CIA aid to Nicaragua to continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, shying away from a confrontation with President Reagan, is allowing the CIA's "covert" aid to Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries to continue.

In legislation providing temporary funds for the new fiscal year that began Saturday, Congress included money for the covert action and Reagan backers voiced growing optimism that they could head off Democratic efforts to kill the embattled program.

Proposals to end it are expected to re-emerge later this month, but their chances appear doubtful.

The congressional maneuvering occurred as CIA-backed "contras" — or counter-revolutionaries — stepped up attacks against Nicaraguan towns near the Honduran border and against economic targets deep inside the country. The leftist Nicaraguan government claims to have beaten back the attacks.

The House, which voted 228-195 on July 28 to kill the program, is scheduled to consider the cutoff proposal again in about two weeks as part of the 1984 intelligence authorization bill. The Senate never took up the House-passed bill and is expected to back the continued covert action although insisting on tighter budgetary controls.

Congressional staff aides of both parties, speaking on condition they not be identified, agreed that the cutoff effort has lost steam since the July vote for several reasons. Among them are:

—The more pressing crisis over the role of U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

—Intense anti-Soviet feeling over the downing of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 that has hardened congressional sentiment on a wide range of security issues.

—Administration pleas that the covert action is crucial to its overall political strategy in Central America and has already succeeded in forcing Nicaragua to soften its negotiating position.

—Pentagon estimates that an overt program for stopping weapons going from Nicaragua to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador would cost $300 million and risk deeper U.S. military involvement.

The House bill, approved in July, would have replaced the covert aid with an open $80 million fund to help pro-U.S. governments in the region stop leftist gun-running.

Stormy weather

A serene scene followed gusts of wind which blew debris from storage sheds into fences behind the home of Skip and Linda Fulkerson on County Road 123. Right, employees of Texas Electric Service Co. restore electricity to the Fulkerson's home as tin from storage sheds lay tangled and twisted on the ground.

Rain finally hits Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

For the first time since January, Midland received almost an inch of precipitation Sunday evening when a burst of rain, hail, wind and lightning struck a thirsty Tall City, causing slight damage to some rural buildings but no injuries.

A quarter of an inch of rain swept down in less than an hour and lightning hit the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, causing a break in the hourly recording of precipitation, according to a NWS weather service specialist.

With an overnight total of .98 of an inch, Midland received its first sizeable amount of rain since the .75 of an inch recorded last January. The last time the area received more than an inch was when Mother Nature dumped 2.25 inches of rain on Midland July 11, 1982.

A "weird wind" was responsible for damage done to six used cars at Village Lincoln-Mercury, according to Bill Stella, general manager. A sign owned by an advertising company "literally disintegrated and blew some debris on about six used cars."

"It appears it was a weird wind because only one ring was buckled (on the sign)," Stella said.

Nearby, cars parked at the Lexington Apartments were damaged when an overhang roof area over a walkway tore off and fell on the cars. According to Jim Mathis, assistant manager, damage was minor.

Along County Road 123 in far west Midland County, Department of Public Safety troopers and Midland County Sheriff Deparment deputies observed wind damage to metal buildings, the roofs of several storage units and houses. Texas Electric Service Co. employees were called out to restore electricity.

While some residents whose homes lost shingles and sustained other damage said they thought the high winds were tornadoes, a NWS weather service specialist said weather spotters in the area claimed it was only high winds.

Itinerary of Reagan trip under review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says the itinerary for President Reagan's November trip to the Philippines and other nations is being reviewed for possible changes.

Asked Sunday night whether Reagan planned to cancel his trip to the Philippines, the scene of violent political unrest in recent days, a White House spokesman read a statement which said, "We are reviewing the itinerary."

The statement, read by White House spokesman Peter Roussel, said Reagan's schedule was under review "in view of the fact that Congress will be in session, that key appropriations bills have not yet been enacted, and that a continuing resolution has been enacted but will expire in mid-November."

The statement added that "it is clear that the first two weeks in November will be particularly demanding legislative weeks."

Nancy Reagan said last month she was concerned for her husband's safety during his planned visit to the Philippines. Last week, Reagan hinted he might not travel to the Philippines, but he said any schedule changes would be because "Congress was in session."

Lee County (Florida) sheriff's deputies investigate the death scene of what is being called a death pact between a couple.

Old couple decides to end their lives

NORTH FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Julia Saunders, 81, had her hair done. Her husband, Cecil, 85, collected the mail one final time and paused to chat with a neighbor. Inside their mobile home, they carefully laid out a navy blazer and a powder-blue dress.

After lunch, the Saunderses drove to a rural corner of Lee County and parked. As cows grazed in the summer heat, the couple talked, then Cecil Saunders shot his wife of 60 years in the heart and turned the gun on himself.

Near the clothes they had chosen to be buried in, the couple had left a note:

"Dear children, this we know will be a terrible shock and embarrassment. But as we see it, it is one solution to the problem of growing old. We greatly appreciate your willingness to try to take care of us.

"After being married for 60 years, it only makes sense for us to leave this world together because we loved each other so much."

On the floorboard of the car, Cecil and Julia Saunders had placed typewritten funeral instructions and the telephone numbers of their son and daughter. They draped the Chevrolet's seat with a shower curtain and wool blanket so their blood would leave no permanent stain.

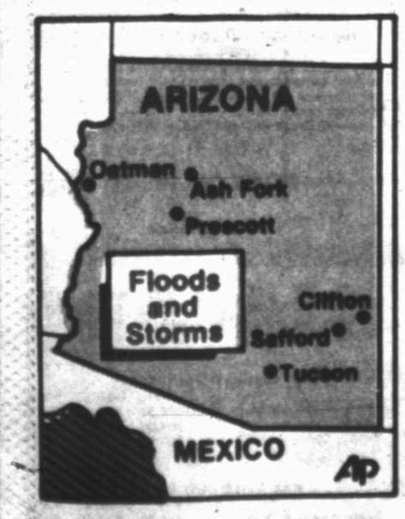
Floodwaters leave 10 people dead or missing



Arizona Gov. Jim West has declared an emergency in the wake of storms and flooding.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Floodwaters that left 10 people dead or missing surged through normally bone-dry land today, forcing thousands from their homes, washing out bridges, roads and power and turning a slice of the desert Southwest into "a raging river."

Rivers swollen to record levels burst their banks amid heavy rains Sunday, swallowing buildings and bridges and causing millions of dollars in damage across a 200 mile swath of Arizona, officials said.

Business districts and thousands of houses in Tucson, Clifton, Safford, Nogales and Marana were under several feet of water as rain continued to fall today, and emergency shelters were set up in the few dry structures.

"The only thing we could salvage was our kids," said Fred Ramone, 24, who left his flooded home in Rillito for Marana, then had to be evacuated again from Marana to Tucson. "My family got out — that's the main thing," he said, adding that he lost his home, car and farm animals to the floods.

A 4-foot-high wall of water hit Tucson on Sunday night as the Santa Cruz River crested, closing all but one of the city's bridges and knocking out major power lines to more than 20,000 homes and businesses.

"It's a desert that has been turned into a raging river," said Joann Webster, director of the American Red Cross' Tucson chapter.

More than 1,500 residents fled to shelters and hundreds more were stranded as more than 4 inches of rain fell in a 36-hour period ending Sunday, the National Weather Service reported.

The peak flow estimated Sunday in the Santa Cruz was 35,000 cubic feet per second to 40,000 cfs, said Charles Huckleberry, Pima County's flood-control director. The greatest recorded previously, around 30,000 cfs, was in 1977, Huckleberry added, calling Sunday's flow a "100-year-plus flood." One cubic foot of water equals 7.48 gallons.

Across town, a 5-month-old, $500,000 office building and the were swept downstream when the banks of the Rillito River crumbled.

Officials said no overall damage estimate would be available until the water receded.

Twenty-five miles downstream in Marana, the water spread out in a 3-mile swath, filling a 100-foot-wide riverbed that usually stands dry, drowning cotton and sorghum fields and flooding over a thousand homes. Residents were evacuated, and power was expected to be out for several days, authorities said.

Tom Price, head of the city's Operations Deptartment, said city crews worked through the night to try to repair traffic lights in time for this morning's rush hour.

Officials evacuated Duncan on Sunday amidst predictions that the Gila River would rise more than four feet today and inundate the town.

Clifton, about 100 miles northeast of Tucson on the San Francisco River, already had been hit so hard that there was little left to be damaged by further flooding, Department of Public Safety spokesman Allan Schmidt said Sunday night. More than half the town had been swept away, leaving the 4,200 residents without electricity, water or phone service, he said.

Just under 6 inches of rain had fallen in Clifton during the 36 hours ending at midday Sunday, the National Weather Service said.

Staff Sgt. Jim Rothlisberger of the Arizona National Guard said some businesses in downtown Clifton were under as much as 8 feet of water.

All drinking water in Clifton, Safford and Pima was reported contaminated. Red Cross units were helping hundreds evacuate their homes.

New hospital advisory board formed

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A first-class community should have first-class facilities and, according to Parkview Hospital's administrator, a group of area residents will help smooth the steps toward that goal.

With plans to provide for the medical needs of Midland, a group of seven people were chosen to serve on the newly formed Community Advisory Board.

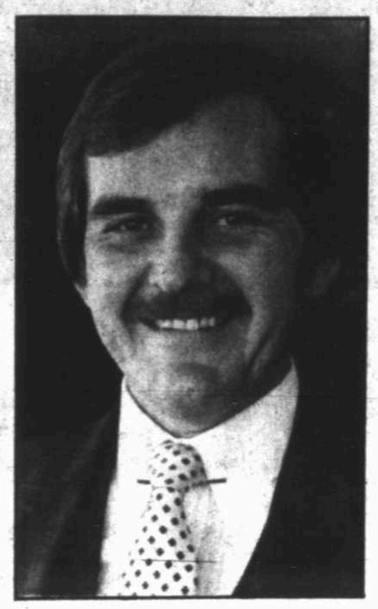
"This advisory board will help us with not only Parkview, but with the Doctor's Hospital, too," said Dick Liley, Parkview administrator. "I plan to use this board as sort of my ear to the community."

Although fresh ideas from the non-medical community will increase insight, Liley said several are involved in area medical programs and practices.

"We have a very diverse group," Liley said. "Two of the folks are related directly to area nursing programs so I plan to use them as a resource for the new hospital."

The two are Celia Harris, director of the Associate Degree Nursing Program at Midland College, and Anna Winn, chairman of the nursing department at Odessa College.

Also serving on the board are Barbara Holdampf, director of Allied Health at Howard College, and Dr. Harvey J. Durbin, Big Spring clinical psychologist.



Dick Liley

Gaylyn Barr, account executive for Gulf Oil, and Conrad Coleman, news reporter for KOSA-TV, also join Liley on the board.

Meeting quarterly, the committee will consider two areas, according to Liley: Parkview's services to the community and services to be provided by the proposed replacement hospital.

Revised plans for the new hospital, to be named the Doctor's Hospital of the Permian Basin, call for 67 medical-surgical beds and eight intensive care unit beds. The building, which will be constructed at the corner of Preston Drive and Loop 250, will sprawl over 79,895 square feet.

The $15.4 million facility was reduced from the $17.5 million, 110-bed replacement hospital requested last fall and turned down in March by the Texas Health Facilities Commission (THFC) in Austin.

Depite competition between Parkview and Midland Memorial Hospital, MMH trustees and directors voted not to oppose the recent request, which was scaled down in an effort, according to a news release issued by Parkview, "to insure the replacement of Parkview Hospital in the shortest possible time consistent with the Texas Health Planning System."

Although physical plans for the facility may have grown smaller, Liley said proposed services for the replacement hospital are as large as ever.

Liley said the new hospital will cater to the citizens of Midland County by providing quality care, pleasant rooms and gourmet meals.

Pending approval at the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin Oct. 11, the replacement facility is scheduled to open July 1, 1984.

"Six months prior to the opening of the hospital, I'll be recruiting a chef in order to prepare gourmet meals," Liley said. "We even plan to present wine lists with the meals.

"This is going to be a first class facility to help keep Midlanders here."

According to statistics compiled by TriBrook, MMH's management consultants, about 71 percent of the Midland County adults requiring hospitalization seek care at MMH or Parkview. The others seek health care ouside of the area.

"With the range of the specialties we have now, we should be able to keep at least 95 percent of the residents we have here," Liley said.

Since 1982, 34 specialists have set up practices in Midland, he said. Services introduced at Parkview in the last few years include orthopedic surgery, reversible tubiligations and vastectomies, penile implants and laser surgery.

"We think this is a first-class community," Liley said, "and they deserve a first-class facility."

Airline industry fearing fare wars

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nine months of battling to bring fare wars under control, the airline industry is holding its breath, hoping turmoil at Continental Airlines will not unleash new rounds of price cutting.

Fare wars might be welcomed by the traveler, but they could foreshadow a fourth straight year of losses for the airlines, since returns for the first nine months of this year already have been disappointing for many carriers.

When Continental's Frank Lorenzo shut down his airline only to resume operation on a much smaller scale and with $49 discount fares last week, one of the carrier's chief competitors — Frontier Airlines — quickly matched the lower fares.

"We will not let Continental take our business away with cutthroat fares," declared Frontier spokesman Bob Shulman. Like Continental, Frontier routes its bread-and-butter flights through Denver.

So far, the fare cuts have not spread to other carriers, such as United Airlines and American Airlines, which compete directly with the reorganized Continental for the traveler's business.

One reason, say officials at a number of airlines, is that the competition is waiting to see if the new Continental, with lower fares, will succeed and post a serious competitive threat.

"A lot of people out there are miffed at Continental — not only passengers, but travel agents," says an official at a competing airline. "We don't feel the threat at this point."

But the official acknowledged if Continental's low-cost approach is successful and the airline becomes a threat, fare reductions may have to be considered. An official at another carrier expressed concern that a resumption of fare wars could force some troubled airlines out of business.

Whether Continental's lower fares will pose a threat may not be known for weeks. For now, say industry officials, Continental is not only fighting to counter traveler resistance because of the uncertainty about its future, but also a strike by many of its pilots. Continental officials said Sunday that most of its flights were operating despite the strike and a spokeswoman, Stephanie Roth, said the volume of reservations is "very high."

Continental has been trying to overcome passenger concerns by $49 one-way fares to any non-stop destination, a fare that could allow a person to travel coast-to-coast with one change of flights for $98. By comparison, a coast-to-coast fare on most other carriers runs from $349 to $423 depending on restrictions.

At the beginning of the year, the airline industry was in the depths of suicidal fare wars. Most airlines offered passengers coast-to-coast fares of $99, below levels at which they could turn a profit.

In March, American proposed new fares based on mileage and much of the industry expressed relief and followed the lead. Then the carriers struggled to eliminate discount fares, but because traffic continued to be depressed through the summer the effort was only partially successful.

Nevertheless, most airline fares stabilized in recent months; the extremely deep discounts for the most part were abandoned, off-peak restrictions were put on most "super saver" fares, and carriers were talking of raising fares.

But with third quarter business disappointing, industry analysts and airline executives in recent months expressed concern that fare wars might resume when the summer travel peak subsided after Labor Day.

Then came the Continental reorganization and a promise by Lorenzo that the carrier would henceforth be a low-cost, low-price airline on the mold of People Express.

"The atmosphere is one that might indicate that a fare war could be coming," said David K. Hillman, a vice president at Thomas Cook Travel, one of the country's largest travel agencies. "At best, the environment is a very fragile one."

But some Wall Street observers say it's too early to tell what impact Continental's troubles will have on industrywide fares. However, some think the lower fares will not extend beyond Continental's limited route system.

"Is everyone going to go to $99 (fares)? The answer is, no," says Eliot Fried, an airline industry analyst at SbearsonAmerican Express.

The subject of fare wars has become so sensitive since the turmoil at Continental erupted that most airline officials would only discuss them on condition that neither they nor their carrier be identified.

"The more that's written about it, the more concern everybody has," said an official at American Airlines. An American senior vice president canceled participation in an industry symposium on fares this week because of the recent Continental developments.

Elderly couple decides to end their lives

Then they consummated their suicide pact, becoming two of the more than 4,000 elderly Americans authorities say will embrace death this year.

"What struck all of us was how considerate, how thoughtful they were to all concerned about killing themselves," said Lee County Sheriff's Sgt. Richard Chard, who investigated the Aug. 19 murder-suicide. "They didn't want to impose or be a bother to anyone. Not even in dying."

Julia's dimming eyesight, heart congestion and a stroke had driven Cecil to place his ailing wife in a nursing home earlier this year. But she became hysterical over what she thought was poor care there, and Cecil brought her home, said neighbors at the Orange Harbor Mobile Home Park where the couple had lived since 1974.

"You never saw him without her," said Vera Whittimore, 67. "If there ever was true love, they had it. I think they were just tired of living and couldn't wait for God to take them."

Weak and ailing, Julia came back to their cream-and-white mobile home three weeks before she died. "Sometime during that period, they made up their minds," said Chard. "Imagine them talking about it — the details, the location, the weapon."

A neighbor, Betty Fieser, saw Julia on the eve of her death, as she was having her soft, gray hair rinsed and set at Faith Family Styling. "I told her she looked nice, and she really did," Mrs. Fieser said. "She was excited about getting a curly permanent."

At noon, another trailer park resident outside to shake a rug greeted Cecil as he ambled to the mailbox in front of his 40-foot trailer framed by rosebushes and ixora.

"When I asked him how he was, Cecil said, 'OK, about the same, standard,' " the neighbor remembered.

The Saunderses had hot dogs and beans for lunch, then drove their Caprice to pastureland 5½ miles from their mobile home, parking on the grassy shoulder.

As thunderstorms rumbled in the distance, they talked.

"I can picture in my mind them sitting there," Chard said. "Maybe they spoke about how things were when they were young. Then he leaned over and gave her a farewell kiss."

From inside a green washrag, Cecil unwrapped the revolver he had purchased eight days before. In its chamber were six bullets. Both husband and wife plugged their ears with twists of cotton to muffle the sound of shots.

Cecil reached over and held the Smith & Wesson inches from his wife's breast. Julia closed her brown eyes behind metal-rimmed glasses.

Cecil fired twice.

One bullet pierced his wife's heart, and blood poured onto her red-and-white print dress. Her head fell backwards against the car seat, and she died in seconds.

Cecil watched life leave her. Then, as he had promised his wife, he pointed the revolver at his shirt pocket and pulled the trigger one final time.

The .32 tumbled onto the seat by his right thigh. Cecil's arms fell to his sides and he slumped forward onto the steering wheel, dead.

The bodies were found by workers from nearby Owl Creek Boat Works, who called police. "Cause of death in both cases was a gunshot wound to the heart ventricle," ruled Dr. Steven E. Levine, the Lee County Associate Medical Examiner. "Death was instantaneous."

In Philadelphia, a police officer stood by as the Saunderses' son, Robert, 57, was told of his parents' death on the telephone. "I took it pretty hard," said the engineer, his voice quaking. "What an utter shock."

His parents wanted no tears shed over their decision to die. The note they left for Robert and his sister, Evelyn, 51, ended with a wish:

"Don't grieve because we had a very good life and saw our two children turn out to be such fine persons. Love, Mother and Father."

Did they get their wish?

"I look around for other options my mother and father could have taken, but I can't find any," their son said slowly. "I don't have any answers."

Midland finally gets rain

"Two of the ham operators live in one of the communities that was the hardest hit, so we got some good first-hand reports from them. They said it was a downburst — they saw the winds come down," he said.

Wind gusts of up to 69 miles per hour were recorded by the NWS, while pea-size hail was reported in various sections of the county.

Midland's overnight rainfall of almost an inch raised the yearly total to 4.39 inches. Area towns reported various amounts of precipitation, ranging from .4 of an inch recorded in Lamesa, showers in Rankin and rain in Stanton, Big Lake, Big Spring and Crane.

The NWS's forecast for Midland calls for continued partly cloudy skies with today's 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms lingering through tonight. A less than 20 percent chance of isolated afternoon showers and thunderstorms is in the forecast for Tuesday.

Winds should remain steady, blowing from the south and southwest at 5-15 mph through tonight, and shifting southerly Tuesday.

Tempertures will remain warm with a low tonight expected in the middle 60s and a high on Tuesday in the upper 80s.

Sunday's high of 92 was five degrees cooler than the record high of 97, set in 1951. The overnight low of 64 was 22 degrees warmer than 1961's record low of 42.

Wreckage search continues

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. Pacific Fleet commander in chief said today the Navy has completed only about half of its search operation for wreckage from the Korean Air Lines jetliner that was shot down by Soviet warplanes.

Adm. Sylvester Foley Jr. also said the Navy has not given up hope of recovering the flight data and cockpit voice recorders from the South Korean jetliner shot down Sept. 1 with 269 people aboard when it flew into Soviet airspace over Sakhalin Island, north of Japan.

Foley, speaking in Sasebo in southwest Japan, said U.S. vessels off the southwest coast of Sakhalin have at times picked up electronic "pinging" signals from beneath the sea, according to Navy officials.

The recorders emit electronic signals for at least 30 days, the guaranteed life of their batteries. However, Foley said the batteries could last far longer than that, allowing the search to continue. Last week, the Navy said there were no immediate plans to end the search.

The Navy has seven vessels engaged in the search for wreckage from the Boeing 747 and the recorders, which could reveal why the plane veered into Soviet airspace and what went on in the cockpit moments before it was shot out of the sky.

Congress continues CIA aid to Nicaragua

But in letters to the House and Senate intelligence committees, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said overt "interdiction against ground supply flow alone could cost upwards of $300 million the first year, and at least $100 million for each subsequent year.

"Even at these levels, little interdiction could be achieved against air and waterborne infiltration," he wrote.

Weinberger added that the program also would "require extensive deployment of U.S. personnel" and risk a direct U.S. combat role. A text of the letters was obtained from a Defense Department source.

The Pentagon has also estimated that blockading Nicaragua to prevent the landing of Soviet-bloc military supplies would cost an additional $100 million a month, an intelligence source said.

By comparison, the source said the covert action cost $33 million last fiscal year and is projected to cost about $48 million over the next 12 months.

The administration contends the leftist Nicaragua government funnels weapons to Salvadoran guerrillas fighting that country's U.S.-backed government. Nicaragua's 4-year-old Sandinista regime denies the charge.

A week ago, the Senate Intelligence Committee voted 13-2 to provide $19 million for the covert aid but obtained an agreement from the administration that it must get the panel's approval to spend more money, sources said. The $19 million is expected to last from three to six months.

The committee's action followed assurances from the administration that covert aid to the contras was the only effective way to pressure the Nicaraguan government to halt its support of revolutionary movements in El Salvador and other Central American nations.

The Republican-controlled Senate is expected to endorse the committee's decision when it considers the 1984 intelligence authorization bill, possibly as early as this week.

Suspect in revenge slayings shoots self

PADUCAH (AP) — James L. Jenkins, wanted for the ambush slayings of two Minnesota bankers, "stuck the shotgun in his mouth" and killed himself, and his son, also sought for the killings, led authorities to the body, a sheriff said.

Steven Jenkins, 18, told authorities Sunday night his father had been threatening to shoot himself, Cottle County Sheriff Frank Taylor said. He said the younger Jenkins was willing to return to Minnesota voluntarily.

Jenkins and his son had been the objects of a nationwide search since the bodies of two Buffalo Ridge State Bank officers were found Thursday on a vacant farm near Ruthton in southwestern Minnesota.

Authorities said the victims, Rudy Blythe and Deems "Toby" Thulin, had been shot to death.

The bank had foreclosed on Jenkins' farm four years ago and Steven Jenkins said his father held a grudge that may have prompted him to shoot the bankers, Taylor said.

Authorities found the body of James Jenkins, 46, about four miles north of Paducah on a dirt road near an abandoned farmhouse, Taylor said.

"His son came in saying they had run out of money and his father was talking about shooting himself. By the time we got to the farm he was dead," Taylor said.

Gay recognition fight resumes at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — The issue of whether conservative, well-heeled Southern Methodist University should recognize a gay students group is expected to be argued before the student senate this week.

Death penalty sought for Lucas

HENRIETTA (AP) — The daughter of an elderly woman killed by a drifter who claims to have murdered 150 women decried the 75-year prison sentence given the man who admitted killing her mother.

Kay Werley of Fort Worth, one of Kate Rich's daughters, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the sentence was a "miscarriage of justice" and that Henry Lee Lucas deserved the death penalty for the crime.

Lucas, who is charged with five other killings in Texas and one in Louisiana, avoided his first murder trial by suddenly pleading guilty Friday to the killing of Mrs. Rich, 80.

Authorities said there was no basis on which to charge Lucas with capital murder in the case of Mrs. Rich, who lived in the nearby North Texas community of Ringgold.

Under Texas law, the death penalty is possible when a murder takes place during the commission of another felony.

Montgomery County District Attorney Jim Keeshan of Conroe said Saturday that he will ask a grand jury this week to indict Lucas for the death of three young women and that "in all likelihood" he will ask for capital indictments.

"I believe it's appropriate on all three," Keeshan said.

Keeshan said Lucas' "intent to perform sexual ravishment upon the bodies" of the young women, and the fact that kidnapping was involved, should put those slayings in the capital murder category.

Officials said Lucas' has signed confessions concerning those deaths and led investigators to the bodies of Gloria Stephan, 16-year-old Laura Donez and an unidentified third woman.

Authorities believe all three victims were brought to Montgomery County from nearby Houston, Keeshan said.

Lucas has told authorities of a multi-state murder spree involving 150 victims over a seven-year period.

And officials in at least one other county told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram they are contemplating possible capital murder charges against Lucas in connection with a rape-murder.

Law enforcement sources have said that Lucas admitted killing an elderly couple just north of Austin while robbing their business, the Star-Telegram reported.

Although Lucas could become eligible for parole in 20 years in the Ms. Rich's slaying, Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey said he doubted Lucas would ever be paroled.

Lucas is described as a man whose days are filled with contemplation of his crimes and of the results of his admissions. He reportedly believes he is mentally ill and wants to be cured, the Star-Telegram said.

Lucas was convicted in 1960 of murdering his 74-year-old mother and spent six years in a mental institution before he was paroled from a Michigan prison in 1970.

Republicans reject minority recruitment

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republican leaders say they will stress their conservative philosophy and make no special effort to recruit Hispanics, blacks, working women and senior citizens into the party fold for the 1984 campaign.

"I don't want to be called a racist," said committee member Robert Pigg of Houston. "But I think we're missing the boat by chasing the Democrats. We ought to accuse them of what they're really doing — exploiting these people."

The party's Executive Committee on Saturday also rejected proposals to send female, black, blue-colar, elderly and evangelical speakers into Republican districts to woo more voters in their own groups.

"If we emphasize what we believe in, people will vote for us regardless of race or ethnic group."

The committee adopted a single statement saying, "We should expand our appeal and encourage the involvement of all Texans believing in conservative principles regardless of race, ethnic background, gender, age, religious belief, birthplace, profession or education."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, Oct. 4, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Saint Francis of Assisi, legendary newspaperman and story teller Damon Runyon and comedian Buster Keaton were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Charlton Heston, actress Susan Sarandon and Kansas City Royals catcher John Wathan. A new field promises you great success if you will work long hours in the beginning. Financial backing is found for a family business. Let romance develop at its own pace. By next June you could be headed down the aisle! Family relations are more harmonious than in the past. Do not let social activities interfere with work. A promotion is possible in March.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You make an excellent first impression today. Reconcile with a business associate before your disagreement affects both profits and your job. A blind date provides a welcome change of pace.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Certain financial goals may be unrealistic. Talk things over with loved ones. Something that looks like a bargain is really a gyp. You shine at a company meeting. Be prepared to move up!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Plan ahead for emergencies. A transportation snafu could leave you running behind. Start out early for an important date. Appearances can be deceiving. Look an offer over carefully before making a decision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Luck is on your side! Once you make a choice, tension fades. Try not to take peer criticism so seriously. Your feelings are very sensitive now. Exercise leaves you exhilarated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not try to rush things today. Delays will prove beneficial. A rumor may be partially true. Check it out. You need to act more reserved at work. Discuss goals with mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accept someone's help graciously. Business opportunities multiply when you travel. Make careful preparations for an upcoming meeting or confrontation. A romance begins anew when a former love returns to town.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A little extra effort will help you get an okay on a special project. Congratulate mate on accomplishing something he/she really wanted to do. Family activities are favored this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A dream can come true if you keep your financial plans quiet. A friend might not understand. Take advantage of an unexpected offer. Romance needs more time to mature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop being so available and the boss will quickly realize how valuable you are. You get paid for answering a businessman's questions. Prepare the necessary documents to support your position.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are a doer and good at getting other people to work hard for your causes. Go ahead and accept a loan from a well-off family member. Athletic activities are favored today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Old-fashioned methods do not appeal to you, but they could be your best bet right now. Consult others, but make your own decision. Something you do today lightens a financial burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A co-worker who has opposed you in the past now comes to your support. Mate strikes it rich! You are invited to share in his or her good fortune. Express your delight.

Carson celebrates anniversary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson, who has survived all the competition for the past 21 years as host of NBC's "The Tonight Show," says he doesn't have time to worry about his current opposition.

Carson's newest rival is Alan Thicke, host of "Thicke of the Night," a syndicated show produced by former NBC president Fred Silverman — and promoted as the program that might dethrone Carson as the king of late-night television.

Since becoming host of "Tonight" in 1962, Carson's quick-witted style has knocked off a number of competitors, from Joey Bishop to Dick Cavett to Merv Griffin.

"You can't sit back and worry about it," Carson says. "You do what you do and let the others do what they do."

He declines to comment on "Thicke of the Night." "No matter what you say, you lose," he says. "I've seen parts of his show, but no matter what I said it would be misconstrued."

Carson, who celebrates his 21st anniversary Monday with a two-hour prime-time retrospective, says he was isn't angered by all the "Thicke of the Night" hoopla. But it seems he isn't pleased, either.

Asked how he reacts to statements that "The Tonight Show" is vulnerable, he smiles and shrugs.

"Well, they had a great deal of hype," Carson says. "I don't blame Silverman. They were trying to get a new show going."

Carson says he had never had any "great battles" with Silverman in the past, "just the contract negotiations. We never had any acrimony."

Carson, who succeeded Jack Paar as host of "The Tonight Show" on Oct. 1, 1962, says, however, "I found it a little strange that a man who three years ago as president of NBC was asking me to continue as host was now saying he thought the show was old-fashioned and vulnerable.

"There was so much in the newspapers. But I didn't get angry. That's the name of the game," the entertainer says. "I've been in this business long enough to know that's how the game is played. The important thing is the end result. How does the thing turn out."

Carson says he enjoyed putting together the retrospective show.

"We had a lot of fun putting the show together, deciding what to use, what to eliminate. I think some of the clips we've used in past anniversary shows have probably played too much."

Carson celebrated his 10th anniversary with a live show with guests, but he says he found that performance unwieldy and in subsequent anniversary programs he and Ed McMahon, his announcer, talked about old times and introduced clips of highlights from previous years.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q985 ♡J7 ◇K104 ♣KQ93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your first task is to tell partner that you have a good hand and that you would appreciate his letting you have the next bid, if possible. The way to go about that is to start with a redouble. Obviously, you intend supporting spades at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1063 ♡7 ◇AJ9854 ♣85
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—It is usually correct to introduce a four-card major before a five-card minor when you respond to partner's takeout double. However, a six-card suit should take preference over a four-carder. Since you have game ambitions, we suggest you start with an invitational jump to three diamonds.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ10653 ♡KQ3 ◇7 ♣K5
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—We would take our chances with Blackwood, and settle in a spade contract at whatever level partner's response dictates. What if partner has just one ace? Not too likely from our holding, but then we would have to play five spades and hope that the opponents misdefend.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:
♡AK43 ◇KQJ106 ♣AK1065
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What do you bid now?

A.—Over the years we have developed a great respect for cold cash, so we suggest that, despite your powerhouse, you simply overcall with two diamonds. If you make a takeout double now, partner might persist to some uncomfortable level in spades. We don't think you are going to miss slam — partner needs too many key cards to offer reasonable play for 12 tricks.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ ♡K94 ◇832 ♣AK1065
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has reversed, showing a strong hand with at least five hearts and four spades. You have full values for your two-over-one response, as well as key honors in both of partner's suits. Slam is in the offing, providing that partner does not have two fast losers in the unbid suit. To express your concern about diamonds, jump over game to five hearts. Partner is not allowed to continue to slam without a diamond control.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K7 ♡Q8762 ◇KJ75 ♣Q10
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you bid now?

A.—In terms of high cards, you have enough to bid six no trump. However, your hand is mildly unbalanced and a suit contract could be a safer spot if you have an eight-card fit. Bid three hearts. If partner raises, jump to six hearts; if partner returns to three no trump, try four diamonds in an attempt to locate a 4-4 fit. Should partner deny a four-card diamond holding, take your chances at six no trump.

Presidential return

It's almost like homecoming to have former President Gerald R. Ford return to Midland. He dedicated the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum while serving as president in 1975.

As president, he guided this nation during one of its most precarious periods: President Nixon had just resigned at the height of the Watergate scandal, Americans were still sharply divided over that scandal, the Vietnam draft evaders and military deserters, and inflation was ravaging the country. It wasn't a pretty time.

That atmosphere demanded a certain type of leader. Jerry Ford was the type of leader the nation needed. He gave us strength when we needed strength, such as in the Mayaguez crisis when the U.S. armada recaptured the merchant ship after Cambodian patrol boats had seized it off the coast of Southeast Asia.

He provided the means for healing some of the American people's wounds by granting amnesty to Vietnam era draft evaders and military deserters.

President Ford's calm and friendly demeanor and his unquestioned reputation for honesty helped pave the way for the start of this country's healing — from both Watergate and Vietnam.

We all owe President Ford a deep debt of gratitude for his service. It's a signal honor for him to return to Midland Tuesday to speak at the Chamber of Commerce banquet. We join other Midlanders in welcoming him back.

Expected response

It took Yuri V. Andropov nearly a month to comment on the Soviet Union's murder of 269 people in the shooting down of an unarmed passenger plane.

What developments prompted him finally to respond is anybody's guess, but surely they included the world's moral outrage at the atrocity, including some Russian voices, and President Reagan's U.N. challenge to the Kremlin to join in a quest for peace.

Mr. Andropov's response, as expected, was disappointing. He did not say he was sorry. Instead, he blamed the 269 deaths on "sophisticated provocation" by United States intelligence. Lamely, he said the United States is not seriously interested in arms control, which is obviously contrary to the truth in view of Mr. Reagan's convincing good faith in his talk to the United Nations. The president made three points that the Soviet leader chose to ignore.

First: "We cannot ... in light of recent events, compromise on the necessity of effective verification. Reactions to the Korean airliner tragedy are a timely reminder of just how different the Soviets' concept of truth and international cooperation is from that of the rest of the world."

Second: "Evidence abounds that we cannot simply assume that agreements negotiated with the Soviets will be fulfilled. We negotiated the Helsinki final act but the promised freedoms have not been provided and those in the Soviet Union who sought to monitor their fulfillment languish in prison."

Third, and very much to the point, were these words: "If the Soviets sit down at the bargaining table seeking genuine arms reductions, there will be arms reductions...

"... the governments of the West and their people will not be diverted by misinformation and threats. The time has come for the Soviet Union to show proof that it wants arms control in reality, not just in rhetoric."

Straight talk, that. If Mr. Andropov's response was weak, it was because Mr. Reagan's challenge was so strong, and unequivocal.

Another View:

Better for both

No one could rightly call the tentative labor agreement between the United Auto Workers union and a General Motors-Toyota consortium a clear victory for either side, and that probably is the accord's principal virtue. In their bid to reopen the idled GM plant at Fremont, Calif., both sides gave something, and both sides successfully defended an important principle.

Toyota, the de facto senior partner in the joint venture, will control the production process, using Japanese methods. It committed itself to hiring a majority of the 2,500-member production-line work force from among those laid off when General Motors shut the plant down early last year, but it won from the UAW recognition that the reopened factory will be a new enterprise and thus not obliged to rehire workers on the basis of seniority.

The loss of seniority is obviously a blow to many autoworkers. On the other hand, the union won a more important victory: Recognition by Toyota and GM of the UAW's status as exclusive bargaining agent for workers at the plant, marking the first time a Japanese automaker has made such a concession in this country. (Nissan and Honda factories in Tennessee and Ohio, respectively, employ only non-union workers.)

Toyota's agreement to hire a majority of workers from the previous Fremont work force also represents a significant retreat from its earlier refusal to make any such commitment, as did its agreement to set up an appeals procedure for former GM workers who are refused jobs when the plant reopens sometime next year.

Achievement of this important compromise still doesn't ensure the resumption of production at Fremont, where more than 6,000 persons worked as recently as 1978. The Federal Trade Commission has yet to approve the unique binational enterprise; Ford and Chrysler are still contemplating antitrust suits, and a final binding labor contract still must be negotiated once the other hurdles are cleared.

Assuming those problems can be overcome, some 3,000 American jobs will be created (including white-collar staff) and a minimum of 200,000 cars per year will be rolling off an American assembly line. That, alone, obviously won't be the salvation of the U.S. car industry, but it should take some of the heat out of the move in Congress to effectively ban Japanese car imports, an action that could lead to disastrous consequences both for American consumers and American-Japanese trade.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Pentagon blinked at Bigeye blast

WASHINGTON — To the Pentagon's big spenders, apparently all's fair in love, war and procurement. In their zeal to get money for the "Bigeye" binary chemical bomb, defense officials neglected to tell Congress about a fatal flaw in the weapon: It would blow up in the plane before it could be dropped.

Jack Anderson

This is not an insignificant deficiency. Yet the information was withheld from the disbursers on Capitol Hill by officials who wanted to get their hands on the development funds first and then worry about the details.

But one meddlesome congressman, Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., learned about the cover-up and fired off an angry letter to the General Accounting Office, accusing Pentagon officials of "massaging the facts and rewriting history" in their testimony about the Bigeye. He called upon the GAO to investigate the "nature and extent" of the deception and the possibility of charging the errant officials with criminal violations.

My associate Jock Hatfield has seen a draft of the letter, which is being treated with official discreetness.

The idea of a binary chemical bomb has been kicking around the Pentagon since the 1960s. To prevent a poison-gas disaster while the bombs are in storage, the chemicals in the bomb would not be mixed into a lethal compound until it was on the way to its target.

This concept was valid as long as bombers stayed at high altitudes, where outside temperatures are far below the 60 degrees Fahrenheit at which the deadly mixture inside the bomb would explode.

But bombing techniques have changed. To avoid radar detection, planes must now approach the target at very low altitudes — where the temperatures could be warm enough to detonate the gas bomb.

This occurred to Saul Hormats, former director of the Army's chemical weapons development. He warned Ted Gold, deputy assistant defense secretary, in early 1982 that the Bigeye might go off inside the airplane.

Meanwhile, the same possibility was brought to the attention of Bethune. The congressman, a former FBI agent, began his own investigation. He discovered that the Bigeye had been tested at Aberdeen, Md., and that the bomb did indeed explode when the chemicals were mixed in a 60-degree environment.

Researchers told Bethune that they had been working on the temperature problem since June 1982. This was a full month before the House took up the question of funding the bomb. During the debate, no mention was made of any problem with the bomb.

Defense officials continued to keep their mouths closed when they again submitted the budget requests for Bigeye in 1983. As late as February, officials insisted that talk of Bigeye's unreliability were "without any supporting evidence." Yet they were fully aware of the test result and other urgent warnings.

Later, they dismissed the test result as merely a "leak" that could be corrected. But Bethune was told that at 60 degrees, the chemical bomb exploded with such force that the rear end was blown off and it "struck against the steel test container with such force" it blew an indentation in the heavy steel "some 4 to 6 inches" deep.

Confronted with Bethune's evidence, Gold admitted that Bigeye has a "serious problem" that's being worked on. But he denied any advance knowledge of the temperature problem until last December when, he said, "We made full disclosure of the information to Congress."

Bethune disputes this. From my findings, so do I.

INDIAN UPRISING — On Aug. 5, I reported the smoldering discontent of Nicaraguan Indian rebels fighting the Sandinista regime in uneasy alliance with the CIA's favored guerrilla group, the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN.

Now I have exclusive new information that the Indians' threats of mutiny actually came to pass. Furious at the way they were being shortchanged on CIA arms and supplies by the FDN and the Honduran army, nearly half of the Miskito Indian rebels mutinied against their own leader, Steadman Fagoth.

Some 700 of the estimated 2,000 Miskito guerrillas joined the mutiny under a "Commander Alfonso." They demanded an end to the alliance with the FDN and independence from the Honduran army chief, Gen. Gustavo Alvarez, whom they accused of corruptly diverting CIA arms the Indians were supposed to get.

Another thing that rankled the Indian fighters is the political taint they say is attached to the FDN, which is led mainly by former officers in the hated National Guard of the late Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza. The rebellious Indians felt their movement's hopes for eventual autonomy in a free Nicaragua were being compromised by the Somoza connection.

The Miskito mutiny was forcibly put down by Honduran troops, and the mutineers are either under arrest, hiding out in the Nicaraguan hinterland or in U.N. refugee camps in Honduras. Very few returned to the main Indian rebel force.

Though the Indian uprising may seem to be a minor incident in the CIA's "secret war" in Nicaragua, it is an ominous sign that American agents have failed to control the anti-Sandinista forces they have unleashed. By insisting on dealing only with its chosen instrument, the FDN, the CIA has compromised its secret war against the Sandinista regime.

CHARLEY REESE

Policy stalking Reagan

The State Department's foolish Middle East blundering is catching up with President Reagan. Just as I predicted, he is now stuck with Marines in a Lebanon torn again by civil war,.

Charley Reese

Some of you may recall that when the Israelis went into Lebanon after the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Reagan administration got its nose out of joint and berated the Israelis for allegedly using too much force.

Well, do you know what the Reagan administration did about two weeks ago? It went to the Israelis and said would you please use your tanks and aircraft to attack the Druse militia which is shooting at our Marines.

In other words, would you please do what we were condemning you for doing last summer. Not surprisingly, the Israelis politely declined to attack people who were not attacking them.

The problem is the Reagan administration doesn't know what to do about Lebanon because it's non-policy is based on a mixture of ignorance of the Middle East, a desire to placate rich oil sheiks and their banking buddies and to play public relations games with the liberal press.

Let's review the sequence of events which led to the present quagmire. Lebanon erupted into a civil war in 1975-76 which killed about 100,000 people and resulted in the country being partitioned in fact if not formally. The Syrians occupied the eastern half and much of the north. The Christian Phalangists occupied East Beirut and another enclave. The PLO occupied West Beirut and all over southern Lebanon except a small strip occupied by the Free Lebanese forces of Major Saad Haddad. The Druse occupied the Chouf Mountains. The Lebanese government controlled nothing much but the presidential palace. All told there were about 40 armed factions in Lebanon.

From 1975 to 1982, the United States showed virtually no interest in the plight of Lebanon. In the meantime, the PLO had turned its part of Lebanon into a world headquarters for international terrorism. It also began to accumulate an enormous store of Soviet arms and to regularly shell and raid northern Israel.

In the summer of 1982, the Israelis drove into Lebanon to destroy the PLO and liberated all of Southern Lebanon from its control. It has also fought off the Syrians and finally penned up the PLO in West Beirut.

All of this was actually as much in our interest as in Israel's. The PLO and the Syrians are nothing more than servants of the Soviet Union. The PLO was supporting with arms and training every Marxist terrorist group in the world and was itself being trained and supported by the Soviet Union.

Strangely, however, instead of cheering the Israelis on, the United States bitterly opposed their move (especially after Al Haig was forced out of the State Department). All of a sudden, we became interested in Lebanese sovereignty and to cap the insanity, arranged and paid for the safe evacuation of the PLO out of West Beirut. This is the same pro-Soviet PLO which has murdered dozens of American citizens as well as American diplomats. We saved our enemy from our friends.

Reagan then compounded his error by landing Marines and demanding Israeli withdrawal. He naively thought the Syrians would politely leave. Of course, they have refused. They have condemned the Lebanese agreement with Israel and egged on the Druse and other factions to start the civil war. The Israelis have withdrawn to the south to get out of the line of fire.

Reagan is left with only two choices. He can either launch a major war and try to conquor Lebanon on behalf of the Phalangist government or he can get out. He should get out. The cost in money and lives would be more than Lebanon is worth.

I think our government is crazy. We scream about 55 advisors and $30 million in aid for El Salvador on our doorstep but commit 20,000 troops (about 1500 on shore, the rest off shore) and $400 million to Lebanon which is strategically worthless.

INSIDE REPORT:

Dam failed, but Maggie didn't

WASHINGTON — When America's No. 1 friend and ally, Margaret Thatcher, arrived at the Washington Monument grounds for a formal State Department reception, officials were boggle-eyed that Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam was not on hand to receive the British prime minister.

Rowland Evans

With Secretary of State George Shultz tied up at the U.N. session, ceremonial duties devolved on Dam. But either because he forgot or his staff failed to tell him the correct time, Dam was busy elsewhere when Thatcher's helicopter landed for the reception.

Robert Novak

Dam immediately composed an abject letter of apology and sent it by courier to Thatcher at the British Embassy. The prime minister stayed composed throughout the unintentional insult, partly because Protocol Chief Selwa Roosevelt handled the embarrassment with diplomatic aplomb.

WORRYING ABOUT MCGOVERN

While most politicians giggled about former Senator George McGovern's quixotic presidential campaign, managers of Sen. John Glenn were worried — fears that have been partly confirmed by a New York state poll.

Glenn's strategists predicted that 1972 Democratic nominee McGovern's name recognition would pass two struggling liberal candidates, Sens. Gary Hart and Alan Cranston, in the polls. Next to so flagrant a liberal as McGovern, front-running Walter F. Mondale might appear to be more of a moderate and thus be harder to catch.

A September statewide poll by the Marist Institute of Public Opinion shows this happening in New York. McGovern was the choice of 6.8 percent among Democratic voters compared with 2 percent for Hart and 1.8 percent for Cranston. McGovern was by far the most identifiable liberal in the poll, while nearly as many voters considered Mondale a moderate as a liberal. That's bad news for Glenn, trailing Mondale 39.8 percent to 21.1 percent.

A SORRY BYRD

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd publicly ridiculed Republican Sen. Steve Symms for his defense of James Watt, then did what the embattled secretary of the interior could not do — erased his unfortunate words from the record.

In a brief speech on the Senate floor, Symms said Watt should stay in office despite his much-criticized remarks. Quickly, Byrd rose to attack Symms, saying that with speeches like Symms' and slurs against blacks and Jews like Watt's, the Democrats were sure to capture control of the Senate in 1984.

But unlike Watt, after making his mistake, Byrd was able to strike his remarks. No record of them exists. After purging himself, Byrd apologized to Symms for having spoken impetuously, just as Watt had.

CIA CHAUFFEUR

A confidential housekeeping report for the CIA's internal use reveals that Director William Casey has used the taxpayers' money to double his chauffeur's regular yearly income with about $26,000 in overtime, much of it for non-official activities.

Central Intelligence Agency officials did not want to discuss Casey's excessive night and weekend use of his chauffeur and government limousine. CIA insiders also have evidence that Casey has made profligate use of a small jet airplane available for the director's official business outside Washington.

JESSE COURTS LABOR

Potential black presidential candidate Jesse Jackson paid a private call on AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland 10 days ago for what one insider termed "just a good ol' boy" chat about this and that. Both are native South Carolinians.

The subject of Jackson's possible candidacy did not come up in conversation between the hard-nosed labor chief and the charismatic Jackson, now on leave from PUSH, his Chicago-based organization. Kirkland was neither asked nor volunteered his opinion on Jackson's future plans.

Officials say guard has good chance of keeping $7 million

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A Wells Fargo guard suspected of stealing $7 million has a good chance of getting away with the crime, say officials who claim one-third of those who participated in the nation's largest cash heists since 1974 have never been caught.

Police say the trail of Victor M. Gerena, the 25-year-old part-time guard accused of stealing $7 million from an armored car terminal in West Hartford, has gone cold since the Sept. 12 robbery.

A review by The Hartford Courant on Sunday of the nation's 14 biggest cash robberies in the past 10 years — ranging from nearly $500,000 to more than $11 million — show that about 27 percent of the robbers who were found were arrested within 24 hours of the robbery.

Jury to decide power plant case

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Prosecutors will try to convince a federal grand jury that the 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant might not have occurred if operators had not altered test records before the reactor was started, a newspaper reports.

Metropolitan Edison Co., a subsidiary of General Public Utilities Corp. and operator of the plant at the time of the March 1979 accident, could be indicted within two weeks for allegedly falsifying the records if Attorney General William French Smith gives his go-ahead, The Scranton Sunday Times reported.

Doug Bedell, a GPU spokesman, said the company would not comment on the report.

Orchestra strikes up sympathy

ATLANTA (AP) — Even management concedes that striking members of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra have staged a public relations coup, winning wide support in the often anti-union South by blitzing the town with their talent during the walkout.

Since the strike began Sept. 6, musicians who are not manning picket lines have formed 36 ensembles that have played for free at restaurants, rapid transit stations, shopping malls and public parks.

"As public relations director of the Atlanta Symphony," said management spokeswoman Ann Hume, "I must say I'm envious of the PR job the players have done."

Space station likely, NASA head says

Hearst Feature Service

NASA, which celebrates its 25th anniversary this month, will have a space station in lunar orbit by the year 2008, predicts NASA chief James Beggs. In an article entitled "NASA 2008: The Next Generation," which appears in the October issue of Popular Mechanics magazine, Beggs says the orbiting lunar lab will be the forerunner of a small research colony on the moon.

The space station would be built around an upgraded model of the American space shuttle, he notes. The lunar orbiter, writes Beggs, could be used as "a freight transfer point for a future lunar settlement.

Group discusses voting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The television networks should voluntarily agree to hold off projecting the winner of presidential elections until the polls have closed on the West Coast, a divided group of experts on American elections says.

The suggestion last weekend at a symposium on voting came over the objections of all three commercial networks, including the American Broadcasting Co., which cosponsored the meeting.

Former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford shared the spotlight for the symposium Friday and Saturday, held to discuss ways to increase turnout in American elections. ABC and Harvard University gathered nearly 50 politicians, scholars and other experts for the conversations.

The major disputes occurred late Saturday as the group tried to hammer out an agenda for increasing voter turnout. Their final recommendations included specific proposals triggering controversy and a series of divided votes on the issues.

One of the most heated disputes centered on the networks' election projection practices.

Using sophisticated statistical methods and computers, the networks are able to project the winners of elections in every state on election night, often before the polls close.

But the symposium, led by Dorothy S. Ridings, president of the League of Women Voters, voted 18-12 to call for voluntary restrictions.

"Rules or laws restraining such reporting would violate the First Amendment. Therefore, the symposium urges that the electronic media exercise voluntary restraint on early projections of election results and the use of exit polling for projections," said the provision adopted by the split vote.

Representatives of all three networks — ABC, CBS and NBC — argued against any restrictions.

The symposium also agreed to urge Congress to "give immediate attention to all means of increasing voter registration — including but not limited to election-day registration."

Shamir seeks confidence vote

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister-designate Yitzhak Shamir plans to seek Parliament's approval for his new government this week despite a potential revolt in his coalition that could jeopardize his majority.

Deputy Prime Minister David Levy said Sunday that a vote of confidence on the new government would be taken either Wednesday or Thursday.

Shamir has assembled a 64-seat coalition in the 120-member Knesset, or Parliament, but six members are threatening to abstain to protest Shamir's failure to reach agreement on a unity government with the opposition Labor Party.

Israeli official begins sentence

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli Parliament member convicted of fraud and theft has begun serving a sentence that requires him to work for three months as a clerk in a police warehouse.

Aharon Abu Hatzeira, a former Cabinet minister, was convicted of stealing the equivalent of $1,750 from a state-subsidized charity fund between 1974 and 1977.

Abu Hatzeira was serving as mayor of Ramleh, south of Tel Aviv, at the time of the fraud, and was convicted after he became labor and immigration minister in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government. He was the first Israeli Cabinet minister found guilty of a crime.

Egypt renews state of emergency

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Parliament has extended for a third year a state of emergency that permits the government to detain suspected subversives almost indefinitely without trial.

The 392-member People's Assembly, dominated by the National Democratic Party of President Hosni Mubarak, approved the extension Sunday by a show of hands. Sixteen deputies of minority parties voted against it.

Exiled Poles go on trial for seizing embassy

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Four exiled Poles went on trial today for seizing the Polish Embassy in Bern last year and holding 13 hostages for three days.

Almost immediately after the trial opened before Switzerland's Federal Tribunal, the defendants' leader accused Swiss authorities of trying to "criminalize" what he claimed was a political case.

The four men initially said the embassy siege was to force the Polish government to lift martial law and release political prisoners, but they later demanded the equivalent of $1.5 million as ransom for their hostages and safe passage to China or Albania. They were arrested Sept. 9, 1982, when a Swiss anti-terrorist unit stormed the building, ending the 72-hour takeover without injuries.

Defendant Florian Kruszyk, 42, a former convict who led the raid, and the three other members of the self-styled Polish "Insurgent Home Army" face multiple charges of hostage-taking, extortion, assault and other counts carrying a maximum penalty of 20 years.

The other defendants are Miroslaw Plewinski, 24; Krzystof Wasilewski, 34, and Marek Michalski, 22.

The trial is expected to last about one week.

One of the scheduled witnesses is a Polish-born Roman Catholic theologian, Josef Bochenski, who negotiated face-to-face with the four men during the siege and later told reporters he was convinced the raid was motivated by money rather than politics. Several Polish diplomats and embassy employees also are slated to testify.

A Polish request for the defendants' extradition was turned down by the Swiss. The two countries have no extradition treaty and under international law, Switzerland has priority in trying them.

For the Swiss counterintelligence services, the siege produced a windfall.

Cowboys' Randy White (54) can be a terrifying sight to behold, as Vikings' quarterback Steve Dils discovers.

Cowboys, 37-24

Come-from-Behinders avoid 'White-wash'

From wire reports

MINNEAPOLIS — It was Ron Fellows' interception and one quick dash down the sidelines that put the Dallas Cowboys ahead in a game that started out as though Dallas was in the process of being Sammy White-washed.

The Vikings took an early 14-0 lead on a couple of bombs to wide receiver Sammy White, but it was the 26 dashes by Tony Dorsett over the afternoon that accounted for 141 yards and helped the Cowboys control the ball for 40 minutes and wear down the Minnesota defense.

"The overriding difference in many games is Dorsett. It's a different dimension not many teams have, if any," Vikings Coach Bud Grant said after his team lost a first-half lead and fell to the Cowboys 37-24 Sunday.

The victory kept Dallas, 5-0, as the only unbeaten team in the NFC. Minnesota fell to 3-2.

"There are lots of reasons," Grant said, referring to the loss, "mainly Dorsett. I wonder if the fellows in Seattle still have their jobs."

THE ANSWER is no. Former Seattle General Manager John Thompson and Coach Jack Patera are no longer with the Seahawks. They were the ones responsible for trading the No. 1 draft choice to Dallas, with which the Cowboys in turn took Dorsett.

But Dorsett was not the only reason for Sunday's loss. The Vikings still led 24-20 with 3:30 left in the third period. Safety John Turner had given the Vikings the ball after his second interception of the day.

It was then, however, that Fellows streaked in front of wide receiver Sam McCullum and took Steve Dils' pass 58 yards for the go-ahead touchdown.

After that Dorsett led another time-consuming drive that accounted for 84 yards, a touchdown and more than six minutes. Rafael put the finishing touches on the victory with his third field goal of the game.

DALLAS quarterback Danny White applauded Fellows' interception but pointed to the drive that set up Septien's second field goal at the end of the first half as the turning point of the game.

No network TV for Longhorns-Sooners battle

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — ABC-TV and CBS-TV have failed to reach agreement on swapping an Oklahoma television appearance, ending any chances for showing the Sooners' game against Texas Saturday on network television, The Daily Oklahoman reported Sunday.

University of Texas officials told the newspaper the game will be shown as an exception telecast over the air in Austin and on pay cable in Dallas. But OU officials said they were leaning against asking for an exception so the game could be shown in Oklahoma.

CBS, the only network that planned to show college football next Saturday, will show the Penn State-Alabama game instead as a national telecast.

The four-year contract between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and ABC and CBS provides that a team can be shown only three times by one network in a two-year period. CBS televised two Oklahoma games last year and has already contracted to show the Oklahoma-Nebraska game this year.

However, the NCAA contract permits the two networks to trade appearances and CBS informed ABC through the NCAA that it would like to trade for an Oklahoma appearance so it could show the Sooners-Longhorn game from the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

Negotiations were finally broken off Saturday night, officials said, after ABC said it didn't find any of CBS' offers attractive enough, and CBS turned down ABC's request for a control date late in the season.

BEFORE THAT it was all Vikings.

Dils, who completed only 17 of 39 passes and threw three interceptions, got the ball after Turner intercepted his first pass. On the second play after that, Dils hit Sammy White with a 43-yard touchdown pass. After Septien's first field goal, the Vikings made it 14-3 when Dils and White teamed up again on a 36-yard scoring pass.

"In the second half we played an excellent game. We were mediocre in the first half," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "We didn't change anything. Maybe we played a little better."

Landry was happiest about Dorsett, who came out of the game uninjured.

"This is the first week he hasn't been hurt coming out of the game," Landry said of Dorsett who was playing with a cracked right wrist and bruised ribs.

"He threw it out there like a Christmas gift," Fellows said. "It's free and I'll take it.

"I made up my mind not to give up too much room because I knew the quarterback had to get rid of it in a hurry."

"We're definitely not predictable," White said. "It seems we need a shot in the arm to do it. Going 80 yards in 50 seconds was a real shot in the arm. We turned our offense around. That was the biggest part of the game."

It came at a time when Dallas needed something good to happen. The Vikings had recovered a White fumble on the Cowboy five-yard line and scored on the next play to make it 24-10. Dallas got the ball back with 45 seconds left in the half. White, who completed 22 of 40 passes, went to the air and in seven plays had Dallas in field goal range. Septien drilled a 45-yarder with no time remaining.

Bill Schammel named TL Executive of Year

Midland Cub General Manager Bill Schammel was named Texas League Executive of the Year by TL President Carl Sawatski Monday.

Sawatski said the honor was bestowed for general overall excellence of the baseball operation in Midland. "The club set a new attendance record. That was an important consideration, but the ball park, its appearance; the good marks the club received from the National Association and the excellence of the overall operation were factors."

Last year's winner was El Paso GM Jim Paul.

Midland is the third smallest city in the three AA (Southern, Eastern and Texas) leagues, yet drew the fourth best attendance last season in the Texas League.

Schammel, who has directed Midland's off-the-field operations for three seasons, saw his club draw a record paid attendance of 124,144 fans, despite a non-contending ball club.

"It helped, not having rainouts," Schammel said. "But without the kind of fans we have here and the full cooperation of the the co-owners, Max Christensen and Bernard Langford, it wouldn't have been possible. The management lets me do pretty much as I please, for which I am grateful."

Cubs' Bill Schammel

Cub attendance has climbed 28,599 since 1980 and the increase over last year's record attendance was 10,099.

Schammel came to Midland from Phoenix, Ariz., in 1981 to succeed Bill Rigney, Jr., who was named Minor League AA Executive of the Year in 1979.

Colbert win pays off

SAN ANTONIO (AP) -Jim Colbert got the title in the Texas Open golf tournament. But he wasn't the only winner. Not by a long shot.

For example, there's Jan Kannaday. She's his secretary back home in Las Vegas, Nev. "I'd promised her a week's vacation in Hawaii if I won over $200,000 this year," said Colbert, whose $54,000 first place check provided him with the best money-winning season of his 18-year PGA Tour career. He now has $212,077 for the year.

And, too, there's Willie Miller, Colbert's caddy.

"I haven't told him yet, but Willie gets a bonus," said Colbert, a 42-year-old grandfather and now a two-time winner this season.

And Colbert, who had 22 birdies an an eagle for the week, set three seasonal scoring marks: low 36 holes, 128; low 54 holes, 194; low 71 holes, 261.

Steelers look bad in winning

Oilers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have played some of their best football in losses this season.

Now, they've played some of their worst foootball in a victory.

The Steelers, losers in two previous home games despite holding big statistical edges in both, were outgained Sunday by the winless Houston Oilers and trailed 10-7 in the fourth quarter. But quarterback Cliff Stoudt then improvised a 51-yard, touchdown pass play to running back Walter Abercrombie and the Steelers went on to win 17-10.

"It certainly wasn't a masterpiece by any means but last week (in a 28-23 loss to the New England Patriots), we had the stats and lost the game," said Ron Wolfley. "I'll take this."

"We didn't play a great game but we won," said Jack Lambert. "Last week we played better and we lost, so what's the sense of it?"

Stoudt had his worst game as a National Football League quarterback, completing just 5 of 12 passes for 108 yards. Running back Franco Harris, gaining 51 yards, was held under 100 yards for the first time in a month. Yet the winless Oilers, losing their 12th in a row over two seasons, couldn't put the Steelers away.

"We played well enough to win, but we didn't get it done," said Oilers quarterback Gifford Nielsen. "And I'm responsible."

The Oilers, 0-5, led after driving 61 yards to score on Earl Campbell's 1-yard run the first time they had the ball in the second half.

But Houston punter John James, trying to catch the Steelers by surprise, ran with the ball on a fake punt attempt at the Pittsburgh 38 early in the fourth quarter and was stopped for no gain.

Four plays later, Stoudt rolled to his right when he couldn't find a receiver open. Abercrombie was supposed to block a linebacker, but instead found himself drifting towards the end zone. Stoudt found him wide open on the right sideline and Abercrombie hit the end zone untouched to give the Steelers a 14-10 lead.

Raiders make 'history' against Ags

Can you recall the last time you saw a game without a touchdown being scored?

Even with the six-to-nine game a week menu afforded by tv, it takes a detailed search of the memory banks to find one. Let's see, Air Force and TCU played a scoreless tie back in the 1959 or '60 Cotton Bowl game. Shucks, it's not even easy to recall a game in which one team suffered a shutout.

In fact, after Saturday night's defensive classic in Lubbock, the subject did come up. One of the players said he understood, "it was back in 1978 or 1977."

Wrong. It was 1980, a 14-0 win over SMU...and an upset at that. But before that it was 1975, a 34-0 win over TCU.

In fact, it's a rarity when Tech holds an opponent under double digits anymore. So it's understandable how Tech defensive coordinator Jim Bates got caught up in the moment at hand in the fourth quarter. Tech was not only leading 3-0 over the Aggies, but was on the verge of doing something that just isn't done anymore, scoring a shutout. And, what's more, Tech needed that shutout to win.

Bates was so wrought up over the possibilities that he had to be restrained from joining his defensive unit on the field after his sideline pep talk.

But you get a better idea of what the Tech defense accomplished when you realize that the Aggies' Alan Smith never got within range to use his talented toe, the same one that tied an NCAA record with six field goals against Arkansas State a couple of weeks ago.

A&M didn't do a bad defensive job either. Ricky Gann's game-winner for Tech was a 51-yarder, not exactly a chip shot.

But it's the victors to whom the spoils go, and Saturday happiness was being a Raider.

Despite that loss to Air Force back in early September, the one that had many Raider fans ready to call off the rest of the season after such great pre-season expectations that Tech was ranked No. 19 in Sports Illustrated's football preview, Tech is 2-0 in the SWC.

The last time that happened was in 1976 when Steve Sloan's Raiders opened the season with wins over Colorado and New Mexico and then beat Texas A&M (27-16) in the SWC opener, and Rice (37-13), and Texas (31-28), and TCU (14-10), and SMU (34-7) to go 8-0 before losing to Houston and going on to share SWC title with the Cougars. That year Tech beat Nebraska, 27-24, in the Bluebonnet...but let's not be carried away this early.

Still, Tech is 2-1 and has its next four games at home, starting with New Mexico Saturday night.

49ers' Russ Francis goes over the top for a touchdown against Patriots.

Raiders suffer first setback

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Raiders lost for the first time when Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann passed to Joe Washington for a score with 33 seconds left and a 37-35 victory.

Theismann's third TD pass at Washington boosted the Redskins to a 4-1 record. The Raiders dropped to an identical mark.

NFL

Theismann's 6-yard winning TD toss overcame four touchdown passes by Jim Plunkett, whose Raiders were hurt by six turnovers. The Redskins trailed 35-20 with 7:31 left before rallying on a Theismann TD pass to Charlie Brown, a Mark Mosely field goal and Theismann's throw to Washington.

At Green Bay, Wis., the Packers had a league-record 49-point performance in the first half en route to a 55-14 win over Tampa Bay, now 0-5, which made the winners' record 3-2. Among the Packers' first half touchdowns were a 90-yard punt return by Phillip Epps, Jessie Clark's score on a 75-yard pass-run play and Mike Douglass' 35-yard run with a fumble.

San Francisco boosted its record to 4-1 with a 33-13 mauling of the New England Patriots, 2-3, at Foxboro, Mass. Joe Montana passed for two touchdowns and Ray Wersching kicked four field goals in the 49ers' fourth straight victory.

Miami stumbled in a bid to go 4-1 when Ken Stabler passed for one touchdown and Wayne Wilson, subbing for injured George Rogers, rushed for 161 yards on 13 carries as the Saints beat the Dolphins 17-7 at New Orleans. Each club now is 3-1.

Stabler passed 11 yards for a TD to rookie free agent Tyrone Young, who was making his first NFL catch. New Orleans also scored on Reggie Lewis 27-yard run with an interception of a pass by rookie Dan Marino, who replaced David Woodley late in the second quarter and finished with 12 completions and one interception for 149 yards.

Cleveland also dropped to 3-2, when the Browns' three-game winning streak was snapped 24-9 by the Seattle Seawhawks, 3-2, at Cleveland. Rookie Curt Warner had two short touchdown runs for the Seahawks, who capitalized on three Cleveland turnovers.

The Baltimore Colts edged the Cincinnati Bengals 34-31; the Philadelphia Eagles nipped the Atlanta Falcons 28-24, the Chicago Bears beat the Denver Broncos 31-14; the San Diego Chargers edged the New York Giants 41-34; the Los Angeles Rams topped the Detroit Lions 21-10 and the Kansas City Chiefs trounced the St. Louis Cardinals 38-14.

Ken Anderson threw for four touchdowns for the Bengals, 1-4, at Cincinnati, but Curtis Dickey's 3-yard in the fourth quarter won it for the Colts, 3-2, who had moved to within winning range on field goals of 29 and 53 yards by Raul Allegre.

Philadelphia pulled out its victory over the Falcons at Atlanta when Ron Jaworski combined with Mike Quick for a touchdown on a 53-yard pass-and-run with 1:45 remaining in the game. Atlanta, which trailed 21-7 at halftime, took a 24-21 lead on Mick Luckhurst's 44-yard field goal with 5:48 left. The Eagles now are 3-2 and the Falcons 2-3.

Receiver Willie Gault scored two touchdowns on pass plays, including a 72-yarder with reserve quarterback Vince Evans, as the Bears, 2-3, beat the Broncos, 2-3, at Chicago. Denver rookie quarterback John Elway started the game, but again was replaced by Steve DeBerg in the second half.

Chuck Muncie ran 34 yards for a touchdown, his third of the game, with 4:32 to play to lift San Diego, 2-3, over the Giants, 2-3, at East Rutherford, N.J. Scott Brunner completed 31 of 51 passes for 395 yards and three touchdowns for the Giants, but fumbled on the Chargers' 12-yard-line with 52 seconds remaining. Injured Dan Fouts passed for three touchdowns for San Diego before leaving the game in the third quarter.

Rookie Eric Dickerson rushed 30 times for 199 yards and scored touchdowns of 1, 8 and 4 yards, sparking the Rams, 3-2, past Detroit, 1-4, at Anaheim. Dickerson now leads the league with 645 yards rushing.

JIM MURRAY

Jimmy McLarnin ..now there was a champion

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The other diners in the restaurant looked at Jimmy McLarnin but they didn't see him. They saw this pink-faced, scrubbed, dapper little old man with the wisps of gray hair and the bright blue eyes magnified behind the bottle glasses.

I looked at him and the years rolled back and I could see the real Jimmy McLarnin clearly. It was in the Depression, when the bootleg era was being phased out. New York was the Great White Way. Jimmy Walker was mayor, girls were flappers and prizefighting owned our childhood. Our heroes were not football players, unless they happened to play for Notre Dame, baseball was Babe Ruth and basketball was something to do before the dance.

In the old neighborhood, you had to have favorites. Mine was easy. He was Irish. His name was Jimmy. And he knocked everybody out in one round. Sid Terris, Ruby Goldstein, Phil McGraw, Sergeant Sammy Baker, Joe Glick and finally the lightweight champ himself, Al Singer.

IT WAS important that your favorite be a puncher. My ballplayer was Jimmy Foxx, the home-run hitter. You never picked a bunter, a jabber, a blocker. Even the guy who threw passes was considered kind of a sissy.

Jimmy was perfect for a kid's fantasies. The "uncrowned champ." The word on the street was, he couldn't get a title shot because he wouldn't play ball with The Mob. So, he beat up all the mob fighters in over-the-weight contests. It didn't have to be true. We believed it. And that was enough.

Jimmy was something in those days. Legs like steel springs, a lightning left, a bone-crushing right. He beat the best there was. They called him Baby Face because he had the map of childhood on his innocent face. He went around looking like a kid staring in a candy-store window. But when the bell rang, the punches came from everywhere.

He had been fighting since he was 10 years old. The family had come from Ireland to Saskatchewan to Vancouver and Jimmy fought for pennies pitched in the ring at lodge hall smokers. He moved to L.A. when he was only 16 and fought 28 four-round bouts. He beat Pancho Villa in that kid's last fight. Villa died of an ulcerated tooth 10 days after the fight.

WHEN THE stock market crashed and the factory smokestacks were capped, the gyms were full of fighters. Career sparring partners were better than main-eventers today, but McLarnin was still better than the best of them. He beat three champions in overweight matches.

Then they put him in the ring with a high-plains assassin named Billy Petrolle. Dubbed the Fargo Express, Billy Petrolle was the best fighter never to win a championship. He would climb in the ring in an old dirty Navajo blanket, he had incredibly long arms and was the most punishing non-heavyweight puncher in two divisions.

He battered McLarnin from ringpost to rope in that first fight. He floored him three times but McLarnin got up. McLarnin always got up. He lost the decision. It was one of the worst nights in the old neighborhood since the time Notre Dame got beat by a last-second field goal. "I don't remember the last nine rounds," McLarnin told the press through cut lips and swollen eyes. "I want to fight him again."

McLarnin fought Petrolle twice more. He reversed his style, put the right hand in drydock and left-hooked him into a blood clot. He won both fights. "You box a fighter and fight a boxer," he explained.

Jimmy got his title shot after that. He knocked out Young Corbett in one round. Then he lost, won and lost the title to Barney Ross in succeeding fights.

JIMMY RETIRED after that. He beat the lightweight champ, Lou Ambers, in his last fight, a non-title shot. They offered him $50,000 guaranteed, a fortune in 1937, to fight Henry Armstrong, a three-time champ who was running out of opponents. Jimmy didn't need the money and he certainly didn't need the nosebleeds. To show you how good things were going, he showed the offer to Bob Hope on a golf course before he turned it down.

But those days are faded clippings on defunct newspapers now. It's 1983 and Saturday night at the Airport Marriott Hotel, they had the fourth annual World Boxing Hall of Fame Banquet of Champions. Jimmy McLarnin was there.

Will he be the one with the glasses and the white hair, 75 years old and a bit hard of hearing? You see what you want to see. What I see is a lithe young tiger in green trunks, the announcer holding his hand up and screaming, "The winner and still champion of the world," and it is a time when I still have his picture in my room and all is well in the old neighborhood. When he won, we did.

White Sox finish record 20 ahead

By Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox may be neophytes, but when they finally returned to championship form, they did it in style.

While playoff opponent Baltimore has won seven East Division titles since 1969, the White Sox haven't won anything since 1959, when they captured the American League pennant.

But this season, the White Sox were the first team in baseball to clinch, winning the AL West on Sept. 17. They ended their season with three straight victories, while Baltimore lost five of seven. The Sox won 99 games, the most in baseball.

And, to top it all off, they finished a league-record 20 games ahead of second place Kansas City. The 1936 New York Yankees finished 19½ games ahead of Detroit to win the AL pennant in the league's previous most lopsided finish.

"Everybody's had a hell of a year, but it's only just starting," White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa said after his club ended the season with a 3-0 victory at Seattle. "I'm happy to be in there."

The Orioles also ended their season on a winning note, blanking the Yankees 2-0 to finish the season with 98 victories.

"Chicago has a good ballclub," said Joe Altobelli, who replaced Earl Weaver as the Orioles manager this season. "They've got good power, pitching and defense, and some speed. They had a tremendous second half — but so did we."

The Orioles won the season series between the two clubs 7-5, but six of the games were decided by one run. Left-hander Scott McGregor, 18-7, will start the opener for the Orioles, while the White Sox will use right-hander LaMarr Hoyt, 24-10. The best-of-five series starts Wednesday (2:05 p.m.) in Baltimore. Game Two is scheduled for Thursday night in Baltimore, with Games Three, Four and Five set for Chicago.

"Everybody's at zero right now," McGregor said. "I just have to remind myself how I threw them in the past. I have to refresh my memory on how they reacted to me."

Rich Dotson, 22-7, Chicago's scheduled starter for Game Three, worked the first 5 2-3 innings, yielding three hits. Tom Paciorek drove in one run and scored another for the White Sox.

Rookie right-hander Mike Boddicker, 16-8, the Orioles' Game Two starter, combined with two relievers on a one-hitter to beat the Yankees Sunday. Eddie Murray drove in both Baltimore runs with a homer, a career-high 33rd.

In other AL games, Boston defeated Cleveland 3-1, Milwaukee beat Detroit 7-4, Minnesota downed Toronto 9-3, California shut out Texas 2-0 and Oakland downed Kansas City 8-4.

Sunday also marked the end of Carl Yastrzemski's 23-year career with the Boston Red Sox. Yastrzemski will retire.

The season-ending individual titles went to Wade Boggs of Boston, .361 batting average; Jim Rice, Boston, 39 homers; Rice and Cecil Cooper, Milwaukee, 126 RBI; Rickey Henderson, Oakland, 108 stolen bases; Cal Ripken Jr., Baltimore, 122 runs scored; Moose Haas, 13-3 for an .813 winning percentage; LaMarr Hoyt, Chicago, 24 victories, Jack Morris, Detroit, 232 strikeouts, and Dan Quisenberry, Kansas City, 45 saves. Rick Honeycutt won the AL earned-run average title with 2.42 despite being traded from Texas to Los Angeles of the National League in mid-August.

Three managers won't be back

By Associated Press

The final day of the 1983 baseball season also was the last day as manager for Milwaukee's Harvey Kuenn, Charlie Fox of the Chicago Cubs and Frank Howard of the New York Mets.

Howard was fired, Kuenn said he was fired and Fox decided to move back into the front office.

Though the Brewers did not announce Kuenn's firing on Sunday — a news conference was scheduled today in Milwaukee — the man who led the team within one game of winning the World Series last year claimed he had been dismissed.

The leading contender to succeed Kuenn, who replaced Buck Rodgers 47 games into the 1982 season and guided the Brewers to their first American League pennant, appeared to be Rene Lachemann. Lachemann was fired by Seattle earlier this season.

"It was disappointing," Kuenn said of Milwaukee's 1983 season, during which the Brewers were fifth in the AL East at 87-75, 11 games behind division winner Baltimore. "We were in a position to be a lot closer and then went into one of those tail spins. I've never seen nine guys go into a slump all at once like that."

The Mets' hitters slumped most of the year, as did the pitchers as the team finished last in the National League East at 68-94, the second worst record in the majors. Howard, who took over as manager when George Bamberger quit on June 3, guided the Mets to a 52-64 mark.

"In light of the record, I don't know that I could have made much of a pitch (for the job)," said Howard, who managed the San Diego Padres in 1981.

"In the first half of the season, we were hopeless. In the second half we were hopeful," said Mets General Manager Frank Cashen. "For that we can credit Howard. But ... we made a decision to go in another direction."

Phils, Dodgers begin NL playoffs Tuesday

By Associated Press

For all but two of the teams in the National League, it's time to go home for the winter.

And for the Philadelphia Phillies and the Los Angeles Dodgers, it's time to heat up for some serious business.

The NL East champion Phillies and NL West winning Dodgers, both substituting freely, each lost their final regular season games Sunday. Los Angeles, which fell to San Francisco 4-3, finished at 91-71 while the Phillies, 4-0 losers to Pittsburgh, wound up 90-72.

The batting race went to Bill Madlock of Pittsburgh, who won his fourth title with a .323.

St. Louis' Lonnie Smith batted .321 and Houston's Jose Cruz .318.

Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia won his sixth home run title with 40 and Atlanta's Dale Murphy led the league in RBI with 121. Last year, Murphy tied with Montreal's Al Oliver for the RBI title with 109.

Tim Raines of Montreal stole a career-high 90 bases to lead for the third straight year and topped the league by scoring 132 runs.

John Denny of Philadelphia led with 19 victories and his 19-6 record gave him a .760 winning percentage, best in the league.

The ERA leader was San Francisco's Atlee Hammaker, who finished with a 2.25 ERA, despite losing his last five decisions.

Former Midland Cub Lee Smith of Chicago Cubs in saves with 29.

Tuesday night in Los Angeles, the Dodgers and Phillies begin their best-of-five NL championship series. The two teams met in the playoffs in 1977 and 1978, with Los Angeles winning three games-to-one each season.

This year, the number everyone is looking at is the one that shows that Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 11 out of 12 times, incldiuing all six at Dodger Stadium.

"Everytime we played them we were flat," Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens said just after his team was shut out by Pittsburgh's Lee Tunnell. "They'd catch us cold. But they'll see a different ballclub now."

The Phillies won their division with an 18-3 burst in September that included an 11-game winning streak. The Dodgers, meanwhile, were 14-17 in Septmeber.

"They're going to be the same team we faced all year, the same guys," said the Dodgers' Pedro Guerrero. "But they will be fired up for the playoffs."

"I'm sure we're not going to go out and beat them like we did during the year, but I still expect to beat them."

Los Angeles shut out Philadelphia five times this season and outscored the Phillies 49-15 in their 12 meetings.

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt said the Dodgers seemed to get a lot of breaks in the games.

"They'd stick out their gloves and the ball would stick. They'd make a wild throw and the first baseman would dig it out.

"They're going to see a team with a great deal more confidence," Schmidt said.

Steve Carlton, whose 15-16 record marked his first losing season in 10 years, will open for the Phillies and be opposed by Jerry Reuss, 12-11.

Neither has enjoyed considerable success in the league playoffs. Reuss is 0-4 with a 5.59 earned run average while Carlton is 2-2 with a 4.73 ERA.

One player who won't take part is Tug McGraw, the hero of the Phillies' drive to the World Series championship in 1980.

McGraw, who saved two games in the 1980 playoff victory over Houston and then saved two games and won another in the World Series triumph over Kansas City, was dropped from Philadelphia's 25-man playoff roster Sunday.

The move to not include the little-used McGraw enabled the Phillies to keep pitchers Marty Bystrom and rookie Kevin Gross, both of whom might face the Dodgers.

Syracuse coach still unconvinced

By Associated Press

How good are the Nebraska Cornhuskers?

Well, Coach Tom Osborne said following Saturday's 63-7 rout of Syracuse that "at times we didn't play as well as we would like, but still we dominated them totally."

How good are the Nebraska Cornhuskers? Well, they're not the best team Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson has ever seen.

"The (Pittsburgh) Steelers are pretty good," MacPherson said.

It was 14-0 after one period, 35-0 at halftime and 56-0 after three quarters as Nebraska stretched the nation's longest winning streak to 15 games, including five this year in which they have outscored the opposition 289-56. Quarterback Turner Gill scored on runs of 9, 1 and 5 yards, while Mike Rozier carried 19 times for 142 yards — the Cornhuskers rushed for 354 — and scored from 37 yards and 1 yard.

"They are a great running team," MacPherson said. "When you break down on defense, they punish you. We broke down."

And Nebraska took advantage, turning three interceptions into touchdowns.

"We had real good field position, which helped us a lot," Osborne said. "After we scored a couple of touchdowns I knew we were going to win unless everything went to pieces."

While Nebraska and runnerup Texas — a 42-6 winner over Rice — kept rolling along, third-ranked Arizona and No. 4 Iowa stumbled.

Arizona led California 26-3 in the third period. But it was mostly California the rest of the way as the Golden Bears rallied for a 33-33 tie.

Cal scored on an 80-yard pass play from Gale Gilbert to David Lewis, Dwight Garner's 67-yard punt return, a 61-yard Gilbert-to-Andy Bark pass, Scott Smith's 3-yard run and Randy Pratt's second field goal of the game, a 22-yarder with 48 seconds remaining that capped a 16-0 fourth quarter.

"That is what football is all about — four quarters," said Coach Joe Kapp.

Oil industry recovering from worst slide

By The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — The nation's oil industry, slimmed down, cost-conscious and still awash in bad loans, has begun to recover from its worst slide in history.

The number of oil-drilling rigs in use in the United States has risen 26 percent since hitting a six-year low in April, according to the widely watched Hughes Tool Co. rig count. Some, but not most, of the pickup is seasonal.

Industry analysts attribute the turnaround to three factors:

— A 28 percent reduction in oil- and gas-drilling costs in the last two years as a result of cutthroat price competition among overstocked oil-field suppliers and equipment manufacturers.

Growing confidence within the industry that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, after cutting prices for the first time in its history by $5 a barrel in February, will not let prices dip below current $29-a-barrel levels. One of the main reasons that drilling activity fell so sharply earlier this year was fear that, in the face of a worldwide glut, OPEC prices would be driven down to $20 a barrel.

— For the first time in five years, oil consumption increased slightly last summer.

The oil-industry recovery is lagging behind the nation's general economic recovery in timing and intensity. But it has begun, and that is good news to Houston and other oil-industry-dependent areas.

"For the first time in a long time, we're seeing some gratifying numbers out of Houston. Unemployment is down, and retail sales are up," said William Gruben, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas. "Things are picking up throughout the Southwest."

Even with the turnaround, the oil industry will face a historically low utilization of rig capacity for all of 1983 — just under 50 percent, according to I.C. Kerridge, a vice president of Hughes Tool in Houston. In the late 1970s rig capacity ran at more than 90 percent.

The industry has undergone a rigorous shakeout since drilling peaked at 4,530 active rigs in late 1981. In Texas alone, employment in one key sector of the industry — oil-field equipment manufacturing — has been halved, from 90,000 to 45,000.

WHILE THERE ARE no hard figures on oil-industry bankrupcies, some analysts estimate that 1,000 to 2,000 of the roughly 14,000 independent oil companies, which account for 88 percent of all drilling in this country, have gone under.

Hundreds of otston-based oil service and equipment companies are being propped up by banks not anxious to write off bad loans, experts said.

Hughes Tool, one of the giants in manufacture of rock bits for drilling, is typical of the industry. Since the drilling peak of late 1981, it has laid off 7,000 employees, more than one-third of its work force.

Even with the trimming, Hughes suffered losses in the second quarter of 1983, its first experience with red ink in 50 years. It expects a flat third quarter and a return to profitability in the fourth.

The recovery has been kindest to drillers, for whom the picture has brightened on various fronts. For starters, layoffs have culled all but the most skilled workers from contract drilling crews, and drilling efficiency has increased an average of 20 percent since the boom year of 1981.

"During that boom, they were hiring people who should have never been on rigs," said Richard Sparling, an economist with the Independent Petroleum Producers Association. "Now, with the better crews, you hear stories all the time of companies completing wells in half the time it used to take."

THE DRILLING companies can also pick from the newest and most efficient rigs; the older ones are being stacked and cannibalized. And they are getting bargain-basement prices from the full range of oil-field suppliers, from mud companies to makers of tubular steel. Mud companies sell special mud used to prevent blowouts and remove rocks dislodged in drilling.

"The price of oil and gas may have gone down by 13 percent in the past two years, but what people tend to forget is that the cost of drilling has gone down by 28 percent," Kerridge said. "There's a lot of money to be made drilling for oil at $29 per barrel."

Refineries have also moved to cut their losses. Plant capacity has been reduced by 13 percent from its 1981 peak, and refineries, as a result of the uptick in demand, are at 79 percent capacity, highest in three years.

"We expect an 85 percent utilization rate by 1984," said Dr. Richard Murphy of the American Petroleum Institute.

Within the industry, the 1980-81 drilling boom is commonly viewed as an aberration, fueled by the capital of outside speculators and false expectations of analysts who saw the wortld price of crude marching to $45 per barrel or more. For the most part, the outsiders have taken their losses and gone home.

"The rhinestone wildcatters have faded into the sunset, and the oil patch has been reclaimed by the oilmen," said Houston economist Nat Eisenberg. Outside investment this year is expected to be no more than $3 billion, down from $10 billion in 1981.

WHILE INDUSTRY bulls say the shakeout period has yielded a leaner, more streamlined and ultimately more profitable oil business, others are wary of painting too bright a picture.

"It's a standard thing to say that an industry comes out stronger after a shakeout," said John H. Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. "But the fact is that we are seeing a slow increase in demand for oil in the face of a rather substantial increase in the overall economy." He predicted that, while the gross national product will grow by 4 percent to 5 percent in 1984, oil demand will grow by half of that.

Still, any increase would be progress for the industry. When oil consumption rose in June, July and August above 1982 levels, it was the first time that had happened since 1978.

The oil recovery is coming in stages, with drillers turning around first, then oil-field service companies and last, probably not until 1985, heavy-equipment manufacturers. Because Houston is so dependent on the last two sectors, its recovery will continue to lag behind that of the nation.

Still, it has begun. Houston's unemployment was 9.0 percent in August, down from a peak of 10.1 percent this spring. Retail sales for the four weeks ended Sept. 17 were 11 percent hiher than in the same period in 1982, "the first signs we're seeing that things have bottomed out," Gruben said.

PETROLEUM FACTS AT A GLANCE

1. U.S. petroleum imports (crude & products) in August 5,973,000 barrels per day (b/d); imports same month last year 5,035,000 b/d.

2. Imports in August as a percentage of total U.S. petroleum supply (which includes natural gas liquids) 35.7 percent; imports as a percentage same month last year 31.5 percent.

3. Arab crude oil represented 12.8 percent of total U.S. crude oil imports (June 1983); 22.7 percent same month last year.

4. Average OPEC price for crude oil $28.73 (as of 8/30/83).

5. Average F.O.B. price in U.S. of foreign crude $28.56 (May 1983).

6. Average price for U.S. crude oil $28.77 (May 1983).

7. U.S. crude oil production August 8,649,000 b/d; production same month last year 8,634,000 b/d. U.S. natural gas liquids production in August 1,511,000 b/d. Same month last year 1,524,000 b/d.

8. U.S. natural gas marketed production 44.1 billion cubic feet daily (cf/d) (June 1983); marketed natural gas production same month last year 50.0 billion cf/d.

9. U.S. deliveries from primary storage of motor gasoline in August 6,957,000 b/d; deliveries of motor gasoline same month last year 6,614,000 b/d.

10. U.S. deliveries from primary storage of distillate fuel oil (home heating & diesel) in August 2,375,000 b/d; deliveries of distillate same month last year 2,208,000 b/d.

11. Oil and gas well completions, including dry holes, reported in August 5,249; total same month last year 6,370.

12. Percentage of U.S. crude oil from offshore wells 12.8 percent in 1982; for April 1983, 13.5 percent; percentage of U.S. natural gas from offshore wells 27.3 percent in 1981.

13. U.S. proved reserves of crude oil 27.9 billion barrels; U.S. proved reserves of natural gas 201.5 trillion cubic feet; natural gas liquids reserves 7.2 billion barrels (as of December 31, 1982 DOE/EIA).

Bahrainians say they're different, not just Gulf's rich-kid upstarts

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Serivce

MANAMA, Bahrain — This being the most Western of the Persian Gulf states, the Bahrainis are quick to point out that they are, well, different from their neighbors. That translates as: We aren't just rich-kid upstarts; we have been around for a while.

Bahrain's history dates back at least 4,000 years, when this archipelago of 35 islands was a trading center known as Dilman, and it was here in the 1930s that the gulf's first school, first hospital and first post office were built. The gulf's first paved road was here. Its first oil well was drilled here.

"We have been ahead of everybody from the beginning," said Ahmed Sheroogi, a civil servant. "We had a head start, particularly in education, so we've had more time to plan for the future when we lose our oil."

Even with Bahrain pumping a modest 42,000 barrels a day, the reserves may run dry within a decade. But Bahrain has developed a well-managed and diverse economy that has transformed this country of 350,000 people into a Singapore of the Middle East.

Though it is a Moslem nation, it is among the most relaxed and tolerant countries in the Arab world.

AT LATEST COUNT, 143 banks were located here. Many are the so-called offshore institutions, highly secretive and loosely regulated, which were attracted by tax incentives.

There are 119 exporting companies, and Bahrain has become a major communications and transportation hub with daily flights to Europe and Australia and almost everywhere in between.

It is the only country in the region where shoppers can buy a bottle of liquor without a permit and one of the few with supper clubs that offer Western-style entertainment.

Despite a per capita income of $9,000 a year, Bahrainis often refer to themselves as "the poor cousin of the gulf." By relative standards, they are. Their oil, discovered in 1932, was never of the seemingly limitless quantity that Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have known, and Bahrain's development has, by necessity, been more cautious and less flashy than that of some of its neigbors.

In addition to its emergence as a services center, Bahrain has branched into heavy industry with the financial backing of wealthier gulf countries. It has built an aluminum smelter, a major shipyard and an oil refinery, and plans have been approved for a $220 million iron ore pellet factory.

IT IS ALSO the home base for Gulf Air, whose routes extend from Bangkok to London.

Much of the money comes from Saudi Arabia, which last year subsidized half of Bahrain's $1.3 billion budget.

The Saudis are also paying for a 15-mile causeway, scheduled for completion in 1985, that will link Bahrain and Saudi Arabia. The government of Sheik Isa ibn Salman al Khalifa views the highway as a means of boosting trade and overcoming the psychological barriers of being on an island. Bahrain's early history is obscure after the Dilman civilization distintegrated. The Portuguese occupied the archipelago in 1507 but were driven out in 1622 by the shah of Persia (now Iran) with the help of the British. Persia then annexed Bahrain.

In 1783, Bahrain was recaptured from the Persians by the Al Otoub tribe of Arabs, headed by Ahmed al Khalifa, an ancestor of the present ruler.

Bahrain, comprising 255 square miles, was a British protectorate from 1892 until independence in 1971. After World War II, it was the administrative seat from which Britain ran the gulf.

IRAN DID NOT renounce its claim to Bahrain until 1970. As recently as 1979, though, a prominent Iranian religious leader referred to Bahrain as Iran's 14th province.

Sheik Isa, 50, who has ruled since 1961, faced his gravest threat in 1981 when 73 persons were arrested in an attempted coup. All are still in prison, serving sentences that range from a few years to life. They include Saudis, Kuwaitis, at least one Omani and Bahrainis trained in Iran. All are members of the Shia sect of Islam, and the Shia government of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran was widely believed to be the attempted coup's principal backer.

The royal family and Bahrain's most influential citizens are Sunni Moslems, although a majority of the population, about 60 percent, is Shia.

Western diplomats here do not detect any signs of serious social unrest and point out that no single group has been left behind in Bahrain's economic boom. The standard of living has risen dramatically.

PBGC offers two classes for oil folks

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has scheduled two courses in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Prospect Evaluation for Non-Geologists," Wednesdays, October 5 — November 9, from 7-10 p.m. Jack G. Elam, consulting geologist, will instruct the course. Fee is $200.

"Basic Fundamentals of the Petroleum Industry," Thursday and Friday, October 6-7, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Raymond Bass Jr., Petroleum Educational Services Inc., Lafayette, will instruct the course. Fee is $225.

For registration or further information, call 683-2832.

Business orders surge

NEW YORK (AP) — New orders received by U.S. businesses surged in September, pointing to continued brisk economic expansion, the National Association of Purchasing Management said Sunday.

"The report is consistent with the notion the economy is continuing to boom," said Steven Dobson, a senior economist at Bank of America in San Francisco.

Incoming orders rose in September at 48 percent of the 250 industrial companies surveyed and fell at only 8 percent, according to the monthly survey by the organization of more than 28,000 purchasing executives. Orders were unchanged at the remaining businesses.

Only twice before in the past 10 years, in April 1973 and April 1976, has the spread between those companies reporting improved orders and those reporting a decline reached 40 percentage points, the association said. In August, 40 percent of the companies surveyed said orders rose and 8 percent reported a decline.

Government hiding financial problems?

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Short-term thinking is listed high among the reasons why American industry failed in the past two decades to maintain its earlier pace of productivity improvements.

And now the question arises: Is government using the same short-term thinking in dealing with economic and financial matters?

In industry, short-term thinking generally means hiding today's problems on tomorrow's agenda, and then doing it over and over again until it can't be done anymore. In the meantime, companies can print out impressive numbers.

They can, for example, show good-looking revenues and earnings, until it is realized that both were achieved by selling off assets, reducing research and development, postponing capital projects and running up debt.

In short, industry learned that it could look good today at the expense of tomorrow and that a lot of people wouldn't catch on until tomorrow.

Something of the sort now seems to be at work on some of the big public issues, among them the federal budget deficit and loans to less-developed nations. And maybe too with Social Security.

No, says A. Haeworth Robertson, former Social Security chief actuary, the system's problems have not been solved, no matter what you've heard. "We've only gained a brief respite," he says. It "will be followed by greater turmoil."

This is decidedly different from the impression gained earlier this year when officials from President Reagan on down celebrated what they said were new and more realistic benefits and payments schedules.

But those schedules, says Robertson, who now works for William M. Mercer Inc., an employee benefits consulting firm, are badly out of whack.

He maintains that Social Security cannot keep its benefits promises without tax increases, huge ones, "substantially higher than the public has been told about thus far." And tax increases, you'll agree, aren't popular today.

Government projections indicate the Social Security tax will rise from 14 percent of the taxable payroll in 1983 to 24 percent by the year 2035. But if benefit promises are to be met, says Robertson, you can sub 40 percent for 24.

But will the promises be met? Robertson wonders about that question, and notes that confidence already has been eroded by benefit reductions, such as the delay in cost-of-living adjustments and increases in retirement age.

Taxpayers, he said, are becoming aware that they are not building up inalienable rights to specified benefits, as in an insurance contract, and that in fact there is little connection between a person's taxes and benefits.

He predicts that "increased knowledge of the way Social Security really works will further weaken the will of the public to pay the ever-increasing taxes the system will consume."

This confidence-weakening knowledge, he says, will involve a realization that Social Security is a gigantic income-redistribution program from high wage earners to lower, from single person to family, from young to old.

The young, he suggests, may not accept the terms, and might, in fact, even insist on a new social insurance system — even if the existing system continues for older segments of the population.

No, says Robertson, the issue of Social Security hasn't been settled — except in the short term. "Rhetoric to the contrary, the Social Security Amendements of 1983 did little more than give us a brief respite..."

We should not be surprised, he maintains, if the Social Security problem, allegedly resolved this year, becomes an ever bigger argument in the months and years ahead.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Leprosy transmitted by humans

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was in the Army overseas, I remember being warned that malaria is caused by a mosquito. I am now planning a vacation overseas to an area where there is leprosy, and I would like to know if this disease is also caused by any insect. — Mr. J.L., St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Mr. L.: Leprosy (Hansen's disease) is transmitted from human to human.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't mean to be funny, but I never hear or read anything about cancer of the penis. Does this ever happen? — Jimmy, Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Jimmy: Cancer of the penis is a fairly rare occurrence, representing about one percent of all tumors in men in the United States. Many of these cancers can be removed without permanently affecting urinary or sexual function.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine sent me an out-of-town newspaper with a story about immune deficiency, and it said that homosexuals and drug addicts were most likely to get the disease. Does that mean that other people do not get it? — Frankie, Clearwater Beach, Fla.

Dear Frankie: The acquird immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) was first described in homosexual men, then in people who used drugs intravenously, and later in recently arrived Haitian immigrants and in hemophiliacs. Now the list seems to be expanding.

A recent report has added apparently normal children to those who suffer from AIDS. If this is confirmed, it would appear that a person's lifestyle, although important, is certainly not the only factor in the development of AIDS.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a newly employed social worker and still feeling my way around. Many of the children I work with come from very disruptive family situations, and it is no wonder to me that they are behavior problems in school and at home. What I would like to know is if these problems will disappear as the children get older. — Ms. K.H., Boston

Dears Ms. H.: As you note in your letter, disruptive family life may be associated with behavior problems in children. These disruptions may include a death in the family, illness, a change in residence or the parents' marital status, and the loss of a job or other financial strain.

The frequency of reports of childhood problems tends to decline as the children get older, and one report suggests that the problems tend to disappear with time. This is not meant to imply that both the children and their parents might not benefit from counseling or other treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does a woman who uses an IUD have more trouble becoming pregnant after she stops using the IUD than if she had been on the pill? I've been getting some conflicting information about this. — Bette, Dallas

Dear Bette: The results of a study conducted in England indicate that 18 to 24 months after an intrauterine device (IUD) is removed, fertility is no different than it is for women who had stopped using oral contraceptives or, for that matter, any other form of birth control. These conclusions were based on a study of 17,000 women who had one or more children.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My older brother went to his doctor because he just wasn't feeling well and he found out that he had a heart attack. He is 68 years old and thought he was in good health and he did not have any unusual pain. How can a person have a heart attack when he doesn't even feel very bad? — Dennis, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Dennis: Older people may not have the typical symptoms of a heart attack. The results of a study of 55 patients over 65 years of age showed that pain was absent or at least atypical in 38 percent. However, among 50 patients who were under 65 years of age, only four percent had atypical pain.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been experiencing some pain in my breast and I'm really afraid of going to my doctor to find out what the reason is. Does this kind of pain usually mean cancer? — Debbie, Easton, Penn.

Dear Debbie: You may feel more at peace after going to your doctor and knowing what the situation is than avoiding him and continuing to be cncerned about what you think it might be. Anyone who experiences a persistent pain in the breast should check with her physician.

As a matter of fact, however, cancerous lumps generally are not very painful whereas a cystic condition often is.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why don't doctors use steroids in patients who have had psychiatric treatment? I know of one case in which the doctor did not prescribe steroids because the person had been seeing a shrink. — Gil, Washington, D.C.

Dear Gil: Corticosteroids themselves may produce behavioral and psychiatric side effects; therefore, physicians are reluctant to use these drugs in patients who have a history of a psychiatric disorder. Some patients find that these side effects are reduced if they take the drug on alternate days instead of daily.

It is not clear why some patients develop psychiatric or behavioral side effects when they start taking corticosteriods, while others do not.

For Glen, Harpers Ferry, W.Va.: Exercise testing is of value for patients who have been diagnosed as having cornary disease. By monitoring changes in the test, physicians can detect the progression of disease and decide on the need for treatment. However, some cardiologists feel that exercise testing by itself is not sufficient to diagnose coronary artery disease.

For Gloria, Brooklyn, N.Y.: Researchers at the National Institute of Mental Health have reported that daily exposure to bright artificial light can provide dramatic therapeutic benefits for patients with winter depression. Previous studies have shown that the amount of daylight in various parts of the world is related to the incidence of depression disorders and of suicides associated with the depression.

Dollar loses ground in trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar lost ground against most European currencies in early trading today and gold fell below $400 an ounce for the first time in a year.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed the recommended morning trading price at $393.50 an ounce. In Zurich, the metal was trading at a bid price of $393.10.

The declining trend in London followed price falls in New York and the Far East, where gold closed in Hong Kong at a bid price of $397.50.

The last time gold fell below $400 an ounce in London was Oct. 5, 1982, when bullion was selling at a bid price of $390.50.

The gold slump followed Friday's news of a $2.3 billion jump in the U.S. M1 money supply, high federal funds levels and an increase in one big U.S. bank's broker loan rate.

The U.S. currency fell against all major currencies except the British pound.

Pool parlor

It's obvious, from the minute a customer enters the door, that this pool hall is no ordinary pool hall.

He may have suspected as much as he drove up to the large, modern building on the corner of Andrews Highway and Midkiff Road. Perhaps the spacious parking lot with the sign warning off loiterers gave an inkling. But the clincher is the parlor itself.

The Rack doesn't fit the stereotype of a pool hall. It's clean, roomy, relatively smoke free and well-lit. It's usually not too crowded, and the customers look no more threatening than the people you might find at a neighborhood block party. A radio playing quietly in the background compliments quiet conversations and the unmistakable smacking, cracking, thudding, thunking sounds of one of the oldest recreational games around — pocket billiards.

"IT'S KIND OF what you'd call a low-key operation," said manager and co-owner Lynne Headrick. "We've tried to make a real nice place for people to come and enjoy themselves without getting knifed or spat on. There wasn't any real place for people working during the day to go and have a bite to eat and have a little recreation at the same time."

Headrick and his business partners, Sam Snoddy and A.J. Cain, decided Midland needed a family-type billiards parlor. So the two oil men put up the money and Headrick, who owned a pool hall at the time, agreed to manage the place.

They planned a rather unusual type of parlor — with 15 pool tables placed seven feet apart, six video games, a television, even darts and dominoes. They have a full-service snack bar that offers steak fingers, chicken and hamburgers. They installed quality furnishings and equipment and were ready for business.

WHAT THEY weren't ready for was the type of customers they were attracting. They found themselves experiencing the kinds of problems they had tried to avoid, Headrick recalled, and were beginning to gain a rather disreputable reputation from frequent fights in the parking lot.

The partners decided making The Rack into a private club was the only solution. Although membership is only $10 a year, it allowed them to sell liquor and to screen the customers.

"We became a private club mainly so we could control the environment and get rid of anyone who causes trouble," Headrick said. "People aren't restricted from coming in the door, just from buying alcohol. Since we went private, so far we haven't — knock on wood — had to eject anybody. We just screen the people too close. It's just like, all of a sudden, people respect the place. We don't even get graffiti on the wall.

Pool parlor patronized

"IT COST US an awful lot of money to go private, because we cut our clientele by 60 percent. It took us a year to build it back up." The Rack now has approximately 1,600 members.

And to reflect the change, he said, they refer to The Rack as a billiard parlor, not a pool hall.

"We're trying to do away with the expression 'pool hall,'" he explained. "When someone hears that sometimes the first thing that comes to their mind is a room where degenerates and criminals hang out. When you have a family-style place like this you try to get rid of that image. When people call on the phone and say, 'Is this a pool hall?' I say, 'No, it isn't.'"

"The clientele more than anything else marks the difference between this and a regular pool hall," he continued. "At lunch about every table in here is going and about everybody has on a suit and tie. We get a lot of downtown business for lunch. We get the UMC, upper middle class. And we have people come in on the weekends and bring their families."

AS HE SPOKE, a three-year-old practiced with a cue stick taller than himself while his father played on another table. Headrick said he gets a lot of business from the nearby Senior Citizens Center as well.

"They're here when I open up in the morning. They usually have a cup of coffee and play. I usually either let them play free or charge them half price." Women also play free, except on the weekends and Friday night, he said.

"This is the pool room of the future," he predicted, encompassing the room with a wave of his hand. "The old pool halls are like water in the desert — evaporating rapidly."

Continental may hire replacements

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines, struggling to stay in the air as it faces both a strike and financial reorganization, will start hiring replacement pilots if enough striking employees do not return to work this week, a company executive says.

"If we can't get enough of our own people for our plans and expansions, we will go out of the marketplace to get replacement pilots," Richard Adams, senior vice president of operations, said Sunday.

His comments came one day after pilots and flight attendants called the walkout to protest layoffs, slashed salaries and emergency work rules ordered as part of the financially ailing carrier's reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

Continental needs 500 pilots to operate its schedule, which has been pruned to save money, and airline officials said 650 of its 1,450 pilots had agreed to cross the picket lines. Adams declined to reveal how many pilots were working during the strike, but he said 400 furloughed pilots were being asked to report to work.

Despite delays and cancellations, the airline continued to fly and was "stronger than ever," Continental spokeswoman Stephanie Roth said Sunday.

However, union leaders, who claim Continental filed for reorganization in order to void union contracts, argued that the carrier could not maintain a sucessful operation for very long.

"We know there's no way we can shut down the operation today," said Henry Duffy, president of the 34,000-member Air Line Pilots Association. "But with the working conditions the company has proposed, there's no way they can keep a successful operation going indefinitely."

Nine flights were canceled Sunday for lack of a full crew, and seven flights were dropped because of equipment problems.

Gary Thomas, spokesman for the ALPA's Continental chapter, said the company was making "private deals" with furloughed Continental pilots and calling former Braniff International pilots.

"They're getting more and more desperate. They have a real problem," Thomas said.

Picketing continued Sunday at many of the 25 U.S. cities served by Continental, including Stapleton International Airport in Denver.

Items stolen from car

In complaints lodged with city police over the weekend, Eugene Shores of 3609 Caldera said golf clubs and a radar detector were stolen from his locked car while it was parked on the lot of his apartment complex Sunday.

Randy Mertz of 5216 Treemont told officers a Bear Paw compound bow and eight arrows worth a total of $250 were taken from his residence after someone gained entry through an unlocked window.

And Dick Kelly, 4103 Dawn Circle, said a lawn mower and vacumm cleaner were among the items taken from his open garage. Total loss was placed at $460.94.

Singer makes bad remarks

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — British rock singer Joe Elliott says he was dealing in "playful chit-chat" when he referred to this West Texas city as "that place with all the greasy Mexicans."

But a Hispanic leader refused to accept his apology and called on fans of Elliott's group, Def Leppard, to boycott the band.

Elliott apologized to an El Paso radio station for the comment, made during a recent performance in Tucson, Ariz., and said because he is English he didn't understand the remark was an ethnic slur.

But Joe Loya, district director for the League of United Latin American Citizens, angrily called for a boycott of Def Leppard records, concerts and T-shirts.

"An apology won't cut it. Anybody who makes that kind of statement is a bigot and a racist. It should have never been said. What good reason can you give me to forgive someone like that? There's no reason," said Loya.

Elliott made the remark during a Sept. 7 concert in Tucson, the day after the band played before a sell-out crowd in El Paso. He apologized by phone from Tokyo to El Paso radio station KLAQ-FM, which broadcast the message at 7 p.m. Friday.

"If I've offended anyone, then I'm very, very sorry for it. Being an English person, I didn't really understand that that (expression) was such an insult," said Elliott. "I'm not a Mexican-American, I do not live in El Paso, so I don't really understand what is and what is not a good or bad thing to say."

Elliott explained that he made the comment while encouraging audience cheers.

"What gets the crowd going is mentioning the town the night before and saying they made twice as much noise," Elliott said.

He said both the Tucson and El Paso audiences were heavily Hispanic, and he thought "I would wind them up more if I actually mentioned their own race of people.

"It was not meant as a racial or harmful statement in any way," said Elliott.

Elliott promised to send Def Leppard T-shirts and records to KLAQ for distribution to El Paso fans.

Magazine brokerage's recruiting methods stir controversy

Copley News Service

A feeling of fear and helplessness washed over Joe Bonin as he hung up the phone in his Santee, Calif., home.

"In a frenzy of round-the-clock calling, Bonin had come to the frightening conclusion that his younger sister, Sally, was somewhere in Scranton, Pa., in the clutches of a group intent on mind control.

It wasn't a fanatical cult selling a strange brand of religion or politics, Bonin discovered.

They were selling magazines, some of America's best-known magazines such as TV Guide, Esquire, The Atlantic and McCall's.

Yet Bonin had been told that the group — field subscription agents hired by magazine publishers — used coercion tactics strikingly similar to those used by cults.

Through his frantic phone calls, Bonin discovered that the group, a Texas-based magazine brokerage that gets crews of young people to go from city to city selling subscriptions door-to-door, preys on impressionable youths in their late teens and early 20s.

Contact with the young people was made through newspaper ads promising travel, excitement and a lucrative job opportunity.

Bonin said he learned that his sister, who lived in Buffalo, N.Y., with his mother and five other siblings, was the victim of the subscription broker's sophisticated method of persuasion that exploits naivete to coerce youthful salespeople to push the magazines. His father was deceased and the family had turned for help to Joe, 24, a commercial real estate agent.

He called better business bureaus, known cult deprogrammers, private investigators, missing-person groups and the field subscription agents themselves.

With determination, resourcefulness and a touch of chicanery, Bonin finally traced Sally to a motel in Scranton. He packed immediately and caught the red-eye flight to Buffalo where he rendezvoused with his mother. Together they drove to Scranton.

Sally Bonin had no plans for college. She was looking for a decent job after she finished high school in June of 1980. The ad in The Amhearst Bee (a suburban Buffalo newspaper) said a "growing company" was "looking for six to 10 outgoing young people free to travel the United States. ... Good benefits, no experience necessary."

Sally was intrigued. She called and was directed to a nearby motel where she was interviewed and hired on the spot. That night she was to return for a training session.

Joe Bonin recounted the events that led to his sister's involvement in magazine sales:

"Sally called my mom about 11 p.m. and said it was going later than expected and that the company would provide rooms for all the kids at the motel that night and that she would sleep over.

"My mom got a little upset, so she sent my other sister, Peggy, over to check on Sally. Peggy found them in a conference room doing chants, chants about selling magazines. She said the kids looked really weird — they had a certain look in their eyes. But although it rang some alarms in her head, it wasn't enough for Peggy to get Sally out of there."

Peggy spoke to her sister and Sally said she was fine, she was having a good time. It was almost a party atmosphere, said Bonin. "She explained what she'd seen to my mom and said, 'Let's just leave her alone for now.' After all, Sally didn't want to go to college and this was a chance to get a job."

It turns out Sally had misgivings herself that night about taking the job.

Joe said his mother was most concerned when Sally failed to returned the next day. She was escorted by a "crude-looking, bouncer-type" named Dino, according to court documents, who turned out to be the chief of Sally's crew. He never left her side as they packed her clothes.

"My youngest sister, Katy, asked Sally what she was doing and Sally replied, 'I'm leaving,'" said Bonin. With that, Sally headed to her room to pack — with Dino shadowing her.

Sally said as she looks back now she can see how she fell victim to high-powered persuasion.

"At that time of my life I was so unsure of what I was doing," she said in an interview. "I was unhappy at the time. Everything seemed great, the people were real nice, warm and friendly. You just don't ask particular questions at that point, like, 'Will we be getting a paycheck every week?' — certain things you assume. But it didn't work out that way."

"My uncle got the license number of the car and it turned out to be stolen," said Bonin. Later that day, Bonin was called by his other sister, Ellen, who explained what had happened.

"So I just got on the phone and started doing some tracking. I had only a couple of things to go on: Circulation Builders of America of Fort Worth, which is what the motel room was registered under, and I had Scranton and the other possible places."

First, he called the Better Business Bureau in Fort Worth, Texas. "I was told, 'These people are rotten,' and they started giving me all this information," said Bonin. He called Circulation Builders of America and the phone was answered, "Mecca Enterprises." He was told that owner Joseph Edge was not available and was allowed to speak with Edge's secretary, who disavowed any knowledge of what he was talking about.

A friend of Bonin's at NBC-TV in New York ran the name of Circulation Builders through the network's computerized library files and out came a story done by correspondent Betty Furness in 1978.

"It was about Joe Edge and young people getting ripped-off in these subscription frauds," said Bonin. The NBC story included incidents where young salesmen had been victims of violent reprisals for wanting to leave, he said.

Now frightened, Bonin called several people he had been referred to, including Ted Patrick, the noted San Diego-based cult deprogrammer. A cautious Patrick referred Bonin to a nationwide deprogramming group, Citizens for Freedom. He called every CFF chapter on the East Coast. The CFF affiliates in Albany and in Buffalo told him of reports from other families.

Dozens more calls resulted in more than one horror story from parents regarding kids involved in field magazine sales and plenty of advice on how to locate Sally and what to do when he found her.

Bonin decided to run a bluff. His sister has had heart problems requiring extensive surgery, he said. Knowing that the scars must have been noticed, Bonin called Circulation Builders again and told the secretary answering that he was the family attorney and warned that Sally was in grave danger if overworked.

The scheme worked. Someone at the firm called back and said Sally and her crew were in Scranton and that she would call the next day.

But with the help of the CFF in Scranton, Bonin located the group at a rundown hotel in the city's tenderloin district. Meanwhile, his mother had made contact — through a friend of a friend of a friend — with an FBI agent working in Scranton.

Officially, the agent said he couldn't become involved. Unofficially, he told the Bonins he could take Sally from the motel under the guise of investigating a missing-person report. They would then have 30 minutes with her in his office to try to convince her to leave the sales crew.

Sally had been with the group for less than two weeks when the agent surprised them by knocking on their hotel room door at 7 a.m. He spirited Sally away and took her to his office. The FBI agent then called the Bonins at their motel.

"My mom got on the phone and Sally was just screaming, 'Why did you do this? These people are my friends,'" said Bonin.

Bonin said he talked to his sister, told her he would be there in minutes to talk to her.

"I showed her my file and said, 'Sally, this is what's going on.' As I started to show it to her, she just broke down and started sobbing. When I gave her the information, you could almost see her mind working. She had all these questions and had put them aside. Now she had the answers."

She returned home, got a job as a waitress and saved enough money during the next nine months to move to Florida. Sally has had no further contact with the magazine sales group.

Rev. Moon prosecutor files suit against publishers, agents

Copley News Service

"These subscription agents and field sales representatives have lured thousands of naive youths away from home and subjected them to a variety of thought-reform techniques ... and have committed upon plaintiffs and others numerous illegal and tortious acts, including racketeering, extortion, unlawful restraint and mail and wire fraud.

"This scheme involves the use of various persuasive coercion devices which create in the recruits acquiescence, dependency, disorientation, false trust, fear, guilt, alienation from their families and society and similar psychoneurotic behavior."

The harsh allegations are contained in a suit filed recently in Federal Court in New York charging several of the nation's major publishers and their subscription agents with racketeering.

It was filed on behalf of Sally Bonin — sister of a Santee, Calif., man who "rescued" her from a magazine sales crew — and four other youths aged 19 to 23. The lawsuit alleges they were coerced into selling magazines after answering an advertisement and were subjected to a kind of brainwashing.

The suit — which asks for $100 million in damages — was brought by New York attorney Paul Traub, who has experience in cases involving cults and coercion. He has sued the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and his Unification Church and helped defend Ted Patrick, the noted cult deprogrammer.

"Under certain circumstances, people who are bombarded with fear and guilt will not exercise their free will or good judgment," said Traub. "The people these groups prey on are kids just out of high school who lack sophistication and experience."

For years this type of sales practice has occurred throughout the United States where the young salesmen are herded from city to city to hawk some of the country's best-known magazines.

Traub said the pattern of involvement is remarkably consistent. Here's how he says it works:

"The kid will read a classified ad in the New York Daily News or the Chicago Tribune or in the Buffalo-area paper, where Sally Bonin saw it — or some reputable publication. It promises travel and excitement and a good job for young people. It looks interesting, so they answer it," said Traub.

A job interview is arranged at a suite in a nice motel where the applicant is told he or she will be selling magazines, reputable ones like TV Guide, Golf Digest or McCall's, Traub said. They will travel as a group, staying together in motels and moving city to city.

"They are told they will be paid a commission for the magazines they sell and they will be given advances and expense money, but the specifics remain vague.

At the training session, they are taught how to cajole housewives into "filling my order so I can earn my bonus points and win a trip to Europe," said Traub.

The youth is told to pack his things and within a day the sales crew hits the road, he said. The crew chief dribbles out money for meals and pays for lodging.

"In a week or two, the kid is given his first earning statement and is told he is actually in debt because of poor sales performance and because he has been advanced money for meals and hotel rooms. Not one ends up with a profit," said Traub.

"Quickly, the kid finds himself getting deeper and deeper in debt. He's a couple hundred miles from home and has no money.

Traub said in the lawsuit that he has evidence of physical and verbal abuse, including beatings and threats, and evidence of phone calls and mail being censored.

"This is a racket," Traub said.

Traub is relying on what he calls an "imaginative use of a statute that I am taxing to the limit." He is suing the publishers and their subscription agents under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.

Four subscription agents are named in the alleged "slavery" suit scheme: Circulation Builders of America of Arlington, Texas, and its owners, Joseph and Joy Edge (the company for which Sally Bonin worked); North American Book Sales Inc. of Michigan City, Ind., Solar Circulation Inc., also of Michigan City, and its owner, Walter Lake; and National Circulating Co. of Gettysburg, Pa., and its owner, Sylvester Brown.

A dozen publishers, all of whom are based or have offices in New York City, also are targeted by the suit.

Extreme temperatures for prolonged periods cause camera problems

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

This past winter I was shooting nighttime skiers at a slope on the Pennsylvania-Maryland border.

As you might well imagine, the temperature was quite low and my cameras, while I tried to protect them whenever I could by putting them inside my jacket were nevertheless, exposed to lots of chilling wind.

While I can't make a hard and fast rule about using cameras in the cold being dangerous to their (and your) health, you can expect to have more than your share of camera malfunctions whenever those somewhat delicate instruments are exposed for lengthy periods to frigid temperatures.

The problem occurs, I'm told, with the lubricants. Extreme cold has a tendency to make them stiffer than they should be. And when they get so stiff that the electrical impulses or the mechanical movements like advancing the film can't occur, chances are something will break.

Incidentally, the pros who shoot in the arctic regions will take their cameras to a high-class overhaul shop where the original lubricants are purged, then replaced with special solutions that don't stiffen in sub-zero temperatures.

But this isn't a column about the problems of taking pictures when you need insulated underwear, we're talking here about what to do when your camera breaks.

All of us have a tendency to think the equipment we're using will last forever, and there is no more distressing feeling than losing a great shot because your equipment didn't function as it should.

I've seen the air turn blue and heard camera manufacturer's names taken in vain when a flash didn't fire or when a shutter didn't release properly. And, believe me, malfunctions have no respect for anyone — they can happen anytime, anywhere.

However, there are a few things you can do to help eliminate the possibility of untimely failure.

First of all, cameras should get their fair share of loving care.

Keep them clean — lens tissue and lens cleaning fluid along with canned air are your primary defensive weapons. Keep in mind, though, that ham-handed cleaning is just about as bad as no cleaning — strong blasts of air can ruin a shutter and slopping lens cleaning fluid directly on your lens are classic cases of too much of a good thing.

Use the air gently to remove any loose particles on your lenses and inside your camera. A camel's hair brush — used gently, of course, works well to dislodge dust particles, and then if it's necessary to clean your lenses, apply the lens cleaning fluid to the lens tissue (instead of applying it to the lens) and wipe the dirty spot ever so gently.

Just remember you're not scouring burned butter from the bottom of a stainless steel pan, so use your lightest touch when it comes to cleaning lens surfaces.

And if something should come loose inside one of your lenses, I'd strongly discourage you from trying to be your own mechanic. Lenses are quite complex and require the expertise of trained technicians when something goes wrong.

And don't even think of trying to repair your own camera. The inside of a modern SLR unit is jam-packed with electronic circuits and hundreds of little bitty parts that, it seems, all need to work together. Turn a wrong screw, bend a part, or short out a circuit and you've got big trouble.

Finding a competent, reliable camera repair person is just about as difficult as finding a competent, reliable auto mechanic.

If your camera needs new parts often there will be a two-to four-week wait before the parts arrive from the manufacturer. Every repair person I've ever spoken to questions why it takes the camera companies so long to ship parts they have on the shelf. The camera makers all seem to have trouble getting parts requests through their internal paper mill and into the warehouse for packing and shipping.

'Galle' vase worth $1,000

By JAMES G. McCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Q: My vase is 23 inches tall and is signed on the neck, "Galle." It appears to have been made in layers and is about one-fourth inch thick.

Any information you can give me will be appreciated.

A: Galle glass was made from 1874 to 1931 in Nancy, France.

This is Cameo Glass and was probably made in the early 20th century. The value would be at least $1,000 — possibly more.

Galle vases are usually sold at auction in a national gallery, so it is almost impossible to determine the value in advance. Some Galle glass sells for as much as $6,000.

Q: We recently acquired a curly maple cabinet and would like to know your opinion of it.

When was it made and how much is it worth?

A: Your cabinet was made in the second quarter of the 19th century and would be classified as Empire.

It is an exceptionally fine antique and should be worth at least $1,000.

Q: My composition boy doll is 15 inches tall and dressed in blue denim with buttons imprinted "Railroad King." The eyes and hair are painted. It is marked as shown in the sketch.

Who made it, when and how much is it worth?

A: This was made by the American Doll Co. in the early part of this century.

According to "The 20th Century Doll Series," it is worth from $55 to $120, depending on condition.

BOOK REVIEW: "Twentieth Century Dolls:" by Johana Gast Anderson; Wallace-Homestead Book Co.; 1912 Grand Ave.; Des Moines, IA 50305; $29.95, plus $1.25 postage or at your local bookstore.

Over 1,300 dolls dating from 1900 to 1970 are listed and illustrated.

Couple executed

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed June 19, 1953, at Sing Sing Prison. The husband and wife had been found guilty in 1951 of conspiring to transmit atomic secrets to the Soviet Union during World War II. Because the actions had occurred during wartime, the death sentence was mandatory, and appeals by religious leaders and others against execution failed.

Useful tips offered

Here are a few handy household hints:

—Charcoal briquets placed in the refrigerator will absorb the odor of rotten meat or other spoiled food.

—Plants should be watered in the cool of early morning or evening to prevent scorching of the leaves.

—Although drying white cloth articles in bright sunlight will brighten their whiteness, only pure cotton should be exposed to full sun.

DEAR ABBY

Hot Latin lover has girlfriend seeing red

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: About a month ago I met "Lorenzo" — a hot-blooded Latin type — and we started to date. The chemistry was terrific between us, but I made up my mind not to rush into the sack with him, as I had made that mistake before and it didn't work.

Last week Lorenzo had to entertain a bachelor businessman, so he asked me to drum up a girl for "Sam" and we'd make it a foursome. I said fine, and drummed up "Millie," a good friend of mine.

That evening Millie flirted with Lorenzo and he flirted back. Later Millie said Sam was too short for her — that's why she danced with Lorenzo all evening.

Yesterday Millie confessed that the night the four of us went out, Lorenzo asked for her phone number, she gave it to him, and the following afternoon (Sunday) she went to bed with him! I nearly fell off my chair. She apologized, saying they were both a little "high," she hadn't seen him since, and that one night didn't mean anything.

I am angry with Millie and furious with Lorenzo. I can't tell him I know about him and Millie because I promised Millie I wouldn't tell. I still care for Lorenzo, but I don't know how to handle this. Please advise me. — STILL IN SHOCK

DEAR STILL: Say adios to Lorenzo and tell him to donate his "hot blood" to the blood bank. And don't trust Millie any farther than you can see her. I think Lorenzo and Millie deserve each other — and you deserve better.

DEAR ABBY: I want to say a few words in behalf of telephone solicitors. I am one. I spend eight hours a day on the phone trying to interest people in a service, and I am sick and tired of being yelled at, lied to and hung up on.

Why can't people just listen to what we have to say, and if they aren't interested, say so politely so we can get on to the next call? Maybe they don't realize that the job we are doing could be keeping us off welfare. Sign me ... DIALING IN SPOKANE

DEAR DIALING: I sympathize with you, but can you sympathize with someone you might have awakened out of a sound sleep, or someone who is ill, disabled, or has a sick or sleeping family member whom you disturbed by your call?

There is no excuse for rudeness, but most people feel that their telephones are for THEIR convenience, and they resent being intruded upon with a pitch for a service they do not want.

How to avoid hay fever

Reducing exposure to ragweed pollen

- ☐ Most pollen is released between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m., so keep windows closed, especially at night
- ☐ Don't jog in the early morning
- ☐ Keep car windows closed
- ☐ Use air conditioning to combat the heat that can aggravate hay fever and to keep out pollen-laden air
- ☐ Stay indoors as much as possible
- ☐ Avoid contact with household pets that may have collected pollen on their coats while outdoors
- ☐ Don't drive on dusty roads
- ☐ Avoid fresh-cut flowers
- ☐ Avoid mowing lawns and areas with freshly cut grass; raking leaves, which stirs up mold spores, can be a problem later in the fall
- ☐ Don't hang sheets or clothing outdoors to dry because pollen and spores can collect in them
- ☐ If symptoms continue after these precautions are taken, over-the-counter allergy medicines usually help, but more persistent problems should be referred to a doctor

AT WIT'S END

Research hurting romance

By ERMA BOMBECK

There are two things that should never be researched. One of them is what makes people laugh. The other is the lovemaking habits of consenting adults.

In some cases, it's the same thing.

We know that more people make love on Sunday than on any other day of the week.

We know that the peak hours are 10 p.m. and 7 a.m.

We know that power shortages increase the birth rate significantly nine months later.

We know that more women sleep next to the wall than men.

We know that men wearing boxer shorts are more likely to become fathers.

We know that jogging increases sexual desires.

We know that garlic is still the most effective form of birth control.

We know that after 60 sex is termed "interesting."

We know that we burn 150 calories making love, which is just under throwing a Frisbee, which burns 200 calories.

I would have been willing to bet that by this time, every single scrap of data regarding lovemaking had been fed into a computer and analyzed.

Well, I was wrong. A team of researchers was curious that with all the love songs about the moon, did the moon really have an effect on the hours people made love.

Husbands and wives filled out separate questionnaires, noting the precise time of lovemaking. Then researchers calculated the exact position of the moon at that time. The conclusion? The position of the moon made no difference whatsoever.

I don't want to hear that another bit of romance has bit the dust. The next thing they'll tell me is that hearts don't "ache and break" and that it was physically impossible for Tony Bennett to leave his heart in San Francisco.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Bulbs make gardening easy

By ELVIN McDONALD

One sure way to get hours of pleasure from mere minutes of gardening is to plant bulbs. They are nature's perfect packages, complete with flowers and leaves miraculously compacted inside.

Right now you will find displays of hardy or spring-flowering bulbs at your local garden center, nursery, florist or hardware. Those that can be potted and coaxed into early bloom indoors are clearly marked.

For earliest blooms, select from the tender — meaning not frost-hardy — narcissus such as paperwhite, Soleil d'Or and Chinese sacred lily. All these need is a few weeks in a cool (50-60F.) dark place to grow a thrifty root system, then they can be brought to fragrant bloom within a month in a sunny, moderate (55-70F.) window garden.

If you want holiday bloom from tender narcissus, allow about eight weeks from when you first set the bulbs in moist soil, or in shallow bowls of pebbles and water. Letting them dry out after roots start, or too much heat too soon, will spoil the blooms.

Next in line for early bloom are the hyacinths, especially those prepared for forcing by the growers. I see these offered in catalogs but not in local shops. Those sold for growing in hyacinth glasses filled with water will bloom in eight weeks at 50F.

The last three years I've had red tulips called 'Jingle Bell' blooming in my windows from before Christmas until after New Year's. These come in a blister-pack-covered container; fill this with water Thanksgiving weekend, set directly in a sunny bright window, keep the water level constant, and blooms appear to perfection right on schedule. The source is Breck's, 6523 N. Galena Rd., Peoria, Ill. 61632.

Q. How much water do ferns need? I have good luck with aloe and hoya but the ferns always die.

A. Ferns need more water than the succulents you mention. The best way is to feel the fern's surface soil; keep it between damp and nicely moist. Ferns can't tolerate being stone-dry or soggy wet.

There are countless kinds of fern, but the popular Boston and other closely related nephrolepis such as 'Fluffy Ruffles' will do well in a humus-rich potting soil that has plenty of air space, yet keeps roots uniformly moist. I suggest two parts packaged all-purpose potting soil to one each of sphagnum peat moss and coarse perlite (vermiculite or clean, sharp sand may be substituted). I am partial to organic fertilizers such as fish emulsion. When possible I also like to use a generous portion of well-rotted oak leaf mold (it has an acid pH) or compost when potting up ferns.

No matter the kind of fern, the shorter, cooler days of fall mean that less water will be needed and likely no fertilizer at all. It's a good time to groom, especially if the day is pleasantly warm so you can do the clean-up outdoors.

Q. I have an orchid that grows like a weed; how can I get it to bloom?

A. There are thousands of different orchids, so I can't be sure. More light is almost definitely needed, possibly cooler night temperatures as well.

Children like denims

Copley News Service

Clothing for kids should be strong and handsome, but finding clothes that look and fit properly takes expertise. Here are suggestions from Calvin Charles Apparel for boys:

COLOR — Kids like denim, so stick with blues, red, wines and yellows for their shirts and sweaters, so that anything they pull out of the drawer will automatically look bright, fresh and appropriate.

FABRICS — If denims are a boy's best friend, corduroys and twill-type fabrics are making a strong comeback — and for good reason. They're toughly made and they keep their shape. However, beware of cords manufactured with too much sizing (the chemical process that makes the fabric appear stiff, crisp and solid). After a washing or two there's nothing left to support the fabric. Good corduroy feels smooth to the touch, and the nap doesn't look fuzzy.

POLY OR COTTON? — Man-made fibers don't shrink or sag as 100 percent cottons tend to do. On the other hand, polyesters, even those that are "new" and "improved," have a tendency to pill and retain stains. Poly-cotton weaves are a nice compromise, though in warmer climates 100 percent cotton allows the body to breathe more freely.

TAILORING — Poorly executed stitching, with inferior thread and too few stitches per inch, will mean loose seams, especially at the shoulders, underarms and crotch. Look for reinforced and finished seams and pull at the pockets to make sure they are reinforced, too.

OUTER WEAR — Think ahead to cold weather. Most kids don't wear full-length coats nowadays; they prefer short jackets. So choose a jacket which color-coordinates with the kind of pants your boy prefers.

ACTION WEAR — Sweat shirts and sweat pants have moved from sandbox and sandlot to the classroom, and the color choices are infinite. They really help to liven up a dull wardrobe. Polyester action wear materials may look shinier, but they're warm in winter. Active clothes that are a blend of polyester and cotton are not only handsome, but durable and easy to maintain. Beware of iron-on decals which begin disintegrating in the wash and make an almost new sweat shirt look like last year's.

Tammy Wynette perfects 'pathetic appeal'

Wynette

FORT WORTH (AP) — Country-and-western singer Tammy Wynette creates a "pathetic appeal" when she pulls at the heart strings of her audience, says an English professor at Texas Christian University who has analyzed her style of performance.

"Tammy knows just which strings to pluck, and she plays them with the skill of an expert," says Neil Daniel, who also wrote in a university magazine that her "style, her delivery, and the rhetoric of her performance can be analyzed according to precepts that have come down to us from Aristotle" and "other classical authorities on the art of persuasion."

Speaking of a "pathetic appeal," the professor said the 41-year-old Ms. Wynette "has a way of singing, a catch in her voice that gets duplicated as she sings two parts in harmony, which will convince her listeners that she is crying and singing at the same time."

Dean

CHOLAME, Calif. (AP) — The cult of James Dean — the soulful movie star of "Rebel Without a Cause" and "Giant" — took to the open road as fans of the deceased actor traveled the route that he drove to his death 28 years ago.

Most of those who participated in Saturday's highway trek in 38 vintage cars from the 1930s, 40s and 50s admitted they were either too young or too old to have seen Dean in his heyday.

"We don't want to make this a sad event," said Will O'Neill of Los Angeles, organizer of the fourth annual tribute to Dean.

The motorists didn't stop at the barren crash site near the intersection of state highways 41 and 46 as they headed north.

Their destination was Utella's Country Kitchen in Cholame, about 30 miles northeast of San Luis Obispo and 150 miles northwest of Los Angeles. The town has a monument to the young rebel.

Dean and his mechanic were speeding toward the coast in the actor's sports car when they slammed into another car turning left in front of them. Dean, 24, died instantly of a broken neck.

NEW YORK (AP) — When President Jimmy Carter flew to the Mideast, he traveled in style, in a jet plane described as one of the most perfectly furnished aircraft in the world. That luxury liner goes on the auction block this week with other Carter memorabilia.

The BAC 1-11, about the size of a DC-9, is expected to go for at least $4 million to raise funds for the proposed $25 million Carter Presidential Library and Carter Center of Emory University in Atlanta.

The plane, owned by Christopher Hemmeker of Hawaii, one of the founders of the library's funding committee, is outfitted with a private office, private bedrooms, seating area for staff and a kitchen and dining room.

"It's considered to be one of the most perfectly furnished, comfortably appointed aircraft in the world today," said Christopher Hest, associate funding director for the Carter Presidential Library.

More than 300 other items to be put up for bid at the auction at Sotheby Parke Bernet on Friday include chairs that Carter built from trees in his backyard and a five-piece silver tea service, a gift from singer Johnny Cash, a hand-carved rocking horse from Gov. John Y. Brown of Kentucky and a guitar used by country music singer Larry Gatlin.

Croce's widow bitter over lawsuits

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A decade after pop singer Jim Croce died in a plane crash, all that remains of his fortune are bitterness and a dozen lawsuits over his music, his widow says.

"There were millions when Jim died, but there aren't even hundreds of thousands now...There's not much of anything now," Ingrid Croce said in a recent interview.

The Croces' grand estate overlooking San Diego Bay has given way to a rented condominium in Hillcrest which Mrs. Croce, 36, shares with son Adrian James, 11. Legal fees have eaten away most of the money.

Five lawsuits are pending in San Diego Superior Court; others have been filed in Los Angeles. But the biggest is in U.S. District Court in New York, where Mrs. Croce is fighting Lifesong Records for $5 million plus rights to Croce's songs.

Lifesong's managers — producers Tommy West and Terry Cashman and attorney Phil Kurnit — won a round in that suit last year, retaining rights to record such hits as "Operator" and "You Don't Mess Around with Jim." The jury awarded Mrs. Croce $500,000 in back royalties, a decision which is being appealed.

Lifesong's executives have "no compassion, none at all," she charged.

"A lot of saying, 'We love Jimmy a lot,' but Jim died without a penny in his pocket," Mrs. Croce claimed. "All he owned on the day he died was a pair of Levis and a T-shirt. He was waiting for the check in the mail. And he never knew he made it."

However, Kurnit says Croce was paid $7,500 a night in performance fees before he died in the 1973 plane crash near Natchitoches, La.

Elevator operator has buttons for thought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Geraldine Thompson's elevator serves only six floors in the oldest congressional office building, but it has more than 2,000 buttons.

Less than a dozen buttons operate the elevator. The rest comprise a colorful up-and-down museum of political dreams, civic boosterism, sports mania and a variety of causes and issues.

Pinned to sweaters and shawls draped over coathangers suspended from the ceiling, the button collection is Mrs. Thompson's identity in the bustling, sometimes faceless world of backshop Congress, where about 21,000 employees — from janitors to $69,000-a-year managers — serve the needs of 535 senators and representatives.

Mrs. Thompson, who has piloted Cannon Office Building elevators for 28 of her 49 years, began gathering buttons during a whimsical moment seven years ago.

"Rep. Sam Hall (D-Texas) started me with my first button," she recalls. "He was a new congressman coming in and he had a (Hall campaign) button in his hand and I asked him for it."

From that point, the collection began growing like the national debt.

"I wore the first ones on a vest," Mrs. Thompson said. "Everyday, I wore it with these buttons on it. Gradually, people came in and said, 'do you collect buttons?' I said yes, and they started giving me buttons. It was the members first, then their staffs, then the lobbyists. And then the people from just all over.

"The buttons are my life on Capitol Hill," she said. "People don't know my name, but they know the elevator lady, the button lady. When they see a button, they think of me. And they bring me one."

Republicans, Democrats, independents, winners and losers — their visages and slogans and the words of their detractors and supporters fill her elevator, but she says she's nonpartisan.

"I take anything and everything, as long as it's a button. I've got some dirty ones, too."

The apparent oldest one is vintage 1948. Scratched and faded, it bears a picture of President Truman and the words, "Give 'Em Hell, Harry."

Some are as new as next year, summarizing the 1984 presidential ambitions of Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Jimmy Carter buttons — both pro and con — outnumber any other politician's. Mrs. Thompson says she's not necessarily a Carter fan. It just happened that one day someone gave her a boxful of Carter's.

Her "really really favorite" button is nonpolitical. Given to her by a House page last spring, it says: "This job has its ups and downs."

Mrs. Thompson, who commutes daily by train to the Capitol from her home in Baltimore, says that while elevator riders enjoy her buttons, unnamed superiors in the House superintendent's office occasionally complain.

"They say the members don't want this up in your elevator," she said. "I tell them the members are the one who started this, the members are the ones who like this, the members are the ones who want me to do this."

In a world of political contacts, Mrs. Thompson has a rather large one — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

She got her job originally as a patronage post from former Rep. Samuel Friedel, a veteran Maryland Democrat who employed her mother as a secretary. Friedel lost to Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., in 1970, but Mitchell lacked the seniority to claim the patronage.

So, Mrs. Thompson, the first woman elevator operator in Congress, went to someone who did — then-Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla.

"I explained to him the situation and he said he'd be glad to take me over," she recalled. "When he retired, he recommended me to this speaker.

Coming soon: Tinseltown meets Middle America

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP) — Tinseltown met Middle America in this sleepy hamlet, as movie folk painted the grass green and toned down the trim on the courthouse to film "Grandview U.S.A." Neither the filmmakers nor the town's 10,000 residents will ever be the same.

"It's like having a 700-pound gorilla come stay at your house; it may be a lot of fun, but you know he's there," said Ken Hixon, who wrote the screenplay for the movie, billed as a humorous but touching look at growing up in a small Midwestern town.

Filming began a month ago, but the excitement hasn't yet worn off for curious townspeople who have followed the crew from location to location, chatting with star Jamie Lee Curtis and getting autographs from leading man Troy Donahue. The CBS Theatrical Films production, directed by Randal Kleiser, is due to open in theaters next summer.

"We've become entertainment for them," said producer William Blaylock. "They bring lawn chairs, food, thermos bottles. They just love to watch us."

On one recent night, hundreds of spectators waited six hours in the fall chill to see a bulldozer, its growl breaking the late-night silence, rip the side off a house in one wood-splintering second.

As the wall crashed into the yard in a cloud of dust and the water heater tumbled into the grass, the army of filmmakers shouted their satisfaction and the local folks showed their approval with applause.

The face of this town 100 miles southwest of Chicago has seen some changes since Hollywood came to town, some more welcome than others. Film crews have:

—Toned down the red and yellow trim on the town's magnificent 108-year-old courthouse, a key reason the location was chosen.

—Built a 1950s vintage demolition derby track from scratch on a vacant lot, weathered it and piled dozens of old cars next to it.

—Sprayed grass green and replaced fall-colored bushes with green ones to maintain the spring setting of the movie.

—Closed streets, and sometimes the town square, for filming.

—Hired more than 1,000 local residents as extras at $30 a day.

—Filmed in the courthouse, a downtown store, nearby Saunemin High School, and several private houses.

One is the 62-year-old home of Bob Zimmerman in nearby Fairbury. Crews arrived early and stayed late for two days.

"We just stood behind them and watched," Zimmerman said. "The director would take time out to explain what they were doing. They never made us feel like we were in the way."

The Pontiac Daily Leader has carried pictures and stories nearly every day, and managing editor Gary Holaway said readers still want to know what is going on daily, sometimes calling with ideas for feature stories.

So far, Pontiac residents seem pleased with the movie people, and vice versa.

"It was culture shock when I first arrived, but it becomes your home and now I love it here," Ms. Curtis said. "But the food is a killer — a lot of fried food which has done havoc on my thighs."

Brian Tunnell of the Pontiac Chamber of Commerce said the film will mean $1.5 million in direct benefits to the community, with motels full, restaurant business booming and retail sales up.
