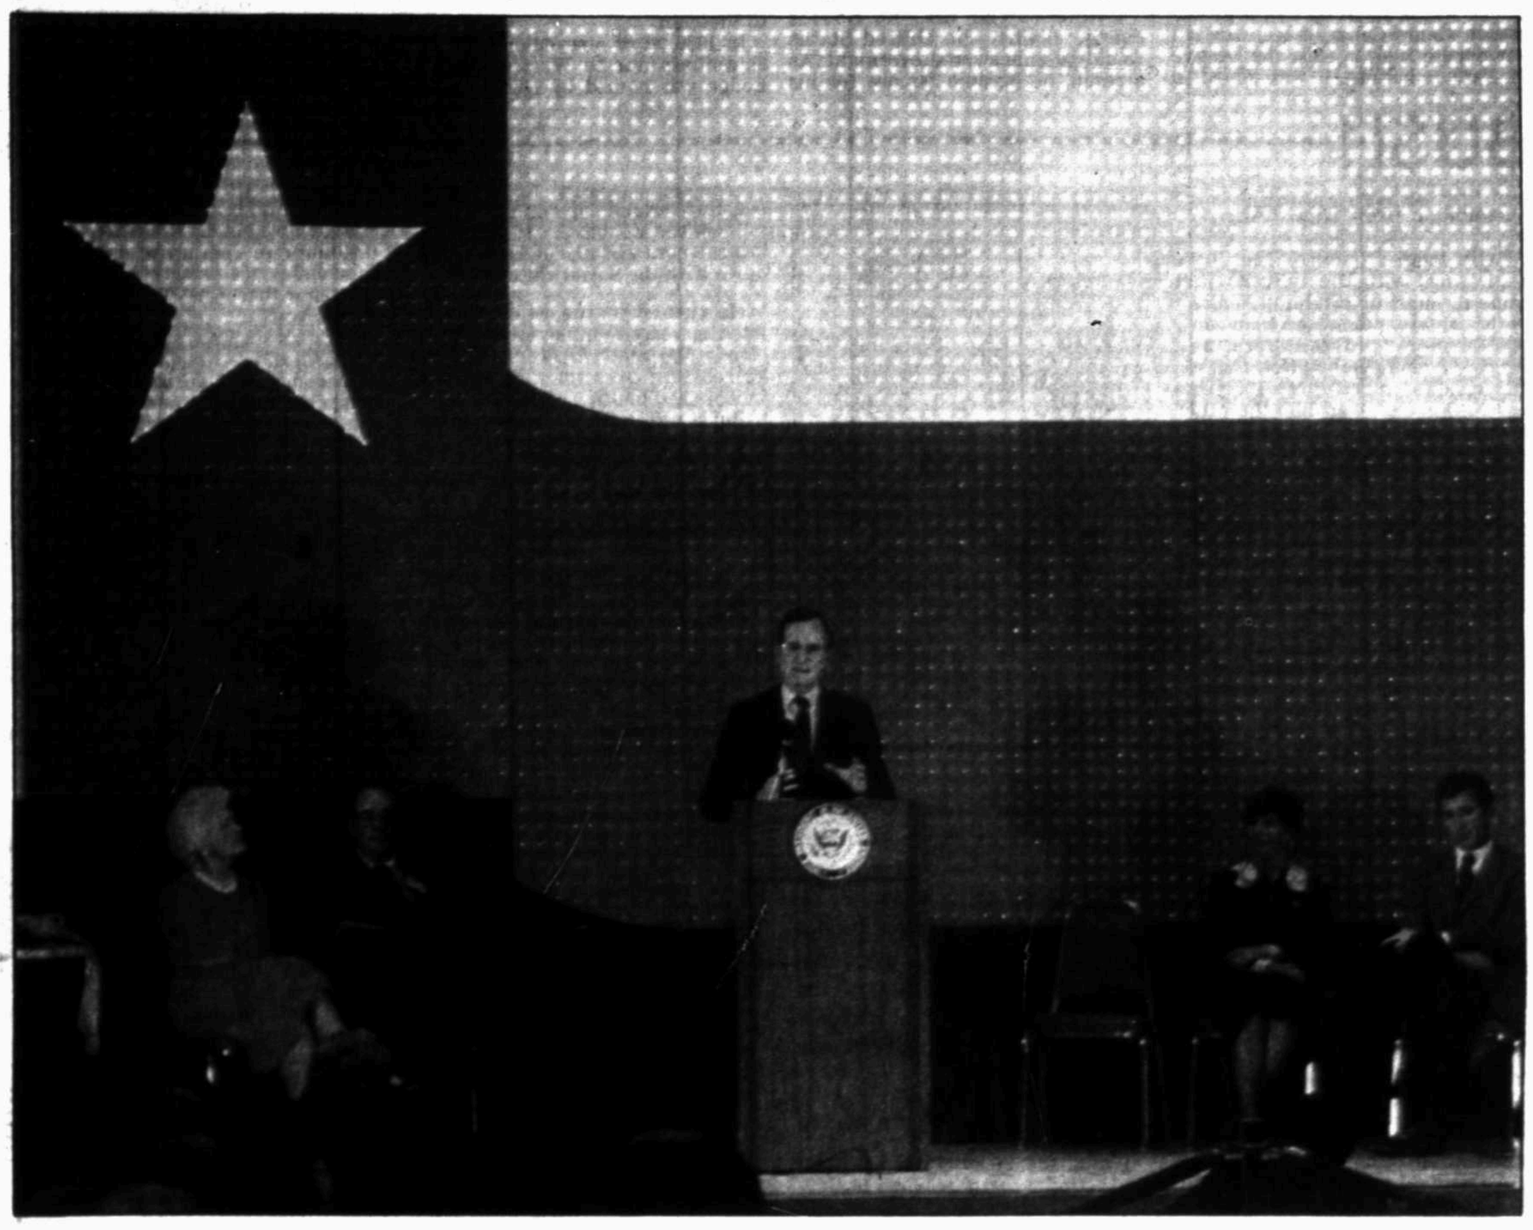
Bush comes home to kick off Centennial



Cody Bell/Reporter Telegram

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

His address changes in Midland told the story: from 405 E. Maple to 1410 W. Ohio to 2703 Sentinel, George H.W. Bush pursued his dream to become a successful businessman and then a public servant.

He became the epitome of Midland's beginnings and its spirit to build, to thrive, to succeed. Once a successful oilman, and now the country's vice president, he came home Wednesday night to kick off Midland's 100 year celebration.

Before a standing room only crowd of about 2,500 persons packed into Midland Center, Bush's talk came on the eve of the day 100 years ago when Midland was carved out of Tom Green County.

The remembrances of Bush flashed through the events leading up to his appearance: from the strains of "On the Road Again," which was the theme song of the 1980 presidential campaign, to the showing of the film "Midland: The First 100 Years," which talked of the 1950s boom when Bush was a local citizen, the vice president's ascension in the ranks could be seen in comparison to the city's rise on the flat plains to become known as "The Tall City."

HE RECALLED his days in Midland and promised to keep the talk "unpolitical," but he diverted from the prepared text for about five minutes to focus on upcoming arms talks with the Soviet Union and the need to keep the MX missile in the budget as a leverage with the Russians.

Although he arrived in Midland 64 years after the town was born, Bush was typical of the early-day settlers. Like other entrepreneurs, such as John Scharbauer who came from Schenectady, N.Y., before him, Bush arrived from the New England area to start his business life. The Centennial film described Midland as a town where the temperature ranges from minus 11 to 109 degrees, and where people had to dig down deep for their livelihood, whether it was water for farming and cattle or oil.

Bush — with 2-year-old son George and wife Barbara — came during an oil boom, first to Odessa in 1948 and then to Midland the following year. Staying here 10 years, he and Barbara produced three more children: Jeb, Neil and Marvin.

During that decade, Midland's population tripled from 21,000 to 63,000 and the Permian Basin was the most active drilling area in the world, producing almost as much as Venezuela — known then as the largest producing country in the world. Midland was a world of unlimited opportunity suited to the tastes of entrepreneurs.

BUSH WAS introduced by a man who became a good ally in business and, later, political life — attorney Martin Allday. "He coached Little League and headed United Way and helped start the YMCA," the attorney said. Mrs. Bush, meanwhile, stayed busy with the Junior Welfare League.

Another friend from those early days, C. Fred Chambers, recalled for Allday a conversation he had with Bush during one of those friendly afternoon cookouts.

"They were talking about what they wanted to do with their lives. C. Fred said he wanted to become a successful oilman, and he did. And the vice president said he wanted to devote his life to public service."

Bush appeals for support of policies

From Staff Reports

Vice President George Bush, saying "I cannot see this many people withoug saying a few words about our programs," Wednesday night made a strong appeal for support of the Reagan administration's domestic and foreign policies. His comments came during an appreciation dinner at the Midland Hilton attended by about 400 Midland Centennial workers, volunteers and invited guests.

"We're not anti-government, we're pro-private sector," Bush said, adding "and despite all the talk of budget cuts, spending for those who really need help is there." Government is taking too much of people's incomes and potential savings and not being efficient in what it is doing with the money, he said.

On the administration's support of the Nicaraguan rebels, Bush said "The Nicaraguan Sandinistas betrayed their own revolution and are moving toward depotism. The rebels are fighting for freedom — freedom of the press, of the church, of the right to come and go." In Nicaragua, he said, "We are supporting a truly democratic revolution against a Marxist-Leninist state, right here in our own hemisphere."

On a personal note, Mrs. Bush, who spoke first, said "We're always looking for an excuse to come back to Midland and relive some of our happiest days."

Centennial Rally 'symphonic' production

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Standing patiently in the cold wind, more than 2,000 people made their way through the magnetometers to see the vice president — a man who once held barbecues for friends and neighbors at his Midland residence.

Although the celebration of Midland's 100th birthday was vividly displayed with a colorful array of flags, from the Centennial banner and electronically lighted Texas flag constructed of wood in the front of the convention center to the wall-sized American flag at the rear of the room — the real attraction was the presence of the second most important couple in the United States — Vice President and Mrs. George Bush.

The Centennial Rally, held at Midland Center Wednesday evening, was a symphonic production. Like an orchestra slowly tuning up, smatterings of people sauntered into the room, kept at a leisurely pace by the Secret Service's thorough security checks at the entrance.

Politely listening to musical entertainment and several speeches and proclamations by officials and enthusiastically applauding the premiere of "Midland: The First 100 Years," a Centennial film, the crowd of 2,500 persons slowly warmed up to the evening's climactic coda.

Although half the seats were still empty, the evening's schedule got off promptly at 5:15 p.m. with country and western tunes from the Roadrunner Band of Midland College, fiddlers Darrel Bowen and Bart Trotter and the Symphony Singers presenting the "Centennial Song" — new words put to "My Favorite Things."

Disparity exists between January, February jobless figures

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

If you are a businessman in the Midland-Odessa area who relies on Texas Employment Commission statistical reports for planning and executing business expansion, you may find yourself with excess capacity or in an increasingly competitive situation.

Jan. 22, when TEC reported employment-unemployment figures for December 1984, the combined Midland-Odessa area labor force totalled 157,600.

Feb. 21, TEC released January 1985 employment statistics. This report contained revised numbers for December, November and January of 1984.

The February revised Midland-Odessa figures showed a total combined civilian labor force of only 137,100.

Somehow, between Dec. 31, 1984 and Jan. 31, 1985, the Midland-Odessa labor force appears — at least on paper — to have lost 20,500 people.

But, according to the February revised TEC figures, the Midland-Odessa area labor force — from Dec. 31 to Jan. 31 — shrunk by only 1,100 persons, 1,000 in Midland and 100 in Odessa.

According to Midland TEC labor market analyst Paul Adams, the disparity between the initial December 1984 figures, and the revised figures for January 1985 released Feb. 21, is due to a "seasonal adjustment" made by TEC officials in Austin. He admitted, though that the size of the adjustment downward (by 9,600 in Midland and 10,900 in Odessa) surprised him.

There are conflicting opinions as to what the disparity means and what caused it, which no one who would, or could, comment on it was able to explain. Midland Chamber of Commerce executive vice president Grant Billingsley noted the total labor force figure had "dropped by about 10,000," but feels there will be no local impact if there are comparable decreases throughout the state. Billingsley said, however, he had not seen TEC figures for the whole state.

Jim Williams and David Thayer, co-owners of Odessa-based Texas Business Forecasts and contributing editors to the Permian Basin Energy Forecast quarterly, believe the downward revision of the Midland-Odessa labor force figures may significantly impact on the area's economy.

Following TEC release of the revised statistics, Thayer said, "Our own econometric model has been consistently coming up lower than the (Austin) TEC's and we couldn't figure 'why.' The revised figures more closely parallel the figures he and Williams developed, he said.

Williams said he doesn't question the local TEC unemployment rate numbers, which continue to be lower than statewide averages. "But, in terms of measuring the economy, distorted estimates of population (based on employment figures and other factors) can affect businesses in the retail area that plan expansion based on population and employment estimates that indicate an increasing economy, but which is basically flat," he said.

What this will mean for 1985, as Williams sees it, "is people in the retail trade sector of the economy may face extremely strong competition because there may be more retail establishments than can be supported by the existing labor force."

Until the area acquires a more diversified economic base, Williams believes employment can be expected to continue to reflect fluctuations in international crude oil prices, which are now as weak as they've been in about five years.

Senate OKs 'comprehensive' water package

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — A water package described as a "difficult" and "delicate" balance among conflicting interests has cleared the Senate, which reversed itself on a key environmental vote that could cause problems in the House.

Legislators have predicted from the beginning that a far-reaching statewide water effort could only be resolved in a conference committee dedicated to a compromise.

The Senate on Wednesday approved two proposals described by Sen. John Montford as "probably the most comprehensive water program that has been attempted in virtually any state in the United States."

A proposed constitutional amendment that would authorize the sale of $1.2 billion in bonds was approved 28-1, and the Senate voted 29-1 for Montford's bill to carry out a statewide water program.

Bond proceeds would be used for water development, water quality and flood control. The Senate pvoposal includes a $5 million pilot program for irrigation conservation that could be expanded into a $200 million loan program for farmers.

THE PROPOSED constitutional amendment and bill both go back to the House, which approved an $800 million addition to the Texas Water Development Fund, plus a $250 million bond guarantee program. The House bill was sponsored by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland. The Senate plan is expected to be rejected by the House, which will send the measure to a conference committee for a compromise.

Montford, D-Lubbock, noted that the Senate proposal omitted the bond guarantee. He contended that senators are not "that far away from a compromise" with House members.

"I don't think we're going into conference with any endeavor to kill the bill," said Montford, referring to a similar water plan which sunk in a 1983 conference committee, partly due to arguments over bay and estuary protection. "There's a lot of room for give and take — I'm optimistic."

If the Legislature approves the proposed constitutional amendment, it would be submitted to the voters at a statewide election in November.

Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, cast the lone "no" vote against both measures. He said, "I've got a bunch of folks in my district not interested in regulating ground water — rice farmers."

Public servant Henry Cabot Lodge dies at age 82

BEVERLY, Mass. (AP) — Henry Cabot Lodge, whose half-century in public life included service as ambassador to South Vietnam, a Cold War post at the United Nations and three terms in the U.S. Senate, died after a lengthy illness. He was 82.

Lodge, a Republican vice presidential candidate in 1960, died "very peacefully" while asleep at his home on Wednesday after suffering from congestive heart failure, said his son, George.

Lodge's role in South Vietnam stretched from 1963, when he became ambassador just before the overthrow of the Diem regime, to 1969, when he represented the United States at the Paris peace talks. In the United Nations, he was known for his biting responses to Soviet charges. He also was presidental envoy to the Vatican under Richard Nixon.

In Washington, the White House released a statement calling Lodge "a very distinguished American."

"The president regrets his loss and extends his personal sympathy to his family," the statement said.

"Henry Cabot Lodge was one of the greatest statesmen from one of the greatest political families in the history of the commonwealth," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., whose late brother, John, twice bested Lodge at the polls.

"He is also remembered by all of us in the Kennedy family for the warmth and friendship that endured despite our political rivalry," Kennedy said.

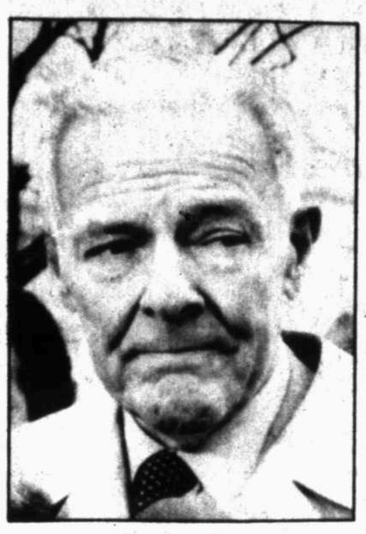
Nixon, who chose Lodge as his running mate in the 1960 race against John Kennedy, called him "a diplomat-statesman of the first rank."

"An indication of his outstanding abilities is that both Democratic and Republican presidents called upon him for top diplomatic assignments," Nixon said through a spokesman, John Taylor. "I would rate his service at the United Nations from 1953 to 1960 as one of the most outstanding diplomatic achievements of the post-World War II era."

"He was beautiful and intelligent and he was concerned about everyone. He was a wonderful world leader," said House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, a Massachusetts Democrat.

Lodge changed the image of his celebrated family from isolationist to internationalist, and was regarded as a model Eastern liberal Republican.

Lodge was born July 5, 1902, in Nahant, to a family with two of Boston society's most famous names — Cabot and Lodge — and a history of public service that included six U.S. senators, a secretary of state, a secretary of the Navy and a governor of Massachusetts.



Henry Cabot Lodge

His father, a poet, died when Lodge was only 7, and the young Lodge was brought up by his grandfather, Henry Cabot Lodge, who led the Senate fight against the League of Nations because it was joined to the Versailles Treaty.

Young Lodge graduated cum laude from Harvard in three years. In 1936, he challenged Democratic Gov. James M. Curley for the Senate. Curley derided his opponent as "Little Boy Blue," but the 6-foot-2, impeccably dressed Lodge spent 13 months touring the state and won.

He opposed U.S. entry into World War II, but as a captain in the Army Reserve he went on active duty in August 1941. He won re-election, but resigned to return to the war after President Franklin Roosevelt ruled that congressmen could not serve simultaneously in the armed services.

Stationed in Europe, Lodge returned home with six battle stars, a Bronze Star and the French Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre.

He won another Senate term in 1946, supporting the United Nations.

In 1952, while Lodge promoted the presidential candidacy of former General Dwight Eisenhower, he neglected his own Senate seat and narrowly lost to John Kennedy.

Eisenhower appointed Lodge U.N. ambassador, a post he held for a U.S. record of seven years, eight months.

Lodge vowed that no Soviet charge against the United States would go unanswered overnight. As a result, he became famous for his Cold War ripostes and sometimes undiplomatic language, such as "lie" and "hornswoggle."

In 1960 another veteran anti-communist, Richard M. Nixon, tapped him to be his presidential running mate. That battle again went to Kennedy.

Kennedy selected Lodge in 1963 as his ambassador to South Vietnam when the United States, displeased with the repressive regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem regime, cut its economic aid.

Three months after Lodge's arrival, Diem and his brother were killed in a coup. Lodge contended that he and the Kennedy administration did not work for Diem's overthrow, although such a role was described in the Pentagon Papers.

Lodge was in Vietnam when supporters placed his name in nomination for the Republican presidential nod. He won the New Hampshire primary on a write-in vote, beating the eventual party choice, Barry Goldwater.

Lodge returned to the United States in June 1964 and toured Europe and the Pacific as President Lyndon Johnson's personal envoy. In July 1965, Johnson sent him back to Vietnam.

In 1969, after a seven-month stint as ambassador to West Germany, Lodge was named by Nixon to the Paris peace talks, succeeding Averell Harriman. Lodge resigned after 10 months; the talks were deadlocked.

Of a peace effort in 1966, Lodge later said the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam was being "conducted on a largely military basis without enough regard for its political and diplomatic implications."

He wrote of the Vietnam War, "I thought from the beginning that an exclusively military solution to the Vietnam problem was impossible," and that "I eventually reached the conclusion that we should withdraw our troops from Vietnam as fast as this could be done in an orderly way and try to negotiate a settlement."

His retirement to Massachusetts lasted until June 1970, when Nixon appointed him the presidential envoy to the Vatican. He stayed in that post until 1977, writing two books, "The Storm Has Many Eyes" in 1973 and "As It Was" in 1976.

He settled in Beverly, the hometown of his wife, the former Emily Sears, whom he married in 1926. They had two sons, George Cabot and Henry Sears.

He was a brigadier general in the Army Reserve.

George Lodge said the family had made no funeral arrangements yet, but said they would be private.

BUSH

Bush looked back to the city's beginnings with the railroad that came through, determining Midland as the midway point. And then came the farmers and ranchers, and another friend. "Bobby Holt told me his granddad moved here 100 years ago to this day" and like the other farmers and ranchers, he battled wind and dust and rain.

Then came the geologists and engineers and entrepreneurs "who overcame similar challenges and built Midland into a major oil center. All of them brought the pioneer spirit to Texas, leaving it to us as their legacy."

THE PEOPLE WHO came and settled Midland were sustained by the strength of their principles...their strong family values, stronger faith and a determination to build better lives for themselves and their neighbors, he said.

Just as the film recounted each of the city's four major booms and busts, Bush looked back on those ups and downs to affirm his belief the economy here will come back strong. The recovery of the domestic oil industry "is important to the health of our local and national economies. But more than that, a domestic oil industry is essential to our national security."

Turning to defense and arms negotiations, Bush said that "peace depends on strength" and called for a treaty to ban all chemical weapons from the face of this earth. And while Congress is battling over whether to build the MX missile, Bush said he can understand the philosophy of stopping arms buildup where it now stands.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

The Secret Service knows no boundaries when it wants a telephone installed, even if it means in the middle of a runway or an open field. Two Secret Service men check with local law enforcement agencies and the control tower before Air Force II lands at Midland Regional Airport.

But in the negotiations with the Soviet Union that start soon in Geneva, Switzerland, "it won't be fair to pull out the MX missile, to make unilateral concessions before we sit down with the Soviet Union."

He turned to the economy and cited increased employment, higher Gross National Product, and an increase in investments, personal income and housing starts.

But it was those West Texas beginnings for him that filled his speech.

"When we got off the plane, it was a wonderful feeling of returning home," the vice president said. "You can sense that West Texas spirit all around you."

His address now reads Washington, D.C., and as vice president when Bush comes "home" to Midland, he brings the rest of the country with him.

POLICIES

In introducing the vice president, Midland attorney Martin Allday, a longtime personal friend, commented on the Bushes' loyalty and said "loyalty is the reason they came back to Midland for this event."

Bush, recalling "the happy days of raising a family in Midland" and working with Little League, helping develop Midland Community Theatre and establish the YMCA, said the city then was "moving and building" and it was tempting then to think "everything (that could happen) had happened."

"But that's certainly not the case. I'm convinced," he said, "that what has happened in recent years and is happening in Midland now is just the beginning of what this area will attempt to do and will do in the future."

Concluding the evening were a number of presentations to Vice President and Mrs. Bush including the first set of a limited edition of gold, silver and bronze Midland Centennial coins, presented by Jim Blakemore, Midland Jaycees; the first copy of a signed, limited edition of the official centennial poster, presented by Charles Grimes, chairman of the board, Texas American Bank; and a signed and framed 1836 map of Texas by John Davis of Midland, presented by Lee Storey, Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

Other items included copies of "Land of the High Sky," a book commissioned by First National Bank of Midland in 1959 and signed by all Midland Centennial commissioners as well as surviving 1959 FNB directors, a number of centennial commemorative items and bottles of wine produced from a vineyard near Greenwood in Midland County.

Speakers and presenters during the evening included Linda Cowden Isbell and Chris Scharbauer, co-chairmen of the Midland Centennial Commission.

RALLY

An invocation delivered by Dr. Charles E. Lutrick of the First United Methodist Church, a presentation of the colors by Boy Scout Troop 80 and a welcome by Centennial commissioner Joan Baskin followed.

Mrs. Baskin paid tribute to early Midland families who settled before the discovery of oil.

"They were a special breed of folks," she said. "We feel that those kind of special folks are what has made Midland."

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, further honored the city's birthday by presenting the Centennial Bill, recently passed by the state legislature.

"This bill is to congratulate the citizens of Midland County from the whole state," said Craddick.

Midland County Commissioner C. Wallace Craig and Mayor G. Thane Akins also presented proclamations honoring the celebration.

The premiere of the Centennial film, a 20-minute narrated documentary of Midland's history, including a short section on the Bush family's days in Midland, was well-received by the crowd, some of whom remembered Midland in its smaller days.

"I was very impressed with the film," said Virginia Gilbert. I have lived here since 1938 and I remember when Midland looked like some of those pictures in the film."

The reminiscent tone of the room began to change with the sounds of the Lee High Band and a fanfare by a brass quartet from Midland High School announcing the arrival of the Bushes.

With the introduction of the couple by Centennial commissioner Martin Allday, an old friend of the Bushes, the focus of the crowd shifted from nostalgic recollection to a respectful honoring of the vice president — a hometown boy made good.

"Midland ought to be proud that Bush still takes an interest," said one guest.

Workers strike Pan Am airline

NEW YORK (AP) — Picket lines went up from Miami to Honolulu today as transport union workers struck Pan American World Airways, virtually shutting down the financially troubled carrier's domestic service and severely curtailing its overseas flights.

"I think it is going to be a long strike," said Transport Workers Union airline division director John Kerrigan, who announced the strike of 5,753 mechanics, baggage handlers, flight dispatchers and food service workers at 12:35 p.m. EST.

Picket lines immediately went up at airports in Miami, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Honolulu. Kerrigan said Pan Am pilots — who settled their contract with the airline Tuesday — have promised to honor TWU picket lines, and other unions have advised their members to stay off the job.

"The picket lines have already formed," said Matt Popejoy from a TWU strike hotline phone at Miami International Airport. "We have over a hundred out already tonight, and they'll be picketing all night until this thing is over."

Pan Am spokesman James A. Arey said the airline will originate 14 flights from airports in the United States today: two from San Francisco, three from Miami, eight from New York and one from Los Angeles.

The only flight with both departure and arrival in the U.S. is a New York to Los Angeles trip. Pan Am usually runs 400 flights per day in the U.S.

Forty night shift workers set up picket lines at Pan Am ticket counters and at other locations at Honolulu International Airport, said Ken Olaso, vice chairman of TWU's Hawaii unit.

"The picket lines are being set up right now, we don't know if they will be honored," Olaso said. "That's the biggest question right now."

Pan Am made fresh contract offers to mechanics Wednesday night, but Kerrigan said they were rejected.

The last Pan Am flight out of the U.S. overnight, from Los Angeles to Sydney, Australia, left on schedule at 12:45 a.m. EST, according to Ann Whyte, a Pan Am spokeswoman.

The airline had three overseas flights expected at John F. Kennedy International Airport early today, and Jeff Kriendler, a Pan Am vice president, said supervisors would handle baggage on all three 747 jets.

Pan Am has been contacting its competitors to seek available space for any of its 39,000 daily passengers grounded by a canceled flight, Arey said.

"Our first responsibility is to the traveling public, and we would make every effort to accommodate all passengers and shipments, either on our own or on other airlines' flights," Arey said.

On Wednesday night, Pan Am offered TWU members a 20 percent wage increase over 36 months, Kerrigan said. In addition, Pan Am offered mechanics an immediate $1,200 bonus and a $900 bonus to other bargaining employees, he said.

TEC

Williams feels 1985 could well be the year of the shake-out in the area's retail trade and service sectors. The shake-out, if it occurs, certainly would not be as severe as occurred in the energy industry, when the boom went bust, he said. But, he added, the possibility of a shake-out should definitely be a matter of urgent concern to those involved in the trade and service sectors of the Midland-Odessa economy.

The director of economic development for the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce, Chuck Bernhard, takes exception to Williams' observations. "I don't agree with the shake-out theory," as it relates to employment-unemployment or labor force figures, said Bernhard. He contends the Midland-Odessa economies "are benefiting from the health of the national economy." And the national economic recovery is being fueled by consumer spending, which also drives our local economy, Bernhard said.

"I'm concerned like everybody else with the size of the (labor force) adjustment," Bernhard said, but he noted even the revised figures show a steady base and continuing growth. As to the importance of labor force figures in planning, he said, consultants and planners use a wide variety of statistical data. Labor force figures would be considered, he said, only to determine if a market is expanding or contracting.

As with the Midland chamber's Billingsley, Bernhard said he, too, had not yet seen the TEC statewide figures, but also believed if the revision was spread statewide any impact on the area would be negligible.

Bernhard said late Wednesday afternoon he had tried throughout the day to contact someone at the Austin TEC headquarters to obtain an explanation of the downward revised labor force figures but couldn't reach anyone who could, or would, comment.

According to Williams, part of the problem with TEC statistics is the state agency relies on voluntary participation of businesses in filling out forms from which statistics are compiled. It appears some companies included in the TEC sample may have been over-stating their employee numbers, Williams said.

The downward revision, he said, reflects that the numbers obtained from quarterly withholding tax returns, which are generally more accurate than TEC surveys.

According to Adams, the sample used by the state employment agency represents about 30 percent of all businesses involved in the manufacturing and non-manufacturing sectors of the Texas economy over a period of time.

Businesses are sent U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics Employment and Training Administration Report on Employee Payrolls and Hours forms periodically and asked to fill them out.

Adams stressed the importance of employers filling out the forms as accurately as possible. He indicated that statistics are only as good as the information used to compile them.

WATER

THE SENATE on a 27-3 vote adopted an amendment that would authorize the state to regulate underground water in areas designated as "critical" if voters in that area refuse to set up a district to protect the water. The House bill has no such provision.

"It's a hot potato in my district," said Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville. "I'm going to have a lot of problems with that."

What the Sierra Club called "two crucial tests" on protection of the coastal environment were approved by the Senate but it took two votes to clear one of the amendments.

Sen. Carlos Truan offered an amendment that would require the state to "maintain the productivity of the bay or estuary system" rather than "a productive habitat in the bay or estuary system."

"The difference is not quibbling over words," said Truan, D-Corpus Christi. "We are getting to the heart of how the Texas Water Commission and the courts will determine whether to issue a permit to divert water behind a dam and how much water is to be released for the bays and estuaries."

The Senate voted 15-15 on Montford's motion to reject the proposed amendment, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby broke the tie, 16-15, which defeated it.

MONTFORD acknowledged that the Truan amendment would strengthen environmental protection, but he asked for a vote to "retain the balance" in the bill. Later, the Senate reconsidered its vote and approved the Truan amendment on voice vote.

The amendment is expected to remain controversial in the House.

The other apparent key vote was on an amendment by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, to make the Texas Parks and Wildlife Agency the lead agency in conducting studies and analyzing bays and estuaries.

Montford's motion to defeat the amendment failed 10-19, and it also was approved on voice vote.

After the Senate passed the plan, Montford said he doesn't think "it makes a hoot" which agency is in charge of the study, noting the bill was aimed at achieving a balance. "I found them (the Sierra Club) to be good compromisers."

Another major difference in the House and Senate bills, Montford said, is that the Senate bill would establish a multi-state planning commission to identify areas of water shortages and possible water sources. An amendment would require the state to confer with the Mexican government on water needs and development of water supplies.

AS IN THE House, there were concerns expressed about the possible transfer of water from East Texas, which has heavier annual rainfall, to dry West Texas.

Montford described as "age-old demagoguery" House debate "that we're going to take all the East Texas water and ship it to West Texas. Members, you cannot do that, and this bill reinforces that concept, and I hope that we can overcome that short-sighted viewpoint."

Aide testifies Mattox asked how bond approval could be slowed

AUSTIN (AP) — A week before he allegedly threatened a Houston law firm's lucrative bond business, Attorney General Jim Mattox asked an aide how the process by which his office approved public bonds might be slowed, the aide says.

"General Mattox asked me if there was any way to slow down one of these bond deals," said Susan Voss, a former lawyer in the bond division of the attorney general's office.

"I told him yes, that there were ways to slow them down," she told the jury in Mattox's commercial bribery trial on Wednesday.

Mattox is accused of threatening to delay or withhold his needed approval of bonds prepared by the Fulbright & Jaworski firm unless one of its lawyers stopped trying to question his sister, Janice Mattox, in a South Texas oil-lease case.

The trial was in recess today. Prosecutors and defense attorneys indicated that Thomas McDade, a Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer, would be cross-examined on Friday.

Fulbright & Jaworski had 17 bond issues pending when Mattox allegedly made the threat to the firm's bond boss, Wiley Caldwell, in a June 17, 1983, phone call.

A series of witnesses said that quick action on bonds was important in June 1983, because federal law changed on July 1. The change made later bonds more difficult to sell.

At that time, Ms. Voss was a lawyer on the attorney general's staff, assigned to review bonds submitted for issue by governmental bodies. Under state law, the attorney general is required to approve such bonds before they can be sold.

Ms. Voss testified that on June 10, 1983, she and Mattox discussed a legal problem on some Fort Worth water bonds, and after that Mattox asked whether bond issues being processed by her division could be delayed.

Ms. Voss said they could.

Judge: Manges wants him voted out of office

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — State District Judge Benjamin Martinez says Clinton Manges is pushing to have him voted out of office so he won't be able to preside over cases pending in his court.

Manges last week offered Maverick County 135 acres of land free if Martinez is not re-elected or does not run for re-election.

But the day after he made the offer, Manges went on local television in Eagle Pass and said the land was available to the county with no strings attached.

Despite his retraction of the condition concerning the judge, District Attorney Amado Abascal said he has launched an investigation of Manges.

"Once the offense is committed, you can't take it back," Abascal said. "The fact that he's retracted it makes no difference."

Martinez, in San Antonio to preside at a trial, said he was distressed at Manges' "lack of respect for the law."

"He's just trying to get me disqualified from other cases he has pending in our district," Martinez said.

Martinez ruled against Manges in a counterclaim suit filed by Raul Garcia. Manges initially had sued Garcia for an allegedly unpaid $50,000 note.

Garcia countersued for damages for mental anguish. Martinez ordered Manges to pay Garcia $1 million in damages.

Manges' attorney Marynell Maloney said the judge "ran roughshod over us" in the case.

She said Manges made the land offer to the county because he "wanted everyone to be aware that the judge is incompetent and very politically motivated."

"Martinez told me and several other people he hoped Clinton wasn't mad and he was sure the Court of Appeals would reverse it (decision)," she said.

But Martinez said the issue is up to the appeals court.

Singer's murder linked to drugs

CONROE (AP) — The Montgomery County sheriff has asked the Texas Rangers to help investigate the shooting deaths of a popular folk singer and his booking agent-girlfriend.

Sheriff Joe Corley says he asked for the help because he believes the deaths of John Duncan Vandiver, 39, and Debra Lynn Davis, 32, may be related to the activities of a drug ring.

The victims were found dead in Vandiver's home near Magnolia last Friday. Both victims had been shot repeatedly and Ms. Davis' throat was slashed.

Corley said he is asking Texas Rangers for assistance even though his investigators are "making good progress. We believe we're on the right track, but we have no definite suspects now."

No arrests have been made in the slayings, Corley said in a news conference Wednesday.

The sheriff said a different-caliber weapon was used on each victim, leading authorities to believe more than one assailant was involved in the killings.

Corley said the motive for the killings was probably the result of a "drug deal that went bad."

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective February 22, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed restructured tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for private line, DATAPHONE* Digital Service, OCC Facilities, WATS and 800 services.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for directory assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service, and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls.

AT&T Communications is proposing to restructure its AT&T Long Distance Service and to reduce its overall revenues from basic long distance approximately $25 million.

While long distance rates will, in most instances, be reduced, certain AT&T Long Distance rates are proposed to be increased to more nearly recover the access charges approved by the PUC for such service.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $123.4 million, or 11.3 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Officials arrest 27 people

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Federal officials say they have cracked a national marijuana trafficking ring with the indictment of 27 people.

The U.S. Attorney's office announced Wednesday that a federal grand jury has indicted 27 people accused of conspiring to import and distribute large amounts of marijuana in Arizona, Texas, California, North and South Carolina and Massachusetts. Authorities believe Arizona was the focal point of the operation, said Nancy Fiora, an assistant U.S. attorney.

The organization also was active in Canada and Mexico, according to the indictment, which was handed down Tuesday.

The indictment said those named had been involved in airlift smuggling operations since July 1983, but it did not say where the defendants are from.

"Tons and tons" of marijuana were involved, said Travis Kuykendall, resident agent-in-charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration office here. He said some of those charged had been "in the smuggling business for over 10 years."

Kuykendall said the ring had been operated by Henry Valenzuela, a drug trafficker who died last July in an accident in Chihuahua, Mexico.

Several people were arrested Wednesday, including at least nine from Arizona who were part of the Valenzuela organization — allegedly working as "ground crews, delivery people, distributors," Kuykendall said. All faced detention hearings today before a federal magistrate.

"We know they were bringing in an average of at least a load a week (averaging from 500 to 1,200 pounds) for 10 years," all by air, Kuykendall said.

The federal investigation covered 18 months, authorities said.

But Kuykendall said that because the ring had operated for so long, "I don't know how to put a dollar figure on it."

The indictment and arrests, he said, would "break the back of this group. But there are several other groups like this."

NATION in brief

Unmarried people can live together, judge says

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ruling that sex in private has no "detrimental effect on society," a federal judge struck down state laws barring unmarried people from living together and banning sexual intercourse between them.

U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr., in a suit filed by a man and woman using the names Jane and James Doe, on Wednesday threw out part of the law referring to unmarried couples living together and ruled unconstitutional the ban on sex between unmarried people.

Merhige discarded state arguments that the fornication statute promoted marital and family relationships and morals, protected citizens from venereal disease and reduced illegitimate births.

Prisoners must decrease

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi has until May 1 to reduce the number of state prisoners in 40 local jails from 1,100 to 917 or face fines of $500 a day per prisoner under a federal contempt of court citation.

U.S. District Judge William C. Keady, who has been overseeing the state's prisons since a 1971 lawsuit, on Wednesday rejected Gov. Bill Allain's argument that the state has done all it could to ease overcrowding.

"I don't know of any avenues that we have not exhausted to try to relieve and alleviate the problem," Allain said.

War fugitive defended

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A specialist in Croatian history testified during extradition proceedings for Anrija Artukovic that the 85-year-old fugitive did not have control of forces responsible for World War II atrocities.

Sacramento college administrator Charles Michael McAdams conceded on cross-examination, however, that he has written widely for Croatian publications and has written an article recently condemning Artukovic's arrest.

Earlier Wednesday, U.S. Magistrate Volney Brown rejected a statute-of-limitations challenge to Artukovic's extradition and declared him competent to proceed despite a medical finding of dementia.

His accusers say he is responsible for the wartime slaughter of 750,000 Serbs, Jews, Orthodox Christians and gypsies.

Students face expulsion

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — Ten Salem High School students accused of a $300,000 vandalism spree may face expulsion in addition to criminal charges that could net some of them lengthy prison terms.

Superintendent Henry J. O'Donnell on Wednesday asked the School Committee to begin expulsion proceedings and the committee voted unamiously to do so. Five juveniles and six adults, including a student at another school — are charged in the Feb. 18 incident.

The charges of breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony and malicious destruction of public property carry possible detention for the juveniles and up to 11 years in prison for the adults.

Bad suggestion

We're all in favor of a lot of the budget-cutting proposals now being pondered in the nation's capital since the need for trimming the country's deficit is obvious. But don't throw the baby out with the bathwater.

One of the most notoriously bad suggestions to come out of David Stockman's Office of Management and Budget is the proposed three-year phase-out of the nation's conservation program, including the Soil Conservation Service which provides the technical know-how.

Yes, it's true that the nation has long since left behind, for the most part, its agricultural roots. Only about 3 percent of this country's residents now live on farms and ranches, as compared with a third of the population only a century ago.

And, yes, it's true that modern farming technology has given the United States the capability, despite the declining farm population, to feed all its millions of people — plus providing food for many millions in other parts of the world — at an amazingly small cost when compared to what others elsewhere are required to spend of their budgets on food.

But now it's time to do a little reminiscing. It wasn't always this way. There was a time, in fact, only 50 years ago when farming techniques were not helping preserve and protect the soil and water. In fact, a lot of farmland was being blown away in the dusty winds of the infamous "Dust Bowl" years. Today it's difficult to imagine the United States encountering such a disaster, but it can happen.

Look at the famine now being experienced in African nations. Experts say much of the starvation is a direct result of massive soil depletion and erosion, in addition to drought and ill-conceived governmental policies. In the United States, that type of calamity has been averted because of the efforts of the Soil Conservation Service. It has made a significant difference.

Established in 1935 as a direct response to soil and water erosion, the service has been tremendously influential in promoting conservation efforts in the past five decades. The conservationists of the SCS have been involved in long—range conservation planning at the request of landowners in addition to providing other services such as forage inventories, livestock recommendations, design of farm water impoundments, design of irrigation systems and so forth. In fact, it's realistic to say farming in the United States would not have reached its successful modern stage without the work of the soil and water conservationists.

What's more, their work is still essential to keeping the soil and water from suffering the devastating effects of erosion or depletion. Their valuable work is sought out by agri-businessmen and others.

We don't believe it's realistic to talk about eliminating the SCS at all. In light of the effort to cut the federal deficit, it is realistic to talk about consolidating some functions of the service and possibly instituting user fees as a means of recouping at least a portion of the cost of the service.

In Texas there are in excess of 1,000 SCS officials and that number could realistically be reduced by 90 without overly affecting the quality of services, local SCS officials say.

But that and other recommendations point the way to proceed. Phasing-out the service in its entirety would be a mistake that could be paid for in 50 years' time or less in terms of human misery.

Another View:

Mrs. Thatcher's visit

When Prime Minister Thatcher is good, she is very good, as in her speech to Congress last week. She offered a rousing defense of Western freedoms and a skillful accounting of her Conservative government's record. On sticky alliance matters, she relied on indirection to speak for Europe without unsettling her friend, President Reagan.

The Strategic Defense Initiative? Of course she favors research on defensive systems, but deployment would be "a matter for negotiation under a new treaty," ergo a bargaining chip. The American deficit? Since no country is immune from its effect, she strongly supports "your efforts to reduce the budget deficit." How can richer countries preach adjustment to poorer countries and refuse to practice it at home? Good advice, well expressed.

Much less satisfactory was Mrs. Thatcher's treatment of Northern Ireland. She properly denounced the murderous Irish Republican Army, praised the Dublin government for its courage in combatting terrorism, and warned Americans that seemingly innocuous contributions pay for murder. What was missing was even a hint about the grievances of the oppressed in the British-ruled North. She dealt with the effects, without mentioning the historic failure of one million Protestants to acknowledge the rights, and humanity, of half a million Catholics.

So long as that majority wishes to remain British, she said, its wishes will be respected: "If ever there were to be a majority in favor of change, then I believe that our Parliament would respond accordingly. For that is the principle of consent enshrined in your Constitution and an essential part of ours."

Taken on its face, this gives the majority an indefinite veto over any new arrangements in a province whose borders were drawn in 1921 to protect Protestant dominance. It means there is little hope for the ideas of joint authority advanced by Prime Minister FitzGerald in Dublin. To close the door to peaceful change is to open it to gunmen.

JACK ANDERSON

Defiant spirit alive in Poland

WASHINGTON — Twice in recent months I've tried to get into Poland, but the country's communist military dictatorship wouldn't grant me a visa.

Jack Anderson

The Polish authorities clearly didn't want me to meet Lech Walesa, the dynamig leader of the outlawed Solidarity union.

The Polish government partially relented, however, and let my associate Lucette Lagnado travel freely through the country recently. Here is what she found:

— Even before arrival in Poland, a visitor is surprised to hear outspoken criticism of the communist regime from Poles flying home from abroad. These were Polish citizens who were among the most privileged and presumably trusted by the regime, having been allowed to leave the country — and they made their remarks within earshot of other passengers who must have included secret police. One man, who told of involvement in the printing of illegal newspapers, was a factory manager.

The returning Poles agreed that Solidarity is still alive and well, though forced underground by the authorities. The murder of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko by police agents invigorated the illegal movement, they said. The passengers denounced the economic system and urged visitors to see proof of its failure in shops that have little to offer.

— The volunteered complaints continued whenever Poles heard my associate speaking English. A young father told of low wages and generally difficult economic conditions. A poet bemoaned official censorship. Even employees of Inter-press, the liaison office between visiting journalists and government officials, complained of difficulties with the Polish bureaucracy.

— President Reagan is apparently as popular among Poles as he is among Americans. Several Poles said they had prayed for his re-election, and even while complaining about their economic hardships, they expressed hope that Reagan would keep up the embargoes that add to their misery. A surprising number of Poles still spoke of Yalta as if it had occurred yesterday instead of 40 years ago; they view it bitterly as the root of all their post-war troubles, a sellout of the Poles by their Western allies.

— Confirming the scarcity of consumer goods was no problem. The only well-stocked stores are the Pevex outlets that accept only hard currency. They offer beautiful sheepskin coats, choice liquors and French perfume. The stores that accept Polish currency have little to sell but shoddy goods. Black market trading for American dollars is ubiquitous. Meat is rationed and buying it requires standing in line for hours. Yet in the tourist hotels, fine cuts of meat are on the menu, along with such luxuries as butter, sugar and orange juice.

— Intelligence sources blame Poland's economic crisis not just on mismanagement by the communist regime, but on the refusal of the labor force to work as a result of the harsh crackdown on their union. One Pole, who claimed to be a Communist Party member, confirmed at least the part about the workers' lack of motivation to produce. And he hinted that the inefficiency of Polish industry was partly the government's fault. "Our factories cannot compete with yours," he said. "They are backward." Such heresy is not uncommon, apparently.

— The police-state repression, though not as overpoweringly obvious as in other Soviet-bloc countries, is nevertheless in evidence where it counts. Even on internal flights in small, antique, propeller-driven planes, security is tight.

Passengers and their belongings are carefully checked, and there is a minimum of two "anti-terrorist" security officers, armed with rifles and knives, aboard the plane. One officer sits at the back of the passenger compartment, the other in the cockpit. Their purpose is to prevent hijackings to the West. My associate was advised by the stewardess to signal her intentions before she tried to use the washroom during the hour-long flight.

— Despite the ever-present threat of official crackdown, Poles remain unregenerately candid in their criticism of the regime. As one man put it with a mixture of defiance and resignation: "I know I can be put in prison for what I say. But so what?"

The church where Popieluszko preached in Warsaw has become a flower-bedecked shrine visited by hundreds of pilgrims daily. Incense burns at his grave and Solidarity symbols cover the church fence.

STRONG IS BEAUTIFUL: The strength of the American dollar and the American economy has proved a boon to art lovers and speculators. American investors are picking up bargains in European antiques and art works.

The only caveat is to buy items that were certifiably painted or made before 1885. The Customs Service classifies anything 100 years old as an antique and therefore exempt from duty. Thus a Picasso would be less of a bargain after paying a huge import tax, while a Degas can come in duty-free if Customs experts are convinced it was painted before 1885.

The stronger economy, meanwhile, has led wealthy Americans to take a plunge in art futures. For example, a painting that sold for $150 in 1967 and was resold for $3,000 in 1981 brought $10,000 a few days ago — from a buyer who figures it'll be worth $20,000 in another five years.

GEORGE F. WILL

More we know, less we know

WASHINGTON — It was a headline that arrested the eye:

Einstein's Brain Was Different

Not news, you say? Wrong. The news from neurobiology is large enough to subvert our sense of ourselves.

George F. Will

Having obtained bits of Einstein's brain from the pathologist who conducted the autopsy in 1955, a scientist at Berkeley has discovered that Einstein's brain had 73 precent more "support cells" for every neuron than are found in average brains. The Einstein samples reportedly came from the part of the brain responsible for "the deepest thinking" — presumably the part we use to ponder the infield-fly rule.

We are learning a lot — perhaps an alarming lot — about what we are. Increased knowledge of the brain already has brought a reduction of misery through pharmacological treatments of such diseases as depression and schizophrenia. But that knowledge seems to threaten us — that inner something that makes us individuals. It seems to portray us as merely physical, as more comprehensible and quantifiable than we want to be.

It was bad enough when Copernicus evicted us from where we think we belong: the center of the cosmos. Since then, many systems of thought have seemed to imbed us stickily in the world in ways that compromise our sense of autonomy.

Darwin embedded mankind in the mud of the planet that Copernicus had made peripheral. Darwin asserted a continuum between mankind and lesser (are we sure?) matter. The historicisms of Marx and others asserted that political and social change are governed by iron laws of social evolution, not the choices of autonomous human beings. Freud said there are within us uncharted depths with their own turbulences.

Now comes neurobiology, suggesting...what? It really does not suggest that anyone with 73 percent more support cells per neuron than average could have said, as Einstein did, "Hey: Increase the speed of an object and you contract the passage of its time." (Einstein was always saying things like that, and may even have understood the infield-fly rule.) Neurosciences do not make such extravagant claims.

In the current issue of the New York Review of Books, Israel Rosenfield of the City University of New York offers a balanced assessment. Suppose particular mental events — feelings, emotions — can be associated with particular chemical events. That does not mean that, say, the feeling of love or patriotism or whatever can be expressed as a chemical formula. Neither does it mean that when you read "Hamlet" you should say, "Ah, yes. This is the product of beautiful brain chemistry."

What has been learned about brain functioning has advanced therapy more than it has understanding. We can improve the functioning of the brain without really knowing how to explain what is being done, aside from the correction of a chemical imbalance. As Rosenfield writes, "Just as we cannot know the role an actor is playing by studying the basic elecrical patterns in his brain, no analysis of the circuits of a computer can tell us whether the computer is playing chess or predicting the weather." While it is better to treat certain mental illnesses by administering drugs rather than confining the patient to an immobilizing chair, "we should have no illusions that we really know what we are doing when we use many of the therapies administered today."

The chemistry of memory, the chemistry of sorrow..... We would feel diminished in dignity by such ways of speaking. But certain foods contain amino acids which pass into the blood and alter moods. Indeed, simply seeing food evidently can trigger physiological mechanisms that produce weight increase. Gracious.

Human beings became comfortable with the thought of themselves as creatures composed of flesh and blood and also something grander. Now neurobiology makes problematic the idea that we are both bodies and quite distinct minds or spirits. The idea of "the ghost in the machine" may be yielding to the idea that we are machines. Are we just the sum of the chemical reactions bubbling within us?

Happily, the more we know, the less we know. The more we know about the brain, the more we are awed by how much there is to know, not only about the brain but about the totality of creation that has culminated (we are the culmination...aren't we?) in a gadget as intricate as man. The neuroscience behind the news that "Einstein's Brain Was Different" calls to mind a recent Chicago Tribune headline. It was a story about the aftermath of the Israeli airlift out of Ethiopia: "20th Century Stuns Ethiopian Jews." I know just how they feel.

Help a farmer; buy his farm!

President Reagan, in last week's radio address, said the government has done everything it can for the farmer. It is now time for others to pitch in and do more, "from officials at the state level to banks, private groups and individuals in the community."

Art Buchwald

I wasn't quite sure what I, as an individual, could do to help the farmer, so I drove out to Culpeper, Va.

"Hi, Farmer Brown. President Reagan told me I should pitch in and help you. What exactly can I do?"

"You can buy my farm."

"I don't know much about farming."

"Shucks, there's nothing to it. All you have to do is get up at 5, milk the cows, feed the hogs, and see how many chickens died in the night from the frost. Any fool can do that."

"When do you get to play golf or tennis?"

"After you till the soil, plant your seed, spread fertilizer, spray for bugs and dig furrows for irrigation."

"Don't you ever get into town?"

"Sure. You get to go once, maybe twice a week, to meet with your banker and explain to him why you can't meet the payments on your loan."

"Dave Stockman says the reason you farmers owe so much money to the banks is you keep speculating in land and buying new equipment to make windfall profits at the expense of the American taxpayer."

"Dave's a good old boy, but he knows as much about farming as he does about drawing up a balanced budget."

"It wasn't just Stockman. President Reagan said the same thing. The reason you're in so much trouble is you bet on inflation and you were wrong. Didn't you hear him Saturday morning?"

"I meant to. But since it was the weekend I decided to relax and dig fence holes, repair the barn, cut down timber, wash my horse and sit up with a sick calf. I'll let you have the farm real cheap."

"How much money can I make?"

"You can make a bundle — provided the bugs don't get your corn, the sub-zero temperatures don't freeze your tomatoes, your cows don't get pneumonia, the dollar gets weaker and the Russians are starving to death."

"You don't make it sound like much fun."

"It's a lot of fun, if you're a gambler. What other business offers you a chance to bet your house on the crap table once a year?"

"The people in Washington say the reason you farmers are living on the edge is that you're always producing too much food and the taxpayers are stuck with the bill."

"I can't quarrel with that. We're just dumb people who know how to grow things, but we don't know how to market them. The ideal situation for America is if we farmers didn't grow enough food and made everyone pay through the nose. Then instead of the taxpayer having to give us price supports we could charge him $15 for a pound of potatoes. I'm sure those smart fellows in Washington will be able to figure out a way of causing a food shortage in the country so we could get a fair price for our crops. You should buy my farm now while it's dirt cheap. Then when Washington works out a plan there will be so few farms left you can get $6 for a quart of raw milk on the open market."

"It sounds tempting. But I'm not sure I want to be a farmer. Even if you make a lot of money it doesn't sound like you have much time to enjoy it. Isn't there some other way I can help you?"

"Well, if you're going back to Washington you can take this corn cob with you and tell David Stockman to stick it in his ear."

Leftist rebels receive military training

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of leftists rebels from Central and South America have received military training in Nicaragua in recent years as part of a Sandinista effort to promote revolution elsewhere in the hemisphere, U.S. officials say.

New intelligence information indicates Salvadoran, Honduran, Colombian and Ecuadoran leftists have fought alongside Sandinista units against anti-communist insurgents after receiving training at camps in Nicaragua.

Officially, the State Department press office said Nicaragua "has, indeed, carried out extensive training of foreigners on its territory." The department refused, however, to identify the nationalities involved because the information is classified.

The sources who provided the details of the alleged Nicaraguan activities spoke only on the condition they not be identified.

A Nicaraguan Embassy spokeswoman, Miriam Hooker, dismissed the U.S. allegations as "totally false." She said Nicaragua "has not been training any foreign groups in its territory."

Ms. Hooker said that in consultation with other Central American countries and the United States, Nicaragua has proposed the establishment of joint border patrols to guard against infiltration by hostile forces.

"It is clear that Nicaragua is not the aggressor in the Central American conflict," she said.

U.S. officials acknowledged that Nicaraguan shipments of arms and supplies to Salvadoran rebels have declined recently, but they said there has been no change in Nicaraguan command and control over the Salvadoran insurgency.

The Reagan administration's attempts to discredit Nicaragua have focused largely on the Sandinista's alleged role in behalf of the Salvadoran rebels and the stationing of an estimated 3,000 Cuban military and security advisers in Nicaragua.

The officials said the presence of leftists from other nations in Nicaragua has received little or no attention. Besides the Cubans, hundreds of volunteers from other countries have been incorporated into the Nicaraguan security apparatus, the officals said.

They noted that Italian officials have disclosed that about 40 members of Italy's Red Brigade terrorist group have been sent to Nicaragua. There are believed to be a similar number of Soviet military advisers.

In Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, 15 Palestinians were seen several months ago wearing Nicaraguan Air Force uniforms, the officials said, adding that more than 20 Libyans are reported to be in Nicaragua as well. In addition, Nicaraguan military recruits are said to be receiving training in hand-to-hand combat from a contingent of North Koreans.

The administration has been escalating its criticism of Nicaragua in recent weeks with a view toward winning congressional approval for a resumption of CIA assistance to Nicaraguan rebels. A five-month legislative ban on such assistance ends today.

But opponents of the proposal are preparing a counterattack. Two liberal organizations, the International Human Rights Law Group and the Washington Office on Latin America, are expected to issue a 150-page report next week outlining alleged human rights abuses by the resistance forces.

Paul Reichler, an American who serves as a Nicaraguan government lawyer, said the report documents "killing, torture, mutilation and rape" by the contras against civilians.

Reichler expressed incredulity that President Reagan would, as he did Feb. 16, call the insurgents "our brothers."

The United States has provided extensive training of Salvadoran military forces in recent years, but officials stressed that the purpose of this activity is to support the Salvadoran government and not to subvert other countries.

CIA money also has been been used to train Nicaraguan rebels, prompting Nicaraguan charges that the United States is an aggressor nation. The administration claims support for the rebels is needed to pressure the Sandinista government into making democratic reforms and loosening its military ties with the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said last week that unless there is a change in Nicaragua's behavior, "lasting peace in Central America will be impossible."

Japan's Tanaka suffers stroke

WORLD

TOKYO (AP) — Former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, regarded as Japan's most powerful political figure despite a 1983 conviction for accepting bribes, has suffered a mild stroke and is hospitalized, doctors said.

The doctors, in a televised news conference from Tokyo's Teishin Hospital, said Tanaka, 66, complained of chest pain and numbness in his right side at his home Wednesday afternoon. They said he was taken by ambulance to the hospital.

They said the stroke was mild and that Tanaka could recover fully in three to four weeks.

Top government and ruling party leaders flocked to his bedside, and newspapers speculated that the stroke could diminish Tanaka's influence in the Liberal Democratic Party and permit a realignment of party alliances that could threaten Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Tanaka, who was prime minister from 1972 to 1974, resigned following a scandal concerning his financial dealings.

In 1976 he was arrested on charges of accepting 500 million yen, or $2 million, to promote the sale of Lockheed Corp. aircraft in Japan. He was convicted of taking bribes in 1983 and sentenced to four years in prison, but the verdict remains on appeal.

Nominally a political independent since his arrest, Tanaka still heads a faction of 122 members of the Diet, or parliament. That is the largest faction in the Liberal Democratic Party, a loose conservative coalition that has dominated Japanese politics for 30 years.

Pentagon opens second probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is opening a second inquiry into Vice Adm. Joseph Metcalf's attempt to bring home Soviet-made weapons following the 1983 Grenada invasion in violation of military regulations, officials say.

Joseph Sherrick, the Defense Department's inspector general, will head the investigation that will focus on the manner in which Metcalf was disciplined after the weapons were seized by U.S. Customs agents, a Pentagon source who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wednesday.

Metcalf received a letter of "caution" about bringing war booty into the country and was later promoted, while nine lower ranking Marines and Army personnel were court-martialed for bringing back weapons from Grenada.

Sherrick reportedly has raised questions about the Navy's handling of the case after it was revealed Metcalf tried to bring back 24 Soviet-made AK-47 automatic rifles in November 1983.

Sherrick's investigation will become the second internal probe of the Grenada guns affair under way within the Pentagon. Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV previously ordered the department's general counsel to investigate the matter, which also has come under scrutiny by congressional committees.

According to the Pentagon source, an announcement of Sherrick's role is expected shortly.

The source said Taft's office had decided to ask for the investigation, and that Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger was aware of the decision.

The Navy has defended its handling of Metcalf's case, noting that more than 300 Marines were granted amnesty when they voluntarily turned in souvenir weapons from the Grenada invasion. Marines who were court-martialed ignored the amnesty and, in some cases, tried to sell the rifles, the Navy said.

Crew believed dead in submarine sinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence analysts believe the entire crew of a North Korean submarine perished when the vessel sank in 350 feet of water off the North Korean coast, a television network says.

Soviet and North Korean ships were attempting to raise the boat, which sank Sept. 20 with all hands aboard, CBS News said late Wednesday.

"A small flotilla of Soviet and North Korean ships is trying to raise the sub, but U.S. analysts believe the crew has perished by now," the network reported.

Neither Japanese nor South Korean officials could confirm the report. But officials of Japan's Defense Agency, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said they were investigating the report.

The network also reported that 87 U.S.-made Hughes helicopters that were illegally diverted to North Korea.

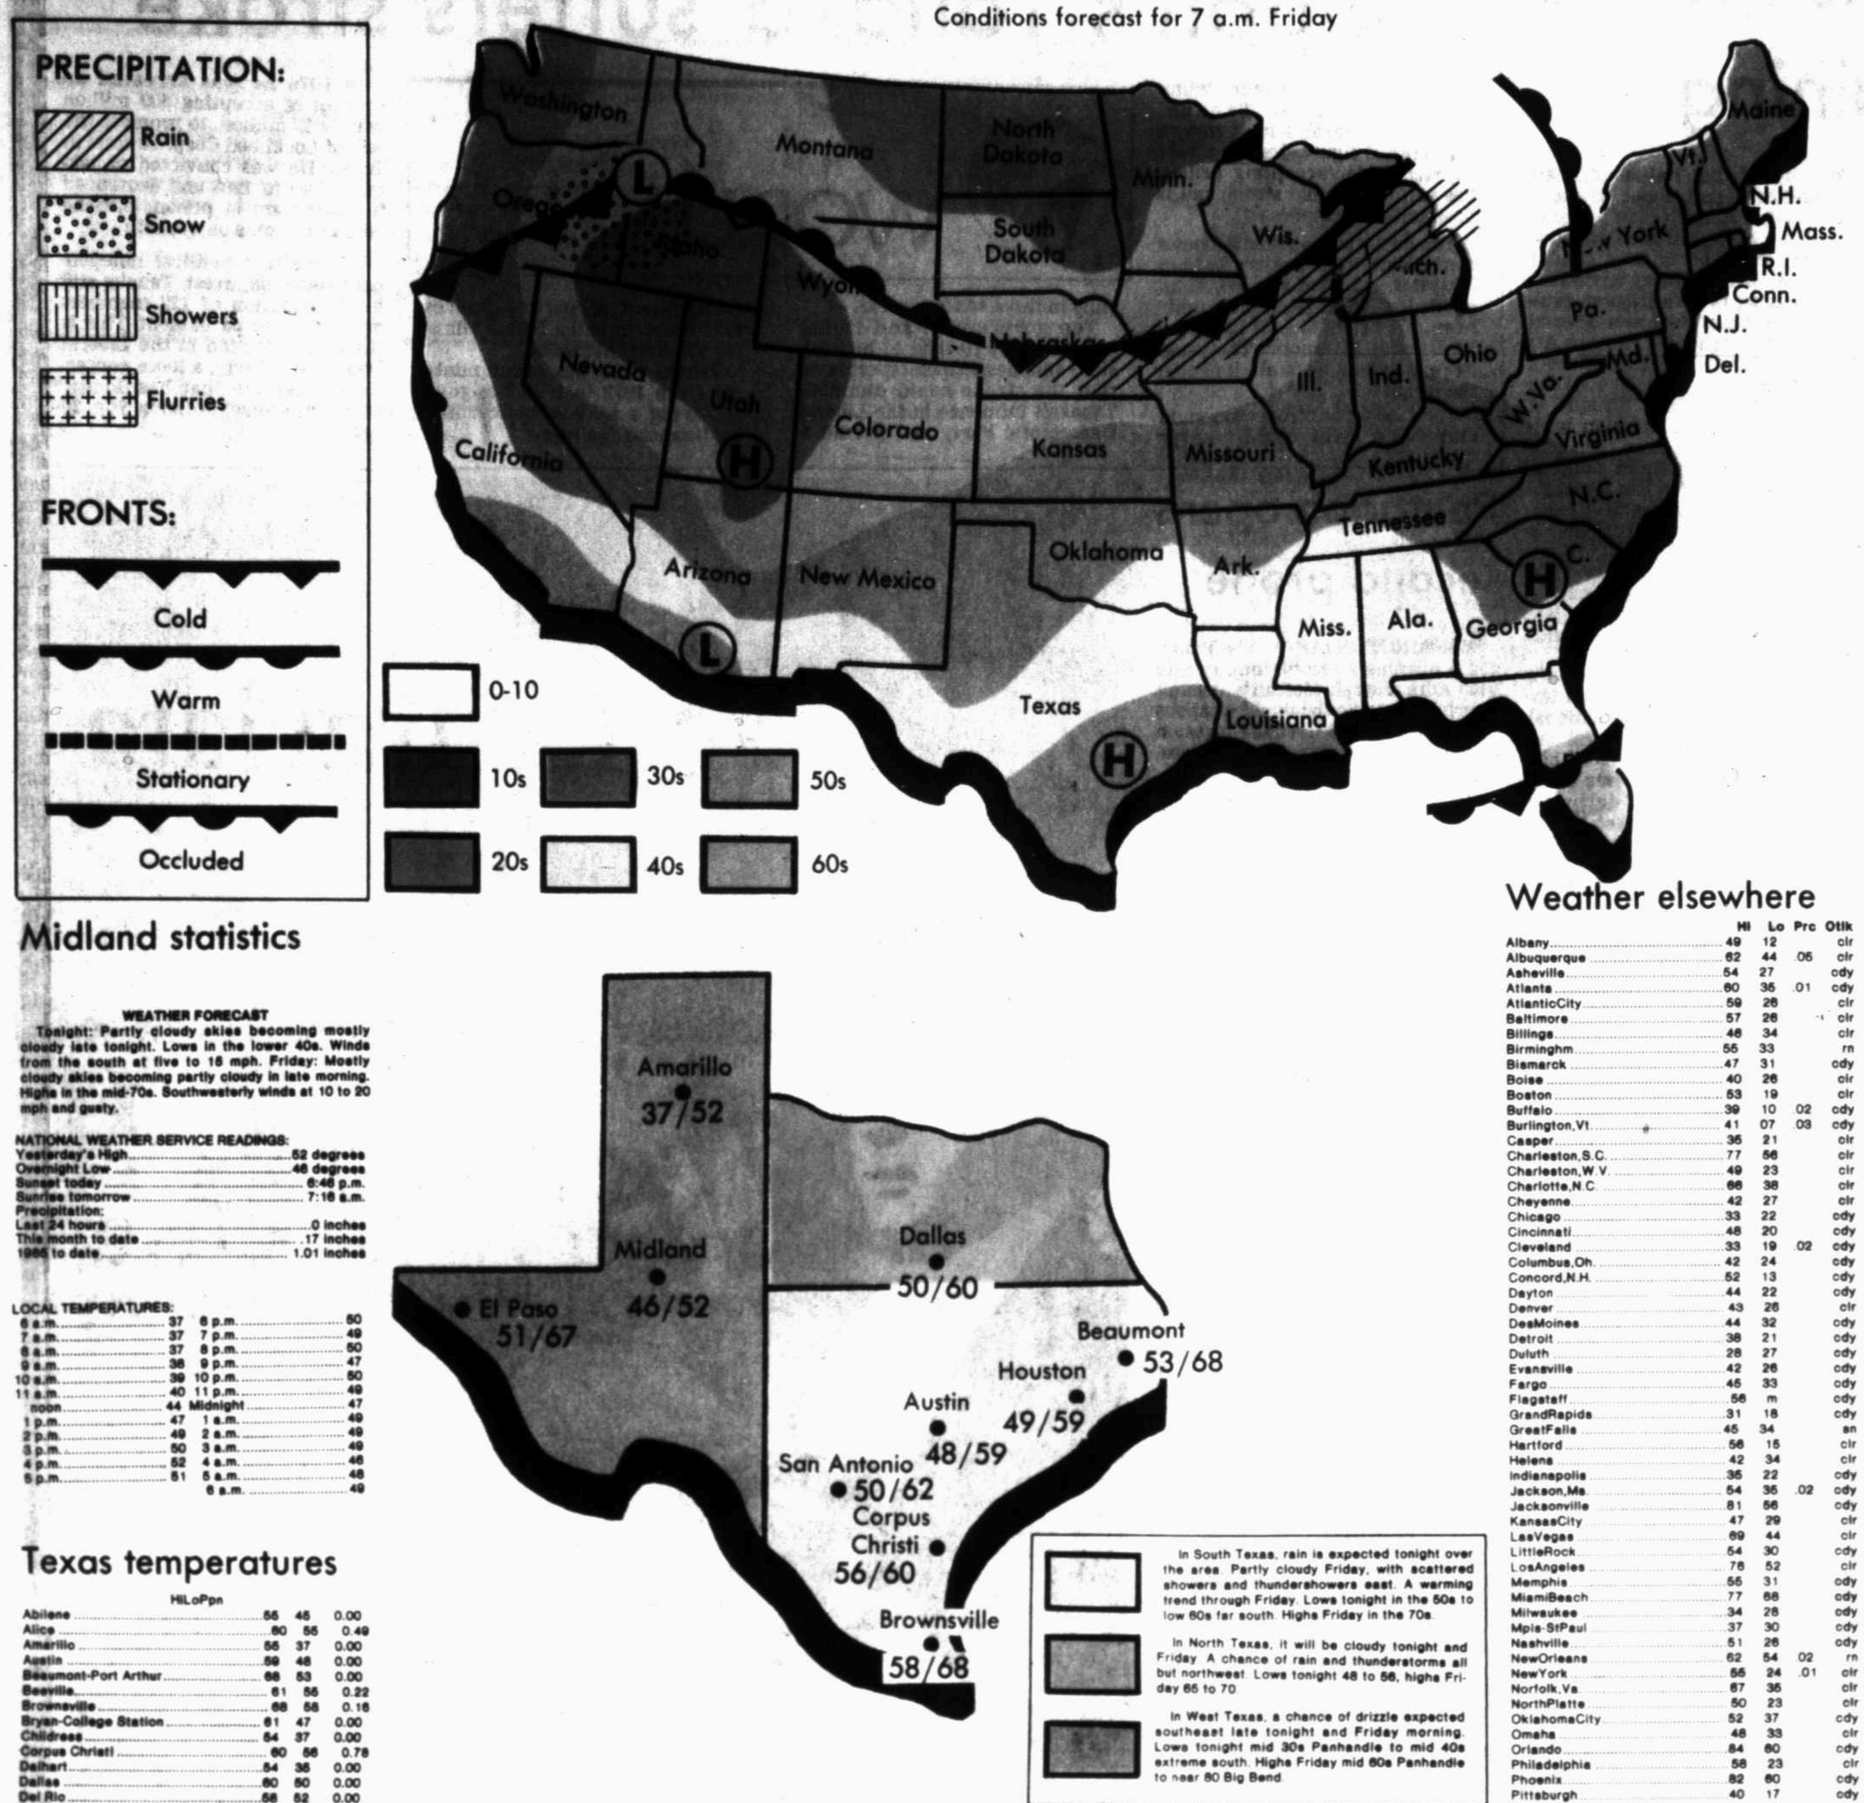
WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 7 a.m. Friday



Warmer weather expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Following this morning's showers, Midlanders are expected to experience continued cloudy skies but warmer temperatures on Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Skies are expected to be partly cloudy this evening, becoming mostly cloudy late tonight as temperatures drop to the lower 40s. Southerly winds will be at five to 15 mph.

Friday will be mostly cloudy, becoming partly cloudy after late morning. Temperatures are expected to warm in the middle 70s. Winds will be from the southwest at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Wednesday's high of 52 was 30 degrees below the record set in 1950. This morning's low was 32 degrees above the 1962 record of 14.

STATE

Continued mild weather is expected in Texas for the next several days, before another cold front arrives late in the weekend.

Thunderstorms could accompany the front on Sunday, with accompanying much cooler temperatures, meteorologists say.

Temperatures are expected to be in the 50s and 60s, and occasionally into the 70s, until then.

Clouds covered most of Texas early this morning. Light rain fell overnight across portions of the southern tip of the state. The light rain was accompanied by fog that reduced visibilities to one-half mile in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

A few patches of light rain were scattered across Southwest Texas. No other rainfall was reported in the state.

A ridge of high pressure covered the eastern half of Texas where winds were light and variable. a low pressure trough developed in the far west producing southerly winds at 5 to 10 mph across west Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s. The coolest temperatures were in the northeast part of the state where Texarkana was 40 degrees. Brownsville was the warmest with with 59 degrees.

NATION

Strong winds pushed temperatures in northern New England into the single digits to teens, while two high pressure systems kept most of the nation precipitation-free.

Strong high pressures centered over central Indiana and southeast Idaho today resulting in a stable weather pattern across most of the nation.

Western New York had a few snowshowers and light rain fell over extreme southern Texas.

Northwesterly winds gusted up to 35 mph across northern New England, depressing temperatures over much of the region.

A wind gust of 144 mph was measured at Mount Washington, N.H., Wednesday evening. By early today, winds atop the mountain decreased to 80 to 90 mph.

Skies were mostly cloudy along the Gulf Coast and partly cloudy from west Texas across southern California and over northern Colorado. Otherwise, fair skies prevailed over the western half of the nation.

Magazine lists hottest, coldest cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Yellowstone, Mont., retained its title as the nation's coldest place for 1984, but Bullhead City topped its Arizona companion Gila Bend for hottest.

West Yellowstone, perennially one of the nation's coldest places, scored both the single coldest day of 1984 and the most daily low readings of any place in the country, according to National Weather Service statistics.

The comparative readings covering the 48 contiguous states were compiled by David H. Hickcox of Ohio Wesleyan University and are reported in the February issue of Weatherwise magazine.

The year's record low was 43 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, recorded at West Yellowstone on Jan. 18. However, the article noted that there was an unofficial report of a minus 65 degree reading at Middle Sinks, Utah.

Overall, Hickcox calculated, West Yellowstone was the nation's coldest place on 80 different days last year, the largest number of daily lows for any singler place.

Second was Gunnison, Colo., with 57 daily lows, moving up from third place the year before.

Turning up the heat, Bullhead City was the nation's hottest location on 71 different days, to move from fifth to first in that category.

The single hottest reading was 123 degrees, recorded at Bullhead City on July 5.

Gila Bend, Ariz., which had recorded the most days as the nation's hottest in 1983, dropped to seventh place last year with only 21 top readings.

Here is rundown of the 10 hottest and coldest locations in the 48 contiguous states in 1984 and the number of days they were the nation's hottest or coldest place:

Red Raiders own share of league title

Beneford hits clinchers at line

Associated Press

DALLAS — Reserve Tony Benford once again played the Mustang-killer Wednesday night, giving his Texas Tech Red Raiders their first piece of a Southwest Conference basketball title since 1973.

His three clutch free throws in the final 40 seconds brought the Red Raiders a 59-54 victory over No. 13 Southern Methodist, at least a share of the Southwest Conference title and guarantees the No. 1 seed in the post-season tournament.

Benford's 15-foot jump shot in the final three seconds defeated SMU 64-63 in Lubbock in January.

"Benford did it again with some big free throws at the end," said Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "This a great victory for a great bunch of guys. It is really something to come in here and win on the road and survive the schedule we've played.

"Who would have thought we would be playing in this game for this (the title) at the beginning of the year?" he added. "Nobody thought that we would be here except those guys in there (the team)."

Benford said, "I was hoping it wouldn't come down to this (last second heroics) again, but I was ready."

Tech can clinch the SWC title outright if it defeats Texas Christian in Fort Worth on Saturday.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said Tech deserved the victory.

"Right now, they're the best team in the Southwest Conference," said Bliss. "Bubba Jennings did a great job shooting for them and they hit some big free throws. We didn't pick a very good time to lose our first home game."

SMU was 15-0 in Moody Coliseum going into the showdown with the Red Raiders.

"It's hard to believe this has really happened," said Jennings. "It hasn't sunk in yet."

The Red Raiders, who defeated SMU earlier in the season by one point, are 19-7 overall and 11-4 in the SWC race.

SMU, with a game remaining on Sunday against Houston, is 21-7 and 10-5. The Mustangs will be the No. 2 seed in the tournament which begins in Dallas March 8th.

Benford hit both ends of a one-and-one with 22 seconds to play as a seething crowd of 9,007 fans in Moody Coliseum pelted the floor with ice and even shook the basket while he tried to shoot.

SWC Roundup

Benford made one free throw while the basket was swaying, but referee Moose Stuben had blown his whistle so the Red Raider had to shoot over. He made the next one.

Jennings led the Red Raiders with 23 points while Butch Moore was high for the Mustangs with 13.

Seven-foot center Jon Koncak fouled out with 1:27 to play for SMU which went the last 4:54 without a field goal. Tech shot 52 percent from the floor to a poor 42 percent for the Mustangs.

Texas Christian 54, Texas 52

AUSTIN — Jamie Dixon and Dennis Nutt hit six of six free throws in the final 37 seconds to seal Texas Christian's victory over Texas.

TCU center Greg Grissom, who failed to score or grab a rebound in the first half, kept the Frogs in the driver's seat throughout the second half with 10 points and eight rebounds.

Nutt added four second-half baskets to his two late free throws and finished the game as high scorer with 18 points.

The victory moved the Frogs to 16-10 overall and 8-7 in conference play. Texas, which ended conference play at 7-9, fell to 14-12 overall.

Carlton Cooper, who along with Mike Wacker scored 17 points for the Longhorns, almost pulled the game out with two straight 20-foot jump shots in the final 49 seconds, which kept Texas to within two points.

"Whew! That was a struggle," TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said. "It looked like we were in mud knee deep out there tonight. Texas really played good defense tonight."

Grissom admitted he was less than spectacular in the first half.

"I decided to start hustling. I wasn't hustling in the first half and I knew if I wanted to play any more in this ballgame I had better do something or I would be collecting splinters on the bench," Grissom said.

Texas Coach Bob Weltlich, whatever Grissom "does to play well against us, we haven't done anything to solve it. His baskets just destroyed us, it's that simple.

"We have no excuses. We had them in our own backyard and with a chance to finish as high as fourth in the league, at least fifth realistically. Now we wind up seventh, I guess," Weltlich said.

Texas A&M 81, Houston 77

HOUSTON — Texas A&M junior forward Al Pulliam connected on a five-foot jump shot with 37 seconds remaining to snap a 77-77 tie and lead the Aggies past Houston.

The Aggies, who trailed at the half, were led by Don Marbury's 30 points. Guard Kenny Brown got 15 and forward Winston Crite 12 points for the Aggies, now 17-9 for the season and 9-6 in conference.

Guard Alvin Franklin scored 19 to lead Houston, and Eric Dickens added 17. With the loss, the Cougars fell to 15-12 and 7-8.

The game was tied four times before Pulliam's clutch shot pulled it out for the Aggies.

A seven-point Aggie surge just before halftime cut Houston's lead to 43-38 at intermission.

Pulliam said he dunked the winning shot by pretending it was just practice.

"I just had to be sure that I didn't rush it," said the junior forward from Houston, Miss. "All you can do is just shoot it and hope."

"Thirty points? Wow!" said Marbury of his point total. He credited his teammates with helping, but admitted, "I'm surprised I got that many points."

It was the second best game of the season for Marbury, who scored 41 against Baylor.

Houston head coach Guy Lewis was philosophical about the loss, which was the eighth in 10 games for the Cougars.

"I don't know what it is," he said. "I'm bewildered. It's so typical of all our conference games. We just don't quite get over the hump."

"We had a chance to redeem ourselves tonight," said a disappointed Franklin. "It seems like every time we have a chance to win, we lose."

Hoyas avenge loss to Redmen

Associated Press

College Basketball Roundup

This time, Georgetown was wearing the look of winners.

The second-ranked Hoyas got another strong game from All-American Patrick Ewing, a surprising performance from Reggie Williams and an all-around good defensive effort to rout No. 1 St. John's 85-69 in a Big East Conference game Wednesday night.

It was sweet revenge at sold out Madison Square Garden for Georgetown, which was ranked No. 1 when it lost to then-No. 2 St. John's 66-65 on Jan. 26 in Landover, Md., a loss that broke the Hoyas' 29-game winning streak.

"This was more a game of pride," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said after his team snapped the Redmen's 13-game winning string. The Hoyas, 26-2 overall, began pulling away in the first half and kept attacking to beat St. John's, 24-2 and the unanimous choice as the nation's best team in the most recent Associated Press poll.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 5 Duke rolled Clemson 90-73, No. 6 Oklahoma topped Oklahoma State 89-84, No. 10 Georgia Tech stopped No. 8 North Carolina 67-62, No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas edged California-Irvine 97-95, Texas Tech tripped No. 13 Southern Methodist 59-54, No. 14 Georgia routed Mississippi 94-66, and Maryland nipped No. 16 North Carolina State 71-70.

THOMPSON, KNOWN for his serious demeanor, provided a little levity prior to the game when he opened up his suit jacket to reveal a shirt that resembled the tri-color V-striped sweater that St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca has worn as a good-luck charm during the last 13 games, all victories.

"I think sometimes you've got to laugh," Thompson said. "It was all done to loosen the atmosphere."

Carnesecca, who jokingly called Thompson's attire "a poor imitation," had only words of praise for Georgetown, the defending NCAA champions.

"It was an unreal performance," Carnesecca said. "They were marvelous in every department. It was their night."

Despite the loss, St. John's still leads the Big East race with a 14-1 conference mark, while Georgetown is second at 13-2.

St. John's can win the regular-season title by beating Providence on Saturday. "They pretty much got the league won," Thompson said.

But he had to be pleased with what he saw Wednesday night.

The Hoyas scored the game's first seven points, and after St. John's rallied to take its only lead at 24-22, Ewing and Williams led Georgetown to a 44-33 lead at halftime.

In the second half, the Redmen got within seven points early but could not contend with Georgetown's relentless pressure at both ends of the court.

Ewing, the 7-foot center, finished with 20 points — several on uncharacteristic outside jump shots — along with nine rebounds and six blocked shots.

"I told him just to circle around outside and take the jump shot and he did just that," Thompson said. In the first meeting between the teams, St. John's collapsed its defense around Ewing inside and managed to hold him in check.

Williams, a 6-7 sophomore swingman, scored a career-high 25 points on nine of 13 shooting from the field.

Chris Mullin led St. John's with 21 points, but could not give his team the spark it needed.

"They did a great defensive job," the 6-6 Olympian guard said. "They made it hard for me to get the ball in scoring position."

Top Ten

Johnny Dawkins scored 19 points and became Duke's all-time assist leader as the hot-shooting Blue Devils cruised past Clemson in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Dawkins' six assists gave him a career total of 405, moving him past Jim Spanarkel's total of 399.

Duke made 20 of 28 shots from the floor in the first half in taking a 45-31 lead. The host Blue Devils sank nine of their first 10 shots in the second half in expanding the advantage to 64-38.

Jay Bilas scored 18 points for Duke, 21-5, which finished with six players in double figures.

Oklahoma got 21 points from Darryl Kennedy and 20 from All-American Wayman Tisdale to win its second straight Big Eight regular season crown by beating Oklahoma State.

The Sooners, 23-5 overall and 12-1 in the league, ran their homecourt winning streak to 31 games. They used an 18-4 surge early in the game to take a 26-16 lead that they held the rest of the night.

IN ATLANTA, Yvon Johnson sank four foul shots and Brice Dalrymple made three in the final 37 seconds to help Georgia Tech beat North Carolina and clinch at least a tie for the ACC regular season championship.

Georgia Tech took the lead for good five minutes into the game and went on to raise its record to 20-6 overall, its fourth 20-victory season in history, and 9-5 in the league. North Carolina is 21-7 and 8-5.

Mark Price led the Yellow Jackets with 18 points and Dalrymple 15. Kenny Smith scored 16 points for North Carolina.

In Las Vegas, forward Armon Gilliam scored 24 points including 12 of 13 free throw attempts as UNLV downed California-Irvine to win its third straight Pacific Coast Athletic Association regular season title.

UNLV, 16-1 in league play and 23-3 overall, made seven of eight foul shots in the final 42 seconds of the game to hold off the Anteaters, 8-9 in the PCAA and 13-15 overall.

Chaparrals brace for road finish

From Staff Reports

Road trips aren't fun, but the Midland College basketball team is anticipating four straight trips to Snyder. The first is tonight when the Chaps close out their Western Junior College Athletic Conference season against Western Texas College.

The other three are the ones the team looks forward to during the Region V tournament at Scurry County Coliseum March 7-9.

MC moved into the tournament by virtue of an 84-71 win over Odessa College before 4,200 fans at Langford Chaparral Center Monday night. The win gave MC a 15-2 conference record and one of two automatic spots in the Region V tournament.

OC can clinch the other berth by beating Clarendon tonight, otherwise the 13-4 and 25-5 Wranglers will face a playoff for second with Amarillo College and NMMI, currently tied at 12-5.

"I just can't say enough about the team play and the contributions made by all the players against Odessa," said Coach Jerry Stone. "We started fast and didn't fold when they started coming back in the second half. And we did get the fan support we wanted. They were great."

Official attendance for the game was 4,280.

"It's nice going into the last game not having to win," Stone said. But he's also looking forward to the opportunity to play on the tournament site. "We'd like to take this game to finish up in good fashion. We also want to get used to the wooden floor at Scurry."

The eight-team Region V tournament will also include four teams from the Northern Conference. MC will play the fourth place team in the opener. The top two teams qualify from WJCAC and the other eight teams will play a mini-tournament to determine the other two entries.

This is the year the Region V entry must play Region XIV in a play-in game to reach the NJCAA tournament in Hutchinson, Kan. Two years ago the defending national champion Chaps met and lost to San Jacinto in their bid to return to Hutchinson.

MC WAS forced to play Odessa without season-long starter Lawrence Chumbley, who didn't even suit up. "We hope he can come back and play for us during the rest of the season," Stone said. "he isn't noticed much, but he does a lot of things well for us. Fortunately, we've gotten good results from our bench, with Tony Wright, Eddie Frazier and Derrick Lewis filling in for Lawrence to spell Teviin Binns."

Stone also had high praise for freshman Ricky Grace, the 6-1 southpaw from Wilmer-Hutchins, Spud Webb's old school. Grace led MC in scoring with 19. "Ricky has good court awareness. He goes to the boards well, and he's getting a lot more confidence in his shooting."

Monday's game was the final home appearance for Zeak Williams, Binns, Chuckie Graves, and Vernon Coleman. "It's really super how these players have developed during the past two years. They've worked as a team, worked hard, and I'm pleased for them that they won the conference title this year."

Paterno notifies NCAA of violation

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Penn State Football Coach Joe Paterno has notified the NCAA that he violated recruiting rules by attending the recent signing of a New Jersey high school player to a national letter of intent, according to a published report.

Penn State Athletic Director Jim Tarman said the school "inadvertently violated" the rule when Paterno appeared Friday at the Montclair, N.J., home of Quintus McDonald on Friday, according to a copyright story in the York Daily Record.

The rule prohibits NCAA Division I-A head coaches from being present when a student signs a letter of intent off the school's campus.

David Berst, director of enforcement for the NCAA, said that because the violation was of an "isolated, minor or inadvertent variety," the NCAA probably would not start an investigation.

Berst said the NCAA's Committee on Infractions — made up of officials from several NCAA schools — would review correspondence from Penn State about the violation and make a ruling.

"Typically, these matters are private in nature," Berst said.

Paterno admitted the violation in a phone conversation Wednesday, Tarman said. The coach then notified the NCAA by phone and by mail Wednesday, according to Tarman.

"There is no question that I inadvertently violated the rule," Tarman quoted Paterno as saying by phone from Hawaii, where he is vacationing.

"Assistant Coach Fran Ganter informed me on Thursday night that Quintus had decided to enroll at Penn State and that he and his mother had requested that I accompany Coach Ganter to Montclair on Friday."

Paterno thought the rule applied only to "national letter of intent day" — Feb. 13, the first day recruits can sign, according to Tarman.

"Because this was nine days after (the first signing date), I simply did not think of a violation," Paterno said. "I would not knowingly or intentionally want to break the rules.

"But I'm aware, of course, that ignorance of the rules is no excuse," Paterno said. "That fact that I was present at Montclair had no bearing on his decision to attend Penn State."

Tarman said Ganter and members of McDonald's family also were present at the linebacker's signing.

Tarman said the NCAA never has investigated Penn State for a football recruiting violation during his 27 years with the university.

McDonald, reached Tuesday at his Montclair home, declined comment about the development. He said he still plans to go to Penn State, but is not 100 percent sure.

Rangers get Harrah for Sample

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Rangers on Wednesday traded outfielder Billy Sample to the New York Yankees for infielder Toby Harrah, who was the Texas franchise's original shortstop.

In addition, the Yankees will obtain a player to be named later, team officials said.

Harrah, 36, batted .217 last season with one home run and 27 RBIs in 88 games for the Yankees. The four-time American League All-Star was obtained by the Yankees from Cleveland last winter. The Indians acquired Harrah from Texas after the 1978 season, and he still maintains his off-season home in Fort Worth.

Sample, 29, hit .247 with five homers, 33 RBIs and 18 stolen bases for the Rangers in 1984.

The Rangers will give Harrah the opportunity to win either the shortstop or second base job this spring, officials said.

"We are pleased that we have been able to acquire Toby," said Rangers General Manager Tom Grieve, who was Harrah's teammate on the Washington Senators and Rangers from 1971 until 1977.

Region I teams head for Chap

From Staff Reports

Boys basketball will return to the Chaparral Center Friday for Region I preliminary play with the championsips and a berth to the state tournament to be decided Saturday.

It will be Amarillo Palo Duro, 24-7 and victor over Midland Lee in a controversial finish last Saturday, squaring off against Fort Worth Southwest (28-8) in the 6 p.m. opener Friday. At 8 that same night, it will be Lubbock Monterey (29-3) against Denton High (24-9).

Baylor 97, Rice 78

WACO — Baylor junior guard Carlos Briggs poured in a career-high 41 points to lead the Bears to a victory over Rice that clinched his team a spot in the post-season tournament.

Briggs' total was the third-best single game in Baylor's history, and he became only the eighth player in school history to score over 500 points in a season. He now has 536 this year.

Briggs scored 22 of his points in the first half, which ended with Baylor ahead 44-37 on Eric Johnson's breakaway layup at the buzzer.

Baylor freshman Michael Williams scored 20 points and dished out seven assists to help keep the Bears ahead throughout the contest, although they never led by more than 12 points.

Baylor Coach Jim Haller, coaching his last game in Heart o' Texas Coliseum, cleared his bench in the second half to let everyone play. Rice closed to within three points early in the second half, but Williams kept pulling the Bears away.

The loss put Rice at 11-15 for the season and 3-12 in SWC play, while Baylor improved to 11-15 and 4-11.

Terrence Cashaw scored 24 points and Greg Hines 20 for Baylor.

Both teams have only one league game remaining, and Baylor swept Rice this season, meaning even if Baylor loses Saturday at Arkansas and Rice wins at Texas A&M, the Bears would still earn the trip to the post-season tournament, where only the top eight teams advance.

Forced to resign because of irregularities reported to university officials by his players, Haller was obviously pleased with the performance of Briggs, the only member of the team who didn't sign a statement in support of a player whose taped conversation with Haller got the coach in trouble.

"Carlos Briggs obviously picked a great time to show what a great player he is. He played up to his ability tonight. He told me before the game he was ready to play, and he just had a super game," Haller said.

"I think we dominated play from start to finish, and that is encouraging. Michael Williams had another great floor game. Our transition game was great tonight. I thought our quickness advantage over Rice really made the difference."

As the eighth-place team in the league, Baylor will be seeded last in the post-season tournament, but Haller said the tournament "is anybody's game and I'm sure that a lot of strange things will happen there. I'm just glad that our team will be rewarded by being there."

Rice Coach Tommy Suitts said his team was whipped soundly by a Baylor team that played well.

"I thought we were a little tight early, but we finally started to play midway through the first half. We were tentative, and they were loose and free."

Beautiful Jewelry
From London

As most of you know on February 20, 1985, while I was in London on a buying trip, two men, one who was supposedly a customer, entered our store and at gunpoint tied and handcuffed my staff and took $795,000.00 cost in jewelry.

There is nothing on earth that can un-do the fear my girls endured, yet the Lord was certainly with them. With your prayers and your continued support as my loyal customers we will recover and once again be on the road to success.

The new jewelry from England is certainly very fine and so well priced you would not believe it.

We are opening two new shops in London Square this weekend at 1213 W. 2nd St.

Nuggets run over Bullets, 124-111

Associated Press

Cold shooting by the opposition plays right into the hands of the run-and-gun Denver Nuggets.

"When they miss their shots, that let's us play our game of pushing the ball down the court," Denver Coach Doug Moe said after the Nuggets whipped the Washington Bullets 124-111 Wednesday night in a National Basketball Association game.

As they have for the last four seasons, the Nuggets lead the NBA in scoring with an average of 119.4 per game. When the Bullets hit only 42.1 percent of their shots against Denver, the Nuggets had a field day converting Washington's misses into their own baskets.

Rockets 117, Clippers 109

Ralph Sampson scored 13 of his game-high 30 points in the fourth quarter and Lewis Lloyd added 26 points to lift Houston over Los Angeles.

The Clippers, who got 26 points from Derek Smith, cut a 94-81 deficit to 102-97 with 4:35 left in the game. But the Rockets responded with an 11-4 spurt, with Sampson collecting the last five points, to rebuild their margin to 113-101.

Celtics 111, Spurs 102

Boston improved its league-best record to 47-12 with a victory over San Antonio as Larry Bird scored 35 points, his seventh consecutive outing in which he has tallied at least 30.

The Celtics never trailed, but had to hold off a second-half rally by the injury-plagued Spurs. They cut an 83-68 deficit to 95-91 with 6:03 left in the game, but Boston scored the next five points to rebuild a comfortable margin.

Mike Mitchell scored 20 points to lead the Spurs, who played without center Artis Gilmore, who has a back sprain.

NBA Roundup

Bucks 119, Jazz 100

Terry Cummings had 30 points and 16 rebounds and backup guard Ricky Pierce contributed 20 points as Central Division-leading Milwaukee defeated Utah.

The Jazz scored 13 of the first 15 points of the second half, eight of them by Rickey Green, to give them a 65-62 lead, but Cummings and Paul Pressey led a 25-10 Bucks streak that put them ahead 87-75 after three quarters.

Pistons 108, Bulls 99

Dan Roundfield broke a tie by scoring Detroit's first seven points of the fourth quarter, and the Pistons went on to win by holding Chicago to 18 points in the period.

Roundfield's basket 12 seconds into the final quarter gave the Pistons an 83-81 lead, their first advantage since the first period.

Nets 114, Hawks 91

Buck Williams had 22 points and 12 rebounds and Kelvin Ransey added 17 points and a career-high 17 assists in New Jersey's triumph over Atlanta.

The Nets led by just five points at halftime, but they opened a 73-58 advantage by outscoring the Hawks 14-4 to start the third period.

Pacers 108, Knicks 106

Indiana handed New York its 25th loss in 29 road games this season as Clark Kellogg scored 21 points and Herb Williams 19.

The Knicks, who got 28 points from Bernard King, led 79-76 going into the final period before the Pacers rallied to go ahead 101-95 with 1:52 left. A three-point goal by Rory Sparrow and a last-second basket by Trent Tucker made the final margin closer.

Bey: A real heavyweight

The thing I like about David Bey as a heavyweight contender is not his left hook, although it's good, or his right cross, although it has KOd 11 guys in 14 fights. It's his guts.

What I'm trying to say is, there's a lot of them. Size 38-to-40, I would say at an informed guess.

Bey is a throwback. He is not one of your modern sleek pugs who is built like a triangle or a Greek statue, and has a stomach you could scrub clothes on. Bey has a stomach you could ski down. You look at him and you figure he has just stepped off an old copy of the Police Gazette, one of those turn-of-the-century photos where fighters looked like Irish bartenders with their shirts off and their hair parted in the middle.

You figure John L. Sullivan loked like that before Jim Corbett got through with him and gave portliness a bad name forever.

Bey is just about two eclairs this side of fat. You look at him and you know he never tasted cottage cheese in his life, or drank a cup of coffee that wasn't two-thirds sugar.

He goes back to a time when fighters were known as The Boston Strong Boy or The Boilermaker, not The Panther or Adonis or The Orchid Man.

There have been a couple of pugs whose silhouettes ran to the general lines of Bey's. There was Johnny Risko, a round man of the late '20s, a trial horse whose nickname was The Cleveland Rubber Man, perhaps in honor of the way he bounced when he hit the floor.

Then there was Tony Galento, a human keg whose inelegant soubriquet was Two Ton. Tony could fight. He could also bleed. Galento, in midfight, looked like the world's biggest plate of sphaghetti. Just the same, he did floor Joe Louis, no less, and turned Freddie Blassie from a fighter to a wrestler.

NO ONE knows yet whether David Bey can fight or just eat. But, like a lot of fighters today, he is starting at the top. He is going to get a shot at the heavyweight championship of parts of the world on March 15 when he takes on Larry Holmes at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas. After only 14 pro fights.

Lots of guys make sacrifices to get title shots. They give up families, night life, junk food, girls. David Bey gave up three-quarters of a million dollars.

The circumstances are complicated. In boxing, they usually are.

But, in fine, they went like this: Among the several heavyweight champions of the world, one of the longest lists of impostors this side of a motel registry, was the South African, Gerrie Coetzee. How Coetzee got the title is familiar only to those who know their way through the labyrinth of alphabetical boxing commissions, but suffice it to say that he wanted to defend his title in his native South Africa, a place where he loses with slightly less frequency than he does elsewhere.

The fight was to be held in Bophuthswana, a kind of fictitious principality like Graustark or Oz, set up by the government of South Africa to transport those parts of the population who louse up the color scheme further south. The presumption is, if they ever discover diamonds or oil there, Bophuthswana will lose its independent status quicker than you can say Bophuthswana, but its legal betting casino, eager to distance itself from apartheid, dangles multimillion-dollar appearance offers to draw international attractions.

Bey was internationally attractive largely because it was thought that Coetzee could beat him. You have to search long and hard outside of retirement communities to find individuals who can fill this bill, and the better likelihood is that Bey would rather turn out to be just one more world fighter who could stop Gerrie Coetzee in any country.

But he turned the fight and the $750,000 and, doubtless, the title down. In a burst of ethnic fervor and prompted by promoter Don King, David spurned the offer and let it be known that, under no circumstances, did he want to lend any credibility or approval to Bophuthswana. It was not a minor sacrifice. A fighter Bey had beaten in his previous fight, Greg Page, did make the trip, gave Coetzee a bad beating, and came home with the money — and the title.

STILL, DAVID'S nobility of sacrifice did not go unrewarded. Larry Holmes, the once and future king of the heavyweights, decided that, out of gratitude for what Bey had done, he would give him a shot at his title, or what's left of it. Virtue may be its own reward but you can't eat it. And David Bey likes to eat.

Fighting Larry Holmes is not to be compared to fighting Gerrie Coetzee. Some say Larry signed for the fight after counting up the milkshake bills paid for by the Bey family in the last six months.

But David considers himself svelte compared to his former avoirdupois. When he fought in Germany in the late '70s, he often climbed into the ring at indeterminate poundage — because the Army scales stopped at 270. His official weight was listed as 272, but observers say that was before he got the left leg up.

Bey doesn't care. A sunny, carefree character who would never have become a fighter if it weren't for the fact that the kids in his old Philly neighborhood used to taunt him as a halfbreed — his mother was German and Irish, his father black. He won most of those fights, too, but still might not have been mean enough to become a fistfighter for a living except that the alternative — manning a pile-driver on the Navy Yard docks — was almost as bad as bleeding for a living, and a whole lot less lucrative.

He thinks Larry Holmes is ready to be taken. If so, we can have a heavyweight champ who really is a heavyweight, and we can give the part to Orson Welles if they make it into a movie. It'll be nice to have a heavy champ who doesn't look like a young Errol Flynn but an old John L., for a change.

McEnroe abuses Fibak in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — John McEnroe was fined $2,500 for "verbal abuse" of his opponent, but scored a 6-4, 6-7 (7-4), 7-5 victory over Wojtek Fibak Wednesday night in the $375,000 World Championship Tennis Houston Shootout.

McEnroe was given a code violation for audible obscenity after a changeover early in the third set. Later in the set, Fibak was given a time violation point penalty that caused him to start the 11th game down 0-15.

At 5-5 in the set, Fibak's time violation came when he went to the sideline saying he had to cut a string on his racket.

The score went to 30-40 and then Fibak lost his serve when he hit a long forehand. McEnroe held in the 12th game, scoring with an ace to make it 40-30 and a took a service winner on match point, two hours and 20 minutes after the match began.

K.V. Johnson of Mount Vernon, Wash., Grand Prix supervisor, announced later that McEnroe had been fined $2,500 for verbal abuse.

Officials would not say what McEnroe said to Fibak, and neither would the players.

"He acts like he's 2 years old," McEnroe said. "He's one of the best if not the best con artist in the game. You don't see people getting penalized for talking to people in other sports."

Fibak said, "He was at his best behavior in the first and second set, and when I was up 1-love in the third" McEnroe got angry. "Then I told the officials I didn't want him to talk to me and he kept talking. It's one of the ways of getting back in the match."

In another night match, Kevin Curren defeated Steve Denton, 6-4, 6-4.

Earlier in second-round play, Mark Dickson upset No. 4 seed Jimmy Arias, 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 (7-4), while 5th seeded Tim Mayotte was downing Mike Bauer, 6-4 6-2.

Shahar Perkiss whipped Terry Moor, 6-7 (5-7), 6-4, 6-4.

Dickson placed four points to take a 4-0 advantage in the third set tiebreaker.

Mets, Gooden reach terms on contract

NEW YORK (AP) — If all the incentive bonuses in New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden's 1985 contract take effect, the National League Rookie of the Year will earn tenfold what he made last year.

Gooden, 20, signed a one-year contract Wednesday that could earn him more than $400,000 this season.

The right-handed hurler reportedly will earn $275,000 in base salary and at least $60,000 in guaranteed endorsements. Incentives could bring the value of the contract to 10 times the minimum $40,000 he made last season.

The Mets also announced that they had signed shortstop Jose Oquendo to a one-year contract. Oquendo appeared in 81 games with the Mets last season, hitting .222.

Gooden, who set a major league rookie record with 276 strikeouts in 1984, and his agent, Jim Neader, originally sought a contract of about $575,000, while the Mets' initial offer was approximately $250,000.

"I'm glad it's all done now," Gooden said. "I can just concentrate on baseball from here on in."

The contract reportedly includes a $10,000 bonus for making 30 starts, $15,000 for 33 starts and $25,000 for 36 starts; $50,000 for winning the Cy Young award, $25,000 for finishing second and $15,000 for third, fourth or fifth; $15,000 for making the All-Star team, and $15,-000 for winning a Gold Glove.

The Mets also will guarantee Gooden $60,000 in outside endorsements. If Gooden's endorsements exceed that figure, the Mets reportedly would share a percentage with the pitcher.

Dollar in tailspin

LONDON (AP) — World currencies consolidated their gains against the dollar today after massive intervention by Europe's central banks sent the U.S. currency into a tailspin. But traders warned the dollar's reversal may only be temporary.

Gold prices were little changed in light trading.

"The basic perception of the dollar's strentgth has not changed," said one London currency dealer.

On Wednesday, the banks sold a whopping $1.5 billion on European exchanges, knocking the dollar into its biggest one-day tailspin in 3½ years.

Their move followed a dollar surge that saw the U.S. currency breaking records almost daily for a month.

"This operation will not necessarily reverse the trend," said David Morrison, chief international economist at the London stockbroker firm Simon and Coats.

"Nothing fundamental has changed. The (British) pound is back where it was a week ago. What has happened is that an astute piece of action by the central banks has caught out the speculators."

The dollar began today by easing in the Far East. The closing price in Tokyo was 259.00 Japanese yen, down half a yen from the opening and more than two full yen lower than Wednesday's close of 261.10.

When the dollar opened in Europe, it edged down further, hitting 258.75 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

–3.3130 West German marks, down from 3.3285.

–2.8250 Swiss francs, down from 2.8375.

–10.1550 French francs, down from 10.1850.

–3.7475 Dutch guilders, down from 3.7650.

–2,058.00 Italian lire, down from 2,062.60.

–1.3760 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3835.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.0938, compared with $1.0885 Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.71 to close at a bid $291.63.

Dollar steady after sharpest slide in 3 years

By KENT KILPATRICK
AP Business Writer

The dollar steadied after its sharpest decline in 3½ years but it remained at historically high levels and many traders said they saw a continuing underlying demand for the U.S. currency.

The dollar slid sharply in Europe on Wednesday as central banks dumped an estimated $1.5 billion on the currency markets. The drop extended a decline that began in the United States on Tuesday after Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker questioned whether the central banks had acted strongly enough in trying to slow the dollar's powerful surge.

Meanwhile, the Congressional Budget Office disputed the Reagan administration's forecast that the federal budget deficit would gradually decline to $82 billion by 1990 from its current projected level of about $200 billion.

The CBO said it estimated the deficit would remain above $180 billion through the decade, even if Congress adopted all of the spending cuts sought by President Reagan. It said congressional economists were less optimistic about economic trends than the administration.

In congressional testimony, Volcker warned Congress that the United States could not sustain continued big deficits in government operations as well as in its foreign trade.

"They imply a dependence on foreign borrowing by the United States that, left unchecked, will sooner or later undermine the confidence in our economy essential to a strong currency and to prospects for lower interest rates," he said.

The dollar's fall Wednesday reversed a record-shattering ascent, in which the dollar had set records on 16 out of 18 business days this month.

The Federal Reserve said its measure of the dollar against 10 major currencies, weighted for international trade, put the dollar down 1.9 percent from Tuesday.

That was the sharpest drop since a 2.01 percent fall on Aug. 12, 1981, another hectic session in which traders were worried about how high they had bid up the dollar at that time.

But by the Fed's measure, the dollar was 42 percent higher Wednesday than it was after the August 1981 drop.

"My own suspicion is that we'll see the dollar starting to rise again because I think the market is still very, very bullish for the dollar and I suspect we're just seeing a temporary setback," said Neil Robinson, an economist at Chase Manhattan Bank in London.

Winfried Mittne, a trader for the Royal Bank of Canada, said, "The dollar should stay strong also because of confidence in the U.S. economy."

In other economic news Wednesday:

—The Labor Department reported 62 major work stoppages in 1984, the lowest in 38 years and down from 81 in 1983, the previous lowest year.

—The F.W. Dodge division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. said the value of new construction contracts signed in January was 6 percent above the level of a year earlier. It said new contracts totaled $14.81 billion last month, compared with $14.02 billion in January 1984.

FDIC offers $65 million in 520 loans

From Staff Reports

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. subregional office in Midland, has announced a bulk offering of $65,659,837 in loans, according to a letter sent to banks throughout the nation.

According to the FDIC offering letter, the loans are high quality and have been packaged as current accounts (60 days or less). Some of the large credits have participatory interests, and all have future maturity dates.

Of the 520 total loans in the offering, the 29 energy loans, valued at over $35.7 million, constitute over half the book value.

Real Estate loans comprise the largest number with 145 loans being offered, but with a book value of $17.82 million, they are a distant second to energy loans. Other loans in the bulk sale include: 101 miscellaneous loans with a book value of $8.74 million; 10 Small Business Administration loans with a book value of $1.35 million and 97 unsecured loans with a price of $960,078. There is also an offering of 138 vehicle loans with a book value of $1.09 million.

Bidding for the loans will be competitive with a minimum of ten loans per transaction, and all bids must be accompanied by an earnest money deposit of 10 percent of the book value of the loans constituting the bid portion of the sales agreement.

U.S. suffers $10 billion deficit

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suffered a $10.3 billion trade deficit in January, 28 percent higher than the December figure, as a flood of imports swamped a record showing for U.S. exports, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the January deficit was far above the $8 billion deficit recorded in December although the United States exported a record $19.4 billion in goods during the month.

The export total exceeded the old record of $19.2 billion set last July and reflected increases in sales of machinery, office machines and new passenger cars.

However, the 1.4 percent gain in exports over the December total was swamped by a 9.2 percent jump in imports, which totaled $29.7 billion during January.

The United States posted a record trading deficit of $123.3 billion last year and many analysts expect the figure this year will could hit $130 billion.

The country's poor trading performance has been blamed primarily on the remarkable strength of the dollar, which has been headed upward since the end of 1980. After posting almost daily records during most of February, however, the dollar has retreated in the last two days.

However, most analysts say the fundamental forces that have kept the dollar strong have not changed. Those forecasters predict the currency will stay at near-record levels for 1985.

The strong dollar means imports are much more attractive to U.S. consumers because they are cheaper and it makes U.S. goods more difficult to sell overseas because they are more expensive.

The January surge in imports came from increases in passenger cars, telecommunications equipment and iron and steel mill products.

Sales of passenger cars from Japan, the leading importer, totaled $1.06 billion in January, up 1 percent from the December total. But the increase in car shipments from other countries was even more pronounced, jumping 66 percent, to a new total of $897.4 million.

Oil imports were down 3.3 percent during January as the average number of barrels per day dropped to 4.86 million from 4.96 million in December. The price per barrel was also down, dipping to $28.25 in January compared to $28.61 in December. Oil was selling for $29.05 a barrel one year ago.

Exports of agricultural products totaled $3.07 billion in January, a drop of 9 percent from the December level.

However, despite the decline in sales of agricultural products, total export sales rose to their highest level ever and were 8.5 percent above the level of a year ago.

Firm officials say union legislation needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of a struck cement plant in Joppa, Ill. say federal legislation is needed to stem union violence against the facility, two senators suggest the company caused its own problems with strikebreaking activities.

Officials of the Missouri Portland Cement Co. testified Wednesday before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, reciting a litany of incidents they blamed on Local 438 of the Cement, Lime, Gypsum and Allied Workers Divsion of the Boilermakers union.

The witnesses said Illinois state police and the local sheriff's office failed to act on requests for help.

There were no union witnesses at the hearing, punctuated by sharp exchanges between panel Chairman Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who accused the company of forcing the strike.

The union local did sent a letter, however, denying most of the incidents — which have been cited by the company before.

Metzenbaum said the hearing was "one-sided," and Hatch angrily responded that he invited union representatives but they declined to attend. Hatch promised to hold an additional hearing to hear the union side.

Bey: A real heavyweight

The thing I like about David Bey as a heavyweight contender is not his left hook, although it's good, or his right cross, although it has KOd 11 guys in 14 fights. It's his guts.

What I'm trying to say is, there's a lot of them. Size 38-to-40, I would say at an informed guess.

Bey is a throwback. He is not one of your modern sleek pugs who is built like a triangle or a Greek statue, and has a stomach you could scrub clothes on. Bey has a stomach you could ski down. You look at him and you figure he has just stepped off an old copy of the Police Gazette, one of those turn-of-the-century photos where fighters looked like Irish bartenders with their shirts off and their hair parted in the middle.

You figure John L. Sullivan loked like that before Jim Corbett got through with him and gave portliness a bad name forever.

Bey is just about two eclairs this side of fat. You look at him and you know he never tasted cottage cheese in his life, or drank a cup of coffee that wasn't two-thirds sugar.

He goes back to a time when fighters were known as The Boston Strong Boy or The Boilermaker, not The Panther or Adonis or The Orchid Man.

There have been a couple of pugs whose silhouettes ran to the general lines of Bey's. There was Johnny Risko, a round man of the late '20s, a trial horse whose nickname was The Cleveland Rubber Man, perhaps in honor of the way he bounced when he hit the floor.

Then there was Tony Galento, a human keg whose inelegant soubriquet was Two Ton. Tony could fight. He could also bleed. Galento, in midfight, looked like the world's biggest plate of sphaghetti. Just the same, he did floor Joe Louis, no less, and turned Freddie Blassie from a fighter to a wrestler.

NO ONE knows yet whether David Bey can fight or just eat. ' t, like a lot of fighters today, ' is starting at the top. He is going get a shot at the heavyweight championship of parts of the world on March 15 when he takes on Larry Holmes at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas. After only 14 pro fights.

Lots of guys make sacrifices tc get title shots. They give up families, night life, junk food, girls. David Bey gave up three-quarters of a million dollars.

The circumstances are complicated. In boxing, they usually are.

But, in fine, they went like this: Among the several heavyweight champions of the world, one of the longest lists of impostors this side of a motel registry, was the South African, Gerrie Coetzee. How Coetzee got the title is familiar only to those who know their way through the labyrinth of alphabetical boxing commissions, but suffice it to say that he wanted to defend his title in his native South Africa, a place where he loses with slightly less frequency than he does elsewhere.

The fight was to be held in Bophuthswana, a kind of fictitious principality like Graustark or Oz, set up by the government of South Africa to transport those parts of the population who louse up the color scheme further south. The presumption is, if they ever discover diamonds or oil there, Bophuthswana will lose its independent status quicker than you can say Bophuthswana, but its legal betting casino, eager to distance itself from apartheid, dangles multimillion-dollar appearance offers to draw international attractions.

Bey was internationally attractive largely because it was thought-that Coetzee could beat him. You have to search long and hard outside of retirement communities to find individuals who can fill this bill, and the better likelihood is that Bey would rather turn out to be just one more world fighter who could stop Gerrie Coetzee in any country.

But he turned the fight and the $750,000 and, doubtless, the title down. In a burst of ethnic fervor and prompted by promoter Don King, David spurned the offer and let it be known that, under no circumstances, did he want to lend any credibility or approval to Bophuthswana. It was not a minor sacrifice. A fighter Bey had beaten in his previous fight, Greg Page, did make the trip, gave Coetzee a bad beating, and came home with the money — and the title.

STILL, DAVID'S nobility of sacrifice did not go unrewarded. Larry Holmes, the once and future king of the heavyweights, decided that, out of gratitude for what Bey had done, he would give him a shot at his title, or what's left of it. Virtue may be its own reward but you can't eat it. And David Bey likes to eat.

Fighting Larry Holmes is not to be compared to fighting Gerrie Coetzee. Some say Larry signed for the fight after counting up the milkshake bills paid for by the Bey family in the last six months.

But David considers himself svelte compared to his former avoirdupois. When he fought in Germany in the late '70s, he often climbed into the ring at indeterminate poundage — because the Army scales stopped at 270. His official weight was listed as 272, but observers say that was before he got the left leg up.

Bey doesn't care. A sunny, carefree character who would never have become a fighter if it weren't for the fact that the kids in his old Philly neighborhood used to taunt him as a halfbreed — his mother was German and Irish, his father black. He won most of those fights, too, but still might not have been mean enough to become a fistfighter for a living except that the alternative — manning a pile-driver on the Navy Yard docks — was almost as bad as bleeding for a living, and a whole lot less lucrative.

He thinks Larry Holmes is ready to be taken. If so, we can have a heavyweight champ who really is a heavyweight, and we can give the part to Orson Welles if they make it into a movie. It'll be nice to have a heavy champ who doesn't look like a young Errol Flynn but an old John L., for a change.

McEnroe abuses Fibak in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — John McEnroe was fined $2,500 for "verbal abuse" of his opponent, but scored a 6-4, 6-7 (7-4), 7-5 victory over Wojtek Fibak Wednesday night in the $375,000 World Championship Tennis Houston Shootout.

McEnroe was given a code violation for audible obscenity after a changeover early in the third set. Later in the set, Fibak was given a time violation point penalty that caused him to start the 11th game down 0-15.

At 5-5 in the set, Fibak's time violation came when he went to the sideline saying he had to cut a string on his racket.

The score went to 30-40 and then Fibak lost his serve when he hit a long forehand. McEnroe held in the 12th game, scoring with an ace to make it 40-30 and a took a service winner on match point, two hours and 20 minutes after the match began.

K.V. Johnson of Mount Vernon, Wash., Grand Prix supervisor, announced later that McEnroe had been fined $2,500 for verbal abuse.

Officials would not say what McEnroe said to Fibak, and neither would the players.

"He acts like he's 2 years old," McEnroe said. "He's one of the best if not the best con artist in the game. You don't see people getting penalized for talking to people in other sports."

Fibak said, "He was at his best behavior in the first and second set, and when I was up 1-love in the third" McEnroe got angry. "Then I told the officials I didn't want him to talk to me and he kept talking. It's one of the ways of getting back in the match."

In another night match, Kevin Curren defeated Steve Denton, 6-4, 6-4.

Earlier in second-round play, Mark Dickson upset No. 4 seed Jimmy Arias, 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 (7-4), while 5th seeded Tim Mayotte was downing Mike Bauer, 6-4 6-2.

Shahar Perkiss whipped Terry Moor, 6-7 (5-7), 6-4, 6-4.

Dickson placed four points to take a 4-0 advantage in the third set tiebreaker.

Mets, Gooden reach terms on contract

NEW YORK (AP) — If all the incentive bonuses in New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden's 1985 contract take effect, the National League Rookie of the Year will earn tenfold what he made last year.

Gooden, 20, signed a one-year contract Wednesday that could earn him more than $400,000 this season.

The right-handed hurler reportedly will earn $275,000 in base salary and at least $60,000 in guaranteed endorsements. Incentives could bring the value of the contract to 10 times the minimum $40,000 he made last season.

The Mets also announced that they had signed shortstop Jose Oquendo to a one-year contract. Oquendo appeared in 81 games with the Mets last season, hitting .222.

Gooden, who set a major league rookie record with 276 strikeouts in 1984, and his agent, Jim Neader, originally sought a contract of about $575,000, while the Mets' initial offer was approximately $250,000.

"I'm glad it's all done now," Gooden said. "I can just concentrate on baseball from here on in."

The contract reportedly includes a $10,000 bonus for making 30 starts, $15,000 for 33 starts and $25,000 for 36 starts; $50,000 for winning the Cy Young award, $25,000 for finishing second and $15,000 for third, fourth or fifth; $15,000 for making the All-Star team, and $15,-000 for winning a Gold Glove.

The Mets also will guarantee Gooden $60,000 in outside endorsements. If Gooden's endorsements exceed that figure, the Mets reportedly would share a percentage with the pitcher.

Dollar in tailspin

LONDON (AP) — World currencies consolidated their gains against the dollar today after massive intervention by Europe's central banks sent the U.S. currency into a tailspin. But traders warned the dollar's reversal may only be temporary.

Gold prices were little changed in light trading.

"The basic perception of the dollar's strentgth has not changed," said one London currency dealer.

On Wednesday, the banks sold a whopping $1.5 billion on European exchanges, knocking the dollar into its biggest one-day tailspin in 3½ years.

Their move followed a dollar surge that saw the U.S. currency breaking records almost daily for a month.

"This operation will not necessarily reverse the trend," said David Morrison, chief international economist at the London stockbroker firm Simon and Coats.

"Nothing fundamental has changed. The (British) pound is back where it was a week ago. What has happened is that an astute piece of action by the central banks has caught out the speculators."

The dollar began today by easing in the Far East. The closing price in Tokyo was 259.00 Japanese yen, down half a yen from the opening and more than two full yen lower than Wednesday's close of 261.10.

When the dollar opened in Europe, it edged down further, hitting 258.75 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

-3.3130 West German marks, down from 3.3285.

--2.8250 Swiss francs, down from 2.8375.

-10.1550 French francs, down from 10.1850.

-3.7475 Dutch guilders, down from 3.7650.

--2,058.00 Italian lire, down from 2,062.60.

-1.3760 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3835.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.0938, compared with $1.0885 Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.71 to close at a bid $291.63.

Dollar steady after sharpest slide in 3 years

By KENT KILPATRICK
AP Business Writer

The dollar steadied after its sharpest decline in 3½ years but it remained at historically high levels and many traders said they saw a continuing underlying demand for the U.S. currency.

The dollar slid sharply in Europe on Wednesday as central banks dumped an estimated $1.5 billion on the currency markets. The drop extended a decline that began in the United States on Tuesday after Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker questioned whether the central banks had acted strongly enough in trying to slow the dollar's powerful surge.

Meanwhile, the Congressional Budget Office disputed the Reagan administration's forecast that the federal budget deficit would gradually decline to $82 billion by 1990 from its current projected level of about $200 billion.

The CBO said it estimated the deficit would remain above $180 billion through the decade, even if Congress adopted all of the spending cuts sought by President Reagan. It said congressional economists were less optimistic about economic trends than the administration.

In congressional testimony, Volcker warned Congress that the United States could not sustain continued big deficits in government operations as well as in its foreign trade.

"They imply a dependence on foreign borrowing by the United States that, left unchecked, will sooner or later undermine the confidence in our economy essential to a strong currency and to prospects for lower interest rates," he said.

The dollar's fall Wednesday reversed a record-shattering ascent, in which the dollar had set records on 16 out of 18 business days this month.

The Federal Reserve said its measure of the dollar against 10 major currencies, weighted for international trade, put the dollar down 1.9 percent from Tuesday.

That was the sharpest drop since a 2.01 percent fall on Aug. 12, 1981, another hectic session in which traders were worried about how high they had bid up the dollar at that time.

But by the Fed's measure, the dollar was 42 percent higher Wednesday than it was after the August 1981 drop.

"My own suspicion is that we'll see the dollar starting to rise again because I think the market is still very, very bullish for the dollar and I suspect we're just seeing a temporary setback," said Neil Robinson, an economist at Chase Manhattan Bank in London.

Winfried Mittne, a trader for the Royal Bank of Canada, said, "The dollar should stay strong also because of confidence in the U.S. economy."

In other economic news Wednesday:

—The Labor Department reported 62 major work stoppages in 1984, the lowest in 38 years and down from 81 in 1983, the previous lowest year.

—The F.W. Dodge division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. said the value of new construction contracts signed in January was 6 percent above the level of a year earlier. It said new contracts totaled $14.81 billion last month, compared with $14.02 billion in January 1984.

FDIC offers $65 million in 520 loans

From Staff Reports

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. subregional office in Midland, has announced a bulk offering of $65,659,837 in loans, according to a letter sent to banks throughout the nation.

According to the FDIC offering letter, the loans are high quality and have been packaged as current accounts (60 days or less). Some of the large credits have participatory interests, and all have future maturity dates.

Of the 520 total loans in the offering, the 29 energy loans, valued at over $35.7 million, constitute over half the book value.

Real Estate loans comprise the largest number with 145 loans being offered, but with a book value of $17.82 million, they are a distant second to energy loans. Other loans in the bulk sale include: 101 miscellaneous loans with a book value of $8.74 million; 10 Small Business Administration loans with a book value of $1.35 million and 97 unsecured loans with a price of $960,078. There is also an offering of 138 vehicle loans with a book value of $1.09 million.

Bidding for the loans will be competitive with a minimum of ten loans per transaction, and all bids must be accompanied by an earnest money deposit of 10 percent of the book value of the loans constituting the bid portion of the sales agreement.

U.S. suffers $10 billion deficit

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suffered a $10.3 billion trade deficit in January, 28 percent higher than the December figure, as a flood of imports swamped a record showing for U.S. exports, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the January deficit was far above the $8 billion deficit recorded in December although the United States exported a record $19.4 billion in goods during the month.

The export total exceeded the old record of $19.2 billion set last July and reflected increases in sales of machinery, office machines and new passenger cars.

However, the 1.4 percent gain in exports over the December total was swamped by a 9.2 percent jump in imports, which totaled $29.7 billion during January.

The United States posted a record trading deficit of $123.3 billion last year and many analysts expect the figure this year will could hit $130 billion.

The country's poor trading performance has been blamed primarily on the remarkable strength of the dollar, which has been headed upward since the end of 1980. After posting almost daily records during most of February, however, the dollar has retreated in the last two days.

However, most analysts say the fundamental forces that have kept the dollar strong have not changed. Those forecasters predict the currency will stay at near-record levels for 1985.

The strong dollar means imports are much more attractive to U.S. consumers because they are cheaper and it makes U.S. goods more difficult to sell overseas because they are more expensive.

The January surge in imports came from increases in passenger cars, telecommunications equipment and iron and steel mill products.

Sales of passenger cars from Japan, the leading importer, totaled $1.06 billion in January, up 1 percent from the December total. But the increase in car shipments from other countries was even more pronounced, jumping 66 percent, to a new total of $897.4 million.

Oil imports were down 3.3 percent during January as the average number of barrels per day dropped to 4.86 million from 4.96 million in December. The price per barrel was also down, dipping to $28.25 in January compared to $28.61 in December. Oil was selling for $29.05 a barrel one year ago.

Exports of agricultural products totaled $3.07 billion in January, a drop of 9 percent from the December level.

However, despite the decline in sales of agricultural products, total export sales rose to their highest level ever and were 8.5 percent above the level of a year ago.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Reeves producer flows 4.9 Mmcf

From Staff Reports

A plug back and recompletion in the Chapman Deep (Fusselman) field of Reeves County has resulted in a 4.9 Mmcfd well.

The ARCO OIL & GAS CO. No. 1 Agnes Beckham "26" was plugged back from the Atoka zone, 13,359 to 13,602 ft., andrecompleted in perforations from 15,644-15,703 ft. The well had a flowing tubing pressure of 4500 psi, an average shut-in temperature of 123.5 degrees and a bottom hole temperature of 200 degrees. The Fusselman was perforated from 15,644 to 15,703 ft. and acidized with 15,000 gallons of 20 percent HCL acid.

Formation tops for the well were listed as: the Bell Canyon at 2,930 ft., Brushy Canyon at 5,305 ft., Dean at 9,288 ft., Wolfcamp at 9,613 ft., Atoka at 12,982 ft., Mississippian at 15,414 ft., Woodford Shale at 15,530 ft., and the Upper Silurian at 15,641 ft. Top of the pay was 15,644 ft.

The well was deepended to 15,705 ft, with a five inch liner hung from 15,143 to 15,705 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 1,320 ft. from south lines of Section 26, Block 57, T-2, T&P survey, two miles southwest of Orla.

Lynn discovery tested to pump 139 barrels

A proposed field name of Lynn, Southwest (Strawn) has been proposed for a recent discovery in Lynn County.

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO. tested the No. 1 Morris to pump 139 barrels of 34.7 gravity crude and no water. Gas-oil ratio is 1,259:1. Amoco perforated the Strawn from 8,833 to 8,913 ft.

Drilled to 9,500 ft., the well is plugged back to 8,950 ft. Final casing size set was 5 1/2 inches at 9,500 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 8,623 ft., the Mississippian at 8,973 ft., and the Ellenburger at 9,303 ft. on a ground elevation of 2,893 ft. Top of the pay was 8,833 ft.

Location is 1,965 ft. from north and 950 ft. from east lines of Section 435, Block 9, TTRR survey, 15 miles southwest of Tahoka.

Recompletion yields 53 barrel Cisco find

Cisco oil production was discovered during a recompletion project in Lea County.

ADOBE OIL & GAS CORP. tested the No. 1 State "16" to pump 53 barrels of 41 gravity crude, 54 Mcfd and 58 barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio was 1,019:1. Adobe perforated the Cisco from 11,178 to 11,199 ft. and acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Originally drilled to 13,770 ft., with 5 1/2 inch casing at 13,770 ft., the well is currently plugged back to 11,400 ft.

On a ground elevation of 3,947 ft., formation tops include Anhydrite at 2,150 ft., San Andres at 4,600 ft., Tubb at 7,487 ft., Abo at 8,569 ft., Wolfcamp at 9,803 ft., Pennsylvanian at 10,728 ft., Canyon at 11,004 ft., Atoka at 12,310 ft., and the Mississippian at 13,193 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 16, T14s, R36e.

The well was originally completed in the Austin (Mississippian) field in 1978. No details were available.

Bone Springs strike pumps 25 barrels

An unidentified Bone Springs discovery was completed in Lea County.

HARVEY E. YATES CO. tested the No. 1 Howry "25" to pump 25 barrels of crude, 25 Mcfd and no water. Gas-oil ratio is 1,000:1. The Bone Spring zone was perforated from 8,486 to 8,515 ft. and acidized with 14,250 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 11,565 ft., the well is plugged back to 9,315 ft. Final casing set ws 5 1/2 inches at 11,565 ft.

Location is 1,650 ft. from north and 330 ft. from west lines of Section 25, T17s, R37e.

Kimble County gains 47 barrel discovery

An unidentified discovery in Kimble County was recently completed by a Midland firm.

MARSHALL R. YOUNG OIL CO. tested the No. 1 Ross Goodall to pump 47 barrels of 26 gravity crude and five barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio is 417:1. Young perforated the pay from 2,506 to 2,512 ft.

Drilled to 4,130 ft., the well is plugged back to 2,590 ft. Final casing size set was 4 1/2 inches at 3,450 ft.

The well is located 934 ft. from northwest and 3,921 ft. from southwest lines of Section 529, Ernest Francke survey, Abstract 123, 17 miles west of Junction.

CHAMBER NOTES

Arts Assembly, Chamber bureau create Gourmet Midland

By SUSAN ATCHISON

Only one form of art can make taste buds tingle. Recognizing that, the Midland Arts Assembly and the Chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau have created a festival of foods to feature local restaurants, caterers and clubs that have contributed to the enhancement of Midland's culinary arts.

The event, to be called GOURMET MIDLAND, will add a new dimension to the Arts Assembly's annual Celebration of the Arts May 10-20. It will be held from 6 p.m. until 9 p.m. on Saturday, May 11, at Midland Center. Booth space for this novel "show and taste" of foods is available for $75 per participant, with a limit of 35 booths.

"Midland has come a long way in the food industry," Shawna K. Rust, Gourmet Midland chairman, said. "We have a wide variety of chefs and other individuals in the area who contribute a great deal to our daily lives just through the foods they prepare, yet culinary arts have been overlooked and under-emphasized in the world of art. Gourmet Midland will hopefully reverse that trend."

Participants eager to have a part in Gourmet Midland have already reserved one third of the booth space available. Establishments interested in having a booth should call Rust at 683-3381 as soon as possible.

Gourmet Midland will be open to the public, $15 each or two for $25. Corporations may buy blocks of tickets at a reduced price for employees and their clients. Tickets will go on sale in mid-April. Food samples, special coupons, elaborate displays, cooking demonstrations and big band music for dancing will all be part of this special arts celebration.

Gourmet Midland board members are Rust and her co-chairman, Zuma Renaud of Midland Arts Assembly, Louis Hochman of Luigi's Restaurant, Kathy Austgen of Ramada Hotel, Nicki Dancy of Holiday Inn, Bob Bunch of KNFM, Amy Weldon from the Chamber and Barbara Allen.

THE MIDLAND CENTENNIAL has been in full gear with a celebration of different sorts. It kicked off the celebration of Midland's 100th birthday with an impressive rally, where Vice President George Bush was featured speaker and honored guest. A former Midlander himself, Bush received a warm welcome "home" as he told about the days when he was a part of this community. Robin Jackson, Centennial director, will be coordinating and overseeing a full year of varied events. They will culminate the July 4th weekend, when CentennialFest activities will be in full swing with a parade, bike race, Centennial Plaza dedication, entertainment and an assortment of old fashioned food, crafts and games.

•••

Chamber of Commerce members will have an opportunity to preview TRADESHOW MIDLAND exhibits at a Business After Hours Mixer Tuesday, March 19. Invitations will be sent, following a similar format to previous mixers. Only a few booths remain for the March 20 opening of the two day show. For more information on how your firm can participate in this business-to-business exhibition, cal Alison Peeler at 683-3381.

•••

Other committees of the Chamber have been active in projects aimed at improving Midland's quality of life. The JAIL TASK FORCE, a special group formed recently to assess the county's jail situation and make recommendations, continues its study. A report from that committee is expected by late March. Meanwhile, the Transportation Committee plans to meet with representatives from the Greater Odess Area Chamber of Commerce on March 12 for an update on construction action at Midland Regional Airport. The meeting is scheduled for 4 p.m. at the Airport Executel.

•••

Grant Billingsley, executive director of the Chamber, Charles Coffman and Jim Everett, recently presented Midland's legislative program to the NORTHWEST TEXAS LEGISLATION COUNCIL at a breakfast meeting in Austin. The program was developed from the results of a legislative survey which polled all Chamber members. The composite of Midland's views concerning major legislative issues has been sent to all members of the House and Senate. The program is also available to the public at the Chamber of Commerce office, free of charge.

The Chamber recently added STEVE HARDIN, a graduate of Mississippi State, to its staff as manager of Economic Development. In that position, Hardin will oversee the industrial and economic development programs of the Chamber. In other staff news, Billingsley has been elected to the board of the Texas Chamber of Commerce Executives, and Shawna Rust has completed a week-long course at a Chamber of Commerce Institute, for organization management in Norman, Oklahoma.

•••

New businesses in Midland welcomed recently by the Chamber's M-Squad include Pages and Prints and McDonald's Restaurant. Upcoming ribbon cuttings include Independence Plaza, Texas American Bank, Ramada Hotel and Courthouse Spa.

Firm announces mortgage rates

CHICAGO (AP) — Average mortgage rates for single-family homes in 14 metropolitan areas as of Feb. 27, as compiled by the Chicago Title Insurance Co. The rates are for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages for 80 percent of the value of the house. A point is a one-time fee equaling one percent of the mortgage.

UNION

The strike against the company began last June 15 after the union refused to accept company demands for economic concessions. McIntyre admitted the company expected rejection of the proposals and prepared for a strike before it started by hiring an outside consultant, installing a fence topped by barbed wire and placing outdoor lighting around the plant.

On Aug. 6, the firm hired permanent replacement workers.

Metzenbaum told the company witnesses, "You looked for a strike, you created it, you did everything possible to break your union and then came to us with hearsay evidence.

"I suggest if you went back and sat down with your employees, and put something in the pot, maybe you wouldn't be here asking the U.S. Senate for assistance."

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., whose former House district included the plant, said, "The attitude of the community is the company did not want to settle, and went out of its way to irritate labor-management relations."

A different picture was painted by Jerry L. McIntyre, vice president for operations of Missouri Portland Cement Co., whose testimony recited dozens of violent incidents.

Contending the company negotiated in good faith, he said, "There has been violence to such an extent that we simply cannot catalog all of it.

"For example, we know that there have been literally hundreds of tires flattened by nails scattered by strikers...There have been over a dozen windshields smashed and scores of other incidents, including vandalism, intimidation, anonymous phone calls, harassment, bomb threats, shootings, beatings and attempted murder."

David A. Lang, an attorney hired by the company, testified, "We believe that only through federal legislation can such lawless conduct be controlled because of the obvious apathy and political tendencies of elected state and local officials, and the police who take orders from them."

The president of the 115-member local, David Beck, said in a letter to Simon, the union does not "approve of, condone or encourage violence."

Beck said only three of the dozens of incidents cited by the company actually occurred. He said a car was damaged after it tried to run down a picket, a truck was damaged — resulting in a conviction — and a substance thrown at four company guards was "skunk-scent," not a health-threatening substance as charged by the company.

"Violence will not help the union to win the strike, it can only hurt us," he said. "The company has more to gain in this situation by creating violence and they know it," he wrote.

Firm raiders: eliminating unfit managers

WASHINGTON (AP) — While executives of major American corporations describe takeover specialists as fast-buck "dudes" trying to mug their companies, the corporate raiders say they are only trying to get rid of unfit managers.

Those positions were staked out Wednesday during a House panel hearing when some of the big guns of recent corporate wars loosened their tongues.

Carl Icahn, the New York financier who is fighting for control of Phillips Petroleum Co., contended that modern corporate management is based on an "anti-Darwinian theory: survival of the unfittest."

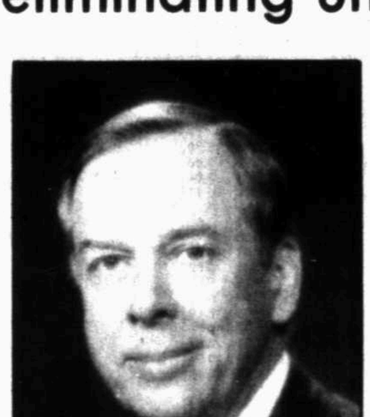
He talked of "mediocre" and "arrogant" managers, applying the second term to the Phillips officials he has dealt with during the last three weeks.

"I don't think I'm arrogant," Phillips executive vice president Charles M. Kittrell retorted. "I think I have more respect for the shareholders of Phillips than anyone at this table."

Kittrell said he was talking about those who had held Phillips stock for, perhaps, 30 years to 50 years and "had faith in the company," not necessarily "Johnny-come-latelies."

He called Ichan and Mesa Petroleum Chairman T. Boone Pickens "dudes."

Kittrell said he was proud of his lengthy association with the firm and its commitment to long-term energy production — a goal he said was not helped by having to divert resources to fight takeover attempts.



T. Boone Pickens

"We not only get competition from these dudes but competition at the pump," he said.

Kittrell commended the telecommunications, consumer protection and finance subcommittee of the Energy and Commerce Committee for its hearings on takeovers even though "we are in it up to our eyeballs and there's not time enough to do anything for us."

Taking a swipe at corporate executives, Ichan said the best managers often do not rise to the top because "the fittest often are a little abrasive."

He said many chief executives get their jobs "because they have been there 20 years and kowtowed" to the man they succeed and "because they know how to get along with the board."

"Management has a vice-like grip on these companies," he said. "The only way you can get half these guys off the golf course is to file a 13-D" — the notice to the Securities and Exchange Commission of an investor's intention to take over a company.

Pickens, an earlier Phillips suitor, was in an equally combative mood.

"Mergers don't divert management from running companies," he said. "Mergers divert management attention from hunting and fishing camps."

Icahn said raiders such as he and Pickens often pay more than a financial price for their efforts.

"A lot of people with the money to do it don't want to get into these things because you start reading about yourself in the newspaper," Icahn said. "I used to read that I'm a gangster. Now they say I'm not real."

Icahn referred to Phillips newspaper ads questioning whether Icahn was "for real" in the sense of whether he could put together the credit that would be required to follow through on his offer.

Datapoint files two suits aimed at takeover bids

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Datapoint Corp. has filed two lawsuits aimed at halting takeover bids by Asher Edelman.

One suit, filed in federal court Wednesday, charges Edelman with antitrust violations. The other, filed in state court Wednesday, seeks a ruling that top company officers have not mismanaged the San Antonio-based company.

The federal petition charges Edelman and his partners, who are seeking to take over Datapoint's board of directors, would be creating an interlocking directorate between Datapoint, Mohawk Data Sciences of Parsippany, N.J., and Management Assistance Inc. of New York.

All three produce computer systems which use proprietary software to connect them into a network.

Edelman, who is vice chairman of both MAI and Mohawk, has nominated himself for Datapoint's board.

He also has nominated MAI directors Dwight Sutherland, Charles Stevenson Jr. and Daniel Kail. Kail is MAI's chief operating officer.

Datapoint claims both MAI and Mohawk compete directly with it in the computer equipment market.

The corporation is asking that the current Edelman group be forbidden from moving forward with plans to replace Datapoint's board.

MAI earlier this year was broken into two parts by Edelman. Its computer manufacturing subsidiary was sold to private investor Bennett LeBow. The service division was sold to a subsidiary of Bell Atlantic Corp.

In the state court suit, plaintiffs Datapoint Corp., Chairman Harold E. O'Kelley and President Edward Gistaro have asked the court to find that Datapoint's $15.9 million second quarter loss was not caused by mismanagement or breach of fiduciary responsibility as charged by Edelman.

Bank denies early notice of international violations

BOSTON (AP) — Bank of Boston officials said they were "shocked and disappointed" the federal Controller of the Currency's office would imply its examiners told the bank it had violated currency-reporting rules in 1982.

The bank, which pleaded guilty and was fined a record $500,000 earlier this month for failing to report $1.2 billion in foreign currency transactions, has maintained it did not become aware of them until 1984.

In a statement Wednesday, the bank said the report of Sept. 30, 1982, "noted only a violation of the regulations dealing with domestic bank transactions and stated that corrective action as to that violation was taken during the examination."

The Boston Globe reported that the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency said the bank promised to take corrective action when told it was not in compliance in September 1982.

That date appears in a letter sent to a House committee on Tuesday by Acting Comptroller of the Currency H. Joe Selby.

RepublicBank First National is county depository bank

RepublicBank First National Midland has been selected as the Midland County depository bank for 1985 and 1986. The bank was also named depository bank for the two year term for the City of Midland.

RepublicBank First National was selected as the County depository after submitting a sealed bid for the deposits of Midland County public funds and trust funds of the County and District Clerks and the Public School funds. The bid was submitted to the County Commissioner's Court for review February 11.

The bank was approved as depository for the city following the submission of a sealed bid to the Midland City Council.

RepublicBank First National Midland is a member of RepublicBank Corp., a Texas bank holding company with 38 affiliate banks in Texas and combined assets of over $21 billion.

Pipeline construction design underway

HOUSTON — Construction design for the 142-mile South CO2 pipeline is well underway with an Amoco Pipeline Co. project team in Lubbock, the company said.

The proposed common carrier line will run from Denver City, southeast to the McCamey area and is planned to be onstream in early 1986.

Amoco Pipeline, which recently completed the Bravo CO2 pipeline, was selected as the design and construction manager by the steering committee of the participants group in December.

Participants, in addition to Amoco, are Arco Pipeline, Gulf Pipeline, Marathon Petroleum, Shell Western E&P, and other major oil companies.

Sources of CO2 for the pipeline will be the Bravo Dome in northeastern New Mexico and Sheep Mountain and McElmo Dome in southern Colorado. The CO2 will move to Denver City through existing CO2 pipelines.

Witness: Fraser's control led to FNB's downfall

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Witnesses in the trial involving ownership of the First National (now RepublicBank First National of Midland) Bank Building cited loyalty to the former bank as their reason for the purchase while one of the buyers testified today that, in his opinion, former FNB President Charles Fraser's control "ultimately caused the downfall" of the bank.

A Midland drilling contractor who agreed to join a partnership to help pull the First National Bank of Midland out of a crisis by buying the 24-story FNB Building for $75 million testified in federal court Wednesday he had been persuaded that "anything coming out of that bank had to be gospel.

"My feelings have always been so deeply toward that bank," said the contractor, 54-year-old Gene Sledge. The late C.J. Kelly, then FNB president, in 1973 "cut me a cashier's check" for a quarter of a million dollars to help Sledge start a new business venture.

"He (Kelly) said, 'Someday bring me some collateral,'" Sledge recalled. "That was quite a vote of confidence."

In late December 1982, Fraser proposed that Sledge and six other Midland-Odessa oilmen-investors set up paperwork to purchase the building for $75 million and then lease the building to FNB for $3 million a year.

"There wouldn't be any risk," Sledge said.

Testifying today, Midland oilman Tom Brown, one of the buyers of the building, described Fraser as a "workaholic who was deep in papers, deep in thought. He put a lot of pressure on himself" in running FNB's operation.

"He was probably too strong, if anything. He did not do a lot of delegating. He handled everything himself," said Brown.

San Antonio attorney Seagal Wheatley asked Brown if Fraser's control "ultimately caused the downfall of the bank."

Brown said, "Yes."

Brown, who is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Tom Brown Inc., said his company in 1982 was the FNB's largest corporate customer. He also said the company "had an astronomical debt of $160 million-plus."

Brown said Fraser, a petroleum engineer, was "believe me, he was the best" in his business and was "very tough" in calculating loan figures. Brown said he "absolutely" respected Fraser's views.

WHEN THE FNB Building sale was finalized, the bank needed the funds by Dec. 31 so that FNB would reflect a profit for 1982, according to Sledge's testimony. The bank had suffered energy-loan losses, as the oil boom was declining and petroleum prices were dropping. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) already was examining bank records and had disallowed Fraser's request to sell the building to raise capital.

"There had been some losses," Sledge said Fraser told him, "and this would put them in a profit posture similar to 1981."

Sledge said he trusted Fraser.

"I was led to believe that he was the premier engineer in this country," Sledge testified in the non-jury trial presided over by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton. "At that point in my life, I would not have doubted anything he told me."

Sledge said he was convinced the downtown building was worth "every bit of 75 (million dollars) and maybe as much as a hundred (million dollars)."

An appraisal in 1983 reflected a $49 million value on the building, according to testimony Tuesday.

Sledge said he, as did each of seven members in the partnership known as Eagle Properties Ltd., "put up $150,000" to help set up the financing and to fund Eagle Properties Ltd.

"And that in all probability would be the sum total we would have to put up," Sledge said, since "permanent financing" was impending.

NEVERTHELESS, on the afternoon of Dec. 31, 1982, in the 24th-floor FNB Board Room, members of the partnership signed $25 million in FNB promissory notes. As a limited partner, Sledge's part was $2.5 million, he said.

Others in the partnership were Thomas C. "Tom" Brown and M.W. "Buddy" Branum, general partners, and limited partners J.L. Davis, Clint Hurt and Carl Lawrence, all of Midland, and Charles R. Perry of Odessa.

In addition, letters of credit were drafted by which InterFirst Bank of Dallas and Texas Commerce Bank of Houston would fund $50 million toward that purchase.

Courtroom evidence indicated that none of the Eagle partners paid anything on the interest or principal of the $25 million in FNB notes. Eagle partners contended that interest wasn't due until there had been a "cash disbursement," which apparently never came.

But in mid-1983 they did sign to fund the two $25 million loans from Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank. When that money was funded to FNB, the Eagle partners by agreement with FNB began receiving $6 million a year for leasing the building to FNB.

By then, the Eagle partnership apparently was aware the appraised value of the FNB Building was $49 million and not $75 million.

"We were already in a trap," Sledge said. "It appeared at that time that the bank was getting in worse and worse shape."

ON FRIDAY, Oct. 14, 1983, FNB, Texas' largest independent bank, which had assets of $1.4 billion, failed and was closed. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) as receiver and liquidator took over the assets and liabilities and sold the bank's assets for $51.1 million to RepublicBank. The new bank opened for business on the following Monday as RepublicBank First National Midland. FNB depositors lost no funds, though FNB stock became worthless.

FDIC, as FNB's receiver, later broke the FNB-Eagle lease but RepublicBank negotiated a lease agreement with Eagle in order to stay in the FNB Building. RepublicBank also bought the $50 million in loans from Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank.

And FDIC sued the Eagle partnership for the $25 million in promissory notes. The partnership refused to pay and filed a countersuit.

That case is now on trial. The "winner" — FDIC or Eagle — or even RepublicBank could end up as owner of the building.

Sledge said Fraser did not tell him OCC had disallowed sale of the building prior to the December 1982 offering to the Eagle partners.

"What he told me was pretty much all positive," Sledge said. "Based on that, I was ready to go."

Sledge did not accuse Fraser of fraud but said, "I don't believe he told me the correct condition of the bank."

EAGLE PARTNER Clint Hurt, also a drilling contractor, said he trusted Fraser "implicitly," that he "didn't question his particular reasons" for selling the building but referred to the "very unfortunate examination" by the federal auditors (OCC).

By 1983, undercover FDIC investigators were filtering into the bank to examine bank records.

Hurt said Fraser told him he had a "sealed appraisal" on the building.

Further, Hurt said he had no real interest in owning the building. "Real estate is not my business...I had adequate depreciation" in oil rigs. He said there would be "some tax implications" in the setup to buy the building.

Man gets probation for robbery

By MARK LEWIS and HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writers

A 23-year-old Midland man was sentenced Wednesday to seven years on probation and fined $2,000 for robbing two Midland teen-agers Oct. 13 in a movie-theater parking lot.

Tommy Joe Ramirez, 2105 N. Benton, was found guilty of the lesser included offense of robbery after originally being indicted for aggravated robbery. Prosecutors agreed to abandon that indictment before closing arguments Wednesday because a knife Ramirez allegedly used to threaten the victims was never found, and testimony about it wasn't strong enough to prove he was carrying one.

"Unfortunately, we didn't find the knife," Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors told the jury. "For that reason, we don't have aggravated robbery. But you don't need a knife for a robbery."

Defense attorney J.K. Rusty Wall urged the jury to find his client guilty of assault, "if you must find him guilty," but the eight-man, four-woman panel took only 22 minutes to convict Ramirez of robbery. They then spent more than an hour deliberating on punishment before giving him a four-year suspended sentence and the fine, and recommending probation.

Final sentencing was to be made today by 238th District Judge Vann Culp, but he was expected to follow the jury's recommendations.

Ramirez could have been given up to 20 years in the Texas Department of Corrections, but the jurors apparently were swayed by his lack of prior felony convictions, which made him eligible for probation.

"There's a big difference between being eligible for it and being entitled to it or deserving of it," District Attorney Al Schorre told the jury during the penalty phase of the trial. Schorre referred to probation as "crime on the installment plan," and asked the jury to send a message to criminals by sentencing Ramirez to the TDC. But they apparently responded to Wall's plea to "Give this young man an opportunity to rehabilitate himself."

Throughout the proceedings, Ramirez sat quietly, expressionless, his eyes on the table in front of him. Earlier Wednesday, his mother Delia Ramirez had testified her son was a ninth-grade dropout who lived at home and had no steady job.

Ms. Ramirez said she had taken her son to the UA Cine IV at about 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 13, and was supposed to pick him up at 10 p.m., but received a call that he was in jail.

The two victims, a 17-year-old Lee High School senior and his 15-year-old girlfriend, a Lee junior, had earlier testified that Ramirez and another Hispanic man had approached them in the parking lot at 9:35 p.m. and demanded money. The boy said he heard the click of switchblades but did not actually see the weapons; the girl said she saw Ramirez holding a knife.

The robbery was interrupted by agents of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, who drove up and apprehended Ramirez. The other suspect ran away, and no knives were found on Ramirez or on the scene by the ABC agents or Midland police.

"Where is this knife which was supposed to exist?" Wall asked the jurors, trying to separate his client's actions from those of the other suspect, who was never identified. But Connors scoffed at the idea that Ramirez and the other man had committed separate crimes.

"Mr. Wall would have you believe there were two transactions — (the other man) was out to rob them, but the defendant was only out to assault them. Come on. They were acting together."

Police were asked to patrol both victims' houses Tuesday night after the 15-year-old girl apparently felt intimidated in the courtroom by members of Ramirez' family, according to Schorre.

Before the rule requiring witnesses to remain outside the courtroom during testimony was invoked, the two teen-age victims were sitting three rows behind several male members of the defendant's family, one of whom looked back at the 15-year-old girl several times. At one point, he held up a matchbook with the victims' names clearly printed on it as he whispered to the man next to him. The girl gasped, and he then turned to stare at her.

After the oath was administered to the witnesses, the man got up and again turned to stare at the girl, who started trembling and crying, covering her face with her hands.

There was no trouble Tuesday night, according to the boy's mother.

Suit likely to be decided after elections

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Minority leaders in Midland say the change from at-large school board elections to single-member districts ultimately will improve minority representation.

But the same leaders say they doubt the change will occur before the scheduled April 6 election.

Isabel Jimenez, former president of the Midland League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), told the Reporter Telegram that although the current at-large system of electing school trustees does not fairly represent the city's minority population, "more than likely the election will go on."

LULAC and the Black Advisory Council have filed a class action suit against the Midland Independent School District to change the election system, which the groups said is discriminatory. MISD has decided to compromise rather than fight the suit.

Negotiations between both parties began in January. Attorneys for LULAC and the Black Advisory Council reportedly took depositions from MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi and school trustees on Monday.

"In my opinion, we're not anywhere near any kind of a settlement," Ms. Jimenez said.

The minority group has gone on record saying it favors electing five trustees to single-member districts and two to at-large seats; or electing all seven of its trustees to single-member districts rather than MISD's four-three proposal (four elected from single-member districts and three at-large).

"They (MISD) are definite on a four-three. We definitely do not want a four-three. In my opinion, the election will go on and we'll see when we can settle. Maybe it will be out of court and maybe not. We're not even sure of that," Ms. Jimenez said.

A cautious Baressi said he also expects the election to take place April 6 without electing board members under the new system.

"I think they'll (LULAC and the Black Advisory Council) ask for an election without an injunction. I believe the case will proceed and we'll settle sometime after April 6," he said.

Ms. Jimenez refused to confirm whether the organizations would seek a court injunction to delay the election until the parties reach a settlement. She said, however, "we're still considering it."

MISD announced Tuesday it filed a petition to hold a common election with the city April 6, pending approval by the U.S. Justice Department.

City officials received a "precleared" notice from the Justice Department Feb. 21 to its single-member district plan for the upcoming City Council election.

The plan calls for four members to be elected from districts, two at-large, and the mayor at-large. Formerly, five council places and the mayor were elected at-large.

Ex-teacher says alleged sexual incident 'purely academic'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A former school teacher and Boy Scout master charged with indecency with a child testified today an incident in which he obtained a sperm specimen at the boy's request was "purely academic."

The mother of the 11-year-old alleged victim testified Wednesday Jospeph Gallagher "sexually abused" her son for Gallagher's sexual gratification. She said her son now suffers nightmares and has problems coping with affection shown to him by adult males.

Gallagher, 37, who is accused of committing the offense last July about a week after meeting both the boy and his mother at a Boy Scout ranch, shook his head emphatically during derogatory testimony from the victim and his mother.

According to the defendant, "He wanted to see what it looked like." Gallagher said he obtained the specimen while in the bedroom in front of the boy.

"It wasn't a matter of allowing him or disallowing him. He was just there," Gallagher said. "I told him he could leave if he wanted to."

The two then examined the specimen under a microscope. Gallagher said he also had specimens of blood, lung tissue, duodenum and cancer of the lip.

When asked by defense attorney Vernon Reichle if the boy was forced to watch him obtain the specimen, Gallagher said, "He never stated 'I want to leave.'"

"Did he act like he was interested in what was going on?" Reichle asked.

"He sure did — quite interested," Gallagher said.

The boy's mother testified her son told her about the incident the night after it happened.

"He told me there were some things that had happened that he was not real happy about," she said.

"(Gallagher) talked about marriage and things he could teach (the boy) if he were his stepfather, including the facts of life," according to the mother's recollection of the discussion with her son.

"Do you feel like what happened between your son and Mr. Gallagher was very bad?" Reichle asked the mother.

"Yes I do," she said. "(He) has had nightmares. He has been extremely frightened of men. If (her husband since Dec. 1) showed him any type of affection — even a hug around the shoulders — he froze."

"Do you think he was sexually abused?" Reichle asked.

"Yes sir, I do," said the mother.

"How?" Reichle asked.

"By exposing him to fields that haven't been explored before," she said; "by touching him in parts that are private to him."

Gallagher denied having had any sexual contact with the boy.

Reichle asked the mother if she felt there was a better way of teaching her son about "the facts of life."

"Well, if I was going to teach him about sexual intercourse, I wouldn't do it by having sexual intercourse with him," she said.

Despite pre-trial publicity, the former substitute physical education teacher at Trinity School and former special education/learning disabled teacher at Lee Freshman High School wanted to be tried in his community by what he felt would be a fair jury, according to his attorney.

"I almost filed for a change of venue," said Reichle. "But sometimes it works for you and sometimes it doesn't. We'll see."

Reichle said his client had received "numerous calls from friends who couldn't believe he would be charged with such a thing."

Watching the trial before 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin were members of the Midland Rape Crisis Center and youths who said they knew Gallagher when they attended Trinity School and were there to give him moral support.

Gallagher, charged with the second-degree felony, faces a maximum punishment of two to 20 years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000. Because he does not have any prior felony convictions, his attorney has filed a motion for probation.

"Even Jesus gave Mary Magdalene a second chance," Reichle said when questioning prospective jurors during jury selection Wednesday morning about their acceptance of the full range of punishment should the defendant be found guilty.

Less than 10 prospective jurors on the 44-member panel were challenged by attorneys based on the prejudicial effect the pre-trial publicity would have on their deliberations, according to Administrative Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan. Assistant District Attorney Chuck Roades is assisting Morgan in prosecuting the case.

During jury voir dire, about five women on the panel said they had been sexually abused or knew someone close to them who had been victimized.

The blond, ruddy-cheeked child, dressed in a tie and a light-brown suit several sizes too large, testified Wednesday he spent the night with Gallagher on July 22. The former teacher set him on his lap in the living room while the two wore only underwear, according to the child's testimony.

The child said Gallagher rubbed the boy's genitals and said, "I love you" several times before taking the boy into the bedroom.

There, the boy said he complied with Gallagher's request to rub the former teacher's testicles while the defendant masturbated to climax because "I didn't want to hurt his feelings."

Accountant to run for school board

From Staff Reports

Barnett

Geoffrey L. Barnett has announced his candidacy for Place Seven on Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

In announcing his candidacy on the April 6 ballot, Barnett said "The education system plays one of the most important roles in society, that of educating our children. The well-being of our country and everyone's future depends upon the proper education of children. Public schools have been of special interest to me since my wife taught for four years and now I have a child in public schools."

Barnett, a 1970 graduate of Midland High School, received a bachelor of business administration degree in 1974 from the University of Texas at Austin. He is a certified public accountant with Arthur Andersen & Co.

"I attended Midland Public Schools from first grade through high school and when I compare my educational background to those with whom I attended college I realize what an excellent education I received. I want to work to ensure that the proper changes are made," Barnett said.

A member of the board of directors and treasurer of Midland Need To Read Inc., Barnett served in the Leadership Midland Class of 1980-81; Leadership Midland Advisory Council from 1983-85; Midland Chamber of Commerce Small Business Council; Saddle Club South Homeowners Association; West Texas Producers Forum, Texas Certified Public Accountants, American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Petroluem Accountants Society and St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

"The education system is undergoing many changes and I want to work to ensure that the changes are made," Barnett said. "I want the opportunity to work to maintain our quality of life and provide our children a good environment to learn."

Barnett and his wife, Mary Kay, have two sons.

Woman confronts burglar at trailer house

From Staff Reports

A man who walked into a trailer house Wednesday afternoon was stopped by the owner's mother, who grabbed a cable television converter box from under his arm before he escaped with $2.

According to city police reports, Joe Price of 2100 S. Terrell said she saw a white male with brown hair dressed in blue jeans enter her son's house at 502 Walcott at about 5 p.m. She then phoned the residence, and when there was no answer, walked to the door.

Reports said she confronted the man as he was leaving the residence and took away the converter box. The man then left in a late model brown Pontiac occupied by a white male and a white female.

Gary Price told police he had left his door unlocked. Nothing else appeared to be taken except $2 in cash from a bedroom dresser.

Midland police today were investigating several thefts and burglaries in which more than $2,000 worth of items were taken.

Dorothy Anastasio, 2715 Roosevelt, told police Wednesday her house was burglarized and jewelry valued at $2,600 was missing. According to reports, Ms. Anastasio placed a gold wedding band and diamond ring on the sill of a kitchen window at about 2 p.m. Saturday. Later than evening, she placed a necklace watch on the headboard of her bed. The items were discovered missing at 2 p.m. Wednesday and an investigation revealed there was a forced entry.

Furniture kept in storage at the C.F. Lawrence & Assoc., Inc. office, 105 N. G St., was discovered missing Wednesday afternoon. According to employee Jim Ericson, six chairs and cushions were missing. Total value was placed at $2,535.

Delores Jurado, 1704 S. McKenzie, told police she left her home at 7 p.m. Wednesday and returned two hours later to find a northeast window was broken. Missing from inside the house was a cable television converter box, $400 gold and diamond cross, $900 men's diamond ring, $300 ladies' diamond ring and $600 worth of assorted gold chains. Total loss was $2,200.

A .22-caliber pistol and case and two ladies' diamond rings were reported stolen from a residence at 4314 Anetta. According to reports, Gracie Miles said she last saw the items Jan. 27 before discovering they were gone Wednesday. Total loss was placed at $1,300. There were no signs of forced entry.

Manuel Sanchez, 1101-A E. Nobles, told police a rental house owned by Nellie B. Fields at 1915 E. Pecan, was burglarized and a two toilet fixtures and a water heater valued at a total of $400 were missing. Entry was gained by breaking windows valued at $100. Damage to the door of the water closet was placed at $35. Sanchez, who oversees the rental property, placed the time of the incident between Feb. 13 and Feb. 20.

LULAC

Notice of the approval will bring an end to the 10-month battle between the city the minority groups. LULAC and the Black Advisory Council filed a lawsuit against the city in May 1984 claiming Midland's at-large system violated the 14th and 15th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

To date, no minority has filed for a position on the school board; nor has anyone announced his or her intention to run for one of the three expired terms.

"We still don't know how the districts will be divided," said Ms. Jimenez. "I don't think anyone would run at-large. We've already seen defeat there," she added.

Though the class-action suit incorrectly says otherwise, she noted that minorities have served on the school board.

"It can be done, it hasn't been done too often," she said.

At least three minorities, two blacks and one Hispanic, reportedly have served on the school board. Lorenzo Ausbie, a black minister, was elected in the early 1970s. Roger Robles, businessman, served in the early to mid-1970s, and James Ramsoure, retired MISD coordinator of guidance and couseling, served on the board from 1974-80. Robles and Ramsoure were appointed to fill unexpired terms.

FDIC

"He (Fraser) felt that the $150,000 cash was all that we would have to put into the deal," Hurt said.

"I was doing it to help the bank," he said. "I wasn't out hunting tax benefits that year."

Nevertheless, he said buying the building "would have been a fairly good investment....if it would have cash flowed."

"I knew that the bank was going to be the tenant. I felt that the bank would be there from now on."

Charles Perry testified that Fraser told him in December 1982 the bank had "undergone a strenuous examination" by federal bank examiners and it had to "charge off" certain loans but expected to recover the majority of them within 90 days.

He said Fraser set a $75 million value on the building but said he (Fraser) did not have an appraised value on it.

Perry said Fraser had called him as "a friend of the bank" and offered the FNB Building for sale.

"It had to be completed by Dec. 31 if it was going to be done at all," Perry said.

"The bank was faced with a loss that year," Perry said Fraser told him, "and he was determined that a loss not occur...This was the only way he could cover that loss."

Car dealers oppose bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Two lawmakers thought they had a Blue Law bill that would appeal even to Texas automobile dealers.

But a spokesman for the dealers says they were wrong.

Reps. Hugo Berlanga and David Cain planned to file a bill today that would allow all stores — except auto dealers — to open on Sundays.

The Texas Auto Dealers Association long has fought to preserve the Blue Law.

But TADA lobbyist Tom Blanton called the bill written by Berlanga and Cain, D-Dallas, a "terrible idea."

Texas teen awake after transplant surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Texas teen-ager who underwent the world's third heart-liver transplant was awake and responsive despite two emergency operations necessitated by oversized donor organs.

"She responded to my voice and tried to talk," a weary JoAnn Cheatham said Wednesday after visiting her daughter, Mary, 17.

Miss Cheatham of Fort Worth improved dramatically after the emergency procedures Tuesday night relieved pressure on her new heart, said liver transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas Starzl.

"It looked like she...might even die," Tuesday night, Starzl said. "Her blood pressure was too low. The space in which the heart was situated was restricting its activity. It was too small."

Miss Cheatham was in critical but stable condition early today, considered normal for transplant patients, at Presbyterian-University Hospital. The nearly 18-hour transplant operation ended at 2:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Starzl helped perform the world's first heart-liver transplant last February and helped remove Miss Cheatham's new organs from the body of Mark Diggins on Monday at Allegheny General Hospital.

Diggins, 22, a computer operator for Nationwide Insurance Cos. in Columbus, Ohio, died from injuries he received Feb. 18 in a skiing accident at Seven Springs, a resort in Somerset County.

Diggins was "about 35 pounds heavier and three inches taller" than Miss Cheatham, Starzl said.

Starzl said two physicians twice opened Miss Cheatham's chest bone Tuesday night, the second time leaving it open. The organs will shrink to fit the space around them, and doctors then can close the chest bones.

Miss Cheatham was breathing through a respirator Wednesday.

"We're in a very satisfactory state. Now the principle things we're looking for are rejection and wound complications," Starzl said.

The teen-ager suffered from an excess of cholesterol that clogged her heart. After waiting in Pittsburgh since Dec. 20 for a donor, Miss Cheatham received a call Monday saying organs were available.

"She was jumping up and down, holding the phone, saying, 'They got me a donor. They got me a donor.' Then she grabbed a suitcase and began throwing things in. She was downstairs waiting about five minutes before her father and I were," Mrs. Cheatham said at a news conference.

Mrs. Cheatham quoted her daughter as saying, "I'm scared but I'm ready."

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

College offers course on recent tax changes

The Midland College Department of Community Services will offer a new course entitled, "Recent Tax Changes for Individuals" from 7-9:30 p.m. March 21.

The course provides an overview of recent changes in the tax law and how the changes affect individuals. Topics to be covered include taxation of fringe benefits such as company cars, capital gain provisions, estimated tax payments and interest free loans.

Participants will be given suggestions for record-keeping and an opportunity for questions and discussion.

For information, call the MC Department of Community Services at 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

Journalism grants offered

High school seniors in West Texas may apply for journalism scholarships at Midland College for the 1985-86 academic year.

The scholarships, funded by a $750,000 endowment, are provided by the James Allison family, former publishers of the Midland Reporter Telegram.

Books, fees and tuition are included in the scholarships. Recipients also are eligible for paid staff positions on the college weekly newspaper and twice-yearly magazine. Journalism credits from MC are transferable to any four-year journalism program in the state.

Interested persons should write to Ralph L. Sellmeyer, Allison Professor of Journalism, Midland College, 3600 N. Garfield, Midland, Texas, 79705. Financial aid information may be obtained by contacting Bill Burns, director of financial aid. Deadline for application is June 1.

MISD promotes nutrition

The Midland Independent School District will observe National Nutrition Month in March by emphasizing the importance of good nutrition. The first of several special events will be from 9-10 a.m. Friday at South Elementary School, 200 W. Dakota. Students will milk a cow and discuss the role of calcium in nutrition.

Group honors Midlander

COLLEGE STATION — Midlander J. Murphy Horton was honored by the Texas Industrial Arts Association during its annual conference held recently at Texas A&M University.

Horton was awarded the TIAA Meritorious Award given to persons outside of the industrial arts profession. It is the first time the award was presented to an individual who had served on the State Board of Education. Horton represented the 21st Congressional District on the SBOE. David Horton, a senior at Texas A&M University, accepted the award on behalf of his father.

Texas House off to races

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House is off to the races with a proposed pari-mutuel bill that includes provisions requested by Gov. Mark White.

The House Urban Affairs Committee passed a proposed horse racing bill, HB 440, on an 11-1 vote Wednesday night.

The bill contains provisions for a statewide referendum, local option elections and controls against organized crime.

White has said he would veto any measure that didn't contain all three.

The bill also includes provisions on minority track ownership, the issuing of minority building contracts, and charity days.

"I'm real pleased with the outcome. It shows we're moving right along. We hope to get to the House within a couple of weeks," said the bill's sponsor Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, who sported a monogramed "HB 440" on his shirt pocket.

Committee chariman George Pierce, R-San Antonio, said the horse racing bill is the strongest law-oriented one in the nation. It gives the Department of Public Safety the power to investigate tracks at any time and also gives them subpoena power, Berlanga said.

Some committee members met with DPS officials for four hours and all their requests were granted, Berlanga said. But DPS still did not endorse the bill.

"I don't think DPS will endorse any bill," Berlanga said.

The bill would establish a horse racing commission, with six members appointed by the governor.

Bill would create new county court

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, creating a new county court at law for Midland County has received a favorable recommendation from the House Judiciary Committee.

The committee voted 5-0 to send Craddick's measure to the full House for consideration.

"I don't know of anybody against the bill," Craddick told the House committee, chaired by Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman.

Craddick's House Bill 710 creates a County Court at Law No. 2, effective Jan. 1 or "on an earlier date determined by the commissioner's court."

The proposed court would have concurrent jurisdiction with the district court in cases in which the amount in controversy exceeds $500 and doesn't exceed $50,000 in appeals of decisions by the Industrial Accident Board, eminent domain cases and matters involving family and juvenile matters.

Salary for the judge of the court would be at least 90 percent of the amount paid by the state to a district judge in Midland County, under the legislation.

The judge would have to have resided and practiced law in the county for at least two years prior to his or her appointment and to have practiced law in Texas for at least four years.

Police recover two stolen vehicles

From Staff Reports

Midland police Wednesday recovered two stolen vehicles and a tip to Crime Stoppers resulted in the recovery of a third, according to reports.

A blue 1978 Chevrolet Chevette, reported stolen Tuesday from Dean Hamilton, 3619 W. Louisiana Ave., was recovered in an alley a couple of blocks away with 100 more miles on it, according to police.

The car was discovered by Steven Cornelius, 3617 W. Louisiana Ave., who saw it when he and a friend were walking home. According to reports, the vehicle was valued at $2,500.

Kay Dennis, 103 W. Cuthbert, told police a car belonging to her father-in-law was found in the 1900 block of East Pennsylvania Ave. The light-brown 1976 Chrysler New Yorker was reported stolen by H.E. Dennis, 1019 Main St. Value of the car was not listed.

Crime Stoppers investigators received a tip Wednesday about a 1971 Jeep owned by the City of Midland which was found abandoned in a field a mile south of Interstate 20 off of the Rankin Highway.

According to reports, the investigators couldn't find the vehicle because of tall grass and a private helicopter was used to spot it from the air.

The $3,400 vehicle was stolen in 1983, reports said. It had been stripped of tires when found.

Chickens sometimes injected with penicillin?

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I am allergic to penicillin. I recently attended a chicken barbecue and awoke the next morning with a swollen face and mouth and could barely speak. I went to the emergency room at the local hospital and the doctor in attendance told me that my problem was probably caused by the fact that some chickens are injected with penicillin.

My own doctor told me the same thing. If this is true, how can I be sure this will not happen again to me? We are fond of chicken and eat a lot of it because it's supposedly healthful. N. Maresca, Stamford, Conn.

A. There is conflicting evidence as to whether or not poultry meat in America is occasionally tainted with antibiotics. Two professors at Cornell Univesity — Gertrude Armbruster of nutritional sciences and Robert Baker, chairman of the poultry department — agree that it's highly unlikely that you had an allergic reaction to chicken that was tainted with penicillin.

Dr. Baker states that a number of years ago the use of drugs, including antibiotics, was stopped in poultry feeding and that penicillin has never been used in feeding programs.

Both professors further point out that the emergency room doctor and your own doctor were merely speculating as to the cause of your allergic reaction, and only laboratory analysis can make this assessment.

In agreement with this is Donald Houston, administrator of the Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "Considering the conditions under which poultry are raised," he says, "it does not seem possible that the symptoms your reader experienced are attributable to the barbecued chicken she ate.

"A review of the data collected by your residue monitoring program for the last two years show no young chickens found positive for antibiotic residues. Producers do not treat individual chickens nor do they inject chickens with antibiotics, such as penicillin."

If no chickens are fed or injected with antibiotics, then why does the Department of Agriculture incur the expense of a residue monitoring program which tests for antibiotics?

A possible explanation is proffered by Jonathan Schell in his book "Modern Meat — Antibiotics, Hormones, and the Pharmaceutical Farm." "Some farmers," writes Schell, "heavily overdose their animals with antibiotics to control diseases brought on by filthy and poorly heated barns.

"Others, desperate to get weak, or even sick, animals to market, will continue to administer a variety of drugs to their stock right up to the day they are shipped to the slaughterhouse. Still others will use illegal or banned drugs.

"More often than not, these violations will go undetected by the Department of Agriculture's meat inspectors, who must examine hundreds, and sometimes thousands, of carcasses a day in busy packing plants."

If everyone connected with the poultry industry followed the rules and regulations to the letter, there should not be any antibiotics in chicken, but this doesn't seem to be the case. And when 5 billion chickens are slaughtered annually and only a relative handful of tissue samples are analyzed for residues, it is easy to see how a chicken laced with penicillin can slip through the system undetected.

Q. Is there any way to liquefy all the little pieces of bar soap that we use around the house? I have boiled them down with water and added some glycerine, but when this cools it forms into a hard mass.

I would like to liquefy it to use in a pump-action container and would appreciate a recipe for doing so. We always try to save in these inflation times. Margaret Ripley, Claremont, Calif.

Although making a liquid out of soap chips seems like a simple thing to do, Mildred Gallik, the director of consumer affairs at the Soap and Detergent Association, states that she has been advised by soap manufacturers that it's impossible to reconstitute soap into liquid form under home methods. It just can't be done.

Gallik suggests as an alternative to grate the soap scraps and keep them in a jar or decorative bottle in the bathroom. Add a small amount of water and use for rinsing out stockings, lingerie and other bathroom basin items. The grated soap can also be used as a lather for shaving.

Another suggestion would be to slit a sponge on one side just enough to fill with soap slivers and use it for bathing.

Slivers of soap which can be held in the hand can be stored in one's sewing box to be used like chalk to mark darts and hems. The markings wash out when the garment is laundered.

Any further suggestions from readers would be most welcome.

Q. In a previous column a reader asked for advice on keeping S.O.S. soap pads from rusting. I had asked Miles Laboratories, makers of these pads, and they said to dry the pad on an absorbent towel, sponge or dish. Since this suggestion was already on the box, I asked for more advice, but they declined even though admittedly many customers had written to them with other suggestions.

I asked for help from readers and many of you were kind enough to send your suggestions. They included wrapping the used soap pad in aluminum foil or a plastic bag and storing it in the freezer, storing used pads in glass jars or plastic containers that have tight lids and squeezing out excess water and returning the pad to the box with the unused pads.

Several readers advised storing the used pads in containers and covering them with water or liquid detergent. One reader wrote to say that of all the methods to keep pads from rusting, the one that's least effective is the one printed on the box, and if you keep a soap pad covered with water, a box can last an entire year. Here are some more responses:

A. Anne Johnson, Absecom, N.J.: Put the pad in a jar and cover with boiling water. Let cool and cover with a tight lid. The soap from the pad and the water forms a jellied substance. Just squeeze out and use.

Mrs. R.S. Smith, Gulf Breeze, Fla.: I keep mine in a small clay flower pot. Put a plastic lid underneath the pot to catch any drips. The clay absorbs the excess moisture, thus slowing down the formation of rust.

Betty Rutter, Tuckerton, N.J.: I save all my soap ends and put them in a short wide can along with half a bar of brown soap and used soap pads and cover all with water.

Mrs. A.J. Bajich, Worth, Ill.: Wet the pan to be cleaned instead of wetting the pad.

Mrs. John M. Konosky, Colorado Springs, Colo.: I keep a pad, to which I have added very hot water, in a china sugar bowl. It sits on the counter next to the sink and I use this pad for weeks on end, adding water occasionally. I believe it's the only answer.

Taste-testers rate frozen chicken bits 'just OK'

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

OK, I'll admit it. In spite of the "supermom" mystique, the last thing I want to do when I come home from work is cook. Kicking off my shoes and being waited on is more my choice.

Because we can't always get what we want, the next-best thing to being pampered is food to-go or TV dinners. A daily diet of take-out food can be expensive — and empty of vitamins — and many frozen meals are severely frowned upon at my house. That leaves frozen meat or fish dishes, such as such as fish sticks, which are convenient to prepare and can be surprisingly good or perfectly awful, depending on product and manufacturer.

The latest fast-food trend is fried chicken bits with dips — sold as an alternative to hamburgers, fish and pizza.

Swansons, a Campbells Soup Company, has recently added its two bits to the chicken bits fad.

The usual taste-testers — adults, teen, pre-schooler and toddler — checked Swanson's bits against fast-food chains' bits for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Swanson's bits are available in three shapes — cutlets, "dipsters" (circular-shaped), and "drumlets," — designed to fill three different needs, according to the manufacturer.

Cutlets are suggested to be served as a main dish or as a sandwich filling, such as those marketed by many fast-food chains. Dipsters are about the circumference of a half-dollar and are suggested to dip in sauces. Drumlets, for some unknown reason, are shaped like teensy boneless drumsticks.

According to information on the labels, each 3½-ounce cutlet has 230 calories and 30 percent of the protein and the niacin in the U.S. recommended daily allowance; a 3-ounce serving of drumlets or dipsters has 220 calories and 25 percent of the protein and the niacin in the U.S. RDA. All three shapes contain the same ingredients, including chicken meat, water, chicken broth and eggs (although dipsters contain more breading than cutlets or drumlets — probably because they are smaller and have more breading in proportion to the amount of meat they contain).

Swanson cutlets are available in a 14-ounce package; and drumlets and dipsters are packaged in 12-ounce boxes. Cutlets cost $2.99 for a four-serving box; drumlets and dipsters each cost $2.89 for four-serving boxes. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Swanson advertises the three flavors of chicken products are "as good as take-out." The taste-testers agreed that Swanson's products taste like good frozen chicken pieces — but do not taste like fast-food chicken pieces.

Swanson's bits taste the same, regardless of shape. In fact, the only noticeable difference, at our house anyway, was the picky eaters were more likely to eat the drumlets because of their "cute" shape.

Hey! Maybe that's why they come that way!

DEAR ABBY

Successful father hesitates to reveal past

by ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been wanting to write to you for years, but never had the courage.

My children, now middle-aged, are demanding that I write a family history, as I've had a very successful, colorful life, have traveled extensively and have many grandchildren.

I have avoided doing so because I was illegitimate and had a very unhappy and humiliating childhood.

Should I confess all to the entire family and brazen it out? As for friends, I doubt that they would care. I'm nearly 75 and have few contemporaries left.

At the time of my birth, my mother was in her teens and my father was in his mid-40s, married, fairly well-off and the father of three. I remember seeing him only once when I was 9 or 10. That's all I know about him, as my mother became hysterical whenever my father's name was mentioned and refused to discuss the matter. She did marry, but it was a brief and unhappy marriage. I took care of her until she died 10 years ago.

Do my children and grandchildren need to hear this dismal story? — MISSING LINK

DEAR LINK: Yes! It's a fascinating story and a part of their heritage. You have nothing to be ashamed of. If you fear that your family will think less of you, you're wrong. They will probably value you even more.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Too Much in Texas," the woman who said, "If I had an extra $2,000 lying around, I would treat myself to breast-reduction surgery."

Unlike breast implants, which are considered cosmetic surgery, breast reduction operations are covered by most health insurance companies because overly large breasts are considered a health hazard.

Until my early 20s, I, too, had breasts much too large for my body frame. I was leered at, and sometimes grabbed (if you're big-breasted, it's erroneously assumed you're loose). Another stereotype I endured was the unconscious assumption many people have that women with big breasts are stupid. It really is true that if you're treated like you're dumb, you'll begin to believe it after a while.

I also had back problems and red marks on my shoulders from the constant chafing of my bra straps. I felt as if I were carrying an albatross around my neck.

The operation changed the way others treated me and the way I felt about myself.

There's no age limit for the operation; I've heard of women in their 50s having it.

I hope the woman in Texas will get in touch with her health insurance company to see if her policy covers it. — GLAD I DID IT

DEAR GLAD: I have heard from many women who have had breast reduction surgery. They tell me it is neither painless nor inexpensive, but all have said it was well worth it.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you wrote: "Confidential to You: If you are not registered, you cannot vote."

Abby, North Dakota does not require registration. In our state, any U.S. citizen over the age of 18 can vote if he or she has lived here for 30 days.

While your statement was valid for the vast majority of U.S. citizens, it doesn't apply in North Dakota. Our unique, hassle-free voting system works well here. — TIMOTHY W. RAND IN GRAND FORKS

DEAR TIMOTHY: No registration? I'll vote for that. It would be interesting to know what percentage of eligible voters vote in North Dakota as compared with the states in which registration is required.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Nutrition advice not always sound

By MARIAN FARR

Advice on nutrition has become almost as common as advice to the lovelorn. Most people wouldn't think of experimenting with their health, yet that's just what happens when they indiscriminately follow the advice given in many of these stories.

A recent study by the American Council on Science and Health indicates the accuracy of information in magazine nutrition stories ranges from 20 percent to 95 percent. Unfortunately the ACSH study also shows that some magazines with the most nutrition coverage are often the least reliable. Readers need to make their own judgements about the accuracy and usefulness of nutrition advice.

First consider whether the article makes inaccurate claims that certain foods or nutrients have special benefits. Particular foods or nutrients may have special features, but eating any one food in excess will lead only to an imbalanced diet. A variety of foods from the four basic food groups of protein foods, breads and cereals, dairy products and fruits and vegetables is the only known way to achieve a healthful diet.

The credentials of the source should also be considered. Unless the author is a registered dietitian, has an academic degree in nutrition or is a medical doctor with special training in nutrition, he is unlikely to have a thorough understanding of the subject.

In many cases the nutrition advice from unqualified authors — especially celebrities — is simply personal testimony that may have no basis in fact. Also, a featured weight-loss diet's safety and effectiveness should be determined. A weight-loss diet should be designed for gradual weight reduction, include a balanced diet and exercise and not promote the purchase of pills, products or special diet foods.

Readers should ask themselves if the information seems to be scientifically sound and factual. Even without a scientific background, readers can note whether the author is associated with respected institutions or programs. They can also be on guard for stories based on a single research study and sensationalized for public consumption.

Choosing camp family decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Not only should parents put a great deal of thought into choosing a summer camp, but children should also play a part in the selection, says Asher Melzer, who has been a camping specialist for 35 years.

Parents should look through camp brochures together with the children involved, advises Melzer, director of camping for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, which sponsors and supports 19 overnight resident camps and 29 day camps. Some 20,000 campers from age 6 to 100 will go to Federation camps this summer, Melzer reports.

"It matters a lot whether the child wants a place where the emphasis is on competitive team sports or on an individual interest in arts and letters," he says. "Perhaps the child would like a place that specializes in computers or sciences or ballet or violin, all available these days."

A shy child might prefer a small place with fewer campers, Melzer points out. Another alternative is a shorter camping season or a day camp, to ease the child into the break from home routine.

In addition to the more common day camps and sleep-away camps, camps for just boys or just girls, and coed camps, there are camps for the emotionally disturbed, the physically handicapped and those with learning disabilities, he notes.

It's a good idea, too, he adds, for the parent and child to talk to the camp director and find out what he or she can expect the summer to be like.

"There should be no surprises."

Paper bag thoroughly recycled

HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — Arthur Kohlmeier, 86, of Hillsboro, really believes in recycling. He has used the same paper grocery bag 99 times to carry food home from his local supermarket, where he receives four cents for each reuse.

Kohlmeier had been using his bag for three years (earning a total of $3.92), when the store manager noticed the pencil marks on it.

"I told him that I make a mark on the bag each time I use it," explained Kohlmeier, himself a retired grocery store manager.

A few days later, Kohlmeier and his wife, Alma, 85, were invited to lunch by Charles Carl, an executive at Willamette Industries, the paper company that made the bag in 1981. The couple was given a pen and pencil set and an escorted tour of the Willamette facility.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: As you climb the ladder of success, your standing in the community also rises. Do what you can to help the deserving. A busier social life leads you to someone who will inspire you for years to come. Love becomes a many splendored thing this summer. Travel proves educational and well worth the expense. Talk to experts about taxes and investments; a well-meaning friend may lack the expertise you need. Be tactful. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor-author David Niven, Harry Belafonte, Robert Conrad, Dinah Shore, Ron Howard, Pittsburgh Pirates' Johnny Ray, actress Catherine Bach, the NFL's Pete Rozelle, "A Team's" Dirk Benedict.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone making a property decision. A second opinion will provide valuable information. Volunteer your services if asked to collaborate on a special project. Involvement in community activities help your career.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Attending a club function could put you in touch with some delightful new friends. Dress stylishly but on the conservative side. A domestic situation grows more rewarding. Repay a favor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An excellent new trend sharpens your creativity. Put your talents to better commercial use. A budget revision relieves tension. Consult an expert about a once-in-a-lifetime investment opportunity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A minor investment could turn into a bonanza! A Leo begins to pressure you; stand up for your rights. It takes two to quarrel. Be more tactful when making requests of mate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Think about a change in employment. Night or weekend classes could boost your earning power. Do some research. An older person may not appreciate your sense of humor. Avoid sarcasm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lavish entertainment will produce the results you want. A small legacy or windfall helps you decide on the school of your choice. Welcome mate's suggestions. Two heads are better than one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Show more affection to someone who feels slighted or neglected. A Leo begins to understand the many demands on your time. Ask for help in meeting a deadline.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your sense of humor makes you the center of attention at a social gathering. Mate or partner may be envious of your popularity. Be tactful. Shower an insecure loved one with praise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A direct approach eases the tension between you and a close friend. Better eating habits will give you new energy and a trimmer appearance. Your social life accelerates.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A close encounter with a Taurus puts romantic ideas into your head. Keep a firm grip on reality. As you move closer to achieving your goals, you become less easily distracted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communication is great between you and those closest to your heart. A short trip could provide information that is vital to a personal project. Answer letters promptly. Others eagerly await your reply.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A visit to someone confined to hospital or home will be greatly appreciated. Stay as long as you can. A letter brings wonderful news. Respond at once. Replace bad habits with good ones.

South, declarer at six hearts, achieved two firsts on this deal from a recent tournament. He was the fastest declarer of the hand and, as a result, the only one to go down.

The auction was normal. North had just enough for a jump raise of hearts and, once the cue-bidding sequence revealed that there were not two fast losers in diamonds, South checked on aces and settled in a small slam when he learned his side had a sufficient number.

West led a trump and declarer wasted no time in thinking about the play. He won in hand and drew a second round of trumps. Next came five rounds of clubs, on which he sluffed diamonds. Now he led a spade from the table and, faced with a guess, he elected to go in with the king. West won the ace and returned the suit — down one.

Had declarer adopted a plan before playing to the first trick, he might have found the winning line. While there is a natural reluctance to discard high cards from hand when you have low ones that you can pitch, declarer would have done much better had he discarded his two spade honors on the clubs rather than his low diamonds.

Since dummy has only two diamonds, the rest is easy. Declarer simply cashes the ace of diamonds and concedes a diamond. He can ruff his last diamond on the board to bring home his slam.

Prince has copter trouble, papers say

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew made a "precautionary landing" on the Falklands Islands when the Royal Navy helicopter he was flying developed a fault, the Defense Ministry said today.

British newspapers variously reported that the second son of Queen Elizabeth II "crash-landed," "ditched" and "made a dramatic forced landing."

The 25-year-old prince is a Royal Navy helicopter pilot. He fought in the 1982 Falklands war with Argentina, and returned to the South Atlantic last January when his present ship, the frigate HMS Brazen, was sent on a five-month patrol to the area.

The ministry said the incident happened Feb. 15 when the Brazen's anti-submarine Lynx helicopter that the prince was flying on a sortie over the islands developed a hydraulic fault.

It said he flew the helicopter back to the Brazen after a maintenance team from the frigate flew out to where he landed to carry out emergency repairs.

A ministry spokesman, who in accordance with British practice declined to be named, said: "He chose to fly to land, and get it patched up," rather than try to make it back to the Brazen. "Afterwards, he flew the helicopter back to HMS Brazen and that was the end of it."

The spokesman said he did not know if the prince was missing for two hours as some reports said. "Andrew is a hell of a helicopter pilot. If you'd broken down while driving to work, it could be said that you'd been missing as well," he said.

The Daily Mail headlined its report: "Andrew crash lands." It said: "The helicopter developed control problems when its hydraulic system began failing during a routine patrol.

Lawrence honored with star

C. Lawrence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Broadway's Carol Lawrence, known for her roles in "West Side Story," "Guys and Dolls" and "Finnian's Rainbow," received the 1,799th star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

About 500 fans, friends and family turned out Wednesday for the ceremony dedicating the 51-year-old actress' star on Hollywood Boulevard.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley also declared Wednesday "Carol Lawrence Day" in the city.

L. Pavarotti

NEW YORK (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti says he's going on a nine-city U.S. concert tour next month, but opera fans don't have to worry that he's leaving the stage for the road.

"I have two or three more operas I would like to do (for the first time) before I retire myself 25 years from now," the Italian tenor said with a smile Wednesday. "I'd like to do 'Pagliacci' — not because I'm a clown in life." Pavarotti appeared at a news conference to announce the March tour. He is scheduled to appear in Reno, Las Vegas, New York, Philadelphia, Toronto, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Phoenix and Atlantic City.

Next opera season, he is to sing on opening night of both New York's Metropolitan Opera, in "Tosca," and Milan's La Scala, in "Aida."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jerry Parr, the Secret Service agent credited with saving President Reagan's life by shoving him into a limousine when he was shot four years ago, went to the White House to say goodbye to his boss.

Parr, 54, retired this week after more than 22 years with the service. On Wednesday, accompanied by his wife and three daughters, he posed for photos with Reagan in the Oval Office.

"You want to just stand here, or you want to throw me over the couch?" Reagan teased.

During the March 30, 1981, assassination attempt, Parr shoved Reagan out of the line of fire and dived into the limousine after him. He ordered the car diverted to a hospital, a decision doctors said saved the president's life.

Parr said he hasn't decided what he'll do now.

"Right now, I am painting my kitchen," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kabuki actor Ebizo X, soon to be elevated to a famous name in the ancient Japanese dramatic art of Kabuki, journeyed to New York to announce that Japan's Grand Kabuki will perform in America this summer.

The 92-member company will appear at the Metropolitan Opera here, the Kennedy Center in Washington and Royce Hall in Los Angeles in July and August.

Ebizo X, who appeared in an elaborate Kabuki costume and makeup at a news conference at the Met on Wednesday, will star in the play "Shibaraku," which means "Just a Moment." The play was created by Danjuro I and has been in the Kabuki repertory since 1697.

When he returns to Japan, Ebizo X, 38, is to become Danjuro XII in a religous ceremony at a temple near Tokyo.

NEW YORK (AP) — A British marine biologist who won the $186,000 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion says he'll use the money to expand his research into the role of faith in human evolution.

"I am a Darwinian and the whole point of my life has been to reconcile Darwin's theory of evolution with the religious side of man," Sir Alistair Hardy, 89, said after learning he had won the prize Wednesday.

Hardy was unable to travel from his home in Oxford, England, to New York for the announcement. He plans to be in London May 14 to receive the cash and a medal of Irish silver from Prince Philip in a ceremony at Buckingham Palace.

Hardy was the 13th person and the third scientist to receive the award, which has gone to Mother Teresa of Calcutta, evangelist Billy Graham and exiled Russian novelist Alexander Solzehnitsyn.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The man suing pianist Liberace for "palimony" support is a public figure and must prove malice in his $12 million libel suit against the entertainer and the Globe International tabloid, a judge ruled.

However, Superior Court Judge Norman Epstein refused Wednesday to dismiss Liberace as a defendant in the case brought by Scott Thorson over a 1982 Globe article titled "The Wicked Past of the Gay Suing Liberace."

Thorson, who once claimed he was Liberace's homosexual lover, contends in his suit against Liberace, Globe and Thorson's half-brother, Wayne Johnson, that Liberace requested and paid for the article.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Trinity symphony, jazz band to play in Odessa

ODESSA — Trinity University Wind Symphony and Trinity Jazz Band will present a concert at 9 p.m. Wednesday at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa.

The 63 members of the Wind Symphony will play a variety of wind instruments — trumpets, trombones, saxophones, oboes and other brass and woodwinds — and percussion instruments.

The Wind Symphony will open the concert with selections from a tour repertoire that includes "Music for Prague 1968" by Karel Husa, "The Solitary Dancer" by Warren Benson and "The Purple Carnival" by Harry Alford.

After an intermission, the Jazz Band will take the stage with mainstream, classic and contemporary jazz by some of the most noted American composers. With 21 members, the Jazz Band is popular on campus for its high-spirited renditions of jazz favorites.

Both ensembles are directed by Dr. Eugene Carinci, director of bands at Trinity.

Locals celebrate Arts Day

Arts Day at the Capitol, held Feb. 20 in Austin, included 26 persons from the Permian Basin area, 13 each from Odessa and Midland.

Midland groups represented included Midland Assembly of Arts Council, Ballet Midland, Midland-Odessa Symphony, Junior League of Midland, Theatre Midland, Midland Chamber of Commerce and Midland College.

At the session, arts advocates appealed for $16 million in arts appropriations for this biennium. Of this, $14.4 million is for direct assistance to arts organizations in the state. An economic impact study showed that $14.4 million should generate $48.2 million in economic activity for the arts.

The arts create $1.7 billion a year in economic activity, which also generates tax revenues, according to a press release.

Last year, Texas was one of three states to receive a $375,000 National Endowment for the Arts grant.

'Dining Room' to open

"The Dining Room," A.R. Guerney's poignant comedy of American family life, will open Friday in Midland Community Theatre's Theatre II. The show will run through March 16.

The six actors chosen to portray 54 different characters in this play are Bonnie Chambers, Ann Perkins, Chrysti Scoville, Jess Kozman, Mykel Menger and Michael Trost.

The play is enjoying tremendous popularity in this country, largely due to Guerney's insights into the transition of what was at one time the most important room in the home.

Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

TOT stages 'La Traviata'

Texas Opera Theater will present Verdi's "La Traviata" at 8 p.m. today in Midland High School Auditorium.

The performance is being sponsored by Midland Opera Theater.

The romantic and dramatic opera, which is being sung in English, tells the story of how family mores and tragic misunderstandings stand between the beautiful courtesan Violetta and her gentleman suitor, Alfredo. Their love endures and only death can separate the couple.

Tickets and information may be obtained by calling 684-4101.

Theater presents 'Offsides'

ODESSA — "Offsides" will be opening at 8 p.m. Friday at Permian Playhouse and will be performed Fridays and Saturdays through March 16.

The football comedy contains references to the Odessa Permian Panthers.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling the theater, 362-2329.

'Clue' comes to big screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Now you can accuse Col. Mustard — or Mrs. Peacock, Mr. Green, Mrs. White or Professor Plum — of murder in a big screen whodunit of the popular board game, "Clue."

British writer Jonathan Lynn makes his American debut as the director of the movie for Paramount Pictures. He wrote the screenplay based on a story by John Landis and Lynn. It was suggested by the Parker Brothers' board game.

The movie will go into production in May at Paramount Studios.

Bernhard Goetz is escorted by guards after he appeared in ManhattanCriminal Court in New York where he faces illegal weapons possession charges.

Goetz shoots youth twice

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, the man who shot four teen-agers when they asked him for money on a subway train, shot at one of the youths a second time after saying, "You seem to be all right, here's another," according to a police report.

Goetz "thought it was funny" that the youths "thought they had him trapped, when in fact they were trapped," Concord, N.H., police officers said in reports released Wednesday after a state Supreme Court hearing.

The youth who was shot at twice was sprawled on a seat when Goetz checked his condition and shot again, the report said.

After the four youths got on the train Dec. 22, they positioned themselves so that two were on either side of Goetz and one asked him for $5, said Officer Warren Foote, the first to interview Goetz after his surrender Dec. 31.

Goetz told The New York Times on Wednesday that the officers' statements were "essentially accurate," but did not elaborate.

When one of the youths put a hand in his pocket as though he had a weapon, Goetz "did not feel threatened by this move," Foote said. "Mr. Goetz stated he already knew what he was going to do and he already had in his mind the spirit of fire, that he was going to fire ..."

Goetz "drew a pattern of fire prior to the shooting taking place, indicating that he was going to shoot from left to right in the quickest and most effective manner possible," said Officer C.T. Domian. "He indicated speed was everything."

He "shot each of the individuals once and then went back to the last individual and shot that individual again, thinking he had missed him the first time because there wasn't any evidence of blood on the person," Domian said.

Goetz told Domian that before firing the fifth shot he said to the youth, who was half sitting, half lying, "You seem to be all right, here's another."

Three of the youths have recovered. The fourth, who police say was the last shot, was Darrel Cabey, 19, who remains paralyzed and in a coma. Authorities have said five shots were fired although only four struck the victims.

A Manhattan grand jury refused to indict Goetz on attempted murder charges, even though it "had all the evidence we could gather," said Mary de Bourbon, spokeswoman for District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau.

"We asked them to vote on four counts of attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and weapons possession charges. They made the decision not to indict except for the weapons counts," Ms. de Bourbon said.

She said that Morgenthau's office has contended all along that "there was no justification as to the shooting of one of them."

She declined comment on whether Morgenthau would reopen the case.

The transcripts of the statements were released Wednesday after the hearing in which Goetz surrendered his passport and lawyers in the case were given access to minutes from the grand jury. He is free on $5,000 bail.

Prosecutors also gave defense attorneys copies of video and audio tapes and statements Goetz made and which had been withheld during the grand jury investigation. They must be made available for the trial process.

Paperboy to get city key

DETROIT (AP) — A teen-age newsboy, credited with foiling the attempted rape of an 11-year-old girl and decorated by police for bravery, insists he's nobody special.

"Anybody could have done it," said Collin Boatright, 14, after accepting the Michigan Association of Police "badge of courage" Wednesday for his action. Today he was to accept the keys to the city from Mayor Coleman A. Young.

"I think Collin sets an example for us all — not only the youth of the community but also the adults of the community," said Neil Craig, president of the 1,500-member police group, which also gave the boy a $500 savings bond.

Police said the Detroit News carrier was delivering the Sunday paper when he saw a 6-foot-2 man force a young girl into a vacant house. He ran to a neighbor to summon help when he heard the girl scream, then went into the house and held the man at bay with a stick until police came.

The young hero has patiently repeated his story to local and national reporters, and got a congratulatory phone call from President Reagan on Tuesday.

"I love it," Boatright said, but admitted he was "still scared" by his sudden celebrity.

His mother, Sue Brown, said Wednesday she was hard-pressed to express her pride in her son.

"If I sat here and tried to explain it I don't think I could," she said. "Words can't explain what he did. I was just glad that he was there to do it, and I'm glad that both of them came out of it alive and OK."

James Smith, 50, of Detroit was charged Monday with assault and battery with intent to commit sexual conduct in the incident. He was being held on $100,000 bond in the Wayne County Jail.

Nothing stands in her way

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — When it comes to seeking justice, Municipal Court Judge Peggy Hora doesn't like anything to stand in her way. Not even her clothes.

So when the judge was faced with a women defendant in an ill-fitting, khaki dress issued by the Alameda County jail, she decided that was no way to appear before a jury Wednesday.

The judge stepped into her chambers, slipped off the size 16, beige-and-black striped dress she was wearing and gave it to the defendant.

"You can never tell what a judge has on under the robe. I looked the same as I always look on the bench. It's just that there was no dress there," Ms. Hora said.

The defendant, a 34-year-old woman from Oakland facing grand theft charges, was unable to post bail at the time of her arrest on Jan. 19 and has been held in jail in Santa Rita awaiting her court appearance.

"I certainly wasn't going to let a jury see a defendant sitting in jail clothes," the judge said, "And I just couldn't see hanging up three attorneys, a judge and a jury over her not having something to wear."

WAIT UNTIL YOU SEE THE SOFTWARE.
Before you is a shape formed with the aid of computers. Under the hood, a computer-monitored engine. At each wheel, computer-selected springs. Open the doors of the 1985 Buick Century and you will find an impressive amount of software as well: a traditionally soft, rich, comforting interior with room for as many as six. At Buick, there are some things that will always stay the same. See for yourself today.

Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?
