TWO MEMBERS BARROW GANG ARE CAPTURED

By United Press

PANORA, Iowa., July 24.—For the second time today, three members of the Barrow gang of Texas eluded a closely drawn cordon and made good their escape from a heavily wooded tract northwest of here shortly after 1 o'clock. The officers combed the woods thoroughly after obtaining an armored car and their hunt revealed theid quarry had fled.

By United Press

DEXTER, Ia., July 24. — Two members of the Texas Barrow gang were captured and three others were fleeing from a strong, organized posse north of here in a stolen car today after a machine gun battle with officers in a heavily-wooded tract.

The two members left behind by the escaping trio were identified as Marion Bell and Blanche Bell, man and wife, of Route 61, Dallas, Texas. Both are badly wounded.

The escaping trio were identified as Clyde Barrow and his wife, and Jack Sherman, who commandeered an automobile from Valley Fellers, Dallas county farmer, and made good their escape from a cordon of officers during the heat of the battle.

Post Lands At New York With New Record

A tired and bedraggled figure, Wiley Post sits on the wing of his plane, the Winnie Mae, to receive the acclaim of thousands who came to greet him at Floyd Bennett Field, New York, after his ephocal flight around the world in seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes.

Olden Revival Is Closed Sunday, 53 Join the Church

The revival meeting which has been in progress at the Olden Baptist church for the past two weeks, closed Sunday night with the largest congregation in attendance that has ever been seen at an Olden church.

The meetings were conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. K. C. Edmonds, with services held each morning and each evening during the two weeks. Because of the hot weather the meetings were conducted in the tabernacle of the church.

During the two weeks 53 additions to the church were received, which far surpassed the expectations of the pastor or the congregation.

Eastland County Men Appointed By T. L. Blanton

Appointment of federal attorneys and appraisers to aid in the work of the Home Owners' Loan corporation in the 17th congressional district has been announced by Congressman Thomas L. Blanton for 17 of the 10 counties in his district. Appointees for the two other counties Brown and Burnet —are under consideration.

Eastland Water Minimum Raised

The city commission of Eastland at a recent meeting, raised the minimum limit on the amount of water to be used during any one month from 8,000 to 10,000 gallons. This ruling of the commission is already in effect and is to be continued indefinitely.

This action was taken on the part of the commission in order that the people might be able to use more water in caring for their flowers and shrubbery during the hot summer months, said City Manager Guy Parker this morning.

Citizens Urged To Attend Smoker

Committees were busy this morning selling tickets for the monthly smoker for business men of Eastland to be held Tuesday night at 8 o'clock on the roof garden of the Connellee hotel.

The program for the smoker has not been completed, but it is understood that some good speakers will be present to present several matters of importance to the citizenship of Eastland. Among the subjects to be discussed will be a bank for Eastland, the National Recovery act and trade extension.

It has been pointed out by those interested in having a large attendance at the Tuesday night meeting, that it is the purpose of the meeting to further the general interest of Eastland and thereby further the interest of the individual and that it behooves each and every citizen to be present and take part in the meeting.

CHILD IS RECOVERING

Little Beth Reineman, whose face was badly bruised and eye cut, when she fell out of a swing, at the home of her grandparents, Judge and Mrs. Earl Conner, is making a nice recovery, and escaping without serious injury to her eye.

The little girl was up and playing around on Sunday.

Mother of Mrs. Herbert Reed Is Dead at Rochester

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Reed received a telegram this morning stating that Mrs. Reed's mother, Mrs. D. C. Clemmer, had been found dead at the home of her son at Rochester. The telegram stated that funeral arrangements had not been made and Mr. Reed did not know whether the body would be buried at Rochester or at Putnam.

Mrs. Clemmer had been ill for some time and her death was not unexpected. Mr. and Mrs. Reed left this afternoon for Rochester.

Eastland Party Going to Chicago

A party of Eastland folk leaves Saturday for Fort Worth where they will join a party of Fort Worth people and leave on Sunday in two special cars for Chicago and the Century of Progress.

The Eastland party to date includes, Mrs. H. P. Brelsford, Sr., Misses Madge Brelsford, Sadie Brewer, Merle Ticer, Thelma Brewer, Geraldine Dabney, Maybelle Taylor of Haskell; Misses Beatrice Sealey, Emily Dreinhofer and Mrs. Robert Hunt of Ranger, and the railroad officials and their wives of Fort Worth.

They will have a stay of ten days in Chicago.

Dollar Is Being Paid on School Apportionment

By United Press

AUSTIN, July 24.—Payment of an additional $1 now being made to school districts, makes a total of $10 on the $16 annual apportionment per pupil, the state department of education announced here today.

The apportionment is one from state funds to supplement school taxes. Payments are being withheld from districts that are delinquent for two years in interest payments on state-owned bonds and from district that have failed to provide adequately secured depositories.

It is expected another $1 will be made in August and $2 in September.

Kansas City Has Become "Crime Capital and Gunmen's Refuge"

Editor's Note: This is the fifth of a series of dispatches on the status of rackets in American cities.

By C. C. NICOLET
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1933, United Press)

Kansas City, "The Heart of America," has become a national crime capital, refuge of gunmen who find other communities inhospitable.

The rackets they help enforce levy a toll of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year—an amazing total in a community of half a million.

The three oustanding examples of spectacular crime were the kidnaping of Mary McElroy, daughter of the city manager of Kansas City; the Union Station plaza massacre, in which machine gunners, in open daylight before crowds, assassinated a criminal and four officers; and the Memorial Day prison break at Lansing, Kan., when the warden was kidnaped and later other officials and citizens were used as hostages and shields to protect gunmen from shots as they fled by tortuous routes to hideaways.

"A lot of men have been making money—big money—out of beer and whiskey," he explained. "Beer is out of the racket category—it is as common as milk. Whiskey is making its come-back. These men will seek other pursuits.

"The public will continue to support these people, as it has in the past; and if they turn to crime we must be prepared to meet them."

Kansas Ctiy presents, perhaps, a picture of what may happen elsewhere as the fading liquor business loses its profits for the underworld. The liquor men and the racketeer slip easily into wholesale assassination, banditry and kidnaping. In Kansas City this situation has become acute earlier than elsewhere because of the influx of outside mobsters.

ROOSEVELT TO PUT IN MOTION RECOVERY PLAN

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 24. — President Roosevelt will put into motion tonight the greatest peace time appeal to public opinion the country has ever known.

He put the finishing touches to his friendly appeal to the people as the National Recovery administration came to groups with the problem of stabilizing the chaotic oil industry.

Mr. Roosevelt's message will be another of his friendly talks to the American people. He will make a direct plea to every employer in the United States to enter voluntary agreement for higher wages and shorter working hours.

Mobilizing every means of communication, the N. R. A. is beginning its drive to put the recovery program before every individual in the country with a blunt statement that the return of better times depends on prompt compliance with the President's re-employment campaign.

The oil hearings opening today brings to the front the issues of federal production control, licensing of oil production, refining, marketing and transportation, and matters of price cutting and labor regulations.

Mollisons Will Continue Flight

By United Press

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 24. James and Amy Mollison, recovered from the cuts and bruises they suffered last night when their plane cracked up near here at the end of a trans-Atlantic flight, will go on to Floyd Bennett field, New York, their original destination, late today.

But their plane, the Seafarer, will not carry them on the last stage of their journey. It was badly smashed when it came down in a bog at Stratford, last night at 9 o'clock. The plane had run out of gasoline.

Five Children Are Burned to Death

By United Press

SARNIA, Ontario, July 24. — Trapped by flames in their upstairs bedroom, five small brothers were burned to death today when fire destroyed their home in the Indian reservation two miles south of here.

The five brothers were: John White, 12; LeRoy, 10; Earl, 8; Raymond, 6, and Milton, 4. The fire, of undetermined origin, started on the second floor of the small, frame building, trapping the brothers in the room.

Elliott Roosevelt Not Worried By Church Report

By United Press

FORT WORTH, July 24.—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president, and his bride, did not seem greatly disturbed today by reports young Roosevelt would be barred from communion in the Episcopal church.

"Isn't that frightfully worrysome," he said jokingly. "If the Episcopal church doesn't want me, there are other churches," he continued.

Flour Millers and Grain Men to Meet

By United Press

FORT WORTH, July 24.—Texas flour millers and grain dealers will open a three-day meeting Wednesday to prepare a code of ethics and fair competition under the national recovery program.

Terminal grain elevator operators, commission merchants and brokers will meet Wednesday. Feed manufacturers will meet Thursday. County elevator operators, grain shippers, farmers co-operative and union associations and dealers will meet Friday and flour millers will convene Saturday.

Ex-Kaiser's Son Fat and Fifty

Prince Eitel Friedrich, second son of the former Kaiser Wilhelm, doesn't carry much weight in German affairs these days, but he's growing much heavier, this new portrait shows. The prince, who is active in the Steel Helmet organization, recently celebrated his fiftieth birthday.

OKLAHOMAN IS BEING HELD BY KIDNAP GANG

By United Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 24.—The family of Charles F. Urschel today moved to begin negotiations with the widnapers of the mutlimillionaire oil man seized at his home Saturday night.

E. E. Kirkpatrick, of Tulsa, a personal friend and business associate of the 40-year-old oil executive, was named go-between and will attempt to negotiate with the gang, the United Press learned today.

Seated constantly at the telephone at the Urschel Mansion, hourly awaiting a ransom demand from the daring machine gun abductors, Kirkpatrick announced he was ready to open negotiations with them. The amount of money the wealthy family was ready to pay was not divulged, but the demand was expected to be huge.

Post Will Receive Acclaim of Nation

By United Press

NEW YORK, July 24.—Recovered from the grueling grind of his record-breaking flight around the world, Wiley Post set out today to receive the applause of New York and the nation.

He will be guest of honor at luncheons, dinners, and receptions today and tomorrow and Wednesday will receive the noisy and dramatic welcome New York accords its heroes—a parade up lower Broadway to city hall through a shower of ticker tape and shradded newspapers.

Fort Worth Wheat Goes Down 10 Cents

By United Press

FORT WORTH, July 24.—No. 1 cash hard wheat continued to hold above $1 today, closing at $1.02 a bushel, as trading was resumed after a two-day suspension. The figure, however, was 10 cents under the $1.12 quotation of the last previous day the market was open, last Thursday.

TWO BODIES ARE FOUND EARLY TODAY

Police Say Pair Were Slugged, Man Shot and Girl Was Assaulted.

By United Press

FORT WORTH, July 24—A 19-year-old Muskogee, Okla., girl and her escort, A. S. Michael 33, Fort Worth electrician were found shot to death here today on a north side street.

The girl was identified by fingerprints as Geneva Cantrell.

Michael's body was found near the automobile and the body of the girl was located in a field nearby, Police said they had been murdered and the girl criminally assulted. Each had been shot in the back of the head with a pistol.. The girl's shoes, hose and underclothing had been removed and were strewn about.

Michael, who had been shot directly in the back of the head, also had a bruised forehead. Police believed the attacker had stolen up to the couple, slugged Michael, shot him and then forced the girl from the car. Michael's pockets were turned inside out.

Michael lived with his mother, Mrs. B. Michael. She is still in a critical condition from injuries received in an automobile accident near Wichita Falls two months ago. Her back was broken in two places.

Mrs. Michael was moved from a Wichita Falls hospital to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Ellis, in Cleburne, where she now is.

State Officers Are Entertained At Sweetwater

Members of the state comptroller's office in Eastland, together with their wives, attended a banquet in Sweetwater Saturday night given by Sweetwater citizens in honor of State Comptroller George H. Sheppard, V. Earl Earp, assistant attorney general, and E. C. Brand, state banking commissioner.

Jointly honored with the three were Will H. Scott, representative from the Sweetwater district, and Wilbourne B. Collie of Eastland, state senator.

"Sweetwater, July 22.—A trio of home-town "boys" who made good came back to their native city here tonight to receive, at a banquet, a tribute from their former fellow-townsmen and neighbors for their rise from comparative obscurity to posts of high importance in the state's governmental set-up.

One hundred Sweetwater citizens and others from over the state attended the affair, given in honor of George H. Sheppard, state comptroller; V. Earl Earp, assistant attorney general, and E. C. Brand, the new state banking commissioner.

Jointly honored with the three were Will H. Scott, state representative from this district, and Wilbourne B. Collie, Eastland, state senator.

James H. Beall, Jr., presided as toastmaster. Roy W. Thompson spoke on behalf of the Sweetwater citizenship honoring the state officials. Each of the honor guests spoke briefly concerning the activities of his respective department."

AMERICAN GRAIN CROPS HIT THE BOTTOM IN YIELD

Secretary Henry A. Wallace, head of the department of agriculture and farm czar, has made a forecast of the smallest harvest of grains, including corn, in decades. There is a reason for it—"the result of the greatest general crop damage in 50 years." According to the report, the year's wheat will be the smallest since 1893, more than 100,000,000 bushels below normal domestic needs. As for corn, the crop would be one of the poorest in 32 years. Oats yield would be lightest since 1897. All in all, speaking of corn, oats, barley, rye and flax seed, there is to be an aggregate yield of 3,783,204 bushels, or 1,480,996,000 bushels less than the harvest of 1932 of these crops. All of which is a reminder that the total yield will be 1,105,396,000 bushels below the average output for the five year period—1926 to 1930 inclusive.

Many large areas in the Middlewest are said to have the poorest crop outlook in the memories of their oldest farmers, "with the prospect of any harvest eliminated on thousands of farms the operators of which, with little or no grain to sell, will have no opportunity to share in the recent general advance of farm prices." Rye bread is coming back. A brilliant Associated Press reporter in the Chicago office turned this loose July 11: "Like a meteor the rye market flamed across the speculative horizon today and gained 9 cents a bushel, smashing high price records right and left." Wheat jumped when the production was placed at 495,681,000 bushels as of July 1. Normally the United States produces about 850,000,000 bushels.

Corn production was estimated at 2,884,032,000 bushels, and the federal crop reporting board said that the crop probably would fall below 2,400,000,000 for the fourth time in 32 years. Corn is king again. Perhaps this is a hint that the corn bread eaters will be doubled in the United States, which will be a return to the so-called days of pioneer history not only in the Midwest but the Southwest and many other sections of the republic.

And then think of barley with the repeal of the 18th Amendment and the coming of 3.2 beer a betting proposition. In 1932 the American barloy crop totaled 300,000,000 bushels. Estimates this year 170,000,000 bushels. In 1932 the total rye production was 40,000,000 bushels. Federal board estimates this year, 25,300,000 bushels.

Who was it that said that the partial destruction of the American grain crops this year was "An Act of God"?

TEXAS COTTON GROWERS AND THEIR RECORD

A tabulation of figures at Texas extension headquarters, College Station, showed Texas cotton farmers who have signed comtracts in the cotton acreage reduction campaign have agreed to cut their 1933 acreage an average of 38 per cent. Texas has 396,160 cotton farmers. They followed the flag of the Iowa czar who has declared his willingness to go all the road regardless of scan wheat yields or heavy cotton yields. That is, there will be no change in the processing tax plan or program.

There is an age when a child begins to lose his beliefs and yet is eager to retain them. A lot of grown up folks are in the same fix today.

It is easy to see that those people who expected reduced taxes are doomed to disappointment.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

The world is topsy-turvy and so far human-kind has proved incapable of setting it right. Something more original than economics, conferences, moratoriums and expensive conversations between representatives of different powers is necessary before the desirable end can be attained.

Loyalty to your home city and a willingness to cooperate with your fellow citizens in working for its welfare is the most important factor in city building. The great cities of America have been built by people who lived in them rather than by the natural advantages of their location.

A lot of politicians are still continuing to abuse public utilities and their rates. Seems that they think it will make them exceedingly popular and help them to gain or hold office. Most of the people are fed upon that old political game; they have more important things to think of. The high cost of living is worrying everybody. Most everything that enters into the cost of living is sky-rocketing in price except utility rates and newspaper advertising.

Treasure Seekers Dreams Shattered By Stark Reality

By United Press

PAINT ROCK, Texas.—Treasure seekers of the depression have had their dreams destroyed by government authorities on Indian lore at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington—scientists with no more romance in their souls than to compare the Indian pictorialist of ancient days with th tired business man who absent-mindedly draws pictures on the table cloth, or the college boy who slips out at night to paint his class numerals on the chapel roof.

In recent months legends of fabulous stores of gold, carefully hidden from the white man in caches marked by crude signs and pictures, have been revived to add color if not wealth to the blessings of the southwest, especially in Concho county, Texas.

Hundreds of messages, according to Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the bureau of American ethnology, have been received at the Smithsonian Institution requesting scientific aid in solving the supposedly cabalistic pictographs left by the Indians.

But science is not poetry and Stirling and his aides were forced to point out that Indian paintings, on rocks and cave walls instead of being directions to stores of buried treasure probably had no more significance even in their day than the idle markings made on a restaurant table cover by a modern business man.

In any case, Stirling reported, no one alive can interpret the pictographs. Indians in Mexico developed a system of writing, but in the United States only a few standard symbols were so used that they could be interpreted by Indians of a specific group.

An attempt at interpretation today is hopeless.

Some of the paintings were "sympathetic magic." An Indian believes that if he painted a picture of a deer with an arrow piercing its heart, the painting would foreshadow the event.

Others were purely personal in character. An Indian who proved his courage by venturing into enemy territory and there performing some piece of vandalism might "write his name" on a conspicuous rock, much as the college youth of today paints his class colors on the chapel roof at night.

Science goes even further than merely to say the pictographs are today unreadable—it adds that Spanish legends of Indian wealth were enormously exaggerated.

The Indians doubtless had a little gold, Stirling said, and quantities of fresh water pearls which they prized, but the gold was insignificant in amount and the pearls would have no value today.

But true or not, the legends go on, and their color—even if not that of true gold—adds brilliance to the lore of the southwest.

Judge Proves Egg Can Be Cooked in Texas By Sun

By United Press

EL PASO.—Judge W. D. Howe, 34th district court, turned scientists here on the hottest day of the season to prove that an egg can be friend on the sidewalk.

It was 104 degrees in the shade when he began his experiment, only there was no shade.

The judge tried an automobile hood first. He dropped an egg gently on the hood. The egg just as gently slid from the hood.

"That doesn't count," the judge declared. "I'll grant a new trial."

He broke the second egg on the sidewalk.

The egg hardened. Judge Howe stooped down gleefully.

"It's cooking," he declared triumphantly. A few minutes later the egg was done to a turn. City Attorney J. H. McBroom came by, and the two learned jurists surveyed the egg.

Judge McBroom concurred in Judge Howe's opinion.

"It's cooked," he declared, gravely.

"So am I," said Judge Howe, wiping perspiration from his forehead. "Have some Egg?"

PIGEON DELIVERED MESSAGE

By United Press

MANITOWISH, Wis.—George Brooks, Chicago, boasted to his friends that he would land a muskelunge the first day of his fishing in Spider lake here. On his third cast a 17-pound muskie took the bait. Brooks landed it, rowed ashore immediately and sent word of the catch to Chicago by carrier pigeon. The message arrived shortly before noon that day.

WASHINGTON.—Depreciation of the dollar doesn't mean much to most of us, but our diplomats and consuls are taking it on the nose.

Several resignations already have been received—though the State Department won't admit it—from members of the foreign service who can't stand the gaff.

The general effect on the present exchange situation is to make the service more than ever a rich boys' playground and freeze out those career men who haven't an outside income.

The consular service is hardest hit. Some of them have experienced a 58 per cent reduction of income as compared with last year. Those who live outside embassies and legations receive up to $720 a year for rent—minus a 15 per cent cut in addition to a similar cut on their salaries and the effect of at least a 30 per cent decline in the value of the dollar abroad.

Foreign service men receive from $2500 to $9000 a year, ministers $10,000 and ambassadors $17,500—all minus the 15 per cent. The average income decline seems to be about 50 per cent. It's especially tough on our representatives who have leases on houses.

Nothing can be done about it, short of an act of Congress—six months hence. Meanwhile, every chief of mission is worrying Washington about the situation and many subordinates who aren't resigning are digging deep into their pockets.

Swim Champion Named

Kansas City Becomes

"Fur" Sammon, notorious old-time racketeer wanted for payroll robbery as far east as Baltimore, was arrested a few days ago in a comfortable stucco house in the upper middle class country club district.

Furniture in this home, it was found, came from a residence belonging to Verne Miller, identified as one of the mob that staged the Union Station massacre. Miller, who has not been captured, had, under the name of White, sought membership at the Milburn Country club.

The rackets built up by these gunmen and their local allies cover a wide field. Slot machines provide more income than any other single line of business. The "take" is divided 50-50 between the store owner and the gang. Cigar stores, drug stores, almost every type of shop has become a field for slot machines.

"Nobody but a sucker would put a nickel, dime or quarter into a slot machine," says City Manager McElroy. "If the slot machines didn't get the sucker money something equally foolish would.

So the police, of which McElroy is the acting head under Kansas City's corporate setup, seldom interfere with the coin devices, and some $8,000,000 a year goes into them.

Hotels, restaurant men and others renting aprons, white coats, table cloths and towels are required to patronize the "right" establishments. Bills frequently are doubled or more, and the business man who complains fears he may be visited by thugs.

Cleaners and dyers are as profitable in Kansas City as in other racket-infested regions. The sale of frozen dainties has been organized, and pays its toll to the golfing gunmen.

John Lazia, former convict, who has wide political prestige among Italian residents, controls a night club ginger ale racket, requiring the cabarets to use his product. He has almost a super-police force of his own. When Nell Donnelly, garment manufacturer, was kidnaped for $100,000 ransom Lazia's men patroled the streets in automobiles and helped obtain her release without payment. When Mary McElroy was kidnaped, Lazia was called to the McElroy home and aided in negotiating her release.

City Manager McElroy scored victims who would not complain and witnesses who would not testify.

"I've talked this kidnaping case over with my son and daughter," he said, "and we are going to testify when the trial comes. My daughter will identify the three men now held and will tell her experience. It is simple duty, though the kidnapers threatened all of us with death if we took action against them."

McElroy revealed how he, as head of the police force, had called in a few of the best men in the department when his daughter was abducted, but had restrained them from any immediate action. He then called the managing editors of the city's newspapers, told them what had happened, and exacted a pledge that they would publish nothing until he released the story. Then he established communication with the kidnapers, persuaded them to cut the ransom from $60,000 to $30,000, and bought back his daughter.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ELINOR STAFFORD, falls in love with BARRETT COLVIN. She is 20 and he is 35. LIDA STAFFORD, Elinor's jealous, scheming mother, breaks up the romance by convincing Barrett that Elinor is a heartless flirt.

When Elinor's aunt, wealthy MISS ELLA SEXTON, dies she leaves her fortune to Barrett. Then drunken VANCE CARTER shoots BENTWELL STAFFORD, Elinor's father. Barrett tells Elinor that if she will marry him and live as a guest in his house for a year he will give her the entire Sexton fortune to divide among her relatives, the rightful inheritors. Knowing the money may save her father's life, Elinor agrees.

The marriage takes place. Barrett, still believing the lies Lida has told him, finds himself more in love with Elinor than ever. The doctor orders a change of climate for Elinor's father and she goes to Aiken with him.

Years before Barrett shielded his half-sister, MARCIA RADNOR, when a youthful romance ended disastrously. Marcia had a son whom Barrett adopted. He has promised Marcia never to reveal the boy's story. Lida Stafford learns about the boy's existence and concludes he is Barrett's son.

Barrett makes an unannounced trip to Aiken. He finds BOB TELFARE there and suspects Elinor of carrying on a flirtation with Bob. In an angry scene he tells her scornfully that he knows all about her affairs.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVII

THE day dawned gray and chill. At 10 the mist had turned to a steady, cold rain. Barrett had eaten a scant breakfast and moved restlessly, waiting for Elinor who, for the first time he could remember, had had her breakfast in bed. He stood before the fire, hands thrust deeply into his pockets, rattling coins. He moved to a window and then turned away, picked up a book, laid it down and sat down to try to read a paper. A moment later he had cast that aside to wander once more to the window. He did all these things half a dozen times and found he could settle to nothing.

The maid, dusting, watched him circumspectly. "He's a very restless sort of gentleman," she said later to the cook.

At 11 Barrett gave in and sent a note to Elinor. His handwriting was nervously unsteady. The note read:

"Child—Will you give me a chance to talk with you? I don't deserve your consideration in the least but I don't know how to go through another hour without trying to make you understand a little of my shame.

Barrett."

Elinor came down almost immediately. She looked pale and there were shadows beneath the blue eyes. Shivering a little, she dropped to an ottoman near the fire and turned her wan face to the dancing flames.

"You were very good to come down," he said with the stiffness which speaks of strain.

"Oh, no—" she answered listlessly.

"Elinor!"

"Yes?"

"Will you try to understand me?"

"I have always tried, Barrett. Sometimes it hasn't been easy. You see I feel the same way all the time. You—well, you know how it's been with us from the first!" The words ended a trifle brokenly.

HE dropped to a chair that was close to her and leaned toward her, arms on knees. "I have always loved you," he said slowly and gravely.

"Then it hasn't made you kind!" she answered hotly. "I'm sorry but for the first time since I've known you, I doubt you! If you had loved me things wouldn't have happened the way they did last night. The way you kissed me—it was as though it was something you were ashamed of!"

Her chin raised. She turned eyes made hostile by pride to meet his gaze.

"I don't want love like that. I don't want anyone to love me and be ashamed of it!" she stated after a stretch of silence that became more tense with each moment.

"I have hurt you badly," he said half-aloud.

"Yes; from the first. You've given me no chance to be of any worth to anyone. I am one of those weak people who can't help being dependent. When I know I've displeased you I feel perfectly miserable. I'm afraid to speak and quite certain that I'll say or do the wrong thing. I'm never sure of myself. I've always been aware of my shortcomings. They've been pointed out to me by many people. It isn't kind or fair to take advantage of a person who stumbles habitually—"

"Elinor—," he began but she cut him short.

"Before our marriage and since," she said, "there have been times when you seemed to care a little for me. And then you always drew away again—as though you were ashamed. I suppose you regretted your lack of taste!" She was breathing quickly and her face had flushed.

He took her hand, held it between his tightly. He saw the tears in her eyes. Perhaps, he reasoned, if his attitude had been different she would not have turned to Bob Telfare.

"I love you," he said. "God knows, Elinor, that I speak the truth!"

"You think me to be capable of flirting and trying to hide it! You said last night that I needn't pretend to be surprised!"

• • •

SHE tried to look the scorn for this she felt. She failed. Her lips trembled and she turned from him, crying.

"But, child—" he said brokenly.

"Oh, don't!" she begged. "I'll begin to think it will last again. I'll start being happy and then tomorrow or the next day you'll scarcely speak to me!"

"You care—?" he murmured, amazed.

"Yes, if it's any satisfaction to you, I do. And I, too, am ashamed of caring!"

She struggled up. Barrett got to his feet and put a hand on her arm.

"Please let me go, Barrett!" she begged.

"I will in a moment, dear. Elinor, if I can make you happy for the rest of the time we must spend together and if by the end of that time you have gained some trust in me, there is nothing in the world that would make me so happy as to help you to a life worth while—open, without evasion—"

"I haven't forgotten," she said, wiping her eyes, "what you did for us all when you married me but—it's been so hard! You don't know how hard! When I thought you cared a little and then you—you—"

He drew her into his arms and held her close. She had not spoken the truth, he was sure. She had gone somewhere with Bob Telfare that afternoon when he wanted to tell her he loved her. But she had had little from life to help her in building a strong, decent code. Perhaps love—his love—offered honestly would help to do this. Perhaps she could learn the satisfaction of living honestly and straightforwardly.

She was shaking from her sobs. He felt his own eyes sting. Stooping, he pressed his cheek against her hair.

She drew away. "Tomorrow," she said, "you'll scarcely speak to me! I know you'll change!"

"No!" he contradicted sharply.

• • •

SHE smiled wanly and turned from him to hurry to the hall and up the stairs. Alone he considered the situation. She was pitiably dependent and alone. He had not helped her. Instead he had hindered her. A little blindness to her faults, a greater appreciation of the good that was hers—perhaps with a few years of this her leaning to "affairs" would be lessened and they could have a decent sort of life together.

After all, he thought, all life seems to be a compromise. "Never the whole, eternal quietude." He loved her. It was love he felt—love that had made his eyes sting when she was crying in his arms. But he did not, could not, respect or trust her.

Bentwell Stafford did not leave his bed that day. "One of the bad days," he panted to Barrett who wandered to his room to visit him. The nurse, Barrett noticed, kept attentive fingers on his wrist. Elinor remained in her own room. The rain fell slowly, dismally. A wire came from Lida to announce that she was coming.

Twilight settled early and the night that followed was velvet black. Miss Hemmingway telephoned for the physician who was attending Bentwell Stafford. At dinner, the first meal of the day Elinor had eaten with Barrett, the girl was abstracted, worried by her father's condition and wilted by the emotional tension that she had known during the last 24 hours.

Barrett, who could not forget her accusations, was conscience-stricken. He could not take his eyes from her. She seemed so weary and so badly shaken by her father's loss of consciousness.

Barrett could sense the strain that made it impossible for her to do more than toy with her food. He decided that he would see to it that the doctor had a look at the daughter as well as the father. His heart caught at the thought of her being ill.

As the clock struck midnight the maid hurried down the stair. At the door of the living room she paused, swallowed hard and then spoke.

"Mr. Colvin," she said, "please sir, Miss Hemmingway wants you to come up. Mr. Stafford has gone—"

COP IS TALENTED ARTIST

By United Press

RACINE, Wis.—Fellow members of the Racine police force are urging Patrolman Wilmer Schmidt to take seriously to art of drawing, which he practices as a hobby. Winner of an art scholarship 20 years ago in Leipzig, Germany, Schmidt spent some time at art school. When he came to the United States, however, he abandoned art and became a policeman. Professional artists have appraised his technique as "perfect."

Junior Missionary Auxiliary

The Junior Missionary Auxiliary of the Baptist church, had an interesting program on "Africa" at their meeting Saturday morning, in the church class rooms.

The session was opened by Lillian Bishop, president pro tem. Theme of program, "Never Give Up Africa," was presented in song, story and reading, opening with the hymn, "The Nail Scarred Hands," led by Lillian Bishop.

The devotional was brought by their director, Mrs. J. P. Truly, and hymn, "A Friend of Mine," was led by Audrey Shepherd.

"Mountain Music," reading by Dale Bishop.

"Little Feet Be Careful," song by Anna Jean Darby.

"Ten Reasons Why I Will Not Use Alcoholic Drinks," Robert McFarland.

Song, "Are We Downhearted."

The lesson study, "The Lost Prince of Africa," was an interesting story told by Mrs. Truly.

Hymn, "Hold the Line For Jesus," was led by James Hassen.

"Our Saviour's Love," reading, Tiny Shepherd.

"I Will Ring a Bell in Africa," reading, Audrey Shepherd.

Prayer chain for Africa, was led by Mrs. Lee Bishop and closed by Robert McFarland.

The names of the 25 missionaries in Africa, on the Baptist field, were read to the children, and prayer given for them.

Next Saturday morning's meeting closes the series on Africa. As that will be the 5th Saturday, everyone is asked to take a lunch, which will be spread on a long table, during the social period.

Oh, yes! Another thing. The committees going around with tickets are taking time off their business to serve the community. It is also important to remember that the Connellee hotel should be notified as to how many plates are necessary to be served. That's only business and when a business man says he don't know whether he will be there or not, and then he is there, that means that the whole works have been disrupted and they don't know how many they should prepare for. So tell the committee yes or no, when they call on you to purchase tickets.

Idaho Farmers See Short Potato Croop

By United Press

BOISE, Idaho.—While wheat prices soared to new highs of several months, Idaho farmers reported possibilities of the shortest crop in several years. G. T. Tudson, marketing specialist, said following a tour of wheat districts.

Extreme cold killed most of the winter wheat and hot, dry winds have caused heavy damage to spring wheat, Hudson said. In the southeastern section of the state, crops that averaged a total production of 30 million bushels in recent years, will be approximately 20,000,000 bushels.

Mother Reunited With Son, Lost 21 Years

By United Press

SWANTON, O.—An overjoyed mother here has been reunited with a son whom she mourned for dead for 21 years.

The mother is Mrs. Augusta Halstead, 81. Her son, K. D. Raker, 47, an electrical engineer in Oregon, returned here recently after many years of absence, during which her letters to him had been returned unclaimed.

Mrs. Halstead was informed many years ago that her son had died in a forest fire in Oregon.

Hold Widow of Slain Gangster

Mrs. Frank Nash, widow of the gangster slain in Kansas City's Union Station massacre, is shown as she was questioned by Department of Justice agents at Kansas City where she is held under $25,000 bond on a charge of obstructing justice. Mrs. Nash is alleged to have tipped off Nash's pals that he was being returned, via Kansas City, to Leavenworth prison, from which he had escaped.

Richard Barthelmess At Lyric Today In "Central Airport"

Richard Barthelmess zooms into town in his latest First National picture "Central Airport" today for a two day engagement at the Lyric theatre. This thrilling air story is unusual in that it glorifies the commercial flyers of peace, rather than the birdmen of war, and it is said that "Central Airport" tops anything ever filmed in a picture of this nature in breath-taking flying scenes, romantic love, and unusual story content.

One of the most fascinating love triangles is formed between Dick, who believes a flyer's place is in the sky, not in the home, his younger aviator brother, Tom Brown, whose viewpoint is just the opposite, and the girl, Sally Eilers, who wants Dick's love but Tom's security.

You'd like the ROBINSONS

THEY'RE the kind of people it's nice to have as neighbors. They always seem to have such a good time together. Their home isn't large, but it's furnished in excellent taste; everything fits perfectly, as though it had been made especially for the very space it occupies.

And their dinners are charming. Not expensive, but different . . . new and interesting dishes that other people haven't heard of yet. Mrs. Robinson dresses beautifully, too. Her clothes have that air of coming straight from Paris yet she doesn't spend much on them.

If you should ask her how it is she manages things so well, Mrs. Robinson would smile and say, "It's really very simple. WE BUDGET OUR INCOME. That tells us how much money we have to spend. And WE READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS. That tells us how to spend our money wisely."

SHERIFF'S SALE

THE STATE OF TEXAS,
County of Eastland.

By virtue of a certain order of sale issued out of the honorable 91st District Court of Eastland county, on the 6th day of July, 1933, by P. L. Crossley, clerk of said court, upon a judgment in favor of Mrs. Emma Green, a widow, for the sum of Three Hundred Thirty-eight and 29-100 ($338.29) Dollars plus interest and cost of suit, in cause No. 15,645 in said court, styled Mrs. Emma Green, a widow, versus J. B. Davis et ux., Exa V. Davis, and placed in my hands for service, I, Virge Foster, as sheriff of Eastland county, Texas, did on the 8th day of July, 1933, levy on certain real estate situated in Eastland county, described as follows, to-wit:

All that certain lot, tract or parcel of land, lying and being situated in the town of Ranger, Eastland county, Texas, and being a part of the Frances Blundell survey lying north and adjacent to the Blackwell road and being more fully described as follows: Beginning at a point 50 feet west of the southeast corner of an 11-acre tract of land out of the said Frances Blundell survey, which said point is also the southwest corner of a lot now (on March 2, 1929) owned by Chestnut & Smith; thence west 145 feet; thence north 140 feet a corner; thence east 145 feet to a corner; thence south 140 feet to the place of beginning, and levied upon as the property of said J. B. Davis and wife, Eva V. Davis, and on Tuesday, the 1st day of August, 1933, at the courthouse door of Eastland county, in the city of Eastland, Texas, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., I will sell said real estate at public vendue, for cash, to the highest bidder, as the property of said J. B. Davis and wife, Exa V. Davis, by virtue of said levy and said order of sale.

And in compliance with law, I give this notice by publication, in the English language, once a week for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding said day of sale in the Eastland Telegram, a newspaper published in Eastland county.

Witness my hand this 6th day of July, A. D. 1933
