'Experts' contend Snyder is prepared for any Y2K glitch

By Joyce May
Staff Writer

For some folks, the only problem with Y2K is overkill on hearing about it.

For months, the media has saturated viewers, listeners and readers with coverage of the potential computer problems associated start of 2000, and as Jan. 1 draws near, coverage increases.

People's opinion on what will happen come the first of the year covers the spectrum from it will be just another day to it will be doomsday.

Nevertheless, preparation

"I think that Y2K has been over-exaggerated."

Laura Lewis

continues in the county to insure, as much as possible, Y2K compliance for city and county offices as well as financial institutions, electric companies and medical providers.

A panel of representatives from numerous local entities gathered Tuesday night at the coliseum for a Townhall meeting to answer questions concerning potential year 2000 problems.

About 40 citizens attended, which was sponsored by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce and United Supermarkets.

Scott Gilmour with United Supermarkets started the meeting by explaining the Y2K problem.

"The century date is the problem," Gilmour said. "With the first computers, the hard drives were very expensive and folks thought they could save memory if they used just two numbers, 99 instead of 1999."

The potential problem is that when the year 2000 comes, computers will read the 00 as the year 1900 and this could shut computerized systems down.

Gilmour said it is estimated that $1.4 trillion will be spent worldwide to correct the Y2K problem. The United States federal government alone will spend some $7 billion.

The good news, Gilmour said, is that additional people have been employed and a great deal of money has been put into the national economy.

"There has been an infusion of capital into our economy," he said, adding that the work done on upgrading systems "can only make us more competitive in the world market."

Concerning the Y2K-compliance status of local banks, Glen Gray with Snyder National Bank spoke.

"This has been an important task that all FDIC banks have had to work on," he said. "We have done a series of rigorous testing of all our computer systems, hardware and software programs that we use."

The series of tests have been to simulate the turn of the century and the detailed process has left banks well prepared, Gray said.

"All banks in Snyder are ready and have been ready," he said. "My advice is to leave your money in your bank. It is safer there. Be leery of people calling and asking for your account numbers, telling you that your money is not safe."

Daryl Thomas with TXU Electric and Gas assured that the company is also prepared for the turn of the century.

The company's testing status is 99 percent complete, with only one generating unit to be tested, Thomas said.

"TXU has verified the readiness of 69 of its generating units. The final generating unit will be ready in November and we will be 70 for 70," Thomas said.

In addition, Thomas explained that TXU has over 20,000,000 kilowatts of generating capacity ready for the year 2000 while the estimated demand is only 12,000,000 kilowatts.

"We feel very comfortable," he said. We have nearly doubled the estimated needed capacity available. The load should be light and we can shift loads if necessary."

More importantly, Thomas explained that the Texas electrical grid is separate from the rest of the North American.

The grid is divided in three with a Western Interconnection, Eastern and Quebec Interconnection and Texas' own EROCT interconnection.

Thomas said one of the fears that some people have expressed is that at midnight Jan. 1 the whole country will go dark. With Texas being on a separate interconnect, just because the western or the eastern interconnects lose power, does not mean Texas will.

"We are separated from the rest of the nation — we're not connected. We have the ability in Texas to switch power among us."

The overall assessment for TXU is that the company expects Jan. 1, 2000 "to be like any other day."

The company said it does not expect our energy services to experience problems.

However, if disruptions do occur, Thomas said he expects them to be very isolated and of short duration. "We will have personnel in place, ready to respond should that be necessary."

Mayor Dayton Robertson said the city estimates spending less than $20,000 on the Y2K problem and that preparation is almost complete.

Rep. David Counts was also on hand. Information is the secret to no panic," Counts said. "If the bankers stand here and say there are no problems, I believe that."

Counts said on the state level, the focus has been on ensuring that there are no glitches in the collection and distributions of funds system.

Counts said a special emphasis has been placed on child support checks from the attorney general's office.

"There cannot be any glitches in child support payments. There are 946,000 checks handled each month by the attorney general's office."

"We are 98 percent positive that we are not going to have any glitches. I think this is going to be the biggest non-event we've had this century, but we have to at least prepare and be aware."

Sherma Barham with Cogdell Memorial Hospital said the hospital has also performed Y2K testing and is prepared.

She encouraged people with medical equipment at home, including pacemakers and diabetic-testing machinery to have the equipment checked.

She also encouraged people on medication not to hoard prescriptions, but to make sure they have enough before pharmacies close for the holiday.

Sheriff Darren Jackson said he his department had very few concerns with Y2K.

"We are concerned with people using their common sense," he said. "We ask people that if there is a glitch, to stay at home. We ask that everyone use common sense and everything will be all right."

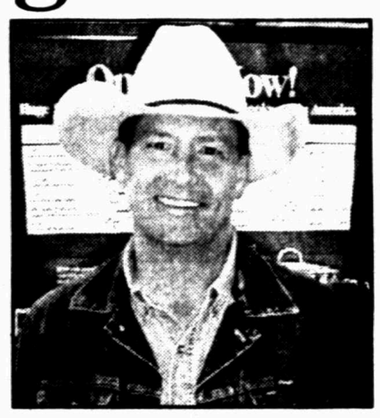
He also asked the public to not call the sheriff's office just to see if there is a problem. "Please do not call the sheriff's office or 911 unless you have an emergency."

Sheriff Jackson said the department's computers and the 911 system are Y2K compliant.

Kathryn Roberts, county extension agent, said information is available at her office on preparing food and water supplies in the event of loss of water, gas or electricity services.

Other helpful Y2K information is available as well. "If we're ready, if we're educated, we will be alright."

Fire Chief Perry Westmoreland said the city and county does have an emergency management plan in place that involves mass housing, mass feeding and public transportation.



"If we have the technology to do the things we do, surely we have the technology to overcome two zeros on the end of the year."

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "We hope Monica does lose weight – and disappears for good."

There are really some other things to remember other than Bill and Monica about the century which is about to end.

During the past 2,000 years, there has been lots of progress, stuff that we take for granted.

We all know that people are living longer, and we would have made lots of guesses about the greatest medical discoveries without coming up with one suggested by a group of scientists.

Their nomination: soap.

They said: "Effectual health care. Not just antibiotics, not just birth control, not just anesthesia...but also vitamin pills and – in some ways most wondrously cost-effective of all – soap – as in the soap doctors use to wash their hands.

Other nominations:

—Eye glasses have effectively doubled the active life of everyone who reads or does fine work. Said one psychologist, "It prevented the world from being ruled by people under forty."

-The eraser. Now it's the delete key or anything else that allows you to go back and fix a mistake.

—Hay. According to a professor of physics, in earlier times civilization could exist only in warm climates where horses and cattle could survive. Hay allowed mankind to move north.

—Space travel was mentioned often, but experts believe it may be centuries more before we know the full impact.

—Another suggested the clock. It converted time from a personal experience into a reality.

—Contraceptive pill. One researcher recalled his mother having six kids in five and a half years. "We were almost a mini-nation." Or look at it another way. It may have prevented you from having another brother-in-law.

—Religion. One might argue whether such was invented are created, but we have to agree with the fellow who suggested it as important. "Try to imagine the past or the future without it."

—The printing press, one of our all-time favorites. Not only did it allow for mass reproduction of news, it had great implications on religion as well.

Our favorites are creature comforts. Things like air conditioning, indoor toilets, toilet tissue, reclining chairs, ceiling fans, garage door openers, fire places supplemented by central heating, soft music, golf courses, iced tea, running water, tacos, tubeless tires, caller IDs, and anti-acids.

Coordinating board gives positive review

A final report from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board which visited the Western Texas College campus last week is not expected for four or five weeks, but remarks made by the team leader in the exit interview was highly complimentary of the college's vocational program.

"Dr. Irma Berry and I had an exit interview," said Dr. Harry Krenek, president of WTC. "Her remarks reflected very positively on the college."

"She told us the visiting team was very impressed with what they saw on campus." Special mention was made of the new district learning center.

"Dr. Berry spoke of the high morale throughout the campus, and not just in the vocational program," said Krenek.

"She said she saw a great deal of improvement in the program as opposed to the visit five years ago."

Dr. Krenek said Dr. Berry made only two minor recommendations for improvement, and that included hiring a person on a half-time basis to do data analysis.

"We're very encouraged by the preliminary report and we're looking forward to the final draft," said Dr. Krenek.

The college was visited by Dr. Berry and Art Villareal of the coordinating board, and representatives of Midland College, Lee College in Baytown and Weatherford College.

The team reviewed the vocational programs that the college offers in all areas, including on the area prison units.

The board also reviewed the overall mission of the institution, plus student services and all the workforce education courses.

Mattel sues over Barbie Web site

NEW YORK (AP) — Mattel is not toying around with what it sees as a threat to Barbie, its billion-dollar doll and a favorite of many children for 40 years.

The company filed a federal lawsuit Tuesday against a company that sponsors a Web site, claiming barbiesplaypen.com promises a free live chat "with our sexy girls."

The lawsuit targets Internet Dimensions Inc.. There was no phone listing in Las Vegas for the company. A message left Tuesday with lawyers for Mattel was not returned.

The Internet location prominently features the words "Barbie's" and "Barbie's Play Pen," infringing on the trademarks of a toy that generates more than $1.6 billion in annual sales worldwide, according to the lawsuit filed Tuesday.

Mattel said the words and images in the site may confuse readers into thinking that the toy company is somehow condoning or sponsoring the site.

The lawsuit sought to block the company from using the Barbie trademarks. It also sought any profits from the site as well as damages to the Mattel business and the cost of the lawsuit.

The site features a woman in a tie, stockings and a black top hat beneath the words, "Barbie's Playpen," promising "Hot sexual party games, free live sex feeds and 1,000 plus video feeds," according to the lawsuit. It also advertises a free live chat "with our sexy girls."

Mattel said in its lawsuit that the Web site is toying with an image it had carefully crafted since the company's co-founder, Ruth Handler, created the Barbie doll in 1959. She named it after her daughter, Barbara.

Lottery sales in Texas are down $17 million, report says

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lottery sales for the first half of September were down 12.36 percent compared to the same period a year ago, lottery officials said Tuesday.

Sept. 1-Sept. 18 sales for all lottery games fell $17.1 million, from $135.2 million to $118.1 million. Cash 5 sales fell $5 million, or 25 percent, and Texas Million fell $2.9 million, or 47 percent.

"The decrease has to do with some of the multi-state games with big jackpots," said Linda Cloud, executive director of the Texas Lottery Commission. "Players have got into the mindset to play when the jackpot is big."

Ms. Cloud echoed other lottery officials, saying smaller jackpots and player apathy led to the slump in Lotto Texas sales. About 3 percent of players play the lotto regardless of the jackpot, while 70 percent play when the jackpot is $15 million or greater, she said.

Instant ticket sales, which account for more than half of all Texas lottery sales, dropped $6.2 million, or 8 percent.

Ms. Cloud attributed the decline to "not as many new faces on (scratch-off) tickets."

Handshake Instead of Hug Is Way to Greet Retarded Adults

© 1999 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the parent of an adult man who has Down syndrome. He has many opportunities to be part of the community in addition to his job — parties, weddings, going to stores, restaurants, movies, church.

The problem? When we are greeting people or leaving an event, complete strangers will shake hands with everyone else but hug my adult son. They do not hug anyone else. However, they think it is just fine to hug him because he is "different."

Please, well-meaning folks, we parents and teachers and social workers work very hard so that our retarded adults can be accepted, productive members of the community. More important, though, is our real concern for their safety. We teach them to shake hands and greet others like "normal" people do. To be hugged by strangers is neither safe nor acceptable social behavior in our society. This behavior further sets our adult children apart as "they" and "people like that" when acceptance and inclusion is what is needed. It also confuses what we have been trying to teach.

Give them a job rather than a hug! Is it safe for your children to hug strangers? Do you hug strangers? It isn't safe for my son either! So please, smile, shake his hand and make him feel welcome. That will do more for him than a hug that diminishes his chances for safe independence in the world.

Abby, I believe I speak for many parents of retarded adults, as we have discussed this problem often. Thank you for getting this message out for all of us.

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: You have made your point, and I hope the well-meaning but patronizing huggers will get the message: It isn't acceptable to hug people you don't know. Inappropriate hugging sets a bad example. If the retarded adult imitates that behavior and initiates the hug, it could be misunderstood as sexually motivated.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife's brother has cancer and lives in another state. He has asked that I be a pallbearer at his funeral. My live-in girlfriend says there is no way that I should agree to do it. She thinks this is a plot that my ex-wife has hatched to be close to me.

Although I divorced my "ex," I still like her family and they like me.

My girlfriend says that since I am divorced, I should have nothing to do with any of my former in-laws or friends that we both share. I feel that it should be OK for me to talk with my ex-in-laws every now and then, and to see mutual friends as long as my ex-wife isn't the main topic of conversation. I think my girlfriend should trust me enough to let me talk without making accusations.

By the way, Abby, I have never cheated on my ex-wife or my girlfriend, but my girlfriend's ex-husband did cheat on her. She also played around a little on her ex-husband before they separated. What do you think?

ANYONE, ANYWHERE, U.S.A.

DEAR ANYONE, ANYWHERE: I think you should be a pallbearer for your former brother-in-law, if it is in your heart to do so. I also think you should consider moving your live-in girlfriend out — unless, of course, you want a lifetime with this insecure and controlling woman.

'Hot lines' require Y2K fixing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is working to fix hot line connections between Moscow and Washington that officials say will otherwise fail on Jan. 1.

In a flurry of activity as the three-month countdown to 2000 is about to start, U.S. and Russian military establishments also are working out final details on an unprecedented arrangement to have Russian scientists at a U.S. strategic warning center in Colorado on Y2K eve.

"The fix is now being put in place. I expect there to be more as time passes," said Adm. Craig Quigley after trouble was reported with the hot lines Tuesday by another Pentagon official in testimony on Capitol Hill.

Edward Warner III, assistant secretary of defense for strategy and threat reduction, told a special Senate committee on the Y2K situation of problems with six of seven hot line links to Russia, including lines between presidents, between the secretary of state and the Russian foreign minister and between each country's nuclear risk-reduction centers.

Problems were discovered several months ago with the Russian ground station for the communications links and with commercial software used by both sides, Warner said.

"While the schedule is tight, we are confident that the fixes will be installed and tested by December," Warner said.

He said the Russians also have requested $15.5 million in Y2K-related equipment such as emergency generators, fire trucks and warhead-handling vehicles. The Defense Department considers the requests reasonable, he said.

The Y2K problem is the worry among some scientists that with the arrival of the new year, computers designed to read only the last two digits of the year will mistake 2000 for 1900 and break down or cause malfunctions in equipment they control.

At the Pentagon, Quigley said there will be full communication with Moscow on New Year's Eve.

"We don't know of any significant systems that will not be fixed in time for the new year," he said.

Quigley said that while U.S. officials do not rely entirely on the hot lines to communicate with Russian counterparts, they are a backup system that must be maintained.

"It's important to us that they all work, if that's within our ability to make them operational," he said.

Quigley said U.S. and Russian military officials are working out details of plans for Russians to stand watch at the joint monitoring center being set up in Colorado to observe U.S. missile warning data during the Year 2000 transition. Russian Defense Minister Gen. Igor Sergeyev and Defense Secretary William Cohen signed a formal agreement on the arrangement last week.

The Y2K Center for Strategic Stability at Peterson Air Force Base, Colorado Springs, will begin operading authority on Russia, said there is almost no chance of an accidental missile launch.

CNN edits graphic videotape

The news network telecast a report Tuesday that showed a captured Russian soldier being shot in the head, then edited it for subsequent viewings to stop the action before the trigger is pulled.

The video, apparently taken by fighters in the breakaway republic of Chechnya three years ago, was contained in a report about how the footage is being used to muster Russian political support for the conflict.

Two people called to complain to CNN after the report was initially aired shortly after noon, spokesman Earl Casey said.

By that time, the decision had already been made to edit the video, Casey said. It was shown again at 2:45 p.m. and was also being aired on CNN Headline News and on CNN's international stations.

CNN's Jeanne Meserve warned viewers before the report that it contains "some very violent images that you may find disturbing." Reporter Mike Hanna said the video, obtained by Russian security, was apparently shown to Russian politicians and, to some extent, on Russian television.

During its initial CNN airing, it depicted a man with a gun to his head, but the image stopped before he was shot. A gun was fired against a second man, his fatal injuries obscured by a puff of smoke and the video's grainy quality.

Another snippet of film shows a man begging for his life. He is then blindfolded and his head placed on a tree stump. The video shows an executioner raising an ax above the man's head and swinging it, with the image stopping before the ax hits its mark.

CNN has run graphic footage during past reports on conflicts, Casey said. During the Kosovo war, the network showed a series of bloody corpses.

Asked why the network did not edit out the depiction of a man being shot before the video was shown the first time, Casey said it was routine in news organizations to make changes on deadline. He didn't say who ordered the change.

MEN AND MARRIAGE

Children, wanting to play "House" in the back yard, needed a Husband and Wife. A five year old PK said, "I will do the wedding. I've heard my dad do lots of them." All agreed and the ceremony went perfectly until the Pronouncement. The PK forgot the words and, looking up to heaven, said simply, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do!"

Pretty cute. But the fact is, whether knowing what they're doing or not, every minute of every day four couples say "I do." It then becomes Wedlock or Deadlock; it's Bliss or Blister, it's Heaven or Hell.

Our hearts ache as we see families we love breaking up. The pain for them is too great. We've got to learn better. Speaking from the men's side, listen Guys, our wives deserve the very best of our love. Here is a suggestion: SUBMIT TO YOUR WIVES! I probably lost most of my male readers with that statement but you who will, please continue.

I know the Bible says that wives should submit to their husbands (Ephesians 5:22) and I believe it. But, Guys, have you ever read three verses later? "HUSBANDS, LOVE YOUR WIVES AS CHRIST LOVED THE CHURCH AND GAVE HIMSELF FOR HER." That, Men is submission.

Our wives need to know that we see them as equal partners in this family thing. Yes, I know that the Bible teaches that the man should be the leader of his home. And I believe it. But Ephesians 5:21 says, "SUBMIT TO ONE ANOTHER." All of the Christian walk is submission. We are not lords of the world. We're not even lords of our families. God put us in families to "GIVE OURSELVES" to our wives and children. That takes commitment and effort - and submission.

What can be more wonderful than a peaceful Christian home where a wife knows she is heard and her opinion is valued and where EVERYBODY HAS THEIR SAY BUT NOBODY HAS THEIR WAY – ALL THE TIME?

BONES, BONES AND MORE BONES

There are 26 bones in each of your feet.

A snake can have up to 400 vertebrae in its backbone.

Cheetahs have a flexible spine and long, slender leg bones, enabling them to run very fast.

The bones located deep in your ears are the smallest bones in your body.

Your bones are 50% water and 50% minerals.

Astronauts in space lose calcium in their bones because there is no gravity to stimulate bone growth.

Rangers looking to tune pitching staff

ARLINGTON (AP) — With the AL West title secure and team and individual records falling almost daily, Texas Rangers manager Johnny Oates is fine-tuning his pitching staff.

Four candidates for the postseason roster combined on a five-hitter as the Rangers won their fifth straight, a 10-0 rout of the Seattle Mariners on Tuesday night.

Jeff Fassero, Mike Morgan, Danny Patterson and Danny Kolb shared the shutout. Morgan (13-8) pitched three innings of three-hit relief for the victory.

"I can only have 11 pitchers on my staff," said Oates, who has already tabbed Aaron Sele, Rick Helling and Esteban Loaiza as his top three starters for the playoffs. "So everybody was out there tonight for a reason."

Fassero got his third start for the Rangers and allowed only one hit in four innings against his former teammates. But he struggled with his control and was replaced by Morgan to start the fifth despite a 3-0 lead.

Fassero, traded by the Mariners to the Rangers on Aug. 27, walked four and struck out three.

"Once the game started, I didn't think about (facing old friends and former teammates)," Fassero said. "I took it as just another game."

The left-handed Fassero will receive extra consideration if the Rangers face the New York Yankees in the first round because of their left-handed bats.

"I'm competing for a long relief role," Fassero said. "I just go out and pitch. The ball is in their court. The Yankees are definitely a left-handed hitting team. They do a lot better against right-handed pitching."

Meanwhile, the Rangers continue to hammer away at opponents. Texas has had 10 or more runs 21 times, tying a club record for double-digit performances first accomplished in 1996.

Rafael Palmeiro hit his 47th homer to tie a team record, and Rusty Greer set a team mark by becoming the fourth Rangers player with 100 RBIs this season.

"That's nothing I set out to do," Palmeiro said after tying the mark set by Juan Gonzalez.

WTC looking to repeat at Sul Ross

Western Texas College's rodeo team will be looking to continue their dominance of early season rodeo action this weekend as it participates in the Sul Ross State University rodeo Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Alpine.

The men's team came out of the chutes in grand style in its first outing, capturing the Eastern New Mexico rodeo title two weeks ago, while the women's team came in second.

"We're looking to repeat what we did in our first rodeo," said WTC coach Greg Rhodes. "Both our teams did an excellent job up there and we're expecting the same type performance this weekend."

Rhodes said he has not selected what rodeo team members will compete as a team, and which members will compete individually.

"All 50 members of our team will compete...I just haven't decided which will compete in team competition," Rhodes said.

In Portales, WTC men were led by the performance of all-around title winner Leland Wood. The sophomore finished first in the finals of team roping with a time of 7.8 seconds, giving him second place in the average.

WTC tallied a total of 265 points, while the closest competition was from West Texas A&M which finished with 190 points.

Tarleton women captured first place in the New Mexico event with 180 points, while the WTC women's 105 points were good enough for second place.

"Then we'll get to rest a weekend," Rhodes said.

Reds rally to defeat Astros; 4 games left

HOUSTON (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds, despite their presence all season in a tight NL Central pennant chase, have a loose clubhouse.

Tuesday night, Pete Harnisch pitched eight strong inning and led the Reds to a 4-1 victory over Houston, giving them a one-game lead over the Astros with four games left in the season.

The Reds looked more than half good on the field, winning their sixth straight and regaining first place for the first time since Aug. 19, when they were knocked out by the Astros. Houston lost its third in a row.

"These guys know how to have a lot of fun in the clubhouse. They're a loose bunch, as you can tell," Harnisch said.

Harnisch (15-10) has a 5-2 lifetime record against the Astros, and he's 4-0 this season. He retired 12 in a row at one stretch and finished with three strikeouts and no walks. It was an efficient performance with 75 pitches that included 59 strikes and 16 balls.

"We're down to a four-game season," McKeon said. "We've come a long way to get this far, but we can't afford to celebrate yet."

Lady Tigers tied for 2nd after loss

SAN ANGELO - Snyder High School's Lady Tigers dropped into a second place tie with Fort Stockton following a key volleyball loss in San Angelo Tuesday night.

The Lake View Maidens won the match-up 15-10, 15-6.

"The girls went into the game ready to play," said Coach Patty Grimmett. "But we played a very good team."

Kameron Kallemeyn added two service points.

Kallemeyn added five kills, while Rina Geiger and Ashley Delce had three each. Tessa Hildebrand had two kills, while Cara Best and Christina Holder added one each.

Best and Delce both had three blocks, while Geiger had two blocks and Kallemeyn added one.

Martinez added five digs in the contest, while Hildebrand and Kallemeyn had three each. Tomlinson, Geiger and Best had two digs each, while Whitney Webb and Delce had one dig each.

The Lady Tigers will play Fort Stockton at 2 p.m. Saturday in the SHS gym, with the JV playing first, followed by the varsity.

Snyder is now 3-1 in district season, and 14-10 for the season.

The JV also lost to Lake View Tuesday by the scores of 4-15, 12-15.

Katie Voss scored seven points while Casey Collier had four and Vanessa Freeman had two. Laticia Martinez added one, as did Laura Billingsley and Kate Wright.

The freshman girls won Tuesday, 13-15, 15-7, 15-2 as Hayley Putman scored 15 service points.

Wendy Profitt and Shelly Fisk had seven points each, while Kayla Beck posted three as did Afton Schwertner. Darah Chambers added two as did Lauren Day. Cheylyn Robinson had one service point.

The freshman girls also recorded a win Saturday against Big Spring. Fisk had 12 points to lead the scoring and Putman added six as did Zipporah Peoples.

The JV defeated Big Spring also, 15-11, 7-15, 15-12.

Wright had 11 service points while Collier had nine and Freeman recorded seven.

Tarkenton cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hall of Fame quarterback Fran Tarkenton was among those cited when the SEC announced enforcement actions against 68 people and companies for alleged accounting fraud, including creating phony invoices and inflating earnings.

Tarkenton, the former head of a computer software company, agreed to settle by paying a $100,000 fine without admitting or denying wrongdoing, the Securities and Exchange Commission said.

Seniors stay at Dunes

BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Damage caused by Hurricane Floyd is keeping the Senior Tour Championship at the Dunes Golf and Beach Club, again this year instead of moving to the new TPC at Myrtle Beach.

The season-ending event, scheduled for Nov. 4-7, was supposed to move to the new course this year. However, PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem said there were too many trees down and too much flooding at the TPC to have it in tournament shape within six weeks.

Rangers work on pitching staf.

ARLINGTON (AP) — With the AL West title secure and team and individual records falling almost daily, Texas Rangers manager Johnny Oates is fine-tuning his pitching staff.

Four candidates for the postseason roster combined on a five-hitter as the Rangers won their fifth straight, a 10-0 rout of the Seattle Mariners on Tuesday night.

Jones wants Houston in NFL

IRVING (AP) — Jerry Jones has a simple plan to get the NFL back into Houston and Los Angeles.

The Dallas Cowboys owner said Tuesday the league should give Houston an expansion team, then concentrate on finding a team to move to Los Angeles.

The idea is the opposite of the premise the NFL has been working under for months.

"The economics already are in place with a good partnership between the city, state and proposed ownership in Houston," Jones said. "So just from the can-do aspect of it financially, it's less of a hurdle to go to Houston than LA."

Aggies' secondary getting good help

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The secondary for Texas A&M's Wrecking Crew defense doesn't have a nickname yet but they're working on it — against their own receivers.

The Aggies newfound passing attack has been fueled by quarterback Randy McCown and an elite set of wide receivers. A secondary benefit of having good receivers has been good practice for the secondary.

"Every day, speed is in your face, 4.2, 4.3," backup cornerback Jay Brooks said. "We're facing the best in the world. They (receivers) call themselves the Gorillas. We're still working to make a name for ourselves."

The Aggies rank third in the nation in turnover margin with 13. They've recovered three fumbles and grabbed 10 interceptions, including two for touchdowns, and they've given up only seven turnovers.

"As a group they (receivers) are the best in the nation and they help us prepare for games," cornerback Jason Webster said.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

Varicose veins can be itchy

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have varicose veins that itch unbearably. My doctor advises against surgery because my legs don't hurt, but I constantly scratch. What causes the itching and what can I do about it?

DEAR READER: Varicose veins usually cause itching because of a skin condition called stasis dermatitis.

In order for any tissue to be healthy, it must have a constant supply of oxygen/nutrient-rich blood feeding it. In addition, stale blood must drain back to the heart for circulation through the lungs.

Fresh blood is delivered through arteries; used blood returns to the heart via the veins. If the veins are filled, this old blood blocks the inflow of new. In people with varicosities, the blood flow through the large, dilated veins is sluggish; consequently, the skin is deprived of oxygen-rich blood. This backup produces unhealthy skin that is dry, scaly, rough, and itchy; over time, the skin will turn a darker color, and chronic, ulcerated sores may appear as the tissue breaks down.

Skin creams are often useful in relieving the symptoms of mild/moderate stasis dermatitis. Also, elevation of the legs will allow the veins to drain by gravity. Finally, elastic stockings frequently permit more efficient circulation by compressing varicose veins and encouraging them to empty. These simple medical measures may be all that is necessary. However, advanced varicosities — especially those associated with ulcers — usually need surgical attention, either by stripping, injection or laser therapy. Once the diseased veins have been removed or obliterated, venous blood finds alternative routes back to the heart.

If varicose veins are making your life unbearable, don't wait until pain or ulcers develop. Such symptoms indicate advanced circulatory insufficiency. Get a second opinion from a qualified surgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I live with a 45-year-old woman who incessantly complains that she cannot sleep. She insists that she is tired, but I say she's lazy. How much time do people need to sleep?

DEAR READER: Normal adults appear to require six to eight hours of sleep per day on average. This needn't be taken at one time; it can be split up, depending on circumstances. For example, former president Lyndon Johnson was said to have been a notoriously inconsistent sleeper. However, he frequently cat-napped during the day to revitalize himself.

Perhaps your companion IS really sleep-deprived. Such deprivation can certainly make people feel and act lazy. She should see a doctor. Insomnia is a common complaint with many causes: External factors (noise, snoring, etc.), depression, worry, physical problems (such as chronic pain), hormone imbalances and nerve disorders. The place to resolve your disagreement, it seems to me, is in the doctor's office.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Sleep Wake Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

Astro-graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Thursday, Sept. 30, 1999

Your success rate in accomplishing your endeavors in the year ahead looks quite encouraging, but nothing will be handed to you on a silver platter. Be enterprising and progressive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Aggressiveness is certain to draw fire today, so if you need to make some suggestions on how something should be done, do so with plenty of cool logic. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Inequality invites failure in all endeavors, but especially where money is involved. If negotiating in this realm today, make certain all parties are treated fairly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Independence is an admirable quality, but there's a chance you could carry it to extremes and come off in a self-serving manner today. Display cooperation instead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If coworkers don't seem to be working up to par today, do not simply assume they are lazy. Chances are the methods or procedures that have been set in place need to be revamped.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Get your social obligations out of the way early today, so you can carry out plans to be with persons you truly enjoy, rather than being only with those to whom you feel beholden.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unless you first think about and then assign what tasks can be happily done by whom in the family today, an all-out desertion could occur. Be considerate of everyone's desires.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might have to deal with someone today who has a bit of a chip on his or her shoulder. Fortunately, instead of using your brawn, you'll use your wit to calm the temperament.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Pay special attention to details today relating to any business or money transaction. What you fail to recognize now could come back to haunt you later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Speak up on your own behalf if you're dealing with someone today who shows little regard for the interests of you or others. Let this person know you won't go uncounted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extra careful today not to go about your work in an absent-minded fashion, because you could miss something quite large that has potential money making possibilities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're the person who can usurp an individual who has taken it upon him or herself to dictate the actions of a group involvement today. Let him or her know it's the majority who rules.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Quietly go about working towards your aims today, especially when in the mist of others who are openly clamoring for the prize. The more subtle you are, the greater your chances of winning.

Here are some basic concepts of money management and savings that you might want to use to open discussions about money with your children. Once the discussion is open use the opportunity to teach your child about money issues.

*It's not how much money you make, but how you manage what you have that matters.

*You don't need a lot of money to be a good money manager. Even a small amount of money well managed is far more important that a lot of money wasted.

*In the same way you have life rules by which you live, you need money rules that can guide the way you handle money.

*If you always save some of your money — before you even think of spending it — you will never be broke.

*Needs are essential, wants are optional.

*It's not wrong to want things. Just remember your wants will always exceed your means.

*A true need is never realized while you are in a store. If you really needed it, you knew that before you left home.

*Saving money can be as gratifying as spending money. The difference? The good feeling you get from saving goes on and on while the fun of spending doesn't last that long.

*A credit card purchase creates a loan. You don't really own something bought with a credit card until you pay the bill in full.

Cancer victims flood phone lines for a shot at new drug

BOSTON (AP) — Ever since she beat breast cancer two years ago, Ellen Fewtrell has been adding to a file full of newspaper clippings about cancer treatments.

The 34-year-old Revere resident, along with five friends and family members who have fought the disease, has avidly followed news of research into a promising new therapy using drugs that shrink tumors in mice.

Fewtrell was excited that volunteers began signing up Tuesday for the first clinical trial of endostatin, an angiogenesis inhibitor that has inhibited the growth of blood vessels that feed tumors in laboratory animals.

GOP leaders mull farm aid deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of bailing out the troubled farm economy continued to grow as congressional Republican leaders sought to get support for an $8.7 billion aid package and end an impasse over an annual agricultural spending bill.

The proposed deal would add $1.2 billion in disaster relief to an aid package approved by the Senate in August and omit dairy and trade provisions that have delayed passage of the farm bailout for the past week.

It was unclear whether the Republicans could get the necessary signatures from members of a House-Senate conference committee that must approve the spending bill. As of this morning, a majority of both Senate and House members on the panel had declined to sign it, according to informal counts by lobbyists and lawmakers.

"Hopefully, within the week we'll have an agreement," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Tuesday.

A judge's ruling in Vermont on Tuesday could make it easier to sell the deal to lawmakers. U.S. District Judge William Sessions III postponed implementation of a new nationwide milk-pricing system that the Agriculture Department planned to put into effect Friday and also kept alive a regional price-setting arrangement in New England that was to expire the same day.

The judge's decision would take the pressure off Congress to deal with dairy policy in the appropriations bill. Opponents of the USDA plan had seen the bill as about their only hope of blocking the new system.

"This buys us precious time at a critical moment, and we may need every minute of it," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

In addition to removing any mention of dairy policy, the proposed agreement on the spending bill would kill a Senate amendment that would allow sales of food and medicine to Cuba and make it difficult for a president to include such items in future embargoes.

At least one major farm organization, the American Farm Bureau Federation, urged lawmakers Tuesday to reject the proposed deal because it failed to include the dairy and trade provisions or enough money to cover farmers' weather-related losses.

The proposed agreement on the spending bill won a major convert on the conference committee, Rep. Tom Latham, R-Iowa, when House leaders agreed to add a provision to require meatpackers to start reporting prices they pay for livestock.

Senate leaders took a copy of the proposed agreement to the Senate floor Tuesday afternoon to show to colleagues.

Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., was urging panel members to sign the deal.

"The most important thing before us is to expedite that emergency money ... so farmers get it before Thanksgiving," he said.

But farm groups complained that the disaster relief remains insufficient, and Democrats and some Republicans reacted angrily to word of the proposed agreement, complaining that they had been excluded from the negotiations.

"They are trying to write the bill with a few leaders and a few staffers. In the end, we will not be able to produce good legislation," said Rep. Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio, a member of the conference committee.

There was discussion of putting the dairy issue to a separate vote in the Senate this week, but that effort appeared to be doomed because of the threat of a filibuster even before Tuesday's court ruling.

Producers in the South and Northeast want Congress to replace USDA's new pricing system and authorize more states to form price-fixing agreements.
