Deputies search estate for kidnap clues

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A heavily armed force of deputies swooped down on a lavish 100-acre estate near here early today, searching for evidence in the Chowchilla school bus hijacking.

The estate, six miles south of here, is owned by Frederick N. Woods III, who also owns the rock quarry in Livermore where 26 schoolchildren and their bus driver were buried in a makeshift, underground prison for 18 hours before digging their way out.

Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins said officials also wanted to talk to Woods' son, 24-year-old Frederick N. Woods IV.

The elder Woods had told one interviewer on Wednesday that he didn't know the whereabouts of his son.

"I was told by the sheriff's office not to say whether I have one son or 10 sons," Woods said.

Houchins said he also was interested in talking to two of young Woods' friends — Richard Schoenfeld, 22, and James Schoenfeld, 24, sons of J.B. Schoenfeld, a podiatrist in nearby Atherton.

A highly placed source in the Alameda County sheriff's office told The Associated Press Wednesday that one young man being sought in connection with the kidnaping was connected to the rock quarry. The source said the other two were sons of a prominent San Francisco area physician.

Houchins emphasized at a news conference late Wednesday night that the younger Woods and the Schoenfeld brothers had not been named in any arrest warrant.

Officials also emphasized early today that no arrest warrants had been issued in the case.

"The three are subjects of the investigation" into the kidnaping, Houchins said. "I would be interested in talking to them. I would not arrest them."

Alameda County sheriff's officials had said earlier Wednesday that Woods "and his boy are being investigated routinely."

Houchins said more than 100 vehicles were found on the estate, including one which he said authorities were interested in, a tractor usually used to pull trailer trucks. The children and the driver were imprisoned in a moving van trailer.

Under the command of sheriffs from Alameda, San Mateo and Madera counties, the caravan of sheriff's deputies left the San Mateo sheriff's office Wednesday night and was accompanied to the Woods estate by Charles Bates, FBI agent in charge of the San Francisco office.

The elder Woods was served with a search warrant signed by a San Mateo County judge.

His house was searched and he and his wife were the only people at home, Houchins said.

Some 60 law enforcement officers then scattered about the property on a fine-comb search of 15 buildings on the estate in Portola Valley on the San Francisco Peninsula.

Standing by as backup team was a Special Weapons and Tactics team from San Mateo County.

Published reports said Wednesday that the kidnaping last Thursday, which authorities said was carried out by three armed, masked men, may have been the work of a "drug and gun cult" involving members of wealthy families.

A source told The AP that the families of all three men sought in the case have residences on the San Francisco Peninsula, of which San Mateo County is a part.

Meanwhile, the Sacramento Bee reported Wednesday, "The arrests of at least seven sons of wealthy San Francisco Peninsula families are imminent."

The investigation shifted here after clothing and other articles taken from the bus driver by the kidnapers were found alongside a Saratoga area road, about 20 miles south of Redwood City.

The Fresno and Modesto Bees quoted a source as saying:

"We are looking very closely to an individual named Fred because the moving van was sold ... to him personally." The source contended that only someone with easy access to the quarry could have buried the van, six feet underground. The van was purchased last Nov. 20.

House overrides jobs bill veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, with an attack on unemployment as a major goal this election year, today overrode President Ford's veto of a $3.95-billion public works jobs bill, enacting it into law.

Final action came in the House, which overrode Ford's veto by a vote of 310 to 96, or 39 more than the required two thirds.

It was the ninth time Congress has overridden Ford. The President has been sustained 14 times.

The Democratic-controlled Congress and the Democratic candidates for president and vice president have made an assault on joblessness a major election-year issue.

The Senate voted 73 to 24 Wednesday to override Ford's veto of the public works bill.

House Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill and other Democratic leaders had predicted they would have no difficulty winning the jobs bill override.

But O'Neill was not so confident about overriding Ford's veto of another bill: a $3.3-billion military construction authorization. A vote was expected later in the day.

Supporters of the public works bill say it would create 200,000 construction and other jobs while protecting another 90,000 state and local government jobs.

Sen. Walter Mondale, the Democrats' vice presidential nominee, said he couldn't understand Ford's veto because "the worst thing you can do is deny people work. This country needs work."

Ford had called an earlier $6.2-billion version of the bill, which he successfully vetoed, "little more than election-year pork barrel." He made clear he considers the new version little better.

"This bill will not create lasting jobs," Ford said, "but will instead create more inflation."

Supporters say the bill will create jobs in the construction industry because it authorizes $2 billion in grants to state and local government for public works construction projects that can be started in 90 days.

They say the 90,000 state and local government jobs will be saved by a $1.25-billion authorization in the bill for anti-recession grants to maintain government services in areas with high unemployment.

Democratic leaders, particularly in the House, set creation of more jobs as their major legislative goal at the start of this year.

MIDLAND COLLEGE isn't in the real estate business but it is trying to sell the Playland miniature golf course and the 9.5-acre tract of land which is in part occupied by the facility. Approximately 60 per cent of the stock in Playland Inc., which owns the land, has been donated to the college foundation, Dr. Al G. Langford, president, said. "We have enough stock to vote to sell it," Langford said. If so, proceeds would be distributed on a proportional basis among shareholders.

New SS station set for Midland

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Rep. George Mahon announced Wednesday a new Social Security Administration resident station will open in Midland.

"People have demonstrated an interest in this matter for some time, and I hope it will be of benefit to the people of the area," Mahon said.

The location and opening date of the office will be announced later.

Erven L. Fisher, district manager of the Social Security office in Odessa, said the main differences between a Social Security office and a resident station are that the station does not have the communications facilities nor the administrative personnel an office has.

"There should be no difference in service to the people, however," he noted.

Initially, five people are expected to be employed in Midland's resident station from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to take care of Social Security matters, Fisher said.

Oops! Martian sky pink, not blue, folks

PASADENA (AP) — The first Martian weather report shows nippy morning temperatures of 122 degrees below zero on the Red Planet, under skies not blue but pink.

Dust particles floating in the thin atmosphere scatter sunlight to paint the sky pink, scientists explained today, even though it looked an earthly blue in Viking 1's first color picture.

"It is red, but not as red as the surface," said Dr. Carl Sagan.

The color was false in the first picture because Viking's cameras have not yet been adjusted to reproduce colors on Mars with perfect accuracy, said project officials.

A more serious problem was also revealed late Wednesday. The seismometer designed to detect marsquakes did not turn on properly after Tuesday's landing.

Unless it can be fixed by radio commands from earth, the instrument will not be able to carry out its work of recording quakes and probing the interior of the planet, said Deputy Mission Director Lou Kingsland.

Scientists had hoped to have the use of seismometers aboard both Viking 1 and its twin, Viking 2 — due for a landing later this summer — in order to determine the location of any marsquakes. If only one seismometer works properly, only the number, not the direction of the quakes can be registered.

Dr. Seymour Hess, meteorology investigation team leader, said the weather station aboard the robot lander recorded temperatures ranging from 122 below zero Farenheit to 22 below, although the latter was not the highest temperature of the day.

He said there were light winds shifting from the east to the southwest during Viking's first Martian night. The highest wind speed was 15 miles per hour, far gentler than the winds of several hundred miles per hour known to blow on the planet.

Sagan, a member of Viking's lander photography team, said another scientist, Dr. James Pollack, had determined the pinkish hue of the Martian sky. It had appeared much brighter than expected in Viking's first black-and-white photos, and had appeared blue in the color picture until further analysis revealed the sky's true color.

The robot lander's camera snapped a pair of photos Tuesday of the spot where, a week from now, a telescoping arm has been preprogrammed to scoop up a sample of Martian soil. That will mark the beginning of biological tests in the hunt for Martian life.

Meanwhile, with one Viking experiment station on Mars working well, officials have decided to be bolder with the second Viking and aim it for a northerly site riskier but more likely to harbor Martian life.

The decision to target Viking 2 for a landing in the north — rather than at an alternate site near the Martian equator — came after more than two dozen meetings at which officials and scientists weighed a multitude of factors.

The northern site, on a vast rolling plain called Cydonia after a town on the Greek island of Crete, is of great interest to scientists. There is believed to be at least five times more water vapor in the air than there is near Mars' equator.

Also, because the area is not far from where the north polar icecap extends in the winter, some residual water or flush might remain at times to nurture life on the otherwise dry planet.

Scientists studying Martian weather also were enthusiastic about the northern territory because the changes in weather conditions from

Rains start again

Those residents of the Permian Basin who thought the rain was over at least for a while were surprised this morning to awaken to more rain.

Midland reported .10 inches and Odessa reported .05 inches of rain as of 8 a.m. today. Even Rankin, who managed to escape last week's deluge, reported rain this morning.

The National Weather Service said even more rain is expected tonight and Friday with a 30 per cent chance of showers and thunderstorms.

Andrews, Garden City, Lamesa, Crane, Stanton and Rankin all rep orted rain, cool temperatures and calm to slight winds this morning.

The forecast for the Permian Basin calls for partly cloudy skies with a 30 per cent chance of showers and thunderstorms tonight and Friday. There will be no important temperature changes. Low tonight will be in the mid 60s and the high Friday will be in the mid 80s. Winds will be southeasterly 5 to 10 mph tonight.

MC trustees okay architectural plans

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Midland College trustees approved architect's plans for a $6.3 million building program and agreed to receive bids Sept. 14.

The three projects, approved by voters in February, include a multipurpose facility to be called Chaparral Center, a fine arts-academic classroom building and an addition to the occupational-technical building.

College president Dr. Al G. Langford said the architects "have done an outstanding job of getting our three buildings ready."

Bids will be received for construction of all three buildings including parking lots; plumbing, heating and air conditioning for the entire project, and electrical work for the entire project.

Chaparral Center will be "a unique building," architect Preston Geren of Fort Worth told the board.

Geren said the building was originally designed for a project proposed, and rejected, for the Midland public schools. The facility, when constructed, will be used by the college, the Midland Independent School District and the community.

Use requirements for the facility required revision of the air conditioning system in the original plan to cut down on noise levels, Geren said.

The design calls for two main entrances, one on each corner of one side, with berms on all four sides. The 5,232-seat facility will be used for college and high school varsity sports.

Other features will allow for an 80-foot head table for banquets and, when some of the seats are removed, a stage for performances and programs.

Separate dressing areas are provided for high school and college athletic teams. No separate dressing area is provided for other events, but the athletic dressing rooms are accessible from the stage, Geren said.

He estimated it will take 16 months for construction of the center, "due to the size amd volume."

Providing a different kind of forum for events will be a 258-seat theater in the fine arts-academic classroom building to be constructed as part of the building program.

Also included in that building will be rehearsal rooms, offices, 16 classrooms and a graphic arts area, which will include art labs, an

Charlie's the bane of columnists

I'm now settled into the newsroom of The Reporter-Telegram, and any day now I'll be doing some real columnizing.

The biggest problem right now is trying to learn to type again for that monster machine I've dubbed "Charlie the Computer," whose peers out of IBM are increasingly calling the turns for functionaries in every trade and profession.

Mark Twain would roll over in his grave and add another chapter to his scathing posthumous essay "Letters from the Earth" if he had to go through the mini-secretarial school necessary to write for the modern newspaper. (Mercifully, for two-fingered newspaper typists to set in their ways to learn new tricks, most papers are not burdened with the newfangled systems yet; The Reporter-Telegram is the only Oestexas journal I know computerized from the reporter to the press.)

Actually, it's not all that bad. My first column in the computer mode only took about an hour and a half to type. And the great advantage, of course (aside from time saved in repunching copy), is that the reporter's original copy is scanned electronically and set in type by "Charlie," so there's one less opportunity for the typos that hound every publication.

And, since my copy has always been the bane of typesetters, it'll be nice to have it handled to a large extent by an entity that won't scowl and utter epithets in the course of getting these "meanderings" into print.

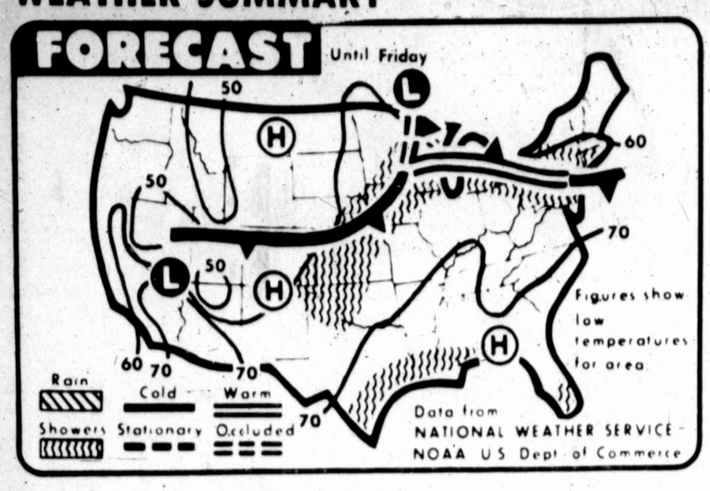

One thing I like: my desk ended up in the Sports Department of the newsroom, an area where I feel at home despite years of trying to figure out the difference between a tackle and a guard. But I have covered lots of six-man and Class D-Minus sports and I think nothing's much more exciting on a Friday night in the fall than a tough game between Paint Rock and Christoval or the like.

I'm afraid I got to be a jinx in sports coverage for the late lamented OESTE Magazine: I covered the state championship grid game the Mojo lost in Cowboy Stadium last winter and the Lone Star Conference cage championship Angelo State handed to Brownwood's Howard Payne.

But I hope Sports Honcho Ted Battles will let me sneak onto the sidelines for a game or two this fall.

By that time, I should have this #!?-#%! computer system figured out, and I might even be able to get something in print about the game.

Fares are key, Southwest says

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — If Southwest Airlines is granted its service route into Midland-Odessa, its lower fares will not severely damage already-established air carriers in the area, a witness said Wednesday.

John Eichner, whose New York firm made a traffic study for Southwest, said under questioning by Midland City Attorney Joe Nuessle that if Braniff and Texas International can meet Southwest's fares, the two lines will not be carrying fewer passengers.

Nuessle represented Midland, which withdrew its opposition to to Southwest earlier this year and participated in questioning as an interested party rather than as intervenor.

Eichner testified that federally-certified carriers can compete with Southwest (an intrastate line) by lowering their air fares, but Texas International attorney James Wilson said Braniff and Texas International, both of which are protesting Southwest's application for expanded service, tried earlier to compete by lowering fares in the Rio Grande Valley but could not operate on intrastate fares.

Southwest, which already serves Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Harlingen, is seeking authorization from the Texas Aeronautics Commission to start passenger service to Midland-Odessa, Lubbock, El Paso, Corpus Christi and Austin.

"If the airlines lower their fares, they'll have more traffic and more revenue than if they didn't lower their fares," Eichner said, noting that lower fares would encourage more people to fly and improve markets for all of the state's passenger lines.

However, Texas International and Braniff maintain that Southwest would divert up to 75 per cent of the passengers they currently serve in those areas. They believe even if Southwest's service increased total passenger volume throughout the state, that carrier would be the only one to benefit from increased passenger fares.

For example, in the Dallas to Midland market, Southwest — if certified — would take 56.4 per cent of the new market; 46.8 per cent of the Dallas-Lubbock market; 31 per cent of the Dallas-El Paso market; 44.6 per cent of the Dallas-Corpus Christi market and 41.6 per cent of the Dallas-Austin market, a Southwest study indicates.

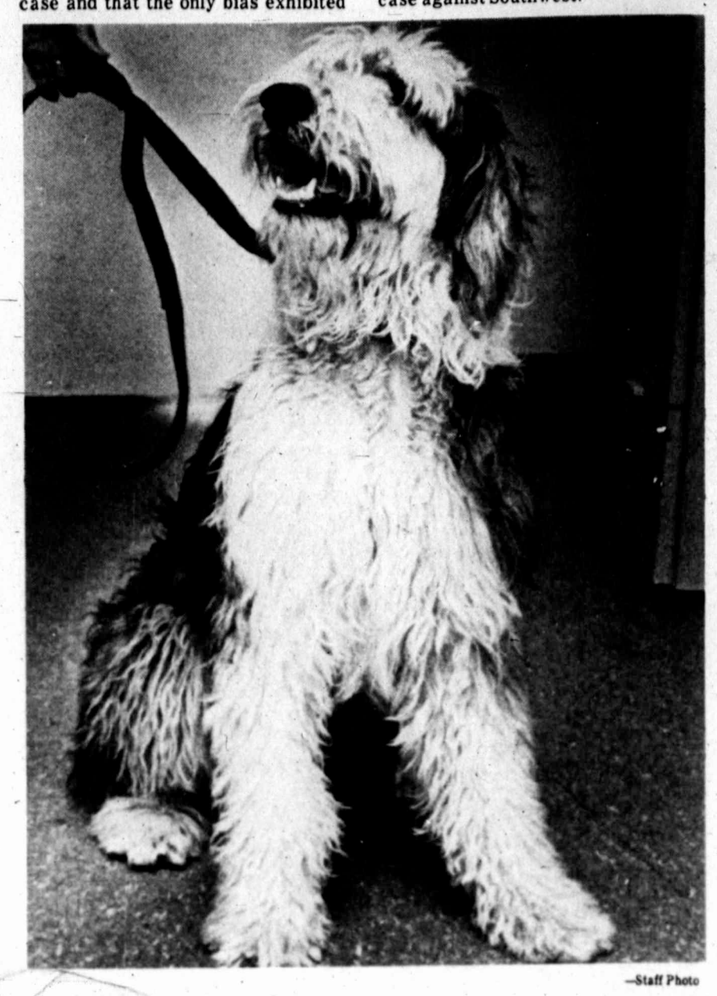

Eichner testified that although Braniff and Texas International may be uncomfortable trying to meet Southwest's fares, the other two carriers can keep many of the passengers because of the two lines' scheduling advantage and because both are able to fly into Dallas - Fort Worth Regional Airport while Southwest can serve only Love Field.

In other action, Southwest's attorney Herbert Kelleher denied Wilson's charges that the Texas Aeronautics Commission is favorably biased toward Southwest's application.

Wilson had charged that a commission order that Texas International provide Southwest with pre-hearing information was unfair, since Southwest had not been ordered to supply the same kind information in last year's dispute between the airlines over service to the Rio Grande Valley.

However, Kelleher said that Southwest had provided information in the case and that the only bias exhibited by the Texas Aeronautics Commission favors the public which "is being eaten up daily by CAB fare increases."

The hearing has been recessed until Monday, when the City of Fort Worth is scheduled to begin presenting its case against Southwest.

Flash floods are possible

Thunderstorms heavy enough to prompt a flash flood watch pummeled parts of South Texas today.

Showers fell from the Pecos River Valley in West Texas into the central part of the state and near the Middle and Upper Texas Coast, the Associated Press said.

The flash flood watch covered a section west of a line from near Austin to 30 miles south of Eagle Pass.

Around daybreak, however, the thunderstorms appeared to be tapering off into moderate showers or light rain, much of it from south of Sonora to Del Rio and nearly 50 miles into Mexico.

While clouds covered much of South and Central Texas, skies were mostly clear in the northeast and northwest parts of the state.

Eary morning temperatures ranged from 79 degrees at Galveston on the coast down to 63 at Lubbock on the South Plains. Wednesday's top marks went as high as 95 at Wichita Falls.

Tools taken from business

Saws, wrenches, drills and other tools worth an estimated $438 were taken from A&A Welders, 3004 Garden City Highway, sometime between 6 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday, police report.

Police said entry was gained by cutting a hole in the tin in a rear door.

FIRES

A fire at 1408 S. Terrell St. Wednesday night resulted in moderate damage to a ceiling.

A two-by-four in the attic was the object burning. The fire department said a light fixture probably caused the fire.

A grass fire was reported Wednesday afternoon at 905 Holly Dr.

City, county discuss ambulance service

By DEBBIE PIERCE

Representatives of the governing bodies for the City of Midland and Midland County put their heads together Wednesday to discuss emergency ambulance service.

Although no official action waa taken at the session suggested by Judge Barbara Culver, both groups agreed to take up the matter individually during their respective regular meetings.

City councilman Mark Martin announced the city's ambulance service was going well, with better performance than originally expected. But the city's temporary agreement with the county regarding emergency ambulance calls within the county expires Aug. 1.

But, at the recommendation of commissioner Durward Wright, both groups agreed to discuss individually the possibility of the county contributing $10,000 to the city for the ambulance service this first year. At the year's end, Wright proposed, a meeting could be held to review progress of the service.

"This thing may make money, go into the hole or break even — we don't have any track record to follow here," he explained.

Wright suggested both governing bodies put on their agendas consideration of extending the existing emergency service contract 30 days to Sept. 1. The city attorney and county attorney could then draw up an agreement on the county's contribution and the bodies later could hold a review session of the service's operation.

City councilmen attending the session were Martin, Thane Akins, Carroll Thomas and Charles Tighe; commissioners court representatives for the meeting were Judge Culver, Wright, John Thomas and Charlie Welch.

Other city representatives attending were City Secretary James McCullough, Finance Director Robert Massengale, City Manager James Brown, and Community Development Coordinator Mike Butler. Another county represetative at the meeting was County Attorney Les Acker.

Bill Cogdell of 201 W. Florida Ave. appeared at the session on behalf of the public interest, he said. Cogdell suggested the city not charge for ambulance service, that it upgrade its traffic system to reduce the fatality rate and that it purchase a snorkel for fires in tall buildings.

No action was taken on Cogdell's suggestions.

Brown said a collection rate of 30 per cent for June and 39 per cent to date had been received from emergency ambulance calls. He noted, however, that a transfer problem was developing and that the city originally had not intended to transfer persons within the ambulances.

Tighe proposed the burden of ambulance service be placed equally on all taxpayers — both in the city and in the county. He said people living outside the city limits should bear their fair cost of city-county services.

But Welch noted the past decision to split various joint ventures, such as fire responsibilities and the library, was wise. He said that, with the city's expanded service from the ambulances, the city is "getting up to where the county is" in its library service.

Wright added that $500,000 is planned in expansions for the library, that the city receives five times the county's share of revenue sharing money and that the city also receives a city sales tax from county taxpayers though the county receives nothing.

He suggested a study committee be appointed by Judge Culver and Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. to discuss joint ventures of the two governing bodies. No action was taken on the suggestion, however.

The third building, actually an addition to the present occupational-technical building, will be ready by Aug. 1, 1977 according to the bid specifications, Geren said.

This building will include laboratory facilities for new occupational programs, as well as classroom space. Geren said several of the areas that will be used for labs later may be used as classrooms until the curriculum expands to include all programs.

In response to a question from board member Reagan Legg, Geren said there will be no entrance from the present building to the addition. "It's two separate areas," Geren said.

Geren told the board he will be ready to submit plans for bidding Aug. 15 so that the board may receive the bids Sept. 14.

He said he believes there will be a larger number of bidders than for the previous project. "I think there will be interest (from contractors)," Geren said.

In other action, the board approved traffic and parking regulations for the campus.

Langford said the rules had been formulated after a year of study. "We think we have something we can live with," he said.

More visible signs will be posted designating parking areas for faculty, students and visitors, although the number of signs will be kept to a minimum to avoid marring the campus landscape, Langford said.

Citations will be issued to violators of the regulations. Those persons with vehicles registered on campus will forfeit parking privileges until a $1 reinstatement fee is paid but visitors will simply be asked to sign and return the citation without a fee.

After 30 days, violations will be turned over to municipal traffic court.

Camal Dakil, dean of students, said visitors are encouraged to come to the campus and that the board does not want to penalize them for violations, except in "flagrant" cases, such as cars parked in areas designated for the handicapped.

In other communication to the board, Langford said the tennis courts will be closed for approximately 60 days because weeds are growing through the surface of all the courts.

He said the contractor will attempt to resterilize the soil beneath the courts and repair the damage.

Another problem on the campus is a sinking spot in the pavement at the main entrance to the campus. Langford said an effort is being made to determine the cause of the problem.

But the catch was that a landing in Cydonia is almost certain to be more fraught with possible dangers. Because of the relationship between earth and Mars as they are oriented in space, earth-bound radar cannot be used to detect rough terrain in the north.

Scientists relied heavily on radar echoes to find the smooth plain where Viking 1 landed safely. Radar had been used to study the southern alternative site and it appeared reasonably smooth.

Therefore, Viking 2 will rely mainly on photography from orbit to scout a

Judge indicted for bribery

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County Grand Jury has indicted State Dist. Court Judge Garth Bates on bribery charges, alleging the 61-year-old jurist took $59,000 to keep a defendant in his court out of jail.

Ed Jay Riklin, 46, an insurance salesman, also was indicted in the case. Riklin is accused of being the go-between in the alleged bribe payment.

The indictment, returned Wednesday, charges that Nukie Fontenot, a defendant in Bates' court, paid the bribe last Friday in return for representations from the judge that he would use influence to keep Fontenot out of prison.

Fontenot, a pawn shop operator, was set for trial before Bates in August on charges of receiving and concealing $90,000 in goods stolen from a jewelry salesman. Fontenot was not charged in the bribery case.

Bates, 61, and Riklin remain free on $118,000 bond each. Conviction on the second-degree felony indictment is punishable by two to 20 years in prison and a fine up to $10,000.

Administrative Dist. Judge Max Rogers of Huntsville named retired Judge John M. Barron of Bryan to preside at the Aug. 2 arraignment for Bates.

Judge Peter Solito originally was scheduled to preside in the case, but he notified Rogers he was stepping aside Wednesday to avoid any conflict questions over the trial of a fellow judge. The case then was assigned to Barron.

C.H. "Chip" Taylor, foreman of the grand jury, said no special pressure was felt in the investigation.

"We are just doing our duty," Taylor said. "We know what our responsibilities are and we reacted to those responsibilities."

Bob Bennett and John Holmes, of the district attorney's special crimes bureau, would not comment on whether their probe is complete.

The bureau reportedly plans to interrogate several more persons in the investigation, although there are no other reported suspects in the case.

The probe started several months ago when a Houston vice officer approached the bureau with information he had received about reported bribe offers to defendants.

The investigation reportedly included tape recorded conversations among Bates, Fontenot and Riklin which were made with the consent of Fontenot.

Grand jurors returned the indictment after hearing one witness, W.S. Bruce, an advertising executive, identified as a former business associate of Bates.

Bates reportedly is on vacation this week and Judge Perry Pickett of Midland is substituting on the bench for the rest of the week.

Baffles might've prevented crash

HOUSTON (AP) — Baffles placed inside tanker trucks to prevent lateral surge of liquid cargo might have prevented the crash of a ammonia-filled truck at a busy Houston intersection May 11 that killed six persons.

The testimony came Wednesday during the second day of hearings by the National Transportation Safety Board into the causes of the crash and explosion of a tanker owned by Transport Co. of Texas.

"Lateral surge is a well known problem," said Benjamin Swan, a marine safety engineer with the safety board. "It's well understood."

Swan said the mathematics of the problem are the same for trucks and ships. He said a contributing factor to the accident appeared to be the shifting of the ammonia to the right as the driver tried to make the lefthand curve on the elevated freeway ramp.

Tanks such as the ill-fated Transport Co. tanker are equipped with baffles to minimize the forward shift of liquid cargo during the braking process.

Charles Hoffman, a member of the board's technical staff, said the board may recommend that longitudinal baffles also be installed on the interior of tanks.

Swan used diagrams to illustrate how the shifting of a liquid cargo in a tank changes the center of gravity and increases the overturning forces on the truck.

Other evidence introduced showed the truck dirver William Gregory Schmidt, 28, who died in the crash, was traveling at least 12 miles per hour faster than the recommended 40 mph speed posted by the state.

Dale Marvel, a traffic engineer with the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, insisted the truck could have made the curve safely despite any shift in cargo, if it had been going the recommended speed.

"About five million trucks have used that ramp since it was first completed in 1961," Marvel said. "This is the only one that's ever gone through the rail."

Houston suit object

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Fred Hofheinz says a suit brought against the city of Houston by the Texas Water Quality Board and the Clear Creek Basin Authority could slow down the city's progress in solving its sewage problems.

The two organizations filed suit against the city in state district court Wednesday alleging the city dumps tons of raw sewage daily into area bayous.

The suit was filed after basin authority members heard a report which alleged that "high concentrations of polio virus" have been detected in sewage waste being discharged from Houston treatment plants.

Hofheinz said the city now is engaged in a $500 million treatment plant expansion program which is the largest public works program in the history of the city.

The suit will not speed up a solution to the problem, Hofheinz said, and concievably could slow it down.

'Jeans' capture young Russians

By ERMA BOMBECK

Of all the styles the United States has to offer, it seems incongruous that "jeans" would capture the imagination of young Russians.

It has been rumored jeans are capitalistic decadence, moralistically hostile to the socialist way of life and make men and women sartorially equal.

If any of that means you can't cough in them, they're right.

A pair of jeans aren't what I would recommend as a friendly hand across the sea. You can't build a relationship for lasting peace on something that shrinks three inches around the waist, two inches in one leg, three inches in the other, fades all over the towels, and has to be washed 287 times before you can sit in them.

It's the only thing in the last 200 years the Russians don't lay claim to having invented. That should tell you something.

Frankly, my sympathy goes out to the Russian mother whose child brings home his first pair of American jeans.

"What are they?" she asks.

"They're dzhinsys, Mama."

"How much did you pay for them?"

"Fifty rubles."

"FIFTY RUBLES! That's 65 American dollars. For a pair of work overalls your father changes out of before he comes into the house!"

"What else do they do besides stand in the corner by themselves?"

"I'll get you a pair, Mama, and you'll see how comfortable they are."

The next afternoon, Mama is so comfortable she can barely breathe. From the crotch to the waistband, the jeans measure six inches. Mama measures twelve inches. Her blouse pops out of the jeans every time she clears her throat. When she walks, her legs sound like the German army marching into Poland.

"Sit down, Mama," suggests her son.

"I am sitting," she says. "And you say everyone in America is wearing them?"

"Yes, it makes them feel independent and free."

As her gripper pops open, Mama frowns. "Maybe we underestimate the Americans. Maybe they're tougher than we think."

DEAR ABBY

Three has always been a crowd, so lose him

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 and Bob is 27. We've been dating for over a year, and I am very much attracted to him, but I don't seem to be making any headway.

You see, whenever we go out, Bob always brings another fellow along. We have never been absolutely alone— —just the two of us.

I've become very much upset with having an extra man on all our dates, and I want to do something about it.

Should I confront Bob with my feelings? Or would that be a mistake?—THREE IS A CROWD

DEAR THREE: A confrontation isn't necessary. If Bob were interested in a romantic involvement with you, you wouldn't have to insist on being alone with him. Three's a crowd. Lose him.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I often discuss remarrying, but we always get hung up on the question of money. Her net worth has grown substantially since our divorce, and mine has gone way down.

She feels that in a remarriage, her assets should remain hers as a sort of security, and that I should contribute the same as before.

I feel that if a couple marries, there should be a complete merger. In other words, since I was the sole source of support in our first marriage because I was "up," so to speak, financially, she should be the mainstay now that our situations are reversed.

We are both in our 50s and semi-retired and have no dependents. What do you say?—FOULED UP IN FLA.

DEAR FOULED: Your letter leaves too many questions unanswered. How long were you married? Why were you divorced? You say that her net worth has appreciated substantially since your divorce, and yours has gone "way down." Why? Did you gamble or make risky investments, or were you merely a victim of the times?

She may be justified in her concern about her "security," but knowing so few of the facts, I hesitate to offer any advice.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two children, 5 and 7. A very good friend of ours comes over about once a week for dinner and because he is such a good storyteller, the children always insist that he tell them a story.

In these stories, the bad guy always wins. I told him to please tell the kids stories in which the good guys win. He did, but the kids didn't like those stories nearly as much as the ones in which the bad guys win, so our friend went back to his old method.

I say it's a bad influence on children, but my husband insists it doesn't matter. I would like to know what you and some of your readers think.—UNSURE IN IDYLLWILD

DEAR UNSURE: I vote with you.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been in heaven for four years. I was 8 years old when the Lord took her away, but I can never forget a certain happening. She once asked my sister or myself to do a small chore for her, like carrying out the trash. We argued so much about whose turn it was to do it that Mama sent us both outside and she did it herself.

Please put this in your column for girls who are lucky enough to have their mothers. Love,—MISSING MAMA

By JOHNA BLINN
Los Angeles Times

VALENCIA, Calif.—Tom Smothers, of the Smothers brothers, is an enthusiastic and outgoing man who refers to himself as a "sneaky cook." Wearing blue jeans and Bicentennial T-shirt, he hungrily dug into a lunch of beef teriyaki, rice mnd his favorite libation, dry white wine. Tom and his brother, Dick, are appearing here at Magic Mountain. We talked in the Four Winds, the nifty Oriental restaurant on top of the mountain here.

"I'm a Chinese cook. I even have a wok. I was a vegetarian for a while until I snuck into Chinese cooking," he said. That was eight years ago. These days, Tom travels with his wok, vegetable steamer, several sharp knives and his soy sause, even though it means carrying an extra valise. "Anywhere I can, I go out and buy up a bunch of fresh vegetables. California spoils you because vegetables out here are so good." He keeps two homes, one in the Sonoma wine country, an hour's ride north of San Francisco, the other a small apartment in Los Angeles.

Tom is fond of all Oriental food, particularly sushi (raw fish served on a bed of cooked rice). "I love raw food. I became enlightened about eight years ago. I got a little high one time on wine and became so uninhibited I learned to eat a whole different style of food! I could never eat an oyster or a snail before that, because of their textures. Now I eat raw fish, quail eggs, you name it!" He does not consider himself a gourmet: "What I like is just good, healthy food in its natural form."

Tom is a casual cook. "I just get together a whole mess of vegetables—asparagus, broccoli, zucchini, whatever I can find. Then I'll take some flank steak and cook it in the wok after I've marinated it in soy sauce. I lift out the meat and throw in vegetables and then put the meat back in."

Celebrity Cookbook

Cooking great Chinese food, he feels, is mainly a matter of timing. "Whenever I haven't cooked for a while, I overdo my vegetables."

Tom's brother is also a devoted Oriental cook. "Dickie's a better chef than I am. He's particularly good with shrimp." Both Smothers brothers lost weight when they became fans of Oriental cooking. "Dickie lost 20 pounds. I lost twelve. Now I only gain when I eat junk food."

Neither of the brothers entertains often, but Tom sometimes cooks for friends when he's in Hollywood. "I've lived in all kinds of places but now I keep this nice, inexpensive little apartment with a $25 stove and $25 refrigerator and I love it! When I go there, I know the first thing I'm going to have to do is go out and buy some vegetables and reawaken that sleeping place! I know I'll have to get into that kitchen and cook one big meal to get things going again."

Dick and Tom both enjoy their music. They are moving into the country scene, and are currently satirizing Latin singers and diso music. During the late 60s, their special target was politics and folk music. Both believe strongly in humor that reflects the times. "Political satire is hard to do now because you can't get a handle on it. People are more interested in a broad-based, philosophical approach to politics, rather than in specifics."

Tom is branching out. In August, he will take on the lead in "Play It Again, Sam," at the Cherry County Playhouse, owned by Pat Paulsen, in Travers City, Mich. He was once offered the same part in a national company, but turned it down. "When I look back, I see many things I should have done and didn't do, like movies—MS for example. "There are so many opportunities. It's hard to pick the right ones." People have often spoken of Tom as a worrier. "No more so than any other performer," he says. "It's true I used to worry a lot during performances about the technical execution of such things as lighting, but now that I'm older, I realize nobody's perfect. People come and go in this business, but then there are the major stars, like Flip Wilson, who just hang in there. Performers like Flip survive becauze they have a nice vision, a proper perspective. They don't chase their careers. They are not anxious about them. They don't start manipulating and trying to be political to get somewhere, and when things do get slow for them, they don't panic."

Tom is eager to realize his own untried potential, but says, "Right now is a time for holding back. I have to wait until I feel a rhythm, something coming up. If I start grabbing at things, I'll get into wrong places. Anything that's happened to us, all the good projects, have been almost accidental. I've certainly done, some projects I shouldn't have done, but disaster or lack of success have their compensations, because they change your mental outlook and you compensate for that and go in another direction."

Many of Tom's thoughts about success and his work stem from his reading. "I'm always trying to improve myself. I read a lot, lately books on Zen, like Alan Watts' 'Spirit of Zen: A Way of Life.' I'm fascinated by one book in particular: 'Zen and The Art of Motorcycle Maintenance,' by Robert Pirsig. It has little to do with taking came of motorcycles but a lot of fascinating p.hilosophy. The first lesson in Zen deals with acceptance. Just let things happen!

"Hey, do you use much ginger in your cooking?" he asked, returning suddenly to food. "I put ginger in all kinds of things. The flavor kind of sneaks up on you!"

STIR-FRY BEEF AND BROCCOLI
Serves 4

1 lb. beef flank steak
¼ cup naturally brewed soy sauce
1 tsp. minced fresh, ginger root or ½ tsp. ground ginger
¾ lb. broccoli
3 tbsps. peanut or safflower oil
1 medium onion, peeled, cut in chunks or thin rings
½ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. cornstarch
1 cup beef broth
1 cup bean sprouts (preferably fresh) or minced celery few drops sesame oil

Cut flank across the grain with sharp knife or meat cleaver into 3-inch lengths. Combine soy sauce and ginger root (or ground ginger); marinate beef in soy sauce mixture 15 to 20 minute. Lift out beef; reserve marinade. Divide broccoli into flowerets, slice into ½-inch pieces. Cut stalks into ½-inch thick crosswise slices (broccoli should measure about 2 cups). Stir-fry beef in oil in wok or large skillet over high heat 2 minutes. Lift out beef. Add broccoli, onion and salt; stir-fry 1 minute. Combine cornstarch, beef broth and remaining marinade; stir to form a Smooth paste. Add cornstarch mixture, bean sprouts, sesame oil and beef to hot vegetables. Stir and bring to boil to thicken sauce. Serve at once over hot cooked rice.

AFTERTHOUGHTS: Tom advises, "Feel free to improvise! Substitute other vegetables for broccoli, such as Chinese pea pods, water chestnuts, mushrooms, zucchini squash or asparagus."

BEEF TERIYAKI
Serves 6 to 8

For teriyaki sauce:
½ cup naturally brewed soy sauce
¼ cup dry white wine
scant 2 tbsps. sugar or honey
½ tsp. ground ginger or 1 tsp. minced fresh ginger root, optional
1 clove garlic, crushed

Combine all ingredients. Set aside.

For the beef:
2 lbs. tender beef (sirloin, T-Bone or Porterhouse)
1 green pepper, cut in chunks
12 large mushrooms, washed, pat-dried, stemmed
1 small onion, peeled, cut in chunks or 12 small pearl onions, peeled, parboiled a few minutes

Cut beef across the grain into 1-inch cubes with sharp knife or meat cleaver. Marinade beef in sauce 20 to 25 minutes, turning once. Thread beef on skewers alternating beef with pieces of pepper, mushroom and onion. Broil teriyaki on hibachi 4 to 5 inches from hot coals, 3 to 5 minutes per side, turning once. Brush often with remaining sauce. Serve at once. Excellent for back-yard picnic as main dish or hearty appetizer.

AFTERTHOUGHTS: If desired, do not slice steak; marinate it whole for 2 hours. Cook vegetablee in packet of aluminum foil brushed lightly with marinade. For unusual touch, omit ginger and season meat liberally with curry sauce mixed with szechuan pepper (it's hot and spicy and delicious!) Grill over hot coals.

Parents to rescue

CHICO, Calif. (AP) — When Notre Dame Parochial School was faced with increasing expenses last year, the parents were willing to do almost anything to keep from cutting back the educational program for their youngsters. So they formed the Parents Custodial Association and took over cleaning duties.

Eightly families in the school either donate a three-hour block of time each month or pay $7.50 each month. About half pay, the others work. From the money raised they bought supplies and equipment.

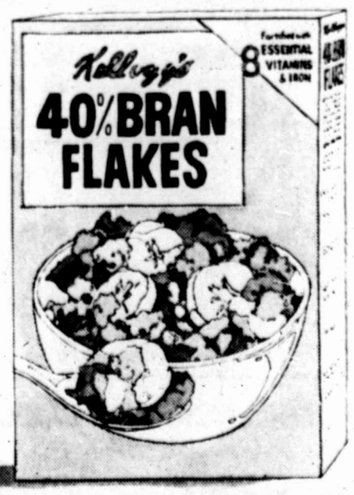

Larry Dion, who heads the association, said the former professional cleaning service hired by the school helped them learn the ropes.

13 IRA suspects nabbed in manhunt

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irish police said today they have arrested 13 suspected Irish Republican Army men in the biggest manhunt in Irish history, mounted for the killers of British Ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs.

The ambassador was killed by a bomb detonated under his car just after it left his home on the southern outskirts of Dublin Wednesday. The blast seriously injured British diplomat Brian Cubbon, killed Cubbon's secretary, 26-year-old Judith Cooke, and wounded the ambassador's Irish chauffeur, Brian O'Driscoll.

Police spokesmen declined to identify the arrested men or to say what charges they may face.

At Londonderry in Northern Ireland, the British army arrested Rory O'Brady, president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, and Sean Keenan, a battalion commander of IRA Provisionals. Police said the army had handed the pair over and the men were being questioned.

Police arrested David O'Connell, 39, reputedly a past commander of the IRA Provisional wing, and Joe O'Neill, a political organizer, in a Dublin suburb a few hours after the ambush.

Nobody has claimed responsibility for the bombing, but police blamed the IRA's Provisional wing or a splinter group linked to it. The Provisionals are waging a guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The IRA Provisional wing attacked the homes of a number of British civil officials in Northern Ireland earlier this year. It said they "share as much responsibility for the oppression in our country as the warlords of the British army."

Several thousand Irish troops and police searched for the assassins. Police manned roadblocks outside Dublin 24 hours after the bombing. A reward of $36,000 was offered for the killers.

A police spokesman said they were hunting for three men seen running from the ambush scene. It was not known if any of the men were among the 13 arrested.

Police said the bomb was planted in a drain under the road and was detonated by remote control by at least three men hidden in a thicket about 200 yards away.

Police officials said they suspected the terrorists were after Cubbon and not the ambassador. Cubbon, permanent undersecretary of state in Northern Ireland and the top British civil servant there, was on a visit to the Irish republic from his post in Belfast.

A senior police officer said, "The ambassador had been here for less than two weeks. It's entirely likely the people responsible for his death were after someone else in the car."

"We feel there was no real reason for the IRA to murder the ambassador, even though he was Britain's representative here," another police official said. "We believe there are strong grounds for suspecting he was not the real target of this outrage."

Cubbon and Miss Cooke arrived in Dublin Tuesday night. He and the ambassador were on their way to see Foreign Minister Garrett Fitzgerald when the car was blown up.

St. Vincent's Hospital said Cubbon was in an intensive care unit with a fractured spine and other serious injuries.

The assassination was expected to prompt British pressure on the Dublin government for a major crackdown on the Provisionals, who use the republic as a base for their operations in Northern Ireland. British Prime Minister James Callaghan told the House of Commons the killers were the "common enemy" of both the British and Irish governments and must be destroyed.

Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave said the murder of the ambassador was an "atrocity ... that fills all decent Irish people with shame." He said his government "is determined that all the resources at its disposal will be used to ensure that the perpetrators are brought to justice and face the full rigors of the law."

Reform bill wins approval of Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate legislation that is advancing through Congress would force members of Congress and other federal officials to disclose their sources of income for the first time, and reform-minded House Democrats are pressing for quick approval.

The Watergate Reform Act, the first bill to respond to the scandals that brought down the administration of President Richard Nixon two years ago, was approved Wednesday in the Senate 91 to 5.

The measure, sent to the House, would require financial disclosure and create a permanent office of special prosecutor to investigate misdeeds at the top levels of government's executive, judicial and legislative branches.

The financial disclosure requirements would apply to federal judges, high administrators, the president and the vice president, as well as members of Congress.

Although some politicians make their sources of income and tax returns public, no federal law now requires them to do so.

Shortly before the Senate vote, rank and file House Democrats demanded that they be allowed to vote on financial disclosure during this election year.

The House Democratic Caucus approved a resolution making it party policy that such a vote be taken.

The Senate bill also would prohibit presidents from naming top officials of their campaign to serve as attorney general or deputy attorney general.

John Mitchell became attorney general after managing Nixon's 1968 campaign. He resigned to head Nixon's re-election effort in the spring of 1972, but quit shortly after the June 1972 break-in at Democratic National Headquarters in the Watergate office building here. Mitchell was later convicted with other top Nixon aides in the cover-up trial.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who offered the amendment to bar political operatives from the top Justice Department posts, said "it has become nearly standard practice for presidents to push this important and sensitive office into the partisan political arena by naming their campaign managers attorney general."

President Ford supported the bill creating a permanent special prosecutor. His reaction to Bentsen's amendment was not known.

The special prosecutor would be appointed by the president to a single three-year term and would be authorized to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by the president, vice president, attorney general, other Cabinet members, the director of the FBI, federal judges and members of Congress.

In addition, allegations involving White House and congressional staff members could be referred to him.

Vietnam to allow Americans to leave next month

WASHINGTON — Vietnam notified several members of Congress Wednesday that Americans stranded in South Vietnam when the war ended last year will be able to depart in August with their wives and children.

The State Department estimates there are 30 to 40 Americans in Vietnam. But there is uncertainty about what the Communist authorities in Hanoi will count as "wives and children" entitled to repatriation, because some have large families and children from previous marriages.

For several months there have been reports about the impending release of this last group of Americans, whom the Vietnamese call "the American bloc," caught in the Communist takeover and U.S. evacuation from South Vietnam in April, 1975.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and George McGovern (D-S.D.), and Rep. G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery (D-Miss.), chairman of the House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia, received notification Wednesday of the impending release from the Vietnamese ambassador in Paris, Vo Van Sung.

Kennedy also received a telephoned message, in English, saying:

"The American bloc in South Vietnam will be authorized to leave South Vietnam, according to their wishes, with their wives and children, beginning Aug. 1, 1976, and with the help of the UNHCR (United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees)."

These Americans are described as a mixture of people, including some businessmen and church workers, who were unable to get out when the war's end cut off their exit route, or who chose to stay, or Americans who rushed to South Vietnam to extricate wives or fiances and were trapped in Saigon.

Just before the messages arrived Wednesday, Under Secretary of State Philip C. Habib had told the Montgomery committee, "Despite assurances given to this committee by North Vietnamese officials that all Americans would be free to leave, a substantial number are still stranded in Saigon."

The State Department received no official notification of the release, which was sent only to the members of Congress who had been active, independently, in urging the release and also urging the Ford administration to normalize its relations with Vietnam.

North Vietnam and South Vietnam are now officially unified, under Communist rule, with no diplomatic relations yet established with the United States, although there have been intermittent diplomatic contacts between Washington and Hanoi.

A State Department spokesman said Wednesday night that "we have long sought release of the Americans and their families, and we would obviously welcome that."

There are "continuing discussions" under way, he said, on a broad range of American-Vietnamese problems, especially an accounting of Americans missing in action.

Kennedy, who has been active in repatriating Americans released earlier from Vietnam, said Wednesday, "It is time for our government to take some real steps in moving from a position of hostility and neglect toward Vietnam to a policy of reconciliation and normalization."

McGovern said, "I hope our own government will now be equally forthcoming in is dealings with Vietnam" and allow Vietnam "its rightful place in the world community — including diplomatic recognition, U.N. membership and direct discussions on all outstanding issues between the United States and Vietnam."

Montgomery said that last Tuesday he sent telegrams to Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong and Ambassador Vo Van Sung "expressing distress" about delays in the release of the last Americans.

Montgomery told a news conference his subcommittee will follow up to determine if "all American dependents detained in Saigon" will be permitted to leave. He said some American businessmen may choose to remain.

Reagan VP preference of many Ford delegates

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's delegates to the Republican National Convention who are expressing their preference name Ronald Reagan and Nelson Rockefeller most often for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.

But both men have said — with varying degrees of firmness — that they would not take the vice presidential nomination at the convention opening in Kansas City in three and half weeks.

Reagan is going all out for the right to recommend the party's vice presidential candidate himself. He lags slightly behind Ford in the tight delegate race for the GOP presidential nomination.

The first choice for vice president of the Reagan delegates with a preference was former Texas governor and Nixon adminstration official John Connally. On the strength of this Reagan support alone, Connally was the contender most often named for the second spot.

Ford meets today with Rockefeller, and later with the New York GOP convention delegation, which includes a large number of uncommitted delegates who may be a key to Ford's chances to beat Reagan.

The Associated Press delegate survey found only about 40 per cent of the 1,982 delegates interviewed gave a preference for the No. 2 spot.

Of those Ford delegates who said they had a choice, Reagan was at the top of the list. Of the 97 delegates naming the former California governor for the second spot, 78 were Ford backers. Most of the rest were uncommitted delegates.

Just about a week ago, however, Reagan made as strong a statement as anyone could want about the vice presidency.

"Under no circumstances whatsoever will I accept the vice presidential nomination," Reagan said in response to a question in Newark, N.J.

Ford has said he has not ruled anyone out of the vice presidential race if he is nominated, including Reagan and Rockefeller.

Continuing the current line-up with Rockefeller as vice president was the next ranking choice of the Ford delegates with a preference. Rockefeller was named by 66 Ford delegates for vice president, most of the 75 delegates who named him.

But Rockefeller took himself out of consideration for the vice presidency last year, after some Ford supporters said he was a liability in Ford's race with Reagan.

Reagan has ruled Rockefeller out of any position in his administation because of "philosophical differences."

Connally was ranked No. 1 among the delegates, the vice presidential choice of 224 delegates. Most of Connally's support — 71 per cent — came from delegates committed to support Reagan for president.

Only 29 of Ford's delegates said they would like to see Connally as vice president, putting him in fifth place among the President's backers, in contrast to the first place he ranked with Reagan backers.

A Reagan-Ford ticket has far less support than a Ford-Reagan team that is supported by some Ford backers.

Only 25 delegates — all Reagan supporters — named Ford for vice president. That is about a third of the delegates who said they would like to see a Ford-Reagan ticket.

Reagan has not included Ford on his list of possible vice presidential contenders. Ford has not given any indication he would even consider the second spot.

Following Connally and Reagan in the AP survey results were Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee with 93 delegate mentions and Rockefeller with 75. Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson was named by 60 delegates. Ford and Sen. William Brock III of Tennessee were each named by 25 delegates.

Sen. Charles Percy and Rep. Philip Crane, both of Illinois, were picked by 23 delegates apiece for the second spot. Rounding out the top 10 delegate choices was James Buckley.

Opponents of B1 bomber score victory in Senate panel vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as Pentagon chief Donald Rumsfeld was exhorting Congress not to "inhibit" defense spending, opponents of the B1 bomber won another victory in their fight to delay production of the aircraft.

By a one-vote margin, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted Wednesday to hold up funds for the bomber until Feb. 1 to give whoever is elected president in November a chance to decide whether to go ahead with the plane.

President Ford and his GOP rival, Ronald Reagan, favor production of the B1, but Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter has expressed reservations about the need for the supersonic bomber.

Rumsfeld called the decision "unsound." Rockwell International's B1 division said 3,000 workers would be laid off if the delay takes effect.

Sen. John Culver said the move was "a clear-cut victory for the American taxpayer and common sense in defense spending."

B1 supporters are expected to try to reverse the committee vote when the defense appropriations bill reaches the Senate floor.

Defense Secretary Rumsfeld, at a news conference, urged Congress to restore $2.4 billion in Navy shipbuilding and research funds and to support Ford's veto of a $3.3-billion military construction bill.

The House was to vote on the veto today.

"We have heard a great deal of talk about increasing U.S. military strength and eliminating waste in defense spending. The issue is whether that will be allowed to happen, as President Ford has advocated, or whether it will prove to be just conversation because we will be inhibited from doing that by the Congress," said Rumsfeld.

Examiners think defunct bank loan went to Eagle Pass man

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A $105,000 loan by the defunct Citizens State Bank in Carrizo Springs found its way to the pockets of a prominent South Texas businessman, state banking examiners believed.

The loan was one of many written off by examiners as uncollectable shortly before State Banking Commissioner Robert Stewart declared the bank insolvent and closed it June 28.

Examiners, according to reports filed in state district court at Laredo in connection with the bank closing, said the unsecured and past due loan was made to Fernando G. Verduzco of Cuarto Cienegas, Coahuila, Mexico.

But the investigators added: "It is believed that the proceeds of this note were recieved by R. C. Harper Sr."

Harper is a prominent Eagle Pass businessman with ranching, banking and real estate interests. He also is a director of the Frontier State Bank in Eagle Pass.

Harper was indicted in 1972 by a federal grand jury on charges alleging that he conspired to export nearly seven tons of plastic explosives from the United States to Mexico.

A mistrial was later declared in federal court at New Orleans for Harper and four other men, including a man from Brooklyn, N.Y. Prosecutors seeking a new trial were rebuffed by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for attempting to use false evidence in their case.

Harper, contacted at his office in the Hotel Eagle this week, denied he received any money from Verduzco, as the banking examiners believed.

"Absolutely a bald-faced lie. A total lie," said Harper of the statement. He termed the statement "the biggest bunch of b.s. I ever heard in my life."

Harper said Verduzco is "a lifelong associate and he's a good friend of Juan Salinas. He's a very reputable rancher and would not dream of lending himself to any such thing for me or anybody else."

Juan Salinas was a brother of Enrique Salinas, an Eagle Pass businessman and principal owner of Citizens State Bank. Juan Salinas was reported killed in a plane crash in Mexico last month.

Banking examiners classified as uncollectable a total of $258,000 in loans to Juan Salinas. They were part of more than $1 million in classified Citizens State loans which examiners said the bank made to Enrique Salinas, his wife and family.

Examiners classify loans which they believe to be shaky, dangerous or uncollectable for the bank.

High prices fail to cut coffee use

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

Getting started in the morning is getting more expensive these days, if coffee is involved. But some just can't do without.

"There is no point when I would stop buying it," Carmen Elera said as she checked prices in the coffee section of a San Francisco supermarket. "I have to have my coffee in the morning."

"I have no choice," echoed Mary Pejirl in Chicago. "My husband is a big coffee drinker and has to have it regardless of the cost. If we have to cut down somewhere, it won't be coffee."

Shoppers have watched coffee prices rise 50 cents a pound or more in the past year, mostly because of a frost that struck the Brazilian coffee crop last July, the war in Angola and this year's earthquake in Guatemala.

But coffee drinkers are apparently buying just as much as ever, although they are shaving pennies where they can. Others are clipping discount coupons, using instant coffee to avoid brewing a full pot, cutting down to one cup a day, or switching to tea.

"The price increases passed on to consumers over the past year have totaled about 40 per cent, but we are still moving our best sellers or medium-priced brands," said Fred Deaux, a New Orleans grocer.

Safeway Stores, which operates 2,45 outlets in 28 states, says it hasn't noticed any changes in coffee buying pattern. And General Foods Corp., the country's largest coffee producer, says sales have held up despite the price increases, probably because some buyers are stockpiling.

"There has been absolutely no decline in coffee consumption in restaurants and very little at the retail level," said Edward Jones, who has studied the coffee situation for the Mitchell Hutchins Inc. brokerage firm in New York.

He predicts a "modest tropoff" in sales in the near future if high prices persist, but he won't estimate the size of the drop. "We're in uncharted seas," he said. "There's never been a coffee price increase approaching this magnitude."

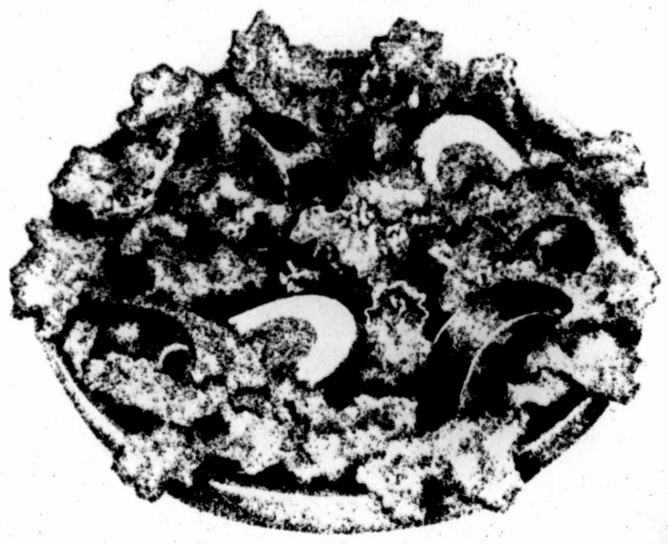

Garth Thorburn of the U.S. Agriculture Department expects a "5 to 10 per cent reduction in consumption if prices continue this high. But it hasn't happened yet."

Back in 1953 a similar frost in Brazil forced a near doubling of green coffee bean prices at one point, and coffee consumption in the United States fell slightly in 1954. It picked up again the next year.

The current trouble started on July 17 last year, when frost caused by an Antarctic cold wave settled over the delicate coffee trees in Brazil, the world's largest supplier of coffee. Nearly two-thirds of the crop, which was to be harvested this spring, was destroyed.

Sirica orders HEW to act in school cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying federal officials have "failed in their duties" to monitor desegregation, a U.S. District Court judge is ordering the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to take action against 46 school districts in every section of the country except the South.

Judge John Sirica, in an order issued Wednesday, told HEW officials to move against the school districts in the next 60 to 120 days, saying there had been enough delays.

The order could lead to withholding of federal funds from school districts that are not in compliance with federal desegregation laws.

Included in Sirica's order were school districts in New York City; Los Angeles; Chicago; Tucson, Ariz.; Omaha, Neb.; and Hartford, Conn.

Plaintiffs in the case had argued that HEW officials failed to enforce the desegregation regulations throughout the country with as much enthusiasm as in the South.

None of the school districts listed by Sirica was in the South. A similar court order involving schools only in the South was directed at HEW officials several years ago, and a government study released last month said fewer students attend "intensely segregated" schools in the South than in any other section of the country.

In response to Sirica's order, Martin H. Gerry, director of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, said the government has already taken proper actions against the 46 school districts. He contended the districts are voluntarily desegregating "in virtually all instances."

Sirica cited "substantial delays of from 1½ to 8 years" in completion of HEW investigations of compliance by the 46 school districts, "during which time the school districts involved have continued to receive federal financial assistance."

But Gerry said Sirica was ruling on the basis of old information.

"I regret that the judge felt it appropriate to take this action, particularly in light of his open acknowledgement that the record in the case before him was stale," Gerry said. "The record before the judge was indeed stale."

Gerry said 21 of the school districts cited by Sirica have voluntarily greed to compliance plans, four others are involved in enforcement procedings, one is before a federal court and HEW is preparing to take formal enforcement action against 10 others.

He said three other districts "have submitted or will soon submit voluntary compliance plans which most likely will be accepted." The investigation of New York City schools is incomplete and the "voluntary compliance process" has not been completed in the remaining districts, Gerry said.

In his order, Sirica broke the 46 districts into three categories. He ordered HEW to begin investigations of 14 districts within 60 days and initiate compliance hearings against them within 120 days if they are found to be in violation of civil rights laws. Sirica ordered hearings to be scheduled in another 26 cases.

Sirica said the final six cases involved school districts already found to be in violation. But he said HEW had failed to initiate any action against the six and ordered the department to move against them at once.

Senate approves liberalized day-care tax subsidy plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, approving a liberalized day-care tax subsidy for working parents, appears to be moving gradually toward a federal guaranteed income for the poorest Americans.

The Senate plan is not nearly as extensive as the family-assistance plan offered and rejected during the Nixon administration. But some conservatives fear the Senate may be getting there fast.

The latest step came Wednesday when the Senate voted an annual government check for certain working parents with incomes so small they owe less than $800 in federal tax.

This provision, as part of a more generous tax credit for child care, follows enactment last year of a bonus payment for families earning less than $8,000 a year.

The proposal adopted Wednesday and the one that became law in 1975 have one thing in common: each amounts to a negative income tax — meaning that families whose incomes are below specified levels get a government check instead of having to pay a tax.

"I can't support having supposed taxpayers making a profit out of the tax laws," protested Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala. "Don't mix social programs and taxation.... I don't see the logic of that."

But Allen was in the minority as the Senate voted, 71 to 21, to amend the child-care tax subsidy to allow the government payments to the poorest families.

The Senate also approved a new tax credit for the elderly that would replace the complicated retirement-income provisions in current law.

This would allow persons over 65 to subtract directly from taxes owed 15 per cent of their first $2,500 of annual income from any source. The net effect would be a $146 tax saving for a single person and $220 for married couples.

The credits for child care and the elderly would cost the Treasury more than $700 million a year.

This loss would be offset partially by a $130-million-a-year increase in taxes on major oil companies and Americans who earn income abroad. This was approved on a voice vote by reducing from 50 to 40 per cent of income the amount of U.S. taxes that can be avoided by payment of tax to a foreign country.

The expanded child-care credit is aimed especially at helping millions of working mothers. It also would aid mothers who do not work because they cannot afford to hire someone to look after their children.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee finished basic work on a proposed package of fundamental changes in federal laws taxing a person's larger gifts during life and his estate at death.

Key parts of the committee bill would:

—Create a unified new rate structure in place of presently separate estate and gift tax rates.

—Provide a unified credit against estate and gift taxes in place of a current lower set of exemptions. This would merge existing exemptions that total $90,000 into a credit ultimately equal to a $153,750 tax exemption.

Greenville training school drug sniffer

GREENVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The shepherd Schnaps should start sniffing in September.

Schnaps is a drug-sniffing German Shepherd that will be roaming the halls of Greenville's junior and senior high schools this fall in search of illicit drugs.

And if Hunt County commissioners give their approval, the unusual drug-detection program, initiated by a group of 80 Greenville parents, may be extended to any of the county's school districts.

The three-year-old dog was given to the Hunt County Sheriff's Department by the Dallas Police Department. Schnaps, along with Capt. W.T. Wallen of the sheriff's department, is undergoing a 17-week training course in Dallas.

"Our main goal is to remove drugs from and around our schools," said Ina Herlocker, organizer of the parent group calling itself Control of Drug Elements (CODE).

"Our dog can already sniff out marijuana," she added, "and we're training it now for the rest of the drugs."

Mrs. Herlocker said Schnaps will be checking the lockers, the grounds and parking lot, where most of the drug traffic occurs.

"What we really think will happen is just the presence of the dog team will discourage students from bringing drugs to school," she said.

At a recent meeting, the Hunt County commissioners delayed endorsing the concept until more information on legal, financial and procedural problems can be obtained.

Mrs. Herlocker said that with the commissioners' permission, Schnaps could be used in those school districts requesting its service.

The organization, generated during a Parent-Teacher Association meeting, already has built a dog run and a dog house equipped with "very sophisticated" protection devices, she explained.

Although there is "little" money, she said when the need for food and veterinary services arises, someone "passes the hat" at a corporation meeting.

Mrs. Herlocker said the Spring Branch School District near Houston had already begun such a program.

Sadat's wife in College

CAIRO (AP) — Jihan Sadat, wife of Egypt's president, has entered the third year of studies at Cairo University after scoring an over-all grade of "excellent" in her university exams, the newspaper Al Ahram reported.

Mrs. Sadat, 43, enrolled in the university's faculty of letters in 1974, one and two years behind her two married daughters.

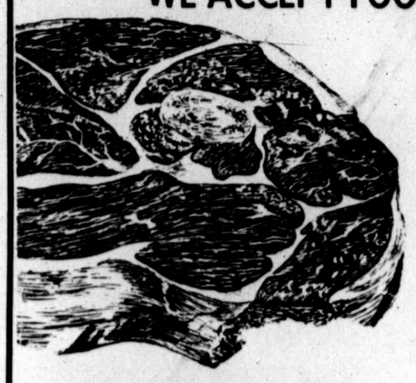

The newspaper said Wednesday that Mrs. Sadat was first in her class in Arabic studies this year.

Colorado, 100 this year, worried about popularity

By C.C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer

ROCKY FORD, Colo. (AP) — Colorado turned 100 this year, entering century No. 2 nostalgic for the days of tumbleweed streets and cowboys riding into the sun and wary about all the people coming to the New West.

And Colorado, still sparsely populated, is getting to be a popular place.

Park officials estimate that as many as three million tourists will roll into the state this summer to visit the Rockies, which are often snowcapped when the mercury registers 96 a few miles away on the flatlands.

The novice may explore any of 53 peaks rising above 14,000 feet; pan for gold near Golden; observe a tobacco spitting contest at Cripple Creek; watch a mock Western shoot-out at Estes Park or park his camper at Lake Granby and ask his neighbor to turn down his portable TV.

Vigilantes don't string up suspects anymore. Colorado citizens are more concerned about stockpiles of deadly nerve gas that they recently persuaded the government to remove from the vicinity of Denver's international airport, and about radiation from the Rocky Flat Nuclear weapons plant.

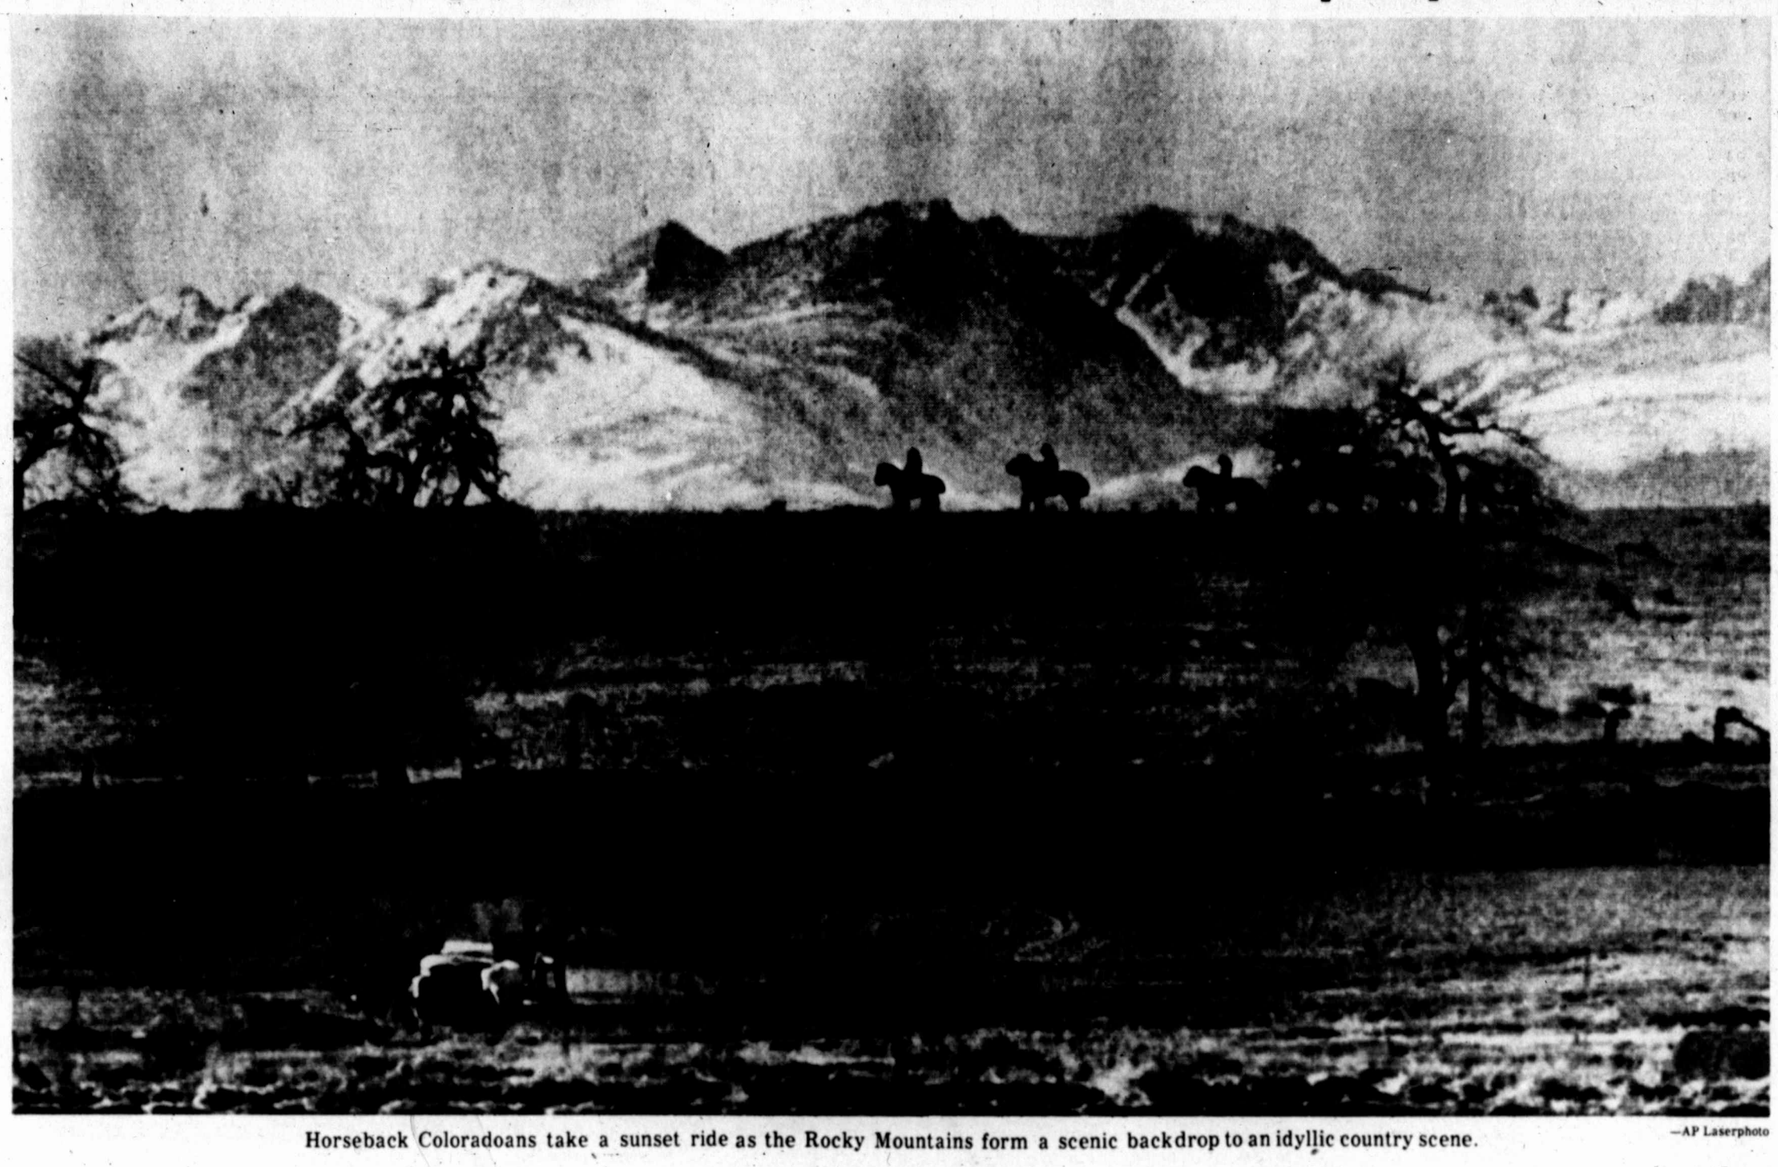

Where men once dug for gold and silver with pick and shovel, engineers using massive machinery are now hollowing out Cheyenne Mountain to expand the North American Air Defense Command's tracking facility.

In the late 1800's Denver boosted "the West's most wicked thorofare," along Holladay Street, with its "boarding houses for young ladies." A leading madam of the day, Mattie Silk, once fought a duel with another woman over a man. Neither woman was hit, but the man, who later married Mattie, was.

Today a woman who calls herself Ming Toy Epstein is among the dozens of women performing at Denver's nude bars, permitted since the state Supreme Court ruled the old anti-obscenity ordinance unconstitutional.

In 1875 the little river town of Denver had a population of 22,000; 55 saloons; 63 hotels; 34 cigarette and tobacco stores; 6 schools and 18 churches and one synagogue. Five years earlier the first railroad reached town, doubling the population.

Today more than 56 per cent of the state's 2.5 million residents live in the Denver metro area.

"The seemingly endless frontier of the West is gone," Gov. Richard Lamm said, adding it is time lawmakers realize that "states have carrying capacities, just like airplanes do."

Colorado's population has increased 45 per cent in the last 15 years, although residents have achieved zero population growth. Today an average of 134 new residents unpack each day. The number of mobile homes has doubled in five years to 68,000.

"We must stop thinking of bigger, faster and more and start thinking of smaller, slower and less," if the state and nation are to celebrate the next 100 years, he says. Lamm, 40, won election in 1974 after "opposing both motherhood and the flag," by supporting abortion and opposing Colorado as the site of the 1976 Olympics.

Denver, "The Queen City of the Plains," is a mile above sea level and has the second highest carbon monoxide level in the nation after Los Angeles.

There were 2,442,145 registered motor vehicles in the state last December for 2.5 million people.

One of every 10 residents works for the Department of Defense, which provides an annual payroll of $1.35 billion. Just over $7 million worth of gold and silver was mined in 1875.

The federal government controls 23,939,394 acres of the state's range, forest and parklands — 36 per cent of the state and equal to Maine, Delaware and Rhode Island combined.

"The growing dependence on government aid and assistance is killing the community do-it-yourself spirit on which the West was founded," says Claire Stafford, news director of station KLMR in the eastern plains community of Lamar.

Colorado's "Sunset Bill," requiring government regulatory agencies to periodically prove their value or close shop, was passed this year and is the model for one now before Congress. Petitions to ban throwaway bottles, restrict nuclear power plant construction and increase taxes on mined minerals are being circulated this summer in hopes of November referendums.

But the spirit of the Old West lingers. Lean men with wrinkled faces, dusty jackets and broad brimmed cowboy hats still make a living in the saddle, or at least behind the wheel of a four-wheel drive pickup truck with a CB radio and rifle rack at the back of the cab.

State conservation officers note that farmers and ranchers are still permitted to kill marauding black bear without a license. Several hundred more are taken annually by licensed hunters. Only residents are permitted to hunt mountain goat and big horn sheep, but others come for deer, elk, antelope and mountain lion.

South Korea seeks to purge foreign influence

By SAM JAMESON
The Los Angeles Times

SEOUL — Foreign actors no longer appear in South Korean television commercials, and foreign words are scheduled to be purged from Korean usage. War has been declared on long hair. Politicians, civil servants and entertainers have been warned to end "degenerate" practices.

It's all part of a "purification" campaign inaugurated by President Park Chung Hee.

Park's minister of culture and information, Kimg Seong Jin, called it "a renaissance of national culture" in which "the essence of traditions" are being transformed into "a modern pattern."

Americans here view it with mixed emotions. Some see the inward looking dangers of xenophobia and chauvinism emerging. But others agree with government complaints that Korean scholars have gone too far in using foreign words to show off their "status."

Nearly everyone agrees that one aspect of the campaign — cleaning up corruption in government — is long overdue.

In ordering the campaign, Park declared that "this is the time for the nation to get rid of, one by one, the things found irrelevant to its historic background and its present reality."

The "reality" he referred to was the threat of military aggression from North Korean forces positioned only 25 miles from the capital. This presence brings a necessity, as Park sees it, to develop a firm sense of self-reliance.

Korea's culture, Park said, must not be "polluted" by an "indiscreet" inflow of foreign influence.

"I don't think there will be any role for foreign influence in our culture in the future," Culture Minister Kim said in an interview. "What I expect of foreigners is that they understand and appreciate our culture as it is. That is all."

Even before the campaign was given its name, "purification," last April, restrictions on some forms of foreign culture were in effect.

A total ban on imports of movies from Japan, Korea's former colonial master, has been in effect since Korea regained its independence in 1945. So few new American motion pictures were being imported into South Korea — 17 in 1975 — that Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of commerce, was moved to bring up the issue at a meeting here in May. He was assured that Korea would "give favorable consideration" to doubling imports of U.S. movies within the next two years.

Rhi Sang Kyu, director of planning and management at the Education Ministry, which is coordinating the language purification campaign, declared that persuasion, not coercive legislation, would be employed. He complained that television was the chief offender in using foreign words and cited such terms as "hit parade" and "news desk."

The word "TV," pronounced in Korean as in English, is all right, he said, because no Korean equivalent exists.

Purification has not stopped with words:

—Although only four commercials featuring foreigners were being run on television here, such ads were banned.

—Manufacturers are now preparing Korean-looking mannequins which are due to replace foreign-looking dummies in department stores beginning in the fall.

—A ban on long hair, considered a foreign "symbol," is being enforced with a threat of a 29-day jail sentence.

"We don't want youngsters to grow long hair," Kim said. "It's bad for mental and physical hygiene. Their hair is always dirty. If they can grow hair that long, they should have sufficient income to keep it groomed and clean.

"It's like a small bird trying to grow the feathers of a big ostrich."

In other purification moves, Park has issued insturctions to members of the National Assembly to stop using their influence to perform favors for constituents, has arrested prominent Koreans caught gambling (including the vice minister of agriculture and fisheries), and banned entertainers caught using marijuana from appearing on TV or in movies. About 300 Korean children enrolled in foreign schools in Korea are being "encouraged" to quit and enroll in Korean schools.

The purity movement has not been an unqualified success, nor has it been enforced with the kind of authoritarian severity Park has used against his political opponents.

Some members of the ruling Democratic Republican Party openly complained about the ban on influence-peddling.

Hair may not be long, but on many Korean men it is 'longish." Only one person has actually been arrested so far for long hair. Shopkeepers have not rushed to tear down signs bearing foreign words.

Asked if the government intended to outlaw use of foreign words in the names of export products, Culture Minister Kim unflinchingly responsed: "No, of course, we'll make exceptions for export products."

Asked whether the standards for purification was that "if money comes in, morals go out," Kim laughed and admitted, "If you put it that way, I would agree. Sometimes morals and realities go separate ways."

Interrupted by a phone call in the middle of the interview, Kim himself unconsciously illustrated the difficulty Koreans will face in purifying their language. The minister wound up his Korean language conversation with the word "okay."

Number of fires higher

The number of fires was up last month from June a year ago, but the total man-hours at the fires was down, the city progress report said.

Ninety-four fires occurred last month, compared to 70 last June, while 182 man-hours were used at last month's fires, compared to 204 at last June's fires.

The city went on 110 fire runs last month and 132 ambulance runs, compared to 87 fire runs and no ambulance runs at this time last year. The ambulance runs were using the new Emergency Medical Services System vehicles leased from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Figures for this year to date stand at 939 runs, 787 total fires and 1,785 man-hours at the fires.

In the county, the city fire department went on 24 runs, recorded 23 fires and expended 74 man-hours at the fires last month, compared to last June's respective figures of 15, 14 and 78. The fire department also went on 21 ambulance runs in the county last month.

Toyah gets new official

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Vivian L. McElligott has been appointed postmaster of Toyah by James J. Symbol, Southern Region Postmaster General. The appointment was effective Saturday.

McElligott is one of four new Texas postmasters and four in Florida appointed.

Selections are made on the basis of merit from a list of qualified candidates submitted to the Regional Management Selection Board. The board is composed of representatives of the U.S. Civil Service Commission, the American Aribration Association and two postmasters.

Violations climbing

Traffic and parking citations issued last month by the city were up from the number of citations issued during June a year ago, according to the municipal court report.

The city issued 1,173 traffic citations and 5,675 parking citations last month, compared to 1,063 traffic and 3,808 parking citations last June.

For 1976 to date, the city has issued 11,169 traffic and 40,959 parking citations.

Revenues collected last month totaled $34,657, up somewhat from the $29,620 collected during this time last year. The yearly revenue total so far is $293,927.

Jobless rate leaves questions

By JAMES ROWE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "When General Motors lays off a shift, nobody doubts that these workers are unemployed," says labor economist and Princeton University provost Albert Rees.

But when the government totes up the employed and unemployed each month, the answers aren't quite that easy. Should it count as jobless a citizen who says he wants to work but has not been looking for a job because he feels no job is available?

Or should the government count as employed a person with a part-time job who wants to work full-time but cannot find a full-time job? And what about the person who quits a job to look for another? Is that person as unemployed as an auto worker who was laid off?

THESE ARE AMONG the myriad questions with which compilers and users of unemployment and employment data must deal.

Both among professionals, policymakers and the public the monthly figures the Labor Department publishes on employment and unemployment are among the most carefully watched of the hundreds of statistics churned out by the federal government.

"The unemployment rate is as well known to the public today as the World Series of Super Bowl scores," Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics, wrote recently.

"It is no wonder. The rate, together with the Consumer Price Index, provides a simple measure of the performance of the economy and a basis for major policy decisions by the President and the Congress."

Second in a Series

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Rep. Augustus Hawkins (D-Calif.) have proposed a bill — which has wide Democratic support — to compress the link between policy decisions and the unemployment rate.

The bill sets a goal of full employment for the economy within four years of enactment and requires the President and Congress to take steps to achieve it: An adult unemployment rate of 3 per cent.

THE ALLURE of the unemployment rate is enhanced both by its seeming precision and its description of a problem that most of us can grasp. The level of joblessness in a socety seems to be a good proxy for the level of hardship in that society.

Its simplicity, precision and impact make the unemployment rate a magnet for critics, both those who think it exaggerates problems and those who think it understates them.

Economists also think that other statistics published with the unemployment rate, especially the number of people on payrolls, leave little impact on the public because of the heavy focus on the rate. The economists are right. But neither politicians nor voters are likely to shift sights within the near future.

The unemployment rate is a tautology, based on the results of a monthly survey of 47,000 scientifically selected households by the Census Bureau for the Labor Department.

The unemployment rate is the percentage of the civilian labor force that is actively seeking a job but cannot find one. The labor force is the sum of those with jobs (the employed) and those without jobs but looking (the unemployed).

For the purposes of calculating the unemployment rate, full-time workers and part-time workers are counted as equally employed. Persons who are looking for work — whether they be heads of households or children of affluent parents out of school for the summer — are counted as equally unemployed.

And persons not looking for work — either because they are newborn infants or workers turned down so many times they've stopped searching — are not in the labor force.

When AFL-CIO President George Meany charged that the official June unemployment rate — 7.5 per cent — was too low and should be more than 10 per cent, he was not accusing the Labor Department of lying. He was saying that he does not like the Labor Department's definition of unemployment and wants to see more people counted in the labor force and as unemployed.

A 7.5 per cent unemployment rate does not tell how bad things really are, Meany is saying.

CRITICS on the other side of the fence, although less vocal for the most part, argue that the 7.5 per cent rate today may indicate different things about the labor market than it would have 10 or 15 years ago.

Most would agree that the unemployment rate, especially in its month-to-month movements, may be misleading. It probably does not tell as much about hardship as many persons think and it certainly leaves out a lot of people who have employment problems.

But despite these disclaimers, the movement of the unemployment rate, if viewed with a critical eye, can tell the expert and the average citizen much about the state of the economy.

And for a society which has set a goal of full employment, even if the goal cannot be precisely defined, a steadily rising unemployment rate is bad and a steadily falling one is good.

On a month-to-month basis the rate can go up or down for purely technical reasons related to its definition, or because of measurement errors or imperfect seasonal adjustments. It can also go up or down because of real changes in the economy.

Because of the definition of the rate, a change in it can signal developments which are not occurring. That is why the rate alone cannot be used as a short-term economic barometer.

FOR EXAMPLE:

—In month A, 200,000 persons become so disgruntled with job prospects that they drop out of the labor force, while the number of persons working fall, too. But by definition, the number of unemployed fell sharply because of the drop-outs and the unemployment rate falls.

—In month B, the number of persons with jobs climbs substantially, but the number of persons looking for work — perhaps encouraged by the success of their friends and neighbors in finding employment — rises faster. The unemployment rate rises.

Few analysts or job seekers would think the economy was in better shape in month A than in month B. But the unemployment rate would indicate that.

Over the longer run, changes in the composition of the labor force itself mean that the unemployment rate is measuring the job behavior of different types of people. An unemployment rate in 1950 might not convey the same economic situation as the same rate in 1976.

The skills of younger workers are usually lower than those of their older counterparts and as a result unemployment tends to be higher among teen-agers. Furthermore, finding a job is often less critical to teenagers than to older workers. Today's labor force has a higher percentage of younger workers than 15 or 26 years ago.

Intended use of records not mandatory

AUSTIN (AP) — Courts cannot compel anyone to disclose why they want access to information made public by the Texas Open Records Act, the state Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court's 5-4 decision said a business organization, the Industrial Foundation of the South, is entitled to receive information on workmen's compensation claims maintained by the Texas Industrial Accident Board.

But it imposed restrictions on the release of possibly embarrassing data.

The board had contended the foundation wanted the information for use in blacklisting employes with a record of filing claims for on-the-job injuries.

An Austin district court had ruled with the foundation but the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals here said it should have granted the board's request to compel the foundation to answer a series of written questions about its intended use of the information.

The appeals court said a writ of mandamus, such as the foundation sought, was not available unless one came into court with clean hands.

"We think the act itself makes clear that the motives of the person requesting information are not to be considered in determining whether the information must be disclosed," said the high court's majority opinion by Justice Ross Doughty.

Dissenting were Justices Tom Reavley, Zollie Steakley, Jack Pope and James Denton.

"Although we recognize that there is often much potential for abuse of information in government records, the task of balancing the public's right of access to government records against potential abuses of the right has been made by the legislature; the court's task is to enforce the public's right of access given by the act," Doughty's opinion said.

"Since the purposes of the requestor (the foundation) are not relevant to a determination of whether the requested information must be disclosed, the trial court was not in error in suppressing defendant's (the board's) interrogatories."

The court said, however, that some information in the workmen's compensation claims files was exempt by law from disclosure if it contained "highly intimate or embarrassing facts the publication of which would be highly objectionable to a reasonable person" and was not of legitimate public concern.

For that reason, it sent the case back to the trial court to determine whether any such information was contained in the files sought by the industrial foundation.

It said claim files containing allegedly private information should be supplied to the judge for private inspection in chambers. The judge would then determine what could and could not be released to the foundation.

"We...recognize the enormity of the task which a case-by-case review of these workmen's compensation files may entail. We believe, nevertheless, that the effective protection of the individual's right of privacy, and the effective application of the policy of openness of government records mandated by the open records act, necessitate the result which we have reached," the court said.

The foundation had suggested a direct tie-in to the board's computer, but the board had objected to the cost.

The court said the open records act does not permit consideration of cost in determining whether information should be disclosed. But it said a computer tie-in could be ruled out if this involved giving the foundation private information.

Once the least expensive method is determined, then it will be up to the foundation to pay the costs incurred, and it can be required to post bond to insure the costs are paid, the court said.

OSHA ranch deadline set for Oct. 25

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers now have until Oct. 25 to comply with certain safety standards under the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) that were have been effective June 7.

The safety practices concern guarding tractor power take-offs (PTO), displaying safety signs and providing initial employe training for operating machinery.

Particular emphasis is on guarding the PTO drive line. The tractor shield on the rear PTO shaft must be kept in place, Dr. Gary Nelson of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service said. However, the master shield may be removed when necessary to operate PTO driven equipment, provided the guards on such equipment cover the tractor PTO shafts, he said.

A farmer must instruct every employe, regardless of his safety training, in the operation and servicing of all equipment with which the employe is involved, Dr. Nelson said.

— Keep all guards in place when the machine is in operation.

— Permit no riders on farm equipment, other than those persons required for instruction or assistance.

— Stop the engine and wait for all movement to cease and disconnect the power source before cleaning, servicing, adjusting or unclogging any equipment. The only exception is if the machine must be running to be properly serviced.

— Make sure everyone is clear of the equipment before starting the engine, engaging power or operating the machinery.

— Lock electrical poser before servicing the equipment or performing maintenance work.

Safety signs must be displayed at prominent locations on tractors and PTO driven equipment indicating the power drive system safety shields must be kept in place.

The warnings must also provide information of possible danger if the removal of a guard or access door might expose an employe to any equipment that continues to rotate after the power is disengaged.

"Complying with these safety standards will make the farm a safer workplace, so they should become a part of the farm operation as soon as possible," Dr. Nelson said. He advised farmers to work toward meeting the safety standards even though the deadline has been extended.

Zero Mostel: A verbal holocaust

By KENNETH TURAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Zero Mostel is a Silly Putty bomb with a very short fuse. He laughs, he shrugs, he snorts, he wails, but mostly he simply erupts.

There is no quiet person inside of him trying to get out, he says, only a louder one. "You know the trouble with you, 'Zero,' a friend once said. "you have no unexpressed thoughts."

ARRIVING in his hotel lobby, he hops on a luggage cart, walks into a door and heads for lunch. "What's he eating?" he demands to know. "Give me a stick and I'll kill it."

He is a verbal holocaust, fueled by unequal parts of Yiddish and profanity, a ferocious talker who is delighted to agree that he simply "consumes" the opposition.

"If you write that," he roars out of nowhere, "your beard will be found strand by strand from here to North Passaic."

He is the all-too-human-Rhinoceros, the mournful Estragon of "Waiting for Godot," the dyspeptic Max Bialystock — "the King of Broadway forced to wear a cardboard belt" — of Mel Brooks' "The Producers," the slave Pseudolus of "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum," looking quizzically at a bottle of wine and asking, "Was 1 a good year?"

HE IS ALL HIS ROLES at once and then some, a walking compendium of the human condition. No wonder it is difficult for him to sit still for questions. "The idea of an interview," he announces, "is to lie. You extract the truth somehow."

In 1964, Mostel created the role he is now reprising at the Kennedy Center here, the much-put-upon Tevye of "Fiddler on the Roof." He won his third consecutive Tony for that, Newsweek put him on its cover, he was called Broadway's newest divinity with no rivals in sight.

Instead, Mostel himself almost dropped from sight. "I suffered from a series of successes," he says, laughing as always. "I was depressed by my successes."

FOR ZERO MOSTEL is hardly a celebrity who does the expected. "Now, do I look like a star image?" he asks, rumpled and relaxed.

"I hate that image crop and the behavior of some of them and the demands they make. I never liked coteries or public relations men. Even the money is illusory. Now when I get a lot of money, it goes to an accountant. I'll show you my balance," triumphantly pulling out his checkbook. "$1,044 minus $25."

So Mostel has disregarded all considerations except doing what he wants to do. He starred in "Ulysses in Nighttown," a version of the Joyce novel. He did a Paddy Chayefsky play, "The Latent Heterosexual," in Dallas.

LAST YEAR he even did an opera, Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi." He has resisted doing Shakespeare, because "I don't want to get trapped with a company that wants to do it 'their way.' Who knows how they did it in Shakespeare's day? They even spelled wrong."

In this consistent pursuit of himself, Mostel has turned down some enticing roles. He was sought for the peddler in "Oklahoma" and says Oscar Hammerstein even told him he could add his own songs. He almost turned down "A Funny Thing" and claims he only accepted because his wife, Kathryn, a former Rockette, threatened to stab him if he didn't.

HE EVEN almost refused "Fiddler," saying, "When I first read it I thought, 'This is the worst crock I've ever seen in my life,'" but some instinct told him it would shape up and be a success.

As for the film version made without him, he says scornfully, "The place looked like a resort. 'Let's stay for the summer; why should we ever leave?" The barn could have belonged to the Rockefellers.

"I don't have good luck in films," he adds of his Hollywood career in general. "God forbid you should act in films, you're in serious trouble. I'm too lazy to do my own. I've done some scripts, and they look at them like a snake. 'Is he mad?'"

MOSTEL'S LATEST FILM, "The Front," costarring Woody Allen, a drama about the victims of the Hollywood blacklist, is particularly apt, because Mostel himself was so victimized. He had made a few films, notably Elia Kazan's "Panic in the Streets," when he was no longer able to get work. "It might be fortunate things ended up like that," he says. "I would have wound up always playing the guy who didn't get the girl."

He returned to the stage and was able to support himself as he had before turning to acting, as a painter. "I was lucky," he says.

REAL NAME Samuel Joel, Mostel was born in Brooklyn in 1915 and got the nickname Zero from school classmates. "I was always laughing and making fun and I always got blamed for trouble. Sometimes even the teacher in the next room would come in and blame me for something that happened there."

The second youngest of 11 children — "They're dying like flies" — Mostel still remembers the enormous lineup in front of the family's single bathroom. His father was a strict Orthodox Jew and would never come to see his son perform, saying only, "I don't need the publicity."

His mother, too, had a deft sense of humor, once scolding a cat she had accidentally stepped on, "I told you not to go around barefoot." And then there was Aunt Fanny. "She made a living from accidents," Mostel says.

"I USED TO SEE her stick her dress in escalators. Finally she got on lists, they wouldn't let her sue anymore. At my father's funeral she wanted to look inside the casket but my mother said, 'Don't let her near the box. She'll get a splinter in her finger and sue us for everything we've got.'"

A 1935 C.C.N.Y. fine arts graduate, Mostel soon found himself doing odd jobs like painting drums of disinfectant, "this half green, this half black." He was the youngest artist in the New Deal W.P.A. and remembers doing The Newspaper Guild's first poster ever.

Now his work has been shown in the Museum of Modern Art and the National Portrait Gallery, but then his mother, with a fine disdain for modern art, told him, "When you were a little boy you drew like a man; now that you're a man you draw like a boy."

IN FACT, one of Mostel's two sons is an artist — currently serving as second assistant set designer for the Fiddler company. Mostel's other son is an actor who is appearing in the "Texas Trilogy."

From entertaining friends at parties Mostel developed a comedy act that started at a place called Cafe Society Downtown in New York and soon had him making enormous sums of money.

The comedy led to acting, but the humor Mostel found in all situations never left. As for instance in 1959, when he was hospitalized for a series of operations after his left leg was nearly lost when he was sideswiped by a bus.

"I WAS SO BORED, I did crazy things," Mostel remembers. "After they had shaved my leg for an operation, I wrote on it with great difficulty, 'This is the leg.' And using a mirror, and in great pain, I drew a picture of myself on my bottom. And do you think the doctor laughed? No, he had to scrub it off."

That doctor, whom Mostel adores and credits with saving his leg, was the victim of another quintessentially Mostelian experience.

Annual festival to open Friday

HOUSTON — The second annual Houston Shakespeare Festival will open Friday, to continue weekends through Aug. 7.

The festival will offer alternating performances of two Shakepearean dramas, "The Tempest" and "Romeo and Juliet," in Miller Outdoor Theater in Houston's Hermann Park.

Co-produced by the University of Houston drama department, Miller Theater Advisory Council and the Houston City Parks and Recreation Department, the festival is free and open to the public, with tickets to be available at numerous outlets, including the University of Houston Center, the Miller Theater box office and the Houston Public Library.

Opening production of the festival will be "The Tempest," directed by Cecil Pickett of the UH drama department faculty. Following its Friday night opening, the drama will repeat July 29 and 31, and Aug. 4 and 6.

"Romeo and Juliet," directed by UH drama department chairman Sidney Berger, will have its initial presentation Saturday night, with additional performances scheduled for July 28 and 30, and Aug. 5 and 7.

All performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. Special pre-performance entertainment presented by instrumentalists, madrigal singers and others will be a feature of each festival evening.

Officers plan symphony's year

New officers of the Midland Symphony and Chorus Association, elected at the association's annual meeting recently, are deep in planning for the 1976-77 season of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale and the series of Midland concerts to be presented during the season.

The symphony season will begin in October with a pair of concerts featuring famed guitarist Carlos Montoya as guest artist.

Heading the Midland association during the coming year is Russell Neisig, with Roger Williamson as vice president. Mrs. Paul C. Rea is secretary and John Hunt is treasurer. Mrs. Lloyd E. Innerarity is president-elect for 1977-78.

At the annual meeting, several new directors were elected to three-year terms on the symphony association's board.

Hawaiian singer digs Nashville, not grits

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Hawaiians are swinging to country music as well as the hula these days.

Melveen Leed, one of Hawaii's leading entertainers, was in Nashville last week recording her sixth album and bringing "Hawaiian country" to the mecca of traditional country music.

"Country music is 'where it's at' in Hawaii," said Miss Leed, 33, who was fourth runnerup in the 1963 Miss Hawaii beauty pageant. "Pop singers are a dime a dozen in Hawaii."

"Country music tells it like it is," she continued. "It's the story of everyone's life. It's great for the soul."

While here, she became the first Hawaiian to perform on the Grand Ole Opry and triggered an excited stir when she passed out 5,000 Hawaiian orchids to the audience.

"Coming here is a dream come true," she said. "We have country music in Hawaii but not true country music musicians like you do here. And I have never come across so many good songwriters."

The recording studios, too, amazed her.

"You can be lousy and the facilities here make you sound good," she said. "Every album I do from now on has got to be done here."

Mostly through her efforts, Hawaii "discovered" country music within the past year.

"I was a guinea pig," she said, referring to her pioneer efforts with "Hawaiian country."

"Hawaiian country," she said, is basically converting the English lyrics to Hawaiian— much the same as Freddy Fender converts some of his lyrics to Spanish.

"Country music has become more meaningful in Hawaii now that we can understand it more," said Miss Leed, who recently won three NANI awards—Hawaii's version of the Grammy.

"Music keeps Hawaii going; it plays a great part in our lives," she said. "It's an extended hand."

Like other country singers, she says her background helps her.

"I'm a country girl—brought up on a farm on an island. I know what it is to feel country and I know what it's like to go without luxuries. I've worked for what I've got."

However, other qualities set her apart. She can sing fluently in 13 languages, play 10 musical instruments and dance a beautiful hula. And no other country singers have a middle name like "Kuuleipuanani."

'Y' travel club slates outings

The YMCA Travel Club, having recently returned from Alaska, is planning a trip to Palo Duro Canyon July 27 and 28.

In August an outing to Fort Worth is planned, including stops at Six Flags, Casa Manana Theatre to see "Cabaret," Amon Carter Museum, a Texas Rangers baseball game and time for shopping.

Other trips planned for the remainder of the year are to the Big Bend area, Fort Davis and McDonald Observatory in September, the Tyler Rose Festival and Jefferson area in October, Mexico's Copper Canyon in November and a Christmas trip in December.

For further information about trips or membership in the "Y" Travel Club, call the general director's office at 682-2551.

Real estate courses set

Three real estate short courses will begin Monday at Midland College.

Real Estate Principles I, II and III each will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Each course costs $33 and completion of Real Estate Principles I qualifies students for the real estate license examination.

All three courses will meet in the occupational-technical building. Real Estate I in room 129B, Real Estate II in room 155A and Real Estate III in room 144A.

Singing duo to present Midland concert tonight

Gary and Sharon Archer, singers and recording artists, will present a free public concert tonight in Midland's Rodeway Inn.

The 7:30 p.m. event will be in meeting room "C" at the motel.

The Archers travel widely, presenting their unique music ministry to youth rallies, prayer retreats and discipleship seminars. Their music is varied, ranging from the beautiful classics of faith to the popular, contemporary "Nashville Sound."

The Archers record on the Light Records label, and recently brought out a new LP, "Thank Heaven for Love," which has been well received. The couple has made a number of television appearances.

Former resident performs

A former Midland resident, David Cooper, is a member of the cast of "Richard III" and "Twelfth Night" being presented in repertory during the current Summer Shakespeare Festival of Dallas.

The fifth annual festival will continue with nightly performances through Sunday in the Band Shell at Fair Park in Dallas. Admission is free.

Cooper Cooper is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cooper of Midland. He had the lead role in Midland Community Theatre's "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail" in the spring of 1971 and also has worked at the Globe of the Great Southwest in Odessa. In recent years he has done extensive work on the dinner theater circuit in the U.S.

'Fonzie' paraphernalia proves smashing hit for manufacturers

By CARLA HALL
The Washington Post

The Fonz, or rather Fonzie — actually Arthur Fonzarelli — is the cool, leather-jacketed, thumbs-up, pesudo hood of the "Happy Days" TV series. His slicked-back DA hairstyle and grinning face have been cropping up not only on the tube, but on T-shirts, jackets, jeans, posters, buttons, beanbags, pillowcases and sheets, knee socks and panties, thermos kits and paint-by-number sets.

According to Allison Manufacturing Co., which has sold more than a million Fonzie T-shirts since the craze mushroomed in March, Fonzie items are the single biggest item they have ever sold in a four-month period. Sales are surpassing merchandise which displayed Batman, Davy Crockett (the multi-million dollar craze of 1955) and a host of baseball players, says Allison sales vice president Marvin Herbert.

A typical fad based on the marketing of a well-known face or name has a life expectancy of four months. But creeping into its sixth month of cultdom, Fonzie is still alive and, for the time being, well. As the "Happy Days" series went into reruns, the poster sales did go down, reports Lou Mindling, director of licensing at Paramount Studios which produces the series and grants licenses to manufacturers to use the Fonzie name or likeness on novelties and clothing. However, Mindling and most manufacturers expect Fonzie to last through the fall season of the series. Since April, Ben Cooper sportswear has sold 150,000 quilt-lined Fonzie jackets like the ones Fonzie wears in the show.

Retailers refuse to calculate a definite time length for the duration of the Fonz infatuation, no matter how well they are doing.

What explains the popularity of this motorcycle tough? Allison's Herbert says bluntly, "He relates."

Actor Henry Winkler, who portrays the Fonz, once said had he seen a "real" Fonz on the street he would have pretended he was blind so the Fonz would leave him alone. But no one is walking away from the TV Fonz. Manufacturers scramble over each other for licenses. "When they came around in February," Miandling recalls, "I would ask them, 'Why did you come around so late? Where were you when the show started?'"

"I've created a monster," Winkler was quoted as wailing recently.

Sociologist Rose Goldsen of Cornell University disagrees that it was Winkler's creation. "Massive familiarity, massive promotion, and massive availability are what make something popular," Goldsen insists.

"That is basically what happened with the Osmond Brothers, and that is what happened with Fonzie. It's simply very clever character merchandising which makes use of intensive advertising."

From the manufacturer's point of view it appears to be working. Bill Ferris of Woolco Department stores sells four or five Fonzie T-shirts, on the average in less than an hour. "An order of 144 shirts will last about four to five days," said Ferris. The buyers are teen-age girls and children, and the stock is selling as well as the grisly "Jaws" T-shirts of last summer.

Spencer Gifts has had similar success with a whole line of Fonzie items, including T-shirts, posters, thermal mugs, and "Fonz for President" buttons. "Fonz is doing better than the Jaws jewelry and T-shirts that we have sold before," said manager Steve Hudak.

The quick-selling Cooper quilted jackets cost a minimum of $27.50, with the most expensive — a leather version — selling for $95. Some 5,000 to 6,000 have been sold. Cooper Sportswear gives Paramount 6 per cent of whatever they gross according to sales manager John Hult.

Each of the licensed manufacturers pay Paramount 5 to 10 per cent of their sales, all of which boosts Paramount's take on Fonzie items to a whopping eight-figure sum, says Mindling. Of course Batman was as lucrative, but over a period three times as long.

"Fonzie is the hottest human property, right now," claims Mindling. What that means is that among live characters — as opposed to animated characters such as Donald Duck. Among TV and movie characters who are marketed, "Fonzie is a runaway," adds Mindling. "It tops Laverne and Shirley, the Brady Bunch, and the movie, 'The Godfather.' "Fonzie only bows to long-running shows in syndication like "Star Trek."

A PAIR OF LIGHT-HEARTED LADIES, Mistress Page and Mistress Ford, have fun at the expense of gullible old Sir John Falstaff in Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," currently playing at Odessa's Globe Theater. The comedy will be performed at 8 p.m. today and Saturday, with Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" scheduled for presentation at 8 p.m. Friday. Seen above, from left, are Globe performers Patricia Angelin Skemp, James Bottom and Marilynn Meyrick.

PBRPC sets regular session

The regular monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board of directors will take place immediately after the semi-annual general membership meeting July 28 in Fort Stockton.

Business will include consideration of a resolution on accepting the application of the City of Big Spring for comprehensive planning funds.

Another resolution to be considered deals with the City of Odessa's "Bikeway Demonstration Program."

Other resolutions will consider the Big Spring Independent School District's Head Start Program application and various state agency assistance programs.

Composers, computers could unite

AARHUS, Denmark (AP) — Not a sound comes out of the instrument when Mogens Kjaer, a 30-year-old musicologist and computer programmer, sits down for a session at what looks deceptively like an electronic organ.

What comes out, by way of digital computer and a graphic plotter, is a master sheet of the music he plays silently on the black and white piano keys.

"Technically, there is in fact no reason why this system could not be developed to the point where the composer might do his composing straight from the keyboard onto master sheets," Kjaer said.

But even if the system, Kjaer's own brainchild to which he devoted four years of spare time, has not reached that stage it is already promising to revolutionize music printing which, despite many innovations, is still one of the slowest, most complicated and costliest printing processes.

For Kjaer simply plays the whole score of an orchestral or choral work into the computer and the plotter then draws up the master sheets, producing either the full score for the conductor or the separate voices for the individual musicians or singers.

The system may even "digest" the full score and come up with its own suggestion of a piano version — useful for rehearsals — and it will promptly protest against any unintended discords or rhythmic irregularities.

"And if so required the system will transpose entire scores or separate voices into a different key," Kjaer added.

The scan-note system, developed in cooperation with Dataland, a local computer service firm, is already in business working on its first orders from several Danish music publishers and music schools.

As explained by Arne Lauritzen, managing director of Dataland, which invested some $50,000 in the project, the obvious advantages of the system are high speed and low cost.

"Apart from the special keyboard the system is largely based on standard equipment," he added. "The secret of the system is that in Kjaer we had the rare combination of musicology and computer expertise."

Other data-processing experts said Kjaer's crucial achievement was the systematizing of the many signs and symbols of a music score. To make the plotter draw up just one note sign calls for up to 200 digital inputs.

At its present stage of development the system calls for a programmer to play a score into the computer sign by sign, meaning that, for instance, a piano chord has to be dissolved and played note by note. Similarly, it takes pre-coding to determine the value of a note.

"But in the next stage, on which I'm already working, the computer will automatically react to note values and, thus, to the rhythmic element as played on the keyboard," Kjaer said.

At present, a score is played into the computer voice by voice for storage on magnetic discs and then, after possible corrections, relayed to the graphic plotter which draws up oversize notes for photographic scaling down for the master plate or master film used in the final printing process.

From one data input the plotter produces full scores as well as individual voices.

Society presents new production

HOUSTON — The Houston Gilbert and Sullivan Society is celebrating its 25th anniversary with a new production of "The Yeomen of the Guards."

The operetta, one of the most celebrated of all Gilbert and Sullivan musical works, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Jones Hall for the Performing Arts in downtown Houston. Tickets are on sale at ticket counters in all Foley's stores and at the Jones Hall box office.

"Yeomen" is a lighthearted romance with touches of intrigue and deception. The Houston production features James Robinson as Col. Fairfax who has been sentenced to die on a charge of sorcery at the behest of his kinsman, Sir Clarence Poltwhistle, who hopes to acquire Fairfax's wealth. Other pivotal cast members include Frank Riesenberg as the keeper of the Tower of London; Kim Josephson as Sgt. Meryll who connives to smuggle Fairfax out of the prison; Lea Berman as Phoebe, the sergeant's daughter who is madly in love with Fairfax, and Ralph L. Katz as Shadbolt, the somewhat dense keeper of the Tower keys. The production is staged and directed by Robert Brunyate.

Battle of sexes involves mathematics world

By SYLVIA CARTER

Girls like math just as much a boys do.

True or false?

True, on all three statements, accordings to "Mathematics and Sex," a report by a University of California mathematics Prof. John Ernest, who concedes that "our title might well evoke a smile."

Ernest and his 10-member research team (eight women and two men) at the university's Santa Barbara campus were perfectly serious about finding out, as Ernest put it, why "a person's sex is, and has been, very relevant to that individual's opportunities in the world of mathematics."

At the time the study began, Ernest said, the university's math faculty consisted of 32 men, and the math secretarial staff had six women. That was the initial reason to explore "the forces which could bring about such gross sex differences," the report states. The report, based largely on a first-year seminar on women in mathematics in 1973 and 1974, concentrates on opportunities in mathematics education and the training and counseling that may lead students toward careers in math.

In 1,324 questionnaires to students in California and on the East Coast, grades 2 through 12, the research team asked three basic questions.

Students were asked to rank four subjects by preference: mathematics or arithmetic, English or reading, science, and social studies. There were statistically significant sex differences in the youngsters' feelings about all the subjects except mathematics. "Contradicitng our preconceptions when designing this question ...the preference patterns in mathematics were almost identical for boys and girls," the report says. "The finding indicates that there is nothing intrinsic in arithmetic or mathematics that makes it more appealing or enjoyable to one sex than the other."

The children were asked which parent they got help from in various subjects. The answers indicated that beginning in the sixth grade, the father becomes the "authority" on mathematics, a finding that the researchers said indicates that parents should try to be even more aware of whether or not they are imposing sexist roles on children. (The mothers helped both boys and girls more in all other subjects.)

The children were asked whether they thought boys or girls did better in various subjects. At the lower grades, girls stated that they did better, and boys said they did. But in the high school, 32 per cent of all students believe that boys do better than girls in mathematics. But the researchers tested for sex difference in university grades in elementary mathematics courses and no significant differences were found.

One reason for such peer attitudes probably is that teachers foster the same ideas, the report said. While 44 per cent of a group of teachers — most of them women — said that mathematics was their favorite subject to teach, 63 per cent thought that girls did better in English and 41 per cent believed that boys did better in mathematics.

Although there are many conflicting studies about whether boys really do better at certain kinds of mathematical endeavors, one study indicated that in third and sixth grades, girls are actually better at arithmetic.

The report also includes information on the mathmatical training of women in high school and college. Interviews with successful women mathematicians are quoted, too. "Inadequate mathematics training for women" as compared with that for men is "a major culprit in closing off scientific and technological opportunities for women," Ernest concludes.

And Emmy Noether? About 50 years ago, she encountered opposition to her admission to the faculty at the University of Gottingen in Germany "solely because of her sex," Ernest says. She delivered many advanced lectures on her work, but they had to be announced under another name. Albert Einstein thought so highly of her ability that he wrote a letter to The New York Times at her death in 1935.

Chamber officer briefs Lions on new industry

By LYNNE WELLS

The Midland Chamber of Commerce should have some definite information about new industry for Midland by early 1977, Chamber president Howard "Rocky" Ford told the Downtown Lions Club Wednesday.

Ford, a Lions Club member since 1948, said Midland is one of five cities being considered by Garrett Corp. as a site for a nuclear enrichment plant. The other cities are Odessa, Big Spring, Wichita Falls and Eastland, he said.

The plant, which would cost one-half billion dollars to build, would be engaged in enriching uranium before sending it on to an electric plant in Fort Worth.

The industry would provide jobs for about 1,500 construction workers, and an equal numbers of employes after it was built.

He noted that chamber members have made two industry recruiting trips to New York City this year, and are planning later visits to Ohio industries.

Ford described some of the Chamber's projects, such as planting 1,200 new saplings, the Christmas parade, sports events such as Midland Cubs Appreciation Night and the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet and Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers Day.

"I think we have a lot to be proud of in our Chamber of Commerce," Ford said.

The film, "This is Midland," was shown to the club. It discussed Midland's economy and other aspects of life in the city.

MH-MR sets new budget in meeting

A proposed $1.5 million budget for the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health-Mental Retardation was accepted Wednesday by the organization's board of directors.

The budget, totaling $1,519,472, will provide operating expenses for the fiscal year beginning Sept. 1.

The board also agreed to write off bad debts from clients totaling $15,989, covering a period from 1973 to the present.

In other action, the board hired two new employees, Roberta Kaspereit as a teacher's aide for the Midland Opportunity Center and Wayne Dismukes as a psychologist for the Odessa MH-MR Center.

In other discussion, the directors heard a suggestion from board member Bill Morrow for revisions in the organizations bylaws and constitution.

Injuries climb during month

Accidents, injuries and fatalities all were up last month from figures during the same period last year, according to the city's traffic engineering department.

Two hundred fifty-six accidents, 74 injuries and two fatalities were reported last month, compared to 174 accidents, 54 injuries and one fatality last year.

Figures for this year to date are 1,190 accidents, 320 injuries and nine fatalities.

Also, parking meter revenues were up last month from June a year ago's totals. The city collected $5,363 in parking meter revenues last month, considerably more than the $3,761 collected during June 1975. The yearly figure to date is $30,006.

Other activity by the traffic engineering department last month was painting of 20 miles of center lines and 10 miles of lane lines in the city; repairing of curbs on various streets; painting of the parking lot at the old post office; trimming of trees at seven locations, and picking up all school signs.

Manny Lantigua (18), Jackson catcher, is forced at second by Midland shortstop Mike Sember who fires to first for a double play in third inning of Texas League game Wednesday night at Cubs Stadium. Backing up play is second baseman Keith Drumright (4).

BY TED BATTLES

For a long time it looked as though the Midland Cubs never were going to break through Mike Bruhert's service and then in the seventh Mike Umfleet and Karl Pagel homered to ignite a 6-2 win over the Jackson Mets at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

Darrell Turner, a 6-3, 21-year-old from Ococee, Fla., scattered 14 hits in a route-going performance to to notch his second victory in eight decisions this year. What's more, he did it with dispatch, Randy Jones style, sending the crowd home early with a brisk one hour, 57 minute job, the fastest nine-inning game at Cubs Stadium this year.

IT WAS the first time Turner had gone the distance since April 23, his first Texas League appearance of the year, in a 2-1 loss to Amarillo. His long stint since was a five inning relief job against El Paso June 29.

"Actually, I felt better as the game went on. The first four innings I didn't feel good at all, " Turner, in his third season of pro ball, said. About the 14 hits, "They hit some good pitches, but those double plays are a pitcher's best friend."

The Cubs reeled off three in support of Turner with perhaps the most important coming in the third inning. Manny Lantigua singled to right to lead off and then second baseman Keith Drumright turned Lee Mazzilli's grounder into a twin killing. That left the bases clean when Jim Kidder tripled off the wall in center, Luis Rosado walked and Terry Senn followed with a run scoring single.

JACKSON MADE it 2-0 in the seventh when Shad Rolle beat out a hit in front of the plate. Turner's late toss sailed down the right field line and when the throw to second wound up in left field, Rolle came all the way around.

The way Bruhert, now 1-5, was going, it looked like it might be enough. However, Umfleet dropped a wind-aided homer over the left field fence. Mike Gordon reached first on an error and after Earle Chew skied to right for the second out, Pagel, the rookie from the University of Texas, boomed his first Texas League homer over the fence in center to make it 3-2.

THAT BROUGHT in lefthander John Andrews to face Umfleet, who's grounder to second scored Putman. Sember then legged it home on a wild pitch.

Nadia proves she's human; Men dominate swimming

MONTREAL (AP) — She was the closest thing to perfection the Olympics have ever seen. She was cool and poised beyond her meager 14 years at a massive, jostling international news conference.

But Nadia Comaneci was just a little girl, subject to all the human faults, at the presentation ceremonies.

The gold medal as the Games' all-around gymnast was around her neck, some incredible marks were in the books and some vanquished Russians were at her sides when Nadia turned to watch the Romanian flag being raised.

JUST AS the first strains of the Romanian national anthem sounded—while a worldwide television audience of a billion people watched, while thousands of newsmen were proclaiming her the queen of the Games—Nadia turned human.

Just once, and just for a moment, this petite package of perfection turned human. At that poignant moment, one for which she had trained through most of her life, she screwed up her face in a grimace—a typical teenage effort to stifle an itching nose.

And America's all-conquoring male swimmers turned human, too. But not much. They won all the medals they could in Wednesday's events—they still haven't been beaten—but, for the first time in the Games, they failed to break a world record.

LIKE NADIA'S, it wasn't much of a lapse. It came in the men's 100-meter butterfly. To make up for the failure to break Mark Spitz' 4-year-old record, the Americans turned it into another 1-2-3 sweep, their third of the Games.

The sweep by Matt Vogel, Fort Wayne, Ind., Joe Bottom, Santa Clara, Calif., and Gary Hall, Fayetteville, N.C., along with a winning, world-record time of 7 minutes, 23.22 seconds in the men's 800 freestyle relay, pushed the male swimmers medal accumulation so far to all seven gold medals awarded, five silver and three bronze in four days.

In all, the American team now has 10 gold, eight silver and four bronze. East Germany is second with seven gold, five silver and four bronze while Russia, also the beneficiary of a women's swimming sweep, is third with six, six and one. No other nation has more than one gold medal.

IN ADDITION to the swimmers, the United States also got a gold and a silver from its shooting team. Included was the first Olympic medal ever acquired by a woman in that sport.

Margaret Murdock, 33, who's in nursing training at Topeka, Kan., took the silver in a controversy with officials. It may yet turn out to be a gold, or a piece of a gold.

U.S. team manager Joe Berry said he was asking officials to reconsider and award two golds. Miss Murdock was originally named the winner with 1,162 out of a possible 1,200 in the small bore rifle, three positions, with Army Capt. Larry Bassham, Bedford, Tex., one point behind.

AFTER A 3½-hour check, officials discovered a clerical error had been made, giving the two Americans the same score. Under international rules, the last 10 shots from the kneeling position are used to break the tie. And the reluctant Bassham was named the winner.

"This is arbitrary rubbish about ties," Capt. Bassham said. "There should be two Olympic champions this time." At the least, he said, he plans to have Miss Murdock hold the gold medal jointly with him at the presentation ceremony today.

The Americans also survived another scare in basketball, saw one of their boxers move into prime position for a medal after a decisive victory over his chief opponent, a Russian, and had the first and second qualifiers, Capt. Phil

Scurry fails on no-hit bid

By The Associated Press

Shreveport left-hander Rod Scurry saw no-hitter hopes dashed and San Antonio hurler John Poloni saw hopes of a 10th consecutive victory go down the drain Wednesday night as Shreveport defeated San Antonio 6-3 in the Texas League.

In other games Arkansas beat Amarillo 6-4, Lafayette shaded El Paso 3-1 and Midland clubbed Jackson 6-2.

Scurry had a no-hitter going two outs into the seventh inning before San Antonio's Jerry Ready singled. Scurry was knocked out of the box in the eighth, but collected the decision, his fifth against four losses.

Poloni's string of nine straight triumphs was broken by pairs of Shreveport runs in the second and fourth innings and single tallies in the fifth and eighth. He now stands 9-3.

Amarillo outhit Arkansas 1513 and left 16 runners on base in losing to the Travelers. Lefthander Bob Owchinki went all the way for Amarillo to absorb his first loss against two victories. Steve Stamiland, 4-8, twirled his second etraight shutout in winning for Arkansas.

The Lafayette Drillers scored twice in the first inning and once in the fifth to defeat El Paso. Dave Fuqua, 3-3, was the winner and Bobby Nolan, 10-2, took the loss.

ROMANIA'S NADIA Comaneci performs a perfect flip as she propels herself off the balance beam to win a gold medal in the Olympic womem's all-around gymnastics competition at the Montreal Forum Wednesday evening.

Bowie, Charlie feud in D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Finley-Kuhn baseball feud has moved into the halls of Congress.

Charlie Finley, the cantankerous owner of the Oakland A's, and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn used a House committee as a sounding board for their differences Wednesday

No end to the feud is in sight, but three other baseball owners told the congressmen they agreed with Kuhn in his recent decision to nullify Finley's sale of three Oakland A's stars for $3.5 million.

Finley told the Select House Committee on Professional Sports that Kuhn was trying to drive him from baseball by nullifying the sale and by past fines. Finley is contesting Kuhn's action in federal court.

KUHN SAID he made the decision in the best interests of all baseball.

The sports hearings, which are expected to stretch into the fall, continue today with professional hockey figures as the witnesses.

The House panel is taking testimony from all major U.S. professional sports in an effort to decide whether to write or revise laws governing such matters as expansion, franchise shifts, labor problems, violence in sports and tax and antitrust statutes. The committee is expected to make legislative recommendatons by the end of the year.

The baseball owners who sided with Kuhn were John Galbreath of Pittsburgh, Bud Selig of Milwaukee and Robert Howsam of Cincinnati.

PETE ROZELLE, commissioner of the National Football League, also testified Wednesday, saying he thought everyone involved in Finley's aborted sales—including both Finley and Kuhn—acted legally.

Finley sold Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million each, and Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million.

Finley told the 13-member committee that Kuhn exceeded the authority granted him by baseball's owners.

"The (major league) agreement does not permit the commissioner to go hog wild or give him carte blanche," insisted Finley.

WHEN ASKED by Rep. Don Clausen, R-N.Y., if he thought Kuhn's decision was an attempt to drive him from baseball, Finley replied, "Yes, sir!"

He cited what he said were four unfair fines by Kuhn that cost him $7,500. "I can't figure the man out," said Finley. "I don't think he likes me."

Kuhn at first declined to discuss the decision because of the litigation, but was drawn into making a few comments.

To Rep. Silvio Conte, RMass., Kuhn said, "If the best interests are to be served, you have to look for the overall benefits for the game and not for individuals."

Women seeking acceptance

By SALLY QUINN The Washington Post

MONTREAL — Wednesday was a big day for the women athletes in Olympic Village. They got their sex cards.

Actually they look more like driver's licenses, small laminated cards with pictures on them. The women must carry them at all times. To prove they are women.

Naturally only the ones who passed the original sex test got cards. The original test consists of taking a small scraping out of the inside of the mouth to determine the number of chromosomes in a woman. Too many male chromosomes and you've had it, no matter how you're built.

The test doesn't hurt at all, and it only takes a minute or 2, but the women are not pleased by it. Oh, they laugh and make jokes about it. But it bothers them.

JAN ROMARY is the liaison for the women athletes. She has been on six Olympic teams as a fencer and in Mexico was the first American woman to carry the flag. She's sort of philosophical about the test.

"In the past," she recalled, "other countries would put real ringers in. They'd have men competing in women's sporting events, especially in track and field and skiing. They'd dress like women.

"After the test we noticed a lot of Eastern European 'women' retiring. And I remember in Melbourne there was a shot-putter who, if she didn't shave every day, was in real trouble."

The tests, she says, do not prove a person is a woman; they just prove that person is not a man.

"THERE WOULD be guys in drag in the women's dormitories, and nobody ever challenged them. What were they going to say, 'Prove you're a woman?'"

"The shoulders on some of these East German girls are something else," she said, then rolled her eyes.

"Some of the women can be very masculinelooking, and especially in past Games there were some around you wouldn't want to meet in a dark alley. I don't know whether they are hermaphroof both."

ven them a little

Romary, 52, married with children, said she can think of several cases when, immediately after the results of the tests came out, the officials have been very closemouthed about those who didn't pass.

"WHEN SOMEONE fell in that category," she says, "They usually just became 'ill' and went home."

Kate Schmidt, a fine javelin thrower who has a chance to win a gold medal this week, thinks the sex tests are funny, too.

"It's kind of a necessary evil," she said. "But I'm sure it goes through every girl's mind, even if she's Miss America, that there's some doubt. If someone goes to the trouble to test you, then you think, "Oh my God, what am I going to do if I fail, go home and say, 'Hi mom, hi dad, I'm your son?'

"It's degrading."

One of the concerns of many American women has been the attitude of American society toward athletic females. Ice skating has always been regarded as feminine and acceptable, and swimming has been okay, but not AS okay. Recently, thanks to Olga Korbut and the attractive young girls in gymnastics, that too has gained acceptance.

BUT WOMEN athletes who still suffer from the stigma of being masculine are in track and field.

Schmidt, 22, has been throwing the javelin since she was about 13. "I was unusual," she says. "When all my friends liked the Beatles, I was listening to classical music, playing the violin and throwing javelin. But I've always done things that others didn't do."

She said her parents wanted her to go into education. "They were never keyed on track and field," she said. "But the acceptance of women athletes in the last few years has been almost phenomenal. Just to notice the sociological chance in people."

"Part of the change may have been my own growth and confidence, but part of it has to be the women's movement. Success is now more acceptable for women, and beauty is incorporated into success. We have to credit Billie Jean King with a lot of this. Her attitude has been so persuasive."

KATE HAS had a boyfriend over the years, and she says she simply doesn't waste time with men who are immature about her javelinthrowing. "I have found there are enough men in the world who appreciate and respect physical strength in a woman, who want a woman to be able to take care of herself. There are plenty of guys like that in track and field."

Maren Seidler, 25, is the best woman shotputter in America. This is her third Olympics. Maren weighs a little more than 200 pounds. She is a big woman, and she feels the stigma more than Schmidt.

"The issue becomes real clear in the shot put," she says. "Tennis and gym have always been accepted. In Europe women athletes are held in high esteem; they are given a lot more attention. In our country it has changed, but it hasn't changed the way it needs to. Until that change we're not going to make any progress. I'm the best in America. But I don't have a ghost of a chance against some of the East Europeans.

SEIDLER THINKS that "male athletes are very, very supportive, and you do find other men's attitudes changing some. They are willing to accept women athletes. But like if I'm training and lifting weights, they'll leave, because I'm stronger and a threat."

"But," she said, "If that bothers them then I don't have to bother with them. I see what I do as a matter of pride, nothing to be ashamed of.

McMillan eyes gold for fans

MONTREAL (AP) — Kathy McMillan, American record holder in the women's long jump, hasn't forgotten how people in her hometown of Raeford, N.C. used to raise money to send her to track and field meets. And now she wants to repay them by winning a gold medal at the 1976 Olympic Games.

"I want to win the gold medal for all the nice people back home—and, of course, for myself," said Miss McMillan, who will be competing in the first track and field final of the Games Friday.

Three years ago, Kathy was a sophomore at Hoke County High School in Raeford and ineligible to have her fare paid by the Amateur Athletic Union because she had not met AAU qualifications in her event. The townspeople began scraping together their funds. They collected enough money to send her to a meet at prestigious Madison Square Garden in New York.

KATHY FINISHED a disappointing fifth in the AAU meet, but admitted she was scared, because it was her first major competition. The people at home, however, were not disappointed in her. They continued to raise money for her at out-of-town meets until, before long, she jumped the required AAU distance, and the august amateur body picked up her plane tabs.

Now, Kathy again has created excitement in the little farming community, some 30 miles southwest of Fayetteville in the tobacco lands of North Carolina. They are rooting hard for her to bring home the gold medal to the hamlet of less than 3,000 population. Her biggest rooters are her father, a brick mason; her mother, an assistant kindergarten teacher and teacher's aide; her four brothers, and her three sisters.

"My family just tells me to do my best and they will still love me," said Kathy, a freshman at Tennessee State University and a protege of the school's well-known coach, Ed Temple, whose athletes have produced 11 Olympic gold medals, all in running events.

"MY FATHER tells me not to get big-headed," added Kathy. "And my coach (high school Coach Billy Colston) and my school superintendent have told me to be myself and not get a big head."

Kathy yearns for Colston. "I wish he were here; he put in all the time with me before the Olympics." But she is confident she can win without him.

"Being up against the world record holder (East Germany's Sigrun Siegl set the mark of 22 feet, 11 1-4 inches this year, compared to Kathy's U.S. record of 22-3), doesn't bother me," said the confident, determined Miss McMillan. "I've been doing better than usual in practice, probably because I now have people to jump with. Normally, I have to practice on my own."

Kathy probably could have bettered her career best of 22-3 at last month's Olympic Trials in Eugene, Ore., but she suffered a pulled hamstring in her left leg two days before the meet and competed in pain.

Smith's cramming nets HRs

By The Associated Press

When Reggie Smith was with St. Louis earlier in the season he had a hunch he might be traded, so he took a cram course. His subjects were the Cardinal pitchers.

The hunch came true last month when the Cards dealt him to Los Angeles and now Smith is teaching a slam course...and the St. Louis hurlers are receiving failing marks.

Smith has hit five home runs in a Los Angeles uniform...all in the last 10 games...and all against the Cardinals. Two of them came Wednesday as the Dodgers topped St. Louis 7-6 in 10 innings.

"I WOULD BE lying if I didn't say that I got more satisfaction hitting this way against the Cardinals," Smith admitted. "But the main satisfaction is the fact we won the game. It seemed like my name kept coming up in trade talks all the time, so I just made an extra effort to study the Cardinals' pitchers. I guess it paid off."

In other National League contests, the Cincinnati Reds blanked the New York Mets 4-0, the Philadelphia Phillies trimmed the San Diego Padres 5-1, the Pittsburgh Pirates took a pair from the Houston Astros 5-1 and 4-1, the Montreal Expos nipped the Atlanta Braves 4-3 and the San Francisco Giants edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1.

While Smith jolted his former St. Louis teammates with solo homers—his 12th and 13th—in the third and fifth innings and a pair of singles, another exCardinal, pinch hitter Ted Sizemore, singled home an unearned run in the bottom of the 10th inning off St. Louis relief ace Al Hrabosky to give the Dodgers the victory.

The revenge motive wasn't as strong for Sizemore, who began his major league career with the Dodgers and was traded back to them this year after spending five seasons with St. Louis.

"BEATING THE Cards is like beating anyone else," he said. "Really, I can't say I get any more enjoyment out of beating my old club."

Reds 4, Mets 0

Fred Norman retired 21 of the first 22 batters and extended his career record at Riverfront Stadium to 30-7 with a four-hitter. The 32-year-old lefthander, senior member of the Reds' staff, allowed only a fourth-inning triple by John Milner until the eighth.

The Reds got the only run Norman needed against Jon Matlack in the fourth inning when Ken Griffey singled, stole second and scored on a single by Joe Morgan. Pete Rose delivered a sacrifice fly in the fifth and Morgan led off the sixth with a double, stole his third base of the game and scored on a wild pitch.

Phillies 5, Padres 1

Jim Kaat won his 10th game with ninth-inning help from Gene Garber whille Tommy Hutton hit a three-run homer, his first of the season. Kaat is baseball's winningest active pitcher with a 245-191 mark. Jay Johnstone led the Phils' 11-hit attack with a double and two singles.

Pirates 5-4, Astros 1-1

Spot starter Larry Demery allowed two hits after flirting with a no-hitter for 62-3 innings in the nightcap. In the opener, Jerry Reuss scattered nine hits and Bill Robinson socked a tworun homer. Pittsburgh's Frank Taveras stole three bases in the twin bill to take over the NL lead with 32.

Demery, making only his fourth start of the season, had a no-hitter until Jose Cruz singled with two out in the seventh.

"I guess I made one mistake," Demery said. "I shouldn't have thrown a change-up to Cruz for that first hit. I was aware all the way that I had a no-hitter going and was just trying to keep from thinking about it. I guess my control was the best it ever has been in any game where I went over a couple of innings."

Expos 4, Braves 3

Montreal erased a three-run deficit in the sixth on Jose Morales' two-run pinch single and a game-tying hit by pinch hitter Tim Foli. The Expos then pushed across the winner in the seventh on a walk, Mike Jorgensen's third hit, another walk and Larry Parrish's grounder. Reliever Dale Murray notched his first victory of the season after eight losses.

Giants 2, Cubs 1

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the top of the ninth on Joe Wallis' homer off John Montefusco, who hurled a three-hitter, but the Giants came back with two in the bottom of the ninth. Marty Perez and Gary Matthews opened the rally with singles and Bobby Murcer punched a bunt into left field for a run-scoring double. Chris Speier's sacrifice fly produced the winning run.

John Linville resigns as Cameron grid head

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — A committee is to be appointed to find a replacement for former Cameron University head football coach John Linville, who resigned Wednesday to take a position in private business.

Cameron's president, Dr. Don Owen, announced Linville's resignation.

After being head football coach for two and one half years, Linville said at a news conference he will be employed as a sales representative for Continental Synthetic Surfaces International in early August.

"It was an opportunity for financial goals I couldn't reach through coaching," Linville said. "The offer came through yesterday."

In the last two years, Cameron's football team won 17 while losing five and tying one. The team went to the national NAIA playoffs against Texas A&I in 1975, but lost 21-19.

Last year, Linville's team elected to go the NCAA route bud did not make the playoffs.

Linville, 43, began his coaching career in 1954 as an assistant at Sherman High School in Texas. Most of his coaching experience was in Texas, including duties as recruiting coordinator at Rice University before coming to Cameron.

U.S. tops Yugoslavia

THE BASKETBALL team, now 3-0 in the round-robin tournament, trailed tough Yugoslavia by four points at halftime and had all three centers in foul trouble before pulling out a 112-93 decision behind Scott May, with 26 points, and Adrian Dantley, with 27.

Russia also remained unbeaten with a 108-85 rout of Canada. The Americans automatically go to 4-0 tonight when they pick up a forfeit against Egypt, which has withdrawn its team from the Games.

Davey Armstrong, Puyallup, Wash., gave a classic performance of boxing and punching in a unanimous decision over Anatoly Volkov, the Russian who stopped him in two rounds in a bout in Moscow early this year.

The attention of the Games, however, was riveted on little Nadia and her flying exhibitions in the finals of the women's all-around gymnastics. And she didn't disappoint anyone—unless it was her Russian challengers, Nellie Kim and Ludmila Tourischev, for years the queen of the world's gymnasts. Miss Kim eventually finished second, Miss Tourischev third.

NADIA, COOL and almost forbidding out of the gymnasium, scored her fourth and fifth perfect 10 scores, this time on the balance beam and uneven parallel bars. Before these Games, no score of 10 had been awarded in Olympic competition. She finished with a total score of 79.275 of a possible 80.

Catfish still has A's number

By The Associated Press

The Oakland A's haven't been the same since Catfish Hunter left—and no one knows it better than Catfish Hunter.

"Oakland doesn't have the defense now," says the New York Yankee pitcher.

On Wednesday night, they didn't have the offense, either— losing a 10-1 decision to their former teammate.

"There are only four guys playing regularly on the A's now," said Hunter. "And there are only 10 players at the most who are still there that I played with in 1974."

HUNTER, WHO came to the Yankees after escaping from Oakland through a legal loophole in his contract, has treated the onetime world champions with utter disdain since 1974. Hunter holds a 5-1 edge over the team he once led to three world titles.

It is only the shell of a team that was once the scourge of the American League, however. Hunter's departure triggered an exodus of good players including outfielder Reggie Jackson and pitcher Ken Holtzman.

"They still have a good team," said Hunter, "and they may yet be able to win their division this year. It would be a hard road, but they can do it."

In the other American League games, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers 6-4 in 12 innings; the Minnesota Twins turned back the Boston Red Sox 5-1; the Chicago White Sox took a doubleheader from the Detroit Tigers 4-1 and 3-0; the Milwaukee Brewers stopped the Kansas City Royals 5-0 and the Cleveland Indians defeated the California Angels 6-2.

HUNTER, 12-8, scattered nine hits and got ample batting support from Thurman Munson. The Yankee catcher drove in five runs with a three-run homer and two singles.

THE ONLY RUN OFF Hunter came in the first, on Joe Rudi's RBI single. Munson hit his home run in the fifth inning and runscoring singles in the first and eighth.

"I haven't had too many laughers this year and even when I had a good lead, I usually gave up three or four runs in the last couple of innings to tighten things up," said Hunter.

The victory kept the Yankees' lead in the AL East at an imposing 12 gmes over Baltimore.

"Our main challenger now is the Yankees themselves," said New York Manager Billy Martin. "We have to keep playing winning baseball and taking each game at a time."

Orioles 6, Rangers 4

Paul Blair, hitting only .206 at game time, socked a two-run homer off Joe Hoerner in the top of the 12th inning to lead Baltimore over Texas. Blair's blast, his second of the season, followed a walk to Bobby Grich and gave the victory to reliever Tippy Martinez, 3-0.

Reggie Jackson hit his 14th home run in the first off Texas starter Bert Blyleven and Ken Singleton added a two-run single in the seventh to account for Baltimore's other runs.

Twins 5, Red Sox 1

Bob Randall drove in two runs with a third-inning double to help Dave Goltz and Minnesota defeat Boston.

Goltz, 8-8, stopped a personal five-game losing streak as he pitched the first seven innings. Rick Wise, 7-8, started for the Red Sox, but was lifted after three innings.

White Sox 4-3, Tigers 1-0

Lamar Johnson drove in two runs and pitcher Chris Knapp won his first major league game with a four-hitter as Chicago beat Detroit in the first game of a doubleheader.

Bucky Dent drilled a two-run triple in the fourth inning and Bart Johnson scattered six hits to carry Chicago to a sweep in the second game.

Brewers 5, Royals 0

Von Joshua and Tim Johnson collected two hits apiece as Milwaukee beat Kansas City with the help of six errors by the Royals.

The victory went to Bill Travers, 11-7, who gave up four hits in 62-3 innings, walked six, threw two wild pitches and hit two batters. Al Fitzmorris, 11-6, who made one of the Royals' errors, was victimized by the faulty support.

Indians 6, Angels 2

Charlie Spikes drove in three runs and Rick Waits scattered seven hits as Cleveland beat California.

Waits, 4-4, outdueled California ace Nolan Ryan, 7-12. The Indians took the lead for good at 3-2 with two runs in the fourth inning on Spikes' two-run single.

Cage merger back on track

NEW YORK (AP) — The pro basketball merger that had appeared in jeopardy seems to be back on the right track today following the removal of two roadblocks.

The National Basketball Association and its Players Association reached a tentative settlement Wednesday of their differences over the Oscar Robertson antitrust suit.

And the four American Basketball Association teams included in the merger agreement settled their problems with the St. Louis-Utah franchise, which is not slated for the merged league.

DETAILS OF the settlements were not released.

On Tuesday, after daylong negotiations, NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien said he was not optimistic that the league's differences with its players could be eliminated.

Federal Judge Robert L. Carter said Tuesday if the differences were not settled in a few days a trial of the Robertson suit might be held in the fall. The class-action suit claims the NBA's common draft and option clause violated antitrust laws.

But on Wednesday, the two sides met with Carter, who is overseeing the suit and the merger, and tentatively settled their differences.

THE AGREEMENT still needs the approval of the NBA Board of Governors, composed of the owners of the 18 NBA teams. O'Brien said the board would be notified today and the results of its vote on the agreement probably would be known by Monday. A three-fourths majority, 14 yes votes, are needed for approval. O'Brien said the NBA's Advisory Board of five team presidents favored the agreement.

"I have changed from pessimistic to reasonably optimistic," said O'Brien. "If it is approved, we would expect court approval of the Robertson settlement and the signing of documents with the ABA expansion teams to occur in a matter of days."

The two sides had reached a tentative settlement of the Robertson suit in February and Carter approved that in principle. But two weeks ago, about the time Carter was prepared to approve the settlement, the players went back to court. They claimed the league was violating the spirit of the agreement by offering top rookies long-term contracts at less pay than top rookies in the past.

THE OWNERS contended the agreement said nothing about the length of contracts, only that they had to offer rookies minimum salaries.

The other difficulty had centered on the amount of money the St. Louis-Utah franchise would receive for its players in a dispersal draft. But ABA counsel Bob Carlson said Wednesday that had been ironed out and he expects final papers on the agreement to be signed shortly.

On Tuesday, Carter refused the St.Louis-Utah request for a temporary restraining order holding up the merger until the money problem was settled.

The New York Nets, Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers and San Antonio Spurs are due to join the NBA for the coming season. ABA teams in Kentucky and St. Louis-Utah were left out.

Sam Driskill threw a no-hitter Wednesday night as the Stadium Sports took an 11-0 victory over the Permian Corp. Rebels in the City Sophomore League playoff series at Redfern Field.

Cliff Collyer also had a two-bagger for the Sports, who along with the Rebels,will play in the District Sophomore Tournament in Abernathy next week.

Heginio Corrales was the loser for the Rebels who used three pitchers.

McKay going back to drawing board

By JEFF PRUGH
The Los Angeles Times

TAMPA — The scenario was vintage John McKay.

As storm clouds blackened the Gulf Coast sky the other day, the head coach of the fledgling Tampa Bay Buccanners momentarily halted practice. He pointed earnestly to the approaching thunderstorm and cried, "Go away! Go away! Go away!"

And just like that, the clouds blew away and the Buccaneers' training camp remained as dry as their coach's wit.

If ever McKay needed the sense of humor that pacified the alumni during his 16 years at USC, he surely will need it as coach of one of the National Football League's two newest expansion teams. Seattle is the other.

There is no O.J. Simpson or Ricky Bell or Mike Garrett to make the Bucs' running game remind anybody of USC's famed Power I. There is no Wild Bunch to make life miserable for rival quarterbacks.

It's now back to the drawing board for McKay, who ate 53 will make his professional coaching debut against the Rams Saturday night, July 31, in The Times Charity Game at the Coliseum.

"See Chuck Knox vs. McKay," said McKay, grinning as he parodied the pregame sales pitch to Rams fans. "See McKay's return to the Coliseum..."

He lit a cigar (Tampa-made, of course) and envisioned a hostile reception.

"They'll all be be taking their best shots at me," he said. "Well, just tell 'em to pay their money. I plan to show up."

His manner was carefree, shoot-from-the-lip. It was apparent that the heat is off McKay for a change. Suddenly he is not burdened by the extreme urgency to win that often made him a tense, brooding man beneath his standup-comig exterior at USC.

For expansion clubs like Tampa Bay, the future is not now but next year. Or maybe the year after next.

And for McKay, the pay is good. He has a five-year contract estimated at $2 million in salary and fringe benefits, including a $350,000 waterfront home and $250,000 in Florida real estate.

Then, too, he has an opportunity to write a unique chapter in NFL coaching history. He is the league's only coach fresh from the collegiate ranks to take over a first-year expansion team.

Skeptics, however, say building a winner may be too much to ask. Others wonder if McKay will stumble as did other ex-college coaches who jumped to the pros (Tommy Prothro, Dan Devine, John Ralston, Chuck Fairbanks). McKay says no other departing college coach has taken on a bigger challenge, but he adds, "I want to see if it really can be done."

Tampa Bay is a patched-together team likely to be lightly regarded during its incubation years. There is a retread quarterback, Steve Spurrier, acquire- from San Francisco; ex-Oakland tight end Bob Moore; former USC stars Johnny McKay (the coach's son), Manfred Moore and Jimmy Gunn, and two prize rookies, linemen, Leroy and Dewey Selmon, from Oklahoma.

Beyond this framework, McKay has a grab-bag assortment of NFL hand-me-downs, little-known rookies, free agents and even World Football League castoffs.

Added problem: A siege of intestinal disorders known as "Montezuma's revenge."

When 20 players had to excuse themselves from practice the other day, somebody wondered if McKay would have to postpone a scrimmage the next afternoon.

"We'll scrimmage tomorrow," McKay said, "if Montezuma leaves town."

For now, at least, McKay's change of scenery seems to agree with him. He appears more relaxed, more engaging away from the public glare than during his USC tenure, when the alumni demanded "Rose Bowl or else!"

Gone, too, are the recruiting wars, the headaches over players' entrance exams, the fights with history profs to keep 260-pound tackles, scholastically eligible.

"It's easier now in the off season — I'm home a lot more," said McKay, relaxing over drinks that practice. "But during the season, it's harder. The seasons are longer now."

McKay and his wife, Corky, reside only minutes from the Bucs' offices and adjoining practice facility. Their youngest son, Richie, 17, has enrolled in a nearby high school where he will play quarterback this fall.

"This whole area is like a big San Diego," McKay said. "Lots of water and recreation. We like it here. The people in Tampa have been wonderful, but so were the people in L.A. I feel, eventually, when the time comes, we'll return to Newport Beach and call it a career."

In the meantime, McKay approaches his job almost as if he'd been granted a new lease on life. Players who knew him at USC are particularly perceptive of changes in the man who won four national championships and compiled a 127-40-8 record.

Running back Charlie Evans, a Trojan fullback before playing for the New York Giants, believes McKay is more responsive to players now.

"Remember, he was dealin' with a bunch of kids just out of high school, so maybe he had to be above us," Evans recalled. "Now, it's like he's one of us. He's makin' a living ... and so are we."

Olympics just fine for Teofilo

By DWIGHT CHAPIN
The Los Angeles Times

MONTREAL — The world's best-known amateur boxer was stretched out like a giant iguana on the lawn near the entrance to the Olympic Village.

Teofilo Stevenson had twice stood up an interviewer. Of course, the Cuban heavyweight didn't see it that way.

"I tell you twice to be at this other place, and you no there," he said. "So I come here."

And just what was he doing waiting like a one-man welcoming committee on the village green?

"How you call it in English?" he asked. "I am watching the girls."

A LOT of them were watching back.

Depending on which report you choose to believe, Teofilo (pronounced Tay-o-fee-lo) Stevenson is 24, 25 or 26 years old, stands 6-4 or 6-5 and weighs 220, 225 or 235 pounds.

It's almost impossible to tell one athlete from another in the village. Nearly all dress in track suits, Levis or bathing suits.

But Stevenson is a fashion plate who wears not the orange uniform of his country but stylish clothes in a kaleidoscope of colors. And, unlike the other athletes, he doesn't rush from one appointment to the next. He saunters and preens, seeing and being seen.

It was different at Munich, in 1972, when he was relatively unheralded. But he won a gold medal there, dismantling American Duane Bobick along the way, then took the 1974 World Games heavyweight title and the 1975 Pan-American Games championship. In Cuba, one of the major emerging athletic countries of the world, he is the top attraction.

THERE ARE those who think that, given time and tutelage, he would be the No. 1 contender for Muhammad Ali's professional title.

But that, of course, is not to be.

"Ali is pro," Stevenson says in English that's pretty good when he wants it to be. "The only way I could fight him is if my Olympic committee asked me to, and they no do that now."

"I have plenty friends in Tavana, all over Cuba," he says. "I am the center of attention now."

He's reportedly had several offers from promoters — including two for $1 million — to turn pro but has quickly spurned them.

"What is a million dollars against eight million Cubans who love me?" he said.

The question is, will they love him if he loses here?

THE SPIRAL hasn't been ever upward for Stevenson since Munich. Soviet heavyweight Igor Visotsky, who isn't on the Russian Olympic team because he has a tendency to cut, decisioned Stevenson in Havana last year, and knocked him out in the third round recently in Minsk.

Asked about that, Stevenson responded as if he just came out of the "I wuz robbed" school.

"I tell you," he said, "the Russian gave me a good lick. My head was not clear for about three seconds. But the floor was wet or I no would have fallen down. I felt good after my head cleared but the referee stopped the fight. I could not understand why."

Some have said Stevenson has made no progress since Munich — and perhaps has even regressed — because he has no capable sparring partners in Cuba. It's been reported he's been working with 160-pounders.

PAT NAPPI, coach of the U.S. Olympic boxing team, says, "I don't think he'll win a gold medal here. He's lost that speed and that punch. He's rusty. Not enough work."

Stevenson denies that.

"At this moment I am in best shape of my life," he says. "That is one of the reasons I lose to the Russian. I not in shape then. I prepare for the Olympics, not that fight.

"I am better now than four years ago because I am older and have more experience. It will be a little harder here because I am the favorite but I am ready for that."

Stevenson wouldn't pick a top potential rival from the field, but did say he thought Bobick "was much better than the American heavyweight (John Tate) this time will be."

Information on Stevenson — from himself or any other source — comes with difficulty.

HE'S FROM Havana, where his father, Lawrence — now retired — worked in a sugar mill. He has two sisters and two brothers, neither of whom box. He likes "modern music — the Cuban bands — and I am fan of Barry White. No, I no hear him on records in Havana; I hear him here." And he obviously likes girls.

"But I would not want to be married," he said. "I have too much fun as bachelor."

For a man of such imposing size, he has remarkable quickness. He says he has run a 10.4 100 meters, and rather than do the miles and miles of roadwork many fighters do. Stevenson prefers a series of 100-meter sprints each morning at dawn.

He says he will fight six more years "and one more Olympics."

U.S. help needed

There were no surprises when the results of the Mexican presidential election were announced. Jose Lopez Portillo, who was unopposed on the ballot, will begin his six-year term on December 1.

Because of the one-sided nature of Mexico's political campaigns, Mr. Lopez Portillo did not have to define issues and his election did not receive much attention in the U. S. press.

It should have. The president-elect traveled widely and talked to millions of Mexican citizens about the problems of our neighbor — which are the problems that he will face in the near future. By the standards of the Western industrial society they are monumental.

Mexico's population today is 62 million. By the time that Mr. Lopez Portillo leaves office it will be 78 million; by 1980, 130 million.

Government-sponsored studies indicate that fully 37 per cent of the Mexican people live in one-room houses, 57 per cent have no toilet facilities in their homes and the country is 2.5 million houses short of its needs. To catch up, Mexico would have to build 600,000 homes a year. It is building 80,000.

Nobody is certain what the unemployment rate is in Mexico, but the underemployed rate, representing those who will take any job to keep body and soul together, is estimated at 40 per cent of the working force. No programs in sight can create the jobs that are needed, and thousands upon thousands of Mexicans from rural areas continue to pour into cities because their situation is worse, further aggravating the situation.

These are social and political pressures that Mr. Lopez Portillo will find difficult to address, even more difficult to contain if a fuse is lighted. It also is a ripe field for exploitation by extremists in the wings, Communists and such groups as the 23rd of September gang of terrorists. Desperate people are not always rational people.

The United States cannot look at Mexico's problems dispassionately. We already are feeling a part of her agonies with our illegal alien problem. And if we think that the number of illegal aliens in the United States today is at crisis level or that the flow of drugs from Mexico is alarming, we haven't seen anything yet if the overpopulation and unemployment growth in Mexico continue at the present rate.

The ultimate answer that Mr. Lopez Portillo is seeking is economic. He must do all that he can to reduce the annual 3.5 per cent population growth and at the same time create a business climate that invites private investment, particularly from the United States.

It is in the self-interest of the United States to do all possible to assist him.

Economic aid race

The Communist countries are big on political encouragement for the Third World but short on real help.

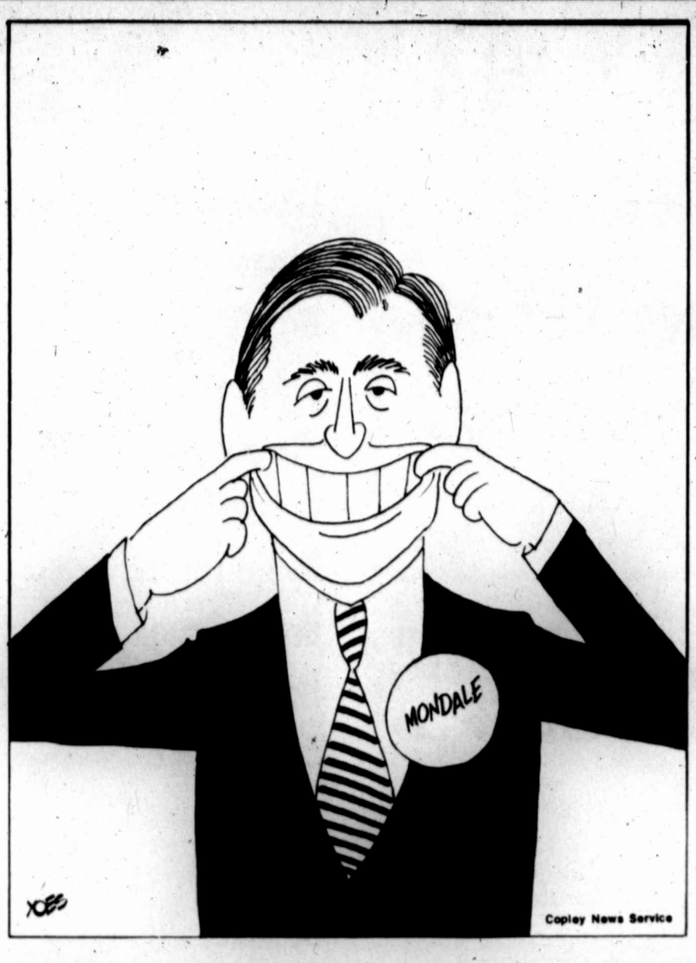

They spent only $1.2 billion on foreign aid last year while the West spent $17 billion and the oil-exporting nations $5 billion. And less than a third of the Communist foreign aid went to the very poor nations who need it most.

Many of these underdeveloped countries still vote regularly against American interests in the United Nations, while we fund direct economic aid at $5 billion a year and give generously through international institutions.

If economic determinism means anything, sooner or later the nations of the Third World are going to see that Communist talk is cheap.

They will have to look to the West for the capital and technology they must have to develop their resources.

They may sense that already. That may be why so few of them have taken the plunge into socialism, Moscow or Peking style.

The Amy-Miss Lillian threat worries GOP

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Republican strategists met this week to discuss the Democratic National Convention and the Carter-Mondale ticket. They were worried about what they had seen on television.

One of them said, "I think we can handle Carter and Mondale, but what are we going to do about the kid and the mother?"

"What kid and what mother?" someone else asked.

"Amy Carter and Miss Lillian. An 8-year-old kid and a 77-year-old mother are a tough combination to beat, particularly when they're both eager to campaign."

"Our research people have been trying to dig up stuff on them. You know the kid doubled the price on lemonade she was selling to reporters in Plains, Ga., from a nickel to a dime. Can we do anything with that?"

"Only if we want to knock the free enterprise system. Don't forget one of the planks of our platform is to let the businessman charge whatever the lemonade market will permit. By doubling her price when there was a shortage, Amy was following the Republican philosophy. If we attack her on the lemonade issue, it could backfire on us."

"I guess you're right. Are there any skeletons in her closet that we can leak to the press?"

"We found one skeleton, but it was from a Halloween party she went to last year. We can't do anything with that."

"There's got to be something. An 8-year-old kid is always getting into trouble. Has she hit any kids in school?"

"If she has, they aren't talking. You know how Southerners clam up when someone comes around asking questions."

"Okay, let's forget the kid for a moment. What have we got on the mother?"

"Nothing. She looks like everybody's mother, or at least like everybody would like his mother to look. Frankly I think we better lay off Miss Lillian or we could get a lot of voters angry at us."

"Good grief. This woman is dangerous. She could wipe us out on the talk shows. We can't stand by and let her steal the election from us."

"We better tread carefully," one of the strategists said. "Miss Lillian is a personal friend of Walter Cronkite's. She spent the whole evening with him in the booth on nomination night. If we go after her, Walter's going to be furious."

"We can't allow Walter to get mad at us," someone agreed.

"All right, wise guys. We can't touch Amy, and you say we have to lay off Miss Lillian. At the same time you all agree the combination of the two of them could murder us. What do we do?"

"We have to find our own Amy and Miss Lillian."

"Yeh, but don't forget neither one of them has chosen his Vice President yet. They've got to choose a VP who has an 8-year-old daughter and a 77-year-old mother. I say we start a search now for a vice presidential candidate who can provide both."

"That's not going to be easy," someone warned.

"But it's possible. I want you to go over every Republican list you have and find someone who can fit the bill."

"Well, she can start learning. We'll get the Marriott Corporation to build her a lemonade stand."

"Okay, but we may have trouble with the mother. She doesn't believe her son should be Vice President. She says politics is a dirty business and she wants no part of it."

"How does she feel about Walter Cronkite?"

"She never watches him. She prefers Brinkley and Chancellor."

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

Reagan forces may 'steal' votes

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The epic struggle for the Republican presidential nomination is so close that Ronald Reagan's aides may resort to stealing delegates away from President Ford.

Some delegates are bound by law to support the President at least on the first ballot. Their votes belong to Ford, but their hearts belong to Reagan.

In secret strategy sessions, Reagan aides have toyed with the idea of asking these delegates to abstain as long as their state laws require them to honor the primary verdicts. This would prevent the President from ringing up an early-ballot victory. Then, in subsequent ballots, they could legally switch to Reagan.

For example, Ford won 25 delegates in North Carolina and 19 in Kentucky. In both states, they are obliged to vote for Ford only on the first ballot. The President's five Nevada delegates must vote for him on the first two ballots.

The Reagan strategists believe they could pirate several Ford delegates from these three states. If the delegates would sit out the first ballot or two, Reagan could wind up with their votes.

We discussed this plot with the President's political aides, who seemed concerned that it might succeed. They conceded that most of the Kentucky, Nevada and North Carolina delegates, who are legally committed to Ford, are really "Reagan men."

They might hold out on Ford and cast their ballots later for Reagan, the presidential aides acknowledged. The plot is an "immoral attempt to disenfranchise the voters," declared one Ford official.

To counter the move, the President's forces may ask the Republican National Committee to adopt a convention resolution compelling each state delegation to honor the primary results. The committee, since it is stacked with friends of Ford, might be able to block the Reagan strategy.

Sources inside the Reagan camp, meanwhile, acknowledged that the delegate-stealing scheme hasn't been abandoned.

OVER-THE-COUNTER POT: In the paneled board rooms of some large corporations, the executives are casting covetous eyes on the multibillion-dollar marijuana market.

The secret estimates indicate marijuana users are now smoking $4 billion worth of pot per year. If marijuana were legalized, the market could soar to $10 billion annually.

This is enough pot to tempt the biggest of businesses. In anticipation of the day pot will be made legal, some alcohol and tobacco companies already are making production plans.

Government-sponsored tests at the University of Mississippi have produced an experimental marijuana five or six times stronger than the pot now sold on the streets. Tobacco companies, therefore, have set aside choice southern land for future marijuana harvests, competent sources report.

Some firms have even registered trademarks on brand names, lifted straight from marijuana street lingo. Since trademarks cannot be issued for illegal products, the companies are using them temporarily on other obscure tobacco items.

Once marijuana is legalized, the firms can switch the trademarks, say, from cigars to pot.

The corporate executives are closely watching the status of legislation that would make marijuana legal to market. One corporate representative made a quiet trip to Washington recently to consult with experts on the law. He wanted to know what could be done to speed the legislation along.

Eight states have already decriminalized marijuana use; another 27 are considering similar legislation. There are also bills before the Senate and House which would decriminalize pot possession on the federal level. They will probably be taken up, according to our sources, after the presidential election.

Meanwhile, the marijuana question may become an issue in the election. Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter has already taken a stand in favor of decriminalization.

President Ford has stated his opposition to the idea but has indicated privately he has an open mind on the subject. Ronald Reagan is staunchly against decriminalization. If he gets the GOP nomination, he reportedly plans to attack Carter on the issue.

Footnote: The moving force behind the decriminalization effort, the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, is opposed to any corporate takeover of the marijuana market. Instead, the group advocates using tax revenues generated from marijuana sales for social purposes.

RADAR RESULTS: An unusual veterans' meeting was held recently in Framingham, Mass. Military men and civilians partially blinded by radar microwaves gathered from around the country.

The victims were led by Joseph Towne, known as the "Ralph Nader of microwaves," who came from California. The microwave visitors were seeking ways to expand favorable decisions by the Labor Department and Veterans Administration, which grant disability payments to those with microwave cataracts.

The problem: Cataracts from microwaves often don't develop until a decade or more after radar men and technicians leave their jobs.

NICK THIMMESCH

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — We know that Plains, Ga., will never be the same. We know that two grown men named President Ford and Ronald Reagan crisscross the republic in search of significant slivers — Republican delegates. What we don't know is how Eugene McCarthy, once a U.S. senator, is doing in his presidential campaign.

Egads, McCarthy tells me that he already has signatures enough to get on the ballot in 20 states and will wind up as a choice for voters in 40 to 45 states. Now presidential elections have a way of often being settled in "swing" states like New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, california and Illinois, and McCarthy says he'll be on in all of them.

So if Jimmy Carter and his Republican opponent are locked in a close election — as happened in 1960 and 1968 — McCarthy's votes could be keys to the outcome. McCarthy says that Louis Harris has an unpublished poll showing McCarthy presently getting 10 per cent of the vote against Carter and Mr. Ford.

Which only means there is still a fair amount of voter dissatisfaction with the major parties, the kind of dyspepsia which got George Wallace 10 million votes in 1968, and caused Richard Nixon to sweat out his win over Hubert Humphrey. McCarthy says what he really wants is the "60 per cent who didn't vote in 1974 or the 45 per cent who didn't vote in 1972."

But to get these legions of disgusted or disinterested, McCarthy must have a campaign apparatus. At this point, he doesn't even have the chugging prop plane Wallace used in 1968 or, indeed, any of Wallace's tattered wherewithal.

The McCarthy campaign has no "name" endorsements, tiny staff and skeleton organizations in the states. The candidate is without a running mate, and McCarthy hasn't even come up with a name for his party.

"Independent would be good," he says, "but many states won't allow it. We might call it the Union Party. We'll get some name." (He respectfully accepted my suggestion that he conduct a contest, thus generating interest.)

Nor has the McCarthy campaign attracted much money. His no-name party doesn't qualify for the $21 million the federal government will give the Democratic and Republican presidential campaigns under the new election law.

McCarthy has spent $200,000 in contributions to get on the ballot in that score of states, and says that he'll spend another $200,000 to complete the chore. "We'll need $4 million to $5 million this fall to run a good campaign against the Republicans and Democrats," he says, increasing his budget tenfold with one hopeful remark.

"Assuming Ford is nominated, we'll lump Ford and Carter together," McCarthy says, "there's no real difference anyway. Carter is demagogic in just about everything, and Ford does nothing, so we'll hit the Democrats on the issues.

"Carter's talk about reorganizing the government, cutting the agencies from 1,900 to 200, is ridiculous," McCarthy says. "I can out-reorganize Carter because I spent 16 years in the government. Wherever he promises to reduce, I'll cut it 10 per cent more. I won't go below five agencies because Julius Caesar said that was the ideal number of subordinates to have."

McCarthy charges that Carter talks "sheer nonsense" on tax reform, antitrust and employment programs. "Antitrust is irrelevant to the problems in the auto and oil industries," McCarthy says. "It's not that there are four or eight auto companies, it's that automobiles are wasteful of our resources and must be limited. Increasing the number of oil companies will probably raise prices — it's an energy policy that we need.

"Carter demagogs it on the fence, too. The fat isn't in weapons systems, it's in personnel. Carter says that he's against the B-1 bomber, but tells a machinists' union that he'll change his mind on that after the election."

McCarthy says the Democrats full-employment act is "80 per cent fraud, because it takes care of only 1.5 million unemployed at enormous cost. What we need to do is redistribute existing employment, not set up new expensive programs."

So McCarthy, a son of Watkins, Minn., will be with us in the presidential campaign. There must be something in the Minnesota water the way it produces national politicians.

A while back, Hubert Humphrey was Vice President, McCarthy was senior senator and Walter Mondale, junior senator. Now Mondale runs for Vice President, McCarthy for President and Hubert hopes to become Senate majority leader. They're all in motion.

McCarthy unhorsed President Johnson on the Vietnam issue. In 1976, however, the public doesn't care much for issues, is more interested in integrity, decency and invocations.

But McCarthy has something both President Ford and Jimmy Carter are short on — wit and the stiletto remark. Both might be welcome in holy weeks ahead. It's good that Gene McCarthy is in the political process, if only to give us all a different flavor this fall.

California man makes his own kind of music

By CRAIG MACDONALD
Copley News Service

J. Fred Williams of San Marcos, Calif., makes instruments that would suit an orchestra.

Only he does not make them for an orchestra or even a musician, and his more than 50 instruments are not for sale.

Williams has personally designed and created these instruments in plastics and sometimes wood.

He makes them strictly for pleasure, and does not even seek patents or money for the instruments which are in superb condition.

"I just make them for the fun of making them," said Williams, 74, a retired wood and plastics craftsman. "My grandfather used to have a music store in Ogden, Utah. And memories of strolling through the store probably explains my interest in creating such a variety of instruments."

In 1943, while a foreman in a furniture factory in Los Angeles,

IN YOUR SPARE TIME

Williams became interested in making musical instruments. He saw a magazine article on how to make violins. So he sent for a violin kit.

After putting the kit together he decided to design his own mahogany violin. He then took three courses in plastic-making from the California Institute of Technology.

He made a plastic violin and soon began branching out into other instruments. Once he got an idea, he would sit down and design an instrument, create molds and finish the plastic instrument.

In 1952, Williams made instruments for someone other than himself. He created six sousaphone bells for the Huntingon Park (Calif.) Youth Band, which were used in the Rose Bowl Parade of 1952.

Since the 1940s, Williams has also used plastic in creating shoes, bubbles for magnifying early television pictures, a flying saucer, a round guide for charting moon flights (the National Aeronautics and Space Administration used this model for larger-scale productions) and a drum pedal that can be worked by heel or toe.

Furthermore, Williams built from scratch the equipment he uses to draft his dreams and makes them a reality through a woodcraft or plastic-creation process.

Williams said in the future he plans on making an Irish harp amd some Chinese musical instruments — a far cry from his days as a youth when he carved a small flute and whistle.

Keeping kids in the backyard

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Luring your children to the backyard might be easy, but can you keep them there?

Yes, if interesting play materials are provided — at least there is less chance of boredom. And there's a bonus — the well-planned play yard can be a minivacation for parents.

A group of Chicago women, all mothers, who conduct a project, Parent as Resource, have published a number of little books on child-parent play. One book, "Backyard Vacations," has a number of good ideas for captivating the imagination of children in outdoor play.

The four women members of PAR travel over the United States to provide information to educational groups on parentchild play relationships. They also have conducted television programs on the subject.

An outdoor play area can be as inexpensively simple as large boxes, old tires, bricks, a long board, rope and some old pots and pans, the book points out. You don't need fancy equipment unless you want it. Low picket fencing may confine the area in an attractive way but it isn't really necessary.

For example, for a sandbox, fill an old tire with sand and add pots and pans, empty milk cartons, unbreakable utensils. A balance board may be made by placing a long board over it. A knotted climbing rope from a tree branch can be fun. A swing using two pieces of sturdy rope with a tire or board for a seat is another good idea.

An old barrel can become a tunnel by opening both ends or several boxes could be linked for a long tunnel.

Large packing boxes are ideal for playhouses or "pretend places" — grocery stores, school houses, fire stations or even ticket windows. A parent should help with projects which involve cutting window or door space with a knife.

"But parents really do not need to get involved much if the materials are safe. Sometimes it is a question of getting youngsters off to a good start," said Carolyn Haas, one of the PAR group, who have 15 children among them, "and we've tried practically everything we suggest with our own children," she added.

The little dollar book also tells how to conduct a backyard carnival, a pet show (any animal is welcome) neighborhood toy fair, a scavenger hunt. If also provides directions for various simple crafts.

Instructions for a cookout include simple formulae for a fire. One involves a large juice can, screening and a wire rack. An Indian-style pitfire, a shallow hole encircled with rocks or bricks is an interesting U-shaped fire.

Camping out doesn't even require a tent. An old blanket thrown over a clothes line and weighed down with rocks might be all that is necessary.

A playhouse could be a whole summer's intrigue for most kids as parents may remember from their own childhoods. It requires a group and can keep all the neighborhood children busy and also can be a great ice-breaker in a new neighborhood.

A do-it-yourself parent might build a little table and a couple of benches for use in the backyard play area. It would be a good place for children to have snacks, cookies, lemonade or whatever.

In providing a play area for youngsters, choose a partially shaded spot, one with a big tree or an overhang from the house. For small tykes, a tub of water can be a lot of fun to sail boats (made out of little cartons) and for splashing. A shower might be rigged up in the yard if there is a run off for water that will not dampen the play area. A water hose can be lots of fun if there is no shower, but a hose may need adult supervision, if there is a possibility that older, more mischievous children are likely to seize the opportunity to use the water spray as an irritant.

WORLD OF STAMPS

Adolph Ochs stamp design released

The U.S. Postal Service has released the design of the 13-cent commemorative stamp honoring publisher Adolph S. Ochs. The Ochs stamp will be issued Setp. 18 in New York in connection with the observance of the 125th anniversary of the New York Times. Ochs was the publisher of the Times from 1896 until his death in 1935.

The design of the stamp is based upon a portrait of the publisher by S. J. Woolf, a noted free-lance artist and writer best know for his technique of combining portraits with interviews.

"Adolph S. Ochs - Publisher" appears in two lines of New York Times style type across the top of the vertical stamp. Beneath the portrait appears "USA 13c."

The jumbo-sized commemorative is being printed on the multi-color intaglio press. The image area size is 1.05 x 1.80 inches or 26.6 x 45.7 millimeters. The colors are grey and black. There will be 32 stamps per pane and one plate number.

The designer was Bradbury Thompson, of Riverside, Conn. The modeler was Clarence Holbert, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The engraves, also with the Bureau, were Albert Saaverdra (lettering and numeral) and John S. Wallce, Jr. (vignette).

Orders for first day cancellations hould be addressed to "Ochs Stamp, Postmaster, New York, N.Y., 10001." Do not send cash. Remittance should be by money order, cashier's check, certified check or, when the amount is less that $26, by personal check. Postage stamps are not acceptable as payment.

The cost is 13 cents per stamp to be affixed to the self-addressed envelopes which must accompany orders. Return addresses should be written low and well to the left and a filler of postal card thickness is each envelope will help to assure clear cancellations and to prevent damage to envelope.

The Centennial embossed envelope, which salutes both the Bicentennial and the Centennial of the United States, will be issued Oct. 15 in Los Angeles during the annual convention of the United Postal Stationery Society, the U.S. Postal Service announced.

The 13-cent embossed envelope is a replica of an envelope issued in 1876 at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia with only the dates and denominations changed. I is based upon the design of the green three-

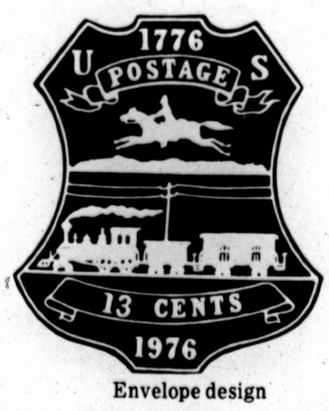

Adolph Ochs Stamp

The design contrasted old and new methods of transporting mail at that time, showing a train and a Pony Express rider. "1776" apperared at the top for the design and "1876" in the version being issued this year and the denomination has been changed to reflect the current 13-cent first-class mail rate.

Orders for first day cancellations should be addressed to "Centennial Envelope, Postmaster, Los Angeles, Calif., 90052." Do not send cash. Remittance should be by check or money order, cashier's check, certified check or, when the amount is less than $26, by personal check.

To eliminate the requirement for Postal Service personnel to apply return addresses, customers are requested to send self-addressed envelopes of an appropriate size or return address labels with their orders.

BACKYARD GARDENER

You can't 'sit back and enjoy' a garden

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

The other day, a recently married young couple who live in our neighborhood dropped by our house and, as we were strolling around the garden, the husband commented that it must be nice, once the garden is planted, to "just sit back and enjoy it."

Well, far be it for me to shatter his illusions. The young fellow has got some pretty ambitious plans for landscaping their new home and I don't want to say anything that would discourage him from establishing the type of garden he has the time and inclination to maintain properly.

But I did point out to him that, much like a homemaker, a backyard gardener's work is never really done. Although the planting is done, the vegetable patch needs constant mothering, and throughout the season certain chores must be done in the flower beds if we wish to maintain the health of our plants and the beauty we set out to produce around us.

Among these important jobs which can be carried out between spells on the lawn hammock or patio deck chair are making sure those plants which need it are properly staked and that the task of "dead-heading" is carried out at the appropriate time.

Actually, the best time to stake your flowering plants is at the time of planting, especially in the case of such varieties as dahlias.

When planting the dahlia tuber, the stake is set in beside it and in this way there is no danger of the stake damaging the root of the plant — after all, it's not Dracula's heart!

In many cases, however, the staking will have been overlooked at the time of planting and must be done when the plant is starting to droop and fall over. Set the stake by pushing it into the ground as close as you can to the stalk without damaging the root. There are also ingenious staking devices for particular plants; for instance, there is a special peony stake with looped stakes and a hoop included in the package.

But for most purposes I prefer the plain cedar stakes, pointed at one end, which are usually available in varying lengths.

They blend into the garden scene very nicely, rather than detracting from it as is the case with odds and ends of sticks and branches. For tying the stem to the stake, use something soft like a strip of old nylon stocking or one of the twist-tie products available in stores.

When you are planting annual seeds that you know when grown will require staking, you can set twiggy branches in the bed for the growing plants to support themselves on. Or, in the case of a well-defined bed of annuals needing support, such as cosmos, you could surround the bed with small stakes and pass string around the bed by means of the stakes. The foliage will hide the string, and the twiggy branches in the former method, and yet the bed will remain confined and well supported.

Another practice that will result in stronger, more continuous bloom is that of removing faded flowers at least weekly from the flower garden — dead-heading as many gardeners refer to it.

If you let the faded flowers rest on the plant, you are giving in to the plant's urge to produce seeds and it will soon expend much of its energy on that process unless you do something to head it off.

When you remove the faded flowers the plant will quickly spring into action to produce more flowers, always in the hope of making seeds for itself in the end. So, if you want an abundance of blooms throughout the season in your garden, keep the sharp clippers handy and cut the old blooms back to the nearest bud or set of leaves.

Rose bushes can be kept nicely pruned throughout the growing season by doing a bit of a pruning job each time you cut blooms for the house. Instead of cutting just a bit of stem, cut down to a likely looking, outward-turning shoot, to keep the plant open and bushy.

Cat's sore spots need attention

By H.P. JANS, D.V.M.
Copley News Service

Q. I have a 3-year-old black female cat which has been spayed and had her distemper and rabies booster shots.

She has had a sore spot on her neck under the chin as big as a quarter for over a year, and it is now beginning to get larger. I have been taking her to a good vet. He took a piece of her flesh and sent it away to see if it was cancerous. He said it was not.

The spot is like a piece of raw meat and she tries to lick it which I believe makes it worse. She is getting a few bare spots on her back also. Sometimes she will eat well and then again she doesn't want anything.

She is getting thin and I am worried about her. Any information you can give will be appreciated. — A.V.B., Covington, Ky.

A. Your cat could have several conditions. If she is licking the spot under her chin, this could certainly prevent it from healing. Topical treatments would not be effective if she is able to remove them. Now that other spots are occurring, more intensive treatment probably is needed. All spots should be cultured for fungus and bacteria and treated accordingly. If cultures are negative, an allergic condition might be considered. Local injections of steroids in this case and systematic treatment would be beneficial. However, if allergy is diagnosed, an attempt should be made to find what your cat might be allergic to, and remove that allergen from her environment.

You should contact your veterinarian again and keep him informed of the progress. Make sure to explain your concern to him and your willingness to explore further diagnostic tests that might be needed. Your veterinarian will be concerned about your cat's problem and quite ready to help her if he has your complete cooperation.

Q. My husband and I are very curious about the habit of our year-old part collie and part German shepherd. Every time it rains, even storms, he will lie outside his doghouse and get wet. He has a very large doghouse, which was especially built for him, and there's always straw in it. Is there any reason for such behavior, and will this getting soaked harm his health? — Cathy S., Grove City, Pa.

A. It would be very unusual if your dog stayed in his doghouse at all times and came out to lie outside only when it rains. I must assume that his usual habit is to stay outside of the doghouse, and the fact that it may be raining or storming is merely incidental. Your pet will find it much more comfortable outside in his normal surroundings rather than a strange place, especially in inclement weather when he may feel uneasy. On the other hand, some dogs, especially little, short-haired or sparsely coated breeds, which are often timid, may find a doghouse not only a place of warmth and shelter, but a refuge from the unknown.

Obviously, your pet has weathered through a number of storms without ill effects. Chances are that if environmental surroundings became too uncomfortable for him, he would move inside.

U.S mint making a handsome profit

By GARY L. PALMER
Copley News Service

With time running out to obtain the official U.S. Mint-struck National Bicentennial Medal, it is somewhat astounding to realize that 213 of the three-inch gold version have been sold at this writing.

That, of course, is the one which set off a turmoil in numismatic circles when the price tag of $4,000 was announced.

The kicking and screaming were over the profit the government was going to make on the medal weighing in at 13.18 fine troy ounces of gold.

Taking a price of $130 for gold, which is close to its current world value today, it doesn't take much mathematics to realize the gold content of this $4,000 medal is right around $1,700. But, of course, there's the high cost of producing and striking the medal and that must cost close to $2,300 each, right?

The 213 medals sold brought government coffers the tidy sum of $852,000, while the gold content, figured at $130 an ounce, amounted to less than $370,000 in value — a nifty profit well over 100 per cent for Uncle Sam.

Well, as P.T. Barnum, the circus impresario, once said: "There's a sucker born every minute."

Meanwhile, the medals, featuring the Statue of Liberty on one side and the Great Seal of the United States on the other, go off sale at the end of the month.

Less than half a million have been sold in the combination of seven different sizes and metals to, as the government puts it, "provide everyone an opportunity to acquire a permanent commemorative of the Bicentennial."

There's also a one-and-five-sixteenths-inch gold version (1.167 troy ounces) which costs $400 (2,726 sold at this writing); a .906-inch gold medal (0.37 ounces) for $100 (14,753 sold); a three-inch silver (7.822 ounces) for $150 (4,085 sold); a 1.5-inch silver (0.925 ounces) for $25 (150,000 sold); a 1.5-inch gold-plated bronze for $15 (24,922 sold); and a 1.5-inch bronze at $5 (289,546 sold).

Silver, keep in mind, is in the $4.50 an ounce range. Anyway, if you want these "bargains," time is short. You can send orders to ARBA, P.O. Box 1976, San Francisco, Calif. 94101, with a money order or check made out to "ARBA." Expect a two-to four-month wait to receive the medals.

It is some comfort to know that revenues from the sale are being used primarily to support state and local Bicentennial projects through matching grants. But it's hard to understand why matching grants are necessary with profits of more than 100 per cent.

Hurry. Time is short.

Smooth-as-glass surface needed before varnishing

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The natural-resin varnishes so popular over the ages are being replaced fairly rapidly by varnishes containing synthetic resins. If an old-timer tries to tell you that the modern varnishes can't approach those he used years ago, it's probably because he hasn't tried the newer finishes.

Varnishes containing such substances as urethane, alkyd and phenolic, among others, are easier to apply and, in most cases, produce better finishes. One rule, however, has never changed. No varnished surface will have the desired appearance if it wasn't smooth and clean before any finishing material was applied to it. That means sanding the wood until it feels almost like glass when you run the tips of your fingers over it. It also means cleaning the surface with turpentine or mineral spirits to pick up any tiny bits of grit that may have been left behind.

While most modern varnishes dry quicker than the old ones, they do not dry as quickly as some other finishes — shellac and lacquer, for example — and so a constant battle must be waged to keep dust from settling on them before they have begun to harden.

Always do your varnishing in a room or workshop which no one will enter for the rest of the day. Be sure the area is as dust-free as possible before you begin, which in some cases means using a vacuum cleaner. Your clothes, too, should be dustfree. Some stores that sell finishing materials carry "pick" sticks so that specks of dust can be removed from a wet varnish surface while you are working on it.

If you can't get one, keep a few wood toothpicks handy. As soon as you spot a bit of dust, use the tip of a toothpick to pick it up. Since this must be done while the varnish is wet, the tiny mark left by the toothpick tip will be quickly filled in by the surrounding varnish. You can see, therefore, that while varnishing you will have to step back in the proper light again and again to look for dust specks.

Varnish should be applied in a free, flowing motion.

Public input may mold Yosemite Park planning

By ROBERT A. JONES
The Los Angeles Times

Snowmobilers should stay away and so should golfers; liquor stores are regarded warily; Hertz and Avis are nearly loathed. But if you come to snowshoe, climb a mountain or putter around the valley in a shuttle bus, welcome to Yosemite.

For seven months, these opinions and thousands of others have slowly merged into a vision of the future for Yosemite National Park in central California as National Park Service officials have moved toward the final stage of a unique experiment in national park planning.

The experiment involves the intensive analysis of about 20,000 individual plans for Yosemite drawn by private citizens. It marks the first time the public has been invited to participate in planning the future of a national park and so far, according to National Park Service planner Ann Bowman, "We are delighted."

Beginning in late 1975, the Park Service mailed 60,000 copies of its Yosemite Workbook to persons who had requested them. "The workbook posed hundreds of questions; it demanded a lot. We wondered whether people would devote the time and energy to do the job well, and now we have the answer. They did the job exceedingly well," Bowman said.

According to Park Service planners, two rough pictures of Yosemite's future have emerged from a computer analysis of the returned workbooks. One alternative would continue most of the park's present policies, some of which have become increasingly controversial in recent years, such as the proliferation of commercial stores, drive-in campgrounds, and government offices in the narrow confines of Yosemite Valley.

While this alternative would temper future development and seek to discourage increased auto use, it would not remove any of the motels, delicatessens, laundromats, or auto garages now in the valley.

The second alternative would make substantial changes, however. The park headquarters, warehousing facilities, some accommodations and campgrounds would be removed from the valley and located elsewhere. Private autos would be prohibited anywhere in the park, and all transportation would be provided by shuttle bus, bicycle, foot or horseback.

Both alternatives, in detailed form, will be presented in the National Park Service's environmental impact statement due to be submitted late this year.

Three additional alternatives also will be included in the EIS, one derived from the opinions of the park headquarters, warehousing Yosemite Park and Curry Co., and other business organizations; one created by National Park Service planners; and a final alternative reflecting the status quo.

"We have to keep stressing," Bowman said, "that the workbooks are not votes and this is not an election. The final plan will be a combination of many elements."

Nonetheless, the computerized results of the public workbooks have yielded a profile — or several profiles — of national park visitors that park officials say will prove valuable not only for Yosemite's future but for the other national parks as well.

From the results thus far, here are some conclusions that can be drawn from the Yosemite project:

—Only a very small percentage of visitors support an all-wilderness concept for Yosemite. One proposal to shut all mechanized transportation out of the park was supported by only 4 per cent of the respondents, for example.

—Converisely, extremely small numbers of respondents supported any expansion of current facilities. One plan, advocated by the Yosemite Park and Curry Co., to convert some valley cabins to more modern motel units was supported by only 9 per cent of the workbook opinions.

—Visitors from outside California support a more pristine plan for Yosemite than do visitors from within the state. Almost uniformly, out-of-state visitors were more staunch advocates of automobile restrictions and curtailments of present commercial activity.

The experiment in public planning began late last year after the National Park Service had spent more than $500,000 in two aborted attempts to create a master plan for Yosemite via traditional methods.

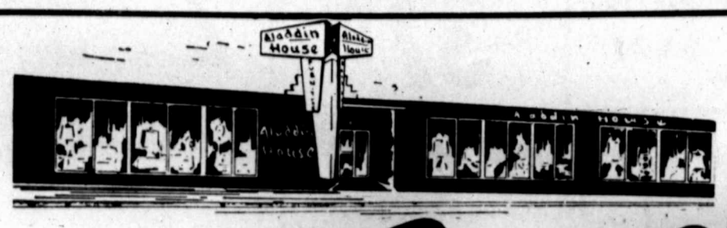

Former tavern bouncer still seeks to make business mark

MUKILTEO, Wash. (AP) — One-time tavern bouncer J. J. "Tiny" Freeman, who in 1972 was trying to entice voters in his campaign for Congress, now is trying to lure buyers to his fruit stand.

Gnawing on an onion, Freeman explained recently that he and his partners had intended to try a novel way to entice people waiting in their cars for the Mukilteo ferry to get out and buy some fruit.

"It was originally our idea to dress the members employes up as assorted fruits and vegetables and have them run up and down the dock drumming up business," he said. The idea was dropped for lack of funds.

Freeman took the opportunity to grab the GOP congressional nomination when no one else filed. He lost in his bid to defeat Democrat Brock Adams.

Singapore says U.S. causing oil doldrums

SINGAPORE — Congressional pressure on U.S. oil companies is given the major share of the blame among industry sources here for the current doldrums of the oil industry in Singapore — the world's third largest refining center.

U.S. companies operating in and around the island state are pulling out several hundred employes and their families and transferring them to U.S. sites, including Alaska, and to the North Sea.

Some Singapore-based analysts believe that complete recovery may be as much as a decade away. Although they concede that worldwide recession, the Communist takeover in Indochina and steps taken by the governments of Indonesia and Malaysia to gain larger shares of foreign oil firms have all contributed to Singapore's gloomy prospects, oil executives laid most of the blame at the doorstep of the U.S. Congress.

Recent legislation limiting maximum foreign tax credits and a bill now before the Senate that would break up the 18 major U.S. oil companies, "have got the head offices in New York and Houston running scared," said one company source.

Exploration budgets for Southeast Asia have been trimmed sharply. "There's nothing political in this," said one company official, denying that the major firms were scared off by the fall of Indochina. "It's purely a business matter."

The island's refining capability of 1 million barrels a day, exceeded only by Roterdam and Houston, has been cut in half. "We're operating with what we euphemistically call "spare capacity,'" said a senior executive with one of the leading companies here.

"I believe there's going to be an improvement," he added, "but it's going to be a long, slow curve upward, a gradual U-turn at best, with full capacity operations maybe not until 1985. Congress has no idea how much damage it's doing."

The marked decline in refining, exploration and related industries has contributed to local unemployment, which the government says is at 4.5 per cent but some foreign observers believe is a high as 6 per cent. It also helped set back economic growth to 4.1 per cent last year, as against 13 to 14 per cent in the early 1970s.

Until recently, there were about 8,500 Americans living in Singapore and about 40 per cent of them were connected with the oil industry. In the last few months, between 500 and 800 Americans have left Singapore.

A source in one of the major companies said the large firms were not cutting back their refinery staffs. "It takes as many people to run a refinery at half capacity as at full," he said. "But a number of smaller exploration companies are pulling personnel out."

"It's extremely difficult to know just how many are going," said an American banker. "Oil people always leave quietly, but they come back into a place with a lot of noise. The idea is to keep the competition worried."

But other signs leave no doubt that the picture is grim. Just a few days ago, Bethlehem Singapore, which is 70 per cent owned by the Bethlehem Steel Corp., dismissed 145 of its offshore rig-building workers. A few months earlier, the company let 180 workers go.

STEVE HULL OF Stanton shows his daughter Carla some of the mineral crystals that are a permanent exhibit in the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. The museum, located just off Interstate 20 in South Midland, has been visited by at least one person from every state in the union except Vermont.

Lo-Vaca customers agree to settlement

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston lawyer said today customers who buy 42 per cent of Lo-Vaca Gathering Company's natural gas deliveries have agreed to a plan to settle more than $1.4 billion in lawsuits involving the company.

Stan McClellan said the dollar benefits of the plan to LoVaca customers would be at least $200 million and could reach $800 million.

McClellan represented United Texas Transmission Co., one of Lo-Vaca's four major customers that have been working toward an out-of-court settlement for more than a year.

He led off testimony at a hearing by the Texas Railroad Commission on Lo-Vaca and its parent, Coastal States Gas Corp.

"Customers stand to gain much more by settlement than lawsuits," McClellan said. He said damages sought could reach several times the $1.4 billion on file.

With this much involved, none of Lo-Vaca's 400 customers could hope to get more than a fraction of the damages it was seeking, McClellan said.

H.K. Howard of Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi said the proposed settlement should mean lower electric bills in the future for CP&L customers.

Other major customers of LoVaca include Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Brownsville and the Lower Colorado River Authority.

The commission voted July 10 to require Lo-Vaca to report Wednesday on the status of outof-court negotiations over the lawsuits, and a general plan was made public Monday.

Coastal States proposed to convert Lo-Vaca into a totally independent company and to carry out a natural gas search program costing as much as $230 million over 15 years.

The plan calls for Oscar Wyatt Jr., Coastal States chairman, to dispose of the new company stock to which he would be entitled.

Coastal States would assume existing debts of about $108 million and would insure unsecured promissory notes of an estimated $120 million during the next 15 years.

The new company would issue $115 million in preferred stock to be placed in trust for the benefit of Lo-Vaca customers.

The stock would have a dividend rate of 8½ per cent and, initially, have 20 per cent of the voting rights in the new company.

Sutton, Coke, Irion operations reported

An exploratory test is slated for Coke County, and a stepout was staked in an Irion field, while a Sutton field drew two long outposts.

IRION PROJECT

Tex, Inc. and Gwen Weiner of Midland staked site for a 2,210-foot south stepout to the opener of the three-well Tom Ketchum field of Irion County, as No. 2 Busby.

Drillsite is 660 feet from south and 500 feet from east lines of section 3081, block 28, H&TC survey, 11 miles northwest of Mertzon. Scheduled depth is 7,600 feet.

SUTTON OUTPOSTS

Amoco Production Co. has slated two outposts to Strawn gas production in the Sutton County portion of the Whitehead (Strawn and Canyon) field, about 25 miles southwest of Sonora.

Both have a contract depth of 9,800 feet.

No. 1-A Batts Friend is 1,396 feet from south and 1,190 feet from the most southerly east lines of Juan Romero survey 20½, abstract 1723, 5¾ miles west of the most southerly Strawn well in the field.

No. 1-B Batts Friend spots 1,150 feet from north and 3,881 feet from west lines of Fritz Schuchart survey 3½, abstract 530, 4½ miles west and slightly north of the most southerly Strawn producer in the field.

Texas tabs drilling hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Applications to drill oil and gas tests in Texas totaled 9,575 through mid-July, an increase of 1,129 from the same period last year, the Railroad Commission said Wednesday.

The commission reported 19 wildcat oil discoveries and 34 gas strikes were completed in the state from July 1 through July 15.

The wildcat oil wells included five in Southeast Texas, seven in South Texas, three in the west central area and one each in East Texas, and the Refugio, Midland and North Texas areas.

There have been 302 wildcat oil wells completed this year, 55 more than at this time last year.

The new gas strikes included 12 in South Texas, seven in the San Antonio area, five in the Refugio area, four in Southeast Texas, three in the San Angelo area and one each in West Central Texas, Midland and North Texas.

A total of 482 gas wildcats have been completed this year, 80 more than at this time in 1975.

Stonewall gains try

John R. Thompson of Abilene intends to drill a 6,600-foot wildcat in Stonewall County, eight miles south and slightly west of Aspermont. It is No. 1 B. W. Denison.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from north and 2,180 feet fron east lines of section 150, block D, H&TC survey, one location north of the Bertha (Tannehill) field and 1¼ mile north of Ellenburger production in the Gloria Gay pool.

Court block price ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court blocked Wednesday a second attempt by Railroad Commission candidate Walter Wendlandt to force the commission to make final its gas price ruling in the Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. case.

Wendlandt told the Supreme Court that since his first motion had been rejected, the railroad commissioners "have been busy—doing nothing."

Until the September 1973 interim order, which allows LoVaca to pass on 100 per cent of its gas costs, is made final, Wendlant noted, it cannot be appealed in the courts. The commission's failure to issue a final order is a violation of due process of law, Wendlandt said in his petition to file a motion for mandamus.

He said the commission was "likely" to postpone a final order indefinitely, which would cause great harm to Lo-Vaca customers, including the city of Austin, where Wendlandt lives.

Eddy oiler potentials

Roger C. Hanks of Midland has completed No. 5 Barbara-Federal as a new producer in the Dagger Draw, North (upper Pennsylvanian) field of Eddy County, N.M., 13 miles southwest of Artesia.

The 24-hour potential test gauged 176 barrels of 41.7-gravity oil and 487 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,594-1. The test was taken through a ½-inch choke and perforati ons from 7,718-7,768 feet, after treating the pay with 2,000 gallons of acid.

It has 5½-inch casing set at 9,164 feet, the plugged-back depth. Total depth is 9,183 feet.

Argo finals Scurry well

Argo Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles, Calif., has completed No. 1 I. N. Hataway, a second producer and location south extension in the Hataway (Strawn) field of Scurry County, six niles west of Fluvanna.

It was completed to pump 11.5 barrels of 42.2-gravity oil per day, with gas-oil ratio of 436-1. The potential test was taken through perforations at 7,706-7,711 feet.

It was drilled to 7,731 feet.

Location is 990 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of section 327, block 97, H&TC survey.

The field was opened in 1961.

Grayburg well tests

C. E. Larue and B. N. Muncy Jr. of Artesia were making production tests in the Grayburg at No. 1 Nola-Federal, ⅜-mile northwest stepout to a newly opened two-well Grayburg gas area in Chaves County, N.M.

It floe flowed gas at the rate of 6.311 million cubic feet for an unreported time, through a 30-64-inch choke and perforations at 1,585-1,621 feet.

The project is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 8-14s-28e, 10 miles east of Hagerman.

Larue and Muncy also intend to drill No. 4 Lillie-Federal, a ¾-mile southeast outpost to the field.

Scheduled to 1,850 feet, it spots 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 20-14s-28e.

WASHINGTON — An Interior Department official threatened Wednesday to shut down construction of the Alaskan pipeline unless the contracting firm straightens out its records on possibly faulty welds.

Undersecretary of Interior Kent Frizzell told the Senate Interior Committee he had directed the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. to develop procedures for taking two X-ray photographs of each future weld, with one copy being delivered to the government.

But Frizzell stopped short of immediately ordering a physical inspection of already completed sections of the pipeline, some of which is buried beneath rivers or in frozen tundra.

That option was reportedly under consideration within the Interior Department until late Tuesday, but was abandoned after officials of Alyeska, a consortium of eight major oil companies, conferred with department officials.

Questioned by Senate committee members, Frizzell said Alyeska officials had indicated they would be cooperative with his directive to promptly take steps to clear up "sloppy records."

If they don't, he said, "then I always have the power of closure and I won't be afraid to exercise it....I won't hesitate to use it if it is appropriate."

The $7 billion, 800-mile pipeline is being built to tap Alaska's north slope oil deposits. It is scheduled for completion in Mid-1977, although problems with faulty welds threaten to delay it.

Frizzell said his orders to Alyeska came after he reviewed the final report by Arthur Anderson and Co., a nationally known auditing firm hired by the government to check Alyeska's internal records on more than 30,000 welds made during the 1975 construction season.

"Because of inadequate control and documentation," Frizzell said, the auditing firm had been unable to reach any conclusions about the welding program.

Alyeska's own audit had disclosed that nearly 4,000 welds required examination and corrective action. "As of today," Frizzell said, "more than 2,200 of the 3,955 welds in question have been brought into compliance with our stipulations."

The remaining problem welds are the target of Frizzell's order that Alyeska submit within 10 days a plan to "bring all of their records of the 1975 welding program into an auditable condition at the earliest possible time."

"I would not minimize the seriousness of the difficulty that has arisen with respect to these welds," Frizzell said. "However, we are confident that this pipeline can be built in an environmentally safe manner."

The start on construction of the massive pipeline was delayed for several years in a dispute over its impact on the environment, and Sen. Ted Stevens (D-Alaska) contended at the hearing that its completion may be delayed because of too much government concern over welding records and X-rays.

Stevens questioned whether the government had proof of faulty welding, or merely had become bogged down in record keeping snafus.

"The standards being applied to pipeline weld X-ray are greater than those applied to human X-rays," Stevens said. He also complained that federal standards are stricter for the Alaskan pipeline than for pipelines built elsewhere in the country, specifically mentioning California's earthquake zone.

"Whatever standards you apply to my pipeline, by God I'm going to apply to yours after this is all over," Stevens said in an exchange with Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr. (D-La.) and Sen. Dale Bumpers (D-Ark.), both critics of pipeline construction procedures.

John W. Barnum, deputy secretary of transportation who headed a federal fact-finding mission to Alaska, told the committee he doubts that the contractor can complete the remedial work this year before cold weather halts the work. "Some work might well carry over into 1977," he said.

Barnum also questioned whether "acoustic imaging," a method of examining the welds from inside the pieline without digging it up, is an acceptable alternative to the more expensive X-rays. "The technique appears to be capable of detecting fractures, but has not been developed to the point where it can reliably detect porosity," he said.

"Frizzell said the Interior Department hasn't decided whether to allow the contractor to use acoustic imaging to check suspected welds.

Police have too many cows

They'd like to get rid of 10 Herefords that showed up on the academy grounds Saturday morning and began grazing.

"We have no idea who they belong to," Cpl. Ron Gregory said. "They just wandered in here and we'll let them graze if no one claims them."

Gregory said he has contacted farms in the area in an attempt to locate the owners. He said eight of the cows are white-faced brown Herefords and two are black and white.

BRIDGE

Even foolish traps may catch victims

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Every now and then I suggest playing a weak suit to throw the opponents off the scent, and sixty serious souls write to say that I must be playing with children. Nobody would ever fool them that way. Nevertheless this old swindle worked quite well in the recent bridge Olympics.

Opening lead — ♣ 3

The club opening lead was a poor idea because South surely had a real club suit. If South had only three clubs she would surely be able to raise hearts or bid spades.

As the gender indicates, this hand was played in the women's division of the bridge Olympics. South was Houston expert Marilyn Johnson, one of North America's best players.

Mrs. Johnson won the first trick with the queen of clubs and could count only seven other tricks unless there was unusually good luck in a red suit. If she went after a second club trick the opponents would surely switch to spades.

LEADS SPADES

Instead, declarer led spades herself, losing dummy's ten to the queen. Yes, I know. There are sixty readers who wouldn't be fooled. But East wasn't one of them.

East returned a club, and West took three clubs with great enjoyment. It was then South's turn for enjoyment since she had her ninth trick and an "unmakable" game.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1 NT (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes. You hold: SA106 HKQ63 DQ986 C42. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards. If partner bids two hearts, you will raise to four hearts. If he bids anything else, you will bid 3 NT.

Market showing sluggish

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market turned in a sluggish showing today, weighed down by disappointment over the size of the second quarter earnings gain posted by Eastman Kodak.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 1.39 at 988.05. Declines held a slight over-all edge on advances among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Kodak issued its quarterly report just after the NYSE close Wednesday. The stock, a component of the Dow Jones industrial average, traded today at 95¾, down 2⅞ from its close on the Big Board Wednesday and off ¾ from Wednesday's last trade on the composite ticker tape.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was unchanged at 104.80. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .07 to 55.43.

Volume on the Big Board slumped to 6.50 million shares over the first two hours, against 7.24 million in the comparable period on Wednesday.

Watkins-Johnson gave up 1⅞ to 23⅝ after a 2⅞-point drop Wednesday, when the company reported sharply lower quarterly profits.

Market hoots at forecasts

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market has largely ignored the erudite analyses and the projections, hopes and dreams of stock brokers and some advisers over the past few months, but undeterred they continued to truck along.

Some advisers, for example, had pointed out prior to the recent political convention that in the midst of the hoopla and excitement about a new and potentially strong Democratic candidate they shouldn't get discouraged.

It was even suggested, in fact, that they might become a bit excited, because a review of the data showed that the market tended to rise faster under Democrats than under Republicans, contrary to some popular assumptions.

As it turned out, the politicians didn't get very excited and investors didn't get very encouraged. Since Jimmy Carter's nomination the stock market has been weak. Some critics have even dared call it a Carter market.

John Wright, manager of huge portfolios for banks and other institutions, seeks to disabuse investors of whatever lingering notions they hold that Democrats are bad for business and consequently for the stock market.

From his base in Bridgeport, Conn., Wright observes that since World War II "the nation's real Gross National Product grew at a 5 per cent average annual rate during three Democratic administrations, versus a 2.2 per cent average rate during the four Republican incumbencies."

Both prices and dividends fared better under the Democrats, he reports. Stock prices rose at an 8 per cent annual rate under Democrats, 5.1 per cent under Republicans. Stock dividend income grew at 5.8 per cent versus 3.3.

In its quarterly analysis, just released, Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. sees the equity market as being "currently near the high end of our estimated range of 'reasonable' value, but it is not overvalued...."

Neither, it adds, does it begin to show the speculative excesses of the late 1960s, and it "seems much better balanced than the ill-fated two-tier market of 1972-1973."

McGovern rents extra home to Syrian envoy

By EUGENE L. MEYER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Since March 1975, Sen. George S. McGovern (D-S.D.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations subcommittee on Near Eastern affairs, has been receiving rental income on a property he owns in Washington from the Syrian Arab Republic.

The property was purchased for $250,000 in January 1965, and is rented as a residence for Syrian ambassador Sabaah Kabbani and his family.

According to Bardyl Tirana, McGovern's attorney, the rental property has so far failed to produce a net profit for the 1972 Democratic presidential nominee. The balance sheet of first-year expenses over income resulted in a $3,446.76 loss — in effect a tax deduction from McGovern's gross income.

McGovern has declined direct comment and denied, through press aide Robert McKeithen, that the arrangement created any conflict of interest for him. "He views the Syrian ambassador as strictly a tenant," McKeithen said.

Since his outspoken public support of Israel during the 1972 campaign, McGovern has come under increasing criticism from pro-Israel groups here for what they consider stands generally more sympathetic to the Arab cause and critical of Israeli policies.

In May 1975, McGovern joined 75 other senators in signing a letter urging continued U.S. support for Israel and then issued a qualifying statement criticizing Israeli occupation of Arab lands since 1967.

Last August, according to congressional sources, McGovern fought unsuccessfully in closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to have the U.S. sell Hawk missiles to Jordan.

Hyman Bookbinder, executive director of the American Jewish Committee, said McGovern's voting record on aid to Israel and his statement on Israeli independence are "generally good."

McGovern bought the large house with a $50,000 down payment, a $150,000 mortgage and a $50,000 personal bank loan as an investment. His original intention, he said at the time, was to house in it 1972 presidential campaign memorabilia. The collection is being stored instead at Princeton University.

The neighborhood civic association raised zoning objections, lawyer Tirana said, and "we knew we'd be looking for a tenant." The Syrian ambassador has already contacted the former owners about renting the property but they wanted to sell it rather than lease it, Tirana said.

Ambassador Kabbni called McGovern aide Owen Donley, who called Tirana, who said he has handled the property for the senator since then.

The house was best suited for embassy use, Tirana said, thus narrowing the rental market. "The alternative would have been selling the house," Tirana said. "The senator didn't want to sell the house. He still doesn't."

From March 1975 to March 1976, the Syrians paid $23,750 in rent, while McGovern paid $6,384 in maintenance and insurance, $3,702 in taxes, and $17,129 in mortgage and loan payments, for a net deficit of $3,466, according to Tirana. Under a new lease in effect since March, the monthly rent has risen from $2,500 to $3,000, and Tirana estimates McGovern will "probably come close to breaking even for the year."

New baby beef grading upheld

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says he would not grade baby beef the way the Agriculture Department does, but yet has upheld the USDA's right to grade as it wishes.

U.S. District Court Judge Patrick Higginbotham ruled Wednesday against the baby beef industry, refusing to knock down new gradings of meat set forth by the USDA.

"While the court would not have drawn the line (between good and standard grades) as it was drawn," U.S. District Court Judge Patrick Higginbotham said, "it cannot say the rules are without rational justification."

The baby beef industry, which brought the suit, had argued that the USDA had narrowed its good grade category "arbitrarily." It contended the new USDA rule, which takes much of baby beef out of the good grade and puts it into standard grade, would cost them $120 million a year.

The new grading went into effect in February. The USDA contended the good grade was changed to make the meat more marketable.

Ned Tyler, co-author of the standards, had told the court in a March hearing that there would be less "taste variability" under the new good grade.

Higginbotham said, "As one proceeds vertically on the meat scale, the meat changes. The setting of standards requires that lines must be drawn somewhere and, given the progressive nature of the changes in meat grades, much of the same attack as launched by the plaintiff (baby beef producers) here could in all likelihood have been launched as to the juncture point of each of the grades.

"The rub here is that much of the baby beef is aimed at the retail grocery outlet. The downgrading to standard effectively eliminates that meat from the grocery shelf; whether this elimination is only a temporary phenomenom remains to be seen."

But Higginbotham noted the baby beef industry focused their attack on a small segment of the new meat grades which affect their businesses, while the USDA had a much broader view.

Tower says he will vote to scrap veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. John Tower says he will vote to override President Ford's veto of a $3.3 billion military construction authorization bill if it reaches the Senate.

Tower was one of nine senators to sign a letter urging their Senate colleagues to vote to override the veto. The issue will go to the Senate if the House votes today to override.

The bill provides $36.7 million for projects at nine Army and Air Force bases in Texas.

The bill also would give Congress the right to review prospective base closings or reductions. This would take in Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring and the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

Ford vetoed it July 2.

"I believe it is essential that Congress has the right to review base closings," Tower said in a statement. "The impact of base closures on the national security and on the local economy of the effected areas is too broad for the decision to be made by the executive branch alone."

The President in his veto objected to a section of the bill which would require the Department of Defense to give Congress notice one year before implementing a decision to close or substantially reduce a military base.
