Social Security Business Heavy

423 persons had business with the representative of the Abilene Social Security office who visits here regularly, in the first half of 1965, according to R. R. Tuley, Jr., District Manager.

He added that 100 claims were filed by local area residents between January 1, 1965 and June 30, 1965.

Tuley urged every reader of the Rotan Advance who is past age 62 to write his office for the leaflet, "You Don't Have to Retire Completely". He feels there are many checks not being filed for because of the mistaken idea that annual earnings past $1200 bar any payment during that year.

As a convenience to its readers, the Rotan Advance furnishes the coupon below which may be pasted on a postal card or sent in an envelope:

Burglars Hit Hospital Clinic Saturday Night

Burglars were disturbed Saturday night by Dr. Maurice Callan and his son Robert when they stopped by the hospital about 11 p. m. with Dr. Callan going to his office in the Clinic. He and Robert had returned from Boy Scout Camp. As Dr. Callan went down the hall, he saw someone push the clinic safe across the hall into his office. Running in the office, Dr. Callan caught a glance of the vanishing leg and then heard a car leave the alley.

The safe had not been disturbed, but the clinic cash register had been pried open, which contained $30.

An identification officer from Abilene was reported to be unable to get fingerprints and few clues were reported by local police.

Hospital Career Opportuities in Texas

by John A. Bradley, Ph.D., Chairman, Council on Public Education Texas Hospital Association and Associate Administrator, Santa Rosa Medical Center, San Antonio

At this very minute in Texas there are several thousand hospital related career vacanies that cannot be filled bceause qualified people are not available. Almost without exception, every one of the 537 member hospitals of the Texas Hospital Association have openings on their staffs for paramedical personnel including professional nurses, pharmacists, medical technologists, medical records librarians, dieticians, physical therapists, occupational thera pists, social service workers, x-ray technicians and vocational nurses.

This represents millions of dollars in salaries annually which could be bolstering the economy of Texas if the positions were filled. Even more important, it would enable the hospitals of Texas to improve and upgrade the quality of patient care.

This critical shortage of paramedical personnel is not unique in Texas alone. It is nationwide. Once a young person has completed an education program in any one of the paramedical specialties and becomes licensed, he may find employment in almost any city in the nation and in some foreign counties. The quality of paramedical education in the United States is recognized throughout the world for its excellence. In Texas there are hundreds of paramedical education programs offered including pharmacy, physical therapy, occupational therapy, professional nursing, medical technologists, medical record librarians, social service worker, dietician, x-ray technologist, vocational nurse, surgical technician and psychiatric nursing technician.

The basic entrace requirements for paramedical programs offered by various institutions are generally the same throughout the State, however, each school may have a few local pre-requisites. Young people interested in hospital career are invited to send inquiries to the Director of Health Careers Program, Texas Hospital Association, 6225 U. S. Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723. Detailed information will be forwarded by return mail.

In addition to being a stimulating and rewarding experience in service to mankind, a paramedical career offers security almost unequaled in other fields of endeavor. Members of the hospital team work in pleasant surroundings in which a hundred human dramas are unfolded daily.

As our national health needs grow, so will career opportunities in hospitalizatal related careers. The future never looked brighter for young people who may qualify for any one of these prestige positions.

What parent wouldn't insure his child good health for life . . . if he could?

Although no parent can guarantee his child good health always, a parent plays an important role in the health of a child.

A parent can teach his child the basic principles of good health. Certain fundamentals, learned early and continued through life, can do a great deal towards promoting the health of the child.

Good health can become a habit. And this is where the parent comes in: teaching his child good health habits early in life.

A habit is an action you've done so often you don't even think about it, you just do it. Help your child develop good health habits.

Hand washing is a fundamental in disease prevention. Teach your child to wash his hands after he visits the toilet. Teach him to wash his ands before he eats.

Little hands- or big ones for that matter - go many places. They may carry out the garbage, handle a fly-swatter, or touch many potential germ sources.

Hot soapy water can wash many disease-causing germs off hands before they enter the mouth and body where they can graw and cause the most harm.

Teach your child to make hand washing a habit.

Tooth brushing after meals is important to good dental health. Otherwise, bits of food lodge on and between teeth allowing bacteria to grow and eventually cause decay. Teach your child to rinse his mouth with water if he can't brush his teeth right after eating.

A daily bath and clean clothes are important, too. Hair should be washed often, and combed with your own comb. Head lice are no respectors of persons and can easily travel from person to person on a "borrowed comb."

Borrowing towels, lipstick, or sharing food or drinking glasses is a good way to borrow trouble - or other people's germs.

True, you may neglect to wash your hands one time, or you may skip a bath one day. But remember to teach your children the good health habit.

'As It Looks From Here'

Omar Burleson, M. C.
17th District, Texas

Washington, D. C. -- The Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives is now struggling with a new Farm Bill. Some Sections of the measure have been approved by Subcommittees, and some by the full Committee.

The principal aim is to reduce surpluses of all commodities now in excess supply and, at the same time, maintain decent prices for the farmer. As a matter of fact, this has been the objective of farm programs from their beginning.

In all these efforts there is the paradox of the acute problem of rapidly rising world-wide famine.

In the next few days there is supposed to be a report issued by a Task Force, appraising the food situation around the globe. There are indications that the experts looking into this matter will describe it as a desperate problem.

In all of Latin America, population is outrunning increased food production. In nations where food is already scarce, population is growing by 3 percent a year, while food output mails to increase.

Perhaps a single fact will illuminate the problem somewhat.

One-fifth of all the wheat America now produces goes to India. It keeps alive about 60 million people. Without this grain there would be mass starvation. In India, as in Latin America, it is simply the inability to produce food as fast as they produce people.

The problem can be analyzed, but the solution is another thing. Experts analyzing the prospective disaster are exceedingly pessimistic for effective international cooperation. It is clear that the only nation which really concerns itself with the problem is the United States.

Scores of new Governments, cut loose from Western Eureopean control, have problems far beyond their limited capabilities. To feed all of them is beyond our own capabilities, and yet, we are a nation of surplus food.

A number of remedies are being suggested. One is to step up the "Food for Peace" Program which now runs at about $1½ billion a year, mostly charged to the Farm Program. Another consideration is to revive and step up the old Point IV Program inaugurated during the Truman Administration. Neither holds a great deal of hope of more than seeing famine in two-thirds of the world.

The original point IV Program was directed mainly at teaching rudimentary methods of agriculture. In India, for instance, a steel point as wide as one's hand attached to the longest end o fcrossed timbers, enabled the Indian farmer to increase his tillable soil from 4 to 18 acres .

It is one thing to speak of informing 3 million American farmers through our efficient Extension Service how to apply modern methods of farming. It is another to attempt to teach 60 million farmers in India, speaking 17 different languages. Shortage of transportation alone is an insurmountable problem. As many as 27 ships at a time have been tied up in Bombay, unable to unload food cargoes.

In addition, although it may sound strange, suitable farming land is running out in Africa, Asia and Latin America. The only resort is for better yield.

Proper population control would obviously be the long-range answer. The fact remains, however, that the habits of varied races, tribes and religions reduce birthcontrol efforts to a mere demonstration. In addition, medical science has greatly reduced infant mortality and raised the life expectancy to heights unbelievable a short time ago.

Starvation itself may be nature's remedy, but imagine the turmoil and tragedy which mist inevitably accompany it.

This is a problem which approaches a dilemma on the part of our Government and all humanitarians. It is presenting itself so rapidly it is difficult to even imagine. The experts say that the calamity will be upon the world in the 1970's with its awful consequences, unless better answers are found than are now in sight.

With all the problems attending the solution of surplus food, what a blessing we in America enjoy.

The readings will also include this passage from the Christian Science textbook: "The understanding that Life is God, Spirit, lengthens our days and strengthening ones trust in the deathless reality of Life, its almightiness and immortality" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 487).

PANFISH THERAPY

There are many fine medicines in this world today, and an ordinary fishing rod plus the cooperation of a pint-sized panfish is one of them.

The effectiveness of angling therapy is often amazing, state the people in Mercury outboards' fishing department. Taking over after pills, machines and specialists have run their course, fishing has been known to work wonders.

For some reason, the gentle tug of a bluegill has magical powers. It seems to revitalize interest in the lives of many unfortunate men and women who would otherwise continue on in a gloomy, unpromising existence.

Few of us have to search far to find someone who is afflicted by one of a number of permanent disabilities. He may be 8 or 80. Regardless of age or impairment, anticipation of action on the end of a line can spark the flame that leads to better things.

From a wheelchair or poised on a pair of crutches, the rod-holder is subjected to the same electrifying nibble as any angler. For, who knows whether that first bump is a bait-filching chub or a three-pound rainbow.

For a great deal of fishing, physical abilities are really not too important. A boat provides access to most good waters, and piers and docks take care of many more. Even the best of streams can be fished from the bank with reasonable ease in certain spots.

Actually, then, the handicapped need only a helping hand to get into position. He and the fish will take care of the rest.

A few hours of your time, say the Mercury folks, will supply the necessary leg or arm or even eyes to a person who has long been without.

It is a chance to give them "heart" again, and it will also do wonders for you.

COTTON MEETING----

the present skip-row planting measurement.

9. Furnished a solid front along with other producer groups to maintain the present 16 million acre minimum cotton allotment, expand exports to protect our markets overseas, maintain the farmers income at the highest possible point in comparsion with costs of production. Developed a practical and workable solution to sell cotton throughout the world at competitive prices.

10. Furnished an organization to give the farmers and businesses of this area a united voice for agriculture and to represent all producers equally and fairly.

11. Furnished an organization to work with local industries, utility companies, and chamber of commerce to influence cotton related industry to locate within the Rolling Plains.

12. Furnished a direct link between other producer organizations, the Administration and producers throughout the area who are interested in promoting an active cotton economy.

We believe that anyone or any organization interested in the welfare of farmers, should do everything possible to maintain and increase farm income.

The income picture for farmers is, indeed, dark at a time when the rest of the economy continues to advance to new record levels. Only farmers themselves, who are trying to dig a living out of the soil, realize how serious the cost-price squeeze really is. They face it every day as the price of the products they produce all go down or remain at low levels, while the price of everything they buy continues to rise.

If this continues, it spells the doom for the family type farmers because with the high investment required to operate a farm and with the low return, it is only a matter of time until a high precentage of the farmers will either be forced to leave the farm or will decide to leave while they still have an equity. Under these conditions, you cannot expect young people raised and reared on the farms to be able to start farming and, of course, they will have little or no desire to start farming.

The efficiency of the family type farm agriculture has never been matched in any nation of the world by any other industry. It is, indeed, a sad state of affairs, when many of the people in and out of the government, who are responsible for making decisions that vitally affect farm income, do everything possible to keep farm income low.

We are aware of the battle some of the Congressman, Senators, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture have been waging to maintain and increase farm income. We realize they are up against well intended interests and the philosophy that the elimination of farmers is the only answer to farm problems.

They are having a difficult time getting committee support from other segments of the economy. Therefore, it becomes a matter of trying to keep what we have. This is the reason, we are pushing so hard to get farmers organized so they can do their part in marketing their products at a profitable rate to maintain family income.

As farmers, it irks us no end to hear statements arousing consumers against farmers and farm programs, by talking about increased prices to the consumers. We say consumers cannot expect to get wage increases and still expect the farmers to get the same low price for his products. This is neither a fair attitude on their part, nor is it economically sound. It is time they wake up. Farmers feed and clothe this nation better than any nation in the world. They deserve to share in the prosperity of the nation. Unless fair minded citizens realize this, they will kill the goose that laid the golden egg.

We as farmers, realize that we must organize at a fast pace to start accepting more of the burden for protecting our own interests. There is one word that can cure most of the farmers problems. That word is "PROFIT."

We must profit from whatever mistakes and shortcomings we have had in the past. We must profit from the start this producer organization has laid for farmers, by continuing to give support and making this years activities, milestones for the future and cornerstones of prosperity for the agricultural communities that we are representing.

Thanks for the work that you have done this year and I ask for your pledge of continued support."

DON'T SIMMER THROUGH SUMMER! STAY COMFORTABLY COOL

per month

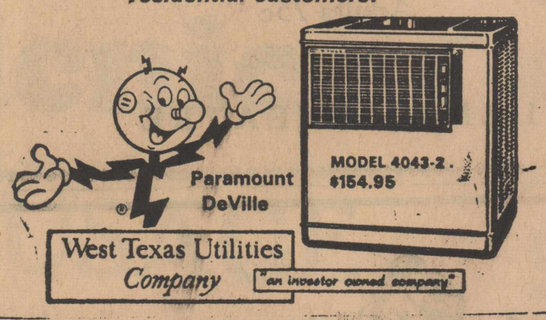

On days when the heat is unbearable, people go to the lakes or beaches to be cool and comfortable. The cool breeze of the lake or sea shore is air in motion that has been cooled by the process of water evaporation. This same process is created by a Paramount Evaporative Cooler. The large squirrel cage blower continuously pulls outside air through wet redwood filters thereby lowering the temperature through evaporation of water in the filters. This cool, fresh, filtered air is then directed into the area to be cooled.

Some of the advantages of a Paramount Cooler are:

- Low cost of equipment, operation and maintenance
- Quick and easy installation
- Maximum comfort at all times
- 100% fresh, cooled, filtered air
- Fresh air ventilation, without cooling, for spring and fall—just turn off the water

See the Paramount DeVille evaporative cooler at your WTU Showroom.

Normal installation FREE for WTU residential customers.
