YMCA to shut down Alamo, Northeast locations on Sept. 1

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Economics has prompted the board of directors of the Midland YMCA to close two facilities, the Alamo YMCA and the Northeast YMCA. The closings will take effect Sept. 1.

"The costs of the three facilities had become uneconomical, and in choosing between keeping children's programs alive or paying the light bill, we felt it was better to keep the programs than pay a light bill," said George Fierro, executive director of the Midland YMCA.

Four full-time staff members will be laid off, as will be 18 to 20 part-time staff members, but some of those are students working at the YMCA for the summer and won't return in the fall, Fierro said.

Midland City Councilman Jose Cuevas said there has been discussion about the Northeast YMCA, located at 2301 Butternut Lane, for the last year. With Monday's announcement, he said, "we may have to step in with some Community Block Development Grant funds" to keep at least the Northeast center open.

The city's concern stems from the recent City Council retreat where a main focus was on youth issues, and particularly the need to increase minority involvement in youth and sports activities, Cuevas explained.

Fierro said that with corporate lay-offs and transfers, the YMCA had seen a 15 percent decline in its memberships in the last 18 months, "and the last 12 months have been pretty severe."

The main impact on members and the young Midlanders the YMCA serves will be location, he said.

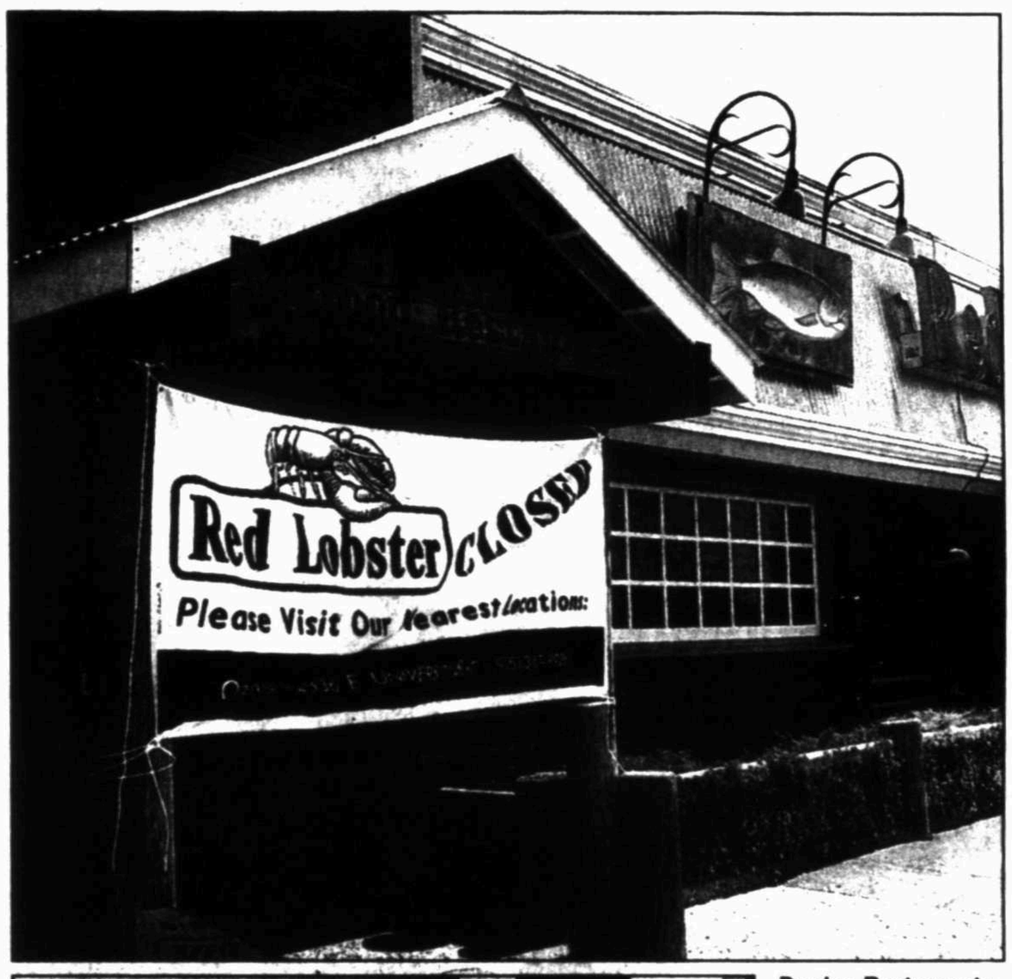

"Our youth programs will continue, but at this facility," he said. In the fall, when after-school programs resume, participants who ordinarily would have gone to the Alamo or Northeast locations will be transported to the Central location at 800 N. Big Spring, he said.

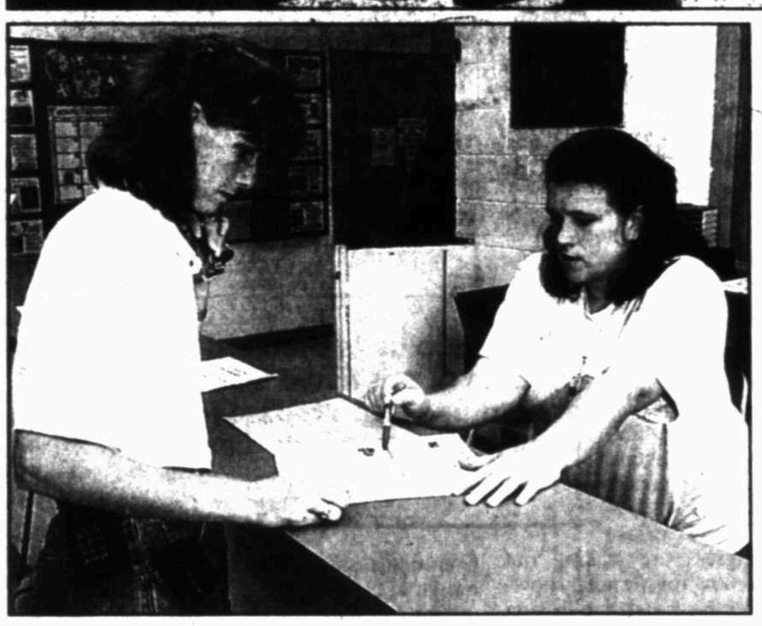

Those programs include after-school care, all-day summer programs, holiday care, sports activities and Y-Indian guides and princesses.

Memberships at the Alamo and Northeast facilities will be honored at the Central facility through Dec. 31, or for as long as those memberships last.

"If you bought a membership in May and paid through next May, we'll honor it," Fierro said. "Those who pay monthly, their fees will be honored through Dec. 31 to give them a chance to try out Central and see if they like it."

The Alamo YMCA opened in 1978, the Northeast YMCA in 1988.

Midland Red Lobster closes, offers its 39 employees transfers

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Despite increased time and effort spent on improving returns at Midland's Red Lobster restaurant, corporate officials this weekend closed the location.

The move affects 39 staff members, with some being offered transfers to the company's Red Lobster restaurant in Odessa or its Olive Garden restaurant in Midland.

"It was a business decision," said Wyman Roberts, executive vice president of marketing for Orlando-based Darden Restaurants, owner of the properties. "We're constantly evaluating our portfolio, and if we have a restaurant that isn't making adequate returns, we have to make a decision. This restaurant wasn't performing at a rate we felt was adequate to generate the returns we needed."

Roberts said those unable to transfer to other Darden properties would be offered "a fair and adequate severance package."

Laura Howell, manager of the Olive Garden, estimated that five or six Red Lobster employees transferred to her restaurant "and we may be getting some more." Others went to Odessa's Red Lobster, and others are taking the severance packages, she said.

She added, "We've been getting phone calls all day asking 'Are you closing?' We're staying open."

Roberts confirmed that the Olive Garden and Odessa's Red Lobster are strong performers for the company and said that perhaps the market was too small to accommodate two Red Lobster restaurants.

Marvin Wynn, president and chief executive officer of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said the closing could be "the natural result of low oil prices that took awhile to take their toll. The store closings we had earlier — Builders Square and Service Merchandise were companies that were in financial trouble, not just their Midland locations."

But he stressed, "I wouldn't say that one restaurant closing means it's the end of the world. It's part of a free market — you'll see businesses come and go."

Wynn said, "We'd be fooling if we didn't recognize that the economy is down but it's beginning to flatten out. But you're comparing this year to a year or two years ago when we were seeing record levels of increases."

Jose Cuevas, president of the Jumburrito restaurants in Midland and Odessa, said "I've always said there'd be a time of correction, and this is probably it. The economy itself is a little weak and people have

New state law gives county attorney big raise

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Attorney Russell Malm's salary will be increased by 40 percent to about $89,000 from the current $64,000 under a Texas Legislature bill to compensate county attorneys for duties heretofore assigned to the state and to bring county attorneys' pay more in line with that of city attorneys.

"Some county attorneys will get more ... up to $50,000 (salary supplement via state funds)," Malm said, "but they cannot get paid more than what the state pays a district judge," which is $101,700 in state funds. That pay is also assigned to a district attorney, such as Midland's Al Schorre.

Malm's salary will be among the highest in Midland County government.

Midland County supplements the pay of its four Texas district judges, Jody Gilles, John Hyde, Dean Rucker and Willie DuBose, and that of District Attorney Schorre by $6,000 each per year to bring their total pay to $107,500 each. Midland County Court-at-Law Judges Al Walvoord and Marvin Moore get $1,000 less, or $106,500 each, all in county funds.

Malm, whose $25,000 pay raise becomes effective in September, will get an additional $25,000 in state funds toward supplementing his county-funded budget. "My expectation is that we will not use one penny" of operating funds from the county in the ensuing Fiscal Year 2000, Malm said.

Commissioner Mike Bradford said the state funding will "allow us (members of the Commissioners' Court) to rely on a steady revenue stream to assist in the funding of that (county attorney's) office and ... allows that office to become much more productive."

For Fiscal Year 2000, Malm said he is requesting an additional $40,000 to hire an assistant county attorney. However, that funding would be up to the Commissioners' Court, which earlier this year declared a hiring freeze because of budgetary deficits.

Malm's current budget of $112,434 includes $24,746 for his administrative assistant, Cheryl Becker, also his legal secretary and legal assistant who handles his budget. "I could not operate without Cheryl," he said. Malm said he is returning to county government $4,000 unexpended from his 1999 operating funds of $7,875.

Statewide, most county attorneys will be paid $50,000 in compensatory state funds.

"If all you do is civil (work), which is what I do," Malm said, "and do not have criminal responsibilities, then the most you can get is one-half of $50,000" for salary.

Emergency response duties turned over to fire chief

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Tornadoes, floods, seal coating streets.

Lately, Midland seems to be a magnet for disaster.

But have no fear. Fire Chief Andy Mehl is on the job and prepared to keep the city as safe as possible in the event of future catastrophes.

Mehl

The city recently made some cutbacks that might not make citizens feel all gooey inside when trouble strikes.

It was proposed not to fund the city's emergency management position.

"We're actually trying to save money and consolidate the position," said Deputy City Manager Glen Hackler.

As the city's new emergency management coordinator, Mehl, who served eight years as El Paso's fire chief, was the lucky recipient of that consolidation. His reward? He'll have the added responsibilities but none of the pay.

Hackler said elimination of the position, previously held by Bill Shipman, will save the city approximately $44,000 in salary and benefits.

"We're trying to take a more comprehensive approach," Hackler said.

Under Mehl's leadership, responsibilities of emergency management would be divided among the Fire Department, Police Department and nonpublic safety divisions of the city.

"It's not as bad as the title sounds," Mehl said.

Many of the paperwork duties will be divided among other staff members, as will some of his fire chief duties.

He'll retain the most important function under the new title, however, that of managing the city's response to disaster.

"The biggest concern in this part of the country is tornadoes. That's the greatest potential disaster," Mehl said.

Of course, the city's emergency plan covers all natural disasters, as well as man-made disasters such as hostage situations or terroristic acts.

In the event of an emergency, Mehl would activate the emergency operations center (EOC) located in the basement of the 9-1-1 building.

The mayor, county judge, city manager's office and all major department heads would then be summoned to the EOC.

"The reason is that all information throughout a disaster comes to the EOC," Mehl said. "With all information and resources gathered at one place you can get done what needs to be done."

In a tornado, for instance, Mehl could direct evacuation efforts and coordinate sheltering the displaced. The mayor and county judge would be on hand to approve emergency expenditures, and Mehl would contact any state agencies or volunteer groups that might be needed for additional support.

The EOC has not been activated since Mehl came to Midland two and half years ago, but more choices. The companies that do a good job of providing service will be the ones that do well."

Another reason, he said, could be the restaurant's location on Loop 250.

"Before that leg of the loop was completed, it was a good location. Now, when people can bypass it, it's no longer that good a location."

He said he was disappointed to hear the news, particularly for the employees.

"I'm disappointed for the people that lost their jobs. That has a ripple effect," he said.

'People still want to eat out, they still want that experience, but they can't afford $8 a plate and above so they seek out low- to moderate-priced restaurants.'
— Jose Cuevas, president of Jumburrito restaurants in Midland and Odessa

Based on his experience as a business owner, he said, "If you have an underperforming store, you do all you can to prop up sales. But given the time allowed, you have to make a business call. And making a call that affects people's lives is the most difficult decision. There's no doubt in my mind Red Lobster did all it could to keep that location open."

Cuevas has noted that in difficult economic times, "people still want to eat out, they still want that experience, but they can't afford $8 a plate and above so they seek out low- to moderate-priced restaurants. My sales are up about 3 percent, but my fellow restaurateurs with sit-down restaurants tell me their sales are down 15 to 20 percent. At lunch you can spend $5 a plate; that seems to be the breaking point. People will spend $5 or less instead of $8 to 10, and at night they'll spend $8 to $10 instead of $15 to $20."

According to Roberts, Darden owns the Red Lobster building but "there are no plans for it right now." He said the company will evaluate the property before deciding whether to sell it or use it for a new restaurant concept.

RAISE: Legislation gives up to $50,000 to county attorneys

(From 1A)

However, Malm said that county attorneys such as Ector County Attorney Tracey Bright who also takes on criminal cases will get the $50,000 state salary supplement, which will bring her pay, now at almost $47,000, close to $100,000.

Because of provisions in the new legislation of House Bill 804, Malm said he will be required to give up his private law practice.

Malm noted that if a county attorney's total salary is "equal to or greater than 80 percent of what a district judge makes," which is $101,700 paid by the state, then a county attorney would be "required to give up" his or her private civil practice.

Misdemeanor criminal cases formerly handled by the county attorney are now handled by Schorre's staff. Schorre's 14-prosecutor staff handles felony and misdemeanor cases. His assistant district attorneys are paid from about $40,000 to more than $60,000, according to the Midland County Treasurer's Office.

Malm noted that in the past years, "the state has given county attorneys responsibilities they didn't have in the past without providing the county attorneys (additional) funds."

Those responsibilities included handling former felony offenses, such as certain thefts, now downgraded to misdemeanors. The state's district attorneys handle felony cases.

"County attorneys statewide are usually paid substantially less than their city counterparts," Malm said. "Because of that, most county attorneys also have private practices. Some devote most of their time to private practice; some devote more to their county attorney jobs, including doing all these additional duties that the state has thrust upon us."

Malm's city government counterpart, Midland City Attorney Keith Stretcher, is paid $94,368. The pay range of his five assistants is $38,000 to $68,000.

"Keith Stretcher is an excellent city attorney, and he deserves every penny he makes," Malm said.

Malm's duties include acting as legal counsel to the Commissioners' Court and any elected official, as well as any Midland County officer and employee regarding official duties, drafting or reviewing contracts, handling mental-commitment hearings, and, now, clarifying Texas Open Records Act disputes involving "any governmental agency" in Midland County. Those would include Midland and Greenwood public schools, Midland County, city of Midland, Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District.

Malm would investigate any alleged open-records violation. "It's kind of one of those unfunded mandates ... thrust upon us."

Malm sad he would "like to convince elected officials to send all open-records requests to me. We're the ones who keep up with the changes in the law and research it. That way we can avoid any potential open-records violations — minefields."

The Open Records Act is complicated, Malm said. "You start off with the general proposition that if it is a record that the governmental body has, it is subject to being produced. But, then you have a number of exceptions. However, you really have to look at how those ... have been interpreted" by the courts and the Attorney General's Office."

Were he to get an assistant county attorney, Malm said his office would take over cases, now handled by Schorre's staff, from the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, the child-protective services.

"By statute, the county attorney is to represent them (child-protective services) in cases that they file," Malm said. But the District Attorney's Office is handling those for now because Malm's office is a one-lawyer staff. "And with only one attorney in the office, there is no way we have the time to do that," he said.

Clinton unveils figures showing $1 trillion surplus

By Nancy Mathis
Houston Chronicle

WASHINGTON — President Clinton unveiled new budget figures Monday that project an extra $1 trillion in surpluses over the next 15 year, and he proposed the money be used to shore up Social Security and Medicare and pay off the national debt by 2015.

"We have now cut up Washington's credit card," Clinton said in a South Lawn ceremony to unveil mid-year White House budget revisions.

The new projections revise figures compiled in February that projected a $700 million surplus within five years, $2.4 trillion in 10 years and $4.47 trillion in 15 years. The new projections raise the accumulated surplus after 15 years to $5.47 trillion. The event upstaged a planned Republican news conference today to unveil Congressional Budget Office figures that project even greater surpluses.

'The surplus is the hard-earned product of our fiscal discipline. We should use it to prepare for the great challenges facing our country ... .'
— President Clinton, announcing new budget figures

The White House and Congress are staking out positions now for a crucial showdown later this legislative session over the surplus. Republicans favor a broad-based tax cut while also setting aside money to save Social Security from bankruptcy. Clinton favors extending Social Security and Medicare while offering targeted tax cuts and increases in spending for programs such as education.

However, Clinton suggested to reporters he would be willing to negotiate on the tax cut issue. "Within the framework of achieving these objectives, obviously I'll be working with the Congress to achieve them," Clinton said.

The new figures announced by Clinton also allowed him to amend the budget plan he outlined in February. The revised forecasts project a $98.9 billion surplus for this fiscal year which ends Sept. 31, almost $20 billion more than predicted in February.

"Improvements in the outlook since February have added $179 billion to the projected budget surplus over five years, half a trillion over 10 years and a trillion over 15 years," Clinton said.

The extra money, Clinton said, means all Social Security payroll taxes can be devoted strictly to the Social Security trust fund and the fund, now facing bankruptcy, could be extended to 2053. The additional surplus means Medicare can be extended and expanded, he said.

Money also can be set aside for the national debt, targeted tax relief and more money for education and children, he said.

But the unexpected cash is just proof to some that taxes are far too high. Rep. Bill Archer, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said Americans have a right to pay less.

"We can shore up Social Security and Medicare and still provide tax relief to American families and individuals who are working harder than ever but can't seem to get ahead," Archer, R-Texas, said in a statement.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., blasted Clinton for announcing the new figures, outlining his new proposals and then leaving for New York and Connecticut to raise money for the Democratic Party.

"He runs into town, throws out supposedly an agenda; does nothing to really make it happen; and off he goes again," Lott said.

"So I don't know whether he's serious or not, but if he is, we're going to have to see more than words. We need to see some deeds," Lott said.

Because of the extra cash, Clinton called for all Social Security payroll taxes to be earmarked for Social Security only. Clinton initially called for 62 percent of the projected surplus to be saved for Social Security.

The United States technically marked its first budget surplus in 30 years last fiscal year. But even then, critics noted, the use of Social Security trust funds, which are invested in government notes, mask the true size of the annual federal deficit. However, Clinton said new projections forecast a $5 billion surplus next year even excluding Social Security funds.

It's the repayment of those invested Social Security funds and the use of the non-Social Security surplus for other programs that would lower the $5.7 trillion national debt.

"Now, we can pay off that debt; by 2015, this country can be entirely out of debt. This is a remarkable milestone, but it is clearly within reach, if we do not squander the surplus by choosing short-term gain over long-term national goals," Clinton said.

Clinton's plan would extend the life of Social Security to 2053. Currently, Social Security will go bankrupt when the large baby boom generation retires.

The president also said he will announce today revisions in Medicare that not only will extend the life of that health insurance program to 2025 but also provide coverage for prescription medicine for senior citizens.

Clinton announced the creation of a new $156 billion children's and education trust fund. The proposal would provide money for Head Start, hire 100,000 new teachers and pay for improvements in children's health.

The president noted that the additional surplus would allow the financing of his own tax relief ideas, including the creation of USA Accounts that would use tax credits to encourage workers to set up their own retirement accounts. His other tax relief proposals include the use of tax credits for: stay-at-home mothers, long-term care, modernizing 6,000 schools, child care and encouraging business investment in poor communities.

"The surplus is the hard-earned product of our fiscal discipline. We should use it to prepare for the great challenges facing our country — caring for our parents, caring for our children, freeing our nation from the shackles of debt so that we can have long-term, sustained economic prosperity," Clinton said.

EMERGENCY: City chooses not to fund position

(From 1A)

he said he came close to making that decision recently.

"I came really close to calling the city manager a couple of weeks ago with all the torrential rains. If it had gotten any worse, I feel certain it (the EOC) would have been activated."

An unusual — for Midland — rainstorm flooded city streets and left several motorists stranded Saturday, June 12.

In a particularly harsh flood, the EOC would be needed to evacuate homes and find shelter for the displaced. But because the city's entire list of resources are available, city trucks could even be used to rescue stranded motorists or police could blockade dangerous streets.

According to Mehl, the city stages a mock emergency every year to ensure its readiness for such events. There won't be such an exercise this year because of the tornado that hit Midland in April.

Mehl said he doesn't anticipate the new assignment being too taxing and he doesn't expect the change to be permanent. Hackler substantiated that.

"Ultimately, I believe the assistant fire marshal will assume those responsibilities," Hackler said, adding that Mehl was chosen to oversee emergency in the interim because of his extensive experience.

Hackler also feels that the move is more of a benefit for the efficiency of emergency management than a cost savings.

"If you aren't careful and rely on one individual to be responsible for that, you run the risk of the rest of the organization taking it for granted. I'm strongly convinced that we have a stronger emergency management program because we are going to rely on multiple individuals," Hackler said.

Even in organized return, refugees find little to come back to HADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — It was still dark when the Mirena family began their journey home, full of happiness and hope after clearing out their olive tent at Macedonia's Stenkovec I refugee camp.

They climbed aboard the bus two hours before it was scheduled to leave Monday morning, thrilled to be part of the first organized refugee convoy to return to Kosovo since NATO-led troops entered the province more than two weeks ago.

"I'm exhilarated," said a beaming Shpresa Mirena, 20, cradling her giggling 10-month-old Ardonita, who had never seen her parents' home.

She never will.

After a stop at the home of Shpresa's parents in the Kosovo capital, the final leg of their journey ended in heartbreak. Their village was devastated, their home a collection of charred white walls littered with shattered roof tiles.

Shpresa squatted in the overgrown yard, sobbing and covering her eyes. She swatted the air with her arm, as if trying to make it all go away, and walked through the ruins, ignoring her husband's warnings to be careful of booby traps.

"If I knew what it was like, I would never have come," she sobbed. "What are we going to do now?"

Nobody answered.

It wasn't meant to be like this. The U.N. refugee agency planned its first organized refugee return carefully — every family had to be intact and had to be from the relatively undamaged area around the capital, Pristina.

But after months of ethnic bloodletting, it's hard to find people in Kosovo who are truly intact.

Nearly half of the 840,000 ethnic Albanians who fled to Albania and Macedonia to escape Serb repression and NATO bombing have returned on their own, eager to build anew.

The Mirenas hadn't gone back because they couldn't afford to. Shpresa's husband Sami, who had been a chef at a small Pristina restaurant, took a taxi back once, paying their last $22 for the trip. From the outskirts of town, he saw that the house was damaged but was too afraid to approach.

So they waited for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees to bring people home. On Monday, saying that the Kosovo capital was safe enough, authorities sent back the first 10 busloads of refugees — 335 people in all.

"If they hadn't taken us like this, we would have been stuck," Shpresa said.

As they packed up the bus, other families looked on jealously. "We cried all night," Emine Guta, 52, said from a nearby tent. "We wanted to be the first to leave."

Upon arrival, each refugee was given a daily ration pack and sent on their way.

For the Mirenas, first stop was the house of Shpresa's parents, where the family had stayed for a year after they were expelled from their home in Hade by Serbian police.

In March, when Serbian forces intensified their crackdown on ethnic Albanians, police arrested Sami and his father, beating his father and testing both for gunpowder traces before releasing them.

"They said, 'You have to go. You have no place here. You all should go to Albania,'" Sami said.

Shpresa's parents stayed in their house to care for her paralyzed grandmother, not daring to venture out and surviving on a stock of flour they had bought before the NATO bombing started March 24 and the Serb attacks intensified.

Shpresa hadn't known if her parents were even alive. She was overjoyed to find them well — and even sheltering three children of a cousin whose house was burned.

Driving through another village nearby, the couple eyed the intact houses of Serbs, cursing.

"May they burn, as ours did," Shpresa said.

A block away, smoke rose up toward the sun.

KLA hands in weapons as UN brings refugees home

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Ethnic Albanian rebels handed over their weapons to peacekeepers Monday, a key step in efforts to enforce peace in Kosovo. As NATO put those weapons under lock and key, the United Nations brought home its first convoy of Kosovo refugees.

The 335 refugees who came in the first organized return operation was only a trickle compared to the flood of ethnic Albanians who have come back to Kosovo on their own in the past two weeks — around half the total of 860,000 refugees.

Like so many who had preceded them, some who went home Monday found only scorched walls, ashes and tears.

"Dear God, look at what they've done," said Shpresa Mirena when she saw for the first time the charred and shattered ruins of her home in a burned-out village near Kosovo's capital, Pristina.

The uncontrolled flood of refugees has complicated the work of peacekeepers, who have had to deal with revenge attacks by ethnic Albanians against Serbs. Tens of thousands of Serbs have fled Kosovo since peacekeepers began moving in two weeks ago.

Ethnic violence continued Monday. Two houses were set on fire in the Pristina in an apparent act of retaliation by ethnic Albanians, NATO officials said.

A large explosion rocked the neighborhood nearby, but British peacekeepers said it was from a controlled detonation of unexploded ordnance and had no connection to the fires.

NATO hopes its control in the province will be strengthened by the handover of weapons by the Kosovo Liberation Army, due to be completed by midnight Monday under a June 21 demilitarization agreement.

Under the deal, KLA fighters must put their weapons into NATO-guarded storage sites and carry them only in designated assembly areas. They are also to vacate their military positions.

Let Scooter's Plumbing help you keep your cool this summer

Keeping cool in a hot West Texas summer probably involves more than hoping your air conditioner can last another year if you ignore it. It also involves more than just calling for repair when it breaks, because you'll be hot until the Scooter's Plumbing technician arrives to fix your unit. Keeping cool means calling on Tim Mabry at Scooter's to do a little preventive maintenance before anything breaks.

Not only can a little "PM" help you keep cool, it can save you money in two ways: First, it can catch potential problems before they actually cause a breakdown, at which time a repair could cost you a lot more money. Second, a clean, well-maintained unit will run more efficiently, saving on your utilities.

The biggest single culprit in air conditioning problems, says Tim, is a dirty filter. "When your filter gets clogged, it slows the airflow through your system, making your fan work harder. That, in turn, can pull dirt through the filter and into your fan and your cooling coils, causing further blockage (and even damaging your compressor)," says Tim. The more slowly the air moves, the longer your unit runs, and the more electricity it uses.

Tim Mabry of Scooter's Plumbing is ready to help you keep your cool this summer.

"Change your filter monthly," Tim recommends. "You should never ever go more than two months between filter changes. Once all that dirt gets into your coils, we have to pull them out to clean them. That's a much more costly procedure than just buying a new filter every month."

Another way to save on utilities is by using ceiling fans. They let you set your thermostat about two degrees warmer all the time, which means your air conditioner does not have to run as much.

If your old air conditioner is more than 10 years old, by installing a new high efficiency Carrier system, you will begin saving money on your summer utility bills. The Carrier Weathermaker Model 38TXA with at SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating) of 13, is about 40 percent more efficient than units produced 10 years ago, and is 30 percent more efficient than today's standard 10 SEER units.

Also, the Model 38TXA is designed to use Puron™, the environmentally-friendly refrigerant of the future. The compressor in this unit is a special version of the Copeland Compliant Scroll® that is designed for the new Puron™ refrigerant. Introduced in 1996, Copeland reports this Puron compressor to have the lowest first-year failure rates of any product in the Copeland product line.

"You should never go more than two months between filter changes."

Trust your vacation memories to Photo Tech

What do your vacation plans include this year—cool, clear mountain air? Warm wet lakes or beaches? A thrill-a-minute amusement park? Whatever you do, it'll include memories you'll treasure always—and rolls of precious film that need to be processed right the first time.

Because your memories are so precious—and so fragile—why sacrifice quality to have them processed a little faster or a little cheaper? Photo Tech does the highest quality work available in Midland, according to owner Tony Gilbert. This quality has earned them a host of loyal clients. "Our customers return because of our quality and care, not speed," Tony declares.

Even without focusing on speed, you'll get your vacation or other memories back the same day, in most cases (unless you bring in every roll you've shot since the opening of Disneyland). And if you are in a real hurry, Photo Tech does offer one-hour service on a limited basis without sacrificing quality.

If you're used to shopping for the best price, Photo Tech is still competitive. "I feel that most people would be shocked to find out that we are not as expensive as they might think," Tony says. He compares his prices to those of a local major retailer with a one-hour lab, noting that his price is only about $2 more for a roll of 24 with 4x6 double prints.

At Photo Tech, that price includes either double prints or a free roll of Fuji film. "Two dollars is a small price to pay for such a large difference in quality and service," Tony states. "Again, our emphasis is on quality, not on the number of rolls we can print in one day."

In fact, if you've been unhappy with the results you've been getting elsewhere, Tony invites you to take your negatives to Photo Tech. You might be pleasantly surprised at how much better you prints can look.

To maintain their quality, Photo Tech performs regular maintenance and evaluations on their machinery and chemicals. And in the printing process, the technician checks every print—they don't make adjustments for the whole roll based on the first print, which can lead to prints that are too dark or too light.

Photo Tech is greatly expanding the number and variety of decorator frames they carry. Frame sizes range from wallet to 8x10. They also have Pioneer photo albums.

If you have an old family photo for which you've lost the negative, Photo Tech can now make copies of any size photo from wallet size to 12x18. Those copies will be on genuine photographic paper, so you won't have to worry about fading.

Photo Tech is locally owned and operated. They opened in November of 1997.They use the newest, most advanced equipment and technology available. The store is located in Midland Plaza, next to Mervyn's. The phone number is 689-3456.

Your vacation photos are too precious to make speed or price your main concern. Photo Tech takes great care with each and every print.

"Our customers return because of our quality and care, not speed."

Japan purges World War II museum of Hiroshima, Pearl Harbor memories

TOKYO (AP) — After years of controversy, Tokyo now has a national museum chronicling the events of World War II. But it is a portrait cleansed of Pearl Harbor, Hiroshima and almost any direct reference to the front lines.

The transformation of the Showa Hall museum, which opened in March, from a war memorial into a bland exhibition of wartime life shows how difficult it still is for Japan to reckon with its past.

Half a century after Japan's surrender, debate still rages over attempts to designate the widely used national flag and anthem as the nation's official symbols. Attempts to bolster the role of Japan's postwar military meet heavy criticism, and historians still battle over whether the imperial troops committed atrocities abroad.

The roiling passions aroused by the Japan's role in World War II has proven too much for the museum, according to Hirokazu Ishida of the government agency overseeing the $101 million project.

"The people on the left wanted wartime responsibility addressed," he said. "The people on the right protested they didn't want an anti-war memorial. It became impossible to display anything historical about the war."

By the time the museum opened, a decade after the project began, officials had backed down from plans to deal with the responsibility issue, and instead settled on the safer theme of the hardships suffered by civilians at home.

Food-rationing tickets are exhibited next to worn-out letters sent to troops. Black-and-white movie footage shows people digging bomb shelters.

The only exception may be a large photograph that shows a part of Tokyo razed by U.S. airstrikes. But there is no caption that speaks of the bombing.

Interviews with survivors of the war are replayed on monitors. But none of the survivors are soldiers. Shown instead are their children and wives, who remember being lonely, afraid and, most of all, hungry.

Not surprisingly, the toning down of the museum's message hasn't pleased activists on either side of the issue.

A Tokyo-based group representing veterans' families, which pushed for the museum, says the museum fails to do justice to the war, which left nearly 2 million Japanese dead, 672,000 of them civilians.

"It's like touching the elephant's leg and thinking you've seen the elephant," said Hitoshi Nakayama, an official with the association. "You have to talk about the war."

On the other side, Hidehiko Ushijima, a professor at Tokai Women's College, says the museum reflects how Japan has never fully dealt with the emperor worship and glorification of death that were wartime pillars of the Japanese psyche.

"Japanese people are still blind to what the war meant," Ushijima said.

To pacifists, the site of the new museum, which has so far attracted 44,000 visitors, has disturbing rightist and militarist undertones. It is within walking distance of Yasukuni Shrine, a Shinto memorial that has been highly controversial for including war criminals among its enshrined.

Even the museum's name has been criticized.

Showa, which means "bright peace," refers to the 1926-1988 reign of wartime Emperor Hirohito. But the museum has nothing displayed on Hirohito, except newspaper clippings of his radio address to the people announcing Japan's surrender.

Hirohito's responsibility for wartime actions remains a major topic of debate in Japan.

Mainstream opinion tends to hold Hirohito as a largely powerless figurehead who couldn't block the decisions of his generals. Many leftists and pacifist groups, however, argue that he should have accepted responsibility for the war, and that by failing to do so made it harder for the rest of the nation to own up as well.

None of that controversy is outlined at the Showa Hall.

"It seems superficial — like they just put things up in a pretty way," said Hiroko Takabayashi, a 58-year-old bar owner who was strolling through the museum recently.

Kazuo Ohashi, a pacifist, was so outraged by Showa Hall he has filed a lawsuit with his supporters accusing the government of misusing tax money to build it.

"It's a sham," Ohashi said. "The museum contains nothing about the war."

His lawsuit is pending in a Tokyo court.

Fighting rages in Kashmir; Pakistani brings proposal to India as possible prelude to peace

KARGIL, India (AP) — Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee convened a closed-door meeting Monday in what local media viewed as a possible prelude to a deal with Pakistan to end the fighting in Kashmir.

Indian party leaders had little comment after the meeting, which came one day after a special envoy for Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif delivered a message to Vajpayee. The contents of the message were not disclosed.

"The parties supported the government's decision to evict armed intruders before resuming dialogue with Pakistan," Pramod Mahajan, the information minister, told reporters afterward.

India says Pakistani troops are supporting separatist Islamic militants who crossed into Indian-held Kashmir in May and entrenched themselves on mountain peaks overlooking a key highway.

Islamabad has denied the allegation, but Pakistan's army chief acknowledged over the weekend that his troops were fighting in Indian territory.

Indian newspapers speculated that Vajpayee called the party meeting Monday to come up with a response to a peace proposal by U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Gibson Lanpher, who traveled from Pakistan to India over the weekend.

Lanpher and Indian officials have denied he presented any proposals.

But Vajpayee's principal secretary, Brajesh Mishra, told The Associated Press that Niaz Naik, Sharif's envoy, did present one.

Indian Army spokesman Col. Bikram Singh said Monday that his forces have killed at least 123 Islamic guerrillas or Afghan mercenaries and nearly 400 Pakistani soldiers since May. India has lost 175 men, with 364 wounded and nine missing, Singh said.

Opening Monday's meeting, Vajpayee did not mention his meeting with the Pakistani envoy or recent telephone conversations with Sharif.

"We are clear there will be no further dialogue (with Pakistan) so long as the incursions continue. We are making no secret deals and no further proposals or mediation by third countries will be accepted," he said.

Sharif was in Beijing on Monday, seeking support from China, but cut short his originally planned five-day visit "because of the situation back home," said his foreign minister, Tariq Altaf.

The United States, Russia, Britain, France and Germany have blamed Pakistan for violating the 1972 cease-fire line in Kashmir and urged it to withdraw its forces. China, which has a border dispute with India, has been more neutral.

Pakistan and India both claim Kashmir in its entirety. Their dispute over the divided territory has triggered two wars since they gained independence from Britain in 1947.

In the battle zone, artillery gunners pounded each other across the cease-fire line as Indian engineers struggled under gunfire and shelling to clear an overturned truck on the lone highway in the region. Military and civilian traffic was paralyzed for 17 hours Sunday and Monday.

Pakistan accused India on Monday of violating its air space, but gave no details. The Indian air force denied it, but reported its French-made Mirage and Soviet-built MiG jets were in their second day of round-the-clock attacks against the militants' mountain bunkers and supply lines.

Turkey prepares for Ocalan verdict amid tight security

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Turkish police reinforced security at embassies, airports and tourist areas Monday, one day before a court was expected to sentence Kurdish rebel leader Abdullah Ocalan to death.

Police were ordered to be prepared for possible airplane hijackings or other attacks, a police official said, speaking on customary condition of anonymity. Security will be particularly high around U.S. diplomatic missions.

Many Kurds believe the United States cooperated with Turkey during the February abduction of Ocalan. After Turkish commandos captured Ocalan in Nairobi, Kurds staged violent attacks in Turkey, killing more than a dozen people.

Kurds also held violent demonstrations throughout Europe at the time, and European authorities were preparing for a possible repeat of those protests.

Ocalan was standing trial on the prison island of Imrali for treason and separatism. If he is sentenced to death, as is widely expected, the case will automatically go to an appeals court. If the sentence is upheld, it must be approved by parliament and later signed by President Suleyman Demirel.

After meeting with Ocalan on Monday, one of his lawyers, Mahmut Sakar, said the defense would appeal any sentence to the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, France, because his client's capture and trial were illegal.

Ocalan's rebels have promised to intensify attacks if Ocalan is executed. It remains unclear if the rebels will react to a verdict Tuesday or wait for a later decision by the appeals court or parliament.

Although Turkey has not executed a prisoner since 1984, there is widespread support in the country for hanging Ocalan. He is widely reviled as the leader of the Kurdistan Workers Party, which has led a 15-year fight for autonomy in southeastern Turkey that has left some 37,000 dead.

Many Kurds, however, admire Ocalan and consider him a freedom fighter.

Austrian and Dutch authorities said Monday they were taking special precautions in anticipation of possible protests. In Greece, authorities placed some Kurds under surveillance and increased security around airports and embassies.

In Germany, reports said police had beefed up security in Berlin, where up to 50,000 Kurds live.

Throughout the trial, Ocalan has offered to work for peace between his rebels and Turkey. He has said he could convince his fighters to lay down arms within three months if allowed to contact them.

But a death sentence, he warned, would lead to a bloodbath.

Security was particularly high in Mudanya, the port city across from Imrali, where hundreds of relatives of soldiers killed fighting Ocalan's rebels have gathered.

Helicopters hovered over the port, and police cordoned-off the jetty and searched cars entering the town. The Justice Ministry also ordered extra measures to be taken in prisons, often the scene of violent pro-Kurdish demonstrations.

Ocalan is expected to make a final appeal for peace on Tuesday, when he is allowed to make his final statement before the verdict is announced.

Turkey refuses to negotiate with Ocalan or his rebels, which it labels as terrorists. Many Turks regard Ocalan's appeals for peace as a mere tactic to avoid the gallows.

Authorities here hope that Ocalan's capture and sentencing will deal a final blow to the rebel organization, already weakened by military defeats in the southeast.

Hoping to further weaken the rebels, the government has drafted a bill that offers leniency to rebels who surrender and cooperate with authorities.

Legal gambling is here, but is it really a safe bet?

Remember all the claims when the Texas Lottery was first getting started several years ago? It was going to bring to state coffers untold wealth, and be such a boon that everyone would be scratching tickets.

Well, Texans who believed everything promoters of the Texas Lottery told them may have been surprised the other day to receive in their mailboxes a colorful flyer promoting the "New Bingo Scratch Ticket." We were.

We are talking about a direct mailing presumedly sent to millions of Texans to tempt them to play Texas Lottery's Bingo Scratch game. We're not certain how that makes other Texans feel, but it really did not give us a lot of confidence that the Texas Lottery is really all it was originally cracked up to be.

Officials with the Texas Lottery say their advertising budget, which includes the flyer promoting the Bingo Scratch Ticket, is $40 million per year. That's certainly not small change, but they also note that in 1998, the most recent year for which final figures are available, the lottery generated $3,090,000,000 for the state.

There is no question that gambling is big business where state lotteries are concerned. In fact, during the last three decades alone 37 states — including Texas — have set up an official lottery and 21 have allowed casinos.

Sadly, however, that mad rush to the gambling tables has been done without the benefit of valid information about the effects of gambling on individuals or society.

One sobering fact is that a year-long study conducted for the National Research Council on the prevalence of pathological gambling — a chronic and progressive failure to resist the impulse to gamble — showed how little is actually known about the impact of widespread gambling. In fact, some wary people sounding a precautionary note point out that it is the gambling industry which supplies most if the information available currently. That really isn't a sound basis on which to establish public policy in regard to gambling.

The data also reveals that there may be as many as 1.1 million pathological gamblers in the United States between the ages of 12 and 18. And we are a nation that already spends billions to combat alcohol and drug abuse among teens. Are we breeding an even worse problem where gambling in concerned? Legalized gambling is already a $550 billion a year industry, but is gambling a safe bet for the nation?

When Texas reached the point of actually sending out millions of pieces of mail to the state's residents promoting a new scratch card, we realized it's time to stop and consider whether this really is the type of activity we want our state government to be involved with.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 29, the 180th day of 1999. There are 185 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 29, 1767, the British Parliament approved the Townshend Revenue Acts, which imposed import duties on such things as glass, lead, paint, paper and tea shipped to America. Colonists bitterly protested the Acts, which were repealed in 1770.

On this date:

In 1776, the Virginia state constitution was adopted, and Patrick Henry made governor.

In 1941, Polish statesman, pianist and composer Ignace Jan Paderewski died in New York at age 80.

In 1946, British authorities arrested more than 2,700 Jews in Palestine in an attempt to stamp out alleged terrorism.

In 1949, the government of South Africa enacted a ban against racially mixed marriages.

In 1954, the Atomic Energy Commission voted against reinstating Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer's access to classified information.

In 1966, the United States bombed fuel storage facilities near the North Vietnamese cities of Hanoi and Haiphong.

In 1967, Jerusalem was re-unified as Israel removed barricades separating the Old City from the Israeli sector.

One year ago: Students at Beijing University peppered President Clinton with polite but critical questions about America's human rights record, Taiwan policy and views on China in an exchange televised live across the vast nation.

Eric Liddell's courage was of a humble kind

Seventy-five years ago, a remarkable man did a remarkable thing. Eric Liddell of Scotland refused to run a heat at the 1924 Olympic Games in Paris because the race was scheduled on a Sunday, which his faith taught him would violate the Sabbath.

Thomas

As we know from the Academy Award-winning film, "Chariots of Fire," Liddell managed to negotiate an unheard-of switch from the 100-meter race he had been scheduled to run to the 400 meter, for which he had not trained, later in the week. On July 11, 1924, Liddell won that race and was showered with Olympic glory.

Instead of cashing in, Liddell turned his back on fame and fortune and followed in his parents' footsteps, becoming a missionary in China, where his most powerful contributions to God and to his fellow humans were made.

In our day of focus groups and leadership weakened by uncertainty of belief, Eric Liddell's example continues to stand out. A fanatic might have demanded that others not run on Sunday, either, and organized a group to enact legislation to conform society to his point of view. Not Liddell. He just said he wouldn't run. Some newspapers denounced him as a traitor to his country and king. How quickly they changed their tune when he won a gold medal. Had he yielded to temptation and compromised his beliefs, we might never have heard of him again.

The account of the race in the July 12, 1924, Times of London conveys the excitement of that day in Paris: "Liddell had the outside berth -- generally considered the worst place .... There was a perfect start, and from the first jump-off the pace looked, and was, terrific. Two men of the six fell .... But that made no difference, for there was never more than one man in the race, and it was the pace he set that fairly ran them off their legs. Sweeping round into the straight Liddell led by four or five yards, and increased his lead by a couple of yards more in the run home. No one ever looked like catching him ...."

"When the time was given out as 47 3-5 sec., and it was realized that, for the third time in two days, the world's 'record' had been lowered, the Stadium went insane ...."

When Liddell left Edinburgh for China the following year, the number of people wanting to bid him farewell was so large that 1,000 were unable to get in. Twenty years later he was taken prisoner with other missionaries and Westerners and became one of 1,800 crowded into a Japanese camp. His personal space had shrunk to 3 by 6 feet. Before his arrest, Liddell managed to get his wife and two children to safety in Canada (Florence Liddell was pregnant at the time with their third daughter, whom Eric would not live to see). He died of a brain tumor on Feb. 21, 1945.

His biographer Sally Magnusson recalled that most people who knew Liddell observed the consistency of his life. She tried to learn whether he had "clay feet." In her book, "The Flying Scotsman," Magnusson thought she might have discovered something when she "happened on a disillusioning eyewitness account of the behavior of some of the missionaries in the Japanese internment camp where Liddell spent the last months of his life. I read of tempers lost and heavy moralizing, of exclusiveness and selfishness. The author scarcely had a good word for anyone, but least of all for the Protestant Christians. Then I turned the page and found this: 'It is rare indeed when anyone has the good fortune to meet a saint, but he comes as close to it as anyone I have ever known.' Of course, he was talking about Eric Liddell."

Magnusson adds that thousands of people live similar lives in obscurity and the world does not know their names. "And the first to remind us of that would be Eric Liddell -- who would curl up with embarrassment at the very idea of being the subject" of a book or film.

At the end of "Chariots of Fire," producer David Puttnam put on the screen: "Eric Liddell, missionary, died in occupied China at the end of World War II. All of Scotland mourned."

Press accounts of the 1980 premiere of the film in Edinburgh told of huge crowds. How fitting. The people of Scotland, who had shared their native son with China, were welcoming him back and affirming the note given to Liddell by his masseur before that 1924 race. It referred to the Biblical passage 1 Samuel 2:30: "He who honors Me, I will honor." And so He did. And so He still does 75 years later.

Suburbs are 'ground zero' for 2000 vote

The Democrats' strategy for re-capturing the House of Representatives next year is now clear: Cause chaos at every turn, paint Republicans as incompetent extremists, and target the suburban swing voters, mainly women, who they think will determine the shape of the next Congress.

Cokie Roberts and Steven V. Roberts

It's a fairly cynical game plan with only one aim — political victory. That means no compromise with the Republicans on any issues, no solutions for pressing problems like reforming Medicare or strengthening patients' rights. For all practical purposes, the Congress that convened only last January is already over except for must-pass bills like annual appropriations.

The Democrats' reasoning is simple. They need six seats to win back the House which they lost in 1994, and any deals with the GOP will only muddy their message. No Rose Gardens ceremonies. No hand shakes with the enemy. It's all-out war, and the elections are still more than 16 months away.

The strategy might well work because the Republicans seem intent on proving that the Democrats are right, that they are both incompetent and extreme. And last week's debacle over gun control is Exhibit A.

The day before the showdown vote, an aide to Speaker Dennis Hastert told us that Republicans had to pass a bill to prove that they could govern effectively. But then 82 GOPers defected, and the bill was crushed by almost 2 to 1. Democratic leader Dick Gephart had a point when he said of the Republican leadership: "They can't run a one-car funeral."

On the extremist charge, the Democrats are stepping up their campaign to demonize Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas, the third-ranking Republican leader. It was DeLay who masterminded the Republicans' failed impeachment crusade, declaring that his side stood for "absolute truth" against the "relativism" of mushy-headed liberals.

Opponents of gun control are always there, always active, because they think their own rights are in jeopardy. Supporters of gun control view it as one more abstract issue, like the environment or abortion rights, but their personal lives and interests are not involved.

The second problem for Democrats is that their ardent anti-gun position could alienate voters they might need next year. Rep. Patrick Kennedy of Rhode Island, who heads the Democratic drive to take back the House, told us flatly that he's "written off the rural areas" in terms of Democratic gains, but that might not be a smart judgment.

Rep. Barney Frank of Massachusetts, a strong gun opponent, admitted that when he campaigned in 1980 for Sen. Ted Kennedy — Patrick Kennedy's father — he ran into a lot of trouble with union members in places like Iowa and Maine. "I'm not for Kennedy," Frank remembers them saying, "He'll take away my gun."

Still, the Democratic calculation is clear: The suburbs are ground zero. And they are hoping that in November of 2000 those parents who send their kids to the bus stop every morning will still remember Littleton.

SPEAKING OUT

Toyah's past could be Midland's future

By Doug Swift

A resident of Midland since 1972, Doug Swift is a research scientist.

Do our civic leaders suffer from an edifice complex? Midland must take an honest look to the future. A community's growth depends on its ability to generate new wealth. No wealth is created by merely redistributing the limited funds that a community already has in its pockets.

The sources of "new" West Texas wealth are hydrocarbons, cotton and cattle. Presently, none of these are in good health.

Texas oil production is seriously dropping. Today, the Permian Basin is producing oil at the same rate as it did in 1938. Forget about growth! The question that must be addressed is "How will Midland maintain a population above that which it supported in 1938?"

"Build it and they will come!" is a line from a recent baseball fantasy movie, not a documentary. Our economy needs to diversify; not go to a ballgame!

Majors and large independents know that the undiscovered oil fields of the Permian Basin are too small to impact their bottom line. They need a billion barrels, not a million barrels. Those companies moved to Midland to take advantage of a central location in the "free-for-all" exploration environment of bygone years. From Midland, they could respond to exploration plays anywhere in the Basin.

Today, these companies believe that the Permian Basin is no longer worth the exploration effort. Most follow the same corporate philosophy: Identify "core" properties; maximize position in those properties; produce them; and divest all other production. It will not take them long to see that they can better manage their Howard Glasscock properties from a field office in Coahoma, Levelland Slaughter properties from Sundown, and Gomez from Fort Stockton. The exodus is far from over.

When Midland loses companies, we don't just lose payroll. We lose civic leaders of the future. Many of the Midlanders who make our community work originally came here as employees of large oil companies. As company after company leaves or merges, "pipelines" bringing bright, motivated leaders of the future are severed. The smaller independents can't afford to hire and train university graduates. They need finished products, not works in progress. Without addressing these issues first, all of the pie-in-the-sky planning for parks and sports facilities is merely building a house on a foundation of sand ... or rather, avoiding a problem by sticking your head in the sand.

As the reader may gather, I do not believe that "now" is the time to be spending $35 million ($350 per man, woman, and child in Midland, not including operations, maintenance, plus interest ... and nobody seems to want to talk about those figures) for a new sports facility.

Rather than traveling to El Paso and California, to see stadiums built in expanding economies, perhaps the city council and the mayor should have taken a trip not so far west, to visit Toyah. At the turn of the century, Toyah was a thriving community with a population of 1,000, while Midland, was twice that size. Today, Toyah has a population of 109 and a beautiful, but abandoned red brick high school.

Is this our future? If we are going to build a $35 million sports facility, I suggest to Mayor Burns that we save on architectural fees and simply model it after the Coliseum in Rome. At least that way, the ruins can attract tourists.

Hubbell to plead guilty in case that involved first lady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Webster Hubbell, President Clinton's Arkansas friend who served as associate attorney general, will plead guilty to covering up work he and former law partner Hillary Rodham Clinton did on a fraudulent land development back home, sources familiar with the case said Monday.

Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr will recommend that Hubbell serve no jail time for the felony conviction, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hubbell was scheduled to go on trial Aug. 9, and Starr's prosecutors had listed Mrs. Clinton as a potential witness. Even if she weren't called to the stand, the trial could have become a political issue as the first lady finalized plans regarding a bid for a U.S. Senate seat.

As part of the agreement, Hubbell's legal team has let Starr's office interview Hubbell in connection with the Castle Grande land deal indictment, which refers to Mrs. Clinton about three dozen times, one source said.

Hubbell will also plead guilty to a misdemeanor tax charge, while Starr will seek dismissal of other charges against Hubbell, his wife, his accountant and his tax lawyer in that separate tax case, the sources said.

That indictment alleges that Hubbell evaded paying taxes on some of the hundreds of thousands of dollars he received from friends of the Clintons in 1994 when he was under criminal investigation by Starr's office.

While Hubbell's pleas would dispose of the remaining court cases Starr has brought in his nearly five-year inquiry, the investigations are still open, one source said. The course of Starr's investigation will depend on information Hubbell and possibly other witnesses give the prosecutors, said the sources.

Starr's office is also scrutinizing Mrs. Clinton over her statements about the White House travel office firings. She maintained under oath that she didn't order the seven employees fired.

Hubbell and the late deputy White House counsel Vincent Foster — a pivotal figure in the travel office matter — were close friends. Foster killed himself in July 1993 as congressional investigators were beginning to look at the travel office firings.

Starr's spokeswoman, Elizabeth Ray, declined comment on the plea agreement.

Hubbell's attorney, John Nields, did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

New York University law professor Steve Gillers said the records in Castle Grande "leave a lot of unanswered questions about Hillary Clinton's role."

"Hubbell is the key to those answers," Gillers said. "I find it hard to believe that Starr would not have demanded complete answers from Hubbell in exchange for what seems to be a fairly generous" plea agreement.

But former Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh said Starr might just be ready to wind down his work as the independent counsel law expires.

"If I were a prosecutor and could get rid of the Hubbell case this way and be done with it, I'd make the deal without any testimony," Walsh said. "It's late in the day and nobody wants to see him tried twice. A felony disposition is a pretty solid outcome."

The focus of some charges against Hubbell is the 1,050-acre Castle Grande tract south of Little Rock, a development that federal regulators concluded was riddled with insider dealing and fictitious land sales. It was owned by Mrs. Clinton's Whitewater partner, the late Jim McDougal, and Hubbell's father-in-law, prominent Little Rock businessman Seth Ward.

Woman pleads guilty to killing 8 children more than 30 years ago

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 70-year-old woman who admitted Monday to smothering eight of her young children decades ago will not go to jail so researchers can study her to learn more about why new mothers sometimes kill newborns.

Marie Noe pleaded guilty to killing the children between 1949 and 1968 and was sentenced to 20 years' probation, the first five of which must be served under home confinement. Mrs. Noe also must undergo mental health treatment sessions with a psychiatrist to determine the cause of her repeated infanticide.

"We needed to get this matter finalized," said Philadelphia District Attorney Lynne Abraham. "Is it perfect? We don't always get a perfect outcome."

At the sentencing, Deputy District Attorney Charles F. Gallagher said: "It's important for the medical community and the legal community that she admit these murders and ... something good will come out of the analysis."

The light sentence Monday also had to do with "the unusual circumstances of the case and the age of the case" and Mrs. Noe's being the sole caretaker of her ailing 77-year-old husband, Arthur, Gallagher said.

"This is not one of those situations where we have a heart of a killer," said defense attorney David Rudenstein.

With no evidence to show otherwise, doctors and investigators had reluctantly attributed the deaths of eight children — none of whom lived longer than 14 months — to sudden infant death syndrome. The Noes had two other children, both of whom died of natural causes.

Police never closed the investigation, however, and Mrs. Noe was charged last August, a year after the case returned to the spotlight following the publication of "The Death of Innocents," a book about SIDS. Also, a cover story in Philadelphia magazine brought to light the suspicions of a retired Philadelphia medical examiner who investigated the final two deaths.

Before her arrest, Mrs. Noe had confessed in March to police that she suffocated four of the infants and said she did not remember the other four deaths. During a meeting with a state psychiatrist in November, she confessed to killing the other four children, Gallagher said.

Gallagher said numerous medical officials indicated that a medical study of Mrs. Noe could be valuable because so little is known about why women kill their babies.

After eight months, jury gets landmark smokers' case

MIAMI (AP) — Six jurors began deciding on Monday whether the nation's biggest tobacco companies are responsible for injuries that hundreds of thousands of sick Florida smokers blame on their cigarette habit.

The first class-action lawsuit by smokers to reach trial went to the jury after eight months of testimony.

The jury must decide if cigarettes cause 32 diseases and medical conditions and if cigarettes are addicting, defective or unreasonably dangerous. They also must decide if manufacturers intended to mislead smokers or keep health information from them.

They spent most of Monday in deliberations, which were to resume Tuesday.

If the jury determines compensatory or punitive damages are in order, the amount will be determined during another phase of the trial.

Seven alternate jurors seemed surprised to learn that while they will not deliberate in this first phase, they are alternates and on standby for the next phase, should it be necessary. One juror gasped.

"Forgive us for, uh, a little white lie in not telling you about that. I hope you understand that," said Circuit Judge Robert Kaye.

The lawsuit was filed against Philip Morris Inc., R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., the Tobacco Institute, and other cigarette makers and industry groups in 1994 on behalf of an estimated 500,000 sick Florida smokers and their families.

The smokers, who are seeking at least $200 billion in damages, are represented by Stanley and Susan Rosenblatt, a husband-and-wife legal team won a $349 million settlement for flight attendants in a secondhand-smoke case against the same defendants in 1997.

The Rosenblatts argued that cigarette manufacturers misled smokers in what Stanley Rosenblatt called "one of the great cons of the 20th century" — working to keep smokers hooked and uncertain about the deadliness of the habit.

College puts immigrants on fast-track to earn their degrees

NATIONAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — While teaching civics and government classes to new immigrants a few years ago, Reymundo Marin and his wife, Maria, stumbled across a disturbing trend.

"We noticed a lot of educated immigrants who were working low-wage jobs because they didn't know where else to go. They were told their degrees from universities in their native countries weren't valid here," Marin said.

They decided to step in to help, and founded InterAmerican College, a nonprofit school where immigrants who were professionals in their native countries are put on a fast track to earn a degree in the United States.

This weekend, the first group of eight graduates received their bachelor's of arts degrees from the independent, four-year school five miles south of San Diego.

Like most of the graduates, valedictorian Francisca Lopez plans to become a teacher and eventually a school administrator.

Lopez had earned a master's degree in engineering at a Mexican university, and climbed the corporate ladder until she became a manager.

But when she immigrated to the United States, she couldn't get a job anywhere — at least not one that required a degree and paid enough to support a family.

"I knocked on many doors, but everyone turned me away. I had learned English, but they said my degree in Mexico wasn't worth anything here," said Lopez, a teacher's aide. "They said I had to fulfill the college requirements here and that meant starting all over again. At 30, I just couldn't see that, wasting all those years of my life learning things I already knew."

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 25.2 percent of immigrants who arrived in the United States after 1990 had college degrees. But many of them founder in low-skill, low-wage jobs, some because they are unfamiliar with the educational system and don't know how to ensure that they get the proper credit for the schooling they got in other countries.

"We can't continue to keep allowing so much talent and education to go to waste," Marin said. "These people can't continue to keep painting, cleaning houses or doing landscaping."

At InterAmerican University, foreign college transcripts are evaluated by an independent panel that appraises course work and gives credit for up to three years of college work.

Students then take intensive one-month courses on weekends and at nights to complete requirements for a degree here.

The school is still in the two-year process of applying for accreditation from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, but has approval from the state's Bureau for Private Postsecondary and Vocational Education to grant degrees, Marin said.

Saturday's graduation leaves 28 people enrolled in the school, which has three offices, a small library and three classrooms at the National City Community Center.

Beatriz Ortiz, 60, a mother of five and grandmother who immigrated in 1970, was an elementary school teacher in Mexico City for 10 years but discovered her teaching credentials weren't valid in the United States.

Architectural gems get polish in Detroit makeover

DETROIT (AP) — Endowed with riches by the roaring auto industry, the men who shaped the Motor City in the early part of the century poured money into bricks, mortar and concrete to create an architectural treasure trove of graceful design and intricate detail.

Today many of Detroit's gems are tattered and worn, done in by years of hard times and neglect. But as the city moves to kick its fledging renaissance into high gear, some see a vision of the future in the elegant past.

Speculators are pouring money into a city that for so long was synonymous with middle class flight to the suburbs and urban decay.

More than a dozen distinctive buildings have changed hands in the past year, sales sparked by a strong economy, renewed corporate and civic investment, optimism in the city's leadership — and an appreciation for aesthetics and history.

"I clearly think there's more upside potential in investing in the city," said David Farbman, a 27-year-old executive of a real estate company that plans to spend millions in Detroit. "I think that Detroit clearly — for the first time in 30-plus years — is beginning to become a driver of the market."

With an investment group, Brian Pastoria bought two century-old buildings — a four-story structure that for 52 years was quarters to a mannequin-rental shop, and a three-story, Tudor-style building where women once sold handcrafted items.

"We're looking to preserve a part of history. ... It's great to have these old jewels shined up," said Pastoria, who thinks at least one of the buildings can be used for loft offices and entertainment venues.

Several of the city's relics boast ornate cornices. Facades of others feature Pewabic tile, Montrose granite and Mankato stone — even marble — as testament to the richness of Detroit's architectural heritage.

"How do you get down to business when you can barely walk?"

The future of my store was on the line. And my knee was killing me. That's when my doctor said I needed surgery.

Knee surgery is hard enough without worrying about whether or not your business will survive while you're gone. So I breathed a sigh of relief when I found out I was going to Memorial Hospital for surgery and rehabilitation.

The experienced staff took good care of me. They had the equipment and know-how to put me back on my feet fast. And they even worked my rehab appointments around my busy schedule.

I had no business being in pain. But, thanks to Memorial Hospital, I'm back to my old routine – and business is booming.

Legal seminar, clinic helps aging residents

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A recent look at the needs of aging Permian Basin residents revealed a need for information about and access to affordable legal services in regards to wills, directives to physicians, powers of attorney and even guardianships.

According to the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging, 35 percent of older Permian Basin citizens have not prepared directives to physicians — living wills — in case of serious illness.

To address that need, the agency is organizing a legal awareness seminar on basic estate planning for July 14 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Southeast Community Center, 1803 E. Indiana. Those attending the seminar can then make appointments for a legal clinic the next day, July 15, where local attorneys, paralegals and legal assistants have volunteered to help low-income residents age 60 and over with legal documentation.

Kristi Elsom, an attorney with Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, will present the seminar. She said it was her work with patients from Hospice of Midland that made her aware of the need seniors have for legal assistance.

"It's a need, and it's hard to know where to start," she said.

It is a need Ellen Smith, director of the Southeast Community Center, has seen with a number of her clients.

She pointed out that "it's not until they have a catastrophe that they think of legal documents, and by then it's too late."

At the center, "We see a lot of need for powers of attorney, simple wills," she said, predicting a large turnout for the clinic. "Having wills, legal documentation is a new concept and we're educating our clients on that need."

Indeed, she said, some clients recently asked her for legal assistance information "and we have them holding for this clinic."

Ms. Elsom said she has donated time to West Texas Legal Services, where clients have to fill out affidavits that they're indigent to qualify for the service and other legal service.

Jacque Burgess, public information coordinator for West Texas Legal, said that the seminar and clinic "will create exposure for us. The more people that know about us, the better."

She said surveys have found people don't even know the center exists and that "low income residents with legal needs didn't know what was available to them for free."

Ms. Elsom, board certified in estate planning and probate law, said her law firm is supporting the upcoming clinic.

"We're donating my time, (attorney) Mary Lou Cassidy's time, and they've released my paralegal and secretary to work. It will be exciting to see how this goes."

To compensate the attorneys for their time and services, a Minimum Continuing Legal Education session on "Primary Care" Basic Estate Planning for Senior Citizens" will be held July 13 at Midland College from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Presenters will be Ms. Elsom and Bruce Bower, attorney with Texas Legal Services Center in Austin. Bower will be discussing Medicaid coverage for long-term care in Texas. Registration is $10 and dinner will be provided to those who pre-register.

A similar seminar and clinic are to be held in Odessa July 21-22 at the Northside Senior Center, 1225 N. Adams.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters

Mentoring is fun for both kid and adult

By Matt Josefy

Sibling rivalry was not a problem when Big Brothers-Big Sisters gathered for a recent meeting.

Pairs of big and little brothers and sisters were on hand to indicate their support for the program, and the parent of a child involved gave testimony as to how the program has benefited her family.

Jocelyn Hudspeth was enthused to speak about her big sister Cherie Hodges. Jocelyn will attend Lee Freshman High School next year. For the past 2 1/2 years, she's been involved in the program, the last 1 1/2 with Ms. Hodges.

"I think it's a neat program. It gives you the chance to meet new people and gives you things to do." The two have done numerous things together, from visiting Balmorhea and Ft. Davis to going bowling and roller skating.

Ms. Hodges describes their relationship as one that is "getting closer all the time because of the time we spend together." She views it as a friendship that is lasting. She enjoys the "opportunity to have a relationship with a child," and to help build Jocelyn's self-esteem.

The initial one-year commitment is one that never has to end, as the majority of the pairings do not have any major problems, according to Ms. Hodges.

Jocelyn says the only thing that the organization needs to do is "keep on doing what they're doing."

Amit Sharma has encountered pleasant results in working with little brother Michael Booker, as well. He became involved after hearing colleagues describe the benefits.

"This is something that suits my lifestyle that I can do to give back to the community," Sharma said.

Booker, clad in his all-star baseball uniform, said that Sharma "is cool. We go to Putt-putt to do the go-carts, the movies, bowling, his house, and play games."

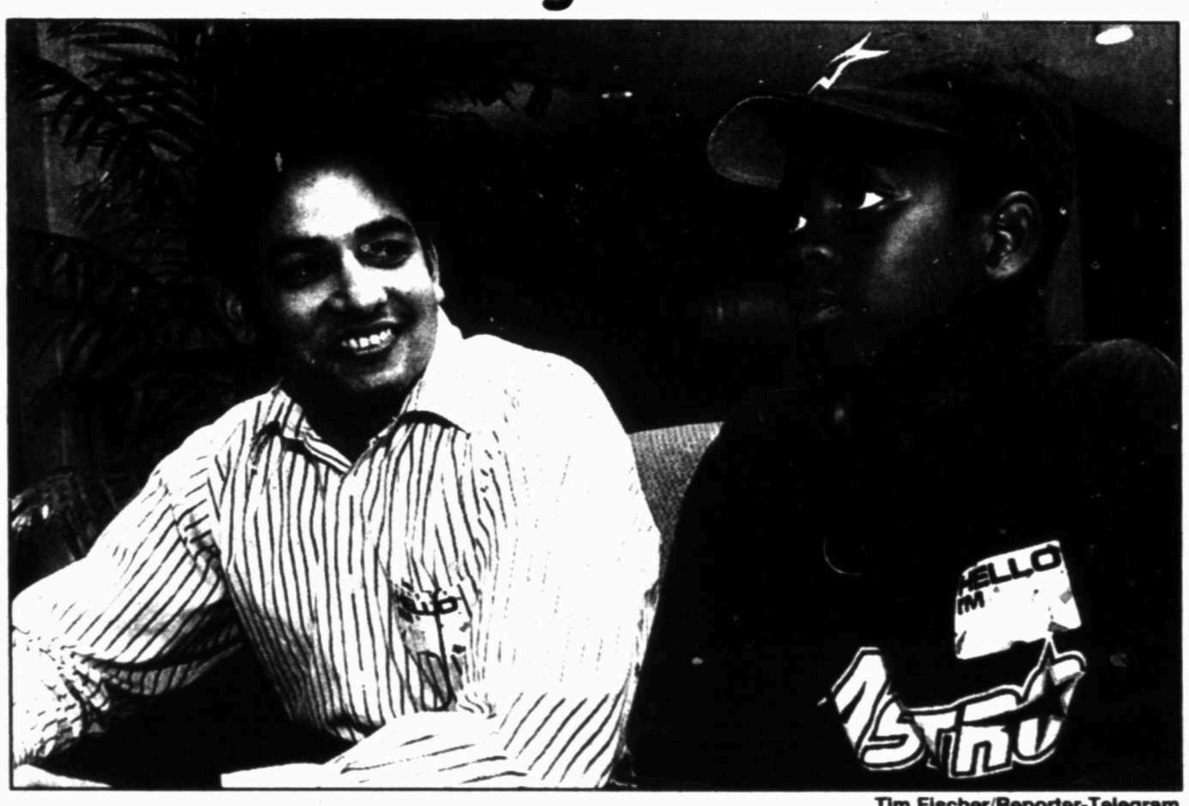

One unique experience for the two was converting Michael's baseball swing to the cricket field.

Sharma said that as giving as the volunteers are, even they can be "selfish" indulging in the "fun it is to be around kids. It reminds us of when we were younger, and we can see the world from their eyes."

Trelisa Grismore, case manager for teenage matches, points out that volunteers do not have to be adults. Presently, she deals with 19 matches of high school students with children ages 5 to 12.

These students "get a sense of helping others," she said. Unfortunately, she does need more volunteers, particularly males. She enjoys "bringing together matches,"

Postponed art exhibit opens at MC

By Jennifer Cherry

An art show that earlier was postponed because it coincided with Kids College opened Monday on the campus of Midland College.

The show, by former Midlander Bonnie Terrazas, features partially nude self-portraits. During the first day of the show, turn-out was light, but not necessarily because of the content.

"Summer shows are usually quiet," said Elise Coombes, public information officer for MC. "That is why we do not have shows in the summer."

This show will be the first summer show to hang in McCormick Gallery in two years, according to J. Don Wallace, Gallery coordinator. Mrs. Coombes did say that the show is a very typical show for McCormick Gallery.

On Monday a handful of on-lookers and a few college photo classes attended the show.

"This is a teaching gallery," said Kent Moss, MC photo/art instructor. "We bring shows of educational value."

He said students can view the processing and techniques Ms. Terrazas used to create her photos as an example during the course of their study.

Ms. Terrazas is a graduate of Midland High School and of Texas Christian University. She is a photo assistant at the Amos Carter Museum in Fort Worth. Her work will hang between the time of Kids College sessions; June 28 to July 16. Kids College will resume July 19.

"The show doesn't interfere with Kids College," Wallace said.

Ms. Terrazas' images will be useful to students when learning about self-portraiture, Moss said.

So far, there has been no negative response amongst those who have viewed the show, Mrs. Coombes said.

The photos, though originally meant to be bolted into the walls of a textured gallery, are mounted inside plexiglass and bolted together. They hang from a thin silver cable that is mounted on plain wood approximately one foot long.

Midland woman heads up national heritage group

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Among her friends and peers, Midlander Marguerite Starr Crain is a grand dame who studies her lineage with a passion accorded to a thorough historian, which, indeed, she is.

Her curiosity as a student of Texas and Texana and of America's colonial times, before and since, has propelled her to the president general of the National Society Colonial Dames XVII Century, a 13,000-plus-member hereditary group based in Washington, D.C.

"You must be a lineal descendant of someone who rendered a service," such as judicial, political, community, or military, during America's 1600s colonial times, Mrs. Crain said. "Mine was a captain (John Knowles) at Jamestowne," which in 1607 became the first English settlement in North America and in what is now Virginia.

An archivist told her that Knowles "was sent over from England to supervise building of the first statehouse in the whole country," Mrs. Crain said.

Aside from that, Mrs. Crane has provable ancestral links to Europe's Three Crusades dating back to Charlemagne, to the American Revolutionary War, to the early 1800s colonial days of Texas and the Texas war for independence, and to the Civil War.

But, Mrs. Crain said, the blessing and/or coincidence of her birth and resultant lineage is not to her glory.

"It is indeed a desirable thing to be well-descended," she said in quoting the Greek philosopher Plutarch, "but the glory belongs to our ancestors."

She is not, at least so far in her research, related to Stephen F. Austin, the founder of Angelo-American Texas and who is hailed as the father of Texas, similarly to George Washington being deemed father of the United States.

However, Mrs. Crain is related, for example, to another historic figure, Alexander Hodge, whose life spanned from the Revolutionary War to the colonization of Texas under Austin's tutelage.

During the Revolutionary War, Hodge had fought with Francis Marion, the "Swamp Fox," in South Carolina. "They would strike the British army with lightning speed and then vanish into the swamp," she said.

Beyond that, Hodge, who was born in the 1750s, was a Scotsman, a farmer, and a judge who linked up with Austin in 1814 as a legal adviser.

"His granddaughter was my great-great-grandmother," Mrs. Crain said. "He served the (Texas) colony as the 'alcalde' (judge). He was Scottish to the core."

The Hodge family was friends with William Travis, who commanded the Texans at the Alamo in 1836, and with James Bonham, who also died at the Alamo along with James Bowie and other Texas legends.

The first actress I remember having a crush on was Hayley Mills

More rambling thoughts ...

— Like most guys my age, I suppose, the first actress I can remember having a crush on was Hayley Mills from the movie, "The Parent Trap."

Ott

— My, how time flies: It was five years ago today, during a TV documentary, that Prince Charles said he had been faithful to Princess Diana until, and I quote, "it became irretrievably broken down."

— Isn't that how it usually happens?

— Aristotle once said, "Learning is not child's play; we cannot learn without pain."

— And while we're on the subject of learning, a fellow named John Ray once said, "Learning makes the wise wiser and the fool more foolish."

— Despite all the jokes, I can't remember my mother ever telling me to wear clean underwear "in case you're in an accident."

— Of course, it is good advice, although "fear of an accident" should not be the compelling reason behind the decision.

— It is hard to believe that young people, myself included, uttered the words, "Don't trust anyone over 30."

— Didn't we realize how silly we sounded?

— I've always liked the word, "balderdash."

— Rejecting a temptation can be a very good feeling.

— But it can be tough, as well.

— Overheard: "Flattery is the food of fools."

— Few situations are as frustrating as being stuck in a coversation with "a big talker" and not being able to get out of it, no matter how desperately you try.

— When did so many women start wearing neck ties?

— And why?

— It is a bit irritating when an author appears on a talk show to plug a new book and keeps repeating the title of the book over and over, as though that's going to make us more likely to rush out and buy it.

— Dan Rather, of all people, did that this past weekend.

— I have always been jealous of people who could do simple little magic tricks.

— One man's opinion: Parents should not name their children after famous people.

— There's a lot of truth, I've noticed, to the old saying, "While the cat's away the mice will play."

— In a morbid sort of way, it can be amusing to see a person gain back all of the weight he, or she, had earlier lost, especially if that person was constantly bragging about the weight loss.

— They can be quite effective, I suppose, but I've never been a big fan of boycotts.

— As one who watched "Welcome Back Kotter" on TV, I still can't believe John Travolta is a big movie star.

— Every office needs someone who has a great knowledge of worthless trivia.

— One of the most attractive traits a person can possess is a tolerance for those who think, and act, differently.

— By the same token, you know you are gaining a bit of maturity when you no longer care what others think of you.

— And today's final quote comes from Robert H. Goddard, who once said, "It is difficult to say what is impossible, for the dream of yesterday is the hope of today and the reality of tomorrow."

BIG: Big Brothers - Big Sisters has been in Midland since 1975

(From 1B)

because "it's almost like bringing together a family."

A waiting list exists for children needing an older match.

The Big Brothers-Big Sisters of America have been in Midland since 1975. The program takes volunteers and matches them with children who come from single parent or alternative parent homes (such as grandparents or other relatives).

Sandy Tisdale explains that the program has a diverse funding base that includes special fund raisers, grants, direct donations, and United Way contributions.

A donor recently gave tickets to Hero's Waterpark, which is something that will enable those on the waiting list to participate as well.

This program benefits the single parent who would say "I do need extra help; my child needs a special friend," Ms. Tisdale comments.

"We don't expect our volunteers to be superhuman, just to be a friend," she continues. The agency requests that pairs get together for at least six to eight hours a month.

"It's easy to spend time with child when you want to, when you're having fun and getting something out of it," she notes, pointing out that most of the matches end up spending much greater amounts of time together.

One small child upon meeting his older match asked "Mommy, how long can I keep him."

The program is in 500 cities across the country and even includes agencies in Canada and other nations. For more than 90 years, the organization has made more than one million matches. Careful screening insures the credibility of the program, which is preventative in nature — trying to reach kids before they start making bad choices.

PHOTOS: Process, hanging methods of artwork are useful teaching tools

(From 1B)

The way that the photos are hung is a lesson in itself to photo students. Moss said most self-portraits are simply mounted on a white matte.

The committee that reviews what is hung in McCormick Gallery decided to postpone the show until after Kids College was finished due to partial nudity that appears in Ms. Terranzas' works, Mrs. Coombes said. Though only two mothers did not approve of the show's timing, the committee felt that there would be a larger group involved, she said.

Polls shows Bush solidifying lead nationally and leading in Iowa

WASHINGTON (AP) — George W. Bush has expanded his lead in the race for the GOP nomination since hitting the campaign trail in June, and most of the gain has come at the expense of Elizabeth Dole, says a poll released Monday.

The Texas governor had the support of six out of 10 Republicans, 59 percent, while Dole, the former Red Cross president, dropped from 24 percent in May to 8 percent in the latest CNN/USA Today/Gallup poll.

Dole, who had been the only other GOP candidate in double digits, is now in a four-way tie with Steve Forbes, Dan Quayle and John McCain for second place nationally, according to the poll. Just over six of 10 Republicans said it would be better if a clear front-runner emerged for the GOP, while just over a third said it would be better to have a number of strong candidates competing over the next year.

Gore remained the Democratic front-runner with a 3-1 lead over Bill Bradley in the poll taken June 25-27. The sampling error for the overall sample of 1,016 was plus or minus 3 percentage points, but the error margin for subgroups of Democrats and Republicans was plus or minus 5 percentage points.

Bush holds a 15-point lead over Gore in a head-to-head matchup, with 56 percent behind Bush and 41 percent behind Gore.

He is an author of popular and scholarly works, sought-after seminar lecturer, and dedicated worker in Sunday School organization having developed over twenty resource packets for leadership education. He has published 50 books listed in the Library of Congress, four of them are listed in the Christian booksellers Best Selling List and several have been adopted as college textbooks. We welcome Dr. Towns in his first involvement in Temple's Summer Bible Conference.

Pops in the park expected to draw 10,000+ with Fourth of July performance

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — With less than a week to go, event coordinators for the second annual Pops In The Park celebration say they expect to herald in yet another Independence Day celebration Saturday with more than 10,000 people in attendance.

Event Committee Chairman Ben Bancroft said this year's presentation will offer a little more than last year, with more food, more fun, and especially more fireworks.

"One of the things that we looked at this year was increasing the overall budget for the program," Bancroft said. "Last year we spent a little over $27,000 to put the show on, and this year we have budgeted $30,000."

Bancroft said his committee has already raised $21,460 for the July Fourth extravaganza, and would like to be able to collect the little more than $8,000 needed to support the event before the gates open.

"We'll have collection boxes at the amphitheater for people to make donations, but we would really rather not rely on that," Bancroft said. "I'd much rather have everything paid for before we open the gates Saturday."

Bancroft said the program has something to offer for everyone, including 16 different booths that will be serving food during the show.

"I'm really glad to see so many people taking an interest in this event, and getting involved," he added.

Bancroft said the amphitheater will open for seating at 4 p.m., with the booths opening at 4:30 p.m..

"The show will get under way at 6 p.m. with folk singer/songwriter Allen Damron opening things up," said Bancroft. "He really is an excellent artist. He sings about Texas history a lot, as well as telling a variety of stories. He will perform until 7:30, and after a brief intermission. The Boy Scouts of America and the Big Spring Vietnam Memorial Committee will present the parade of flags.

"The Big Spring Symphony will begin their performance at 8:45, and we expect to have the fireworks after it gets sufficiently dark ... at around 9:30 p.m. The program will end at 10:20 p.m., when they play 'Stars and Stripes Forever,' along with the final aerial fireworks display."

DAME: Friend notes her 'appreciation for finer things of past, present'

(From 1B)

ters of the Republic of Texas, the Daughters of the American Colonists, Daughters of the American Revolution, Descendants of Austin's Old Three Hundred (members of the original Texas colony), San Jacinto Descendants, George Washington's Army at Valley Forge, the Jamestowne Society, Dames of the Court of Honor, Order of Charlemagne in the United States of America, Magna Charta Dames, Most Noble Order of Knights of the Garter, Colonial Order of the Crown and Order of Three Crusades.

"We are so very proud to have her claim Midland and Texas as her home," said Barbara Culver Clack, a former Midland County judge, Texas district-court judge, and Supreme Court justice who also is a Colonial Dame.

"She is my authority (on history)," Judge Culver said of Mrs. Crain. "When I want to find out something, I ask her about it. She is going to be a marvelous national president."

Mrs. Crain recently returned from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., where she presented a Colonial Dames award to an outstanding cadet in system engineering. The Colonial Dames also awards the Pocahontas Scholarship to American Indian students pursuing careers in medicine. The society has other projects related to preserving history and recording tradition.

Judge Culver noted that Mrs. Crain has "earned and deserved the respect of so many people" in her various roles, including that as president general of Colonial Dames.

"The object of Colonial Dames is not to promote women," Mrs. Crain said. "It's not a feminist movement." Rather, it is to encourage the study of and appreciation of history and heritage. The society traces genealogies.

"We encourage continued research to discern your emigrant ancestors," Mrs. Crain said. "Then, you (may) go on back to England and see what you find over there.

"We are not political," she said. "Everybody can do her own thing." The members of the Colonial Dames "are conservative in their thinking.

"I contend that everybody can help preserve our history by recording his or her on own life," Mrs. Crain said.

When she mentions that to an individual or to a group, "invariably" a response will be: "'My kids aren't interested in what I've done.'"

To counter that, Mrs. Crain has a stock reply: "'I don't care what your kids are interested in. I am thinking about your grandchildren. Write it down. It doesn't matter about misplaced commas, incomplete sentences, and misspelled words. Just write it.'"

DeWayne Davis, a retired Midland schoolteacher who was a classmate of Mrs. Crain in their pre-World War II days in Vernon, Texas, said that Mrs. Crain is "deeply into and has an appreciation for history like no one that I have encountered in recent times.

"She is a historian, really," Davis said. "She has an appreciation for the finer things of the past as well as the present. She is quite a leader in that respect. She is very knowledgeable.

"Marguerite, ever since we were in high school, has been such a smart person. She is from an old family in Walbarger County, well-known, and, I'd say, prosperous."

Mrs. Crain is "a grand dame and gracious," Davis said. "She gets to the point real fast. She is admired by so many different and varied interested groups in Midland, has always been active in the Methodist Church, and she has friends in varying degrees and orders all over the state and, now, in the nation."

Among her early-day friends, for example, is Robert "Bob" Hite, who was a B-25 co-pilot in the Jimmy Doolittle-commanded a raid on Japan in April 1942.

"She has hobnobbed with the people in Washington who we read about and she has hobnobbed in Texas with people that we know about. So, she has gotten around," Davis said.

Through her research, Mrs. Crain has authored or co-authored three historical books: "Two Glass Buttons" about her family's role in the Texas War for Independence; "Ten Sons of Oliver" about the Crain family migration from Virginia to Texas, and "They Followed the Sun" about the Starr family migration from Virginia to Texas. She is co-editor of "The First Colony of Texas: Austin's Old Three Hundred."

One of her kin was a fearless Texas Ranger who wasn't fazed by bullets meant for him.

Another was a great-grandfather, far removed, in Washington's time. He was a drinking buddy of Washington's father, Augustine Washington.

"I don't know how many greats back," Mrs. Crain said of the forefather, Dempsey Carroll. "He was a rascal. It's such fun to look back and read about him, but you sure would hate to be married to him."

And to the best of her research, Mrs. Crain said that she has yet to uncover a horse thief in her lineage. "But I'm not through researching."

Among her most-admired national leaders is George Washington, who "tops the list" with his "integrity and courage.

"There he was with no pattern to follow," Mrs. Crain said. "There had never been a democracy that he could pattern after. Each colony was wanting to be the leader. Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson were at odds with each other. He (Washington) had what it took to pull those colonies together to act as one. That took a mighty man."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, June 29, 1999:

Others frequently seek you out for feedback and information. Your personality melts barriers and allows others to approach you. Though you may become stuck or rigid on occasion, your solidity draws favor and affection. Learn to understand others and to walk in their footsteps. Listen to what they are really saying, not what you think they're saying! If you are single, you get what you want in a relationship, though you might question the prospect of a long-term commitment. Worry less about the future, and just have fun! If attached, work together to make what you have dreamed about a reality. CAPRICORN is a great business connection.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Maintain a high profile. You accomplish a lot very easily. Others respond to your ideas; even arguing with you is stimulating! Establishing limits helps you make a better relationship. Being nice doesn't bring the same kind of results, as you will discover if you try that approach! Tonight: Working into the wee hours.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Working as hard as you do has its rewards. Listen to news, sort through information and be willing to broaden your horizons. Stretch beyond your norm. New doors open because of your willingness to "hang in there." Tonight: Take in a movie.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Intuition comes through for you when dealing with funds and a key relationship. Listen carefully to feedback that you are getting. You might decide there is a deeper message here than you are receiving! Be open; discuss what you feel is the main issue at hand. Tonight: Snuggle in.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ A friend does care, even if he is unusually tough on you at times. Let everyone express their feelings and opinions. Pulling ideas together for a common goal takes talent — and you have it! Tonight: Get together with a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Pace yourself. Take charge of your work, and get it done. Your serious demeanor tells others you mean business. Your ability to ask for what you need can make all the difference. Tonight: Plugging along.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ It is easy for you to allow your creativity and ingenuity to reign, presently. Others appreciate this infusion of ideas. Sort through what is realistic and what isn't. Reach out for others. Tonight: Remember, all is possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Build strong foundations. Know what you want. Pressure builds as you reckon with that difficult, critical partner. Be imaginative. Let another contribute as much as he can or wants, but eliminate any expectations. Tonight: Hang out at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Take the first step and initiate a conversation. Others could be testy and sometimes difficult. Keep communication flowing. You might need to limit just how much talking and socializing you do. If you can, take time for a neighbor or a relative. Tonight: Talk up a storm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Play a supporting role rather than the lead. Carefully think through professional decisions. You might not always agree with coworkers about expenses and projects. Do only what you must, presently. Tonight: One step at a time!

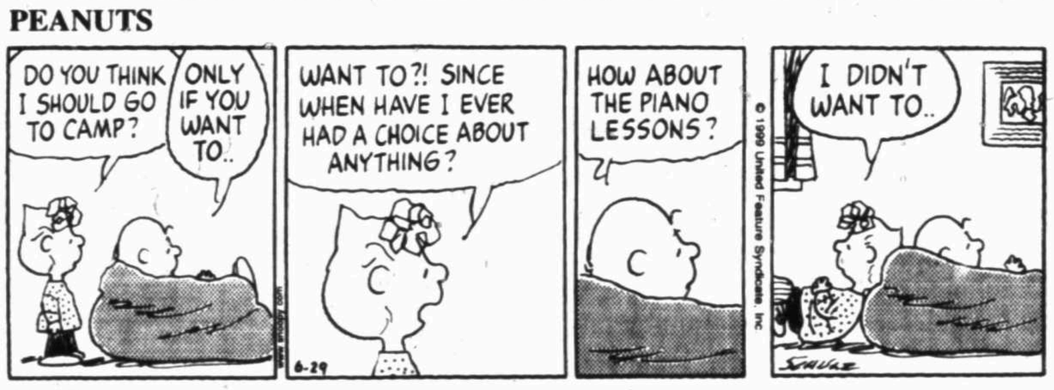

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Don't let anyone or anything undermine you. Others aren't necessarily creative or positive. In fact, they might be a bit negative and lacking in imagination. You are in control. Call your own shots! Tonight: Beam in what you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★ The less said, the better. You could be confused about what is happening, and you may be unable to grasp the whole picture. Do your own thing; don't let another push you in any way, shape or form. Take a walk at lunchtime to restore your energy. Tonight: Switch on your answering machine.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Stay in touch with friends; be the one to call, even if no one else does. Network to get past a difficult conversation. You or another could be very negative in a key talk. Be as understanding as possible. Your vision might not be communicated as clearly as you would like. Tonight: Chatting online.

The bidding:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH
2◇	2NT	Pass	3♣
Pass	3♡	Pass	6♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

One of the great players of the modern era, Bobby Goldman of Dallas, died suddenly of a heart attack on May 16. A four-time world champion, he won a host of national and regional titles in a 35-year tournament career.

On this deal Goldman sat South and found himself in a contract of six hearts after North used three clubs to check on major suits. With potential losers in spades and diamonds, it might seem that the slam depended on a club finesse but, on the bidding, that was likely to fail. Goldman took a different finesse, one more likely to succeed.

Since the bidding marked the opening lead for a singleton, declarer rose with the ace of diamonds, cashed the king and ace of clubs, then ruffed a club with the queen of hearts. Declarer returned to the table by overtaking the jack of hearts with the king and trumped dummy's remaining club with the 10 of hearts. The ace of spades was cashed, followed by the two of hearts and, when West followed low, Goldman finessed the seven!

When that held, the remaining trumps were drawn, declarer discarding a spade and a diamond from hand. Now a diamond was led from dummy. East could win with the king but then was forced to return a diamond or a spade and declarer scored the last two tricks with the queen of diamonds and king of spades.

When asked why he had taken the deep heart finesse, Goldman remarked: "It was nothing. East presumably started with six diamonds and had shown up with one trump, four clubs and a spade. Even if East's last card was a trump, the finesse was still a 3-to-2 favorite to succeed."

He will be sorely missed by all who knew him.

Royal belt-tightening saves $8 million

LONDON — In another year of belt-tightening, Queen Elizabeth II and her family saved more than $8 million in expenses for travel and the upkeep of their eight palaces, Buckingham Palace said Monday.

They didn't exactly take to bicycles, like the more laid-back Scandinavian royals. But economies included fewer trips on the royal train and renting a modern helicopter instead of flying to engagements — or between palaces — in two Royal Air Force helicopters.

"The royal household has achieved substantial savings and better value for money," declared the official who oversees spending of government grants.

It was the second successive year the royals have disclosed details of travel costs — part of seeking to make the monarchy less expensive, more open and more modern.

The queen also now pays income tax, supports relatives previously on the government payroll and has opened Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle to paying visitors.

LONDON — A special 5-pound coin honoring Princess Diana goes on sale July 1, her birthday.

The coin, worth about $8, features a portrait of her in profile. A portrait of Queen Elizabeth II is on the reverse side.

Limited editions in gold and silver were sold earlier this year. All proceeds go to charities recommended by the fund set up after Diana's death in a Paris car crash in 1997.

MUNICH, Germany — Michael Jackson received minor burns from fireworks used in a charity concert.

The pop star was treated and released after Sunday's show featuring 30 performers, including Luther Vandross and Boyzone.

Jackson's burns were "nothing serious," a hospital spokeswoman said.

It wasn't his first brush with pyrotechnics. He was hospitalized with second-degree scalp burns in 1984 after his hair caught fire from a smoke bomb while filming a commercial.

The concert raised $1.6 million for UNESCO, the Red Cross and the Nelson Mandela Children's Fund.

PHILADELPHIA — Gregory Peck was honored by the city for his humanitarian work.

Gregory Peck received the second annual Marian Anderson Award for his humanitarian work.

The 83-year-old actor received the second annual Marian Anderson Award on Saturday in front of 400 friends and fans. Peck received a crystal sculpture and $100,000, which he donated to several charities.

Among Peck's achievements are his starring role as Atticus Finch, the Southern lawyer who crusaded against racism in the 1962 film "To Kill a Mockingbird."

He's also an outspoken supporter of gun control and has raised money for many causes, including cancer research and civil rights.

"Our Congress has been going around and around this past week," said Peck, referring to the battle over gun control legislation. "What is wrong with keeping guns out of the hands of the wrong people?"

The award is named after Marian Anderson, the late opera singer and Philadelphia native who was the first black performer to sing at the White House.

NEW YORK — Tom Cruise found the filming of Stanley Kubrick's "Eyes Wide Shut" such an intense experience that he developed an ulcer.

"I didn't want to tell Stanley," Cruise told Time magazine in this week's issue. "He panicked. I wanted this to work, but you're playing with dynamite when you act."

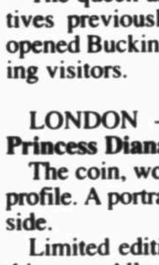

"Eyes Wide Shut," a story of sexual obsession starring Cruise and his real-life wife Nicole Kidman, turned out to be Kubrick's swan song. The director died in March and neither Cruise nor Kidman were able to talk about him without misting up, Time said.

"We're so proud of the movie, but we have this strange feeling about its success," Kidman said. "Stanley was always around. And now he's gone."

Bush makes aggressive pitch for nation's fastest-growing ethnic group

Campaign 2000

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — When George W. Bush tours the "Plaza de Mexico" exhibit at a county fair this week he'll undoubtedly slip in a bit of Spanish. The Republican presidential front-runner is aggressively courting Hispanics, who make up 15 percent of the electorate in California and have traditionally voted Democratic.

In California, battles over illegal immigration, affirmative action and bilingual education that raged through most of the 1990s under then-Gov. Pete Wilson have created deep reservations among Hispanics toward Republicans.

It's a fact that's not lost on Bush or his presidential rivals.

Hispanics make up America's fastest growing electorate group. Nationally 5 percent of the voting public is Hispanic.

In a speech last week in Detroit, Bush told his predominantly Hispanic audience: "The message has got to be, 'The American dream has got to stand for you as well.'"

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander gave a brief Spanish pitch to adult students in Los Angeles in March, but it backfired when his audience began to pepper him with questions in Spanish, which he didn't understand.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona has long courted Hispanic voters and captured more than 50 percent of the Hispanic vote in his last two elections. "Their support is my honor," McCain said at a GOP convention here in February.

On the Democratic side, the front-runner, Vice President Al Gore, told a mostly Hispanic audience in Los Angeles last week that the Republicans were trying to divide Californians with "demagogic tactics designed to turn one group against each other."

It was an apparent reference to the state's Proposition 187, the successful ballot measure five years ago that sought to bar illegal immigrants from receiving most forms of state aid.

In the last two presidential elections, the Hispanic vote nationally went overwhelmingly for the Democrat, Bill Clinton. He got 72 percent in 1996, according to a Voter News Service exit poll. In 1992, the figure was 61 percent, but that probably underestimated his support among Hispanics because of the way the question was asked.

Last year, Bush won the Texas gubernatorial race last year with 49 percent of the Hispanic vote, according to a VNS exit poll. Another exit poll, by the William Velasquez Institute of San Antonio for the Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project, a Hispanic interest group, put the figure at 39 percent.

Bush made a big push for Hispanic votes during that campaign, including Spanish-language advertising. Bush said issues such as education and family values were important to Hispanic voters, along with what he called the politics of inclusion. "I believe I have set a tone that says to the Hispanic community, you're a part of the future," he said.

The Texas governor hopes to parlay this support into a broad victory in the primaries. States with heavy Hispanic populations include California, Texas, New York and Florida.

"That's a 900-pound electoral gorilla," said Leslie Goodman, a Republican consultant volunteering for Bush's campaign.

The four states combined have 144 of the 270 electoral votes needed to win the White House.

Bush has an edge in Florida, where his brother Jeb is governor and is married to a Mexican woman. Jeb Bush says his son, George P. Bush, is in Mexico brushing up on his Spanish in preparation for a campaign swing through California with the Texas governor.

In California, though, Bush will find that the Hispanic political climate is different than in Texas, experts say. He plans to hopscotch the state Tuesday through Thursday, stopping in San Diego, Irvine, Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Francisco, Palo Alto and Fresno.

"The main difference is that the issues that divide Californians just don't play here in Texas," said David Lanoue, a political scientist and college professor who has taught in both states.

"In California, so many people I talked to seem to say immigration was treated as some kind of invasion from foreign culture or country," said Lanoue, who currently teaches at Texas Tech University. "Here, there's never been that sense."

CASA DE AMIGOS
35th Anniversary

It was my privilege to serve as Chairman of the Board of Casa from 1977-1979. This was an exciting time for Casa. The prior Board, under Don Hellinghausen's leadership, had made the decision to build a new facility at the present location of Lamesa Road and Garden Lane. It hadn't been that long since we had moved into the house at 928 North Dallas, but Casa was meeting needs and the demand for services was growing.

Robert Landreth

Where would we get the $85,000 we needed to buy the land and build the building? It seemed an awfully tall order in 1976, but then, this is the Tall City, isn't it? With the help of Board members and Midland Reporter-Telegram Publisher Jimmy Allison and others, we obtained a commitment for the necessary funds from the Walter Davis family which, by mutual agreement, was kept confidential for several years. And build we did, with the fine cooperation and contribution of Gene and Dick Abbott. As I recall, the final product - approximately 4,000 square feet - was modestly furnished but fully functional. Sometime later, the weekly meal program for seniors was started.

I was blessed to serve with a truly great and caring Board. It seems we never could move fast enough to keep pace with the dreams and ideas of Don Hellinghausen and Mel Goffigon, but it was challenging and rewarding. Midway through my term, Marcia Ingram elected to step down as Director, and we all felt we could never adequately replace her. But Margaret Hernandez continued her steady work, and Mary Hinkle stepped into Marcia's shoes in 1979 and did a fantastic job.

The continuing mission of Casa brings to mind a compelling verse of Scripture: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." May it continue to be so for Casa de Amigos.

Celebrate 2000

DEAR ABBY

Man's AIDS volunteer work makes girlfriend fearful

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a woman for two months. "Sally" seems like a great match for me in a lot of ways. She has all of the qualities that I look for, and I can see a future with her. We're taking things slow because she's in the middle of a divorce and also for the reason I am about to relate.

Van Buren

For the past three years I have been spending time with several children with HIV/AIDS. I take them out weekly to parks, movies, etc., and visit them in the hospital when they're sick. Some of their parents passed away or are sick, so it is important that they have a "big brother" to make them feel special and expose them to different things.

Sally is a very caring person and respects what I do, but she's scared to death to be intimate with me because she thinks I am at risk of getting the virus myself and then she would get it. She read that you can get HIV through saliva. I take precautions when I'm with the children, and if they get cut, I have gloves and bandages with me at all times.

I am going to ask Sally to consult with some experts on the disease, and then I thought I'd write to you to see what you think. If she can't get over this fear, we may both miss out on what could be something special. — "BILLYBOB" IN N.J.

DEAR "BILLYBOB": One cannot get AIDS from spending time with children with AIDS. Insist that Sally talk to a doctor with you so that she can put this fear to rest.

DEAR ABBY: I hope it's not too late to offer a suggestion to "Looking for Privacy," whose in-laws copied their house key and used it as they saw fit. DO NOT key the locks on all your doors alike. With an attached garage, I changed the lock on only the garage side door and gave that key to my in-laws to keep. However, they do not have the key to get into my home from the garage; I leave that door unlocked only if I EXPECT them.

Sound controlling? Perhaps, but I realized that if my mother-in-law had no qualms about barging into our bedroom and jumping into our bed (so we could all snuggle and watch TV), there were no measures too extreme to ensure our privacy from some people. The intrusions into our privacy forced me to face the fact that this type of situation only gets worse with time. I love my in-laws, but any attempt to gently discuss this type of subject resulted only in wounded feelings. Some people just don't "get it," so do what you have to do. — MRS. JONES, ANYWHERE, U.S.A.

DEAR MRS. JONES: No need to apologize or to discuss it. Your thinking is A-OK.

DEAR ABBY: What do you say to people when they are nosy enough to ask, "Isn't it about time you had kids?" if you aren't planning on having any? — ON THE SPOT, SAUK RAPIDS, MINN.

DEAR ON THE SPOT: You don't have to answer every question that is asked. Just tune them out. If it was any of their business, they would KNOW!

Stuckenschneider's hit lifts 'Hounds to 9-8 win

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Admittedly, Midland RockHounds outfielder Eric Stuckenschneider hasn't had the year he would've liked. Coming into Monday night's game against the Wichita Wranglers, Stuckenschneider was hitting just .105.

But you can throw away that average as Stuckenschneider came up with the biggest hits in a RockHounds uniform, including the game-winning two-out RBI single in the bottom of the ninth inning to help Midland defeat rival Wichita, 9-8, at Christensen Stadium. The win broke a two-game slide by the RockHounds against the Wranglers.

"It hadn't been the type of year I was anticipating during spring training," said Stuckenschneider, who went 2-for-5 with four RBIs. "It's been a tough year and then I got off to a slow start here. I'm starting to find my swing back. Hopefully tonight was the step toward that."

Stuckenschneider's progression this year was slowed with a shoulder injury during the first week of spring training. After a few months of inactivity, he was sent to Midland on rehab assignment, hoping to get back to where he once was when he was tearing it up with the San Antonio Missions and Triple-A Albuquerque last season.

"I was trying to avoid surgery as much as possible. I came here, and hopefully my shoulder keeps getting stronger," Stuckenschneider said.

In the bottom of the ninth, Stuckenschneider showed flashes of his old form of when he was playing against Midland in a Missions uniform. Stuckenshneider came to the plate with the bases loaded and two outs with the score tied at 8-8. Pinch hitter Justin Bowles had reached with a double and both Cody McKay and Jeff DaVanon were intentionally walked. Stuckenschneider then took a Jamie Bluma (2-4) pitch and hit it to right field for the game-winning hit.

"I was just in my two strike approach, trying to fend off anything that goes up there, and luckily I got some good enough wood on it," said Stuckenschneider about his game-winner. "It was good to finally break through. It's kind of hard to fit in here with all these hitters. Wichita is tough to play against, even when I was with San Antonio last year they were tough. To come back tonight, it just gives everybody confidence."

Midland went down 8-4 in the seventh inning after Dee Brown homered and Sean McNally scored on a wild pitch by Andy Kimball.

The 'Hounds rallied for four runs in the eighth which was highlighted by Stuckenschneider's three-run double to left-center field which seemed to bounce off the glove of Wrangler center fielder Goefrey Tomlinson.

After falling behind twice to the Wranglers and seeing his team come back twice in the game, Midland manager Tony DeFrancesco was happy to see his team have some resiliency on Monday night.

"(Wichita) has proven the whole series that they can come out swinging," DeFrancesco said. "Luckily, we keep battling back."

DeFrancesco was also happy to see Stuckenschneider bust out of his slump.

"Eric's got potential," DeFrancesco said. "We've been working on his swing and making adjustments at the plate. Once he gets on track he's going to contribute big time."

This was just one win, however, against the Wranglers, who own a 14-6 record against the 'Hounds this season.

"Tomorrow will be another battle, I can tell you that," DeFrancesco said. "We haven't played well against them all year, so we just need to keep doing what we've been doing and hopefully we can shut them down."

NBA DRAFT

Devil of a draft for NBA

■ Duke has four potential first-rounders available for Wednesday's draft.

By David Droschak
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM, N.C. — Duke lost the national championship three months ago. The Blue Devils will lose a whole lot more Wednesday in the NBA draft.

Players such as Grant Hill, Christian Laettner, Danny Ferry, Mike Gminski and Gene Banks never left Duke early for the riches of pro basketball.

But Duke's luck ran out this season. Elton Brand said he would turn pro after his sophomore season, setting off a domino effect involving underclassmen William Avery and Corey Maggette.

Add senior Trajan Langdon and the Blue Devils most likely become the first team to have four first-round picks in the same draft.

Five schools have had three first-round selections in the same year: Indiana (1976), Michigan (1990), UNLV (1991), Arkansas (1992) and Kentucky (1996).

"It is really hard to imagine that this could happen very often," said Keith Drum, an area scout for the Sacramento Kings.

There was talk of a Duke dynasty after coach Mike Krzyzewski led the team to a 37-2 record with players such as Brand, Avery and Maggette returning to join Chris Carrawell, Shane Battier and Nate James. Now the Blue Devils begin next season with six freshmen among their 10 scholarship players.

Krzyzewski said last week he felt hurt after some of the players bolted early, the trio not even staying for their junior seasons.

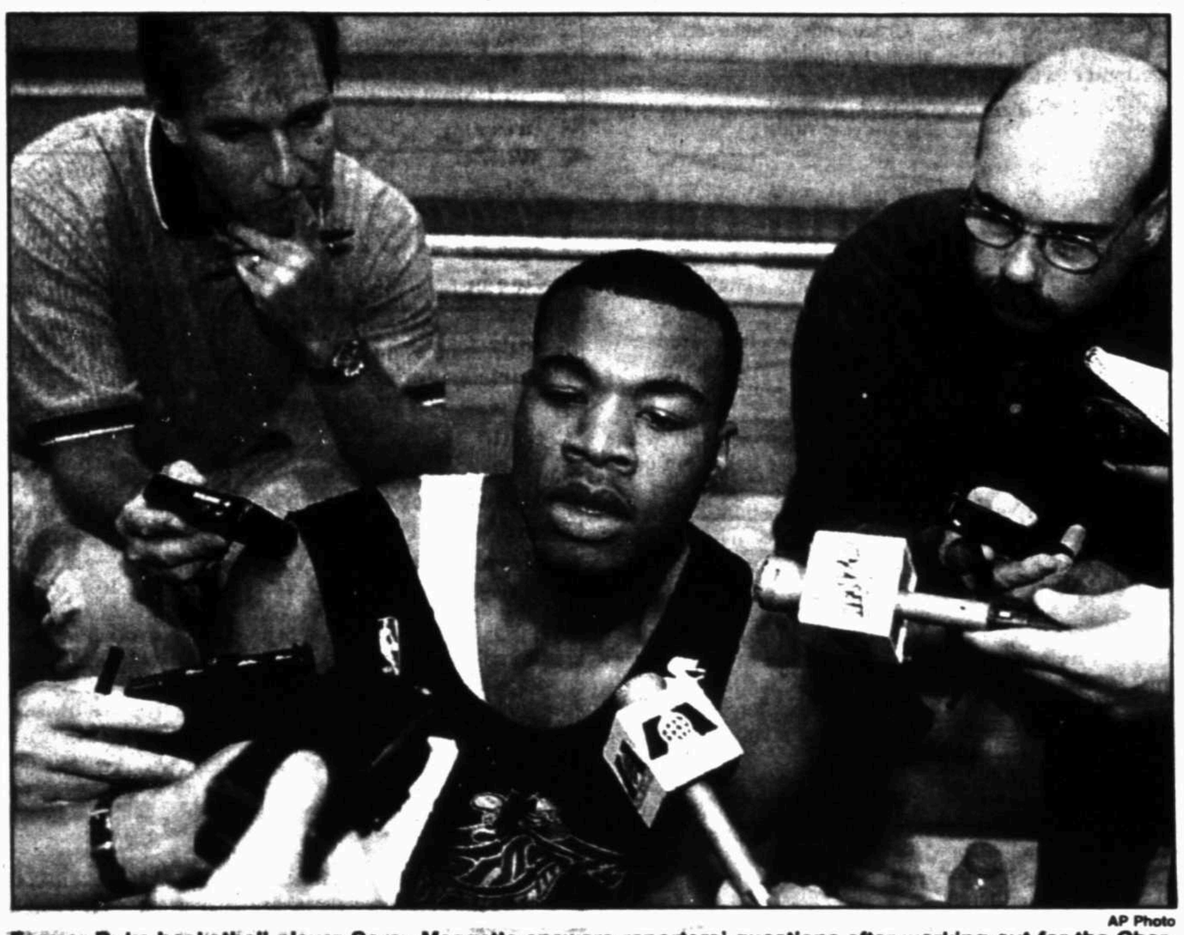

"I think we have allure here," Krzyzewski said. "We have one of the great schools, we have an outstanding basketball program and we have great people. To me, that's a heck of a thing to be a part of. To me, that stands by itself against anything."

Not millions of dollars, though. Brand, Avery and Maggette are expected to go high in the first round, but teams have questions about all three.

Is Brand tall enough? Can Avery run the point in the NBA? Does Maggette have the experience?

Brand is 270 pounds and 6-foot-8, and

Mavs must do without first round pick

DALLAS — Don Nelson says he'll hardly be heard from on draft day.

Believe it when you see it.

Throughout his 20 years as a general manager, Nelson has made a habit of dealing players on draft day. He's made three trades during two draft days with the Dallas Mavericks, including one that gave up the team's top pick in Wednesday's draft.

"I can be out of character because we don't have a first-round pick," said Nelson, who also is Dallas' coach. "So we don't have anything to talk (to other teams) about."

Nelson essentially made his draft-day move for 1999 during last year's draft by sending this year's first-round pick to Phoenix as part of a deal for Steve Nash. That picked turned into the ninth spot for the Suns.

All the Mavericks, who went 19-31 last season, are left with is the seventh pick of the second round, No. 36 overall, and the 40th, which came from a 1996 trade that sent Popeye Jones to Toronto.

"We don't believe whoever we draft there (in the second round) should be able to make our team," Nelson said.

Nelson's successful track record with trades and draft picks were a big reason he was hired by Mavericks

Can Rockets find hidden treasures?

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets got two starters out of last year's NBA draft, but they don't expect to be as fortunate this year.

Houston stocked up with three guards last year and two of them, Michael Dickerson and Cuttino Mobley, ended up in the starting lineup. They also got bench contributor Bryce Drew.

Carroll Dawson, vice president for basketball, acknowledges that point guards and small forwards — known as the "three" spot — are plentiful in this draft.

"The three is good because we're looking for, threes, fours (power forwards) and fives (centers)," Dawson said.

The Rockets fizzled in the playoffs last season despite high expectations fueled by the addition of small forward Scottie Pippen to a front court already anchored by Charles Barkley and Hakeem Olajuwon. Pippen signed a five-year, $67.5 million contract in January but never quite settled into the offensive scheme drawn around the resident superstars.

Pippen finished the regular season with career lows in many categories. His 14.5 scoring average was the lowest since his rookie year.

Everett has found a home in Houston

■ Escaping New York, Astros center fielder enjoys new start in Houston after controversial stay with Mets.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Some players want to play for the big-market teams, but not Carl Everett. He couldn't wait to get away from the New York Mets and find a career with the Houston Astros.

Everett had a career year in center field last season, his first with the Astros, after an unhappy time with the Mets. This season, he's almost matched some of last year's statistics before the All-Star break.

"I'm just getting the opportunity to play every day over here and I'm not being judged by just one game," Everett said. "They (Mets) wanted to put a label on me that I wasn't an everyday player."

With the Astros in an offensive slump, Everett has been the team's steadiest hitter. While the Astros hit .151 and were outscored 26-10 during a four-game home sweep by the Cincinnati Reds, Everett still hit .273 in the series with a double and home run.

Going into Tuesday's series opener against the St. Louis Cardinals, Everett is hitting .302 with 80 hits, 52 RBIs, and eight homers. He already has 20 stolen bases this season with just one unsuccessful attempt, compared to just 14 steals last year.

Everett also leads the Astros with a .403 average with runners in scoring position and he's hitting .469 with a runner at third base. The good times in Texas haven't erased the bad memories from three years in New York.

"I still don't like to play there," Everett said. "Here you have a clubhouse where you don't have to worry. You had a team full of worries in New York from wondering what the front office or the media was going to do."

Everett came to the Astros during a trying personal time. Everett and his wife, Linda, had their children taken away in 1997 when a Shea Stadium child care worker noticed bruises on one of Everett's children.

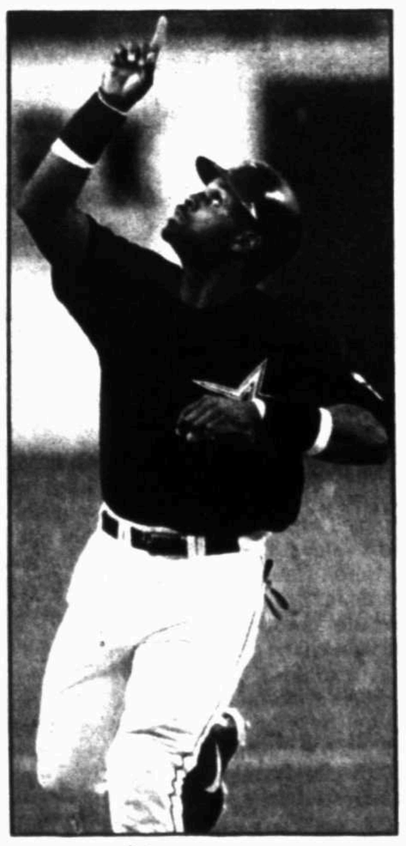

Child abuse charges later were dropped, but a judge ruled that Linda Everett inflicted excessive corporal punishment and that her husband didn't stop her.

"Everyone wanted to have an opinion on that, and a lot of people were way off base," Everett said. "When things are put on you and when you know what is right, then you don't worry. I have let bygones be bygones."

Jeff Bagwell has found Everett to be a good fit with the Astros.

"We didn't know what we were getting, but we quickly learned that he is a great guy, he's fun to have as a teammate," Bagwell said. "This is a more comfortable atmosphere for him.

"This is laid-back team, a laid-back city and media. That's helped Carl to flourish."

Agassi solves rugged serves

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Andre Agassi flailed feebly at returns for two sets and did little more than a pigeon-toed shuffle on the baseline as Wayne Arthurs ran his amazing streak of unbroken service games to 111.

Agassi looked as helpless as everyone else the skinny left-hander had faced in his surge from anonymity at Wimbledon. He kept pace with the Australian, but only by holding serve.

They split two tiebreakers, and might have gone to a few more in their fourth-round match Monday, if not for one particular volley that Arthurs blew and never got over in a 6-7 (7-5), 7-6 (7-5), 6-1, 6-4 defeat.

It was a sitter waiting to be pummeled into an open court at 1-1 in the third set, but Arthurs whacked it into the net only a few feet away. Agassi seized on that gift as if he knew he might not get another, pounding a backhand return that kissed the sideline on the next point.

That gave Agassi the break Arthurs had not yielded in six matches going back to the qualifying tournament, and it launched Agassi's surge into the quarterfinals.

"When you can hit four corners with a range of 30 mph difference, that's a big serve," Agassi said of the No. 163-ranked Arthurs, a 28-year-old doubles specialist he had never played and had barely heard of.

"He can hit it flat or bomb out wide in the deuce court. He can hit 129 mph. He can also hit a nasty kick 98 mph. He can blast up the middle or hit a bender up the middle. He can serve into your body and swing you wide, with pace or without pace."

The catch, Agassi said, is that Arthurs is a one-trick pony who "doesn't present much of a presence on the return game. So you feel like it's just a matter of time before you get a window or two."

When that window opened, Agassi jumped through for the first of three straight breaks that turned the match around.

Arthurs went into the match with a streak of 98 straight service games without a break. He served 25 aces against Agassi, considered the best returner in tennis.

Agassi, who won his first French Open last month, is seeking to reclaim the Wimbledon title he won in 1992. If he succeeds, he will be the first man since Bjorn Borg in 1980 to win both majors back to back.

Agassi will next face Brazil's Gustavo Kuerten, the former French Open champ, who beat Swiss qualifier Lorenzo Manta 7-5, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3.

Kuerten hadn't won a grass-court match until last week, but he is increasingly confident on the surface. He lost only his first set of the tournament against Manta, who stunned 1996 champ Richard Krajicek in the third round.

Rain delayed the start of play, wiped out most of the big fourth-round matches, and left Jim Courier eager to retreat as he stood two games from defeat against Britain's Tim Henman. Henman, seeking to avenge a loss to Courier in the Davis Cup, led 4-6, 7-5, 7-5, 4-3 when a downpour stopped play.

The rain couldn't save No. 9 Mary Pierce from the all-court attack of 16-year-old Jelena Dokic, the Australian who made a spectacular debut by knocking off No. 1 Martina Hingis.

Nets name Casey head coach

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — New Jersey Nets coach Don Casey is the complete opposite of his predecessor, John Calipari. And that suits his players just fine.

"I think he can make us play hard," point guard Stephon Marbury said at a press conference Monday introducing Casey as the Nets coach. "His personality allows you to go on the court and give it everything you have. You're not dealing with a coach that's screaming and yelling."

The Nets had a 3-17 record when Calipari, known for his temper, was fired in March. Casey, a veteran assistant with more of a laid-back approach, became the interim coach and led the team to a 13-17 record with most of the leading players on the injured list.

The Nets, impressed with the way he handled the team, gave him a reported $1.1 million multiyear contract last Friday. The deal would make Casey the second-lowest paid coach in the NBA. That fact, however, does not concern him.

"It's more money than I've ever made in my life," Casey said. The 62-year-old earned $55,000 in his first job as an assistant coach and $34,000 when he coached Temple University.

"If you don't have six (championship) rings, you don't have a commanding presence," Casey said, referring to Los Angeles Lakers coach Phil Jackson, who won six NBA titles with the Chicago Bulls.

■ NBA Roundup

Negotiations for Casey's contract officially began last Monday, although the season ended on May 5 and Jackson decided to coach the Lakers two weeks ago. Team president Michael Rowe said the Nets had to spend time flying members of Casey's staff back and forth for interviews and presenting the proposal to the Nets owners.

"Could it have been done any quicker? It could have been," Rowe said. He said the team reached an understanding with Casey last Wednesday, but delayed a news conference until Monday out of respect for the neighboring New York Knicks, who were battling in the NBA Finals until Friday night. "We're big Knicks fans," Rowe said.

Casey's wife, Dwynne, said while she and her husband waited, they returned to their California home to relax, then came back to New Jersey and passed the time with nightly dinners at their favorite restaurant in Hoboken.

"We understood totally looking at Jackson," Mrs. Casey said. "I think that once that was resolved ... I think it could have been done a little bit quicker.

"We kept telling ourselves they're new owners. They've never done this before," she said of an ownership group that includes businessmen Lewis Katz, Finn Wentworth and actor-philanthropist Bill Cosby.

The team's owners did not appear at the news conference, although Marbury, Keith Van Horn and Kendall Gill showed up. Casey took no offense.

Casey said next season — his first as a head coach since he briefly coached the Los Angeles Clippers in 1989 — depends largely on how well his leading players recover from the injuries that plagued them last season. Jayson Williams is walking gingerly on his broken leg and teammates Van Horn and Kerry Kittles were among half a dozen players who battled injuries all year.

76ers president to be released from hospital

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia 76ers president Pat Croce, injured in a motorcycle accident June 17, is scheduled to be released from the hospital Tuesday.

Croce plans to hold a brief news conference around 10 a.m. as he leaves the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, team spokesman Rob Wilson said.

Croce underwent several operations for multiple fractures of the left leg following a crash that cut short a planned cross country motorcycle ride.

Spurs expecting to stand pat

By Kelley Shannon
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — With an NBA title in hand and most of the team's core players under contract through next season, it should be a fairly quiet offseason for the San Antonio Spurs.

Jaren Jackson, Malik Rose and Will Perdue are exceptions. The three reserve players become free agents this summer after each found moments to shine during the Spurs' 15-2 playoff journey leading to San Antonio's first NBA title.

Perdue and Rose were among the several Spurs players who took turns guarding and slowing down Shaquille O'Neal when San Antonio swept the Lakers 4-0 in the Western Conference semifinals.

Jackson scored a playoff career-high 22 points in Game 3 against the Lakers and followed up with 20 points, including six 3-pointers, in Game 4 at Los Angeles. Against the New York Knicks in the NBA Finals, Jackson scored 17 points and sunk a key 3-pointer to put a stop to a Knicks' run in San Antonio's series-opening victory.

Since winning the title on Friday, players and coaches have spent most of their time celebrating and none of it talking publicly about individual contracts or personnel moves. During the championship series, Jackson said he would like to be back with the Spurs next season.

"I'm keeping the situation with a level head, not too overconfident," said Jackson, who has played with eight NBA teams. "I'm not going to count my chickens yet."

David Robinson has two years left on his six-year, $66 million deal. He could choose to opt out of it this summer but isn't expected to.

The Spurs also have said little about the NBA draft on Wednesday in which the team has the No. 29 overall pick.

Another personnel matter to be addressed in the offseason is the contract of coach and general manager Gregg Popovich. Spurs chairman Peter Holt is trying to negotiate an extension of Popovich's three-year deal, which ends after next season.

Perhaps the biggest contract question looming for San Antonio is a year away. That involves franchise player Tim Duncan.

Duncan has one more season left on his three-year rookie deal. He has said he would like to stay in San Antonio but has hinted the Spurs' arena uncertainty needs to be resolved before he'll decide.

If the Spurs don't get a new arena, the team may leave town and relocate in some other city with a better facility.

"We just have to get it done," Duncan said. "I think we will get it done. We've given them a good reason to keep us."

TENNIS: Dokic keeps up surprising roll

(From 1C)

Pierce has been open about her use of Creatine as a supplement to her weightlifting regimen. She's bigger and stronger than ever, but her extra bulk doesn't seem to have helped her on the court. And it hasn't tempted Dokic from trying to go into a muscle-building program of her own.

"No, that's not me," Dokic said. "I think you have to put those things aside. Mary is a big hitter, and so is (Lindsay) Davenport and Venus (Williams). If you look at (Martina) Hingis, she's been beating them. You sort of just try to outsmart them or outplay them."

Dokic won five straight games against Pierce to take the first set after trailing 1-4. Dokic gained control of the second set by breaking Pierce at 3-3, then closed the match with a backhand winner just seconds before showers returned.

Davenport and defending champion Jana Novotna advanced to a quarterfinal matchup with straight-set victories. Novotna, seeded No. 5, swept France's Nathalie Dechy 6-3, 7-5, while the No. 3 Davenport rallied from a slow start to down No. 13 Barbara Schett of Austria 7-6 (9-7), 6-1.

Both matches were interrupted for 2 hours, 40 minutes because of rain in the first set.

Davenport came back from 2-5 down in the first set. She saved three set points at 4-5 and three more in the tiebreak, then cruised through the second set.

"This is one of the times where the rain delay helped me immensely," Davenport said. "I was really nervous to go out there and play. I was down 5-3, and the rain delay came and I was able to relax a little bit. I could think about how I wanted to play, and I did great."

MAVS: Nelson has intriguing draft history

(From 1C)

owner Ross Perot Jr. in February 1997. So far, his two Dallas drafts have produced more trades (three) than starters (two).

Two years ago, Nelson bypassed Chris Anstey, the player he wanted, and took Kelvin Cato with the 15th pick because that's who Portland wanted. The Trail Blazers took Anstey three spots later and sent him and some money to Dallas.

Last year, Nelson again skipped the guy he really wanted, Dirk Nowitzki, and took Robert Traylor at No. 6. Milwaukee took Nowitzki three spots later and sent the German and No. 19 pick Pat Garrity to the Mavericks. Nelson then packaged Garrity, two benchwarmers and this year's top choice for Nash.

Nash and Nowitzki are starters, while Anstey has had to fight for playing time. Of Nelson's four second-round picks for Dallas, one was traded, one was hurt, one was waived and one, Bruno Sundov, played 11 minutes last year after attending a prep school.

During Nelson's previous GM stints in Milwaukee and Golden State, he found ways to improve his teams even when picking outside the top spots. From 1989-92, Nelson brought the Warriors four future All-Stars, including Tim Hardaway and Latrell Sprewell, without a pick higher than No. 11.

ROCKETS: Houston picking at 22nd

(From 1C)

Dickerson started all 50 regular-season games and finished his rookie season with a 10.9 average. Mobley took over at point guard and started 37 games.

The Rockets will be looking for versatility, a preference of coach Rudy Tomjanovich, Dawson said.

"A lot of guys are just half-court players, but we want the versatile players," Dawson said. "Rudy really likes guys to play two positions, like Cuttino could play one (point guard) and two (shooting guard)."

This draft is considered by many observers to be perhaps the most shallow since 1989, prompting several teams to trade away their first-round picks. The Rockets own the 22nd and 50th picks as well as the Phoenix Suns' 44th selection.

DUKE: Devils lose 3 underclassmen some speculate he is closer to 6-5 1/2. In fact, Brand was measured twice when he worked out for the Chicago Bulls.

(From 1C)

"Teams made a big deal about it," Brand said. "When it was my turn to get measured it was like, 'OK, it's Brand, shoes off, socks off, head straight' because there were so many rumors."

But Brand's height checked out and he has surprised some teams.

Charlotte Hornets coach Paul Silas, whose team picks third, has a drill in which players are fed the ball in a stationary position and dunk it repeatedly. He said most of his players can do about 10 straight dunks. Brand did 20.

"He has great physical size, long arms, great hands, a soft touch, quick feet and he can run," Drum said. "Without question, he was the best low-post guy in college basketball."

Avery, a 6-2 sophomore, joins Maryland's Steve Francis and UCLA's Baron Davis as the top point guards in the draft.

"There are questions to be answered like will he get his shot away or get stronger?" assistant director of NBA scouting Ryan Blake said.

Maggette, a 6-6 freshman, was Duke's sixth man. He may be the draft's biggest mystery — or reward.

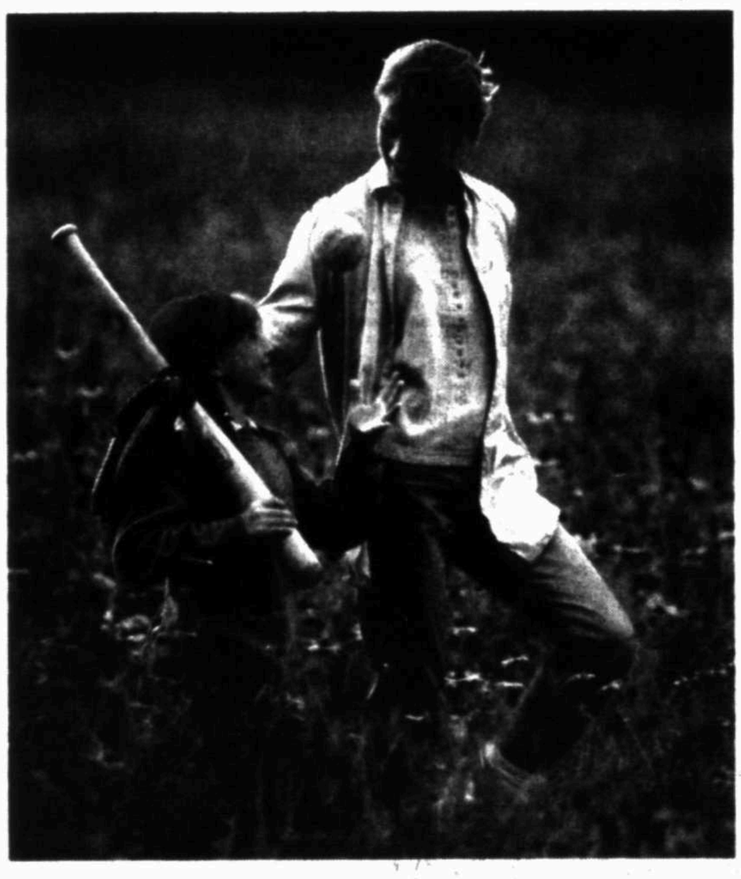

"I saw him play twice. I didn't notice him," said Marty Blake, the head of NBA scouting. "The guy looks athletic."

While Maggette already has a pro-type body, he averaged only 17 minutes a game for the Blue Devils. Krzyzewski thinks Langdon, his senior star, is the one most ready for the pros.

The 6-3 guard also has one big edge in a pro game desperate for scoring.

"He does the one thing that everybody in basketball all want to see more of — he shoots the ball," Drum said. "He is one of the best shooters in this draft, if not the best."

Morgan pitches Rangers past Angels, 9-1

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Morgan came within one out of his first shutout in six years, scattering seven hits to lead the Texas Rangers over the Anaheim Angels 9-1 Monday night.

Morgan (9-5), whose last shutout was a five-hitter for the Chicago Cubs against Colorado on July 15, 1993, allowed a two-out homer in the ninth to former Midland Angel Todd Greene. Morgan struck two and walked one in his first complete game since Sept. 26, 1997 for Cincinnati at Montreal.

Chuck Finley (4-8) gave up three homers as Texas stopped Anaheim's season-high four-game winning streak. The Rangers have won 10 of their last 11 decisions against Finley.

Juan Gonzalez hit a two-run homer in the first inning, Royce Clayton capped a five-run fourth with a three-run shot and Rafael Palmeiro gave the Rangers a 9-0 lead with a two-run homer that chased Finley with one out in the fifth.

Pitching on three days' rest for the first time since last Aug. 27 at New York, Finley surrendered three homers for the first time this season and was charged with all nine runs and seven hits. He was moved up a day in the rotation because of the arthritis in Ken Hill's pitching shoulder.

Gonzalez had three hits, including a single that started a five-run fourth. Finley loaded the bases with a pair of one-out walks, Lee Stevens hit a two-run single on an 0-2 pitch and Clayton followed with his third home run of the season.

Gonzalez's homer was his 22nd. Palmeiro's was his 20th and first in 15 games since June 13 against Colorado. Palmeiro's nine consecutive 20-homer seasons are the most by a left-handed hitter in club history, breaking the mark he shared with Pete O'Brien.

The nine runs and three homers allowed by Finley tied career highs. It was the first time an Angels pitcher gave up nine runs since July 22, 1997, when Dennis Springer did it at New York.

Red Sox 14, White Sox 1

BOSTON — Jose Offerman had the first grand slam and multihomer game of his career, driving in a career-high six runs to lead the Red Sox over the White Sox.

Offerman, who came into the game with one homer this season and 23 in 3,845 career at-bats, hit a solo homer off Mike Sirotka (6-8) in the fifth and added the slam off Bryan Ward in the seventh, going 4-for-6. Nomar Garciaparra went 4-for-5 as Boston got a season-high 21 hits and won for the fifth time in six games.

Bret Saberhagen (4-2) made his second straight scoreless start, allowing six hits in seven innings.

Blue Jays 3, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Tony Batista homered and Chris Carpenter (5-5) came off the disabled list to pitch five strong innings as Toronto stopped a three-game losing streak.

Carpenter (5-5), sidelined since June 2 with inflammation in his right elbow, allowed two runs and seven hits Billy Koch pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Dave Eiland (0-4) allowed all three runs and eight hits in seven innings. Tony Fernandez was 1-for-3, dropping his major league-leading average to .400.

Indians 6, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Charles Nagy (10-4) became the AL's second 10-game winner and Richie Sexson hit a two-run homer.

Nagy won for the seventh time in eight decisions, allowing and five hits in seven innings. Kansas City's only run came on Mike Sweeney's leadoff homer in the fourth.

Sexson connected off Jay Witasick (3-6) in the fifth and is hitting .329 with seven homers and 21 RBIs since breaking an 0-for-24 skid June 9.

Mets 10, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Robin Ventura hit three-run homers in consecutive at-bats and Al Leiter won his fifth straight start, leading the Mets over the Marlins.

Edgar Alfonzo added a double and two-run triple as the Mets won for the 16th time in 21 games. Florida has lost 11 of 13 overall and is 2-8 against New York this season.

Ventura homered off Brian Meadows (5-9) for a 3-2 lead in the fourth and made it 9-2 when he connected off Vic Darensbourg in the fifth. Leiter (7-5) allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 1/3 innings, striking out eight and walking three.

Braves 13, Expos 5

MONTREAL — Andruw Jones homered twice, including a three-run drive off Miguel Batista (6-5) in a five-run first. He also connected off Anthony Telford in the seventh.

It was Jones' first multihomer game of the season, the seventh of his career. Ryan Klesko went 3-for-4 with four RBIs, and the Braves had 16 hits off six pitchers.

Kevin Millwood (9-4) won his the third consecutive start, allowing five runs — two earned — and seven hits in five innings.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2

PITTSBURGH — Adrian Brown singled home the winning run in the 10th inning and Greg Hansell (1-0) pitched a perfect 10th to win for the first time since May 29, 1996, when he was with Minnesota.

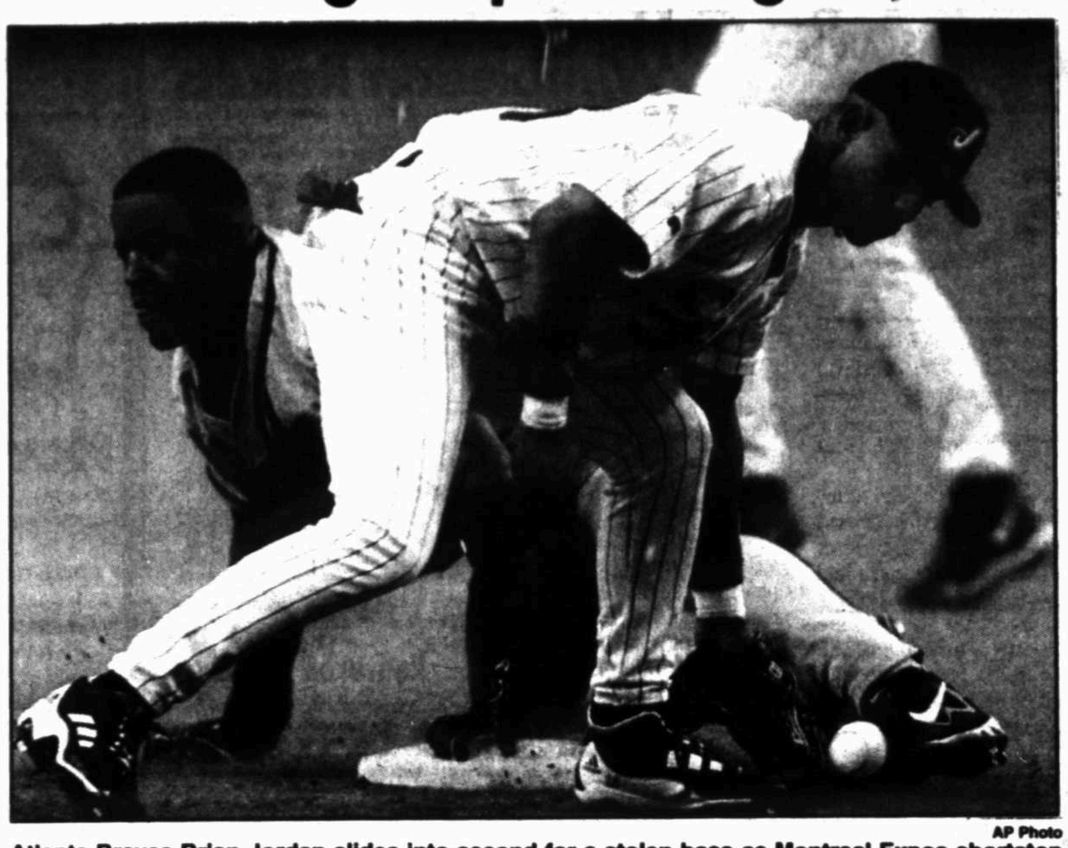

Kevin Young singled off Steve Montgomery (0-3) with one out in the 10th and Jason Kendall popped out. Warren Morris singled off Jim Poole and Brown grounded a 1-2 pitch up the middle, giving the Pirates their fifth win in six extra-inning games this season.

Padres 8, Rockies 7

SAN DIEGO — The once-ugly Padres are playing like champions these days.

The Padres beat the Rockiesto extend their winning streak to 10, the longest in the majors this year.

It wasn't easy, though, as Colorado closed a four-run deficit with two solo home runs by Dante Bichette and a two-run shot by Larry Walker.

Big bucks don't mean big results for Dodgers

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Davey Johnson was asked what it felt like to have the biggest payroll in the league and still be in last place in the NL West. The Dodgers' manager took a deep breath, then tried to look ahead.

"We need to win every series. We need to get our act together over here," he said. "There's a long way to go. We have time to right ourselves, but our pitching has got to lead us. I felt like we were a better pitching staff, and the starters have struggled at times."

With Sunday's 8-7 loss to the Giants, Los Angeles dropped into the cellar for the first time since April 24, 1996. Much more had been expected of a team that pays its players an average salary of $2.7 million.

The Dodgers, with a $79.2 million opening-day payroll, had been predicting championships since early in spring training. Now they're 34-39 and being ridiculed as among the biggest underachievers in baseball.

"It's been a tough year for us, we haven't been able to get a good string going," said center fielder Devon White, one of several free agents signed during the winter as the Dodgers revamped their lineup and pitching staff.

The roster includes three of the sport's 10 highest-paid players — Kevin Brown is third with earnings of $10.7 million this season, Gary Sheffield is fifth at $9.9 million and Raul Mondesi is tied for ninth at $9 million. None of those three is to blame for the Dodgers' struggle.

Brown, who got a $105 million contract from Los Angeles, is 9-4 with a league-best 2.89 ERA and 96 strikeouts in 112 innings. Mondesi is hitting .261 — well below his .292 career average — but has 19 homers and 50 RBIs. Sheffield is hitting .306 with 16 homers and 46 RBIs.

Yet the loss Sunday dropped the Dodgers a half-game behind the Padres, whose nine-game winning streak heading into Monday night's game at home against Colorado included a three-game sweep last week at Los Angeles. San Diego, with a $48 million payroll, plays host to the Dodgers on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The Dodgers point to this weekend's series at San Francisco, in which they won two of three games and had two big comebacks. Todd Hundley's three-run homer in the ninth won Saturday's game, and they rallied from a 7-2 deficit to make Sunday's game close.

Though they're in last place, the Dodgers are just six games back in the loss column and the first-place Arizona Diamondbacks and second-place Giants are struggling.

"A couple of days ago we were eight out in the loss column. We came up here and played about as well in a series as we have all year. That's the way we have to look at it," first baseman Eric Karros said. "We play the way we did this weekend for a while, good things will happen."

A lot of bad things have surrounded the Dodgers this season:

■ Despite such sluggers as Mondesi and Sheffield in the middle of the lineup, the Dodgers are hitting .263, third worst in the NL.

■ The pitching has been so disappointing that Charlie Hough was fired as pitching coach May 26. Starters Chan Ho Park (5.54 ERA), Darren Dreifort (5.67) and Carlos Perez (6.92) all have been ineffective. Park has given up four grand slams this season.

■ Hundley, who missed most of last season after surgery on his throwing elbow, has caught just seven of 65 base stealers and lost his starting job to Angel Pena.

■ Shortstop Mark Grudzielanek broke his throwing hand on June 1 when he punched a wall in Pittsburgh after grounding into a double play.

"I don't think of us as being in last. It means we're 7 1/2 games out of first place, that's all it means," reliever Jeff Shaw said. "I never thought we would be (in last place), but it has been a combination of a lot of things. We haven't hit or pitched very well on a consistent basis at times."

Shaw said the Dodgers can use the series against the Giants as a springboard. But Johnson, whose teams have finished first or second in each of his 10 full seasons as a manager, was concerned about Park's performance.

Park allowed two homers and six runs in 3 2/3 innings Sunday. He has lost his last three starts and is tied with teammate Ismael Valdes for second in the NL with 19 HRs allowed.

"We're in last place, 7 1/2 games out. We made some steps forward in this series but we also took some steps back with Chan Ho," Johnson said. "He's done it in the past. He just needs to do it again. We desperately need it."

U.S. World Cup team sports great depth

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

When U.S. coach Tony DiCicco looks down his bench, he sees enough talent to form another Women's World Cup team. In the end, that could prove a decisive edge.

As the Americans head into Thursday's quarterfinals matchup with Germany at Landover, Md., many of their key players will be rested. The reserves who have gotten a chance to play have looked sharp. And the inexperienced backups who were called upon in the first round won't be so green if they are needed in the knockout rounds.

"I think we are as good as anyone in the field," DiCicco said after Sunday's 3-0 victory over North Korea gave the U.S. team a 3-0 record in the opening round. "I think we're capable of beating anyone and of winning the tournament. But there are some very strong teams that feel the same way."

Those teams, most notably Norway and China, don't have the depth of the Americans. The Norwegians have been plagued by injuries in the last week, with captain Linda Medalen's bruised nose and face the most worrisome.

Against the Koreans, DiCicco rested starters Michelle Akers and Kate Sobrero for the entire game. He gave Tiffeny Milbrett and Julie Foudy the first half on the sideline, while Mia Hamm and Cindy Parlow took off the second half.

And while it was Milbrett and Foudy who sparked the second-half rally after an 0-0 first 45 minutes, backups Shannon MacMillan (a goal and two assists) and Tisha Venturini (two goals) finished off the scoring plays.

"We got into every practice fighting for starting roles," said MacMillan, who was a regular for the 1996 Olympic team that won gold. She had two game-winners in her three goals in the Atlanta Games and is a proven commodity.

"I am happy to be among these 20 women. It's an awesome team. I'm ready to contribute, whether it's starting or coming off the bench or not playing at all."

MacMillan played in all three first-round games. Venturini made her '99 World Cup debut against the Koreans and didn't do much in the first half.

But in the second, the eight-year veteran of the national team was sensational.

"We've achieved what we wanted in the first round, and now we have a chance to move closer to our goal," Venturini said. "As we proved in our last two games, whoever we play, if we play our game, we can win."

And whomever DiCicco puts on the field, it appears those players are capable of leading the United States to victory.

"This is the best coaching job in the world," he said with a smile. "We have a lot of weapons on the U.S. team.

"The way I look at it, we have an opportunity to do something that has never been done before, and that's what is driving this team."

He meant following an Olympics title with a world crown.

Rockies co-owner apologizes over last week's DUI incident

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Colorado Rockies co-owner Charlie Monfort apologized Monday for his arrest last week on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Police said Monfort's blood-alcohol level was .209 after he was stopped while driving in a residential area early last Wednesday. Colorado law says a blood-alcohol reading of .10 or more is illegal.

"Without trying to make any excuses for myself, I want to sincerely apologize for how this incident has affected my family, friends, business associates, and others who have had faith in me through the years," Monfort said in a statement. "I have in the past tried, and will in future endeavor, to be responsible in my personal behavior."

Police said Monfort, 39, also faces charges of driving a vehicle with excess alcohol, failure to signal a lane change and making an unsafe lane change.

Monfort, who lives in Greeley, and his brother Dick Monfort are two-thirds of the Rockies' ownership group.

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mixed against other currencies Monday as traders held back ahead of this week's meeting by the Fed's interest rate committee.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0351, down from $1.0428 late Friday. The dollar also was quoted at 121.21 Japanese yen, down from 121.43.

The Fed is expected to nudge interest rates higher during its two-day meeting this week, but some traders are holding back to see how much of a change the Fed makes.

The dollar also was quoted at 1.5450 Swiss francs, up from 1.5324, and 1.4683 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4662. The British pound slipped to $1.5823 from $1.5873.

Stocks up on interest rate hopes

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks shot higher Monday as investors grew more confident that the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates only slightly at its meeting this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 102.59 at 10,655.15.

Broader stock indicators also closed higher. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 16.04 to 1,331.35, and the Nasdaq composite index gained 49.79 to close at 2,602.44, boosted largely by software makers and a late recovery among Internet stocks.

Volume remained light, a sign that many traders were unwilling to make big commitments in advance of the Fed's Open Market Committee meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday. By the 4 p.m. close, volume on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange came to 641.14 million shares, up from 609.76 million on Friday.

The Fed is widely expected to increase short-term interest rates by a quarter percentage point to slow the economy and prevent inflation from accelerating. Analysts say that increase is already reflected in stock prices.

"The rate hike is almost history and now investors are thinking it's a great time to buy," said Alfred E. Goldman, director of market analysis at A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis.

Monday's rally was a "relief-type situation," said, John Lynch, director of investment strategy at IJO Wachovia in Charlotte, N.C. "A quarter-point increase is not something that will grind the economy to a halt."

Last week, the Dow lost 303 points, or 2.7 percent, amid fears that the Fed would raise interest rates by a larger amount.

Further illustrating the strength of the U.S. economy, the Commerce Department reported Monday that consumer spending rose 0.6 percent in May, outpacing personal income, which rose 0.4 percent. The continued rapid rise in spending, which boosts corporate profits, also increases fears about inflation.

Investors are already looking past the expected quarter-point interest rate hike to gauge whether the Fed will make a series of increases or just one, Lynch said. "I don't think a series of rate hikes is necessary, as the global economy still has a way to go till it hits recovery," he said.

A rally in the bond market also boosted stocks. The bellwether 30-year Treasury gained about 5/8 of a point in price, easing its yield to 6.10 percent from 6.15 late Friday.

The blue chip index was led higher Monday by the financial sector, which is most vulnerable to fluctuations in interest rates. J.P. Morgan, up 5 1/2 at 134 1/16 and American Express, up 2 13/16 at 125 1/4, were among the biggest Dow gainers.

Cyclical stocks, or economically sensitive companies, also rose, led by Dupont, up 1 3/8 at 67 11/16, and construction equipment maker Caterpillar, up 2 1/16 at 60 11/16.

Internet stocks and software makers led the Nasdaq. Yahoo! was the biggest gainer, adding 9 5/8 at 156 1/2. Microsoft added 1 13/16 at 86 3/4.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a 12-to-7 margin on the NYSE.

The NYSE composite index rose 5.55 to 628.89, and the American Stock Exchange composite index was up 2.08 at 774.10

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 5.50 to 448.61.

Overseas, Japan's Nikkei stock average rose 1.0 percent. Germany's DAX index was up 0.8 percent, Britain's FT-SE 100 was up 0.3 percent, and France's CAC-40 was up 1.1 percent.

Government ships salmon downstream, hoping they make it back on their own

The Associated Press

CASCADE LOCKS, Ore. — Gray clouds hug the Cascade Mountains along the Columbia River as a barge called the Chinook chugs into the Bonneville Dam lock with its cargo — 200,000 live salmon.

For more than two decades, the federal government has been shipping young fish downstream past eight federal dams, hoping the fish will swim back upstream on their own to spawn. So far the fish are losing the battle.

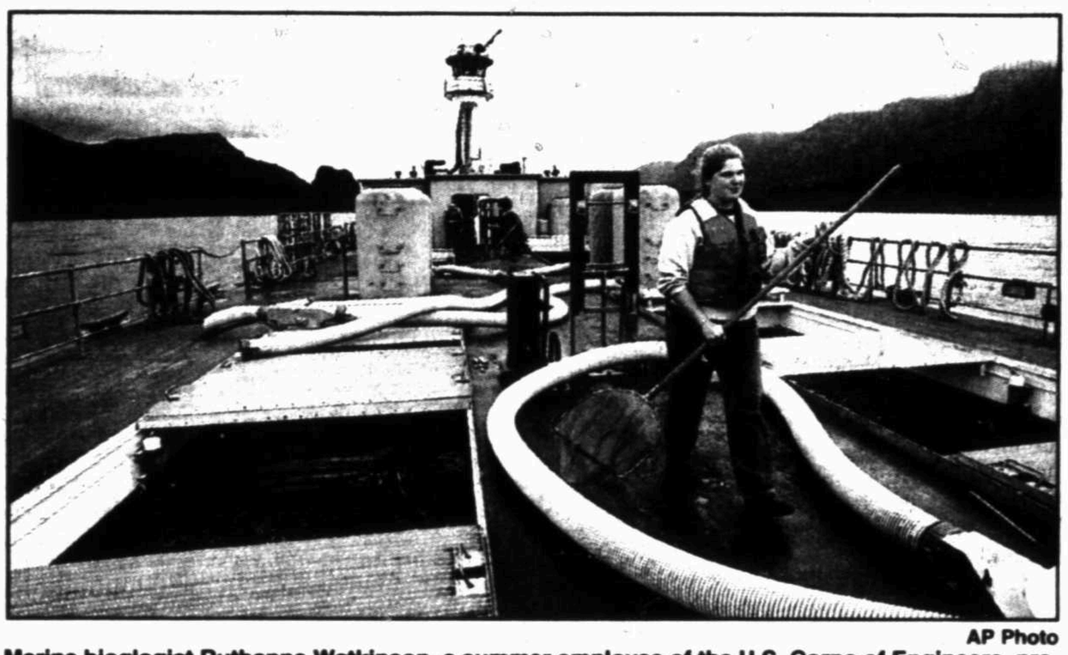

Only about 1 percent of the salmon on this barge were expected to make it back to spawn.

Fifteen types of salmon in the Columbia Basin have been put on the threatened or endangered species list since 1991.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' salmon barging program is either a vital crutch for the fish or a sure path to their greater doom, depending on one's perspective.

"Barging just doesn't work," said Justin Hayes of the environmental group American Rivers. "As long as they keep flushing money and fish into the barge system, they're going to fail."

But Bruce Lovelin of the Columbia River Alliance, an industry group, said barging has "kept the salmon on life support. ... We'd define it as the best that the corps has going right now."

Marine biologist Ruthanne Watkinson, a summer employee of the U.S. Corps of Engineers, prepares to release the juvenile salmon at the end of their journey a few miles below the Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River Friday, June 11. For more than two decades the federal government has been shipping salmon downstream, hoping the fish will swim upstream on their own.

The corps will spend about $3.4 million this year to ship more than 20 million salmon down the river.

The fish barging helps ensure the both the fish and the dams survive.

Barging program backers point to studies showing that two of every three adult salmon that survive the inland migration through the eight dams were barged fish.

But environmentalists cite another study showing that just a quarter of 1 percent of barged fish make it back upstream to spawn.

That means that of the 20 million salmon the corps will ship downstream this year, only 50,000 will return to spawn.

"If we keep going at this rate, the fish will go extinct," said Jim Baker of the Sierra Club.

Congress will ultimately decide. In the near term, lawmakers show no desire to cut back or cancel the barging program.

Legislation brings long-distance rates down for Texans

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Long distance customers should begin seeing lower long distance bills later this year, the result of legislation passed last month by the Texas Legislature.

Saralee Tiede, spokeswoman for the Texas Public Utility Commission, said that among the provisions of the omnibus telecommunications bill, SB 560, was a requirement that long distance carriers pass reductions in access charges to their customers.

Carriers are also required to reduce their access charges — the cost to them of accessing the local phone carrier's system — by 1 cent effective September 1 and an additional 2 cents July 1, 2000.

Midland, she said, benefits from a provision that requires phone companies "to charge comparable rates in rural areas. The legislators said that rural areas have to have such services as high speed digital lines at the same prices as are available in urban areas. The companies have to provide, within 15 months, services to rural areas that are reasonably comparable and at prices comparable to urban areas. This addresses what's called the 'Digital Divide.'"

Another provision, she said, was the extension of the cap on business and residential rates to September 2005.

Janee Briesemeister, senior policy analyst with Consumers Union, said consumers will benefit from a provision that prohibits phone companies from disconnecting local phone service for non-payment of long distance charges.

"We've said that if the consumer is paying enough to cover local service, he should be able to keep that," she said. "You can cut off his long distance or report him to the collection agencies. This is good for lower income customers who otherwise would have no choice but to go to high cost service providers."

The legislation also standardizes prepaid calling cards and offers consumer protection against slamming and cramming by giving the PUC authority to levy penalties on such activities, she said.

But on balance, she said, "this will hurt competition in local service and raise rates."

Kelly Curbow, a spokesman for Southwestern Bell, countered that the provisions requiring a reduction in access charges "will reduce our access fees by $300 million a year. That's $300 million out of our revenue stream."

What's bad about the legislation, she said, is "Southwestern Bell can raise their rates on a lot of their most popular services, like Caller ID, without warning. Also, the bill lowered access charges but there's no guarantee the companies will pass them on. We're much more likely to see higher local service bills, which especially hurts low and moderate income customers."

Curbow said that Southwestern Bell will have more freedom to package and price its services and introduce new services more rapidly.

With pricing and package flexibility, he said, "Our competitors have been able to bundle services and charge prices according to consumer demand, but we've been limited in our ability. This levels the playing field."

The customers favored by the legislation, Ms. Briesemaster said, are business customers and residential customers who spend $100 or $200 on Internet, wireless, long distance and local services, customers targeted by Southwestern Bell or AT&T, who want to offer them bundled services on a single bill.

"Say a customer spends $200, Southwestern Bell can go to them and say 'We'll give you those services for $150.' That's a $50 savings. Our objection is not that someone who spends $200 is saving $50, it's that it's not worth the trade-off. My job, and I think the legislature's job, should have been to protect those at the bottom for whom a $1 or $2 increase makes a big difference."

A good example, Ms. Briesemeister said, of how those phone customers on the economic bottom rung suffer is the implementation of a $3 minimum usage fee recently imposed by AT&T and other long distance carriers like MCIWorldcom.

"This is an extension of what we started last summer," when new customers signed up with the company, said Kerry Hibbs, public relations manager for AT&T's southwest region.

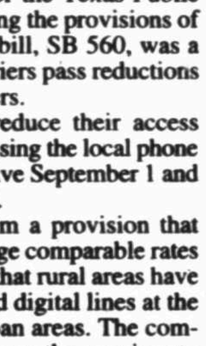

He noted that 85 percent of the company's customers make more than $3 in long distance calls each month, and that any long distance charges will be included in the $3 charge.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Borrowing against home to invest in stocks a bad idea

By Eric Tyson

Q: My husband and I are refinancing our home and will probably get $10,000 cash out at closing. We are planning to build a new home within the next 18 to 24 months and want to invest the $10,000 in something that would yield a high rate of return. Our intention is to use the original investment plus all earnings as a down payment on our new home. What do you advise?

Tyson

A: I don't think you should pursue the strategy you have in mind. Why go through the hassle and cost of refinancing to borrow money to invest it for two years or less?

As mortgage rates are around 7.5 percent (pre-tax), at a minimum, you would need to find an investment that returns you more than 7.5 percent (pre-tax) per year to come out ahead if you borrow mortgage money to invest.

With such a short time frame, you should really avoid more volatile but higher potential return investments like stocks. Otherwise, when you sell 18 to 24 months hence, you might find you have a lot less than $10,000 as a down payment on your new home. Lower risk investments such as high-quality bonds won't provide you with a return higher than the interest rate on the mortgage.

Of course, you might pick higher risk investments that do great over the next two years, and you might have far more than $10,000 to put toward your down payment. If you had invested in stocks two years ago, you'd probably be happy today that you did. However, there have been plenty of other two-year periods where that would not have been the case. In fact, stocks have underperformed money market funds in about one-third of every two-year period in modern U.S. market history.

If I were you, I would leave the extra equity in your current home and then arrange to tap it for your new home's down payment shortly before you need it. In the meantime, you might begin speaking with lenders to see if there are any reasons you might not qualify for the loan you have in mind.

Q: Thank you for your recent article on discount brokers. I'm in one of those investment firms that's "business as usual" with high commissions. Can I transfer my investments directly to a discount broker, or will I need to sell everything in my present account and then transfer the money to the discount broker?

A: Generally, you can transfer your investment holdings to a discount broker. One exception is if you invested in proprietary investments at your current broker. For example, if your current broker, who we'll call Fleecem and Cheatem, has a mutual fund called the Fleecem and Cheatem High Fee Mutual Fund, a discount broker may not be willing or able to hold such a fund.

Otherwise, if you hold various stocks, bonds and widely available mutual funds, you should be able to transfer those to a discount broker. Once you've identified the discount broker you desire to do business with, contact it and obtain a new-account application as well as transfer forms for the type of account you hold. After you send these forms into the discount broker, it should be able to handle the transfer on your behalf.

If, for whatever reason, you desire to unload some of your current holdings, it still probably makes sense for you to transfer them first to the discount broker, which then should be able to sell them for a lower commission.

Government may aid Canada's NHL teams

By David Crary
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO — With another team threatening to move to the United States, the federal government on Monday said it is ready to reverse past policy and provide financial help to protect Canada's six National Hockey League franchises.

"The federal government is prepared to be part of a solution, but not the only part of the solution," said Industry Minister John Manley after an unprecedented one-day "hockey summit" devoted to the financial problems of the Canadian franchises.

He said a new round of talks would be held next month to pursue specific financial remedies.

Attending the meeting were federal, provincial and local officials; executives of the six teams; the head of the NHL players' association, and NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman, who says he wants the six teams to stay in Canada.

According to the NHL, the six teams collectively lost more than $100 million from 1996 through 1998. Their problems include tax burdens that are higher than the league's U.S.-based franchises, plus having to pay player salaries in U.S. dollars even though their revenues are derived from weaker Canadian dollars.

Teams based in Quebec City and Winnipeg moved to the United States in recent years, and the Ottawa Senators — one of the league's top teams last season — say they will move after next season if they get no government help with their tax burden. Senators owner Rob Bryden, along with his fellow owners, emerged from Monday's meeting with newfound optimism.

"I was very encouraged," Bryden said. "The meeting was more positive than I would have expected."

The Canadian teams are not lobbying for reductions in corporate or individual income taxes, but they do hope for breaks on local taxes.
