Storm dumps snow all across nation

Worst storm of season hits Midwest

Associated Press

The season's worst storm, already blamed for 10 deaths, lashed the Northeast today with gale force winds, snow and freezing rain after dumping nearly two feet of snow on the Midwest, where 319,000 customers were left powerless when ice-laden lines snapped.

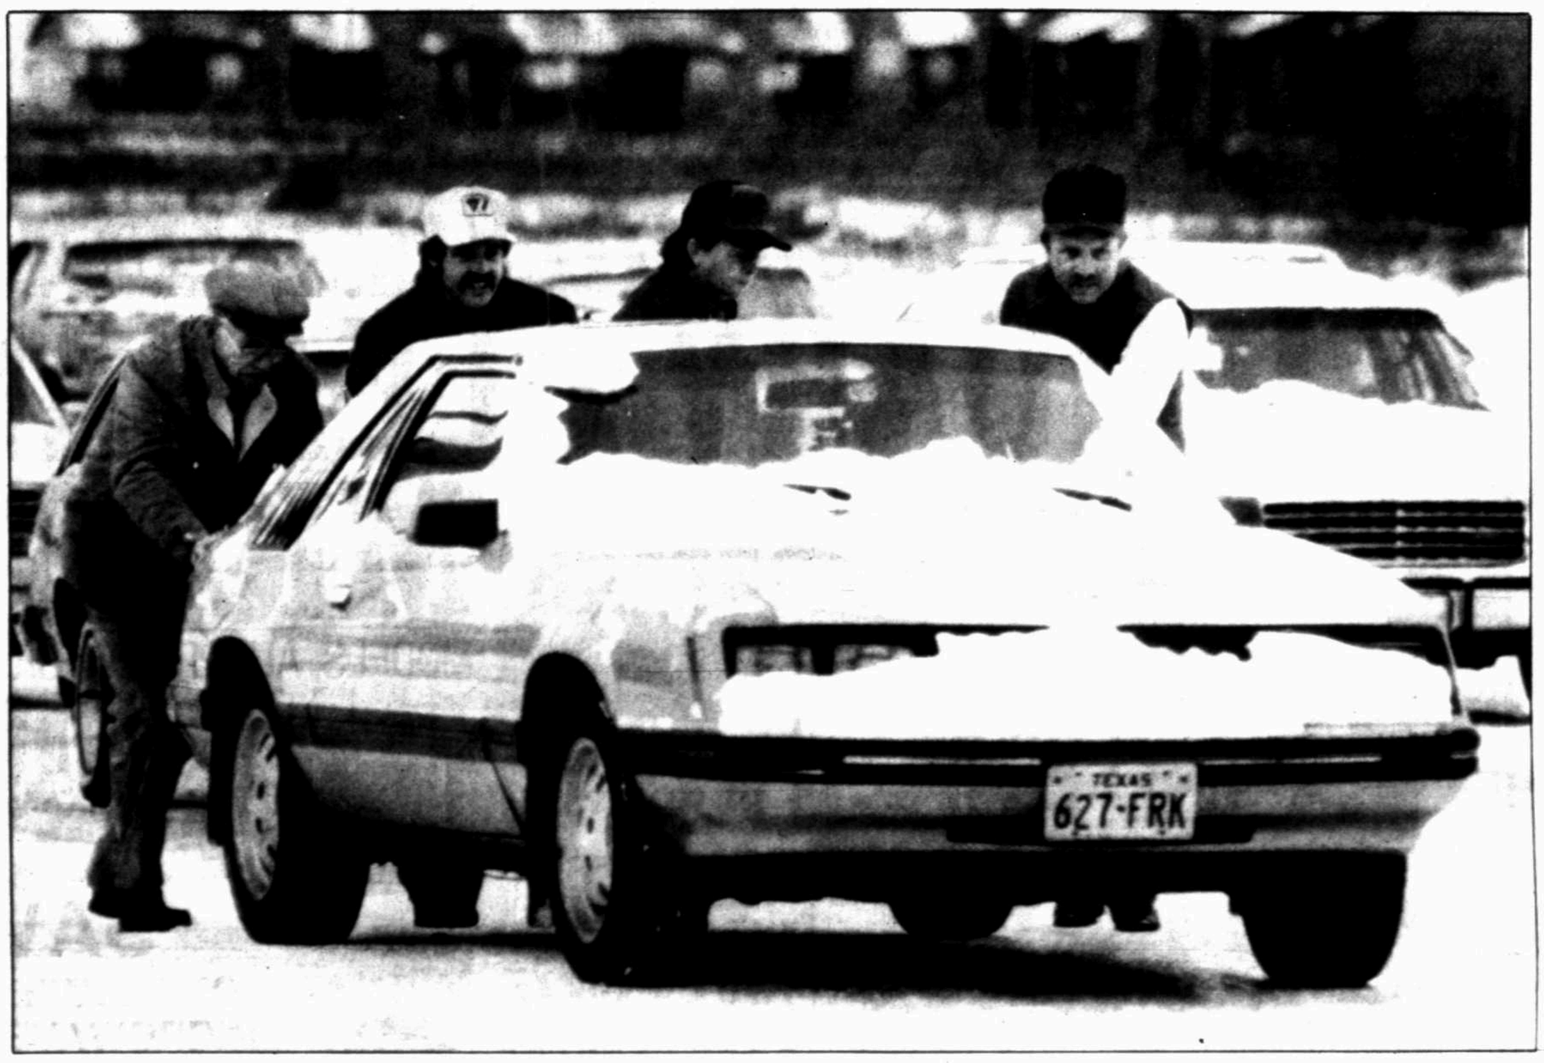

A winter storm warning was in effect for northern New Hampshire and Maine, while travelers advisories for freezing rain were posted today along northern and central New England and gale warnings for coastal areas.

"This sort of storm has a history of leaving at least 8 to 10 inches of snow in Maine and New Hampshire," said Harry Gordon of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

By 1 a.m. three inches of snow had fallen at Caribou, Me., and an inch at Houlton. The National Weather Service predicted that up to a foot of snow could cover Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont by today.

In Texas, raked by thunderstorms, flooding and eight tornadoes earlier this week, storm warnings for heavy snow were in effect. Two inches of snow were reported on the ground in the Dallas-Fort Worth area just after midnight Tuesday.

Half-inch falls on Midland

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

It could have been a lot worse.

By the time the snow starting falling Tuesday, the last of the New Year's Eve revellers had already straggled home and were huddled safely around their televisions watching bowl games.

Instead of adding to the national holiday death total, the half-inch snowfall which had turned Midland roads into glaciers by nightfall caused only minor accidents and long delays for Wednesday morning commuters.

"We probably averaged about half an inch" for the area, said Weather Specialist Don Oettinger of the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. "It's pretty much typical. We usually get weather like this at least once per year."

At the airport itself, the weather service measured only 0.01 inches of snow, and the only delays reported by the Aviation Department were flights arriving from the Dallas area, which were delayed by bad weather there.

"We've had no problems," said Operations Agent Tracy Lincoln. "There have been no delays."

Search under-way for missing Eastern Airlines jet

At least seven Americans believed to be on board airliner

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — U.S. and Bolivian planes searched the snow-capped Andes today for an Eastern Airlines jet that disappeared 10 minutes before its planned landing at La Paz airport. Authorities said at least seven Americans were among the 33 people aboard.

A U.S. government plane returned to La Paz airport this morning after its crew scanned the crevices and passes of the Andes but found no trace of the Boeing 727, said Royce Fichte, the U.S. consul in La Paz, who was aboard the search craft. He said the Beech 200 aircraft had searched for two hours and 15 minutes and would search again today, probably in the afternoon, when visibility was expected to be better.

Fichte said heavy clouds hampered the searchers, who thought they spotted some wreckage but after circling for a closer look decided that it wasn't wreckage. He said the search plane flew over the flight route that the Eastern jet had planned to follow.

The Federal Aviation Administration said in Washington that wreckage believed to be that of the Eastern jet had been spotted about 50 miles from the airport in "the general area" of the plane's last known location as established by radio contact.

But Fichte said "the FAA reports about finding the plane are false." He said he believed the FAA report was based on the radio conversation in which crew aboard the U.S. search plane said they had spotted something that looked like wreckage and were going to take a second look.

An Eastern spokesman, Bob Hunter, said in Miami after the U.S. flight returned from its first search run that "our information is simply that we have no wreckage found."

The last contact with the crew of the Eastern flight was a radio conversation with the pilot 11 minutes before the jet's scheduled landing Tuesday evening, said Richard McGraw, an Eastern senior vice president in Miami. The pilot said in that transmission that he planned to land a minute early.

The pilot was told to lower his plane's altitude, then at 35,000 feet, to 25,000 and make radio contact when he did so, but the pilot was never heard from again, airport officials said.

Airport officials said fog at an elevation as high as 30,000 feet blanketed the region. The hunt was concentrated in the Bacon region of Cochabamba state, about 60 miles south of the Bolivian capital. Several search planes were returning to the airport because of the heavy clouds, they said.

They said five or six Bolivian air force planes took off this morning after a search by car and jeep of the area surrounding the airport failed to turn up the 727. An Eastern Airlines jet was being sent to Bolivia from Ecuador via Peru to search for the missing jet, Lima airport authorities said.

The missing plane, Eastern's Flight 980, left Asuncion, Paraguay, at 5:57 p.m. Tuesday and was due in La Paz at 7:48 p.m. on its way to Miami, said Rene Osorio, director of Eastern's office at El Alto.

Bolivian officials said there were reports from Asuncion that Marian Davis, the wife of the U.S. Ambassador to Paraguay, Arthur Davis, was on board.

Asked about this, Paula Musto, an Eastern spokeswoman in Miami, said: "There have been such reports, but at this time I cannot confirm it. We have to talk to the State Department. I think someone in the State Department in Washington is working on it."

In Washington, State Department press officer Kathleen Lang said, "Pending notification of next of kin, we are saying nothing about the Americans aboard the plane."

Robert Minutillo, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Asuncion, was contacted by telephone fron New York and said he could not give out any information about the plane's passengers.

Bolivian officials said there was no indication the plane was having technical difficulties and the skies were clear when the plane was last heard from.

McGraw did not rule out a hijacking, but Bolivian officials said a hijack was considered unlikely. They said there were no reports of the landing at any nearby airport.

Interior Secretary Clark announces resignation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's trusted friend and troubleshooter William P. Clark is planning to resign as interior secretary in two or three months and hit the trail for his California ranch, the White House says.

Clark told Reagan of his plans to resign in the next two or three months at a meeting Monday in Palm Springs, Calif., where the president is winding up his New Year's vacation, said Marlin Fitzwater, a White House spokesman.

Clark, who took the job after the resignation of James Watt in August 1983, "told the president that his tasks were essentially complete at the Interior Department and (he) felt it was time to return to his home in California," Fitzwater said Tuesday night.

Asked if Clark's departure was the result of a policy dispute, Fitzwater said, "I think he just felt it was time to get back to his ranch."

In an interview published in today's editions of The Washington Post, Clark said: "My task at Interior is substantially complete so it's time to go home to California."

Clark, who has been an aide and close political associate of Reagan since the president's days as California governor, sought to leave the administration in 1983 when he was national security adviser.

But Reagan prevailed on Clark to stay on in Washington and replace Watt, who resigned under pressure in August 1983 after he made a joke about minorities and handicapped people.

■ Clark profile — Page 2A

Although he shared many of Watt's views, Clark abandoned his predecessor's confrontational style that had riled many environmental groups. Clark adopted a more conciliatory role in an attempt to defuse the controversy that surrounded Watt's tenure.

Several Interior Department officials, speaking on condition they not be identified by name, expressed dismay Tuesday night that Clark will become a lame duck secretary just as the administration finalizes its budget proposal for the agency and tries to sell it to Congress.

Possible successors to Clark include Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., Reps. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., and Manuel Lujan Jr., R-N.M., and Interior Under Secretary Ann Dore McLaughlin.

Clark's announced departure comes at a time when the Interior Department must formulate a new five-year plan for the sale of offshore oil leases by February. The plan, mandated by Congress, must spell out the administration's schedule for the sale of oil drilling rights.

Like his predecessor, Clark favors offshore oil drilling. But he has been unable to persuade Congress to lift a drilling ban on the most promising areas off the coasts of California and New England.

While Watt favored the sale of thousands of square miles of underwater drilling tracts, Clark has bowed to the pressure of some states to exempt certain areas for environmental reasons.

Most recently, he used his influence with Reagan to quash a plan by Budget Director David Stockman to merge the Army Corps of Engineers with the Bureau of Reclamation, which builds dams and irrigation projects in 17 Western states.

The plan was opposed by Clark and two other influential Californians in the administration, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Presidential Counselor Edwin Meese III.

Children win computer for shunning TV for year

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two children who shunned television for a year survived the experience and won a home computer in a wager with their father, but their parents said the bet caused problems because they lost their electronic "babysitter."

"It was as much a transition for us as parents as it was for them as children," said Peggy Penning, 33, whose children missed "Where's the Beef?" and other televised gems but earned better report cards for their year of abstinence.

Her husband Bruce, 29, first proposed the idea to the children as a combination wager and 1984 New Year's resolution.

"I thought it would only last about two or three weeks. But they showed me I was wrong," Penning said Tuesday, the first day the children were allowed to watch television.

Jerry, 11, and Wendy, 10, said the loss of television gave them more time to read books, do homework and play with friends. It also meant a change in routine for their mother.

"As a mother, you get used to using TV as a babysitter. When kids are bored, you say 'Why don't you go watch TV.' We couldn't say that any more," she said.

The payoff was to be $200 for each child who completed the bet. Penning said his children originally wanted to buy a television set for each of their rooms if they won. "But that didn't make sense to me," he said.

So he upped the ante with the pledge that he would buy them a personal computer if they held out until Dec. 31. The first thing they viewed was Tuesday's Cotton Bowl parade.

"It wasn't that tough," said Jerry. "You just have to have confidence in yourself for the first week. And by the second week, you're so used to it that you can just do it."

The Pennings said they trusted their children not to cheat by watching television at a friend's house or sneaking a peak when they were out of the house.

Caller says 'Army of God' bombed abortion clinic

WASHINGTON (AP) — A caller claiming to represent the "Army of God East Coast Division" telephoned the Washington Times and claimed responsibility for the New Year's Day bombing of an abortion clinic.

The bomb exploded at the Hillcrest Women's Surgi-Center here at 12:10 a.m. Tuesday, collapsing a ceiling, cracking brick walls and twisting iron bars over the windows. Police said the clinic was empty and there were no injuries.

The caller told the newspaper Tuesday afternoon he wanted to express "solidarity" with Matthew J. Goldsby, 21, of Cantonment, Fla., who has been charged in the bombing of four Pensacola abortion clinics, according to Jack Killorin, spokesman for the federal Bureau for Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Killorin said the caller referred to the Pensacola man as "Brother John Goldsby" and described himself as belonging to the "Army of God East Coast Division."

The Army of God has claimed responsibility for the bombings of abortion clinics and family planning agencies in the East and Midwest and was involved two years ago in the abduction of an Illinois doctor who performed abortions, FBI agent Ron Hoverson said. The doctor was later released.

The type of bomb used in the New Year's attack and a damage estimate were not released.

"It takes time to reconstruct the type of device that was used," Tom Hill, another ATF spokesman, said.

"The explosion did extensive damage to the interior of the building, causing the ceiling to collapse and the wall to fall also," District of Columbia Police Lt. William White III said.

Goldsby was arrested Monday in connection with the Pensacola bombings, three of them on Christmas Day and the other in June.

At least two men involved in abortion-clinic bombings

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A second man charged in the bombings of four abortion clinics acted in conjunction with another suspect who confessed to the attacks but claimed he acted alone, authorities said.

Matthew J. Goldsby was charged in the bombings over the weekend, and police said he told them he opposed abortion on religious grounds. On Tuesday, James Thomas Simmons, a 21-year-old glazer's apprentice, surrendered because he knew he was being sought, authorities said.

Simmons was to appear before a federal magistrate at a bond hearing today.

Goldsby, 21, was arrested Sunday and was being held without bond after agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms testified he had admitted planting three bombs on Christmas morning and one on June 25.

Both men lived in Cantonment, a rural community 10 miles north of this northwestern Florida city, and both attended the First Assembly of God Church, but officials said neither was active in anti-abortion protests.

Simmons got his job at the Pensacola Glass Co. on the recommendation of Goldsby, whose brother works there, said Jack Sherrill, former assistant manager.

Simmons was charged with 16 counts of violating federal firearms and explosives laws, said Jack Killorin, an ATF spokesman in Washington.

"He turned himself in to the sheriff's office," said Dewitt Fincannon, an ATF agent in Pensacola. "He heard we were looking for him."

Goldsby, who works for Norton-Del Gallo Construction Co., faces similar charges. The maximum penalty for each violation is 10 years in prison, a $10,000 fine or both.

"They are charged with working in conjunction on the bombings," Killorin said.

"Our investigation has developed no evidence that would tie these incidents to anti-abortion bombings and arsons elsewhere in the country," said Stephen E. Higgins, national director of ATF, in a prepared statement.

There were 24 attacks on abortion clinics, doctors' offices or Planned Parenthood offices last year, two in 1983 and three in 1982.

Early Tuesday, the first abortion clinic bombing of 1985 occurred in Washington, D.C. No injuries were reported.

In the Florida bombings, Goldsby used "fairly sophisticated" black-powder pipe bombs equipped with timing devices, authorities allege.

Goldsby claimed he had acted alone, but ATF agent Robert Hofer testified there was evidence others may have been involved.

Clark manages to succeed in unlikely jobs

By GUY DARST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary William P. Clark has made a career of troubleshooting for Ronald Reagan, succeeding in unlikely jobs that Reagan's political opponents predicted he would flub.

"In his hours of need, Reagan goes back to Bill Clark," former Reagan secretary Helene von Damm once said.

Reagan elevated Clark, a college dropout, from county chairman in his first race for governor to chief of staff at the Statehouse in Sacramento, justice of the California Supreme Court, deputy secretary of State, national security adviser and Secretary of the Interior.

The 53-year-old Clark plans to leave the Interior Department within two to three months, the White House said Tuesday.

The low-keyed Clark sought to leave the national security adviser's post several times. By all accounts, the congenial Californian detested White House infighting and constant squabbles between the State and Defense Departments.

The president told him, "Bill, I've always let people go before, but I want you to stay a little longer."

Two months after James Watt resigned as interior secretary in August 1983, however, Reagan tapped Clark for the job.

Despite Clark's taste for wearing cowboy boots and his description of his 888-acre California ranch as "somewhat of a wildlife refuge," the appointment was opposed by the Sierra Club and the Wilderness Society.

In contrast to Watt, he moved slowly and quietly at the Interior Department, but he did shuffle agencies and bureaus around to suit his passion for neat management.

Also contrary to Watt, he declared he would not allow oil and gas drilling in wildlife preserves. But he was as adamant as his predecessor in backing offshore oil drilling.

Clark succeeded Richard V. Allen as national security adviser on Jan. 4, 1982. He tried to tighten leaks to the news media and was a main backer of trade sanctions designed to slow construction of the Soviet Union's Siberia-Western Europe natural gas pipeline.

Clark also backed the committment of U.S. Marines to Lebanon.

At the State Department, some saw Clark as the eyes and ears of the White House.

His Senate confirmation hearings for the deputy secretary's post were almost a political fiasco. He was unprepared and had to plead ignorance when publicly quizzed about British Labor Party policies, the name of the South African prime minister and other foreign affairs matters.

His only foreign experience was "72 hours in Santiago" on a trip to Chile years ago, he said. A Dutch newspaper described him in a headline as a "nitwit."

Clark came to State from the California Supreme Court, to which then-Gov. Reagan nominated him in 1973. He was confirmed despite then-Chief Justice Donald R. Wright's remark that he was "not qualified by education, training or experience."

Officer thought official aware of plot to kidnap priest

TORUN, Poland (AP) — A secret police lieutenant testified today that his superior led him to believe a deputy interior minister was aware of a plan to kidnap a pro-Solidarity priest.

Lt. Leszek Pekala resumed his testimony in the trial of four secret police officers charged in the abduction and slaying of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko last October. He had testified during the first two days of the trial last week and returned to the witness stand this morning when the court reconvened after a four-day holiday recess.

Pekala said his superior, Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski, "was able to create such an atmosphere that led me to believe one of the deputy ministers knew all about it.

"He never said this specifically, but I could think such a thing in the context of our conversations," Pekala said.

Pekala, 32, and two other officers, Piotrowski, 33, and Lt. Waldemar Chmielewski, 29, are charged with abducting and killing Popieluszko, who was 37.

The fourth officer, Col. Adam Pietruszka, 47, is charged with aiding and abetting his three subordinates.

Under cross-examination, Pekala said Piotrowski insisted that Popieluszko be killed, that his body be thrown into a reservoir, and that he told the two lieutenants that a high-ranking official supported the operation and would protect them from prosecution.

"He created an impression that someone high was behind it and created appearances of a security guarantee," Pekala said. He did not name the high-ranking official purportedly behind the plot.

Polish authorities granted seven passes to Western correspondents to attend the trial but denied access to The Associated Press, citing lack of space in the 100-seat courtroom. Correspondents at the trial provided the AP with their notes.

WORLD

In a nationally televised speech on New Year's Eve, Polish head of state Henryk Jablonski called for punishment of the killers "in keeping with the universal will."

Jablonski, who has held the ceremonial position of chairman of the Council of State since 1970, said the killing in October was an "unparalleled provocation that physically hit out at one man, and politically and morally struck the idea of agreement — that is, at all of us."

The decision to conduct a public trial of four security police officers is unprecedented for a Communist government, and the case is considered one of the most significant in 40 years of Communist rule in Poland.

Some Poles speculate that Communist Party hardliners ordered the killing of Popieluszko in the hope it would spark a violent reaction that would force Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski to adopt tougher measures against the political opposition and militant priests.

Pekala, in evidence from the pretrial investigation read in court Friday, said Piotrowski told him a deputy interior minister had approved the plot against Popieluszko, and there was a wider plan to kidnap and possibly kill other outspoken priests.

Pope says arms talks represent 'flash of hope'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II told a New Year's Day audience in St. Peter's Square that the forthcoming arms talks in Geneva represent a "flash of hope on the world's horizon."

The pontiff, speaking after a morning Mass marking World Peace Day, said the United States and the Soviet Union must "renounce egoistic and ideological interests" if the Geneva talks are to be successful.

He called for a "new philosophy" in international relations that would do away with "tensions, hate and subversions."

The "energies and resources, freed by disarmament," he said, could be devoted to the "great causes of our times — struggle against hunger, promotion of human rights, and welfare of the people."

Otherwise, the pope said, "all will be fragile and precarious."

He said that 1984 had been a year "of anxious questions" regarding nuclear disarmament and that the new year would be marked by the talks between the Soviets and the Americans starting next week in Geneva.

Only rarely has the pope mentioned specific negotiations between the two superpowers. He said the decision to resume the arms talks was a wise one, though the task will not be easy. He said they will involve "vast and intricate" problems.

At issue, he said, is the fact of increasing nuclear forces on this planet — and projected into outer space — and he pointed out that the products of modern nuclear armaments are ever more sophisticated. But he said the negotiations must not be guided by technical criteria alone and must take into consideration, "above all, human and moral reason."

These reasons, according to the pope, suggest that acoord can be found by the two sides at Geneva if they are convinced that "destruction and survival, in any nuclear confrontation, would be shared equally by both sides."

Hearty souls greet New Year by jumping into cold water

Associated Press

Hundreds of hearty souls greeted the New Year by hurling their warm flesh into frigid waters from coast to chilly coast in an annual rite popularized by the Polar Bear Club — where no one has cold feet when it comes to a January swim.

In Milwaukee, about 70 Polar Bears clad in bathing suits and other skimpy garb shivered and splashed in Lake Michigan on Tuesday as several hundred people in beach chairs watched. The air temperature was 27 degrees, and the water wasn't much warmer.

"We're thrill seekers, I guess, or just plain stupid," said Kevin Pionke, 20.

In Vancouver, British Columbia, an estimated 1,700 people raced down a snow-covered beach to plunge into the frigid waters of English Bay in the 64th annual Polar Bear Swim.

This year's swimmers were a little braver than in previous years: The air temperature was 32 degrees, which matched a record set on New Year's in 1929 and 1963. The water was 37 degrees.

The chilling affair was created by Greek immigrant Peter Pantages, who swam the bay daily for 40 years.He founded the Polar Bear Club in 1921 for hearty swimmers who thrived on cold water and began the New Year's Day dip to popularize the health benefits of winter ocean swimming.

Others made winter waves amid less fanfare.

In Williamsburg, Ky., 73-year-old Ray Gant said he was ending his 51-year streak of winter holiday swims in 40-degree water, but not for lack of zeal.

"There's no place to go," he said after his final holiday swim in a 5-acre fish pond. "The rivers are polluted. Pollution is going to get us all."

In Pittsburgh, about 40 people dived into the Monongahela River in what has become a New Year's Day ritual.

The unusually warm weather drove the mercury up to 57 degrees, but the water was a chilly 44 degrees.

"It's a good way to start a new year," said Karen Charles, a two-year Divers Club veteran of the annual Mon River dip. "The water was nice and not like last year when there was ice floating around."

In California, Susan Heim dived off a crowded fishing boat near Alcatraz and beat a mob of 50 swimmers through 49-degree water back to San Francisco in the annual New Year's Day race.

"Forty Niners win Super Bowl, that's my wish," Ms. Heim mumbled as she emerged from the chilly water. "If I'm slurring my words, because numb, not too much brandy." She also was last year's winner.

At Coney Island in New York City, eight members of the Iceberg Athletic Club charged into the Atlantic Ocean to welcome the New Year, said club president Vic Boff. Air and water temperatures were in the low 40s.

About 35 people jumped into the chilly waters of Owasco Lake near Auburn in the Finger Lakes region of New York.

Spain starts year with good-luck grapes

Associated Press

In Japan, tens of thousands of people lined up for a New Year's glimpse of the emperor. In Spain, people ate a dozen grapes for good luck in the 12 months of 1985. Many Italians threw out the old year by tossing rugs, shoes, chairs and books from their windows.

Hundreds of people were injured and dozens killed around the world in New Year's celebrations. Many people were hurt by fireworks, but some also were hit by stray champagne corks and others by bullets.

In Italy, the Interior Ministry reported that 596 people were injured and seven killed in holiday-related incidents, including a Sicilian hit by a bullet as he drank a champagne toast.

One boy lost an eye from fireworks in Turin, while in nothern Vicenza doctors said 21-year-old Marco Dalla Pria risked losing his left eye after being hit by a popping champagne cork.

In the northern village of Forte Dei Marmi, Primo Pucci, 58, suffered a fatal heart attack as he proposed a New Year's toast to his family in a restaurant.

In the Philippines, eight people were killed in shooting and stabbing incidents and 722 were injured, many of them by firecrackers.

In Singapore, police said an estimated 1,000 Thai and South Korean workers were involved in a New Year's Day brawl after a party at two adjoining construction sites. Seven workers were hospitalized with injuries.

In Tokyo, Japan's Emperor Hirohito, the world's longest-lived monarch, today greeted thousands of flag-waving subjects from the balcony of the Imperial Palace in a traditional appearance to mark the New Year.

Police estimated that 6,000 people poured over an iron bridge on the palace grounds in central Tokyo in the first group allowed to see the emperor, his wife Empress Nagako, their two sons and daughters-in-law.

The 83-year-old emperor, who rose to the throne Dec. 25, 1926, enters the 59th year of his reign this year.

In the Sudan, President Gaafar Nimeiri marked the 29th anniversary of independence Tuesday with a fresh appeal to Christian and animist rebels in southern Sudan to end their insurrection.

"We call on those who took arms to enter this dialogue with a sincere, patriotic spirit," said Nimeiri, speaking in the southern provincial capital Juba. He accused Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy of financing the rebellion.

In many countries, there were special efforts to keep revelers under control.

In one working-class suburb of Sydney, Australia, where past New Year's celebrations have gotten out of hand, the City Council organized a "creative violence event" by setting fire to 16 old cars in hopes of keeping residents out of trouble of their own making.

Police said the plan worked, and they reported that extra patrols and rainy weather in other cities resulted in fewer arrests than usual.

In London's Trafalgar Square, an estimated 50,000 revelers gathered under giant electronic message boards that reminded them "Behave Sensibly," "Jumping Can be Dangerous," and "Beware of Fireworks."

Trafalgar Square was divided by metal barriers and the fountains were boarded up — precautions introduced in 1983 when two women were trampled to death and 143 people injured when a pedestrian barrier fell and people surged to the exits.

This year, police reported 78 arrests and said 48 people were injured badly enough to require hospital treatment. Some had suffered eye injuries when revelers sprayed aerosol foam at the crowd.

Reagan, Nakasone to discuss trade

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, concluding his West Coast visit, is appealing to Japan to take urgent action to open its markets to U.S. goods in an effort to cut America's "staggering" trade deficit.

Winding up his vacation in this desert resort, the president was flying to Los Angeles today for a working luncheon with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone at the Century Plaza Hotel.

After the three-hour meeting, the president was returning to Washington.

Reagan, meanwhile, in a conference with his top foreign policy advisers, gave final instructions to Secretary of State George Shultz for his meeting next week in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

"The president finalized instructions on how Shultz should represent the United States' position..." at the arms control meeting, assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg said.

That was the only characterization from the White House of the hour and 45 minute meeting also attended by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and national security adviser Robert McFarlane. Earlier, a senior White House official had said that U.S. strategy for the Geneva meeting was all but set and the conference would focus on possible "Soviet gambits."

Shultz had been reported earlier to be carrying a plan to Reagan under which he would propose to Gromyko two sets of arms control talks, one on offensive weapons and the other on defensive weapons.

Looking ahead to Reagan's talk with Nakasone, a U.S. official said the meeting was occurring "at a time of mounting frustration over our continued inability to gain full access to Japan's market."

As a result, the U.S. trade deficit with Japan was expected to reach about $34 billion in 1984 out of a total U.S. trade deficit "that has now reached truly staggering proportions of $114 billion," the official said, speaking on condition that he not be identified..

Besides the trade problem, the leaders were expected to discuss the Shultz-Gromyko talks on Jan. 7-8, which Nakasone supports.

In advance of meeting with the Japanese leader, Reagan said he wouldn't get tough "with a very good friend" on the trade problem. But the U.S. official said the president will nevertheless tell Nakasone that "there's an urgent need for effective action."

"You don't go into a meeting with a friend like that, treating him as an enemy or an adversary, setting up the kind of confrontation in which, frankly, you may satisfy some people's emotional longings, but you don't make progress," said the official.

While Reagan "will be very candid about the problems," the official said, "there's a difference between being candid...and being threatening, or being abusive, or being confrontational, or making threats that, in fact, amount to shooting yourself in the foot."

The president was unlikely to ask Nakasone to try to reduce the $34 billion trade deficit by a specific amount, but rather planned to encourage the prime minister to increase U.S. imports in specific areas.

In particular, the official said, the administration wanted fewer barriers to U.S. products in the telecommunications, electronic equipment, medical supplies and forest products industries — all areas where the United States is competitive with Japanese products.

"We can in those sectors put some ballpark figures," the official said. "They could add up as much as $10 billion of additional exports that should be competitive in the Japanese market."

Nakasone has said he opposes setting specific targets for U.S. imports, calling it managed trade.

But the prime minister said Tuesday that he'll propose that Japanese officials get together with their U.S. counterparts for high-level talks on how to tackle the trade problem.

The American official stressed that the United States considers Japan "the linchpin of the U.S. political and strategic position in the Pacific region," and intends to adopt a cooperative attitude.

"I'm sure this is what the president will be saying...we face a common problem. We have common responsibilities to maintain a free and open trading system.

"If the United States and Japan don't set the lead, then we really aren't going to make it," he said.

"It's not a problem that's going to be solved overnight," the official said. "It's a problem that, by going after different areas of restraint, we expect over a period of time to get a substantially more open Japanese market."

He said the close ties between the two nations means Reagan may not be as tough with Nakasone as he could be, but also means that "Japan is going to make, and has made, extra efforts on the trade front that are motivated not simply by economic and trade considerations.

Two mayors prepare to run affairs of Mexican city

MONCLOVA, Mexico (AP) — Two men, each claiming to be mayor, prepared to begin running this northern city, one of several in the northern state of Coahuila where the opposition refuses to accept mayoral victories awarded to the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

The atmosphere was tense in the cities, including Piedras Negras, 155 miles to the north and across the border from Eagle Pass, Texas, where the new mayor Carlos Juaristi Septien of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as PRI, was to begin work Wednesday.

No incidents were reported in any of the cities on Tuesday.

Violence erupted as Juaristi Septien was sworn in late Saturday. At least one person was killed and nearly 80 others injured, the city hall and jail complex and vehicles burned and windows broken in the protests against alleged fraud in the Dec. 2 mayoral election.

The opposition National Action Party, continuing to challenge the election results, said Tuesday four of its members in Piedras Negras have been missing since the disturbances. Eleazar Cobos, the party's mayoral candidate in the border city, said he has asked for a full investigation.

The two Monclova mayors were sworn in separately Monday, one by the outgoing mayor who is from the National Action Party, and the other, declared the official winner, by a state government representative.

About 200 opposition supporters continued to occupy city hall Tuesday to keep from turning it over to the PRI, state judicial police commander Arnulfo Villarreal said.

STORM

Officials in Michigan said it would take until Friday to restore power to the 319,000 homes and businesses affected by downed power lines at the peak of Tuesday's storm. About 200,000 customers — most of them in Kalamazoo, Battle Creek and Jackson — were without power early today and another 58,000 in suburban Detroit.

"The particular nature of this storm makes it difficult to restore power because it's so widespread," said Dan Bishop, a spokesman for Consumers Power Co., which had 200,0000 customers without power early today.

The storm headed east out of Illinois early Tuesday after dumping 19 inches of snow on Antioch, near the Illinois-Wisconsin border; 14.5 inches at nearby Lake Villa; 12 inches at Barrington; 10 inches at Rockford; 8 inches at Moline; and 7.5 inches at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

Despite hazardous road conditions in much of the state, no weather-related traffic fatalities were reported."It's too slow out there to cause damage. Even the drunk drivers can't cause much damage," said state police Sgt. James Bentley at Oak Brook, Ill.

Lines were long at O'Hare, the world's busiest airport, where operations were suspended for about 30 minutes Monday night. Scores of flights were canceled earlier Tuesday and others were delayed up to an hour.

Winds gusting to 40 mph drifted snow up to 4 feet deep in southeastern Wisconsin and northeastern Illinois on Tuesday.

Five people died Tuesday in Wisconsin, four of them shoveling snow and another who was clearing snow away from his car.

SNOW

No traffic injuries had been reported this morning, but there were many minor accidents.

"We've had eight to 10 just since 8 a.m.," said a police spokesperson at 8:30. "Big Spring and the Loop, Garfield and the Loop, downtown — it's all over."

The only possible road closing in Midland was Big Spring Street at the State Highway 80 underpass, she said.

"Cars were going down Big Spring and couldn't get up" the underpass, she said, and officers were on the scene redirecting traffic.

Skies should be clear by this afternoon, and tonight will be fair and cold, with a low in the upper teens, Oettinger said. Thursday will again be fair, with a high in the low 40s.

Tuesday's high of 40 was 33 degrees below the record for the date of 73, set in 1965, while the overnight low of 20 was 20 degrees above the 1979 record of zero degrees.

TV

Jerry's ignorance of Wendy's restaurant's "Where's the Beef?" commercial should serve as proof that the children stuck to the bargain, Penning said.

"Everybody in school was saying 'Where's the beef? Where's the beef?' And I didn't know what they were talking about," Jerry said.

The suburban Mount Lebanon family decided on the wager after Penning felt his children were watching too much television.

"It wasn't uncommon for them to get up in the morning watching it and when I'd get home from work they'd be watching it. And suddenly your life begins to revolve around this box," he said.

Wendy said she used the three to four hours she usually spent watching television doing her homework, playing with her friends and reading books.

"I read some books — like the 'The Wind in the Willows' and 'Charlotte's Web.' I had them for a while, but I never had time to read them because I was watching TV," she said.

"And my grades were better. It's the best report card I ever had," she added. "Last year, I got one 'difficulty' and no 'commendables.' This year I got several 'commendables' and only one 'difficulty.'"

Jerry and Wendy are now on their own to watch what they like in 1985.

CLARK

In 1967, Clark was picked by Reagan to be the executive secretary of his guberatorial office in California. An attorney, Clark was named by Reagan to the California Supreme Court in 1973. He remained on the bench until 1981 when he came to Washington as deputy secretary of state. In 1982, he became national security adviser and played a role in the resignation of Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who was later replaced by George Shultz.

Clark is the second Cabinet member to announce his resignation since Reagan's landslide re-election victory last November. Education Secretary T.H. Bell stepped down last month to return to teaching.

Osorio and McGraw said there were 25 passengers and eight crew, but added the figures were based on the scheduled passenger list and could have changed.

Glenn Parsons, director of public relations for Eastern, said the seven Americans known to be on board included the captain, first officer and flight engineer, all based in Miami, and four passengers, including an off-duty Eastern pilot based in Houston.

McGraw said all the flight attendants were based in Santiago, Chile, but he was not certain of their nationalities.

Six of 10 Americans favor prayer amendment

By LAWRENCE KILMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Six of 10 Americans in a Media General-Associated Press poll said they would favor a constitutional amendment to permit organized prayer in public schools, but less than half said they went to church often.

The nationwide telephone survey of 1,476 Americans also said nearly seven of 10 Americans had no doubts about the existence of God. In addition, half of those surveyed said they would oppose a constitutional amendment to further restrict legal abortions.

The respondents were asked, "Do you support or oppose a constitutional amendment to allow organized prayer in public schools?" and 61 percent said they would support it, 31 percent said they would oppose it and 8 percent had no opinion.

Asked the same question about a constitutional amendment to further restrict legal abortions, 50 percent said they would oppose it, 35 percent said they would support it and 15 percent had no opinion.

When asked how often they attended the church of their choice, 46 percent said often, 22 percent said sometimes, 26 percent said hardly ever and 5 percent said they had no church of choice. One percent didn't answer.

The U.S. Supreme Court has been asked to decide whether state laws allowing public schools to set aside daily moments of silence for students may mention "prayer" as one possible activity during the silence.

At least 23 states have moment of silence laws, but not all of them mention prayer. Numerous political candidates last year, including President Reagan, called for a return of organized prayer in public schools. The court, which will announce its decision by July, was sharply divided in arguments last month.

The respondents in the Media General-AP poll also were asked which of several statements came closest to their beliefs about God. Sixty-nine percent chose "I know God really exists and I have no doubts about it." Only 3 percent chose "I don't know whether there is a God, and I don't believe there is any way to find out."

Twelve percent chose "While I have my doubts, I feel that I do believe in God"; 8 percent chose "I don't believe in a personal God, but I do believe in a higher power of some kind"; and 5 percent chose, "I find myself believing in God some of the time, but not at other times." Three percent didn't answer or had no opinion.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,476 adults across the country Nov. 12-19. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several additional reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

'Subway vigilante' may fight his extradition

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The man who confessed to shooting four teenagers in a New York City subway has been named in an arrest warrant charging him with attempted murder, but he says he'll fight his return to New York, authorities said.

Bernhard Hugo Goetz, 38, dubbed the "subway vigilante," was to be arraigned today in Concord District Court on charges of being a fugitive from justice. He is being held on $500,000 bail in Merrimack County Jail.

An arrest warrant issued Tuesday in New York City charges him with four counts of attempted murder and one of criminal possession of a dangerous weapon, said New York police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

But Goetz' return to the New York could be delayed "weeks or months" if he fights extradition, said New Hampshire Assistant Attorney General Brian Tucker.

Correction Officer Thomas Barton described Goetz as near tears during processing Tuesday at the Merrimack County Jail, according to the New York Daily News.

"He said, 'I'm sorry for what happened, but it had to be done,'" the News quoted Barton as saying.

Dairy aids search for kids

CHICAGO (AP) — The faces of two children missing for nearly three years will appear on millions of milk cartons this week as a dairy helps police in the search for some of the thousands of children who disappear each year.

Tricia Kellet was 9 when she was last seen playing near her Northwest Side home in May 1982. Gary Antonio Feltman was 2½ when he disappeared in August 1982, shortly after a judge awarded custody of him to his father.

"Their faces will be there at the breakfast table," Joe Mayo, commander of the police department's youth division, said Tuesday. "People will have to think about it. Their children will ask them questions. If it helps us find one child, it will be worth it."

The pictures, to be shown on Hawthorn Melody Farm Dairy milk cartons beginning Thursday, will appear for several weeks before being replaced by other missing children, Mayo said.

Procedure to be tested

WOODBINE, Ga. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. will test the procedure for unloading barrels of methyl isocyanate, the chemical that killed more than 2,000 people in India last month, before it is processed into pesticide, officials say.

Company spokesman Jim Bertrand says it probably will be the end of the week before the tests are finished and the 15 tons of MIC can be transferred to a chamber for processing into Temik, one of the Woodbine plant's main products.

The MIC was transported to Woodbine from Norfolk, Va., over the weekend after Brazil rejected it because of the India accident.

Seat belt law in effect

WHITEHALL, N.Y. (AP) — It's buckle up or else in New York, and at least three people felt the pinch for not wearing seat belts as the nation's first law requiring them went into effect.

A Vermont woman who came to New York to celebrate the New Year received the first citation at 12:10 a.m. Tuesday.

Taxing changes

With the year George Orwell rendered ominous now committed to the history books, we should all be able to look forward to a few positive changes, right?

Believe it or not, as unusual fact king R.L. Ripley might say, the year already is off to a better start. Tax-wise, anyway.

That's right because federal tax bills for most Americans decreased somewhat starting Tuesday as the result of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. The provisions of that act — better known as tax indexing — mean individual tax brackets, exemptions and the standard deduction now are adjusted to the Consumer Price Index.

The size of the adjustment was determined Oct. 24, based on a 4.08 percent average rise in consumer prices for the 12 months through September. As a result, the ceiling on this year's zero bracket — the amount of earned income on which no tax is owed — has been increased from $3,400 to $3,540 while the personal and dependent exemption went up from $1,000 to $1,040. Another change increased the standard deduction from $2,300 to $2,390 for single persons and from $3,400 to $3,540 for married couples filing joint returns.

Then there's the bad news. When Americans rip open their first pay envelopes this year they probably won't see much of the increase reflected on their checks. That's because the effect of indexing will be largely offset in many cases by the Social Security tax increases that took effect Tuesday.

The payroll tax on employees that took 6.7 percent of workers' paychecks last year, on the first $37,800 earned, increased this year to 7.05 percent on the first $39,600. The maximum Social Security tax climbed by $259.20, from $2,532.60 to $2,791.80.

Taxpayers who underpay their federal taxes will find an unpleasant surprise this year, too. The Internal Revenue Service now will impose a 13 percent interest rate on the balance of taxes owed.

Despite all the gloom and doom inherent in talk of taxes, taxpayer organizations are pleased with the changes taking place this year, particularly indexing which will protect most taxpayers from costly "bracket creep" or getting "bumped" into higher tax brackets because of inflation.

David Keating, executive vice president of the National Taxpayers Union, said earlier this week, "We think that Jan. 1 is a landmark date for taxpayers. When indexing passed in 1981, most opponents thought it would never see the light of day. And here it is."

Afghans fight on

Did the Soviets, given to planning, have a five-year plan for the conquest of Afghanistan when they invaded in December 1979?

If they did, they have not fulfilled it. Neither by their own brutal efforts nor by the service of their few Afghan recruits have they managed to put down a brave resistance.

Simple people, fighting with hand-me-down weapons, have borne tremendous costs and kept a modern, well armed state from imposing an alien political will.

The fight for freedom in Afghanistan is an awesome spectacle and deserves generous tribute.

Does it also deserve greater American support, beyond the reported several hundred million dollars now being provided? Many in the Afghan resistance think so, and a broad collection of American liberals and conservatives, admiring both the mujaheddins' courage and their anti-communism, appears to agree.

In Congress in October, a unanimous resolution was passed urging "material aid, as the United States considers appropriate, to help (the Afghan people) fight effectively for their freedom."

Some of its sponsors state that the amounts and kinds of help reaching the guerrillas mock the agreed significance of their cause.

It seems strange to find an administration led by President Reagan having to fend off a charge of letting down the Afghans. The irony, however, does credit to the administration's sense.

No doubt the flow of "material aid," including not only humanitarian assistance but also arms, could be improved; inefficiency, corruption and leakage are said to plague the long and necessarily devious pipeline. The administration understands, however, as some of its critics do not, the grounds for residual discretion and restraint.

Specifically, the interests of Pakistan, the key guerrilla sanctuary and a country vulnerable to Soviet reprisal, are critical.

Its support of the Afghan resistance has brought it an immense refugee burden (3 million people) and 63 aerial incursions from Afghanistan this year alone. Its judgment of the risks must be respected on matters of aid to the Afghans.

The United Nations, by repeated top-heavy votes, offers the Soviet Union a negotiated withdrawal protecting the internationally accepted Soviet interest in Afghanistan's neutrality and nonalignment.

But the Soviets continue to press a policy seemingly aimed at eventual absorption of Afghanistan as a constituent "republic." This policy is rejected even by many of the Third World countries that otherwise seldom question the Moscow line.

The Kremlin remains isolated on the issue. Its only practical prospect of breaking out is to go the United Nations way.

EDWIN FEULNER

Bleiberg bullish on U.S. for cause

Bob Bleiberg, editor and publisher of Barron's financial weekly, is bullish on America.

Edwin Feulner

And though not everyone stops to listen when he speaks — as they allegedly do "when E.F. Hutton speaks" — the smart money in town should be on Bleiberg.

What has Bleiberg been telling his quarter-million subscribers?

In the spring of 1982, when most economists agreed that the recession was coming to an end (Business Week, for example, headlined its May 10, 1982, cover story, "Here Comes the Recovery"), Bleiberg was warning that business had nowhere to go "but down" — which is what it did, right through the end of November 1982.

On Nov. 22, Bleiberg again went against convention and in a front-page editorial said the economy was headed "onward and upward." Six months later, on June 27, 1983, when many observers were still voicing doubts about the durability and strength of the recovery, Bleiberg again climbed out on a limb with a follow-up commentary headlined "Let the Good Times Roll — Business Recovery Promises to Better Most of the Forecasts." And again he called it right.

I bring up these brief slices of history not just because Bleiberg has a remarkable track record spanning several decades, but because he is out on a limb again, predicting that everything is in place for a period of sustained economic growth that will likely cause economic historians to someday refer to our times as the "Amazing Eighties."

Speaking recently at a national leadership conference sponsored by the prestigious Shavano Institute, Bleiberg offered a number of reasons for his optimism.

1) Contrary to popular opinion, the economic recovery has not been limited to the United States, but has been worldwide. "Indeed, since Jan. 1, 1984, a dozen major stock markets — including Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Frankfurt, London, Oslo, Paris, Singapore, Stockholm, Sydney, Taipei, Tokyo and Zurich — have hit all-time highs," he noted.

2) Despite "the grim predictions of Henry Kaufman" and other doomsayers, interest rates are heading downward.

3) From the standpoint of population trends, the '80s "shape up as potentially one of the greatest decades since the Baby Boom peaked in the late '50s," he said. In 1982, for example, 2.5 million Americans got married, the greatest number of marriages in U.S. history. On the other side of the coin, the number of divorces dropped 3 percent in 1982, to roughly 1.2 million — the first decline in 20 years. Naturally enough, he noted, "something resembling a modest baby boom is under way." And in an affluent society, "there's no more powerful an economic and social force than family formation and population growth."

4) Despite all the scare talk, Americans are growing healthier and living longer. Since 1900, the life span of the average American has increased from 46 years to 74.5, in striking contast to the Soviet Union, where the life span has been dropping.

5) The explosion of technology and the prospect of stable-to-lower energy prices will lead to dramatic increases in productivity.

6) Finally, changes in tax policy have led to an explosion in venture capital and a record number of new business starts and first-time public stock offerings by small firms "at the cutting edge of U.S. capitalism." In 1978, before the changes were made in the capital gains tax, 45 companies went public, raising $250 million in the process. The year after the change, the number nearly doubled, with 81 new public offerings raising $506 million. In 1980, 237 companies were public, raising $1.4 billion. In 1981, 448 companies went public, raising $3.2 billion. And in 1983, 889 companies made initial public offerings, raising $12.6 billion in new equity capital.

As Bleiberg noted, these are "the highest-powered dollars around," because small businesses generate most of the breakthroughs in U.S. technology and create far and away the bulk of the new job opportunities.

Yes, Bob Bleiberg is bullish on America — and with good cause.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Charge part of 'peace' effort

Public service in this country offers few rewards. Those who take up major appointments in the federal government generally find their tours of duty very expensive. Government salaries don't cover the tremendous expense of living in the nation's capital.

Anthony Harrigan

One of the worst drawbacks to public service is the torrent of abuse and denigration to which officeholders are subjected. I was reminded of that recently when I read that Senator-elect Albert Gore Jr. called Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger the "worst Cabinet member in modern history." Mr. Gore, who had just returned from a visit to the Soviet Union, was angry with Secretary Weinberger for not proposing even deeper cuts in defense spending. Only days before, Mr. Weinberger had agreed to $8.7 billion in cuts, hardly a miniscule amount.

While a certain amount of partisanship is inevitable in political life, there should be some respect for the truth. Mr. Gore totally ignored the truth.

What has been Mr. Weinberger's record? It is a record of extraordinary accomplishment. When he took over his duties at the Pentagon, the U.S. defenses were at low ebb. Under Pesident Jimmy Carter, American's armed forces experienced a terrible deterioration. Mr. Carter canceled essential weapons systems, including the B-1 bomber and the neutron bomb. He also slashed naval construction. The U.S. Navy had declined in size until it was smaller than the Navy was in 1936. As a result the United States was approaching a position of extreme vulnerability.

All that has been repaired under Mr. Weinberger's direction of the Defense Dept. The services have been strengthened. New weapons programs are in place. Morale has increased enormously. The nuclear deterrrent has been strengthened by the placement of cruise missiles in Europe. This means that the American people enjoy a degree of safety that they have not enjoyed in years.

One wonders whether Sen-elect Gore would dare compare Mr. Weinberger's record of success with the record of former Secretary of Defense Robert Strange McNamara in President Johnson's administration. Mr. McNamara's testimony in the Westmoreland libel case revealed that Mr. McNamara decided in late 1965, while he was Secretary of Defense, that the Vietnam War could not be won militarily. This confirms what Sen. Strom Thurmond said at the time, namely that Mr. McNamara was fighting a "no-win war."

That historical case is something Mr. Gore might consider. The Gore charge against Mr. Weinberger has to be seen as an opening shot in the latest battle by liberals in Congress to prevent the rearmament of the United States. They want to abort the restoration of America's defenses. They want to slash funds needed in the next few years to give the American people a full measure of protection against the Soviet Union.

A new "peace" campaign is in the works. The aim of this campaign is stop America's rearmament. The unfair charge against Secretary Weinberger has to be seen in this light. Shame on Mr. Gore!

Canadian politics dramatic

New York Times News Service

OTTAWA — Imagine President Reagan and his Cabinet going to Congress every day to defend the administration's record for 45 minutes before an array of hostile Democrats.

Such a political drama is played daily when the Canadian House of Commons is in session, in a tradition blending British ritual with North American bare-knuckle politics.

The House of Commons offers an incongruous setting for the charges traded between Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, and the opposition Liberal and New Democratic Parties.

In the days before Parliament recessed for Christmas, the adversarial relationship grew unseasonably nasty over a concept that the Canadians call "universality" — the extension of social welfare benefits to everyone regardless of income.

The Liberal Party, which was turned out of power in national elections in September, has vied with the smaller New Democratic Party to accuse Mulroney's government of plotting to cut benefits for Canadians over a certain income level, despite Mulroney's insistence in the House that "we are fully committed to the concept of universality."

In a question period, Mulroney has been sarcastically compared to Johnny Carson, Pinocchio and a character from the madcap British radio comedy "The Goon Show."

In response, he has accused his critics in the House of maliciousness and meanness of spirit.

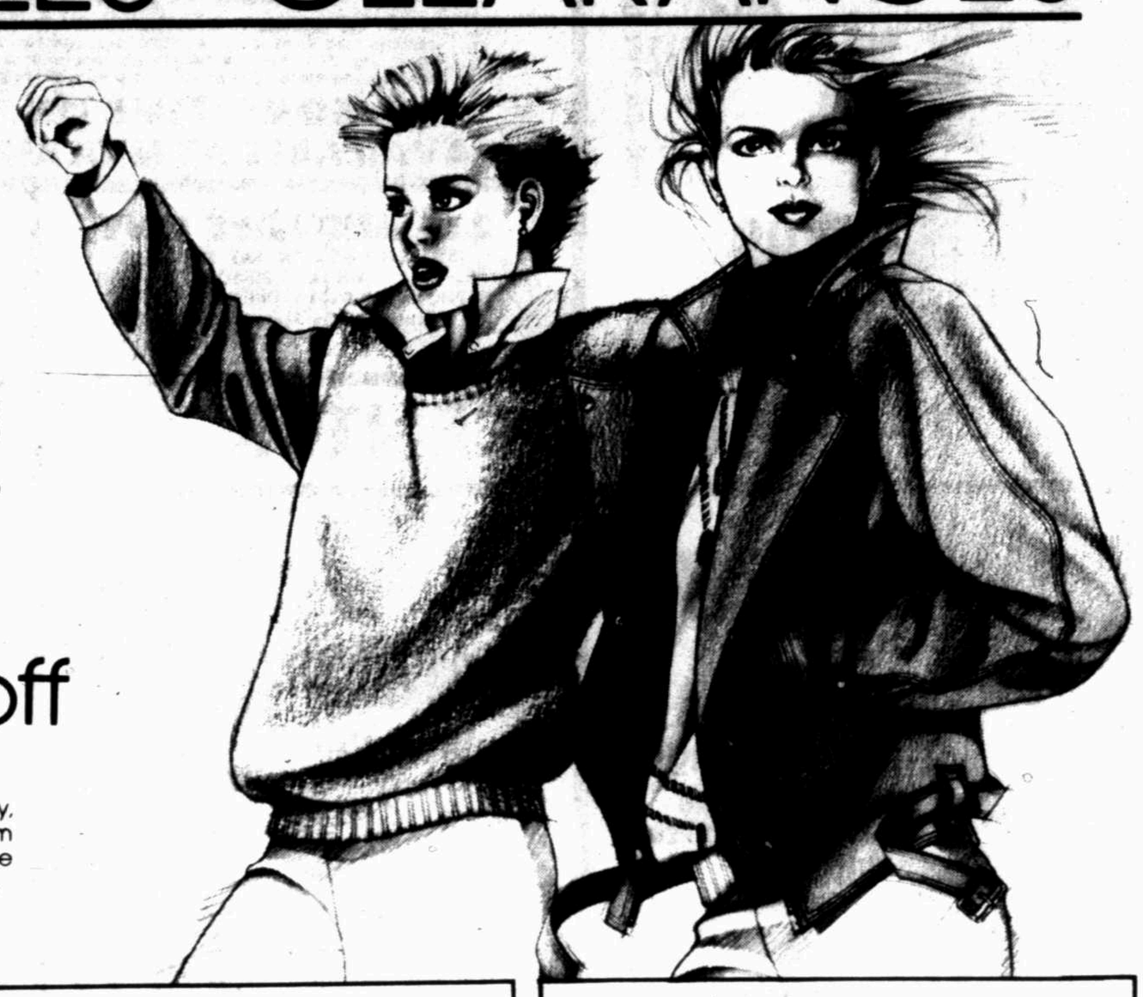

Tower of Pisa's registers low tilt

PISA, Italy (AP) — The Leaning Tower of Pisa in 1984 registered its lowest tilt in recent years, the head of the group maintaining the landmark says.

Professor Giuseppe Toniolo, in a report issued Tuesday, said experts' measurements showed the 180-foot-high marble tower increased its lean by only 0.02 inches, down from a movement of almost 0.05 inches in 1983.

"It's a very comforting development," Toniolo said, adding that the tower has been leaning by at least 0.04 inches anually in recent years.

Boston College wins first bowl in 44 years

DALLAS (AP) — It wasn't a highlight film Cotton Bowl Classic for Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie, but the results couldn't have been more satisfying.

Flutie, the Boston College All-American quarterback who holds two NCAA passing records, accomplished his final collegiate goal of winning a bowl game.

However, the 45-28 victory over the Houston Cougars — BC's first bowl triumph in 44 years — didn't come without its difficult moments on New Year's Day.

And Flutie didn't even win Most Valuable Offensive Player; that honor went to Eagle fullback Steve Strachan.

Flutie rifled three first-half touchdown passes as the Eagles built a 31-7 advantage and saw most of it melt away in the numbing 32-degree cold under a furious Cougar rally.

The Eagles had to resort to an unheralded running game to hold off the Cougars as Flutie was intercepted twice, once for Audrey McMillian's 25-yard touchown return.

"It was not one of my better days by far," Flutie admitted.

"But this being the last game of my career and fulfilling a goal will make it very special to me and stick with me the rest of my life," he added.

THE EAGLE ground game was the story in the second half as the Cougars pulled to within 31-28. Flutie was just 2 of 13 for 13 yards in the second half. He finished with 13 of 27 for 180 yards.

Strachan rushed for a season-high 91 yards on 23 carries and scored on a four-yard run and Tony Stradford dashed a career-high 196 yards on 20 carries and scored on an 18-yard run.

Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell said the game proved the Eagles were a good overall team.

"I think Doug is happy with what he did today, but it was a team game," Bicknell said. "We tell Doug: 'You are allowed to be less than super sometimes'."

Bicknell said, "Everything with us has always been offense, offense, offense and Flutie, Flutie, Flutie, but the defense showed it could play well, too. There are many games that are not a Flutie show.

"We have a lot of good players on our team."

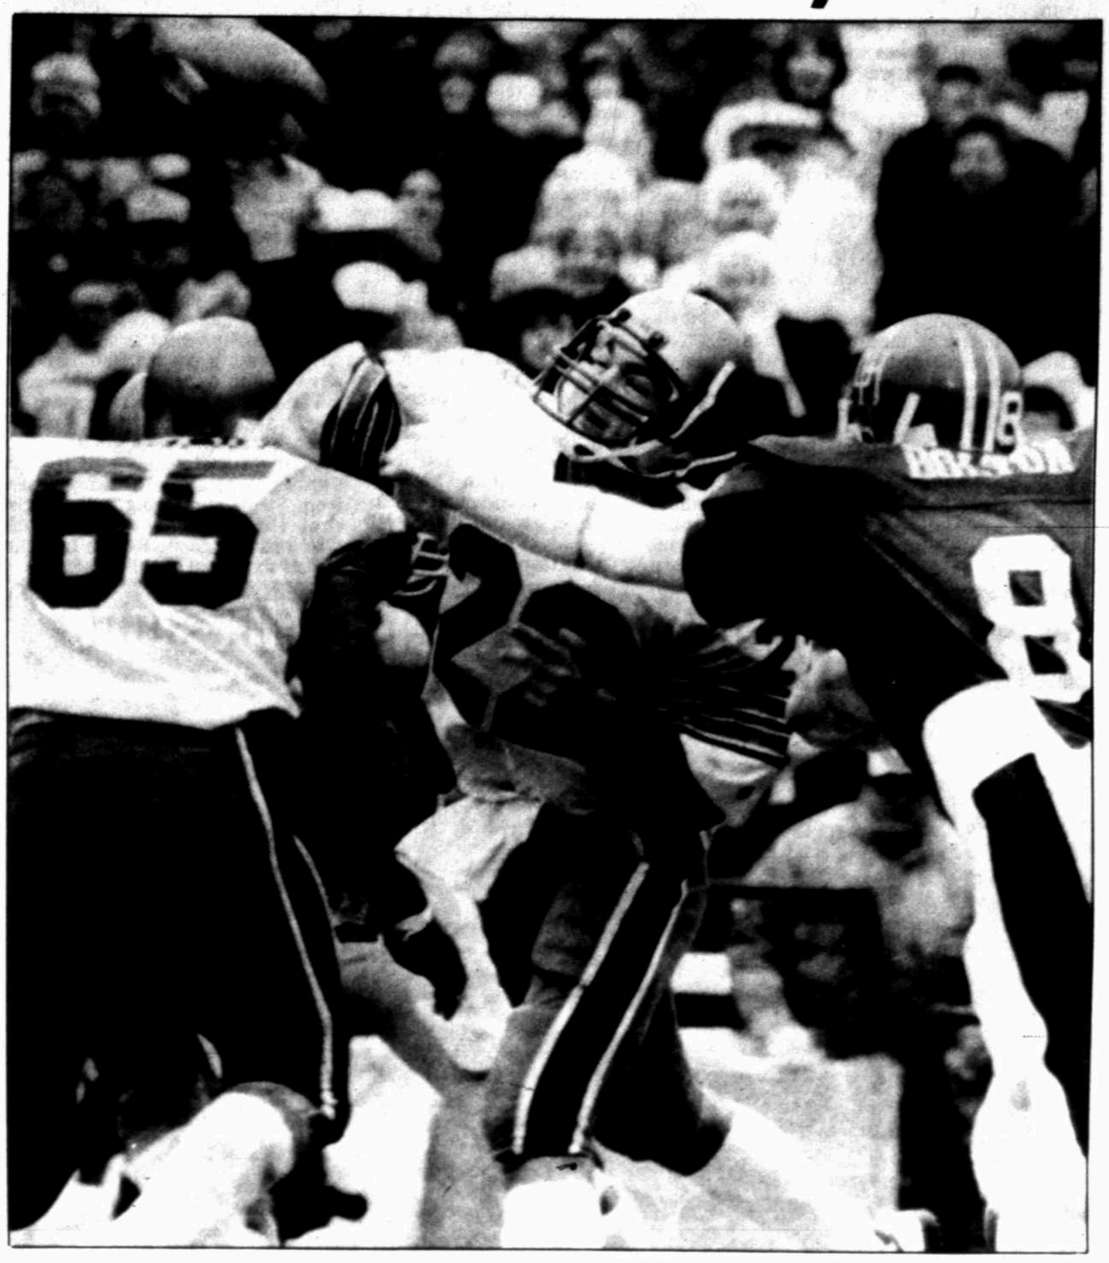

Flutie had some problems with a 17 mph wind and so did his receivers, who dropped four passes.

"I was able to grip the ball but it was hard to judge the wind," Flutie said.

Flutie said his fabulous career would have been a little empty without a bowl victory.

"The win fulfills a goal that we set and I myself set coming into the year," he said.

Cougars give Bicknell scare

DALLAS (AP) — His star quarterback was struggling and his 24-point lead had shrunk to three. Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell was concerned.

"I thought we were in control of it, then we weren't," he said.

Despite Doug Flutie's off day, the Eagles rallied in the last 10 minutes to lock up their first bowl victory in 44 years and their first New Year's Day bowl in 42 years.

"I'm feeling very relieved because you just don't want to blow it. You don't get too many chances like that," Bicknell said after Tuesday's 45-28 Cotton Bowl victory over Houston.

"It means a lot to me because it's another goal," said Flutie, the Heisman Trophy winner. "It's something I've been dreaming about."

His subpar performance was a dream come true for Houston, but the Eagles' 353-yard rushing attack was a nightmare.

"They have an excellent team," said Cougars' Coach Bill Yeoman. "I think it was evident today that they have more than just a quarterback, which I had had an annoying suspicion of for some time."

Troy Stradford rushed for 196 yards and Steve Strachan, the most valuable offensive player of the game, picked up 91. Both were career highs, and each player scored twice.

The offensive line opened holes and kept the Cougars from sacking Flutie, and the defense held Houston's unfamiliar veer offense to 321 yards, its fourth lowest yield of the season.

"A lot of people say Doug Flutie's the football team," said offensive guard Mark Bardwell. "But he's surrounded by so many great people."

Houston's quarterback, sophomore Gerald Landry, also struggled. He completed nine of 29 passes.

"Our little quarterback might have been a little tight," Yeoman said. "It was something he had to live through and I have great, great confidence in him."

"We didn't get the inside game established," said Landry. "You have to establish the inside before you establish the outside."

Oklahoma quarterback Donny Bradley (1) is flipped upside down on a play that took him to Washington's one-yard line in Tuesday's Orange Bowl Classic. Moving in for the Huskies is Doug Parry (59).

Now it's Huskies talking No. 1

MIAMI (AP) — The Washington Huskies, who have been silent partners for the most part in the war of words over who's No. 1, became a late entry Tuesday night and wasted no time voicing their claim to the national championship.

"We're No. 1. We have my vote," Coach Don James said after the fourth-ranked Huskies scored touchdowns 54 seconds apart in the final six minutes and upset No. 2 Oklahoma 28-17 in the Orange Bowl.

"I think anybody who beats a team as strong as Oklahoma deserves to be No. 1. Our kids did a tremendous job tonight."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, the foremost critic of 13-0 Brigham Young and its Western Athletic Conference schedule, had said earlier that he considered fifth-ranked Nebraska, a 28-10 Sugar Bowl winner over LSU, the best team in the country.

But he changed his tune Tuesday night, saying: "Washington is the best team we played and they deserve to be No. 1. They're a better football team than Brigham Young, I guarantee you."

Hugh Millen, who lost his starting job after eight games of the regular season, lofted a 12-yard touchdown pass to Mark Pattison with 5:42 remaining to put Washington ahead 21-17 and the Huskies scored again on Rick Fenney's 6-yard run less than a minute later.

The late rally wiped out a 17-14 Oklahoma lead on Tim Lashar's 35-yard field goal with 8:45 left after an earlier 22-yard effort was nullified by a pair of penalties, including a bizarre 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct call against the Sooners' covered wagon mascot for racing onto the field.

The Associated Press will announce the national champion at 6:30 p.m., EST, Wednesday. Washington's triumph may have settled the month-long controversy in favor of No. 1-ranked Brigham Young or could have switched the undecided votes to third-ranked Florida or Washington.

Brigham Young Coach LaVell Edwards, in Palo Alto, Calif., where he will coach in Saturday's East-West Shrine Game, told The AP he rooted for Washington and said the Huskies "played super all night long.

"The point I tried to make all along," added Edwards, whose Cougars were the only unbeaten major college team, "is that we were No. 1 going into the (Holiday) bowl game and we won that bowl game (over Michigan 24-17), so we should remain No. 1. That's why I didn't put that much stock in this game (the Orange Bowl)."

The victory enabled Washington to finish with an 11-1 record, the first time in the school's 96-year football history it has won that many games. Oklahoma, which had verbally campaigned long and hard in an attempt to overtake BYU, finished with a 9-2-1 record.

The Sooners trailed 14-0 just 10:36 into the game but had their own comeback erased by Washington's final one.

Millen, a 6-foot-4½ junior who was benched in favor of Paul Sicuro after throwing three interceptions and losing two fumbles in the first half against Arizona, replaced Sicuro on Washington's first possession of the fourth period.

PASSING—Washington, Sicuro 7-17-3-78, Millen 2-4-0-41. Oklahoma, Bradley 8-21-1-124.

RECEIVING—Washington, Greene 4-97, Fenney 2-14, Robinson 2-(minus 4), Pattison 1-12. Oklahoma, Sheppard 3-87, Sewell 2-34, P.Collins 1-3.

That series ended with a pass to an ineligible receiver, but Millen drove the Huskies 74 yards in seven plays after Lashar's field goal put Oklahoma in front.

The key plays were a 30-yard pass from Millen to Danny Greene on third-and-9 from the Washington 27 and a 27-yard burst by Fenney to the Oklahoma 17. Three plays later, Millen lofted a pass that Pattison grabbed near the left sideline of the end zone between cornerback Brian Hall and strong safety Sonny Brown.

There was plenty of time for Oklahoma to rally again, but Buster Rhymes, a senior playing in his home town of Miami, bobbled the ensuing kickoff out of bounds at the 2-yard line. Danny Bradley's first-down pass was tipped by defensive tackle Ron Holmes and intercepted by linebacker Joe Kelly to set up Fenney's clinching touchdown two plays later.

An interception at the Oklahoma 7 by Brown killed a Washington threat early in the third quarter and the deadlock remained intact until Lashar's fourth-period field goal.

Several minutes earlier, he drilled an apparent tie-breaking 22-yarder, but Oklahoma was penalized for illegal procedure.

When referee Jimmy Harper raised his arms in a preliminary signal that the field goal was good, Oklahoma's pony-drawn "Sooner Schooner," a miniature covered wagon, raced onto the field. That cost the Sooners 15 more yards for unsportsmanlike conduct and a subsequent 42-yard field goal try by Lashar was blocked by Tim Peoples.

"Dan McNamara (executive director of the Orange Bowl) approved us taking the Schooner on the field after touchdowns or field goals and the referee signaled field goal," said Doug Madden, president of the student group that sponsors the wagon. "That's the first time we've ever been penalized. We can't turn it around very easily. Once it got on the field, that was as fast as we could turn it around."

MISSED FIELD GOALS—Louisiana St., Lewis 19, 24.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Craig Sundberg wasn't even certain he'd be able to play in Tuesday night's 51st Sugar Bowl football game, but play he did.

Sundberg passed for three touchdowns and scored another to lead fifth-ranked Nebraska to a 28-10 victory over No. 11 Louisiana State.

"I felt weak and tired," Sundberg said of a bout with intestinal influenza that had him vomitting just four hours before gametime.

"We were lucky to be in the game the first half," Sundberg said after LSU built a 10-point lead despite having one touchdown called back and missing a chip-shot field goal.

"We were fortunate we weren't 17 down," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "I think we wore 'em down."

Missed opportunities hurt LSU, but Nebraska took advantage of its scoring chances.

"When we got close, we scored," Sundberg said. "The first half they looked like the team that tied Florida and beat Southern Cal."

LSU Coach Bill Arnsparger said, "We just have to have more points. One touchdown and field goal is not enough to beat a good football team."

The Cornhuskers, 10-2, saw its top-ranked defense battered around by the quicker Bengals in the first half before setting up two of three second-half touchdowns with pass interceptions and also staging a pair of key goal line stands.

Sophomore Doug DuBose scored Nebraska's first touchdown when he scampered 31 yards with a screen pass from Sundberg in the second quarter after LSU had taken a 10-0 lead.

Then, in the second half, Sundberg gave the Big Eight Conference co-champions the lead for good when he scrambled nine yards for a touchdown 6:46 into the third quarter.

Sundberg, who completed 10 of 15 passes for 143 yards, put the game on ice with a pair of fourth-quarter scoring shots to Todd Frain that covered 24 and 17 yards. Sundberg was voted the game's Most Valuable Player.

LSU built its 10-0 lead on a 37-yard field goal by Ronnie Lewis and a 2-yard run by Dalton Hilliard that capped a 73-yard drive in the second quarter.

The Tigers, 8-3-1, reached the Nebraska 1 on second down in the second quarter but failed to score, with Lewis missing a 19-yard field goal try, and went to the 2 on a second down in the third quarter when Lewis was wide left from 24 yards.

Chad Daffer, who had two interceptions, set up one Nebraska score with an 8-yard return to the LSU 33 in the third quarter and Scott Strausburger's interception at the LSU 34 set up another Cornhusker score.

LSU used the speed of its receivers to pile up 291 yards in the first half against a powerful Nebraska defense that had yielded only 203.3 yards per game during the regular season.

The Tigers finished the game with 404 yards of offense — most against the Huskers this season. Oklahoma State was the only other team to net more than 300 yards against Nebraska, gaining 324.

Caps whip Bruins, 5-1

NHL Roundup

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The confidence level of the Washington Capitals may be catching up with that of Bob Carpenter, the team's leading scorer.

Carpenter feels he got the jump on most players in the National Hockey League after playing during the offseason in the Canada Cup competition.

"After being out on the ice for 1½ or two months, I was in top shape," Carpenter said. "I was able to take advantage of those not in the best of shape.

"It really paid off," Carpenter reflected Tuesday after scoring two goals as the surging Washington Capitals whipped the Boston Bruins 5-1 Tuesday. "It got my confidence level up."

In the only other NHL game on New Year's Day, it was Calgary downed Winnipeg 5-3.

After 39 games, one shy of the NHL's halfway mark, Carpenter already has 30 goals and is within two of his career high.

"I'm really happy with what I've done so far," Carpenter said, "but I want to put that one-half season behind me, and go out and do it again."

Carpenter has eight goals and 10 assists while scoring in nine of his last 10 games, and for the season he has been held without a point in only five games.

The Caps, meantime, have lost only once in their last 13 outings and have gone 16-2-2 over the last 20. They have allowed just 10 goals while winning their last six straight at home.

The streak has carried them to the top of the Patrick Division, four points ahead of the Philadelphia Flyers, who have three games in hand.

Coach Bryan Murray, asked to assess the reason for the lengthy streak of success, mentioned discipline, hard work, good movement without the puck and the ability to check.

"But as much as anything," Murray added, "is the confidence. We're playing against good clubs and not giving up a lot of chances. We're playing as well and moving the puck as well as we ever have."

Carpenter tipped in a slapshot by defenseman Scott Stevens to put Washington ahead at 16:56 of the first period.The Bruins tied it at 19:45 on a shot by Keith Crowder, who has eight goals and eight assists while scoring in each of his last 10 games.

Bengt Gustafsson's power-play goal made it 3-1 in the second period before the Caps pulled away on third-period goals by Bryan Erickson, Carpenter, and Mike Gartner, with Carpenter assisting on Gartner's power-play tally.

"I could see they (the Bruins) were tired," Carpenter said, "but you've got to kick 'em when they're down. They kick us when we're down."

The contest ended a four-game road trip for the Bruins, and the loss was the only one suffered during the six-day excursion.

Flames 5, Jets 3

Lanny McDonald scored twice and Calgary also got goals from Allan MacInnis and Dan Quinn late in the second period to snap a 2-2 tie.

McDonald scored his eighth goal of the season 2:16 into the contest on a feed from Quinn, who knocked down an attempted clearing pass. The veteran right wing made it 2-0 at 5:52 when he intercepted a pass at center ice and went in all alone on goalie Brian Hayward, sliding a low wrist shot into the far corner.

The Jets fought back to tie the game in the middle period. Thomas Steen — who had two goals — connected on a slapshot and Robert Picard scored at 14:07, taking a pass from Steen and firing a low wrist shot through the legs of both MacInnis and goalie Rejean Lemelin for his sixth goal of the season.

Sixers fight off Blazers, 111-106

NBA Roundup

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Moral victories don't count in the National Basketball Association.

Otherwise, the Portland Trail Blazers would have one in the win column after Tuesday's 111-106 loss to the Philadephia 76ers.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said the 76ers escaped the Blazers in a game he labeled "the start of something big for Portland."

The 76ers led by as many as 17 points in the first half, which ended at 60-51, but the Blazers stormed back behind Kiki Vandeweghe and Jim Paxson in the second half.

Indiana beat Utah 119-117 in the only other NBA game Tuesday.

"The shots by Moses Malone down the stretch were real critical," Cunningham said. "I haven't seen Portland play in a while, but the way they played tonight I can't imagine why they have been losing so much."

The Blazers lost their tenth game in 11 outings, but both Cunningham and Blazer Coach Jack Ramsay predicted things are going to turn around for Portland soon.

"I felt we found a lot of people tonight," Ramsay said, referring to the his team's effort. Portland, in its losing streak, has suffered from a stalled offense. The usually high-scoring Vandeweghe was held to a season-low four points in his last outing at Houston.

Vandeweghe scored 27 points off the bench Tuesday, while Paxson, who only had nine points against Houston, added 21.

But it was Malone, with 30 points, including 12 in the final quarter, who helped the Sixers claim their fifth straight victory and escape Portland's charge.

"We had to have those shots by Malone and he was shooting under real pressure, trying to get the ball over Sam Bowie, who was playing in real tight," Cunningham said.

Pacers 119, Jazz 117

Steve Stipanovich's 14 fourth-quarter points and a pair of free throws by Clark Kellogg with 18 seconds remaining gave visiting Indiana the triumph.

Kellogg and Herb Williams scored 24 points each for Indiana. Stipanovich added 22 for the Pacers.

Utah's Adrian Dantley was the top scorer on the floor with 34 points.

"We can't expect to win when we play only half of a game," said Jazz Coach Frank Layden. "The Pacers deserved the victory. They got the good shots going down to the wire."

UNRANKED HOUSTON, 7-5, was impressed with the 10-2 Eagles, who won the second most games in their history.

Defensive coordinator Don Todd of the Cougars said, "I think Flutie is everything everyone expected, but he has a great cast with him."

Houston Coach Bill Yeaoman said, "It wasn't a surprise they ran so much. They give scholarships to runners, too. Flutie is great and there are a lot more players on that team than just Flutie."

Only 56,522 fans, the lowest Cotton Bowl crowd since 1948, braved a wind chill factor of 15 degrees.

There were numerous Cotton Bowl records established, including a 98-yard kickoff return for a touchdown by Houston's Earl Allen.

Flutie's three touchdown passes tied a record. BC's total yards of 533 yards and 45 points were records. It was the highest scoring game in Cotton Bowl history.

"Winning the Cotton Bowl is something BC has just never dreamed of before," Bicknell said. "We haven't been to a bowl like this in so long. It gives us confidence for our program."

The No. 8-ranked Eagles last won a bowl game when they defeated Tennessee in the 1941 Sugar Bowl.

BOSTON

Boston College didn't establish its passing game so it established its inside running game.

"We were a little frustrated," said wide receiver Gerard Phelan, who caught seven of Flutie's 13 completions. "There was a slip (on the wet surface) here and a slip there and they were stuffing the receivers a little more in the second half so we decided to go with the run."

"We just found alleys and seams, nothing spectacular," Stradford said.

Flutie, troubled by the wind and wet ball, did throw three touchdown passes in the first 25 minutes.

"Doug didn't have a typical Doug Flutie day, but he still put 45 points on the board," said Eagles' defensive tackle Scott Harrington.

But he completed just two of 13 passes in the second half. His completion percentage of 35.1 was the fourth lowest in his 43 career starts and his 180 passing yards were the 10th lowest.

"I didn't think we would run the ball that much," Stradford said. "It was Doug Flutie's last game. I expected him to go out with a big bang."

Still, Flutie was happy.

"We dreamed of being here for three years, a Jan. 1 bowl," he said. "We're here and we made the most of it. Nobody can take that away from me."

SUGAR

DuBose was the rushing leader with 102 yards on 20 carries, and he also had two pass receptions for 39 yards.

The Bengals had one touchdown — a 26-yard pass from Jeff Wickersham to Garry James — nullified by a holding penalty and later settled for a field goal on that drive. LSU then took a field goal off the board after a penalty at the Cornhuskers' 6 in the second quarter, then failed to score.

LSU punted only once — after advancing 42 yards with the opening kickoff — and then was stopped twice in the final three minutes when four consecutive possessions produced two turnovers for each team.

The Tigers opened the scoring on the 37-yard field goal by Lewis with 4:40 left in the first period. James dashed 35 yards around the left side to key the 52-yard drive, which stalled at the Nebraska 22 when Wickersham was sacked for a 7-yard loss by Rob Stuckey.

LSU went in front 10-0 on its next possession, going 73 yards in 10 plays with Hilliard getting the final two only 1:49 into the second quarter.

Wickersham completed passes of 11, 19 and 18 yards in the drive and the Tigers also got a break on an eight-yard interference call against Dennis Watkins for a first down at the Nebraska 2.

Nebraska, which had only one first down and 29 yards of offense at the time, quickly closed the margin to the 10-7 halftime score by going 70 yards in only six plays.

DuBose had runs of 10 and 12 yards and Sundberg hit Brian Heimer for 13 yards before lofting the screen pass that DuBose turned into a 31-yard scoring play with 10:31 left in the half.

LSU took Lewis' 28-yard field goal off the board, instead taking the first down at the 6 on the roughing-the-kicker penalty. James ran to the one on the first play before a false-start infraction cost LSU five yards on second down and the Tigers couldn't recover. Lewis then missed the 19-yard field goal try and he also missed from 24 yards with four seconds left in the third quarter.

ORANGE

Washington started out against the nation's second-ranked defense as though the game would be a blowout. The Huskies stormed to a 14-0 first-period lead on Sicuro's 29-yard pass to Danny Greene after a fumbled snap by Oklahoma punter Mike Winchester and a 1-yard run by Jacque Robinson.

Robinson rushed for 135 yards on 28 carries against a defense that yielded only 68.8 yards per game on the ground during the regular season.

Oklahoma overcame its early jitters and tied the score in dramatic fashion. The Sooners made it 14-7 on Bradley's 1-yard run after the second of three interceptions thrown by Sicuro. And they knotted the score on the final play of the first half, a stunning 61-yard pass play from Bradley to split end Derrick Shepard.

The Sooners took over at their 39 with eight seconds left after Jeff Jaeger was short on a 61-yard field goal attempt. Shepard ran a slant-in pattern, caught Bradley's pass at the Washington 47, broke away from Peoples and won a foot race with cornerback J.C. Pearson to the end zone.

After Rhymes' 38-yard punt return to the Washington 22 gave Oklahoma excellent field position on its first possession of the game, the Huskies got a break when Winchester muffed Kevin Adkins' accurate snap.

That gave Washington the ball at the Oklahoma 41 and the Huskies needed only two plays to take a 7-0 lead. Robinson ran for 12 yards with a pitchout and Sicuro then found Greene all alone in the end zone. The first of Jaeger's four conversions made it 7-0.

On its next possession, Washington marched 72 yards in 12 plays, with Sicuro completing three of four passes for 38 yards, including a 21-yarder to Greene. Robinson rushed six times for 28, including the final yard, on the drive. That made it 14-0 against a team that surrendered only 12.4 points a game all year.

Oklahoma scored its first touchdown by going 33 yards in seven plays after Jim Rockford's diving interception on a pass that was tipped by linebacker Brian Bosworth. Fullback Jerome Ledbetter gained 18 yards on three consecutive carries and Steve Sewell's 12-yard run put the ball at the 3. Bradley sneaked over from inches out on fourth down to trigger the Sooners' comeback.

The teams traded turnovers in the third period. Brown picked off a pass by Sicuro after Washington drove from its 41 to the Oklahoma 16. The Sooners moved to their 49 but Spencer Tillman was stripped of the ball by strong safety Jim Rodgers, who recovered at the Oklahoma 46.

Late in the period, Sicuro rolled out to pass, was hit by tackle Rick Reed and fumbled. All-American nose guard Tony Casillas recovered for Oklahoma at the Sooners' 46.

The game was played in breezy 70-degree weather before an announced crowd of 56,294, the second smallest since 1947. The Orange Bowl holds more than 75,000.

Fibak-Mayer open WDTC play with three-set victory

LONDON (AP) — Wojtek Fibak of Poland and American Sandy Mayer beat defending champions Tomas Smid and Pavel Slozil of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 in the opening match of the World Doubles Tennis Championships at the Royal Albert Hall Tuesday.

Fibak and Mayer won in 93 minutes, but because the tournament is played on a round-robin basis, the losers have a chance to recover from a below-par performance.

Smid, who has taken over from John McEnroe as the world's top-ranked doubles player, lost his serve in each of the first two sets giving his opponents openings to take a firm grip on the match.

Fibak and Mayer were rarely under pressure on their own serves and faced break points in only one game during the first two sets.

When Smid and Slozil had chances of service breaks in the third set, Fibak and Mayer survived.

Mayer served two double faults in one service game which might have given the champions a 3-1 lead. Instead, Mayer held serve and then he and his partner captured Slozil's serve to go ahead 3-2.

At this stage, the champions' challenge disintegrated and the Polish-American duo continued to hold serve and coast to victory.

The American pair of Tim Flach and Robert Seguso, both 21, upset Mark Edmondson of Australia and American Sherwood Stewart 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

BYU's Edwards sure of No. 1

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — LaVell Edwards, coach of top-ranked Brigham Young University, said he felt certain Washington's 28-17 Orange Bowl victory over No.2 Oklahoma will ensure BYU wins the national crown.

The final Associated Press poll of the season, the one that picks the AP's national champion, will be released at 6:30 p.m. EST today.

Edwards, whose 13-0 Cougars have had their detractors since rising to the top of the poll, said he would have felt BYU deserved the No. 1 recognition regardless of the outcome of the Huskies-Sooners clash.

The BYU coach acknowledged an Oklahoma victory could have threatened the Cougars' grip on No. 1.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A windfall comes just when you are about to give up hope. Hang in there! Give romantic partner time to adjust. Continue to work on projects launched last year.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Creative people will find the backers they need. Guard your secrets and valuables. Double check your insurance if you have recently married or become a parent. Others are counting on you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow through on a good idea no matter who takes the credit. Self-discipline is the key to new gains. Put yourself on a pay-as-you-go program until you build savings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A technological breakthrough means more business for you and your employers. Lovers develop a new rapport while traveling together. Do not let minor delays erode your usual good humor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An overdue check or payment finally arrives. Do some research before starting a publishing project. You succeed where others have failed. A former romantic partner reappears. Avoid repeating a mistake.

In the early 1970s, Australia was a major force in international competition. Now they have a new young team, and if their performance in the recent World Team Olympiad is any guide, they will have to be reckoned with in the future.

One of the Australian pairs, Paul Marston and Steve Burgess, play an artificial system that includes an opening bid of one heart to show a hand of 0-7 points, regardless of distribution. That accounts for what might otherwise appear to be a misprint in this column. Thereafter the auction was normal. The opening bid was ignored so, in effect, South opened with a strong no trump and ended in four spades after a Stayman sequence.

West led the five of diamonds—almost surely a singleton. Declarer was faced with the problem of two trump losers and perhaps two heart losers. He played the jack of diamonds from dummy, which was allowed to hold. After long thought, he continued with a diamond to the queen. Now it was West's turn to go into the tank.

He found the best defense—ruff the diamond and exit with a trump. Declarer won the ace, came to hand with the ace of clubs and sluffed a heart on the king of clubs. Then he exited with a spade.

When the missing spade honors crashed, the contract was home. Dummy's diamond suit would be set up after the ace was cashed, and club ruffs would serve as entries to the board.

Unicorn Hunters nominate words which should be banished

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — You've had your fill, you want to kill. You hide your ears, but it's still so shrill. The words are wrong but used with zeal. Who ya gonna call? Wordbusters.

They ain't 'fraid a no nouns. They ain't 'fraid a no verbs.

They're the Unicorn Hunters, and feel free to call on them, but don't call them "busters." That's one suffix they're out to bust.

All varieties of "busters" came into vogue in imitation of the popular movie "Ghostbusters," and is one instance of flattery that must be stopped, say the Unicorn Hunters, self-appointed guardians of the English language who seek to banish the overworked and overstated.

"Busters" follows the pattern set by "arama" and "anatomy of a...," said William T. Rabe, archivist for the Unicorns. "They are all drawn from the entertainment world and then applied to almost everything."

Having endured inflationbusters, crimebusters and a variety of sportsbusters (baseball's National League playoffs had both Goosebusters and Cubousters) the Unicorn Hunters decreed that "busters" should be banned.

The 10th annual Dishonour List, released Tuesday, was based on more than 3,000 nominations from as far away as Japan and Saudi Arabia, said Rabe, a journalism instructor at Lake Superior State College, where the Hunters are based.

Sharing top billing was a word that ranks right behind "constituent" in many political vocabularies: "mandate."

"There were hundreds of nominations of 'mandate,' and not all from disappointed Democrats," said Rabe. "I sensed a general feeling that all politicians are using the stronger 'mandate' when less forceful words would suffice."

Peter Thomas, chief herald for the Hunters, which claims a worldwide membership of 30,000, said the club followed the suggestion of Canadian Press editor Joseph J. Dary and banished "Star Wars" unless used in reference to a trilogy of science fiction films.

The term is misleading when used to describe a space-based military defense system, Thomas said.

For the first time, the Hunters included a list of foreign-language phrases on their list, including "in der Tat," which means "indeed" in German.

Other English banishments included:

—"Near-miss," which Robert K. Hancock of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said should be a "near-hit."

—"Overcrowded." James L. Knight of Nashville, Tenn., said, "We have not had a simply crowded prison here in Tennessee since 1982."

—"Vertical access device," said John Constantino of East Lansing, is bureaucratese for "elevator."

—At Handy High School in Bay City, Bruce Peasley's English class inquired whether "bare naked" is opposed to "clad naked."

A special commendation went to Martha Kerns of Sandusky, Ohio, for "banishment nominations above and beyond the call of duty."

"She sent us seven lists of nominations, each with 200 to 250 words," Rabe said. "Mrs. Kerns appears to be eliminating the language — which might not be a bad idea, because we could start anew."

Decker weds British Olympian

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Runner Mary Decker and British discus thrower Richard Slaney, who carried her off the Olympic track after her stunning collision with Zola Budd during the Summer Games, greeted the New Year at the altar.

The couple was wed Tuesday evening in a 20-minute private church ceremony at the First United Methodist Church.

Ms. Decker, 26, wore a white satin gown with veil and carried a bouquet of flowers. Slaney, 28, wore a black tuxedo.

Track star Alberto Salazar was a groomsman and drove the couple to the Eugene Hilton hotel for a reception after the wedding.

Many other athletes, as well as Ms. Decker's coach, Dick Brown, were among the 250 people who witnessed the wedding.

The church choir sang "Amazing Grace" during the ceremony officiated by the Rev. Fred Kane.

It was Ms. Decker's second marriage and Slaney's first. Ms. Decker was married for two years to marathon runner Ron Tabb before their divorce in 1983.

Ms. Decker's collision with Ms. Budd, a South African running for Great Britian at the Los Angeles Olympic Games, dashed her hopes for a gold medal in the women's 3,000 meters.

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Carter will be the first American to receive the World Methodist Peace Award for "consistency, creativity and courage" in pursuing peace both as president and private citizen.

Jimmy Carter

Carter joins the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and peace activist Saidie Patterson of Ireland in winning the prize established in 1977 and awarded whenever the 15 officers of the World Methodist Council choose to recognize someone, said Joe Hale, council general secretary.

"Our feeling was that former President Carter has been a man of peace, not only when he was head of the most powerful nation in the world, but also in his private capacity," Hale said.

The award, to be presented March 13 at Emory University, recognizes Carter's "long commitment to the goal of world peace, his concern for increased understanding among peoples of the Earth and his vision evidenced through the establishment of the Carter Center of Emory University," Hale said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1984 Rose Queen, the first black to hold that title since the Tournament of Roses began almost 80 years ago, says her selection was a result of her qualifications, not her color.

"When I became the first black Rose Queen, there were those who said I was part of a trend, and 'They're going to pick her now because it's time for a black queen,'" Kristina Kaye Smith, a 20-year-old Pasadena Community College student, said Tuesday after the annual parade.

"I wasn't chosen because I was black, but because I was the best," she said, adding that she was surprised at the hoopla that greeted her selection.

"I didn't even know there wasn't a black Rose Queen before me," she said. "But now that I've made it so many black girls have come up to me, and told me they're now encouraged to try out because they feel they have a chance."

Lee's field goal gives UCLA 39-37 Fiesta victory

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — UCLA junior placekicker John Lee says he had been there before and "the law of averages were with me."

Lee, who kicked an NCAA-record 29 field goals this season, with three winning games in the final minute, booted a 22-yarder with 51 seconds remaining to give the 14th-ranked Bruins a 39-37 victory over 13th-ranked Miami, Fla., in Tuesday's Fiesta Bowl.

"I've kicked something like 41-of-42 inside the 40-yard line this year and I believe in the law of averages. I wasn't going to miss," Lee said. "I just told myself, 'Don't be pressured. Don't be afraid to hit the ball hard, just like in practice. Don't worry. You'll make it.'"

The field goal — Lee's third of the game — capped a 10-play, 63-yard UCLA drive against the defending national champion Hurricanes, who had gone ahead twice in the second half.

"You have to play defense to be a championship team, and we did not do that," first-year Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "UCLA did a super job of preparing for us and they had no turnovers, which was a big key."

The victory gave the Bruins, 9-3, their third straight win in a New Year's Day bowl and preserved their unbeaten streak at Sun Devil Stadium.

"I don't rank wins, but this is certainly a monumental one for us," said UCLA Coach Terry Donahue. "Going into this game, I reminded our team that we had a chance to do something a lot of teams have not done. It was a very important win for us."

UCLA first had to withstand a last-gasp Miami drive, which ended on quarterback Bernie Kosar's fumble at the Hurricane 31-yard line with 15 seconds left.

Miami finished 8-5, losing its third consecutive game in bizarre fashion.

"I always expect the worst out there and for the last three games, the worst has happened," said Kosar, a sophomore who was harried all afternoon by the Bruins' blitzing defense. "You do whatever it takes to win and our job was to get that last field goal. We couldn't handle it and I couldn't handle it."

The Hurricanes had taken a 37-36 lead on two fourth-quarter touchdowns by freshman fullback Melvin Bratton, a 19-yard run with 9:49 left and a 3-yard pass from Kosar with 2:58 remaining.

UCLA, up 22-21 at halftime, twice trailed in the second half.

Greg Cox's 31-yard field goal 6:46 into the third quarter put Miami up 24-22, but the Bruins stormed back on a 10-yard touchdown pass from Steve Bono to Mike Sherrard with 5:44 left in the period and a 33-yard Bono bomb to Mike Young six seconds into the final quarter for a 36-24 lead.

Down 21-7 early in the second quarter, UCLA rallied to lead at the half.

Freshman tailback Gaston Green, starting in place of injured senior Danny Andrews, ripped off a Fiesta Bowl-record 72-yard touchdown run with 9:14 remaining in the second period to make it 21-14.

Green's dash surpassed the 64-yard effort of Penn State's Curt Warner in the 1980 Fiesta Bowl.

The Bruins then tackled Miami punter Rick Tuten for a safety with 2:33 left, and Lee's 51-yard field goal 1:10 later closed the gap to 21-19.

Lee kicked a 33-yarder 36 seconds before halftime to cap the UCLA comeback.

Green had opened the scoring on a 6-yard run 5:46 into the nationally televised game.

The Hurricanes tied it 1:12 later on Darryl Oliver's 34-yard run, and they went ahead 14-7 with 2:18 to go in the first quarter on Eddie Brown's 68-yard punt return, which tied a Fiesta Bowl record.

Kosar's 48-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades 59 seconds later gave Miami its 21-7 lead.

Green, who had 372 yards on 70 carries this season compared to Andrews' team-leading 605 on 158, finished with 144 yards on 21 carries and was named the game's most valuable offensive player. Andrews broke his leg in the Bruins' season finale.

Kosar hit on 31 of 44 passes for 294 yards, with the completion total tying the Fiesta Bowl record set last year by Pittsburgh's John Congemi.

Bono, a senior who was 18-of-27 for 243 yards with no interceptions, said "it was the best game of my career, no question about it. I wanted to come out a winner."

UCLA is now 4-0-1 here with three victories over Pacific-10 Conference rival Arizona State and a 10-10 tie with Arkansas in the 1978 Fiesta Bowl.

Miami was appearing in its first-ever Fiesta and playing for the first time in the state of Arizona. The ending of this contest was typical of the Hurricanes' previous two games — a 42-40 loss to Maryland after leading 31-0 and a 47-45 loss to Boston College after a last-second, 48-yard touchdown pass by Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Doug Flutie.

Brown's punt-return touchdown was the first in four years for Miami and it tied the Fiesta Bowl record of Arizona State's Steve Holden in 1971. Bratton had a record-setting nine receptions.

A crowd of 60,310 at 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium watched the first-ever meeting of the two schools. It was the fifth non-sellout in the Fiesta Bowl's 14-year history.

USC edges Ohio State, 20-17

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Tim Green has gone from September's redshirt to January's Rose Bowl hero for Southern California. He knew it was coming.

"When I got up this morning, I opened my hotel room's blinds and saw it was a beautiful day, I knew we were going to win. I had that feeling," said Green, voted Co-Player of the Game with his All-America teammate, linebacker Jack Del Rio.

"I didn't want to make it public to the press. We had the last laugh. We own the town. We're the Rose Bowl champions," Green said.

While Del Rio and his defensive buddies were swarming Ohio State's Keith Byars, Green turned two of four Buckeye turnovers into touchdown passes of three yards to tight end Joe Cormier and 19 to flanker Timmie Ware in a 20-17 victory.

Originally, Green had planned to bank his last season fo eligibility until 1985. But an injury to No. 1 quarterback Sean Salisbury changed his course.

He was forced into the lineup and led the Trojans to a 9-3 record, the Pac-10 title and the team's 21st post-season victory, more than any other school in history.

"Not to take anything away from Sailisbury," said Del Rio, "but Tim was the perfect quarterback for our team this year. He's scrappy. He's a fighter. He's a leader."

Green's passes led Southern California to a 17-6 halftime lead and the Trojans' defense forced Ohio State out of its game plan.

The Buckeyes rushed Byars, the nation's leading rusher, scorer and all-purpose runner this season, just 23 times. Fifty of his 109 yards rushing came on one play.

Earle Bruce, Ohio State's coach, wanted to run his Heisman Trophy runner-up 35-40 times and only pass the ball a maximum of 25 plays. Instead, quarterback Mike Tomczak threw 37 times.

Tomczak completed 24 of those for 290 yards. He threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to split end Cris Carter.

Tomczak, too, committed four turnovers and had forewarned that would be the difference in the game. Two of his interceptions set up Green's passes.

"One of the reasons we had so much trouble offensively," he said, "is because we started our possessions behind the 20-yard line too many times. The USC defense did a fine job of holding us."

After Tomczak's scoring strike to Carter with 7:34 left, Ohio State had one more opportunity in the final minutes.

The Big Ten champions, 9-3 for the fifth successive year, moved as close as the Trojans' 38-yard line before defensive tackle Brent Moore sacked Tomczak for an eight-yard loss in the closing seconds.

Moore was one of the reasons Byars had so much difficulty before 102,594 fans.

"He reminds me a lot of Herschel Walker," Moore said of the Buckeyes' 235-pound junior tailback. "He runs well from point A to point B. But when we hit him with six guys, he goes down like anybody else."

Byars said a half-loaf is not good enough, explaining why the Big Ten now has lost 14 of its last 16 Pasadena dates to the Pac-10.

"To win football games, you have to play 60 minutes. We only played 30. You can't expect to win that way," he said.

Bruce blamed the turnovers for the defeat, the Buckeyes' fourth in a row in the Rose Bowl. "They won the first quarter. We won the last three, but they won the game. They dominated the line of scrimmage against the run," he said.

Painter's friends, family cheer him on at ceremony

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A courtroom full of Gary Painter supporters cheered the new sheriff and gave him a standing ovation moments after Midland County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry had sworn in the new sheriff.

"If it hadn't been for you," Painter told the midnight gathering early into New Year's Day, "I wouldn't have made it, and I'll remember that."

The 6-foot-5 sheriff, decked in western attire, pledged to "preserve, protect and defend" the state and federal constitutions and laws.

Among the estimated 100 spectators were former Sheriff Ed "Big Ed" Darnell, a 36-year sheriff who in 1976 was defeated by Painter's predecessor, two-term Sheriff Dallas Smith; Police Chief Wayne Gideon; former County Commissioner Charlie Welch; Constable Tom McGinnis; Justice of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine; District Attorney Al Schorre; a force of city police officers in plainclothes; deputies; Painter's other friends and relatives, and Democrats and Republicans. Smith was not among the celebrants.

Painter, 37, had campaigned under the Republican Party banner to defeat Smith, 42, by garnering 60.6 percent of the vote to Smith's 39.4 percent in the May primary election. And in the November general election, Painter won 58.35 percent of the vote to write-in candidate Smith's 14.30 percent and Democratic Party nominee Joe W. Carr's 27.35 percent.

"A job well done," Darnell said after the swearing-in ceremony. "I think the voters did a wonderful job."

Smith had been critical of Darnell's administration, which spanned from 1941 through 1976 and claimed that he — Smith — was the "proven professional."

Welch, a Democrat who said his "opinion was not like some folks," said "the people did an excellent job" at the election polls.

Moments after Ms. Cherry had administered the oath of office to Painter, she swore in 35 of Painter's force of about 55 deputies. She also swore in the three investigators — Dewey Lee, Pat Fuller and J.D. Luckie — for the district attorney. Other deputies will be sworn in later. Again, the audience applauded.

"I'm so proud," said Chief Deputy Robert Settles, who once served as Smith's captain of criminal investigation. "I'm ready to go to work."

And the spectators applauded again when Painter's 35-year-old wife, Patsy, pinned the sheriff's badge on her husband.

"I'm just very proud," said Mrs. Painter, who, when she was secretary to the police chief, had met Painter when he was a city police officer. "I think that this is probably the best New Year's I've ever had."

Painter had been Smith's patrol lieutenant until he resigned in early February 1984 to campaign against the sheriff. Before that, he had been on the Midland Police Department.

"I was just proud of him and excited," Painter's 12-year-old daughter, Sandy, said of her father. Joining in the fanfare were her sister, Jennifer, 4, and brother, Justin, 3, and Painter's parents, Wayne and Beth Painter of Edmonson.

Painter thanked the people for attending the ceremony.

"I'm the people's sheriff," Painter said afterward. "I think the people of Midland County are going to see a new era of law enforcement cooperation. The people of Midland County will certainly benefit."

Temporary job lasts 41 years

By DENISE GAMINO

AUSTIN (AP) — Marguerite Grissom had no intention of becoming the permanent organ player at St. Mary's Cathedral when she agreed to play at the Christmas midnight Mass in 1943 as a temporary replacement for the organist who had quit.

After all, she thought, she was a 22-year-old student studying voice — not piano or organ — at the University of Texas.

It wasn't long, however, before Miss Grissom, who has been blind since birth, was put on the Catholic church's payroll at a salary then of $10 per month.

Now, 41 years and an estimated 5,000 Masses later, Miss Grissom has played her final song on the 19th century organ in the church at 10th and Brazos streets.

Just before 10 a.m. Sunday, Miss Grissom, 63, slowly made her way up the narrow stairs leading to the third-floor balcony, which has been her domain since that Christmas night more than four decades ago.

For the next hour, the nearly 300 parishioners two floors below heard Miss Grissom sing and play Christmas carols for the last time. Between songs, Miss Grissom used her plain brown Braille missal to follow the service.

When she descended the darkened staircase at 11 a.m., she was formally retired.

"She's certainly a marvelous musician," said the Rev. Clement Funke.

"She contributed something that just attracted people.

"People just loved to come because they admired her singing. Many people came to the 10 and 12 o'clock Masses principally because she contributed to it."

Funke remembers attending Miss Grissom's voice recital at UT.

It was during the year before that recital that Miss Grissom was chosen from the church choir to fill in as the organ player.

"I said, 'I'll play until you find someone else,' but they never found anybody else," Miss Grissom said.

"I was just taken for granted."

Joe Sullivan, with his wife, Rose, has attended Masses at which Miss Grissom played for the past 30 years.

"You're talking about a real pro here," Sullivan said.

Residential real estate market holding steady in Midland

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland's residential real estate market is sailing in calm waters while a wind appears to be whipping up in other parts of the country.

Sales of single family homes nationwide increased by 9.1 percent as the wave of lower interest rates began building, according to an Associated Press report.

But Midland's sales are staying close to the figures reported last year. Residential sales totaled 97 units for $8,936,875 in November 1983 while the same month this year saw 107 units sold for a total value of $10,524,112, according to figures released by the Midland Board of Realtors.

"I really haven't seen an increase in sales," said Board of Realtors President Sara Newsom. "It takes six to eight weeks to get something closed, so we may see it in January. With this interest rate going down and if it continues to drop, we should see a spur in sales."

Another Realtor, Patsy Bohannan, is predicting it "to get good the first of the year. Midland's real estate is alive and kicking now, but it should be picking up at the first of the year." Ms. Bohannan is on the National Association of Realtors board and the Texas Real Estate Research Advisory Committee.

The number of residential units on the Multiple Listing Service this year is stalled at about the same level as last year — 1,591 in November 1983 compared to 1,594 this year.

Another Realtor noted that Midland has had a "big backlog" of houses and as many are coming on the market as are going off.

But that market is giving the buyer a wide choice, said Joan Noel, president of the Midland Realtors Association. Realtors will pre-qualify a potential buyer, determining how much house that person can buy with his or her income and what type of mortgage. Then a computer compiles a list of houses on the market that fit that category, she said.

The rumors continue to circulate that one major oil company or another will be moving in people after the first of the year, the two Realtors noted. "I pay no attention to rumors. I don't believe them until I see the whites of their eyes," said Ms. Noel of families moving to Midland.

During recent years when interest rates skyrocketed, the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage became too expensive for some homebuyers. The adjustable rate mortgage which started low and was raised over the years became the financing tool for numerous homebuyers. But with interest rates dropping, the appeal of fixed rate mortgages could be increasing.

Home mortgage interest rates locally hover at 12.5 to 13 percent, according to the Realtors.

Ms. Noel said most of the buyers she works with prefer the fixed rate mortgage. "The adjustable rate has its benefits; you can get in a house at a lower rate."

Ms. Bohannan said 15½ percent used to be a good price on a fixed rate mortgage. "I've even worked up to 18 percent," she said of those high interest days. The 12½ and 13 percent rates today can mean a savings of at least $200 a month on the house payment, she said.

The past three years in Midland have demonstrated the meaning of "supply and demand," Ms. Noel said. In 1981, the demand was high, supply was short and prices were high. Today, demand is lower, supply is high and prices have dropped.

For Ms. Bohannan, 1984 was her best residential year. "I've had a steady flow of people. For every three to eight that go under contract each week there's another 12 to 15 that go on the market," she said of the multiple listing service. "That's not a bad market. We keep comparing it to the big boom years. But Midland is now back in a 'normal' market."

Alzheimer's disease like 'never-ending funeral'

By MARY SHERWOOD

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Last spring Edna Jordan, 60, was doing what she had done for 14 years — help Moody High School Students understand English and history.

Now she lies in bed understanding little of what goes on around her. She cannot move without help, and she is unable to speak, except for repeating occasional words or phrases.

Mrs. Jordan is a victim of Alzheimer's disease.

Her husband of 20 years, Bob, first noticed things weren't right last spring.

One Sunday, she was sitting at the kitchen table grading papers. But she kept asking Jordan for help. She couldn't remember how to calculate simple averages.

When Jordan looked at the papers, he knew that something was very wrong with his wife. After working all weekend, she was still on the first five papers and the numbers she had put on them made no sense.

He called her grader at school and asked how his wife was teaching. "She's not," was the answer. Mrs. Jordan, who had always been very organized, was spending all her time searching for misplaced papers.

After a series of tests, including a CAT scan, a neurologist concluded Mrs. Jordan had Alzheimer's disease.

He made that diagnosis by eliminating all the neurological disorders that mimic the effects of Alzheimer's disease.

A brain biopsy or autopsy are the only ways to be certain of the diagnosis.

Jordan, who knew nothing about Alzheimer's disease, learned that his wife's confusion was just the beginning.

Eventually, she would not be able to remember things from one minute to the next, she would forget how to talk, how to walk, how to eat, and would lose control of her bladder and bowels along with her other motor functions.

Finally, if she didn't die first of pneumonia, a urinary infection or some other complication, she would go into a coma and die.

Another man whose wife has the disease said, "Alzheimer's disease is like living through a never-ending funeral.

"You can't grieve. You can't get over the guilt. Losing by death is nothing compared to this. I keep losing her every single day."

Looking back, Jordan believes his wife's symptoms surfaced about a year ago. That's when her checkbook, which had always been neat, legible and balanced, became a mess of voided and unrecorded checks and arithmetic mistakes.

Jordan began reading everything he could find on Alzheimer's disease. He learned that it is not preventable or treatable, and that although there is ongoing research, doctors don't know what causes it.

Neurologist can't say how fast the disease will progress. It is swift in some case and slow in others. Victims may live from three to 15 years.

Jordan is not alone in coping with the pain of watching a loved one deteriorate so dramatically.

According to the latest estimates, Alzheimer's disease affects 2 million to 2.5 million people nationwide.

Most of them are over 65, but as many as 60,000 are thought to be between the ages of 40 and 50. The youngest age recorded is 27.

It is estimated that over half of the people suffering from senility are victims of Alzheimer's disease — not just the inevitable effects of aging.

Most nursing home administrators in Corpus Christi say they have only two or three diagnosed Alzheimer's patients each.

At first, Mrs. Jordan's case seemed mild. Jordan, who is 59, thought that for the five years until his retirement as superintendent of the Central Power & Light central meter shop, his wife could stay by herself during the day.

Medical examiner's job includes death messages

AUSTIN (AP) — Because Travis County had a record number of traffic deaths in 1984, investigator David McCandless of the county's medical examiner's office had to spend more of his time doing the part of his job he doesn't enjoy — relaying the death message to relatives.

"It is real tragic to go and tell somebody's parents that their children are deceased and then watch the parents realize that their children have died before them," McCandless said.

He and two other investigators from the coroner's office handle the duty.

"Sometimes introducing yourself, giving your name and the office you work for will key them to the fact that someone has died. But, most of the time telling them you're with the county coroner or the medical examiner doesn't make any difference," McCandless said.

"You still have to come right out and say in the simplest, most direct way that you can, 'So-and-so has passed away. So-and-so has died.' Everyone varies in their response to that, but they usually believe it when they hear it."

The medical examiner's office is responsible for investigating all deaths in the county that occur outside of a hospital. After making a detailed examination of a death site and the body, the investigators start trying to locate the victim's closest relatives.

The telephone book is often the most helpful reference guide, McCandless said.

"In one recent case the victim's father lived at the same address," he said. "I looked up the name and then went to the address to tell him."

McCandless says that when a victim's next of kin lives in Austin, he tries to inform the relative in person. In cases where the victim is from out of town, the victim's family is notified by telephone or by teletype sent to a police agency in the family's area and sent to the house by an officer there.

The delivery of the death message takes a toll on the messengers as well, McCandless said.

"It's much, much easier to do it by phone," he said. "Some (of the conversations) stay with you for years but most of them fade on out fairly promptly. It varies depending on the circumstances of who the deceased person was and who the person you're notifying is."

Waiting for help

A small group of stranded people wait for help after they were isolated by the Llano River's raging waters early Monday morning near Junction. The river, swollen by heavy rains Sunday and Monday, stranded many people throughout the area. Most of the people had to be rescued by heavy equipment or helicopters.

Apartment residents say they smelled gas leak

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Residents of the Chateau Orleans Apartments reported smelling a gas leak before a New Year's Eve explosion that killed one resident and injured 12 others, investigators said.

The explosion, which shattered a section of the apartment complex, killed Ella Mae Saenz, 66. Most of the injured were treated and released, but four were in stable condition today at local hospitals.

Arson investigator Julio Rodriguez said the blast is believed to have been caused by a natural gas leak.

"(Ms. Saenz's) grandson told us he'd smelled natural gas in the apartment earlier and he'd told her to talk to the manager about it. He even went around on several occasions looking through the apartment for the source," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez said he did not know if the apartment management "was aware of it or not."

Helen Witten of Corpus Christi, whose sister Sarah Keene and brother-in-law Stanley Keene remain hospitalized from injuries they received, said her sister had smelled gas for days.

Attempts by The Associated Press today to contact apartment officials were unsuccessful.

Overloaded extension cord blamed for fatal blaze

UVALDE (AP) — An overloaded extension cord triggered a fire that gutted a small home, killing a family of four, authorities said.

Neighbors said the family could not afford to have electricity hooked up, so an extension cord plugged into the house next door was used to power a heater, refrigerator, a radio and an alarm clock.

The victims were identified as Mario Torres, 20, his wife Norma Torres, 18, and their sons Mario Torres Jr., 2, and Mark Anthony Torres, 4 months.

The blaze, which was reported about 3:30 a.m. Tuesday, gutted the small home.

"The cause was electrical," Fire Marshal Jim Hanson said today. 'They were getting electricity from next door. There was an overload on the extension cord.'

A neighbor, Janey Vasquez, said her mother-in-law, Olivia Vasquez, owned the house and rented it to the Torres family. She said the family moved in the house in October, but could not afford to hook up electricity.

Ms. Vasquez said her mother-in-law gave the Torreses permission to tap into her home next door, but warned them "not to keep the heater on."

Firefighters discovered the family gathered near a bed inside the house. The father was on his knees at the side of the bed, one child was on the floor beside the bed, the baby was found on the bed and the mother was discovered near a chair.

Torres and his two sons were pronounced dead at the scene.

Mrs. Torres, who was still alive with burns over 60 percent of her body, was taken to a Uvalde hospital and later put on a private plane to a Galveston burn hospital. She died en route, authorities said.

Nuclear 'fire sale' nets Dallas $30,000

DALLAS (AP) — After deciding nobody would really survive a nuclear war in fallout shelters, city officials several years ago removed all survival kits from the city's 815 official shelters. The kits were placed in the shelters in the mid-1960s.

Despite trouble giving away the thousands of water cans, sanitation kits, medical kits, crackers and hard candy, the city finally sold them, clearing about $30,000.

"The only stipulation was that they had to go get it. Nobody was interested," said John Pickett, director of the Dallas Office of Emergency Preparedness.

"We couldn't find anybody willing to go down in to the several hundred places and scrounge around in dark basements," he said.

"The only stipulation was that they had to go get it. Nobody was interested.

"We couldn't find anybody willing to go down in to the several hundred places and scrounge around in dark basements."

— John Pickett, director of Dallas Office of Emergency Preparedness

Finally, the city sold 2½ million pounds of crackers to five area hog farmers and cattle ranchers in 1977 for about $25,000, then 9,000 water cans, 1,000 medical kits and 5,000 sanitation kits to a Lincoln, Neb., couple, Jim and Coleen Burden, in 1982 for $3,600.

Burden, in a recent interview, said he would like to stumble onto another deal like that. He and his wife turned around and sold the survival equipment for $88,000, he said.

"If anybody says there's so many tons of something somewhere and the price is free or cheap, I'm there," Burden said. "When I heard shelters were being cleared out, I said there has to be money in it."

It took the Burdens six months to clear the 129 stocked shelters, they said. They hauled the booty away in 18 tractor-trailer loads and spent the next year peddling it, mostly to members of the Mormon church.

"If there was a nuclear war, the Mormons would be better prepared than anyone," Burden said.

The couple also sold supplies to a survivalist group in Utah, they said.

"They had a clandestine meeting with us that smacked of all kinds of intrigue," he said. "They had people watch the traffic on the highway to make sure nobody knew they were stashing it."

Stolen pickup recovered by Midland police

From Staff Reports

A $4,000 pickup truck reported stolen early this morning was later recovered by Midland police, according to reports.

Mike Segora of Horizon Mud Co., 1110 Dayton, told police the 1980 red and white Ford pickup was taken from the fenced yard at the company between noon Tuesday and 1 a.m. today.

The burglars cut a hole out of the gate to gain entry and apparently rammed the fence with the vehicle to exit the yard, reports said. About $1,500 worth of damage was done to the fence.

In complaints filed Tuesday with city police, Rafael Rodriguez Jr. of 508 W. Cowden said his house was burglarized and $2,575 worth of items taken. According to reports, clothes, stereo equipment, albums, alcoholic beverages and furniture were taken. The burglary took place between 7 p.m. Monday and 3 a.m. Tuesday.

Two rifles valued at a total of $1,500 were reported stolen from the Jack Camp residence, 3608 Stanolind. The burglars, who apparently did not use force to gain entry, took the rifles from the gun case in the living room, reports said. The burglary took place between 7 a.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Tuesday.

A purse containing $378 in cash apparently was stolen during an argument at Red's Barbecue, 1807 E. Front St., about 6:30 a.m. Tuesday. According to reports, Guadalupe M. Chapa told police she got into a fight with another female at the bar before clearing and closing the bar/restaurant. When she locked up, she noticied her purse, which contained $100 in restaurant money and $278 in personal money, was missing. According to reports, Ms. Chapa thinks someone walked out with the purse during the fight.

A $300 television set was reported stolen from the Sandpiper Inn, 3838 W. Wall. According to motel manager Ron Moss, Room 111 was rented at 10 p.m. Monday. When he checked it at 9 a.m. Tuesday, the set was gone.

Gunshot victim to be released

From Staff Reports

A 25-year-old Midland man, admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital Dec. 23 with gunshot wounds suffered in a confrontation with a neighbor, is expected to be released today.

Raymond Bill of 1301 S. Mineola was transported to the hospital in critical condition after the early morning fight at his home, according to reports.

Marcelino Mendoza Avila, 43, of 1312 S. Mineola, was arrested in connection with the shooting. He was charged with attempted murder and released on a $7,500 bond.

A 65-year-old Midland woman, injured Sunday in a two-vehicle accident east of Midland, was discharged from MMH, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Rose Delema Walsh, Route 1 Box 135E, suffered fractured ribs after her 1976 Buick collided on FM 307 with a 1893 Chevrolet pickup driven by Perry Wayne Lee of Henrietta. Lee was not injured.

Houston families evacuated as Red Adair caps gas well

HOUSTON (AP) — About 150 northwest Houston families were evacuated from their homes for several hours as famed oil well firefighter Red Adair and his team capped a leaking gas well.

No injuries were reported, but natural gas and salt water spewed from the well Tuesday as firefighters searched for the source of the leak, authorities said.

An ignited leak was reported about 5 a.m., but it had burned itself out by the time firefighters arrived one hour later, said Yolanda Ramos, a spokeswoman for Harris County Sheriff's Department.

Oil and gas-well expert Red Adair and volunteer firefighters found and tapped the leak with a valve, said Charles Womack, chief of the Northwest Houston Volunteer Fire Department.

About 150 residents were evacuated from their homes nearby.

Psychic leads police to area near body

HEMPSTEAD (AP) — The body of Mayme Knight lay hidden in some underbrush, just 49 feet from where a psychic and police sat trying to figure out where she'd gone, the psychic and officials said.

Hempstead authorities and hundreds of local residents had been scouring the area for the 74-year-old woman since Dec. 22, when she wandered away from the Retirement Care Center here, home administrator Taft Martin said.

But after days of fruitless searching, Martin called in John Catchings, a Dallas-based psychic who says he has helped Texas authorities find nine other bodies in the past 3½ years.

On Sunday, Catchings arrived in this city near Houston and told Martin the woman had wandered farther than authorities had believed.

He led them to a swampy field more than two miles from the center and participated in a daylong search. They turned up nothing, despite Catchings' strong "feeling" that she was nearby.

That "feeling" turned out to be true, but some underbrush hid Mrs. Knight's body until Tuesday morning, when Martin says a hunter stumbled across it.

"For whatever reason, I guess it just wasn't intended for us to find her that day (Sunday)," Martin said. "Our searchers probably got to within 15 yards of her."

Catchings said Hempstead police Chief Randy Johnson returned to the spot with a measuring tape and discovered their truck had been 49 feet away from the body on Sunday.

Authorities have ordered an autopsy, but Hempstead police say they believe the woman died of exposure.

Family carries on windmill tradition

By TOM ALLSTON

CLAUDE (AP) — Members of the Crowell family of Claude say servicing windmills is possibly the only trade left in American culture that cannot be learned in classes and must still be passed from father to son.

Mike Crowell (they pronounce it "CROH-ul"), 32, was handed the flame by his father, George, in April 1983. As head of Crowell Water Well Service, he continues a family tradition almost a century old.

"And when my husband turned the business over to Mike," his mother, Claire, says, "I turned the bookkeeping over to his wife!"

It was Mike's grandfather, Walter Crowell, who came to the Texas Panhandle in 1896, settled in Groom, and began drilling and servicing the windmills that made human habitation of the area possible.

George Crowell says although technology has made some specific improvements in the field, most drilling and repair of windmills is remarkably like it was 98 years ago when his father began the business.

"We still use cable rigs, similar to what he had, only his were horse-driven," he explained. "We use a spudding unit on the back of a truck, and pull a tower up with a winch."

"THEY'RE MAKING changes like going to fiberglass sucker rods," Mike added. "But otherwise, it's about the same. They haven't ever found anything that works as good as the leathers on the valves, for instance."

One improvement he can point to, Mike said, is Teflon-type seals replacing the traditional babbit.

"A common problem with windmills is running out of oil," he said, "and then the babbit got eaten up. The Teflon ones will last a lot longer without oil."

Although wood vanes are gone, they said, there are still a few wood windmill towers left.

"If we have to repair one of those," Mrs. Crowell said, "we call a carpenter."

Carpentry, however, is virtually the only skill related to drilling and servicing water wells the Crowells don't pass from generation to generation.

"You've got to be able to drill, weld, be a mechanic and electrician, and do a lot of other things, too," Mike said.

George Crowell, shortly after the end of World War II, established the company in Claude, and built the rigs they use for drilling and servicing wells. The rigs purchased today aren't as reliable as the handmade variety, he said.

"THE RIGS we have are built of old (automotive) rear ends and things, and they don't break down near as often."

Mrs. Crowell explains that only a few companies remain in the business of supplying water well drillers and service companies, and even with these, there are problems.

One established company moved its manufacturing operation to Argentina, she said, "and they don't have any quality control. You can pour oil into one of their castings, and it leaks out all over. It's terrible."

Costs have, of course, risen over the years. Nowadays, George Crowell says, a 10-foot (vane diameter) windmill costs $10,000 — $12,000 to drill and erect.

"Sucker rod used to be a quarter a foot," Mrs. Crowell said. "Now it's $2.50. A cylinder that used to cost $18 is about $180 now. That's the increase in 40 years."

His father "never got less than a dollar a foot" for drilling water wells, George Crowell said, but now the going rate is $14 per foot to drill.

And windmills last, they point out, if serviced properly.

"I still do work on wells my grandfather drilled 80 years ago," Mike said.

They now maintain a large shop for machine work, three truck-mounted drilling or servicing rigs, and a "boneyard" of discarded heads and other windmill parts.

"It stays real busy," Mike said. "We work three crews and can't stay caught up."

HE CAN'T estimate the number of windmills in the area they service from Canyon to Stinett, but says in the past year they serviced 34 windmills on the 6666 Ranch alone.

"When it got so cold last winter, a lot of wells froze up and broke," he said. "That kept us busy."

His wife, Cindy, also stays busy, he points out, and puts a lot of miles on the pickup, going into Amarillo for parts.

Servicing windmills in the field on a Panhandle winter day is a case of mixed emotions, one might infer from his description:

"The wind puts a chill factor down to 30 below, but you need the wind to keep the windmills going so they won't freeze up and break on you."

Another complication, George Crowell said, is that, although it is of necessity a family business, often family members don't enter it. His brother Lee, retired from water well work in Groom, and Mike's brother Herb is a photographer in Amarillo.

"But one problem we don't have is people paying," he adds. "You fix somebody's windmill, send 'em a bill, and they pay you."

Snow blankets much of state's northern half

DALLAS (AP) — Icy blasts sent temperatures plummeting past zero in parts of Texas early today and ushered in 1985 on a frigid pillow of snow that blanketed much of the state's northern half.

As dawn broke, the National Weather Service said snow was still falling in a band about 50 miles wide running from Tyler in East Texas into the south central sections of North Texas.

The weather service said the snow, which was slowly moving eastward, would continue over most of North Texas with additional accumulations of one to three inches possible.

Snow also covered the Panhandle and West Texas while freezing rain and freezing drizzle fell as far south as 20 miles north of San Antonio in the Hill Country.

A winter storm warning was in effect for North Texas and travelers advisories were posted for the eastern and south central portions of the South Plains.

Winds howling from the north at near 40 mph in some places only added to the problem, dropping the wind chill to near zero.

Ice and snow made driving conditions hazardous from Austin north to Dallas, northwest to Midland-Odessa and east to Bryan, said Lisa Fields of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Around two inches of snow fell during the night over a large portion of North Texas, including the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Hamilton, Comanche and Eastland counties had four to five inches overnight.

Forecasters said snow accumulations in the Dallas-Fort Worth area could top 10 inches if the storm resurges.

Snow also was falling at daybreak in Midland, San Angelo and Abilene, where the temperatures were hovering around 20 degrees and wind chill indexes were below zero.

Fort Davis, Marfa and Alpine also had snow. Interstate 10 and 20 east of Van Horn were snow-packed and icy and Interstate 20 east of Big Spring also was icy.

Roads and windshields iced badly throughout the night and early morning, sending scores of autos into wild skids, authorities said.

Sleet and freezing rain fell on Austin throughout the night, making streets hazardous when morning commuters awoke. Numerous accidents were reported on the ice-slicked roads and parts of Interstate 35 were closed.

Ice frosted roads in San Antonio, forcing the closure of part of Loop 410 around the city and of freeways inside the Loop.

Breeder to hold first airborne cattle auction

MERIDIAN (AP) — More than 300 people will get aboard a Honolulu-bound 747 jet one week from today to take part in what is being billed as the world's first airborne cattle auction.

Steve Harrison Sr., a purebred Santa Gertrudis breeder and owner of The Bee Creek Ranch here, organized the auction, which he said he expects to bring up to $1 million in winning bids.

There won't actually be any cattle aboard the plane — just videotape and seven large video screens. And the Santa Gertrudis cattle in the films aren't for sale — just their frozen semen or embryos, Harrison said.

But other than that, he said, the auction will be conducted like any other, with an auctioneer and ringmen working the crowd for the highest bids.

"The purpose of the auction is to make a statement of our commitment to the marriage of the traditional cattle and the high-tech world of genetics and embryo transplants," he said. Next Wednesday's eight-hour flight will depart from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

"Doing a videotaped auction on board a 747 will be a relatively small wonder when compared to some of the achievements we are about to see coming from genetic engineering laboratories," Harrison said.

Embryo transplants will change cattle production from survival of the fittest to production of the finest, Harrison said.

Through the transplants, the best cows will be able to produce 50 or more calves in a lifetime, five times more than normal, he adds, and genetic engineering will allow breeders to capitalize on their best cows' best traits.

The airborne cattle auction began as a fun trip and ended with a serious purpose, Harrison said.

"Our breeders association president asked me last year to put together a trip to Hawaii for our members," Harrison said.

"He wanted to have seminars on cattle production on the plane over, but we go to seminars all the time. Then we hit on the idea of an auction, and things just went from there."

After arriving in Hawaii, the group has eight days of activities scheduled before returning.

The videotaping of the cattle took several months, Harrison said, and special approval had to be obtained from the Federal Aviation Administration to show the video during flight. United Airlines had to alter its chartered plane so that everyone aboard could see one of the plane's seven screens, he said.

"The plane holds 429, and we have about 340 reservations so far," Harrison said. "We don't want to fill the plane up, though, because we want to be able to move around."

To entice participants even more, Harrison put together more than $50,000 in prizes, ranging from a western tuxedo with a mink hat to five frozen Santa Gertrudis embryos. There also will be a women's fashion show and sale and a men's fashion show during the eight-hour flight.

Opryland plans showboat to celebrate 60th anniversary

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 2 percent increase in attendance at the Opryland theme park, more than 800,000 spectators at the Grand Ole Opry and "the fastest-growing network on cable" are among the highlights for 1984 boasted by Opryland USA Inc.

And looking to the new year, Opryland plans to launch a $12 million showboat, celebrate the Opry's 60th anniversary and expand The Nashville Network to Canada, says E.W. "Bud" Wendell, Opryland president and chief executive officer.

Wendell oversees the company that includes the theme park, the historic Opry, the 22-month-old country cable network, a 1,068-room convention hotel and conservatory, Opryland Productions and the WSM AM and FM radio stations.

The theme park, which opened in 1972, experienced a 2 percent growth in 1984 — a year when the national attendance average to theme parks was down 3 percent, Wendell said.

General Jackson, a 300-foot showboat, is under construction and scheduled to dock June 1 at the theme park on the Cumberland River in suburban Nashville. Network negotiations are underway to welcome the craft during a network television special, he said.

The boat will be used as a 1,200-passenger excursion boat in the daytime and a nighttime spot that can accommodate 700 people for dinner and a show, he said.

General Jackson, a 300-foot showboat, is under construction and scheduled to dock June 1 at the (Opryland) theme park..."

The continued popularity of the Opry was enhanced during the past year by President Reagan's visit to the Opry House in September to help Roy Acuff celebrate his 81st birthday.

"That was a real highlight and an honor — to the company and to Roy," Wendell said.

Owners are planning to mark the Opry's 60th birthday with a two-hour television special for a major network in late 1985, he said.

The success of the luxurious Opryland convention hotel and conservatory during 1984 has prompted the owner to plan a a multimillion-dollar expansion, with groundbreaking in late 1985 or early 1986.

"We initially thought we would add 400 rooms, but it now looks like it will be 500 to 600 rooms," Wendell said.

In 1984, the hotel had a 82 percent occupancy rate, while the national average was about 67 percent, he said.

Calling The Nashville Network "a sleeping giant," Wendell said he wants to expand the cable programing in Canada during 1985 and make it available in one of every four U.S. homes by spring.

Currently, TNN is one of only a handful of U.S.-produced cable networks available in Canada and is seen in only 200,000 to 300,000 homes. Just to reach that far, TNN had to seek a waiver of a Canadian regulation requiring that 20 percent of the programming content be Canadian.

"We had a great deal of support for that," Wendell said.

"In production of programming, I'd say this is the third-largest television production center in the country," behind Los Angeles and New York, Wendell said.

"Our facility is the largest employer of union musicians in the country for various productions," he said.

"We're not known for drama or sitcoms, but for music," he said.

Opryland USA is owned by Gaylord Broadcasting Co. of Dallas, which is a subsidiary of Gaylord's Oklahoma Publishing Co. of Oklahoma City.

Gaylord Broadcasting bought the Opryland complex from American General Companies of Houston in 1983. American General had purchased the businesses when it bought NLT Corp. the year before and later announced plans to divest all non-insurance properties.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D. Water won't add weight

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter has been trying to keep her weight down by cutting back on the amount of water she drinks. I remember reading in your column that water is important. Can you advise me of what I can say to her about this? — Mrs. F.C., Muskegon, Mich.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. C.: An adequate amount of fluids is essential to good health. You can tell your daughter that while drinking additional water might cause her to weigh more temporarily, it will not make her any fatter.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You once gave a rule-of-thumb formula that could be used to determine the ideal weight for men and women. It was based on a person's height. Would you please repeat it? — Hannah, Easton, Penn.

Dear Hannah: The ideal weight for a woman five feet in height is 100 pounds; five pounds should be added for each additional inch in height. The ideal weight for a man five feet in height is 106; six pounds should be added for each additional inch in height.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Things seem to become more complicated every day. I started eating bran when I found out that fiber was good for you. Now I learn that there are different kinds of fiber, and that some of them also help lower cholesterol. If this is true, what kind of fiber helps lower cholesterol? — G.T., Hutchinson, Kan.

Dear Mr. T.: Foods that contain fiber that helps lower cholesterol levels include apples, other fruits, carrots, oats and soybeans. Bran is not effective in lowering cholesterol levels.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Although I am now in my 30s, I continue to enjoy the sports I participated in when I was in high school and college. At present I play basketball in a league sponsored by the local community center. I know I am not a pro, but I would like to do well, and I would like to know what kind of a meal you would recommend prior to a game. — Wayne, Silver Sprilg, Md.

Dear Wayne: I do not suggest that any particular pre-game meal will make you a better athlete, but high-carbohydrate, low-fat foods are your best bet. Such foods are more easily and more quickly digested than are high-protein, high-fat foods. Fat remains in the stomach longer and may be a source of discomfort during a game.

Low-fat foods such as fruit, cereal with skim milk, whole wheat bread and soup broth would be much better choices before a game than high-sugar carbohydrates such as candy and honey.

For Perry, St. Paul, Minn: It is true that the moderate consumption of alcohol increases high-density lipo-protein cholesterol levels. It is for this reason that alcohol is believed to have a protective influence on the development of cardiovascular disease.

Neil Solomon M.D. is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write to Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replis but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Burger King delivers

GAHANNA, Ohio (AP) — The owner of seven Burger Kings has launched a home delivery service, and he hopes his idea turns out to be a whopper.

"Everyone expects pizza to be home delivered," Denny Erwin, who owns the Columbus-area eateries. "But now when we say, 'Here's a Whopper, fries and Pepsi,' it blows them away."

If the experiment at the Gahanna restaurant proves successful, delivery could be expanded nationwide, Erwin said.

The pioneering Burger King delivered 53 meals during a five-hour period the first night delivery service was available.

Prices for delivered food are 5 percent higher than those for food served in the restaurant, and a $5 minimum order is required.

COCONUT OR BANANA CREAM PIE WITH PLUM SAUCE
(Serves 4-6)

SERVING DIRECTIONS
Prepare Shrimp Stuffed Steak Roll, Julienne Vegetables and Plum Sauce in pressure cooker according to recipe directions. Cool Steak Roll, wrap and refrigerate. Meanwhile, prepare Creamy Sauce from remaining liquid in pressure cooker. Make Jellied Rice Mold from sauce; chill. Follow recipe directions for making Vegetables Vinaigrette. At serving time, arrange cold Steak Roll slices, Molds and Vegetables Vinaigrette on large serving platter. Serve Plum Sauce at room temperature over thawed cream pie.

Shrimp Stuffed Steak Roll

- 1 (1-1/2 pound) flank steak or (1-1/2 pound) top round steak about 1/2-inch thick
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- salt and pepper
- 1 (7-ounce) can tiny shrimp, drained
- 1/4 cup fresh bread crumbs
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon minced green onion
- 1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
- 1 tablespoon marinade
- 1/2 teaspoon basil
- 3 Romaine leaves, spine removed or 8-10 spinach or sorrel leaves
- 1 teaspoon oil
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup red wine
- 2 packages (5-ounce each) frozen prepared Chicken A la King or Cream Chipped Beef
- Prepare 1 cup instant rice according to package directions

Butterfly the flank steak, pounding lightly to even thickness. Make marinade by combining lemon juice and 2 tablespoons oil; brush half of marinade over steak. Sprinkle steak with salt and pepper. Let stand at room temperature while preparing stuffing. Combine shrimp with bread crumbs, garlic, onion, Tabasco, remaining marinade and basil. Soften Romaine under hot tap water; pat dry. Cover steak with Romaine. Spread shrimp over Romaine. Roll and tie securely. Prepare vegetable packet and Plum Sauce; set aside. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a 6-quart pressure cooker. Brown meat on all sides, curving to fit pan. Add water and wine. Close pressure cooker cover securely. Place pressure regulator on vent pipe. Cook for ten minutes at 15 pounds pressure. Cool pressure cooker at once. DO NOT ATTEMPT TO REMOVE COVER UNTIL PRESSURE IS COMPLETELY REDUCED. Remove pressure cooker cover and place vegetable packet beside meat. Place pressure cooker rack on top of meat and vegetables. Balance casserole of plum sauce on rack. Close pressure cooker cover securely. Place pressure regulator on vent pipe. Cook for 10 minutes at 15 pounds pressure. (Meanwhile prepare instant rice.) Let pressure drop of its own accord. Remove fruit, vegetables and steak roll from pressure cooker. Place steak roll on serving platter and keep warm. PREPARE CREAMY SAUCE: Rapidly boil remaining juices to reduce by half (about 3/4 cup). Add frozen Chicken A la King or Creamed Chipped Beef, stirring to heat and blend. Makes about 1-3/4 cups. Serve sauce over or with sliced steak roll. FOR COLD MEAL, USE SAUCE FOR PREPARING JELLIED RICE MOLD. Arrange vegetables along side meat on platter.

Steamed Rice

1 cup regular milled long grain white rice
1-1/2 cups water
1 cup water

Combine rice and 1-1/2 cups water in metal bowl. (Use a 5-cup capacity bowl, 3-inches high or less, which will fit loosely into a pressure cooker.) Place 1 cup water, cooking rack, and bowl in pressure cooker. Close cover securely. Place pressure regulator on unit pipe. Cook 5 minutes at 15 pounds pressure. Let pressure drop of its own accord. DO NOT ATTEMPT TO REMOVE COVER UNTIL PRESSURE IS COMPLETELY REDUCED. Open pressure cooker and allow rice to steam uncovered 5 minutes.

Yield: 3 cups cooked rice.

Jellied Rice Mold

- 1-3/4 cup Creamy Sauce
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1 cup cooked rice
- 1/2 cup sour cream

Keep Creamy Sauce made for meat hot. Soften gelatin in vinegar; add to hot sauce, stirring to dissolve. Add cooked rice and sour cream. Spoon into decorative individual molds as shown or a 3-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold to serve. Arrange mold on serving platter with cold sliced steak roll and vegetables vinaigrette.

Vegetables Packet

- 2 cups assorted fresh vegetables, cut in Julienne strips (green beans, carrots, turnips, celery, green pepper, etc.)
- 1 tablespoon butter
- aluminum foil

Wrap vegetables and butter securely in aluminum foil. Cook with meat as directed.

Vegetables Vinaigrette for Cold Meal

- 1/3 cup olive oil
- 4 teaspoons vinegar
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- pepper

Put cooked vegetables in a bowl or plastic container. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over vegetables. Cover and chill for several hours or overnight. Arrange vegetables with slices of cold steak roll and rice molds on serving platter.

Plum Sauce

- 4 red plums, cut into sixths, or eighths, seeds removed
- 4-1/3 cup packed brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon orange liqueur
- 1 20-ounce ready-to-bake frozen apple pie, baked or 14-oz. ready-to-serve frozen coconut or banana cream pie

Place fruit, sugar and liqueur in a 16-ounce baker that will fit in pressure cooker. Wrap securely in aluminum foil. Cook as directed. Serve warm over apple pie or at room temperature over thawed cream pie.

THE BUTCHER

Meat, poultry predictions made

By MERLE ELLIS

I find it impossible to resist the temptation to be prophetic this time of year. Resolutions I never make; at least I've never made one I didn't break, so I don't bother anymore.

Predictions are another matter — those are fun. If things work out I can say, "I told you so," and if they don't, I somehow never have the terrible guilt feelings I always suffered the first day of every February after having broken every resolution I made the month before. No resolutions this year, only a few predictions.

BEEF OUTLOOK

There is not likely to be any dramatic change in the beef price picture in the coming year. Beef is going to continue to be the most expensive of the popular red meats, but it will remain, nonetheless, the most popular red meat.

You will, I think, see more "branded" beef in the marketplace in the year and in years ahead. By that I don't mean that the beef you buy will be stamped with a hot branding iron like the longhorns of old. Rather, I'm referring to a trend in meat marketing where the packer or producer puts his label on the meat at the packing house.

The chicken industry has been successful with branding their products. Many consumers aren't happy with just chicken anymore, they look for Perdue or Holly Farms or Foster Farms chickens. Angus breeders are having success with the Certified Angus Program. There are markets in California handling Harris Ranch beef exclusively. In Nebraska, the Limosine breed of beef cattle is being marketed as such.

This trend toward "branding" is apt to cost you a little more, but it gives the producer or processor motivation to produce the best possible product — his name is on it — and it gives the consumer some assurance that the product is of high quality and worth a little higher price.

It's interesting that while consumers are buying "generic" in other parts of the supermarket, they seem to want brand names at the meat counter. Consumers are confusing!

PORK OUTLOOK

Hog producers around the country have cut back on production in the past few months in order to boost prices. It's worked; prices have jumped some and the upswing may continue well into 1985 due to the decrease in supply. By summer, however, the swing probably will be back in the other direction.

There are some interesting technological developments on the horizon that could help the pork industry and the consumer. It may be possible in the not too distant future to eliminate once and for all the widely held belief that pork consumption could cause a disease called trichinosis. The disease is a clinical rarity in the United Statesthese days, but the stigma still seems to plague the pork industry.

Experiments have shown that irradiation could guarantee trichina-free pork. The process involves the passage of gamma waves through food much as microwaves pass through food in a microwave oven.

The meat itself in no way becomes radioactive. It's not a new process; it has been successfully used abroad for several years and the foods eaten by our own astronauts in space are irradiated. It's a subject about which we shall talk again in '85.

Another subject, too complicated to go into in detail but about which we shall speak again — after this butcher does some homework — is the new "PFF" requirement which, I think, is going to greatly improve the general overall quality of the hams available in the supermarkets of this country.

Starting next April 15, 1985, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will require minimum protein levels in hams and other cured pork products by regulating the amount of curing solution used in the curing process. Known as protein-fat-free (PFF), the new USDA ruling will replace the current regulation that allows any amount of curing solution to be pumped into a product as long as the finished product is accurately labeled.

This new regulation, and the computer technology that has made it feasible, will provide more accurately labeled products. It will also, I believe, improve the quality of hams on the market. I think consumers in general and ham loversin particular can chalk up one for our side with the new PFF regulation.

POULTRY OUTLOOK

The pork industry needs all the help it can get and that may not be enough, because 1985 may be the year that poultry consumption surpasses pork consumption in America for the first time. The projections are that we will consume over 14 billion pounds of poultry this year versus 13.5 billion pounds of pork.

By the end of the decade, projections indicate that we will be consuming some 16.5 billion pounds of poultry annually and it's going to continue to be comparitively inexpensive — particularly if you cut up your own chickens. That's another thing we'll talk about.

Rental wine cellar planned

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Alain Bellet, a transplanted Frenchman, plans to build a wine cellar for 600,000 bottles of wine.

Bellet, who moved to Dallas 10 years ago, already has transformed the sauna at his home into a personal wine cellar. Now, he hopes to build a wine cellar for all of Dallas.

The former Parisian came up with the idea of a commercial wine cellar where Dallasites could rent space to store their wines and he founded New World Wine Cellars nine months ago to build the 20,000-square-foot facility.

"The problem here in America is that wines are not always stored properly," said Bellet, who serves as president of New World Wine Cellars. "I have found fine, old wines that were practically undrinkable, like vinegar."

The Frenchman said wine lovers will be able to buy a 20-year lease on a 10-case space for $750 at his above-ground cellar.

The cellar, expected to cost $1 million, will control and monitor every variable: temperature, humidity, vibration and light. And should electrical power ever fail, Bellet said, a backup energy system will switch on immediately to protect the wine in storage.

Renters also will be able to have their wine delivered or pick it up themselves.

Cynthia West, Bellet's wife and the company's vice president, said, "We will have a room where people can come and check out their wine or leave it. But we are trying to limit access to the cellar because of the problem of keeping the temperature at 55 degrees."

Construction of the mammoth wine cellar in the land of Lone Star beer is expected to start about next May and could be completed before the end of 1985.

Once Bellet's company obtains 25 percent of the $1 million cost for the land, construction and equipment, it will start building. Until that time, he said, the firm will keep prospective renters' money in an escrow account and their money will be returned with interest should the company fail to obtain enough preconstruction leases.

Bellet said 60 people had expressed interest in the idea and two agreed to rent spaces during the first week leases went on sale. The couple and a financial partner, Larry Sisson, created the company and began selling 20-year leases in December at discount prices.

Until March, Bellet said wine lovers can purchase a discount lease. A 20-year lease on a 10-case space would cost $100 a year for the first five years and nothing for the next 15 years — a total of $500 instead of the normal $750. All the renters also will be charged $6 a month to cover the costs of energy, insurance, maintenance and monitoring.

Nutritious carrots easy to cook

Hearst News Service

Carrots are tasty, nutritious and easy to cook. They may be boiled, steamed, or stir-fried. To boil, add 1 inch of water to pan and cook covered. Simmer whole carrots about 20 minutes. Plan on 10 to 15 minutes for cut carrots. To save time and energy, cook carrots in the pressure saucepan. Under 15 pounds of pressure, whole carrots cook in five minutes, or, sliced, in three minutes.

To stir-fry, coarsely shred 3 cups carrots and one small onion. In 10-inch skillet, melt two tablespoons margarine. Add carrots, onion and one tablespoon brown sugar. Stir and cover. Cook over medium heat about five minutes, until carrots are tender-crisp. Serves six.

If you're cutting down on salt or calories, rely on herbs and spices when seasoning carrots. Basil, caraway seed, curry powder, dill, ginger, mace, marjoram, mint, nutmeg and parsley compliment the mild sweet carrot flavor.

CARROT SOUP

⅔ cup chopped onion
3 cups finely chopped carrots
1 quart chicken broth, divided

Chopped parsley

Melt margarine in large saucepan. Add onions and cook until soft. Add carrots, 2 cups chicken broth, rice and seasonings. Simmer, covered, 15 minutes. Puree soup in blender or food mill. Return to saucepan and add remaining 2 cups broth and milk or cream. Heat to serving temperature. Garnish with chopped parsley. Makes 5 cups.

SAUERKRAUT AND CARROT SALAD

1 cup sauerkraut
1 cup shredded carrot
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon caraway seed
¼ cup creamy dressing or mayonnaise

Rinse and drain sauerkraut. Add carrots, sugar and caraway seed. Toss. Add dressing and toss. Serves 6.

To make Creamy Topping, combine 2 tablespoons milk with 3 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing. Add to drained carrots and heat to serving temperature.

To make Honey Bee Glaze, in a seperate small saucepan, combine 2 tablespoons honey, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and ¼ cup margarine. Cook over low heat until margarine is melted. Pour over drained carrots and garnish with ¼ cup chopped walnuts if desired.

To make Polka Dots, add ¼-cup margarine and ½ cup sliced pimiento-stuffed olives to drained carrots.

CARROT BREAD

1 cup finely grated raw carrots
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 tablespoon oil
1 cup boiling water
2 eggs
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup chopped nuts

Combine carrots, brown sugar, baking soda and oil in a large bowl. Add boiling water and stir to mix. Set aside.

Sausage sure winner in Super Bowl menu

SAUSAGE GUMBO

1 pound hot breakfast pork sausage
⅔ cup all-purpose flour
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped sweet pepper (bell or banana)
1 large clove garlic, minced (or 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder)
1½ cups tomato juice (12 oz. can)
1 cup water
1 cube each: beef bouillon, chicken bouillon
⅛ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1 pound bratwurst, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 cup sliced okra
1 cup chopped tomatoes (fresh or canned)
Cooked white rice

Brown sausage in Dutch oven. Drain fat from sausage, reserving ½ cup. Set sausage aside. Return fat to pan and stir in flour to make a roux. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until roux is rich golden brown, about 15 minutes. Add onion, pepper and garlic. Cook and stir until vegetables are tender. Add sausage, tomato juice, water, bouillon cubes and hot pepper sauce. Bring to boil, stirring often. Reduce heat and simmer 20 minutes. Add bratwurst, okra and tomatoes and simmer 15 minutes while stirring frequently. Serve sausage gumbo over rice. Makes about 2½ quarts, enough for 10 servings of 1 cup gumbo over ½ cup rice.

ITALIAN SAUSAGE AND RICE CASSEROLE

1 (6 oz.) package long grain and wild rice
1 pound Italian sausage, casing removed ½ cup sliced onion
⅔ cup chopped sweet peppers (bell or banana)
½ teaspoon tarragon leaves
¼ teaspoon marjoram leaves
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
Sauce:
2 tablespoons butter or margarine or fat drained from sausage
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot water
1 cube chicken bouillon
⅔ cup milk or light cream
¼ cup slivered almonds

Cook rice as directed on package. Meanwhile, cook sausage in large skillet or Dutch oven over medium heat, stirring to break it into small pieces. Add onion. Cook and stir until onions are translucent and sausage has changed color. Drain off fat. Stir in peppers, tarragon, marjoram, salt and white pepper. Combine rice and sausage mixture in 1½-quart casserole.

Sauce: Melt butter. Stir in flour. Gradually stir in hot water and bouillon cube. Cook and stir over medium heat until sauce comes to boil. Stir in milk and simmer three minutes. Pour sauce over rice and sausage mixture in casserole. Sprinkle almonds over top. Bake at 350-F. about 20 minutes until almonds are golden. Makes about 5½ cups, enough for six servings.

NOTE: For a moister casserole, cover while baking.

SAUSAGE JAMBALAYA

2 tablespoons butter
¾ pound bone-in chicken pieces
1 pound hot Italian sausage, casing removed
1 cup diced smoked pork or ham
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 cups chopped celery
½ cup chopped onion
3 cloves garlic, minced or ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon each: black pepper, rosemary leaves, white pepper
⅛ teaspoon thyme leaves
2½ cups water
1 cube beef bouillon
½ cup plain white rice
1½ cups chopped tomatoes (fresh or canned)
2 cups chopped sweet peppers (bell or banana)
1 cup chopped scallions
½ cup chopped parsley
6 to 8 ounces cooked or canned crabmeat, cartilage removed

In large Dutch oven melt butter. Add chicken. Add sausage and smoked pork. Brown well. Remove all meat from pan; set aside. Drain off fat; measure ¼ cup and return to pan. Stir in flour. Cook and stir over very low heat until rich brown color, about 20 minutes. Add celery, onions and garlic; cook two to three minutes. Stir in seasonings. Add water and bring to boiling. Add bouillon cube and rice. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Meanwhile remove chicken from bones. Add chicken, sausage and smoked pork to pan. Stir in tomatoes. Cover and simmer at least 15 minutes but no longer than 30 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients. Bring just to boiling; reduce heat and simmer until peppers are tender, about 10 minutes. Makes about three quarts, enough for eight to 12 servings.

SAUSAGE AND BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

1 (8 oz.) can or jar sliced mushrooms (optional)
1 (20 oz.) package chopped broccoli, broccoli cuts or 2 pounds fresh broccoli, trimmed and chopped
1 (16 oz.) jar pasteurized process cheese spread
½ cup evaporated milk
¾ teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ tesapoon garlic powder or 2 to 3 cloves garlic, crushed
½ pound smoked sausage, thinly sliced

Drain mushrooms and combine with broccoli in 1½-quart casserole. In saucepan heat cheese spread and gradually stir in evaporated milk to make sauce. Remove from heat; stir in salt and garlic. Pour sauce into casserole. Cover and bake at 350-F. for 30 minutes. Remove cover. Return to oven and bake five to 10 minutes longer, until edges of sausage begin to crisp. Makes about five cups, enough for six servings.

COUNTRY SAUSAGE PINWHEELS

Pinwheels:
1 pound hot or mild breakfast pork sausage
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons butter or lard
2 tablespoons vegetable shortening
1 tablespoon baking powder
2 teaspoons fines herbs (or combination of equal parts chives, parsley and tarragon)
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
½ teaspoon sugar
¾ cup milk
Gravy:
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
4½ tablespoons flour
1¼ teaspoons fines herbs (or combination equal parts chives, parsley and tarragon)
¼ teaspoon black pepper
Pinch crushed red pepper
2 cups milk

Pinwheels: Take sausage out of refrigerator about 1½ hours before starting. In mixing bowl combine flour, baking powder, fines herbs, seasoned salt and sugar. Make a biscuit dough by cutting in butter and shortening until mixture is crumbly. Stir in milk just until soft dough forms. Turn out dough onto lightly floured surface. Roll or pat out dough to form rectangle 14x10-inches.

Unwrap sausage; place on waxed paper. Cover sausage with waxed paper. Pat or roll out to form rectangle 14x8-inches. Turn sausage over onto biscuit dough and peel off waxed paper, leaving 2 inches plain dough at one end. Roll up, jellyroll fashion, starting from 14-inch side with sausage inside dough. Finish rolling with plain biscuit dough on outer edges. Wrap dough in waxed paper and chill in refrigerator 45 minutes. Remove dough from refrigerator, unwrap and cut roll into 1-inch slices. Place slices, cut side down, in 13x9-inch pan. Bake at 400-F. about 35 minutes until biscuit dough is golden.

Gravy: In saucepan melt butter. Stir in flour and seasonings. Gradually stir in milk. Add bouillon cubes Cook and stir over medium heat until gravy comes to boil. Reduce heat; simmer 1 to 2 minutes. Ladle gravy over pinwheels. Makes 14 pinwheels and 2 cups gravy.

Herbs can add surprising interest to many foods

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst News Service

Cutting back on salt doesn't mean you have to cut back on flavor. Foods can taste just as good — and perhaps better — when flavored with herbs and spices.

There are many mouth-watering possibilities for livening up a dish. "Take one bay leaf ..." is good recipe advice for many stews, casseroles, and the like, says Holly H. Shimizu, curator of the herb garden at the U.S. National Arboretum in Washington, D.C., and author of "Do Yourself a Flavor," a guide to using herbs in place of salt. The guide appeared in a recent issue of the FDA Consumer Magazine, published by the Food and Drug Administration. Reprints are available free by sending your name and address to: Do Yourself a Flavor, Consumer Information Center, Dept. 613M, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Shimizu says herbs can provide creative, tasteful alternatives to salt for flavoring foods. Through the skillful use of herbs and spices, imaginative flavors can be created and simple foods made into gourmet delights.

There are no strict limits to the use of herbs, the young curator says. A good rule is not to mix two very strong herbs together, but rather one strong one and one or more milder flavors to complement both the stronger herb and the food.

If you are wondering what spice or seasoning goes with what, Shimizu provides the guide below.

Here are some tips for cooking with herbs and spices:

— In general, the weaker the flavor of the main item, the less seasoning needed to achieve a satisfactory balance of flavor in the end product.

— Dried herbs are stronger than fresh, and powdered herbs are stronger than crumbled. A useful formula is: one quarter teaspoon powdered herbs equals three-quarters to one teaspoon crumbled equals two teaspoons fresh.

— Leaves should be chopped very fine because the more cut surface exposed, the more flavor released.

— A mortar and pestle can be kept in the kitchen to powder dry herbs when necessary.

— Scissors are often the best utensil for cutting fresh herbs.

— Be conservative in the amount of an herb used until you are familiar with its strength. The aromatic oil can be strong and objectionable if too much is used.

— The flavoring of herbs is lost by extended cooking. Add herbs to soups or stews 45 minutes before the cooking is completed.

Microwaved chicken easily prepared

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Chicken is the meat for the microwave age. It cooks up juicy and tender in a matter of minutes and can be transformed into so many microwave dishes, from simple fare to haute cuisine.

Casseroles, salads and sandwiches including cooked chicken used to mean boiling the meat — but it's so much quicker and less messy to microwave.

To prepare chicken for use in recipes that call for cooked meat, follow these guidelines:

— One piece — 2 to 4 minutes at HIGH.

— Three pieces — 5 to 7 minutes at HIGH.

— Six pieces — 8 to 14 minutes at HIGH, rotating one-half turn after 5 minutes.

While deboned chicken may be more hassle-free, it is also more costly and likely to be tougher than bone-in meat.

The muscle tissue shrinks quite a bit during the first eight hours off the bone, according to a recent study. So you may be better off spending the few minutes it takes to remove the bones yourself.

Skinning chicken pieces is easy when you grasp the skin with a paper towel and simply pull it off, along with any fat, trimming with a sharp knife where necessary.

Skinned chicken is a must for dieters.

The recipes below call for varying amounts of cooked, skinned meat; use leftovers or microwave breasts and thighs, let cool, then shred or cube.

Bones and skin are easier to remove after cooking. However, skin should be removed before cooking if calories are a problem.

Chicken is becoming more and more popular on American dinner tables because it's inexpensive, plentiful and low in cholesterol and calories.

So whether you're watching your budget, your diet or your cholesterol intake (and most of us are keeping tabs on at least one of these), chicken can probably fill your bill.

CALIFORNIA CHICKEN SANDWICHES

1½ cups cooked, shredded chicken
3 strips bacon, cooked and crumbled
Dash each ground black pepper and curry powder
3 English muffins, split and conventionally toasted
6 tbsps. mayonnaise
1 ripe medium-size avocado, peeled, pitted and thinly sliced
½ cup grated cheddar cheese

Toss together chicken, bacon, pepper and curry powder. Spread each muffin sice with 1 tablespoon mayonnaise. Top with chicken mixture, avocado slices, and sprinkling of cheese. Microwave three at a time until cheese melts, 1 to 2 minutes.

Serves 3 to 6.

CHICKEN A LA KING

⅓ cup butter or margarine
⅓ cup flour
1 cup each milk and cream (or 2 cups half & half)
1 chicken bouillon cube
1 cup hot water
½ tsp. instant minced onion
2 cups cooked and cubed chicken
1 (4 oz.) jar pimiento slices
1 (4 oz.) can mushroom stems and pieces, undrained
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper

Place butter or margarine in 2-quart glass casserole. Microwave until melte, about 1 minute. Stir in flour a little at a time, then gradually blend in milk and cream or half & half. Dissolve bouillon cube in hot water; stir in instant minced onion. Add mixture to cream sauce, blending well. Microwave 8 to 10 minutes, stirring well with wire whisk after 4 minutes. Stir sauce again, then add remaining ingredients, mixing well. Microwave at MEDIUM HIGH (70 percent power), covered, for 7 to 10 minutes, stirring after 5 minutes. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

Serves 4.

CHICKEN AND RICE ALMONDINE

4 cups cooked, cubed chicken
4 cups cooked rice
1 medium onion, chopped
½ cup each chopped celery and slivered almonds
1 (4 oz.) can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup hot water
1 chicken bouillon cube
½ cup each milk and white wine
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
¼ tsps. each salt and pepper
Paprika

Combine all ingredients in 3-quart glass casserole. Stir well to blend. Covr and microwave for 9 to 10 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes. Let stand, covered, several minutes before serving. Sprinkle lightly with paprika.

Serves 6 to 8.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Chow mein fun to make

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Chow mein is a fun dish that is sure to please. You can prepare the fried noodles in advance to avoid the last-minute annoyance of frying. This recipe is from the Song Hee restaurant in Westwood. Calif.

SONG HEE BEEF CHOW MEIN WITH CHINESE NOODLES

6 ounces flank steak
¼ teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon salt
Dry white wine
1½ teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
6 ounces Chinese egg noodles (thin strips)
Oil
1 cup chicken stock
6 ounces bean sprouts

Cut beef into paper-thin slices. Place in bowl and sprinkle with pepper, salt, 1½ teaspoons white wine, cornstarch and water. Mix well. Set aside.

Cook noodles in boiling salted water 15 minutes. Drain. Spread noodles in pan. Heat 2 to 3 tablespoons oil in wok or large skillet. Drop noodles in hot oil until golden brown. Remove noodles from pan and drain. Set aside.

Heat pan 2 minutes. Add 1 to 2 tablespoons oil and heat until smoking. Add beef. Stir-fry until almost done. Add chicken stock, bean sprouts, noodles and season to taste with additional white wine, salt and pepper, if needed.

Stir-fry 2 minutes. Turn out onto platter. Makes 1 to 2 servings.

Zucchini-carrot muffins unique

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

It's been fascinating to watch what I call "The Zucchini Explosion." In less than a dozen years the zucchini has become extraordinarily popular.

There are now six soft-cover books devoted to zucchini recipes on my shelves. Their publishing dates are from the early 1970s to 1984.

To tread comparatively new ground as far as zucchini recipes go, we present Zucchini and Carrot Muffins.

They're very much in the present mode — made with skim milk, egg whites, safflower oil and some whole wheat flour.

ZUCCHINI AND CARROT MUFFINS

1½ cups all-purpose white flour
½ cup whole wheat flour
⅔ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅓ cup safflower oil
¾ cup skim milk
2 large egg whites
1¼ cups coarsely shredded pared carrots, loosely packed
⅔ cup coarsely shredded unpared zucchini, loosely packed
½ cup walnuts, coarsely chopped

On wax paper or in a medium bowl, thoroughly stir together white flour, whole wheat flour, sugar, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg.

In a large bowl stir together oil, milk and egg whites until blended; add flour mixture; stir just until blended. Stir in carrots, zucchini and walnuts. Turn into oiled muffin-pan cups (each holding ⅓ cup), filling them about ⅔ full.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 20 minutes. Serve warm.

Makes 12.

Wine makers' image as important as grapes

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Newcomers to wine making often find that making premium products is no easy task — but it's a snap compared with selling the stuff.

For no matter how good the wine is, in the face of exceptional values from well-entrenched French, German, Italian and American wineries, new producers of fine wine have a near-impossible task.

Marketing is the key for the wine industry of the 1980s. Two new wineries, which started at the same time recently, may have hit upon the key element in making a brand image. Curiously, neither winery had heard of the other, yet both had been formed with many of the same concepts.

Indeed, the parallels between the Chateau Julien in California's Carmel Valley and the Gainey Vineyard in the Santa Ynez Valley, also in California, are so striking it's hard to believe the concepts were conceived independently. Here are some of the similarities:

Both wineries realize that brand image is critical, so both have chosen classic label designs that feature their names in stylized print written in gold.

Both feel that direct contact with the public is better than the coldness of long-distance selling through salespeople, so both have opened handsome visitors centers to host the public.

BOTH INTEND to make only premium varietal wines, using the best grapes and most modern equipment. Both have spent thousands of dollars on expensive French oak barrels, and have highly experienced technicians for wine makers.

Both have kitchens in the tasting room facilities geared to making gourmet dinners after the first quakes of startup have eased.

Both wineries have had wine on the market for a brief period of time. Chateau Julien has been on shelves for about a year; Gainey released its first wines a few weeks ago. All of the first releases of both wineries were not from their own grapes, or from grapes they will eventually use regularly. Since the wineries wanted their products on shelves quickly, they contracted for some wines to be made to their specifications at other wineries.

Chateau Julien is the more established of the two, sitting in a swale in the Carmel Valley. The handsome tower-graced building, reminiscent of French and Spanish architecture, is a gem, resplendent with leaded glass windows and wrought-iron and oak fixtures.

Michael Block, vice president and a partner in the winery, said the goal is to use grapes from local areas, such as Monterey. Chateau Julien has only eight acres at the winery, none of it bearing fruit. Yet wine maker Bill Anderson has turned out some exciting wines.

ONE OF HIS best is a 1983 Chardonnay Private Reserve from the Cobblestone Vineyard in Monterey, Calif. ($17), which has big, lush fruit aromas and intense flavors. At $15, the 1983 Chardonnay from the Paraiso Springs Vineyard in Monterey County also is impressive. However, the best buy is Chateau Julien's 1983 Chardonnay from grapes off actor Wayne Rogers' Rancho Tierra Rejada vineyard in San Luis Obispo, Calif. At $8.75 it's an excellent buy — clean, full of varietal flavors.

The first red wine released by the winery was its 1982 Merlot ($12), winner of a gold medal and two silver medals at three statewide judgings this year. During a recent visit, I tasted the winery's first Cabernet, a 1982 effort from a hillside vineyard in Monterey. The flavors were extremely impressive, and the wine appears to have what it takes to age well. In addition, a tank sample of the 1983 Merlot was even better than the '82. Release dates for those wines have not been set.

Block, a former restaurant owner in Carmel, Calif., was brought into the winery when Robert and Pat Brower decided to buy the assets of the old Richert & Sons Winery in Morgan Hill. Since Richert specialized in sherry, Chateau Julien gained two exceptional ones to sell.

GAINEY VINEYARD is so new that it was only admitted as a member of The Wine Institute, the San Francisco-based trade organization, on Nov. 28. Visiting Gainey, one gets the feeling that nothing was left to chance.

Located three miles east of Solvang, the tiny Danish community in the heart of the picturesque Santa Ynez Valley, the Gainey winery, which finished construction only a few weeks ago, sits among four old, craggy oak trees amid 1,800 acres owned by Dan and Robin Gainey.

The rambling, ranch-style facility is so carefully designed that it looks as if it were cut from a textbook on how to make wineries.

The Gainey family had, for two decades, operated a multiple-purpose farm, raising horses and growing produce. But economic conditions change.

"Two years ago, the Gaineys realized that the diversified farm and Arabian horse ranch wasn't as good as it should be," said winery manager Barry Johnson, "so they decided to move into grapes."

At the front is the tasting room, a huge, L-shaped facility with an inlaid Spanish tile floor, hand-rubbed wood and luxurious trappings all around. It is clearly conducive to wine tasting. The goal of the Gaineys and Johnson is to sell 10,000 cases per year at the tasting room.

"A few wines will be available to special restaurants," said Johnson, "but otherwise we want to sell direct to the public if we can."

FIFTY-FOUR ACRES are planted, including a one-third-acre plot called the Visitors' Vineyard. Walking along a courtyard, guests can receive a brief seminar on what the different grape varieties look like, how they grow and on different methods of growing them — such as the various types of pruning, vine training, etc.

Behind the tasting room is a state-of-the-art winery with a new stainless steel, bottling line and a cellarful of new oak barrels from France.

A year ago, after the Gaineys decided to move into wine making, they had no building, no vineyards and no wine maker.

To solve at least one of those problems immediately, Gainey hired Hugo Oswald III, formerly with Husch Vineyards in Mendocino, Calif., to be the winemaker. Oswald, who looks like a younger Omar Sharif, is a brilliant technician who is most cautious about over-oaking his wines. His award-winning Husch wines are lean and crisp.

Stew favorite dish world-wide

By TOM HOGE
AP Food and Wine Writer

In my mind, one of the most comforting experiences after a day out in the cold is to sit down to a bubbling meat stew. It's one of the few meat dishes I still love.

Beef is the most popular meat for this dish, but lamb or pork can be very tasty. And one of the best stews I ever ate was a rich dish featuring venison that I had during a visit to Finland.

The United Nations once ran a check on favorite main dishes around the world. Of the 76 member nations polled, almost 60 percent listed stews, and this included a number of countries in warm climates.

The entries ranged from Dwight D. Eisenhower's personal recipe for beef stew to a Saudi Arabian concoction of chicken, rice, onions, carrots and spices called Rus Bukhary.

Afghanistan weighed in with a pungent mixture of beef, yogurt, beans and peppers. And Belgium submitted its famed carbonnade, which is cooked in beer.

Stews often present a picture of a nation's favorite foods. Potatoes, for instance, are a key ingredient of Irish stew, while Italian stew usually includes macaroni. And Hungarian goulash would not be complete without that nation's flat, egg-rich noodles.

In Brazil, where my wife was born, a rich stew known as feijoada is the centerpiece of Sunday dinner. The family sits around the table and they help themselves from a big bowl filled with a steaming mixture of salt pork, dried beef, sausage, bacon, black beans and hot spices.

For some reason, a number of Latin American nations refer to blockbuster stews as soup. Ecuador uses this name for a mixture of chopped beef, sirloin strips, corn on the cob and hard-boiled eggs, to name a few ingredients.

Here's a recipe for a memorable stew I once had in Holland.

DUTCH STEW

2½ pounds beef chuck
¼ pound smoked ham hock
½ cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons salt
1 pound onions, sliced thin
2 teaspoons flour
1 can concentrated beef broth
1 can water
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 pinch each marjoram, thyme and rosemary
1 clove garlic, minced
1 ounce dry sherry
2 carrots sliced thin

Cut beef into thin strips. Cut ham into half-inch cubes. Brown meats in oil in skillet. Sprinkle meat with 1 teaspoon salt and set aside. Brown onions in same oil and set aside. Pour off oil remaining in skillet except 2 tablespoons. Stir flour into oil in skillet and make a roux. Add broth, water and rest of ingredients to make a sauce. Arrange meat and vegetables in casserole. Add sauce. Cook in 300-degree oven 2½ hours. Add water as needed. Serves 6 to 8. Good with cold beer.

DEAR ABBY

Old age doesn't have to be an affliction

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My dear departed mother, who had a wonderful sense of humor, gave this to me:

A Senior Citizen's Lament

Thought I'd let my doctor check me
'Cause I didn't feel quite right.
All those aches and pains annoyed me,
And I couldn't sleep at night.
He could find no real disorder,
but he wouldn't let it rest.
What with Medicare and Blue Cross it wouldn't hurt to do some tests.
To the hospital he sent me,
though I didn't feel that bad.
He arranged for them to give me
every test that could be had.
I was fluoroscoped and cystoscoped,
my aging frame displayed,
Stripped upon an ice-cold table
while my gizzards were X-rayed.
I was checked for worms and parasites
for fungus and the crud,
While they pierced me with long needles taking samples of my blood.
Doctors came to check me over, probed and pushed and poked around,
And to make sure I was living,
they wired me for sound.
They have finally concluded;
(their results have filled a page)
What I have will someday kill me, my affliction is OLD AGE. —
(Author unknown)

— I REMEMBER MAMA

DEAR REMEMBER: What an amusing poem, but old age never "killed" anybody. Unfortunately, some doctors still equate aging with inevitable mental and physical decline.

Dr. Robert N. Butler, former director of the National Institute of Aging, tells the story of a 101-year-old man who complained to his physician about a pain in his left leg.

"Well," said the doctor, "what do you expect at your age?"

The man replied, "But doctor, my right leg is also 101, and it doesn't hurt a bit."

Apropos aging, I have just come upon a wonderful handbook titled "Help Yourself to Good Health," compiled by the National Institute on Aging — a part of the Department of Health and Human Services, whose secretary is Margaret M. Heckler.

This excellent handbook will be a godsend for people 60 years old and older.

Some chapter titles: Accidents and the Elderly; Aging and Your Eyes; Arthritis Advice; Cancer Facts for People Over 50; Constipation; Dealing With Diabetes; Hearing and the Elderly; Urinary Incontinence; What to Do About the Flu; Prostate Problems; High Blood Pressure; The Safe Use of Medicine by Older People; Senility, Myth or Madness?; A Healthy Diet; How to Find Good Medical Care; Protection Against Crime; Sexuality in Later Life; and more.

It is written in large type in simple language that everyone can understand. It contains a wealth of information for everyone over 50 who wants to live a long, healthy and independent life.

It is absolutely free — including postage!

For your book, write to: Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, P.O. Box 3852-DA, Grand Central Station, N.Y. 10163. Ask for the book Dear Abby mentioned for older people. (A postcard will do.) Please print your name and address clearly. And don't thank me, thank the National Institute on Aging and Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, which funded this fine project.

P.S. This offer includes our Canadian neighbors.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Sunday brunch menu can be tasty, fun to prepare

Hearst News Service

Social critics have put down brunch as a Yuppie mating ritual, a way of finding someone to share your Sunday paper before slipping off to the late-afternoon flicks. But brunch can be a delight; it even can be fun to prepare.

Brunch isn't like other meals. For one thing, most of it is prepared immediately before it's served. Moments out of a warm, Sunday morning bed, you don't feel like taking on an elaborate confrontation with your stove.

One of the best brunches is the Absolutely No Work Brunch. For this, all that's required is an automobile. You and your spouse, friend or whatever roll out of bed 49 minutes before the guests are expected to arrive. Cold-turkey — no coffee, no shower — you stumble to the car and drive to the nearest bagelmaker.

Buy bagels, allowing three per guest, plus cream cheese and lox. (You'll have to decide ahead of time whether you regard raisin bagels as just a little slack. If you wait until the last minute, you may become frozen with indecision and arrive late for your own brunch.) Then head for the supermarket or veggie stand and pick up some ripe tomatoes and cucumbers, melon and orange juice.

When you arrive home, put on the coffee, shower, slice up the tomatoes and cucumbers, open the melons, pour the orange juice and display the bagels around the edge of a large platter in the center of which are the unwrapped cream cheese and the lox. Turn on some Vivaldi tapes. If you've done it right, your guests will just be arriving. First one in gets to slice the bagels.

Another great brunch is the It's OK to Bring the Children Brunch. An anathema to the determinedly single, this brunch is not as sinister as the name suggests. The key here is keeping things simple, not just to prepare, but to eat. There should be no fish with bones (trout is out) and nothing that's difficult to cut. At the same time, you'd like the brunch to be worth getting up for.

Try this: Ramos gin fizz (not, of course, for the kiddies), broiled grapefruit, New Orleans black muffins, Eggs Soubise with sausage and tomatoes, and fig sherbet.

If all this sounds a little New Orleans to you, you're right. The best brunches are served there, so why not take advantage? The recipes are from "The Commander's Palace New Orleans Cookbook," by Ella and Dick Brennan, and from "Paul Prudhomme's Louisiana Kitchen." Chef Paul, of course, used to work for the Brennans before he and his wife set up in business for themselves.

Should you serve wine? Not unless you want it to be a successful brunch. If anyone quails about the calories, they need only jog a bit in the afternoon.

I'm not much for fancy decorations, but at brunch I think you have a responsibility to the recently roused. A cheerful tablecloth, bright-colored fruit, fresh flowers (the only way to keep someone from bringing a bouquet is to count on it), nice silver — all can help. Discreet music doesn't hurt either, but in the end it's the food that counts.

Never let your brunch become work. If you're considering a menu, figure out exactly how much time you'll need at the stove and when. Beware of running out of burners. If you're serving a salad (a good idea), prepare it when you first get up. Most salads will keep up to four hours in the refrigerator as long as they're not dressed.

Desserts also can be made ahead. Tart shells can be prepared the night before, frozen without baking, and then filled and popped in the oven while everyone is beginning their brunch. Sherbets and frozen souffles are ideal for brunch because all you have to do when you get up is take them out of the freezer.

Another prepare-ahead possibility is coffee. If you don't have a big coffee-maker and want to assure a plentiful supply, make some early in the morning and pour it into a Thermos. Test it before serving. It shouldn't need reheating, but why take a chance?

Recipes for brunch dishes have New Orleans-style flair

Hearst News Service

Here are some suggested recipes for a brunch:

BROILED GRAPEFRUIT

Allowing half a grapefruit per person, cut the grapefruits in half horizontally and sprinkle each with 1 tablespoon melted butter and 2 teaspoons brown sugar, a pinch of cinnamon and a dash of rum. Place the grapefruits under a hot broiler until they begin to bubble, about 5 minutes.

RAMOS GIN FIZZ

1½ ounces gin
½ ounce Simple Syrup (see below)
1 dash orange-flower water
1 egg white
1 ounce lemon juice
2 ounces half-and-half or light cream

Half fill a cocktail shaker with ice cubes. Add the gin, Simple Syrup, orange-flower water, egg white, lemon juice and cream, and shake until frothy. Strain the mixture into a 9-ounce old-fashioned glass.

Simple Syrup: Combine 1 cup of water and 2 cups of sugar in a saucepan, bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer the syrup for 5 minutes.

NEW ORLEANS BLACK MUFFINS

½ cup molasses
¼ cup cup milk
2 cups whole-wheat flour
1 cup all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups coarsely chopped pecans, dry-roasted

In a medium-sized bowl, combine the hot water and molasses, stirring until well-blended. Stir in the milk until blended. In a large bowl, sift together the flours, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt.

With a rubber spatula, fold the liquid mixture and pecans into the dry ingredients just until the flour is thoroughly incorporated; do not overmix. Spoon into 12 greased muffin cups. Bake at 300 degrees F until done, 45 minutes to about 1 hour. Remove the muffins from the pan immediately and serve while hot.

EGGS SOUBISE

8 slices sausage (Italian sausage with fennel is excellent if you can't find andouille; slices should be 3½ to 4 inches in diameter and ½-inch thick)
2 tomatoes
2 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Soubise Sauce:

½ cup coarsely chopped onions
½ cup thinly sliced white portion of leeks
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Dash of cayenne
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 cups heavy whipping cream
Dash of salt
8 poached eggs

Grill or broil the sausage slices. Drain and keep them warm. Cut the tomatoes in half horizontally and spinkle the cut surface with Parmesan. Grill until the cheese and tomato are slightly bubbling. Set them aside; keep them warm.

Sauce: Cook the onions, leeks and butter in a saute pan over low heat until the onions are translucent. Add the black pepper and cayenne. Stir in the flour, blending it well. Add the cream and continue to cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture is the consistency of a medium cream sauce. Add a dash of salt to taste. If you're not using it immediately, keep the sauce over hot water until ready to serve. Makes 2 cups.

To serve: Put 2 pieces of sausage on each warmed plate. Put a poached egg on top of each sausage slice. Put a half tomato on the side of the plate and top the eggs with the Soubise Sauce. Serve immediately.

Coriander used in many different ways

Copley News Service

The leaves of the coriander plant have a distinct, pungent flavor delicious to some, unpalatable to others. If you're not sure whether you like it or not, taste a leaf before adding any to a dish. Today's recipes may be prepared without the leaves if you find that you dislike them.

Coriander leaves, with their thin, slightly fringed edges, look rather like parsley. (But they don't taste at all alike.) Buy in fresh bunches, and use only the leaves — not the stems.

Mexicans call these leaves cilantro, and use them to flavor tomato "salsas" (sauces), guacamole and other condiments. Fresh cilantro is also srolled up in tortillas with cheese, beans and tomatoes.

You can also use coriander seeds whole or ground. They're an important flavoring agent in curry powder, pickling spices and in a number of traditional baked goods.

GUACAMOLE CON CILANTRO

1 large tomato, chopped fine
¼ cup minced green onion
½ cup sour cream
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 clove garlic, minced fine
2 tbsps. fresh coriander (cilantro) leaves, chopped
2 green chilis, minced
¼ tsp. pepper

Peel avocados and remove pits. Mash pulp with fork and stir in remaining inredients until well blended. Refrigerate, covered, if not to be used immediately.

Makes about 2 cups.

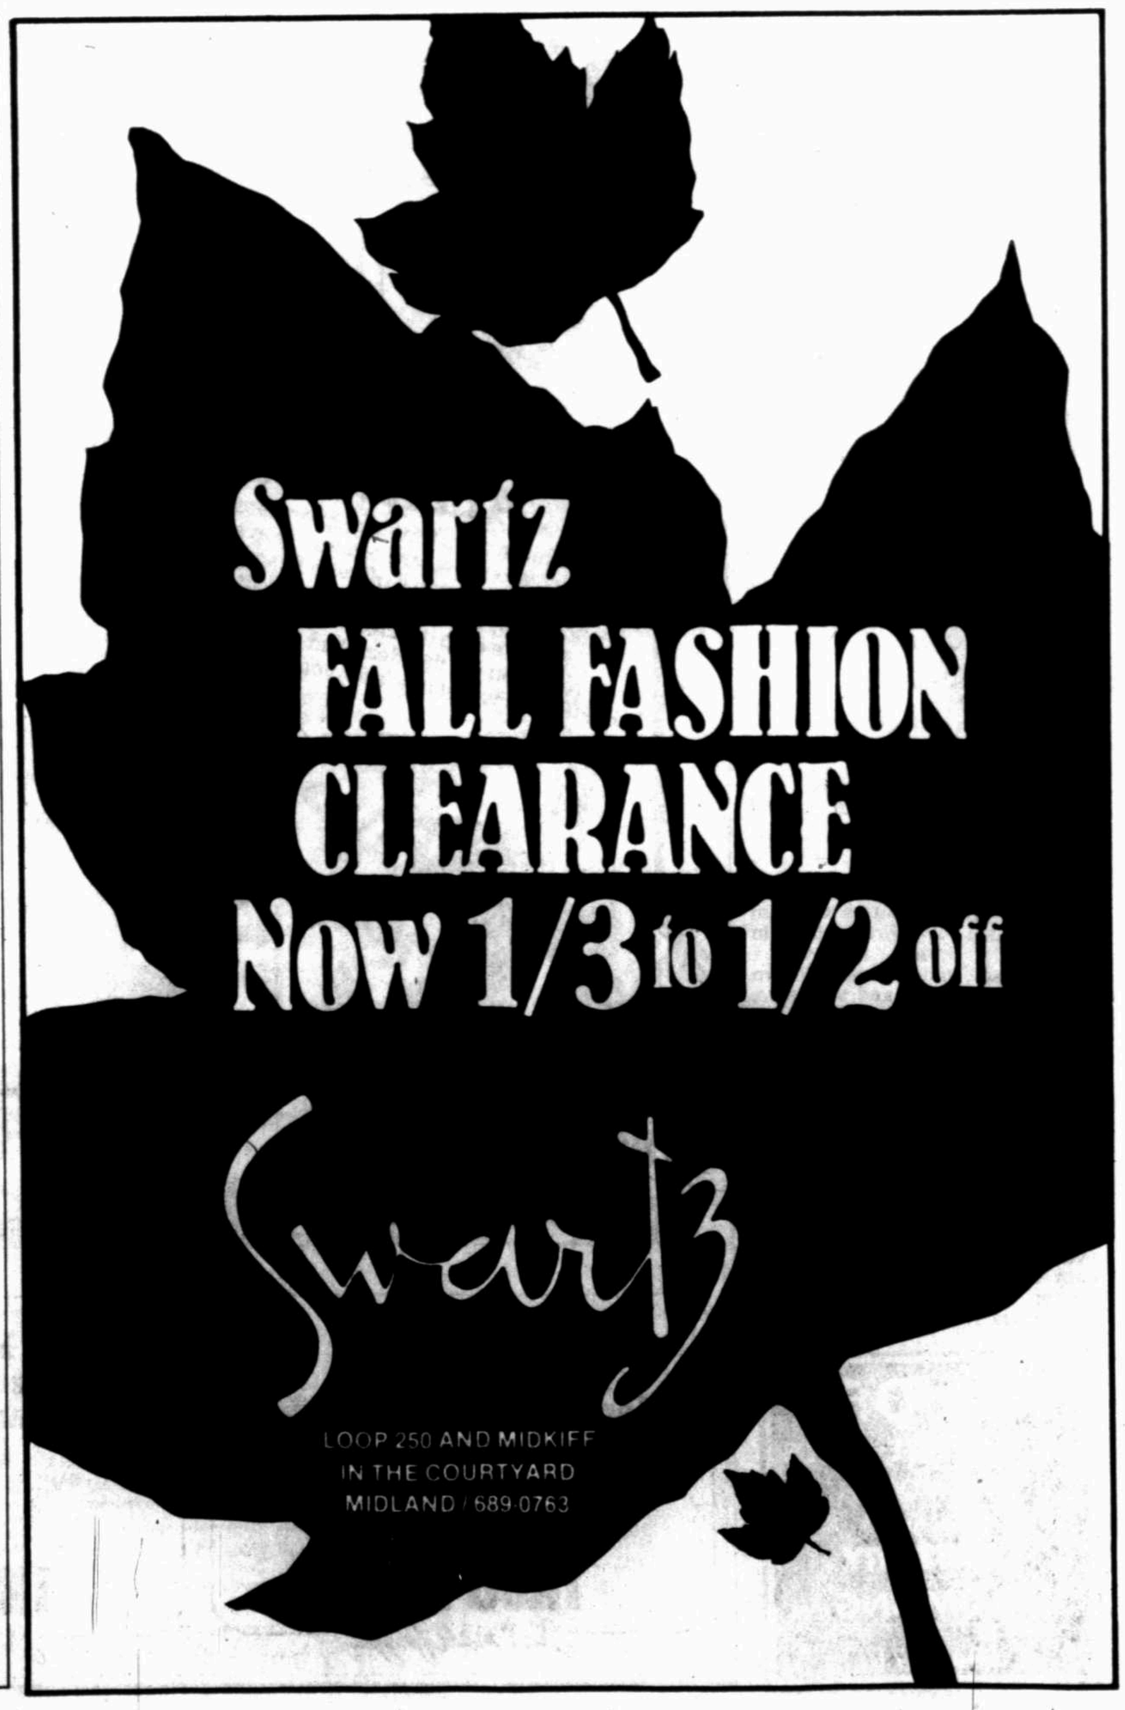

MEXICAN GREEN CHILI SALSA

¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
2 large tomatoes, peeled and chopped fine
1 (4 oz.) can minced green chilis
¼ cup tomato paste
2 tbsps. vegetable oil
½ tsp. ground coriander seed or 3 tbsps. fresh chopped coriander (cilantro) leaves
¼ tsp. Tabasco sauce
Dash pepper

In food processor or blender, puree together onion, green pepper and garlic Turn pureed mixture into medium-size saucepan and add remaining ingredients. Stir to blend well and bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, for about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Store in covered container in refrigerator for one to two days to let flavors blend. Serve at room temperature.

Makes about 1½ cups.

LONDON (AP) — The dollar resumed its record-setting surge early today as European exchange markets reopened after the New Year's Day break. Gold bullion prices edged lower.

The dollar rose against all major European currencies, hitting an all-time high against the French franc and pushing the British pound below the $1.15 level for the first time ever.

During the first hour of trading in Frankfurt, the dollar briefly broke through the 3.17 West German mark barrier before profit-taking pushed it back to 3.1695 marks.

The last time the dollar reached the 3.17 mark level, on Sept. 21, 1984, West Germany's central Bundesbank intervened heavily in the open market, a move that temporarily halted the dollar's climb.

A dealer for the London branch of the U.S. Citibank said the dollar was being underpinned by continued high corporate demand, with year-end investment positioning still affecting trading.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Monday included:

–2.61575 Swiss francs, up from 2.6025.

–9.7015 French francs, up from 9.6450.

–3.5780 Dutch guilders, up from 3.5610.

–1,943.25 Italian lire, up from 1,933.50.

–1.32315 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3204.

The British pound plummeted steadily during the morning session, hitting a new all-time trading low of $1.14135, down from Monday's late rate of $1.1578.

In addition to the effects of the strong dollar, sterling has been under intense pressure from speculation of further declines in world oil prices. The pound is sensitive to fluctuations in oil prices because of Britain's huge North Sea oil reserves.

Tokyo markets remained closed. In London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 251.97 yen, up from 251.58 yen Monday.

The value of gold bullion fell in response to the dollar's continued strength. Zurich markets remained closed, and thin trading was reported on the London market.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $306.25 a troy once, down from $308.75 Monday.

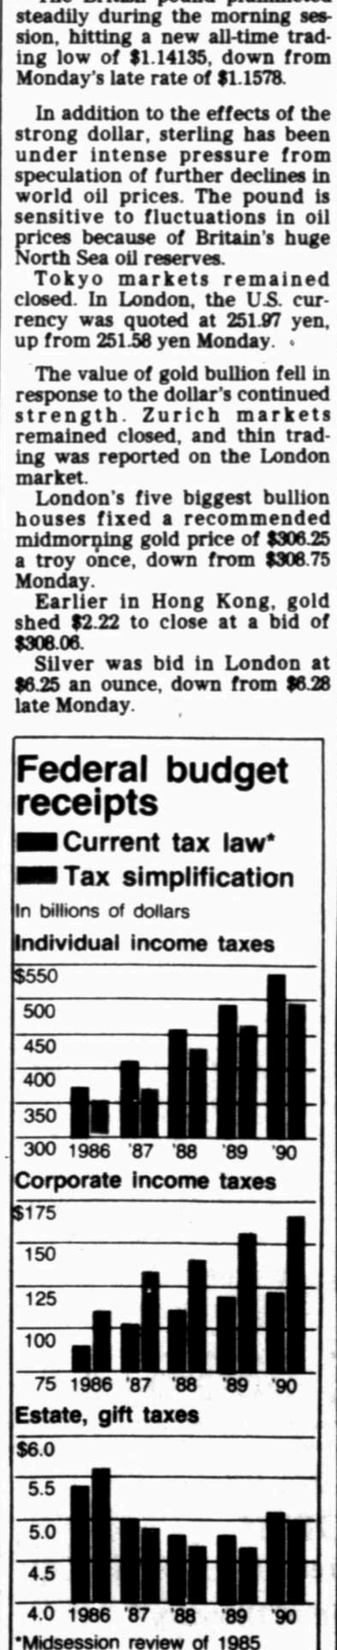

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold shed $2.22 to close at a bid of $308.06.

Turnarounds, toymakers top earners in 1984

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

Matt Holten/Reporter-Telegram

In the meandering market of 1984, some of the most spectacular performances were turned in by companies in fairly mundane fields that engineered turnarounds during the year. Among them was a diversified manufacturer of farm equipment and industrial products and a company that produces gypsum board.

Other top picks among the approximately 1,500 common stocks on the New York Stock Exchange were toy makers, takeover targets and Tootsie Roll Industries, which has enjoyed several years of strong sales and earnings gains.

The worst performers of the year came from the ranks of oil companies and companies that filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. The list was led by a company that fell into both categories: Charter Co., a petroleum refiner, oil marketer and insurance company that entered Chapter 11 proceedings in April, saw its stock price plummet 91 percent.

The Big Board's best-performing stock of 1984 was Allied Products Corp. of Chicago, according to data compiled by The Los Angeles Times and Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Allied Products, which makes farm equipment and such industrial products as fasteners and auto and truck parts, had a nearly 123 percent increase in its stock price, to $19.50 on Dec. 31 from $8.75 at the end of 1983. (Prices are adjusted for stock splits and dividends.)

For Allied Products, "this has been a helluva year," President Richard Drexler said. Following two years of losses, Allied expects a $9 million profit in 1984 on sales of $320 million, he said.

Allied Products has been undergoing an aggressive divestiture program, selling 27 money-losing or marginally profitable businesses in 25 months, Drexler said.

At the same time, the company has been expanding, partly through acquisitions, its farm-equipment business, which has managed to remain profitable during the last few years when the rest of the industry was losing money.

Allied has benefited from rising automobile and truck production and increased agricultural planting that resulted from sharp reductions in the federal payment-in-kind program, reported Value Line Investment Survey.

Republic Gypsum Co. of Dallas captured the No. 2 spot on the NYSE winners list. Republic's stock, which moved to the NYSE from the American Stock Exchange in November, jumped 114 percent to $18.75.

Republic saw demand improve for its products — gypsum wallboard, paperboard and other building products — as interest rates fell and construction increased.

For the year ended June 30, 1984, Republic Gypsum recorded a 121 percent increase in revenue and a 316 percent increase in net income, although sales and earnings for the July to September quarter declined from the previous quarter because rising interest rates slowed housing starts.

Further down the winners list was Wilmington, Del.-based Rollins Environmental Services Inc., which treats and disposes of hazardous wastes. Rollins' stock price rose 94 percent to $14.875.

For the year ended Sept. 30, Rollins sales rose 44 percent, while income leaped 130 percent from depressed 1983 levels thanks to a "growing awareness by companies to increasingly tough environmental regulations (dealing with) hazardous wastes," said Jeffrey A. Klein, an analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Rollins specializes in hazardous waste incineration, which is growing in popularity even though it is more expensive than other disposal methods because it is more permanent, Klein said.

Toy companies were well represented among 1984 winners. Mattel Inc.'s stock jumped 105 percent to $10.25 and Tonka's stock rose 82 percent to $41.

For traditional toy companies, said the Toy Manufacturers of America, 1984 was one of the best years ever. In the first nine months of the year, the trade organization reported that shipments were up 52 percent and orders increased 83 percent.

Toy company stocks were even higher on the winners list until last Thursday, when Wall Street reacted badly to an announcement by retailer Toys 'R' Us that Christmas sales, although up a healthy 16.9 percent, had been lower than anticipated.

Traditional toys had a good year because the decline in popularity of video games and home computers "probably left $1 billion plus in consumers' pockets to buy other holiday items," said David Leibowitz, senior vice president of New York-based American Securities Corp.

MSHA develops proposed mining rule

The Department of Labor's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) has developed a proposed rule which would revise the existing loading, hauling and dumping standards for metal and nonmetal mines.

The proposed rule, aimed at improving the quality and effectiveness of MSHA's present standards, was published Dec. 18, 1984, in the Federal Register.

The proposed rule would make several organizational changes. Part 55 would be combined with Part 56 and would apply to surface and open pit metal and nonmetal mines. This reorganization would reduce repetition of identical standards which presently exists in the Code of Federal Regulations.

There are presently 69 loading, hauling and dumping standards in Part 55 which are duplicated in Parts 56 and 57. Part 57 has an additional 17 standards that apply to underground mining only. As a result of the consolidation of closely related standards and the deletion and transfer of others, the proposed rule would reduce these 224 standards to a total of 13.

The agency is soliciting comments on the proposed rule. Written comments and requests for public hearings must be received on or before Feb. 16, 1985. Comments should be sent to the Office of Standards, Regulations and Variances; MSHA; Room 631, Ballston Tower No. 3, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, VA 22203.

British tycoon moves investments base to U.S.

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LONDON — Sir James Goldsmith, the British financial tycoon who appears to be moving his base of operations to the United States, is a free-wheeling entrepreneur who prefers to keep the details of his operations to himself.

He has made few public disclosures about his latest move, announced two weeks ago, to acquire up to 25 percent of Crown Zellerbach Corp., the San Francisco-based forest products company.

"I don't really believe," he once said, "that people should disclose exactly what they do and exactly how. I think people have the right to privacy."

Earlier this year, Goldsmith led a group of investors who acquired a stake in St. Regis Corp., another forest-products company, which was then sold back for a profit estimated at $50 million.

More recently, Goldsmith made an unsolicited bid for the Continental Group, a paper and packaging conglomerate, and though the bid was not successful he is said to have made a tidy profit.

Goldsmith, 51, is a tall, restless, impeccably turned-out financier who smokes big cigars and never stays long in one place. He has been looked upon with a certain suspicion in the British financial establishment because he is something of a maverick, even though politically he is a deep-dyed Conservative.

"He has never been part of the business establishment," one financial expert here said. "They really don't know what to make of him, so they really don't trust him."

In addition to his many and varied financial interests, Goldsmith has dabbled in publishing, including ownership of the successful French news magazine l'Express and the ill-fated Now!, a British news magazine that folded after a year.

He is the son of Frank Goldsmith, a Conservative member of Parliament who was the son of a German immigrant and a French mother. He was brought up in England and France, becoming fluent in both languages, and was enrolled at Eton, the renowned prep school. He left the school, he has said, as the result of betting on the horses.

Goldsmith served in the British Army, then moved into the gambling circles of London's West End clubs. At age 20, he eloped with the Bolivian tin heiress Isabel Patino. She died in childbirth. Later, he married a French woman and established a household in Paris, then left her for Lady Annabel Birley.

He has undertaken a number of business ventures, some apparently without much success. He made his mark in the financial world, he has said, by buying the rights to a small pharmaceutical firm for a couple of hundred dollars and selling it for a considerable profit.

In 1962, he teamed up with a distant relative, Baron Alexis DeGunzburg, and bought into a company called Generale Occidentale. It has become a major conglomerate, with interests throughout Europe and the Far East.

Goldsmith also formed a food company, Cavenham, turning out cookies, jam and other specialty grocery goods that have proved eminently profitable.

In the 1970s, Goldsmith was involved in a long-running feud with the satirical magazine Private Eye, which questioned some of his financial dealings. The magazine also criticized his private life and the knighthood that was awarded him in the controversial resignation honors list of Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson in 1976. The knighthood was presumed to have been awarded for his help in bailing out a bankrupt financial investment company called Slater Walker.

Goldsmith won a libel suit against Private Eye, which referred to him as "Sir Jams," but it continued to snipe at him.

Possibly because of the public criticism of his activities and the demise of the magazine Now! — along with his failure to buy into British national newspapers — Goldsmith shifted much of his activity to Paris about four years ago.

But since the Socialists came to power there, in 1981, Goldsmith, the staunch Conservative, has found the French business climate much less to his liking. He has been seen more frequently in the United States, operating out of New York. In the United States, he is thought to control Grand Union Co., a supermarket chain, and some spinoffs from the Diamond International Corp., a forest products company he bought four years ago and broke up.

He is closemouthed about some of the holding companies that control his various other corporations. These are thought to be based in Panama, the Caribbean, Lichtenstein and Hong Kong.

In the United States, he has acquired something of a reputation as a corporate raider and he is unhappy about charges that he has operated as a "greenmailer," one who buys into companies, threatens to take them over, then sells off his stock at a high profit.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Businessmen have high expectations for '85

NEW YORK (AP) — Businessmen have high expectations for the first quarter of 1985, Dun & Bradstreet Corp. says.

However, their optimism is not as high as it was during the heights of the latest recovery and expansion in 1984, the business information company said Tuesday.

Most business executives responding to a quarterly survey said they expect employment to remain strong and prices to remain stable in the first quarter, Dun & Bradstreet said.

But expectations for higher sales, new orders and profits are not as strong as they were in the previous quarter, it said.

Joseph W. Duncan, Dun & Bradstreet's chief economist, said the survey results reflects the fact that the economic expansion "has slowed to a more moderate pace following the very strong gains made in the first three quarters of last year."

Gas price ceilings lifted after 30 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 30 years of strict federal control, price ceilings have been lifted on about half the nation's natural gas.

However, surplus supplies and falling oil prices are expected to keep consumer bills stable and most consumers won't even notice the change when they get their January bills next month.

For one thing, federal rules governing the pipeline companies that move gas from producer to consumer forbid rate adjustments based on anticipated changes in the price of decontrolled gas.

Because rates can be adjusted only after a price change by producers, any increase or decrease will not show up until next spring or summer when the pipelines file their "purchased gas adjustments" with the Federal Energy Regulatory Administration.

But even then, hardly anyone involved in the $65-billion-a-year industry that provides one-fourth of the nation's energy expects any significant price change. That will be a relief for consumers, who have seen annual double-digit increases in their gas rates three of the last five years.

Aeronautics board finals 46-year control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board, ending 46 years of control over the airline industry, has became the first major federal regulatory agency to close its doors forever.

The shutdown signaled the end to regulation of an industry which in recent years has undergone revolutionary change. With the board's passing, airlines no longer have to look toward the government to tell them where to fly and how much to charge.

A ceremonial final hearing on Monday lasted less than 10 minutes and concluded with a Marine bugler playing "Evening Colors" — the traditional sunset ceremony at military installations — as a board staffer removed the agency's seal from the hearing room wall.

By law, the board officially passed out of existence at midnight Monday. About 300 CAB employees will move across town to the Transportation Department where they will continue to administer a variety of airline regulations.

CAB Chairman Dan McKinnon slammed the gavel down to end the board's last meeting before an audience that included several former board members and staff officals. Earlier, Alan Pollock, the agency's director of public affairs, issued what he called the board's "final press release," a one-paragraph farewell with a black border.

McKinnon, giving his eulogy to the agency, praised airline deregulation and said consumers are "better served" by freely competing air carriers. Today, he continued, the industry stands "healthier than it has been in 10 years."

New Mexico investors acquire Quinn

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A group of New Mexico investors has acquired 55 percent control of Quinn & Co., Inc., the state's oldest and largest investment and brokerage house.

J. David Stanford, a former partner in the El Paso, Texas, law firm of Kemp, Smith, Duncan and Hammond, has been appointed chief executive officer.

"Our major goal in acquiring Quinn is to continue building the company into a strong regional firm by expanding the corporate finance department and to further strengthen and expand the retail base," said Pete Morrow, vice chairman.

Quinn Group Inc., the holding company which purchased Quinn's controlling interest, includes Stanford, Morrow, Bill B. Boykin, Jack Rich, Graham McNary, Dave Thomas, John Kipp and William Kipp.

Hawthorne, Calif.,-based Mattel, following a sharp earnings decline in 1983 when the video-game and home-computer markets were overrun with competitor's products, sold all its non-toy businesses and returned to profitability. The company, which was No. 2 on the 1983 NYSE losers list, completed a financial restructuring in July by selling a 45 percent voting stake to raise $231 million in cash.

For the nine months ended Oct. 27, Mattel reported income of $86.6 million on revenue of $731.7 million compared to the year before, when it lost $222.8 million on revenue of $497 million. "Mattel stayed where it has always been successful in the past," Leibowitz said.

Tonka Corp. of Spring Park, Minn., also experienced a turnaround in 1984 following two years of losses. Tonka's success was fueled by its line of GoBots, robots that can be transformed into cars, planes and other items by twisting hinged parts.

Takeover targets, both rumored and real, also were well represented among the best-performing stocks of the year.

For the first nine months of 1984, there were 179 acquisitions of publicly traded companies, compared to 130 in the same period last year, reported W.T. Grimm & Co., a Chicago-based merger specialist. Overall for the first nine months, there were 1,899 mergers, compared to 1,812 in the first nine months of 1983.

Cowles Broadcasting Inc., a small Daytona Beach, Fla.-based company that owns two network-affiliated television stations, is about to be taken private by H&C Communications Inc. for $46 a share. Cowles' stock rose 94.7 percent to $45.75.

Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Inc., parent of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities, agreed in principle in November to be acquired by Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States for $30 per common share and $230.77 for each share of DLJ Series A preferred stock. DLJ's stock closed the year at $29.875, up 86.7 percent.

A bidding war erupted in 1984 for the bankrupt Milwaukee Road railroad,, which is 96 percent owned by Chicago Milwaukee Corp. Rival bids by Soo Line Railroad Co. and Chicago & North Western Transportation Corp. are being considered by a bankruptcy court, under whose protection Milwaukee Road (formerly known as the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad) has operated since December, 1977.

"As the bids went up, the value of Chicago Milwaukee increased and that was reflected in the price of Chicago Milwaukee's stock," said Burton Strauss, an analyst with E.F. Hutton. Chicago Milwaukee's stock rose 92 percent to $186.25.

Persistent takeover rumors dogged Chicago-based Tootsie Roll Industries Inc., where insiders control 57.6 percent of the stock.

In addition, the confectionery industry performed well during the year, drawing attention to Tootsie Roll, which has achieved healthy sales and earnings increases for several years, Leibowitz said.

A collection of hard-luck stories dominated the list of companies with the largest stock declines in 1984.

Charter Co. of Jacksonville, Fla., in April filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code because of a loss of trade credit for its oil refining operations. The company's insurance subsidiaries, which weren't included in the Chapter 11 filing, also suffered from bad publicity over the single-premium deferred annuity in the wake of Baldwin-United Corp.'s 1983 bankruptcy.

Last year was another bad one for many oil companies because of soft prices and excess refining capacity left over from the heady days of the late 1970s. Besides Charter Co., whose stock dropped 91 percent to $1, Santa Monica-based Tosco Corp.'s stock fell 80 percent to $1, Tulsa, Okla.-based Energy Exchange's stock sank 79.2 percent to $0.156 and Oklahoma City-based Texas International Co.'s stock slipped 78 percent to $1.125.

Tosco, which was 10th on the 1983 losers list, began suffering heavy losses in 1983 after the promising synthetic fuels industry collapsed as oil prices fell. Under an agreement between Tosco and its banks, management and operating strategy have been changed but losses have continued.

Tosco has done a good job of reducing operating costs and personnel but has suffered from the rising price of once-cheap heavy crude, which it refines, said L. Craig Schwerdt, an analyst with Morgan, Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner in Los Angeles.

Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings captured a variety of companies on the losers list in 1984.

Mobile Home Industries Inc. of Tallahassee, Fla., which expanded aggressively in the early 1970s, was plagued by high repossession costs. Although operations were reduced, Mobile Home Industries had continuing cash-flow problems.

Mobile Home Industries filed for Chapter 11 protection in early December. The company's stock ended the year at $0.563, down 86 percent.

Storage Technology Corp., a Louisville, Colo.-based manufacturer of IBM-compatible computer disk and tape storage equipment, filed for Chapter 11 protection in October. The company fell victim to its battle with giant International Business Machines Corp., which has become increasingly competitive in a variety of areas. Storage Technology's stock, which was 17th on the 1983 losers list, fell 83.5 percent to $2.25.

Western Union Corp., the Saddle River, N.J.-based parent of Western Union Telegraph Co., saw its stock price fall 76 percent to $8.75. Western Union lost nearly $67 million in 1983 but earned almost $4 million for the first nine months of 1984.

Western Union's profit margins have been and could continue to be depressed because of higher charges for leased telephone lines, analysts said. In addition, the company's traditional businesses must compete with newer electronic mail services, including Western Union's own 2-year-old EasyLink service.

RRC to hear UPS arguments

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has agreed to hear oral arguments by United Parcel Service and companies opposed to UPS' application for authority to transport packages from point to point within the state.

The commissioners will hear arguments by both sides at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Railroad Commission headquarters building here.

The request was filed with the Commission's Transportation Division by companies protesting the UPS application. The hearings examiner in the case recommended the Commission grant the application based on a need for the proposed service in Texas. That recommendation was delivered to the commissioners during their regular weekly conference on Transportation Division matters held on December 10.

In granting oral argument, the commissioners allotted 45 minutes to each side for its presentation.

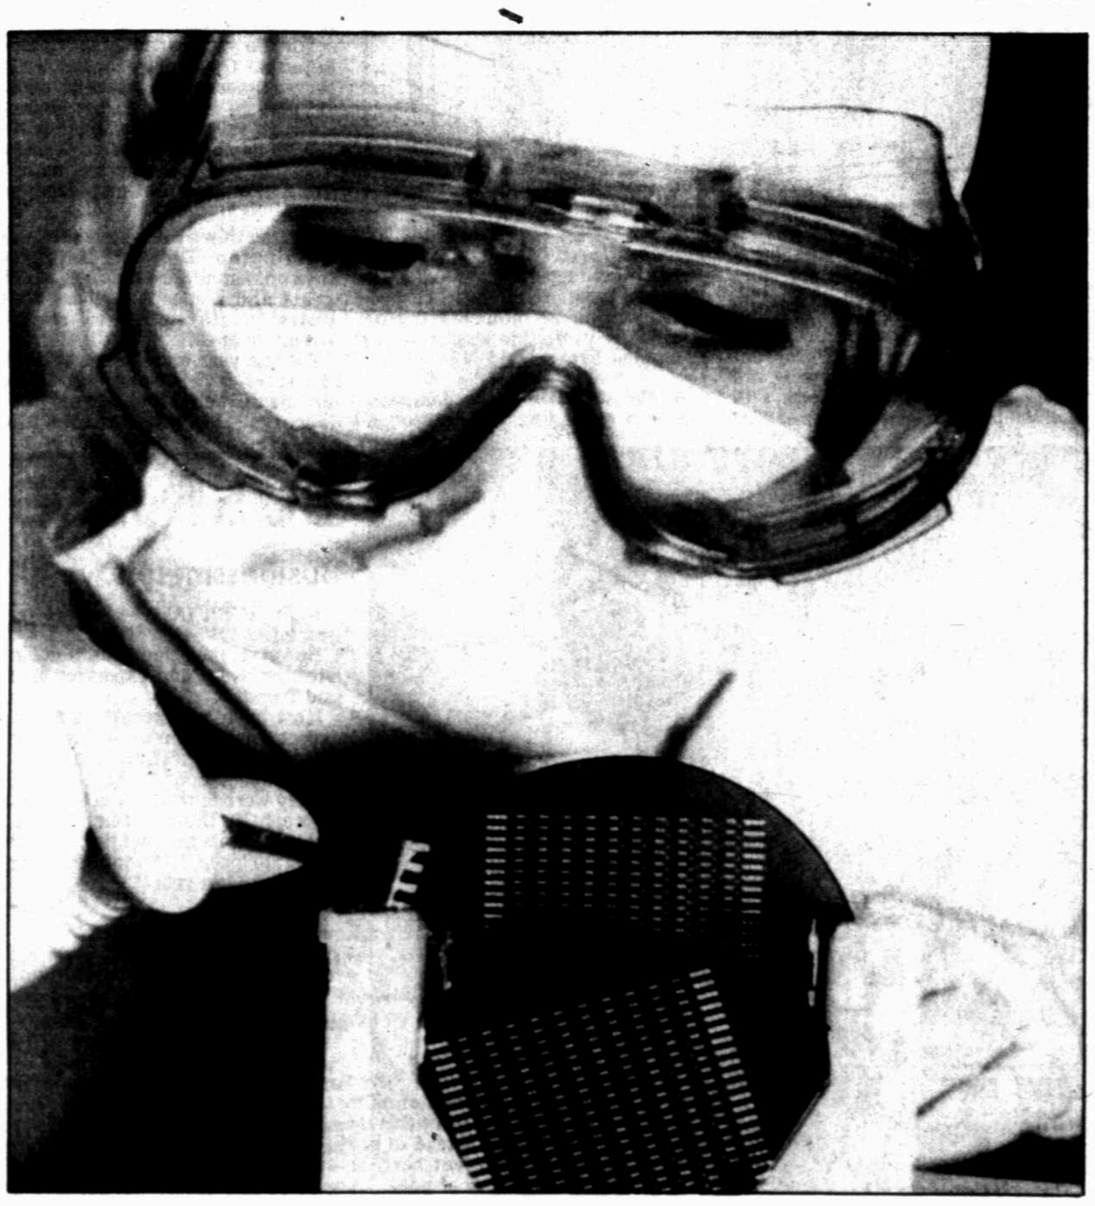

New Sanger-Harris president announced

CINCINNATI (AP) — Federated Stores Inc. has announced that Michael Steinberg has been promoted from executive vice president and general merchandise manager of its Bloomingdale department store in New York to president of the Dallas-based Sanger Harris Division, according to a Federated Stores manager.

Steinberg, 56, will replace Charles E. Griffin on Feb. 1.

Jack Schultz, senior vice president of Sanger Harris, was promoted to executive vice president and general merchandise manager of the division.

Sanger Harris operates 16 stores and two Levy's department stores in Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico.

Nation's railroads chopping away at unprofitable lines

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

The folks in Biola, Calif., had plenty to gossip about when three full kegs of beer mysteriously disappeared from the Chamber of Commerce visitor center the day after the town's recent Raisin Day celebration. A few days ago people were buzzing again — this time about the railroad Biola is losing.

Normally not that much happens in Biola. Surrounded by vineyards, the town is like many other small, quiet communities up and down California's Central Valley. Its tiny downtown has the usual general store and a bar. There are a few modest houses and the population, mostly Latino, is pushing 1,000.

But Biola is unique because it is blessed with a rail line that hauls raw materials to its largest industry, a foam packaging plant employing 125 workers. The town was shocked to learn it that soon will be without the branch line Southern Pacific is abandoning. Less than 10 miles long, the line joins SP's main tracks at Fresno.

"There's not one person here who isn't going to be affected, directly or indirectly, by the railroad's abandonment," said Michele Ramirez, the general store owner. She formerly managed the Biola Community Services District, the local governing agency.

Biola, its future threatened, is not alone. The nation's railroads have been chopping away at unprofitable lines, abandoning nearly 5,000 rail miles a year, industry sources estimate. Most have been in the East, Midwest and across the Northern Plains states.

Recently, though, and without fanfare, Southern Pacific Transportation Co. embarked on the most far-reaching systemwide rail abandonment program in its history. It covers 14 states from California to Tennessee and Illinois.

California transportation officials believe the program is particularly disturbing for California because SP is the state's biggest railroad. The company has nearly 3,800 miles of main and branch lines serving dozens of California cities, towns and communities. Ten years ago the system totaled 4,100 miles.

Since 1982, SP has sold, abandoned or is seeking to abandon more than 450 miles of California rail lines. Nearly 25 branch lines are involved. Other abandonments with far less mileage are planned by Union Pacific and Santa Fe, SP's partner in a pending merger.

"We have too much railroad, too much plant — too much for the business we handle," says Ken Dixon, SP's general manager for line evaluation. "If we don't get rid of the deadwood and put ourselves in a more competitive position, then we'll perish."

Many cities, and entire regions as well, have reacted to these rail abandonment plans with dismay and anger.

SP's attempt to trim its California mileage, which is a program unparalleled in 100 years of operations in the state, has touched off a scramble by state agencies, cities, towns and private individuals to rescue the targeted lines for continued freight use or to preserve the rights-of-way for rail transit, busways, bikeways or for specialized tourist excursions.

Many experts believe that the lines should be saved because cities and public agencies are finding it increasingly beyond their financial means to assemble new rights-of-way for transit ways and highways. Within the transit community, the fear is that if the rail lines are allowed to deteriorate or are torn up, a valuable transportation resource will be lost, probably forever.

Furthermore, many transportation planners are convinced that the demand for rail transit lines will grow — and existing rights-of-way should remain intact — as California's freeways become saturated with cars.

North of San Francisco, for example, the Golden Gate Bridge Highway and Transportation District serving the Bay Area has started buying abandoned sections of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad, an SP subsidiary, in Marin County. The idea is to assemble right-of-way for a transit corridor in a county where growing numbers of commuters jam the area's lone freeway.

But in other cases, the railroad land simply becomes available for development.

These rail abandonments, while lagging in California until recently, are part of a national phenomenon that ballooned in the 1970s with the change in economic and industrial patterns, especially in the Northeast.

Industry sources say that the root of the problem facing many railroads is too much trackage. The lines, an industry spokesman says, were hampered by government regulations until the mid-1970s and the railroads "didn't even try (to abandon lines) until they became a drag on the whole system."

Despite the rigid government controls, the railroads did manage over the years to cast off many lines they did not want.

An increasing amount of freight was hauled by truckers on the nation's expanding highway system. By 1983, the railroads had cut their mileage to 155,000 from a peak of 250,000 in the early 1900s.

"Deregulation, the ability to streamline operations, has meant a renaissance for the railroads, allowing them to compete more freely ... ," an Association of American Railroads spokesman said.

While many rail abandonments are routine, each case must have the Interstate Commerce Commission's approval.

The ICC considers such factors as the impact the loss of rail service would have on a community and also its effect on shippers. The commission also has authority to require the sale of a line proposed for abandonment if there is the likelihood for its continued public use.

Normally one-third of the abandonment cases before the ICC are strongly opposed and another one-third generate some opposition. ICC figures show that the commission usually goes along with the railroads. It denied only one abandonment in 1981, three in 1982 and two last year. Most were for lines less than 40 miles long.

Some states, alarmed by the loss of rail service, especially in outlying rural neighborhoods, have gone into the rail business themselves — buying, operating, rehabilitating or subsidizing lines to save towns and communities that depend on rail service.

In some cases, the unwanted rail lines have been sought for transit use. Los Angeles County, for example, wants Southern Pacific's East Long Beach branch for inclusion in a light rail transit line.

Southern Pacific acknowledges the scope of its rail abandonment program but insists that it was undertaken for streamlining purposes only.

Even so, Southern Pacific's Ken Dixon acknowledges the program will bring in $20 million or more.

Investors plan world's first starport to be in Colorado

Los Angeles Times
New York Times News Service

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — On a patch of barren prairie, midway between Colorado Springs and Pueblo, a group of investors has secured 190 square miles to build Port Centauri, the earth's first starport.

Armed with the Motto — "The meek shall inherit the earth, the bold shall inherit the stars" — the backers of the International Center for Aerospace Sciences and Technology hope "within 50 years" to launch mankind's first visit to a neighboring star from this desolate chunk of Colorado.

The voyage to Proxima Centauri — about 26 trillion miles — should take 4.3 light years, or 52 months in a spaceship traveling at the speed of light.

The lucky human voyagers will be chosen from the inhabitants of hexagonal "crystal colonies," which will rise around a space-oriented industrial complex complete with business parks, high-tech factories, research and development centers — even "non-retirement" communities for the adventurous elderly.

Aside from a slick brochure and a small core of investors, the center exists only as a dream.

But less than two years after President Reagan announced his plans for the "Star Wars" weapons system, is fast on its way to becoming the military space capital of the free world.

Port Centauri is merely the most ambitious and romantic symbol of a huge space boom that is about to grip the Centennial state.

Like gold and silver and energy booms before it, the space explosion could radically alter Colorado: flooding the Front Range of the Rockies with sleek high-tech office parks; pumping Colorado Springs with capital and people until it surpasses Denver as the state's premier city; and propelling a little-known Colorado congressman, Republican Rep. Ken Kramer, into national prominence and the Senate seat he covets.

At the U.S. Space Foundation's first symposium — a glittering success for its Colorado founders that was held recently here — such dreams had a way of sounding real.

Consider these proposals advanced at the symposium by noted government officials and scientists as legitimate options for national policy in the next decade:

— An end to the threat of nuclear war.

"Star Wars" weaponry — 100 laser battle stations, each weighing more than 10,000 tons and compressing nuclear explosions into powerful x-ray laser beams — could circle the Earth and incinerate ballistic missiles as they rose from the launch pad.

— A permanent manned base on the moon.

Commemorating the 500th anniversary of Columbus' discovery of the New World, the moon base might accommodate a dozen men and women astronauts in 1992 and up to 100 by the turn of the century.

Lunar colonists would spend their time using solar furnaces to generate oxygen and hydrogen, mining the moon for precious resources, building segments of a space-based laser defense system and launching finished space stations and their armor shields from the moon's low gravity back to Earth orbit.

Using those same techniques, the establishment of a colony on the moon could be followed by a manned landing on Mars by 2004.

— A "laser railroad" of small, automobile-sized rockets guided and powered into orbit by mighty laser beams that super-heat the chemical reaction within rocket engines and triple the available power.

Such a system could reduce the cost of putting payloads in space from $1,000 a pound to $30 a pound, alleviating the single biggest obstacle to space exploration — the tremendous cost of putting man and material in orbit — and opening the heavens to widespread commercial and military use.

— An end to deserts, drought and famine.

Using huge metal shades and reflectors hoisted into orbit by the laser railroad, sunlight could be focused onto the Earth's surface to steer tropical storm systems, relieve drought and saturate deserts. The Sahara could become a garden.

"We have recently been living in an Age of Timidity," said Dr. Lowell Wood of California's Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory — one of the leading architects of Reagan's "Star Wars" weapons system, a respected scientist, and the proponent of several of these ideas.

"What is clear even now is that the existing technology base for moving large-scale human endeavors into space during the next decade is remarkably broad," he said.

Wood believes that the decision to deploy the "Star Wars" defense — formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative or SDI — will have far-reaching implications beyond the question of war and peace.

"The basic pace of human activities in space during the coming decade will quite clearly depend on whether and on what scale the SDI proceeds," he said.

"During the past quarter century, we humans have learned to use space as a devstatingly effective medium through which to conduct attacks aimed at extinguishing mighty civilizations in a single hour.

"In the next quarter century's coursed of forestalling such attacks from space on our homes and our people, we may rather inadvertently lay the foundations of the first non-terrestrial human civilization," he said.

And that could mean a windfall for Colorado.

It would mean more growth and new demands on planning to avoid the environmental risks of boom-town excess.

As skyrocketing real estate values around this city clearly demonstrate, there are just a few "ifs" to be dealt with before these dreams become reality.

Kramer has the "ifs" numbered.

"If" No. 1: Colorado Springs must become headquarters not just for the Air Force Space Command, as it currently is, but for the all-services U.S. Space Command that will plan the military conquest of space, run fleets of military satellites and military space shuttle flights, and attract millions of dollars of scientific, industrial and military investment to the area.

The Pentagon announced recently that President Reagan has approved the formation of a U.S. Space Command, and Kramer is optimistic that the new command will be based in Colorado Springs.

"If" No. 2: The United States must decide to invest billions of dollars in the "Star Wars" plan to build a space-based defense against nuclear weapons — by far the biggest "if."

Deployment of the "Star Wars" plan is highly controversial and by no means a sure bet, Kenneth Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, told the symposium.

Treaties with the Soviet Union would have to be amended. Deployment could start a holocaust, not stop one, if the USSR was not assured by its own technical progress or a gift of American technology that the United States was not altering the balance of power. Billions of dollars in taxes would have to be raised at a time of multi-billion-dollar deficits. Theoretical science must be transformed into working hardware.

And the opposition of a sizable portion of the electorate has to be overcome.

"It's an escalation of the arms race. It's unworkable. It's making the orld more dangerous and there's a tremendous cost involved," said Mary Sprunger-Froese, 34, one of a small but persistent band of protesters who dogged the conference — and at one point was "escorted" from the hall after shouting "No more nuclear weapons — for the sake of my children, stop" as Dr. Edward Teller, creator of the hydrogen bomb, tried to speak.

"If" No. 3: Should the nation make the decision to deply the "Star Wars" weapons, the unified Space Command must be given the responsibility of operating the system, and — in what is assuredly going to be a fierce competition among the country's defense-oriented communities — Colorado Springs must be picked to host the strategic defense program.

Colorado Springs would seem to be a logical choiced, with the North American Aerospace Defense Command headquartered in Cheyenne Mountain and Space Command's Consolidated Space Operations Center scheduled to open east of town in 1986. But this decision, too, remains a big "if."

"If the United Space Command is formed, and if the SDI is approved, and if it is located here," said Kramer, "the impact is going to be incalculable."

Thais to protest alleged invasions

NONG SAMET, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam shelled Cambodian positions today in two embattled resistance camps along the Thai-Cambodian border, and Thailand said it planned protests at the United Nations against alleged Vietnamese incursions into Thai territory.

The Vietnamese fired for 40 minutes with artillery and mortars on sectors of the Rithisen camp still held by the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, said front commander Lia Ne. He said his men responded with mortar fire and rocket-propelled grenades.

Resistance units defending their toehold at Rithisen suffered nine wounded in the predawn clash, Lia Ne said.

There was no estimate of Vietnamese casualties and no independent verification of the reports.

In the Thai capital, Bangkok, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Thailand plans to protest the latest Vietnamese incursions from Cambodia into its territory to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Senior government officials were awaiting a full report from military field headquarters at the border about the ambush on Thai territory Monday which left six Thai rangers wounded, said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Details were expected from Maj. Gen. Aroon Srivuthai, deputy commander of the Second Army region, who Tuesday confirmed details of the clash. Some of the wounded rangers were pinned down 24 hours before reinforcements arrived at the scene, in Buriram province about 500 miles northeast of Bangkok.

Another incident Monday involved a Vietnamese unit discovered about a half-mile inside Thailand, according to military sources. The Foreign Ministry official said he had no details on the second incident, in which no Thais were wounded.

Today was the ninth day of combat in and around resistance camps inside Cambodia. Hundreds of Cambodians and Vietnamese have been reported killed or wounded in the new dry season offensive, although no precise figures are available.

The non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front is allied with the communist Khmer Rouge against the Vietnamese, who invaded Cambodia in late 1978 and set up a pro-Hanoi government. A third resistance group is loyal to former Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The International Red Cross said 41 front guerrillas from Rithisen were treated on Monday and Tuesday, with 25 hospitalized and 16 treated and released. This compared with 100 on Sunday, one of the bloodiest single days of combat since the war began five years ago.

Thai intelligence sources at the border town of Aranyaprathet said the Vietnamese also dropped five artillery rounds on the perimeter of Ampil camp, the front's headquarters 12 miles north of Rithisen along the central Thai-Cambodian border.

A Red Cross official said the organization had treated 261 Cambodians from Rithisen since the fighting began.

Paul Fruh, contacted by telephone in the Thai border town of Aranyaprathet, said of these 105 were wounded Sunday, 60 with lighter wounds were treated at "Red Hill," an evacuation site near the battlefield, while the rest were rushed to the Red Cross hospital at Khao-I-Dang.

WORLD IN BRIEF

East German refugees go home

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Seventeen East Germans, ending months of desperate efforts to gain direct passage to the West from here, left the West German Embassy today and boarded a train home.

The group of six women, seven men and four children appeared subdued as they filed into a second-class passenger car. About 45 other East Germans remained holed up in Prague's West German mission.

It was among the largest group to leave since mid-September, when the first of about 160 East Germans began crowding into the ornate 18th century mansion in downtown Prague, seeking direct passage to West Germany.

Since the standoff began, East Germany has continued to insist that its citizens return home, saying they would be free to apply to emigrate on their return.

Three men charged in bomb plot

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Two Irishmen and a Briton were charged in a magistrates court with plotting a bombing in Britain.

The three — Patrick Brazil, 34, and William Grimes, 43, both of Dublin, and Peter Jordan, 60, of Bristol, England — were ordered held for three days pending further hearing. They did not enter a plea nor did they apply for bail during Tuesday's proceedings.

They were among six men detained Christmas Eve under Britain's Prevention of Terrorism Act in Liverpool. One man was released Sunday night without being charged. The other two were freed Monday after being fined $175 each for failing to give police information.

Khadafy makes service mandatory

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The government of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy has made military service compulsory for both men and women, according to the official JANA news agency.

JANA quoted an official announcement Tuesday as saying the measure was taken "in the interest of defense" and that military training would begin in schools shortly.The report, monitored in Belgrade, did not elaborate.

Pakistani banks undergo change

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan's nationalized banking system has begun a major switch to operating under Islamic law, and the government pledged to prohibit all Western-style interest payments by June.

The change is part of a vast Islamization of the government, legal system and business, spearheaded by President Gen. Mohammed Zia Ul-Haq, the first Moslem ruler in the country to make such changes on a major scale.

Finance Minister Ghulam Ishaq Khan said Pakistan would continue to repay debts and interest it owes to foreign governments and financial institutions. Pakistan has an estimated $10 billion foreign debt, most of it to the United States, Western Europe and Japan.

Fires guts shopping hall, town hall

BERLIN (AP) — Fires swept through a large West Berlin shopping complex and a historic Bavarian town hall, causing millions of dollars damage but no injuries, authorities report.

About 50 residents were evacuated for several hours early Tuesday as firefighters battled the flames that gutted the Tegel Center mall. Authorities said it was one of Berlin's worst fires in recent years.

The fire was brought under control after 10 hours, leaving 27 shops in ashes and up to two dozen others damaged, said a fire department official.

Police sealed off the area to prevent looting. The cause of the fire was under investigation.
