Oil import fee essential, Bentsen tells club

From Staff and Wire Reports

An oil import fee is essential in order for the United States to prevent dependency on foreign oil as it was in the early 1970s, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said.

"We must not get hooked on foreign oil again," Bentsen warned about 800 people attending a Houston Forum Club luncheon Monday. "There's no easy, fool proof solution, but I know a successful step we can take. I think we should have a survival price for oil in our country, one that approaches $22 a barrel.

"I think we should use the difference between the world price and $22," Bentsen said to a round of applause.

Bentsen, D-Texas, explained that if the world price of oil was at $15 a barrel, then the import fee would be $7.

"A viable import fee is essential," he stressed. "It would help Texas but also help Americans from importing so much oil."

The senator said the United States used 29 percent foreign oil last year while in 1973 and 1974, the country depended on 47 percent. In five years the country will be over 50 percent dependent on foreign oil, he predicted.

Bentsen, senior member of the finance committee and chairman of the Democratic working group on trade, said a stern trade policy is what is needed to ride out the storm.

"America desperately needs a bipartisan trade policy," he said. "This policy needs to start trading goods, not jobs."

The senator told the Houston crowd to hang on because the current oil recession won't last forever. He also said Houston's diversity with the medical center, universities, and the space center still gives the city a safety net.

"From the Alamo to the dust bowl to the energy crisis we'll emerge a lot tougher than when we went into it," he said.

Bentsen was not alone in his call for an import fee. Across town the Houston-based International Association of Drilling Contractors adoped a resolution calling for an import fee and saying the collapse of the U.S. oil and gas drilling industry was "imminent."

"The collapse of oil prices in combination with punitive actions of the Congress and the federal government, in the form of windfall profit taxes, natural gas price controls, and the like, threatens to destroy the U.S. independent oil and gas industry," according to resolution adopted by the International Association of Drilling Contractors and released Monday.

The resolution came on the heels of the weekly national rig count, which indicated the number of working rigs had fallens to 663, a new record low, down nine from the previous week. It was the lowest rig count in the 46 years since Hughes Tool Co. has been compiling the national rig count. The previous all time low was in 1943 when the count sank to 805 working rigs.

Texas candidates practice punches for LWV debate

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Like boxers trading jabs at the weigh-in, Texas' gubernatorial candidates practiced their verbal punches Monday as they accepted a League of Women Voters invitation to debate this fall.

Republican nominee Bill Clements took advantage of his opponent's on-again, off-again decision to debate during the Democratic primary.

"Mark White can run, but he cannot hide," Clements said.

"He must answer for the 10.5-percent unemployment. He must answer for the declining economic conditions that have 846,000 Texans unemployed. He must answer for his litany of broken promises."

White, the Democratic incumbent, took after Clements' increasingly elusive plan to solve the state's $2.3 billion budget shortfall.

"Perhaps Bill Clements, if he accepts this challenge, will take this opportunity to finally divulge the details of his secret budget plan," White said.

Modelle Brudner, debate coordinator for the league, said she hoped to arrange a wide-open format for the session, which would be televised statewide.

"We would be delighted" with a true debate rather than a question-and-answer session with reporters, she said.

"But it's difficult to get the candidates to agree to that type of debate."

Brudner said the league is negotiating with KHOU-TV in Houston for a debate sometime in October.

"I prefer it to be fairly close to the election," she said.

KHOU broadcasted a debate between Clements and his two GOP rivals during the Republican primary this spring.

Brudner said the league was not disappointed that its attempts to arrange a similar debate between White and his Democratic opponents failed.

The "horned toad," actually the Texas Horned Lizard, is a common sight in semi-arid West Texas, although it can be found throughout the state. The reptile — along with alligators and crocodiles — is considered a distant relative of extinct dinosaurs.

Former Midlander given prison term in rape of teen-ager

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County District Judge Joe Connally sentenced a former Midland man Monday to 25 years in prison for the June 1985 kidnapping and rape of a 13-year-old girl.

Connally denied a motion for a new trial for William Mitchell Dyer, 34, submitted by his attorneys, Tom Hirsch and Anthony Foster.

The motion contended a new trial was warranted because of new evidence that surfaced June 18 while a 244th District Court jury deliberated Dyer's guilt or innocence.

At that time, Hirsch said, he was informed by someone who knew the family that the girl had been the subject of a sexual assault prior to June 13, 1983 — the date Dyer allegedly kidnapped her from near Water Wonderland and sexually assaulting her repeatedly during about a two-hour period.

Hirsch, claiming a file on the earlier incident was in the Ector County District Attorney's office, said the girl allegedly had been the victim of a sexual assault by her mother's boyfriend.

Knowledge of this during the trial could have raised questions about the credibility of testimony by the girl, who said she was a virgin at the time she was allegedly raped by Dyer, defense attorneys said.

District Attorney Eric Augesen was called to the witness stand Tuesday by Hirsch to testify about the earlier incident.

Augesen said his office had received the file in early June 1985, but he had decided against submitting the case to the grand jury "because of insufficient evidence."

Hirsch contended the district attorney's office should have revealed existence of the file during the discovery process of the trial.

However, Augesen said, since the case was filed by Odessa police juvenile officers under the name of the boyfriend of the girl's mother there was no way his office could connect the two cases because it is impossible to cross reference cases by victim's names.

Dyer was indicted by an Ector County grand jury on four counts of aggravated sexual assault and one count of kidnapping.

He also faces one count of aggravated sexual assault in Andrews County.

Augesen indicated Tuesday he would dismiss the remaining charges against Dyer since prosecution would only cost taxpayers money and not result in Dyer serving any more time in prison.

Limits on water use spreading

Associated Press

Residents of three North Carolina communities face jail for five-minute showers and limits on water use are spreading as the Southeast battles a farm-threatening drought and eight days of 100-degree temperatures blamed for 10 deaths.

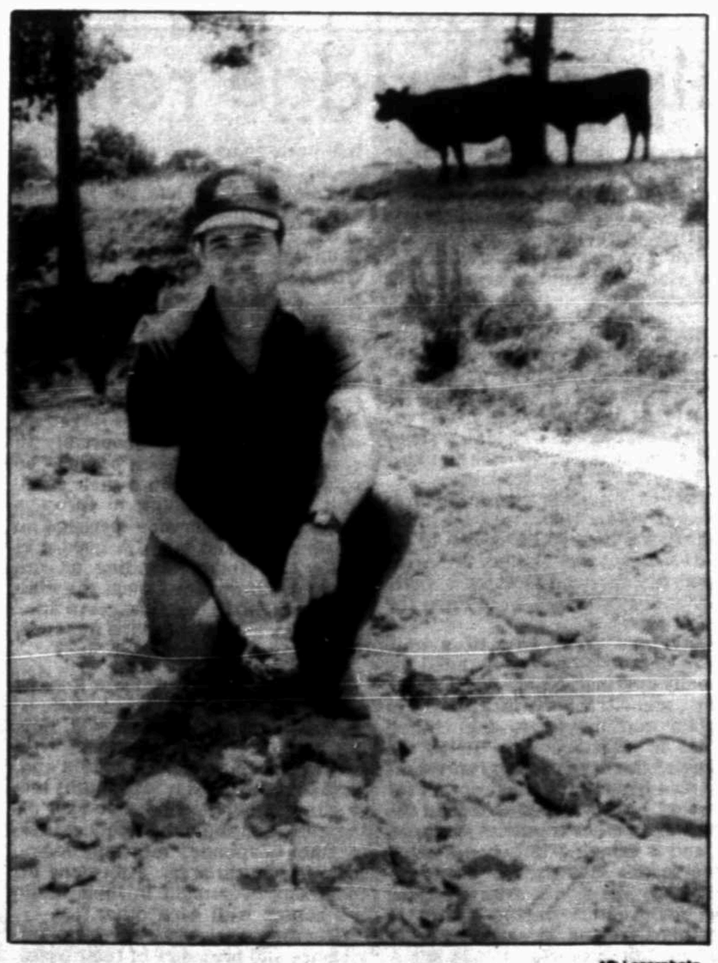

Despite scattered thunderstorms Monday night in Tennessee and South Carolina, forecasters held out no hope of relief today from what in some areas is the worst drought in a century and from record high temperatures.

"It's not widespread enough, it's just too spotty to make a difference," said Mike Looney, of the National Weather Service in Memphis, Tenn.

The National Weather Service predicted 100-degree temperatures today in parts of South Carolina, where it was 101 degrees in Columbia on Monday for a record eighth straight day of triple-digit readings.

By 10 a.m., temperatures were already well into the 80s in parts of North Carolina, while Norfolk, Va., had hit 80 degrees at 9 a.m. To the west, North Little Rock, Ark., warmed to 81 at 8 a.m.

Character of witnesses criticized as kidnap-slavery case debated

KERRVILLE (AP) — A defense attorney argued that the case against three men accused of conspiring to enslave and kill a drifter on a Texas Hill Country ranch hangs on the testimony of "baby-rapers, con artists, burglars and thieves."

A state district court jury resumed deliberations today in the trial of rancher Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 54; his son, Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33; and ex-ranch worker Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21.

The three are charged under Texas' organized crime statute with conspiracy to commit aggravated kidnapping and murder in the March 1984 death of Anthony Bates.

The state claims Bates, a one-eyed drifter from Huntsville, Ala., was lured to the Ellebrachts sprawling Hill Country ranch with the promise of work then, like other hitchhikers, was forced into slavery.

Prosecutors also alleged Bates was tortured with a cattle prod, beaten, denied food and suffered from exposure until he died. Witnesses said his body was doused in gasoline and burned.

The credibility of the state's key witnesses was attacked Monday by defense attorney Ray Bass, who represents the younger Ellebracht. Bass was one of six attorneys who gave final arguments after nine weeks of testimony.

Bass mentioned Robert McCafferty and Travis Boyd, two drifters who said they were enslaved on a chain gang for a day at the ranch in March 1984. He also mentioned Paul Harvey Hicks, another former ranch worker who awaits seperate trial.

"Baby-rapers, burglars, con artists and thieves," Bass said to the jury. "Those are the people on whose testimony the prosecution wants you to find these people guilty of organized crime."

Bass claimed the case "is an abuse of the Texas organized crime law. This is not an organized crime case."

"The hope is you will be so stampeded by the pre-trial publicity and by what you heard on these tapes that you'll go in the jury room and return a verdict regardless of law," Bass said.

Pointing to tape recordings of torture sessions involving Bates, Bass said, "There may be some things on here that offend you to the depths of your soul. But it's not organized crime."

Witnesses testified during the trial they heard voices belonging to Caldwell and the younger Ellebracht on the tape.

Trial continues in Delta crash suit

FORT WORTH (AP) — A defense attorney in the first lawsuit stemming from the 1985 crash of Delta Flight 191 attacked the condition of one victim's businesses, saying either state authorities or the oil industry slump would have shut them down.

But Delta attorney Frank Finn told jurors Delta Air Lines considered a $300,000 settlement "fair under the facts" in a claim against the airline by Kathy Ann Reynolds, the wife of Paul Reynolds. Reynolds was one of 137 people killed in the Aug. 2 crash.

Mrs. Reynolds' suit is the first of 50 similar suits related to the crash to go to trial. Testimony in the case before U.S. District Judge David O. Belew was scheduled to resume today.

But on Monday, the crash was scarcely mentioned and attorneys zeroed in on the Reynolds family while Mrs. Reynolds, 29, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., wept.

Finn said that at the time of his death, Reynolds was involved in "boiler room" oil lease ventures "close to illegal if not illegal under Florida law."

Finn claimed Reynolds and his wife also were frequent users of drugs and alcohol. A year before his death, Reynolds beat his wife in a "drunken rage" while Kathy Reynolds held their young daughter.

Within 10 weeks after the crash, Kathy Reynolds was involved with another man, Finn said the evidence would show.

"They ask for recompense for lost companionship," Finn said. "When counsel said she was alone and grieving, the facts are simply not there."

Mrs. Reynolds' attorney, Bill Hoppe of Miami, described his client as totally dependent on her late husband and devastated by his death.

Some South African unrest persists

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Scattered labor unrest and school boycotts persisted today after the first mass black protests under a month-old state of emergency, but most students and workers reportedly were back at their classes and jobs.

The Labor Monitoring Group, an independent fact-finding body, said significant labor unrest was reported today only in the Port Elizabeth area. General Motors spokesman Mike Kileen said GM's plant in the Cape Province city was closed for the second day.

Kileen said about 2,000 blacks reported for work, but later asked to go home, apparently because they were worried about conditions in their townships, where student strikes were continuing.

Other employers in Port Elizabeth, where an estimated 70 percent of workers did not go to work Monday, said workers were trickling back to work as bus service resumed.

Peter Mundell of the Department of Education and Training, the government agency for black education, said attendance among the country's 1.7 million black students appeared "almost identical" to the estimated 80 percent who attended school when classes resumed Monday.

"The overwhelming majority of pupils, particularly at the primary level, are back in the classrooms," Mundell said.

Also today, the government Bureau for Information reported six more blacks died in fighting with other blacks in the 24 hour-period that ended at 6 a.m.

Among the victims — most of them set on fire with burning tires around their necks — was a 66-year-old woman in the KwaNdebele tribal homeland, the bureau said.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions, the largest mainly black union federation, declared Monday a day of protest against the detention of union leaders, among an estimated 3,500 people being held under emergency regulations. Unions have emerged as a major force in the black-majority struggle against apartheid, the system by which 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks.

The Labor Monitoring Group said it could not give comprehensive figures on Monday's labor action, but that about 11 percent of black workers stayed home in the Johannesburg-Pretoria industrial region.

"The state of emergency — the legal situation, the curbs on the media, the detention of over 200 trade union leaders and the fact that hundreds more are in hiding — have combined to severely disrupt unions' ability to communicate with their members," the group said.

Young activists organized student strikes the same day, when black schools opened after a long holiday, to protest new security rules at schools. The rules require students to carry identification cards and allow school authorities to turn away suspected militants, without appeal.

Anglo American Corp. announced four black workers at Western Holdings gold mine, south of Johannesburg, were killed in three fights at a miners' hostel since Thursday. Spokesman John Jones said it was not clear whether the outbreaks were related to political unrest.

More than 2,000 people have been killed in 22 months of unrest, nearly all of them blacks. Many have died in clashes with security forces and others in fighting among black groups.

In Durban, a supreme court hearing continued on a challenge by the Metal and Allied Workers' Union to the state of emergency regulations imposed June 12. The union contends the government failed to inform Parliament of the emergency decree, as required by law, and that parts of the regulations are vague.

Justice John Didcott said during Monday's session that the regulations appeared to be a "jumble of words.... I cannot make head or tail of the regulations."

Loan questions may stall naming of ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — A black North Carolina businessman said to be under consideration by the Reagan administration as next U.S. ambassador to South Africa may have to deal with questions about a 14-year-old government loan before getting the post.

Robert Brown, 51, a management and public relations consultant from High Point, N.C., would be the first black U.S. envoy to the white-ruled country. A black, John Burroughs, is the consul general in Capetown.

But as word of his consideration for the job emerged Monday, reports surfaced that Brown had received a government loan earmarked for disadvantaged minorities in 1972, when he held a well-paying White House job.

Late Monday, the office of Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., reported that when Brown was a White House aide in the Nixon administration, he and a partner received an $860,000 Small Business Administration contract that was intended for disadvantaged minority firms.

An aide to Chiles said the incident was discussed during 1977 hearings on SBA standards for the awarding of minority contracts.

Brown was not accused of any wrongdoing, said the Chiles aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity, but questions were raised about whether he had used his White House position to get preferential treatment. Congress later tightened the eligibility standards for the minority contracts.

Spanish officials mourn nine bomb victims

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Government and police officials today mourned nine civil guards killed in a terrorist bomb blast that was widely blamed on Basque separatists, and newspapers criticized the state for its failure to halt political violence.

A conservative opposition leader called for resignations in acting Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez' government, and one Madrid daily suggested Gonzalez consider replacing Interior Minister Jose Barrionuevo in the new Socialist Cabinet he is expected to form before the end of July.

Barrionuevo, the Cabinet official responsible for security affairs, paid his respects to the families of the victims during today's memorial service held at Civil Guard headquarters.

The guards, killed Monday when a van packed with explosives blew up in Madrid as a busload of paramilitary police passed by, were to be buried in their home towns.

Fifty-six people were injured in the attack, including 11 civilians. Twenty-eight civil guards remained hospitalized today, four of them in serious condition.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack, but the governing Socialist Party, the news media and the political arm of the Basque separatist group ETA blamed ETA terrorists for the attack.

ETA's political arm, the radical Herri Batasuna, issued a communique saying, "Negotiation is the only way to solve the problem of the Basque country."

It was the first time Herri Batasuna has condemned an attack linked to ETA separatists. The bombing was the deadliest since 1968, when the ETA began its drive for independence of the northern three-province Basque country of Spain.

At the funeral Mass, the vicar general of the armed forces, the Rev. Jose Manuel Estepa, said, "There is no possible social or political cause that can justify so much blood, so much death and violence."

In neighboring Portugal, there were five blasts Monday, including one that killed the son of an army colonel and another young man in the officer's Lisbon apartment. Police said they believed the two young men may have been handling the explosives.

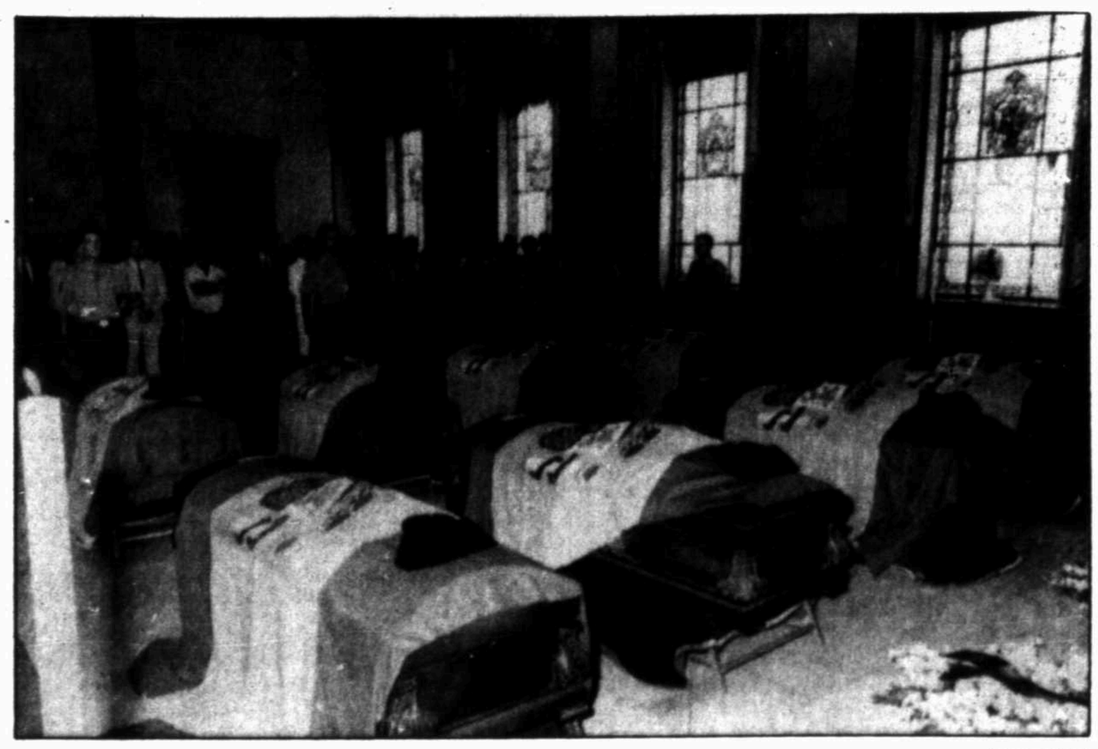

A group calling itself the Armed Revolutionary Organization claimed responsibility for the four other bombings in the southern cities of Evora and Setubal that caused damage, but no casualties.

The blasts brought to nine the number of bombings in Portugal this year, and were believed unrelated to the attack in the Spanish capital.

Madrid's Socialist Mayor Juan Barranco called for three minutes of silence at noon today "in memory of the slain guardsmen and their families and for peace and for reconciliation."

In an editorial, the independent Madrid daily Diario 16 said the attack "indicated serious technical failures on the part of the state security forces" and called on the government to consider Barrionuevo's replacement.

Conservative opposition leader Manuel Fraga called the attack "a political failure which demands resignations and other responsibilities" from the government.

Nine caskets containing the remains of civil guards are viewed by the families prior to today's funeral in Madrid. The guards were killed Monday in a bombing blamed on Basque separatists.

The conservative daily ABC also criticized the government, and said those politically responsible for security affairs should bear the consequences.

Gonzalez' Socialists won a second absolute majority in the lower house of Parliament in general elections held June 22.

The bomb exploded in the fashionable Dominican Republic Square, about three miles from the center of the capital, shattering windows, damaging street-level shops.

The guardsmen's deaths raised to 29 the number of victims of political violence in Spain this year.

Reagan's original strategy of deferring a decision on oil and gas fees in anticipation of a recovery has proven to be unrealistic as prices and drilling activity continue to fall, said Ned E. Simes, president of the drilling contractors organizaton.

Simes said Congress is unlikely to act on the issue because of election-year politics, but President Reagan has executive authority to impose import fees on strategic commodities, including gas and oil.

"President Reag n used this authority recently to limit the import of cedar wood shingles from Canada," he said. "Certainly, the survival of America's energy industry is at least as strategic as that of the wood shingle industry." The association represents more than 1,300 companies involved in worldwide drilling and oilfield support services.

"High pressure extending well up into the atmosphere will be building over the southern and central states today and Wednesday," said weather serrvice forecaster Marilyn Scholz in Louisville, Ky., predicting hotter, more humid weather this week.

Officials in De Kalb County near Atlanta planned to open a shelter today for senior citizens to cool off. Augusta, Ga., hit 104 degrees Monday, tying a 98-year-old record.

"After you're on the street an hour or so you're soaked all the way through and you stay wet all day," said mailman Ken McDowell in Charleston, S.C., where the temperature hit 101 on Monday, when humidity made it feel like 111. It was a record seventh straight day of 100-plus temperatures.

"That's about the most miserable thing," McDowell said, "that you're soaked all the time."

The weekend deaths of three elderly people of heat stroke raised the number of heat-related fatalities in Georgia to four. Two heat-related deaths have been reported in North Carolina and one each in South Carolina, Virginia and Louisiana.

Georgia poultry producers and processors said the heat had killed more than 400,000 chickens within three days last week.

In addition to the heat, rainfall this year is 15 to 20 inches below normal in the Carolinas, Georgia and Tennessee. Parts of Kentucky, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware also are below normal.

"Unless abnormally high precipitation occurs within the next few months, streamflows and ground-water levels in much of the (Southeast) could be at their most critical levels in recent times," said Harold Golden, a U.S. Geoigical Survey hydrologist in Atlanta.

Georgia's Department of Natural Resources asked 73 communities, mostly in the northern part of the state, to implement water conservation measures such as voluntary restrictions on outdoor water use. Commissioner Leonard Ledbetter said the state may declare a state of emergency in some smaller communities, requiring them to ration water.

Faced with declining reservoirs, at least seven Tennessee utility districts have asked customers to limit water consumption.

Residents of Chapel Hill, Carrboro and southern Orange County, N.C., faced $50 fines or 30 days in jail if they showered longer than four minutes. They also are not allowed to fill swimming pools or wash cars, must limit lawn watering, and restaurants may only serve water upon request.

The South Carolina Water Resources Commission declared a severe drought alert for 13 counties, allowing regional committees to restrict non-essential water use.

"In drier areas, it's probably the worst in 100 years, at least for this time of the year," said John Purvis, South Carolina state climatologist.

The Atlanta area is the driest it has been since record-keeping began in 1888, said the weather service's Gary Beeley.

Clayton County, south of Atlanta, imposed a ban on outdoor watering Monday and asked restaurants not to serve water unless customers request it.

"We're basically at the point that people can either have green yards or water in the house," said Melvin Newman, water system manager there.

The Georgia Farm Bureau is surveying drought-related crop damage to see if any farmers qualify for disaster aid, said president Bob Nash. "The drought will accelerate the failure of farmers in Georgia and throughout the Southeast.

"Every commodity out there is going to be below average."

Minister helping bridge religious rift

By TONI GIOVANETTI
Los Angeles Time-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Growing up a Protestant in Northern Ireland, Jimmy Arbuthnot was an exception to the rule — he was encouraged to befriend Catholics. Now an Anglican minister, he is a perfect addition to a program that brings children of both religions together in the United States.

"Father worked with a Catholic man; they shared the same bench in a mill that was situated in the Catholic area at the end of the first World War," Arbuthnot said. "His friend protected him in getting him home at night through the Catholic area — the friendship spilled over into the rest of life. We visited his family and they visited us. It also spilled over into the second generation, and there's nothing we wouldn't do for each other."

In a land where Protestants and Catholics attend separate schools, sit on separate sides of soccer stadiums and walk on different sides of the street, it was an unusual turn of events. Arbuthnot has since become good friends with a Catholic priest he works with in the program.

Arbuthnot, 67, and the Rev. Matt Wallace, 43, had served in Belfast parishes less than two miles apart for several years, but had never met until they were recruited for the Children's Committee 10, a program to bring the children together for a summer in America.

"Were it not for the program, we would never have met," Wallace said in a recent visit to Dallas. "Because the tendency there is to stay in your own area and to look after your own streets and avenues. We were strangers five years ago."

"And I've been shackled with him ever since," Arbuthnot says in mock seriousness.

Arbuthnot and Wallace are touring several U.S. cities to thank the parents of host families participating in the program and to promote an effort that they hope will change the future of Northern Ireland. They will leave at the same time the children do, Aug. 11 or 12.

The 5-year-old program has brought more than 1,000 Catholic and Protestant children 12 to 19 years old to the United States as guests of American families — Catholic and Protestant — across the country.

Children's Committee 10, a nonprofit organization, was founded nationally by Vincent Lavery, a Fresno, Calif., schoolteacher who grew up in Dublin and moved to the United States 30 years ago. The "10" in the name of the organization represents the plan to continue the program for 10 years. Lavery hopes to expand the program to other countries eventually, and is bringing 16 Lebanese children to this country this year.

Lavery was struck with the idea for the program during a visit to Northern Ireland in early 1981. He said he felt compelled to do something to end the violence in the war-torn country, no matter how limited the effort. Arbuthnot describes it this way:

"Vincent at that time felt that it had been going on for endless years — this division between Protestants and Catholics. He had the vision of doing something for the next generation. He said let's work on the young people. Adults were so entrenched in their position he felt that very little could be done with them. Influence the children. That was his dream.

"It causes some Catholics and Protestants to sit down together at the same common table for a meal, to get them to play games together, which they don't do. Invariably to get them to accept each other — so when they go back into their situation and one is going to throw a stone on the other side, perhaps he will hesitate and say, 'Oh good gracious, that fellow standing on the other side is the one I spent the summer with in Dallas five years ago,' and then he will hesitate to throw the stone. It's a catalyst."

"The program has brought together not only the children, but their parents, as well," Wallace said, noting that the parents gather with their children for an orientation and for a Christmas party six months later. "Invariably we find that a lot of the kids tend to hold contact, either by the telephone, meeting downtown in neutral areas; even some of them stay over night in their family's houses with each other."

Spending six weeks away from the violence and prejudice of their country helps mature their world view and make them less likely to get involved in violent organizations, Wallace said.

"The children tend to mature, to assert themselves, it raises their self-esteem, because they suffer from such low ones," Wallace said. "They become more sure of themselves and realize that religious differences shouldn't keep people apart. They feel they should learn to love, rather than to hate each other."

Textbook panel warned of 'conservative bias'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas State Textbook Committee was warned to be wary of critics who want to inject "ultrafundamentalist conservative bias" into educational processes.

"Turn a deaf ear to sectarian and religious arguments and make your decisions solely on educational criteria," a spokesman for People for the American Way said Monday during the beginning phase of selecting $114 million in textbooks for Texas public schools.

The final decision on what books will be studied during the next six years will be made Nov. 8 by the State Board of Education.

"The new textbooks, adopted for use in Texas schools for the next six years, will be marketed nationwide," Michael Hudson, a spokesman for People of the American Way, told the committee Monday.

"Textbook publishers have confirmed that they have adapted the content of their nationally distributed textbooks to conform to the Texas content requirements," said Hudson, executive director of the self-styled constitutional liberties group.

Hudson said if textbook critics, including religious fundamentalists, "are allowed to influence textbook content in Texas by censoring out ideas they don't agree with, they can affect the quality of public education in every state in the union."

There was no direct reply to Hudson's remarks.

Publishers of books criticized before the committee have 21 days to file rebuttal remarks. Changes in textbooks can be made by publishers on recommendation of the committee.

Mel Gabler of Longview, a longtime critic of many proposed textbooks, complained that beginning readers did not stress "intensive phonetics."

"Nowhere in the beginning books are letters taught as representing sounds," said Gabler. "Now is the time to effect changes. Let's teach Texas children to read instead of memorizing or guessing for the rest of their lives."

Jane Boyd of Grapevine, representing the National Organization for Women, said most of the basic readers offered were sexist in content.

"Here's a story about a frog and a toad, and both of them are male," she said. "One of them should be female."

Eleanor Hutcheson of Fort Worth, representing the Texas Society for Daughters of the Republic, said one health education book did not stress the "negative effect" of drinking, drugs and smoking.

Elizabeth Judge, of Houston, representing Broader Perspectives Inc., said two health education books avoided information about the anatomy of reproduction "to such an extreme that their sections on venereal diseases are ludicrous. For example, one refers to the 'site of entry' instead of using anatomical terms."

White hasn't set date for special session

Gov. White offered no new suggestions during Monday's interview on how spending might be cut but did say he hopes to avoid a tax hike.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Gov. Mark White isn't yet ready to set the date for convening a special session of the Legislature to try to balance the state budget.

"No. Not yet," he said in a brief interview Monday after speaking to the opening session of the Southern Legislative Conference.

White said last month he is prepared to call a special session if needed to solve the state's budget crisis.

Comptroller Bob Bullock said on May 30 that the deficit, fueled by the enormous drop in oil prices, has reached $2.3 billion and will go significantly higher by Aug. 31, 1987, unless action is taken.

The House Appropriations Committee began work last week to try to find areas where spending could be cut to reduce the deficit and eliminate a cash-flow problem that could force the treasurer to write hot checks by later this year.

White offered no new suggestions during Monday's interview on how spending might be cut but did say he hopes to avoid a tax hike.

"I want to hopefully get the Legislature in and out without a tax increase," he said.

Bullock said he is studying the amount of revenue which could be raised by including under the sales tax some products and services which currently are exempt from that levy.

White said Monday he has "no position on that effort," although he did say that those on whom the 4¼ percent state sales tax increase would be imposed for the first time probably would consider it a tax hike.

"I think it's good that they (lawmakers) will have every opportunity to look at all the possibilities," White said when asked about studies of an expanded sales tax. "I'm pleased that he (Bullock) is taking the initiative to get the information available to the Legislature."

White in mid-February issued an executive order asking some 200 state government agencies to voluntarily trim spending by 13 percent.

Asked Monday how that effort was going, White replied tersely that it is "Working very well, thank you."

Lawmakers hear from presidential hopefuls

FORT WORTH (AP) — Legislators from 15 states attending the Southern Legislative Conference meeting this week are hearing from a list of possible presidential candidates as the South bids for greater national political clout.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., spoke to the group Monday, with others scheduled before the legislators return home Thursday.

The appearances come as 12 southern states have scheduled their presidential primaries for the week of March 8.

The regional primary is designed to force presidential candidates to pay closer attention to the South and issues it considers important.

"We anticipated that if nine or 10 states adopted the early date, we would have been very successful," said Texas state Sen. John Traeger, chairman of the Southern Legislative Conference. "Already there is evidence that the South will get more attention from presidential aspirants," Traeger said. "Four of them are here to listen to our discussions. They can't ignore the South now unless they're very naive or foolish."

Besides Gephardt, the southern lawmakers were slated to hear from former secretary of state Alexander Haig, former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. However, Biden might not make his appearance today due to a conflict in Washington, said Mary Jane Gallagher, conference spokeswoman.

Gephardt used his speech Monday to warn that federal tax reform legislation might be in jeopardy from special interests even though both the House and Senate have approved plans.

"Don't believe for a minute that the special-interest lobbyists have been put out to pasture on this issue," Gephardt said.

"Remember, they love that tax code the way it is. If they can kill tax reform, they'll do it. Our hopes and our goals and our objectives could still unravel in the conference committee."

Gephardt, who with Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., introduced his own tax simplification bill in 1982, said both the House and Senate did good jobs on their tax reform plans.

He said legislation to overhaul the tax laws and make them simpler and fairer is a reform that is long overdue. For too many years, he said, Congress has used the tax laws to protect and promote certain individual interests at the expense of the average taxpayer.

"Our tax laws are so complicated and so unfair and so anti-middle class that they're nothing short of a national disgrace," he said. "It's a spoils system for the special interests."

Noting that most Americans come in contact with the federal government only when filing their income tax returns on April 15, Gephardt said their suspicions that others are getting tax breaks has eroded confidence in the government.

DOE may clear shafts to study waste with TWC

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The U.S. Department of Energy may request Texas Water Commission approval before it drills two 2,500-foot shafts to study storing high-level nuclear waste in the Panhandle.

But while two state officials Monday cheered the "first positive thing that has happened to the state of Texas in regard to dealing with the DOE on high-level nuclear sites," a DOE spokeswoman said the applause may be premature.

State Sen. Bill Sarpalius of Canyon and Water Commissioner Ralph Roming based their comments on a letter sent to Sarpalius from William Purcell, associate director for geological repositories with the DOE.

"The Department will comply with all applicable laws and regulations," Purcell wrote.

Sarpalius sponsored a 1983 bill that requires a Texas Water Commission permit for any project that entails drilling through underground water supplies.

The two shafts, designed to study the salt domes beneath the Deaf Smith County site, would pierce the Ogallala and Santa Rosa aquifers.

"The key word (in Purcell's letter) is "applicable,' " said Linda McClain, project manager for DOE studies in Texas.

The department will file a permit application, she said, only if it determines that such action would not violate the federal law that governs the project.

Sarpalius warned that he would file suit if the department does not ask the water commission to approve the drilling plans.

"It's the only water supply that we have," he said. "We would have excellent grounds for a lawsuit that the state has the right to protect its drinking water."

Roming said it could take years for the commission to approve the application, if the DOE files one.

"It will be scrutinized extensively and exhaustively," he said.

"This shaft would be in such diameter and size (12 feet across) that it's never been done before."

Roming said he is concerned that the drilling could contaminate the aquifers by exposing them to the salt domes that lie below.

The salt, he said, could "render the aquifers possible unusable" as a source for drinking water and irrigation from Texas to the Dakotas.

The DOE is considering placing the waste from nuclear power plants in those Panhandle salt domes.

If the department does not properly seal the shafts after the tests, Roming said, placing the nuclear waste there would also pose the possibility of radioactive contamination.

The DOE is also studying sites in Washington and Nevada.

'Granny' willing 'to take the heat'

By LAURA A. LAMBETH

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some grandmothers enjoy special hobbies such as planting gardens or doing other "grandmotherly" things. Not Doris "Granny" Hale. She loves fighting fires.

As captain of the Harmony Volunteer Fire Department in southeast Bexar County, she has been fighting fires and answering other emergencies for the past 13 years.

"I love to fight fires," the 64-year-old said. "It's a hard job, and it's a thankless job; it's hot, dirty, filthy work.

"There's no glory in it, believe me. But it's the excitement of going, and doing what I can do that makes me feel good."

She was nicknamed "Granny" by fellow firefighters because at one time three of her eight grandchildren also were volunteers at the Harmony department.

"They (the grandchildren) called me Granny, so everybody else started calling me Granny, too," she said. "Now, nobody knows me except by Granny, or when I'm in my red (pumper) truck."

Volunteer firefighting is a family affair. Mrs. Hale's daughter, Charlotte Lambrides, is president of the Harmony VFD; her son-in-law, William Lambrides, is an assistant fire chief; and her husband, Ace Hale Sr., has been with the department 25 years and now is its treasurer.

When the Harmony department offered jobs to women 13 years ago, "Granny" Hale, standing 5-foot-3, did not hesitate to join.

"I thought it would be a good way to help out. I had to prove myself to the men," Mrs. Hale said of her early years as a firefighter. "But I've earned my respect now."

Wearing an emergency radio clipped to the waistband of her slacks when she is away from the emergency monitor she keeps at her home, Mrs. Hale keeps track of all fire calls in the county and is ready to jump to action when she hears a call in her community.

The Harmony department serves about 100 square miles, bounded by Sulphur Springs Road on the north, Salado Creek on the west, the San Antonio River on the southwest and the county line on the southeast.

Mrs. Hale's red fire helmet, jacket and rubber and steel boots always are out and ready for her to grab as she heads for her car and a fast trip to the fire station. There, she takes the wheel of the pumper truck and heads for the fire scene.

Mrs. Hale said she seldom leaves her home during weekdays, when many of the men in the department are away at their jobs, so she will be available for fire calls.

"There's been many a fire I've fought with the fire chief and three or four other women," Hale said. "During the day, I'm liable to be at the end of a hose by myself out there."

County Fire Marshal Carl Mixon said more women have joined local volunteer departments in recent years and estimated at least one-third of the county's volunteer firefighters are women.

Jail tightens security after return of escapee

GILMER (AP) — Jerry Walter McFadden, whose escape from Upshur County jail sparked a two-day manhunt, threatened to flee again and waged a brief hunger strike after visitation rights were suspended upon his return, Sheriff Dale Jewkes said.

But this time, an escape won't be as easy, because officials at the jail have been warned to tighten up on security which was lax when McFadden gave them the slip Wednesday night, Jewkes said.

McFadden, a three-time sex offender, overpowered two deputies and slipped out of the Upshur County jail last week, taking a third deputy hostage.

McFadden was able to knock out Deputy Ken Mayfield, 53, with a sharp, L-shaped piece of metal when the officer turned his back on him, Jewkes said.

A door leading to the dispatching area where deputies Rosalie Williams and Stacey Mullinix were working was left open. It allowed McFadden easy access to his hostage, Jewkes said.

McFadden held Mrs. Williams for 16 hours before she escaped from him Friday.

Jewkes said jailers also should have noticed when they checked McFadden's cell that the metal slab had been pried from the cell window.

"The door is supposed to always be closed and locked any time a prisoner is out of his cell," he said.

"If it had been closed, the worst that could have happened was McFadden would have held Mayfield hostage and possibly killed him. But he could never have gotten off the fifth floor. The glass in the door will stop a .357 magnum," he said.

When jailers told McFadden Sunday he could no longer have visitors, he began his hunger strike, which ended later the same day.

McFadden was being held in jail awaiting a pre-trial hearing on aggravated robbery charges in connection with a Lake Hawkins holdup. He is charged in the slaying of Suzanne Harrison, 18, of Hawkins, who was found strangled days after going on a lake outing with two friends.

Jewkes said the escape was not the result of negligence, but attributed it to human error.

"In defense of my people...they deal with prisoners day in and day out. You tend to get lax in your duties anytime you do things on a routine basis. Unfortunately in this line of work, if you get lax, it can get you killed," Jewkes said.

Jewkes said he takes full responsibility for the escape and has taken extra measures, which he would not reveal, to guarantee McFadden doesn't escape again.

Since his recapture, McFadden has "shown some very aggressive behavior," Jewkes said, refusing to give details. Officials also have received several threats against McFadden's life, he said.

Panel says Austin should end payments to nuclear project

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin should stop making payments to the South Texas Nuclear Project, put the money in escrow and take steps to cancel the plant, a city advisory panel has recommended.

The Electric Utility Commission voted 6-1 Monday for a motion from commission member Albert Fairweather, who said Austin's $2.5 million weekly payment on the long-delayed project was "playing havoc with our rate base."

Fairweather said he doubted that bond companies would consider Austin a bad risk "for exhibiting fiscal responsibility" in withdrawing from the project, in which the city holds a 16 percent interest.

Commission Chairman Merle Moden said Austin's situation with the project "is a different world" from the days when most calls for cancellation came from anti-nuclear activists.

Since then, auditors hired by the Public Utility Commission have said that between $1.1 billion and $1.3 billion was wasted on the project because of bad management by Houston Lighting & Power Co. The utility company is building the $5.5 billion project near Bay City.

School will be named for teacher

FLOWER MOUND (AP) — Lewisville school trustees voted that the name of a new school to open in Highland Village in 1987 will remain Christa McAuliffe Elementary.

Several trustees, who said Monday they received calls on the vote, overwhelmingly favored the school board's May 14 vote to name a new school for the teacher who died in space shuttle Challenger's explosion.

A group of residents opposing the school name had collected signatures of 301 people.

Dead man member of Rebel Riders

BURLESON (AP) — The Associated Press reported erroneously Monday that Stephen Gerholt of Hurst, who died in a fight at a party held by a motorcycle club, was a member of the Bandidos motorcycle club.

Gerholt was a member of the Rebel Riders club and was a U.S. Army recruiter in Hurst, said E. "Spider" Pruitt, spokesman for the Rebel Riders.

FBI agent asserts innocence

By LINDA DEUTSCH

Richard Miller

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard W. Miller was a "tormented man" and not to be hated, said the judge who sentenced the only FBI agent ever convicted of spying to the maximum two life sentences plus 50 years in prison.

"I believe you are going to sentence me as if I committed these crimes," Miller told U.S. District Judge David Kenyon Monday. "I did not commit them." "I shall continue to assert my innocence with an appeal that I hope will result in a new and fair trial."

Kenyon, who described Miller as a tormented man ungrateful for the blessings life gave him, said his crime was so severe he should never again know the joys of freedom. In addition to imposing the maximum sentence, Kenyon imposed the maximum fine of $60,000.

Miller, 49, a portly, bumbling FBI agent whose lackluster 20-year career ended with his arrest in 1984, broke the silence he had maintained through his trial as he stepped to a lectern in the packed, hushed courtroom.

"I never intended to injure this country or benefit the Soviet Union," Miller said. "My conduct was of no damage to this country."

Kenyon accepted the argument of U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner, who said Miller had "besmirched the reputation of the FBI" and damaged national security, selling out his country for sex and money.

"It seems to me a person who deliberately, for their own personal gain, betrays their country, should not walk again in this country as a free man," Kenyon said. "It is this court's intention to sentence the guilty with that in mind."

He specified that Miller serve at least one-third of his concurrent sentences. Bonner said the earliest Miller could be eligible for parole would be in 16 years.

Miller was found guilty June 19 of conspiring with his lover, Svetlana Ogorodnikov, 36, and her husband, Nikolay, 53, to pass classified documents to the Soviet Union. The government said he agreed to accept $65,000 in cash and gold.

It took two trials to convict Miller. The first jury deadlocked.

His defense at both trials was that he was trying to salvage his career by infiltrating the Soviet KGB intelligence agency. He claimed he had devised a James Bond-style scheme to become a double agent.

The Ogorodnikovs pleaded guilty in the midst of their spy trial last year and are serving federal prison terms.

Miller, whose battles with the FBI over his obesity were the subject of testimony, appeared to have gained at least 20 pounds in the month since his conviction. He wore a three-piece gray suit that strained at the seams as he stood before the judge.

Kenyon, in an emotional statement defending his rulings during the lengthy trial, characterized Miller as an ungrateful man who threw away a good life.

"As I see it, Mr. Miller's fundamental problem is he didn't realize that he had everything," the judge said.

He enumerated Miller's blessings including his eight children, a wife and a church that were loyal, and sympathetic FBI supervisors who treated him with compassion.

"We're all here to learn a lesson," Kenyon said. "We're not here to hate or despise Mr. Miller. My heart goes out to Mr. Miller. My personal impression is he is a tormented man."

Man arrested, charged in Jell-O tamperings

HONESDALE, Pa. (AP) — Authorities arrested a man Monday and charged him with falsely claiming that Jell-O dry-mix desserts had been tainted with cyanide in a scare that forced one supermarket to pull the products from its shelves.

Norman Mark Allen, 21, was charged with communicating false information that a consumer product had been tainted, said Wayne Davis, agent-in-charge of the FBI's Philadelphia office.

Neither Honesdale police Chief Frank Rosler nor FBI agents would say if Allen was a suspect in similar cyanide tampering scares last week in Illinois and Georgia.

Jell-O gelatin and instant pudding were removed from the Acme supermarket here after the store received two calls Friday and Saturday saying the products were contaminated with cyanide, Rosler said.

There have been no reports of sickness from the desserts, but those who purchased the items since Wednesday have been advised to return them to the store, he said.

The products were removed after the calls and will be tested by the manufacturer, General Foods Corp., Rosler said.

A spokesman for General Foods Corp. did not return phone calls Monday for comment.

General Foods ordered Jell-O gelatin removed from stores in the Chicago and Atlanta areas last week after receiving anonymous tampering threats there. The investigations continue and proof of tampering has not been confirmed, officials said.

Allen, who was scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday before a U.S. magistrate, could receive a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $125,000 fine if convicted.

The FBI declined to release further details.

A man throws a bag of garbage from his truck into a sea of trash at the Grays Ferry temporary dumping site in southwest Philadelphia. The strike by municipal workers entered its 14th day Monday.

Proposals traded, as garbage rots

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thousands of tons of trash continued rotting in temporary dumps as negotiators traded proposals in the 15-day-old strike that has idled 12,000 city workers.

Officials said, meanwhile, that some white-collar employees who had been on strike returned to work Monday, crossing picket lines without incident.

City Managing Director James S. White announced the brief contract talks late Monday, calling a negotiating session that lasted about an hour "very constructive." He said negotiators would meet again if requested by a state mediator.

Since municipal workers walked off the job July 1, 15 temporary dumps have been pressed into service to hold uncollected garbage, but residents closed several sites with picket lines, complaining of the stench and possibile health hazards.

City spokesman Charles Bussey said a dump in west Philadelphia was closed Monday because it reached its 960-ton capacity. A city-owned parking lot a block away was opened to dumping to replace the closed site, he said.

District Council 33 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees and the smaller District Council 47 struck the city, but the 2,000 white-collar and professional employees of Council 47 agreed to a two-year contract last week.

The contract gives members a 10 percent wage increase, and allows them to recognize the blue-collar workers' strike without facing discipline.

"The report coming from our local presidents is that our people are really holding on," Council 47 president Thomas Paine Cronin said.

But White said 2,053 union members were back at work Monday from both unions, up 176 from the number reporting for work Friday.

Recreation Commissioner Harold J. Comfort said more than three-fourths of the department's recreation workers returned to work Monday, with 66 of the city's 89 swimming pools open — the most since the strike began.

At the Health and Human Services departments, chief deputy city solicitor Richard J. Gold said fewer than 10 percent of all District Council 47 members had returned.

One District Council 47 member who did not cross picket lines was social worker Richard Dalton.

"I don't want to stay out here, but I've been calling people scabs for two weeks," Dalton said.

Captive's sister makes trip for brother's release

NEW YORK (AP) — The sister of Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, left for Greece on Monday in an effort to gain freedom for her brother and four other Americans kidnapped in Lebanon.

Peggy Say was invited to Greece by Margaret Papandreou, wife of Greek premier Andreas Papandreou.

"It's something that she wanted, to get into the Middle East or in that area to do what she could for Terry and the other hostages," her husband, David, said in a telephone interview from the couple's home in Batavia, N.Y.

Anderson, 38, was kidnapped in Lebanon on March 16, 1985.

Mrs. Say has letters for all the hostages from their relatives, Say said.

"It may be a fruitless attempt, but it's something she wants to try," Say said.

Mrs. Papandreou called last week to invite Mrs. Say to meet with her in Greece.

"She (Mrs. Papandreou) had met with the Syrian ambassador and wanted to go over what results she had gotten," Say said. "She (also) met with (Syrian) President Assad. That was the main thing. That was the biggie. She wanted to go over that with Peggy."

'Nothing's definite. We're not making any plans until we get to Athens," Mrs. Say said just before her flight left from the Rochester-Monroe County Airport on her way to Kennedy International Airport in New York.

Charles Lewis, chief of the AP's Washington bureau, was accompanying Mrs. Say to Greece.

Mrs. Say said she wanted to make public and private appeals to the captors to release her brother and the others. She said she also hopes to find a way to let her brother know that she is all right.

She said she's acting on a promise made to her brother and father before they died earlier this year to "do everything in my power" to free Anderson. Glenn Anderson Sr. died in February; Glenn Anderson Jr., died in June.

The other missing Americans are William Buckley, 56, a U.S. Embassy political officer; the Rev. Martin Lawrence Jenco, 51, director of Catholic Relief Services in Lebanon; David Jacobsen, 54, administrator of the American University Hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

NASA makes repairs, sets new target

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA says it's well on the way to fixing the things the Challenger accident commission found wrong and that it has set a new target — the first quarter of 1988 — for flying the space shuttle again.

"Instead of saying we will fix things that the Rogers commission felt were wrong, we are in the position of saying we are fixing things the Rogers commission found wrong," NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher told reporters Monday.

He and Richard Truly, head of the shuttle program, held a news conference hours after Fletcher delivered to the White House a report on actions NASA has taken since the Rogers commission made nine major recommendations last month.

The report said space agency engineers are working on a completely new design for the booster rockets which caused the Jan. 28 Challenger explosion, as a contingency in case no other approach is found suitable for the joint seals on the boosters.

"We are going to take a look at designs that assume we can't use the existing base hardware," Truly said, while conceding a new design would make it impossible to meet a first quarter-1988 launch schedule.

"The reason we are doing it is that if we get into testing and we should have a test failure that shows our design analysis was inadequate, we'd have a head start on an alternate approach," Truly said. "However, everybody that's been involved in the redesign believes there is a design available with the present hardware."

Fletcher said the space agency had responded favorably to each of the recommendations but said "there is one negative piece of news that came out after studying the problem in some depth."

He said the July 1987 flight resumption, which had been NASA's plan when he became administrator two months ago, "was a little optimistic in view of the extensive tests that have to be done on the solid rocket motors before we feel comfortable flying again."

The interim report is expected to help the administration decide what to do about building a replacement for Challenger. The accident left the shuttle fleet with only three vehicles and unable to launch satellites.

A replacement for Challenger and enhancing the shuttle spare parts inventory would cost $2.5 billion.

Fletcher said he discussed the replacement shuttle extensively at the White House, but that there was no decision.

"As I said, I'm not sure I want to go ahead with the fourth orbiter if it comes out of NASA's other programs," Fletcher said.

The first recommendation of the Challenger commission, headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, was that "the faulty solid rocket motor joint and seal must be changed" and that "no design options should be prematurely precluded because of schedule, cost or reliance on existing hardware."

A leak in a joint on the right booster rocket of Challenger allowed hot gases to escape, causing the main fuel tank to explode in the 74th second of flight from Cape Canaveral, Fla. All seven astronauts aboard, including school teacher Christa McAuliffe, were killed.

NASA said emphasis on the rocket booster designs is on testing and that, in addition to tests with subscale rockets and with full-scale rocket segments, there will be at least "four full-scale hot static hot firing tests."

The agency said it had not decided whether these tests would be conducted with the rocket in the horizontal position — as had been done before — or vertically — one of the recommendations of the commission.

"The preferred configuration is anticipated to be proposed in late July 1986," the report said. "Two of these full-scale tests will contain all system changes."

Journalists in space delayed several years

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — NASA's plan to allow a journalist to fly on a space shuttle may be delayed by years, officials said.

Monday's announcement followed a National Aeronautics and Space Administration statement that said the next shuttle flight will not be made until 1988 while engineers work on a new design for the booster rockets that caused the Challenger crash.

"Now that a clearer picture of our return to launch capability has emerged, we are in a position to evaluate the impact that launch delays will have on related activities," NASA Associate Deputy Administrator Ann Bradley wrote in a letter. "In that vein, it has become evident that it will be several years before we will be able to include a journalist on a space mission."

The letter to the Association of Schools of Journalism and Mass Communication instructed it to stop the selection process.

The decision was made almost three weeks ago, but wasn't announced until Monday by project officials at association headquarters at the University of South Carolina.

More than 1,700 people initally applied for the mission. That list was cut to 100 people, then 40 before the selection process was placed on hold.

Drug test opponents fear method's potential for mistakes

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It's your big day. You got the job. All that is left before you are officially on the payroll is the company physical. The doctor listens to your heart, takes your blood pressure, pokes at a few places. Then the nurse hands you a small cup and points you to a room down the hall.

You haven't touched any drugs in years, months, or, well, maybe weeks. What are the chances your urine test will accurately reflect your good judgment?

Proponents say not to worry, that a properly administered screening procedure is virtually infallible. Critics say the screening technology, particularly when applied on a mass scale, still holds a troubling potential for mistakes, and is too unreliable to use as a basis for decisions about someone's career.

The U.S. Army, which initiated random testing in 1982, has admitted that it mislabeled or contaminated the tests of 60,000 soldiers, many of whom were discharged. The Navy reinstated approximately 4,000 sailors because of problems with its testing program.

The federal Centers for Disease Control, which sent urine "spiked" with predetermined quantities of drugs to 13 laboratories between 1972 and 1981, found "serious shortcomings" in their ability to test accurately.

The results of its study, published in the April 1985 Journal of the American Medical Association, showed error rates of as high as 100 percent in tests for some drugs.

"You and I can flip a coin and do better than that. Jobs are on the line," said Terry Cowan, executive director of Workers Assistance Program of Texas, an organization that counsels workers with drug and other personal problems.

Advocates say testing technology has evolved significantly in the last few years. Manufacturers of the most widely used urine tests, such as the EMIT enzyme immunoassay test produced by the Syva Co. of Palo Alto, Calif., claim near-infallible rates of reliability.

But even scientists who endorse urine screens as an appropriate drug detection tool say that the most reliable test, applied on a mass scale to a population with a certain percentage of drug users, is mathematically destined to produce some "false positives," a finding that drugs are present in a urine sample when they are not.

This means that if a test with a "sensitivity" of 99 percent — one that will properly identify drugs in a urine sample 99 times out of 100 — is applied to a population of 100,000 people in which five percent are drug users, it will correctly identify the 5,000 users. But it will also incorrectly accuse another 1,000.

"Every test has false positives, that's a categorical truth," said Dr. Thomas McConnell, a pathologist and owner of Dallas' AM Laboratories.

False positives can also be triggered by certain widely used over-the-counter medicines. Persons taking Contac, a cold medicine, or Sudafed, a decongestant, may test positive for amphetamine use, according to a Syva spokesman. Syva recently withdrew one of its chemical tests for marijuana after discovering that it registered false positives in the urine of those taking ibuprofen, an aspirin substitute found in Advil and Nuprin.

"The problem is, this went undiscovered for a number of years. How many other things are undiscovered?" asked Dr. Arthur McBay, professor of pathology at the University of North Carolina and chief toxicologist for the state medical examiner.

Pathologists stress the importance of using a second test to confirm the findings of the initial screen, preferably one employing a different set of scientific principles. With a confirmatory test, the number of false positives can be reduced to nearly zero.

"It's not going to be perfect, but justice isn't perfect, either," McConnell said.

Most experts recommend confirmation by a method called Gas Chromatography-Mass Spectrometry, known as GC-MS, which breaks down urine samples into electromagnetic "fingerprints" specific to each drug. Another method, about which some experts are somewhat less enthusiastic, is Thin Layer Chromatography, also known as TLC, in which urine reacts with various solvents on a small plate, turning certain colors to indicate the presence of certain drugs. Some say the results in this test are too dependant on subjective judgements by lab personnel.

Laboratories conducting corporate drug screening use different combinations of the EMIT, TLC and GC-MS methodologies, usually according to what companies are willing to pay. Clinlab, a Dallas company, charges $20 for an initial screen with TLC and confirmation of a positive result with EMIT, for example. For confirmation with GC-MS, a more sophisticated method, the price goes to $35.

Laboratories say that when an employee's job hangs in the balance, most companies, wary of the controversy surrounding testing, usually opt for the more expensive procedure.

"Some want it and some don't," said Lynn Johnson, industrial accounts manager for Primacare, which administers urine tests for approximately 50 Dallas companies.

"In a screening type situation, if you've got a choice between John and Billy and John comes back positive on his urine, that's all they want to know," Johnson said.

Cocaine is metabolized by the body at a relatively rapid rate, so that within 48 to 72 hours, or less, a moderate dose is beyond the range of detection.

Some experts maintain that THC, the active chemical component in marijuana, stays in the system for 30 to 60 days. But the chief clinical pharmacologist for the National Institute for Drug Abuse, Dr. Michael Walsh, says those assertions are "grossly exaggerated," and that for all but heavy users, two to five days is the limit.

NATION IN BRIEF

Man humiliated by Yogi takes Maharishi to court

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man who says he got sore joints and humiliation from the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi rather than inner peace and an ability to fly will get his day in court Nov. 5, in a $9 million suit against the Maharishi and related organizations.

The man says he spent 11 years and more than $6,000 on courses and work with the Maharishi's organizations, achieving little more than sore hips, knees and ankles.

His suit says he also has suffered and "will continue to suffer the severe mental anguish, trauma and humility of realizing that he had devoted a substantial portion of his youth to serving and supporting the defendants' organization, which had perpetrated a massive fraud on him and other members of the public."

The man, identified in public court documents only as "John Doe I of Sea Isle City, N.J.," is one of seven people taking their complaints to federal court.

Publications and advertisements by groups associated with the Maharishi, a native of India who travels widely promoting his methods as a way to world peace, have included photographs the groups contend show advanced practitioners of the Maharishi's methods of levitating.

At the first public demonstration of "yogic flying" last week in Washington, reporters saw practitioners hopping from seated positions. Organizers said the practitioners were not pushing themselves off the ground but were rising involuntarily as their meditation gave them higher and higher levels of "brain coherence."

The Maharishi's organization has denied any guilt, and said the plaintiffs themselves had breached agreements by making the public charges.

Teacher fired due to TB

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reinforcing its recent legal opinion on AIDS, the Justice Department filed a brief with the Supreme Court arguing a third-grade teacher who was fired because she had tuberculosis should receive no employment protection under a federal law for the handicapped.

The Justice Department argued that "discrimination on the basis of contagiousness is not handicap discrimination within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973," which bars discrimination based solely on handicap for any program or activity receiving federal financial aid.

The brief was filed Monday in the case of Gene H. Arline, who sued the Nassau County, Fla., school board after she had three relapses of a childhood case of tuberculosis. She was dismissed because of "chronic susceptibility" to TB.

The brief takes the same approach as a legal opinion the Justice Department issued last month on AIDS. It said employers can discriminate against AIDS victims if their actions are prompted by fear of contagion.

The American Medical Association last week disagreed with the administration opinion on AIDS, and filed a brief in the Florida case arguing that federal law protects victims of AIDS and other infectious diseases from discrimination based on irrational concerns that they might spread illnesses to co-workers.

The Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether all recipients of federal aid including virtually all public schools are barred from discriminating against people with contagious disease, including AIDS.

Social programs revived

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $15.5 billion, multi-year package of long-standing social programs ranging from Head Start to low-income energy aid has been given a new lease on life by the Senate.

Lawmakers on Monday voted to reauthorize the programs for the next fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1. The Reagan administration had been critical of much of the measure, calling it duplicative.

The largest component, the low-income energy assistance program, which provides funds to the needy for payment of utility bills, would be continued at a total level of $9 billion through 1990.

Head Start, the 21-year-old program to aid the health, educational and social development of children starting from the age of three, would be reauthorized at a level of $4.8 billion through 1990.

New senator asserts self

WASHINGTON (AP) — As his first order of business, Republican James T. Broyhill, a 23-year House veteran sworn in as North Carolina's newest senator, vowed to lobby House members to override President Reagan's veto of a bill tightening import quotas on textiles, apparel and shoes.

He also said he will "double up" to make sure staff members continue to provide constituent services for his now-vacant 10th congressional district until the seat is filled in this fall's election. And Broyhill said he will ask Reagan to stump North Carolina for him as he attempts to win the Senate race against former Democratic Gov. Terry Sanford.

Broyhill met briefly with Reagan to accept the president's congratulations on being named to the seat left vacant by the death of Sen. John East, R-N.C.

Trouble on border

Vigilantism is nothing new in America. It's part of that narrow but persistent mean streak that has run throughout American history, from the Ku Klux Klan of the past to the Posse Comitatus of today. It may be that vigilantism is the dark side of American individualism.

But whatever their origins or motives in the past, it was probably inevitable that modern vigilantes would turn their attention to our troublesome border with Mexico. It now appears that one group has been "patrolling" the border for some time, possibly with the knowledge of government authorities.

Recently, 20 armed members of an Alabama-based paramilitary group called Civilian Materiel Assistance helped capture 15 undocumented aliens near the Arizona-Mexico border. There were conflicting reports from group members about the nature of their patrols. Some said they were there only to "observe, document and report" on illegal border activities such as drug smuggling. But others said the group captured the aliens — who included women and children — after a firefight and then held them at gunpoint for 90 minutes until the Border Patrol arrived. Worse, there were strong indications that the group's other activities included armed incursions into Mexico to look for drug smugglers.

A spokesman for the group claimed local immigration and law enforcement personnel were aware of the patrols. Harold Ezell, regional commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said he doubted that and added a strong condemnation of what he called the group's vigilante activities.

Neighborhood Watch is a commendable program, but a civilian "border watch" is going too far. Vigilantism goes against every principle of American justice. If that practice is condoned, the concept of a free and open society is doomed.

Yes, the problem of illegal immigration needs attention. But the Border Patrol has a difficult enough job without having to worry about the interference of fanatics armed with assault rifles and M-16s. Imagine the consequences if some of these misguided Americans were to start shooting on the Mexican side of the border. It's appalling to think that this self-appointed "border patrol" could get away with terrorizing people whose only crime is a desire to escape poverty.

It's not enough for federal and local authorities to merely condemn vigilantes. Strong and decisive action should be taken to keep them away from the border — permanently.

Stacy Dam opposition

I am opposed to the Stacy Dam. I do not hate West Texas or West Texans, but I do hate seeing what West Texas is becoming.

I see fields that were farmed for too long able to grow nothing more than tumbleweeds, and I see fields under the plow succumbing to the same plight. I see the beautiful natural deserts of Texas becoming the ugly, sterile man-made deserts of misuse. What many people do not seem to realize or at least remember is that the semi-desertic region we live in is a delicate ecosystem and can support only a limited number of people without irreparable damage.

I believe that it is the job of the environmentalists to protect the land from people who believe that the Earth was put here for their use only. Those of us who care for this Earth must protect the land and its living creatures not only for future generations, but for the plants and animals themselves, for they are part of this world, too. Those of us who oppose the dam are not just trying to save a snake, but are trying to save an entire ecological system.

Praise for sodomy ruling

Don't you just praise God for the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to uphold Georgia's state law that makes sodomy illegal for homosexuals? This means they will uphold the same law in the State of Texas.

We should all be thankful for companies like Lone Star Gas Co., which you mention in your article "Gay Alliance holds rally" in the Sunday, July 6th, Midland Reporter-Telegram. It would be great if all companies in America took a stand against hiring homosexuals with AIDS, as this company has.

Dallas and every city in America should make it unlawful for homosexuals to demonstrate as if they are entitled to break the law. Would we also allow murderers to demonstrate because it is unlawful to commit murder? How about child molesters? When is the last time you saw a child molesters' rally in the streets of Dallas or America?

Don't you think it's kind of silly for us to condone something even animals refrain from doing?

'Seeing' a problem

It's an ironic situation. The Midland County Public Library spends tax monies for large-print books, especially designed for the visually impaired. Yet the library personnel persistently refuse to turn on all the lights, leaving the library less than optimally illuminated.

Perhaps the county commissioners might intercede on behalf of us visually handicapped, or are they, too, blind to our problems?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 15, the 196th day of 1986. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifteen years ago, President Richard M. Nixon announced in a nationally broadcast address that he would visit the People's Republic of China to seek a "normalization of relations." Nixon made the trip the following February.

On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch painter Rembrandt was born.

In 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

In 1945, President Harry S. Truman arrived in Belgium on his way to the Potsdam Conference.

In 1958, President Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered Marines to Lebanon during a Middle East crisis.

In 1965, U.S. scientists displayed close-up photographs of the planet Mars taken by the spacecraft Mariner 4.

In 1975, Three American astronauts blasted off aboard an Apollo spaceship hours after two Soviet cosmonauts were launched aboard a Soyuz spacecraft for a mission that would include a linkup of the two ships in space.

Ten years ago: A 36-hour kidnap ordeal began for 26 schoolchildren and their bus driver as they were abducted near Chowchilla, Calif., by three gunmen and imprisoned in an underground cell. All of the captives escaped unharmed.

Five years ago: The Reagan administration released its revised economic forecast, predicting higher federal spending and lower inflation.

One year ago: President Reagan's doctors announced that cancer was found in his colon, but that his surgeons believed they had removed all of the malignant tissue.

Today's birthdays: Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., is 62. Actor Keh Kercheval is 51. Actor Alex Karras is 51. Actor Jan-Michael Vincent is 42.

Satellite vulnerability concerns officials

WASHINGTON — Pentagon officials have yet another nightmare, and it's no pipe dream: A nuclear explosion in space could cripple the multi-billion-dollar commercial satellite network the military uses for its worldwide communications.

Jack Anderson

The nuclear explosion could be intentional — a test by some aspiring member of the "nuclear club" — or accidental, as the malfunction of a nuclear generator used to power a reconnaissance satellite. Or it could be a deliberate "accident" staged by the Soviets, who agreed with the United States in 1963 to stop above-ground nuclear testing after a number of satellites were damaged.

Details of the Pentagon's concern are spelled out in an internal Defense Communications Agency study completed three years ago. Our associate Donald Goldberg obtained a copy.

"There exists today a very real concern that the current generation of commercial satellites with their extensive use of solid state devices (is) significantly more susceptible than the 'Early Bird,'" the report states. The reference was to satellites launched in the late 1950s and early 1960s that used vacuum tubes. The newer, solid state equipment is believed to be much more vulnerable to the electromagnetic pulse emitted by a nuclear blast.

"Compounding this increased susceptibility," the report continues, "is an unstable global environment wherein a proliferation of Third World powers have, or are well on their way to having, the capability to test a nuclear device in space. These countries are not constrained by the current nuclear test ban agreements."

The report then warns bluntly: "Such a test, whether intended to do so or not, could deliver a decisive blow to our commercial satellite assets, severely or totally disrupting our national telecommunications system."

Any adversary with the necessary liftoff power could stage an apparent nuclear accident. "This threat pertains to any device tested in low Earth orbit by a Third World country or intentionally by the Soviet Union to test the survivability and endurance of our commercial satellite services," the report states. "An 'accidental' nuclear event might be associated with the disintegration of a radioisotopic thermoelectric generator used as a prime power source on an operational reconnaissance satellite."

Another threat would be a high-altitude explosion near the "geosynchronous" orbits used by most communications satellites. Traveling at the same speed as the Earth's rotation, the satellites appear to hover over one spot.

"Such an event could conceivably be called accidental and a singular event," the report states, adding ominously: "Its consequences would be devastating. ... Such an event would, could, possibly destroy the entire fleet (of satellites) if the event was positioned near the center of the commercial satellite orbital arc."

A Pentagon task force considered three approaches to the problem — and discarded them as either too expensive or ineffective:

— Wait for the worst to happen and replace the damaged satellites. But replacement could cost $5 billion and would take five to 10 years.

— Store spare satellites in orbit, ready to turn on. But these, too, would be vulnerable while waiting in the bullpen.

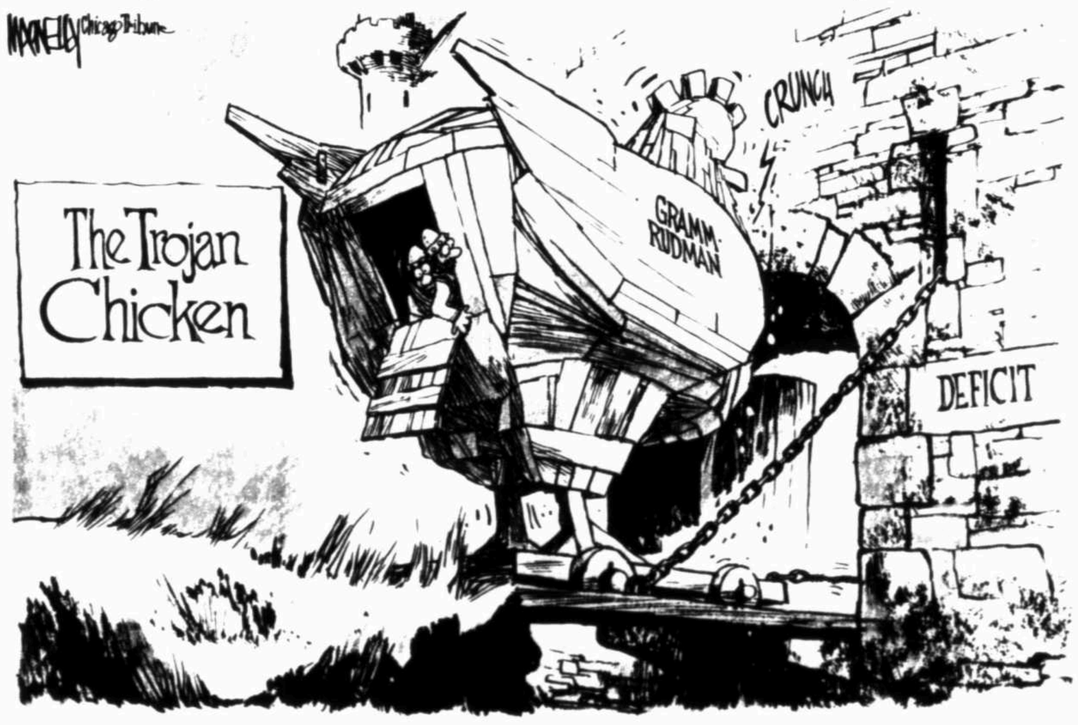

— Launch a fully protected military satellite system of three $100 million satellites. But they would be "neither affordable nor survivable."

The study's final recommendation was obvious, if vague: "Harden" future commercial satellites with built-in protection against nuclear effects. What this protection would consist of, and who would pay for it, are yet to be determined.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Poor Arturo Tolentino: After boldly declaring himself president of the Philippines and occupying the ritzy Manila Hotel, he meekly admitted he couldn't stay long because "it's quite an expensive hotel." Even if he did show up without luggage, that's no way to handle a haughty hotelier. A few thousand miles east a real president demonstrated the proper technique: Because the Santa Barbara Biltmore wouldn't give a discount, White House aides were moved to the Sheraton (even though it meant mingling with the press). Call it another Grenada if you will, but the Biltmore blinked — and the White House got its discount.

EVANS & NOVAK

Time running out for 'colorblind society'

WASHINGTON — After more than a year's delay, Ronald Reagan has just five weeks left to cut through timidity and apathy around him and come out against government-sponsored reverse discrimination before his presidency ends.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Recent Supreme Court decisions upholding certain but not all kinds of affirmative action remove a final reason for delay. Administration supporters of the long-pending executive order against racial quotas to help minority groups say that President Reagan's Aug. 16 summer vacation is the final deadline.

The presidential vacation will merge into the mid-term election campaign, obviously no time for politically dangerous activity. By then, supporters of the proposed order agree, it will be dead for the Reagan presidency and probably for all administrations.

Thus, the next five weeks will test whether a mature administration has grown too cautious and consensual in its long enjoyment of unprecedented popularity ratings, or still has a revolutionary spark. If Reagan signs an executive order watering down affirmative action, he would defy the political and business establishments to the benefit of blue-collar white workers living beyond the Washington Beltway.

There are two questions. First, shall the issue be brought to Reagan so that he can break the deadlock between Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Secretary of Labor William Brock? And second, if the issue does reach the Oval Office, what will the president do?

There is not much doubt about the second question. Reagan would pick Meese. In private and public, the president has expressed support for a "colorblind" policy. Lately, insiders say, he has been in a particularly feisty mood affirming his conservatism on a variety of issues. There is no presidential trouble about signing an order that puts the U.S. government against "mandatory" hiring goals based on race.

But nobody knows whether the issue will ever reach the president's desk — nobody, that is, except chief of staff Donald T. Regan. There is no sign that Regan dissents from the prevailing view, shared even by some conservatives, at the White House (as distinguished from the Oval Office). That view: Riling up editorial writers, columnists and many Republican members of Congress on an issue where big business is now content promises big trouble and little benefit.

Accordingly, there is a disposition on the White House staff to let affirmative action drift on aimlessly. "It is on the top of nobody's list," one senior aide told us. "There is certainly no need to get into it."

But Regan's distaste for disorderliness in government, that might lead him to shun the executive order, also militates against a freeze-out that will prevent the president from deciding it. The chief of staff is not wholly to blame for the ludicrous succession of excuses and delays that have blocked resolution of the issue for over a year.

The stalling game would have killed the issue once and for all had it not been for the tenacity of White House communications director Patrick J. Buchanan and Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds. They reacted to the Supreme Court's pro-affirmative action decisions by pressing once again for a presidential order. The response on the White House staff is to try again bringing Brock and Meese together — an unachievable goal.

The next five weeks are thus critical in the battle to achieve true colorblindness. Although the issue may seem distant indeed from the private lives of senior officials whose children never will be subjected to reverse discrimination, the real world lies beyond their policy meetings.

Interesting testimony on that point comes from Linda Chavez, who as a White House aide fought for a new revised executive order. In an uphill campaign for the U.S. Senate from Maryland, she reports a strongly favorable reaction from white ethnic voters when she calls for a nondiscrimination policy for both blacks and whites. Here is an issue where the Democratic Party, chained by its close ties to the black vote, cannot compete.

The fact that the Labor Department imposes quota-like goals on government contractors well into the sixth year of the Reagan presidency suggests that the voices Chavez hears have not penetrated the White House. If Reagan does not respond to them before his Santa Barbara vacation, a colorblind policy may be lost for all time.

CHARLEY REESE

Judicial activism complicating issue of rights

I have gotten a lot of laughs out of the reaction to the Supreme Court's decision that there is no constitutional right to practice sodomy. First thing you know, liberals will be demanding that strict constructionists be appointed to the Supreme Court.

Charley Reese

Some of us unfashionable mossbacks have been warning for a long time that judicial activism is a loose cannon that can shoot in more than one direction. Judicial activism — the practice of using the Constitution as a jumping-off point to legislate from the bench according to the justices' own whims and biases — is a bad practice whether the results please liberals or conservatives.

You can hardly blame the homosexuals' lawyers for thinking the Supreme Court would find there is a constitutional right to sodomy. After all, the same court created a mythical constitutional right to privacy which it then said was so powerful that states could do nothing to protect the lives of unborn children.

Apparently all Americans have a right to privacy but pregnant women have more of a right to it than homosexuals. When Supreme Court justices set themselves up as arbiters of all human activities, you need not expect any rhyme nor reason to their rationalizations.

Actually there is no constitutional right to sodomy, normal sex, abortion, stamp collecting, sleeping on park benches, and 10,000 other human activities. The Constitution was never intended to be an institutionalized King Solomon which would settle any and all disputes. The Constitution was never intended to be the last word on rights, morality, wisdom and high fashion. The authority for that is the Constitution itself.

The Ninth Amendment says that just because a right is not mentioned in the Constitution, no one can assume that the right does not exist. In other words, the Constitution recognizes that there are two classes of rights — those explicitly covered in the Constitution, and others. The Supreme Court, however, has no jurisdiction over the others since it is limited, as far as state and local laws are concerned, to deciding if they are constitutional. And on most issues, the Constitution is silent.

The Constitution was written for specific and limited purposes. The Constitution itself simply sets up the federal government, spells out the powers and duties of each of the three branches, specifies what the federal government can do and what the states cannot do, and sets the qualifications and conditions for candidates and voting in federal elections. It does not speak explicitly at all on the subject of individual rights.

Some of its authors argued that individual rights were implied by the limitations placed on the powers of government. Others wanted a more explicit statement and they won. The first 10 amendments were passed by the first Congress and these we call our Bill of Rights.

Even these, however, are quite explicit. The first and second cover religion, free speech, free press, peaceable assembly, and the right to keep and bear arms. The third involves quartering soldiers in private homes. The fourth prohibits arbitrary searches and seizures. The fifth and sixth spell out the rights of accused in criminal prosecutions and prohibit taking private property for public use without compensation. The seventh outlines rules for civil actions. The eighth prohibits excessive bail and cruel and unusual punishments. I've already mentioned the ninth, and the tenth says all powers not assigned to the federal government or prohibited to the states belong to the states and to the people.

The other 16 amendments have to do with the mechanics of government except for the Reconstruction Amendments, which abolished slavery, prohibited states from abridging the rights of citizenship, and gave blacks the right to vote.

Judicial activists have distorted the Constitution so that they may legislate. They have, for example, injected themselves into the question of nude dancing by concluding that dancing in public is a form of speech. George Washington, who presided over the Constitutional Convention, would throw up if he could read an opinion like that.

Abrams, Helms split on U.S. policy toward Chile

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams and Sen. Jesse Helms are accusing each other of indefensible behavior and swapping other charges in a tempest over U.S. policy toward Chile.

The disagreement Monday focused on the presence of Ambassador Harry G. Barnes Jr. at the funeral of a 19-year-old Washington resident who was fatally burned during anti-government protests in Santiago.

But in swapping charges in separate Associated Press interviews, the State Department official and the Republican senator from North Carolina clashed on the role the Reagan administration should take in Chile.

Helms, just back from a week-long visit to the South American country, said Chile was "really the only country in Latin America placing its faith in the market economy and free enterprise." The senator said it also had the best chance of moving toward "a stable, productive democracy."

He said the funeral of Rodrigo Rojas de Negri last Wednesday at the Chilean Human Rights Commission was "a Communist rally" and that U.S. citizens and Chileans Helms met with in Santiago had accused Barnes of "consorting constantly with the left."

But Abrams said: "I would argue that those who support an indefinite extension of military rule rather than a transition to democracy are playing into the hands of the Communists."

Last week, President Augusto Pinochet indicated he may remain in office until 1997 and said Rojas de Negri was carrying a flammable susbtance that led to fatal injuries during a general strike July 2 by opponents of the government.

The State Department has issued three public calls for an independent investigation into his death.

Helms called the demand a "little charade." He said Abrams and Barnes knew the judiciary had already launched an independent inquiry and that the diplomats' conduct was "indefensible because they have deliberately distorted the situation in Chile."

There, the senator said, Communists and anti-Communists were engaged in a war.

"I asked Barnes why he went to that funeral," Helms said. "He sort of mumbled."

Spokesmen at the White House and the State Department said Barnes was carrying out President Reagan's policy by encouraging and supporting movement toward democracy in Chile.

Abrams said Barnes had received his personal approval to go to the funeral.

"Ambassador Barnes was not freelancing and doesn't make specific moves without getting specific approval," said Abrams, who heads the State Department's Bureau of Inter-American Affairs.

Abrams challenged Helms as being "wrong on the facts of the case" and said the senator should have raised his objections to Barnes' presence at the funeral during a hearing of his Senate subcommittee or with Reagan privately at the White House.

"He can sit down with a president and complain," Abrams said. "But to go to a foreign country and complain is indefensible."

The State Department official said that if a liberal senator challenged U.S. policy in Nicaragua and called for the withdrawal of the American ambassador, "I think Senator Helms would view that as indefensible."

Barnes received further criticism Monday from Chilean Navy Adm. Jose Torio Merino, a member of the ruling military junta, who said the Reagan administration should remove Barnes. Merino said Barnes was responsible for relaying bad information to Washington.

"Tell the State Department of the United States to change the ambassador so it can get a better information," Merino told reporters.

Helms said he found in Chile a transitional constitutional government moving ahead to schedule elections in 1989.

"I didn't present myself as pro-Pinochet or anti-Pinochet," Helms said. "I am anti-communist."

The senator said he found almost no criticism of Pinochet among U.S. citizens and Chileans he met there.

"Even critics said he was honest and effective," Helms said.

Voyager tours coastline to ready for world trip

MOJAVE, Calif. (AP) — A plane that is little more than a flying fuel tank has been zipping up and down the California coast for four days in an attempt to prepare it for a nonstop flight around the world without refueling.

During its trips between San Francisco and San Luis Obispo, the fuel-efficient, piston airplane Voyager has averaged 90 mph and 29 miles per gallon of fuel.

Pilot Dick Rutan and co-pilot Jeana Yeager have guided the airplane, designed by Rutan's brother Burt, since last Thursday when it took off from Vandenberg Air Force Base.

They were preparing to end their odyssey today to claim the closed-course flight record held by Air Force Capt. Bill Stevenson, who flew 11,337 statute miles in 1962 in an Air Force B-52H jet.

Stevenson's bomber flew in one loop from March Air Force Base, southeast of Riverside, around Alaska, Greenland, Bermuda, and Florida before returning to California.

"We're awake right now. We're kind of excited about getting the thing over with," Rutan said in a radio-relay interview with The Associated Press as the plane headed south down the California coast.

The Voyager's journey is a test flight and prelude to September when Rutan, 46, and Ms. Yeager, 32, hope to circle the globe without a pit stop.

For that trip, Rutan said today, he planned to have better sleeping pads and sound insulation installed in the rear of the plane, where the pilot who isn't at the controls spends off-hours. Voyager's only seat is in the cockpit.

On Monday, after 95 hours aloft, the plane established a world record for non-stop mileage flown by a piston-engine aircraft, said Lee Herron, a project spokesman at the Voyager's Mojave base, 70 mies north of downtown Los Angeles.

The plane was over Monterey Bay when it broke the old piston-engine record of 10,007 statute miles set in 1981 by Jerry Mullins, who flew a BD-2 aircraft continuously between Oklahoma City and Jacksonville, Fla., Herron said.

Records claimed by the Voyager crew must be certified by the National Aeronautic Association and NAA officials flew alongside Voyager for much of its journey.

Rutan and Ms. Yeager, who is not related to test pilot Chuck Yeager, flew the craft in six- or seven-hour shifts.

Flight surgeon Dr. George Jutila said Rutan had trouble sleeping during the first two days, but both later reported the cockpit felt just like home.

Jutila issued periodic reports saying morale, stamina and psychological status of the aviators were fine.

The Voyager is made of a strong but light graphite material called Magnamite. Its airframe weighs only 939 pounds; including equipment and crew, it weighs about 2,500 pounds before its 8,934 pounds of fuel are added. The two-engine plane resembles three hot dogs speared by a skewer-like, 110-footwing. Its builders have invested $1 million and more than 22,000 hours of labor in it.

The lightweight aircraft took off from its Mojave base last week but the flight was aborted seven hours later when it developed rear engine trouble. It landed at Vandenberg, 120 miles northwest of Los Angeles, the engine was repaired and it took off again the following day.

To qualify for the closed-course record, the Voyager had to finish its trip on the same Vandenberg runway where it it took off.

Because the crew wanted to end the flight at Mojave, Voyager and Vandenberg officials agreed the craft could fly over the runway at low altitude with confirmation by base radar, Herron said.

Explorers videotaping ship describe staircase as 'titanic'

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Explorers using a submarine overcame a strong current to videotape the Titanic in the murky darkness of its 2-mile-deep undersea grave and said it was a "breathtaking" experience.

The Jason Jr., a lawnmower-sized robot equipped with a video camera, was set to descend the Titanic's elegant staircase into the grand salon today, said Shelley Lauzon, spokeswoman for the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

Expedition leader Robert Ballard reported to Woods Hole on Monday that the second of 12 scheduled dives to the tomb of the Titanic was successful.

"We drove the whole length of the ship on both sides," Woods Hole spokeswoman Anne Rabushka quoted Ballard as saying. "We saw rows of portholes with the glass still in place.

"We then drove up around the forecastle up to the starboard wing of the bridge. We landed where the wheelhouse was and saw the ship's wheel, minus the wood, all polished, and took some beautiful pictures of that."

Ballard and two others made the first dive to the wreck Sunday inside the Alvin, a midget submarine. The first task was to deploy radio transmitters around the wreck to give precise information on its position in the pitch blackness 13,000 feet below surface.

During the dives, the Atlantis maintained telephone communication every half hour or so with the Alvin. On Monday, the explorers illuminated the area with lights and took about five hours of color videotape of the liner's remains.

Ballard reported that he could not see the name of the Titanic while scanning the length of the bow during his nine-hour exploration.

"There are rivers of rust pouring down the side of the ship out onto the sediment," he said. "We then left and drove up over the No. 1 funnel opening (where one of four large smokestacks had been) and out over the grand staircase, which for lack of a better word, is a titanic opening.

CENTENNIAL YEARS, YES

AND NOW

MY SEMI - CENTENNIAL

July 15, 1936 - July 15, 1986

By Choice, on July 15, 1936 I became a Midlander, a West Texan and a Texan. It has been my pleasant privilege to meet and know a goodly number of fine men during this 50 year span. Men who made their mark, impacting the betterment of Midland, Odessa, West Texas, our State, and our Nation.

This is a remembrance salute to these men who have passed this way, not only those listed; but those unintentionally omitted. I take the liberty to nominate and designate them:

• STATUE OF LIBERTY CITIZENS • TEXAS SESQUICENTENNIAL CITIZENS • MIDLAND CENTENNIAL CITIZENS • AND ABSOLUTELY MY SEMI CENTENNIAL CITIZENS

Fair skies anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Midland-Odessa area will have fair skies and moderate temperatures through Wednesday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service. The high on Wednesday will be in the low 90s.

The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a low tonight in the upper 60s with winds out of the south at 10-15 mph. Winds will continue southerly on Wednesday, increasing to 15-25 mph and gusting.

Monday's high was 18 degrees below the record high of 107 set for the date in 1933. This morning's low was 63, which is a new record low for this date. The old record was 64 degrees set in 1960.

STATE

Widely scattered rainshowers and a few thunderstorms developed just offshore in the Gulf of Mexico today and moved along the upper Texas coast, bringing the chance of precipitation for other sections later.

Skies were mostly cloudy to partly cloudy in the Trans-Pecos region and the south part of the upper Gulf coast. The rest of the state had generally clear skies.

Winds were southerly at 5 to 15 mph across most of the state. Early-morning temperatre were in the 60s and low 70s over West Texas. The rest of the state had temperatures in the 70s and low 80s. Extremes ranged from 62 degrees at Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock to 82 degrees at Fort Worth Meacham Field.

The National Weather Service predicted a chance of mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms for South Texas, the southeast part of North Texas and over West Texas west of the Pecos.

Otherwise, it should be fair to partly cloudy statewide tonight.

Other temperatures at 5 a.m. were 77 at Longview, Wichita Falls, Waco and Texarkana; 75 at San Antonio and Austin; and 76 at Shreveport and Abilene.

NATION

Heavy thunderstorms hit parts of the Midwest and South, while the Southeast faced more record-breaking heat.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted early today for central and eastern South Dakota, where a cluster of strong storms was part of a stationary front.

Earlier, thunderstorms produced 64 mph winds at Chadron, Neb., while shortly after 1 a.m. EDT, hail fell at Mobridge, S.D.

Heavy thunderstorms also hit northern Kentucky early today. Locally heavy rains dropped up to 2 inches of rain and produced flooding. Louisville recorded 2.21 inches of rain the six hours ending at 2 a.m. EDT today.

AL sluggers tackle pitching rich NL in Astrodome

By BEN WALKER

HOUSTON (AP) — The names are new, but the story is the same at the 1986 All-Star Game: American League sluggers against National League pitchers.

And tonight's meeting features a different twist — the Astrodome — the worst hitter's park in the big leagues.

"I had heard it was a tough place for home runs," Oakland's Jose Canseco, a rookie whose 23 homers lead the major leagues, said after batting practice Monday. "And I found out it was true.

"I thought the ball would be a little more lively. I found out it's kind of dead."

That was never more evident than the last time the All-Star Game was at the Astrodome. In 1968, an AL lineup featuring Harmon Killebrew, Carl Yastrzemski and Frank Howard was held to three hits in a 1-0 loss.

Since then, the fences have been moved in. The distances down the lines are now 10 feet closer at 330 feet, and the rest of the perimeter has been pulled in about eight feet, to 400 in straightaway center field.

Even so, fewer home runs are hit in the Astrodome than any other major-league park, even with increased homer totals throughout the majors this season.

"Those 10 feet might help me," California rookie Wally Joyner, who has 20 homers, said.

Joyner, the first rookie elected to start an All-Star Game since fans resumed choosing the team in 1970, joins an AL club that also boasts Jesse Barfield and Lance Parrish, both with 21 homers, and Jim Presley, with 18.

GLENN DAVIS is the only NL player with 20. Overall, the AL players have outhomered their counterparts 266-192.

The NL, however, has faced such muscle before. The counter has always been pitching, and the result has been a 36-19-1 edge, including 13 victories in the past 14 games.

Fastballing Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets, working with six days rest, will start for the NL.

"I think he's the best pitcher in baseball," NL Manager Whitey Herzog said.

Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela and his screwball or Houston's Mike Scott, whose split-fingered fastball has helped him lead the majors in strikeouts, probably will follow.

Gooden threw two scoreless innings in his previous All-Star outing, while Valenzuela has not allowed a run in 4 ⅔ innings through four games.

"I won't worry about facing Gooden until tomorrow," Joyner said. "I want to have 24 hours to enjoy myself before I worry about batting against him."

BOSTON'S ROGER Clemens, leading the majors with 15 victories and topping the AL in ERA and strikeouts, will oppose Gooden. He will be pitching after going nine innings on Saturday.

"I hope two days' rest is enough for my arm. I don't know if I'll go the full three," he said.

"I'm not going to go over any scouting reports or anything. I'm just going to throw."

Screwballer Ted Higuera of Milwaukee and knuckleballing Charlie Hough of the Texas Rangers are expected to follow Clemens.

"I know how good the National League team is and what they can do — I pitched against a lot of them when I was in that league," Hough said.

"But following a hard thrower like Clemens doesn't mean I have an advantage. I followed some pretty hard throwers before and I still got hit pretty hard if I didn't pitch well."

Clemens, Higuera and Hough are three of the 15 first-time All-Stars for the AL. The NL has 10 players making their first appearance.

THE GAME, to be televised by ABC, will start at 7:35 p.m. CDT after Vice President George Bush throws out the first ball.

It is a sellout, with more than 45,000 fans expected.

All Star Game

The AL will be trying to win its first game at an NL park since 1962 at Wrigley Field. In the last 14 years, the AL's lone victory came against a team managed by Herzog, in 1983.

"It seems like every year I predict a victory for the American League and I've been wrong every year but one," AL Manager Dick Howser said. "So it's hard for me to predict what is going to happen. This is a good lineup."

The AL lineup was announced as: Kirby Puckett, cf; Rickey Henderson, lf; Wade Boggs, 3b; Lance Parrish, c; Wally Joyner, 1b; Cal Ripken, ss; Dave Winfield, rf; Lou Whitaker, 2b; Roger Clemens, p.

For the NL, it was to be: Tony Gwynn, lf; Ryne Sandberg, 2b; Keith Hernandez, 1b; Gary Carter, c; Darryl Strawberry, rf; Mike Schmidt, 3b; Dale Murphy, cf; Ozzie Smith, ss; Dwight Gooden, p.

Return trip to be better, says Grimes

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Shreveport's Johnny Grimes hopes his next trip back home to West Texas will be a more memorable one — at least on the playing field.

Grimes, a product of Monahans High and Texas Tech, is playing with the Texas League's Shreveport Captains, who just completed their only trip to the Tall City of the season Monday night, taking four of five games against the home club.

Rather, Grimes is not playing with the Captains — at least not as much as he would like. Grimes is the second catcher with the San Francisco Giants' Class AA team, playing every fourth or fifth day behind TL All Star Mackey Sasser.

And with Sasser hitting .314 and leading the team in hits, 100, and rbi, 54, Grimes role is likely to be increased only when Sasser moves up to Triple A.

But Grimes has accepted his backup role — at least for now — and is waiting for his chance to play every day. In 52 games, Grimes, 6-2, 205 pound righthander, is struggling at the plate with a .169 average in just 130 at bats. He has hit just two homers with 13 rbi.

In the five-game set at Angels Stadium, Grimes saw action in two games, going 1-for-5 with a pair of walks.

"I WANT to play every day, naturally," says Grimes, who caught once and DH'd once in the series with Midland. "Catching is not the hard part of playing part-time. Trying to hit after not seeing live pitching is tough. I know I'm a much better hitter than what I'm hitting this season."

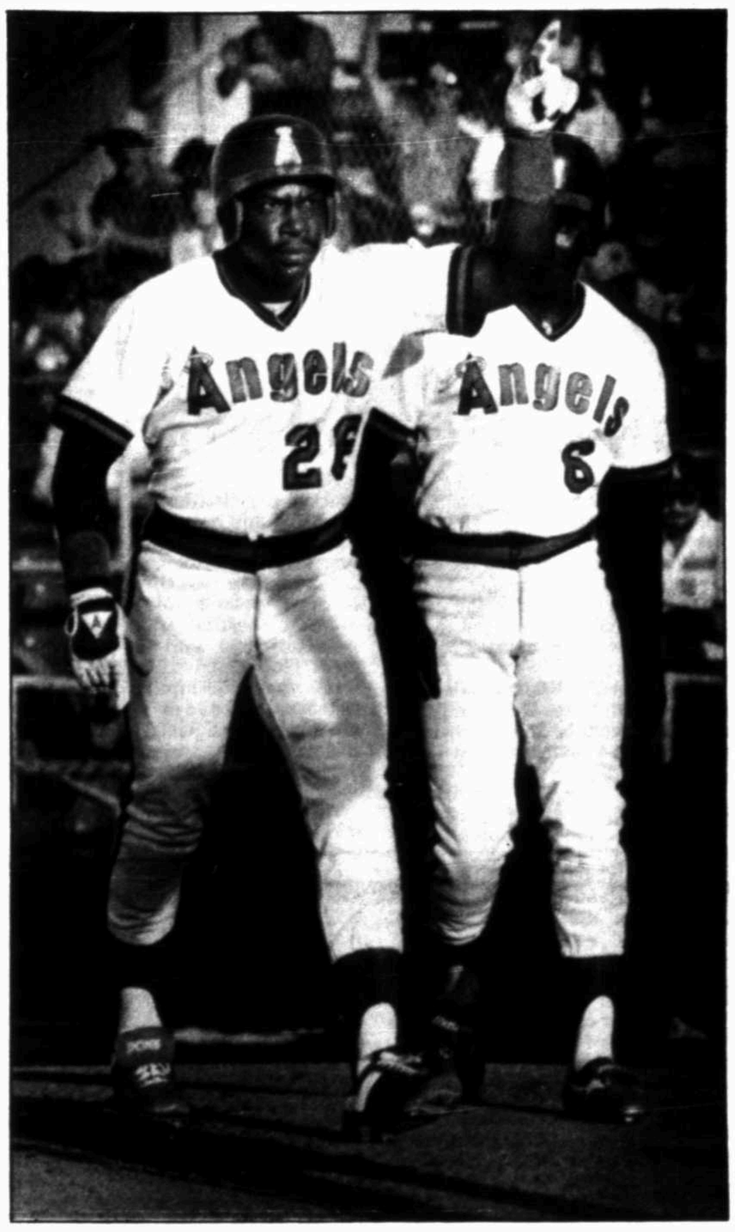

History bears Grimes out on that point. Last year in his first full season in organized ball, Grimes hit .299 catching every other day for Fresno of the Class A California League.

At Texas Tech, where Grimes played four years in the Southwest Conference with the Red Raiders, he hit .356, including an outstanding senior season. After redshirting in 1983, Grimes came on in 1984 as the Raiders' No. 1 catcher.

In addition to hitting .406 with 24 homers and 79 rbi, Grimes was named the SWC's Most Valuable Player and an All-America. The big righthander still holds career records at Tech for homers, 38, and rbi, 143. As a reward, the Giants made him a seventh round selection in the June free agent draft of 1984.

NOW GRIMES, 24, is waiting for a chance to prove that he can hit with authority at the AA level, his third year of pro ball.

SLC welcomes new members

DALLAS (AP) — Three Texas schools will join the Southland Conference, officials announced just four days after Louisiana Tech said it would withdraw from the league.

Stephen F. Austin, Sam Houston State and Southwest Texas State will become eligible for championships in the Division I-AA conference no later than Sept. 1, 1987, commissioner Dick Oliver said Monday.

"We wanted to act quickly so that we would be able to work everyone in schedule-wise as soon as possible," Oliver said. "One of the first things we will have to decide is what sports everyone will participate in, and then work on scheduling in those sports."

The Southland Conference currently requires its members to compete in men's championships for football, basketball, baseball, cross country, indoor track and outdoor track. Women's championships are conducted in volleyball, basketball, softball, tennis, cross country and outdoor track.

Sam Houston State, located in Huntsville, does not currently sponsor a men's track and field team while Stephen F. Austin in Nacagdoches does not field a women's tennis squad.

Captains sink Angels again; Jackson Mets next to try luck

Shreveport beat Midland again, 10-9, just like Sunday, before 2,201 fans at Angels Stadium Monday and if Wendell Kim doesn't mend his ways when the teams resume hostilities over in Shreveport, he may be out of a job.

The Captains took the Angels four out of five and that's no way to treat the guy who hires you.

Kim, the Shreveport manager, helps Midland Manager Joe Maddon with his winter baseball school in Arizona during the off season and the two have to be considered good friends. But not if this keeps up.

In Sunday's 10-9 loss, Midland kept blowing leads. In Monday's bookend loss the Angels never led, although they tied once at 3-3.

It was a game one had the feeling the Angels would pull out until Kim called in Scott Medvin with trouble brewing in the eighth. Using a fastball and slider, the relief ace from Ohio simply overpowered the Angels to nail down his sixth save and second in two nights.

"Overpowering?" responded Shreveport pitching coach Marty Demerritt, "Tonight, perhaps, but not always."

THE ANGELS outhit the Captains, 15-11, and outhomered the Texas League East leaders, four to three, but, thanks to the generosity of Midland pitching, the Captains made their homers count for more runs, seven to five, which is enough to get a team beat.

With a strong wind blowing out to center again, it figured to be a slugfest, a reality that was quickly established.

In the first, Rafael Pimentel walked lead off batter Everett Graham. Mackey Sasser doubled home the run with two out and then Gregg Litton homered to left, 3-0.

In the home first, Midland tied it when Pete Coachman walked, James Randall powered his 16th homer to right-center and then Dante Bichette hit his fourth of the season to left. Randall's homer was the only one of Midland's four round trippers that came with a runner on base. And Coachman was the only walk to come home to haunt Captain pitching.

Pimental wasn't so fortunate. He strayed into quicksand by walking the first two batters to open the second before Angel Escobar beat out a bunt to load the bases. Up came Graham, a thorn in the side of Midland pitchers through the series, and homered over the barrier in right, a grand slam and his first home run of the year, no less.

Alan Cockrell opened the fourth with his ninth homer of the season, third since arriving in Midland.

MIDLAND lost and Shreveport won because only once in the game did Kevin King come to the plate with runners on base. Consequently, his 15th homer and those two doubles drove in just one run, although he scored three.

"Don't worry, we'll come out of this," he promised.

King's homer led off the fourth. In the fifth, there was just one runner on base and there could have been two, but Al Romero was gunned down trying to take third on a ball that trickled away from catcher Mackey Sasser.

As a result, when King doubled it merely moved Dante Bichette to third. Brian Brady singled two runs home and Shreveport's lead was 8-6, but the Angels still came up a run shy.

Shortstop Jeff Schaefer got Midland within one, 8-7, with his second homer of the season to lead off the sixth. And it was after that inning that Kim lifted starter Brian Ohnoutka, 5-8. Ohnoutka was the San Francisco Giants No. 2 draft choice last year out of Texas Christian University. He was 7-2 at Fresno last season. "But this year he hasn't been consistent," said Kim. "He just came off the DL and was programmed tonight for a certain number of pitches, good or bad."

As it turned out, Ohnoutka was tagged for 11 hits and seven runs, but stayed in the game because Shreveport turned Midland walks into runs.

HALO HOOPS— Jackson's Mets come into Midland's Angels Stadium to open a five-game series at 7:30 p.m. tonight....Shreveport heads for El Paso and Kim was counting on his old buddy Maddon to beat the Mets for him to keep his team in first place....It was Andrews Community night at Angels Stadium and some 700 Kermit fans also were in the stands....If Kim seems familiar to long time Texas League fans, he should. "My last year in the league was in 1976 (Amarillo) before I went up to AAA ball for three years. In 1979 I became a coach and now have been managing for six years." Fans couldn't complain about a lack of runs in the series, 10-9, 10-9, 15-12, 8-7.

STAT

The Astrodome, site of the All-Star game, has seen the fewest home runs in the 1980s of any major-league ballpark — an average of 54 per year. Last year, after the fences were moved in, 94 were hit there, still second-lowest in the National League.

SWINGS

The American League won 12 of the first 16 All-Star games, reaching its greatest advantage in the series. The National League, having won 13 of the last 14 and 21 of the last 23, holds a 36-19-1 advantage.

SEASONS

July 15

1901 — Christy Mathewson of the New York Giants pitched his first of two career no-hitters in beating the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0.

1969 — Rod Carew stole home off Chicago White Sox Gerry Nyman in the Minnesota Twins' 6-2 victory. It was Carew's seventh steal of home for the year and tied Pete Reiser's 1946 major league mark.

1973 — Nolan Ryan of the California Angels struck out 17 batters and threw his second no-hitter of the year as the Angels beat the Detroit Tigers 6-0.

Navratilova isn't all that tough

Think Martina Navratilova is tough with six Wimbledons? Makes you wonder about Helen Wills Moody. With eight Wimbledons (1927-1938), she must have ruled the game like Ivan the Terrible....

Tom Seaver on pitching in Boston's Fenway Park, "When I saw this ball park for the first time in 1984, I told my wife that when I retire and I want to go back and see a game, the one ballpark I'd choose is Fenway Park. Aesthetically, from a historical point of view, the feeling you get when you walk in here...I love this park. I think it is the essence of baseball." Come on, Tom, more so than Shea or Riverfront?...

Okay, name one pitcher who beat 26 major league teams in his career? You've got four choices and, a hint, one of them isn't Cy Young...

Lee Dixon, Midland Angels' press box vocalist, claims the number he did last Saturday night on the fans "wasn't the real me. For my next rendition I'd like to show 'em my true range. You know, Smoke Gets In Your Eyes, Moon River, Star Dust...."

When Boston's Wade Boggs collected 240 hits last season, it was the most since what player? Don't laugh. This guy reached his total in a 154-game season....

Leonard Marshall, New York Giants, waiting to accept his award as NFL defensive lineman of the year at a recent banquet, finally gained the podium and declared he'd keep his remarks brief, "I don't know about a lot of you people, but I've got to go to the bathroom. It's been three hours."...

Shreveport's Alan Cockrell, former University of Tennessee quarterback who was the San Francisco Giants' No. 1 draft choice in 1984, played against Auburn's Bo Jackson "in football, but not baseball. I think he made the right choice, picking baseball. He can always go back to football, if he doesn't make it." Judging by Bo's batting average, Jackson may be in NFL togs by September. But as Cockrell pointed out, "He's really just going through spring training. He didn't play any ball at Auburn in the spring, so he's breaking in cold."...

Former Midland Cub Joe Carter with 12 homers and 50 rbi was ready to pass his totals for the entire 1985 season. Of course Joe, and another ex-Cub Mel Hall, are prime reasons for the most baseball excitement in Cleveland since Bob Lemon, Bob Feller, Early Wynn, Big Mike Garcia days....

Last batter to accumulate as many as 240 hits in a season was Babe Herman. I told you not to laugh. That was in 1930. Most folks remember Babe for trying to catch a fly ball with his head, but he was a tremendous hitter. Today, he'd be on his way to the Hall of Fame as a DH....

One pitcher who beat 26 teams during his major league career? If you said Gaylord Perry, Rick Wise, Mike Torrez or Doyle Alexander, you were right. Perry, yes, but those other guys...I never would have suspected....

Former Howard College, Abilene High coach Harold Wilder was camp director for Jerry Stone's weeklong basketball school at Midland College last week. Wilder is now coaching in Conroe, a school flourishing in athletic success...basketball, football, girls basketball, baseball and two state golf championships.

"I really like it. I live right on April Sound (one of Texas' resort golf courses) and can look down the green first fairway to the lake and marina."

What's more, Conroe is just close enough to Houston to be convenient, but not so close as to be a daily hassle. In fact, Harold is almost a regular at Astro and Rocket games, "And I've become an Oiler fan."

Wilder coached at Abilene High during the days when David McWilliams, Texas Tech's new football coach, was head coach of the Eagles. "The thing that impressed me about David," says Wilder, "was that he really cared about the kids and took time for them. There was none of this 'kill' mentality."....

Incidentally, Wilder thinks Larry Brown will do a good job as Howard's new coach. "I coached against him when he was at Bryan and he does a good job."...

GENERAL

CHICAGO — Bo Jackson is not close to signing an endorsement contract with Nike Inc. that gives him an incentive to leave professional baseball for the NFL, the Heisman Trophy winner's lawyer said.

Chicago-based Advertising Age magazine reported Monday that Jackson was closing in on a deal with the sportswear company that would pay him more if he plays football.

"There is no Nike deal," attorney Tom Zieman told ABC Radio Sports. Zieman said Jackson will be no more influenced by money in making a shoe deal than he was when he originally chose baseball over football.

FOOTBALL

INDIANAPOLIS — Second-round draft pick Jack Trudeau has until Friday afternoon to sign with the Indianapolis Colts or else the National Football League team will seek a veteran quarterback to back up Gary Hogeboom, owner Robert Irsay says.

Coach Rod Dowhower already has said Hogeboom, acquired in a trade with Dallas the day before the college draft last spring, will start for the Colts this season. Last year's starter, Mike Pagel, was traded to Cleveland.

Trudeau's agent, Greg Lustig, has threatened to have his client sit out the upcoming NFL season or steer him to the United States Football League if a satisfactory contract is not offered by the Colts.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Veteran St. Louis Cardinals running back Stump Mitchell has rejected a contract offer from the Arizona Outlaws of the United States Football League and will re-sign instead with the NFL's Cardinals, his agent said.

Harold Lewis said Monday that Mitchell's heart was in St. Louis and that was the reason he planned to sign a three-year $1.5 million dollar contract with the Cardinals on Tuesday.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

PEORIA, Ill. — Bradley University was penalized by the NCAA for recruiting violations and unethical conduct by head basketball Coach Dick Versace, who promptly signed a one-year contract that school officials announced would be his last.

The NCAA sanctions bar Bradley from competing in postseason play and off-campus recruiting for next season only, although the school officially was placed on probation for two years. No television sanctions were imposed.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Olden Polynice, Virginia's leading basketball scorer for the past two seasons, was suspended from the Cavalier team for the 1986-87 year, Athletic Director Dick Schultz said.

Schultz said Polynice, who pleaded no contest last week to a shoplifting charge and received a 30-day suspended sentence, will not be allowed to rejoin the team after Jan. 1, even if he meets conditions for such a reinstatement originally set by Schultz and basketball Coach Terry Holland. Schultz also said that Polynice had lost his athletic scholarship.

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — Dutch rider Connie Meijer won a sprint finish in 3 hours, 5 minutes and 29 seconds in the fourth stage of the Women's Tour de France cycling race over 79 miles from Cognac, while Maria Canins of Italy retained the overall lead.

Clinkscale missing; others on hold

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Cowboys starting strong safety Dextor Clinkscale was missing from the ranks of Dallas veterans who reported this weekend to training camp, making the fifth consecutive year that a veteran missed at least the first day of camp.

Meanwhile, Mark Walen was on hold Monday, and the other two holdouts were still holding out as negotiations continued — sort of.

Clinckscale's agent Paul Schoonover said he planned to meet Clinkscale Monday night.

"Technically, he doesn't have to be there for several days, but I'm not saying that's why he's not here," he said.

According to a section of the collective bargaining agreement, Clinkscale is not required to report to the club's training camp any earlier than 15 days before the team's first scheduled pre-season game or July 15, whichever is later.

Mike Sherrard and his agent haven't talked to the Cowboys in a week. Darryl Clack and his agent were scheduled to meet with team representatives this week — maybe. And Walen's fate depends on what they do.

"It's the same status it's been, although if you can continue to talk, that's fine," said Joe Bailey, the NFL club's vice president of administration who is in charge of negotiating contracts.

The problem is there have been no talks between Bailey and Leigh Steinberg, who represents Sherrard. Steinberg is looking for a 4-year contract for his client worth $1.76 million.

THE COWBOYS reportedly offered Sherrard roughly $500,000 below that figure, then dropped their offer to $1.2 last Monday. That was the last time both sides talked.

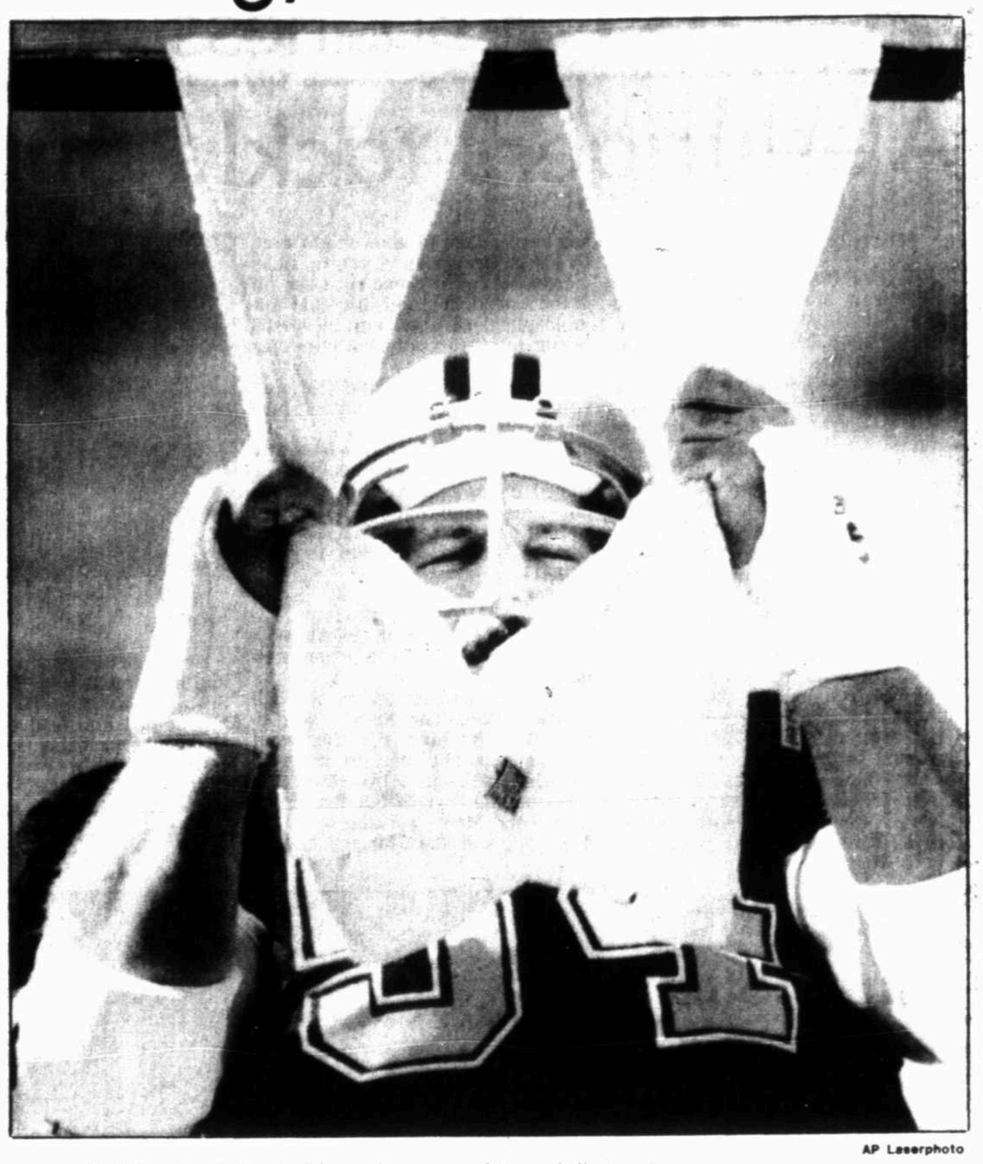

"When they dropped their offer, at that point they said unless we wanted to accept, we were not to bother to call back." Steinberg said. "I have not called since then. It's not a matter of pride. I would call 27 times a day if it made a difference, but they made it clear it won't make a difference."

Steinberg continues to negotiate with the Arizona Outlaws of the United States Football League, and he said the club was presenting options to its four-year, $1.9 million offer.

Clack's agent, Bruce Allen, talked with the Cowboys several times Sunday and said he was scheduled to meet with Bailey in Los Angeles.

"We've set up a meeting to try to find out if this is their final offer," Allen said of the Cowboys' reported four-year $800,000 offer.

Allen reportedly is asking for a 4-year deal worth $1.1 million. Allen said the Cowboys want to give his client a five-year contract.

North Central, Eastern survive loser's bracket

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — A pair of Tall City teams dodged elimination in the District III Little League tournament here on Monday, setting up an all-Midland elimination game tonight.

Midland North Central and Midland Eastern both won games in the loser's bracket Monday and will meet tonight at 8 p.m. at the International League Park. The winner will go on and play Wednesday, the loser is out of the tournament.

North Central escaped elimination by beating Odessa Alamo, 3-0, at the National League Park. Brian Rounding hurled a two-hit shutout to earn the victory. Richie Greth hit a two-run homer while Duane Culpepper doubled and Mike Melzer collected two singles to lead North Central.

It took Midland Eastern nine innings to knock off Tower, 7-3, Mario Rodruguez collecting the win. Robert Thorns took the loss for Tower.

Big Spring American beat Odessa Northeast, 13-8 in a winner's bracket game. They will face the winner of tonight's contest between Midland Western and Odessa Jim Parker, 8 p.m., American League Park.

Wrestlers take 3 golds from Soviets

By BERT ROSENTHAL

MOSCOW (AP) — Heavyweight Bruce Baumgartner knew exactly what he had to do in order to win a gold medal in freestyle wrestling competition at the inaugural Goodwill Games.

Baumgartner, John Smith and Dave Schultz provided the American team with their only victories Monday night in the competition otherwise dominated by the Soviets.

The Soviets, with wrestlers in all 10 finals, took seven gold medals and three silvers. The three golds they didn't get went to Americans — all in close bouts.

The wrestling results, along with the Soviet's sweep of the first three places in the men's all-around gymnastics competition, gave the Soviet Union a total of 145 medals, 59 gold, after the first 11 days of the games. The United States is second in both categories, with 99 medals, 34 gold.

BAUMGARTNER, the 1984 Olympic champion in the 286-pound class, earned the gold by scoring the final point in a 4-4 match against David Gobedzhishvili.

"I knew all I needed was to score the final point to win," Baumgartner said holding an ice pack on his swollen left knee. "I had a two-pointer, he had a two-pointer, he had two one-pointers and I had one. In that case, I knew that if I got the final one, i would win."

Baumgartner got the point with 22 seconds remaining, capping a comeback from an early 3-0 deficit.

The 20-year-old Smith, the youngest member of the American team, defeated Khazen Isaev 6-3 in the 136-pound class. Smith's triumph marked the first loss in the tournament for any member of the Soviet team, which had won 31 consecutive bouts until that point.

Schultz, the 1984 Olympic champion at 163 pounds, rallied from a 2-0 deficit in beating Adlan Varaev.

Baumgartner said he expects to meet Gobedzhisvili again in the world championships at Budapest in October, and build on his series margin over the Soviet. Baumgartner said he leads the series 4-2, while the Soviets claim it's only 3-2.

HE AND Smith complained mildly about the officiating.

"I thought I was the aggressor and they called me for stalling," Baumgartner said. "I think the officiating was fair, with the Soviets getting the benefit of the doubt."

Smith, the victim of what he termed "a questionable call in the second period," said the Soviets have the "home-court advantage."

"I accepted it, and I tried not to let it get to me," he added.

Schultz, the leader of the American team, cuddled his 3-month-old son and smiled broadly during the playing of the national anthem at the awards ceremony following his comeback victory.

The American wrestling silver medalists were Kevin Darkus, 125 pounds, Andre Metzger, 149 pounds, and James Scherr, 198 pounds.

In gymnastics, Yuri Korolev led the Soviet's 1-2-3 finish with 117.50 points.

The United States opened the men's volleyball tournament with a 15-8, 15-9, 15-10 victory over Bulgaria. The Soviet Union defeated Brazil 15-9, 15-6, 15-3, Czechoslovakia rallied to beat Japan 10-15, 8-15, 15-11, 15-11, 16-14, and France downed Poland 5-15, 15-11, 16-14, 16-14.

In tennis, favorites Andrei Chesnokov and Larisa Savchenko, both of the Soviet Union, moved ahead with straight-set victories. Chesnokov defeated American Bobby Blair 6-4, 6-2, in a second-round men's match, while Savchenko beat Doar Rangelova of Bulgaria, 7-6, 6-4 in a women's quarterfinal.

Prices for crude, crude products continue to fall

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Prices of some crude oil and petroleum products fell Monday to their lowest levels in years on the world oil market. Brent North Sea crude oil, a benchmark of international prices, traded at $8.85 a barrel, the lowest price since this grade was introduced in 1976.

Prices in both the New York-based futures market and the London-based open market fell sharply most of the day. Traders recovered some losses on crude oil and petroleum products after King Fahd of Saudi Arabia issued a statement urging the Organization of Petreoleum Exporting Countries to agree on production curbs at its July 28 meeting.

Despite the rally, however, all the petroleum products finished lower for the day, and oil analysts said further declines seemed virtually certain.

The oil market's depressed condition was underscored by a report from the Hughes Tool Co. in Houston that the count of rigs operating in U.S. oilfields had sunk by 9 in the last week, reaching a new postwar low of 663.

The Sun Oil Co., in another development Monday, lowered its posted price — the price it will pay for crude — by $1, to $11.25 a barrel, the lowest since early 1975. Last week, the median posted price for West Texas Intermediate stood at $12.25, down $1 from a week earlier.

George F. Friesen, a vice president at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said crude oil prices were likely to sink lower because "there isn't anything in the market now that can arrest the price decline."

"It's the story of the last 18 months — too much oil is chasing too few consumers," said Philip K. Verleger, a visiting fellow at the Intstitute for International Economics. "But it's been exacerbated by the Gulf producers turning more oil out of the spigot."

According to Verleger and other analysts, the latest round of price drops resulted from the recent sharp increases in crude oil production by OPEC nations, particularly Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

Two respected trade publications, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly and Platt's Oilgram, said Monday that OPEC's output for July would average 19.5 million barrels a day, coming on top of an estimated 19 million barrels a day last month. This, analysts said, has added at least 1.5 million barrels a day to the already-glutted world oil market. OPEC ministers suggested in April that 17.5 million barrels a day would be a suitable production ceiling — if the organization's members could agree on it.

Saudi Arabia's production is said to have reached at least 5.2 million barrels a day, and Kuwait's output is thought to be more than one million barrels a day for the first time in about eight years.

Jack Shaughnessy, an analyst at Wood, Mackenzie & Co., said those reports were the immediate cause of the Brent oil's sharp drop Monday. The British blend, which had been in the $9-a-barrel range since last week, reportedly was sold as low as $8.75 for a single cargo.

However, Shaughnessy and others said that the new estimates of OPEC production — and the fact that these cargoes were on their way to American and European ports to join the already huge surplus of crude oil — were affecting the entire oil market equally.

Dubai's crude oil traded Monday at $6.75 a barrel for August delivery, its lowest level since 1973. Verleger said he would not be surprised to see several crude oils, including the Arab heavy grades, trade in the range of $5 to $6 a barrel.

The benchmark American crude, West Texas Intermediate, has lost $1.74 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange since OPEC ended its meeting at Brioni, Yugoslavia, on June 30 without a production accord.

West Texas Intermediate closed Monday in futures trading at $11.04 a barrel, down 9 cents, and on the open market at $11 a barrel, down 10 cents.

The near-term futures contract for heating oil sank just below 30 cents a gallon in early trading. Later, after Fahd's statement, it rallied to close at 31 cents a gallon, down less than a cent. That was the fuel's lowest close since 1978, according to Peter C. Beutel of Elders Futures Inc.

Futures contracts for leaded and unleaded gasoline reached their lowest levels of the 1980s, trading around 31 cents a gallon, before recovering to close at 33 cents a gallon for leaded and 32 cents a gallon for unleaded.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) - The U.S. dollar fell in early European trading today. Gold prices were little changed.

Foreign exchange dealers said they expected U.S. economic statistics to be issued later in the day to put mild downward pressure on the dollar.

Early trading was dull, and a dealer in Frankfurt commented, "The market is bearish on the dollar, but there is also much hesitancy to trade at these levels."

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 159.85 yen from Monday's 161.35.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—2.1632 West German marks, down from 2.1900

—1.7595 Swiss francs, down from 1.7887

—6.9675 French francs, down from 7.0325

—2.4350 Dutch guilders, down from 2.4650

—1,494.75 Italian lire, down from 1,502.875

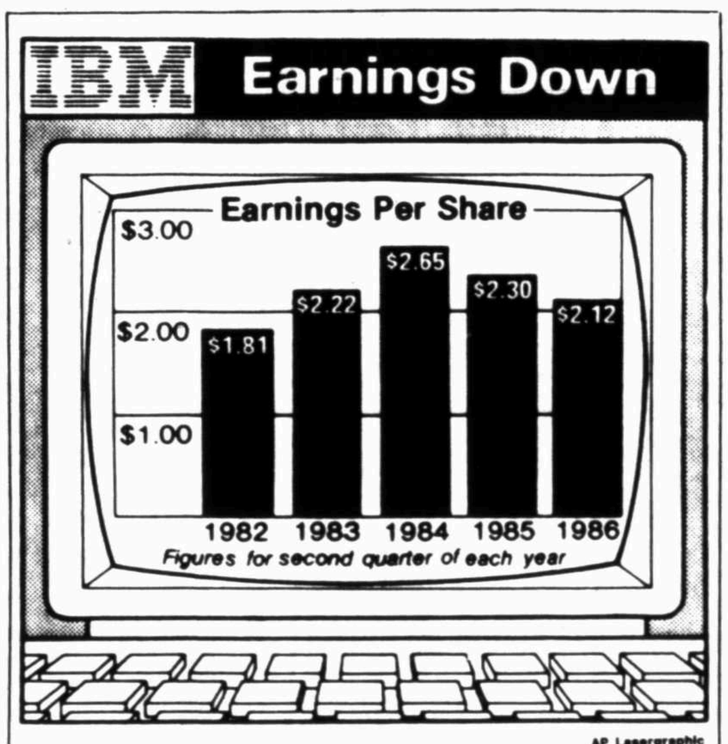

In London, the British pound was quoted higher at $1.4935.

Lower IBM profits reflect economy

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

International Business Machines said Monday that its profits fell 7.7 percent in the second quarter and were down 3.2 percent for the first half of the year — a sign of the company's continuing vulnerability to the sluggish economy.

The results were below analysts' expectations and generally were blamed for the gloomy day on Wall Street. IBM's stock fell $3.87 1-2 to $139.25; it was the most heavily traded on the New York Stock Exchange, and led the way to the nearly 28-point loss among the Dow Jones' 30 industrials.

In announcing the results, IBM Chairman John F. Akers said they "reflect a continuation of the business slowdown" and he warned "it will be difficult to show earnings growth in 1986" unless there is a pickup in capital spending.

The giant New York-based computer maker, the fifth largest company in the country, said that for the quarter ended June 30, its net earnings were $1.3 billion, down from $1.4 billion in the year-ago period. Sales during the quarter were nearly $12.3 billion, a 7.3 percent increase from the 1985 second quarter.

For the first six months of the year, IBM earned $2.3 billion, down from $2.4 billion for the first half of 1985. Revenue during the half totalled $22.4 billion, a 5.6 percent increase from year-ago sales.

IBM has been openly cautious about its earnings prospects since late last year, warning that although international sales were continuing to grow, the domestic outlook was grim. In numerous appearances in the past seven months or so, Akers has repeated the company's worries, in virtually the same words: uncertain North American economy, sluggish capital spending and a cautious outlook.

Since the beginning of the year, many analysts have been readjusting downward their estimates of the company's net income. Even so, many of them have continued to predict annual growth rates of as much as 10 percent for the company, in anticipation of a strong second-half upturn. IBM's first-quarter profit was a 3.1 percent increase from first three months of the 1985, but even that was a disappointment to investors and analysts.

The slowdown in the computer industry's growth, which has persisted for more than a year, has been tied to the languid rate of domestic capital spending.

Supply of domestic cars drops as imports rise

DETROIT (UPI) — Inventories of U.S.-built cars dipped slightly as of July 1, compared with the previous month, as worker vacations and model changeovers cut production, Automotive News magazine reported Monday.

The supply of imported cars, however, reached its highest level in 47 months, the weekly trade publication said.

Inventories of U.S.-built cars on July 1 totaled almost 1.86 million units, down about 7,300 units from the month before but up considerably from the 1.58 million cars in transit and on dealer lots as of July 1, 1985.

Import stockpiles as of July 1 totaled 400,106 units, the highest since Aug. 1982 when the level was 429,663 units. The latest figure compares with 387,911 last month and 310,221 as of July 1, 1985, the study showed.

U.S. models posted a 63-day supply, up slightly from a 62-day selling supply in June and a 58-day supply a year ago. Imports posted a 40-day supply, the highest since March 1983 when it was 41 days, the publication said.

The supply figures generally indicate whether or not a model is selling well. However overbuilding to increase available supply may inflate numbers. Conversely, cars may be in short supply because of lengthy model changeovers or other production interruptions. A 60-day supply is considered normal for most models.

By company, American Motors Corp. posted a 145-day supply of cars, compared with 167 last month and 118 a year ago. Chrysler Corp. reported a 67-day supply, down from 70 days last month and 78 days a year ago.

Ford Motor Co. showed a 55-day supply, unchanged from last month and down slightly from 56 days a year ago. General Motors Corp. had a 67-day supply, up from 63 last month and 54 a year ago.

By make, American Motor Corp.'s Renault Encore was in highest supply of all U.S. cars at 272 days. A $1,000 cash rebate was announced Monday by AMC on that model.

Chrysler's Plymouth Sundance model posted a 325-day supply, but that model is new and has been stockpiled for introduction. The company's Laser model showed a 148-day supply.

General Motor Corp.'s new luxury cars — the Buick Riviera, Oldsmobile Toronado and Cadillac Seville and Eldorado — posted the highest supplies of its car lines at an average 193-day supply.

Oklahoma bank closed, sold

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — First National Bank & Trust Co. of Oklahoma City, tottering on the brink of financial disaster for months, reopens today as part of a California banking company after being closed by the comptroller of the currency.

Federal regulators, scurrying to beat a deadline imposed by an expiring federal law, closed the bank Monday afternoon, then considered bids for several hours before selling the bank to First Interstate Bank of California.

"I am very, very pleased to be able now to chair a bank that I think can respond so well to the needs of this city," W.G. Cairns, chairman and chief executive of First National, told a sidewalk news conference at dusk.

Cairns, who told the bank's employees of the chance during a lengthy staff meeting, said all customers' accounts would be secured when the bank opened this morning as the First Interstate Bank of Oklahoma City. He said he and all other officers and employees would retain their current positions.

It was the 28th bank failure in Oklahoma since the collapse of Penn Square Bank July 5, 1982, sent shock waves throughout the nation's banking community.

Although a much larger bank, the repercussions of First National's failure were expected to be minimal — primarily because it had been anticipated and because the deal with the Los Angeles bank protects all depositors, even those who had more than the $100,000 federally insured limit.

The Penn Square closing signaled the beginning of the Oklahoma economic downturn sparked by the collapse of oil prices and a softening in the agricultural sector — Oklahoma's two biggest industries. Cairns hinted that the First National collapse might be the bellwether of recovery.

"As the community suffers the banks suffer," Cairns said. "And this bank suffered. But now rejuvenated, if you will, with the new capital and with these problem loans gone, the bank is in such a beautiful position to help people now through these difficult times and finance the recovery and the diversification of our economy.

"And I really believe that with the strength behind this bank now, First Interstate, with all of its diversity and all of its capital and all its earnings power, that we are in a position to be a very, very key organization in the redevelopment and the revitalization of the economy here in Oklahoma."

The end of First National came after four years in which its holding company, First Oklahoma Bancorporation Inc., lost $171 million, principally because of losses in the bank's commercial loan portfolio.

First National, with total assets of $1.6 billion, was the state's second largest bank.

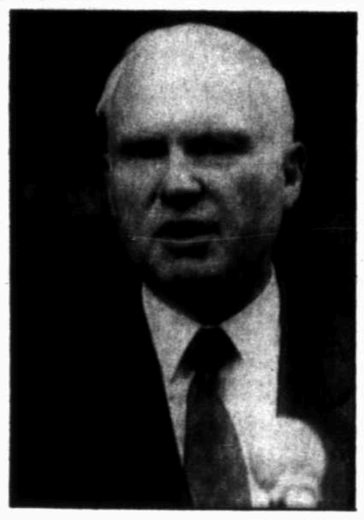

Three banks bid on First National, including Oklahoma City rival Liberty National Bank, which is the state's largest financial institution with assets of $2.3 billion. Cairns identified the other loser as Ballwood Group Inc., a merchant banker in New York.

Legislation allowing out-of-state interests to purchase failed or failing Oklahoma banks was rushed through the recent Legislature amid warnings that a major bank was tottering.

But federal regulators worked feverishly to accomplish the closing and sale before a federal law allowing emergency interstate bank acquisitions expired Monday. They indicated they did not believe the Oklahoma law was sufficient.

The rush of Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. personnel into the office and the closing of the bank's night depository and automatic teller machines hinted at the long-expected collapse before Cairns made his announcement.

Shortly afterward, Allen Whitney, an FDIC spokesman in Washington, D.C., said in a statement that First National was closed by the federal agency late Monday afternoon and that the bank's deposits and certain other liabilities then were purchased by First Interstate.

James G. Cairns, chairman of First National Bank and Trust of Oklahoma City, announces the closure and sale of the bank.

Oklahoma National Bank, which was rescued from insolvency by First National four years ago, also was sold to First Interstate.

"Over the past several years, the bank has experienced serious deterioration in the quality of its assets," said Comptroller of the Currency Robert L. Clark.

"This deterioration has resulted in heavy loan losses which have led to substantial operating losses and severely diminished capital levels," Clark said.

"As a result of widespread and continuous adverse market publicity concerning the financial condition of the bank and its parent, market confidence in the bank had eroded resulting in severe liquidity problems," he said.

Natural Gas Burns Hot. But tempers boil when the federal regulations come down.

Getting hot under the collar about implemented natural gas regulations from Washington doesn't do much for your cash flow. But, understanding them beforehand and then making wise decisions can.

You can get just this type of insight at the upcoming Natural Gas Issues and Development Seminar brought to you by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. Federal Energy Regulatory Commissioner C.M. (Mike) Naeve, 20% of the power affecting your income from natural gas, will keynote this vital seminar. You'll hear it straight from the horses mouth when he discusses the current and projected status of federal regulations that impact your bottom line.

Joining the Commissioner will be Gene Hammons, El Paso Natural Gas Company, who'll express the opinions of an interstate pipeline concern about Reg. 451 (deregulation of old gas) and 436 (equal access). In addition, John Hays, renowned gas attorney, will outline the pitfalls of selling gas across state lines and the legal aspects of "take or pay" provisions.

If you have income from natural gas, this is one free seminar you can't afford to miss. After all, it's much easier to make plans in your best interest when you have an idea of what the future will be.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Terry field gains 1,730 barrel well

From Staff Reports

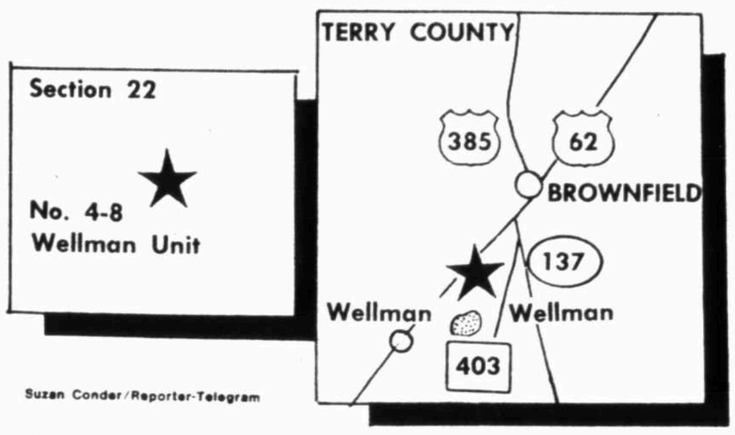

UNION TEXAS PETROLEUM, Midland, reports a prolific Wolfcamp producer in the Wellman field of Terry County with completion of the No. 4-8 Wellman Unit.

On potential test, the well pumped 1,730 barrels of 41.4 gravity crde and no water from perforations 9,504 to 9,511 ft. The interval was acidized with 300 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 565:1.

Drilled to 10,000 ft., the well was plugged back to 9,645 ft. A 5 1/2 inch liner was hung from 9,019 to 9,999 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 9,400 ft. on ground elevation of 3,286 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from south and 1,429 ft. from west lines of Section 22, Block C-36, PSL survey, four and a half miles east of Wellman.

Winkler field reports prolific discoveries

The Crittendon field of Winkler County gained a Fusselman gas discovery and a Strawn gas discovery as HERITAGE RESOURCES, Midland, completed activity in the area.

Heritage potentialed the No. 1 Tubb Estate "21" for a calculated absolute open flow of 22.1 Mmcfd from perforations 18,902 to 18,918 ft. The interval was acidized with 20,000 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 22,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 19,706 and plugged back to 19,628 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 16,600 ft. Pay was topped at 18,902 ft.

Location is 600 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 21, Block C-23, PSL survey, 14 miles northwest of Kermit.

Heritage also completed the No. 1023 Tubb Estate, potentialed for a calculated absolute open flow of 27.9 Mmcfd from perforations 13,859 to 13,957 ft. The interval was acidized with 15,000 gallons of acid.

Scheduled as a 22,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 14,650 ft. and plugged back to 14,065 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 12,934 ft. Pay was topped at 13,859 ft.

Location is 1,000 ft. from north and west lines of Section 23, Block C-23, PSL survey, 14 miles northwest of Kermit.

Cisco producer tests to flow 162 barrels

RUST OIL CORP. has added a Cisco producer to the Cowden field of Ector County with completion of the No. 1 Cowden Ranch "18".

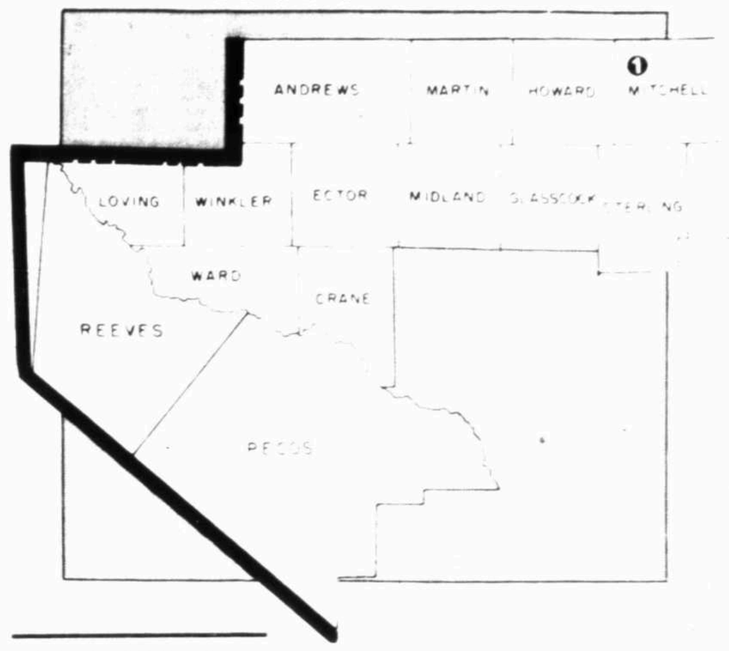

The well was completed to flow 162 barrels of 41 gravity crude, 75 Mcfd and five barrels of water on a 20/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 110 psi. Production is from perforations 8,813 to 8,815 ft., which had been acidized with 1,200 gallons of 15 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 463:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 9,000 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,960 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 4,208 ft. and the Clearfork at 5,546 ft. on ground elevation of 3,009 ft. Pay was topped at 8,813 ft.

Location is 1,880 ft. from east and 560 ft. from north lines of Section 18, Block 43, T-2-S, T&P survey, four miles west of Odessa.

RRC moves to postpone premature well pluggings

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas Railroad Commission, responding to falling oil prices has extended for two months an emergency rule that lengthens the required time to plug an inactive well.

Commission Chairman James E. Nugent said the rule change — extending the period from 90 days to one year — will help stave off the premature abandonment of hundreds of marginal "stripper" wells across Texas.

Nugent said the three-member commission, which regulates Texas' oil and gas industry, is moving to make the rule change permanent.

"With OPEC nations quarreling among themselves and no help coming from Washington, this is a postive step we have taken at the state level to provide desperately needed relief to our hard-pressed oil and gas industry," he said.

The number of well pluggings reported to the commission has declined 25 percent since March when the emergency rule was first adopted. The commission received 1,183 plugging reports in June, compared to 1,573 in March.

"Producers of marginal wells have come under increasing economic pressure as falling crude prices reach or fall below the cost of production," said Nugent. "They are now able to shut in uneconomical wells for up to a year without going through the expensive plugging process."

Nugent said postponing the plugging decision saves thousands of barrels of oil.

"Once plugged, the cost of re-entering these wells makes it unlikely they will ever produce again," he said.

Commission figures showed that out of 212,000 producing oil wells in Texas, 142,000 are stripper wells which produce 10 barrels a day or less. Stripper wells produce about 435,000 barrels a day.

OIL AND GAS DIGEST

Pogo files new lawsuit against United Gas

HOUSTON (SWN) — Pogo Producing Co. has filed a new lawsuit against United Gas Pipe Line Co. to enforce the terms of 29 natural gas purchase contracts covering producing federal and State of Louisiana offshore oil and gas leases in the Gulf of Mexico. A hearing on the petition has been set for July 22.

This latest suit, filed Friday in a Louisiana State district court in New Orleans, seeks a Writ of Mandamus, or preliminary injunction to require United to pay the full base contract price for all gas taken in May, 1986, and all subsequent months from the properties covered by the contracts. Pogo's pleading recites that United paid Pogo for gas delivered from the offshore properties in May of this year at the rate of $1.90 per MMBtu. This amount, Pogo says, is in contravention of contracts with United, each of which stipulates higher prices than the $1.90 per MMBtu paid by United. Pogo asks the Louisiana court to direct United to pay Pogo at least the base contract prices for sales in the month of May and subsequent months.

Tenneco announces formation of company

HOUSTON (SWN) The formation of Tenneco United Co., a trading company headquartered in Los Angeles, was announced by Tenneco Inc.

Tenneco United is a joint venture equally owned by a unit of Tenneco Inc. and Indamerica International, Inc., Los Angeles.

The new company will develop and manage world trade with the United States with a particular focus on the Peoples Republic of China.

Indamerica, founded in 1946, is a prominent trading company specializing in international business. It provides international trading and trade finance expertise including a worldwide distribution network.

Mobil affiliate makes North Sea gas strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mobil Oil Corp. announced that its British affiliate has struck gas in the company's third North Sea discovery this summer.

In its latest find, Mobil North Sea Ltd. hit gas in an exploratory well in Block 49-29b of the Southern Gas Basin.

The well, in which Mobil North Sea has a 60 percent interest, flowed gas at the rate of 31 million cubic feet a day. The well, located in 122 feet of water, was drilled to a total depth of about 8,400 feet.

Gas Council (Exploration) Ltd. holds the remaining 40 percent stake in the well.

Earlier this summer Mobil North Sea discovered oil in Block 9-13b, 210 miles north of Aberdeen, Scotland. That well, in which Mobil holds a 50 percent interest, yielded oil at the rate of 6,208 barrels a day and gas at 3.4 million cubic feet a day.

Mobil's British affiliate also made a gas find in Block 48-17a in the Southern Basis. Mobil North Sea is the sole participant in the well, which tested up to 34 million cubic feet of gas a day.

Partners Oil meets with its principal bank

HOUSTON (SWN) — E. Ralph Daniel, president, Partners Oil Company, announced the current status of its discussions with its principal bank.

Representatives of the company and the bank have held informal meetings since last year and formal meetings since April of this year evaluating available alternatives toward resolution of the company's indebtedness to the bank. The company did not make its scheduled debt service payment on June 30, and therefore is in default under the provisions of its loan agreement with the bank.

The company has proposed the settlement of its indebtedness by granting to the bank a production payment made up of a significant percentage of its future net oil and gas revenues. In addition, the company would issue shares of its common stock to the bank thereby making it a more significant shareholder than its present holdings. The bank has been evaluating the company's proposal as well as other alternatives available to it. Both parties have indicated a desire to achieve a mutually acceptable resolution and are continuing to conduct negotiations along these lines. Any settlement arrangement would be subject to the approval of the company's shareholders.

Accounting method change lowers Texas Eastern profit

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texas Eastern Corp. announced that it will change its oil and gas exploration and production accounting method to the successful efforts method from full cost accounting. The change will be made effective in the second quarter.

The company stated that the change in its accounting methodology is appropriate in view of current and anticipated crude oil prices coupled with its previously announced decision to suspend U.S. oil and gas exploration activities.

As a result of the change, Texas Eastern's operating results for prior periods will be restated. The restatement will reduce the company's retained earnings at December 31, 1985 by approximately $139 million. Earnings for first quarter 1986 will be restated to $37 million, or $0.70 per common share, as compared to $6 million, or $0.11 per common share, reported earlier utilizing the full cost methodology.

According to I. David Bufkin, chairman and CEO, the adoption of the successful efforts method will benefit future periods' operating results through lower depreciation charges against oil and gas revenues. However, the change will also reduce the amount of interest and exploration costs currently being capitalized under the full cost method.

Bufkin stated, "Due primarily to the reduction in revenues caused by lower oil prices and to the inclusion in second quarter 1985 results of a $90 million favorable tax credit applicable to foreign operations, Texas Eastern's operating results for the second period of 1986 are not expected to compare favorably with those reported for the comparable 1985 period. The impact of lower crude oil prices on the company's earnings and the uncertainty as to when price improvements might occur require a view of the appropriateness of maintaining the quarterly common dividend rate at the current $0.55 per share. Any adjustment of the company's rate will be considered at the next regularly scheduled board of directors meeting on August 7."

Ex-controller pleads guilty to lying to FAA

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former air-traffic controller at Midland Regional Airport pleaded guilty Monday in federal court to lying before a Federal Aviation Administration board inquiring into his "possible operational error."

In another case, an ex-banker pleaded "not guilty" to embezzlement.

The former controller, 23-year-old Thomas Odin Eliason, is to be sentenced at noon on Aug. 11 by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

He could be sentenced up to five years in prison.

The ex-banker, Olen Mack Brock, 49-year-old former vice president and loan officer of the defunct First National Bank of Midland, pleaded "not guilty" before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith to three counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds, and benefiting from a loan transaction between the bank and a customer.

Brock, who had been a banker in Ruidoso, N.M., resigned his position following his indictment last week, said W.H. Heatley, Brock's attorney.

The indictment was a product of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's probe into improper banking practices in the Permian Basin.

The magistrate released Brock under a personal recognizance bond.

Brock could be sentenced up to 15 years in prison — five years on each count — if he is convicted.

He was charged with sharing in profits through a $21,700 loan made to Quado Construction Co. in 1981, with embezzling $12,500 by causing $87,000 to be loaned to The Bost Land Corp., and receiving an undisclosed amount of money through another loan.

The First National Bank failed on Oct. 14, 1983.

IN A PLEA-BARGAINING agreement, Eliason pleaded guilty to one count — making a false statement to the FAA investigative board.

The government is to dismiss another count which alleged that Eliason erased that portion of a tape which reflected an "operational error" he had made on Jan. 20, 1986.

The error was in Eliason's failure to keep a 3-mile separation between the two aircraft as required by FAA registration.

The two planes came within 2½ miles of each other, said Eliason's attorney, J. Michael Cunningham.

One plane was reportedly gaining altitude after taking off while the other aircraft was flying over head. In March, the FAA relieved Eliason of his air-traffic control duties and re-assigned him to administrative activities.

"He's not an operational air-traffic controller," said Cunningham. "His job is being reviewed at this time."

Cunningham noted that Eliason's mistake was "trying to cover up" the operational error he made when he was directing air traffic.

"He panicked," Cunningham said. "Operational errors are very common."

Cunningham said that the charge was not the same as perjury, such as lying to a grand jury.

In a Feb. 4 statement, now part of a court document, made to an FAA special agent, Eliason admitted making the tape erasure of voice recordings made when he was "working at the approach-control position" at Midland Regional Airport.

"I was losing separation" between two aircraft, Eliason said in the statement. "I had an operational error."

IN THE PREVIOUS week or so, Eliason said he had been under "extreme pressure from management" by "recording me on position for later scrutiny" and monitoring him for "coordination errors, procedural errors...I felt at the time my job was in jeopardy — that I was being recorded for cataloging my errors to use in my removal."

Eliason said his "mild paranoia" was due to "a basic lack of communication with upper management."

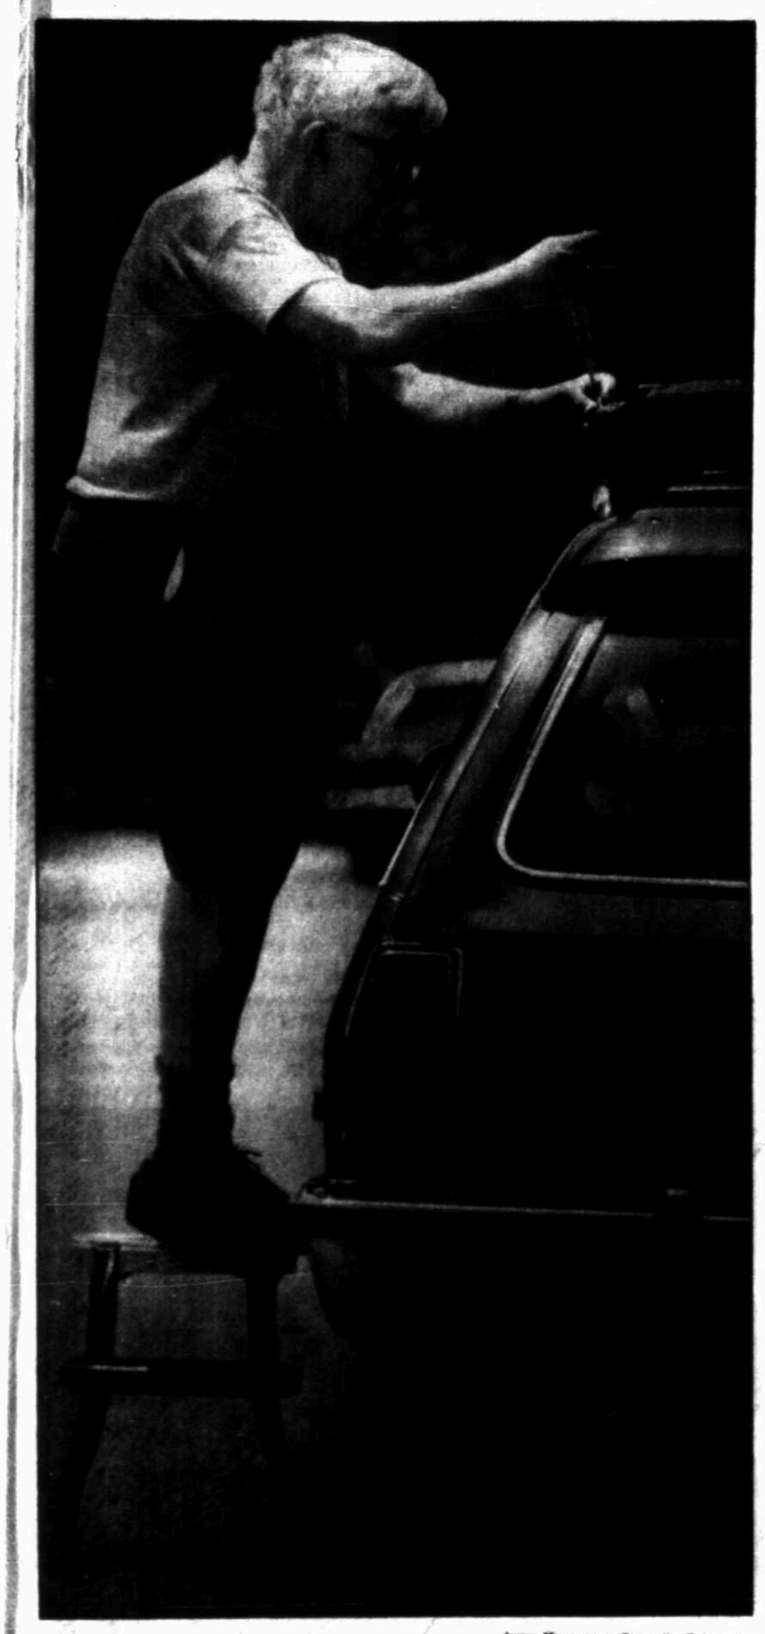

"...When I had the errors," Eliason said, "I felt instant panic and quickly rushed to cover it up" by erasing the evidence in the tape room.

Later, he admitted giving false statements to the FAA panel about the operational error and acknowledged his mistakes after suffering the pangs of guilt.

"I now realize the seriousness of erasing government tape," he said. "It's the wrong option no matter the circumstances...I also know now of my responsibility to report any operational deviation or error exactly as they occur; this is my job to do so...

"The error was just that — a mistake — but covering it up is something infinitely more wrong."

Eliason said he values his "job quite highly" and plans to make a career in the FAA.

Cats more likely to be rabid than dogs

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The scruffy cat lurked at the woman's home until she gave in to the hungry look in its eyes.

As she bent over to offer it some food, the ungrateful cat hissed, scratched and bit her.

The incident last year prompted, Midland veterinarian Dr. Craig Brown to put the cat to sleep so a brain biopsy could be performed to check for evidence of rabies.

"It's never an easy thing to do," Brown said.

"Unfortunately, there is no way of telling if an animal has rabies until it is put to sleep. But when a human life is in danger, the animal's life becomes secondary," he said.

That cat was not rabid.

But, statistically speaking, it easily could have been.

Atlanta's Center for Disease Control statistics reveal, for the fifth straight year, more U.S. cats than dogs contracted rabies, which can be fatal to both humans and animals.

Figures indicate that nationwide 127 cats were reported rabid in 1985 compared with 113 dogs.

Patricia Armstrong, assistant director of Midland Animal Control, said a case of human rabies reported in Midland in 1985, which was not fatal, was contracted from a cat.

No other rabid animals were reported, but it is possible some cases occurred, she said.

Ms. Armstrong said about 10,000 dogs and 10,000 cats within the city limits were vaccinated for rabies last year.

Those figures probably only represented one-third of the cat and dog population in Midland, Armstrong said.

She said cats were more likely to contract rabies because they are "roamers" and more likely to attack animals always suspected of being rabid, such as skunks, raccoons and foxes.

And, although it appears that cats are more likely to be rabid than dogs, there are no laws to keep cats from roaming Midland streets as there are for dogs.

"There is no leash law for cats because it would be impossible to enforce.

"You can't catch a cat when they're jumping across fences or climbing up trees," said Karen Hoffman, Animal Control spokesman.

However, Ms. Hoffman said there is a similar "nuisance law" for cats.

"They are not allowed to become a nuisance to surrounding neighbors," she said, and are confiscated if they do.

Only 15 states require vaccinations for cats, compared to 47 states that require the vaccines for dogs.

In Texas, however, the law stipulates that both dogs and cats are required to be vaccinated against rabies by the age of four months and then again once each year, Hoffman said.

Commissioners defer major decisions

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County commissioners made no major decisions in their Monday meeting.

But they noted that:

— The Midland County Jail got another nudge toward renovation.

— Culver Youth Home expansion likely will began this fall.

— The Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department would get the county's moral support — in other words, the backing of the county in helping maintain Greenwood's fire-fighting equipment but no county funds.

— And the commissioners considered yet another proposal which addressed the county jail issue.

Midland architect Walter Pate said that the Texas Commission on Jail Standards has approved the renovation schematic design of the jail, which takes in the fifth floor of the 1930-built courthouse, and that the "design development" phase of jail renovation is underway.

"The (jail) commission has never rejected a plan," said Pate. "They have commented on the plans, but they have never rejected a plan."

Renovation of the 85-bunk jail was authorized in a $3-million bond issue in May 1985.

In approving the renovation, the voters rejected a $9.9-million bond issue to build a new $8.4-million jail on a seven-acre tract just east of Midland.

THE JAIL HAS been cited for flaws by the jail commission, which also restricted jail population to 85 inmates.

Excess prisoners are transported to outlying county jails at Midland County's expense.

Though Pate did not indicate when jail renovation might get underway, he did said that expansion of Culver Youth Home likely would begin no later than early November.

Bids are to be received from general contractors on Sept. 22.

"Assuming everything falls in line," said Pate, "...we can initiate the contract that week (of Sept. 22)."

The facility for troubled juveniles is to be enlarged at a cost of $501,000, which is coming from the $3-million bond issue.

"I can't believe we are going to get so much done this year," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, who also noted that remodeling of the Midland County Courthouse Annex is virtually completed.

Craig, a real-estate broker who has been commissioner since 1983, was defeated in his bid for re-election in the Republican Party primary runoff election.

His successor will be decided in the Nov. 4 general election, when Democrat Don Boydstun and Republican Guy McCrary vie for the $24,000-a-year post.

Culver Youth Home expansion calls for the addition of maximum-security facilities for four boys and two girls, a day room and other support facilities, a classroom and headquarters for the Juvenile Probation Department, said Bill Parsons, the project architect.

The expansion, which is to be completed September 1987, will bring the home's maximum- and minimum-security capacity to 20 youths.

W.A. "ANDY" Glasscock, chief of the Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department, sought financial aid for the community's fire department.

"You probably think I'm another guy asking for money," Glasscock told the commissioners. "You're right. We are."

Instead of cash, the commissioners offered Glasscock and the Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department moral support and the use of the county's mechanics in maintaining Greenwood fire-fighting equipment.

"We know money is tight," Glasscock said.

Craig alluded to another volunteer fire department which operates in Northeast Midland County.

"We don't want to get ourselves in a position of helping one and not the other," he said. "I think there is a real need for a volunteer fire department."

Craig noted that "I can't see that it would cost the county any amount of money to speak of" to help maintain Greenwood's equipment.

He praised the volunteer fire department.

"We've got two old trucks, and we're keeping them up the best we can," said Glasscock, who is a detective sergeant in the Midland Police Department.

Currently, Glasscock said the volunteer fire department is in need of additional communications pagers and gear for its 35 volunteers.

"WE DON'T WANT to look like a fly-by-night organization...that's going to fall down," Glasscock said. "We are going to hang in there. We are going to be winners. We can fight fires now. We are ready."

Glasscock said that the city of Midland Fire Department "is going to be the backbone of fire-fighting" in the city and county.

"We are going to help them."

With the volunteer fire department in the Greenwood community, Glasscock noted that its "response time" to Greenwood fires would be quicker than that of the Midland Fire Department.

Through their pagers, Greenwood volunteers are notified of fires in their community after an alarm is turned into the Midland Fire Department by the caller dialing the 911 emergency number.

In addressing the on-going jail issue, James Epley Jr., Midland financial consultant, proposed that a group of private investors build a new jail on county land about 1½ blocks east of the courthouse and connect the jail and courthouse with an underground tunnel.

The jail would be leased to the county, which, Epley proposed, would rent cell space to the federal government for the housing of minimum-security federal prisoners.

From those proceeds, the county would pay for the lease under a lease-purchase plan, and the investors would recoup their investment and make a profit.

The commissioners took no action on the proposal.

Ector County Commissioners attempt to cut $2.5 million

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners Monday began three days of meetings with department heads to decide how to cut some $2.5 million from the county's 1987 operating budget.

Preliminary proposals indicate close to $570,000 could be cut from the budgets of the coliseum, county airport and public works areas — with the road and bridge fund bearing the brunt of cuts, perhaps as much as $500,000.

Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace says it's too early for county employees "to be worried about their jobs."

He indicated, however, consideration is being given to giving county employees five unpaid days off each month, which would mean some county offices would be open only about four days a week.

Commissioners also are considering cutting authorized positions that are not filled by Oct. 1 from next year's budget.

Pace said commissioners are trying to avoid an across-the-board pay cut.

He said he believes, however, that because of the state of the local economy taxpayers "will not see a tax increase this year."

Budget hearings were to continue today concerning mandated services and their supportive departments, which are supported by general fund revenues.

This includes departments headed by elected officials as well as the county's court system.

Silver City had tarnished reputation

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — This city near the Red River was a gateway to North Texas in the 19th century as it is now, and that geography led to a colorful piece of history that is little known today.

It's the story of legendary Silver City — an old neighborhood that embodies the history of Gainesville's brothels, saloons and gambling activities.

Richard Kastl, director of the Morton Museum, rediscovered Silver City while poring over old newspapers and records at the courthouse.

Silver City, Kastl says, was a place where more than 100 prostitutes tried to soothe the end of a tired cowboy's month on a long cattle roundup. It was located from west Church Street between Elm and the fork of the Trinity Creek, where the fairgrounds near Frank Buck Zoo are today.

"Sometimes I wonder if the beginning of Silver City was because of the cowboys," Kastl said. "I imagine the roots of the activity began before that, when Civil War soldiers were in the area. Of course, that's all hearsay."

Silver City boomed between 1870 and 1910, according to Kastl, when Texas economic vitality depended solely on one commodity: cattle.

Cowboys regularly passed through Cooke County driving cattle to railroads here to be shipped north and east. After several weeks in a saddle, they were looking for ways to spend a month's pay. Hot, tired, dusty and thirsty, they sought the cool drink and entertainment they found at Silver City.

Unwashed — and sometimes unholy — cow-punchers crowded into establishments like George Holsapple's saloon and "boarding house" on the north side of the town square, Kastl says, where they could find plenty of poker, cold beer, warm whiskey and friendly barroom girls. The girls were known unaffectionately to outsiders as "soiled doves."

Once inside, a cowboy could get a bath, a shave, a warm bed, and often some female company. It is uncertain what the going rate was for such services, but Kastl estimates the price of a fling in the early 1880s was somewhere around $5, maybe as little as $2.

Most ladies of the evening were transients, traveling from city to city. Some stayed in Silver City for a few months, while others lingered several years. Madames, or operators of the "boarding houses" remained in the area for as long as 20 years, Kastl said.

Women of the time did not have the luxury of choosing from many occupations, Kastl noted. Many respectable women were seamstresses or school teachers, if they worked at all.

Occasionally, authorities rounded up the prostitutes, fined them and then let them go again. It was one way for the city to increase its revenues. The ladies were usually back at "work" by the end of the same day.

There was more than prostitution going on in the saloons of Silver City. Gambling played a big part in town, as well. The main diversion was poker, where many a cowpoke figured to double his earnings but often ended up in a fight.

At one time, Gainesville boasted as many as 26 saloons, and Kastl is quick to add that not all were involved in bedroom trade. Some were respectable places where businessmen congregated, he said. One, the Lindsay House Hotel, was considered the best place in town to stay.

Kastl has yet to encounter a written account of Silver City, probably because the cowboys couldn't write, he says.

So the only record of the forbidden city is court documents and arrest records of gamblers and prostitutes who went to the place and were caught.

Deliberations resume in 'kidnapped' Central American's trial

DALLAS (AP) — Jurors in federal court today resumed deliberations in a drug-smuggling case where both sides agree the defendant was unlawfully arrested and returned to the United States.

A wealthy citizen of the marijuana-rich Central American country of Belize had just gotten off a plane in Guatemala when he was met by a Drug Enforcement Administration agent wearing a "Miami Vice" cap, authorities said.

Angel John Zabaneh, held overnight at the airport in Guatemala City, was whisked off to Houston and eventually to Dallas, where he is on trial for allegedly flying 1,120 pounds of marijuana into Longview in 1981.

Officials say Zabaneh has been held without bond since his arrest eight months ago. The charges — including conspiracy and possession, importation and distribution of marijuana — carry a maximum sentence of 39 years in prison and a fine of $135,000.

Prosecutors and defense lawyers agree he was unlawfully arrested. The defense went as far as to label Zabaneh's case a kidnapping.

However, two federal judges said they would not bar the prosecution of the 31-year-old banana and citrus grower.

The government's power to prosecute, because of a little-known but well-established line of precedent-setting cases stretching back to the 1880s, is not hindered when a defendant is taken into custody illegally, whether the arrest takes play inside or outside the country.

Congress has twice admonished federal drug agents in the past 10 years for abusing the latitude in arrest powers granted by those court cases. Congress also passed a law in 1976 specifically outlawing arrests "with respect to narcotics control efforts" in foreign lands.

But officials said cases such as Zabaneh's, only a few of which his attorneys believe occur each year, may proceed unfettered because Congress has not backed up its stated concern with any remedy for such illegal arrests overseas.

"I really think that in the war on drugs, John Zabaneh has been a victim," said Dallas lawyer Dan Guthrie, a former federal prosecutor who is one of Zabaneh's defense attorneys.

DEATHS

Tom Arnold Mallan

Services for Tom Arnold Mallan of Midland will be Wednesday at 9 a.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Leon Odom of Tyler officiating.

Mallan, 75, died at a Houston hospital Saturday.

He was born August 19, 1911, in Bronx, N.Y., and was raised in Mt. Vernon, N.Y. He attended Mt. Vernon High School, the Manlius Preparatory Institute and Colgate University. During World War II, Mallan served with the 42nd Rainbow Division and the 90th Division, receiving the Purple Heart. He moved to Midland in 1952 and became a homebuilder until his retirement in 1979. Mallan married Gloriadel Bowen on May 25, 1951, in San Angelo.

He is survived by his wife, Gloriadel Mallan of Midland; a son, Tom C. Mallan of Midland; a daughter, Mrs. Michael L. Fontenot of Boulder, Colo.; a son-in-law, Michael Fontenot of Boulder, Colo.; three sisters: Mrs. Gordon Owen and Mrs. B.O. Moxon, both of Vancouver, British Columbia and Mrs. W.L. Smith of Pembroke of Ontario, Canada and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, PO Box 2621, 79702.

Joe Ray Pitts

Services for Joe Ray Pitts of Midland will be Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. in the Christian Life Center with Greg Hammond, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pitts, 65, died at his home Monday morning after a lengthy illness.

He was born Oct. 31, 1920, in Josephine. He graduated from Josephine High School and attended Brantley Draughan College in Fort Worth. He moved to Borger in 1944 and then to Midland in 1969 to reside with his sister, Vera Morrow.

Pitts is survived by a son, Larry Pitts of Ennis; a daughter, Carol Geordano of El Paso; two sisters: Vera Morrow of Midland and Marie Wilhite of Westville, Okla.; two grandchildren; a nephew; two nieces and several great-nieces and nephews.

Charles Lee Straub

STANTON — Charles Lee Straub, 25, of Bryan, died Sunday at Giddings of injuries he received in an automobile accident.

Rosary will be today at 8 p.m. at the St. Joseph Catholic Church in Stanton. Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the St. Joseph Catholic Church, with the Rev. Frank Colacicco officiating. Burial will be at St. Joseph Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Straub was born September 20, 1960, in Stanton. He was a student at Texas A&M University. He married the former Tyra Swanson on May 5, 1985, in Victor, New York.

Survivors include his wife; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Straub of Stanton; two brothers, Martin Ray Straub and Raymond Lee Straub, both of Stanton; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G.E. Anderson of Brady.

Jeanne Blanchard

Graveside services for Mrs. Jeanne Blanchard, formerly of Midland, will be Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Resthaven Memorial Park, with Dr. Ray Riddle, chaplain of Hospice, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

Mrs. Blanchard, 63, died at Rockport Monday morning.

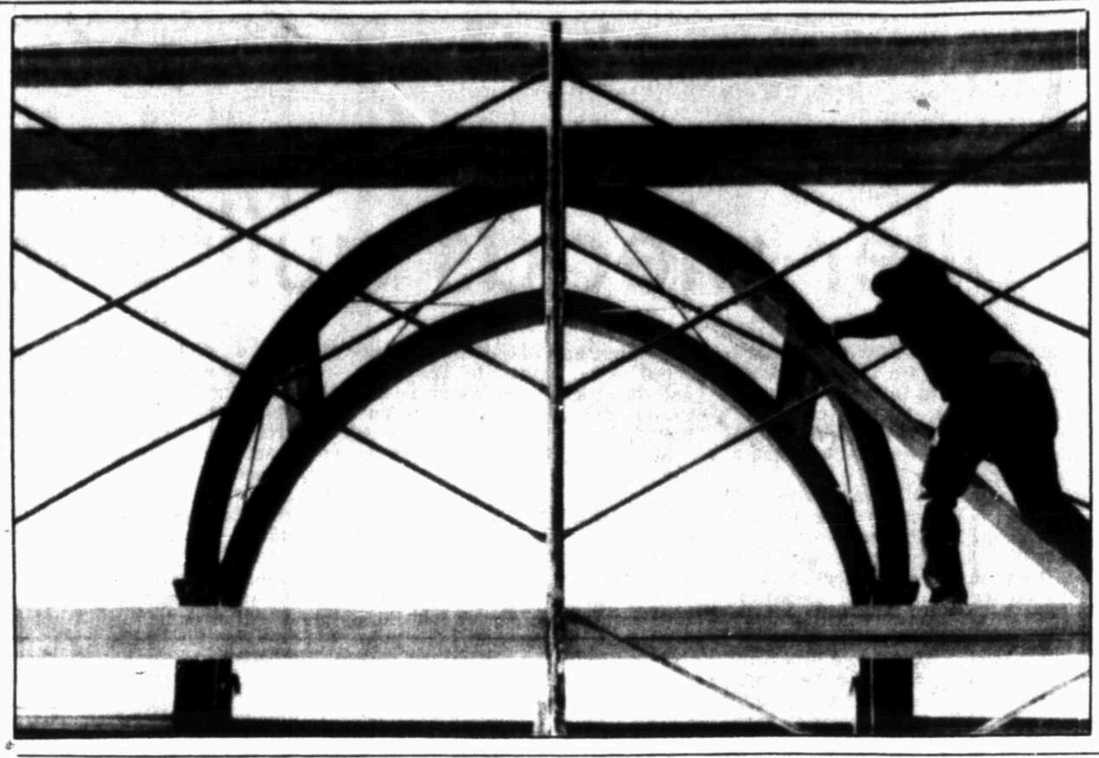

She was born Oct. 1, 1922, in Wellington, Kan. While living in Midland she was very active in the Geological Wives of Midland, a Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary member, and a member of Jane Phillips Sorority. Mrs. Blanchard was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Rockport.

She is survived by her husband; Ken Blanchard of Rockport; a son, Steve Blanchard of San Antonio; a daughter, Mrs. Nancy Cowden of Midland; a sister, Mrs. Wilma Record of Yukon, Okla.; and four grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, PO Box 2621, 79702.

Nancy Bates

Services for Mrs. Nancy Bates are pending with Ellis Funeral Home. She died at her home Monday morning.

Family's suit seeks to link store to man's death

DALLAS (AP) — A family waging a war against improper gun sales has started its latest battle against a sporting goods company and a gun distributor in connection with a death.

John Wilson began the battle against Oshman's Sporting Goods Inc. and a gun distributor after he said he learned how his brother's killer got the weapon he used to pepper a karate studio with bullets.

The Wilsons have sued Oshman's Sporting Goods and the distributor, accusing them of "gross negligence" contributing to Jimmy Wilson's death.

Authorities said Barry Wayne Shaw, 21, was convicted in the karate-studio shooting on Sept. 24, 1984, and also for firing shots in the foyer of his former high school three days later.

The Wilsons, during Shaw's trial, the Wilsons learned that two days before the studio shooting, he had bought a 9mm Uzi and 100 rounds of ammunition from an Oshman's store in Hurst while on two years probation for felony theft.

"We feel like the system let us down," Wilson told the Dallas Times Herald. "People who have the authority to sell these vicious weapons are pitifully falling down on the job."

The suit seeks more then $960,000. It alleges that Oshman's employees violated the Federal Gun Control Act by failing to obtain Shaw's signature on a required firearm disclosure form before selling him the weapon.

Attorneys for Oshman's and the Philadelphia-based gun distributor, Action Arms Ltd., filed motions last week saying allegations in the negligence suit are unfounded and that there are no grounds for damages.

A gun purchaser by law must state he is not a convicted felon and answer several questions about his mental health, drug use and citizenship.

It is illegal to knowingly sell a weapon to a felon. But federal law mandates only that gun sellers obtain a signed firearm transaction disclosure form. No background check is required.

John Wilson and the Wilsons' attorney, Mark Siegel, hope to win restribution for the family and tighter restrictions on sales of firearms.

Five burglaries reported to Midland police

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department today reported five burglaries, including one of electronic equipment valued at more than $2,000 from a local business.

James McDaniel, an employee at Johnson Tire Co., 2210 W. Front St., told police two aviation scanners in leather carriers valued at $1,600, and two other scanners valued at $575 were taken from the business sometime between Saturday and Monday morning.

Reports said entry was apparently gained through an east window.

A stereo valued at $79 and a power saw valued at $75 were reported stolen from a storage unit belonging to Haynie Construction, 4600 Sinclair Ave.

Entry was apparently gained by cutting a padlock. Two other units on the property also were reported broken into with an unknown number of items missing.

The burglary of a vehicle was also reported to police early today.

John Covarrubias, 1507 S. Baird St., told police a set of speakers valued at $180 was taken from his vehicle while it was parked at the Crown Royal Club, 1110 E. Scharbauer Dr. The burglary occurred sometime between 9:30 p.m. Sunday and 1 a.m. Monday. Entry was apparently gained through the window on the driver's side.

In other reports, an AM/FM cassette stereo valued at $250 was reported stolen from a vehicle Nickel Used Cars, 101 E. Florida Ave. Entry to the vehicle, a 1974 Ford, was apparently gained through a vent window on the driver's side.

Two employees of Wynn Pump and Supply told police three custom made pump racks valued at $285 were stolen from the bed of a pickup truck late Sunday or early Monday morning.

The vehicle was parked in the 900 block of Bentwood Dr. when the burglary occurred, reports said.

Engineers on trial for computer programs' theft

DALLAS (AP) — Two engineers are accused of stealing computer programs valued at $20 million when they left Texas Instruments to work for another company, prosecutors say.

Testimony in State District Judge Ed Kinkeade's court was expected to begin today. Assistant District Attorney Ted Steinke said he expects the trial of Thomas B. Schalk and Robert G. Leonard to last about two weeks.

Attorneys say the case marks the first time in Dallas County that, under the state's theft of trade secrets statute, a defendant has been tried on charges of allegedly stealing computer programs.

The engineers were indicted by a Dallas County grand jury in September 1985 on charges of theft of trade secrets, a third-degree felony that carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

But defense attorney Mike Carnes said neither of his clients are accused of actually stealing anything.

"They are accused of copying trade secrets," said Carnes, adding that one of the issues to be decided in the trial is "whether what was copied was a trade secret."

Officials said Schalk and Leonard, who both have doctoral degrees, were TI employees working on the development of programs that permitted voice control of computers.

The men resigned from TI to work for Voice Control Systems Inc., a company that designs voice-controlled telephones.

NASA engineer to speak to businessmen's fellowship

From Staff Reports

The Midland Chapter of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International will hold an interdenominational meeting Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Midland Hilton.

The featured speaker will be Robert "Bob" Bobola, the Chief Orbiter Project Engineer for the NASA Space Shuttle Program.

Bobola has appeared on CBN's 700 Club, Canada's 100 Huntly Street, and FGBMFI Good News programs on television.

He speaks in Christian organizations, churches and FGBMFI chapters in the United States and Canada.

Dinner will precede the meeting at 6 p.m. and is $6 per person.

Groups join together to clean up east Midland

From Staff Reports

Midlanders will join together Saturday to clean up the East Highway 80 entrance to the city and the remainder of east Midland.

The clean-up effort will begin at 9 a.m. at the Park Place Motel, corner of East Front and Carver Streets.

Co-sponsored by the Midland Jaycees, Eastside Area Business Owners, Eastside Economic Development Task Force and Clean Midland, the clean-up effort will concentrate on properties along East Highway 80 and littered and overgrown lots along Lamesa Road.d

Midland Jaycee project chairman said "We need at least 300 volunteers to work about two hours each in order to clean all of the properties."

Area businesses have agreed to donate trash bags and gloves. Midland County will provide heavy equipment — mowers and front-end loaders.

Manuel Carrasco, Eastside Economic Development Task Force chairman, said the East Highway 80 entrance is "very important to all of Midland, because it is often the first impression people have of Midland.

Smoking areas restricted at Ector County Coliseum

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners Tuesday adopted a policy that will drastically reduce smoking privileges at the Ector County Coliseum.

Coliseum Director Don Thorn, in requesting the ban on smoking, said non-smoking areas would include the permanent seating areas, the main floor of the coliseum and the restrooms.

Smoking would still be permitted in the concourse and lobby areas.

Thorn said the smoking ban will not apply to Building G, the coliseum grounds or exhibit areas.

Thorn said the ban on smoking should provide for a cleaner facility, address recurring complaints from non-smoking citizens and reduce a potential fire hazard.

"The policy would be installed over the course of several upcoming events with a positive PR campaign," he said, "and implemented with the assistance of the ushers, security and coliseum indoor marquees."

The smoking ban was adopted by commissioners on a four-to-one vote, with only Precinct 2 Commissioner Bryan Henderson voting against it.

TRIAL

"The actions of the DEA agent in this case constitute a clear violation of the law."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Revesz, who prosecuted the case in its early stages, also criticized the agent who arrested Zabaneh.

"No, I don't think it's right," he said. "They (DEA agents) have got to follow the law. It kind of puts us in a bad position."

DEA agents have refused comment on the case during the trial. But Phil Jordan, special agent in charge of the DEA's Dallas division, disputed that his agency acts illegally in such cases.

He noted that neither Belize nor Guatemala protested Zabaneh's arrest in November 1985 followed a series of debriefings with informants who told DEA agents that Zabaneh and his family were responsible for one-third to one-half of all the drugs smuggled into the United States from Belize.

Court documents show the total is about 100,000 pounds of marijuana and 3,000 kilograms of cocaine since 1978.

He was brought to the United States to answer a federal drug indictment in New Orleans, and later a criminal complaint on marijuana charges in Jackson, Miss.

Both cases were dropped in favor of the Dallas case because of problems with obtaining informants' testimony, Revesz said.

Crime Stoppers seeks data on burglaries

Crime Stoppers is seeking information about several burglaries of pharmacies in Odessa that have occurred in the past several weeks.

Someone June 24 broke into the Nelson Pharmacy, 508 N. Sam Houston.

Three pint bottles of cough syrup containing codeine were taken in the burglary.

This burglary is similar to other recent burglaries of pharmacies in Odessa, in that cough syrup containing codeine was all that was taken.

Investigators believe the same party may be responsible for these crimes.

Anyone with information about these burglaries is encouraged to contact Crime Stoppers.

A reward of up to $1,000 is available this week only for information that leads to the indictment or indictments of the person or persons responsible.

Crime Stoppers also pays cash rewards for information on other felony crimes.

In Midland, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 694-TIPS; in Odessa, 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.

Lottery ruling issued

AUSTIN (AP) — Any drawing that requires a charitable donation in order to have a chance of winning an artistic painting is a "lottery" and is illegal, the attorney general said Monday.

The opinion was asked by Beaumont Criminal District Attorney James McGrath.

P.I.P. Instant Printing can handle all those printing needs

Customer representative Melinda Malcolm and manager Rayburn Davis at P.I.P. Instant Printing are always ready to assist you. Call 687-1377 or go by 409 Andrews Highway for a free quote on you next printing job.

"New customers are often surprised at the services we offer," said Jack Hampton, owner of P.I.P. Instant Printing, located at 409 Andrews Highway.

Being a quick printer, doesn't limit P.I.P. to photocopies. P.I.P. is fully equipped with an Itek plate maker and AB Dick offset press, as well as their sophisticated Xerox copier. In addition, P.I.P. has expert problem solvers that can help you put together a flyer for a campaign or a brochure for your organization. Planning is made easy with the experienced staff.

So, they can print envelopes, post cards, business cards, letterheads, invitations, tickets, invoices and NCR forms. The list goes on with booklets, reports, church bulletins, newsletters and much, much more.

In fact, they can handle anything from 25 copies of a one-page resume to 20,000 copies of a two-sided flyer.

And, they can print on a variety of papers, including a wide assortment of colored paper (There's no extra charge for the colored paper.)

On top of the fine printing P.I.P. offers, this fast print shop provides binding services. Folding, collating, drilling, cutting, stapling and padding can all be handled by P.I.P.'s experts.

Whatever you need done at P.I.P. Instant Printing, you can be assured of quality work.

P.I.P. is committed to delivering quality printing work on a timely basis. P.I.P. meets your deadline, usually providing same day or next-day service. Jobs requiring typesetting, paste-up or art work may take a little longer than camera-ready copy, but P.I.P. always guarantees fast service.

Even though P.I.P. is equipped to handle all those big, tough jobs, this printer hasn't forgotten that sometimes all you need is a simple photo copy. They can handle that in a flash.

You can count on Rayburn Davis, manager of Midland's P.I.P. Instant Printing, and customer representative Melinda Malcolm to give you the friendly service you deserve. They'll be glad to give you a free estimate on your next printing job. Just call them at 687-1377 or go by 409 Andrews Highway. P.I.P. is open 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Churches enjoy a ten percent discount at P.I.P. Instant Printing.

Forget the concrete age..Enter the Super-Stone age...

You say it's been awhile since you gave your house a bit of a makeover? Well, perhaps now is the time. Let the competent staff at Super-Stone of the Permian Basin help you make that "just right first impression" for your guests along your front walk, entryway, pool-deck, patio or driveway.

This beautiful, decorative stone surface, applied over concrete, lasts for ages. Composed of all-natural native Texas pebbles, granites, marbles and quartz, Super-Stone is sealed by super-hard epoxy resins to create a permanent surface that is harder than concrete, and far more appealing. Choose from an exciting variety of materials, sizes and colors to achieve just the right look you prefer. You can even mix styles and colors for creative border and design effects.

And Super-Stone is super strong! Super-Stone is one of the most durable surfaces known. It's fire-proof. Extremes of heat and cold do not affect it. It resists staining and damage from virtually any chemical substance. Mildews will not grow on it. And this convenient product never gets tacky or soft, even where temperatures reach over 200 degrees Fahrenheit.

Not only is it tough, Super-Stone is super hard! Ice, snow, sleet, freeze or thaw; Super-Stone stands up to the weather without cracking. It won't break down, even after years of exposure. It resists cracking under heavy weights, too; so, it's perfect for driveways.

Add an exciting new look to that drab entryway, damaged concrete pooldeck, patio, walkway or driveway.

And this timely product is also perfect for commerical use; for example, those hard-driven apartment or retail driveways and walkways.

Super-Stone is strong enough to drive on and smooth enough to walk on. Its porous surface allows water to seep through, so there's never a problem with draining, slipping or skidding. (Super-Stone is less expensive, too, than almost any other finished surfacing material - brick, marble, flagstone, terazzo or tile. And when you consider its virtually maintenance-free durability, Super-Stone is also a better buy than concrete or asphalt. Installation is about as fast as other surfacing materials. Walk on it in eight hours. Drive on it in about 48 hours. Install in the evening and it's ready for foot traffic the very next day.

Super-Stone is a high-quality product distributed only through licensed contractors trained and certified by Super-Stone International of Dallas.

Call the friendly, competent staff at Super-Stone of the Permian Basin today for your free estimate at 683-6063 or 333-6198.

One of the completed projects by Super-Stone of the Permian Basin, at a prestigious Northwest Midland home, boasts an impressive new look for its front walk and entryway.

Jack Tar Villages - The all inclusive vacation by Adventure Travel

A Jack Tar Village vacation is a one price paradise where cash is optional. Immerse yourself in the carefree pursuit of pleasure. And Adventure Travel in Oakridge Square can assist you in making all those travel decisions.

Not only will you find relief from the stresses and responsibilities of the everyday world but you will discover a new world, a totally different way of vacationing. Everything is paid for in advance, including roundtrip airfare, transfers, baggage handling and accommodations. So you don't have to worry about paying for meals or drinks, or recreational activities or even tips. Forget about money and whatever your pleasure, you'll find it here.

Everyday will bring new adventures, new experiences. Meet new friends who all have the same aim - fun, sun and relaxation. Every village can bring you new experiences and each offering a character of its own. Stroll down to the beach for a relaxing sail or windsurfing. And remember it will only cost you your time, because all activities are free at Jack Tar Villages.

There's more too! Join the fun of a barbecue beach party. Some of the villages also have golfing, bicycling, tennis and daily activity programs. After a heated tennis match, you'll need a tall drink to cool off. Just stop by one of the bars - there's unlimited beer, wine and cocktails daily and nightly for your enjoyment.

This is the most all-encompassing vacation ever offered. Everything you need for your pleasure is at the Jack Tar Villages. Most villages even offer unlimited cigarettes. You don't have to worry about anything.

Using the village as a starting point, you can venture out on any number of excursions. When you want a change, there's always a nearby town to explore. Visit places Columbus discovered, ancient fortresses or go shopping for bargains in the local straw market.

If you like excitement, try river-rafting or walking up a waterfall in Jamaica; or, try a hand at Lady Luck in the casinos in the Bahamas and Dominic Republic. Local markets in all the Jack Tar villages offer interesting native crafts and duty-free goods imported from Europe are most attractive.

Now the decision is yours. Four fun-filled excursions are offered through any of the competent travel assistants at Adventure Travel: Grand Bahamas, Jamaica, Puerto Plata or St. Kitts. Basic features such as meals, transfers, round trip air fare from Dallas, cocktails and watersports such as sailing, water skiing, snorkeling, scuba lessons and windsurfing are offered at each location (Every Jack Tar Village varies in the exact watersport events available). But such wonderful added enjoyments such as golfing in the beautiful surroundings of the Grand Bahamas, St. Kitts or Puerto Plata and horseback riding in St. Kitts and Puerto Plata are also "musts". For a more leisurely afternoon, gather with new-found friends for a relaxing game of backgammon, Trivial Pursuit, a chess tournament, shuffleboard or volleyball in the beautiful hotels of the Grand Bahamas or St. Kitts.

...And the list of fun things to do goes on and on. For your hard-earned dollars, this is THE best vacation offered this year.

For singles, watersport enthusiasts and honeymooners, these four points of interest are PARADISE.

So call any of the trained travel assistants at Adventure Travel today to learn more about these scenic excursion locations. Three to four week reservations for these vacations are recommended but spur-of-the-moment bookings are sometimes available.

Catch a ride to one of the wonderful Jack Tar Village resort locations from one of the experienced travel assistants at Adventure Travel: Charmaine Hackney, Amy Leach, Patsy Welmaker or Dana McKay (who has just returned - Welcome back Dana!).

Betty's Boutique offers junior, missy, missy petite fashions

Betty's Boutique, located in San Miguel Square, is the perfect place to shop for junior, missy sporty fashions and accessories. Fall fashions are arriving daily.

Betty explains that her shop has been in San Miguel Square, ever since the shopping center opened about seven and a half years ago. Since then, many Midlanders have consistently shopped at Betty's Boutique. It's no wonder that customers go back to Betty's time and time again. Shopping for clothes should be fun and Betty's Boutique makes it fun. You can expect friendly, personal service every time you enter the store, which is open Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The friendly staff of Betty's Boutique in San Miguel Square is excited about their many fall fashions for back-to-school, arriving daily. Come in and let them show you around.

There's no difficulty finding the right size at Betty's. This store caters to the young working women of Midland, as well as sporty high school students. Betty knows these people often have a difficult time finding the styles they want in the sizes they need. That's why she keeps the store well stocked in a wide range of sizes, including a lot of small sizes even in one's, three's and five's.

New fall styles are arriving; everything from Guess jeans to long sweatshirts. Betty has a wide variety of Lanz and Schrader Sports dresses, Saint Germain jumpsuits, skirts and Lord Isaacs slacks in juniors and missy petites in sizes 4 to 14 for Midland career girls.

Lee, Zena, Bacardi and Guess jeans fill the racks. The Guess line includes denim skirts, overalls and of course, jeans. Betty understands how the students of today like to dress and is "with" those styles.

For fall, the big shirt with denim will be popular. She has ordered and already has in stock many fashion ideas in the brightest colors.

Active wear by Hang Ten and OP are two of Betty's Boutiques fall lines in those back-to-school colors.

Mickey Mouse tops, night shirts and socks are available at Betty's.

Sasson lingerie is available in a wide array of colors.

All the new styles of cotton shirts of bright colors and the new sweaters are just waiting for you at Betty's Boutique.

Betty announces that she has also expanded her accessory lines. More and more belts, handbags and jewelry will be seen at this friendly store. Even the popular Dhurrie bags are in stock.

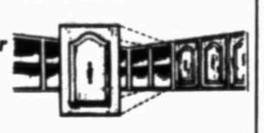

Visa, MasterCard and American Express are all accepted, and Betty does have a layaway plan.

Go by Betty's Boutique in San Miguel Square, and you'll see how a friendly atmosphere and a good selection can make shopping for your fall wardrobe a fun experience.

Leggett's Fabrics offers wide variety of sewing classes

In the wake of our present economic setback, it seems that everyone is trying to cut back on expenses. Betty Martin at Leggett's Fabrics in Plaza Shopping Center is "in tune" with those thoughts.

"Even though we are all experiencing hard times, most everyone enjoys dressing fashionably," said Betty. "But most of those trendy fashions are so expensive in the retail stores. For that very reason, my staff and I have started several classes to teach our customers the latest techniques in creating fashionable garments and accessories."

From a beginning sewing class to learning how to tailor and applique garments, Leggett's Fabrics has covered the spectrum.

In the five week basic sewing class, students will complete such worthwhile projects as making a skirt from one of three stylish patterns, all with waistbands and a zipper; also, a blouse with a collar, buttons, buttonholes and sleeves. The cost for this project is $50 and will be broken down into three hour sessions.

"The makeup of our classes varies in age and even gender, but we all have a lot of fun. Right now, our classes are limited to eight students with a morning and evening class. But of course, as the response grows, so will the amount of classes offered," explained Betty.

Leggett's Fabrics also offers several other types of sewing classes, even for those beginning seamstresses; one of which, is a pattern alterations class that teaches students the "how to's" of altering patterns in problem areas for the bodice, skirt and pant patterns. Since the method of alteration for each area is so different, each course is taught separately. The skirt and pant class are priced at $20 each, the bodice is $30; all with supplies furnished.

Another popular class among today's career individuals is a tailoring workshop; one for speed tailoring and another using the pad stitching method. This four week class allows students to fashion a blazer during these three-hour sessions.

Other classes include Seminole patchwork, machine applique, French sewing by machine, machine quilting, Brazilian embroidery and an ultra suede skirt class. An instructor specifically trained in working with Ultra suede will teach this course where students will finish an ultra suede skirt in one five-hour class. Students can also learn to design an ultra suede purse for themselves or for a gift. The cost for this course is $30 for the skirt portion; $20 for the purse, supplies not included.

In the classes offered by Leggett's Fabric, personalized service and a friendly, fun environment surround each project.

And for quality fabric, this is the place to be.

"Through the years, we have strived to offer the best quality merchandise and service to our customers and I believe we have succeeded in doing just that," smiled Betty.

Leggett's Sewing Solutions, located in the Plaza Shopping Center, offers a wide variety of sewing classes, including one for children. Call to find out more.

Fashion Cleaners continues a tradition of quality services

Fashion Cleaners, 801 W. Wall, has served Midlanders for 49 years and has become well known for quality service and convenience for those who work in downtown Midland. Recently, owner James McCain announced that Fashion Cleaners had taken that same quality service to a second location at ClayDesta Plaza. The new location, which opened March 3, boasts a very competent mangaer, Ann Cox, trained in all phases of dry cleaning.

Fashion Cleaners plans to continue the tradition of maintaining quality facilities. This tradition won Fashion Cleaners the acclaim of being one of the "Top Ten" in the most recent annual plant design award program, sponsored by the American Dry Cleaners Association. McCain was impressed with the fact that three of the top ten awards went to Texas plants. His plant was in the category of remodeled plants.

At its fine facilities, Fashion Cleaners is able to offer fur storage, cleaning, glazing and alterations as well as reweaving. Of course, all of this is in addition to the fine dry cleaning for which Fashion Cleaners is famous. They have keepsake heirloom service for special items like wedding dresses.

They've always done a fine job on cleaing draperies. And, if you want complete drapery service, including taking them down and rehanging them, McCain says their Eldon Drapery franchise will take care of the job. They are the Sears franchise cleaner.

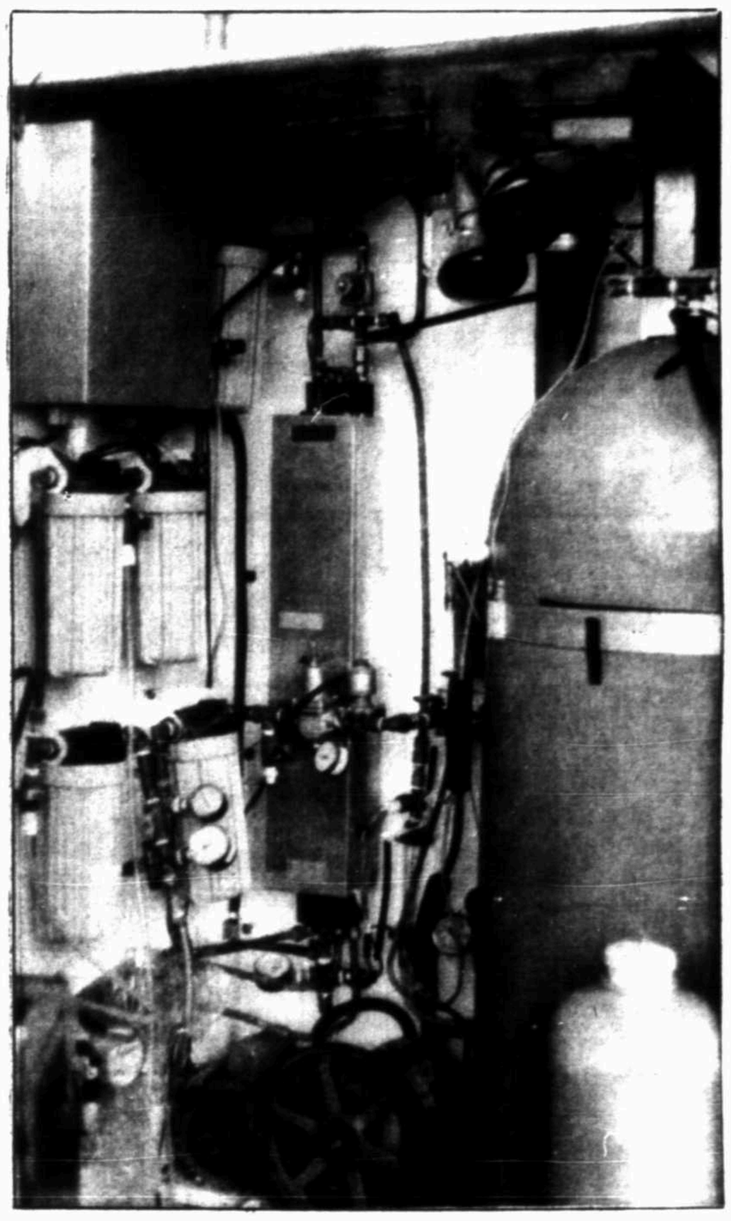

Fashion can also handle your laundry. In fact, McCain is excited to announce that they have installed their own laundry equipment. This service enables the Fashion Cleaner staff to better handle their customers' laundry.

There are many little extras you will discover at Fashion Cleaners. Pickup and delivery service is available. Fine men's ties are sold there. In addition, Fashion has a tuxedo shop in Oakridge Square.

This week, take your laundry to Fashion Cleaners, 801 W. Wall, where 49 years of quality work assures you of the service you and your clothes deserve.

Sally Henson and Manager, Dorothy Avery specilaize in many types of tailoring and alterations at the Wall Street location of Fashion Cleaners. Both women have their "specialty" areas; Dorothy with men's tailoring and alterations and Sally with women's. Helen Billingsley (not pictured) also assists in tailoring men's suit coats.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, July 16, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will be able to take an original idea and build it into a nesting for the future. Look forward to times of great happiness, love and excitement. It will be a banner year for you if you control your moods and keep your nose to the grindstone at work. Improve grooming and nutrition for greater success.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Christian Science founder Mary Baker Eddy, "The Colbys" star Barbara Stanwyck, painter Sir Joshua Reynolds, dancer-actress Ginger Rogers, three-time Wimbledon champ Margaret Court Smith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Continue to keep your spending in check. Show respect and patience for an older colleague's ideas. This person could be the key to future career/business success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make copies of all correspondence. Out-of-town and foreign matters will have a great impact on your investments or career. Avoid new starts. Today is a rewarding day for all relationships.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Preserve your credit rating by paying bills on time. You may be asked to take on additional responsibilities to cover for someone on vacation. Loved ones may be preoccupied with their own interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Consult a figure of authority when making complaints; this will bring about quick action. Friends furnish an important introduction. Your personal effort is the key to success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take constructive criticism in the spirit in which it is given. Take care of personal matters you have been putting off. This evening's plans may need to be changed at the last minute.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Efforts to decorate or improve your property will increase its value. Remember family duties. Cancel out on an evening function unless it is business related. Secret affairs should be avoided.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discard outmoded methods for updated ones. Expenses must be kept to a minimum. Buy supplies in quantity whenever possible. Seek mates assistance in performing more self-services.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Guard against a communication breakdown as misplaced documents surface nuptially. Keep a close watch on money and other valuables. Clear out your closets and make donations to your favorite charity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An influential person may not be available when needed. A friend does you a favor, but there could be strings attached. Keep track of spending. Family members could be the cause of a misunderstanding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cash flow problems need to be addressed by you personally. This situation will cause you great worry. A nap after lunch will restore your energy and give you a lift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cultural activities arouse your aesthetic sense and give you a renewed interest in the community. Gifts appear at just the right time. Accept them graciously. Improve your savings plan.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Business affairs get off to a slow start, but earnings gain momentum by late afternoon. Celebrate a happy event with someone who has contributed to your success.

THE OLD HIDDEN-QUEEN TRICK

Neither vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠K 5 4 3 ♡K J 10 8 6 5 ◇6 3 ♣Q
WEST ♠A Q 9 8 7 6 ♡2 ◇9 7 5 ♣10 7 5		EAST ♠J 10 2 ♡A Q 9 7 4 ◇J 2 ♣6 3 2
	SOUTH ♠Void ♡3 ◇A K Q 10 8 4 ♣A K J 9 8 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠
6 ♣	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♡

To reap the full benefit of our sage advice, cover the South and West hands before deciding how you would conduct the defense from the East chair. Your partner leads the two of hearts. Is there a legitimate line to defeat the contract?

Your partner's opening lead marks declarer with a heart. From the bidding, you can assume that declarer is 6-6 in the minors, although 6-5-1-1 with the ace of spades is a remote possibility. In either case, you can forget about your side scoring a spade trick to defeat the contract. And if your side can win a club trick, declarer is a prime candidate for the funny farm.

There is one legitimate chance to defeat the contract. If partner's three trumps are headed by the 10, you can win the opening lead and return a heart to promote a diamond trick for your side.

Is there a way to improve the odds? Yes, if declarer gets careless, and you might be able to lull him into a false sense of security. The initial step in your campaign is to win the first trick with the ace! That can't cost—there is nothing useful declarer can discard on the king of hearts. Now return the seven of hearts.

If partner has the ten of diamonds, your little bit of deception will have done no harm—the contract is going down no matter what. But if the cards lie as in the diagram, declarer might not realize the necessity of trumping high, and partner will get to overruff for the setting trick.

Have you been running into double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. For a copy of his "DOUBLES" booklet, send $1.85 to "Goren-Doubles," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 4426 Orlando, Fla. 32802-4426. Make checks payable to "Newspaperbooks."

Good rerun ratings, protests prompt revival of 'Steele

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — NBC-TV will revive the canceled series "Remington Steele" because its ratings have improved during summer reruns and because viewers have showered the network with protest letters, a spokesman says.

The MTM Productions detective show will be ready for broadcast in November, though there currently are no slots open in the schedule, said the network spokesman, who discussed the matter on condition that he not be identified. There should be room for the show because of the high attrition rate for fall television shows.

The NBC spokesman said "Remington Steele" would return with its original cast including Stephanie Zimbalist, Pierce Brosnan and Doris Roberts. Brosnan has been rumoured as the next movie James Bond, and the spokesman said he had no idea how the network's decision might affect his chances at the role.

Peters

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Award winner Bernadette Peters, star of the Broadway hit "Song and Dance," has been honored by the city.

Mayor Edward I. Koch presented Miss Peters Monday with the city's Certificate of Appreciation. A show at the presentation on the steps of City Hall featured performers doing numbers from Miss Peters' shows.

Miss Peters, a New York native, told an audience of about 1,000, "New York has always been good to me, but today I feel it's opened up its arts to me."

Loewy

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Raymond Loewy, an American industrial designer for decades, died Monday of natural causes. He was 92.

Loewy began his career as a fashion illustrator. His first major success came in 1934, with a refrigerator for Sears, Roebuck & Co. that used non-rusting shelves for the first time. In 1945, he formed Raymond Loewy Associates, which eventually included a staff of 200 with offices in New York, London, Chicago, Los Angeles and Sao Paulo, Brazil. His white cigarette package inspired the advertising slogan "Lucky Strike green has gone to war" during World War II and he designed the rakish "continental" Studebaker car models of the 1960s.

Van Buren

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Kirk Douglas wrote to "Dear Abby" with a report of his experiences as an activist for the elderly and praising the columnist for publicizing "the hidden horror" of nursing home abuses.

Douglas, 67, who has worked on behalf of the elderly since he did research for the TV movie "Amos," wrote in response to "Helpless," who said in a letter to columnist Abigail Van Buren that she couldn't send gifts to her mother in a nursing home out of fear they would be stolen.

"Helpless" said nursing home authorities claimed the thefts were beyond their control, and such incidents were standard.

"This is a lie," wrote Douglas. "Theft is not a normal part of the aging process. ... Once you accept theft as 'normal,' it is easier to accept bedsores, rapes and broken bones from beatings as 'normal.'"

Douglas said his activism has resulted in a flood of letters from the nursing home industry vilifying him, and more letters from people who claimed they were abused in nursing homes.

"Amos," broadcast this past weekend, starred Douglas as an elderly man who rebels against abuse inside a nursing home.

Korean student's role more militant

EDITOR'S NOTE: From high school through university, the Korean student has been a catalyst for change, the opponent of established authority. But generations differ as to means and ends. Here is a report on the student revolution of the '60s and the revolutionary of the '80s, their similarities and differences.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — In their day, old Kim and his classmates of 1960 toppled a government, embraced the military and liked Ike.

Today, young Kim and his campus comrades revile America and South Korea's generals and sometimes destroy themselves in suicidal frustration over their political helplessness.

The Korean student, a hardy perennial of his country's politics, is once again back — this time in a deeper shade of militancy.

"We admire what the students did in 1960," today's Kim says. "But they had no theoretical basis. Today we have one — anti-Americanism and Marxism-Leninism."

"That's the problem with the students today," says the 1960's Kim. "This leftist influence has really gotten hold."

Recent interviews with the two student leaders old and new — they spoke on condition their real names not be used — helped shed light on the important role of students in modern Korean history.

That history ranges from high schoolers who agitated against Japanese rule early this century and university students who brought down President Syngman Rhee 26 years ago to today's radical leftists whose street battles with police and chilling political suicides have drawn world attention to their struggle against President Chun Doo-hwan's military-dominated government.

The Korean student is heir to a Confucian heritage that marks the scholar as a moral leader in society. But he also is part of a universal process that often turns young idealists into middle-aged pragmatists. The elder Kim is an example.

At age 21, he was a student leader at a major Seoul university, a key player in the democratic revolution of 1960. But later he rose again to political prominence as part of South Korea's authoritarian military regime.

Today, at 47, filled out but fit, clad in a suit, lunching at a plush French restaurant in bustling Seoul, he feels no need to apologize.

"At least the country has boomed under the military," he said in fluent English.

But he relishes memories of 1960, when he led thousands of students into Seoul's streets to protest the Rhee government's corruption and electoral fraud. Within weeks, with the military's blessing, Rhee was ousted and a liberal parliamentary government installed, one whose prime minister, Chang Myon, sought campus leaders for regular consultations.

When President Dwight D. Eisenhower visited Seoul, he met with student representative Kim.

"We were thankful," Kim said. "We knew that in the end it was the United States that told Syngman Rhee to go."

Inter-party wrangling soon paralyzed the government, and in 1961 the military under Gen. Park Chung-hee took power. A confused Kim went underground for weeks, but finally he and other students endorsed the military coup.

"The country was in bad shape economically, politically. A lot of people thought the military could do some good," he explained.

By the late 1970s, after a successful business career, Kim was a total convert, sitting in the National Assembly as a representative of the party of Park and his successor Chun, another general. Kim is not alone — former 1960s student leaders serve as Chun's parliamentary floor leader, as top trade negotiator and other key positions.

But the young Kim of today — a 23-year-old militant at a Seoul university — sees these ex-students as part of the "military dictatorship," target of an escalating series of demonstrations that culminated two months ago with a student-police melee in Inchon and four shocking suicides, three by fire and one by drowning, of anti-government student protesters.

Since then, the authorities have cracked down anew, arresting scores of student activists. It took days for a reporter to arrange a meeting with young Kim, a veteran campus radical who has been lying low.

Nervously smoking a cigarette, the slim, bespectacled young man explained the radical students' position:

They oppose current talks between the Chun government and the recognized opposition parties, a dialogue aimed at establishing a democratic electoral system — direct election of the president among other liberalizations —— because the opposition represents what they claim are conservative interests that care little for South Korea's large, low-paid working class.

The student militants' ideology?

"We have given up on 'liberal democracy,'" Kim replied, speaking through an interpreter. "We believe in idealistic socialism, not what you see in China or Russia."

Political analysts here say the radicals remain a minority on the campuses, but all agree that anti-Americanism — one of the radicals' key themes — is growing among young South Koreans, whose country has long been tied to the United States militarily and economically.

This anti-Americanism disturbs the elder Kim. In his mind, the United States is forever linked to the fight against the Communist north in the 1950-53 Korean War — a war in which the northerners for a time took over most of the south, and in which Kim, at age 11, lost both his parents.

Opposition to block Juarez traffic

WORLD

By DORALISA PILARTE

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The main opposition party has vowed to stop traffic for five minutes today in this border city and block a major highway Thursday to protest state elections they claim were stolen.

Thousands of supporters of the opposition National Action Party Monday night took over two bridges over the Rio Grande linking Juarez with El Paso, Texas, while Mexican army soldiers with riot gear and city police stood ready.

Lorenzo Garcia of Albuquerque, N.M., was caught with his wife on the Juarez side when the takeover started. He said the two were able to walk to El Paso unharmed.

"We pushed our way through, but no one prevented us from coming over," said Garcia.

The conservative National Action Party, or PAN, is seeking annulment of July 6 state elections to choose a governor of Chihuahua, the mayor of 67 cities and 14 state legislative seats. PAN leaders claim the elections were marred by massive, government-instituted fraud.

Results released early Monday showed the government Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, nearly swept all the races. PRI, which hasn't lost a presidential or gubernatorial election since its founding in 1929, has rejected allegations of fraud.

The bridges, connecting the downtown areas of each city, were thick with PAN supporters waving party banners, chanting political slogans and singing the Mexican national anthem in an impressive show of solidarity during the two-hour takeover that ended shortly after 10 p.m. MDT.

The U.S. Border Patrol's 30-member riot squad was placed in downtown El Paso streets, out of sight of the bridges, said Gustavo de la Vina, acting agent in charge of the federal agency.

The entire Border Patrol regular staff of about 100 patrolmen was also called out "in anticipation of any possible mass entries," and blocked off all city streets leading to the bridges, de la Vina told the El Paso Times newspaper.

"Needless to say, there were some tense moments," de la Vina said.

The massive takeover started when Gustavo Elizondo, PAN candidate for mayor of Juarez, spoke to some 10,000 people at a 7 p.m. rally in front of city hall.

Elizondo said all PAN supporters should stop their vehicles for five minutes at 2 p.m. MDT starting today.

"It doesn't matter where you are or where you're going," Elizondo told the crowd, which went wild, cheering and waving PAN banners and flags whenever two government helicopters carrying soldiers flew overhead.

City police has been under control of the Mexican army since last Thursday. The army has kept a watchful eye over rallies staged by the two parties over the weekend, with at least two helicopters flying over any demonstration.

"I want you to promise me we will neither provoke violence nor accept violence," Elizondo told the crowd. "Our cause is peaceful."

He then directed the crowd to split in two and for each group to take a bridge, which are about a block apart with city hall in between.

Army soldiers carrying see-through shields, tear-gas canisters and batons arrived at the scene and began walking to the international lines at mid-bridge but shortly after, they were called back while the crowds applauded. A man in a van used a megaphone to continually urge the crowds to remain in place but not provoke violence.

Elizondo also said supporters should meet at 6 p.m. MDT Thursday at a roundabout to block the Panamerican highway. He said similar actions were to be take by PAN supporters all over the state of Chihuahua.

Riot troops alerted near U.S. border

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Riot squads were mobilized on both sides of the border and U.S. officials blocked streets in El Paso, Texas, as members of Mexico's main opposition party vowed more disruptions to protest elections they claim were fraudulent.

About 10,000 supporters of the opposition National Action Party on Monday night took over two Rio Grande bridges linking Mexico with the United States as soldiers carrying shields, tear-gas canisters and batons watched.

The U.S. Border Patrol's 30-member riot squad was placed in downtown El Paso streets, out of sight of the bridges, said Gustavo de la Vina, acting agent in charge of the agency.

The entire Border Patrol regular staff of about 100 patrolmen also was mobilized "in anticipation of any possible mass entries," and blocked off all city streets leading to the bridges, de la Vina told the El Paso Times.

The demonstration broke up peacefully after about two hours, but leaders vowed more protests today, including an attempt to block traffic for five minutes in Juarez and on the major intercity highway.

The opposition party, known by its Spanish acronym PAN, is seeking annulment of July 6 elections to choose governors and hundreds of state and local legislators in six states.

PAN leaders claim the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) engaged in a massive election fraud.

Results released Monday showed PRI, which hasn't lost a presidential or gubernatorial election since its 1929 founding, swept nearly all the races. The only major PAN victory was in the mayor's race in the city of Ensenada in the state of Baja California Norte.

The governing party has rejected allegations of fraud.

The Juarez police department has been under control of the Mexican army since Thursday and the army kept watch over weekend rallies by both parties.

The takeover of the bridges began after PAN's losing mayoral candidate, Gustavo Elizondo, spoke to a rally in front of city hall.

"I want you to promise me we will neither provoke violence nor accept violence," Elizondo told the crowd. "Our cause is peaceful."

Earlier Monday in Ciudad Durango, capital of the state of Durango, about 440 miles south of the border, 1,000 PAN supporters took over city hall in an election protest.

The non-violent takeover took place at about 1 a.m., and the activists threatened to stay indefinitely, said Jaime Lopez, a government spokesman in the city.

PRI had nearly 62 percent of the vote in the race for Chihuahua ernor, according to partial results announced by the State Electoral Commission in Ciudad Chihuahua, the state capital.

PRI also won the mayor's seat in Juarez, said Lorenzo Gonzalez Lechuga, president of the Municipal Electoral Committee.

Amniocentesis used in India to abort females

By MAYANK CHHAYA

BOMBAY, India (AP) — A growing number of pregnant women in India are using the medical procedure known as amniocentesis to determine the sex of their unborn child and have an abortion if it is a female.

A preference for sons goes back centuries in Indian tradition, especially in remote areas where they help in the fields, add to family income and offer parents' security in old age.

Amniocentesis is chiefly used elsewhere to determine the health of the fetus but its use in India solely to determine sex of the fetus has set off a raging controversy between women's groups and doctors who give the test.

Women's groups contend that when it leads to the abortion of the female fetus it is an outrage against morality and against women.

The doctors maintain, however, that it as an alternative in overcrowded India to the practice of women having six or seven unwanted daughters to gain the goal of a son or two.

"Forcing a mother of three daughters to have a fourth may be in a way matricide," said Dr. Datta Pai, whose Pearl Centre clinic has performed thousands of the tests.

He added in an interview that even though the father is the determining factor in the sex of a child, women are blamed for not having sons.

"In Indian society, which is sick to the core in these matters," Pai said, "a woman bearing too many female children invites the wrath of her husband and in-laws and may undergo the most cruel mental trauma."

Among those objecting to the procedure is Vibhuti Patel of the Forum Against Sex Determination and Sex Pre-Selection Technique.

"Amniocentesis, which is primarily meant for detecting genetic defects in a fetus, has been reduced to a lethal weapon to be used against women," she said.

The procedure, which involves drawing amniotic flued from the sac surrounding the fetus, was introduced as a technique for sex determination in India in 1982, in the northern state of Punjab.

Bombay since has become the center for the practice, and as many as 20 clinics are believed to offer the test here, along with many more individual physicians.

Most of the clinics are capable of more than 1,000 of the procedures a year and some, including Pai's Pearl Centre, also offer abortions.

Pai began amniocentesis tests in 1982 and did 200 that year. In 1985, he did 1,350. He said 55 percent of the fetuses he's tested were female.

"It is entirely possible that a large number of the female fetuses were aborted," he added.

No official figures are available on the sex of aborted fetuses, but researcher R.P. Ravindra published a study in January on 8,000 abortions in Bombay hospitals and reported that all but one involved female fetuses.

The cost of the test runs from $5.75 to $16. The procedure is widely advertised on trains and buses, often with unabashed praise for male children.

Mrs. Patel complains about the low cost in India, noting the test is much more expensive in other countries.

"One of the reasons for the cheap availability of the tests is the misconceived notion that it helps family planning," she said.

She calls the test a "perverse misuse of modern technology," while Pai says it should be considered against the social backdrop of India.

Despite government policies that foster family planning, India's population of about 780 million is expected to grow to 1 billion shortly after the year 2000. Abortion is not officially part of the family planning policy, but it is legal and easily obtainable.

While a son is a prize for an Indian family, a daughter is looked upon as a deficit and female infanticide is still a problem in some tribal areas.

Daughters usually don't earn money and must be provided with hefty dowries for their marriages.

"We are talking about centuries of conditioning that women are worthless," Mrs. Patel said, adding that she believes in trying to change that attitude and education is bringing about some change.

But Pai sees the arguments against amniocentesis as a refusal to recognize reality.

"We have this bad habit of mixing morality with every issue," he said. "One must not forget the brutal reality that no matter what the government says, women are treated as secondary citizens. I practice amniocentesis as a lesser evil. It is better to have feticide than matricide."

American evangelist, ten nuns abducted in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Moslem militiamen kidnapped a U.S. missionary to make up for their earlier failure to collect ransom for a French priest, while a disgruntled government worker organized the abduction of 10 nuns, a military report said today.

Military authorities said reports from the field indicated that the American missionary, Brian Lawrence, and the nuns kidnapped on Mindanao island were safe, but were being moved from one hiding place to another.

Although both abductions occurred in Marawi, the capital of Lanao de Sur province 510 miles south of Manila, the report gave no reason to suggest they were in any way related.

Heavily armed men dragged Lawrence, a 30-year-old Presbyterian evangelist from Madison, Wis., from his apartment in downtown Marawi on Saturday. He saved his wife from abduction by hiding her in a cabinet.

The day before, 10 cloistered Filipino nuns of the Roman Catholic Carmelite order were taken from their hilltop convent two miles from the city.

The report identified the employee as Aragasi Pasandalan, but gave no further details or say why he might have abducted the nuns.

Newest petite designs don't fall short

By RHODA AMON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The big news is that small women — petites — are carrying off high fashion these days with no less aplomb and savoir faire than taller women.

The petite customer, once confined mostly to budget dresses or the juniors department, has recently caught the attention of name designers such as Calvin Klein. That Midas-touch merchandiser moves into petites sizes this fall with Calvin Klein Sport Petites, a new playwear collection.

Other design houses jockeying for a share of the rich petites market — almost 47 million adult women in the United States are 5-foot-3 or shorter, according to government statistics — include Adrienne Vittadini, Anne Klein II, Liz Claiborne, Carole Little for Saint-Tropez West, Maggie London, Evan-Picone, Jones New York, Ellen Tracy, Albert Nipon, Christian Dior and the Spiegel Mail-order catalog. Some, like Evan-Picone and Jones New York, have been in petites since the start of the '80s; others, like Calvin Klein, are just beginning to mine the area.

Klein's playwear for petites ranges from $35 jeans to an $84 jumpsuit. Liz Claiborne fall petites, re-porportioned from her misses sportswear separates, are priced from $28 turtlenecks to $200 hand-knit coats. Typical of the dressier fashions are Marlene Steiner's petites dresses at $120 to $500.

"IT'S AN EXPLOSIVE business, and we haven't felt the full impact yet," said Bill Ruban, president of Bonwit Teller, which has been expanding petites departments in all its stores. "Petites started as a moderate-price dress business. It's only now that the upper-moderate sportswear houses are coming into it that we're getting this great growth. The small woman wants more fashion, and she's willing to pay the same prices as her full-size counterpart." Ruben estimates that petites now account for 20 to 25 percent of the stores' business, not surprising since petites make up 16 to 40 percent of customers in the womenswear market (depending on whether you define "petite" as small-boned or just short).

But still there are not enough clothes to choose from, say fashion-loving petites, particularly those at the small end of the size range. The overscaled-fashions of recent years have not been kind to the little woman.

"What designers consider size 4 or 6 is still too much for a small person who wants to dress in a glamorous way," complains Lori Cincaglini, 5-foot-2 and 105 pounds. "The shoulders are too padded; the skirts don't fall right; the jackets don't feel right. There's a lot of us out there who want smaller clothes."

In response to the demand, a new firm called Petite Concept Ltd. plans to blanket the country with 200 petites fashion stores in the next five years. The stores, half on the East Coast and half in the West, will be headed by former R.H. Macy executives who aim to build the petites clothes chain into a $200-million-a-year business giant.

THE STORES WILL offer both private-label and better-price designers starting with the Liz Claiborne and Evan-Picone at the middle-price level and going up, up, up, according to Philip Schlein, who heads U.S. Venture Partners, the California firm that started the Ross Stores off-price chain and is now backing the new petites clothes chain. "You tell me where there's a good petite chain serving the better-price customers; they have never been served properly," said Schlein.

Anne Marie Cloutier, co-author with Allison Kyle Leopold of "Short Chic: The Everything-You-Need-to-Know Fashion Guide for Every Woman under 5'4" (Bantam paperback, $8.95) is inclined to agree.

"There's always been petite-size clothes made for adults but that seem to be designed for children," said Cloutier, herself 5-foot-2. It's still a frustrating time, she said, "if your taste runs to anything but the classic." Though many designers and manufacturers are entering the petites market, "They're still reluctant to get innovative," she said.

Like the whole apparel industry, the petites market has had ups and downs. After a rapid growth spurt five years ago, sales flattened or rose only slowly for a few years. Manufacturers went in and out of the petites market, generally blaming the stores for wavering on the category.

What may have set off the current explosion, some observers say, is the recent influx of immigrants from Central America, the Philippines and the Far East, all of whom are, on the average, smaller than Americans. Many of these newcomers have "settled into Amerian life and into preofessional careers," said designer Mory Green, herself an immigrant from the Dominican Republic. "They have money to spend and no time to sew for themself."

THERE'S MORE TO designing for petites than shortening hems and sleeves. Details have to be adjusted in proportion. Shoulders, necklines and lapels are made smaller, cuffs narrower and waistlines generally higher. In some cases, even buttons and zippers are scaled down; pockets are smaller and placed higher.

Green, who like many petites-wear designers is barely 5 feet tall herself, pays special attention to the upper proportions of her coats and jackets. "The distance from bust line to waist in petites is five or six inches, compared to eight-and-a-half inches in a regular size. Our waist-to-hips (measurement) is five inches, compared to the regular seven inches," she said. "This has to be done in the pattern. It can't be done with alterations." Green designs for "very tiny demi-petites," as well as for average petites up to size 12.

Among the first to specialize only in diminutive garb, Green has seen her business grow so rapidly that last year her husband, Chuck, gave up his jewelry business to concentrate on marketing his wife's line. "We've found our little niche," he said.

Ellis Oppenheim carved an early niche in the petites world eight years ago, when he "pioneered" his first Piaffe store on Madison Avenue. "It was almost impossible to find better-quality merchandise then," recalled Oppenheim, who now also has stores in Philadelphia and Washington. His plan, he said, was to convince designers that "you can make the same clothes for petites as for average and tall, providing it's in porportion."

PETITES WERE STILL a "disaster area" when Jane K. Klein, 5-foot-½ ("Don't forget the half; I need every half-inch"), began selling high fashion for the small woman by appointment only in her shop called Le Piccole Apparel Ltd. in New York City. A former media promotion writer, Klein said she got into the business five years ago "out of frustration at not finding sophisticated clothes that fit. Petite women were treated badly in the stores. We were shown awful stuff. Today there's a lot more choice."

She still prefers to work with "normal designers, who will cut small sizes for me," rather than with petites clothes that tend to be less sophisticated.

Klein encourages her small-size customers to break the rules. "A short woman doesn't have to wear a sort, cropped jacket, for example. She can wear a long jacket if it's porportioned right. We're all built differently. I have broad shoulders, so some petite styles don't fit me. Some of my customers have big hips."

NOT ONLY SHORT women but average-size women who are short-waisted have been turning to the petites racks, according to designer, Frank Smith, who scales down his regular sportswear line for Evan-Picone, the largest supplier of better petites. Smith said any woman who finds today's big-shouldered, long-waisted jackets "a bit overpowering" should try a scaled-down version that "won't look like it's wearing you. A lot of people are petites and don't realize it," he said. "It never hurts to try."

The firm reports its petites business has tripled since it introduced the line six years ago.

Blass' designs previewed

By BARBARA DeWITT
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — No bare midriffs, no thigh-high slits and not a single sock worn with pumps was seen at Bill Blass' fall preview fashion show.

Blass, the Indiana-born 63-year-old designer who caters to the rich and famous, is big on style and leaves the gimmicks to others.

What Blass is known for is making an entrance, and his models did just that as they paraded the runway at the Hotel Pierre in a cloud of Bill Blass Perfume.

First came a stunning red wool suit — notable for its short, slim skirt exposing the knee and its floor-length matching coat billowing onto the stage as the model strutted. The color alone was dramatic, but the long-over-short silhouette was power-packed, especially with a generous addition of fox fur on the shawl collar and wide cuffs.

Underneath the coat was a brown turtleneck sweater, which was seen in abundance in this show.

Keeping the slim jersey sweater in mind, Blass presented more models in slim-lined suits, some in black-and-white color schemes, others in caramel-and-gray combinations.

In the black-and-white category, skirts were either short and straight or long (to the middle of the calf) and slightly flared, resembling a trumpet.

In the gray-and-caramel group were less showy suits; the jackets were usually a contrasting color to the skirts. The jackets were treated to Persian lamb accents on the cuffs and collars, an emerging trend this season.

Few models wore hats in this show; most wore hoods to match their suit color.

Another continuing trend was the gloved hand, and Blass had hands covered in soft kid, sometimes short, other times flared at the wrist in a gauntlet style.

The only jewelry used in the Blass show was large earrings — usually squares the size of a soda cracker inset with lizard skin. For evening wear, the same earrings were rhinestone studded.

Speaking of evening, this is the fashion time when Blass performs best. Over and over again, models came out in long, fluid gowns that gently caressed the body. Some were nifty halter styles that bared the backs; others were strapless or one-shouldered. The halter necks were the freshest and seemed to work best in black knit.

Favorites were a solid red ensemble that included a smocked sweater worn with a very full taffeta skirt with unpressed box pleats and a jeweled belt and a deep pine velvet sheath with iridescent blackish green feathers in a fan shape at the bottom. Panne velvet — a slinky patterned velvet — was a novelty in Blass' show and he used it in jewel tones as well as his favorite black.

DEAR ABBY

Junk mail returned to sender

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For the benefit of "Too Much Mail," and others who want to know how to put a stop to being the recipient of unsolicited mail: punch five or six holes (use a large pin) in the card to be returned. The computer will reject it.

For years, my husband made contributions to a political party. After his death, I wrote "Deceased" on the card and returned it. Solicitations continued to come.

A friend had the same experience and passed the above information on to me. It worked beautifully. The rejected card was obviously read, and my name removed from the files. Sign me, VOICE OF EXPERIENCE IN VA.

DEAR ABBY: You told "Too Much Mail" that once her name is "in the computer" she's automatically solicited, in which case her only defense would be to ignore the solicitation. Not true! Here's how I handle junk mail: I just take those postpaid envelopes and return everything — including the envelope!

It's lots of fun, and it forces the sender to pay first-class extra postage to get their own junk returned! — A. BUHRER, PORT CLINTON, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I recently read the letter about the person receiving too much junk mail. Here is my solution to the problem at the sender's expense: Take the entire junk mail contents, including the outside envelope, tear it to shreds and mail it back to them in their postpaid envelope. Leave your name and address label in one piece so they'll know who it's from. They don't like the mess, or paying the postage. It worked for me! — NANCY J. KELLEY, HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

DEAR ABBY: Please advise "Too Much Mail" to write "Refused — Return to Sender" on the envelope or package. The postal service will return it to "sender" and collect the postage due. She will be removed from the list. I've had my name removed from lists this way. — HELEN SHEPHERD, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I have a good way to get off mailing lists, or at least a good share of them. Especially the begging letters. If there is a U.S. stamp on the return envelope, I cut it off and use it. If it is a postage-guaranteed envelope, I seal the empty envelope, write my name on the back, and mail it.

They'll get the message after a while. — NO NAME IN WEATHERFORD, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: You gave the address for DMA's (Direct Marketing Association) Mail Preference Service as a solution to reducing the quantity of unsolicited mail.

I liked an alternative that I tried with success whth one organization. If there is a return envelope with a permit number to pay return postage, just put something heavy in the envelope.

For those who want to know what percentage of their contribution actually goes to the beneficiary, and how much goes for "administration" and fund raising, write to: the Charities Division of the Council of Better Business Bureaus, 1515 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22209. People have a right to know how their money is spent. — SALLY HUNTER, ALEXANDRIA, VA.

DEAR READERS: Everybody hates junk mail, right? Wrong! Read on for a major surprise:

DEAR ABBY: How can I get on a list that will get me some junk mail? I live alone and enjoy looking at catalogs and all kinds of advertisements. I even welcome campaign literature and religious material. I find it depressing to go to my mailbox and find it empty. If you use my letter in your column, please don't use my real name. My neighbors will think I've lost my mind. — LIKES JUNK MAIL IN BALTIMORE

New Vietnamese party chief conducts funeral

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — New Vietnamese Communist Party chief Truong Chinh today led funeral rites for Le Duan, praising his predecessor's pro-Soviet policies and pledging to contribute to the building of socialism, Vietnam's official radio said.

Truong Chinh

The 79-year-old Chinh was given the powerful post of party secretary general at an extraordinary session of the Central Committee on Monday, four days after Le Duan's death in Hanoi, the Vietnamese capital.

Chinh is also chairman of the State Council, the supreme government body, and is known to the West as a strict ideologue who, with independence leader Ho Chi Minh, helped found the Indochinese Communist Party in 1930. That party was the forerunner of the Vietnamese Communist Party.

Hundreds of thousands of people poured into the streets of Hanoi to pay their respects as Le Duan's casket was carried to Mai Dich Cemetery, the Voice of Vietnam said in a broadcast monitored in Bangkok. As incense filled the air, party and state leaders filed past the casket, and a military band played "Requiem for Fallen Soldiers" before the burial, it said.

Earlier, Chinh read the funeral rites at Ba Dinh Hall, where the body lay in glass coffin, the official Vietnamese radio said in a live broadcast.

The broadcast said Chinh met at the Presidential Palace on Monday with delegations from the Soviet Union, Laos and Cambodia, the only nations invited to send special envoys to the funeral.

Mexico considering plan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government Monday approved a draft plan for entering the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, moving the nation a step closer to entering the international trade arrangement.

Mexico is considered highly likely to join the trade group as part of the efforts of President Miguel de la Madrid to bolster the badly sagging economy.

Entry into the 90-member trade arrangement, known by its initials as GATT, will require Mexico to dismantle some of the trade barriers that have protected many domestic industries from foreign competition.

The decision is part of the government's push to force the country to expand and diversify its exports and reduce its dependency on petroleum sales to bring in needed foreign revenues.

Test decision pending

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today was quoted as saying that the Kremlin's decision on whether to extend its unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests beyond Aug. 6 depends "to a large extent" on U.S. positions on arms control.

The official news agency Tass said Gorbachev made the remark Monday when he met with representatives of some 150 scientists who gathered in Moscow to demand an end to nuclear testing.

The scientists presented Gorbachev with an appeal that the unilateral test moratorium that the Soviet Union implemented last August be extended, and they urged the United States to join.

Gorbachev said the request to extend the test ban beyond its scheduled expiration date, Aug. 6., would be studied "most closely."

Did satellite explode?

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet reconnaissance satellite appears to have exploded and its fragments, including a nuclear reactor, could fall to Earth within a year, an amateur Japanese astronomer was quoted today as saying.

Nariyasu Hashimoto, president of the Tokushima Astronomical Association, was quoted in an interview with the Japan Times as saying that the Cosmos 1736 satellite, launched in March, changed altitude on June 21 from 156 miles to 540 miles, and has broken into at least 21 pieces.

Data obtained from the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration confirmed that the satellite had broken up, Hashimoto was quoted as saying.

The Japan Times quoted Hashimoto as saying ignition of unused fuel or problems with the satellite's nuclear power supply may have caused it to explode.

There was no immediate comment on the report from U.S. or Soviet sp..ce officials.

Caller claims robbery

ROME (AP) — A telephone caller claimed Red Brigades terrorists staged the robbery of $700,000 from an armored security truck in Rome, but police reportedly believed the claim could be be a diversion attempt.

Italians dubbed the Sunday robbery the Trojan Horse Caper, because two masked bandits hid in a secret compartment in an overflowing garbage cart, then sprang into view and stole the money from the truck parked nearby.

An anonymous telephone caller on Monday told the Rome newspaper Il Messaggero that the Red Brigades pulled off the predawn robbery, which police said involved at least 10 robbers.

"Listen well. We from the Red Brigades carried out the garbage cart robbery to finance ourselves," the daily quoted the man as saying.

RAI state television said anti-terrorist police were investigating the call but were not ruling out the possibility the claim was bogus and an attempt to sidetrack them.

ASEAN has new leader

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Roderick Yong of Brunei today took over the post of secretary general of the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations, succeeding Phan Wannamethee of Thailand.

In a brief address at a ceremony held at the ASEAN secretariat in Jakarta, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmadja stressed the need for the secretariat to take a greater role in the association's activities.

Transfer of the post takes place every three years.

ASEAN's member countries, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, the Philippines and Brunei, take turns holding the secretary general's post in the regional organization.

China urged 'wake up'

PEKING (AP) — Many Chinese bureaucrats stall, spout official jargon, and hold endless discussions instead of getting things done, the official Communist Party newspaper said in a scathing commentary today.

"We should shout in a loud voice at them: 'Comrades, wake up, wake up,'" the front-page commentary in Renmin Ribao said.

Some Chinese bureaucrats have the attitude that new party policies do not affect them, and some officials and people at the grassroots level "dispute over trifles and moan and groan" about changes, the commentary said.

Many bureaucrats work in "slow motion" and "soak in a sea of meetings" that have no practical results, Renmin Ribao said.

China's official press and leading officials have said recently that many reforms are being held back by bureaucrats who resist them.

Indian fighting continues

AHMEDABAD, India (AP) — Hindus and Moslems fought for the sixth day Monday in the western state of Gujarat, where scores of people have been stabbed, beaten and burned to death. The state radio said police fired on some of the mobs.

The central government in New Delhi sent more than 5,200 paramilitary troopers to reinforce police in the state.

At least six people were stabbed to death Monday, including four in the state capital of Ahmedabad, police said, but newspapers reported 11 stabbing deaths.

Gujarat authorities put the statewide death toll in the week of fighting at 49, while the news media and other unofficial sources said up to 66 people had been killed.

Five refugee camps housing more than 5,000 people have been set up in Ahmedabad, a city of 3.5 million. They provide shelter for both Moslems and Hindus who were burned out or driven from their homes, or fled to escape the violence.

Curfews have been imposed in Ahmedabad and Baroda. The state radio said police opened fire on mobs in both cities, wounding several people, but did not give casualty figures.

None hurt in bombings

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Left-wing guerrillas tossed dynamite bombs from speeding cars at four Lima banks at dawn Monday, causing damage but injuring no one, police reported.

They said the rebels' targets were three branches of the Banco de Credito and one of Interbanc.

Banco de Credito is Peru's largest privately owned bank, and Interbanc is partially state-owned.

Officials blamed the attacks on the pro-Cuba Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement, but no individual or group asserted responsibility.

A police spokesman who asked not to be identified said the attacks occurred almost simultaneously at 6 a.m. — an hour after the end of the capital's 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. curfew.

President Alan Garcia imposed a state of emergency and the curfew on Lima and its port of Callao in February following a series of early morning bombings and assassinations.

39 killed in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — At least 39 people were killed in clashes between Tamil rebels and security forces, government and guerrilla sources said Monday, as peace talks entered a second day.

A Tamil source said two soldiers were slain by rebels Monday in an attack in the eastern district of Trincomalee. Government statements said 11 civilians, 20 rebels and six soldiers were killed in battles the night before.

The reports came as President Junius R. Jayewardene met again with a Tamil delegation on his proposals to end the violence that has taken more than 4,000 lives since the fighting broke out in July 1983.

A leader of the Tamil delegation, Appapillai Amirthalingam, issued a grim prediction of what will happen if the talks do not open the way for a settlement.

"The present unfortunate situation will continue and get worse," he said. "Everybody — Sinhalese, Tamils and the country as a whole — will suffer."

Amirthalingam said the meetings will continue Tuesday.
