Paving estimates for airport bids come in too high

County commissioners Monday afternoon delayed formal approval of firms to complete electrical and paving work due at the county airport after learning paving costs will exceed the original Federal Aviation Administration grant.

Don McCrary with Bain, McCrary, Bane Engineers, Planners and Surveyors, Inc., construction engineers for the project at Winston Field, informed the court of the overrun.

The low bid submitted for the paving portion of the project was listed at just over $1.5 million by Arroyo Construction Co. of San Angelo. The bid, which totaled $1,555,848, included reconstruction of the north-south runway and its parallel taxiway.

McCrary explained that in order to hold costs below the $1.1 million grant offered by the FAA, the taxiway must be completed in several stages as additional funds become available from the federal agency.

RAINS RETURN — After a weekend break, the spring rains returned to Snyder and Scurry County Monday and Tuesday, causing local residents to seek relief from the wet. Even the ducks at Towle Park seemed tired of the water, as they sought higher perches to keep their feet dry. (SDN Staff Photos)

Hall didn't see actions as 'cover-up'

Testimony repeatedly defends actions of former boss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fawn Hall testified today that she never considered her shredding, altering and removing sensitive documents from Oliver North's files to be part of a cover-up as the Iran-Contra affair unraveled last fall. "I use the word protect," she said.

In occasionally contentious testimony at Congress' televised hearings, Miss Hall at one point said her activity was justified because "sometimes you have to go above the written law."

She swiftly retracted that, saying a few moments later, "I don't feel that."

But she retracted none of her support for North, describing him as every secretary's dream to work for, praising his hard work and patriotism and bluntly challenging Maine Sen. William Cohen's assertion that North does not have a right to limited immunity in the case.

Miss Hall's congressional questioners repeatdly asked about North telling her to alter four documents on Nov. 21 and their jointly shredding an 18-inch stack of documents the same day.

Asked by Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, whether the shredding was motivated by a desire to cover-up activities, Miss Hall replied: "I don't use the word coverup. I use the word protect."

"I can appreciate that very much, but how does that fall within the realm of a secretary to protect the Iran-contra initiative?" Stokes said.

"I wasn't the one initiating the protecting, sir. I — that's my answer," she replied.

But she also said she expanded the scope of shredding, adding phone logs and copies of computerized inter-office memos to the pile North was creating, because they were "revealing as far as conversations between Col. North and other people which I felt in my mind were private."

Miss Hall, a 27-year-old part-time model with cascading blond hair, kept the Iran-Contra committees spellbound during 2½ hours of testimony on Monday.

$4.8 million...

'Level' budget is profiled at WTC

Calling intial operating and revenue estimates "preliminary proposed," administrators with Western Texas College previewed a "level" 1986-87 college budget for board members Monday.

College officials noted the unanswered question related to state funding for junior colleges this year made all figures presented subject to change.

Assuming "level" state funding, WTC now projects a total budget which mirrors last year's in total expenses. Both the figure for 1986-87 and the amount now projected for 1987-88 is $4.8 million.

The coming year's budget is actually one-fourth of 1 percent below the current year. Exact amounts are $4,848,455 for the current year and $4,836,286 projected next year.

Regarding salaries, some $2.5 million was required last year and $2.4 million is now projected for the upcoming year.

The reductions are listed at all levels to include maintenance, auxiliary, clerical and professional personnel.

Regarding local ad valorem taxes, some increase in the tax rate is now predicted due to an overall decline in the college's tax base.

Last year's rate was some 11 cents per $100 valuation, and the projected "effective tax rate" is 14.8 cents. This would be the figure required to raise the same amount of taxes as last year.

The state funding question for WTC is expected to be answered during the special session of the state legislature which will go into session June 22.

'Straw vote'...

Tax consolidation due August ballot

County commissioners Monday agreed to schedule the question of consolidating tax collection responsibilities here as a non-binding "straw vote" at the Aug. 8 special election.

Court members added the referendum item to the ballot at the request of Western Texas College trustees. Roy Baze, representing chairman R.C. Patton, presented a letter to the court Monday from the college governing body.

In his remarks, Baze noted that the college board would like to see consolidation of tax collections for the six county taxing jurisdictions. Currently, the county collects for the City of Snyder, Scurry County and the college. Collections for the three school districts — Snyder, Ira and Hermleigh — are handled by the Scurry County Appraisal District.

Although he voted to include the item on the ballot, Pct. 4 Commissioner Ted Billingsley noted, "I have strong mixed feelings. If taxes are collected by the county, it may force the schools (to also be collected by the county). I don't know how that's going to work. We have a collector that's efected by the people, but I'll go along with what the people want."

The tax collection ballot will join another non-binding vote on the ballot, the proposal to extend FM 1611 to create a western truck route around Snyder; and a vote to add a county sales tax of ½ of 1 percent to offset property taxes.

Also Monday, commissioners appointed judges and alternates for the Aug. 8 election to include:

Local bank's bid, museum contract renewed by WTC

The bank depository bid for Western Texas College will stay at Snyder National Bank for the next two years and WTC will again offer business management services for the Diamond M Museum this coming year.

Both these actions were approved Monday by votes of the WTC board.

Regarding the bank depository bid, SNB offered what was considered the best interest amount for certificates of deposit in excess of $100,000 and drawing interest "long term."

SNB bid a flat 1 percent over the prevailing T-bill rate for money placed in all CDs. The college normally has no CDs less than $100,000, noted Gay Hickman, vice president in charge of business.

For CDs over $100,000, West Texas State Bank bid three-fourths of 1 percent over the 13-week T-bill rate; and American State Bank bid one-half of 1 percent for the "asked rate" of U.S. Treasury Bills.

Based upon the bids quoted Monday, the rate of return for $100,000 CDs coming to term in

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The biggest room in the world is room for improvement."

The regular session of the state legislature is history, but lawmakers will be back in Austin in just three weeks for a 30-day special session.

Speculation on whether the legislature can solve the budget woes and approve an appropriations bill in just 30 days is anybody's bet.

Snyder residents have a keen interest in the budget process, since the prison project depends on funds appropriated. The chamber committee working on the project has postured this community extremely well. Folks in state government know about Snyder, Texas. New prisons will be built in Texas, and now it is just a matter of waiting for funding. The next 60 days is going to be important.

We noticed that someone in Austin did a little calculator research to determine the cost of the legislature being in session.

The Senate is the most expensive, costing about $14,000 per day. Cost per day for the House of Representatives being in session is just over $10,000.

State government is big business, but nothing like the federal government. A few months ago, Texan Jim Wright got some national attention when he became speaker of the house.

The new speaker thought he might like to deliver his own fireside chats, but there was a slight problem--he had no fireplace.

So the Speaker had a nice new fireplace installed in his Capitol office at the cost of $4,500 plus $6,000 for the chimney.

It's hard to be critical of a fireplace in a politician's office....it's a lot neater when they're blowing smoke.

Did you hear about the FDIC folks who foreclosed on a Houston pie shop. It sold 800 pastries at a discount. It just goes to show that the FDIC takes lots of crust.

Raise prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union apparently is raising bread prices as part of a move to close the gap between supply and demand for certain foods, goods and services, according to Agriculture Department analysts.

Retail bread prices had been in the range of 24 cents to 67 cents per kilogram, which is about 2.2 pounds. No figures were provided to indicate how much the prices may increase when the plan is fully implemented.

Seven hurt

EL DORADO, Kan. (AP) — Seven people were injured when horses pulling their covered wagon bolted, sending the rig crashing down a ravine.

The group was returning Sunday from a camping trip offered by Flint Hills Overland Wagon Trips of El Dorado. The accident nine miles east of Rosalia was the first in the company's eight-year history, said Ervin Grant, company president.

"We were almost back to the ranch and we'd stopped to rest the horses because they were warm," said sightseer Joan Barber, 56, of Salina.

Other rain totals include Lake Thomas, .20 with no runoff; Ira, .25; and Dunn, .20.

Chicago incident cited as proof of air control failings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chaotic evening of traffic control in the sky over Chicago, including controllers' mixing up of two jetliners, is being cited as evidence of flaws in a federal plan to keep planes safely separated this summer.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators disclosed Monday they are examining a series of events May 29 in which airspace handled by the Chicago traffic control center may have become overcrowded while a supervisor attempted to get the O'Hare tower to increase the separation between aircraft departures from the busy airport.

Later, a Federal Aviation Administration quality control officer concluded in a hand-written memo that controllers directing westbound departures "appeared to lose the (mental) picture" between about 7:45 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. local time.

"Flights went out on the wrong beacon codes going in an unplanned direction," the quality control officer, identified only as Johnson, wrote in the memo titled, "Breakdown of Air Traffic Svc." The document was made available by investigators.

During the 30-minute late evening rush a mix-up at the O'Hare tower added to the confusion as a controller unknowingly directed an American Airlines Boeing 727 toward another American Airlines jet that was inbound.

While the two planes came within 500 feet vertically and a quarter mile horizontally, investigators believe their route would have avoided a collision in any case.

Union workers walk out on Bell

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Striking United Auto Workers members say they are prepared for a long strike at Bell Helicopter Textron if it is necessary to get a contract that they want.

No talks between the union and management are planned, Bell spokesman Terry Arnold said Monday.

Union members are prepared to stay off the job for months if that is what it takes, said J.J. Birchard, president of UAW Local 218.

One of the workers had a better definition of how long he was prepared to stay on strike.

"Indefinitely," said C.J. Gilbert.

Dear Abby

Readers Straighten Abby Out On Advice to Gay Man's Mom

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: I recently published a letter from a reader who was emotionally torn over whether she should allow "John," her grieving homosexual son whose lover of 10 years had just died of AIDS, to return home for a family reunion and come out of the closet to his entire family. John had told his mother that he was not about to sit down with his family and pretend that life is "beautiful" after having been through the most painful and tragic year of his life — and unless he could be open and honest with his family, he refused to come home.

His mother said, "We love our son, but don't want the embarrassment and hysteria that this situation could bring."

I told the mother that the decision should be John's, but for him to insist that the entire family be informed that he is gay, though it might cause embarrassment and hysteria, would be insensitive and inconsiderate, but to welcome him anyway.

Did I get letters! Some excerpts:

"... Your response to the mother of John, whose lover and partner had just died of AIDS, was both incredibly insensitive and ignorant. You (and John's mother) have conveniently overlooked two facts: (1) John is almost certain to die of AIDS as well; how are they going to deal with the 'hysteria and embarrassment' of that situation? (2) If he's been living with a male lover for 10 years, the relatives all know he's gay anyway — they just don't discuss it with his parents.

"You missed an opportunity to do some educating about AIDS, homophobia and common decency."

GARY IN HOUSTON

"... I still have a column of yours in which you say: 'One thing is certain, God made gays just as surely as he made straights. And all his children are entitled to live and love in dignity, without shame or guilt.' I can't believe anyone who would make that statement would advise a gay person to stay in the closet at a time when he needs all the support and understanding he can get. If his family can't stand the 'embarrassment and hysteria,' that's their problem, not his."

BI IN CHICAGO

"... Many doctors have concluded that self-esteem plays a crucial role in the condition of the immune system. If John is forced to suppress who he is because his family finds it embarrassing, it could very well push his immune system over the edge. And what will his parents do if he does develop AIDS? Tell him to pretend he has an extended case of the flu? Abby, this is the time when John needs his family the most. Shame on you for encouraging them to stifle him."

KRISTIE IN MILL VALLEY

"... The man is in pain. To ask him to be dishonest about a loving relationship is asking him, once again, to subordinate his feelings to those of heterosexuals at a time when he needs to be honest. His parents need to face their own 'shame' concerning their son's sexuality. ('We've never wanted to let the rest of the family know that John is gay.')

"You blew it, Abby."

MIKE V. IN L.A.

DEAR MIKE, KRISTIE, BI, GARY, ET AL: I certainly did, and I apologize for my own insensitivity. I should have known better. And the sad fact is, I really do.

Hacklemans end training course

Guy and Mary Hackleman of Colorado City completed a training course last week in the Dallas area on a operation of a Field Manufacturing Laboratory.

They are now using the lab for on the spot building and repairing of custom made All in the Ear hearing aids. This eliminates the usual two to three week delay for delivery of these aids.

The procedure also makes practical the fitting and inexpensive continual "growth" of a less conspicious hearing aid for the hard of hearing child.

The Hacklemans visit Snyder as least twice each month. They are associated with Texas State Hearing Aid Center of Abilene.

ABWA meets

The Scurry Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association met May 28 at MAWC with Carla Beaird as hostess. There were 29 members present. Kathy Landes gave the invocation.

Grace Bryant, program chairman, introduced Lucille Sterling and Minnie Boyd with The Texas Cowbells. They presented information to members concerning beef production and diet. Beginning with feeding out a calf, the ladies told the process of butchering and explained various cuts of meat.

They pointed out that a calf weighing 1,000 pounds will probably give 432 pounds of dressed meat. They urged members to eat a balanced diet, eliminating fried foods. Protein foods low in cholesterol include flounder, 52%; turkey, 65%; beef, 73%; chicken, 76% and pork, 77%.

Deborah Rodgers, vocational chairman; introduced Sharla Williamson who is employed with the Scurry County Appraisal District. Rodgers informed the group that houses are still selling although values have dropped. Further tax notices are being sent out. Rodgers reminded members that home improvements also increase taxes.

Rodgers said that if homeowners are not satisfied with the tax appraisal, they need to go the the appraisal office before July 16 to discuss the complaint.

The chapter chose Robin Rodgers as their Fourth of July Queen.

Irene Brooks, representative to MAWC, informed the club about the garden tour set for Saturday. Tickets are $5 and may be purchased at participating homes or at MAWC.

Members voted to have a bake sale June 30 at Everybody's Thriftway. Rachel Reyes applied for a scholarship from the Stephen Bufton Memorial Fund and Kathy Landes led the group in the benediction.

Wasn't it a little optimistic for North to raise two no-trump to three? Not at all. Even though South had originally passed and could not hold more than 12 high-card points, North's hand had good body in each of its suits (look at those 10s and eights), and the king of hearts can certainly be given full value after South has bid that suit. It was right to go to game.

After the opening heart lead was won by dummy's king, declarer led a club from dummy. East cleverly won the club ace (concealing the king) and continued with the heart eight. Declarer put up the jack and West played low. Declarer continued with another club. East won the king and played his last heart. West now took three heart tricks to set the contract.

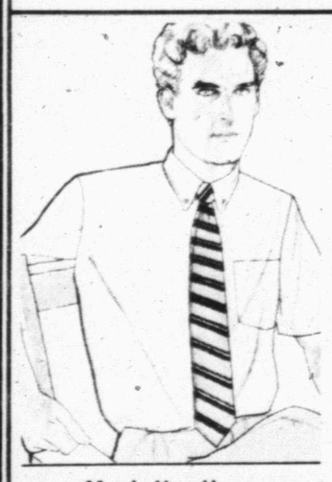

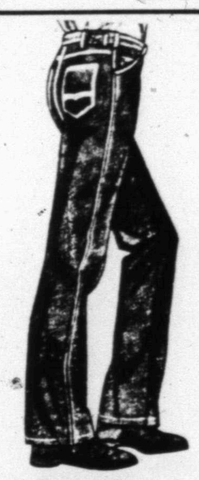

Despite that deceptive club play by East, declarer should have realized that the club king could not be with West. If he held that card, he would certainly have won the second heart and forced out declarer's last stopper. The contract could have been made if South tried for three diamond tricks by playing West for both the king and the 10.

If East does not false-card in clubs, declarer can prevent the defenders from taking three heart tricks by simply playing low on the second heart. Although West can then take two quick heart tricks, that will not be enough, and South can force out the other high club and make his contract.

LAFF-A-DAY

" 'Hello?' Did you say 'hello'? Congratulations, that's the magic word! You're the lucky winner of a round trip to the supermarket!"

Say LA Lakers players...

No more excuses for Boston

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Celtics were supposed to be too hurt and too tired to win a game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

But now that the Celtics have reduced Los Angeles' advantage in the NBA championship series to 2-1 and held the Lakers' running game in check, there will be no more lame excuses after tonight's Game 4 at Boston Garden.

"They've proved they aren't so banged up," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "Now that that's over we can get back to basketball."

The Celtics were bothered during the season and the playoffs by a series of ankle, knee and foot injuries that hobbled starters Robert Parish, Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge and deprived the bench of Bill Walton and Scott Wedman.

"All the talk about them being injured took away from how great we were playing," said guard Byron Scott, who had a total of 64 points in the two Los Angeles victories, but scored four in the 109-103 defeat on Sunday. "Now they've beaten us and they're not injured anymore."

"I didn't see anyone limping out on the floor," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "They had so many injuries this season that it became part of their picture and ultimately pulled them together."

Blowout losses in the first two games had the Celtics believing they weren't physically capable of stopping the Lakers, but Ainge said Sunday's victory proved something.

"It's a frustrating feeling," Ainge said of the two losses. "I think that frustration is gone. It's back to reality."

Ainge was at midcourt when the clock ran out in Game 3, and he slammed the ball to the floor in jubilation.

"We gave everything we had and finally won," said Ainge, who missed three earlier playoff games with a knee sprain. "In the first two games, it seemed like everything we tried to do, we still couldn't stop them. When we finally did it, the emotion just came out."

McHale, despite a stress fracture in his right foot, had 21 points and 10 rebounds, two more than his total for the first two games. Parish, who has aggravated an ankle injury several times during the playoffs, had foul trouble, but still scored 16 points in 26 minutes.

Riley and the Lakers said that if they can correct a few shortcomings tonight, they will overcome the Celtics, although they have won 85 of their last 87 games at Boston Garden.

"We feel like we did it to ourselves; they didn't do it to us," Johnson said. "Not boxing out really killed us."

"In the first two games, it was so easy to score and get good shots that we got frivolous with our shot selection, thinking that anything would go in," Riley said. "It's a subconscious thing. If you ask them if they were overconfident, they'll say no."

"In Los Angeles, we pushed the ball up constantly, we kept going," guard Michael Cooper said. "What we did (Sunday) was push it for a minute or two, then get caught up in the Celtics' pace."

Riley was most upset at the Celtics' 56-41 rebounding advantage in Game 3.

"We got pushed around underneath the basket," Riley said. "We won't win if we get outrebounded like that."

Boston is trying to become the first team to repeat as NBA champions since the 1969 Celtics. That year, Boston also lost the first two games of the best-of-seven series in Los Angeles, then came back to win the title in seven games.

Bucks going international

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The Milwaukee Bucks will be going international as representatives of the National Basketball Association.

NBA Commissioner David Stern confirmed in Boston Monday that the Bucks would serve as hosts to a round-robin tournament Oct. 23-25 at the Milwaukee Arena featuring the Soviet national team and European champion Tracer Milan.

It will be the first time the NBA will be involved in international competition. The tournament was organized by the NBA and the international governing body for basketball, FIBA.

The schedule calls for the Bucks and Tracer Milan to open the tournament on Friday, Oct. 23. The Soviet team will play Tracer Milan on Saturday, with the Bucks and Soviets meeting in the final game on Sunday.

Stern said the Bucks were chosen because "we wanted a team that would win, but we were afraid it would scare off the international teams" if the Boston Celtics or Los Angeles Lakers were selected.

"We want nice, friendly games that we win," Stern said.

Langston throws two-hitter; blanks Texas Rangers, 6-0

SEATTLE (AP) - Mark Langston believes he may pitch a no-hitter some day, but for now he's happy with his two-hit, 6-0 shutout of the Texas Rangers.

The 27-year old lefthander allowed just singles to Ruben Sierra in the fourth inning and to Steve Buechele in the ninth, while striking out nine batters and walking one Monday night.

It was his second career two-hitter, the first coming against Detroit in 1984. And it was his third shutout of the year.

"You're always capable of pitching" a two-hitter, Langston, 7-4, said. "You've got to have a lot of luck and make every pitch perfect."

In addition to nine strikeouts, Langston got eight Rangers to ground out, and only four Rangers hit the ball to the outfield.

"They only hit two balls really hard," Mariners Manager Dick Williams said.

Mariners pitching coach Billy Connors clocked Langston at 91 mph, his fastest speed of the year, but Langston felt location was the key to the victory.

"Speed is meaningless unless you throw the ball in the right location," he said. "I threw all four pitches for strikes tonight. I established myself early by getting ahead of the hitters, and getting my breaking ball over."

Langston had a rough outing against Toronto last week, walking six batters, but has won three of his past four starts.

"I hope I'm in a groove," he said. "But every time you start to think that, you have a bad game and you're back to zero."

Langston's nine strikeouts threw him back in the major-league lead with 106, overtaking Houston's Mike Scott. Langston, who led the American League with 345 strikeouts last year, was 42 ahead of his pace after 12 games last year coming into Monday's game.

"You swing and miss a lot at good stuff like that," said a dejected Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine. "We had a couple of balls hit hard, but right at people."

While Langston was baffling the Rangers, his teammates had no trouble with Texas starter Mike Jeffcoat, 0-1, who was making his first appearance of the year after being called up from the minors.

Jim Presley led the way, driving in four runs with a homer and double. Presley had entered the game with just one hit in his past 21 plate appearances.

"I haven't been driving them in lately," he said. "That's what this team needs is more two-out hits."

What Presley was referring to was his two-out, two-run homer in the fifth inning, which upped the Mariners' lead to 4-0.

Say LA Lakers players...

No more excuses for Boston

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Celtics were supposed to be too hurt and too tired to win a game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

But now that the Celtics have reduced Los Angeles' advantage in the NBA championship series to 2-1 and held the Lakers' running game in check, there will be no more lame excuses after tonight's Game 4 at Boston Garden.

"They've proved they aren't so banged up," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "Now that that's over we can get back to basketball."

The Celtics were bothered during the season and the playoffs by a series of ankle, knee and foot injuries that hobbled starters Robert Parish, Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge and deprived the bench of Bill Walton and Scott Wedman.

"All the talk about them being injured took away from how great we were playing," said guard Byron Scott, who had a total of 64 points in the two Los Angeles victories, but scored four in the 109-103 defeat on Sunday. "Now they've beaten us and they're not injured anymore."

"I didn't see anyone limping out on the floor," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "They had so many injuries this season that it became part of their picture and ultimately pulled them together."

Blowout losses in the first two games had the Celtics believing they weren't physically capable of stopping the Lakers, but Ainge said Sunday's victory proved something.

"It's a frustrating feeling," Ainge said of the two losses. "I think that frustration is gone. It's back to reality."

Ainge was at midcourt when the clock ran out in Game 3, and he slammed the ball to the floor in jubilation.

"We gave everything we had and finally won," said Ainge, who missed three earlier playoff games with a knee sprain. "In the first two games, it seemed like everything we tried to do, we still couldn't stop them. When we finally did it, the emotion just came out."

McHale, despite a stress fracture in his right foot, had 21 points and 10 rebounds, two more than his total for the first two games. Parish, who has aggravated an ankle injury several times during the playoffs, had foul trouble, but still scored 16 points in 26 minutes.

Riley and the Lakers said that if they can correct a few shortcomings tonight, they will overcome the Celtics, although they have won 85 of their last 87 games at Boston Garden.

"We feel like we did it to ourselves; they didn't do it to us," Johnson said. "Not boxing out really killed us."

"In the first two games, it was so easy to score and get good shots that we got frivolous with our shot selection, thinking that anything would go in," Riley said. "It's a subconscious thing. If you ask them if they were overconfident, they'll say no."

"In Los Angeles, we pushed the ball up constantly, we kept going," guard Michael Cooper said. "What we did (Sunday) was push it for a minute or two, then get caught up in the Celtics' pace."

Riley was most upset at the Celtics' 56-41 rebounding advantage in Game 3.

"We got pushed around underneath the basket," Riley said. "We won't win if we get outrebounded like that."

Boston is trying to become the first team to repeat as NBA champions since the 1969 Celtics. That year, Boston also lost the first two games of the best-of-seven series in Los Angeles, then came back to win the title in seven games.

Bucks going international

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The Milwaukee Bucks will be going international as representatives of the National Basketball Association.

NBA Commissioner David Stern confirmed in Boston Monday that the Bucks would serve as hosts to a round-robin tournament Oct. 23-25 at the Milwaukee Arena featuring the Soviet national team and European champion Tracer Milan.

It will be the first time the NBA will be involved in international competition. The tournament was organized by the NBA and the international governing body for basketball, FIBA.

The schedule calls for the Bucks and Tracer Milan to open the tournament on Friday, Oct. 23. The Soviet team will play Tracer Milan on Saturday, with the Bucks and Soviets meeting in the final game on Sunday.

Stern said the Bucks were chosen because "we wanted a team that would win, but we were afraid it would scare off the international teams" if the Boston Celtics or Los Angeles Lakers were selected.

"We want nice, friendly games that we win," Stern said.

Langston throws two-hitter; blanks Texas Rangers, 6-0

SEATTLE (AP) - Mark Langston believes he may pitch a no-hitter some day, but for now he's happy with his two-hit, 6-0 shutout of the Texas Rangers.

The 27-year old lefthander allowed just singles to Ruben Sierra in the fourth inning and to Steve Buechele in the ninth, while striking out nine batters and walking one Monday night.

It was his second career two-hitter, the first coming against Detroit in 1984. And it was his third shutout of the year.

"You're always capable of pitching" a two-hitter, Langston, 7-4, said. "You've got to have a lot of luck and make every pitch perfect."

In addition to nine strikeouts, Langston got eight Rangers to ground out, and only four Rangers hit the ball to the outfield.

"They only hit two balls really hard," Mariners Manager Dick Williams said.

Mariners pitching coach Billy Connors clocked Langston at 91 mph, his fastest speed of the year, but Langston felt location was the key to the victory.

"Speed is meaningless unless you throw the ball in the right location," he said. "I threw all four pitches for strikes tonight. I established myself early by getting ahead of the hitters, and getting my breaking ball over."

Langston had a rough outing against Toronto last week, walking six batters, but has won three of his past four starts.

"I hope I'm in a groove," he said. "But every time you start to think that, you have a bad game and you're back to zero."

Langston's nine strikeouts threw him back in the major-league lead with 106, overtaking Houston's Mike Scott. Langston, who led the American League with 345 strikeouts last year, was 42 ahead of his pace after 12 games last year coming into Monday's game.

"You swing and miss a lot at good stuff like that," said a dejected Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine. "We had a couple of balls hit hard, but right at people."

While Langston was baffling the Rangers, his teammates had no trouble with Texas starter Mike Jeffcoat, 0-1, who was making his first appearance of the year after being called up from the minors.

Jim Presley led the way, driving in four runs with a homer and double. Presley had entered the game with just one hit in his past 21 plate appearances.

"I haven't been driving them in lately," he said. "That's what this team needs is more two-out hits."

What Presley was referring to was his two-out, two-run homer in the fifth inning, which upped the Mariners' lead to 4-0.

Legal battle expected over SS disability rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Further court battles are expected over the Reagan administration's handling of Social Security disability benefits in the wake of a Supreme Court ruling upholding a procedure that could disqualify hundreds of thousands of recipients yearly.

Eileen P. Sweeney of the National Senior Citizens Law Center said Monday's court ruling favoring the administration could turn out to be "a relatively hollow victory."

"The court could have given the administration license to arbitrarily continue" denying claims by hundreds of thousands of people, she said. "It didn't."

She said future lower court cases will decide whether the administration is carrying out the review of those claims fairly.

John Trollinger, spokesman for the Social Security Administration, said the government is not denying benefits to those who deserve them. "The important thing is people who are disabled will continue to receive decisions in their favor," he said.

The Supreme Court, by a 6-3 vote, upheld a government regulation for withholding benefits based solely on medical evidence that someone is not severely disabled. The court said it is not necessary for officials to consider the individual's age, education and work experience.

Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and John Paul Stevens, who joined the majority, expressed reservations in a separate concurring opinion over the way the regulation is being applied.

"Empirical evidence ... supports the inference that the regulation has been used in a manner inconsistent with the statutory definition of disability," O'Connor said in an opinion joined by Stevens.

Three dissenting justices voted to strike down the regulation as being on its face in violation of Social Security law.

It is not clear how many would-be recipients could be denied benefits under the regulation. But court records suggest the figure could be as high as 800,000 people each year. More than 2 million claims for Social Security disability benefits are made annually.

The rule says money may be denied to those found able to do "basic work activities" even if they are incapable of performing their past jobs.

Monday's decision was a defeat for Janet Yuckert of Seattle, who was refused benefits despite a middle-ear condition that causes her dizzy spells and other problems. She said she is unable to work.

When she applied for benefits in 1980 at age 45, she was enrolled in a computer training program and had worked as a travel agent and real estate broker.

She said her illness requires her to rest her eyes every 30 minutes while reading, and that she must take naps two or three times a day.

HHS ruled Ms. Yuckert did not suffer from a severe impairment significantly limiting her ability to perform basic work-related activities. The decision was based solely on medical evidence, without taking Ms. Yuckert's age, education and work experience into account.

Yuckert's attorney, James Douglas of Seattle, said Monday he believed the Supreme Court took a "simplified approach" to his client's case and said the decision leaves room for additional litigation in lower courts on the manner in which the disability-benefits regulation is applied.

In other action, the court:

—Ruled, 5-4, that investors who charge stock brokers with fraud may be forced to submit their claims to binding arbitration rather than having the disputes settled in federal court.

—Agreed to study the CIA's firing of a homosexual spy. The justices will hear arguments that the agency's personnel decisions are immune from federal court review.

—Refused to force the Reagan administration to adopt rules for reducing acid rain in the United States and Canada.

Controversy boosts 'stripper-gram' places

HOUSTON (AP) — Interest in messenger services providing "stripper-grams" is taking off, thanks to a recent controversy involving a high school valedictorian who hired one and then was barred from graduation ceremonies.

Kingwood High School valedictorian Michael Woosley, 18, was suspended the last six days of school and prohibited from speaking or participating in commencement exercises after sending a stripper-gram to his physics teacher.

The stripper, dressed as a police officer, was stopped early in her performance before the class by a school administrator.

"We had just been in our physics teacher's class for two years, and we liked him a lot. It was just a joke," Woosley said. "I think it was taken wrong, and I think it was wrong to do it."

The incident prompted questions among students and the public over whether the punishment fit his offense.

But representatives of local messenger services say the publicity from Woosley's stunt has triggered an increase in business.

About 20 different companies deliver singing and stripping telegrams in the Houston area. Greg Jeu, owner of Singing Cavalier Balloons and Tunes, said it is a unique form of entertainment.

"(It) is a different kind of entertainment business, a fast-food entertainment business," he said.

Singing Cavalier messenger Vanora Davis said her clientele includes husbands, wives, lovers and friends.

"Wnat it's all about is trying to embarrass the person having a special occasion without humiliating them, by making them the center of attention," she said.

Female strippers for Singing Cavalier are less risque than those for some competitors, only baring as much as corsets, garters and stockings, Jeu said.

County officials still wary of nuke dump site search

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso authorities say they haven't won a battle against placing of a low-level nuclear waste dump in neighboring Hudspeth County, although state officials now say they'll look elsewhere.

"I think they're trying to lull us into complacency and that's not going to happen," said El Paso County Attorney Joe Lucas, whose office filed suit against the Texas Low-level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority.

"I think they're concentrating all their efforts on trying to put it in Hudspeth County," Lucas said.

The authority had targeted a parcel of state land 11 miles northeast of Fort Hancock in Hudspeth County. The site, the authority's primary choice for the state's dump, is about 50 miles from El Paso.

El Paso County filed suit against the authority earlier this year. State District Judge Bill Moody issued an injunction preventing the authority from continuing with the search process until the suit was heard Aug. 17.

But last week, the authority issued an announcement saying it had renewed its search for a dump site in response to state Land Commissioner Gary Mauro's decision not to turn the state land over to the authority.

In its announcement, the authority also noted that state Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, threatened a filibuster against a bill that would have directed Mauro to transfer the land. The bill died in the closing hours of the regular legislative session.

Michael E. Wimmer earns degree from UT med school at Houston

HOUSTON--Michael E. Wimmer received a doctor of medicine degree from the University of Texas Medical School during graduation ceremonies on May 30.

Wimmer, son of Alvin and Pauline Wimmer and grandson of Alfonse Wimmer and Luther and Ludnia Azbill, all of Snyder, graduated from Snyder High School and attended Angelo State University before entering medical school.

Wimmer was active in the Texas Medical Association student section, American Medical Association, and the Harris County Medical Society while attending UT Medical School.

Following graduation, he plans to enter a residency in general surgery and then go into orthopaedic surgery at Texas Tech University at Lubbock General Hospital.

The University of Texas Medical School is part of the University of Texas Health Science Center, located in the renowned Texas Medical Center.

Police receive reports of theft

Police investigated two misdemeanor theft reports Monday.

Employees of McCrory's reported at 4:48 p.m. having two shoplifters in custody at their store.

The suspects — two boys ages 14 and 15 — were taken into custody for misdemeanor theft and later released to the custody of their parents.

Mickey Burnett of 2711 N Ave. R filed a second report later in the evening.

He told police a telescope had apparently been stolen from a residence in the 2600 Block of El Paso Ave. on May 8.

He contacted police to file a report Monday after locating the missing scope in a local pawn shop.

A suspect in that case has been identified, but no arrest was made Monday.

Wreck reports total 2 Monday

Two minor traffic mishaps were reported in Snyder Monday.

Involved in the first — at 12:51 p.m. at the intersection of 37th St. and Ave. M — were a 1977 Oldsmobile driven by Disidora Falcon Delarosa of 313 26th St. and a 1974 Chevrolet driven by Darrel Ray Doty of 3723 Ave. U.

The second report was filed by Zelphia Franklin of Rt. 3, Snyder at 6:39 p.m.

Franklin told police that her 1978 Chevrolet had apparently been struck by an unidentified vehicle while parked somewhere in Snyder during the day.

Leaders pledge support for unimpeded free flow of oil

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Western leaders, at the midpoint of their 13th annual summit, declared today that the free flow of oil "must continue unimpeded" through the Persian Gulf, and embraced a superpower plan to eliminate hundreds of nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia.

Besides giving President Reagan diplomatic support on the troublesome Persian Gulf, the leaders underscored concern about the threat of terrorism — even as summit serenity gave way before dawn as military frogmen scurried to retrieve a suspicious-looking metal box — rendered harmless — from a nearby Venetian lagoon.

In Rome, 340 miles away, small explosives rocked the American and British embassies shortly before Reagan sat down to breakfast with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Before the debris was cleared the leaders had signed off on their annual condemnation of terrorism, this time emphasizing a determination not to make concessions to terrorists or their sponsors.

A car bomb shattered windows and set fire to parked cars near the U.S. Embassy and bombs exploded on the grounds of the U.S. and British embassies. A woman who was near the car that blew up was hospitalized for shock, police said. There were no other reported injuries.

A caller to The Associated Press in London claimed the attacks were the work of the Anti-Imperialist International Brigade. Callers last year using the same group name claimed responsiblity for the assassination of the French military attache in east Beirut and for bomb and rocket attacks on the U.S., Japanese and Canadian embassies in Jakarta, Indonesia.

The anonymous caller, who spoke English with a slight accent, said today's bombings proved "that the revolutionary will is stronger than the high security measures taken for the protection of the so-called seven giants of the world."

In Venice, military frogmen found a suspicious-looking device in a lagoon not far from the summit site and blew it up. An Italian official called it a mine from World War II and said it was not connected with terrorists. The U.S. Secret Service said it was merely a harmless metal box.

Statements of East-West relations, terrorism, the Persian Gulf and other matters were issued in the name of the leaders of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada.

Agreeing to step up efforts against terrorism, the leaders pledged to halt all air travel to and from countries which refuse to cooperate in cases involving not only hijackings but all other violations of aviation security.

Before resuming talks today, the leaders posed for a "class picture" in the courtyard of the 17th century Benedictine monastery that is the site of the summit.

The communiques did not commit the allies to any military role in the Gulf, where U.S. warships soon are to begin escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers to protect them from attack.

However, it urged the adoption of a U.N. Security Council resolution sought by the United States that would impose an arms embargo against Iran unless it agreed to peace talks with Iraq, its enemy in nearly seven years of bitter war.

College selects bank depository

180 days would have been: SNB, paying 7.1 percent interest; ASB, paying 6.6 percent; and WTSB, paying 6.5 percent.

With Monday's vote, trustee Bill Wilson, also a director for SND, removed himself from discussion and voting on the depository bid.

The board also renewed the management agreement with the Diamond M Museum Monday.

The Diamond M Foundation provides all funds to operate and staff the facility and the college contracts for its business management.

The board also met in executive session at the start of the regular meeting, but took no action upon coming back into open session. Items discussed were listed as personnel and land transactions.

Trustees attending the meeting included Bob Hargrove, who presided in the absence of R.C. Patton, Bill Wilson, Edwin Parks, Roy Baze and Howard Sterling. John Gayle was absent.

In other board action Monday, trustees:

—Accepted the resignations of Phil Spradling, WTC men's basketball coach; and Patrice McKinney, half-time instructor in the health, physical education department.

—Granted James Eby, director of the golf course-landscape technology program, a promotion in rank to assistant professor. Following WTC policy, it was noted, the change in rank does not entail a salary increase.

—Approved the small class report for the summer term now underway. Only three courses are being offered with fewer than 10 students.

—Approved the purchase of the copyright for 364 instructional video tapes in a variety of study topic areas to include history, English, foreign language and science. The expense was $2,928 to be paid to Southwest Media Inc. It gives WTC the right to copy this material for use in classroom instruction and staff training. In addition, the purchase gives the college the option of purchasing professional quality tape reproductions of these programs at $8 each.

Airport bids over estimate

"We now must arrive at a certain amount of construction to fit the original grant and then proceed (with actual construction). Then we can ask for addition funds from FAA. Those are usually granted before construction is completed, although there's no guarantee," he said.

McCrary noted that a portion of the taxiway that connects it to the main runway will be included in the reconstruction.

The original award includes a provision that the county must fund 10 percent of the work — some $100,000. If the commissioners request additional funds for the taxiway, those additional funds would also be granted on a 90-10 percentage basis.

The two other lowest bids of six submitted for the paving phase included Norris and Norris Co. of Abilene at $1,711,240 and J.H. Strain Construction Co. of Tye at $1,809,589.

McCrary noted he plans to renegotiate with the low bidder and will bring a recommendation to the court next Monday.

In addition, bids for the electrical phase of the work will also be formally approved next Monday. The three low bidders of six firms who bid include Ray Electric of Amarillo at $57,204; Pecan Valley Electric of Brownwood at $61,581; and West Texas Controls and Construction of Big Spring at just over $63,488.

School administrators to gain training here

For the second summer in a row, members of the Big Country School Administrators organization, comprised of superintendents and principals from this area, will be in Snyder for two days training in teacher evaluation procedures.

Approximately 37 of the group's members will be here Wednesday and Thursday to learn more about the Texas Teacher Appraisal System (TTAS).

TTAS was part of the mandates of House Bill 72 and is used, among other purposes, for the selection of career ladder classroom instructors.

Instruction in TTAS methods will be offered here by representatives of the Texas Education Agency regional service center in Abilene.

The local sessions will be conducted at Willow Park Inn.

A welcome is to be offered Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. by Troy Williamson, city mayor; Dr. Harry Krenek, WTC college president; and local school board president Mike Jordan.

Preventative plan is recommended

DALLAS (AP) — Even healthy adults should have physical checkups every five years starting at age 20 to help prevent heart attacks and strokes, the American Heart Association recommends in new guidelines.

The recommendations Monday mark a broader approach to preventing "silent" diseases, said Dr. J. Alan Herd. He said the association is urging doctors to tell patients about test results and suggest appropriate diet or lifestyle changes.

"The transaction should be something more than, 'You do not have heart disease now. You do not have diabetes now. You do not have cancer now,'" he said.

Herd was a member of the committee that drew up the guidelines, published in the June issue of the Dallas-based association's journal, Circulation.

The American Medical Association is in accord with the AHA study, although the five-year guideline should be used only for patients who are at zero or minimal risk, said Dr. Joseph Skom of Chicago, a member of the AMA's council on scientific affairs.

Noting that some people have a family history of heart disease, Skom said, "There are some people who feel much more comfortable being examined more frequently because they need to be reassured periodically that everything is all right."

Herd said, "There's no question that we're taking a position that (yearly checkups) may be more than is appropriate." He said the association took a cost-efficiency point of view on the time between checkups.

"What this is doing is it's putting the responsibility on the individual patient and his physician," said association spokesman Howard Lewis. "Hopefully, it will get the physician who's actually seeing the patient more tuned in to practicing prevention at the same time."

The push for heart checkups was inspired by successful public education programs about high blood pressure, said Herd, medical director of the Institute of Preventive Medicine at Houston's Methodist Hospital.

"We have learned that the physician's efforts in suggesting to the patients that they should change are more successful than we used to think."

Herd said the guidelines recommended starting checkups at age 20 because many people with heart problems began developing the disease much earlier.

After age 60, the association recommends checkups every 2½ years. The association does not recommend annual checkups until after age 75.

The checkup guidelines include updating information every five years on weight, blood cholesterol, triglycerides and blood sugar, taking blood pressure measurements at each exam and once between checkups, getting a baseline electrocardiogram at ages 20, 40 and 60 and getting a baseline chest X-ray at age 40.

Doctors should look for "classical symptoms" of heart disease, gather a detailed personal and family medical history including obesity, lack of exercise and behavior patterns, the association said. Other points that should be covered are dietary habits.

Homeless use downtown library as living area

DALLAS (AP) — Each day when the downtown central library opens, dozens of homeless people are among the first to arrive.

Many scurry first to the bathrooms to wash up, shave, even take a bath of sorts, in preparation for another day on the streets of downtown Dallas.

For hours, they rest in the library's comfortable reading chairs, occasionally dozing alongside the stacks of books and newspapers.

Even when temperatures are mild, 100 to 200 homeless people usually can be found sitting or sleeping in the library, said library director Patrick O'Brien. The number often doubles in more extreme weather, he said.

"The library provides the only safe shelter that will not turn the homeless away during the day," O'Brien told The Dallas Morning News. "They can't go into any of the stores, and they get kicked out of the underground passageways downtown."

O'Brien said that in recent months, library security guards found a man washing his feet in a toilet and a woman who had washed her clothes in a library sink and was spreading them on chairs and tables to dry.

"We don't want to stand in the door and say, 'We don't want you because you don't look good or smell good.' That would violate their civil rights," he said.

After the number of street people using the library grew over the winter months, O'Brien sought help from the Greater Dallas Commission for the Homeless, he said.

Since April, commission and staff members have been looking for a downtown location to serve as a day center for as many as 400 homeless people, said Russ Delatour, who assists the commission and is executive director of the Community Council of Greater Dallas.

Four privately owned buildings were identified as a possible site, but the monthly leases range from $2,500 to $8,000, and a funding source has not been found.

Craig Holcomb, a member of the Dallas City Council, said efforts to open day center downtown for street people are important not just from a humanitarian standpoint, but for preserving the library and downtown retail businesses.

In 1985, former Mayor Starke Taylor's Committee on the Homeless estimated that 4,000 people were living on downtown streets in any given month.

Efforts to help Dallas homeless over the past two years have tended to focus on finding them adequate food, overnight shelter and health care services instead of providing them a place to go during the day, officials said.

Recent AIDS decision will affect immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III says immigrants with AIDS will be barred from the United States and that convicted criminals will be tested for the deadly disease when they enter and leave prison.

At a news conference Monday, Meese said all immigrants, refugees and aliens applying for legalization under last year's immigration reform law — up to 2.5 million people in the next year — will undergo mandatory AIDS testing.

Those found to have the virus will be barred from entering the country.

More than half a million people a year emigrate to the United States, and the nation admits 60,000 refugees annually. As many as 1.9 million people are expected to apply for legalization in the next 11 months under the amnesty provisions of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

"A testing program of all aliens must be put in place to assist in detecting the presence of the virus," Meese said at the news conference.

The program is designed to take effect in the next few months, once rules are approved declaring AIDS a dangerous, contagious disease. Proposed rules, subject to public comment for the next 60 days, were issued Monday by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Meese also announced that convicted criminals will undergo AIDS tests when they enter prison and that inmates will be tested when they are about to be released.

Chip makers are satisfied with action

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's reviving semiconductor makers say they support President Reagan's decision to remove 17 percent of the penalty tariffs against Japan that were imposed on their behalf two months ago.

"We hope this goodwill gesture will lead to a continuing pattern of compliance by Japan," the Semiconductor Industry Association said in a statement Monday.

In Venice, Italy, on Monday for a summit conference, Reagan sliced $51 million off the $300 million in tariffs he had imposed on Japanese electronics goods in retaliation for alleged Japanese violation of an accord on semiconductor trade.

Reagan said the Japanese "ought to be rewarded" for partial progress, but it was too soon to eliminate the sanctions.

Japanese officials in Tokyo said they hoped the rest of the sanctions would be removed promptly, while some Democratic lawmakers in Washington said it was too soon to ease off on the measures at all.

The United States has accused Japan of selling chips at unfairly low prices and not opening its home market enough to foreign-made chips.

Reagan's decision came as the U.S. semiconductor business showed new signs of vigor because of the pricing measures and a general upturn in demand.

Orders and shipments in May were the highest since 1984, the industry trade group reported Monday.

Industry analysts said the trade agreement on chips, while good for a few chip makers like Texas Instruments Inc., is beginning to put a squeeze on big U.S. consumers of semiconductors, such as computer makers, by raising the prices they pay for the tiny slivers of silicon.

Japanese electronics companies such as Fujitsu Ltd., Toshiba Corp. and NEC Corp. make their own memory chips and can now get them much more cheaply than Americans can, gaining an important advantage in cost.

"There's been a backlash against the chip agreement" from the U.S. electronics companies, said Andrew Rappaport, president of Technology Research Group in Boston.

"The agreement has probably helped the profitability of a couple of American chip companies. But weigh that against the interests of electronics manufacturers, and at the very best you have a wash," said Michael Boss, an analyst for Dataquest Inc. in San Jose, Calif.

The 100 percent penalty tariffs are being lifted on Japanese-made, 20-inch television sets, but will remain on certain Japanese personal computers and power tools that represent $249 million in U.S. sales.

Reagan's decision means prices for imported Japanese televisions will return to pre-sanction levels, but other prices will be unaffected.

The sanctions are mainly of symbolic importance: the entire $300 million represents only about one-third of 1 percent of all Japanese annual exports to the United States.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D Texas, said he wanted to see exactly what the president had done, but added, "I hope that is not sending the wrong signal to Japan. The administration must deal resolutely with the Tokyo government."

Was Fawn Hall just following orders?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fawn Hall may have earned a niche in the folklore of America's professional secretaries.

Testifying under oath and under a grant of immunity from prosecution, Miss Hall is telling congressional investigators that when the carefully constructed wall of secrecy surrounding White House initiatives on Iran and Nicaragua collapsed last November, she was asked to do things for which she had been prepared by neither training nor experience.

A professional secretary helps her boss do his job, and Miss Hall, 27, opened her testimony Monday by telling the congressional Iran-Contra committees that that's what she did for her boss, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North.

But in the panic that followed the Iran-Contra disclosures, she said she did just a little bit more, enough more that some committee members said it is clear she destroyed evidence and took part in "an obstruction of justice."

She helped North shred a stack of documents a foot-and-a-half thick.

Acting under his instructions, she retyped and materially altered the contents of a sheaf of key documents drafted the year before.

After North had been fired by a president who simultaneously told him he was an American hero, she slipped documents North had overlooked past National Security Council officials trying to secure his files.

She stuffed some in her boots and hid others "in my back."

Walking out of the Old Executive Office Building she entered a car driven by North's attorney, Thomas Greene, and handed the documents over to North.

And when she was initially asked if she had done any shredding, she said that, in "a protective mode," she misled her questioners by saying she had done nothing outside normal office routine.

Miss Hall described destroying documents, saying she had placed as many as 15 sheets of paper at a time into the shredder, feeding so many that it jammed and had to be fixed.

In her opening remarks, Miss Hall recalled that she had first begun secretarial work when she was still only 15 or 16, working first for the Navy department. She also worked part time as a model.

She worked for the Navy until early 1983 when she was transferred to the National Security Council staff and became personal secretary to North, then a Marine major.

Her testimony, she said, came from "the perspective of a secretary," someone whose job it was "to facilitate the smooth operation of the office."

She said she was good at what she did: "I was a dedicated and loyal secretary and performed my duties in an exemplary manner."

Dog used in therapy has been reported missing

DALLAS (AP) — Lolly, one of six dogs used in therapy for patients at the Baylor Institute for Rehabilitation, is missing.

Lolly, a brown and white Shetland sheep dog and one of the most popular dogs used for therapy at the institute, ran away from the home of a friend of her owner.

Newton Hunt, owner of the dog, had worked more than a year with Lolly to prepare her to work with patients at Baylor. He had left the dog at a friend's home last weekend, but the dog ran away.

"I'm decimated and so is my wife," Hunt said Monday. "It doesn't take long for an affectionate animal to become part of the family. But she's not only our loss, it represents a loss to the patients."

Their therapeutic methods may be peculiar, but they work.

Shari Bernard, an occupational specialist at Baylor, said the dogs lie still while the patients stroke them or they fetch balls for patients. They get results, she says.

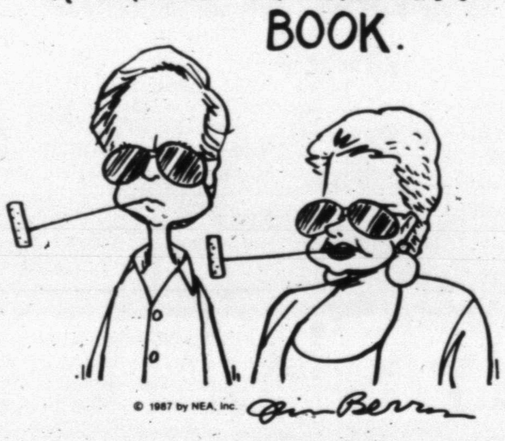

"A lot of our patients are comatose and head injured, and they don't respond to therapy," Bernard said. "The dogs are used as a modality, a way to motivate the patient to work."

Hunt and hospital workers have been working to post placards and prepare fliers in their efforts to find the dog. There has been no response so far, he said.

"She was one of our best dogs," Bernard said. "She worked well with patients. It takes a special dog to lay still and be sensitive and tolerant for our patients."

Dogs used in the program must be tested and undergo special training for temperament and reliability and must be certified by Therapy Dogs International before they can be used in therapy.

Heat, massage treat neck spasms

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a 73-year-old woman and was diagnosed three years ago as having torticollis. Will you please explain the symptoms, as well as treatment and medications that might be available?

DEAR READER — Torticollis (wry neck) is caused by spasms of the muscles that support the head. It can result from tension, arthritis of the neck (cervical) bones, inflammation of the neck muscles, or — in rare cases — a pinched nerve in the upper spine.

Treatment depends on the cause. In most instances, the muscle spasm can be relieved by hot packs, massage and anti-spasmodics, such as Robaxin or Flexeril, which reduce the sharp pains or neck-aching associated with torticollis. If the muscle spasm is severe, a person may have difficulty turning or moving the head. In such cases, pain medication or physical therapy will be useful.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have an eye inflammation that my doctor calls a pterygium. I have worn hard contact lenses for more than 10 years with no difficulty. Now I occasionally feel some irritation with the left lens. Exactly what is a pterygium?

DEAR READER — A pterygium is a winglike film of scar tissue that extends from a corner of the eye, across the white portion (sclera) to the clear front of the eye (cornea). Although it is harmless and usually does not affect vision, a pterygium can cause irritation. In people who wear contact lenses, the abnormal tissue can be especially bothersome because it prevents satisfactory contact between the lens and the cornea. A pterygium can easily be removed by most qualified ophthalmologists.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Should mineral oil be used for constipation and colon problems? I have read that it can be harmful, yet some doctors still prescribe it for elderly patients. Could you suggest something better?

DEAR READER — Mineral oil, although an effective laxative, is not appropriate for long-term use. It can cause changes in the bowel wall, poor absorption of vitamins and — in some elderly patients who inadvertently inhale it — a type of pneumonia.

As a first step toward regulating sluggish bowels, I recommend the use of natural laxatives, such as fruit (particularly prunes and apricots), fruit juices and vegetable fiber, like bran. The next step is to try bulking agents, such as Metamucil, and increased dietary water. If these don't bring results, try a laxative like milk of magnesia, which is safer than mineral oil. (However, remember that long-term use of chemical laxatives can make the bowel unable to work on its own.) I'd use mineral oil compounds only as a last resort and for short times — a day or two at most.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME, which explains the symptoms and management of this common problem. Other readers who want a copy can send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.
