Corsair in show

The Chance-Vought F4U Corsair, called the "Whistling Death" by the Japanese, was a formidable carrier-based U.S. Navy and Marine Corps fighter-bomber in World War II. The powerful Corsair, propelled by a 2,000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney radial engine, went into service in 1943 and had a top speed exceeding 400 mph. Together, the Corsair and the Grumman F6F Hellcat destroyed 7,295 enemy aircraft. The Corsair will perform aerial demonstrations in re-enacting air battles in the Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 on Oct. 12-13 at Midland International Airport.

Rabbi sues

NEW YORK — A rabbi filed a $50,000 libel and slander suit Thursday against Poland's Roman Catholic Cardinal Jozef Glemp, claiming he falsely accused him of trying to kill a group of nuns. Rabbi Avraham Weiss' lawsuit stems from a July 1989 protest at Auschwitz, where an estimated 1.3 million Jews were murdered. After the protest, Glemp suggested the demonstrators had tried to destroy the convent and murder its nuns.

Pilot killed

SAN DIEGO — A veteran Navy pilot who served in the Vietnam and Persian Gulf wars was killed when he ejected from his A-4 Skyhawk over the Pacific Ocean, a Navy spokesman said Thursday. The pilot was identified as Cmdr. John J. Roach, 47, assigned to Fighter Squadron 126 based at Miramar Naval Air Station.

Haitian troops attack

Leader asks U.N. for help in deposing junta

■ Haitian soldiers reportedly kill at least 150 people, some apparently because they supported President Aristide.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Attacks by soldiers have left at least 150 dead and 300 wounded in Haiti this week, according to reports Thursday. A radio station said 30 to 40 people were massacred in one slum, apparently because its residents supported the deposed president.

At the United Nations, President Jean-Bertrand Aristide asked the Security Council to help depose the military government.

"How many more will be massacred if an end is not put, once and for all, to this attempt to murder democracy?" he said, speaking without notes. "This threat to democracy in Haiti also constitutes a threat to democracy everywhere, throughout the world."

There was still no sign Thursday that anyone was fully in control of Haiti. Troops cruised the streets of Port-au-Prince in jeeps and unmarked cars, sometimes firing into the air.

Aristide accused the army chief, Gen. Raoul Cedras, of plotting the coup, but Cedras has insisted he was forced to step in by non-commissioned officers who wanted to kill Aristide. "I am not the president of any military government," Cedras said Wednesday.

Haitian politicians said they welcome international pressure on the army to restore Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president. But most said they opposed any military intervention.

Nations supporting the return of Aristide, a leftist priest inaugurated Feb. 7, have thus far relied on economic and diplomatic sanctions to pressure the Haitian army.

But in Caracas, Venezuela's defense minister said the army was on alert in preparation for a multinational military operation in case diplomatic efforts to restore democracy in Haiti fail.

Parade kicks off LHS homecoming

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Hundreds of Lee High School fans stood outside in bright sunlight Thursday afternoon awaiting the school's 1991 homecoming parade.

Despite the late afternoon heat, spirits were high among paradegoers standing or sitting along curbs of Midland Drive and Neely Street.

Miriam Swazlin, 45, who sported Midland High School bulldog logos printed on her T-shirt and padded seat cushion, said, "Watching both homecoming parades — Midland High's and Lee High's — is an annual tradition for us. We don't get many parades in Midland, so we support all of them."

One women, garbed in Lee's colors — maroon and white — identified herself as "just another mom with a minicam."

And sure enough, many adults in the crowd had staked out choice spots to stand and videotape the event.

The parade, which started at 5 p.m., snaked down Midland Drive from Fairmont Park Church of Christ to Neely Street. It turned east on Neely to the high school.

By 5:40 p.m., the parade turned the corner of Neely and headed toward the high school.

It was led by girls carrying a banner stating the 1991 homecoming theme: "Enchantment on the Nile."

Gates denies slanting reports

■ Nominee for CIA director contradicts testimony that he wrote analyses to reflect a greater Soviet role in the Third World than was the case.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert Gates, seeking to fuse threatening ruptures in the Senate's support for his nomination as CIA director, denied on Thursday that he had slanted intelligence reports for political gain but acknowledged "I have to be more sensitive" to underlings.

Gates

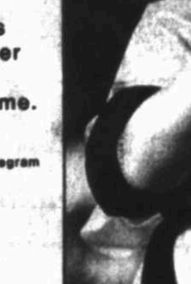

Gates reappeared before the Senate Intelligence Committee in the wake of testimony from former and current CIA analysts that, as a high-ranking deputy, he had tailored information to pander to his bosses' anti-Soviet views and that he harshly suppressed dissent.

"I've watched and listened and read with some dismay, as well as pain and anger" the proceedings of recent days, said Gates, who joined the CIA in 1966

Candidate Clinton says he'll fight for middle-class America

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Bill Clinton joined the field of Democratic presidential candidates on Thursday promising to reinvent government to protect a middle class he said President Bush ignores.

Clinton

"We must turn this country around and get it working again. We've got to fight for middle-class Americans for a change," Clinton said in speech interrupted by applause more than 50 times.

Clinton is the fifth major Democratic candidate to join the race for the 1992 nomination. All the contenders cast the federal government as shortsighted and gridlocked, blind to the middle class.

"The change I seek, and the change we must all seek, isn't liberal or conservative. It's different and both." Clinton said. "Out here, the people don't much care about the labels: left or right or liberal or conservative — all the other words that have made our politics a substitute for action."

Clinton, who made himself a standard-bearer for the moderate wing of the party in his role as chairman of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council, used the phrase "middle class" 12 times in his 32-minute speech.

He declared himself a candidate outside the Old State House in downtown Little Rock at a rally that drew about 3,000 cheering supporters. The building was the site of Arkansas' 1861 vote to secede from the union.

Uninvited media have plans to invade Taylor's wedding

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Elizabeth Taylor takes her eighth walk down the aisle, this time in a private ceremony sure to be invaded by tabloid journalists who will stop at nothing, save a bungee jump from a hot air balloon.

Pop music's Michael Jackson will give the bride away Sunday at his Santa Ynez Valley ranch, where an onslaught of paparazzi will hover in at least 10 helicopters.

A ground assault on the walled Jackson compound will include tabloid reporters masquerading as caterers and limousine drivers. Some enterprising photographers may don scuba gear for a coveted snapshot from the estate's lagoon.

Researchers link Alzheimer's to genetic mutation

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Moving one molecule closer to unraveling the mystery of Alzheimer's disease, scientists announced Thursday that they have identified a genetic mutation associated with one form of the disease and used it to develop a blood test.

The molecular flaw was found in the genetic code of six members of one family, spanning three generations, said geneticists at the Indiana University School of Medicine. Disease-free members of the same family did not have the mutation.

The researchers said they were confident the flaw was responsible for the nerve cell death and resulting dementia characteristic of inherited Alzheimer's.

Approximately 250,000 new cases of Alzheimer's disease are diagnosed in the United States each year. Up to 20 percent of these are believed to be hereditary.

The flaw described Thursday occurs in a chain-like protein molecule made up of 770 smaller molecules. The researchers reported in the journal Science that in the defective protein, a wrong link is substituted for only one of the 770 smaller units on the chain.

The test capable of detecting the defect means that

Serbia, allies, take control of federal parliament

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Moving to consolidate its control over what remains of Yugoslavia, the republic of Serbia announced Thursday that it was taking over the federal parliament with three allies.

Although the parliament is virtually defunct, the move appeared to represent Serbia's effort to usurp what remains of federal power. A senior Western diplomat said the move effectively dissolved the eight-member federal presidency, which nominally controls the Yugoslav army.

The army, which launched a major assault against Croatia this week, bombarded areas around historic Dubrovnik, starting a raging forest fire, and closed in on the capital, Zagreb.

The Borba newspaper in Belgrade said 26 federal soldiers had died in three days of fighting for Dubrovnik.

Croatian leaders say the attacks on the Adriatic, on the eastern Croatian region of Slavonia and in Banija, south of Zagreb, represent a bid by Serbia to define a "Greater Serbia" that would include most of Yugoslavia. The republic of Slovenia and what remained of Croatia would then be permitted to become independent.

In Belgrade, representatives on the federal presidency from Montenegro, Serbia, and Serbia's two provinces decided to take over the federal parliament at a meeting that included the defense minister and army commanders.

The presidency normally requires five votes for any decision, but its chairman, Stipe Mesic of Croatia, was not among those at the meeting. Mesic already has said that Yugoslavia is bound to splinter.

Macedonia President Kiro Gligorov, whose republic, like Croatia and Slovenia, has declared independence from Yugoslavia, called the Serbian takeover "illegal and unconstitutional."

The presidency in Bosnia-Hercegovina, where Croats and Muslim live in growing discord with Serbs, also condemned the move.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic were reported to be heading Friday to The Hague, where peace talks sponsored by the European Community continued.

The European Community has debated sending armed peacekeepers to Croatia, and Pope John Paul II told Tudjman on Thursday he is committed to finding a peaceful solution to the crisis.

The pontiff has often given moral backing to Croatians, most of whom are Roman Catholic, but has stopped short of recognizing the independence declaration.

South African novelist Nadine Gordimer wins Nobel prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Nadine Gordimer, whose searing portrayals of human relationships in the racial maelstrom of South Africa were denounced as unpatriotic by her own government, won the 1991 Nobel Prize in literature on Thursday.

She was the first woman in 25 years to win the award.

The Swedish Academy, which awarded the prize, said Gordimer's novels and stories, combining literary artistry and a strong anti-apartheid message, have been "of very great benefit to humanity." The prize is worth about $1 million.

Gordimer, 67, who is white, told reporters in New York that she writes about race and morality because "it's being lived by the people around me. ... This kind of situation naturally fascinates me."

The African National Congress, South Africa's chief anti-apartheid movement of which Gordimer is a member, hailed the award.

"In honoring Nadine, one of South Africa's outstanding writers, the people of the world pay tribute to all South Africans who stand for truth, human dignity and freedom," the ANC said.

South Africa's Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1984, said he had telephoned Gordimer to congratulate her. "She has had this tremendous commitment and caring about people, caring about justice, and here is the world recognizing it and giving her the highest accolade that you can get," he said.

Some of Gordimer's works, which include 10 novels and more than 200 short stories, were banned in the past by the white-minority government. But she refused to leave her homeland, once telling an interviewer that "to go into exile is to lose your place in the world."

All her works are legal in South Africa today. Her most recent novel, published in 1990, is "My Son's Story."

Peru Congress votes to lift former president's immunity

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Opponents of President Alan Garcia on Thursday hailed a legislative vote to allow him to be tried for embezzlement as a victory for morality in government.

The Chamber of Deputies voted 95-57 with 26 abstentions Wednesday night to send Garcia's case to the Senate, where another vote will decide whether to lift his congressional immunity so he may face trial in the Supreme Court.

Garcia is accused of tax evasion and of having used $500,000 in government funds to build three houses in Lima.

"It's a historic precedent for this country and for Latin America," said Congressman Pedro Cateriando, member of a panel which is investigating Garcia's finances.

"We used to have a tradition of tolerating corrupt governments. Now the moralization issue has become indispensable," Cateriano said in an interview.

Garcia's secretary Mirtha Larrauri said Garcia would not comment Thursday, but was not surprised by the outcome.

"It's a vote which follows the party line," Garcia said before the vote Wednesday. "Those who lost the last elections want to eliminate me from politics."

Garcia, president from 1985 to 1990, accuses his political enemies of mounting a smear campaign to hurt his chances for re-election. Many see Garcia, 42, as the frontrunner for the 1995 elections for lack of strong opposition. He has not said he plans to run.

If the Senate vote goes against Garcia, few believe he will be found guilty in court. In his final year, Garcia packed the court with Aprista members and sympathizers.

"It's nothing. It's business as usual," said Mirko Lauer, a political analyst with leftist sympathies. "Garcia doesn't care if he wins or loses in the Senate. He's proven this is political persecution, not a moralization campaign."

The vote ended two days of often stormy debate.

In one incident, a member of Garcia's Aprista party had to be restrained by congressmen when she angrily approached Congressman Fernando Olivera, head of the panel that launched the investigation.

PARADE: LHS students march into the homecoming spirit

(From 1A)

They were followed by grand marshals, Ernie Johnson and Billy Gilbreath, both retired from the LHS staff.

The LHS band appeared close behind the grand marshals, and was greeted with cheers and applause.

Although band members faces' perspired profusely — beneath juanty maroon hats — as they neared the end of the parade, their movements were precise and they played enthusiastically, with no hint of exhaustion.

Some students, who were aboard floats, let their friends and family members know that they wanted something to drink at the end of the parade.

Between shouts of "LHS is the best" from one spunky brunett on the Spirit Club float, the young lady shouted, "Hi mom. My knees hurt. I need a drink. Get it fast. LHS is the best."

A couple of Lee Freshman High School cheerleaders, though they had pranced and chanted much of the parade, performed handsprings a good distance down Neely Street.

A costumed Rebel mascot (General Wins-Alot) garnered cheers from delighted youngsters as he skated along the street on roller blade skates.

Some members of the LHS junior class got into the spirit of a homecoming on the Nile by donning togas and Egyptian garb. They manned a float decked with banners declaring juniors a class "Born to be Worshipped."

A couple of LFHS girls carried an immense can of soup labeled "Cream of Cougar." A cougar tail dangled from the top of the can. (The LHS Rebel football team will play Abilene Cooper's Cougars during the homecoming game tonight.)

One float sported banners encouraging the Lee Rebels to "mummify the cougars."

The LFHS and junior high school bands also participated.

At the end of the parade, a massive mountain of smashed wooden crates and planks awaited the torch for the annual homecoming bonfire. At the top of the wood pile was a brightly painted wooden cougar, draped over a goalpost.

The bonfire, set up in a field near the LHS vocational building, was adjacent to another homecoming event — car bashing.

For $1, bashing enthusiasts were given the privilege of taking three swings with a sledge hammer to a two-door engineless car which was donated by David's Auto Truck & Equipment.

The junked car was spray painted with slogans including "Kill the Cougars." Proceeds from the car bashing will benefit the LHS Orchestra.

Most adults, when asked what they liked best about the parade, replied, "My kid."

Homecoming activites will continue with a 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. reception today in the LHS faculty dining area. The reception will honor all Lee alumni, former faculty and staff. Former LHS students are invited to roam the halls and visit former teachers today. All former band members, student council members, cheerleaders, Dixie Dolls, Rebelettes, football players and homecoming court members are invited to sign up to be recognized at tonight's homecoming football game.

Tonight's pre-game festivities will include introducing the homecoming court and their parents. Half-time activities will include crowning the homecoming king and queen.

Saturday's homecoming semi-formal dance will be presented from 9:30 p.m. -12:30 a.m. at the Lee High Youth Center, 3500 Neely. Tickets are $10 per couple in advance or $20 per couple at the door. The Student Council is sponsoring the dance. Sam Hollis is taking photos of the occasion.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies in forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the upper 80s and west winds at 10 to 20 mph, shifting to the north in the afternoon at 15 to 25 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the upper 40s. Saturday should be cloudy in the morning turning to partly cloudy in the afternoon with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 58, Thursday's high was 91 compared with a record high for that date of 95 set in 1951. The record low for today was 41 set in 1932.

STATE

It was sunny, breezy and warm across much of Texas on Thursday.

The circulation around an area of low pressure over West Texas was promoting southerly winds at 15 to 20 miles an hour over West and Central Texas with light southerly winds in the east. Gusts were clocked near 35 mph in the Panhandle.

Temperatures climbed into the 80s and 90s across most of the state. At 3 p.m., readings ranged from 81 degrees at Guadalupe Pass to 93 degrees at Del Rio.

A cold front was expected to bring lower temperatures to North Texas over the weekend. Forecasters said the region would be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. High temperatures in the 80s and 90s Friday and 60s and 70s on Saturday. Lows were to range from the lower 50s to mid 60s Friday night.

The South Texas forecast was for partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures on Saturday. Highs in the 90s were predicted Friday and 70s to 90s on Saturday. Lows were to range from the 50s to 70s.

West Texas was expected to be clear and cooler with highs Friday from the 50s in the north to 90s in the south. Lows Friday night were expected to be mainly in the 40s.

NATION

Showers were scattered Thursday along the East Coast and thunderstorms developed along a cold front crossing the middle of the nation. Snow covered parts of Montana.

A cold front crossing the central states bumped up against hot air with temperatures in the 80s that extended across the southern Plains and the lower Mississippi Valley, creating the possibility of thunderstorms.

The cold front extended from south-central Kansas to northern Illinois at midday and a few showers and thunderstorms had developed over the southern half of Missouri.

Showers forming ahead of the cold front were scattered from Ohio to the lower Great Lakes, while behind the front showers spread over Iowa and eastern Nebraska, and rain and snow showers were over the northern Plains.

Late Wednesday, thunderstorms that developed along the front produced large hail, heavy rain and damaging wind from northeastern Kansas across northern Missouri to west-central Illinois.

Showers and thunderstorms associated with low pressure off the coast of North Carolina stretched over northeastern North Carolina. Showers prevailed along the middle Atlantic Coast and the southern coast of New England.

The naval air station at Norfolk, Va., received 1.31 inches of rain between 2 a.m. and 8 a.m. EDT, and morning showers produced about 1.75 inches of rain at Portsmouth, Va., the National Weather Service said.

Showers and thunderstorms associated with a stationary front extended across southern and central Florida.

Snow developed over Montana during the morning and heavy, wet snow continued to fall during the early afternoon. Snow totals ranged up to 3 inches in the Great Falls area, with an inch reported at Cut Bank and Lewistown.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

In Thursday's newpaper, it was reported that Adela Marmolejo had been awarded almost $50,000 in a civil lawsuit against the city of Midland.

Because the jury found Ms. Marmolejo 50 percent negligent for the accident, only half of the damages determined by the jury will be actually awarded, court officials said.

TAYLOR: Reagans, Fords among guests journalism.

Selling papers is the main motive, and a photograph of Miss Taylor, 59, and Larry Fortensky, 39, reciting wedding vows is worth "something in the high six figures," said a well-known celebrity photographer, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

The National Enquirer and Star wouldn't discuss their coverage of the 5 p.m. wedding, but The Globe did.

"At our command post overlooking the historic Foxen Vineyard, Globe will have two helicopters, a refueling truck and ground crew, a motor home for on-site photo processing, cellular phones and walkie-talkies and a hospitality tent," said Mary Ann Norbom, the Los Angeles bureau chief.

She said it considered using a hot air balloon for a bungee jump into the ceremony, but balloons were outlawed in the valley because they were scaring horses on ranches.

The multimillion-dollar wedding 100 miles northwest of Los Angeles promises to be an even bigger event than the 1985 Malibu wedding of Madonna and Sean Penn, who had to shout vows over the drone of helicopters.

"We've heard about it and we've got anti-aircraft guns just in case," Miss Taylor's attorney Neil Papiano said jokingly Wednesday. "These people can do what they want, but it will be dark and the ceremony will be covered."

Security plans for the 2,700-acre estate are confidential, but they reportedly include officers on horseback and in two helicopters. A metal detector will screen guests for cameras.

First lady Barbara Bush declined an invitation due to a schedule conflict. If the Bushs were guests, the airspace over the ranch would be closed and a media circus avoided.

The Reagans and the Fords, however, will be among the 160 guests.

No wedding details were released by Miss Taylor's publicist Chen Sam, but guests reportedly include Frank Sinatra, Gregory Peck, Arsenio Hall, Pia Zadora, George Hamilton and Liza Minnelli. Women were asked not to wear yellow because Miss Taylor's Valentino wedding dress is that color.

The news media was excluded so Miss Taylor could make exclusive coverage deals designed to raise millions of dollars for AIDS research.

Herb Ritts was picked as photographer. He has sold rights to photographs in Europe for $100,000-plus, tabloid sources said. The Associated Press was told $1.5 million would get the news service a picture.

Gossip columnist Liz Smith of New York Newsday was given exclusive print coverage, saying she was "just lucky to have been a friend of Liz Taylor's for 26 years." Her story will be distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

The Academy Award-winning actress met Fortensky, a twice-divorced construction worker, during their November 1988, stay to kick drugs at the Betty Ford Clinic in Rancho Mirage. The romance apparently flourished when the actress was hospitalized near death with pneumonia last year.

GATES: Current and former CIA analysts testify and rose to become its acting director for a brief time in 1987.

The crowded hearing room was still as Gates, 48, presented the case on which his nomination might hinge. Just two weeks earlier, in his first appearance, he seemed to enjoy near-solid bipartisan support, but several senators appeared to be wavering after hearing the latest criticism.

"This is a decision of historic importance for us," said committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla.

In a methodical way, Gates — a trained analyst of Soviet affairs — listed 20 allegations and sought to disprove them. He noted that most of the criticism emanated from the CIA office which dealt in Soviet activities in the Third World.

Mel Goodman, who directed that office until 1985, was the most outspoken of three former CIA officials who criticized Gates in testimony Wednesday. In addition, the committee released sworn statements from three current analysts, echoing the same theme, as Gates appeared Thursday. One said the "vast majority" of analysts and managers at the agency believed Gates "subverted the intelligence process."

Among the critics' allegations was that Gates, seeking to impose his own views and those of his late boss, William Casey, systematically slanted analyses to reflect a far greater Soviet role in the Third World — including Iran, Afghanistan and Nicaragua — than was the case.

Gates cited examples to the contrary, and said he had always encouraged analysts — even junior ones — to present other points of views.

He traced some of the rancor against him to his demanding personality and tough style. He told the panel that three days after taking over the CIA's analysis operation in 1982, he assembled the analysts and told them that much of their product was "flabby" and "verbose," reflecting "complacent thinking" and "arrogance."

Gates said many analysts resented the criticism, but many also flourished under the changes he instituted. When he became deputy CIA director in 1986, Gates said, he instituted weekly meetings with analysts — initially at brown-bag lunches — to hear their views.

"I suspect that to a lot of people I was not the most approachable person," he said. "I suppose that if I'm confirmed, I have to be more sensitive about this."

Gates said several studies by the CIA's inspector general in the 1980s failed to find concrete proof of political interference.

Nonetheless, he said, one of his top priorities would be confronting the perception of political bias and diffusing it. Another urgent agenda item, Gates said, was a comprehensive administration study of U.S. intelligence needs to help the CIA revamp its mission.

Gates, who left the CIA in 1989 to become President Bush's deputy national security adviser, cited his "uncommon relationship" with the president as an asset for such a task. Gates spent the weekend with Bush on a combined pleasure and business trip to Georgia and Florida.

Republicans were pleased with Gates' reappearance. Democrats were more reserved.

"Members are going to reach their own judgment. It's a difficult question," Boren said.

HAITI: Army attacks leave at least 150 dead

(From 1A)

The Pentagon says it has forces in place to send troops to evacuate an estimated 8,000 Americans from Haiti, but spokesmen said Thursday there appeared to be little chance of this happening.

Radio Lumiere, a Protestant-run station, said an army-sponsored massacre occurred Wednesday afternoon in a shantytown in the western part of Port-au-Prince, the capital.

Security forces who picked up the body of a dead soldier in the slum returned later with reinforcements and went house-to-house shooting residents indiscriminately, the radio station said. Some residents were forced to dig holes to bury people on the spot, the report said.

Soldiers on Monday shot a 17-year-old youth to death outside Aristide's shelter for homeless children in Port-au-Prince, according to a supervisor, Milius Lubrun. He said five other youths from the home were shot and wounded Tuesday when they went to search for their friend.

Aristide, a 38-year-old Roman Catholic priest, founded the orphanage in 1986, and it was one of his most prized achievements. It was thought the attacks might have been intended to carry a symbolic message for Aristide.

There was no independent confirmation of the reports, but hospital officials spoke of 150 dead and more than 300 wounded since the coup began. The military has long been an agent of repression in the impoverished Caribbean nation.

Fewer soldiers seemed to be on the streets of this capital city of 1 million Thursday, but an apparently nervous military issued an order banning street demonstrations.

Political leaders urged Aristide's return but said they opposed any military intervention. The Organization of American States, whose charter includes the possibility of military intervention, said it would order economic and political sanctions against Haiti.

An OAS delegation was reportedly traveling to Port-au-Prince as early as Friday.

"Before coming, the OAS delegation must make clear whether multinational armed force is envisioned. If it is, they will have trouble finding people to talk to," said Marc Bazin, a runner-up in last year's presidential elections.

Sen. Serge Gilles, a socialist, also said armed intervention should be ruled out. Both Gilles and Bazin, a conservative, said Aristide should be permitted to return, however.

The army sought to counter Aristide's calls for help abroad by appealing to traditional Haitian resentment at foreign intervention.

CLINTON: Arkansas governor announces candidacy

(From 1A)

Drawing on the history of the site, Clinton said Republicans have tried to divide blacks and whites.

"In the shadow of this great building, all of us know all about race-baiting," he said. "They've used that old tool on us for decades now. And I want to tell you one thing, I understand this tactic and I will not let them get away with it in 1992."

Clinton said the challenges facing Arkansas, one of the nation's poorest states, and the rest of the country cannot be met without new leadership in Washington to right the nation's course.

"Here in Arkansas we worked very hard against very steep odds to create more jobs and educate our people, and every one of us in own way tried to be one of the 1,000 points of light," Clinton said, alluding to Bush's program to encourage volunteerism in America.

"But I can tell you my friends ... where there is no national vision, no national leadership, no direction, a thousand points of light leaves a lot of darkness."

His biggest round of applause came when he voiced support for abortion rights, saying Bush was "more than willing to make it a crime for women to exercise their right to choose."

Clinton, still boyish-looking at 45 despite graying hair and a slight paunch, has been a rising political star since the 1970s. He was the nation's youngest governor at age 32 when elected to his first term in 1978. Now he's the nation's longest-serving governor.

Voters threw Clinton out of office in 1980 but he began a string of successful campaigns in 1982 after apologizing for the arrogance of his first term.

In Washington, Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, welcomed the latest addition to the Democratic field.

The governor praised Bush in the area of foreign affairs, but said "we cannot build a safe and secure world unless we can be strong at home."

GENE: Doctors develop blood test

persons in whose family hereditary Alzheimer's disease occurs can now determine through a blood test if they have the same defect, said Dr. Merrill Benson, head of the research team.

However, the significance of the discovery appeared tempered by the fact that other scientists have examined the same area of genes of persons with inherited Alzheimer's disease and found the genetic code to be normal.

And scientists from a third group reported last year that they had found a different genetic mutation — in precisely the same location on the same 770-link chain — among victims of the disease.

Taken together, the discoveries seem to indicate that any of several mutations may cause Alzheimer's, said Dr. Bruce Yankner, of Children's Hospital in Boston.

"The question people are going to be asking is whether this is the mutation that gives rise (to Alzheimer's) or whether this happens to be an area on the gene that is particularly subject to mutations," he said.

Benson said genetic codes from 31 family members spanning three generations were analyzed. They included six individuals who either had or had died of early-onset Alzheimer's disease.

The six with the disease — and only those six — had the mutation, he said.

The gene on which the defect was discovered provides a template for the construction of a substance called "amyloid precursor protein" in the brain.

Like all proteins, the molecule is a chain of smaller molecules called amino acids. The defective gene causes the substitution for a wrong amino acid on the chain, said Benson.

The cells of Alzheimer's disease victims contain abnormal concentrations of a substance called beta amyloid, which scientists have determined is a fragment that breaks off of the amyloid precursor protein.

Gorbachev gives Bush high mark

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Thursday gave high marks to President Bush's arms control proposal and said he considers it as important as the landmark superpower summit at Reykjavik in 1986.

In a brief interview on Soviet television, Gorbachev also said he has appointed a group of experts to analyze Bush's proposal and work out a "positive, adequate" response.

He noted that he spoke with Bush by telephone before the U.S. president announced a week ago that America was unilaterally reducing its arsenal of short-range nuclear weapons. Bush called on the Soviets to take similar steps and to enter negotiations to eliminate intercontinental ballistic missiles with multiple warheads.

"We agreed with the (U.S.) president that it is necessary to immediately begin contacts to clarify all the questions that we have. The president right away, in that conversation, said he liked the idea. And now representatives of the president are coming to us," Gorbachev said.

He was referring to a delegation led by U.S. Undersecretary of State Reginald Bartholomew that is expected to arrive in Moscow soon.

"I gave a special presidential order to form a group, which is already acting, to analyze in detail the proposal from the American side ...," Gorbachev said.

"You know, I think from our side there will be a proposal that will mean further development of this idea."

Gorbachev reiterated his previous praise for Bush's proposal and likened it to his summit meeting five years ago with former President Reagan in Reykjavik, Iceland. The superpowers agreed in principle at the Reykjavik summit to a 50-percent reduction in strategic offensive weapons.

The interview was conducted in Gorbachev's Kremlin office by a German television company immediately after the Soviet leader spoke by telephone with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to congratulate him on the first anniversary of German unification.

The nightly TV news program "Vremya" also carried an interview with a Soviet general, F.I. Ladygin, who it said was presenting the military's view of the American proposal.

Showdown with Mobutu risks violence or worse

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Etienne Tshisekedi, the opposition leader named prime minister this week, urged foreign troops Thursday to remain in Zaire while his power struggle with President Mobutu Sese Seko unfolds.

Tshisekedi held lengthy talks Thursday with opposition leaders and Mobutu supporters, but there was no progress reported in efforts to form a new government following last week's violent riots.

Mobutu told Western diplomats on Wednesday he was thinking about replacing Tshisekedi because of his refusal to give Mobutu's Popular Movement for the Revolution an adequate share of power in the interim government.

But Zaire's state-run television continued to refer to Tshisekedi as prime minister on Thursday, and there was no indication that Mobutu — Zaire's ruler for 26 years — would be able to displace him.

Nguz Karl-I-Bond, a member of the opposition coalition that supported Tshisekedi's nomination, and the man Mobutu reportedly favors as Tshisekedi's replacment, said he would not accept the post if Mobuto offered it to him.

It appeared that it could take several days for Tshisekedi to name a new government. The 150-party opposition coalition, in addition to its dispute with Mobutu's backers, faced serious internal dissent.

"It's almost impossible — they have to resolve regional and ethnic disputes" while forming a government, said Ngefa Atondoko, a spokesman for the Zaire Association for the Defense of Human Rights.

Tshisekedi urged France and Belgium not to withdraw their paratroop units, which arrived on Sept. 24 to help evacuate more than 10,000 foreigners.

Kinshasa newspapers reported 117 people had died in the violence that began last week with a mutiny by troops and quickly spread across the nation of 35 million people. Kinshasa and several major cities have been stripped of food and consumer goods.

There were reports Thursday of renewed looting overnight by soldiers in Kinshasa, but the city of 3 million was calm during daylight hours, and shops were beginning to be restocked.

Tshisekedi's supporters say they have already formed an alliance with underpaid army troops. Mobutu has told Western diplomats that he intends to maintain command of the army.

Tshisekedi, 59, who was detained for nine years and tortured, has angered Mobutu by telling reporters he would hold all power in the new government.

But sources close to negotiations between the two men said the real issue was how many Mobutu supporters would hold Cabinet posts in the new government.

U.N. missile team begins using helicopters

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Weapons inspectors searching for Scud missiles and launchers flew U.N. helicopters over Iraqi territory Thursday for the first time since Iraq backed down and gave its permission.

The U.N. inspectors planned to make unrestricted surveillance flights in remote areas and to stage surprise visits at sites suspected of holding Iraqi weapons of mass destruction. Earlier teams have been restricted to the Baghdad area by lack of transportation.

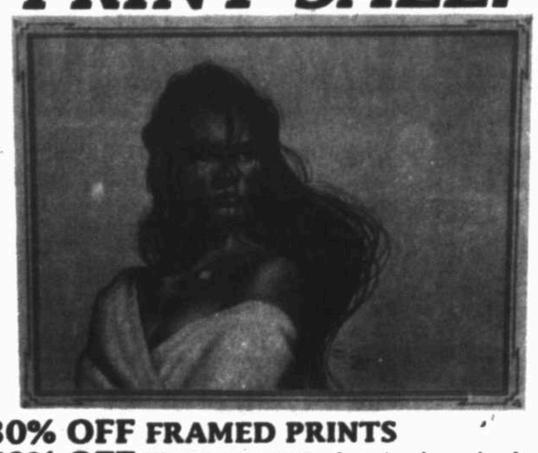

The 20-member team took off from Baghdad's Rasheed military base, said Alastair Livingston, an official at the U.N. Special Commission's office in Bahrain.

The inspection teams work for the commission, which is overseeing the elimination of Iraq's long-range missiles and nuclear, chemical and biological weapon programs under the Persian Gulf War cease-fire.

The commission's chairman, Rolf Ekeus, arrived in Bahrain late Thursday en route to Baghdad with his deputy, Robert Gallucci, to discuss the inspections with Iraqi officials, Livingston said.

House votes to close down lawmakers' bank

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted 390-8 Thursday to shut down a prized perk — its members' bank — following disclosure that lawmakers, including Speaker Thomas Foley, wrote rubber checks.

The resolution also ordered an ethics committee investigation of whether House members "routinely and repeatedly" wrote checks knowing they had insufficient funds in their accounts.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said the investigation would concentrate not on occasional rubber check writers but look for habitual abuse "that could lead to disciplinary action against members" or House employees.

Gephardt also admitted that three of his checks, totaling $216.28, were submitted to the bank when he had insufficient funds. He blamed the problem on a payee who waited two months before presenting a Gephardt check for payment.

The resolution ordered a closure of the bank, run by the sergeant at arms office, by year's end — a move that would force members to maintain accounts with the House credit union or any other federally insured institution.

On another embarrassing matter, Foley said current and former members who are delinquent in clearing their tabs at the House restaurant should be forced to pay up.

But he said a suggestion to post the names of such members is "an extraordinary thing I'm not ready to endorse."

Foley said that he, too, had bounced a check at the House bank.

Last Dec. 27, he said, he wrote a $540 check for a compact disc player and an audio receiver without knowing he did not have sufficient funds to cover the amount.

"I didn't know the check presented for payment was delayed for 24 hours," Foley said Thursday.

Asked last week by reporters if he had written any rubber checks at the House bank, Foley replied: "No, I do my banking at United States Bank in Spokane, Wash." He said he did have an account at the House bank, "but it's not active."

Meanwhile, House sources who spoke only on the condition of anonymity said Foley agreed to a bipartisan request for an ethics committee investigation only after Republicans threatened to seek the probe by themselves.

One source said there was an "audible gasp" at a meeting of House party whips Thursday when someone suggested that half the ethics panel members would have to withdraw from the probe because they had written rubber checks.

Foley said that after the ethics panel probed possible "significant, substantial and repeated" abuses, it would decide whether any members should be investigated.

The resolution asked the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the formal name of the ethics committee, to investigate whether House members or employees "abused the banking privileges by routinely and repeatedly writing checks for which their accounts did not have ... sufficient funds..."

The panel also would investigate the operation of the bank by the sergeant at arms office.

Discussions already have begun about moving accounts from the members' bank to the congressional credit union, said Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Administration Committee which oversees the chamber's operations.

House leaders are trying to resolve twin public relations disasters that highlight the privileges given lawmakers.

Connecticut lays off hundreds of workers

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut began laying off hundreds of state workers Thursday as a stalemate between union leaders and the governor over contract concessions continued.

Public employees in several other states, including California, New York and Maryland, faced a similar fate, the victims of dwindling state revenues, skyrocketing costs and budget-conscious taxpayers.

Connecticut Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. made good on a threat to dismiss 200 workers unless union leaders agreed to $345 million in concessions needed to balance the state's $7.6 billion budget.

Some 2,300 other workers already have received layoff notices and Weicker said he was ordering pink slips for 1,277 others; it wasn't clear when those layoffs would begin.

"Everybody's been saying goodbye, everybody's upset," said Kathy McNamara, a 37-year-old prosecutor who was among three workers in the Hartford State's Attorney's Office losing their jobs.

"There were some tears, including mine at the farewell party," she said.

McNamara, a former police officer who would have marked her first anniversary with the state on Oct. 19, said she felt "almost betrayed" by being let go.

"I've worked so hard," she said. "It was a question of seniority. But nonetheless it hurts."

Study finds teen-age drug use on decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Use of illegal drugs by teen-agers dramatically declined over the past five years, a study by a private group has found.

The percentage of teen-agers ages 13 to 17 who said they had used marijuana in the previous year dropped by almost 30 percent, while those who said they had used cocaine fell by more than 52 percent and crack cocaine almost 47 percent, said the Partnership for a Drug-Free America's Attitude Tracking Study.

And although the number of teen-agers who said they planned to use drugs in the next year also declined, a significant percentage still said they planned to use them at least once. Eighteen percent said they would try marijuana, 5 percent cocaine and 3.4 percent crack, the survey said.

Fewer younger teens appeared to be trying drugs at all.

The percentage of 13 year olds who said they had tried marijuana dropped by more than half, from 16.3 percent five years ago to 7.8 percent this year, the survey said. There was a 69 percent drop in the use of cocaine in that age group, from 8.4 percent to 2.6 percent, and a decrease from 4.7 percent to 2.3 percent for crack cocaine.

"These children have grown up hearing and seeing anti-drug messages in the media, in their classrooms and in their homes, and it's paying off," said James E. Burke, chairman of the partnership, a non-profit coalition of private advertising and media groups.

MIAs' families need answers

For the 18 years that have passed since the United States signed the peace agreement in Paris, the nightmare of not knowing what happened to hundreds of Americans listed as missing-in-action or prisoners-of-war has hung over the American people. There will be no rest — no real peace — for thousands of those people until the nagging questions are answered.

The pain of not knowing whether some Americans may still be alive in Southeast Asia won't allow the issue to be laid to rest until the answers are found.

Five years ago an article written by Richard L. Worsnop for Editorial Research Reports noted that searchers in a joint U.S.-Vietnamese effort had unearthed human bone fragments at a U.S. airplane crash site in Vietnam, then added that "American members of the search party held out little hope of identifying any of the remains."

The article went on to note that "a more sensitive question is whether any Americans are still alive and being held captive in Vietnam. Over the years, there have been many reported sightings of Americans in remote areas of the country...."

Those sightings have not diminished during the last five years and now a special U.S. Senate committee, headed by Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., is preparing to start probing the possibility that the sightings could be factual.

No doubt the committee's work will dredge up pain and tragic memories for thousands of Americans whose loved ones never returned from Vietnam. But were the possibility that Americans are still held there against their will not investigated, it would only add to the pain of the Vietnam War. The possibility — though many will discount it — must be probed until the answers are available or it is removed from the realm of concern.

Americans have a right to know what happened to those hundreds of their countrymen and, more than that, the families of the missing deserve to learn what happened to their relatives in that tragic and divisive war.

Helms questions funds for China

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government is hellbent on giving $2 million in grants to two groups doing projects in China, even though informed critics of the plan say the grants will amount to a gross misuse of federal funds.

Anderson

The grants, from the Agency for International Development, would go to an American medical center and an American-studies program at Fudan University, both in Shanghai. The groups seeking the grants have something in their favor — a president with a crush on China and a high-powered lobbying firm with good connections on Capitol Hill.

But on the downside, they have run up against Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who has held up the grants by asking a basic question that the government doesn't seem to have the answer to: How is the money going to be used?

That is just the beginning of the questions. Why are there no Americans involved in on-site management of these Chinese-American ventures? Does anyone on the foundation staff know anything about running a hospital? And will the hospital be connected with another Chinese hospital suspected of performing forced abortions as part of China's barbaric population-control program that limits families to one child each? With this last question still unanswered, sources say AID will opt to give all of the money to the university and postpone action on the hospital.

The attempt to throw money at China once again renews the debate over the Bush administration's love affair with China, where pro-democracy demonstrators were massacred in Tiananmen Square in 1989. It also shows how politics override sound spending on American foreign aid.

The two groups asking for money are the American Hospital in Shanghai Foundation and the Fudan Foundation. They are represented in Washington by Cassidy and Associates, one of the slickest lobbying agencies in town, which has been paid about $470,000 by the two groups. The foundations have already received about $8 million in U.S. aid since their inception in 1986. Now they've asked for $8 million more, but AID trimmed the request to $2 million.

The money would come from an account called American Schools and Hospitals Abroad, or ASHA. Every year, AID assembles a panel of experts to review the applications for ASHA grants. Our associate Scott Sleek has learned that in past years the advisory panel has said no to the two foundations, but AID has continued the grants anyway, with the exception of last year. Now the 1991 installment has been delayed because of Helms' questions.

"If they get any money for this, it will be an incredible waste of taxpayers' funds," said Dr. Paul Ehrlich, a physician who has been on the ASHA review panel several times in the past eight years.

The decision to approve the funding came under pressure from Congress, specifically Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., and Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis. Obey chairs a House panel overseeing foreign aid programs. Cassidy and Associates had a connection with Obey. Elliot Fiedler, Obey's aide for 11 years, is now a lobbyist for Cassidy.

William Cloherty, who also works for Cassidy, helped set up the two foundations. Over the last three years, Cassidy, Fiedler and Cloherty have given Obey about $4,500 in campaign contributions.

Obey told us he supported the projects as a way to keep information about democracy flowing into China. And he said he has told AID that the two programs should be expected to "pass muster." Obey said that the campaign contributions have not influenced his thinking.

The Cassidy firm also has a familiar face in AID's top office. AID Director Ronald Roskens was former president of the University of Nebraska, and Cassidy represents the university's fund-raising arm.

Intellectual honesty lacking in column

There is perhaps an effort at objectivity in Gelb's column you published on Sept. 19. But listen to him: "It is immoral to tie humanitarian aid for Soviet Jews to the political issue of Israeli settlement policy."

There isn't much intellectual honesty in that statement. I fear that Gelb is little more than an Israeli mouthpiece. Perhaps New Yorkers of Gelb's ilk get together and talk to each other until they begin to believe absurd things. Surely they miscalculated this time, for a poll shows 86 percent of Americans approve Bush's stand against the Israeli lobby that has terrorized Congress for decades.

Actually, I don't know why we should expect Jewish-Americans to be objective about Israel, hard though they might try. But similarly I don't see the fairness in publishing their views without also publishing the views of Arab-Americans.

If I were to express publicly an opinion on the troubles in Northern Ireland I'd feel obliged to disclose that my ethnic background is Scotch-Irish Protestant. I believe Lewis Gelb and William Safire and the other Jewish columnists ought to do likewise when writing about Israel, as should citizens who write letters to the editor, if their ethnic origin is pertinent.

And why should Jews be the first to be rescued from the Soviet economic disaster? Were they not instrumental in bringing Marx-Leninism to Russia? Above all, why should American taxpayers pay the bill when world Jewry is the richest ethnic group on the planet?

It is claimed that Israel has never defaulted a loan. The reason is that Israel gets Congress to forgive the loan or give Israel the money to pay it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 4, the 277 day of 1991. There are 88 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 4, 1957, the Space Age began as the Soviet Union, to the dismay of the United States, launched Sputnik, the first man-made satellite, into orbit around the Earth.

On this date:

In 1777, George Washington's troops launched an assault on the British at Germantown, Pa. The attack lost momentum, and the Americans suffered heavy casualties.

In 1822, the 19th president of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes, was born in Delaware, Ohio.

In 1887, the first issue of the International Herald Tribune was published as the Paris Herald Tribune.

In 1931, 60 years ago, the comic strip "Dick Tracy," created by Chester Gould, made its debut.

In 1940, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini conferred at Brenner Pass in the Alps, where the Nazi leader sought Italy's help in fighting the British.

In 1957, the television series "Leave It to Beaver" premiered on CBS.

In 1958, the first trans-Atlantic passenger jetliner service was begun by British Overseas Airways Corp., with flights between London and New York.

In 1965, Pope Paul VI became the first reigning pontiff to visit the Western Hemisphere as he appealed for world peace in an address to the U.N. General Assembly.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

UT seems to be clamping down on critics

The University of Texas anthem — "The Eyes of Texas" — takes on frightening connotations in the 1990s.

Yes, the eyes of Texas are upon you, all the livelong day. And supposing they don't like what they see? Why, then, the hands of Texas clamp over your mouth. There are things you can say at the University of Texas and things you are well-advised not to say. Last year, Alan Gribben, a Mark Twain scholar, achieved national prominence by sounding the alarm over plans for a freshman composition course based on readings about racism and sexism. He didn't think it fitting to infuse an ideological viewpoint into a course on basic writing skills.

Murchison

Professor Gribben, discouraged at the personal abuse and professional isolation that came his way, departed this fall for friendlier climes. The English department hasn't got him to kick around anymore. Never mind. There's his friend, Dr. James Duban, who had the affrontery the other day to question the premises of a proposed course on multiculturalism.

The University of Texas is thinking of requiring all students to study a "minority or non-dominant culture within the United States" and "at least one non-Western or Third-world culture.

Duban, at a recent meeting of the University Council, a legislative body, voiced objections. "The definition of a 'U.S. multicultural course,'" he said, "would ... appear to exclude consideration of Irish, German, Italian or Jewish culture in the U.S. Have we come this far since 1946 only now to pronounce, 'No Irish need apply'? Also the standards used to define the so-called 'multicultural course' exclude numerous countries and cultures from the list of the cultured."

Duban charged that "the committee's 'overall doctrine of exclusivity' apparently violated University of Texas President William Cunningham's direction to walk wide of 'political agendas or particular ideologies.'" The committee, Duban charged, had distinguished "between non-dominant and dominant cultures," when what was wanted was consideration of "World Civilization" — everybody included.

Less than a day after he spoke, Duban was fired by the English department chairman as head of the departmental honors program. He had held the post for eight years. A supporter of the multiculturalist approach replaces him.

Chairman Joseph Kruppa invites us to see the change not as retribution for Duban's speech but as the consummation of a process long under way (though not previously revealed to Duban!).

Two impostures seem to be going on at the University of Texas and elsewhere. One is that Irishmen and Italians, for instance, rank as high as blacks, Hispanics, Asians, women, in the scale of academic concerns. They don't. "Multicultural education" is too much of the time an attempt to show up the "dominant," i.e., Western-male, culture and thereby make members of "non-dominant" cultures feel better about themselves. This is education as psychotherapy.

The second imposture is that nothing out of the way is happening on the campuses, and that critics of the new dispensation are free to speak their minds. On the hard evidence, much of it documented by Dinesh D'Souza in his best-selling "Illiberal Education," this assertion simply isn't so; critics aren't free to speak. Worse: If they aren't free even at the good old sober-sided University of Texas, my alma mater, we're in a mess for sure. Professor Duban and his allies are going to need a lot of help in upcoming months.

Global corporations dominate economy

China is supposed to be a lesser developed nation. We are supposed to be one of the top industrial nations in the world. Yet, within a short time of opening trade with China, it is the United States which has the trade deficit and China which has the trade surplus.

Reese

In other words, several billions of dollars worth of Chinese goods are being sold to us in excess of the amount of American goods being sold to China.

Why do you suppose this is true? It's true because much of the goods being exported from China are from joint ventures set up by American-based global corporations. In other words, the opportunity they saw in China was not a billion customers. It was a billion workers who could be forced to work cheap. Rather than make stuff in the United States for sale to Americans, these corporations are making stuff in China for sale to Americans.

That's what accounts for China's large amount of exports. Other than firecrackers and the Chinese version of the AK-47, China doesn't actually have much stuff worth exporting. It just has cheap labor.

If I seem to hit this subject often, it's because if you do not understand the role global corporations play in the world today, you cannot understand what is happening in the United States.

It is important to understand that the structure of the world today is not the same as the structure of the world in the past.

Economic activity is dominated by global corporations, some of which have annual incomes far in excess of the gross national product of some nations. For example, General Motors gross sales in 1989 were $127 billion while Austria's gross national product was only $118 billion.

These global corporations are not in any sense nationalistic. In fact, as several studies have shown, their top executives tend to view nationalism as a threat and one of the great curses of mankind.

Therefore if you are going to understand the world you live in, you must understand that it is no longer correct to say, for example, buy an American car and help America. For one thing, there are no American car companies left. Ford Festiva is made in Korea. Mercury Tracer is made in Mexico. The Ford Probe is made by Mazda. At the same time, GM owns a piece of Isuzu, and so on.

General Motors is laying off workers in America but it is building a massive new plant in Germany. This globalization of big business has been occurring for the past few decades (investment banking firms and oil companies were the first).

These vast engines of wealth and the men who control them exert enormous influence on American government. For all practical purposes, they dominate it. Much was made of the fact that Jimmy Carter, who campaigned as an outsider, actually produced a Trilateral Commission administration with not only policies but even personnel taken directly from the Trilateral Commission.

This is a trans-national private organization created by David Rockefeller to help the global corporations in the United States, Japan, and Europe coordinate their thinking and influence the policies of their respective governments. The point is that while much was made of it in regard to Carter, the same degree of influence is found in all administrations in the last few decades.

House approves rules for barring spread of AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate approved a compromise Thursday that requires states to adopt federal guidelines for deterring the spread of the AIDS virus by doctors and other health professionals.

The compromise rejects a plan passed earlier by the Senate that would have set prison sentences for any AIDS-infected doctor, dentist or nurse who performs surgery or other "invasive procedures" without disclosing the ailment.

Both houses agreed to the change on voice votes without debate as part of a bill appropriating $19.9 billion for the Internal Revenue Service, Treasury Department and several other federal agencies for the 12 months that began Oct. 1.

The bill itself also was approved on voice votes and sent to President Bush.

More national news/2D

The Senate had voted 81-18 for the much tougher proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to make it a federal crime for a health worker to perform high-risk procedures without disclosing he or she was carrying the AIDS virus.

The compromise, said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., "reflects reason rather than hysteria." Under it, each state's public health department will have one year to certify that Centers for Disease Control guidelines have been adopted.

The guidelines provide that health workers who perform invasive procedures should be tested for AIDS and hepatitis B, avoid risky procedures except when life or limb is in danger and inform patients if they are infected.

A state that does not adopt the guidelines could lose all of its federal Public Health Service funds, including money for child immunization and safe-water programs.

The $19.9 billion in the bill is down $1 billion from a year ago. The biggest single chunk, $8.7 billion, would go to the Office of Personnel Management for federal employees' benefits.

The Internal Revenue Service would get almost $6.7 billion; the Customs Service, $1.5 billion, and the office of the president, $298 million.

The president's office total includes $105 million for the Office of National Drug Control Policy, up $11.5 million from last year.

The bill includes $470 million to subsidize the Postal Service for handling certain rural newspapers and publications of non-profit organizations.

Also included in the bill is job protection for any employee of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Public Debt who refuses to transfer from Washington when the agency moves to Parkersburg, W.Va. The bill says no such worker may be penalized unless he or she declines another Treasury job in Washington.

The compromise bill includes a provision designed to ensure that the Federal Election Commission has enough money to help finance Democratic presidential campaigns early next year.

In a move that Democrats interpreted as a partisan effort to help President Bush, the Treasury Department ruled this year that the nominating conventions and general election have first call on federal matching funds, which come from taxpayers' checkoff contributions on their tax returns.

By committing in advance to the conventions and November election, the ruling would leave little money for the early primaries next year, in which several Democrats are likely to be running while Bush faces no party opposition.

The bill says in effect that the FEC can borrow to provide matching funds for the early primaries. The provision was inserted into the bill by Senate Democratic leaders over the opposition of Republicans.

The guidelines provide that health workers who perform invasive procedures should be tested for AIDS and hepatitis B, avoid risky procedures except when life or limb is in danger and inform patients if they are infected.

Thomas gets vote from 12th Democrat

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate majority for Clarence Thomas' confirmation to the Supreme Court appeared to solidify Thursday as formal debate began on whether to put the conservative appeals judge on the nation's highest court.

Sen. Wyche Fowler of Georgia became the 12th Democrat to say he would vote for Thomas, who appeared to have 53 votes for confirmation on the first of four days of Senate debate.

Opponents suffered another setback when one of three pro-choice Republicans they had hoped to win over said he would vote for Thomas. Delivering a lukewarm endorsement, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, called Thomas a "competent jurist."

So far, none of the Senate's 43 Republicans has opposed the nomination, although two remain undecided.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, Thomas' leading Senate opponent, conceded that chances of defeating the nominee were slim, but he vowed to fight on until the Senate votes next Tuesday.

"The probabilities are that he would be confirmed, but in this business it's not over until it's over," Metzenbaum said.

Fowler, the third freshman Southern Democrat facing re-election next year to endorse Thomas, said he would vote against the advice of many supporters who made "many compelling viewpoints against the nomination."

"My vote is essentially one of hope, a hope that Clarence Thomas will demonstrate the same independence, the same self-reliance and the same promise that are the hallmarks of his career," Fowler said of the nominee, who rose to prominence from poor black family in Georgia.

On the Senate floor, Metzenbaum pleaded with colleagues to study Thomas' testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, which declined on a 7-7 vote last week to endorse the nominee.

"No senator should be stampeded into voting for this nomination," Metzenbaum said. "Go back and look at the record. Go back and see what he said and see what he didn't say. If you do that you may reconsider your previously announced position."

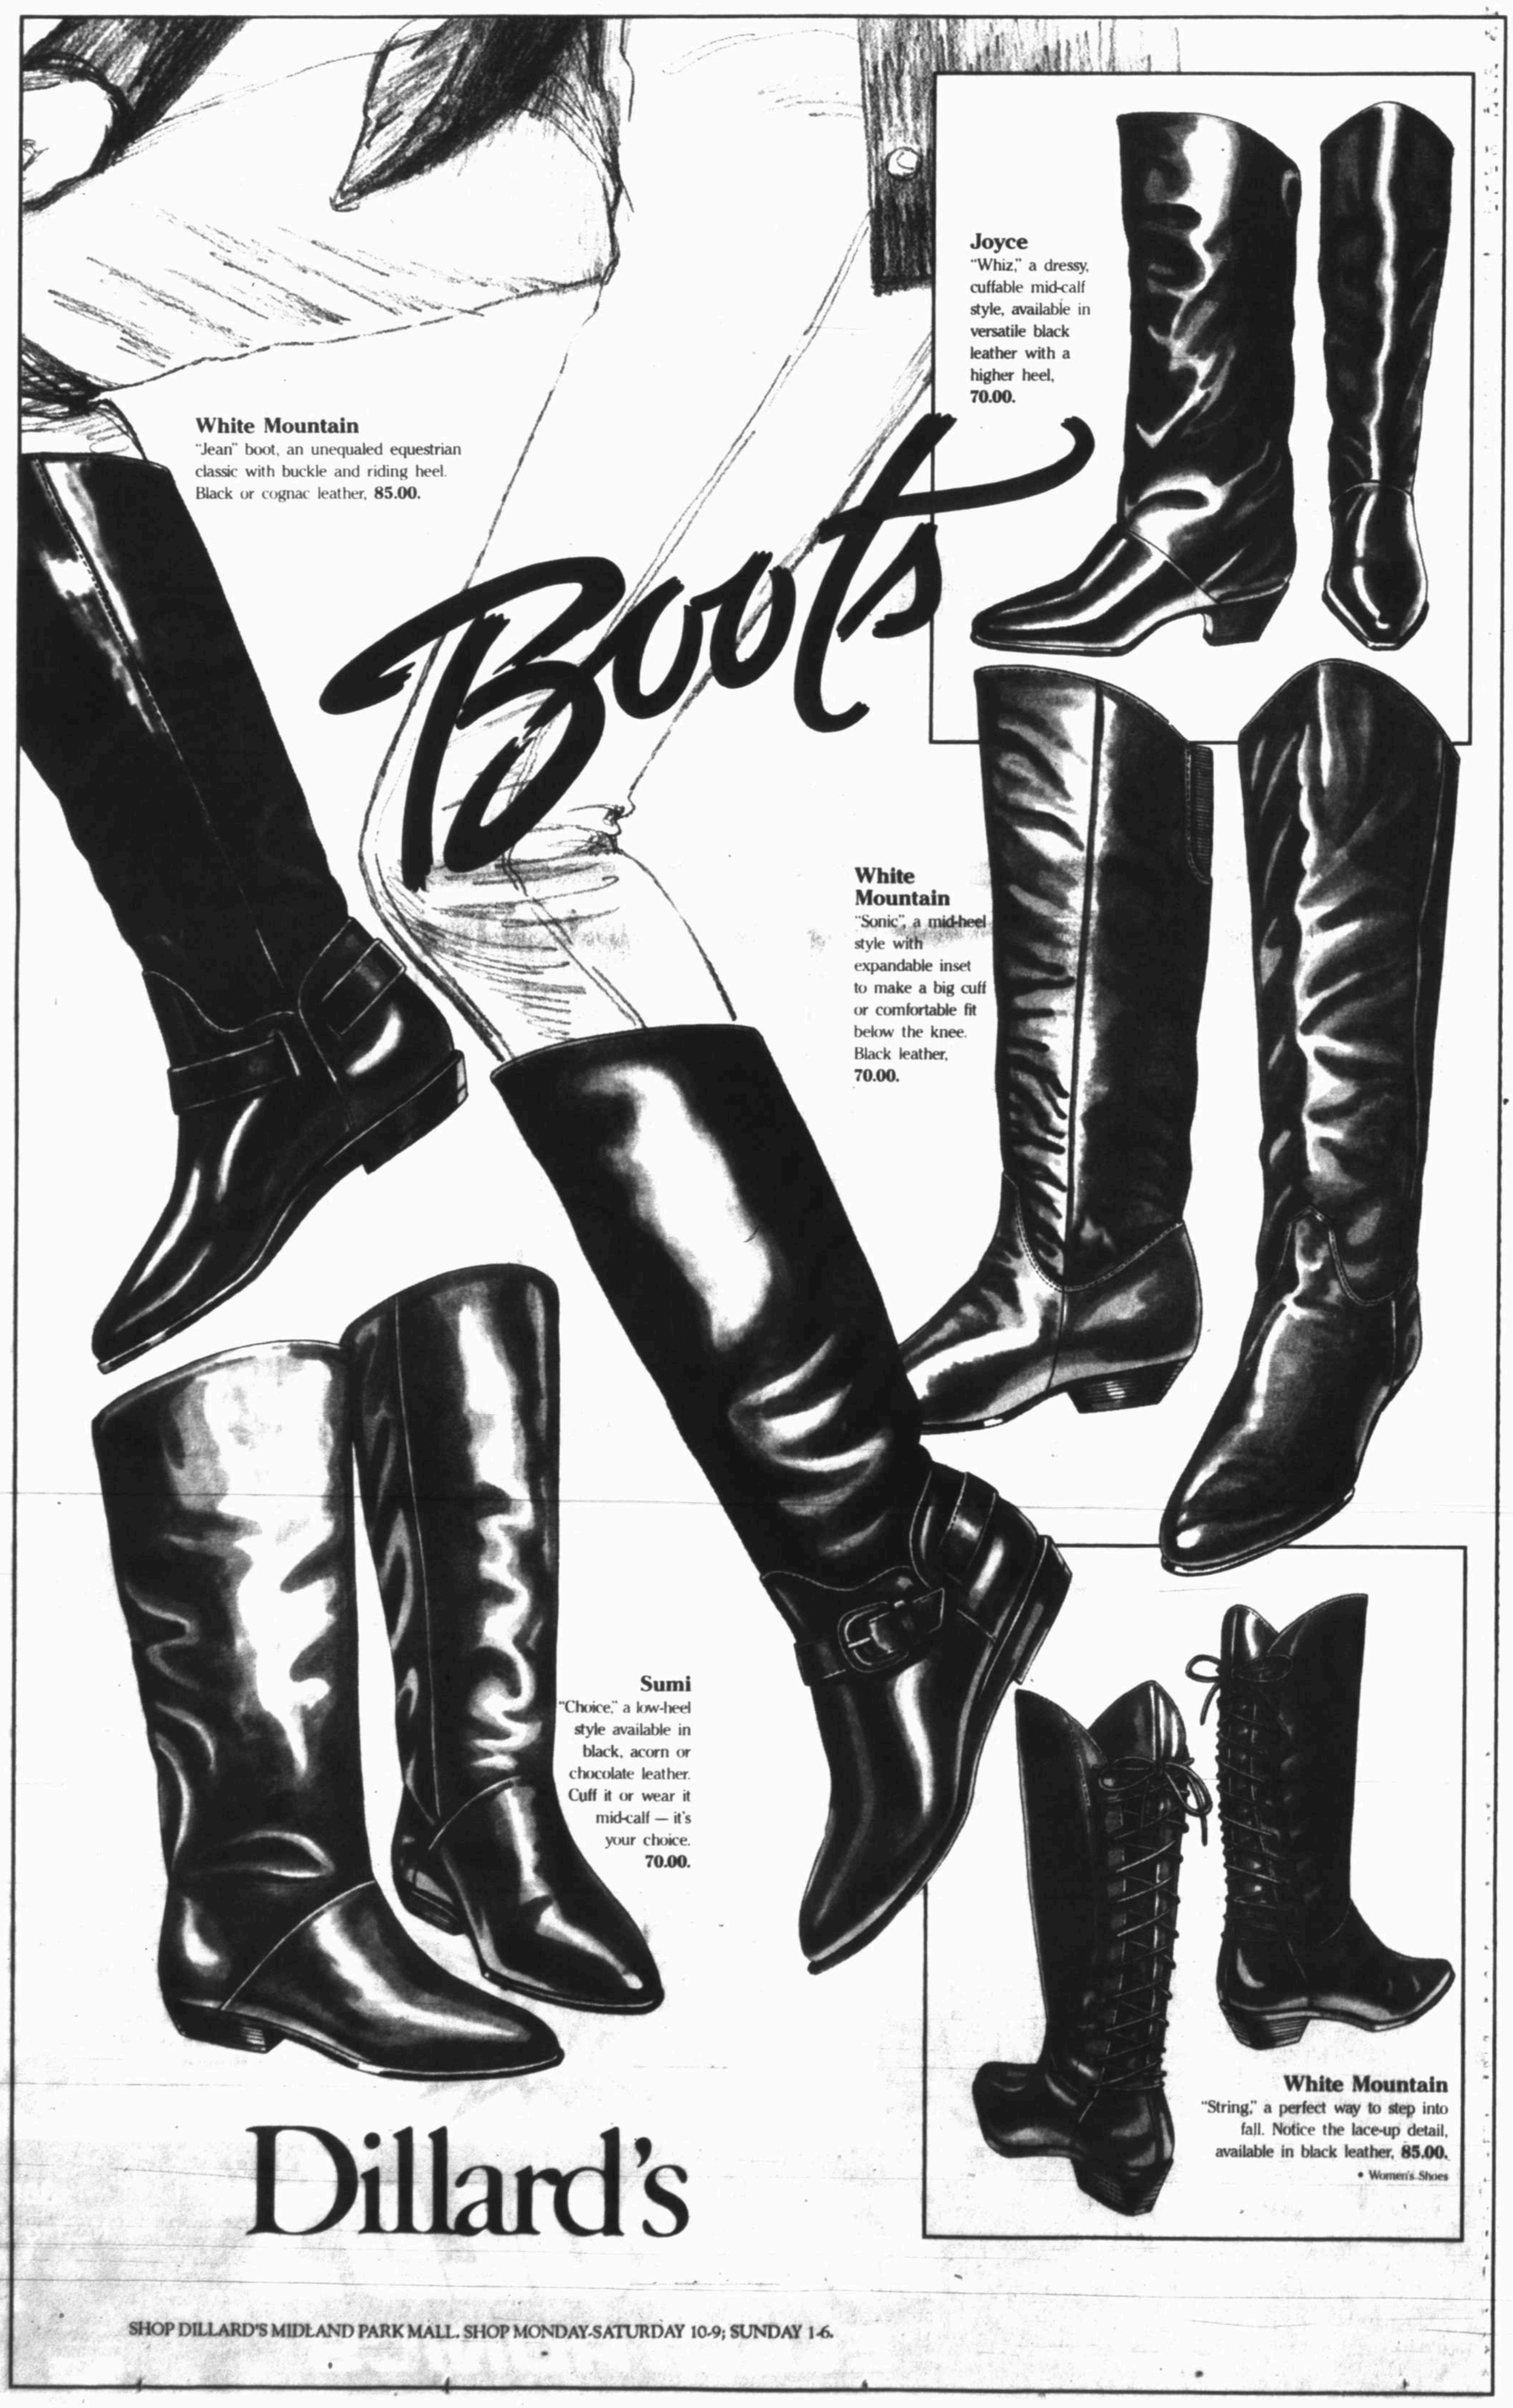

The floor debate focused on whether Thomas had been forthcoming during confirmation hearings.

Telescope spots volcano eruption

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An eruption of a sulfur volcano on Jupiter's moon Io can be seen from Earth, more than a decade after it was believed to have gone dormant, University of Arizona scientists report.

The volcano, named for the Hawaiian fire goddess Pele, was discovered in March 1979 in photo images taken by the spacecraft Voyager 1. Four months later, images from Voyager 2 showed that it had fizzled out.

But Pele is active again, the scientists report in the October issue of The Astronomical Journal, based on observations by the Multiple Mirror Telescope at the Fred Lawrence Whipple observatory atop Mount Hopkins.

Court candidate pledges campaign limits

■ Running for a seat on the Texas Supreme Court, Craig Enoch, a Republican, says Texans have no confidence in the justice system.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Texas Supreme Court candidate Craig Enoch said he wants to continue the court's ethical reform movement, promising a voluntary limit on campaign contributions.

"Texans' confidence in the justice system has been shattered," said Enoch, a Republican who is seeking the position currently held by Democratic incumbent Oscar Mauzy.

Enoch referred to the "60 Minutes" expose of the state's highest court four years ago. The investigative segment cited ethics violations and large, questionable campaign contributions to judges.

Enoch said he would not accept more than $5,000 per person or political action committee, and has placed an auditor on his campaign staff.

Midland attorney Nick Taylor, introducing Enoch at a press conference at Midland International Airport Thursday, said the candidate is "in the reform tradition."

"We desperately need him to bring the court back to honesty and integrity," Taylor said.

Enoch, currently chief justice of the Fifth District Court of Appeals in Dallas, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements in 1987 and won election to the seat in 1988. A Dallas attorney, Enoch, 41, has been a judge since 1981.

He announced his candidacy for the court seat in August and Wednesday began a statewide campaign tour.

"Under the leadership of the reform judges, integrity is returning to our justice system," Enoch said.

The candidate said Mauzy remains a threat to a fair court and acts more like a legislator than a judge.

"This race is about judging — not legislating," Enoch said, citing his efforts in the appeals court to improve its efficiency.

"In two years, the court experienced the sharpest decline in backlog in Dallas County's history," he said. "To Texans, this means a swifter, surer, less expensive justice."

Enoch advocated separation of legislation and court action.

"The judge does not decide the law. The judge interprets the law as it is written," he said. "If the legislature does something in violation of the rules of democracy, the court steps in."

Enoch said he won't practice "dirty politics."

"I'm a judge, and I'm going to conduct myself like a judge," he said.

He said he expects his support on a reform movement platform to be bi-partisan.

"The traditional Democratic vote believes in the integrity of the high court and will vote to protect it," Enoch said. No other candidates have announced a bid for the Republican nomination. The primary is set for March 1992.

The race "will be about who's the real judge," Enoch said. "I'm going to bring out the big guns to bear in that."

Highway wrap up in sight

■ Texas official says State 191, linking Midland and Odessa, is fully funded.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

By the end of its 20th birthday this year, a road connecting Midland with Odessa should begin looking more complete, a Texas Department of Highways official said Thursday.

Lynn Passmore, resident engineer with the department's Midland office, said construction of main lanes for State Highway 191 is progressing rapidly at both ends of its Midland-Odessa route. First designed in 1971, the highway has existed only as frontage roads because funding was unavailable for its completion.

An underpass at 191 and Loop 250 should be complete within three months, Passmore said. About the same time, workers should complete a similar project several miles west, where 191 enters Odessa, he said.

The first project is designed for speed and safety, Passmore said.

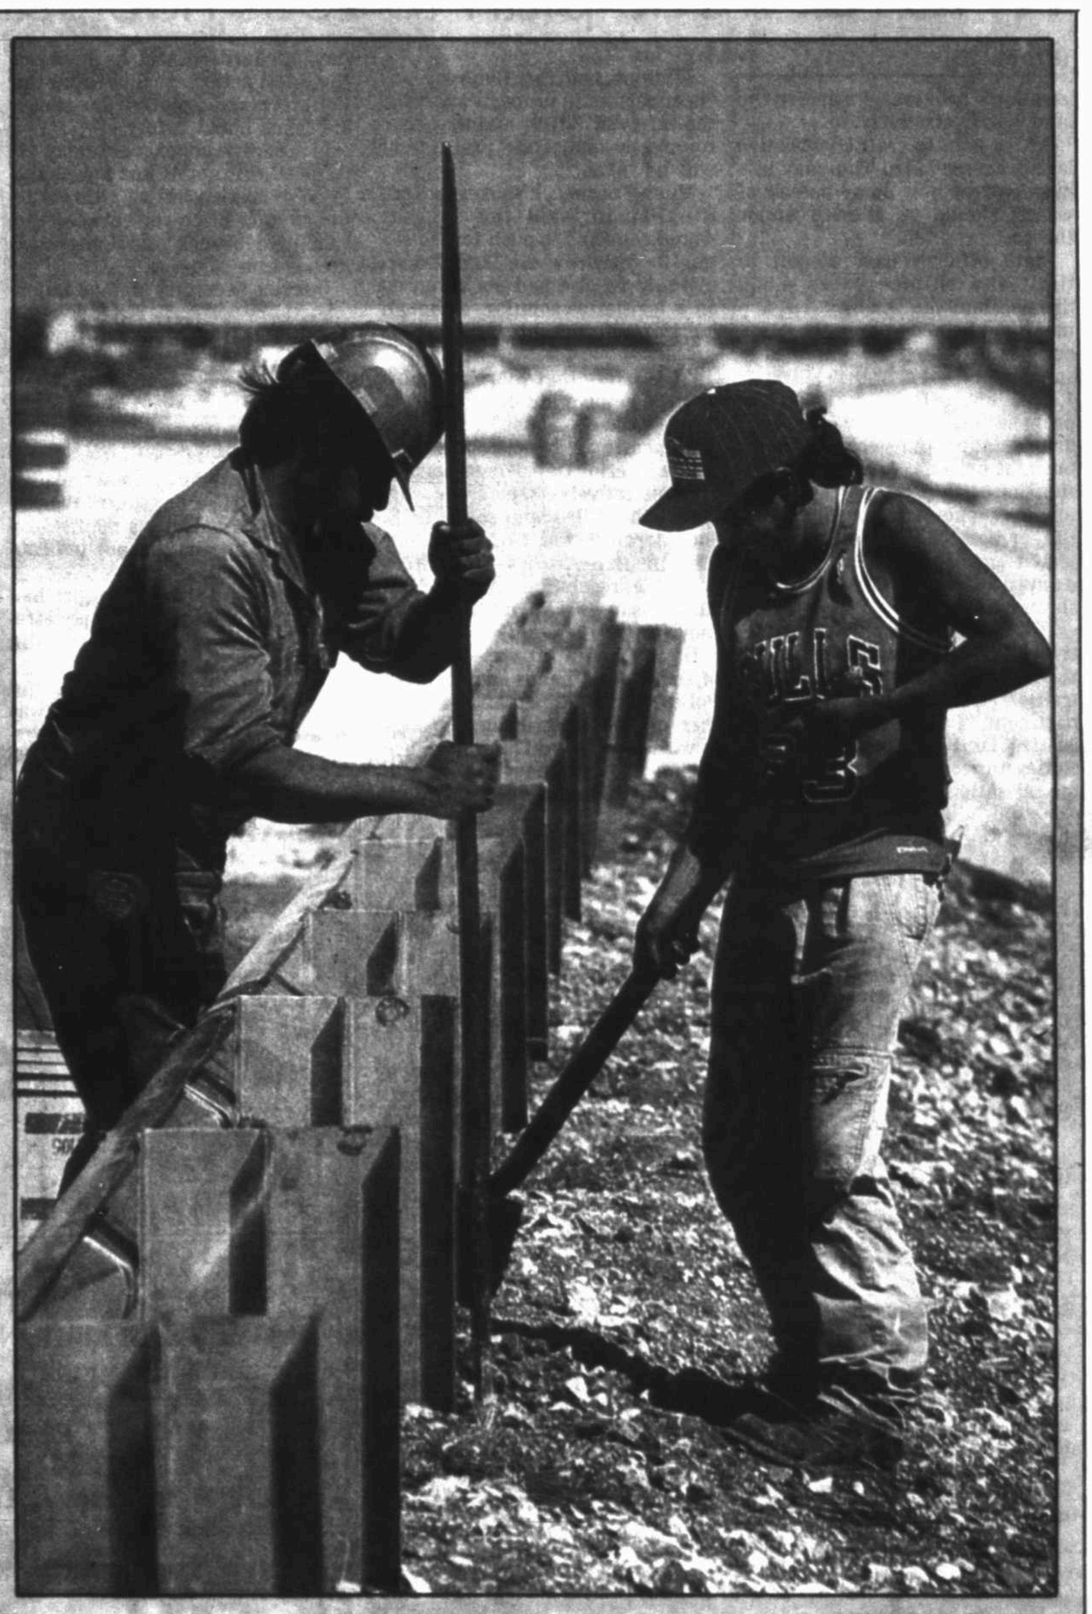

"From Midland, you'll be able to go to Odessa with no stoplights," he said. "At 191 and the loop, if you're going on through, you'll go under."

The same project includes building a bridge where Andrews Highway (State Highway 158) intersects with 191, taking traffic on 191 over the bridge and on 158 under, before the two highways connect.

"That's been a dangerous area," Passmore said. "People don't want to yield to traffic on 158 when they're coming up. There are a lot of accidents."

Workers are building a two-mile stretch of main lanes on 191 from just east of the loop to just beyond its intersection

Seatbelt effort has Midlanders clicking buckles

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Officers assigned to STEP, Selective Traffic Enforcement Program, issued 1,335 safety belt citations and 48 no child restraint citations on selected days between June 1 and September 30.

Results of an intensive four-month seatbelt awareness campaign indicate a record number of Midlanders are keeping themselves restrained. Midland police say the original goal of 70 percent compliance was shattered.

"We conducted a survey on Monday morning and came up with a 91 percent compliance for the driver's and 89 percent on the passenger's side," said Lt. Clint Lovejoy of the Midland Police Department. The study also revealed an 85 percent child restraint compliance rate.

The police department launched the campaign in June after formally accepting a $15,000 federally-funded grant. The money solely provided for the officer's overtime costs and was offered by the Federal Transportation Department through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The campaign did not use any local tax money.

The $15,000 grant will be reimbursed to the city by the state, said Lovejoy.

Officers assigned to STEP, Selective Traffic Enforcement Program, issued 1,335 safety belt citations and 48 no child restraint citations on selected days between June 1 and September 30. Each violation is a Class C misdemeanor carrying a fine of up to $200.

Citations were also issued for several other violations including, 123 for no driver's license, 79 for no insurance, 43 for speeding, 26 for license plate violations and 12 for inspection sticker violations.

Citations issued through the STEP program were in addition to those tickets issued by regular patrol.

Lovejoy said implementation of another similar program would depend on the availability of state funds.

"Hopefully, people will keep on wearing the belts. We'll still be out there making stops," said Lovejoy.

U.S. tells New Mexico nuclear waste coming

■ The federal energy department plans to test nuclear waste storage, New Mexico officals plan to sue.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department assumed control Thursday of a tract of federal land near Carlsbad for a controversial atomic waste storage facility.

A spokesman for the Energy Department said a bin of waste is ready and could be shipped in a week. But New Mexico Attorney General Tom Udall promised to file suit to prevent the waste from entering the state.

Energy Secretary James Watkins received permission from the Interior Department for the land transfer late Thursday after daylong, last-minute negotiations broke down over an alternative plan being drafted in Congress.

The land transfer was needed before the department could begin a five-year test program at the underground storage facility known as the Waste Isolation Pilot Project, or WIPP, 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

The department plans to ship as many as 8,500 drums of plutonium-contaminated wastes to the underground disposal site from federal weapons production facilities to determine whether the site is suitable for permanent use.

Energy Department spokesman Fred Lash said the state on Thursday was given the required seven-day notice before waste shipments can proceed.

"There's one bin ... ready to go," Lash said.

But Udall said he planned a court challenge to the Interior Department's action within a week.

"It's an illegal action, and I believe it threatens the health and safety of New Mexicans," Udall said. "We're going to file a lawsuit and try to get a very early hearing and get a judge to pass on this question of whether waste can be shipped at this point and time."

A spokesman for Gov. Bruce King said the governor was ready to support such a suit. He said the governor was told the first shipment to the 10,240-acre site are expected to come from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory as early as Oct. 10.

New Mexico state officials have expressed concern about the department's test program. The state's congressional delegation has labored for weeks to try to work out compromise legislation for the land transfer that also includes restrictions and additional safeguards.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., had argued that a legislative land transfer was needed to ensure adequate oversight of the test program by the Environmental Protection Agency.

He said it also was needed to limit adequately the amount of wastes that will be shipped during the test phase and assure adequate compensation for the state for road improvements and other costs.

"I deeply regret that we have come to this unfortunate point," Domenici said of the Bush admin-

Jury finds Midland man guilty in rape of girl, 8

■ Raymond Glynn Reed was found guilty after a two-day trial and jury deliberations of 4½ hours.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 30-year-old Midland man raped a girl, 8 years old at the time, at her home last year, a 142nd District Court jury determined Thursday.

Raymond Glynn Reed was found guilty of aggravated sexual assault after a jury deliberated for about 4½ hours following a trial that lasted less than two days.

In light of previous criminal convictions, Reed is subject to 25 to 99 years or life in prison, and a $10,000 fine. A date for sentencing was not scheduled Thursday.

Testimony that led to the jury's verdict included that of the girl, now 10, her parents and expert medical witnesses.

Wednesday, the girl, using dolls, demonstrated to jurors how she was forced into sexual intercourse on two occassions.

The incidents occurred at the girl's south-central home around September of 1990. Thirteen people were living in the three-bedroom, one-bath house at the time, testimony indicated. Reed, the boyfriend of the victim's cousin, was one of the residents, testimony revealed.

The abuse was not discovered until the Christmas holidays, when the girl visited her father, who lives in Fort Worth, according to testimony.

A medical doctor, who examined the victim, testified on Wednesday that the girl had evi-

Auto insurors fight new rule

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance companies asked a judge Thursday to block a new rule that prohibits insurers from denying or charging higher premiums to first-time buyers of automobile insurance.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown said he would decide Friday on whether to issue a temporary court order to stop enforcement of the rule that was adopted last week by the State Board of Insurance.

Adoption of the emergency rule followed complaints that insurance companies were taking advantage of drivers who were trying to purchase coverage for the first time.

Many motorists began trying to buy auto liability insurance since a new law took effect Sept. 1 that requires proof of coverage to get or renew a driver's license and license plate, and safety inspection sticker.

The state has estimated that 25 percent, or 2 million drivers do not have the required coverage.

Rio Grande Valley lawmakers and the Office of Public Insurance Counsel said insurers were either denying coverage or charging especially high premiums for those seeking insurance for the first time.

The insurance companies said they must charge more because previously uninsured drivers are bigger risks.

Jerry Johns, of the Southwestern Insurance Institute Service, said uninsured drivers are 24 percent to 73 percent more likely to have an accident than insured drivers.

But Amy Johnson, of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel, said many previously uninsured drivers have good driving records and should not be charged higher premiums.

HIGHWAY: Officials see completion with 158. The $5.96 million project has been underway for about 18 months, but workers lost about 30 days during heavy summer rains.

"There were times that hole (for the underpass at the loop) was two or three feet deep with water," Passmore said. Now a pump has been installed to automatically remove water from the area.

A second $6.3 million project on the same highway will construct main lanes from FM-1788, near Midland International Airport, to Odessa. On other parts of 191, drivers use the access roads, as main lanes have not been built.

But Passmore said 191's main lanes may be completely built by the summer of 1993. Money for the final project — connecting the current two — has been allocated and the engineer said he does not anticipate any changes.

The department will open bids next week for the final stage of 191 construction.

When all work is completed, the highway department will have spent about $33 million on the highway. Until now, funding has been difficult to justify partly because of a light traffic load.

But Passmore said official counts have revealed the road has become popular for between-city travel.

"Right now, the interstate, (U.S. Highway) 80 and 191 all handle about the same amount of traffic going west to Odessa," he said. During construction, travelers should always have through access on 191, Passmore said.

Meanwhile, Midland's Loop 250 remains in a similarly incomplete state that is not likely to change soon, the engineer said.

"We've got no definite dates on that," Passmore said. "It could be five to six years or it could be 10 to 20. Hopefully we'll get to start on it before too long."

Highway workers continue dumping excess fill material around the intersections of main roads with the loop, preparing for the later construction of overpasses.

"We keep piling up our unused material, hoping we can cut some off the price of the project," Passmore said. "We'll keep doing that no matter how long it is until the work is complete."

State estimates for the completion of main lanes on the loop from West Highway 80 to Big Spring Street, considered the area of most need, total about $25 million.

"On the loop, the cost is more per mile than 191 because there are so many bridges," Passmore said. Frontage roads to the west were completed in the early 80s, followed a few years later by frontage roads to the east. Near West 80, the main lanes are complete for a few miles but there are no access roads.

"We hope in the next few years we'll get to do some work in the busiest sections," Passmore said. "We need main lanes especially at Midkiff, where traffic is at its peak."

Construction on Loop 250 would likely be completed in three or four projects as funding is available. Passmore said loop construction to the east is likely to be delayed a long time.

A new highway department revenue source was recently approved in the form of a 5-cent gasoline tax. About two-thirds of funds generated by the increase in the cost of a gallon of gas is slated for the department's work. It is expected to generate $665 million over two years.

"We operate a little differently than other state agencies," Passmore said. "We receive no money from the general fund."

The department's projects are funded through gasoline taxes and vehicle registration fee revenues. Federal funds are available at times as well, the engineer said.

"Our last (Congressional) highway bill expired Monday," he said. "Right now we're kind of waiting to see what they're going to do."

Funding for the completion of 191, however, is almost certain, Passmore said.

"I'm not going to tell you it's 100 percent sure, but it has been allocated. Now if we get realistic bids, we'll go with it."

istration's decision to transfer the land administratively.

An attempt to craft a legislative land transfer failed Thursday in a dispute over how many barrels of wastes should be allowed under the test program.

State officials have sought to limit the shipments to 4,500 drums, but the Energy Department had balked at the restriction and has suggested it might need to ship twice that number.

Domenici offered a final compromise that would allow 9,000 drums under some circumstances, but that proposal failed to get the support of the state's other senator. A spokesman for Sen. Jeff Binghaman, D-N.M., said he objected to the DOE's "last minute" demand for the additional shipments.

Watkins then moved adminstratively, as he is allowed to do under the law, to have the WIPP site transfered from Interior to his department. "I cannot support a legislative land withdrawal that includes unnecessary restrictions on the operation of the facility," said Watkins.

Watkins said the five-year test "is important in properly assessing the safety of WIPP" and that environmental and safety precautions will be taken.

Mitch Foushee, a spokesman for Binghaman, said the senator would continue to push for legislation to withdraw the land. Domenici said he also had not given up on a legislative solution, although he was not optimistic about its success.

"It is likely that there will now be little resolve in Congress to act on this issue," Domenici said in a statement.

The Interior Department Jan. 22 administratively transferred control of the WIPP land to the DOE. But March 6, the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee passed a resolution by Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., nullifying the move.

He invoked a little-used section of the Federal Lands Management Policy Act of 1976 that allows either of two congressional panels to withdraw federal land from use during an emergency.

On the floor of the House Thursday, Richardson said he believed the latest action circumvented the Congress and ignored the state's concerns about safety.

"I ask my colleagues today to think of this not as just a problem in New Mexico but as a threat to the balance of power between the executive branch and Congress," Richardson said.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan said through a spokesman that he agreed to remove the WIPP land from public domain and transfer it to the Energy Department after being assured by Watkins "that all clearances have been received" and that "WIPP can be operated safely."

In Santa Fe, a member of a group opposed to the land transfer called it a desperate act.

dence of physical injuries consistent with sexual assault.

Another medical doctor, called by the defense on Thursday, said that the first doctor's medical records of the girl did not indicate sexual assault.

"There is no way this girl had sexual intercourse with penetration," testified the doctor, who did not examine the girl.

In addition to testimony, the possible outcome of the trial was questioned by the defense Thursday in light of a story on the proceedings in the Midland Reporter-Telegram that day. The newpaper article made mention of past convictions of Reed — information not revealed in the courtroom.

After the trial, only one juror said she had read the article and that the information did not affect her judgement.

A motion for a mistrial may be forthcoming. Unless it can be shown that the jury would have decided otherwise because of the article, a mistrial will probably not be granted, according to the prosecution.

Herbicide should be applied to lawn to prevent winter weeds

Now is the time of year to get your lawn ready for winter by applying a pre-emergent herbicide to prevent the growth of winter weeds. Some fescue grass has already sprouted from all the rains, but as temperatures cool off, there will be an increase in growth.

Kiker

For a fescue lawn apply 2-1-1 fertilizer and 1-1-1 or 1-2-2 if it is a bermuda or St. Augustine lawn. This fall fertilization has shown to increase winter hardiness.

To protect peach tree borers, spray trees with Dursban. If the borers are not controlled, they will kill the peach tree.

Squash bugs on squash are controlled somewhat by liquid insecticides. Organic gardeners need to plant enough countering crops to help minimize bugs or try an insecticidal soap or oil. The soap or oil will probably be only marginally effective and will require frequent applications.

Worms on tomatoes are usually controlled with Diazinon, pyrethrine, Dipel (or other Bt products), liquid Sevin or Malathion. If Sevin is used, it should be rotated with other products to prevent spider mite buildup. For spider mites, use Malathion, Sygon, insecticidal soaps or summer oil sprays to help prevent damage. Apply any mite control liquid spray with plenty of water with good pressure, covering the underside of the leaves is essential.

For all people interested in obtaining their private applicators license, a training test will be given Thursday at 9 a.m. at the County Extension office.

For anyone interested in participating in a horse short course, there will be demonstrations and presentations at the West Texas Stud and Winnermaker Farms on Saturday, October 12 beginning at 8 a.m. The fee for this is $5 per person. Preregistration deadline is October 8.

For more information on any of these programs contact the Extension office at 687-1351.

Hearst, colleagues interview Soviets

(Excerpted from "The Hearsts: Father and Son" by William Randolph Hearst Jr. with Jack Casserly. Part six of a nine-part series)

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

In February of 1955 Moscow was an iceberg in the globe's glacial politics. Most of the world shivered amid the gusty political winds of the Cold War. My family and friends compared the Soviet Union to the far side of the moon.

Joseph Kingsbury-Smith, our INS European general manager in Paris, and Frank Conniff and I checked into the National Hotel, which faces Red Square. They gave us a suite on the first floor with a fine view of the square. It had a balcony in case anyone wanted to catch a numbing chill and perhaps a case of pneumonia. The suite had high ceilings and long, red drapes circling much of each room.

Kingsbury-Smith, our longtime foreign hand, took over. He hired a Russian secretary who spoke English. She would type the letters that we planned to send to the top Soviet leaders, including Premier Georgi Malenkov, party chief Nikita Khrushchev, Foreign Minister V.M. Molotov, Marshal Georgi Zhukov, and others. The letters were simple and direct. They said we had come to Moscow in hopes of serving some useful purpose, especially toward improving the relations between our two countries. We would welcome the opportunity of an interview. We walked over and dropped them in the Kremlin mailbox.

Nothing happened for almost three weeks. I began to lose hope. Nevertheless, we spent part of each day honing our possible interviews. From the start, I suggested we hold these sessions in a bathroom with the water running so no "bugs" could eavesdrop. Joe and Frank agreed.

I GOT even more edgy. What the hell were they waiting for? If we were getting the stiff arm, we should pack up. I sounded out the other guys, and we went into our think tank — the bathroom — for a decisive session. Joe and Frank made an unusual suggestion, and we implemented it immediately. The two walked around the sitting room addressing the drapes, chandeliers, and anything else we thought might be hiding a bug.

For much of the next two days, Joe or Frank spoke variations on the following theme: "Now, Mr. Hearst, the president said you could give your message only to the premier or one of the top Soviet leaders. Yes, Mr. Hearst, you must deliver it personally — that's what the president said — personally to Premier Malenkov. Or another Soviet leader. But the premier and the others don't seem to be available, so perhaps we should prepare to leave."

On the third day the Kremlin took the bait. Our phone jingled. It was the foreign minister's office. Molotov would receive us the following morning. Be ready for a ministry car at 10:45 a.m.

One of our first questions to Molotov related to the crisis in the Formosa Straits. We asked if he thought the U.S. Sixth Fleet could evacuate the Chinese Nationalist troops on the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu without being fired on by artillery on the Chinese mainland. Molotov replied affirmatively. We then asked him whether he would obtain such assurances from the Chinese Communist government. He said, in effect, that was none of his business.

Our interview with Molotov was published the next day in the Soviet press. Shortly thereafter, President Eisenhower risked ordering the Sixth Fleet to evacuate the Chinese Nationalists on Quemoy and Matsu. Not a shot was fired. It was obvious the Soviets favored a reduction of tension in the Formosa Straits, and Molotov was advising the Chinese Communists accordingly.

THERE WAS much more. In the midst of the 80-minute interview, Molotov began to accuse the United States of encircling the Soviet Union with military bases and threatening its security. He said these bases should be withdrawn. Kingsbury-Smith suggested that a start could be made if the Soviets would be willing to withdraw their troops from the Soviet area of occupation in Austria. (The Big Four — the United States, Britain, France, and the Soviet Union — then maintained occupation forces in individual zones within Austria.)

Joseph Kingsbury-Smith, left; William Randolph Hearst Jr., center; and Frank Coniff interviewed Communist Party Chief Nikita Khrushchev and other Soviet leaders in 1956. They won a Pulitzer Prize for their efforts.

Molotov hesitated before responding and then asked, "Would that be contagious?"

We replied that, as journalists, none of us was authorized to give any such assurances. However, Soviet withdrawal from Austria might be a first step in the withdrawal of military bases by both sides. We pointed out that such moves would create a favorable atmosphere for coexistence. Molotov made no further comment on the issue, but he left us with the impression that the door to Soviet withdrawal from Austria might open. And a peace treaty might eventually be worked out.

After our interview was published, the Austrian ambassador to Moscow arranged to see Molotov. As a result, negotiations were soon held in Vienna. The four major powers agreed just four months later, in May of 1955, to a peace treaty and evacuation of Austria. Chancellor Julius Raab credited our interview with paving the way for Austrian independence.

We had hardly written our Molotov story when our phone rang again. A car would arrive at 11 a.m. the following day to take us to Communist party headquarters, where we would meet Comrade Khrushchev.

AS WE walked into his long, narrow office, Khrushchev was sitting casually behind his desk. The squat man with the round, bald head and peasant face bounded forward and gave us a toothy grin and a full, firm handshake. After a few minutes of jocular sparring, there was no doubt in any of our minds who ran the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev would take all questions on any subject. His telephone interrupted his response to one of our first queries. The party chief was clearly annoyed. He quickly signaled with his stubby fingers that he was taking no calls. We were never disturbed again. (On our way home later, Conniff said that proved that Khrushchev was the head man. Everyone else we had met kept their phone ready.)

We seesawed back and forth for three hours. Khrushchev was direct, blunt, threatening, shrewd, boisterous, and humorous. He seldom paused. The interview often became a wide-open debate.

Despite all of Khrushchev's bluster, one ringing phrase came through clearly: peaceful coexistence. He echoed it again and again. The party leader was talking peace and better relations with the United States, not a return to Stalinism. He repeatedly stressed that there must not be a nuclear war between the United States and Soviet Union because both would be destroyed. At one point he leaned over the table and patted my arm, saying, "You're a capitalist, but we're having a peaceful talk here. If we can coexist around this table, I think we can coexist around the globe." Khrushchev's blue eyes flashed and he broke into a broad grin.

As we rose to leave, Khrushchev stood and put his arm around my shoulder and said, "When you get home, you may be summoned before the (House) Un-American Activities Committee for coming over here and having this conversation with me. If you do, I'll come over and tell them how you defended your government's policies."

IT WAS a light parting touch and Khrushchev added another. He said we could meet any people we wished. I mentioned viewing the Bolshoi ballet, meeting some of their top performers, and seeing other Soviet artists, musicians, poets. Khrushchev smiled, but said nothing. He simply nodded to his interpreter that he understood.

We phoned the story to the INS London bureau which cabled it quickly to INS in New York. It was immediately put on the INS wires around the nation and the world. Within an hour we were receiving congratulatory phone calls from various publishers and many friends. Everybody seemed to use the same word: "Sensational!"

We later interviewed Marshal Zhukov and Svetlana Stalin.

Before leaving Moscow, we tried to say thanks in typical American fashion: an evening cocktail party in our suite. The hotel had vodka and caviar, but I still don't know how we rounded up Scotch and other booze. That may have come from the U.S. and other Western embassies.

Suddenly the party noise and chatter slowed and then almost stopped. The door had opened and there stood Galina Ulanova in the flesh. The celebrated prima ballerina of the Bolshoi, renowned throughout the world, had lived her entire life and even become a grandmother without once coming in contact with a Westerner. At least that was the story around Moscow. In ballet, Ulanova was almost worshiped as a legend. However, her lithe figure halted at the footlights. So did foreigners who wished to meet her.

ULANOVA SAID little, but a half-dozen other ballet people came in and introduced themselves. I invited them to our cocktail party.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Bohlen understood the meaning of the visit. Soviet leaders were signaling that they wanted friendlier relations with the West. There had been virtually no socializing, except at formal functions, among Moscovites and Westerners for a full decade. That was a political decision and so was the presence of Ulanova and the others. Bohlen smiled and told me to come back anytime.

We later interviewed Bulganin and the interview also received world-wide attention. And for all of these interviews, Conniff, Kingsbury-Smith and I received the Pulitzer Prize in 1956.

Texan restoring Russian-built plane

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — It has taken him five years, but a Longview businessman has finished the restoration of a World War II Russian-built plane.

Don Talley said his YAK C-11 is the only one with a Russian engine still flying in the United States today.

"They started making these right at the end of World War II," Talley said.

One of the distinctions of the plane is its "snow-camouflage paint, with the top of the plane painted white, while the underside is painted blue. This was to prevent it from being easily seen by the enemy, either in flight or on the ground."

Another distinct element of the plane were the bright red stars and the lettering, below the cockpit, on each side which translated means "For Stalin." Also just below the cockpit are seven red stars placed there for the number of planes that had been shot down, Talley explained.

Talley, who has been flying for 15 years, said it was a dream of his to have a plane like this and often takes it to air shows.

Talley was hooked from the first time he saw World War II planes perform and it was then that he knew he wanted to own and learn to fly one.

"The hardest part is getting up the nerve to do the aerobatics, Talley said.

He is also part owner of another World War II-era plane, a 1944 trainer.

"They were built to withstand punishment," Talley said.

An experienced pilot would ride in the cockpit behind the pilot he was training.

Once someone had learned to fly a trainer plane they were able to move onto a fighter plane. Planes similar to these are still being used in crop dusting, he said.

Talley and Longview businessman Clarence Barnes restored the Russian aircraft from the ground up, checking each part, replacing any worn parts or updating existing parts.

"We put in a modern radio and American instruments," he said. "It wasn't too difficult to find parts for the plane," Talley said, adding that an extra engine came with the plane.

Tally bought the YAK from a man in Kentucky, who had bought it from a Frenchman. The Frenchman brought it from the Egyptian Air Force, who had received military equipment from Russia, he said.

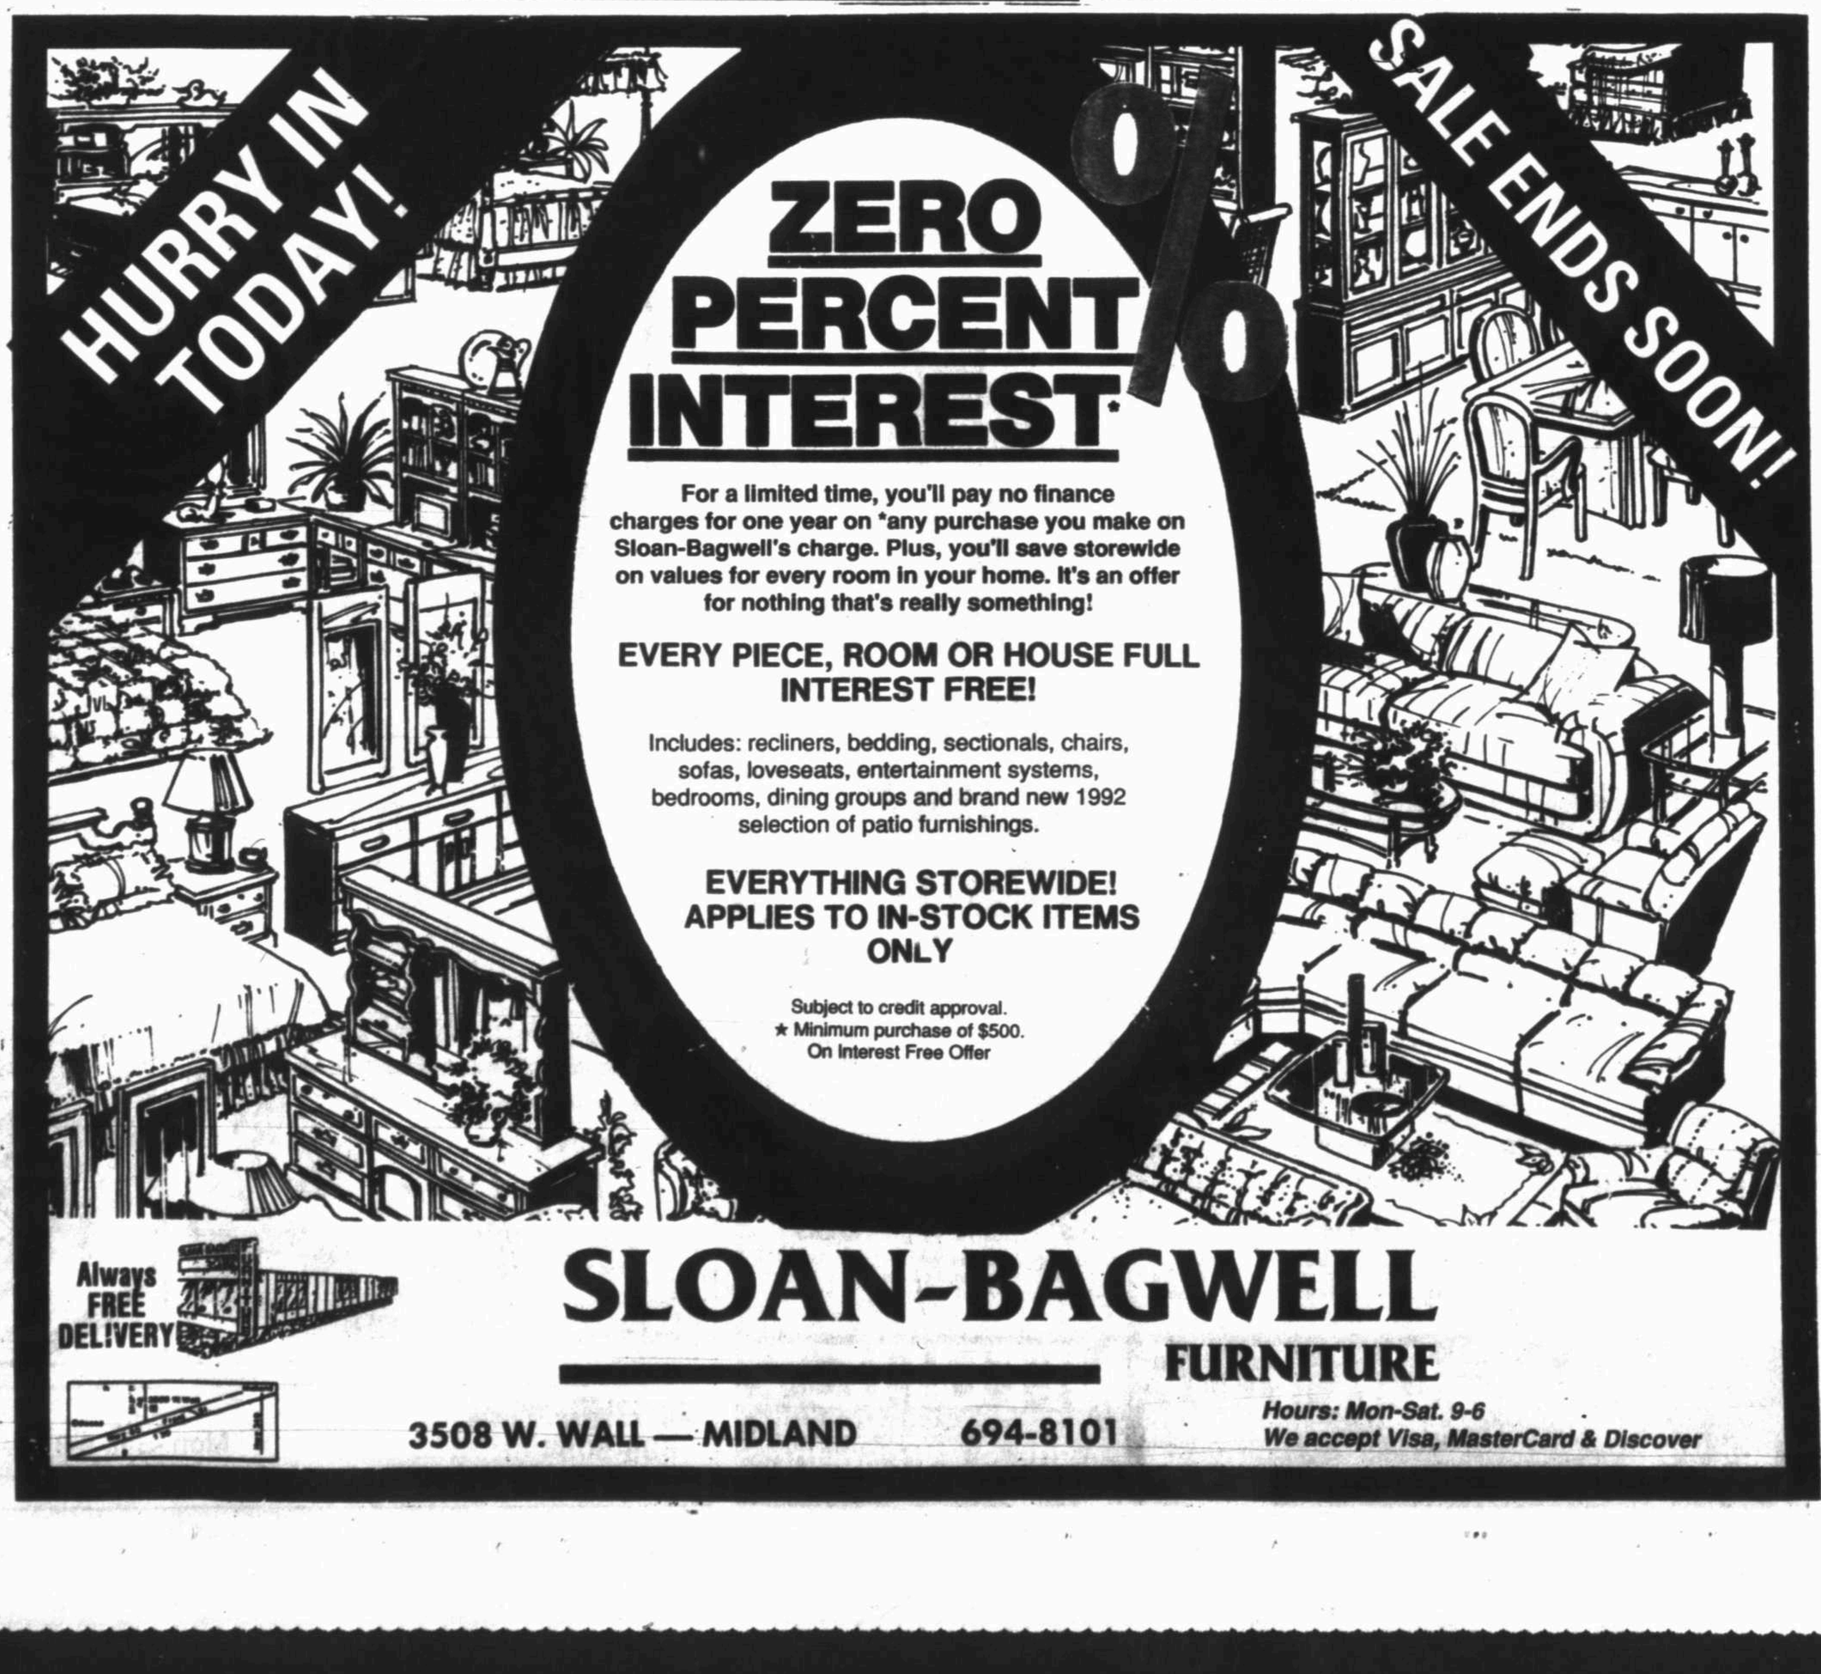

Talley also performs aerobatics with the two planes and says that the YAK is easier to maneuver into the various turns and flips.

League opposes ethics amendment

AUSTIN (AP) — An influential, non-partisan group announced Thursday its opposition to a proposed constitutional amendment on the Nov. 5 ballot that would create a state Ethics Commission.

The League of Women Voters of Texas said the method of selecting members to the commission is flawed, and if the amendment passes, that method will be imbedded in the state constitution, which would make it more difficult to change.

If Proposition 6 is added to the constitution, it would take approval by two-thirds of the Legislature and a majority vote at the polls to change it.

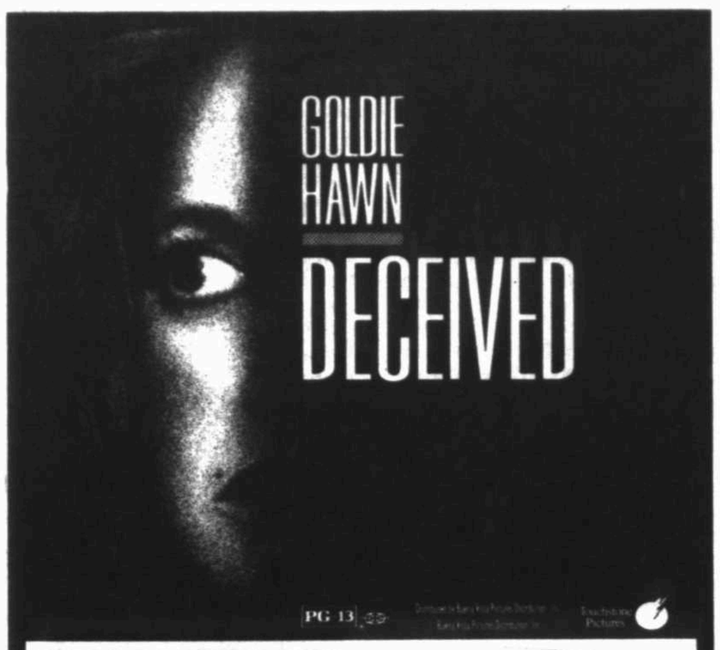

If the amendment fails, the commission will be created by legislation, which would require only a majority of lawmakers to change.

Under Proposition 6, the commission monitoring the conduct of state officials would be composed of eight appointees originating from lists submitted by Democratic and Republican party activists in the state House and Senate.

DEAR ABBY
Jealousy upsets husband

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for nearly five years and have two adorable children. We are each other's best friend, get along great, and have a terrific sex life.

Van Buren

My problem: When a sexy-looking woman comes on TV, I change the channel. This infuriates my husband like you wouldn't believe. He is normally not a violent man, but he gets so angry he looks like he'd like to strangle me! This is the only thing we ever fight about. I can't stand to see the way he looks at women with low-cut dresses or miniskirts.

Yesterday, he was watching a beauty pageant, and when all the girls came out in their bikini bathing suits, I thought his eyes were going to fall out of his head!

Abby, can you blame me for changing the channel? — JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: Yes. If your marriage has survived five years of channel-changing because of your jealousy, your husband must love you very much.

Grow up. The problem isn't your husband's — it's yours. Since you can't stand to see him appreciating the sight of a provocative female on TV, you should leave the room.

DEAR ABBY: I have had this problem for years, and it keeps getting worse: my teeth.

I have no dental plan and I'm unemployed right now. Abby, I hide my teeth 24 hours a day. If someone talks to me, I turn my head and pretend to be interested in something to one side, so he won't see my teeth. I don't even brush my teeth in front of a mirror because I get too depressed. I often have dreams about my teeth falling out with all my friends watching and laughing. It's a living nightmare.

Abby, I feel like my life is going nowhere. If I could just get my teeth fixed, a whole new world would open up to me. Meanwhile, I'm ... KEEPING MY MOUTH SHUT

DEAR KEEPING: Schools of dentistry (as well as state and local dental societies) operate dental clinics where low-cost — or free — dental care is available for those who qualify.

Your county dental society should be listed in your telephone directory. And any dentist can refer you to the nearest dental college.

Do not delay. Your general health can be undermined by infected gums and decaying teeth.

DEAR ABBY: A friend gave me an idea she said came from your column years ago that solved the "thank-you note" problem in her family. I use it with my two children and it works!

They may not spend the money, play with the toy or wear the clothing until their thank-you notes are written. I began this practice when they were too young to do it for themselves. Now, my 5-year-old dictates his note to me and I write it verbatim (which amazes him) and then he signs it! My 9-year-old does it herself.

I have tried to remind them if they were the sender, they would like to know how the recipient felt about the gift — or even if it arrived. — LINDA BYZEWSKI, KINGMAN, ARIZ.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

FAMILY MATTERS
Fiance shows two different attitudes

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I moved to Midland (several) years ago and have been very happy here. I am very active in my church and consider myself a committed Christian. Last year I met someone at a church gathering and fell in love. I thought that he was a wondeful Christian man who was loving, gentle, caring and totally committed to Christ.

May

We have been dating ever since and at first it was wonderful. Our whole life has really been about each other and serving the Lord. My problem is that about six months ago we became engaged. It was a major event in our lives and all our friends at church thought it was a match made in heaven. I was so very happy and just couldn't believe how good the Lord had been to me.

After we became engaged he started to change. Before he was always proud of me and what I said and did. He used to really encourage me to witness to others and share my testimony. Since we've been engaged he has become very negative about the things I do. He is always correcting me in public and later after we leave he will tell me all the things that I did wrong and how I should have done or what I should have said.

If I say anything or try to defend myself he just gets furious. Sometimes he won't speak to me for days and I have to apologize and beg him to forgive me. He says that "his wife" will be submissive to him and do what he says. I am certainly willing to submit to my husband and I believe that is what a Christian wife is supposed to do. I just don't know why he acts like this now.

The real reason that I'm writing is that last week we were at a church gathering with my friends and he started putting me down in front of them. I was so hurt that I just started crying. I couldn't help myself. He got mad and made me leave with him. All the way to my apartment he screamed and yelled at me. He said some horrible things to me. He never said that he was sorry (he never does), and several days later he called and acted like nothing had happened.

I don't have anyone I can talk to about this. My minister thinks that (fiance) is such a wonderful Christian that I'm afraid to say anything to him. All my friends are involved with our church and I'm too embarrassed to say anything to them about this. I can't discuss this with my parents; they think that I am so lucky to find a "Christian man" in this day and age. I'm supposed to be planning a June wedding and I'm scared to death. What can I do? AFRAID

DEAR AFRAID: By acknowledging that there is a problem, you have already made an important step. Several concerns need to be addressed. Your fiance's controlling behavior and inappropriate reactions can be serious symptoms of more deeply rooted problems. And living the lie — "this wonderful Christian man" — makes it even more difficult for you to understand what is happening to you and the relationship.

Your fiance's behaviors are classic dysfunctional patterns — wonderful to those on the outside but terrible to those inside. These patterns are explained in a number of self-help books. Given your Christian orientation, you may find Dr. Margaret Rinck's "Christian Men Who Hate Women" to be of help.

Please seek professional counseling. You cannot change him if he does not want to change. Your fiance is already making the shift from one extreme ("Mr. Wonderful") to the other extreme — first emotional abuse and then verbal abuse. If something does not change you will only hurt yourself and place yourself in serious jeopardy of further emotional and verbal abuse.

I would like to share a thought with you about "submission." You will recall that Christ directly stated in John 13:34, "I give you a new commandment: love one another; just as I have loved you, you must also love one another." I believe that any discussion about submission must be held within this context of loving one another. While Paul notes that wives should submit to their husbands it is as, "... the Church submits to Christ." He immediately goes on to state that, "Husbands should love their wives just as Christ loved the Church and sacrificed himself for her to make her holy" (Ephesians 5:23).

I believe that the submission described by Christ and further elaborated on by Paul is one of mutual love and spiritual growth. It is that each will sacrifice himself/herself for the other to help make the spouse holy. Each loves and supports the other.

You are in an abusive relationship held there by falsely constructed "Christian ropes." You must free yourself from these chains.

Artificial joints help arthritis suffers regain independence

By Lisa Periman

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — In just a few years, opening a door, grasping a pencil and buttoning a shirt had become nearly impossible for Claire Baumel. Rheumatoid arthritis had crippled both her hands and left her in chronic pain.

In 1989, Baumel, 63, of North Andover, Mass., underwent surgery that replaced the diseased joints in her right hand with flexible hinges made of silicone. It corrected the deformities caused by her dislocated bones, which had made her fingers swing out sideways, and restored almost all her mobility.

It also erased the pain.

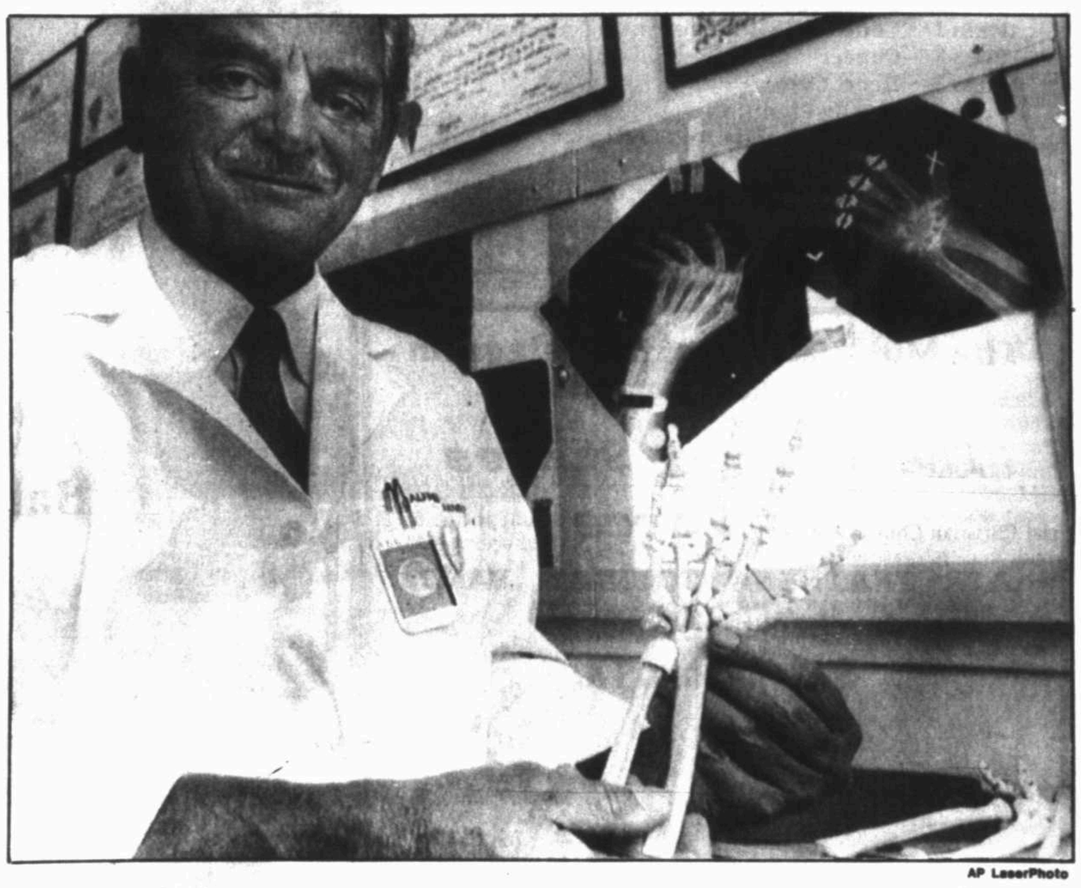

Artificial joints for hips and knees are relatively well known. That's not the case with the hand joint replacements, although Grand Rapids hand surgeon Alfred B. Swanson developed them nearly 30 years ago.

"The predominant surgery for orthopedic surgeons is with the hips and knees, because the first thing you want to do is restore mobility for the patient," said Gene Jakubczak, director of marketing of silicone devices for Dow Corning Wright of Arlington, Tenn., which markets the small joint implants. They are manufactured at Dow Corning's plant in Hemlock, Mich.

Clair Baumel, 63, of North Andover, Mass., displays the difference between her right hand, which had surgery to correct rheumatoid arthritis, and her left hand, which had not yet been operated on in this 1990 photo. The diseased joints were replaced with flexible hinges made of silicone, correcting the deformities caused by her dislocated bones and restoring almost all her mobility.

AP LaserPhoto

Hand surgeon Alfred Swanson of Grand Rapids, Mich., displays the silicone joint implants for hands that he developed nearly 30 years ago. Implant surgery is designed for patients who suffer the debilating effects of osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis.

ONLY ABOUT 10 percent of the approximately 10,000 orthopedic surgeons in the United States specialize in hand surgery and have specific knowledge of the implants, Jakubczak said. Because arthritic patients commonly see general practioners and orthopedic surgeons who don't specialize in the hand, they may never find out the implants are available.

"Hand surgery is very complex," Jakubczak said. "Essentially, it's like doing five little knees."

About 16 million people in the United States suffer from osteoarthritis and 2.1 million from rheumatoid arthritis, the forms of the disease for which the implants are designed. About one-quarter of them have cases severe enough to be considered for surgery, Swanson said.

But of the millions of Americans who potentially could benefit from the small joint implants, only about 200,000 have had the surgery, Swanson said.

Worldwide, the rubber-like artificial joints have been used in more than 1 million operations in 83 countries since Swanson performed the first surgery in 1964.

Osteoarthritis, which afflicts about half the population over 65, is caused by damage to cartilage. Rheumatoid arthritis, apparently a disease involving the immune system, is an inflammation of the lining of a joint. As the cartilage and ligaments of the joint are destroyed and bone begins to rub against bone, the person begins feeling chronic pain.

Swanson is a surgery professor at Michigan State University and director of an orthopedic research and hand surgery fellowship at Blodgett Memorial Medical Center in Grand Rapids.

HE BECAME interested in joint replacement in 1950. As a student at Indiana University, he assisted in the development of an artificial hip implant.

Two years later, while an Army surgeon, he hand-carved a model toe implant out of wood. He also tried, unsuccessfully, to replace destroyed toe joints with a metal version.

In 1961, Swanson heard about a medical-grade silicone developed by Dow Corning. He began experimenting with the implants on test machines and animals in a subbasement at Blodgett.

"The normal joint is so sophisticated and the ligaments around it so much in tune that you really can't simulate nature," Swanson said. "My idea was to make a functional joint, one that was pain-free and restored most of a person's mobility."

Previously, doctors would remove the diseased joint and leave a gap, hoping it would be filled with scar tissue that didn't cause as much pain. "It was totally unpredictable. My goal was to make it predictable," Swanson said.

After surgery, reconstructed tissues heal and surround the implant to function as ligaments while the bone around the implant improves. Relatively few complications from the surgery have been reported, Swanson said.

The surgery does not cure arthritis. But most patients regain 50 percent to 75 percent of the hand's original mobility, he said.

Surgery for one hand generally costs about $2,000 and is covered by most insurance plans, he said.

TODAY, 27 YEARS since his first operation on humans, the joint implant remains almost identical to Swanson's first design. The silicone used, however, has been toughened, and Swanson has developed a titanium shield to be placed on either side of the implant to protect the silicone from damage caused by sharp bone edges. He believes that innovation will make the implants last at least 30 years.

Swanson, whose desk displays samples of the various patented joints he's developed, also has made silicone implants for three wrist bones, as well as the shoulder and elbow.

"I think Dr. Swanson's development of the silicone implant has been a tremendous contribution," said Dr. James W. Strickland, president of the American Society for Surgery of the Hand and professor of orthopedic surgery at Indiana University Medical School. "They really have stood the test of time."

He agreed that there is a lack of awareness about the implants among many primary care physicians and perhaps a bit of reluctance among rheumatologists to refer patients for the surgery.

"There were cases in the early going, some 20 years ago, that didn't turn out so well and perhaps hand surgeons got a bad reputation," Strickland said. "But if that persists today, it's unfortunate because the results have been quite good."

For Baumel, the surgery two years ago on one hand gave her a sense of independence she had not tasted since 1984. In February, the other hand was operated on.

"IT'S HARD to describe what it's like, being able to wear my wedding ring again ... to have people look at you rather than at your hands as you speak," said Baumel, who often speaks in public as vice president for a national volunteer organization.

"Just being able to open the snack on an airplane without having to ask for help is wonderful," Baumel said. "Things like that may not sound like much, but this has truly given me back control of my life."

Study: Bowen's disease not linked to other cancers

CHICAGO (AP) — A particular form of skin cancer that strikes tens of thousands of Americans yearly is not a signal for the presence of internal cancers as previously thought, a study says.

Bowen's disease, a subtype of squamous cell carcinoma, is considered one of the least dangerous skin cancers but has been regarded as a red flag for other, deeper cancers, said authors of the study published last month in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

But when they compared 71 Bowen's disease patients with 826 patients who had other types of non-melanoma skin cancers, they found the rates of internal cancers almost identical.

Subjects were residents of Rochester, Minn., who developed nonmelanoma skin cancers over nine years beginning in 1976, researchers reported. Rochester was chosen because records are available on almost all 57,000 residents via an ongoing study operated through the Mayo Clinic.

The largest previous study that used good scientific methods also "found no association (between Bowen's disease and internal cancers)," authors said.

In their study, patients with Bowen's disease tended to be elderly, as in other studies, and age alone gives them a "dramatically increased risk of cancer," said the authors, led by Dr. Christopher G. Chute of the Mayo Clinic.

Dr. Irwin M. Braverman, a Yale University School of Medicine dermatologist, said the study was limited by its small number of subjects and short follow-up period of 4½ years.

SSA has new toll-free number

Gwendolyn S. King, commissioner of Social Security, has announced that Social Security's nationwide toll-free telephone number has been changed, as of Sept. 30. The new number, 1-800-772-1213, resulted from a mandatory change in SSA's long distance carrier. It replaces the number that was introduced in October 1988.

"Although our number is changing, our comprehensive service is not," Ms. King said. "Under this new number, SSA will continue to provide personal, toll-free 800 number telephone service from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. in each time zone each business day."

The 800 number provides another convenient option for those doing business with SSA. Most Socal Security business, including filing for benefits, applying for a Social Security number, reporting a missing check or asking questions, can be conducted over the telephone. For those who prefer face-to-face service, Social Security offices are open nationwide.

Physical therapy for arthritic knees researched

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A study using physical therapy on elderly patients with osteoarthritis in the knees found that most had increased functional capacity and less pain, researchers said.

Pain is the primary complaint of people with osteoarthritis of the knees, said one of the principal investigators, Dr. Glen E. Gresham, chair of the rehabilitation medicine department at the state University of New York at Buffalo.

Gresham and colleagues conducted their study on 80 older people with osteoarthritis of the knees — a condition that affects about 10 percent of the elderly population. Of the 80 patients, 72 experienced less pain, 68 had improved muscle strength and endurance, and 76 had increased capacity.

The pain, stiffness, decreased range of motion and muscle weakness that accompany the condition can severely impair the ability to climb stairs, rise from a chair, stand comfortably and walk.

"When I started I could go up, but not down stairs — I had to go down on my fanny — because of the pain and weakness in my right leg," said patient Steve Rubach, 65, of Snyder. "Now I can go up and down the stairs like crazy."

The three-month rehabilitation program, which strengthens the leg muscles around the knee using a specially developed exercise bench, tries to delay the progression of the condition and postpone artificial knee surgery.

"We're not claiming that you would completely do away with the need for a knee replacement eventually, but it's quite conceivable now that it would postpone the day," said Gresham, who suffers from the condition himself.

"It's a study that convinces us all we're doing the right thing" by exploring physical therapy as an alternative treatment, Dr. Frederic McDuffie, director of the Arthritis Center at Piedmont Hospital in Atlanta.

"The study would have been a little better if they got some other type of therapy or no treatment to show the difference" among therapies, he said.

The Buffalo researchers said that what makes their program special is that it measures patient progress in a quantifiable way, measuring muscle strength and endurance and the speed of muscle contraction.

Physical therapy and quantitative progressive exercise, both used in the study, previously were not considered an option for patients with osteoarthritis in the knees because of a lack of evidence that they would help.

Houston thieves use guns to take vehicles

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man recovering from a gunshot wound Thursday is the latest victim in a string of aggravated robberies called "carjacking," in which thieves steal cars at gunpoint from the owners.

Assistant Chief Joe Breshears said Wednesday that Houston police have noted an alarming new wave of the "carjacking" incidents.

Breshears said 628 such incidents were reported in the city in 1990, compared to 416 reported through the end of September this year — a 35 percent increase.

"It's (carjackings) relatively new," he said. "We think they're largely the result of two things — technology increases as far as better car alarms and car locks, which are preventing thieves from stealing cars easier, and, second, it's more difficult for them to target convenience stores, so hijackers are turning to other alternatives."

The latest victim of a serious incident in Houston was Johnny Brocato, 22, who was shot and wounded in an attack by three men.

Brocato was in fair condition at Ben Taub Hospital Thursday where he was being treated for a gunshot wound.

Officers said three men followed Brocato to a used auto parts store and one man jumped out of his car, ran to Brocato's car and started beating on the window with a pistol.

Lemieux's back

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Former NHL scoring champion Mario Lemieux is troubled again by back spasms, but still expects to play in the Stanley Cup champion Pittsburgh Penguins' season-opener tonight in Buffalo.
Lemieux said Thursday his back was feeling much better and he expects to play in the opener.
He left the ice Wednesday shortly after the end of the Penguins' 90-minute practice, complaining of back pain. In frustration, he broke his stick in a hallway.
Lemieux missed 54 of the Penguins' 80 regular-season games last season due to back problems, but returned in late January to lead them to their first Stanley Cup championship. He missed Game 3 of the Stanley Cup finals against Minnesota due to back spasms, but was a dominating force in the final three games.

DeOssie arrest

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants linebacker Steve DeOssie was arrested on drug charges this week in Dallas. DeOssie, meanwhile, revealed Thursday he has an alcohol problem.
"I feel like I'm on the first step to recovery. I need a complete change of lifestyle or I'll end up dead before my lifetime," DeOssie said. "Right now, it's hard for me to see any light at the end of the tunnel."
Police at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport arrested DeOssie on Monday on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia, said airport spokesman Joe Dealy.

Unbeaten Lee hosts Cooper

■ Midland Lee tries to avoid homecoming distractions and looking ahead a week to Odessa Permian, as the Rebels take on the Cougars from Abilene.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

A simple look at the facts for most high school football fans reveals that Midland Lee should be able to handle Abilene Cooper.

The unbeaten Rebels take on Cooper in a homecoming game that begins at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium. Lee has compiled a 4-0 record and outscored opponents 143-10 this season, while the Cougars are 2-2 and barely escaped with a 7-0 win over winless cross-town rival Abilene High a week ago in District 4-5A's opening round.

However, Lee head coach Earl Miller — who owns a record of 47-11-1 at Lee and would become the all-time leader in coaching victories with a win over Cooper — has some facts of his own.

Like homecoming distractions and looking ahead to archrival Odessa Permian, the Rebs' opponent a week from tonight.

"Definitely those things are on our minds, but I don't know what to do about it. You guard against it the best you can, but you can't get into the kids' minds," Miller said.

"We didn't want to make an issue of it (the Permian game) because that might make them think about it more. But I told them Monday that I didn't even want to hear the word Permian. We're playing Abilene Cooper.

"Cooper has had two shutouts the last two ball games and they're getting better. They have got a good defense and they have more offensive yards than we do (a 271.3 average to the Rebels' 255.8)," he said.

Also, Lee's defense, ranked ninth in the state by giving up a paltry 125 yards a game, will see some shuffling in the linebacker corps. Starting middle linebacker Jovan Tellez will miss the game because of a sore knee and will be re-

ABILENE — Midland High and Abilene High, two winless teams with a combined offensive output of 10 points this season, will meet here at Shotwell Stadium today in an 8 p.m. District 4-5A shootout in a game that should give one of those teams a much needed booster shot in its offensive arm.

Both teams carry an 0-4 record and both teams are on track to be the worst scoring offensive teams in league history. AHS has scored seven points this year and MHS has three points on the season.

"Well, it ought to be a heck'va game," says first-year AHS head coach Carlous Stone. "Unless there is a tie, one of these teams is going to win a game, but a tie probably looks good to both of us right now the way things are going.

"It's going to be like two blind hogs fighting over the same acorn."

MHS coach Davis Corley places a little more importance on this game.

"I don't think there is any question that this is the biggest game we have had up to this point," Corley said, "and I think our kids realize that. These kids have worked hard, but haven't had a lot of good things happen to them. They just need some success."

Stone, too, is feeling the weight produced by a slow start.

TORONTO — Joe Carter. Devon White. Roberto Alomar. Tom Candiotti. Candy Maldonado. Dave Parker. Juan Guzman.

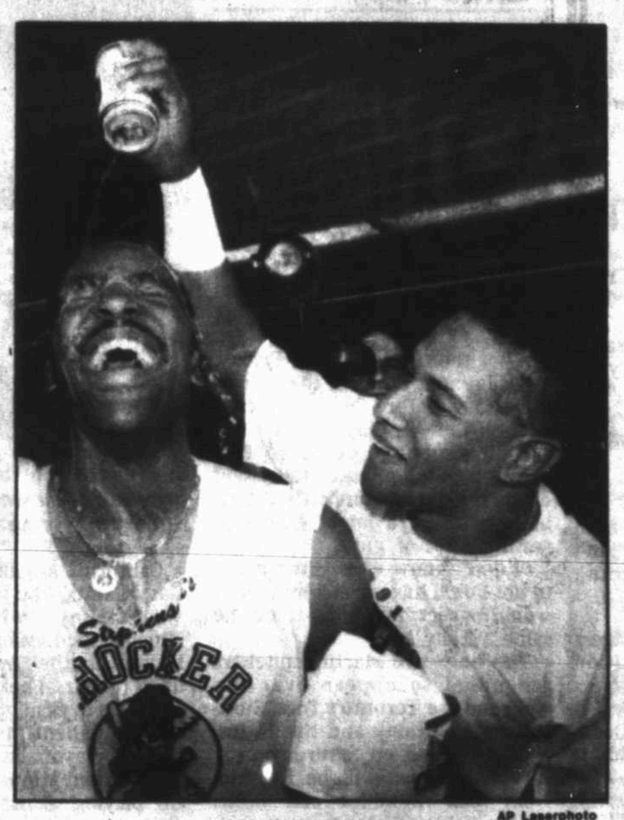

Ladies and gentlemen, introducing the Toronto New Jays.

"Everyone called him 'Stand Pat,' but Pat Gillick is unbelievable," Carter said of the Jays' executive vice president whose wheeling and dealing helped Toronto win the AL East. "He knew what it was going to take to win and he went out and got it."

The New Jays — a.k.a. the Blue Jays — earned a playoff berth against the Minnesota Twins by rallying Wednesday night in the ninth inning for a 6-5 victory over the California Angels.

White, an Angel a year ago, began the comeback. Alomar, in San Diego last season, scored the winning run. Carter, also a Padre in 1990, drove Alomar home. Candiotti, in Cleveland

Atlanta at home, LA in Candlestick

Associated Press

All season long, the Atlanta Braves have been chasing the Los Angeles Dodgers. Even when they were ahead, it was like the Braves were behind, looking out for Darryl Strawberry and the Dodgers.

Now, after a season spiced with ups and downs, baseball is down to the final days and the Braves are all even. And finally, it feels like they're ahead.

Tonight, the Braves, who trailed Los Angeles by 9½ games at the All-Star break, are back at home. Hotshot Steve Avery will pitch for Atlanta against Houston rookie Jeff Juden, who is still seeking his first major league victory.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, will be in Candlestick Park. That's the same place where San Francisco fans chanted "Sweep! Sweep! Sweep!" during a three-game series in mid-August that the Giants indeed did sweep.

All week, the Giants have been looking forward to doing it again to the Dodgers. They beat them in 1951 on Bobby Thomson's home run in the playoffs, knocked them out again in a three-game playoff in 1962 and denied them an NL West title in 1982 when Joe Morgan homered on the last day — at Candlestick — to give the Braves the championship.

"I know they're going to come out and play their hardest, but that's the way you're supposed to play every game isn't it?" Strawberry said. "If they want to beat us so bad, they should have beaten us when it counted for them."

The Giants did, sort of. They hold an 8-7 edge over Los Angeles and won four of six in Francisco.

"I hate the Dodgers," Giants pitcher John Burkett said. "I've been in this organization since 1983, and there's always been a

Lee's Miller shoots for record book

Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller could take a step into history tonight — if his Rebels beat Abilene Cooper as expected.

Miller could notch No. 48 in his victory belt with a win, making him the winningest coach in Lee football history. Former Lee coach Jim Acree produced a 47-34-2 record during the 1970s, but was tied by Miller for the most number of victories last Friday when Lee beat Midland High by a 44-0 count. Miller currently stands at 47-11-1.

Williamson

Of course, the significant fact is that it took Acree 83 games to obtain win No. 47. Miller has done it in just 59 games. He has truly become the real "Earl of Lee."

Still, Miller has no sense of timing. He should have waited to put No. 48 on line next week against Odessa Permian. Now that would be a real taste of drama. Coaches are always looking for the easy way out.

Miller insists, however, that overachieving kids and good assistant coaches have vaulted him into this lofty position.

"When I took the head coaching job in 1986, we weren't expected to do much. We didn't have a lot of talent, but we had some overachieving kids. They won the district championship and got into the playoffs. That just set the tone for everything else to come," Miller said.

Miller has served as his own defensive coordinator since becoming head coach and this year's Rebels, who have given up only 10 points in four games, has a chance to become Lee's best defensive unit. Lee's best defensive year was in 1981 when the Rebs gave up only 73 points. That was an 8-2 year and Lee missed the playoffs.

Miller was also the defensive coordinator at Lee in 1981, so he is competing against himself this year if that record is to be broken.

He can also beat Odessa Permian, winning four out of five meetings as head coach, but let's not let this guy get off that easy. Miller's playoff record is 5-4-1, not exactly the same pace as his overall mark. But then again, we will remind him of that again when the playoffs roll around.

Now, let's take care of business. This week in District 4-5A:

Midland Lee 35, Abilene Cooper 0: Points are hard to come by against the Rebel Brigade this year. The Lee homecoming is just a way of marking time until next week when the district championship goes on the line — again.

Abilene High 7, Midland High 3: It will be low scoring and the results could just as easily be the other way around when you get in a tight match like this. This is game of the year for both teams.

San Angelo 30, Odessa High 14: The winner goes to the playoffs, the loser stays home. At least, that is the way this one is being viewed at this early date. And this says the Bobkitties are in the playoffs for the second consecutive year.

Odessa Permian 45, Alamogordo, N.M., 0: This Saturday (2 p.m.) game at Ratliff Stadium is the other side of the marking time equation. The Ratliff Stadium turf parts next week. LEE VS. PERMIAN nears.

JAYS: New faces help prevent annual choke until June, pitched 6 1-3 innings and left with a 4-3 lead — thanks to a two-run homer by Maldonado, an August waiver pickup.

Parker, signed off the waiver wire last month, scored the first run as Toronto began clawing back from a 3-0 deficit. Guzman, in Class AA in 1990 and in Class AAA as recently as June, won his 10th straight decision Tuesday to put Toronto in position to clinch.

"This team has been called choker in the past," Alomar said. "But that doesn't fit this team. There are too many new faces around here."

The big irony is that — except for Guzman, who came out of nowhere — all of the New Jays came from of losing programs.

"It took a while to get used to having 50,000 fans at every game," Candiotti said. "I was more used to three or four thousand."

"My entire career, I've waited for this," said Carter, who before coming to Toronto had completed the Loser Hat Trick by playing for the Cubs, Indians and Padres.

"In San Diego, we had the team to win a pennant. But we didn't do it," Alomar said.

Maldonado had 22 homers and 95 runs last year, but the Indians — proving again why they are the Indians — didn't sign him to a 1991 contract. He made Milwaukee as a non-roster player but broke his foot in the season's first week and was out for 2½ months. When he didn't produce big numbers when he came off the disabled list, the Brewers let him go. He signed with Toronto on Aug. 9 and has been the starting left fielder ever since.

"The front-office went out and did everything they could possibly do to patch up the weaknesses of this team," Candiotti said. "You wonder what would have happened if Candy hadn't come over. He's stabilized our lineup and given us some power."

Candiotti and Guzman have more than made up for the loss of Dave Stieb, who is out with a back injury. Candiotti's 2.65 ERA ranks second in the league. Guzman is baseball's hottest pitcher and has been especially effective against the Twins.

The 40-year-old Parker won't be available for the postseason, having signed after Sept. 1. Too bad for Toronto, because he has reached base in all but one game since his arrival. Though he was with California this year, Parker enjoyed success most recently of all the Jays, having played with AL champion Oakland last season.

Carter has provided power, Alomar speed. After one year, it appears Toronto has gotten the best of the megadeal that sent Fred McGriff and Tony Fernandez to the Padres.

"I didn't feel we could keep the same lineup for another year," Gillick said when asked why he made baseball's biggest offseason trade. "We needed some new blood."

The New Jays are glad Gillick didn't stand pat.

"I've never felt like this before. I'm so happy," Candiotti said. "It's a great way to end my losing era in Cleveland."

Now that he's escaped, does he have advice for his former teammates?

"I'd tell all the guys in Cleveland to work hard, because it's worth this feeling," Candiotti said. "This is what it's all about."

Chisox sweep AL West champs

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Jack Morris, tuning up for his start in Game 1 of the AL playoffs, pitched five shutout innings, but the Chicago White Sox rallied to beat the Minnesota Twins 3-2 in 10 innings Thursday in a doubleheader opener.

Carlton Fisk hit two homers, including a grand slam, and drove in six runs as Chicago completed the sweep by winning the second game 13-12 in 12 innings.

Morris, whose next start will be Tuesday night against Toronto at the Metrodome, scattered six hits, walked one and struck out five. He finished the regular season at 18-12.

The only threat against Morris came in the first inning, when the White Sox loaded the bases with one out. But Morris escaped when Bo Jackson grounded into a double play, one of four turned by the Twins.

Warren Newson, who began a two-run rally in the ninth inning against Rick Aguilera, singled home the winner with two outs in the 10th. Tim Raines led off by reaching on third baseman Scott Leius' throwing error, took third on a groundout and scored on Newson's single.

AL Roundup

Brewers 9, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Dale Sveum had two RBIs during a four-run fifth inning, and Dante Bichette had two in a five-run seventh as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians.

The victory moved Milwaukee above .500 for the first time since May 7. The Indians lost their 104th game, extending the team record they set Wednesday night.

The Brewers, 17 games under .500 in early August, have gone 37-19 since Aug. 4, the best record in the American League over that span. They collected 60 hits while winning three of four games in the series.

Jaime Navarro (15-12) pitched seven innings.

Yankees 9, Orioles 6

NEW YORK — Roberto Kelly homered, doubled and drove in four runs, leading the New York Yankees over the Baltimore Orioles for their fourth straight victory.

Jeff Johnson (6-11) gave up three runs on seven hits in seven innings.

Tigers 10, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Bill Gullickson became the American League's first 20-game winner as the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox on Cecil Fielder's grand slam and Rob Deer's three-run homer.

Gullickson (20-9) allowed just two hits for six innings before he lost a bid for his first 1991 shutout.

rivalry, even in A ball. We had five, six brawls against them one season."

It's no secret that a lot of people feel the same way. Especially when it comes down to rooting for the Braves, who are trying to join Minnesota as the only teams ever to bounce back from last place to first, or the hated Dodgers.

"I'll manage like they're World Series games," said San Francisco's Roger Craig, who pitched Brooklyn to a victory in the 1955 World Series, the first time the Dodgers won the championship. "Maybe we'll make our season in three days.

"It'll probably go down to the last inning, the last out. If Atlanta wins, it will help baseball and all the people in the South."

One advantage for everyone: Because of ESPN, WTBS and CBS, all three games in both series will be shown, as long as they matter.

And, it might go beyond that. Because Dodgers general manager Fred Claire called "heads" in a coin flip last month, Los Angeles won the toss and the right to host a one-game playoff Monday night. That, too, will be on TV.

If it goes that far, it might not be such good news for Los Angeles. There have been five playoffs in NL history, and the Dodgers have been involved in every one. They've lost four times.

They were swept in a best-of-3 by St. Louis in 1946, and lost to the New York Giants in 1951 on Thomson's ninth-inning shot in the deciding third game. It was the same thing in 1962, when they lost to San Francisco in a best-of-3, and in 1980 — the only time an NL division was tied at the end — Houston won a one-game playoff in Los Angeles.The only time the Dodgers won was in 1959, when they stopped the two-time champion Milwaukee Braves in a two-game sweep.

"I think even LA felt it was going to come down to the last weekend or the last day," said Braves pitcher Tom Glavine, the only 20-game winner in the majors. "We feel pretty good about it. Now let's see if we can get a little bit of help."

Perhaps the Dodgers did feel like it would go until the final days. But they probably didn't think they would be racing against Atlanta.

Early in the season, the Dodgers thought the main competition would come from the World Series champion Cincinnati Reds. It wasn't until mid-July, when Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda told his team in a pregame meeting — for the first time, really — that the Braves were to be believed.

ALCS foes face off in regular-season finale

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Play it again, Cito and Tom.

If Humphrey Bogart were at the Metrodome Sunday, that's what he'd say to Cito Gaston and Tom Kelly.

In a scheduling quirk, the AL East champion Toronto Blue Jays and AL West champion Minnesota Twins will be locked in an unusual tuneup to the playoffs. It's the first time division champs will meet in a regular-season ending series.

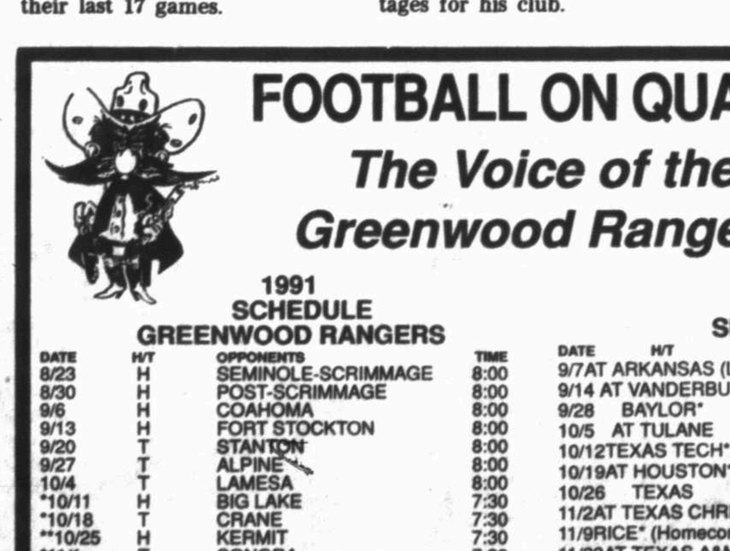

After the teams play on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, they'll rest for a day before belting out an encore: the AL playoffs.

"It'll probably be more like spring training games," Kelly said of the regular-season finale. "We'll both be using a lot of guys and resting a lot of guys.

"I don't know what Cito's going to do. You'll have to ask him, but I would expect he's going to do the same," Kelly said.

The only two starting pitchers scheduled to appear over the weekend are Toronto's Todd Stottlemyre on Friday and the Twins' Scott Erickson on Saturday.

"Those games will be for fun. Next week will be for real," Twins center fielder Kirby Puckett said.

In preparation for the American League Championship Series, grounds crew workers paint the league logo on the field at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis.

California Angels third baseman Gary Gaetti, who was on the field Wednesday when Toronto clinched its division with a 6-5 victory over the Angels, said the dress rehearsal between the Twins and Blue Jays might spoil some of the excitement of the playoffs.

If the playoff lasts seven games, Toronto and Minnesota would end up playing each other in 13 of their last 17 games.

"When two teams play each other 13 out of 16 games, it may take a little of the edge off," said Gaetti, who played for the Twins when they won the 1987 World Series. "The atmosphere for the playoffs in Minnesota is so great, I just hope that last series doesn't detract from it."

Twins general manager Andy MacPhail doesn't see any advantages for his club.

"I guess a negative for us is they'll have time to get a little more acclimated to the Dome," he said. "They won't even have to travel. They'll just play three games, have an off-day, and play two more."

In 1987, the Twins won every postseason game they played at the Metrodome.

If nothing else, the weekend series will put a shine on the Twins' ticket counter. More than 40,000 fans are expected Friday, Saturday's game is sold out and 50,000 or more are expected Sunday.

"All of our postseason tickets are committed, so people who don't have playoff tickets but want to see the two teams play have a chance this weekend," Twins vice president Dave Moore said. "There will even be a good Canadian contingent."

What the weekend series may lack in drama, it will replace with scenery.

Moore said bunting is being draped in preparation for the playoffs and American League logos are being painted onto the Dome's artificial turf.

"The field will be set up in playoff type formation," Moore said, "it'll have pretty much of a playoff look."

Arlington schools battle

Prep Preview

The battle between top-ranked Arlington Lamar and crosstown rival Arlington Sam Houston has been billed as a clash between two of the state's most-talented running backs, but Sam Houston coach Ken Ozee knows better.

Lamar's Shawn Walters and Sam Houston's Jeff Godley, who each ran for more than 2,000 yards last season, will be the focus of the capacity crowd at Wilemon Stadium Friday night, Ozee said.

"I think that's going to draw a lot of people. That stuff's good for the game," he said. "Surely they're both going to be factors, but we have more weapons and so do they."

Like Lamar quarterback Tony Kennedy, who has thrown for 525 yards, and Miguel Pineda, who has 25 catches for 398 yards. Kennedy, the team leader, and Walters also are a dangerous combination on the option play.

"Kennedy makes that Viking ship sail real well," Ozee said.

The Texans have been forced to resort to their secondary weapons this season. Godley was arrested on a robbery charge and missed the Texans' first two games, including a 27-7 season-opening loss to Grand Prairie. He returned in a 35-16 victory against South Grand Prairie, carrying 12 times for 118 yards and four touchdowns.

But Godley suffered minor shoulder and ankle injuries last week against Arlington Martin and was ineffective. Teammate Tracy Young picked up the slack with 202 yards and four scores on 13 carries, and Mike Adams had 162 total yards in the 42-4 romp.

Ozee said the Texans will have to play flawless football to win.

"We can't turn the ball over. They're so dangerous on offense, they'll just run down and score," he said. "We've just got to make some first downs and move the ball, and the kicking game will have to play well to get us good field position."

Ozee said Sam Houston can hope to slow — but not stop — Walters, who has 490 yards this season, including 158 yards and three touchdowns in last week's 31-15 victory over Weatherford.

"If you don't do something at the line of scrimmage, you're going to be in trouble," he said. "He's a man among boys."

In other games involving the top 5A teams, No. 2 Dallas Carter plays district rival Bryan Adams. The Cowboys will be without starting running back Jesse Cornelius, who broke his arm in last week's 35-0 romp over Dallas Skyline.

Odessa Permian, which is tied with Huntsville for the No. 3 ranking, plays Alamogordo, N.M., on Saturday.

Huntsville battles Spring Westfield and it's Waco vs. Killeen, San Antonio Marshall vs. crosstown rival Madison, Fort Bend Willowridge vs. Fort Bend Dulles, Alief Elsik vs. Houston Memorial and No. 9 Plano vs. Richardson. Tenth-ranked Aldine plays Aldine Nimitz on Saturday.

Killeen, previously the ninth-ranked team, received a double whammy last week. In addition to losing its first game, 40-21 to Temple, the Kangaroos lost running back Dion Marion for two-to-four weeks with a separated shoulder. Marion had carried for 424 yards through three games.

In 4A, top-ranked Bastrop takes on Brenham, which was placed on probation this week as a result of the alleged assault of two Del Valle players and two coaches after an Aug. 23 scrimmage.

Clearwater leads Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Keith Clearwater brushed aside his crazy, late-night trip to Texas and shot a 7-under-par 63 Thursday to grab the first-round lead at the Texas Open.

Karl Kimball wa second at 64, one stroke better than Mark Calcavecchia, who had two eagles in his first outing since his rough final match in the Ryder Cup last weekend. Nine golfers were at 66 after one trip around Oak Hills Country Club.

The leaders all played morning rounds. The afternoon scores were generally higher as greens baked in the sun and appeared to get faster.

Clearwater, who had seven birdies, attributed his performance to a relaxed approach. He hadn't played a tournament in several weeks because he was spending time with his family.

"You're relaxed, you're not intense and you let a lot of good things happen," Clearwater said. "I putted the ball real solid, and really kept the ball in play and gave myself a lot of chances."

Clearwater was operating on just three hours' sleep after arriving in San Antonio early Thursday morning. His plane out of Salt Lake City experienced hydraulic trouble, forcing the passengers to stay on the grounded aircraft for two hours. Clearwater later found another flight to Texas.

"That was the event, really — just to get here," said the easygoing Clearwater. The travel snags left him no time to practice or mentally prepare himself until just 40 minutes before the tournament began, he said.

Clearwater played the morning round, which he said actually helped him because the Oak Hills greens were in good condition and not as fast as they can be. He finished the round with a birdie on the 18th hole, his third 12-foot putt of the day.

Kimball, who birdied four holes on the front nine, attributed his performance to overcoming adversity on the 15th and 16th holes. He two-putted the 15th for par. On the 16th, Kimball at one point found himself hitting from spectator bleachers. He managed to save par.

"My mom always said perseverance always pays off," Kimball said. He went on to birdie the last two holes with 8- and 5-foot putts, respectively.

Though a slight breeze blew Thursday, Kimball said it was only noticeable when the ball was in the air. He said he saw the wind take his golf ball on the troublesome 16th.

Calcavecchia, who was unavailable for comment because of special travel plans, stayed even through the first seven holes, then eagled the 309-yard eighth. Two holes later, the par-5 10th, he eagled again.

Defending champion Mark O'Meara shot an opening-round 76.

O'Meara, Calcavecchia, Paul Azinger, Lanny Wadkins and Corey Pavin — the Ryder Cup team members playing in the Texas Open — headed to Washington aboard a charter flight after their Thursday rounds. On Friday morning, they were to get personal congratulations from President Bush for the American victory last weekend, then return to San Antonio in time to play afternoon rounds.

Ryder Cup team members scurry to Washington

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The five members of the victorious U.S. Ryder Cup team playing in this weekend's Texas Open all left hurriedly after their opening rounds on Thursday for a meeting with President Bush on Friday.

Mark Calcavecchia, two shots off the lead with an opening 4-under-par 66, led the quintet which also included Paul Azinger, Lanny Wadkins, Corey Pavin and Mark O'Meara.

The golfers took a charter flight to Washington Thursday night and were scheduled to return in time for their rounds Friday afternoon.

Calcavecchia, who led his final-day match against Colin Montgomerie 4-up with four holes to play only to see it finish in a tie, had two eagles in Thursday's opening round at Oak Hills Country Club. Calcavecchia finished his round at Kiawah Island, S.C. last weekend bogey-triple bogey-bogey-triple bogey. He was despondent after the halve and showed little positive emotion after Bernhard Langer of Germany missed the 5-foot putt on the final hole of the final match to give the United States a 14½-13½ victory over Europe to reclaim the Ryder Cup which Europe had held since 1985.

Azinger shot a 68 Thursday, Pavin a 69 and Wadkins 70.

MHS: Eagles move Kaufmann to fullback

(From 1C)

"I'd be lying if I told you any differently, but this season has been like your average death march. It's been a rough one. Midland High seems to be a lot like us in the fact that we both seem to like to shoot ourselves in the foot every Friday night."

Injuries have played a key role in the MHS season and the Bulldogs are still hobbling.

Linebacker Roland Chambers, who didn't play against Lee, still has a bad ankle, but is expected to play. His backup, Marvin Fulsom, has missed two days of practice this week with the flu while defensive tackle Maurice Lewis and linebacker Larry Tompkins have been held out of some practice due to nagging injuries.

Of course, two-way lineman starter Brian Booker is out at least two more weeks with a leg injury. Punter Cory Emerson is out for the year with a broken arm and offensive tackle Steve Johnson had knee surgery Thursday. Offensive tackle William Merritt has a broken wrist, but will try to play Friday.

"The major problem we have is that we've shuffled so many kids around that there is not a lot of stability on this team. We've had kids trying to learn new positions to fill in the gaps of all the injuries," Corley said.

A low scoring game is expected, which should produce a competitive game.

"We've outscored Midland High by a 7-3 margin this year. That really impresses me," Stone deadpanned. "This is our homecoming game, so maybe that will give us a boost. It was either Midland High or Odessa Permian for homecoming, so I'm hoping we made the right decision."

Abilene High has moved junior quarterback Marcus Kaufmann to fullback, and he responded to the move with over 90 yards rushing last week against Abilene Cooper. Defensively, AHS has given up only 58 points this year, an average of just 14.5 points per game.

"Abilene looks pretty good defensively, but the big change is Kaufmann moving to fullback," Corley said. "They were a good passing team with Kaufmann at quarterback, but now they are a better running team and they throw the play action passes with the new sophomore quarterback."

Both teams are coming off losses to cross town rivals. MHS lost 44-0 to Midland Lee last week while AHS was blanked 7-0 by Cooper.

"Anytime you lose to your cross town rival, it's tough," Stone says. "After all, you have to live in town the rest of the year, hearing all that stuff from the other side of town."

But a victory tonight by either team will help erase some the pain that this strange season has produced for these two teams.

LEE: Cougars try to balance offense placed by James Ward, who usually starts at weak-side lienbacker in the Reb 4-3. Filling in on the weak side will by Joel Ochoa, a 5-10, 185-pound senior, while Mark Seidenberger retains his strong-side duties.

"We're trying to tell the kids that this is a district game and and it's just as important as all the others. It's very important to play consistent football, and right now Abilene Cooper is just like us, 1-0 in district. I'm sure they also plan on being 2-0, just like we are," Miller said.

However, first-year Cooper coach Randy Allen still finds Lee a tough nut to crack.

"I think Lee is a complete football team. Their defense is stingy and their offense controls the ball. We're just going to have to come in and do what we do best. Lee's made a lot of progress the last three weeks. They're pretty salty.

"We're a pretty balanced offense and we've been able to move the ball, but we just haven't been able to take advantage of opportunities inside the 20-yard line," Allen said.

Cooper Running back Tony Tate is a returning starter who owns a 6.0-yard-a-carry average, but he has been overshadowed by sophomore Mike Rose. Rose is fourth in the district in rushing with 263 yards, and ran for 94 yards two weeks ago against Mansfield.

Still, Allen knows where his Coogs will have to make progress — on the arm of quarterback Jason St. Pierre, who has completed more than 50 percent of his passes for 375 yards.

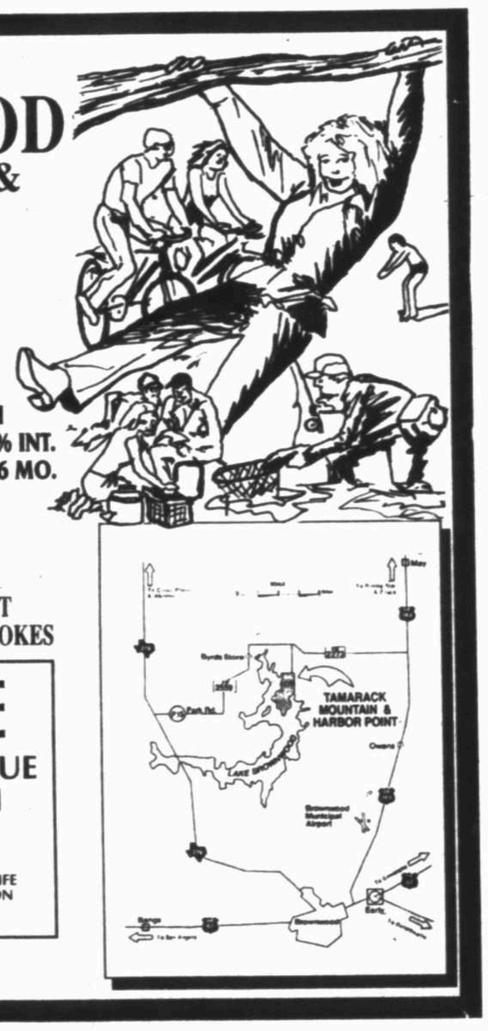

"I don't think a team can come in and run at them. You have got to throw the ball to keep them off balance, but we don't have any particular agenda," Allen said.

He also added he holds no illusions about Cooper's chances.

"For one thing, we are coming off a 42-0 loss to this team last year. Also we will be without a couple of starters.

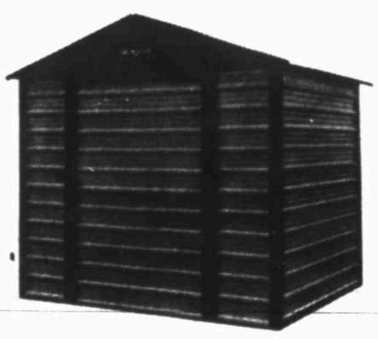

"We're trying to build a program, and though it's not where it needs to be, last week's win was a shot in the arm. We're appreciative of being able to beat the cross-town rival. But Lee, that's a whole different type of ball game."

Bears tabbed over 'Skins in a squeaker

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

NFL Picks

This has to be the stat of the year.

In three home games, Washington has allowed no points. In two road games, the Redskins have surrendered 58.

But the bottom line is that they're 5-0 as they go into Chicago this week to face the Bears, who until last week were tagged with the label of being the NFL's worst 4-0 team. Now, after a loss to Buffalo, they can revel at the distinction of being the worst 4-1 team ... well, there's still Detroit.

The Redskins come in as 2-point favorites, which shouldn't surprise anyone who has watched Monday night games last two weeks.

One other change.

Noting that the Redskins destroyed Antone Davis on Monday night, the Bears are lifting Stan Thomas, who didn't have a great day against the Bills (or Jets, or Giants). In other words, rookie offensive linemen, even No. 1 draft picks, often get a rude initiation into the NFL.

There are two other factors worth mentioning:

—The law of averages and the short work week for Washington.

—Mike Ditka is angry and when Mike gets angry ...

Buffalo (minus 3) at Kansas City (Monday night)

This is the game the Chiefs have been pointing to since training camp, which may be one reason they've been stumbling in the early season.

Yes, the Chiefs match up well — their prevent offense seems to give the Bills trouble and on paper, they have enough defense to cause some problems.

But the best bet for Kansas City is the law of averages. After this game, the Buffalo schedule is soft enough for Florida State to cruise through and since no one goes unbeaten in the NFL ...

CHIEFS, 23-21

Denver (plus 7½) at Houston

Speaking of the worst 4-1 team in the league, any votes for the Broncos?

No. Just make them 4-2 after Sunday. Houston has had a week off to think about losing to the Patriots. The Denver defense is playing well, but not that well

OILERS, 24-10

Minnesota (plus 3) at Detroit

The Lions are another candidate for the NFL's worst 4-1 team, given that their four wins are over teams with a combined record of 3-17.

On the other hand, it's not all Barry Sanders for the Lions — there are guys like Jerry Ball, Chris Spielman, Mike Cofer and Bennie Blades on defense who aren't bad either.

The same qualifier every week. If Rodney Peete stays healthy ...

LIONS, 17-9

Phoenix (plus 9) at Giants

Now we get into the other category — best 2-3 teams. Giants or 49ers?

San Francisco's idle this week, so it's the Giants.

Besides, Lawrence Taylor called a players-only meeting this week and when LT speaks ... it's time for a wake-up call.

GIANTS, 27-10

Jets (minus 1) at Cleveland

Jeff Lageman started a tabloid war by saying the Jets are now the best team in New York (New Jersey?)

The Giants beat the Browns 13-10 two weeks ago.

Here's one for Jeff.

JETS, 14-10

Dallas (minus 2½) vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee

Two questions:

—Is Don Majkowski's shoulder OK and if he tries to play will he be effective?

—Will the young Cowboys let down after the win over the Giants that Jimmy Johnson calls his biggest as a pro?

Answers: No and Yes.

Heads or Tails.

COWBOYS, 20-10

San Diego (plus 7½) at Raiders

The Raiders have allowed 19 points in three home games.

John Friesz is the Chargers' quarterback.

RAIDERS, 19-3

Pittsburgh (minus 6½) at Indianapolis

The week-off theory (Steelers) or the new coach theory (Colts)?

When even Zefross Moss is hurt ....

STEELERS, 26-12

Philadelphia (minus 3) at Tampa Bay

Pat Ryan (or Brad Goebel?) steps into the middle of the Testaverde controversy.

The Philadelphia defense is enough.

EAGLES, 9-3

Miami (minus 6½) at New England

Funny things can happen in Foxboro.

DOLPHINS, 17-14

Seattle (plus 3) at Cincinnati

Sam Wyche spent his week of playing tennis.

BENGALS, 40-30

Last week: 3-9 (spread) 6-6 (straight up)

Season: 29-37-2 (spread) 41-27 (straight up)

Seminoles, Wolverines face ranked teams

Associated Press

College Roundup

Top-ranked Florida State and No. 7 Michigan may be on opposite tacks this weekend, but they're both headed for rough water.

The Seminoles play No. 10 Syracuse, which beat No. 13 Florida two weeks ago and is looking for a Sunshine State sweep of sorts, and No. 7 Michigan faces Big Ten rival Iowa, ranked ninth and looking for recognition.

Florida State (4-0) beat Michigan 51-31 last Saturday and knocked the Wolverines (2-1) down three pegs from No. 4.

"We're on a mission," Florida State offensive tackle Kevin Mancini said. "We know what it takes to win it all."

In other games involving the Top 10, it's Oklahoma State (0-3) at No. 2 Miami (3-0); Arizona (2-2) at No. 3 Washington (3-0); No. 5 Oklahoma (3-0) at Iowa State (2-2); No. 6 Clemson (3-0) at Georgia (3-1), and No. 8 Notre Dame (3-1) at Stanford (1-2).

The schedule of other ranked teams has No. 11 Baylor (4-0) at Houston (1-2); No. 12 Penn State (4-1) at Temple (1-3); No. 13 Florida (3-1) at LSU (1-2); Wisconsin (3-0) at No. 14 Ohio State (3-0); Southern Mississippi (2-2) at No. 16 Auburn (3-1), and Maryland (1-2) at No. 17 Pittsburgh (4-0).

Also: No. 18 California (3-0) at No. 24 UCLA (2-1); No. 21 Georgia Tech (2-2) at No. 19 North Carolina State (4-0); Tennessee-Chattanooga (3-1) at No. 20 Alabama (3-1); Minnesota (1-2) at No. 22 Illinois (2-1), and No. 23 Texas A&M (2-1) at Texas Tech (1-3).

The last time Florida State and Syracuse (4-0) met in 1989, the Seminoles won 41-10 at the Carrier Dome. But things have changed a lot since then.

Seven of the Orangemen's players this year were recruited from the state of Florida, including tailback Terry Richardson and cornerback Dwayne Joseph.

"They had a speed transplant since the last time we played them," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said.

Michigan will be the first test of the season for Iowa (3-0), which has built its perfect record against Hawaii, Iowa State and Northern Illinois.

"I know one thing, I've been in coaching for about 40 years and there's not any substitute for winning," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "You go into the next week with that extra step, that extra heart beat."

Another win over Michigan would give the Hawkeyes something Fry dearly wants — recognition. "We've been the little guy — the Barney Google on the bottom," Fry said.

Iowa beat Michigan 24-23 last year but has not beaten the Wolverines two in a row since 1984 and '85.

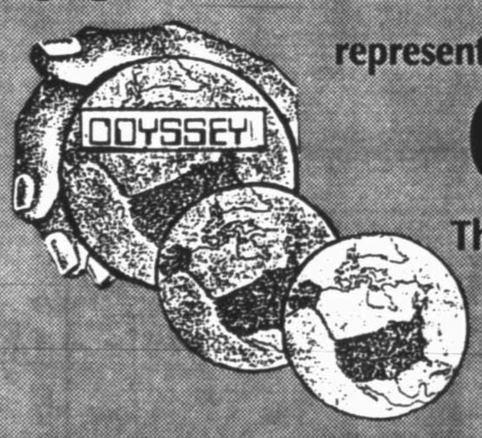

The odds are not good for Oklahoma State against Miami. The Hurricanes haven't lost to an unranked team since 1984, and heaven only knows the last time they lost to a team that was winless. Oklahoma State is 0-3 and can expect to be 0-4 shortly.

"The upsets are when you're high for one game and then you go real low the next week," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your ambition serves you well. Successful financial negotiations will make November a golden time for business. Romance blooms during a Christmas vacation. A close relationship will be tested in February. May brings flowers and a much-desired reconciliation. Step up your investment program in June. Joining a professional organization or going back to school will make next September a banner month.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Charlton Heston and Clifton Davis, singer Patti LaBelle, actress Susan Sarandon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Advance planning works brilliantly for you. Find a long-term solution to a troublesome personal problem. A parent offers well-meant advice. Listen attentively but follow your instincts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Timely talks or letters lend strength to your residential or financial plans. Comparison shoppers will save a lot of money. A great day for do-it-yourself projects. Nurture a love relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Curb a tendency to act or speak hastily. An accident could happen if you rush ahead. Seek inexpensive entertainment this evening. Romance soars to new heights when you ask your mate's advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Old friends or a special group will help you solve a problem and smooth the path to financial success. Someone is evaluating your job performance. Abandon outmoded methods for newer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keeping a high profile will help you generate financial capital. You may have to bend the ears of influential people to gain their attention. Return to a more traditional approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stay close to home today and do not venture to parts unknown. Stimulating chats take place within your household. Delegate more chores to younger family members. Sharing secrets brings you closer together.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good fortune could come to your doorstep in the form of a visitor. Do not throw away recent gains for a vague possibility. Send important messages promptly. Wear your heart on your sleeve!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A dream could come true if you communicate a secret desire today. Private discussions provide the key to obtaining additional funds. You could be lucky in love tonight. Dress up if going out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop acting like a recluse and try to hook up with wealthy, influential people. You can reel in some big fish if you find the right stream. Terminate a going-nowhere relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be prepared for business delays today. News of a journey gives you fresh hope. The direct approach ensures more hits than misses. Learning to compromise helps a relationship flourish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Beware of a tendency to act overconfident. Get the whole story before making an important presentation. You feel more responsible than ever for your family's welfare.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day for team efforts. Be cautious when trying new procedures. Share the limelight. Your future financial security depends on how well you manage your present income.

There is one advantage to playing duplicate bridge. If failing by a trick is going to produce a terrible result, you might as well go to extremes to make your contract—conceding more undertricks won't do your score much harm. At rubber bridge, the difference between down one and down many can be expensive.

Despite West's preempt, North-South arrived in a reasonable slam that depended only on a 3-2 trump break. East's double announced that just the opposite could be expected and, since going down one doubled in a slam seldom earns any match-points, South elected to try for six no trump, hoping to be able to run the diamonds.

West led the king of hearts and declarer was in a state of shock. North's bare ace of diamonds meant that declarer would need an entry to hand to run the suit, and the only entry was about to be removed while the diamonds were still blocked. It looked as if North-South were headed for a seven-trick set.

There was, however, a possibility of limiting the loss somewhat, perhaps drastically, and even have a chance to make the contract. Declarer allowed West to win the first trick!

It was difficult for West to realize that a shift was vital. It seemed natural to continue with hearts, but declarer demonstrated that it was a major miscue. Dummy's blocking ace of diamonds was discarded as declarer won in hand, and when the king and queen of diamonds felled the jack, declarer ran diamonds, coming down to nothing but A K Q 9 of spades in dummy and three clubs to the queen and a spade in hand. On the last diamond East was forced to discard from J 10 8 3 in spades and the ace of clubs, and whichever suit East chose to release would provide declarer with the fulfilling trick.

Police recover Jackson glove that was stolen from museum

LOS ANGELES — Detroit police have recovered the crystal-beaded Michael Jackson glove that was stolen from the Motown Museum this week.

The glove was recovered Thursday night from a man suspected in the theft. No immediate arrest was made.

Rap star Hammer had offered a $50,000 reward for the glove's return.

"With certain markings that are on the glove, we know it's (Jackson's)," Inspector James May said.

The pop superstar wore the glove on a 1983 television program honoring the 25th anniversary of the founding of Motown Records.

Hammer, who recently dropped the "M.C." from his appellation, set up a special telephone line to Capitol Records for people to call with information about the glove, Capitol spokesman Larry Jenkins said Thursday.

Hammer recently challenged Jackson to a dance-off and has a competitive interest in what the glove symbolizes.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Violinist Isaac Stern came to home of the Grand Ole Opry House but his heart stayed in New York City, home to Carnegie Hall.

Stern

Stern, 71, who was scheduled to perform today and Saturday with the Nashville Symphony, has been president of Carnegie Hall for the past 31 years.

Stern worked to save the New York City performance hall from demolition in 1960 and on efforts to restore it in 1986.

"It became a calling, almost a religion," Stern said.

"What is really joyous about it is that it's there, it has succeeded, and it is still the linchpin of American performance," Stern said.

Stern, who began playing the violin at age 8, has slowed down on the number of public appearances he makes. He performs about five months a year.

"I now play when and where I choose to play," he said.

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — Roy Clark has one. So does Boxcar Willie, Jim Stafford and Mickey Gilley. And now it appears country music's Gatlin Brothers may join the list of performers opening theaters in this Ozarks resort community.

Brothers Larry, Steve and Rudy Gatlin have scheduled a news conference Friday at the site of a theater to be built by Arkansas developer Ben Bush, band spokeswoman Becky Hamilton said Thursday.

Ms. Hamilton would neither confirm nor deny the Gatlins would headline the theater.

Johnny and June Cash, Willie Nelson and Andy Williams have announced plans to open theaters here next year. Branson expects to draw upward of 5 million tourists in 1991.

The Gatlin Brothers announced in June that the band would break up when its tour ends next year. They cited health problems, rising business costs and tough competition on a music scene dominated by newcomers such as Clint Black and Garth Brooks. The Gatlins haven't had a hit record in four years.

DALLAS (AP) — Opera soprano Leontyne Price says she knew she had a knack for music when her parents bought her a piano at age 6.

"It was something in my throat," she told seventh- and eighth-graders at Greiner Middle School. "The moment I sat down, played the first note and hummed along, I noticed I received much more attention."

"By the time I was your age, I was pointed toward a musical career."

The opera star, who was raised in Laurel, Miss., and now lives in New York City, was in Dallas for a recital Tuesday.

Her visit to the school Wednesday was part of the Dallas Opera's involvement in the Greater Dallas Chamber of Commerce's Adopt-A-School program.

"I hope I will see future artists, impresarios, teachers, educators, shakers and breakers," she told the students.

WASHINGTON — King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia of Spain will be weekend guests of President Bush at Camp David, the White House said Thursday.

Juan Carlos

The Spanish royalty will fly to the presidential retreat in the Catoctin Mountains of Maryland with Bush and his wife Barbara on Saturday night, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The king and queen will leave Sunday for New York, where Juan Carlos will address the U.N. General Assembly on Monday. He also will open an exhibit, "The Splendor of the Spanish Monarchy," at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The king will return to Washington on Tuesday to address the Organization of American States and attend the opening of a Christopher Columbus exhibit at the National Gallery of Art.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Oil prices advanced Thursday amid news of delivery and refinery problems on both sides of the Atlantic.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $22.67 per barrel, up 34 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The petroleum futures contracts were moving higher as traders responded to reports of shipping problems caused by bad weather in the North Sea, as well as delays in the loading Soviet of supplies of gas oil, the European equivalent of home heating oil, that were to be exported.

There were also indications that the Soviet Union, the world's largest oil producer, will suffer more declines in output.

The market was given a further jolt by news of a fire at the Chevron Corp. refinery in Philadelphia. The refinery has a capacity for processing 175,000 barrels of crude oil a day, but the damaged unit, with a capacity of 30,000 barrels a day, was the only section taken out of production, Chevron said.

Amoco Corp.'s decision to close a small refinery in Casper, Wyo., which had been running about 28,000 barrels of crude a day in recent years, gave the oil rally additional momentum.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.891 per 1,000 cubic feet, down .3 cent.

Dollar sinks

NEW YORK — The dollar sank to a seven-month low against the Japanese yen and finished lower against most major currencies in domestic trading Thursday after turning in a mixed performance in Europe.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to 131.15 Japanese yen from 133.11 yen at Wednesday's close.

In London, the pound edged up to $1.7525 from $1.7519 late Wednesday.

Selected dollar rates in New York, compared with late rates Wednesday, included: 1.6640 German marks, down from 1.6660; 1.4545 Swiss francs, down from 1.4565; 5.6700 French francs, down from 5.6765; 1,245 Italian lire, down from 1,246; and 1.13125 Canadian dollars, up from 1.13075.

Orders fall

WASHINGTON — Orders for manufactured goods, unable to sustain their biggest increase in 21 years a month earlier, tumbled 1.9 percent in August, the government said Thursday.

Some analysts question whether the industrial sector can continue to lead the recovery without stronger participation by consumers, who represent two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

DOE vows to boost gas spending

■ Deputy secretary decries funding for natural gas research and promises to increase spending by 1993.

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The Department of Energy's second-ranking official on Wednesday attacked the government's natural gas research budget as "insignificant and worthless" and vowed to boost federal gas spending by 1993.

Deputy Secretary W. Henson Moore said the Energy Department plans to spend $8 million on natural gas research and development next year, far less than planned for nearly every other major energy sector.

"As far as I'm concerned, the Department of Energy is totally irrelevant when it comes to research and development in natural gas," Moore said. "We're not even a bit player. It's insignificant and worthless."

Moore, speaking to a Natural Gas Week conference in Houston, said the administration plans to press for beefed-up gas funding for the 1993 fiscal year, but he declined to say how much will be requested.

The agency for 1992 has recommended $52 million for oil supply research, $330 million for nuclear, and $430 million for coal, said Phil Keif, a department spokesman.

Though Moore said the administration does not plan vast increases for gas spending next year, he said the gains should be enough to begin to offset past shortcomings.

In addition to a bigger budget, Moore said the department also plans to boost gas research by encouraging joint research ventures between the government and the private sector.

This week, for example, Moore talked to officials at a Houston-based gas research consortium about joint venture deals between the group and the federal agency.

The Energy Research Clearing House, spearheaded by Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. chairman George P. Mitchell, has asked the department for matching grants for its upstream gas research projects, officials said.

Banking executive arrested

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A bank vice president was arrested Thursday for allegedly helping doctor the books of his small institution months before its collapse triggered Rhode Island's banking crisis.

Peter J. Iannuccilli, also a director of the defunct Heritage Loan and Investment Bank, altered Heritage's computer records to make it appear more than $1 million in payments had been made on 12 loans suspected of being fraudulent, prosecutors said.

The arrest was the first of a high-ranking banking executive since a private deposit insurer's failure forced 45 banks and credit unions in Rhode Island to close Jan. 1.

Heritage President Joseph Mollicone Jr., has been charged with embezzling $13 million from the bank. He has been missing since November 1990, when state officials discovered Heritage was teetering on collapse. A federal fugitive warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Iannuccilli was charged with one count of fraud. He was arrested at his Cranston home and led into the attorney general's office in handcuffs. After a hearing, he was released on $50,000 personal recognizance.

Prosecutors allege he made the bank records appear that Mollicone had validly obtained the loans and made payments on July 13, 1990. But there was no collateral or other standard documentation to support the loans and the transactions were little more than theft, said Attorney General James E. O'Neil.

Sun Co. to lay off 900 people

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Sun Co. will lay off 900 people, eliminate its real estate subsidiary and take a $400 million charge against earnings as part of its restructuring plans, the company announced Thursday.

The moves are part of a strategy announced last summer aimed at saving the company $100 million a year starting in 1992.

Sun Co. spokesman Bud Davis said 600 of the 900 job cuts, or two-thirds, will occur in southeastern Pennsylvania, where the oil company has two refineries, its marketing and corporate headquarters and a marine transport group.

All of the job cuts will be in salaried positions. Of the 4,070 employees in the area, 2,700 positions are salaried.

Davis said 125 of the other job reductions will be in the Tulsa, Okla., area, where the company has a refinery. The rest of the job cuts will be spread through numerous facilities, with none expected to lose more than 10, he said.

Davis said the company has offered an enhanced retirement program in hopes of easing the reductions.

The offer expires Oct. 15. Layoffs would begin after that, with the 900 jobs being eliminated by the end of the year.

The company eliminated 100 salaried positions earlier this year.

The reductions are the result of a merging of Sun Co.'s corporate staff and its refining and marketing unit, a move announced last month. As part of the consolidation, Sun is eliminating the name of its principal subsidiary, Sun Refining & Marketing Co. and merging its Radnor facilities into its Philadelphia offices.

Robert H. Campbell, Sun's president and chief executive officer, said the company offered the retirement program to lessen the impact of the job cuts.

"But the bottom line is that this restructuring will enable Sun to become a more efficient, focused company better able to compete in a very competitive marketplace," he said.

In August, Sun announced it would reduce by more than half its $1.2 billion in real estate holdings.

But after a three-month study, the company decided to eliminate it totally.

The company's real estate subsidiary, Radnor Corp., is $900 million in debt, leaving a net investment of $300 million. The company had attributed a major portion of its 63 percent drop in earnings for the second quarter on its real estate losses.

Seventy percent of the holdings is office buildings, hotels, resorts, and shopping centers, with the remaining in such items as condominiums.

Authorities make arrests in S&L fraud case

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal authorities on Thursday began arresting 17 people who were indicted on 38 counts of fraud and related charges stemming from an alleged multimillion dollar scam operated in three states during the late 1980s.

"This is a classic example of what happened during that period in the savings and loan industry," U.S. Attorney Ronald Woods said Thursday in Houston. "This is the first one. There are several others that are equally large."

A 23-count indictment, involving more than $29 million in questionable loans, was returned Sept. 19 by a federal grand jury in Houston. A separate 15-count indictment, involving $102 million in loans, was issued in Florida.

Authorities unsealed the indictments early Thursday and began making arrests during the day.

The thrifts involved are Vision Banc Savings Association of Kingsville, Texas, which was formerly Kleburg Savings and Loan Association, and Hill Financial Savings, of Red Hill, Pa. Both thrifts have since gone out of business and have been turned over to the Resolution Trust Corp., the government entity that deals with assets from failed S&Ls.

Woods said the case was one of the nation's "top 10" fraud cases uncovered as part of the investigation of national savings and loan failures.

"We tried to look at institutions with the biggest losses and the biggest fraudulent use of government money," he said.

The Houston indictments name Robert Louis Corson, former chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Vision Banc; Billie Jean Garman, former director of Vision Banc; and Billy Wayne Chester, a former officer of Corson and Garman Development.

The indictments allege Corson, Ms. Garman and Chester between May 1986 and March 1987 approved $29 million in loans and netted more than $8 million of it for themselves through several fraudulent schemes. The schemes include a coastal land scam in Florida, a town house deal in Houston and a partnership loan in Fort Worth. All of the loans defaulted, Woods said.

The Florida indictment relates to the 1986 purchase of about 21,000 acres of beachfront property along the Gulf coast through loan funds from Hill Financial and Vision Banc totaling $102 million.

Among the Houston scams are a phony real estate deal in Fort Worth and a phony town house buy in Houston. Prosecutors say in the town house deal, Ms. Garman used the loan money to pay off personal liabilities, including gambling debts.

The Florida indictment names William M. Adkinson, formerly of Houston; Ann Powell Minks, principal in the Houston-based Imperial Title Company; Robert B. Ferguson; Mary Catherine Fawcett; Ronald D. Peek; Gilbert G. Dufilho; Keith Cox; Robert Alligood; Benjamin Koshkin; James Morgan; and Houston attorneys Robert L. Collins, Richard A. Tinsley, Robert Brockman and Daniel D. Kistler.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Unit trusts are self-liquidating investments

By Bill Doyle

Q. About six months ago, I purchased 50 units of a unit investment trust at $100.43 per unit. A copy of the broker's confirmation statement is enclosed. The trust holds insured municipal bonds paying exceptionally high interest. The current yield at the time of my purchase was 8.65 percent.

Doyle

I am aware the units I bought were previously issued and the bonds are likely to be called. In fact, the monthly checks I have received include both interest and principal.

I am thinking of further investments in this trust. But the high tax-free yield seems almost too good to be true. Is it?

A. You're getting that yield on your investment. So, it's factual. However, you should be aware you will not get back all the money you paid for those units.

A unit investment trust is a bit like a mutual fund because it holds a diversified investment portfolio, in this case a number of different municipal bonds.

Tax-free interest is paid on the bonds and passed along to you and other unit holders. As the bonds mature or are called in for early redemption, you also get your share of that money. By the time all the bonds are redeemed, your units will have zero value. That makes a unit trust a self-liquidating investment.

The confirmation statement you sent along lists par value — the unredeemed amount of bonds behind each unit — at $89.57. That's the amount of principal you're assured of getting back by the time all the bonds mature — in 1999, according to the confiration statement.

Easy arithmetic shows $89.57 is $10.86 less than the $100.43 you paid for each unit. On 50 units, that comes to $543. Assuming you hold the units until all the bonds mature, you figure to receive $4,478.50 in returned principal — $543 less than your $5,021.50 purchase price.

Until then, you will continue to collect high tax-free interest. To be realistic, however, you must realize the loss in principal will offset part of the interest.

Q. We bought 40 units of a municipal bond unit investment trust at $1,014.94 each, or $40,597.60 total. The first monthly statement we received listed the value at $970.29 per unit, or $38,811.60 total. That's a difference of $44.65 per unit, or $1,786.

Is the explanation that we will get back the difference when we sell the units?

A. No. The price you get, if you do sell, will determine if you have a profit or a loss. But that won't impact on the price you paid.

Although you don't say so — and the broker's confirmation statement you enclosed doesn't disclose it — I suspect the $970.29 unit "value" you mention was par value — face amount of bonds behind each unit.

Unit trusts can trade at, above or below that value, depending on market conditions. It's obvious you paid a premium price. That's not unusual.

Q. No commission is shown on the confirmation statement for our purchase of investment trust units. The broker told us his fee was paid by the seller. Should we believe the broker?

A. And the moon is made of green cheese.

If it was a new issue, an underwriting fee was built into the price. The brokerage firm deducted that fee from the total price you paid and sent the remainder to the investment trust. An underwriting fee is similar to a mutual fund load. You paid more than the market value for the trust units, with the difference being kept by the brokerage.

If you purchased previously issued units in "the secondary market," the broker bought them at one price, tacked on a markup and sold them to you at a higher price.

Albuquerque launches balloon festival Saturday

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A giant tennis shoe-shaped balloon will help kick off this year's Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta on Saturday as colorful shapes of the good, the bad and the funny fill the city's skies.

The nine-day fiesta runs through Oct. 13, with many events planned for the hundreds of pilots and thousands of spectators expected to attend, including 7:30 a.m. mass ascensions on both weekends.

Santa Claus, a witch flying on a broom and a clown are among the nearly 50 special shapes slated to fly at the 20th annual fiesta.

A newcomer to this year's fiesta is "Miss Penny," a plump pink pig promoting United New Mexico Bank.

Food, faces and fairy tale characters also will hover over Albuquerque in the shapes of a giant hamburger, an apple, a beer can, Uncle Sam, the cow jumping over the moon and a big blue Smurf.

"How they get more exotic each year makes it more and more fun," said state Sen. Tom Rutherford of Albuquerque, who helped found the fiesta.

Rutherford said the traditional-shaped balloons that flew at the inaugural fiesta "look like Model T's compared to the ones we have now."

The Special Shapes Rodeo, a popular attraction for both children and adults, is slated for 4:30 p.m. next Thursday and Friday.

More than 600 balloons and 800 balloonists from the United States, France, Germany, Austria, England, Japan and other parts of the world are expected to land in the Duke City for the increasingly popular event.

A special program is planned for the some dozen pilots who flew at the original fiesta in 1972.

A record 1.2 million people attended the fiesta in 1990, and officials expect even more people at this year's.

The Balloon Glow at 7 p.m. Sunday will feature the dancing, illuminated shapes tethered to the ground. About 300 balloonists are scheduled to blast their propane burners and light up the skies.

On Tuesday afternoon, pilots will launch from several spots around the city, Rutherford said.

"The idea is so that the pilots can thank the city more personally for all their support over the years," he said.

Other scheduled events during the week include:

■ A fiesta parade at noon Sunday; beginning at the State Fairgrounds and proceeding to University of New Mexico campus.

■ Key Grab contest from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. Wednesday.

A camera mounted in a Sun Bank ATM machine captured this photo of a man being held up at gunpoint in Maitland, Fla. last month. The robber escaped with $200.

MAITLAND, Fla. (AP) — A dramatic photograph taken by a security camera at an automatic bank machine last month resulted in charges filed Thursday against a man shown robbing a customer at gunpoint.

The photo distributed to news media by Maitland police asked the public's help in identifying the gunman — who is clearly shown holding his pistol against the customer's neck as the customer bends over the cash machine.

"We started getting calls within 30 minutes after the picture was shown on television" Wednesday night, said Maitland police spokesman Dave Robb.

Of about 30 calls, six identified the gunman by name. Detectives traced him Thursday to the Orange County jail in Orlando, where he was being held on traffic and cocaine possession charges.

Tillman Wheeler, 37, will be charged with armed robbery and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony, "And I don't think we'll have much of a problem proving that," Robb said.

Wheeler had been in jail since Sept. 18.

The victim, John McComb, was about to use a SunBank ATM cash machine Sept. 8 when he was approached from behind by the pistol-packing man who ordered him to withdraw the maximum amount of cash possible, police said.

The gunman grabbed the $200 the machine spit out and fled on foot.

"The photo was so good that we'd been showing it around to everybody (at the police station) but nobody could come up with a name," Robb said. "I finally decided to take it to the Orlando Sentinel and the local TV stations."

Defense contractor in trouble, auditor says

WASHINGTON (AP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp., the nation's largest defense contractor, is so financially strapped that it might have to cease operations, the head of the Pentagon's contract auditing told Congress on Thursday.

"We're concerned about the ability of the corporation to raise sufficient cash to maintain ongoing operations as their debt increases," said William H. Reed, director of the Defense Contract Audit Agency, which oversees all Pentagon contracts.

"We believe that their ongoing operations are threatened," Reed told the oversight and investigations subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

McDonnell Douglas, based in St. Louis, manufactures a wide variety of military equipment for all the service branches, including the Air Force's F-15 fighter, the Navy's Tomahawk cruise missile and the Army's Apache attack helicopter — all of which played important roles in the Persian Gulf War.

The company took issue with the glum assessment. "We believe that the DCAA assessment of McDonnell Douglas' overall financial condition is flawed, is based on old data and faulty financial modeling," Mike Burch, vice president, public relations of McDonnell Douglas in Washington.

He said the report failed to take into account "the commercial aspects of our business and our ability to generate large volumes of cash with the delivery of each commercial aircraft." He said the company has just posted the best first six months of operating earnings in its history.

The company's financial problems center mainly on several high-tech weapons systems it has under development, such as the C-17 transport plane for the Air Force, as well as the A-12 Navy stealth attack aircraft whose development was cancelled by the Pentagon last January.

By some Pentagon estimates the C-17 project is running at least $1.4 billion over budget, a sum that McDonnell Douglas would have to absorb. The company disputes this projection, saying it expects a cost overrun of no more than $400 million.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the oversight and investigations subcommittee, asked Reed whether he believed McDonnell Douglas's financial woes might lead it to stop paying its bills, stop work on defense contracts or seek court protection under the bankruptcy laws.

"All three of those are certainly possibilities," Reed said in sworn testimony.

Dingell noted a Pentagon audit report on McDonnell Douglas by Reed's office last April which raised doubts about the company's financial viability. Asked whether a follow-up audit now in draft form showed any improvement, Reed said:

"It's fair to say that the situation has improved somewhat since the April report, however it has not improved to the extent that we are able in any way to mitigate our concern about their overall condition."

Dingell ticked off a long list of questions about McDonnell Douglas's defense contract performance, its accounting practices and its financial condition.

He said that although McDonnell Douglas blames its financial squeeze on the Pentagon's contracting rules, his subcommittee's investigations have shown the problems are rooted in "plain old-fashioned mismanagement" by McDonnell Douglas.

Dingell accused McDonnell Douglas of secretly asking the Pentagon last January for a $1 billion bailout because of the company's deteriorating financial condition. This occurred just after the Pentagon cancelled the A-12 project. When the office of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney demanded that McDonnell Douglas take cost-cutting measures the company withdrew its request, Dingell said.

McDonnell Douglas and the Pentagon have denied any bailout was sought or given.

Dingell also released a new report on the Apache helicopter by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress. The report said that while the Army had made progress toward reducing reliability problems in the Apache, previously known structural cracking in a tail section has emerged as a "potentially catastrophic problem" for Apaches with high numbers of flying hours.

The GAO report said the Army has been aware of the tail cracking problem since 1987 but has not fixed the problem because it has been unable to reach agreement with McDonnell Douglas on issues such as who would pay for additional testing.

Linguistic structure of gossip helps make it nasty

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers say they have found one explanation for why gossip tends to be so nasty — and it's not just that it's more fun that way.

Instead, they blame the way gossip unfolds in group conversation.

Once one disparaging comment is made, the structure of those conversations encourages further cutting remarks while severely limiting the chance to challenge the criticism, researchers found.

In fact, the study suggests that if a participant wants to stop the criticism, "you've got to jump in real quickly" and challenge the first disparaging remark immediately, said co-author Donna Eder.

"Then it becomes more of a discussion of that person and their pros and cons, rather than a fully negative discussion."

The study focused on adolescents, who are more prone than adults to disparage other people behind their backs, Eder said. But once an initial criticism is made among adults, the structure of gossip probably promotes further disparagement in the same way, she said.

The adolescents in the study were white, and Eder said the relevance of the research to other ethnic groups is not clear.

Eder, an associate professor of sociology at Indiana University in Bloomington, reports the work in the August issue of the American Sociological Review with Janet Enke, a visiting professor of sociology at the University of Cincinnati.

The study is an important contribution that "definitely adds to our knowledge of gossip and in particular why gossip turns negative," said sociologist and gossip researcher Jack Levin of Northeastern University in Boston.

People usually blame negativism in gossip on "some personality blemish in people who gossip, like the need for revenge," he said. "But what these investigators find instead is that the negativism is in the very structure of gossip. I mean, you can pretty much count on it."

Levin said the finding pertains only to gossip done in the absence of the target.

Researchers analyzed 16 conversations from 11 groups of middle school students, ages 10 to 14. They focused on "evaluative" gossip, in which a positive or negative evaluation of somebody not present was followed by a response from another student.

'But what these investigators find instead is that the negativism is in the very structure of gossip. I mean, you can pretty much count on it.'

— Jack Levin, researcher

Most initial evaluations were criticisms, and a key step in the conversations turned out to be the first response to the disparaging remark. This was the only time such a remark was challenged, researchers said. If the first response supported the disparagement instead, it appeared to block any further chance for a challenge, they found.

"It's perhaps easier to have a conflict or a disagreement with one person than it is to have a disagreement with what appears to be a group consensus," Eder explained in a telephone interview.

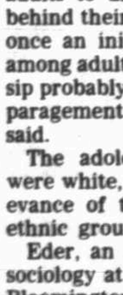

Only four challenges were noted in the 16 conversations.

On the other hand, there was abundant opportunity to join in the disparagement as the conversations proceeded. Even students who barely knew the target or who had previously appeared to have different viewpoints sometimes jumped on the bandwagon, researchers found.

"Gossip is pretty easy to participate in. You don't have to know a story that involves this person, you don't have to have insulting skills," Eder said.

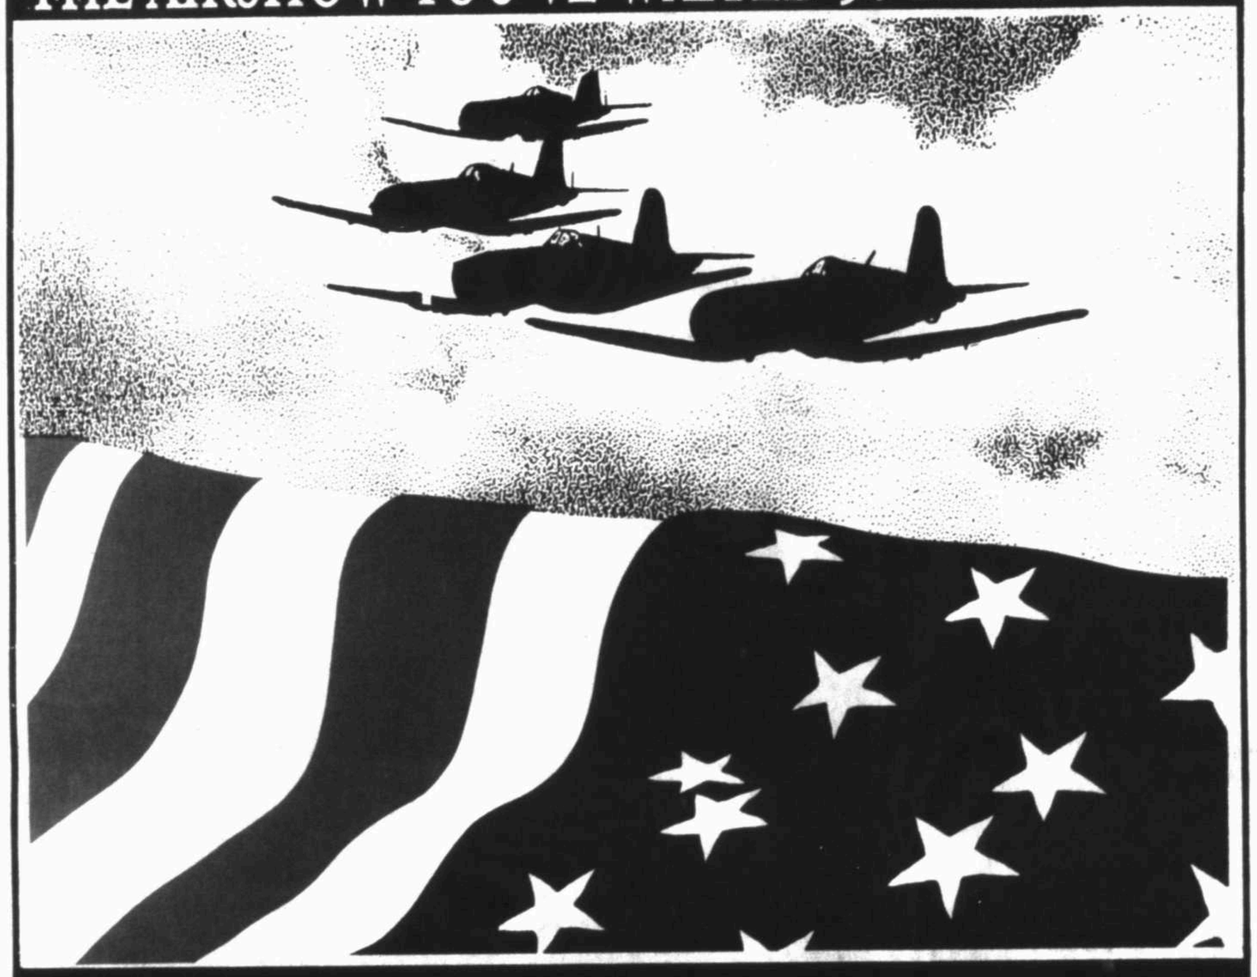

People like to join in these conversations because it makes them feel part of the group, Eder said. And since the structure of gossip gives only a fleeting chance to disagree an initial criticism but lots of opportunity to support it, it encourages more criticism, she said.

That might explain why people who really don't want to put somebody else down do it anyway, and it may also make the disparaging opinion seem more widely shared than it really is, Eder said.

Four congressmen admit overdrafts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The furor created by word that some House members wrote rubber checks or stiffed the House restaurant system is giving Congress a black eye, some Texas congressmen said Thursday.

Of the 27 Texans in Congress, four acknowledged they bounced checks from their House bank accounts. Five others declined comment, citing privacy reasons; and the rest said they didn't believe they had ever overdrawn on their accounts.

The delegation has been inundated with queries since a General Accounting Office report revealed House members got free overdraft protection on 8,331 checks from July 1, 1989, to June 30, 1990, giving them, in effect, interest-free loans.

In the first six months of 1990, 134 unidentified members overdrew their accounts with 581 checks of $1,000 or more. They paid no penalties and no interest on the overdrafts, which were covered by the members-only bank.

That disclosure was followed by news Wednesday that almost 300 current or former House members owed almost $300,000 in meal bills. Most of the delegation members said they paid their restaurant bills monthly and owed only small amounts, if anything.

House members voted 390-8 Thursday night to close the bank.

"It's just another black mark on the reputation of the Congress," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis. "It makes those of us that try to do the right thing, and do do the right thing, furious.

"I don't bounce checks," Barton said Thursday. "I don't abuse children (or) kick dogs. I try to be, and I think I am, the kind of individual that people can be proud of."

Barton, along with several other congressmen, said he supports disclosure of names of those who overdrew their accounts.

"I'm one of the suckers that kept money in the bank that they used to cover bad checks," he said.

"Members who have the responsibility for the largest budget in the world . . . should certainly take care of their own personal financial situation without writing hot checks," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston.

Archer, who said he has never bounced a check in the House, added lawmakers must "set the very highest standard in the way we conduct ourselves."

"It's a black eye for the institution," said Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth. "I think these two incidents taken in conjunction with a lot of the other bad publicity that Congress has gotten over the last several months contribute to a very low esteem that I believe Congress is held in."

But Geren said disclosure should be left up to each member.

"A lot of people have bounced checks at some point in their lives. I know I certainly have, just never at the House bank, so I don't want to sound too sanctimonious about it."

But Geren said a different standard should be applied to those who deliberately took advantage of the penalty-free privilege.

"I think it's unfortunate that people who have just made inadvertent errors . . . have gotten thrown in with some members who have arrogantly abused both the bank and the restaurants," he said.

Unlike most other congressional staffs, Geren's found they were owed $10.50 after being double-billed by the House restaurant system.

"The institution is always harmed when something like this happens," said Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock.

The four who acknowledged to overdrafts — Reps. Albert Bustamante, Greg Laughlin, Charles Stenholm and Lamar Smith — said they resulted from arithmetic errors.

Bustamante, D-San Antonio, revealed he bounced two checks for undisclosed amounts. "They have more than one checking account and just drew too much on one and needed to draw on another," said Bustamante press secretary Ben Harriso, adding the overdrafts were covered within two hours.

"At this point, I've not had any calls or letters critical. Certainly in my instance, it's an absolute human error and the minute I found out about it, I corrected it," said Laughlin, D-West Columbia. "It was embarrassing."

Laughlin's office said he wrote seven checks last February for which there were insufficient funds.

Smith, R-San Antonio, bounced one check for $60 in November 1989, said press secretary Juli Branson.

Denton band wins right to play halftime hymns

DENTON (AP) — The Denton High School band can continue playing its halftime hymns through the end of the year, but the band director must stop leading students in prayer, a judge ordered Thursday.

State district Judge John White signed an order ending the 3-week-old lawsuit that was filed by the American Civil Liberties Union and the American Jewish Congress.

The lawsuit accused Denton High School band director Don Hanna of violating the constitutional separation of church and state. It said Hanna did so by promoting Christianity with a football halftime show of religious music and a marching formation in the shape of a cross. The lawsuit also contended Hanna routinely led students in prayer.

Hanna's attorney D. Keith Osburn said the lawsuit allows the band to continue its current program, which includes such songs as "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" and "Precious Lord, Take The Light." The band also can play the songs at a band competition.

The settlement agreement prohibits school officials from leading the students in prayer or conducting bible studies, and prohibits the band from marching in the formation of a religious symbol.

"But in the future, and this is for any school ... there cannot be any programs that have a primarily religious theme," Osburn said.

Hanna had already removed the cross marching formation.

The lawsuit was filed Sept. 13 on behalf of a student and her parent against Hanna, the high school principal, superintendent and school board members.

"We're very happy that the students in the Denton schools will be able to play in the band, go to school and participate in school and extracurricular activities without being subject to religious teaching," said Joel Roffman, president of the Southwest Region of the American Jewish Congress. "We don't believe it's a proper forum for religion to be taught."

The injunction also states that:

—School and district officials and teachers cannot direct, rehearse or compose a program for school use consisting of primarily religious music.

—Officials and teacher cannot direct, rehearse or compose a program for school use intended to promote religion.

—And school district officials and teachers cannot teach, lecture or promote religion through music or words.

Bee ban covers 17 counties

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Africanized honey bees have been trapped near Del Rio, prompting agriculture officials to make Val Verde County the 17th South Texas county on a quarantine list.

The restriction allows commercial beekeepers to move bee hives within the area, but not out of the zone, said Dr. Horace Van Cleave, who oversees the Texas Apiary Inspection Service.

The detection of Africanized honey bees in new areas this week indicates that fall swarming may be increasing, Van Cleave said. Honey bees normally swarm, or look for new nests, in the spring and fall.

The quarantines were imposed on eight counties in October 1990 when swarms began arriving in South Texas following a decades-long voyage from South America.

Duval, Jim Wells, Kleberg and Nueces counties were added Tuesday to a dozen others already under quarantine by the apiary inspection service, the regulatory agency for state bee laws.

The so-called "killer" bees gained their reputations because they are very aggressive and attack in swarms, often chasing prey for long distances.

About 600 deaths have been attributed to the bees, mostly in South America. No Africanized bee-related deaths have been recorded in the United States, although there have been several stinging incidents.

So far, the bees have moved steadily across South Texas in natural migrations. The quarantine is intended to keep beekeepers from helping them in their northward trek.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 p.m., October 15, 1991, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for re-roofing certain buildings at the Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The principal items of work of Midland International Airport are set forth in specific detail in the Proposal section of this Project Manual; however, the work items may be generally described as re-roofing to the FAA Flight Service Station and National Weather Service (NWS) buildings.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, acceptable to the City of Midland. Proposals submitted without bid guaranty in the form of cash, certified check or bid bond for 5% of the maximum bid will not be considered.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

All bidders assure they will make sufficient reasonable efforts to meet the Minority Business Enterprise goals as established for this prime contract. The MBE goal for minorities is five percent and the goal for women is two percent of the dollar value of this contract.

After opening of bids, the apparent successful bidder will be required to submit the names and addresses of MBE firms that will participate in the contract along with a description of the work and dollar amount for each firm. If the responses do not clearly show MBE participation will meet the goals above, the apparent successful bidder must clearly demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the airport sponsor, that a good faith effort has in fact been made and that meeting said goals is not reasonable possible. If any apparent low bidder cannot do so, the contract may, at the option of the airport sponsor, be awarded to the next low bidder able to meet these requirements.

CONTRACTS OVER $10,000

The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the Equal Opportunity Clause, and the Bidder must supply all the information required by the bid or proposal form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegrated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify Prospective subcontractors of the requirement for such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and Notice to Subcontractors appear in the Project Manual.

In all areas of employment, woman and men will be afforded equal opportunity of employment. The employment of woman shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

CONTRACTS OVER $50,000

A contractor having 50 or more employees, and his subcontractors having 50 or more employees, and who may be awarded a subcontract of $50,000 or more, will be required to maintain an affirmative action program within 120 days of the commencement of the Contract.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the Specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

This project is subject to Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action, Minority Business Enterprise Contract Provisions, and other requirements stated in the Instructions to Bidders and other sections of the Specifications and contract documents.

Attention is called to the fact that there must be paid on the project not less than the general prevailing rates of wages as set forth in the SPECIAL PROVISIONS. The contractor must abide by the Wage and Hour Laws of the State of Texas and must pay not less than the rates legally prescribed or as set forth in the SPECIAL PROVISIONS, whichever is higher.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and drawings are on file in the office of the Director of Airport, Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703.

Copies of the plans and specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, upon a deposit of Twenty Dollars ($20.00) as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the Bidder upon return of the documents to the Engineer in good condition within ten (10) days after the date for receiving bids.

Notice of Intent by Glasscock Commissioners Court to Reapportion County Commissioners Precincts

The Federal Voting Rights Act requires County Commissioner Courts to meet certain requirements and in order to be in compliance with the Federal statue, Glasscock County Commissioners Court has determined that new commissioner precinct lines need to be established.

The County plans to provide opportunity for all persons in the community to participate in the process by which the final boundary lines will be drawn. Comments, suggestions, and proposed plans are welcome. A public hearing on reapportioning commissioner precincts will be held on October 8th at 10:00 a.m.

Maps showing the boundaries preliminarily proposed by the County are available for no charge. These maps may be obtained from or examined at the Judge's office at Courthouse.

Any persons or group that wishes to submit a proposed redistricting plan for the commissioners court's consideration should submit the plan to the county clerk on or before October 7th, so that the plan may be inspected prior to the public hearing to be held on October 8th. The following criteria will be used by the commissioners court in assessing plans for adoption.

1. Any plan should not operate to dilute the voting strength of racial or language minority citizens.

2. Any plan should not fragment minority communities or pack them into districts in concentrations greater than needed to elect minority representation.

3. Any plan should be drawn to conform with geographic boundaries utilized by the Bureau of the Census in the 1990 census to the extent possible unless other reliable sources are used.

4. Any plan should be based on 1990 census data unless it can be shown that other more reliable sources were used.

5. Any districts should be composed of territory that is contiguous and reasonably compact.

6. Any plan, to the extent possible, should preserve historical boundaries, and should recognize clearly identifiable economic or community interests.

These criteria should be followed in any redistricting plans submitted for the County's consideration.

If anyone or groups would like to submit a plan or make comments or suggestions, the County is very much interested in receiving them for consideration during the redistricting process. Please feel free to call W.E. Bednar at 354-2382 if you have questions about the redistricting process.

GROW-LIGHT BOOKCASE

More and more plant lovers are growing their plants under artificial light. This combination bookcase-planter is built in two sections: bookcase on the bottom, planter on top. You can build just the top part as a wall unit or unite the two together as a floor model. Using Douglas Fir and plywood, follow a step-by-step pattern with construction photos, a complete materials list and cutting schedule.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES

Now you can make your own house signs with our easy-to-follow plans. Made from pine or fir, the numbers measure 3" wide by 4" high so they're easy to read from a distance, and the charming country-style duck adds just the right "homey" touch! For those with longer street numbers, the sign frame can be extended. All you need is a power jig saw or a hand-held coping saw and our traceable patterns with step-by-step directions and photos.
