other crop."

Galloway says "as far as production costs, they are very similar to irrigated cotton. The largest cost in producing sunflowers, of course, is for pesticides. Head moths are the single biggest factor, but there are other insects, too. There are some animals (insects) out there crawling around that you don't really know are there until you grow sunflowers."

Blending insecticides with planting seed to guard against stem weevils is a "must." If insecticides

Winds to scrimmage Post

Friday skirmish on local field

Coach Earl Overton doesn't pause when he names the Whirlwind football squad's strong points in 1987: willingness to work and attitude.

"Our kids have worked very hard and we feel good about where we are," the first-year Mean Green athletic director and head football coach volunteers. He adds that, "We had a good workout Friday morning, which was the first time in pads."

The enthusiastic band of Whirlwinds will take the local field Friday for a scrimmage against visiting Post, a traditional AAA powerhouse. Junior varsity squads open their segment of the scrimmage about (5:30) 6 p.m., with varsity gridders later taking their turn.

FHS footballers travel to Cooper the following Friday, Aug. 28, for their second scrimmage. It also will involve both varsity and JV.

The Winds will enjoy the home field advantage when they open the campaign on Sept. 4 against Crosbyton.

52 UPPERCLASSMEN

Fifty-two upperclassmen are in camp. The Whirlwinds held an intra-squad scrimmage Saturday morning, followed by a watermelon feed for players, coaches and fans.

In addition to the 52 upperclassmen, "17 or 18 freshmen" are involved in drills.

Coach Overton terms the '87 Mean Green as "average" in size but lacking depth.

Of the 24 players presently listed on the varsity, exactly half are seniors. The balance of the squad includes eight juniors, two sophomores and two freshmen.

The coaching staff counts nine returning lettermen, plus two transfers — Corey Bates at Port Isabel and John Taylor at Sudan — who were starters last fall for their schools. Floydada letter earners from 1986 who have returned to the fold include Randy Enriquez, Greg Lawson, Roel Cisneros, Chad Pernel, Daniel Medrano, Ty Stovall, Leonard King, David Medrano and Ralph Casillas.

Last fall's signal-caller, Ty Stovall, has been moved to right halfback for his senior campaign. Quarterback had been the squad's deepest position with Stovall, Bates and capable junior Chad Quisenberry in the fold.

The Whirlwinds have not suffered a serious injury, with only "the usual soreness, bumps and bruises."

DEPTH CHART

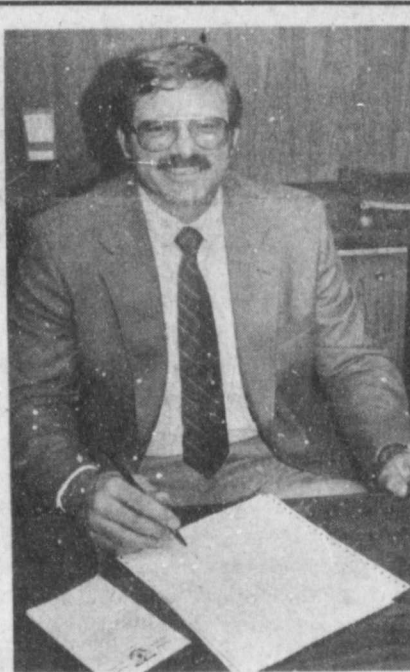

Whirlwinds' depth chart was issued to The Hesperian by Coach Overton, although he points out that changes occur virtually every day.

The depth chart:

LT: Danny Caballero, Jr.; Dana Cooper, Jr.
LG: Greg Lawson, Sr.; Ismail Delgado, Jr.
C: David Cates, Soph.; Joe Barrientos, Jr.

Congressman Boulter due for town hall meet

Congressman Beau Boulter has announced plans to be in Floydada next Wednesday, Aug. 26, for a "town hall meeting." It is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Massie Activity Center.

"Everyone is invited and encouraged to attend," organizers state.

They add that "Congressman Boulter will bring us up to date on what's happening in Washington and will also have a question-and-answer period."

Anyone desiring a private meeting with the congressman Wednesday evening is asked to contact Bill Hale to make arrangements.

Leroy Schaffner new hospital administrator

Leroy Schaffner was appointed administrator of Caprock Hospital District during a special board meeting Friday. He succeeds Guy Hazlett II, administrator since June 1984, who resigned his local position to become chief executive officer of Titus County Memorial Hospital in Mount Pleasant.

The Schaffners moved to Floydada in November 1984 from Springfield, Colo. He has been associated with Caprock Hospital District since that time as lab and x-ray manager.

Schaffner spent seven years serving in the United States Army, with duty stations in Texas, Germany, Colorado and Maryland. He worked in medical labs while in the military.

Following his discharge, he spent five years working as lab and x-ray manager at Southeast Colorado Hospital in Springfield.

Schaffner was graduated from Wayland Baptist University in April 1987 with a B.S. degree in business administration.

The new hospital administrator and his wife, LuAnn, are parents of two sons: Landon, a seventh grader, and Logan, four years. They are expecting their third child in September.

The Schaffners are active members of the Bible Baptist Church in Floydada.

Schaffner says he is "looking forward to this new challenge and will enjoy continuing to work with the physicians and staff at Caprock."

Capture, betrayal and 'La Jornada del Muerto'

By Bill Gray

The advance party was commanded by Captain H.B. Sutton and included two civil commissioners, William G. Cooke and George Van Ness. Others going were Major George T. Howard, Captain William P. Lewis, Lieutenants Thomas S. Lubbock, Ira Munson, John H. Brown, and Theodore Seavy. Journalists George W. Kendall and George Grover were also among the ninety-nine men comprising the contingent. Leaving Camp Resolution, they covered only about six miles and bivouacked the first night at the foot of the Caprock, west of present-day Flomot. The Sutton-Cooke party commenced their ascent of the dreaded Llano Estacado on August 31, lacking any knowledge of how far it was to Santa Fe.

With great difficulty, the detail made its way up the escarpment, camping east of modern-day Plainview on the second day. They crossed rugged Tule Canyon on September 3.

Making about thirty miles per day, they had problems negotiating the canyons and crevices of the southern edge of the formidable Palo Duro Canyon. The Sutton-Cooke party finally descended the Llano near the present town of Tucumcari, New Mexico, on September 7. The journey across the Llano had taken its toll. Most provisions had been consumed. While out foraging, several men turned up missing, becoming lost or picked off by Indians.

On September 9, they reached the Canadian River and discovered an old cart path. Here they encountered three Comancheros who directed them to the sheep ranches of Anton Chico, about sixty miles west toward Santa Fe. Commissioner Cooke hired the traders to join his servant, Matias, to return to the party at Camp Resolution. Matias carried orders for General McLeod to abandon camp and leave immediately for the New Mexican settlements.

Obtaining a plentiful supply of sheep at Anton Chico, the hungry men ate everything that had been bought and dressed. The Mexican shepherds appeared friendly enough, but were very reserved. Sutton and Cooke soon discovered why. They were informed that the entire territory was up in arms. Volunteers were being recruited to defend against the Texans - even the priests were warning the populace that the "Tejanos were coming to kill, steal, and despoil their women!" (Noel Loomis wrote in The Texan Santa Fe Pioneers: "Stirring up the general population against the Texans would help affirm Mexico's control over the territory." Loomis further suggests, "That the entire structure of fear and hatred was manufactured by Governor Armijo and his sycophants. It was not an unusual thing to do then and is not new. Propaganda is still a powerful weapon.")

The Texans also learned that the earlier Howland group had been arrested and imprisoned in Santa Fe. This was not the anticipated reception of the expedition. Cooke should have heeded the warnings - he committed a grave error by not sending word back to General McLeod, advising those at Camp Resolution of the circumstances.

A scouting party was ordered to proceed to San Miguel, there to survey the situation, buy supplies, and report back. In this group were Captain William Lewis and Commissioner George Van Ness. They both spoke Spanish and were directed to contact the authorities. George Kendall, Major Howard, and Archibald Fitzgerald were included in the detachment.

Upon reaching the village of Cuesta on the Pecos River, Kendall and the others were arrested by Captain Damaso Salazar and a force of more than one hundred armed soldiers. The Texans would have been shot on the spot had it not been for the intervention of a local rancher, Gregorio Vigil, who convinced Salazar that only Governor Armijo had the power of life and death. Salazar relented, ordering the Texans' horses and possessions seized, and that they be chained and marched on foot to Santa Fe.

Before reaching the capital, the prisoners and their captors met nearly one thousand soldiers escorting New Mexico Governor Manuel Armijo. Being conversant in Spanish, Captain Lewis acted as the spokesman. After a short consultation with the governor, Lewis was released from bondage, placed on a mule, and directed to join the governor's troops. This action caused great concern among the other Texans. Lewis rode off with the Mexican force and the others were marched back to San Miguel.

On September 17, from a jail window in San Miguel, Kendall and his cellmates witnessed the cold-blooded executions of Samuel Howland and Alexander Baker. These two, along with William Rosenberry, were captured three weeks earlier. Rosenberry had been killed during an escape attempt. Howland and Baker made good their escape from Santa Fe, and in attempting to reach the expedition, were recaptured. Howland was offered his freedom if he would persuade the Texans to surrender without incident. He refused to betray his comrades and it cost Howland his life.

Such was not the case with Captain Lewis, who did betray his fellow Texans - as well as his Masonic brethren. On September 17, the Sutton-Cooke party was surrounded by Captain Salazar's troops at Anton Chico. For years, Texans had faced overwhelming odds in Mexican confrontations, so the large force didn't deter Sutton's men from standing their ground. As the Texans prepared to fight to the death, Captain Lewis emerged from the Mexican ranks, accompanied by Governor Armijo's nephew, Jarvis.

Lewis approached William G. Cooke, informing the commissioner of the New Mexicans' concern over the "invasion." Cooke protested, reminding the captain that theirs was not a military operation in any sense. Besides, they were in Texas territory in the first place. Cooke was led to believe that Lewis had the authority to offer the Texans the right to trade in New Mexico if they would surrender their arms - it was the government's policy for the Santa Fe Trail traders and other merchants to relinquish their weapons while doing business. Lewis further explained that the Texans would be permitted to trade for eight days, after which their horses and weapons would be given back to them. They would then be allowed to return to the land whence they came.

Captain Sutton and most of the others doubted the Lewis story. Commissioner Cooke and Lewis held a private meeting in which the captain pledged upon his Masonic trust that he was telling the truth. (A Mason's word to a brother was seldom questioned so it is not surprising that Cooke sincerely acknowledged Lewis' veracity.) After this meeting, Cooke assured Captain Sutton of Lewis' honesty. Sutton ordered the Texans to lay down their weapons - it didn't take long for the Pioneers to realize that Lewis had betrayed them all.

In the words of Thomas S. Lubbock (member of Holland Lodge No. 1, Houston): "...that Lewis had pledged his Masonic faith to the correctness of what he had stated; and that all was right. That day our arms and equipment were delivered up." Lubbock was later to write, "He (Cooke) reminded him (Lewis) of his pledged honor, which had been forgotten, his plighted Masonic faith, which had been broken; and declared to him, his former associates

THE DEATH MARCH—The treatment of the Texans by their captors was among the most treacherous ever inflicted in the history of warfare. It was every bit as dreadful as the infamous Bataan Death March — one hundred years later. A number would lose their lives on their march to the prisons of Mexico. The Mexican commander would later be court-martialed for his atrocities committed against the Texan prisoners under his charge.

would have died in the ditch but for his treacherous representations." Cooke immediately condemned Lewis as a man, a Texan, and a Mason.

After surrendering their weapons, the Texans were stripped, searched, humiliated, and placed in bondage. Lewis was later observed loading up a wagon of Texan goods and supplies. When last heard of, he was on his way to Chile. (Later, William P. Lewis would be expelled from Austin Lodge No. 12, A.F.&A.M., as a result of charges brought against him by returning members of the 1841 Texan Santa Fe Expedition.)

On September 20, the Sutton-Cooke party was marched through San Miguel where they learned of the Howland and Baker executions. What lay ahead of the Texans was a forced march, on foot, to the prisons of Mexico City - a distance of over 2000 miles. Sutton assumed that George Kendall, Major Howard, and the others were lost. Commissioner Cooke was deeply concerned about General McLeod. The party from Camp Resolution was proceeding into a trap - and there was absolutely nothing Cooke could do about it.

Back at Camp Resolution, General McLeod's problems were compounded - over eighty horses were lost to the Indians and several more men were killed in isolated attacks. There was speculation that the Sutton-Cooke party had been intercepted by the Mexicans. The majority of McLeod's men agreed with "Old Paint" Caldwell that they should retreat back to Austin.

On September 17, Matias and the Comanchero traders arrived, carrying orders from Cook to abandon the camp, burn the wagons, and proceed to Santa Fe. In spite of the objections of Amos Golpin and the other merchants, the orders were obeyed. McLeod's party led Camp Resolution on September 19. Their campsite that night was in the vicinity of Cottonwood Springs, west of the present community of Quitaque.

With Matias and the guides leading the way, McLeod's party had little difficulty negotiating the Caprock. The guides knew the route well. However, the party was critically short of supplies and food - they were even forced to kill and eat the pet dogs that had followed them from the Waco village.

"Paint" Caldwell and a small detail were sent to buy provisions, check on Cooke's party, and return. It took ten days to cross the Llano, and the McLeod command arrived at Laguna Colorado (south of present-day Tucumcari) on October 4. Here the party was confronted by Colonel Armando Archuleta's superior Mexican force. The Mexicans demanded an immediate surrender. General McLeod considered the condition and privation of his men. The remnant of men who reached Laguna Colorado that day were but shadows of the force that had left Brush Creek Camp back in June. They lacked the strength to successfully cope with any opposition. Given assurance they would be well-treated, the Texans surrendered without the firing of a shot. McLeod quickly learned that surrendering so easily was to lead to even greater misfortune and tragedy.

The McLeod party, along with the several scouting details that had been captured, were marched on to San Miguel where they were combined with Kendall and the others for the long, tortuous journey to the Mexican prisons. Now numbering over two hundred, this combined group of Texan prisoners left San Miguel on October 17 - about three weeks behind the Sutton-Cooke party.

The Texans were marched west toward Albuquerque and then turned south, following the east bank of the Rio Grande River. South of Socorro, they veered westward, following the contours of the river. At Fray Cristobal Paraji they entered upon that portion of the train known as "La Jornada del Muerto" (The Journey of Death), appropriately named two hundred years earlier by the Spanish explorers. It was on the Jornada that several prisoners were murdered by Captain Salazar.

On October 24, John D. McAllister was unable to keep the pace and was brutally shot by the Mexican captain. Having cut off the Texan's ears, Salazar hung them on a rawhide thong around his neck as sort of a morbid trophy. Four others, including the merchant Amos A. Golpin, were slain in similar fashion - and their ears were added to the adornments on Salazar's grisly necklace.

McLeod's party arrived at el Paso del Norte (present-day Juarez, Mexico) on November 4. Here the disheartened men saw the advance Sutton-Cooke group. At this point, all the Texan prisoners were turned over to Colonel Auturo Elias, who was the first Mexican commander to give them humane treatment.

Upon hearing the stories of brutalities and seeing the five pairs of ears worn around Salazar's neck, Colonel Elias ordered that Captain Damaso Salazar be court-martialed for his atrocities committed against the Texan prisoners under his charge.

The Sutton-Cooke party departed for Chihuahua first, with the remaining McLeod group staying a short time in el Paso del Norte. Kendall and some of the officers even obtained short paroles and were welcomed into private homes. The Texans received meals, money, clothing, and other benefits not afforded them since their arrests.

George Kendall noted that it was unbelievable how their situation could change. One night they would be huddled around desolate campfires with nothing to eat. The next night they would be allowed to visit homes of prominent Mexicans, often fed and entertained by the wives. The prisoners were frustrated in the way they were treated, never knowing what next to expect.

Police investigate two burglaries

Two burglaries were reported to the Floydada City Police Department during the past week.

An individual entered the Family Health Clinic, 406 W. Calif., in an incident reported Aug. 15. The person or persons had been entering the housing and using the telephone, according to police.

At least one long distance and possible others were made. The same situation also had been reported "about a month ago."

Nothing was reported missing from the house.

A window was broken from the OK Tire Co. on Thursday night or early Friday morning to gain access to the firm. The burglary was reported Friday, according to Sgt. Harold Snell.

Stolen were a 13-inch Sears black-and-white TV set and two CP brand 2 1/2-inch drive air impact wrenches. In addition, there was damage to a window and back door, by which the thief exited.

Harbin interim manager of Lighthouse Electric

Harbin told The Hesperian that he and his family will be moving "to Floyd County, in or near Floydada; that is our goal, anyway."

"I'm grateful for the opportunity (to join Lighthouse) and look forward to working with employees, members and board of directors of Lighthouse," he adds.

The new interim LEC general manager and his wife, Linda, are both Muleshoe natives, having graduated from high school there. They are parents of two offspring: Joe, 14, an eighth grader, and Jennifer, 10, a fifth grader.

Harbin says his children "probably will start to school here," depending upon the date they are able to move.

The personable Harbin earned a bachelor of science degree in agricultural engineering from Texas Tech University. Following graduation, he worked for the Soil Conservation Service in Big Spring, Crosbyton and Liberty prior to joining Lamb County Electric in 1974 as engineering services manager.

The Harbin family are members of the Church of Christ. The parents are involved with their offspring in 4-H and other youth activities. He is a Lions Club member.

"Our whole family likes sports of any kind that involve outdoor activities: hunting, fishing, water skiing, snow skiing, etc.," he said.

On a light-hearted vein he has been "a Littlefield Wildcat fan, but I'm looking forward to becoming a Floydada Whirlwind fan." Floydada and Littlefield are longtime athletic rivals.

COLORFUL—Bright yellow petals ring large, ple-size heads make sunflowers one of the area's most colorful crops. These sunflowers are growing are not added at planting to combat stem weevils, the insects "bore through the center of the stalk, causing the stalk to die and break over before the head is mature."

Local crops destined for foreign markets

"Insects definitely are our biggest obstacle and major cost" in growing seed sunflowers, Galloway points out.

"Primarily the machinery that you have to farm cotton with will work with sunflowers," the Floydada producer explains. However, "as with all specialty crops, there is some additional machinery needed. We must apply pesticides when we plant, but some people are now using insecticides when they plant cotton."

He adds, "We can use the same cultivation equipment we do on cotton. Of course, special harvest equipment is necessary."

He explains that "after planting, only one cultivation is required. Aerial spraying of pesticides is necessary beyond that point."

Ironically, "what is good for sunflowers is bad for cotton, weatherwise. Two irrigations are all that are required for crops to reach their potential under normal conditions. This year it looks like one watering will do it. If you get March and April rains to plant on and spring rains — when our cotton usually gets hailed out — this saves one watering. As I mentioned; usually what is bad for cotton is good for sunflowers."

MID-APRIL PLANTING

With seed sunflowers, "the normal planting date varies anywhere from the seventh to the fifteenth of April. The fifteenth is really their (seed companies) deadline. Unless the weather keeps you out of the field, there is really no reason for sunflowers not to be planted at that time," Galloway says.

Harvest "runs from the last of August to the first of September. Sunflowers are really an early crop."

Galloway explains that "weather like we've had in July has not had as adverse an effect as damp, cool weather would in August, when plants are maturing out."

However, "sunflowers are more of an arid type plant and they can't stand in water. They need a certain amount of dry, hot weather. They're somewhere between cotton and milo in how weather affects them."

Despite adverse weather for cotton recently, "we are still looking at an average harvest date for our sunflowers. When they start maturing — usually the first or second week in August — a severe hail would damage the crop.

"An earlier hail would damage the plant slightly, but as long as it has enough foliage to feed the plant and the bloom isn't too far advanced, it still has a chance to reach its potential."

"I've had cotton destroyed by hail right next to sunflowers, and these sunflowers went on and matured to near average production. It depends on the state of maturity the crop is in when you receive the adverse weather."

The Floydada producer says "last year was a terrible year for sunflower germination, just like milo. A lot of it didn't germinate because of the extremely wet fall."

BEEES VALUABLE

Unknown to persons not familiar with seed sunflowers, one of the most important facets of the crop is bees.

"You have to have bees for pollination," Galloway explains. "Sunflowers do not wind pollinate like milo; they have to have the worker bees to pollinate."

Seed companies make arrangements with beekeepers to furnish hives for their producers. Cost of the hives — which feature bees from south and east Texas — is shared by the seed company and the producer.

How many bees are needed? "On an average," Galloway says, "it takes about one good hive of bees to take care of approximately five acres of seed sunflowers."

Beekeepers normally place bees from one-half mile to a mile from the sunflowers, frequently in native pasture, wheat ground or leave-out land.

When a hive is "set" or located, "scouts are sent out in all directions." Wildflowers are among their favorite haunts, but when a scout locates a sunflower field, it returns to the hive with information about the find.

"It's usually about two days (after hives are set) before the bees move to sunflowers," says Galloway, who adds that they are capable of flying up to five miles.

Safety of the bees against insecticides is one reason that hives are located away from the sunflowers.

NIGHT SPRAYING

As another precaution, "aerial applicators have to be equipped to spray at night because what they are spraying are bugs, and the bees are bugs. Inexperienced or careless applicators can kill your bees.

Consequently, the sunflowers have to be sprayed between dusk and sun-up or when bees are in their hives."

With commercial sunflowers, "bees are important but not as critical because they are self-pollinated. Hybrid sunflowers are not self-pollinating and bees are essential to pollinate between 'male' and 'female.'"

Bees "don't want to get out and work when the weather is cool," which means their activity was curtailed a portion of last week.

"Usually, one of the side benefits of the bees," Galloway points out, "is that the beekeeper normally tries to leave them on leave-out land or wheat ground and they pollinate cotton through the blooming stage after sunflowers have been pollinated." The bees are "usually picked up in mid-August before we start preparing the land for wheat."

On another topic, Galloway says that "the current farm program dictates a lot of the acreage that can be grown, even though it is not a program crop."

With this in mind, "We can count our pollinator rows as set-aside as long as they are in a four-row pattern. Usually pollinator rows are destroyed after pollination takes place. It depends on a farmer's individual situation. If he has enough land set-aside, he could harvest the pollinator rows."

Pollinator sunflowers must be sold as commercial. The nearest buyer of local commercial sunflowers is headquartered in Petersburg. "None of our sunflower production, other than pollinator rows on the years they are suitable for harvest, goes to Petersburg," Galloway says.

"There are two companies that grow seed sunflowers in our area, Triumph in Ralls and Gro-Agri in Lubbock," the local producer says. "All my sunflower production is with Texas Triumph."

Basically, four varieties of sunflowers are grown on the South Plains. In addition, "there are scattered amounts of confectionaries grown."

Average yield of "seed sunflowers is probably 1,800 pounds" per acre, which is lower than commercial sunflowers.

"We have made all the way from 1,000 pounds an acre to last year when we averaged 2,200 pounds," Galloway notes.

He plans to continue producing seed sunflowers, which lend diversification to his farming operation, although "it's not a fairy tale crop."

person may own.

Among the most common things entirely or partially excluded when counting resources for SSI purposes are the following:

*A home (and adjacent land) which a person owns and makes his or her principle place of residence, regardless of its value.

*Personal effects and household goods with a total equity value of $2,000 or less. If the total equity value exceeds $2,000, the excess counts. The equity value is what an item can be sold for, less the amount of any legal debt against it.

*A car regardless of value, if it is used by any member of the household for transportation to a job, to maintain essential daily activities, or if it is modified for use by a handicapped person. If a car cannot be excluded for any of these reasons, up to $4,500 of its current market value is excluded.

*Life insurance policies with a total face value of $1,500 or less per person.

*Burial plots or spaces regardless of value, if intended for the use for a person or his or her immediate family.

*Burial funds set aside for an individual or his or her spouse of up to $1,500 each.

If you are in need, and are 65 and over, or blind or disabled you should not try to figure out if you can qualify.

Help for handicapped

The Client Assistance Program helps people with disabilities get vocational rehabilitation (VR) services from the Texas Rehabilitation Commission and the Texas Commission for the Blind.

VR services are aimed at helping people with physical or mental disabilities get a job. VR services include help with college or trade school expenses, interpreter services for deaf people, reader services for blind people, medical services, on-the-job training, help in finding a job, and many other services.

The CAP can help people in many different ways. If you or someone you know, are having problems with Vocational Rehabilitation services, call Advocacy, Inc. at 800/252-9108. This is a toll free number.

Social Security Report

By Terry J. Clements

The supplemental security income (SSI) program, designed to provide a floor of income protection for needy people 65 and over, or blind or disabled, does not require that people sell their home and all their possessions before they can qualify for payments.

Single persons may own resources valued up to $1,800 and couples up to $2,700 and still be eligible for payments. And some resources do not count in figuring SSI eligibility.

Resources under SSI are defined as any property that people own that can be converted into cash (if not already cash) to be used for their food, clothing, or shelter. Resources include real estate, personal property, savings and checking accounts, stocks and bonds, and just about anything else of value a

Lakeview News

By Joyce Williams

Aug. 20:

Only a few more days of vacation before school starts again, ready or not.

Brandon Harrison and Jason Pyle got in some fishing and hunting time at the willow edged lake west of Lakeview, as did Zack Adams, who caught four fish recently. R.C. Andrews will have to provide lively classes to compete with such summertime fun.

Klaus Von Lepel, Rotary International exchange student staying with the James Williams family has been given a varied sample of Southwestern life this month.

The Tom Taylors from Crosbyton joined the James Williamses and Klaus at Red River, New Mexico the first weekend he was here. Kellie Williams served Sunday dinner to both Klaus and the student from Japan, Futoshi Uchida, and their hosts. Then Klaus attended the Post Stampede Rodeo and was given a tour of the rodeo by the lovely cowgirl, Miss Sylvia Adair.

A birthday swimming party and cookout at Roaring Springs for Austin Williams was Klaus' experience at that West Texas vacation site. He expressed amazement at the great distances West Texans drive for a swim, a cookout, a rodeo. Others who helped Austin celebrate his birthday included D.G. Hollums, Tyson Edwards, Dana Vinson, Zack Adams, Corey Carthel, Travis Bailey and the guest of honor's grandmother. The boys cooked hamburgers after their swim. The birthday cake was decorated with a cowboy boot design.

Klaus was given a lesson in West Texas history when Mrs. James Williams and Mrs. Monte Williams took him to Palo Duro Canyon to see "Texas" last week. They got rained out the last thirty minutes but he read the synopsis in the book and enjoyed the musical, he said. The Ralls rodeo gave him another sample of that unique sport. He has toured the Lockney feedlots and Floyd County rangeland with Monte Williams and observed Texas justice with James Williams.

Neal Bertrand has been in the Sabinal area with Glen Bertrand and Sam Green for corn harvest in that area. Also Guy Galloway and David Maines of South Plains are in the crew.

Misses Misty Bertrand and Joanie Smith and Mrs. Randy Bertrand were in Lubbock recently for the District 4-H Fashion Revue. The Victor Smiths went over for the evening show after the day's judging at Texas Tech University Center auditorium. Misty Bertrand won first place in the Buying Clothing project.

Miss Angie Bertrand participated in the District 4-H Volleyball Tournament at the Floyd County Fairground. She also attended the 4-H dance, with music by the Maines Brothers Band. Angie was among the youth at the Methodist church "Lock In" at Floydada First United Methodist Church building. The young people divided into study groups for discussions, watched movies and enjoyed refreshments at the all-night event.

Mrs. Dana Robertson of Lubbock visited her mother, Mrs. C.N. Walding, Saturday morning. Dana lived in Illinois twenty years and moved back to Lubbock about 2½ years ago. She worked at Reese Air Force Base.

Mrs. Joe Wayne Wright of Springhill, Florida visited this month with her in-laws, the Verlon Wrights.

Mrs. Verlon Wright attended her class reunion at Morton High School recently.

Miss Beth Norris of Carlsbad, New Mexico, Mrs. Shannon Norris of Amarillo and her sister, Miss Joan Hammond visited Mr. and Mrs. Bill Norris.

A grant proposal writing workshop at Post, Texas was attended by area museum, library, day care, child care and other public institution representatives, including Mrs. Q.D. Williams week before last.

A light shower fell over part of the community Monday afternoon. Pastures need rain.

Blanco Canyon rattlesnake killers observe that all snakes shot in the past week or two were headed toward the canyon walls, a sign taken to mean they were looking for caves to den up for an early winter. South flying geese and ducks have been observed headed toward Mexico as another sign of the early freeze anticipated after that norther that blew in about two weeks ago.

Housewives are canning and freezing as fast as they can get the fruits and vegetables in from field and orchard.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mooseberg and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thurston attended the monthly after-services fellowship at the City Park Church of Christ Sunday evening. So many bowls of fresh blackeyed peas, okra, cucumbers, corn, fresh sliced peaches, plates of cornbread to go with the good vegetables made everyone aware of the bounty of our countryside. The ladies of the church are sewing quilt blocks featuring a house of calico, with windows and chimney for a friendship quilt for the Joe Paty family who worshipped and served among us over twenty years while they taught school here. They have now moved to Carrollton where both teach in that area.

B.A. - Ethel Colston descendants reunion at Hubbard Creek Lake

The Village Inn Reunion House on Hubbard Creek Lake at Breckenridge was the site of the B.A. Colston Family Reunion on Aug. 7-9.

Attending were: Jake and Wilma Colston of Eden; Bernice Colston Nance and Justin and Beth Joseph of Grapevine; Jim Bob Holmes of McKinney; Dee Cullender and Terry Lee and Tyler Cullender of Dallas; Will, Katy, Cody and Jeff Sinor of Irving;

Also, Les, Trina and Melissa Dawn Sinor and Lee Sinor of Bridgeport; Edwin, Doris, Tammy and Terri Wilcox of Levelland; Raymond and Vonciel Colston, G.L. and Thelma Fawver and Mary Sinor of Floydada.

Everyone was treated to swimming, boating, horseshoe pitching, other table games and the traditional bingo game.

The main meal, Saturday night, featured barbecue brisket prepared by Will Sinor. The trimmings were prepared by all attending. "As usual, everyone ate too much," a family member says.

The same place and time were set for next year: the second week-end in August, Village Inn Reunion House.

Tyler Cullender, 10-month-old son of Terry Lee, and Melissa Dawn Sinor, two-month-old daughter of Les and Trina, were welcomed as new members of the family.

Dee Cullender, Katy Sinor, Doris Wilcox, Mary Sinor and Beth Joseph as alternate will be in charge for next year.

Cedar Hill News

By Grace Lemons

Monday, Aug. 17:

Crop report: Broom-weed in bloom, new frost date October 16. Junior Taylor brought by a grown on the Plains, broomweed in bloom, last Sunday morning. Junior does some farming below the cap, but he certifies this broom-weed is a genuine Cedar Hill specimen. Three oldtime signs now indicate Oct. 4, 12, and 16 as frost dates. The die is cast. Prayer might move the date back so, people of Cedar Hill, get right!

Lake pumps are being started on crops that are beginning to suffer. Most who must pump from the substrat feel late watering will not pay expenses.

Although it is not a crop Cedar Hill industry merits some mention. Two private enterprises are in full production.

Charlene Langley is still in the specialty baking business, operating from her home. Charlene says she is having difficulty keeping up with orders, and to use her words "I am working my head off."

Durrell Fortenberry reports that his EXCL hay equipment factory is experiencing a sharp increase in orders. Although dealers are being slow to add to their inventory, private orders have them working full time. Eleven pieces of equipment sold in the last few days and orders received for five more. While on a recent equipment delivery trip to the Olney, Cisco area Durrell spent the night with his wife's son-in-law Jay Strickland in Haskell. He reported crops in that area were in moisture stress, even more than Floyd County crops.

Ruby Bailey of Floydada, and her daughter and family, friends of Alpha Fortenberry, were evening service visitors at the Assembly of God Church last Sunday.

Those attending the Lackey reunion report an excellent period of fellowship. Present president of the reunion, Jerry Lackey was returned to his position as was secretary Imogene Fortenberry. Those present from the Roscoe branch were Dorothy Merrell and Dola Lackey. From the Ollie Lackey Cybert branch were Edith from Amarillo, and Ruby Lee of South Plains. Vonnie Anne Lackey Fortenberry was represented by two sons Fred and Cephus Fortenberry. Johnnie's descendants present were Emogene and Jack Stansell, Jerry and Leah and children, and Mrs. Jay Lackey and baby. Members of the Elvie Lackey branch were unable to come due to illness, work schedules or vacation conflicts. Joyce Dillard Morrison and Herman Morrison of Muleshoe were Clersey's children present. Sarah Lackey Beard, the sole survivor of the original Lackey family, had daughters Lois, Betty and Rose's daughter from Amarillo present. There were great-grandchildren and numerous visitors, present whose names were not available at this writing.

Patrick Jernigan and Wesley Durham moved to an apartment in Plainview Saturday August 15. The boys have been attending a court reporting school while living at Cedar Hill with their grandparents Cephus and Imogene Fortenberry. Imogene and Melba Jean had to go along to supervise the settling in. In addition to their school work Pat works at Hastings Bookstore, and Wes works at Wal-Mart warehouse.

From the Motley county line Junior Taylor reports two showers this week, total one and eight tenths inch rain.

Wednesday night Edna Gilley and Dwight and Helen Teeple visited in Plainview with the Leighton Teeplees. The occasion was the presence of Leighton and Juanita's daughter Shirlene, who is on missionary leave from Amsterdam, Holland.

Rev. and Mrs. Morton and boys returned home Friday from the nationwide General Council of the Assembly of God Churches in Oklahoma City. They reported a very full schedule with business conferences each morning and again in the afternoon and then preaching services at night. A total of more than twenty thousand persons registered for the conference. Fortunately for the Morton boys both their maternal and paternal grandparents lived in a small town nearby and they were able to visit both sets of their grandparents.

Aimee and Terra Gilley enjoyed supper in Plainview with their grandmother, Edna last Saturday night.

Visitors at the morning services of the Assembly of God were GA representatives brothers and sister Murdock and their family. The Silverton pastor and his family attended the night service.

Bert Glasscock, pastor of the Baptist church at the time it was rebuilt in 1960, is now superintendent of schools a few miles northwest of Denton, Texas, at a place called Valley View. Vada also teaches in the Valley View school system. Their youngest child is in her sophomore year at Denton.

As an attendance reward young folks from the Assembly of God Church were treated to a pizza/skating party in Plainview Monday afternoon.

It is amazing what ordinary people can do if they set out without any preconceived notions.

Floydada Nursing Home Happenings

By Jo Bryant

Monday: Morning coffee and juice as usual. Then at 10:30 I did the morning devotion. I read from Ps. 118-24, "This is the day that the Lord has made, let us rejoice and be glad in it." It seemed appropriate for a Monday, as some of the residents seem to be getting sleepy. Then we shared from the gospel of Matt. 14:22, about "Jesus walking on the water." We shared that we are going through a storm in our lives, trial, that we will sink like Peter did if we don't keep our eyes on Jesus. For us not to keep our eyes on our problems alone but on Jesus. We need faith to believe that we can do it, and to believe he will take care of our problems. Then at 2 p.m. we had the rhythm band. Each one played an instrument to the music of "Little Brown Jug" and "Frankie and Johnnie" and other fast songs. They enjoyed hearing the old timer songs once again.

Tuesday: 9:30 break as usual. 10:30, Bro. Richard Neeley brought the bananas, they always enjoy the treat. Bro. Neeley opened with a prayer, and asked the question, "Did you think to pray when you got up this morning?" We sang two songs, "Lord Lead Me" and "Farther Along We'll Know All About It." He spoke on 1 Cor. 4:4-1. He said, "Do we please man or Jesus Christ? Does man walk his own way or does he walk the straight and narrow? Do we preach Christ and His word?"

Wednesday: 9:30, coffee and juice break. 10:30, Toni Richardson, youth director from the First Methodist Church, came and shared 1 John: 4-7-10. She said when she looks at a cross, she thinks of the love that Jesus has for us by dying on the cross. We do not see just an old rugged wood cross, but we see "Love." We sang "This Is My Commandment That You Love One Another" and "The Joy of The Lord Is My Strength."

We played Bingo at 2 p.m. Angelina Reynolds came and called out the numbers and helped the residents with their cards, thanks Angelina. Bananas and bugle snacks were their treats. Those playing were: Burmah Probasco, Rosetta Underwood, Opal Morrison, Brooks Callaway, Della Halencak,

A rehearsal supper, hosted by the groom's parents was held by the pool at the Lubbock Country Club.

Other courtesies extended the couple was a bridal shower in Odessa in the home of Mrs. Bill Heggenier and a "spice and rice" shower in the home of Valerie Ullman of Lubbock, co-hosted by Terre Clark. The patio at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jon Jones was the setting for a "Fiesta" dinner party. Mr. and Mrs. Travis Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Muncy and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Lloyd assisted as hosts. An "old-fashioned picnic" was held at the Floydada Country Club with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Burleson, Mr. and Mrs. Don Bean, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Christian, Mr. and Mrs. Laron Fulton and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny West as hosts. A bridal luncheon was given in the home of Mrs. Jake Younger assisted by Mrs. J.E. Waller, Mrs. Ray Gene Ferguson, and Mrs. Bob Ross. A bridesmaids luncheon was held in the home of Emily Baker of Lubbock with Pam Beene assisting.

Lockney Care Center News

By Lanita Cantwell

COME TO THE FAIR! This is the phrase we have been seeing and hearing about town recently. Today is the day! Lockney Care Center invited you to come by the Unicare Health Facility booth. We will have some educational materials to hand out concerning Alzheimer's Disease. We will also be showing some short films on Alzheimer's as well as on dignity of the elderly. We will be taking donations for Alzheimer's research and for every $1 donation, you will get one chance on our door prize drawing. We hope to have many valuable prizes donated by our business people and friends.

Alzheimer's Disease (pronounced Alts'hi-merz) is a disorder of the brain which affects perhaps as many as 1.5 million middle-aged and older Americans. Although there are a number of promising clues, the actual cause of Alzheimer's Disease is unknown and further scientific investigation is required. Unicare Health Facilities plans to donate $10,000 of the monies collected this year to Texas Tech University Alzheimer research project.

Last week was really a busy one. We wish to thank our volunteers for helping us get through it. Glenda Francis was the bus volunteer on Monday. Geneva Stansell and Jackie Spencer did a lot of telephone work for us. Thanks, to all of you for donating your valuable time.

Tears of sadness and joy flowed freely on Wednesday when Benny Thompson was transferred to the Unicare Health facility in Tulia. All of us at Lockney Care Center learned to love Benny. He formerly lived in Tulia and often expressed a desire to go "home." Since Benny no longer has family members living in Lockney, our administrator, Lavona Pitchford, felt we should be able to grant Benny's wishes. After his family agreed to this move, Tulia Care Center staff came with one of Benny's friends to move him. We teased Benny about needing a U-Haul trailer to move all his pictures and mementos from well-wishers. We truly will miss Benny, but know he will bring a ray of sunshine to all the residents at the Tulia Care Center.

See you at the Fair!

Vicious dog legislation established

EDITOR'S NOTE: Recent legislation by the State of Texas has established the keeping of a vicious dog as a violation of the state penal code. The following is offered to inform readers what constitutes a designation of "vicious dog" and what an animal owner must do if his animal is so tagged.)

H.B. 571 - ANIMALS: VICIOUS DOGS Effective 9/1/87;

SECTION 1. Chapter 42, Penal Code, is amended by adding Section 42.12 to read as follows:

Sec. 42.12. KEEPING VICIOUS DOG. (a) In this section:

(1) "Dog" includes coyote, wolf, or other animal belonging to the canine family.

(2) "Unprovoked" with respect to an attack by a dog means that the dog was not hit, kicked, or stuck by a person with any object or part of a person's body nor was any part of the dog's body pulled, pinched, or squeezed by a person.

(3) "Vicious conduct" with respect to a dog means an attack made by the dog on a person in which the dog initiated continued physical contact with the person and fails to retreat and:

(A) the attack resulted in bodily injury to the person;

(B) the attack was unprovoked; and

(C) the attack did not occur in a pen or other enclosure in which the dog was being kept and that was reasonably certain to prevent the dog from leaving the pen or enclosure on its own.

(b) A person commits an offense if the person owns or keeps in his custody or control a dog that he knows has engaged in vicious conduct and the person does not:

185 firemen-EMS personnel vie in Floydada Agro-Rescue School

One hundred and 85 persons participated in the fourth annual Floydada Agro-Rescue School on Saturday. Firefighters and EMS personnel from this area as well as downstate — some as far as Killeen — attended the all-day school at the regional training field in southeast Floydada.

Purpose of the school is "to educate emergency personnel in rescue techniques in agricultural accidents." Classes were offered in basic and advanced rappelling, grain rescue and different aspects of rescue from farm machinery, such as cotton strippers, combines, tractors and balers.

The annual event is sponsored by Texas Engineering Extension Service. The unique school, first of its kind in the state, has resulted in an agro-rescue school being included in the annual Firemen's Training School at Texas A&M University, according to a local source.

"Special thanks should go to Q.D. Williams, who supplied the location for advanced rappelling; Floydada EMS, who supplied an ambulance in case of injury; the St. Mary's Flight for Life helicopter for making a special appearance at the school and especially to the wives of the Floydada Firemen, who unselfishly gave of their time to assist," according to a Floydada volunteer fireman.

Floydada Rebels vie Saturday in state softball tournament

Floydada Rebels "played well but had one bad inning in each game" during the state Class D state softball tournament, held last week-end in Amarillo.

At 8 a.m. Saturday, Movie Score of Midland scored 10 runs in the top of the first inning against the Floydada squad. The Midland squad won 19-10, meaning it was outscored 9-5 by Floydada after the first inning.

Floydada Rebels jumped ahead of Avangi Rebels of Fort Worth until the third inning, and the Fort Worth squad claimed a 19-10 verdict. The Floydada team played error-free ball in the 6:30 p.m. Saturday match.

One hundred and 52 teams, representing 60 cities and towns, competed in the tourney.

The Rebel's first game was played at Southwest No. 2 and the evening contest was played at Martin Road Complex #1.

C.O. Woody is manager of the Floydada Rebels, which qualified for state by winning the Floydada Men's Softball League championship with an 11-1 record.

The teams "appreciates fans who supported us at both games. It was an honor to get to play in the state tournament."

One fan says Floydada could have won either game with a couple of breaks. The team and manager have "high hopes for next year."

Attebury and Lambert, both Floyd County teams, also played in the state tourney although their scores were not available.

Presentation in Blanco Amphitheater

Prairie drama begins

Individuals from throughout the South Plains and beyond are in for some fine historic entertainment as "God's Country" unfolds on six nights.

The original prairie drama will be performed by an all-volunteer cast of area residents at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 20, 21, 22, 27, 28 and 29 in the Blanco Canyon Amphitheater, 10½ miles north of Crosbyton or about four miles south of Lakeview.

One of the most reluctant cast members to get involved in the cast of 1986 was Lester Bownds, vo-ag teacher at Lorenzo. He and his wife, Paula, after some prodding from Kevin and Terry Rainwater, would agree only to non-speaking parts.

Bownds blossomed as Sheriff Franklin, or "Big," as he is affectionately known. His participation has accelerated to multiple scenes in this year's production, an enthusiastic promoter of "God's Country," plus being a heavy contributor of volunteer labor and materials behind the scenes. Recently, Bownds helped to construct a 15'x30' metal building behind the stage that will serve as a dressing room for the cast, shelter in inclement weather and off-season storage for theatrical props.

Materials for this building were donated to the Rio Blanco Heritage Foundation by Joe Appling and d Bownds. Volunteer labor for this building was provided by Joe, Mark and David Appling of Mt. Blanco, Mark Hodges of Crosbyton, Jon Jones of Floydada and Bownds, all of whom fill multiple roles in the "God's Country" endeavor.

Floydada community residents appearing in the prairie drama are Jon Karen Jones and Lou Burleson.

In addition to the new episodes which have been added to the 1987 version of "God's Country," three new songs have been composed by music director Rick Sudduth, lifelong resident of the McAdoo community. One hauntingly beautiful Indian lullaby solo will feature Zama Norris of Ralls.

Other featured soloists will be Jane Morris, Camille Driskell, Larry Ramsey and Connie Clark, all of Crosbyton, and Steve Verett of Ralls.

Although some levity is allowed in one scene in order to depict an actual tale of cowboy larceny and frontier justice, much care has been taken to maintain historical authenticity throughout the drama. History has been set to music via the original songs of Sudduth and to dialogue by author Pat Brown to give viewers the chance to learn where and how their ancestors developed this colorful area.

Blanco Canyon has never looked more splendid and provides a breathtaking setting for the Blanco Canyon Amphitheater which has been greatly improved since the close of the 1986 season.

In addition to the stage having been raised 4-6 feet, the seats are now numbered so patrons will not have to make a mad dash to acquire a seat in the first-come-first-serve fashion and can enjoy the time before curtain call to savor the beautiful sights visible from the amphitheater grounds.

Purchasing a ticket to "God's Country 1987" involves more than just buying an unforgettable 2½ hours of entertainment. It represents a small contribution toward a "first" in this area and an opportunity to become involved in this noble project. The foundation further invites your participation by way of membership in the Rio Blanco Heritage Foundation for a $10 annual fee which is used to perpetuate the "God's Country" musical and to maintain the amphitheater.

Much hard work and many personal sacrifices have gone into this fledgling project but through it all, those involved are proud of the roles they have held and of the feelings of a job well done for their efforts.

For reservations call Jana Parrish at 806/675-2331 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays and Saturday mornings.

SPS sponsoring youth coloring contest; winners offered gifts

In an effort to "encourage electrical safety," Southwestern Public Service Co. in Floydada is sponsoring a coloring contest for youngsters. Generous prizes are being offered to winners.

Characters to be colored appear in one-page inserts in this issue of The Hesperian. Additional copies are available at the SPS office in Floydada, Kirk & Sons and Perry Brothers.

The coloring contest opens immediately and continues through the Sept. 11 deadline for entries. Children's works should be returned to one of the three abovementioned firms.

Lewis McDaniel, local SPS manager, says three age categories have been established: six years and under, seven and eight years, nine years through fifth grade. Ages as of Sept. 1, 1987, will apply.

First, second and third place awards — $50, $25 and $10 gift certificates — will be presented in each category. The gift certificates may be redeemed at Perry Brothers or Kirk and Sons.

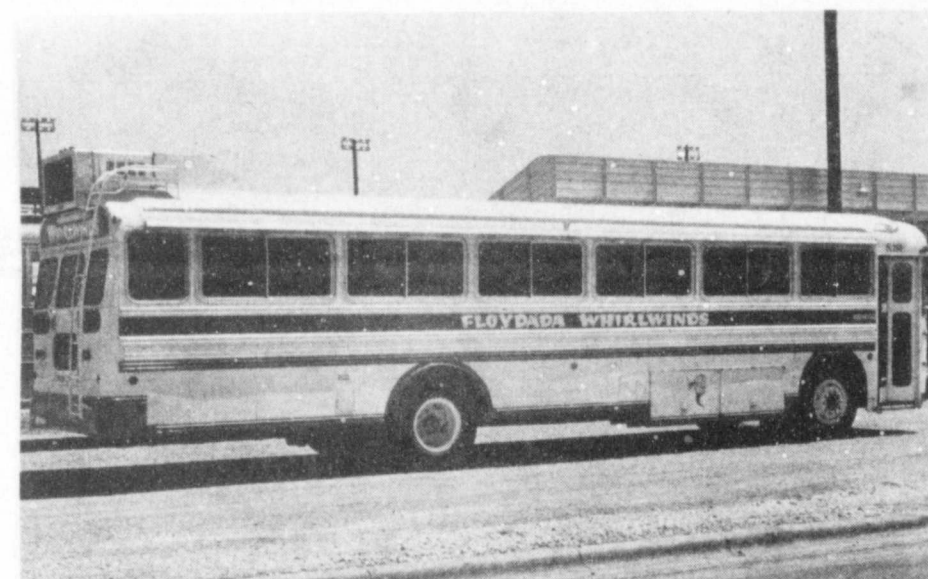

McDaniel says that any medium may be used in coloring the pages: crayons, oil paint, watercolors or others.

Pictures will be on display at the three stores until they are judged. Winners are to be selected by "an independent judge."

The SPS manager expects prizes to be awarded by Sept. 25.
