FEEDER CATTLE, like these at a feedyard near Hereford, are being sold for a little as 58 cents per pound, which means cattle raisers are losing close to $100 per head.

Beef industry's downturn seen as worst since '70s

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

Cattle feeders, long accustomed to cyclic turns of the cattle industry, are beginning to view the current market situations as possibly the worst downturn since the market collapse of the early 1970s.

"The loss of equity is comparable to the '73-75 fiasco," said Bob Josserand, owner of AZTX Cattle. "That was the worst on record, and the industry as a whole is rapidly approaching that point."

Texas Cattle Feeders Association market director Jim Gill said, "There are more similarities between today's market crisis and the crisis of the early '70s than there are differences.

"The cattle industry has endured an ongoing loss for more than a year. That's comparable with what happened in the '70s," Gill said. "But this situation is not over yet."

Industry participants blame the continuing downturn on excess supply of protein, loss of demand caused by product inconsistency, and poor export opportunities, caused in part of the Asian financial crisis.

"All three major proteins are at an all time record high," Gill said. "Normally, if the beef supply is low, then the pork or poultry supply is high. Right now, all three are extremely high."

Josserand said all cattle producers are being hurt by the current market. Cow-calf operators need to get $350-$450 per calf to break even with operating costs. The latest market price is about $250-$300 per calf.

"What it amounts to is we are selling every pound of beef we produce, but it's all being sold at a loss," Josserand said.

Feeder cattle, which should be selling for 60-70 cents per pound are being sold for as little as 58 cents per pound, which means all cattle raisers are losing close to $100 per head.

"There were bigger losses per head during the '70s, but it didn't have the duration that this one seems to have," Gill said.

"The only ones making money right now are the custom feeders. Grain prices are low, cattle prices are low and with the current drought, producers are liquidating their stock," he said.

For the last five years, feedlots have seen an increase in the number of fed heifers, Gill said. The latest reports indicate 42-45 percent of all fed animals are heifers, up from 37 percent a year ago, he said.

If the market makes a turnaround, the industry will feel the liquidation of breeding stock in the spring

Changing attitudes of consumers hurts beef market

"Somewhere, the fact that everyone cut off that one-inch layer of fat and threw it away, got lost. It was never eaten."

- Milton Rudder, AZTX Cattle

Consumer demand drives the supply and the marketability of nearly all products, and beef's no exception.

As consumers' attitudes change, then so must any product if it is to maintain the market share.

This is the prime reason for the declining beef demand, according to beef industry experts.

In the last 18-20 years, consumers have become more health conscious and prefer leaner meats that still have all the taste of a prime cut, as well as products which are quick and easy to cook.

Milton Rudder, a longtime employee of AZTX Cattle in Hereford, said the beef industry "used to raise big, fat cattle and sell the untrimmed cuts. Then people began watching their cholesterol and, somehow, someone convinced the public that beef, because of all the fat, was not good for them."

"Somewhere, the fact that everyone cut off that one inch layer of fat and threw it away, got lost. It was never eaten." he said.

In response to the need for leaner cuts, butchers and meat markets started trimming fat from meat from one-inch to a quarter to an eighth inch.

Meat cutters, such as Edward Tijerina, said in the nine years he has worked at Hereford Meat Market, he has seen changes in the way people buy meat.

"Nearly everyone likes the thicker, leaner cuts, but they want it in smaller portions," Tijerina said. "They like some marbling, but they don't want any fat."

According to Tijerina, people in the 20-35 age bracket stick with hamburger and cheaper cuts; buyers in the 35-55 age group buy the most meat and the most variety, and the over-55 group usually buys the best cuts, but they want it thinner and definitely in smaller portions.

Even with the closely trimmed meats, many consumers have bypassed the better cuts and opted for cuts showing little if any marbling, and so have lost most of the flavor of the beef.

Rudder said marbling, small streaks or flecks of fat within the meat muscle, adds taste, palatability, and cookability to any meat.

Bob Josserand, owner of AZTX Cattle, said that the beef industry's failure to meet the 20-year challenge to produce a consistently tender, flavorful cut in the appropriate portions has played a tremendous role in the loss of beef consumers.

"Hopefully, this will have our cattlemen reducing the number of breeds and focusing more on the breeds that produce the quality beef," Josserand said.

Josserand did say there were other ways of producing the tender cuts - aging, shocking the carcass, or large quantities of vitamin D in the last days of feeding - but industry leaders would prefer to develop naturally tender cuts.

The breeds that typically produce the better

School weathers stormy start

■ H.I.S.D. elects to temporarily move entire campus to safer environment

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

School staff, administrators and students of Northwest Elementary School awoke Friday morning to more than the wonderful sound of nearby thunder and the smell of rain in the air.

But when they got to school, the sights and sounds were far less pleasing - soggy, wet ceiling tiles, water-logged carpeting, and damaged supplies and school work - all caused by a flat, leaking, previously repaired roof.

Earlier this year, Hereford Independent School District administrators were forced to look at the needed repairs of the school and chose to replace the flat roof with an angled version at the same time the heating and cooling systems were replaced.

The work, which was supposed to be completed by the first week of September, has been plagued by minor setbacks, but nothing like the disaster that school administrators found Friday morning after scattered heavy showers dropped approximately three-quarters of an inch of rain in the area.

"The rain just blew in under the completed portions," HISD Superintendent Jack Patton said. "Where it was leaking previously, it was still leaking."

Patton estimates about a third of the classrooms sustained water damage to ceiling tiles and says the amount of carpeting which will have to be replaced cannot be estimated until it dries and further determinations are made.

He did say that upon early examination, the biggest expense will be the flooring repairs. Water damage is severe enough that floor tiles may have to be removed and replaced, as well as much of the carpeting.

The exact dollar amount of damage throughout the school will not be known until sometime next week.

Hereford to fete Bayne

DUDLEY BAYNE

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Hereford's official 100th birthday will be observed at 7 p.m. Sept. 1 with the dedication of Dudley Bayne Park and the "burial" of a 25-year time capsule.

Hereford Mayor Bob Josserand said the capsule, unlike those that were raised during the Centennial Celebration/Town & Country Jubilee, will be placed in a raised vault. He said the decision to place the capsule in an above-ground vault was made after the contents of the time capsules raised during the Centennial Celebration were found to have sustained extensive damage during the 25 years and 50 years they were under ground.

Josserand also said residents of Hereford are asked to provide information about what should be in the time capsule to be "buried" at 8 p.m. Sept. 1.

Josserand said anyone who has an idea about the contents of the capsule should contact City Manager Chester Nolen or City Secretary Terri Johnson by noon Monday.

Bayne retired in 1985 after 29 years as city manager.

When Bayne retired, The Hereford Brand reported then-Mayor Wes Fisher said the longtime city administrator "has done more than any other single individual in building this community, and we owe him a debt of gratitude."

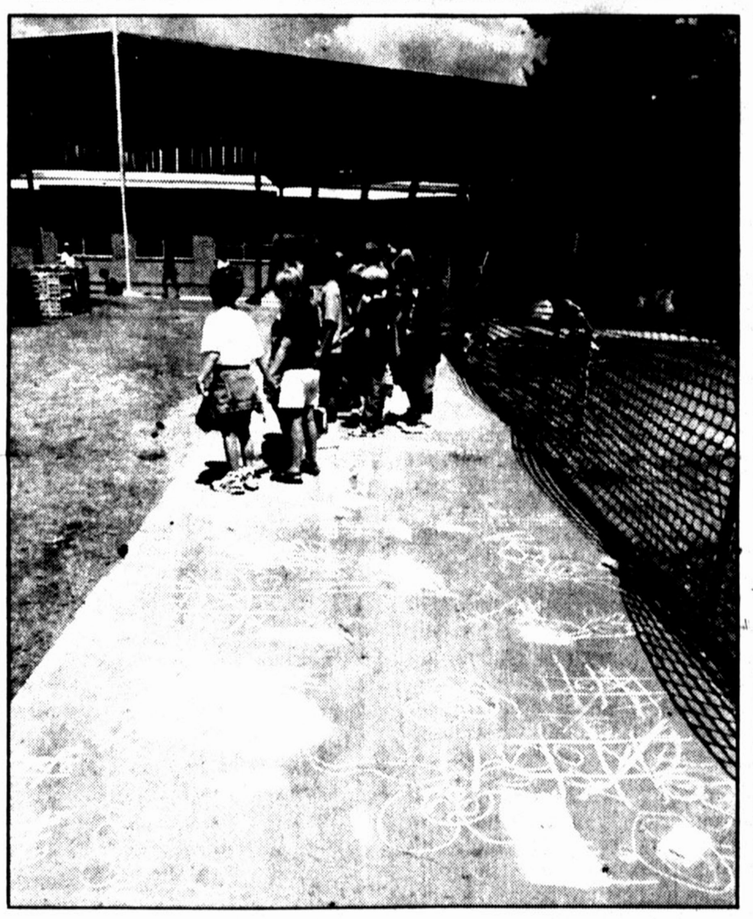

During Bayne's tenure, the city's population tripled and he supervised most of the major infrastructure improvements.

Bayne, who now lives in Flower Mound near the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex, is expected to attend the ceremony.

Patton said the contractor, John Vinson of Amarillo, received the contract as the low bidder and had ample references and insurance.

Vinson's insurance will be liable for damages.

"We had no reason believe that Vinson would have difficulty completing the job as contracted," Patton said.

Initial reports, which indicated that electrical wiring was exposed and water was standing several inches deep, proved inaccurate.

Some wiring was visible when the wet ceiling tiles collapsed, but according to Patton, all the electrical wires were either non-activated or had extremely low voltage, much like that from a nine-volt battery.

Patton was at the school before 6 a.m. and issued instructions that students were not to be in rooms where water was standing or coming through the ceiling.

Clean-up crews were on hand before students arrived, working to make classrooms useable.

Administrators have set up temporary classroom facilities at the HISD administration building for all Northwest students.

Beginning Monday, Northwest students will need to be dropped off administration building. Buses will pick up and deliver students to the administration building.

"We've made arrangements for all the routine functions of the school," said Patton. "We'll feed them breakfast and lunch from carryout trays with the same meals the other students are getting. We'll rope off a section of the parking lot for recess and on bad days, we'll bus the students to the YMCA. It's going to be business as usual."

Patton said the students will remain at the administration building until the construction job is completely finished.

"This is possibly the best way to handle this. The administration building is air-conditioned and it will be better to make temporary arrangements than trying to work around the students," Patton said.

Temporary arrangements could last up to two weeks or more.

Parents are encouraged to review the accompanying diagram and help students through the first day of the temporary arrangements.

RAINDROPS KEEP FALLING — Hereford Independent School District administrators, faculty and students made the best of things Friday after Northwest Elementary School, located at 400 Moreman, was flooded by rain showers early that morning. The entire campus, starting Monday, Aug. 31, will be moved to the H.I.S.D. Administration Building until repairs are complete. A map (top left) shows the suggested drop-off route for students. Uprooted students (bottom left) were kept occupied with a wide variety of games while maintenace personnel tackled classroom clean-up tasks across one entire wing of the school (above).

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This letter is written in reply to the (Deaf Smith) County Commissioners' only consideration - the increasing of taxes as a method to meet budget goals.

Agriculture is paying all the property taxes possible. The farming community CANNOT digest any more tax increases.

I would respectfully suggest that "they need to bring expenditures in line with income."

John B. Stribling Jr.,

Dear Editor:

Here we go again. Some business people are trying to have the little people of Hereford to pay their telephone bill. I check my telephone bill for a year without finding long-distance charges to Amarillo for over $10. I have voted NO to the extended service to Amarillo. I would like all people who have not spent $40 per year to call Amarillo to vote NO. Let the businesses pay their own telephone bill(s).

Norman V. Smith,
Hereford

Hillary has respect during her trouble

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - The woman once lampooned as Saint Hillary for seeking "the politics of virtue" is gaining new admiration.

After her husband's public admissions, people now use words like "loyal" and "brave" to describe Hillary Rodham Clinton. Two years ago, common descriptions included "dishonest" and "rhymes with rich."

Americans praise the first lady not only for a private commitment to her marriage but for accomplishing the public show of an intact White House team.

"If she can get us through this whole ordeal, she's got a lot to bring to American families and American women. The country could learn a lesson," said Carol Chase, 50, a registered independent but Clinton supporter.

The mom from Scarsdale, N.Y., spoke as she sat with her family outside the Chilmark Store on Martha's Vineyard. The Clintons have been vacationing on the island ever since the president's television admission of an inappropriate relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

Professing awe at Mrs. Clinton's fortitude and calling herself a "Hillary wannabe," Chase suggested she would put her own husband "through a meat grinder" if he were unfaithful.

Her growing respect for Mrs. Clinton is echoed by national opinion polls - and among White House aides grateful for the first lady's show of commitment to her husband.

One top Clinton aide never considered close to the first lady voiced pure admiration: "I would walk on hot coals for that woman - not her husband."

Asked to supply a one-word description of Mrs. Clinton, the top five responses in a national survey released this week were: strong, intelligent, brave, good and loyal. The top answers two years earlier: strong, dishonest, intelligent, smart and "rhymes with rich."

As soon as this island getaway ends on Sunday, the first lady's credibility and political clout will be weighed on both national and international scales.

Mrs. Clinton is to accompany her husband next week to Moscow, Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic, making separate speeches on education and women's empowerment at each stop.

She then plans a week of "back to school" U.S. appearances.

Tied with Vice President Al Gore as the Democratic Party's second-highest fund-raising draw after the president, Mrs. Clinton also is slated for at least 15 fall campaign stops before she represents the United States at a first ladies' summit in Santiago, Chile, and another women-in-democracy forum in Uruguay.

On personal grounds, public opinion stands with her. In a Pew Research Center survey released Thursday, 66 percent of Americans said they admired Mrs. Clinton's decision to stand by her husband and 63 percent had a favorable opinion of her. Her favorable rating had been as low as 42 percent early in 1996.

Still, other polls have found that an even greater majority - reaching 84 percent in a Newsweek survey - said they don't believe Mrs. Clinton's contention that she did not know of her husband's affair.

Hillary Clinton

Back in Chilmark, 18-year-old Becky Chase said that, as the wronged wife, Mrs. Clinton gets a free pass even if she was lying when she defended her husband and blamed the Lewinsky investigation on a "vast right-wing conspiracy."

Republican pollster Linda DiVall cautioned that efforts by some Clinton supporters to portray Mrs. Clinton as the victim of her husband's deception only play into the White House argument that the Lewinsky matter is a wholly private one - and not the stuff of impeachment.

Such a strategy could be ultimately destructive to the first lady's image, in DiVall's view.

"It's an enormous credibility problem," DiVall said. "Here's this leading feminist supposedly talking about women and men as equals."

"For her to have best of both worlds - pretend she's a victim and also have a hand in the strategy, essentially condoning the president's behavior with her silence - that puts her in a very dangerous position."

Plague has medieval aura, but modern face in western U.S.

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - Veterinarian Barbara Swanson didn't think much about it when the sweet, sick cat she was treating for an infection bit her on the thumb.

Four days later, a high fever and intense pain in her arm sent her to the hospital. The diagnosis: bubonic plague.

Esther Morrison believed her 70-year-old husband was exhausted when he stopped splitting wood, complained of stomach pain and told her not to count on him for supper.

Two days later, he was dead. The diagnosis: septicemic plague.

Despite its medieval aura - the Black Death (the pneumonic form of the plague) wiped out one-quarter of Europe's population in the 14th century - plague has a decidedly modern face. There are still sporadic outbreaks around the world. In the United States, an average of 10 to 15 cases are reported in humans each year, mostly in the West.

That makes it rare - but worrisome nonetheless.

"We treat it very seriously because of the risk of human-to-human spread and the high fatality rate," said Kenneth Gage, chief of the plague section of the Division of Vector-Borne Infectious Diseases with the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Plague is a bacterial disease of rodents that generally is transmitted through flea bites. The culprits are most likely to be rock squirrels, ground squirrels, prairie dogs or pack rats living roughly in the western half of the United States.

Most of the human cases occur in the Southwest - New Mexico accounts for more than half - and along the Sierra Nevada in California. There have been human cases reported in at least 13 Western states.

"The closer you get to the Rocky Mountains and on west, the more plague you're going to find," said Gage, whose office is in Fort Collins, Colo.

And it doesn't require unsanitary conditions or urban squalor. A roaming cat can bring plague back to a suburban living room.

Although flea powder and other precautions can reduce the risk, and prompt treatment with antibiotics can cure it, plague kills about 16 percent of its human victims, according to the CDC.

There were 394 human plague cases in the nation from 1949 through 1997, 63 of them fatal, the CDC said. New Mexico logged 218 of those, including 30 fatalities, said Paul Ettestad, public health veterinarian with the state Department of Health.

"It's a disease that can be fatal if not recognized and treated early enough," Ettestad said.

Swanson, the nation's first human plague case this year, saw a doctor as soon as she felt sick and spent two days in the hospital. Several months later, she still had lingering fatigue.

Esther Morrison's husband, Donald, a retired metallurgical engineer, died in August 1984 after being stricken at their house on a wooded hillside a few miles from Santa Fe.

Dead ground squirrels found in the family's woodpile were later determined to have had plague. But the doctor he saw twice didn't recognize the disease.

U.S. rig count up by 19

HOUSTON (AP) - The number of oil and gas rigs operating nationwide rose by 19 to 790 this week, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

There were 980 rigs operating in the United States during the same week last year.

Of the rigs running this week, 568 were exploring for natural gas and 221 for oil. One was listed as miscellaneous.

Houston-based Baker Hughes has kept track of the count since 1940. The tally peaked at 4,500 in December of 1981 during the oil boom. It dropped to a record low of 596 in the summer of 1993, exceeding the previous low of 663 in 1986.

The rig count represents the number of rigs actively exploring for oil and natural gas.

Of the major oil- and gas-producing states, Oklahoma increased by 10, New Mexico by seven, Alaska three, Wyoming two and Louisiana by one.

California was down two.

Texas was unchanged.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a budget is a process of checks and balances. The checks wipe out the balances.

o0o

Speaking of budgets, local taxpayers seem to have fared well on the new tax rates. The school district and the city have approved rates which are one cent less than last year, while the county and hospital board are retaining the same rates. Due to tax appraisal values, the same rates will generate a little more revenue for taxing entities.

The hospital district finances have been of some concern the past year. The Community Health Improvement Partnership(CHIP) was formed almost a year ago to evaluate the needs of the district. CHIP committees have received input at public meetings and will come up with recommendations for the board. We've heard quite a few citizens complain that one option mentioned was to build a new hospital. However, that's all it was - an option.

We don't look for the hospital district to ask for a new hospital. It was noted that if a new facility, with the same square feet as the current hospital, was built, the estimated cost would be $13.9 million. That doesn't appear acceptable to voters. However, CHIP determined that the present hospital is not obsolete, but work is needed on the facility, especially with the plumbing, heat and cooling systems. The hospital has spent a lot of money renovating and adding equipment over the past 25 years, but patrons of the district may be asked to finance a plan to bring everything into compliance with state and federal regulations.

It's sure something to think about. Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon is closing Oct. 1, after piling up a big debt. They have signed an agreement with Baptist/St. Anthony's to take care of emergency room services and some outpatient services. We'd sure hate to lose our hospital.

With school underway, now might be a good time to tell high school kids -- and some college students -- that all the facts of life are not taught in the classroom. Some schools are trying to do away with winners and losers, but this is not the way it works in real life. Charles Sykes, author of "Dumbing Down Our Kids," has listed some of the things students do not learn in school:

Rule 1: Life is not fair; get used to it.

Rule 2: The world won't care about your self-esteem. The world will expect you to accomplish something before you feel good about yourself.

Rule 3: You will not make $40,000 a year right out of high school. You won't be a vice president with a car phone until you earn both.

Rule 4: If you think your teacher is tough, wait till you get a boss. He doesn't have tenure.

Rule 5: Flipping burgers is not beneath your dignity. Your grandparents had a different word for burger-flipping; they called it opportunity.

Rule 6: If you screw up, it's not your parents' fault, so don't whine about your mistakes. Learn from them.

Rule 7: Before you were born, your parents weren't as boring as they are now. They got that way paying your bills, cleaning your room, and listening to you tell how idealistic you are. So before you save the rain forest from the blood-sucking parasites of your parents' generation, try delousing the closet in your own room.

Rule 8: Life is not divided into two semesters. You don't get summers off, and very few employers are interested in helping you find yourself. Do that on your own time.

Rule 9: Television is not real life. In real life people actually have to leave the coffee shop and go to jobs.

Rule 10: Be nice to nerds. Chances are you will end up working for nerds.

Rule 11: Smoking does not make you look cool, it makes you look moronic. And ditto for purple hair and pierced body parts.

Rule 12: Living fast and dying young is romantic...only until you see one of your peers at room temperature.

Urging resignation

It's just a whisper now ...

By MIKE FEINSILBER
The Associated Press

So far, the notion that President Clinton should resign is just a murmur in Congress, an idea advanced by a handful of mostly conservative voices.

Back in the 1970s, talk of a resignation by President Nixon also started with a few lawmakers - liberals in that case. But the voices grew as the Watergate tale unfolded.

After Nixon surrendered the famous "smoking gun" tape in which he virtually confessed to obstructing justice in the Watergate affair, Clinton, then an obscure congressional candidate from Arkansas, joined the chorus of politicians calling for Nixon's departure.

"There's not any point in his putting the country through an impeachment since he isn't making any pretense of innocence now," Clinton told the Arkansas Democrat in August 1974.

Now, 24 years later, it's Clinton who has admitted wrongdoing. But at this juncture, his resignation seems implausible to most.

Democrats say the allegations against Clinton in the Monica Lewinsky affair pale when compared with the abuse of power and obstruction of justice that ended Nixon's presidency.

Nixon's high job-approval ratings gradually eroded as the congressional investigations of Watergate unfolded. Clinton's job-approval ratings have remained high throughout the seven months of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's investigation of the Lewinsky matter.

There are other differences, too. Inflation was soaring in the Nixon era; Clinton presides over a prosperous nation at peace.

Furthermore, Republicans have scant appetite for forcing a Clinton resignation that would install Al Gore in the Oval Office and allow him to run for election in 2000 behind the power of the presidency.

Presidential spokesman Mike McCurry brushes off any suggestion of a Clinton resignation.

"If that sentiment is widespread, I think it would be worth addressing," he said. "I don't think it's necessarily worth addressing now."

So far, only a few members of Congress - and only one Democrat - have called for Clinton's resignation. Most did so after the president's televised address last week in which he admitted an improper relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern, but denied that he committed perjury or asked anyone to lie.

Clinton has "abdicated the moral authority that was entrusted to him," said Rep. Helen Chenoweth, R-Idaho, who last April began urging the president to resign.

Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., also thinks Clinton should quit "because once that bond of trust has been broken to the American people, it's very difficult, as Richard Nixon learned, to re-establish it. It's almost impossible."

Martha Kumar, a political scientist at Towson State University in Maryland, noted that most of those urging resignation are longtime Clinton critics - the "red meat guys" of the GOP.

It would be more significant if a number of Democrats began calling for his resignation, said Stanley Kutler, a retired University of Wisconsin historian. "Nixon finally had to resign because he had become a burden to his own party," Kutler said. "If the Democrats decide that Clinton's a burden, he's gone."

Former Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia broached resignation in a column published Sunday in The Washington Post: "In the weeks ahead, the president must lead by putting the country's interest first. This means a voluntary and complete disclosure of all relevant matters concerning alleged acts of illegality to the independent counsel, to the congressional leadership and to the American people. This will require personal sacrifice and may even require his resignation."

So far, only one Democrat in Congress has asked Clinton to step down, retiring Rep. Paul McHale of Pennsylvania, who said he came to that difficult decision after concluding Clinton had lied under oath.

"Perjury is not excused by an apology compelled by overwhelming evidence and delivered under pressure," said McHale, who is leaving the House after six years.

Clinton, meantime, enjoys strong backing in the public opinion polls. His job-approval rating is higher than before the Lewinsky affair surfaced in January. At the same time, the segment of Americans who tell pollsters they think he should resign or be impeached has inched up to about 25 percent.

While a majority of Americans want Clinton to stay in office, historian Kutler is bothered that the notion of a president resigning is being bandied about casually. Before 1974, he said, most Americans didn't even know a president could resign.

Why bribe the students?

DIANNA E. DANDRIDGE
The Real World

School is back in session, and I couldn't be happier.

I've purchased the notebooks, pencils, paper, folders, crayons, scissors, and kleenex, knowing there is a reasonable use for it all, thinking that's all that is needed. But, wait - now my sixth- and fourth-grade students tell me they HAVE to have a large bag of candy.

Why?

The kids tell me that they need it for the teacher to give as rewards when students do particularly well.

So now it's come down to us literally bribing children to behave and do their schoolwork.

Boy, that makes a lot of sense for children to be told: "Now, Johnny, if you keep talking in class you won't get to pick a treat from the goody box."

Horsefeathers!

What ever happened to teachers telling students to sit down, be quiet, and get to work. And, actually expecting the students to comply.

I remember a teacher - who I thought was the meanest person alive - used to rap our knuckles with a ruler should we misbehave or fail to bring in our homework at the appointed time. Not only would she rap our knuckles, but then she would write a note to our parents, which had to be signed and returned. Few students ever repeated a misdeed.

As I grew older, my opinion changed. She taught unruly children to sit still, get their lessons completed and then go on to better things. In other words, we were expected to do what we were there to do. Through the years I've realized she was one of my favorites.

Looking back at her class, I can remember her ramrod straight back as she wrote the daily lessons on the old green chalkboard, usually with either yellow or white chalk.

When students were required to answer a question - which was quite often - we stood beside our desk, respectfully answered the question and waited for our reward.

If the answer was correct, we were rewarded by being allowed to sit. If the answer was incorrect, we were rewarded by the teacher taking the time to walk us through the question and let us correct our answers as necessary.

Having Mrs. M walk us through terrible stated problems, boring history lessons, and hypothetical science theories in her crisp, precise speech - now, that was a reward.

During my stay in her class, I firmly decided I would never need to learn the multiplication facts and I chose to read a book when she had told us to write the facts a certain number of times.

I'll never forget the sting as that old wooden ruler whacked across my knuckles. Nor will I forget the whipping I got when I got home and showed my mom the note that said I had been disruptive in class.

I know we can't make anyone do anything they choose not to do. We can't make someone quit drinking; we can't make someone not get involved with drugs. At best, we can only give them the tools necessary to make the right choices.

Personally, I fail to see how the offering of a piece of candy will motivate a child to behave. After all, most kids get more than just a bit of candy on a routine basis.

Most people agree that for any child to get pleasure from being disruptive, there has to be someone to note the disruption. If this is so, would it not accomplish much more by setting a child outside the classroom until he tired of his own company?

I have a child who invariably gets in trouble at school and then tries to convince me that it's the teacher's fault.

"She doesn't like me! If she had only given me more time, I would have finished the project. She doesn't know how to teach me."

Just as invariably, she gets upset when I point out that it was ultimately up to her to complete the assignment or prevent the trouble. She accuses me of always taking the teacher's side. And, because I think the lessons, assignments or the consequences for failing to comply are reasonable, maybe I do take the teacher's side?

Popcorn in the foyer?

Popcorn in the foyer?

Of church?

When you enter the foyer of most churches, you find brochures and other denominational literature, notices about church group meetings, or pleas for donations for mission projects.

But, starting in mid-October, a popcorn machine will be sitting in the foyer at Fellowship of Believers Church in Hereford as part of "A Night at the Movies."

Pastor Nathan Stone said a large-screen television will be in place in the church and a movie will be presented.

Stone said the idea is to watch the movie intelligently, making a effort to find out the film's central message, if it describes reality, if it offers insight on how life should -- or should not -- be lived.

Also, he said, viewers will be asked to tell what scenes, situation or comment in the film most affected their emotions.

"We won't be viewing the 'typical churchy' movies like 'The Ten Commandments' or 'Jesus of Nazareth,'" Stone said. "The movies will be those that provide deep meaning to contemporary audiences (and) the film rating will be announced in advance," Stone said.

Among the movies under consideration for viewing and discussion are "Cry, the Beloved Country," "Lord of the Flies," "Defending Your Life," "The Pawnbroker," "Trip to Bountiful," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "Fried Green Tomatoes," "My Left Foot," "The Edge," "Slingblade," "The Apostle," "War of the Roses," and "The Quiet Room."

Although the main focus of "A Night at the Movies" is on adults, children won't be left out. A children's movie and discussion time will held in another room, Stone said.

Although nothing's been carved in stone yet, Stone said he thinks the movie will be shown at 6 p.m. The discussion will follow the movie and should be over by 9 p.m., he said.

Stone said the idea is to bring together people from the community to share their thoughts and stimulate their intellectual processes.

Who knows? Maybe it'll work out, maybe it won't. But it's a good idea that deserves a chance.

And, there'll be popcorn popping in the foyer.

Didja know?

"Factoids" are those bits of trivia that some people might find interesting, but which you don't necessarily need to know.

The following "factoids" arrived in the e-mail from Dennis Byrd, the Donrey Media Group bureau chief in Little Rock.

- All 50 states are listed across the top of the Lincoln Memorial on the back of the $5 bill;
- Maine is the only state with just one syllable;
- A goldfish has a memory span of three seconds;
- A cat has 32 muscles in each ear;
- "Stewardesses" is the longest word that is typed with only the left hand;
- Almonds are members of the peach family;
- There are only four words in the English language which end in "-dous": tremendous, horrendous, stupendous and hazardous;
- The average person falls asleep in seven seconds;
- No word in the English language rhymes with purple, month, silver or orange;
- A dime has 118 ridges around the edge;
- Tigers have striped skins, not just striped fur;
- A microwave was invented after a researcher walked by a radar tube and a chocolate bar melted in his pocket; and
- Bill Gates, founder of Microsoft, is the richest man in the world. To put his wealth into terms we (the little people) understand, Reader's Digest published these statistics: If Gates purchased a $250,000 Lambourghini, it would be like us making a 63-cent purchase; based on Gates' hourly wage, if he saw a $100 bill on the ground, it wouldn't be worth his time to bend over and pick it up.

Of course, another "factoid" is: Donrey's Little Rock bureau chief must have a bit too much free time on his hands.

NEWS in brief

Bon Aqua endures water shortage

BON AQUA, Tenn. (AP) - It seems as unlikely as Orange City, Fla., running out of oranges or Jackpot, Nev., shutting down the slots.

But residents of Bon Aqua - the name means "Good Water" - is enduring a water shortage.

"I've been here 17 years, and it's never happened like this," said James Jenkins, who manages the utility district serving Bon Aqua and Lyles, both about 35 miles southwest of Nashville.

The trouble started when one of the pumps serving Bon Aqua burned out earlier this week. While the pump was being repaired, reserve water supplies ran out.

Tankers trucked water in from neighboring communities Wednesday to refill the reserves, and Jenkins said all 2,750 customers were getting at least a slow flow of water. But further shortages were expected.

The Tennessee Emergency Management Agency was coordinating efforts to bring more water to town. Jenkins said he didn't know how long it would take to get the rural system running at full speed again.

"It's just going to take time," he said.

Burglar knew just what to get

AKRON, Ohio (AP) - A burglar knew exactly what to haul off in a heist from a discount outlet store: a single pair of mint-condition 1930s Levi's jeans valued at $4,000.

Police in suburban Cuyahoga Falls discovered the theft after responding to a burglar alarm at Village Discount Outlet early Monday.

Capt. Lou Dirker thought the store had incorrectly listed the value of the jeans in the theft report. "I think it's highway robbery what they get for them, anyway," Dirker joked.

The pants are distinguishable from ordinary dungarees because of a big "E" stamped in red on a rear pocket, police were told.

Jeans from the '30s are fairly rare but the theft of vintage jeans isn't anything new, said Lynn Downey, historian for San Francisco-based Levi Strauss Co.

"I've heard of other instances of people backing up trucks to pawn shops and taking nothing but vintage Levi's," Downey said.

French chef tries unusual cuisine

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) - It isn't every day that French gastronome Jean-Michel Vienne gets to savor Hamburger Cookies or Fruit Pizzas, much less Slappy Dogs.

If they sound like culinary creations only a child could imagine, it's because they are. Each is an entry in a kid-friendly cooking contest celebrating the 35th birthday of the Easy-Bake Oven.

The plastic oven is heated by a 100-watt bulb. Pawtucket-based toy giant Hasbro Inc., which has sold 16 million of the ovens, is offering a $5,000 savings bond and enough cooking supplies for two years to the child with the best recipe using one or more Easy-Bake brand mixes.

Five youngsters will be chosen to go to the finals Oct. 9 in New York City.

Tasting honors in Thursday's semifinals went to four master cooks including Vienne, who is national chairman of the Euro Gastronome chefs' society and dean of culinary arts at Johnson and Wales University.

Among the 13 semifinalist dishes were sugary confections adorned with chocolate-chip frosting, marshmallow creme and gumdrops. Vienne gave the youngsters - ages 8 to 11 - high marks.

I'm all for providing teachers with the necessary tools to teach the little darlings the lessons of the day, but just as I chose to learn my multiplication tables rather than suffer the consequences, I also choose to not to supply the bribes for the little disrupters. I will not send candy to school.

Just as Mrs. M taught students in her classroom to make appropriate choices, I hope that today's teachers choose to find better alternatives to bribing the students or whacking their knuckles with a ruler.

Distracted Clinton confronts troubled world

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Analysis

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Just about all Bill Clinton needs to do is put his hand on the map in the White House Map Room - scene of his Monica Lewinsky television confessional - and he'll be touching a global trouble spot.

If he's not depressed by his own problems, he might be by everyone else's.

Asia chokes on a financial crisis from Indonesia to Japan that is reflected in a 1,000-point Dow Jones swoon. Saddam Hussein slams the door on United Nations weapons inspectors. North Korea may be reneging on a 1994 agreement to give up attempts to build nuclear weapons in exchange for fuel oil and Western-built nuclear reactors.

Bombs rip a frail peace in Ireland. Fighting in Kosovo threatens to draw Albania into that war while winter's approach carries the prospect of a humanitarian disaster for a quarter of a million refugees. America braces for terrorist retaliation following its missile attacks in Afghanistan and Sudan.

And Russia, where Clinton hopes his visit this week will help restore his presidential credentials, faces economic crisis. Russia ultimately could right itself, but it also could wind up in collapse and chaos, or under nationalistic or military rule.

So the question is whether the president is too crippled politically to run foreign policy.

And on that, the experts are, as experts tend to be, divided.

Charles Kupchan, who teaches at Georgetown and served on the staff of the National Security Council during Clinton's first term, believes that Clinton, in rehabilitation mode, is likely to become a more activist president on foreign policy, a matter that appeared to bore him during the first two years of his term.

"Americans like their presidents to be presidential," Kupchan said, "and that involves getting on Air Force One and flying around the globe and making America's power felt abroad."

"When Clinton is in Moscow, will Boris Yeltsin think any less of him (because of the scandal at home) or will the Russian people listen less closely to his speech? I doubt it," says Kupchan. It is America's might, and not its president's troubles, that matter, he argues.

The country's "diplomatic clout," he says, derives from such factors as the strength of its economy, the size of its markets, and its military capabilities. "So I think the president's domestic troubles will not have any immediate impact."

To all of which Richard Betts, a veteran of Jimmy Carter's NSC staff and the staff of the Senate Intelligence Committee, offers energetic disagreement.

Betts, director of national security studies at the Council on Foreign Relations, thinks Clinton has been enfeebled and "that alone is reason enough for him to resign."

"We do have an unusual number of crises all at once - an extraordinary number which would tax the abilities of a commander in chief even if he wasn't distracted by his lawyers half the day," Betts says.

None is of the order of the Cuban missile crisis, he says, "but several could turn into a major disaster. If Russia collapses, that's a terrible disaster. If North Korea figures it can get away with making nuclear threats now, that's serious. If the Iraqis think that Clinton has too much on his plate now, they might be tempted to up the ante."

Betts thinks Clinton is immobilized by the Lewinsky matter: Before he makes any move abroad, he must consider how it will play at home.

And even Kupchan concedes that any time Clinton needs Congress to make a foreign policy move - to approve funding for a bailout project, for example - he will confront the reality that lawmakers of both parties are distancing themselves.

Another former member of Clinton's first-term NSC staff, Gideon Rose, makes an additional point: Today's foreign policy crises are small potatoes compared to the 50-year crisis that was the Cold War, with its threat of nuclear Armageddon.

The end of the Cold War has reduced the deference the public pays the president and that Congress pays the executive branch.

"We are in a good enough position that our politicians can yammer away," he says. "They can play to the gallery."

Settling a Dispute With Your Broker

Most investment representatives are reputable people who work hard to help their clients succeed financially. The vast majority of investors have good relationships with their financial professionals.

Occasionally, however, investors have a dispute with a broker or financial professional. Some people in this situation file lawsuits. However, a lawsuit can be an expensive and harrowing ordeal. It's reported that more than 14.5 million civil lawsuits are filed annually, and the typical case takes three to four years to get to trial.

Fortunately, investors with legitimate arguments have another option, called alternate dispute resolution (ADR). ADR can be a two-step process. First, mediation is attempted. If unsuccessful, mediation may be followed by binding arbitration.

In mediation, both parties cooperate to solve the problem. A lawyer is not needed. However, the mediator — a person specially trained in dispute resolution — is often a lawyer, possibly a former judge. In securities cases, the mediator is generally familiar with securities law.

The mediator typically meets privately with each party to discuss the case and possible solutions. Approximately 85 percent of mediated disputes conclude in voluntary settlements. In the small percentage of cases where mediation fails, it is usually suggested both parties go to binding arbitration.

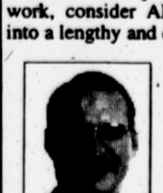

Arbitration is a method of having arbitrators (impartial persons who are knowledgeable in the areas of dispute) dictate a resolution. According to the Security Industry Conference on Arbitration (SICA), arbitration has long been used as an alternative to the courts because it is a prompt and inexpensive means of resolving complicated securities issues.

Unlike mediation, "an arbitrator award is final and binding. It is subject to review by a court only on a very limited basis," says the SICA. After arbitration has been selected, the parties generally give up their right to pursue the matter through the courts.

Yet arbitration is much simpler than a court trial. Rules of evidence, witnesses and testimony are relaxed. The arbitrators (typically three, representing the legal profession, the securities industry and the public) are more interested in hearing the entire story and reaching a fair decision than in getting mired in every detail. With arbitration, both parties can — and typically do — use lawyers, but the legal fee is usually only a fraction of what it would be for a court case.

A variety of organizations sponsor arbitration, including the national and regional stock exchanges, The Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board and the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD).

The vast majority of securities disputes are solved by simple, open dialogues with your broker. If an error has been made, a legitimate firm will be anxious to rectify it. But if this doesn't work, consider ADR before jumping into a lengthy and expensive lawsuit.

BEEF

cuts of beef are longer bodied with more loin area, Rudder said.

"It's important that breeders look for these qualities and breed for them. The genetics that determine these desirable traits can't be bred into animals in one generation. The industry needs time to develop the best animals to deliver the best quality meats," Rudder said.

Besides the questions of cholesterol problems, the industry has also been faced with health problems regarding the product safety after numerous E-coli scares and meat recalls.

"We want the public to understand that E-coli bacteria can penetrate only the ground meat and if it is cooked to 165 degrees or more, it is harmless," Rudder said. "Thicker cuts, such as steaks and roasts, are subjected to so much heat for a sustained period that once again the bacteria is destroyed.

"What it boils down to is the industry must change the consumers perception of our product," Rudder said. "Our product is the most inspected, most governmentally controlled, and the safest product on the market."

Even the animals' feed is strictly monitored to prevent scares like the mad-cow disease in Britain.

"Our feed consists of steamed or flaked corn, crushed grain, minerals, and roughage like hay or alfalfa," Rudder said. "Probably, the least palatable of any ingredient is the food-quality liquid fat. We only use a small amount in a ton of feed.

"I guess every beef producer just hopes the consumers will just stick with us until we can meet their demands," he said.

Different industry programs continue to address the need for quick and tasty meals that today's on-the-go families require.

Cookoffs and beef challenges encourage cooks who have found good recipes to share them with others and possibly win prizes in the process.

"It's just another way the industry is trying to meet the consumer designs," Rudder said.

CATTLE

and fall when producers normally are rebuilding herds, Josserand said.

"We've lost demand over the last 18 years," Josserand said. "The industry needs to respond to the more health-conscious diets of the consumers. We've got to answer the challenge issued by the pork and poultry industry."

The best way for the beef industry to regain the lost consumers is to diligently produce a consistently tender, quality cut, which is packaged for today's buyer, Josserand said.

"Hamburger and steaks make up only 25 percent of a carcass," said Josserand. "The rest of the cuts need to be of more uniform quality and size. There are a lot of things we could do toward that end."

However, the most difficult obstacle for the industry to overcome may be the ailing export market, Gill said.

"Right now, the Asian market can't afford to pay for U.S. beef," he said. "We import some beef even with our own supply so high, but it all boils down to a free-trade market."

"I don't know what the outcome is going to be," Josserand said. "What I do know is this fiasco is going to permanently change the cattle business. It's going to change the way we market our product - the cattle owner and the risk taker. It's going to change significantly - we hope for the better."

Yeltsin won't resign

MOSCOW (AP) - Boris Yeltsin's opponents appeared today to be backing off on their demands for an immediate power-sharing agreement, and the interim government said there would be no return to the Soviet past.

Yeltsin vowed unequivocally Friday that he would not resign, and the government tried to reassure both Russians and international investors that efforts to build a market economy would not be abandoned.

GOP lawmaker renews push for 'Star Wars' defense system

WASHINGTON (AP) - Citing the recent embassy bombings in Africa as evidence that terrorists are targeting the United States, a Republican congressman today renewed his party's push for a missile defense system.

Rep. Michael Pappas of New Jersey used the GOP's weekly radio address to call on the Clinton administration to set up a missile defense system to shield those on American soil from terrorist threats. The best possible missile defense system also should be in place to protect troops in the field from missile attacks, such as the Iraqi Scuds that claimed 28 lives during the Persian Gulf War, he said.

"It should be the goal of the United States to ensure that our citizens at home and abroad are given every reassurance that we have done all we can to protect them from acts of terrorism," Pappas said.

Despite the end of the Cold War, the United States still faces serious challenges to its national security interests from "smaller, less predictable adversaries, including well-funded terrorist groups," he said.

The congressman, a member of the House National Security Committee, said potentially two dozen countries - including Iraq, Iran and North Korea - have missile technology capable of striking the United States.

In July, a congressionally mandated review concluded that American cities are vulnerable to missile attack, contradicting CIA assessments that no imminent long-range missile threat exists. Earlier this month, several House members introduced legislation that favors the creation and deployment of a missile defense system.

The administration has resisted moves to develop an anti-ballistics missile defense system.

GERI HALLIWELL

LONDON (AP) - Ex-Spice Girl Geri Halliwell is clearing out her wardrobe, including her Union Jack minidress, to benefit charity.

Along with the clothes, Halliwell will offer her 1967 MGB roadster, bought with her first royalty check, in the sale at Sotheby's on Sept. 16.

The Union Jack dress, which she promised to deliver personally to the buyer, had an estimated price tag of $13,000.

A beaded white evening gown and coat worn when Halliwell was presented to Queen Elizabeth II at the 1997 Royal Command Performance is expected to fetch at least $1,600.

Halliwell, who had a benign lump removed from her breast at 18, wants all the proceeds to go to the Sargent Cancer Care for Children charity.

ROBERT REDFORD

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The Sundance Kid doesn't have a monopoly on the name.

Robert Redford, who played the outlaw in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and uses the name on his Utah-based Sundance Enterprises, Sundance Film Festival and Sundance Institute, plans to start a chain of Sundance movie theaters, with one of them to be in Fort Worth.

But theaters owned by Ed Bass already are named Sundance - so Redford's attorneys wrote to him, saying they wanted the name Sundance removed.

Bass and his brothers, who are developers, took Redford to federal court, claiming they had used the Sundance name in Texas since at least 1981. Redford started his Sundance Institute in 1980.

Under an agreement approved Wednesday, the Bass brothers can useheaters in 13 counties in Texas and Oklahoma, including the Fort Worth area. Redford can use it anywhere else.

Censure of Clinton now seen as an alternative

WASHINGTON (AP) - Even before Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr submits a report to Congress, some politicians are reviving a historical option for condemning President Clinton's behavior: congressional censure.

Far less severe than impeachment, a censure resolution would simply scold the president. It's only been used once, 164 years ago.

There's more public support for that sort of symbolic action than for impeachment or for Congress doing nothing to chastise Clinton, recent polls suggest.

The only president ever censured was Andrew Jackson. In 1834, the Senate approved a censure resolution after Jackson removed the nation's money from a private bank in defiance of the Whig Party, which controlled the Senate.

The resolution, which had no legal impact, was expunged from the Senate record in 1837 after Jackson's party, the Democrats, regained a majority in the chamber.

Robert Remini, a University of Illinois historian and Jackson biographer, said the policy dispute that led to Jackson's censure was far different from the allegations of perjury and obstruction of justice being investigated by Starr.

If Congress does find evidence of crimes, Remini said, a censure vote would be "kind of a fake response."

"The Constitution is clear: If this man has committed high crimes and misdemeanors, then the resolution is impeachment," he said. Censure would be "like sending a child to his room rather than giving him a sound licking."

Starr is investigating whether Clinton lied about his relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky in a sworn deposition for a sexual harassment lawsuit or took other steps to cover it up. Starr is expected to detail his evidence with a report to the House, perhaps in a few weeks.

One recent poll found 41 percent of Americans favored a congressional resolution scolding Clinton, while 24 percent favored impeachment and 32 percent wanted no formal action at all. That CNN/USA Today/Gallup poll, with a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points, was taken last Friday through Sunday.

In an ABC News survey Sunday, 55 percent favored censuring or reprimanding Clinton, while 40 percent opposed such a step. The margin of error was plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

Impeachment is the only sanction outlined in the Constitution for a president. But the Constitution says the House and Senate can punish their own members through censure. The Senate has done so nine times and the House 36 times, according to their historians.

It is not clear whether one or both houses of Congress would vote on any censure resolution against Clinton.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., in March raised the possibility of a presidential censure as a "lesser option" to condemn Clinton's conduct if "it's not serious enough for impeachment."

But House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, who called for Clinton's resignation, has criticized the censure idea as unsupported by the Constitution and too weak a response if crimes were committed.

A Democrat, Rep. John LaFalce of New York, said censure might be a good idea "if that would bring the matter to a close."

Congressional aides say some Republicans are reluctant to embrace censure before they know the seriousness of any offenses Starr may uncover. Democrats, meanwhile, are wary of publicly supporting censure now for fear it would establish a minimum punishment that could be surpassed only by impeachment.

Rep. Martin Meehan, D-Mass., a member of the House Judiciary Committee, where any impeachment proceedings would start, said it's too early to discuss censure.

"Members of Congress shouldn't make excuses for what the president has done," Meehan said. "But we can't automatically make a leap from being extremely disappointed with the president to impeaching him, unless there is supporting evidence that the president has committed treason, a high crime or a misdemeanor."

Poll finding no sign of erosion among likely Democratic voters

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democratic leaders worry aloud that fallout from the Lewinsky affair could cause their party's voters to stay home in November, but a new poll shows no sign of erosion.

"Right now, we don't see any less interest in Democratic voters with regard to turnout," said Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press, which released its poll Thursday. That's "even though the public is more critical of Bill Clinton personally than it has been," he said.

Several congressional Democrats voiced renewed concerns about President Clinton in recent days, with House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt talking about the possibility of impeachment. But the party's chairman encouraged Democrats on Thursday to stick to the Democrats' tested message.

Richard Gephardt

"People are very pleased with the president's economic policies, education programs, his push on health care and inclusion," said Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, general chairman of the Democratic National Committee. "The best thing to say to candidates is, 'Remember where we came from, how we got here, stay with those issues and that will win.'"

According to the Pew poll, 61 percent say the Clinton-Lewinsky controversy will not affect their vote in November.

In fact, construction worker John Mason of Louisville, Ky. said the controversy has made him even more likely to vote Democratic.

"I'm so bitter at Republicans, it makes my support of Democrats even stronger," declared the Democrat, wearing a blue hard hat with a stubby pencil over one ear. "They need my vote."

Still, Republicans say they are seeing the first signs that the president's problems could dampen Democratic turnout this fall.

"The Democrats are not as likely to be interested in the election, they are less intense about voting and about supporting their candidate," said Republican pollster Ed Goeas, citing his detailed GOP survey of voter intensity. But Democratic pollster Geoff Garin countered it's too early to get a significant reading of such matters.

Much will depend on the contents of an expected report from special prosecutor Kenneth Starr and the president's handling of the situation, analysts said.

The intense debate generated by the Lewinsky controversy could eventually cause voter disenchantment, said Curtis Gans of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

"My gut says that it cannot help but dampen turnout," Gans said. "My judgment is that as we get closer to the election, if Republicans don't overplay their hand, this will help step on whatever message (Democrats) have."

Rep. John Linder of Georgia, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, said he's getting a sense from campaigning across the country this month that "Americans of all political persuasions are disillusioned, disheartened and disgusted."

William Sumpter of Louisville was one Democratic voter who was fed up and ready to vote Republican.

"I will walk in that voting booth and hit that 'R' button just like that," he said, snapping his fingers. "It will send a message that the people of the United States will not tolerate this from their leaders."

The Pew poll suggested Democrats and Republicans are closely matched in this fall's congressional elections, with Republicans still having a slight edge among likely voters. And it reflected no significant change in voter enthusiasm for either party since June.

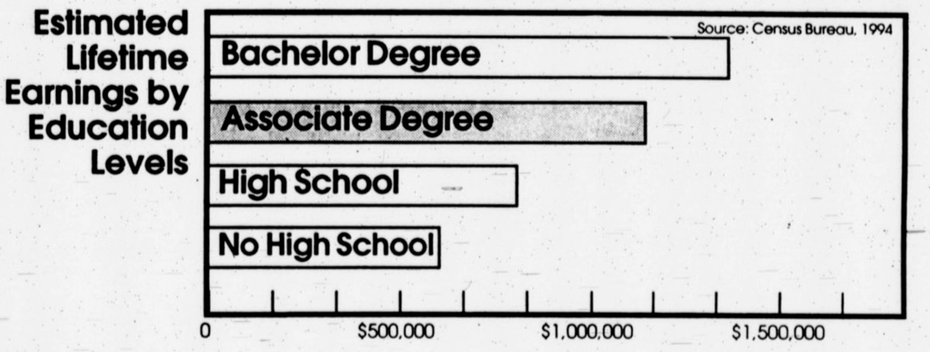

The president's job approval rating was steady at 62 percent, and a majority of those surveyed would have an unfavorable view of any member of Congress who voted for impeachment hearings for the president.

But the poll had some potential trouble signs as well. A majority said the controversy was severe enough that it was interfering with Clinton's ability to run the country. And 43 percent said he did not have the respect he needs from officials in Washington and world leaders to lead the country.

"This is potentially a sign of vulnerability," Kohut said.

SkyTalk

by John Gilmore

A giant appears in the eastern sky these late summer evenings in the form of the planet Jupiter. Named after the most powerful Roman god, Jupiter is the largest planet in our solar system possessing an equatorial diameter eleven times that of the earth. It lies at a mean distance of four hundred and seventy million (470,000,000) miles from the sun. (Earth, you will remember, is only ninety-three million (93,000,000) miles from the sun).

Furthermore, Jupiter's rotational period is approximately ten hours compared to twenty-four hours for earth to complete one rotation on its axis. Also, the orbital period of the Jovian (Latin for Jupiter) Titan is close to twelve years. This means an inhabitant of Jupiter would experience a short day while the year would be extremely long.

But Jupiter has a stellar composition (most of its mass is hydrogen and helium). Therefore, it does not have a solid surface. It is a gaseous body, just like a star. Indeed, models of stellar formation reveal the Jovian mass to be one-eightieth of the mass needed for ignition which results from internal heat due to gravitational collapse. Think of it, if Jupiter were eighty times more massive we would have two stars in our solar system. This would not afford too many nights of total darkness and therefore not too much observing could be done. Just a thought.

By contrast, at least sixteen satellites (moons) orbit the King of the solar system with surfaces ranging from rock to ice. Four of these, Io, Europa, Ganymede, and Callisto, may be observed with modest optical aid, i.e., binoculars or a small telescope. It was the Italian astronomer, mathematician, and physicist Galileo Galilei (1564-1642) who made the first telescopic observation of these four moons (known as the Galilean satellites) in 1610. The previous year Galileo heard about the newly invented telescope. He set about constructing his own crude, by today's standards, nine-power instrument. Galileo turned his telescope to the heavens and discovered the moon to be cratered and mountainous. Turning to Jupiter, he observed four small stars that soon proved to be Jovian satellites. With this humble instrument Galileo revolutionized astronomy. The advent of telescopic astronomy changed forever time-honored traditions and ecclesiastical dogma regarding our place in the cosmos.

Likewise, as mentioned, anyone with binoculars or a small telescope can discover for themselves the four Galilean satellites of the Jovian behemoth and marvel at the intricacy and precision of the orbital paths they describe around our planetary neighbor. As you look at this spectacle of nature, it's not hard to imagine you're seeing a miniature solar system in action.

Finally, Jupiter is very easy to spot in the east a little after sunset. It is the brightest object in the sky, and it is approaching opposition (the closest point to earth in it's twelve year orbital period) which makes this a very good time to observe the King of planets. The best place to view this phenomenon is, of course, southeast of Hereford or west of the city, or any location away from the glare of city lights. As September approaches, Jupiter rises earlier and stays with us through the autumn and much of the winter. If possible, look for the bands that characterize Jupiter's surface features.

From reports I have read, the Perseid meteor shower did not disappoint observers around the world, despite the gibbous moon, and in our case locally, cloudy skies. As I mentioned last time, we have another chance in November when the Leonid meteor shower makes it annual appearance.

Next time we will continue our tour of the solar system and visit the ringed planet Saturn.

Lawmakers more venturesome in using Internet

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the Dark Ages of the Internet, politicians dipped a cautious toe into the cybersurf, offering at most a meager, cookie-cutter menu of information.

Visitors were asked to click here for the congressman's letter of welcome, there for press releases or handy tourist tips when visiting the nation's capital.

All standard.

But in the three years since Congress first emerged in a big way on the World Wide Web, some lawmakers have become far more venturesome.

They're using their Web sites to put into the hands of the folks back home reams of information - and rhetoric - that can't be squeezed into newsletters, town hall appearances or media interviews. They're also tailoring their Web pages to reach out to other constituencies: Fellow congressional offices, special-interest advocates, reporters, C-SPAN junkies and others curious about the day-to-day workings of Capitol Hill.

More than most, House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas has established a multifaceted Web presence.

The Irving Republican has Web pages for his congressional office, majority leader's office, and one dedicated to his top legislative passion: Scrapping the current tax code in favor of a flat tax.

On the majority leader Web site, visitors can respond to survey questions and learn more about the millennium bug, Armey's thoughts on cloning, President Clinton and more. He also provides the GOP's response to the president's weekly radio address and a "Tax Season Survival Kit."

"It begins with sweaty palms, followed by bouts of disbelief and panic. Can you recognize the warning signs of tax season shock?" the Web page asks, helpfully dishing out Armey's favorite prescription: A flat tax.

Visitors are treated to an "Armey axiom," a weekly dose of political theory flavored with his staunchly conservative views. Past axioms include: "To diagnose our problems, we must understand the full anatomy of the political economy - especially the invisible foot of government" and "Never believe it when someone says, 'I'm from the government and I'm here to help.'"

The Web page also lists each American's share of the national debt: $20,715 and rising. And, for those eager to hear Armey's drawl, visitors with the right computer gear can download snippets of his speeches.

"It's a great tool to use to communicate ... and people expect us to have it," said Paul Morrell, the top aide in Armey's congressional office.

Thousands of people visit Armey's Web pages every week. Since June, Armey's congressional office site has recorded more than 80,000 "hits" or visits. The trick, Morrell says, is keeping the Web pages fresh.

"It's one thing for people to know the information is available, but you also have to make it interesting enough and keep it up to date so that people keep coming back," he said.

A fellow Texan in the GOP leadership, Rep. Tom DeLay of Sugar Land, has set up a Web site that has become an important legislative resource.

DeLay's majority whip Web site displays the House's current floor activity, daily and weekly schedules, and allows users to download a ticker service that provides updated news headlines and House business throughout the day. For those who don't want to visit the Web site, DeLay offers an e-mail service with the daily and weekly floor schedules.

DeLay and his staff are keenly pleased with their improved ability to communicate within and outside the halls of Congress.

"We take great pride in having as many options and as many add-ons as you can have, and the reason behind doing it is that DeLay feels that this is ... a very effective communication device," said spokesman Michael Scanlon. "It's only going to become more important."

Increasingly, members are customizing their pages to reflect their diverse interests.

Recently, Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock added a new component: A "Farmers Market" that provides a paean to the farming life as well as links to sites with up-to-date information on the drought, satellite maps, crop forecasts and agricultural conservation techniques.

"I think all of us can benefit with a better appreciation of the rural life of farmers and ranchers who raise crops, raise their families and provide Americans with the safest and most reliable supply of food and fiber in the world," said Combest, who is second-ranking Republican on the House Agriculture Committee.

Rep. Nick Lampson, D-Beaumont, who has embraced the cause of children in distress, links to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

The information flow isn't all one way. Politicians increasingly are soliciting comment.

Earlier this year, House Republicans eager for dirt on the Internal Revenue Service set aside space for taxpayers to voice their complaints. Dallas-area GOP Reps. Sam Johnson and Pete Sessions offer links to the "IRS Horror Stories" site maintained by the House Republican Conference.

Few congressional rules govern lawmakers' use of the Internet. In a key prohibition, however, members are barred from linking their home pages to political Web sites, such as Democratic or Republican party headquarters or campaign organizations.

More than 2 million hits are recorded each month on the main House Web site, according to a 1997 CyberCongress project report.

Chiropractic Q & A

If your child is athletic, his enthusiasm for sports can sometimes lead to problems. Minor injuries are common enough when two bodies collide at full velocity. But body contact is not the only problem.

Starts and stops at high speed, twisting and turning into awkward positions may cause strains to muscles, limbs, and back. Untempered enthusiasm may cause a youngster to try harder and play longer than is good for him. If his body is fatigued, there is greater potential for accidents and injury.

And if he's too proud to complain of minor injuries, how do you find out if there's a problem that should be treated before it becomes worse?

The best answer is periodic chiropractic examinations. These are recommended before the season begins, so he can start in top form. They're also recommended whenever an injury occurs as well as at the end of the season. Any structural defects should get the correction and treatment needed to keep your child in good health.

"This is simply a personal subjective assessment, and I've done no empirical research, but it strikes me the (movie) violence today is more graphic."

- Dennis Longmire, criminal justice professor, Sam Houston State University

Texans blame TV, film violence for crime rate's jump

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Almost half of the Texans questioned in an annual crime poll taken by Sam Houston State University blame television and film violence for causing crime to rise.

And the number of people who blame TV and movies for crime is nearly double the amount who expressed that same sentiment 20 years ago.

"It seems to me a lot more people have been a lot more sensitized to the association in recent years," Dennis Longmire, a Sam Houston State University criminal justice professor and coordinator of the Texas Crime Poll, said.

In 1978, only 25 percent of Texans queried by Sam Houston researchers believed movie violence was causing a large increase in the crime rate and 28 percent believed television was the culprit.

But this year's Texas Crime Poll shows 47 percent of those surveyed believed movies are the root cause of perceived crime rate increases. Forty-eight percent blamed television.

"This is simply a personal subjective assessment, and I've done no empirical research, but it strikes me the (movie) violence today is more graphic," Longmire said. "It strikes me today the news media is paying more attention to crime, in part violent crime, than they were in the late 70s.

"And so those are two kinds of intuitive differences that might explain some of the increase in concern."

Longmire also said it was worth noting that the interest of the Clinton administration and particularly Tipper Gore, the vice president's wife, in trying to regulate music videos, has raised the public's sensitivity to the issue.

"We're a lot more familiar with the hypothetical relationships than we were in the past," Longmire said.

The school, conducting the poll for the 31st year, contacted 548 Texans by phone last July and asked them questions about crime and criminal justice .

Among other findings:

- More Texans support the death penalty now than they did 20 years ago. In 1978, 79 percent of those asked said they support execution. This year, 83 percent believe in the capital punishment. Nearly 80 percent of those surveyed said they support the death penalty for women convicted of murder. The question about a killer's sex wasn't asked 20 years ago.

- As far as an individual's fear that he or she might become the victim of crime, little has changed in 20 years. This year, 59 percent of respondents said they were concerned they would become a victim of rape, robbery, assault, burglary, theft, car theft or vandalism, compared to 57 percent who said the same, in 1978.

- And 83 percent of Texans said they had a "great deal" or "some" confidence in their local police, with 86 percent expressing confidence in the Texas Departent of Public Safety.

- Lowest confidence ratings went to the juvenile justice system, with only 41 percent of respondents saying they had a great deal or some confidence in state juvenile parole. Some 42 percent felt the same for adult parole.

Snipes puts the bite on vampires in latest movie

By MARK KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - Wesley Snipes has offended many people during his rich film career: anti-gang activists, Japanese, black women, white men who can't jump.

Now there's a new group: the undead.

Vampires take an awful beating when Snipes morphs into "Blade," a Marvel Comics-based superhero who slashes his way through Earth's teeming mass of toothy bloodsuckers.

This time, though, Snipes isn't worried about backlash. After all, the movie-going public is decidedly pro-living and anti-vampire.

"I'm trying to touch all the markets, man," jokes Snipes, grinning behind a pair of sunglasses.

Snipes obviously relishes his new over-the-top role. During a recent interview, the actor borrowed most of Blade's costume: the all-black clothing, the impenetrable pair of shades - even the SWAT team flack jacket. He makes the Terminator look like a Teletubby.

Which is, of course, a 180-degree turn from the actor's last film role - the unheroic, complicated anchor of "One Night Stand," director Mike Figgis' atmospheric take on infidelity.

"Look, I'm not limited in my imagination, so why should I be limited in my work? I've been the underdog pretty much all my life so I'm not afraid of not being the cat's meow, the one who's ordained," says the actor whose title character in "Blade" is a half-human, half-vampire who packs a sword, a flame-thrower and a nasty assault weapon that shoots silver bullets.

"It's been that way all my life and I'm very accustomed to it," he says. "So I'm always going to do the things that are somewhat unexpected."

That might just as well be his motto. Over a two-year period, 1991-92, Snipes portrayed a chilling, streetwise crack boss in "New Jack City," an architect in an interracial affair in "Jungle Fever," a paraplegic in "The Waterdance" and the heroic "Passenger 57."

This much is clear: The 36-year-old actor - who also starred in "White Men Can't Jump" - can run. He can jump. He can shoot - and cry. He even wore a dress - in 1995's "To Wong Foo, Thanks for Everything! Julie Newmar."

Snipes grew up in the Bronx and attended the High School of the Performing Arts - the celebrated "Fame" school - where he studied dance, singing and acting.

While still a teen-ager, he moved with his mother to Orlando, Fla., where money was tight and Snipes, small for his age, developed a slickster persona. He credits a tough background with keeping him real.

"I've been doing work now for maybe 10 years or so and there have been times when I've been really, really hot and other times when I've been kind of cool," he says.

"And in those times, I'm not tripping. I'm not drinking myself to madness."

Women over 50 now are big 'Net surfers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Kay Kennemer, 58, knew exactly where to turn for information after a recent doctor's visit by her elderly mother: the medical sites on the World Wide Web.

"I was interested in something the doctor said to my mother," remembered Kennemer, who also uses the Internet to send e-mail across Texas and New Mexico to her family and friends. "And I thought, 'Let me just go check this out.'"

Once the domain of the young and technically inclined, the Internet increasingly is taking root with a wide cross-section of Americans.

A new study estimates that more than a third of adult Americans now use the Internet, an increase of more than 18 million - or 34 percent - in just nine months. Among the fastest-growing groups online were blacks and Indians, as well as young adults 16-24 and women over 50.

The study showed an increase of 50 percent in the number of American women over 50 using the Internet during the nine months ending in June, accounting for nearly 5 million users. The numbers of men over 50 using the Internet grew almost half as fast during the same period.

"It is absolutely mind-boggling - I think everything in the world is there," said Kennemer of Austin, Texas. She recently graduated from high-tech classes offered by Green Thumb Inc., a nonprofit group that offers computer training for seniors.

The study released Tuesday by Nielsen Media Research and CommerceNet estimated that 70.2 million Americans over 16 use the Internet. That represents 35 percent of adult Americans; the same study in September 1997 counted 52 million adult Americans online, or 26 percent.

And for the first time, the report said, the majority of Americans between 16-24 are using the Internet - about 18.8 million of them, including 70 percent of men in that age group and 51 percent of women.

"I'm still pretty new to it," confessed Diane Park, a social worker near Seattle and an Internet neophyte who logs on from her local library. She owns an older computer and can't afford to buy a new one powerful enough to use the Internet. "It takes time figuring out all the different search engines. I don't know quite all that's out there."

Tuesday's study estimated 40.1 million American men and 30.1 million women use the Internet, and that the percentage growth among men and women overall during the nine-month period was about the same.

But a closer look at the figures showed the largest gains in Internet use among some minorities:

-Asian adults were especially active online, with the highest rates of all racial groups: 58 percent of Asian men, or 1.9 million, and 38 percent of Asian women, or 1.1 million.

-Among blacks, the report estimated 5.6 million, or 24 percent, use the Internet, an increase of 53 percent from nine months earlier.

-The report estimated that 868,000 American Indians were online, or 24 percent, an increase of 70 percent over nine months.

Both the figures for blacks and Indians, while improving, still are far below the 36 percent of whites using the Internet, a "digital divide" that is under study by the Clinton administration.

Last month, a report from the Commerce Department showed that whites are more than twice as likely to own a home computer as blacks or Hispanics, and that a racial disparity in PC ownership exists even among families earning more than $75,000.

Kennemer said she uses the Internet to exchange e-mail with her children, sister and her 78-year-old mother. She wasn't surprised to hear that women over 50 were making huge gains.

"We're really very curious about what's going on," she said.

Happy Birthday

Stamps featuring artists, art on sale

WASHINGTON (AP) - Postage stamps depicting four centuries of American art went on sale nationwide Friday, marked by ceremonies at a gallery holding two of the paintings included in the set.

Dozens of art lovers and stamp collectors gathered in the lobby of the Corcoran Gallery of Art for the ceremonies putting the 20-stamp set on sale.

At hand were large-scale depictions of "The Last of the Buffalo" by Albert Bierstadt and "Niagara" by Frederic Edwin Church. The originals were on display a floor above.

The two paintings, produced in 1889 and 1857 respectively, were obtained by the gallery as contemporary works, in an effort "to encourage American genius in the arts," said Corcoran Chief Curator Jack Cowart.

The new 32-cent stamps are the latest in the Postal Service's classic collections series.

Other stamps in the set include:

-John Foster, "Portrait of Richard Mather," 1670, Princeton University Library.

-The Freake Limner, "Mrs. Elizabeth Freake and Baby Mary," 1671-1674, Worcester Art Museum, Mass. Because the artist's name is not known, it is attributed to the limner - an old word for painter - of the Freake family.

-Ammi Phillips, "Girl in Red Dress with Cat and Dog," 1830-1835, Museum of American Folk Art, New York.

-Rembrandt Peale, "Rubens Peale with a Geranium," 1801, National Gallery of Art, Washington.

-John Audubon, "Long-billed Curlew, Numenius Longrostris," 1834, Amon Carter Museum, Fort Worth, Texas.

-George Caleb Bingham, "Boatmen on the Missouri," 1846, Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco.

-Joshua Johnson, "The Westwood Children," 1807, National Gallery of Art, Washington.

-William Harnett, "Music and Literature," 1878, Albright-Knox Art Gallery, Buffalo, N.Y.

-Winslow Homer, "The Fog Warning," 1885, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

-George Catlin, "The White Cloud: Head Chief of the Iowas," 1840s, National Gallery of Art, Washington.

-Thomas Moran, "Cliffs of Green River," 1874, Amon Carter Museum, Fort Worth.

KRISTIN FANGMAN of Hereford dinks the ball over the net and the outstretched arms of Lauren Duniven (44) and Shauna Paulk in a match against Lubbock Coronado recently at Whiteface Gymnasium. Rangers split with White Sox; 14 homers hit

CHICAGO (AP) - There must have been something in the air at Comiskey Park.

The Texas Rangers and Chicago White Sox combined to hit 14 home runs in a doubleheader Friday night, tying an American League record set May 22, 1930, by the New York Yankees and Philadelphia Athletics.

Mike Cameron, Ray Durham and Mike Caruso each homered in a span of four at-bats in the eighth inning for Chicago, giving the White Sox an 8-7 victory in the nightcap and a split of their twinbill with the Rangers.

"It was our biggest come-from-behind win of the year," said White Sox manager Jerry Manuel, who is dealing with 12 rookies on his roster, not postseason plans.

Will Clark homered in the 10th inning and was part of the Rangers' spurt of three straight homers in the fourth for a 6-5 win over the White Sox in the first game.

Texas is now three games behind AL West-leading Anaheim, which beat Boston 7-6 Friday.

"The marathon is about to end and the sprint is on," Texas manager Johnny Oates said, focusing on the final month of play.

In the second game, Cameron hit a two-run homer off Danny Patterson in the eighth to close the gap to 7-6. Durham greeted Eric Gunderson (0-2) with his 16th home run and second of the day to tie it 7-7, and Caruso followed with his fifth homer.

Bryan Ward (1-1) picked up his first major league win by getting two outs in the eighth. Bob Howry pitched the ninth for his first career save.

Rusty Greer, Roberto Kelly and Royce Clayton homered for the Rangers in the nightcap.

Kelly hit his 13th home run with one out in the first. Robin Ventura answered in the Chicago second with his 16th home run to tie it 1-1.

Clayton led off the Rangers' third with his second home run, and Greer hit a three-run shot, his 13th, to make it 5-1 and chase starter Scott Eyre.

Durham hit a run-scoring groundout and Albert Belle added an RBI double in the third to close Chicago to 5-3.

Todd Zeile hit an RBI single in the Texas sixth, and Belle hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Clark led the Rangers in the first game, posting his first multihomer game of the year and 12th of his career.

"We've talked about him being an impact player," Oates said. "Will Clark is plenty good, as he showed today."

Juan Gonzalez, Clark and Ivan Rodriguez hit consecutive home runs in the fourth, with Gonzalez raising his major league-leading RBI total to 135 with his two-run shot.

"I get a lot of fun out of winning the game in general," Clark said. "Now, in the last month of the season, it's pressure packed. You've got to win every game. But this is also the fun part. You've worked six, seven months to be in this position where it's a lot of fun."

Clark's game-winning shot, his 21st homer, came off Bob Howry (0-3) with two outs in the 10th.

Xavier Hernandez (6-3) pitched two hitless innings. John Wetteland pitched the 10th for his 37th save.

Atlanta's DeBerg sparks win

By The Associated Press

Who says there's no life after 40 in football? Remember George Blanda?

Now along comes Steve DeBerg, who at the age of 44 is making a pitch to stick with the Atlanta Falcons.

Trying to become the oldest player in the NFL since Blanda, DeBerg directed two second-half touchdown drives as the Falcons finished off the preseason with a 17-0 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals on Friday night.

"Honestly, I've surprised myself with this whole experience," said DeBerg, who hasn't played a regular-season game since 1993. "I'm surprised at how fast I've been able to come back. I'm happy to be where I am."

If DeBerg makes the team, he will be the league's oldest player since Blanda finished his career in the 1970s kicking as a 49-year-old.

Elsewhere in the NFL, it was Miami 21, Green Bay 7; Buffalo 27, Washington 17; Baltimore 14, New York Giants 6; St. Louis 10, Kansas City 6; Minnesota 42, San Diego 28; New York Jets 24, Chicago 7; New Orleans 10, Tampa Bay 6; and Seattle 21, San Francisco 20.

DeBerg was 10-of-14 for 129 yards and a touchdown. Almost as important, he avoided any sacks after looking lethargic in his first exhibition appearance for the Falcons (2-2).

"I thought Steve played extremely well," coach Dan Reeves said. "He made decisions a lot quicker and the improvement in just a two-week period of time has been really good. He's worked hard at it. If there's ever somebody that shows what hard work can do, he's a great example."

Atlanta finished with a 393-155 lead in total yards and held the ball for 41 minutes, 35 seconds.

The Bengals (1-3) were totally inept offensively, with Neil O'Donnell and Paul Justin splitting most of the quarterback duties.

Dolphins 21, Packers 7

At Miami, Karim Abdul-Jabbar scored on two 1-yard runs as the Dolphins completed their first undefeated preseason since 1981.

The Dolphins finished the exhibition season 4-0. After going 4-0 in the 1981 preseason, they went 11-4-1 during the regular season. Green Bay, playing its second road game in five days, finished 2-3.

The Packers scored their only TD on a 4-yard pass by third-string quarterback Damon Huard.

Bills 27, Redskins 17

Buffalo, which entered the game last in the league with 37 points, had first-half touchdown drives of 70 and 99 yards in beating visiting Washington.

Buffalo (2-2) quarterback Rob Johnson connected on a 52-yard pass to Eric Moulds and found tight end Lonnie Johnson for a 5-yard touchdown pass that gave the Bills a 7-0 lead 6:13 into the game. Doug Flutie led the Bills on a 99-yard second-quarter drive for a 14-0 advantage.

Gus Frerotte was just 1-for-8 for 21 yards and Jeff Hostetler finished 5-for-8 with 66 yards passing for the Redskins (1-3).

Ravens 14, Giants 6

Baltimore limited New York to two field goals and got a game-winning, 23-yard touchdown run from Errict Rhett in the third quarter to beat the Giants.

Priest Holmes scored on a 5-yard run with 28 seconds to play for the visiting Ravens (4-0), who gave up 26 points in the exhibition season, including 12 in the last three games.

Brad Daluiso kicked two field goals for New York (1-3), which ended the preseason with a three--game losing streak.

Rams 10, Chiefs 6

At Kansas City, Greg Hill scored St. Louis' only touchdown in his return to Kansas City, giving the Rams a win over the Chiefs in a penalty-filled game.

Vikings 42, Chargers 28

At Minneapolis, Brad Johnson threw three first-half touchdown passes as the Vikings finished the exhibition season unbeaten.

NFL SEASON PREVIEW '98

Money, money, money ensures NFL labor peace

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

The players are getting rich, the owners are getting very rich and television is willing to pay for it all. The NFL, with labor peace well into the next decade, is in the best shape of any professional sport as it approaches the new millennium.

Not even the impending retirement of such superstars as John Elway, Dan Marino and Reggie White can take away from the glow.

These are grand times for pro football, which has no lockout woes, no ratings problems and plenty of big names and showcase teams to go around.

"The new television deal is the most significant in TV history," Pat Bowlen, owner of the Super Bowl champion Denver Broncos, says of the $17.6 billion, eight-year contract the league signed with Fox, CBS, ABC and ESPN.

"Not just measured by length or by the revenue involved, but most importantly by ensuring the stability of the NFL," he says. "We all desire stability in our franchises, and this long-term deal benefits that in every way."

As does the collective bargaining agreement, which was extended in the offseason through 2003.

When the season begins Sept. 6, each of the 30 NFL teams will have seen the salary cap rise by more than $11 million. That's meant huge deals for the likes of Dana Stubblefield, Curtis Martin, John Randle, Sean Gilbert, Bryce Paup, John Copeland, Yancey Thigpen, Ray Crockett, Kevin Mawae, Doug Evans, Aaron Taylor, Natrone Means, Todd Steussie . . . shall we go on?

In other words, money for everyone.

And there's more coming. Lots more.

Two days after the season begins, the league will introduce the winner of bidding for the Cleveland Browns expansion team that begins play next year. The expected price tag: close to $500 million.

And because that will bring the NFL membership to 31, necessitating a bye each week of the 1999 season, further expansion will come very soon (did anyone mention $1 billion for the next new team?)

But this is the 1998 season, which begins with an AFC team on top for the first time since 1984. The Broncos won a thrilling Super Bowl over Green Bay, and they weren't raided the way most defending champions are. John Elway decided to return for one more season, Terrell Davis is one of football's most dominant players and the Broncos should have another strong run in them.

As should the Packers, who did take some big hits in the offseason (Evans, Taylor, Gabe Wilkins, Edgar Bennett, Eugene Robinson) and saw No. 1 running back Dorsey Levens hold out through training camp.

Green Bay has the league's best player in Brett Favre, who has won three straight MVP awards. It has White back for one more year -- and it has the memory of the super loss to Denver.

"All last year we felt like we were the best, but for one day the Denver Broncos were better than us and they're crowned the champs," Packers receiver Antonio Freeman says. "It's not an easy thing to accept. But time is the best healer."

Time is on the side of the league's two newest quarterback phenoms, Peyton Manning in Indianapolis and Ryan Leaf in San Diego. The first two choices in the draft, they were handed the starting jobs right away and their

NFL

The Vikings (4-0) set a team record with shutouts in the first two games, then rallied to beat Carolina in overtime last week.

On Friday, they cruised until mop-up time against the Chargers (3-1), who were after their first perfect preseason since 1962.

Jets 24, Bears 7

Wayne Chrebet caught four passes for 86 yards and a touchdown and third-string running backs Richie Anderson and Robert Farmer combined for 123 yards and a touchdown for the Jets.

The Jets outgained the Bears 474 yards to 218. Glenn Foley was 12-of-22 for 182 yards and a touchdown, and Vinny Testaverde was 10-of-15 for 71 yards.

Saints 10, Bucs 6

After their first-string offense was shut out in the first half, the Saints managed a touchdown with their second string and a field goal with their third for a victory over visiting Tampa Bay.

It was not a game to build confidence for the Saints (1-3) heading into the season, however.

Tampa Bay (2-3) started its second-string offense and even though Steve Walsh didn't throw the ball often or far, the Buccaneers held a 3-0 lead at the half and 6-0 in the third quarter.

The Saints finally went ahead on Troy Davis' 6-yard TD run in the third.

Seahawks 21, 49ers 20

John Friesz passed two yards to Bobby Shaw for a touchdown with 25 seconds left as the Seahawks came back to beat visiting San Francisco.

Todd Peterson kicked the extra point to give the Seahawks a 4-1 record for the preseason. The 49ers finished 2-3.

Johnson whiffs 16; Astros win, 2-0

Snaps Pittsburgh's nine-game win streak

HOUSTON (AP) - Randy Johnson's Houston Astros teammates didn't help him out much. Actually, he didn't need much help.

Johnson struck out 16 for his third straight shutout at the Astrodome since joining Houston as the Astros snapped Pittsburgh's nine-game winning streak Friday night with a 2-0 victory.

The Astros got only four hits and scored both runs on close plays at the plate. With Johnson's 16 strikeouts, the Astros had to make only 11 defensive plays.

"We just played standard defense," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "Randy didn't let them hit the ball hard enough that we would have to make any great plays."

Johnson picked up steam as the game progressed. He had seven strikeouts after four innings, but he struck out the side in the fifth and ninth innings and looked stronger at the finish.

"I think one of my assets is I get stronger later in the game," Johnson said. "I was focused from the first to the ninth, but they really made me work."

Johnson passed Sandy Koufax for the top spot on the career list of 10 or more strikeout games by a left-hander. Johnson has 98 games with 10 or more strikeouts. Nolan Ryan is the overall leader with 215.

"Of all the games I've pitched for the Astros I was the most comfortable in this one," Johnson said. "It's easier to keep your focus later in the game when you have a 2-0 ballgame."

Johnson had 15 strikeouts three times this season with Seattle before he was traded to Houston on July 31. His career-high strikeout total is 19, which he has accomplished twice.

Jason Kendall entered the game leading the NL in hitting against left-handed pitchers (.390) and went 1-for-4.

"He's nasty, that's the best word to describe it," Kendall said. "He was definitely better than he was in Pittsburgh, both velocity and location."

Johnson (5-1), who allowed seven hits, tied a franchise record for strikeouts in a game by a left-hander. He had 12 strikeouts in seven innings at Pittsburgh on Aug. 2 in his first start after joining the Astros.

Johnson also ended Pittsburgh's string of success against left-handers. In their nine-game streak, the Pirates were 5-0 against left-handed starters.

"He just overpowered us," Pirates manager Gene Lamont. "He was better than he was against us in Pittsburgh. He was throwing harder. He was throwing as hard tonight as he was in the AL when I saw him in 1992 and 1993."

Craig Biggio had fielder's choice grounders in the sixth and eighth innings to account for the game's only runs.

Francisco Cordova (12-11), who won his last three starts, kept the Astros scoreless until the sixth. Brad Ausmus doubled to start the inning and went to third on Cordova's balk.

Biggio hit a grounder to second baseman Kevin Polcovich, who threw home, but Ausmus slid safely under catcher Kendall's tag.

In the eighth, Biggio grounded to short to score Ausmus again.

Ausmus said he was safe on both plays.

"There was no question about it," Ausmus said. "Kendall likes to get his knee down to block the plate but on the first one, I got my foot between his legs. On the second one, the throw was high and he came off the plate."

Adrian Brown's two-out single in the eighth almost got the Pirates a run when right fielder Richard Hidalgo bobbled a hit by Kendall, allowing Brown to reach third. But Kevin Young popped out to end the threat.

Brown went 3-for-4 and extended his hitting streak to nine games.

Cordova allowed five hits, struck out four walked one.

progress will be noted each week, especially in Week 5, when they face off in Indianapolis.

Marv Levy retired just short of becoming the oldest coach in NFL history, with Wade Phillips taking over in Buffalo. Jim Mora gets to oversee Manning's development with the Colts. Jon Gruden, who just turned 35 -- three players on his preseason roster were older -- gets his first head coaching job with the Raiders. Chan Gailey, like Gruden an offensive coordinator promoted to a top spot, also owns a high-profile position as coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cardinals, who've played in Chicago, St. Louis and Arizona, begin their 100th season with a vastly improved roster. The New York Giants will play their 1,000th game when they face Kansas City on Dec. 20.

Barry Sanders, fresh off a 2,053-yard season and a shared MVP award, will continue his pursuit of Walter Payton's career rushing record of 16,726 yards. Elway must pass for 1,331 yards to reach 50,000. Marino needs 15 touchdown passes to become the first player with 400.

Two more new stadiums debut this season, in Baltimore and Tampa. That brings to seven the franchises that have new or almost totally rebuilt homes in the 1990s, with Cleveland and Tennessee getting new stadiums next year, and several other cities (Seattle, Cincinnati, Detroit) committed to building stadiums.

One team particularly anxious about its stadium is Minnesota, but at least the Vikings settled their ownership mess when Red McCombs bought them for $250 million.

Sounds like a bargain compared with what the Browns' owners will pay. And it certainly is a good deal compared with what the TV networks invested in pro football.

Of course, no other sport comes close to the ratings the NFL gets.

CBS got back into the football club after a four-year absence by spending $4 billion to take AFC games away from NBC, and Fox held onto the more lucrative NFC package for $4.4 billion.

Disney, which owns ABC and ESPN, spent $4.4 billion for the Monday night package and $4.8 billion for the Sunday night cable deal (which also includes a couple of Thursday nights), forcing out Turner Sports, which previously split the cable telecasts with ESPN.

For all of the good vibes, there have been some troubling times, too.

The Cowboys can't seem to avoid negative headlines, with Michael Irvin usually involved. The 49ers had an ugly front-office battle in which highly regarded team president Carmen Policy resigned.

Author defies critics with best seller

By CHRIS OLERT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - Malachy McCourt has always been a man mad for books.

"If you'd given me the choice of a book or a dinner, I'd take the book every time," says McCourt, sitting in his book-lined Manhattan living room.

McCourt is the younger brother of Frank, the retired New York City schoolteacher whose "Angela's Ashes" - a memoir about growing up poor in Ireland - won the 1997 Pulitzer Prize and has been on the best-seller list for nearly two years.

Now Malachy, an actor-raconteur, has crept onto the best-seller list himself with "A Monk Swimming." Not bad for a knockabout whose formal education ended when he dropped out at 13.

Critics have said that Malachy's no Frank. But the winningly blunt Malachy is having a giddy time defying critics: "I knew it would offend a man of letters, this vulgar, ignorant, bawdy book."

A Time magazine review called "A Monk Swimming" an "entertaining story excruciatingly told." The New York Times sniffed: it is "W.C. Fields falling flat."

McCourt responds by spitting out an expletive, adding that many critics "have no sense of humor."

The book's title comes from the Catholic prayer that includes the line, "Blessed art thou amongst women." To a kid's ears, those last two words come out "a monk swimming."

It's a 66-year-old man's memoir of arriving in New York from Limerick at age 20 with a sixth-grade education and more brass than brains. It's McCourt crashing about with his drinking buddies and having a roaring time ... amongst women.

To beat bill collectors, he bought a rubber stamp and inked "Deceased" on his bills. He tried to sell Bibles to sunbathers on Fire Island, but only succeeded in comforting lonely women whose husbands left them during the week at the seaside resort.

Back in New York, he did succeed as a saloon keeper for a few years.

McCourt also was a successful storyteller, appearing regularly on "The Tonight Show," frequently drunk. He had a pretty good run as an actor in several daytime dramas, plus on Broadway and Off-Broadway. Most recently, his film credits have been as a bishop in "The Devil's Own" and as a chauffeur in "She's the One."

As for his newest career - best-selling author - McCourt laughs: "The landlord's getting the rent on time."

McCourt gave up drinking 13 years ago. "That was an enormous step. I remember things now. When you're an addict, you stop maturing," he says.

His book was born last summer in a rambling house in northeast Pennsylvania. He doesn't type, so he wrote longhand.

"Away I went with a pen. It was terrific," he says, grinning like a child who's discovered ice cream in his toy box. "I wrote and I wrote. I couldn't wait to see what I had to say next."

When the pen stopped, McCourt had written 125,000 words - 45,000 more than his editor wanted. The editor, Maureen O'Brien at Hyperion, predicted it would hit No. 3 on the best-seller list.

She is, as the Irish say, spot on.

"I thought there'd be a bit of curiosity, not a lot of interest," McCourt says.

McCourt says he and Frank "would sneak into the adult library" and read everything in reach. Political books. Geography. And books on India.

"I was always fascinated by India. The beauty. The cadence of speech. The smells of it."

Some of the funniest parts of "A Monk Swimming" are his tales of gold smuggling to India.

One of his heroes is Mahatma Gandhi - for driving the British out of India. "He never gave up hope that it was going to be all right," McCourt says.

Master's work set for sale

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) - A shadowy portrait of an elderly man wearing a turban that has been the subject of speculation since it was discovered in 1917 has been confirmed as the work of Rembrandt.

The privately owned painting, worth millions now that it has been identified, will go on show publicly for the first time at an Amsterdam art fair in October, fair spokeswoman Cornelie Langhout said.

Experts authenticated the 10.7-inch-by-8-inch oil-on-oak-panel painting, "Old Man with Turban," by analyzing the signature and the style, Langhout said.

The Rembrandt Research Project, set up to distinguish real Rembrandts from works by his students and followers, determined that the initials "RHL" - a signature used by the young Rembrandt around 1627 - were applied to the painting while it was still wet, meaning that Rembrandt was almost certainly the artist.

The research group also analyzed the wood in the oak panel, the way the paint was applied and compared the composition with other known works by the Dutch Master.

CANDACE OAKLEY

MACON, Ga. (AP) - The sister of the late Allman Brothers Band member Berry Oakley felt people were desecrating the burial plots of her brother and band co-founder Duane Allman, so she had an 8-foot chain-link fence topped with razor wire put around them

But the city of Macon, which owns Rose Hill Cemetery where the two are buried, has told her the fence must come down.

Oakley's sister held a news conference at the grave site Thursday to call attention to her fight against vandals and pressure from Mayor Jim Marshall to take down the fence.

"After pleading for help all these years and all I got was lip service, I had to do something," Candace Oakley said. "It's my intention to keep the fence up unless there's another solution."

Marshall said he would work with Ms. Oakley toward a solution, but on Friday he had the fence be taken down.

Thousands of people have visited the graves of Allman and Oakley since they died in motorcycle accidents about a year apart in 1971 and 1972.

Ms. Oakley said Thursday that people have chipped pieces of the marble stone.

Lifestyles

Active senior citizen is proof: you're never too old to learn

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

"Green Thumb has been a life saver for me," Ada Smith said.

And she wasn't talking about her horticultural abilities.

She was referring to Green Thumb, Inc., a non-profit organization committed to improving the quality of life of all Americans by using and developing the talents and skills of older individuals through community service employment and training.

Participants in Green Thumb must be at least 55 years old, eligible to work in the United States and meet certain income guidelines.

Smith met all the eligibility requirements but was not aware of Green Thumb and what it had to offer her.

"I have known Mary Ann (Resch, Panhandle area supervisor for Green Thumb) for years. She and I share the same birthday, just one year apart, so she knew how old I was and approached me about what Green Thumb has to offer," Smith said.

Smith completed the necessary paperwork and was hired -- by Green Thumb to work in its office located in the Texas Workforce Commission building.

"I am doing clerical work for Green Thumb and also helping TWC some, too," she said. "I did very little on the computer before I came to work here, but they trained me. I was still scared but they helped me do this."

According to Smith, Green Thumb will look for a specific job for a specific person.

Participants in the Green Thumb program are provided work experience, training, skill assessment, counseling and supportive services to help them in obtaining permanent employment.

ADA SMITH

"So many who are older feel left out but Green Thumb gives them something to do and helps keep them off welfare," she said. "You are never too old to keep learning."

That is just what Smith has done. She quit school when she was in the ninth grade to get married, but with encouragement from Green Thumb, she just recently received her GED.

"It was a challenge," she said. But Smith is no stranger to challenges. She had her own answering service in Hereford for several years. She plays the piano, likes to write and sing songs, enjoys crocheting and she works as a night dispatcher for Deaf Smith Electric Co-op.

"I just keep doing. I don't like to be still," Smith said.

Editor's Note: Green Thumb, Inc. operates the Senior Community Service Employment Program with funding from Title V of the Older Americans Act through the U.S. Department of Labor. For more information, call 806-364-2743.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am 26 years old and made up my mind a few months ago that I have been in the closet long enough. I told my older brother that I am gay.

His response was what I might have expected. He said he didn't have any trouble accepting "the problem" as long as I kept quiet about it. More specifically, he suggested that I not have my significant other, "Ed," with me when I attend family functions, such as weddings, funerals, graduations, Thanksgiving dinners and Christmas, most of which take place at my brother's house. In other words, keep Ed out of sight.

I would like to make it clear that my relationship with Ed is not just a passing fancy. We have been a couple for almost three years and are devoted to one another. Ours is a relationship that we hope will last a lifetime. It goes without saying that we conduct ourselves properly at all times.

What should I do, Ann? Should I simply refuse to attend family get-togethers unless Ed is welcome? I know my brother needs time to adjust to the situation. I hate being estranged from my family, but I've made up my mind that I am not going back in the closet. -- Sweating It Out in New Jersey

Dear New Jersey: Tell your brother that Ed is your life's partner and you expect him to be included in the same way other family members' significant others are included. Let him know that if he cannot accept your relationship, you will understand, but you do not plan to attend without Ed. Meanwhile, I hope other family members will be more welcoming.

Dear Ann Landers: I thought you might want to print this article by Chris Conley of the Memphis Commercial Appeal as the latest entry in your "stupid crook" series. I couldn't believe my eyes when I read it, but there seems to be no end to these weird incidents. -- Alice in Ashland, Miss.

Dear Alice: Thanks for your blue-ribbon entry. It's a lulu. Here it is:

A 44-year-old man telephoned Crime Stoppers and turned himself in as the culprit who burglarized a flower shop in Memphis. Then, he asked how much reward he would collect.

"I have had a lot of strange calls," said the police captain, "but I've never had one who wanted to know how much he would get for turning himself in." The captain, the head of Crime Stoppers, said it will be up to the Crime Stoppers board whether to pay the man for ratting on himself. The highest reward Crime Stoppers offers is $1,000, but the amount for burglary usually is substantially lower.

The police captain said that he got an anonymous call and the caller started talking about a burglary at the flower shop. Someone broke through a wall there and took $40. The caller said he knew a certain person was the burglar. The police captain asked how he knew that. "Because I am the person," the caller answered.

"Then, it got real strange," said the police captain. The man said he was calling from a pay phone, gave the location and described what he was wearing. Patrol officers picked him up five minutes later.

Dear Ann Landers: Am I being petty and small-minded? You decide. "Libby" and I get along fine. My only complaint is that whenever we go out, she asks me for a quarter for a pay telephone or a dollar for the ladies' room. Last night when we passed a drugstore, she said, "Please run in and get me a large bottle of aspirin." R.S.V.P. soonest. I need your opinion. -- Wilmette, Ill.

Dear Ill.: A quarter for the phone, OK. A dollar for the ladies' room, fine. But I don't know why you should buy her a large bottle of aspirin unless, of course, you gave her the headache.

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age? For a copy of her most frequently requested poems and essays, send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $6.25.)

"Confidence comes not from always being right but from not fearing to be wrong." -- Peter McIntyre

Library orientation for all seventh graders will begin this week during the students' English classes. Students will have the opportunity to check out Accelerated Reading books during this time, also.

Eighth grade science classes are practicing observation as part of the scientific method process of learning. You might ask your eighth grader what he or she can learn from a Gobstopper. We can almost guarantee an interesting response.

Computer literacy classes are studying basic vocabulary and learning keyboarding. They will soon begin preparation for word processing.

With only two weeks into the new year, there have been entirely too many, (more than 500), Noon Study Halls, most of which have been given for lack of having assignments finished. Parents should be aware that after seven NSHs, the students will be assigned to Saturday School and for each NSH thereafter the student will have Saturday School. After 12 NSHs, not only will the Saturday School be assigned, but three one-hour after school detentions will be assigned. This will affect any after school activities the student may have. If your child is too busy to complete assignments, they are too busy. Work with us on this, even if it means rearranging your schedule to help your child.

A number of students have asked about Junior Historians and there will be an organizational meeting very soon. We will also begin plans for History Day and Geography Bee within the next two weeks. Announcements will be made about the time and place for these meetings.

The book, What Do You Stand For? A Kid's Guide to Building Character, by Barbara Lewis teaches kids how to think and to solve real problems. The author doesn't tell kids what to believe -- just how to find out. A high point in each chapter is a true story profiling real children who serve as examples of character in action and one with whom young people can identify. This book would prove helpful to both parents and teachers in helping kids to become accountable for their actions and to make good choices to carry them positively through their lives.

"It is books that are the key to the wide world; if you can't do anything else, read all that you can." -- Jane Hamilton

The Successful Family

SPOILING YOUR CHILDREN

A spoiled child is a boy or girl who has learned to be defiant, demanding and manipulative. Spoiled children do not respond well to limits placed on their behavior by their parents. They generally have a hard time waiting for things they want and will often respond with temper tantrums - - hitting, breaking or throwing things when told "no."

It is important to recognize that children approximately 1 year of age and younger are never considered to be "spoiled." The developmental stage of infancy requires babies to demand their needs be met. As they grow older their needs become less demanding.

How do children become spoiled?

Spoiling children is not an easy task. It takes a lot of time, effort and attentiveness on the part of a parent to spoil a child. Spoiling children requires a parent to perform the following behaviors:

*Do everything for a child so he does nothing for himself.

*Anticipate a child's request so he never has to ask for anything.

*Spend all your waking hours together.

*Prohibit any type of short separation from the child; even having a babysitter.

*Only pick a child up when he cries.

*Be inconsistent in the limits and rules you set down so a child never knows what to expect.

*Blame the child for being demanding and demonstrate anger toward him.

If you follow these above steps, we guarantee you will have a spoiled child.

Encourage healthy child behaviors. No child is ever born spoiled. Becoming spoiled is a learned behavior like being afraid of the dark, or not liking to eat certain foods. Children learn to be spoiled from the people who serve as their primary caregivers.

*Help your child by helping yourself learn new, nurturing parenting attitudes and child rearing practices.

*Pay attention to the needs of your child without overdoing it.

*Promote independence by encouraging your child to do things for himself.

*Model for your child the proper way to handle disappointment, frustration and sadness so he will act more appropriately.

Spanking or hitting a child NEVER prevented one from being spoiled. The absence of reasonable limits and consequences for inappropriate behavior contributes to spoiling a child, not the absence of spanking. Spanking is a type of hitting; hitting is a type of hurting touch; hurting touch is a type of abuse. A nurturing parent uses other, more effective, means of discipline and punishment than hitting.

The payoffs for encouraging healthy behavior in children last a lifetime!

For more information on how to encourage healthy behavior in your family, contact Tilli Boozer at 364-4357. Join other families at the San Jose Community Center on Thursdays from 6 p.m.-9 p.m. DRESS YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS is for infants through grandparents.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 30, the 242nd day of 1998. There are 123 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One year ago, on Aug. 30, 1997, Americans and others in the Western Hemisphere learned of the deaths of Princess Diana, her boyfriend, Dodi Fayed, and their driver, Henri Paul, in a car crash in Paris. Bodyguard Trevor Rees-Jones survived. (Because of the time difference, it was the morning of Aug. 31 in Paris when Diana was pronounced dead.)

On this date:

In 30 B.C. (on Aug. 30, by some estimates), the seventh and most famous queen of ancient Egypt, known as "Cleopatra," committed suicide.

In 1797, the creator of "Frankenstein," Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, was born in London.

In 1862, Union forces were defeated by the Confederates at the Second Battle of Bull Run in Manassas, Va.

In 1941, the World War II siege of Leningrad began.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur arrived in Japan and set up Allied occupation headquarters.

In 1963, the "hot line" communications link between Washington and Moscow went into operation.

In 1967, the U.S. Senate confirmed the appointment of Thurgood Marshall as the first black justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1979, Hurricane David devastated the tiny Caribbean island of Dominica, beginning a rampage through the Caribbean and up the eastern U.S. seaboard that claimed some 1,100 lives.

In 1983, Guion S. Bluford Jr. became the first black American astronaut to travel in space, blasting off aboard the Challenger.

Ten years ago: Top aides to Republican presidential nominee George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis met in Washington without reaching agreement on a schedule for debates in the fall.

Five years ago: Israel's Cabinet approved a framework for Palestinian autonomy in the occupied territories. Robert Malval was installed as prime minister of Haiti during a ceremony at the Haitian Embassy in Washington. "The Late Show with David Letterman" premiered on CBS-TV.

One year ago: Philip Noel Johnson, an armored car driver believed to have stolen $22 million,, was arrested at the Texas border. Johnson later pleaded guilty to charges of kidnapping, money laundering and interfering with interstate commerce.

Nazarene Church site of afternoon wedding

The wedding of Melissa De La Cruz and Tony Medina was held Saturday afternoon, Aug. 1 in Hereford Church of the Nazarene.

The bride is the daughter of Pete and Sally De La Cruz. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Medina. All are from Hereford.

Pastor Elda Olivarez of New Hope Nazarene Church officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Nancy De La Cruz, sister of the bride. Best man was Ben Flores, cousin of the groom.

Bridesmaid was Lisa Dominguez, cousin of the bride and groomsman was Kenneth Duncan.

Sammy Valdez, cousin of the bride, and Kenneth Duncan served as ushers.

Brooke Cantu, daughter of Roy and Laura Cantu, was flower girl.

Ring bearer was Jonathan Zambrano, son of Armando and Ann Marie Zambrano.

Candle lighters were the mothers of the bride and groom.

Vocalists were Nancy De La Cruz, Lisa Dominguez and Cagney Cantu.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white Italian delustered satin designed with a low scooped neckline and trimmed in re-embroidered lace, hand-beaded with pearls and sequins.

The sleeveless lace bodice flowed into a princess a-line skirt. The deep-cut back was accented with a double bow trimmed with pearls. The bow had long streamers which highlighted the chapel train.

She wore a double tier fingertip veil of illusion attached to a crown headpiece of white satin roses, pearls and sequins.

She carried a teardrop bouquet of white roses, magnolia blossoms and white frosted eucalyptus accented with pearls and frosted baby's breath.

Bridal attendants wore princess style floor-length dresses in teal. The criss-cross back was covered with a white bolero during the ceremony. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of white satin roses and frosted baby's breath tied with white and teal satin ribbon. The bridesmaid carried two long stemmed white roses.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony.

Those assisting with the reception were Rudy and Juanita Ramos.

The bride's cake featured a flowing fountain beneath three tiers of white on white cake. Connected to the bottom tier of the cake was a stairway leading to a two tier cake which was connected by a stairway to a single tier cake. Teal and white bows and flowers decorated the cakes.

The groom's German chocolate cake was in the shape of a tuxedo with the top covered in fresh strawberries.

After a wedding trip to Cozumel, Mexico, the couple is at home in Hereford.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1997. She is currently attending West Texas A&M University pursuing a degree in bilingual elementary education. She is employed at Hereford Day Care and is an aerobics instructor at the YMCA.

The groom graduated from Hereford High in 1995. He is currently employed at Poarch Brothers. He is youth minister for New Hope Church of the Nazarene.

Out of town guests represented Midland, Dallas, Bovina, Donna, Amarillo and Canyon.

The only two changes made in the letter pattern on the standard typewriter keyboard since it was first marketed in the 1870s are the X and C keys have changed places and the M has moved down a line.

If it weren't for the last minute, nothing would get done.

— YOUR EYES —

Don't Neglect Eye Safety

When we concentrate on visual acuity -- how well the eyes can see -- and correction with glasses where necessary, it's important to consider too how safe those glasses are.

Ordinary eyeglasses, whether glass or plastic, may not be adequate for active people -- especially active children. There can be serious eye injuries if glasses shatter on impact or fail to shield the eye from injury. The wisest choice is often grinding lenses of polycarbonate, a tough and virtually indestructible material created for the space program. This special plastic may add considerably to the cost of eyeglasses, but the added protection for eyes is priceless.

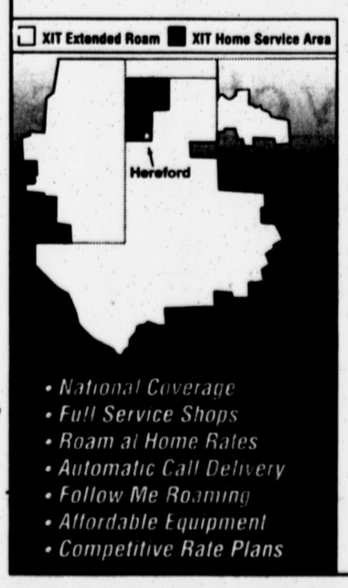

Polycarbonate lenses are an important safety feature for those without vision problems, too. They are the first choice for sports goggles, for racquetball and baseball, and for contact sports as well.

Red Cross Update

`The Tri County Chapter is raising funds for victims of the South Texas flooding and Hurricane Bonnie. A garage sale will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Chapter office.

Financial donations are being accepted at the chapter office, at P.O. Box 1371, Hereford, TX 79045 or by calling 1-800-HELP NOW or for Spanish, call 1-800-257-7575.

Flooding generated by the Tropical Storm Charley has devastated communities in South Texas and Red Cross relief teams are providing emergency food, shelter, first aid and mental health counseling. Four Red Cross shelters were opened Tuesday sheltering 947 people. Five ERVs and three fixed feeding sites are providing service to the affected communities.

As hurricane force winds and torrential rains began battering coastal communities, 126 Red Cross shelters from South Carolina to Virginia have protected more than 18,124 hurricane evacuees.

Most shelters were opened well before landfall of gale force winds and others are available to be opened as needed. With Bonnie's wrath continuing to lash the East Coast, residents in states from New York to South Caroline are urged to continue to monitor the storm's progress and to take appropriate precautions for themselves and their loved ones.

More than 115 Red Cross Emergency Response Vehicles (ERVs), each capable of serving 1,000 meals per day, are on the alert or are in the area ready to provide meals, snacks, beverages and comfort to people affected by any disaster as soon as it is possible to travel.

The chapter is accepting information for Disaster Welfare Inquiries. Disaster Welfare Inquiries may be requested when immediate family members in the disaster area have not been in contact with their families. Call the chapter office, 806-364-3761, for further information.

TCFA addresses mandatory price reporting realities

Mandatory price reporting has been in the news and on the minds of cattlemen quite a bit recently. From the hallways at association meetings to tabletops at the cafe, the current cattle market situation and what to do about it has been the topic of a lot of discussion.

"That's certainly understandable," says Jim Gill, market director at the Texas Cattle Feeders Association. "With the cattle market in the shape it is, it's only natural for cattlemen to look real hard at any idea that might bring relief sooner than later, and mandatory price reporting for live cattle is one of the ideas that has been given lots of attention."

But is mandatory price reporting the "silver bullet" answer?

"There are no silver bullets in the cattle market," Gill says. "We're dealing with cyclical forces, low grain prices, changing consumers and a difficult global economic situation. If time heals wounds, it is also the best antidote for a sick cattle market. No one single action, such as mandatory live cattle price reporting, will solve the issues facing cattlemen."

In fact, mandatory live cattle price reporting may actually create more problems than it solves.

For a price reporting system to be successful, it must:

-- must capture how all cattle are sold;

-- accurately report all cattle sales;

-- be based in legislation;

-- be funded , probably by user fees passed on to cattlemen;

-- be timely and useable for both daily spot and grid markets;

-- enjoy consensus and confidence among all ag segments;

-- be under government control for data collection and enforcement;

-- cover all data collection points, including private treaty sales;

-- be flexible over time;

-- have sufficient penalties and investigative authority to be enforceable.

If mandatory price reporting became reality, it's likely that a new government bureaucracy would be created, according to the TCFA.

Gill reports that the USDA doesn't have the manpower to collect additional data and does not have the injunctive powers required to enforce a mandatory reporting system, which means any new program will have t be funded, most likely through user fees paid by cattlemen.

USDA estimates it will cost at least $60 million just to monitor for compliance.

To enforce mandatory price reporting, individual business audits would have to be done by the new bureaucracy to determine if all sales are being reported.

That would mean the federal government would be able to enter any farm, ranch or feedyard and have complete access to all financial records.

Fines and penalties would have to be legislated and be severe enough to get everyone's attention. Enforcement and penalties would need to to be rigorous enough to be noticeable, said gill.

Cattlemen have long enjoyed operating their businesses in an environment that is relatively free of direct government intervention. turning that situation upside down is not a very palatable idea to most cattle producers.

Gill continued to say that mandatory live cattle price reporting would likely create a downward bias in prices.

According to a 1995-96 study in Texas by the Packers and Stockyards Administration, there were 52,000 cattle sold and not reported that traded above the reported USDA high.

During the same time period, there were 400,000 animals sold and not reported that were below the USDA daily low. Although there may be ample reason these cattle sold at a discount - plainer cattle, heiferettes, roping steers, etc.,- it probably would not benefit cattlemen to force the reporting of these sales.

Alternative marketing methods are now a fact of life in the cattle business.

Forward contracted cattle are often committed - but not priced - for weeks or months ahead of time. If these prices were to be reported when they were set, they would be meaningless in relation to daily cash prices.

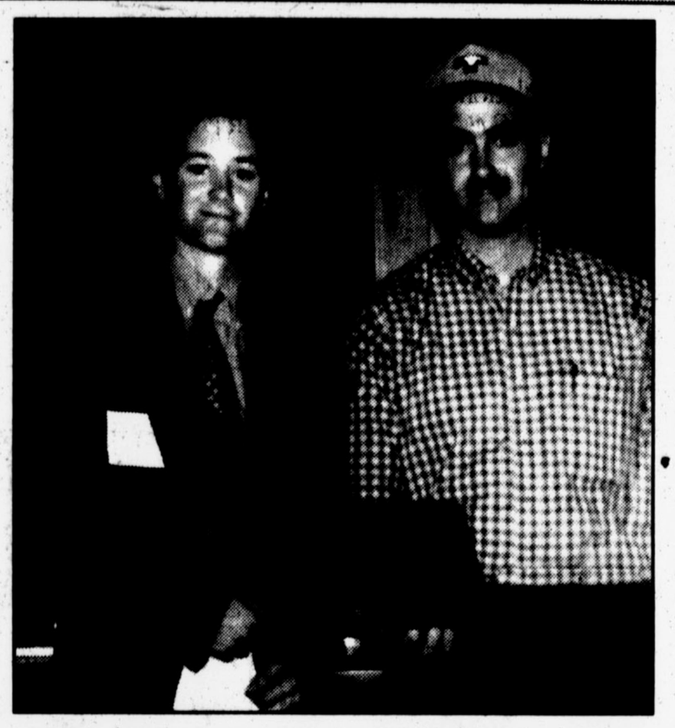

Similarly, mandatory price reporting forformula cattle would be rather useless in analyzing daily markets since there would be at least a week's delay before the price is actually set and reportable.

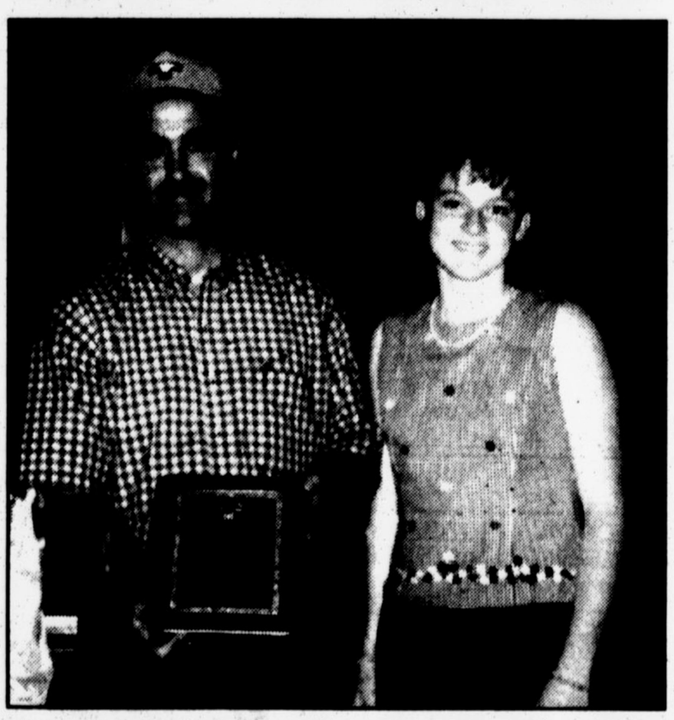

As more and more alliances develop, especially those that involve the retail sector, determining live cash prices will be even more delayed. In fact, with feeder-retailer alliance, a live cattle price may never be determined.

Given the problems associated with mandatory live cattle price reporting, TCFA supports the National Cattle Breeders Association's decision to seek improvements in the voluntary live cattle price reporting, while working for legislation to establish mandatory price reporting for boxed beef and import-export beef.

Under NCBA policy, voluntary live cattle price reporting proves insufficient by 2000, NCBA could develop a mandatory price reporting policy and develop legislation that defines who must report and what classes of cattle to report.

Beef challenge winners

Farmers seek storage facilities

Elevators prepared to turn away low quality grain

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) - Wanted: airplane hangars, armories, any big building. Will even settle for paved ground.

On the verge of harvest, Kansas farmers are desperately looking for places to store anticipated bumper fall crops at a time when grain elevators are already bulging with winter wheat.

Last week, the Kansas Department of Agriculture sent surveys to businesses around the state looking for nontraditional storage for what already promise to be bountiful harvests of corn, soybeans, milo and sunflowers this fall.

The culprit behind the storage crisis is low grain prices. Reluctant to sell at a loss, wheat farmers across the state have opted to store two back-to-back record wheat harvests.

As of Tuesday, the state still had 430,200 bushels of wheat either piled on the ground or in temporary storage, said Carole Jordan, spokeswoman for the state Agriculture Department.

Kansas farmers are expected to pile 75 million to 100 million bushels of grain of several kinds on the ground or in temporary storage this fall, Jordan said. That is more than three times the amount dumped on the ground last year, when the storage shortage was 31 million bushels.

"Everybody is very nervous," Jordan said.

Already, some elevators have told farmers they will be turned away if their crops are of low quality. Some elevators plan to impose new requirements on pounds per bushel, moisture or trash in their crop, said Kevin Lickteig, research program coordinator for the Kansas Corn Growers Association.

Corn growers in northeastern Kansas have more to worry about, because fall is wetter there. In southeastern Kansas, farmers are concerned about lower yields because the weather has been drier in that area, Lickteig said.

"You hear them talking about storage, but it is the price," Lickteig said. "They realize if the demand is up, they wouldn't have a storage problem."

Fall harvest begins in less than a month.

"They are thinking about getting into the field in the next week or two," Lickteig said. "I haven't heard anybody actually doing it, but I heard some strong thinking."

Mike Guetterman, who grows corn south of Kansas City, said he has added storage on his farm and cleaned out other bins. He also plans to sell his corn on a forward contract for pickup later.

"We are going to have a good crop but be barely able to pay our bills," he said.

Clay County Extension agent Greg McLure has heard the concerns about the low commodity prices.

"The (corn) crop looks good, but there is very little optimism because of the low prices," McLure said. "I normally try to counterbalance because farmers in general tend to be pessimists, so I try to be the optimist. But even I can't do that this year."

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

These are a few of my favorite things

As we make our journey through life, we tend to surround ourselves with tangible memories. For one it may be a photo album containing priceless family pictures. Another may have a collection of favorite books. Still another may collect art, furniture or antique automobiles.

As a writer, one of my favorite collections is the written wisdom of others. I enjoy great quotes, prose and short common-sense essays.

In this fifth column of the month, I want to share a few of my favorite written pieces. I hope you will find a few "keepers" to add to your collection of favorite things.

The essence of learning

• It's what you learn after you know it all that counts. - John Wooden

• What counts is not necessarily the size of the dog in the fight - it's the size of the fight in the dog. - Dwight D. Eisenhower

• Everyone lives by selling something. - Robert Lewis Stevenson

• The plans of the diligent lead to success... - Proverbs 21:5

• If you think you can or think you cannot, you're right. - Henry Ford

• The longer I live, the more I realize the impact of attitude on life. Attitude, to me, is more important than facts. I am convinced that life is 10 percent what happens to me and 90 percent how I react to it. And so with you ... we are in charge of our attitudes. - Charles Swindol

• Better to remain silent and be thought a fool, than to speak out and remove all doubt. - Abraham Lincoln

Author unknown

The following two pieces have been attributed to a number of different writers. I can find no accurate source for either piece. However, they are two of my favorite writings, so I share them as "author unknown."

The Man in the Glass

When you get what you want in your struggle for wealth
And the world makes you king for a day,
Just go to the mirror and look at yourself
And see what the Man has to say.

For it isn't your father or mother or wife,
Whose judgement upon you must pass
The fellow whose verdict counts most in your life
Is the Man staring back from the glass.

Some people may call you a straight shootin' chum
And say you're a wonderful guy,
But the man in the glass will say you're a bum
If you can't look him straight in the eye.

He's the fellow to please, never mind the rest,
For he's with you clear to the end,
And you've passed your most dangerous, difficult test
If the man in the glass is your friend.

You may fool the world, down the pathway of years,
And get pats on the back as you pass,
but your final reward will be heartaches and tears,
If you cheated the Man in the glass.

Poem:

If you think you're beaten - you are.
If you think you dare not - you don't.
If you'd like to win, but think you can't -
It's almost certain you won't.

If you think you'll lose - you're lost.
For out in the world we find -
Success begins with a person's will
It's all in your state of mind.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

Now that school is in full swing, Deaf Smith Country Library's fall children's programming will resume. Friday, Sept. 4 at 10:30, will be preschool public story time. Sue has combined public story time with one of the smaller day cares, to insure a good group. Don't worry about being the only family to come to public story time. There will be other children here also. Story time is always a treat for the little ones with songs, stories, and other fun things to do.

The other day my husband and I were discussing our family's schedule of activities. Our calendar is full. He commented that now that school has started, maybe things will settle down a little. Somehow, I doubt it. Now we have to deal with homework, football practice and games, fund-raisers, and parent meetings, not to mention all that goes into getting four people ready to face the world each morning.

These are all worthwhile activities, and we wouldn't want to miss any of it, but it just doesn't look like a slowdown to me. In retrospect, the summer (which was so busy we couldn't find time to travel to see dear friends or have a family reunion), seems long and lazy. Maybe the enforced schedule of meeting school deadlines will at least give us a little more structure, if not more time.

Perhaps I should read one of the new books out this week. Simplify Your Life and Get More Out of It by Norman Wright tells how to eliminate the clutter in our lives. The author presents several different approaches, giving you the opportunity to try, and eventually adopt, the one that is right for you. Each of these approaches leads us to simplifying in six area: pace, expectations, activities, possessions, relationships, and spiritual lives.

The last chapter contains practical, concrete step-by-step help in setting up your personal plan. The appendix even has information about how to get rid of junk mail.

I didn't realize that getting rid of junk mail could make a difference. When I think about what happens to junk mail at our house (it gets piled on the dining table until I can't stand it any more and throw a bunch of it away), I have to consider that maybe the man has a point.

On the inside flap of the cover of Character Is Destiny by Russell W. Gough, the book is described this way: "The quality of our lives is not determined by the happenstance of genetics or by the influence of environment; it is not measured in material possessions or in the trappings of youth; it is not dependent on personality or social acclaim. On the contrary, the intrinsic value of the lives we lead reflect the strength of a single trait: our personal character. By cultivating the habits of virtue, we will strengthen not only ourselves but, more important, our families and our world. This book shows how to overcome the most formidable obstacle to an ethical life: ourselves."

Gough is a professor of ethics and philosophy at Pepperdine University, and a chairman for the annual White House Conference on Character Building.

Other nonfiction available this week:

Visits: Caring for an Aging Parent: Reflections and Advice by Lee Ann Chearney

Israel: A History by Martin Gilbert

Donna's Day: Fun Activities That Bring the Family Together by Donna Erickson

On the new fiction shelf we have Rattlesnake Crossing by J.A. Jance. Single mother of a young daughter, Sheriff Joanna Brady is the law in Cochise County. Rising above the hole left in her heart by the brutal murder of her police officer husband, Joanna must do the job she was elected to do -- especially since murder has shattered the small town's fragile peace.

A local gun dealer has died violently and his stock of high-powered weapons has been cleaned out. Two more slayings follow soon after. Suspicion falls on Alton Hosfield, a local rancher at war with the government, environmentalists, area newcomers, and anyone whom he thinks is a threat to his family, his freedom, and his isolation. Sheriff Brady suspects that it is not as simple as that.

As the situation gets hotter by the minute, the last thing Joanna wants is another "Ruby Ridge." However, her preoccupation with bringing a killer to justice could take a terrible toll on her personal life.

In A House by the Side of the Road by Jan Gleitier, Meg Kessinger, for the first time in her life, is content. She has inherited her great-aunt's house in rural Pennsylvania, leaving behind the hectic life of Chicago and the heartbreak of an ex-boyfriend. She has made friends with her neighbors and two of the town's most eligible bachelors vie for her attention. Even the small wild dog that has been wandering around the neighborhood seems to be warming to her.

All is well, until mysterious things begin to happen. They seem to be related to the former tenant of Meg's great-aunt, the house itself, and also to the death of an elderly woman neighbor months before.

Other new fiction:

Boobytrap: A "Nameless Detective" novel by Bill Pronzini

Child of the River: The First Book of Confluence, a sci-fi by Paul J. McAuley

Breath, Eyes, Memory by Edwidge Danticat, an Oprah Book Club selection

Tomorrow's Dream by Janette Oke and T. Davis Bunn

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

PROTECT YOUR HOME'S EXTERIOR

Your windows, roof and siding bear the brunt of the winter weather, and now is the time to prepare for the snow, cold, and wind that will assault your home in the coming months -- before it is too late.

As fall approaches, you should decide whether or not this "first line of defense" needs renovating. Making an informed evaluation of your windows, roof and siding is not as difficult as you might think.

The experts at Sears HomeCentral suggest asking yourself the following questions to help make the best decisions for your home and family.

First, examine your windows:

*Do they leak drafts of cold air?

*Do they give your home a neat, well-maintained look?

*Are they easy to clean?

*Do they provide the right amount of light and air?

*Are they energy efficient?

If you answered "no" to any of these questions, consider replacing your windows. Quality windows can be installed quickly and easily.

How about your roof?

*Is it more than 10 years old?

*Do you notice any loose or missing shingles?

*Do you have water stains on interior ceilings?

*Is there damaged flashing between the roof line and exterior walls?

*Are there cracked, curled or rotted shingles?

If you answered "yes" to any of the above, your roof may need to be replaced regardless of its age. Remember, harsh weather can age a roof before its time.

Lastly, examine your siding:

*Are there any corner pieces missing?

*Is your siding faded or in need of new paint?

*Have any siding slats warped or pulled away from the house?

*Are there any dents or abrasions in the siding?

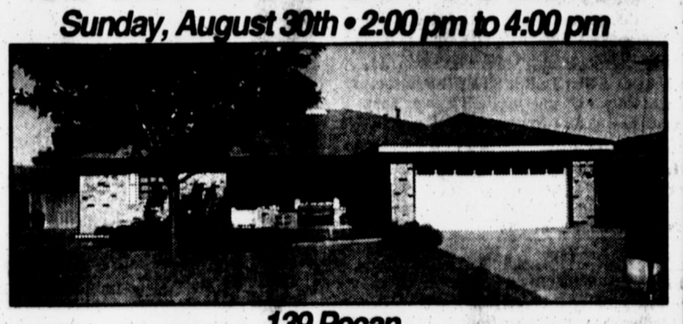

If you answered "yes" to any of the above, your siding may need to be replaced.

Hunt is mad about the Bard in Twelfth Night

Oscar and Emmy winner Helen Hunt (As Good as It Gets, Mad About You) stars as Viola, a love-struck young woman posing as a boy, in William Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, or What You Will, airing Sunday on PBS' Live From Lincoln Center (check local listings).

By John Crook
©TVData Features Syndicate

For Helen Hunt, apparently film and TV glory isn't as good as it gets.

The Oscar- and Emmy-winning actress (As Good as It Gets, Mad About You) has spent the summer on the boards of Lincoln Center, brushing up her Shakespeare as Viola in Nicholas Hytner's production of Twelfth Night, or What You Will. The production has received high marks from the critics, and its final performance airs on PBS on Sunday, Aug. 30, as part of the venerable Live From Lincoln Center series (check local listings).

In addition to Hunt, the cast includes theater veterans Paul Rudd, who previously teamed with Hytner for the movie The Object of My Affection, and Kyra Sedgwick (Miss Rose White).

One of Shakespeare's most beloved comedies, Twelfth Night mingles two bittersweet love stories with spiraling confusion over mistaken identities.

As the play opens, a devastated Viola reaches the shores of the kingdom of Illyria following a shipwreck that apparently has claimed the life of her twin brother, Sebastian.

To survive, Viola disguises herself as a boy, Cesario, and becomes an attendant to a handsome duke, Orsino (Rudd), with whom she falls in love. He, however, is in love with Countess Olivia (Sedgwick), and sends his "boy" to woo her in his stead. In a reverse Tootsie, Olivia promptly falls in love with "Cesario," thus forming a comic triangle: Viola, masquerading as Cesario, loves Orsino, who loves Olivia, who loves Cesario/Viola.

Matters become even more confused when Viola's twin, Sebastian (Rick Stear), returns alive – and is the very image of Cesario.

"The two things that I find extraordinary (about this production) are, first, you can understand what they are saying extremely easily," says John Goberman, who has been the executive producer of Live From Lincoln Center since its inception 25 years ago. "It doesn't have that kind of stilted, otherworldly pronunciation that makes you not sure of what's going on.

"Secondly, it's just very, very funny. The comic bits are genuinely funny, so this is very accessible Shakespeare."

Goberman credits Hytner's production skills for the unusual accessibility. "The concept is so extraordinary as to where this is happening and when; it's not modern dress, but it's not costume drama, either," he explains. "There's just a marvelous sense of otherworldliness, but always appropriate to the play."

In addition to the three celebrity leads, this Twelfth Night features other familiar faces from film and TV playing the characters who handle most of the play's more raucous comedy.

Tony Award winner Philip Bosco, who appeared as the father of the bride in My Best Friend's Wedding, plays Malvolio, and Max Wright, familiar to millions as the TV "daddy" of ALF, plays Sir Andrew Aguecheek. The mischievous Maria is portrayed by Amy Hill, who played the irascible grandmother on All-American Girl.

Small wonder that Live From Lincoln Center opted to present a play for only the second time in the history of the series. "With this I said, 'Let's just take a chance,' " Goberman says. "It's got a great director, a great designer (Bob Crowley) and a terrific cast – and it's Twelfth Night! We'll make it work.

"The cast is really 'up' about doing this at their last performance together, which is usually something special. And they'll be performing for an invited audience. I feel very good about it!"

HOROSCOPES

Aug. 30-Sept. 5

ARIES – March 21/April 20
Don't get carried away early in the week. There's too much going on to lose your head. An outburst only will make things more hectic. An old friend has a proposition for you. Look at everything that is involved before making a decision. Something just isn't right with this deal.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21
Your persistence pays off when it comes to romance this week, Taurus. That special someone finally says yes. He or she just needed to see how serious you were. Don't be cavalier now. Wine and dine him or her, and show your true feelings. A loved one needs your help with a family matter. Be supportive.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
Your professional life keeps you on your toes during the middle of the week. A lot of demands are placed on you. Stay focused and organized — that is your key to success. A close friend wants your input on an important decision that he or she has to make. Be honest. The truth is needed.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
Don't let your desire for more let you give up all that you already have, Cancer. Open your eyes to what's in front of you. You've been taking those closest to you for granted. Show them how much you really care. A business associate asks for help later in the week. Do what you can, but don't fall behind in your own tasks.

LEO – July 23/August 23
Don't be overcome by the call of the wild, Leo. There's a lot of work to be done this week. You face demands in both your professional life and personal life. Set your priorities early in the week, and you'll get things accomplished by Friday — leaving you plenty of time to enjoy the weekend.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
Your orderly nature serves you well early in the week, Virgo. By keeping things organized, you make a lot of progress. Don't forget to delegate some of your less-important tasks. You have every right to do so. A friend introduces you to an interesting person. Be yourself, and you're sure to make a good impression.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
You're flying high this week. Your efforts are being rewarded in the work place, and your personal life is going well. The person whom you've been seeing wants to intensify the relationship. Say yes — you know that is what you want too.

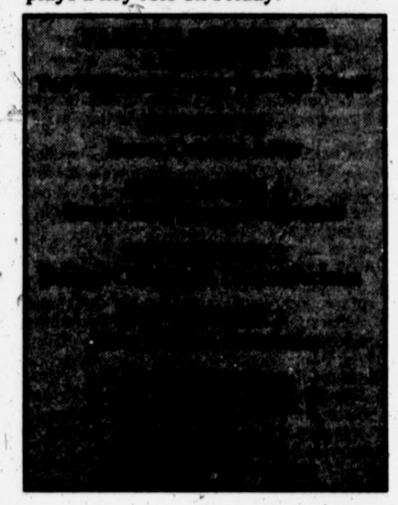

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
You have a lot of decisions to make, Scorpio. Examine all of your options carefully. Don't be too hasty. Remember, the repercussions won't just affect you; those closest to you are involved also. A business associate wants to get to know you better. Don't get in over your head.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
Your bravery wins you accolades early in the week. You stand up to an adversary at work and make a bad situation better for everyone. The higher-ups are impressed with your efforts. That special someone wants to call it quits. Don't give up without a fight. He or she means too much to you.

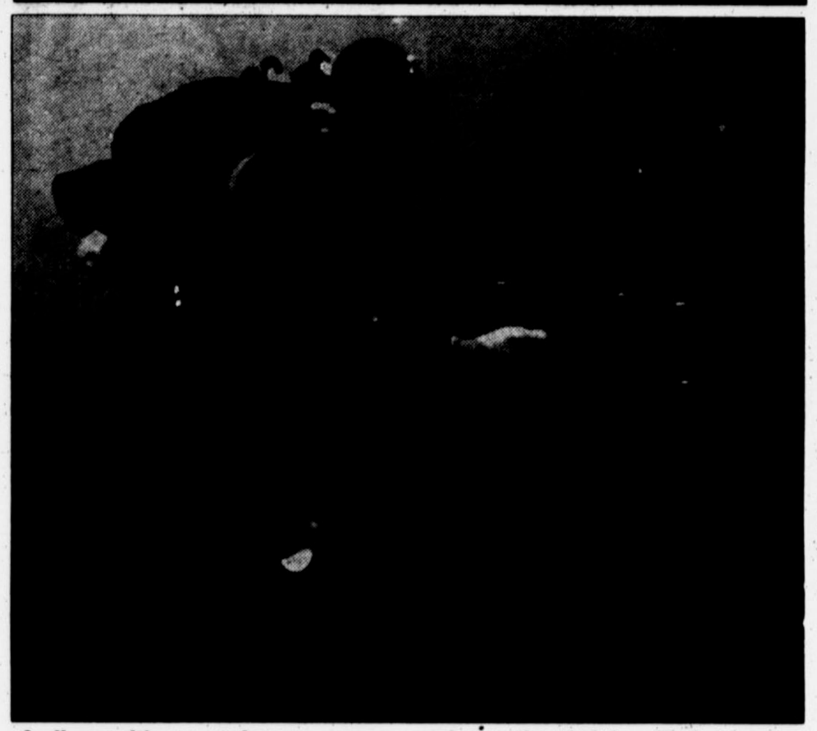

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't be shy when it comes to meeting an important person this week. Impress him or her with your knowledge and abilities. He or she is sure to take an interest in you. Opportunity is knocking. A loved one needs romantic advice. Don't venture into unknown territory. Tell him or her that you just don't know what to say.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
Telling a lie gets you into a lot of trouble late in the week. You spend several days trying to get things back on track. Remember, honesty is the best policy. A close friend has a surprise for you. Enjoy the suspense, and let yourself go. You haven't been able to relax in a long time.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20
The stress of the last few days finally is gone, Pisces. You can relax and enjoy yourself. Take time to pamper yourself — you deserve it. An acquaintance has an interesting question for you. Be honest. Leo plays a key role on Friday.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: When Ellen first came on the air, she had a roommate named Adam. How exactly did they write him off the show? –D.S. via e-mail.

A: In one of the show's many retoolings, Adam (Arye Gross) moved to London to accept an exciting job opportunity.

Q: Please settle an argument between my husband and myself on two questions. I recall an episode of The Lucy-Desi Comedy Hour involving the character of actress Tallulah Bankhead. My husband says that Bette Davis played Tallulah; I say it was Tallulah herself.

Next, who played Louise on Dear John? My husband insists it was Jane Leeves of Frasier, but I say no. –Patty Smith (and Brian) via e-mail.

A: You are right on both counts. That was Bankhead herself camping her way through an episode that, if you recall, involved her fierce allergy to "strawwwwww-berries," as she called them. Jane Carr, who bears a passing resemblance to Leeves, played Louise on Dear John.

Q: In the Mickey Rooney TV movie Bill: On His Own, did David Duchovny play the rabbi who befriended Bill? –Jonathan Gallagher via e-mail.

A: No. Rabbi Jeff Portman was played by actor Paul Lieber.

Q: In the early days of TV, I remember a late-night talk show hosted by Jerry Lester, who used to swap jokes with a large-busted gal. What was the name of the show, and who was the woman? –Walter Sweikhart, Montgomery, Ala.

A: You're thinking of NBC's Broadway Open House, the 1950-51 predecessor to The Tonight Show. For a comedy bit one night, Jerry Lester invited actress Jennie Lewis to appear as

Arye Gross

Dagmar, a dim, poetry-spouting blond bombshell.

The routine was an instant hit with audiences, and Dagmar (Lewis took the character name as her own) became Lester's sidekick and a beloved TV personality in her own right.

Q: Whatever happened to The Straight Dope on A&E? It was a quirky show that answered questions from viewers about everyday things from embalming to how rats end up in toilet bowls on the fourth floor of apartment buildings. –Todd Urquhart via e-mail.

A: Dope, a spinoff of Cecil Adams' hip syndicated column, simply didn't attract a large enough audience to survive.

Q: Is Robbi Chong of Poltergeist: The Legacy related to Rae Dawn Chong? –Roger A. Hatfield, Del Rio, Texas.

A: They're half sisters. Comic actor Tommy Chong (of Cheech & Chong fame) is the father of both actresses.

HIGHLIGHTS

USA Network and CBS have weekday and weekend coverage of tennis's U.S. Open, which begins Monday in New York. American Venus Williams is a contender for the women's title.

Macatee front and center for U.S. Open tennis coverage

Bill Macatee is all set for a two-network volley of U.S. Open tennis when he calls the play-by-play for USA Network's and CBS' extensive coverage.

"It's exciting for me to work so much of the Open," he says, "and I'm looking forward to my first Grand Slam finals."

Macatee believes the U.S. Open, which begins Monday, Aug. 31, may be the breakthrough tournament for Venus Williams to overcome defending champion and No. 1-ranked Martina Hingis and win her first major title.

"No one rival consistently steps up and beats Hingis," Macatee says, "but I'm looking for Venus to do it in New York, where the animated home crowd will help her and sister Serena. Venus has been on that stage before and loves it."

Macatee sees one dominant figure on the less-colorful men's side: four-time U.S. Open champion Pete Sampras.

"I can't turn away from Pete. He reaffirmed his dominance at Wimbledon, but I believe he won't really be fully appreciated for his accomplishments until he's gone in five to 10 years. Then everyone will say, 'Wow, look at what he did.' He's not a showman – just the best all-around tennis player in the world."

Joining Macatee for USA's coverage from Arthur Ashe Stadium are lead analysts John McEnroe and Tracy Austin, Barry MacKay, Ted Robinson, and studio host Bill Patrick.

Michael Barkann provides features with often wild angles.

Catching the ball at wild angles is CBS' "Mac-Cam," which was named after McEnroe and reveals in slow-motion replay whether a ball is in or out after a disputed call.

McEnroe, who also is behind the mike for CBS, was known for disputing just about every borderline call as a player. Now he has the technology to show who's right.

Leading up to the U.S. Open, CBS continues a tradition of telecasting Arthur Ashe Kids' Day on Sunday, Aug. 30.

Cynthia Watros is returning to daytime, but not as the popular Annie on Guiding Light. Watros is taking over temporarily for Jensen Buchanan, who plays Vicky McKinnon on Another World.

"Procter & Gamble (Co.) has been really good to me, and AW casting director Jimmy Bohr is a friend," Watros says. "The show needed someone to step in and help out, and I'm happy to do so." Buchanan is scheduled to return to work on the NBC soap Tuesday, Sept. 8.

News of Jonathan Jackson's (Lucky) departure from General Hospital is a bit premature.

Several publications reported Jackson was leaving GH immediately. The truth is the young actor wants to go to college this winter and is trying to decide if he wants to go to school and work at the same time. If he does leave, it won't be for several months.

Dear Candace: I really enjoy The Bold and the Beautiful and the character Ridge (Ronn Moss). The other day, I saw an advertisement for some '70s music, and I was almost sure that the lead singer for the group Player was Moss. Can you confirm this? –Patty in Oklahoma.

Dear Reader: You are correct. Moss was a rock star in the '70s.

Dear Candace: What happened to the original Ruth on All My Children? Also, are Doug Davidson (Paul, The Young and the Restless) and Eileen Davidson (ex-Kristen, Days of Our Lives) related? –L.L. on the Internet.

Dear Reader: Mary Fickett (ex-Ruth) decided to retire and left the role voluntarily. Doug and Eileen are not related.
