Spring board

How's that? Sirens

Q. I heard sirens last night. Was there a tornado in the area?

A. The sirens were activated accidentally during the storm last night, Emergency Management Coordinator Hal Boyd said. He is unsure what activated the sirens, but he suspects the cause was lightning or a power surge on the west side of town.

Calendar Talkers

TODAY

• The Kentwood Center will be the host of a gospel singing session at 7 p.m. The public is invited.

TUESDAY

• City Council budget meeting at 6:30 p.m. at Airpark meeting room.

WEDNESDAY

• Big Spring Evening Lions Club will meet at 7 p.m. in the Howard College Cactus Room to discuss upcoming camp programs for crippled and diabetic children.

Items for the Spring board calendar must be community-wide events to be included and will be listed no more than one week in advance. Send such notices to: Spring board, Big Spring Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring. Club notices will be printed in the "Bulletin Board" section of the Sunday Herald.

Tops on TV Fight for Life

Jerry Lewis and Patty Duke star in the premiere movie based on the story of an American couple's efforts to secure a drug available only in England that would help control their daughter's severe epileptic seizures at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.

• "Brown Sugar" at 7 p.m. on Ch. 5.

• "Pony Express" at 7 p.m. on Ch. 11.

Outside Windy

Skies today are partly cloudy and cooler with a high in the mid 60s and gusty northwest winds at 20 to 30 miles per hour. Lake wind advisories are in effect, and will be required Tuesday. Tonight will be clear and colder with a low in the mid 30s, and Tuesday will be sunny and windy with a high in the mid 60s.

Color guard places first

Howard College's winter color guard, Mariah, took first place at a regional meet in Houston during the weekend.

The guard took first in the Class A competition with 74.5 points. The second place team earned 62 points.

Of the five classes, class A is next to the top class, Cheri Sparks, vice president for student life, said.

The group will compete at the state level in Dallas April 4, Sparks said.

Tracy Burch is director of the group and part-time color guard instructor at Howard College.

Court limits banning of 'indecentcy'

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today limited the authority of all states to ban "indecent" material from cable television.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, upheld a ruling that barred Utah officials from banning sexually explicit material and nudity from cable broadcasts except during the hours of midnight to 7 a.m.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor voted to hear arguments in the case, but four votes are needed to grant such review.

Today's ruling was announced in a one-sentence decision affirming a federal appeals court's ruling.

Ten states joined Utah in urging the Supreme Court to permit regulation of indecent material on cable TV. They are Arizona, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Washington and West Virginia.

"The transmission of sexually explicit programs by cable television into homes where cable television is desired but sexually explicit programming is not has become in recent years a matter of grave concern to many states," they said.

The Utah Legislature passed the Cable Decency Act in 1983, making it a public nuisance for cable TV to show indecent material. The law carried fines of up to $10,000 for repeat offenders.

The statute defined indecent material to include "the visual or verbal depiction or description of human sexual or excretory organs or functions ... exposure of genitals, pubic area, buttocks, or the showing of any portion of the female breast below the top of the nipple."

The law banned such material if "the average person applying contemporary community standards for cable television ... would find (it) is presented in a patently offensive way."

The Utah attorney general's office set guidelines for the law, imposing the ban for all hours except midnight to 7 a.m.

After cable companies challenged the law, U.S. District Judge Aldon J. Anderson declared it unconstitutional in 1985. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the ruling last September.

In other action today, the court:

• Turned down an appeal by major league baseball players aimed at winning them the legal right to millions of dollars in revenue from televised games.

The court, without comment, left intact a ruling that major league baseball's 26 team owners have a copyright on the telecasts.

• Agreed to hear a Reagan administration appeal aimed at making it easier for the government to deport illegal aliens.

The court said it will review a decision ordering further administrative hearings for a California man trying to avoid return to his native Ghana.

• Ruled that federal judges have the authority to suspend the extra prison terms federal law requires for people who commit crimes while awaiting trial on a previous charge.

The justices reversed a federal appeals court ruling that judges lack the legal authority to suspend the 2-to-10-year additional sentences required in such cases by the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984.

• Refused to throw out child-stealing charges against a fundamentalist Christian woman who said her son should not be living with the boy's homosexual father.

The court, without comment, let stand California court rulings that Betty Lou Batey may be prosecuted for taking her son from his father's custody.

• Rejected a Reagan administration bid to affirm the firing of four negotiators for the union that led a 1981 strike by air traffic controllers.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that the negotiators legitimately were absent from work to participate in collective bargaining and should be SUPREME COURT page 2A

Michael McKenzie, 7, holds out a spearful of trash so his father Robert can bag the garbage they were collecting at the corner of FM 700 and Mesa Street. The two were among a group representing ATS Telecom (formerly Advanced Telephone Systems). The company group adopted FM 700 between Highway 87 and Highway 80 as a civic project and group members were out cleaning the road Saturday morning.

Nine groups adopt road sections

Nine organizations have adopted approximately 18 miles of Howard County highways in the state Adopt-a-Highway program, according to Junior Dorn, state roadway maintenance supervisor for the county.

In adopting a two-mile stretch of highway, an organization agrees to clean it at least twice a year, Dorn said.

But he added that the highways often need cleaning more frequently, especially during the spring because of high winds and storms.

"You take 18 miles around our city, and it certainly helps" eliminate litter, he said.

In addition, he believes the program has helped make the public more aware of the litter problem.

The areas of highway adopted in Big Spring are the western part of FM 700, four miles north and eight miles south on Highway 87, he said.

The county still has "quite a few" miles left to be adopted, but they are further away from town, he said.

To participate in the program, interested persons should contact Dorn at the local the state highway department office, he said.

The nine organizations already participating are: ALSA, VFW Post No. 2013, the Kiwanis Club, Howard County Jaycees, Texas Employees Association Chapter 52, ATS Telecom, Explorer Post No. 5, the Student Organization of Howard College, and the Howard County Misdemeanor Work Force.

City's sirens blast as hail falls on area

Staff and wire reports

A tornado watch was posted for central sections of Texas today after a stormy night that included snow and blizzard conditions in the Panhandle and twisters in central sections of the state.

Big Spring experienced hail during a brief thunderstorm Sunday night that caused emergency warning sirens to sound. Hail one inch in diameter fell in the Midland area last night.

Big Spring's sirens were not turned on but sounded spontaneously, probably as a result of a power surge in the west side of town or by lightning strike, emergency management coordinator Hal Boyd speculated this morning.

Sirens at the rodeo grounds and at the Capehart addition — former Webb Air Force Base housing — sounded, he said.

The sirens had to be turned off manually, Boyd said, adding that they are being inspected today for damage.

Gusty winds brought sandstorms to the spring city this morning. Lake wind advisories are in effect for Big Spring area lakes today and Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service.

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures, with a high in the mid 60s and northwest winds at 20 to 30 miles per hour.

Forecasts called for clearing skies except in Northeast Texas where a few thunderstorms were expected to linger through tonight. It will be mostly clear and slightly cooler statewide Tuesday.

Stephanie was one of many area residents who attended the carnival Saturday afternoon at the Howard County Fair grounds. The six-day carnival was sponsored jointly by Howard County Jaycees and ALSA.

Legislature facing deficit legal issue

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature, at the halfway point of its 140-day session, will be busy this week searching for a solution to a budget problem.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has asked Attorney General Jim Mattox whether the deficit projected for the end of the fiscal year, Aug. 31, can be carried over to the next biennium.

The question is whether Texas' constitutional "pay-as-you-go" provision would prohibit such a move.

A finding by Mattox that the deficit must be erased would force lawmakers to raise $1 billion in new revenue in the remaining five months of the current two-year spending cycle.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said that would require a "surcharge on existing taxes" since there would not be enough time to expand the sales tax base and bring in $1 billion by Sept. 1.

The House Committee on Public Health, meanwhile, had scheduled a hearing today on the AIDS problem. Scheduled witnesses included Dr. Peter Mansell, medical director of the Institute of Immunological Diseases at Houston.

In other business, the Senate State Affairs Committee had scheduled a hearing on a bill by Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, to amend the Open Meetings Act.

Chairman Jeffrey Bruce of Texas Media & coalition of the state's major journalism groups, said coalition representatives have been meeting for six months with organizations representing public officials that have historically expressed concerns about amending the law.

On Tuesday, the Senate Criminal Justice Committee agenda includes Sunset legislation on the Board of Pardons and Paroles, Adult Probation Commission and Texas Board of Corrections, which oversees the state prison system.

Under the Sunset law, the Legislature reviews certain agencies each session. An affirmative vote is required to extend their lives.

Howard County commissioners approved buying materials for summer paving projects and accepted ownership of an infants heart monitor during action this morning.

Commissioners authorized bids for road gravel and agreed to purchase a $1,440 culvert to be installed underneath County Road 47 in Precinct Two.

County Engineer Bill Mims told commissioners his department this summer will pave approximately 10 miles of county roads in each of the four precincts.

He did not specify which roads. Commissioners also discussed a recent March of Dimes grant application for a monitor that serves as a warning device for infants COUNTY page 2A

Clements favors lottery to aid prisons

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said today a lottery would be a good way to improve the overcrowded Texas prison system without raising taxes.

The lottery has been talked about as a way of helping reduce the state's budget deficit, and now lawmakers are discussing using the profits to build new facilities, Clements said.

As a constitutional amendment, the issue would have to be approved by a two-thirds vote in the House and Senate before it could be placed on the ballot.

"I understand from talking to Mr. Gib Lewis (house speaker) that the lottery would probably be directed to the criminal justice system in order to build prisons," Clements told a meeting of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

"I think that kind of idea of constitutional funding will increase its chances for passing in as much as the people of Texas, in all of the surveys I have seen, want more prisons built and will be willing to pay for them."

"This is a good way of doing this without raising taxes," Clements said.

Clements said he personally was neutral on the lottery issue.

The governor also talked about other issues the Legislature is working on, including the budget, tort reform and taxes. He said horse racing also has a chance of being placed on the ballot in November.

Vice President George Bush was scheduled to address the group later today.

About 200 editors and publishers of Texas daily newspapers are attending the three-day conference.

Also on the agenda are talks on the Legislature and the state's economy by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis and state treasurer Ann Richards.

Don Adams, TDNA legal and legislative consultant, and newspaper analyst John Morton are also scheduled to speak.

Police beat

Police arrest three, find controlled substances

Three local men were arrested early Sunday morning on suspicion of possessing a controlled substance.

Police Lt. Jerry Edwards said police found marijuana and an unknown quantity of powder in a plastic bag.

The powder is believed to be a controlled substance and is being tested at a laboratory for identification and amount, he said.

Arrested were Casey Chance Harrison, 18, and Lathay Kenn Williams, 17, both of Sterling City Route Box 136, and Grady Lynn Cunningham, 34, 4 Highland Cove.

The three were transferred to the county jail. Harrison was released on a total of $35,000 bond, Williams on $25,000 bond, and Cunningham on $20,000 bond, set by the city.

The arrests were made at a Great Western motel room when officers responded to a report of a disturbance there, Edwards said. The motel room was searched with the owner's permission, he said.

A Big Spring man, on parole after his conviction of burglary of a motor vehicle, was arrested Sunday on a parole violation warrant, suspected of burglary of a habitation, according to David Harman, adult probation officer.

Raymond Lopez Chavarria, 31, 1217 W. Sixth St., was arrested. A parole hearing is scheduled for April 16. Parole Hearing Officer Tammy Bloxon is to conduct the hearing, Harman said.

Michelle Darden, 538 Westover Apt. 131, told police that someone she knows damaged four tires on her black and white 1985 Pontiac at Highland Lanes bowling center Saturday.

The incident occurred between 8 and 11:30 p.m. Saturday. Damage was listed at $350.

Two car door-mounted speakers valued at $60 and 15 cassette tapes, valued at $150, were stolen from a vehicle owned by Hope Puentez, 1212 Mesquite St. between 4 and 10:45 p.m. Saturday.

Johnny Rodriguez, 1605 Harding St., told police that someone stole his bicycle from the county fairgrounds at 10 p.m. Sunday.

Charles Bertram Cahoon, 18, 801 E. 20th St., was arrested Saturday, charged with failure to leave information at the scene of an accident.

Linda Kay Marshall, 22, 1002 N. Main St., and a black male juvenile, unidentified because of his age, were arrested at that address Saturday afternoon, charged with disorderly conduct-fighting.

Michelle Cano, 17, of Coahoma, was arrested Saturday on a warrant for assault.

Holston Banks Jr., 21, 1106 N.W. Seventh St., was arrested early Sunday morning on suspicion of Class C assault.

Emilio Herrera, 26, Big Spring Trailer Park, was arrested Sunday on a warrant for discharging a firearm.

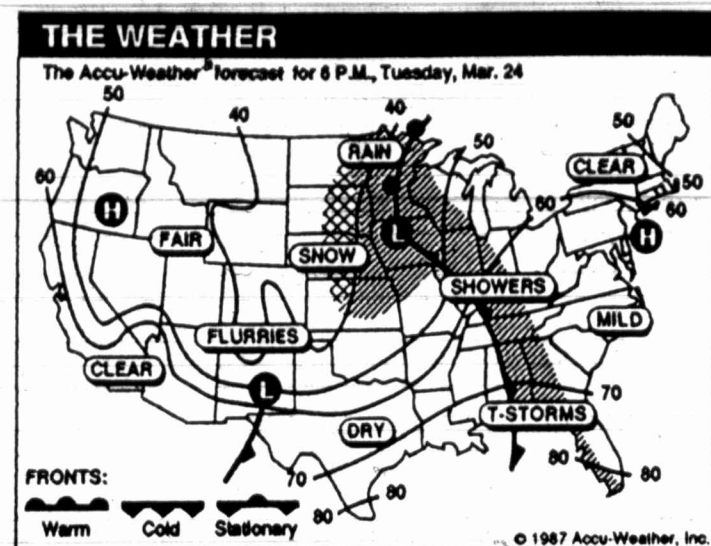

James Owen Winchester, 19, 103 E. 20th St., was arrested at Comanche Trail Park Sunday evening on suspicion of driving with a suspended license. He was transferred to the county jail and released on $500 bond.

Weather

Forecast

West Texas - Skies will be fair tonight and sunny most Tuesday. Lows tonight 28 Panhandle to 37 southeast. Highs Tuesday will be from 55 in the Panhandle to 69 in the southeast and near 80 in the Big Bend valleys.

State

A tornado watch was in effect for central sections of Texas early today after a stormy night that saw tornadoes touch down in the Panhandle and in some areas of Central Texas.

The watches expired at 7 a.m. and storm activity began tapering off between midnight and dawn.

Forecasts called for clearing skies except in Northeast Texas where a few thunderstorms were expected to linger through tonight. It will be mostly clear and slightly cooler statewide Tuesday.

The stormy weather Sunday was triggered by an upper level storm system moving over warm, moist air at the surface.

A line of showers and thunderstorms moved steadily eastward across the state early today. They were stretched across a cold front located from across North Central Texas southwestward to near Del Rio.

Heavy rains, high winds, some gusting to as high as near 60 mph, and hail were common with the storms as they moved across the state. Bracketville had wind gust to 60 mph and hail one inch in diameter fell in the Midland area last night.

Some light snow was falling West Texas early today, but was expected to end not long after sunrise.

Skillet fire burns woman

A Big Spring woman remains in the hospital with burns she suffered when a skillet of grease ignited Friday evening as she prepared supper.

Catherine Woods, 2600 Carol St., suffered second and third degree burns on her right hand and both feet, a Scenic Mountain Medical Center spokeswoman said.

Woods is in good condition and remains in the hospital with severe burns, and a chance of infection exists, the spokeswoman said this morning.

Assistant Fire Chief Burr Lea

Settles said Woods was preparing supper when the pan of grease caught fire. As she moved the pan, some of the grease spilled on her hand and feet, he said.

Fire department reports indicate Woods dumped the flaming grease out the back door. The kitchen carpet and a tablecloth were burned, the reports state. Damage was listed at $1,500.

The hospital spokeswoman said Woods was in a rush to extinguish the fire because her husband, an emphysema patient, was using oxygen, which could explode if exposed to flames.

Local man hurt in accident

A local man remains in the hospital after he was hurt in a two-car accident Saturday night.

Marty Allen Cornahan, 22, Sterling City Route Box 163, is in good condition, a Scenic Mountain Medical Center spokeswoman said this morning.

A passenger in Cornahan's 1980 maroon Ford Fairmont, 17-year-old David Gonzales of Vernon, refused medical treatment.

The accident occurred when Cornahan, stopped at the 2900 block of Gregg Street and signalling to turn left, attempted the turn in front of an on-coming truck, the reports state. The vehicles collided.

The truck was a 1984 Dodge Ram pickup driven by Alan Scott Patterson, 26, 310 E. 21st St. Police reports indicate he was not injured.

Cornahan was cited for failure to yield right-of-way and failure to maintain financial responsibility, second offense. Police reports state he had been drinking but that he was intoxicated.

Gonzales was arrested for public intoxication.

Deaths

John Deffebach

John Alexander Deffebach, 82, of Abilene, brother of a local woman, died Saturday, March 14, 1987.

Graveside services were Monday, March 16, at Greenwood Memorial Park in Fort Worth.

He was born in Fort Worth and had lived in Abilene for 30 years. He married Lura Dickenson Deffebach.

Deffebach attended Texas A&M University, where he played on Southwest Conference championship football teams in 1925 and 1927.

He graduated in 1928 and went to work for the Burton-Lingo Lumber Co., where he later became a director. He was a veteran of World War II and served two years in the European theater.

He was active in Abilene community affairs and served on the boards of the Salvation Army, YMCA and Child Welfare. He was past chairman of the board of stewards of St. Paul United Methodist Church in Abilene.

Deffebach was president of the Rotary Club, the Central West Texas Lumbermen's Association and the Abilene Fine Arts Museum.

He is survived by his wife, Lura Deffebach of Abilene; two daughters, Mrs. Robert Sweeney of Fort Worth and Mrs. Steven Lynch of Austin; three sisters, Mrs. Forrest Hurley of Fort Worth, Mrs. Kelly Lawrence of Big Spring and Mrs. James White of Beaumont; and five grandchildren.

Three children, two adults die in Dallas fire

DALLAS (AP) — Five people, including three children, died when fire swept through a two-story federally subsidized apartment building in Dallas, fire officials say.

The victims of the Sunday night fire were identified as Linda Hudson, 19, her 2-year-old daughter, Shaquitha; two nieces, Alicia Michelle Hudson, 8, and Naomi Hudson, 15 months; and Willie James Jones, 35, a family friend who was visiting, fire officials said.

Linda Hudson died at Baylor University Medical Center and the other four victims died at Parkland Memorial Hospital, authorities said.

Dallas Fire Capt. Don Howard said the blaze apparently began in the downstairs living room of Ms. Hudson's apartment in the Turner Court housing project operated by the Dallas Housing Authority. The cause was under investigation early today, Howard said.

The victims were upstairs when the fire broke out about 11:15 p.m. and spread quickly through the living room, Howard said, preventing the victims from running down a staircase that was their only escape route.

"The fire had gotten trapped and they couldn't get out," he said.

Eula Rae Hudson, Linda Hudson's mother, escaped unhurt and tried to warn others to flee the apartment, according to Sheila Clay, a neighbor.

"She ran around to the back of the building, beating on the door and telling everyone to get out," Ms. Clay said.

Leroy Robertson, 17, and John Scott, 19, were among the first neighbors to arrive at the apartment to try to save the victims.

"I came out and saw a big flame," Robertson said. "The lady said there were people trapped in there."

The two men then climbed on a clothesline to get to the apartment's second-floor bedrooms, where the victims later were found.

"I heard kids hollering," Robertson said. But he said they could not reach the victims.

Robertson said he and Scott tore off a screen window and shoved a water hose inside. They tried to climb in to rescue the victims, but the smoke was too intense.

Fire officials said neighbors swamped the department with calls once they sighted the fire.

"Everybody in the neighborhood called up," dispatcher Ed Coe said. "They knew there were kids in there. They said the kids are in there and they're burning. We got a jillion calls. It was bad."

It took only about 15 minutes to bring the blaze under control, fire officials said, but the victims had succumbed to smoke and heat inhalation.

In 1986, 34 people died in fires in Dallas. Nine of those killed were children younger than five, fire officials said.

Sheriff's log

Howard County resident Jessie Garcia on FM 669, 1 1/2 miles north of Luther Gin, told sheriff's deputies Sunday night someone burglarized his residence between 7:30 p.m. Friday and 8:10 p.m. Sunday.

Items reported stolen were a $400 microwave oven, miscellaneous household items valued at $185, a $25 ice chest and a $35 radio alarm clock.

Deputies released Dennis Ausbie, 26, 1408 Harding St., from county jail Sunday morning after he served a seven-day jail sentence for outstanding fines he owed the county from a possession of no driver's license offense.

Supreme Court

reinstated. In the cable case, Anderson, noting that the Utah act was aimed at banning more than obscenity, said it violates the Constitution because it is too broad a prohibition.

"The scope of the language is so uncertain as to chill legitimate expression in a way that the (Constitution's) overbreadth doctrine forbids," he said.

Anderson rejected arguments that the law is in keeping with a 1978 Supreme Court ruling that the Federal Communications Commission may restrict the broadcast of indecent language over the airwaves.

That ruling, in a case involving the use of seven "dirty words" by comedian George Carlin, gave the FCC power to punish radio stations broadcasting his monologue at certain times of day.

Anderson said there are many distinctions between Utah's law and the FCC action.

Cable TV viewers, unlike radio listeners, invite the programming into their homes by being paid subscribers, Anderson said. The 1978 ruling only authorizes the FCC to monitor consumer complaints "at broadcasters who operate in the public domain," he said.

Also, Anderson said, a limited number of radio frequencies makes that medium subject to greater regulation. Cable is not limited to a finite number of channels the way broadcasting is, he said.

Anderson also rejected arguments by Utah officials that the state law is aimed at protecting children.

"The act itself does not mention children anywhere," he said. "It does not provide any systematic procedure for protecting children."

"We're disappointed, but we gave it our all and that was the result," Utah Attorney General David Wilkinson said in reaction to today's decision.

"I would think most legislatures are going to want to wait and see what changes take place on the court in the next two or three years before they do anything further," he said.

The case is Wilkinson vs. Jones, 86-1125.

with defective heart conditions.

County Attorney Tim Yeats said the device is used as an aid to prevent crib death syndrome. It signals an alarm that the baby needs emergency care if the infant's condition deteriorates, Yeats said.

The March of Dimes is adding $1,000 to the $400 previously approved by the county.

Commissioners also approved

O.L. Brown's motion that the county assume ownership and maintenance responsibility for the device.

That action was taken after Yeats told commissioners the March of Dimes needed a letter of agreement from the county before authorizing funds.

Brown's motion also contained provisions authorizing use of the device to all persons regardless of their income.

Retail gas prices rise

LOS ANGELES — Retail gasoline prices, which have fluctuated all year, rose more than a penny in the last two weeks and likely will continue to climb, an analyst said.

The price rose 1.23 cent per gallon to a national average price for all grades of 94.36 cents, according to the Lundberg Letter, which based its findings on a biweekly survey of 15,000 stations.

The wholesale price of gasoline during the period showed an even sharper increase, rising by 1.92 cent to reach an average 59.6 cents.

"The greater increase at wholesale indicates we will probably see retail prices climb further as dealers pass through their costs to customers," Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

Retail gasoline prices bottomed out last November at 84.63 cents. Since then, prices have fluctuated.

According to the latest Lundberg survey, regular unleaded at self-service stations averaged 86.86 cents per gallon, up 1.31 cent. Regular leaded was 82.42 cents, up 1.52 cent, while premium unleaded was $1.0020, up 1.14 cent.

Boy needs second liver

PITTSBURGH — A boy whose need for a new liver generated a nationwide flood of donations, including $1,000 from President Reagan, has deteriorated into critical condition and must undergo a second transplant, officials said.

Seven-year-old Ronnie DeSillers on Sunday was moved into intensive care at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh after doctors learned a virus had irreparably damaged his transplanted organ, said Debbie Lesniak, a nursing supervisor.

The Florida boy has been placed on the waiting list for a donor liver, said spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

"Ronnie's need is urgent," she said Sunday night. "It's very difficult to predict the course of this virus... but with every passing day, his need increases."

Nicotine hurts defenses

SAN DIEGO — Nicotine seems to promote the spread of cancer throughout the body, and people who already have the disease should be encouraged to stay away from tobacco to improve their odds of surviving, new research suggests.

The study finds preliminary evidence that nicotine, the addictive drug in cigarettes, disrupts one of the body's built-in defenses against cancer's spread, and raises questions about long-term use of nicotine gum to break the smoking habit.

"All too often, patients who have tumor disease take a very fatalistic attitude," said Dr. Gesina L. Longenecker. "They say, 'I already have the problem. I might just as well not deny myself the pleasure at this point.' In fact, it is not such a good idea to take that attitude."

City opposes coalition proposal

DENVER (AP) — A proposal to guarantee shelters with an "atmosphere of dignity" for homeless people could open a costly Pandora's box if approved in a referendum, say city officials who oppose it.

But advocates for the homeless say the plan, which gives "street people" the right to sue if not provided safe, "dignified" shelter, only binds the city to meet its obligations.

"We look to government to do a lot of things for us, to coordinate things," said Kathleen Mullen, president of the Colorado Coalition for the Homeless. "We say that patching streets is no more important than caring for the most vulnerable of our citizens."

The non-profit group gathered 10,418 residents' signatures to get the measure on the May 19 ballot.

The goal "is to solve the short-range problem of 200 to 300 people every night who are not finding a bed to sleep in in our community," Mullen said. Estimates of the total number of homeless vary, from 1,200 to 3,000.

Providing emergency space to absorb the overflow from existing shelters would cost no more than $438,000 per year, said Mullen. But opponents say the ordinance could lead to costly litigation and judgments against the city.

"The main problem is the right to sue," said Deputy City Attorney Patricia Wells. "There is no legal obligation on anybody but the city. No obligation falls to anyone but the taxpayers of Denver."

The language of the ordinance is particularly troublesome, she said. "If a homeless person decided the Jesus Saves mission is kind of run-down and seedy and 'my shelter is not being provided in an atmosphere of dignity — I'm going to sue the city.'"

"How in the world can you calculate that cost in advance?"

Mullen, a veteran Legal Aid Society lawyer, said the city's fears are unfounded. "You can count on one hand the number of lawsuits we brought against Denver on behalf of poor people," she said.

Because the ordinance's definition of homeless people includes anyone "who is afraid to go home — not just a person who doesn't have a place to live," the city could be forced to provide shelter for victims of domestic violence, said Wells.

"Once you start down a path providing shelter to people that is 'safe and dignified," then the courts are free to define what those mean," she said.

This homeless man walking the streets of Denver, Colo., would be guaranteed shelter if Denver city officials pass a referendum ensuring an estimated 1,200 to 3,000 homeless safe and "dignified" shelter.

Mary Krane, manager of Denver's Department of Social Services, says the homeless need job training, not more beds.

"The AFL-CIO is running an employment program for homeless people," Krane said. "I would rather invest the money in programs like that than much money to open a new shelter."

"What we really need to do is get in the population of people who are homeless and provide services to assist them not to be homeless anymore. We can't do that with shelter beds," Krane said.

Radio: RJO has Waite

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Tehran Radio said today Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite was kidnapped in Lebanon by the Revolutionary Justice Organization.

The state-run radio, monitored in Nicosia, said the group seized Waite claiming he was a U.S. spy.

"It is necessary to note that Terry Waite, accused of espionage, was captured by an armed Lebanese group known as Revolutionary Justice," the radio said without elaboration.

There was no independent confirmation of the report, one of a series concerning Waite since he disappeared Jan. 20 while on a mission to free foreign hostages in Lebanon. No group has claimed to hold Waite.

Officer linked to plot

MANILA, Philippines — An officer belonging to a military fraternity linked to a foiled coup plot is the prime suspect in the bombing of the Philippine Military Academy, the chief of staff said today.

The blast Wednesday killed four people and wounded more than 30. The bomb exploded on a grandstand where President Corason Aquino made a speech Sunday, and investigators have not ruled out the possibility that it was part of an assassination plot.

In her speech at the academy, Mrs. Aquino conceded her peace initiatives have failed and ordered the armed forces to crush leftist rebels and rightist plotters.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos told reporters in Baguio City, site of the academy, that the unidentified army captain as well as three enlisted men and six civilians were being questioned about the bombing.

Four die in Navy crash

MANILA, Philippines — A U.S. Navy helicopter crashed during a training flight today in Zambales province about 80 miles west of Manila, killing four American servicemen, the U.S. Navy announced.

Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of their families. There were no survivors.

A statement from the Joint Public Affairs Office at the Subic Bay naval station said the CH-46 helicopter crashed near the Bucaco River 1.6 miles south of the town of Botolan.

The cause of the crash has not been determined, the statement added.

Judges refuse request

JERUSALEM — The judges hearing the trial of retired Ohio autoworker John Demjanjuk rejected a defense request today that they disqualify themselves from the Nazi war crimes case and ordered the trial resumed immediately.

"Let us state unequivocally. The court has had no hostility either towards Mr. Sheftel, the defense, or the defendant they represent," Presiding Judge Dov Levine told the court.

New 'airplane' game takes players for ride

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

"Airplane," the newest twist on the age-old illegal pyramid scheme, is turning up in communities around the nation, and authorities are urging unsuspecting players not to be taken for a ride.

"On these pyramid-type schemes, for the most part, the victims are just about as greedy as the promoters," said Spencer Barasch, associate general counsel for the state Securities Commission in Oklahoma, where dozens of "Airplane" games have sprung up. "Airplane" is like an Oklahoma tumbleweed drifting down the street.

There are variations, but a typical "Airplane" game is started by a "pilot" who persuades two people to pay him an entry fee to be "co-pilots." The fee reportedly has been as high as $1,500, but typically is $100.

The co-pilots, in turn, recruit two players each. These four, who also pay the fee, become "flight attendants" and each recruits two "passengers," again for $100.

When a plane is full — say, with 14 entries — the pilot has $1,400 and the pyramid splits in half, with the co-pilots becoming pilots, flight attendants becoming co-pilots, and passengers becoming flight attendants. Newly recruited passengers pay the pilot $100 each, and the pyramid continues splitting and growing.

Of course, the longer the pyramid is running, the more difficult it is to find willing players. Those not yet pilots would lose their money when the pyramid collapses.

Such games are called pyramids because a few money-makers at the top are supported by lots of money-payers at the bottom.

Where the game got started is a mystery, but it has been reported in Miami; Tampa, Fla.; Oxford, Miss.; Rochester, N.Y.; Toronto; Los Angeles; Montreal; Indiana; Colorado; Tennessee; Georgia; South Carolina and Texas.

"The 'Airplane' differs from other multilevel pyramid deals in that it doesn't have a common promoter," said Barasch. "It's just a lot of little airplanes. It's spreading by word of mouth."

Peers important in most teen's lives

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

Peers assume a more central role in the lives of teenagers than any other age group. In a sense, the heavy involvement with friends is a mechanism — like candy for a former smoker — for helping the young person make the transition from dependent child to an independent adult.

Most parents would say, "Of course I want my child to be independent." But they don't carry those words out with actions.

The more independent thought and behavior going on in a family, the more diverse the problems and more difficult the answers. So it's a natural tendency for parents to want to minimize problems through control of children's behavior. Yet in order for a teen to gain independence, parental control must decrease. Once parents realize they must reduce their control, then they can address the issue of peer pressure. The influence of the peer group seems to be at its peak between ages 12 and 14 and gradually declines thereafter.

Focus on family

Parents can help their teenagers by adopting a friendly and loving attitude not only toward their own adolescent but toward their teenagers' friends as well. Encourage them to "hang out" at your house when you are home. Stay in the background but be kind and friendly when approached. Don't be reluctant to make and maintain house rules, just don't nag about them.

Parents and adolescents should agree on the important moral issues and then give permission for individual decision making. Is it immoral for a 15-year-old boy to have a permed tail of hair? Then why worry about it. He likes it and so do his peers.

Parents of teenagers may do best to save their words and worry for the really important things. Keep communication open and direct. Be nonjudgmental of your teen's personality and attitudes, but speak out about your personal beliefs.

Make family outings as appealing to your teen as possible, but accept that fact that to the adolescent, friends are more fun than family. This attitude is an important part of the adolescent's life passage and will decrease with time.

Indoor tanning hazardous to skin

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER

Despite claims to the contrary, indoor tanning equipment which uses ultraviolet-A rays are hazardous to your skin, according to a physician at the New York University Medical Center.

"For years, ultraviolet-B light was assumed to be the primary cause of sunburn and skin cancer," said Dr. Jennifer A.K. Patterson, assistant professor of dermatology at the medical center. "However, new evidence strongly suggests that ultraviolet-A radiation also causes burns and other adverse effects of sun exposure, including premature aging and skin cancer."

Patterson said the risks associated with using this equipment to develop or maintain a tan were far greater than any benefit.

She noted it is difficult to control the amount of UV-A exposure received at a tanning parlor from one session to the next. "The amount of exposure depends upon the age of the light bulbs used. You might spend your first five-minute session under a lamp with one-month-old bulbs, and your second five-minute session, a week later, under bulbs which have just been changed. You are likely to react much more intensely to the second session."

In people with medical conditions, such as lupus erythematosus, which make the skin more sensitive to sunlight, ultraviolet light exposure can cause uncomfortable, harmful and unsightly skin reactions.

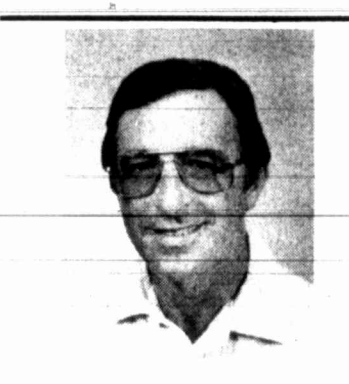

Insect Monitoring program initiated

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

What is the status of the Howard County Pest Management Program?

The Howard County Field Crops and Pest Management Committee has initiated an Insect Monitoring program for 1987. The program will consist of a survey-type monitoring program. The cost of this program is 25¢/planted acre. Farmers wishing to participate in this program need to send their payments to: Kelly Gaskins (treasurer), Rt. 1 Box 23, Knott, Texas 79748 by April 10, 1987.

According to Rick Minzenmayer, our Extension Agent-Entomology, who serves the tri-county area lost estimated 1/3 bale of cotton (value $82.50) per acre to cotton Fleahoppers in 1986. In 1985, they lost at least the same amount to bollworms. An insect monitoring program will help alert producers of potential pest problems. Please call Minzenmayer at his office in Stanton at 915-756-2251 or write him at P.O. Box 1090 Stanton, Texas 79782 for additional information.

Ask the agent

What about the Russian Wheat Aphid we heard so much about last year?

Producers who have fields of wheat, barley, oats, triticale or rye should be aware that the Russian Wheat Aphid is attacking these crops already again this year. This aphid is a newly introduced pest to the U.S. and has spread over several western states. Russian wheat aphid populations appear to damage drought stressed fields most severely.

According to Rick Minzenmayer, in their attack, they cause the leaves to curl over the site where they have colonized providing them protection from their natural enemies and from the weather. Damaged plants have distinctive white stripes running down the leaf blades. Affected tillers often lie flat on the ground, in contrast to healthy plants whose leaves maintain an upright posture. Severe infestations cause malformed grain heads and reduced yields.

The critical period starts when the seed stalk begins differentiating (technically, when the first node of the culm (seed stalk) forms. On small grains grown for grain, one application of Cygon or Di-Syston (liquid) alone or in combination with Ethyl Parathion will control the aphids and prevent yield losses. This treatment should be applied when the first node of the seed stalk forms. Do not spray fields unless 10% of the tillers are infested with Russian Wheat Aphids. If you suspect such an infestation please contact Minzenmayer or the local County Extension Office.

Simple rest room labels offer patrons best relief

DEAR ABBY: This is regarding the letter in your column from "Proud Texan," who had asked for suggestions on how to label men's and women's washrooms in his new country-western club.

The hotel school in San Francisco (City College) makes a very strong point of stating that public rest rooms should be labeled "Men" and "Women." Their second choice is simply "Ladies" and "Gentlemen," but not recommended.

Never, never should they be "Cows," and "Bulls," "Senores" and "Senoritas," "Boys" and "Girls," "His" and "Hers," "Guys" and "Dolls," and on and on. I've been told that there are no hotel schools in Texas, so the "Heifers" and "Bulls" have to go to Stillwater, Okla., to learn these things.

SOONER IN ARIZONA
DEAR SOONER: The letter concerning what to put on rest room doors flushed out several interesting letters. For example:

DEAR ABBY: As an alternative for "Men" and "Women" on the doors of one club's rest rooms, it was handled this way in Annapolis, Md., restaurant: "Buoys" and "Gulls."

out of reading about the problem the country-western club in Texas had when considering what to put on the rest room doors. It reminded me of the same problem here in Baltimore several years ago.

The manager of a local club was confronted by an irate female who didn't know which rest room to use because all they had on each door was a picture of a dog!

The manager said, "For goodness sakes, lady, don't you know one of them is a pointer and the other is a setter?"

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state.

Alien fees appear to be reasonable

It has been known all along that implementation of the legalization program under the 1986 immigration law would include fees for resident illegal aliens applying for legal status.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has developed rules that would include a basic $185 adult application fee with $50 fees for children and a family maximum of $420, not including the cost of required medical examinations.

In defense of the INS, it has a maior problem estimating the cost and trouble it will encounter when the application process begins in May because no one is sure how many aliens must be processed.

It may be more prudent to set the fee high than to understate the cost because it would be easier later to adjust the fee downward than to raise it.

All things considered, including the benefits to be expected by the qualifying alien residents, the INS' proposed fees may actually be rather reasonable.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Governor's apology appropriate

Gov. Bill Clements took the proper action in apologizing for his role in allowing payments to Southern Methodist University football players to continue, even after the school was placed on probation.

Clements didn't mince words or play games with his statement to the press. He said he and other members of the SMU Board of Governors erred in deciding to "phase out" the payments rather than stopping them immediately.

The action by Clements took courage, as he emphasized that the important thing is that the truth be told.

Clements' open attitude and full disclosure was good to see. We can only hope that others who had knowledge of the payments will speak out soon, so that the whole matter can be put to rest.

The Lufkin Daily News

Prison rodeo seen as bad tradition

The Texas Prison Rodeo is one tradition we're better off without.

Although the 55-year-old rodeo has raised money for the prison education and recreation fund and prison officials say it's popular among the inmates, it is still barbaric.

The sport once billed itself on the bodily harm it caused inmates. The advertising is more sophisticated now, but the draw still is the same for many: A chance to watch prison inmates, who are not professional rodeo hands, risk life and limb on a bucking bronco or a raging bull.

It's not too far removed from the days the Romans threw Christians to the lions.

Bryan-College Station Eagle

Wright would keep higher tax rate

House Speaker Jim Wright continues to push for a tax increase "to help reduce the federal budget deficit."

The Fort Worth Democrat is pushing for a transfer tax on all stock market transactions.

That is not all Wright wants. He would revoke part of the tax-reform law enacted last year by freezing the top tax rate at 38.5 percent instead of allowing it to drop to 28 percent next Jan. 1, as scheduled under law.

If Wright's new tax and higher tax rates were dedicated absolutely to cutting the deficit, he might gain public support. By tightening the Democrats' identification with higher taxes and more spending, he is hurting the party's already battered image.

San Antonio Express-News

Rising oil imports prompt warning

Following through on his repeated calls for action to safeguard the domestic oil industry — and the nation's security — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen introduced a bill that would require action by the president when oil imports reach 50 percent of U.S. demand.

"By the end of 1986," Bentsen pointed out, "oil imports were flooding into the U.S. at 6.3 million barrels a day, compared with 3.9 barrels a day in 1985. As a result, our dependence on foreign oil last year rose to nearly 40 percent, far above the 27 percent level in 1985."

If the United States' dependence on foreign oil continues to grow unchecked, it's entirely too conceivable that Americans could once again find themselves experiencing the severe dislocations attendant upon the oil shocks of the 1970s.

With American motorists and householders still reveling in the luxury of relatively low gasoline and heating oil prices, it's difficult to enlist massive public support for efforts to aid the domestic oil industry — but there is a clear, urgent need for such efforts.

Corpus Christi Caller

Education cuts endanger the future

Gov. Bill Clements so far has shown an inclination to balance the state's budget at the expense of the educational reforms enacted in 1984-85, and we find that approach disturbing.

In addition to his assault on the "career ladder" incentive payments to teachers, Clements wants to cut or eliminate funds for vocational education and reduce kindergarten programs to a half-day.

Clements also has proposed "borrowing" money from the Permanent University Fund and diverting other funds from the teacher retirement fund. Overall, he envisions vastly reduced state expenditures in virtually every facet of education.

What Clements basically is saying is that if Texans want an educational system they can be proud of, he is going to dump the tax burden directly on the local taxpayer — even though some of these programs have been mandated by the Legislature.

That is simply the wrong approach to the financial problems facing Texas. When we cut education, we are in essence cutting the future of this state.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The weather was quite chilly today — 43 degrees, with a strong west wind.

The Street Commissioners reviewed the reports on the streets they had inspected since their last meeting. They found that the condition generally had improved.

Commissioners Philip Panchake and William Richards were designated as a committee to determine the price of stone for finishing the arch over Dock Creek at Second Street.

The Pennsylvania Assembly began consideration of a bill to extend the land on State House Square for the erection of a new County Court Hall and a new City Hall. This action complied with the wish of Andrew Hamilton, a prominent early Philadelphia lawyer, who had designed the State House and recommended that all government functions should be centered on the State House Square.

CONFEDEATION TODAY
Congress convened today with eight states fully represented. A committee resolution was introduced to address "the present deranged condition of the national revenues and numerous demands on the federal treasury." The resolution concluded by recommending the reduction of salaries of civil servants. Congress voted unanimously to adopt the report.

Writing from Paris, William Short, Thomas Jefferson's associate, reported to James Madison that Jefferson had taken a trip to the south of France. He mentioned that the Marquis de Lafayette was occupied with the Assemblée des Notables, the French legislature, and this activity plus a severe chest cold had made it difficult for him to write his friends in the United States.

LOOKING BACK

Government Salaries in 1787

Two hundred years ago today, Congress found itself strapped for funds and, as an economy measure, it decided to reduce the salaries of government employees.

The members proposed the following salaries: the president of Congress, $8,000; secretary of foreign affairs, $3,500; secretary of Congress, $2,600; commissioners of the Board of Treasury (three members), $2,250; comptroller of the Treasury, $1,500; treasurer, $1,250; auditor, and $800.

The salary of the president of Congress is somewhat deceptive. From this amount, he was expected to pay a private secretary $300 and a steward $300. Further, he had to pay house rent and any charges that were included in his office.

The president was the only member of Congress who was paid out of the federal treasury.

Reagan's transition team had hit list of CIA 'leftists'

By JACK ANDERSON and

DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Within days after Ronald Reagan's election as president in 1980, a transition team for the incoming administration compiled a secret hit list of 26 "leftists" to be purged from the Central Intelligence Agency.

The conservative blacklist included Frank Carlucci, now the president's national security adviser.

The hush-hush plan to politicize the nation's top intelligence agency failed, primarily because William Casey, who had served as Reagan's campaign chairman and at first supported the proposed purge, decided not to follow through on it when he became CIA director upon Reagan's inauguration.

The list of politically suspect names was contained in a 15-page transition team report on the CIA dated Nov. 22, 1980 — just 17 days after Reagan's landslide victory over Jimmy Carter.

The report was classified (then known as "Top Secret") and submitted to Casey, who approved its general conclusion.

But not long after he took over at the CIA, Casey abandoned at least the recommendation to fire the 26 supposed leftists. Carlucci, then No. 2 man in the agency, did leave — to become No. 2 man in the Pentagon at the insistence of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Carlucci's place at the CIA was taken by John McMahon, who had been in charge of clandestine operations — and who also was on the secret hit list.

Another man on the list, R.E. Hineman, also was promoted. In 1980, Hineman was deputy director for the National Foreign Intelligence Center. He was promoted to deputy director of the Science and Technology Division.

What had the 26 CIA people done to incur the wrath of the

Jack Anderson

Reaganites?

"(These) individuals are, in the main, Carter administration proteges who advanced in grade and position during the past four years because of their willingness to support leftist-oriented perceptions and programs," the secret report charged. It added:

"(T)here should be immediately some key and visible staff changes at the top, both for the internal morale of the agency and in order to reverse the effect of Carter administration policies. Decent intelligence from the agency is not likely for at least six months in the new administration, almost regardless of what actions are taken, but a start must be made."

The report urged "the removal" of the 26 individuals. In fact, it went further, pushing strongly "a general recommendation that all deputy directors, the legislative counsel, the general counsel, the inspector general and the comptroller be removed." (One deputy director was singled out by name for exemption from this wholesale firing.)

We have been able to determine the current status of most of the people on the secret blacklist. Four still are with the agency, but according to CIA and other intelligence sources, only two of the 19 known to have left actually were forced out of their jobs.

The 17 others were able to track either resigned after lengthy service with the agency or went on to better jobs elsewhere. For example, Robert Dean, then an assistant national intelligence officer specializing on the Soviet Union, left to accept a top post in the State Department.

The fact that Casey never implemented the wholesale political housecleaning was confirmed by one ex-agency man on the blacklist.

"You can't characterize this (Casey) period as a purge," he told our reporter Lisa Sylvester. "You can't call it meat-axing. I was aware that some people were less welcome than others. I survived certainly for three years of the Casey entourage by keeping a relatively low profile. (But) in the end it became quite unpleasant."

When the list of 26 names was read to him, the former CIA man said: "It makes absolutely no sense. The people they've identified, you would call them the best and the brightest. Everyone will tell you they are outstandingly successful people who rose through the ranks. If I'm on the list, I'm proud to be."

Another ex-employee, Joe Zarling, former national intelligence officer for Western Europe, said he had been unaware of the list, and called it "the silliest thing I ever heard of."

He added: "Some of us on the list were professionals who had been there for 25 to 30 years under administrations of all political bents. And some were ready for retirement, like myself."

Citizen ignorance discouraging

By STEPHEN CHAPMAN

If you're a normal American, in the course of a day you find your path blocked by an unending procession of people you would prefer never to encounter again.

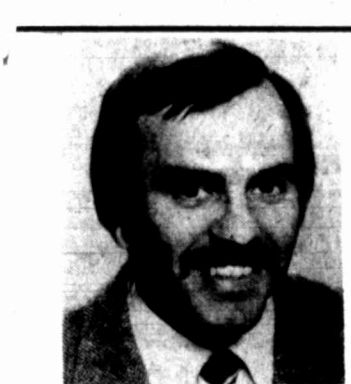

The group might include sales clerks who confuse the appliance department with the lingerie section, drivers who speed on residential streets to shorten a 15-minute trip by 3.7 seconds, directory assistance operators who have to ask how to spell "Smith," or auto mechanics whose creativity turns an engine tune-up into a $1,200 repair bill.

My problem isn't that these people exist, although it wouldn't be a huge inconvenience to me if they didn't. And I don't torture myself with the hope that things are any better in Sweden or Chile or Japan or anywhere else.

Presbyterians believe in original sin — at least they did when I became one — before they decided that what they really believed in was the combined legislative agendas of the Sierra Club and Planned Parenthood. Original sin is a way of saying that if the Bible hadn't told us man was made in God's image, we might never suspect it.

The doctrine strongly implies that auto mechanics are the same the world over.

Maybe there's a country where people who perform unnecessary valve jobs are justly staked to anthills in the desert. If so, it's prob-bably some place like Iran, where all villainous energies are channeled into equally malign pastimes, like seizing hostages and burning American flags.

No, my problem is that though these types are present in every society, they actually have a hand in running ours.

Under our Constitution, anyone with the modest mental acuity and physical mobility needed to transport himself to a polling place once every two years or so, no matter what his defects of mind or morals, has a sacred right to a voice in the affairs of state.

You, devoted reader, may spend hours each week in activities conducive to wise decisions in the voting booth — reading books on current affairs, watching "Nightline," weighing the opinions of newspaper columnists. But on Election Day your vote is likely to be canceled out by the president of the local chapter of the Vanna White Fan Club.

In a democracy, you entrust decisions about war and peace to people whom you wouldn't entrust with cleaning out your rain gutters.

Adlai Stevenson, when he ran for president, understood the problem. When a supporter said, "You'll get the votes of all the thinking people," he replied, "That's not enough. I need a majority."

A recent poll, sponsored by the Hearst Corp., tried to discover how much the typical specimen of homo Americanus knows about our Constitution, the bicentennial of which we observe this year — the same one that enshrines his right to contribute his lack of knowledge to the choice of our leaders.

More than a thousand people were polled, with lawyers excluded, presumably to spare the profession any needless embarrassment.

Apparently 200 years of exposure to the Constitution has not made an impression on everyone. The polls show that democracy is the political corollary of the jury, which, someone said, consists of 12 people of average ignorance.

Almost half of those polled think James Madison's master work contains the phrase, "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need," whose real author was Karl Marx.

Three out of five were strangers to the Bill of Rights. Half said the president can dispense with the Constitution during a war or national emergency. One in five thinks the police, without a warrant, can ransack the home of anyone with the bad luck to be related to or acquainted with a known drug dealer.

Apparently a lot of Americans mistakenly believe they are residents of Bulgaria, which may explain why they tolerate Ed Meese. But let's not assume everyone has heard of Ed Meese. Seven percent, after all, think the current chief justice of the United States is Earl Warren.

Worse still, the public seems unperturbed by the police state customs it assumes to be operative. The only encouraging sign is that 92 percent know that anyone suspected of a crime has a right to a lawyer, at public expense if necessary.

For that we can thank T.J. Hooker, not our high school civics classes.

It's a sad fact that people like this are not only permitted but also encouraged to vote. Unfortunately, it's hard to think of a less unappealing form of government, since we can assume that a monarchy or dictatorship would merely concentrate in one person the defects now dispersed among the entire electorate.

Calloway's tip pierces Brown

CINCINNATI (AP) — Indiana's Ricky Calloway said assistant coach Ron Felling hammers away at every practice on rebounding position.

All of that harping paid dividends for the Hoosiers Sunday in the NCAA Tournament's Midwest Regional championship game at Riverfront Coliseum.

Calloway's tip-in off a rebound follow of Daryl Thomas' miss with seven seconds left provided the decisive points as the Hoosiers advanced to the Final Four with a 77-76 victory over Louisiana State.

Indiana, 28-4, meets top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas in one semifinal Saturday. Big East opponents Syracuse and Providence are first up in Saturday's other semifinal at New Orleans.

"Coach Felling runs it in the ground every night in practice that 75 percent of all (missed) shots come off on the weak side," said Calloway, who scored 11 points. "I was just waiting on it."

Calloway's tip-in capped an 11-1 Indiana run over the final 4:06 which erased a nine-point LSU lead. The Tigers led by as many as 12 points in the second half. Indiana's only lead of the final 20 minutes came on Calloway's rebound.

LSU Coach Dale Brown described the feeling as "a javelin through my stomach and back" after watching his team's season come to an end at 24-15.

Indiana led 47-46 at the half, but LSU outscored the Hoosiers 17-4 at the outset of the second half for a 63-51 advantage at the 12:25 mark. Nikita Wilson scored eight points during the surge.

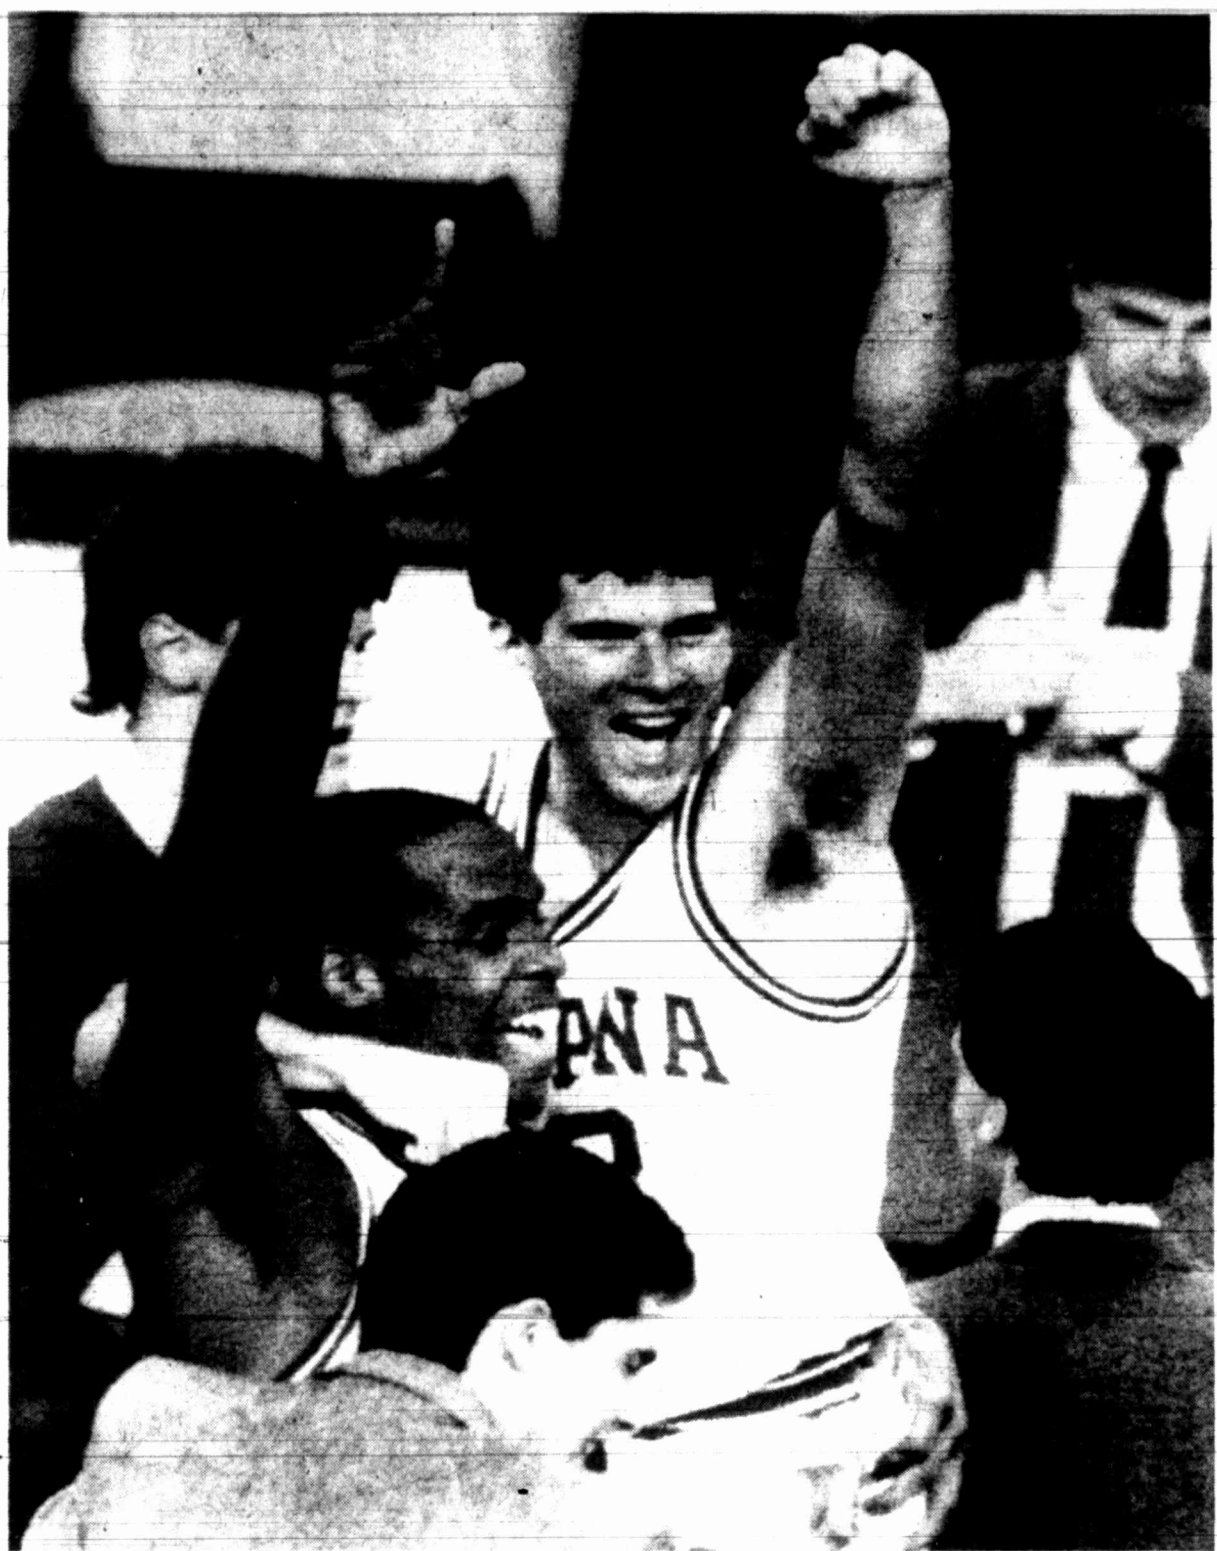

"I wasn't sure we could beat this team," Indiana coach Bob Knight said. "As I continued to look at them on tape, I thought they were as good a collection of athletes playing hard as I've seen all year and they work like hell on the defensive end."

But Indiana clawed its way back. Trailing 75-66 with just four minutes remaining, the Hoosiers ran off seven consecutive points on center Dean Garrett's tip-in dunk, a three-point play by substitute guard Joe Hillman — who played all of 53 seconds in the game — and two free throws by Thomas.

That narrowed LSU's lead to 75-73 with 3:06 left.

After Darryl Joe hit the first of two free throws with 50 seconds left for a 76-73 advantage, Indiana's Keith Smart hit a pair of foul shots with 40 seconds left to make it 76-75.

With LSU spreading its offense and waiting for a layup, guard Fess Indiana's Steve Alford and Dean Garrett celebrate their team's victory over LSU Sunday for the NCAA Midwest Regional Championship in Cincinnati.

Irvin, who scored 14 points coming off the bench, was fouled with 26 seconds left. But he missed the front end of a one-and-one.

Indiana got the ball inside to Thomas, who muscled up a shot which fell short of the rim. But Calloway, a 6-foot-6 sophomore who played his high school ball in Cincinnati, powered in the rebound.

"I had a clear path. Usually you grab the ball, come down and then go back up," Calloway said. "But they had bigger guys inside and I thought I might not get off another good shot. So I thought if I had the chance I would just put it up."

The Tigers' Nikita Wilson got off a last-second turnaround jump shot from 15 feet, but it missed the mark to send Indiana to the Final Four.

"I was positive we were going to win," LSU's Brown said. "I was positive (Wilson's) shot was going to go in. ... I couldn't be prouder in defeat, and I hate defeat with a passion."

All-America guard Steve Alford led Indiana with 20 points — but scored just two in the second half. Garrett added 17 points and 15 rebounds, while Thomas had 16 and Smart 10.

Nikita Wilson, voted the regional's most outstanding player, topped LSU with 20 points, with Anthony Wilson scoring 15, Irvin 14 and Bernard Woodside 13.

Alford said, "Coach (Knight) told us just to hang in there when we were down 12, and not to try to get it all back at once. ... We just hung together. We've done that all season. I think both teams were tired at the end. That's when you have to reach down for something extra."

Shark bombs sink Iowa

SEATTLE (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian knew what was coming if his team had lost to Iowa.

"You writers would say we lived by the 3-point shot and died by the 3-point shot," said the Nevada-Las Vegas coach, whose top-ranked Runnin' Rebels led the nation all season in making 3-pointers.

UNLV certainly appeared terminal Sunday, making only four of 17 3-point attempts while falling behind 58-42 at halftime to the sixth-ranked Hawkeyes. UNLV's top gunners, Gerald Paddio and Freddie Banks, were a combined 1-for-11 from 3-point range and to most teams it would have seemed hopeless.

But this wasn't most teams. This was a UNLV team that was down by 17 points to Temple in the preseason National Invitation Tournament and won the game on a last-second 3-point shot by Paddio.

This was a UNLV team that used the 3-point shot to rally from 21 points down at halftime to beat Western Kentucky in the NIT final at Madison Square Garden.

And, like those early games, this was a Runnin' Rebel team that could force the tempo in the second half and fire 3-pointers without trepidation.

"We encourage our kids to do it," Tarkanian said. "Some day, when we don't hit them, we'll get beat."

In a season where the 3-point basket was introduced to all of college basketball, this was a team that used it best, riding it to a Final Four appearance in New Orleans next Saturday afternoon against No. 3 Indiana.

"We won 36 games by the outside shot, we weren't going to stop now," Tarkanian said.

For Iowa, the slide to an 84-81 defeat started with 17:40 left in the game on a 3-point basket from the right corner by Banks. It was still 62-47, but the shot seemed to inspire the Runnin' Rebels, perhaps telling them that they had not yet run out of miracle finishes, not yet run out of some Vegas luck.

"You gotta be good and you gotta be lucky," said Tarkanian, "today we were lucky."

After Banks' basket, Paddio, who had suffered through a devastating slump in the season's final nine games, came to life.

The same shooter who missed all five of his 3-point attempts in the first half suddenly ignited, hitting his next four 3-point attempts, including three straight, to help put UNLV ahead for good 68-66 with 10:11 left.

"I knew I was either going to start making the shot or we were going to lose," said Paddio, a 6-foot-8 junior.

"I kept telling him to keep going and one of these days he would hit all of them," Tarkanian said.

Banks, a senior guard, hit two more 3-pointers during the 27-4 run that turned a commanding Iowa lead into a margin that UNLV never relinquished.

That UNLV would shoot 3-pointers was no surprise to Iowa. After all, the Runnin' Rebels put up 716 3-point attempts in their first 37 games, hitting 285 for a 40 percent average. One out of every four shots UNLV put up during the season was from behind the 3-point line.

Tarkanian said the poor 3-point shooting throughout the tournament — UNLV hit only four of 23 against Wyoming in the regional semifinals — worried him, but not enough to change at this point.

...but Rebs may be in NCAA hot water

NEW YORK (A) — Nevada-Las Vegas, bound for the Final Four, apparently committed at least seven NCAA violations while recruiting New York City high school basketball star Lloyd Daniels, according to a New York newspaper.

The 6-foot-8 Daniels received cash, clothes, a car, a motorcycle and free housing from UNLV coaches, boosters and other representatives of the school, Newsday reported Sunday. Coach Jerry Tarkanian denied the allegations Sunday night.

"It's just not true," Tarkanian told The Associated Press. "We would never do anything like that — no way. We knew the NCAA would be watching us and we wouldn't do anything of that kind."

The newspaper based its allegations on several interviews and official documents. It said Daniels declined to be interviewed.

After dropping out of Andrew Jackson High School in Queens in February 1986, Daniels signed a letter of intent with Nevada-Las Vegas in April and spent the summer in Las Vegas before enrolling at Mount San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif., in the fall.

Newsday said UNLV, in its dealing with Daniels, apparently violated NCAA regulations by:

— Provided him with cash and clothes, according to Daniels' Mount San Antonio teammate James Jones.

— Provided him with a car and a motorcycle to drive while attending Mount San Antonio, according to records of the Nevada Department of Motor Vehicles.

— Paid to have the car repaired, according to an unidentified Pomona, Calif., mechanic.

— Visited him several times a week at Mount San Antonio, according to Jones.

— Provided him with free meals at Las Vegas hotels, according to former UNLV player Ricky Collier.

— Arranged a job at a casino for the friend (Steve Cropper), who used the money he earned to pay his and Daniels' apartment rent, according to Cropper.

Daniels, who never received a high school diploma and reportedly has a second-grade reading level after attending four high schools in three states, enrolled at Nevada-Las Vegas as a full-time student in January, planning to play there as a junior college transfer starting next December.

Steers, Fowler make teams

Big Spring's Brian Mayfield and Teresa Pruitt and Coahoma's Shana Fowler were named to various all-star teams released this weekend.

Mayfield, the Steers 6-5 junior, was named on three teams. He was named to the Lubbock Avalanche Journal's All-South Plains Team. Mayfield was on the boys 4A first team. Andrews' senior Bernard Williams was also on the team. The player of the year was Lubbock Estacado's Ryan Davis, and Andrews' Frank Bice was coach of the year.

Mayfield was also named to the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches all-region second team in the 4A division. He was also named on the Abilene Reporter's all-area team.

Pruitt and Fowler were both named to the Reporter's girls' all-area team.

National titles abound at Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Donna Lopiano makes no apologies for the fact that her $2.8 million women's athletic program at the University of Texas generates less than a 3 percent return on its investment.

Lopiano says she is an educator, not a businesswoman. And who cares when the bottom line is this:

Four 1986 national championships — in basketball, outdoor track and field, swimming and cross country. The volleyball team made the Final Four, finishing in a tie for third.

Five national Coach of the Year recipients. Swimming coach Richard Quick has won the award every year since 1983. A 95 percent graduation rate. The cumulative grade-point average for the women's athletic department last fall was 2.8 out of a possible 4.0.

Recognition by the Knoxville Journal, which annually evaluates women's athletic programs, as the best in the country.

Texas did it with good coaching, great athletes, superior organization and a financial commitment to a program that is not self-supporting.

But the Lady Longhorns are not a big red blotch on the athletic business ledgers at Texas. Less than 10 percent of their funding comes directly from men's athletics.

Lopiano and her staff have sold women's athletics to the university and the community. Women's basketball games at the Erwin Center outdraw the men by almost 2,000 a game.

At post-game meetings, 500 fans will sit for an hour and listen to basketball coach Jody Conradt's one-liners and quiz her about her latest defense.

Texas' former president, Peter Flawn, expressed some concern two years ago that cutbacks in university funding might hurt women's athletics. A change in administrations also was feared since many of the funds for women's athletics are dispersed at the president's discretion.

Since Flawn's statements, however, the women's budget has grown by more than a half-million dollars. And the son of new president William Cunningham is a basketball player at the women's basketball games.

At the center of the program is Lopiano, a "pushy Yankee" who took a $72,000 athletic program in 1975 and made it into a multi-million dollar national power. Ruth Cohoon, women's athletic director at Arkansas, described Lopiano as "bright, smart, almost brilliant."

"She asks everything of you," said UT track coach Terry Crawford. "But she doesn't ask as much from other people as she asks of herself."

Lopiano on what interested her most when approached about being women's athletic director at UT: "I didn't have to keep all the old coaches."

Lopiano on whether a women's department can succeed inside a men's department: "No. And I say that with great respect. But revenue-producing sports will always make the women second."

Lopiano on the 1981 demise of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, of which she was the last president: "Women started to get a little too powerful for some people."

When Lopiano asks for something, people rarely say no. Two of her coaches said Lopiano won't take no for an answer, which is what they tried to tell her when she first tried to sell them on UT.

Her recipe for a successful program is simple: Hire the best people. When she wanted a coach, she interviewed the coaches from the top 10 programs in that sport and asked them who was the best coach in the country.

She admits she made mistakes. In her first 10 years, the eight women's programs had 23 coaches. But the program has stabilized now, with track coach Crawford her latest selection in 1985.

Taylor admits to kids that cocaine was 'fun'

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — New York Giants All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor, breaking a year long silence on his cocaine problem, says he found the drug enjoyable when he first experimented with it.

Taylor, who returned to his hometown over the weekend, told a group of students at Lafayette High School, his alma mater, that he began using cocaine after he became a professional football player.

"All of a sudden, you're talking four, five, six, seven thousand dollars in your pocket and you try to figure out what to do with it,"

Taylor said. "I acted a little immaturely. I said, 'Let's have some fun,' and I started experimenting with cocaine. I tell you the truth — it was fun."

Taylor said he volunteered for drug abuse treatment a year ago because he was getting irritable and his family life was suffering.

"When you're doing drugs, you're not yourself," Taylor said. "But I'm not going to tell you not to do drugs. That's up to you."

Taylor, who previously had declined to talk publicly about his cocaine use, said people sometimes are misled about the lives of professional athletes.

Crenshaw had advantage of a bigger target

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Curtis Strange could not quite believe it. "That was Ben? That was Ben who hit it over there on 17? And he made three from there?" Strange asked incredulously.

"Well, that's Ben. He scrambles and he fights and he scratches."

"And he puts the eyes out of it," Strange said.

And that is just what Crenshaw did over the final 18 holes Sunday for a 3-stroke victory in the USF&G Classic.

He putted the eyes out of it.

"The hole looked this big," Crenshaw said, sketching with his hands a circle about the size of a basketball hoop.

He one-putted 10 times — four of them for saves of par — and had two other par-saving second putts of 8-10 feet in his closing round of 67.

Crenshaw hit into the driving range. He got one in the water. He hit two trees. He skulled one spectator. He became greatly upset when he was warned for slow play on the ninth hole.

"Dadgummit, it just incenses me," Crenshaw said. And he still got out with a 5-under-par 67.

"You know me. Never a dull moment," Crenshaw said after scoring the 13th victory of his career. It came on a 20-under-par total of 268, one stroke off the Lakewood Country Club record set by Lee Trevino in 1974.

Despite his various adventures, the former Masters champ was never headed, never tied over the last 18 holes.

Strange made one late run, making birdie on two of the last four holes. But his challenge never had a chance. Not with Crenshaw's putting magic.

He one-putted five of the last six holes, once making a 20-footer to save par. He got up and down from behind bleachers — "I could have taken line of sight relief, but the lie was too good," Crenshaw said.

"I just didn't feel comfortable. My swing was quick. But I hit some good shots when I had to. And, I hit some funny ones, too," he said.

"But I got away with it."

He also got away with a $90,000 winner's share of the $500,000 total purse. It pushed Crenshaw's earnings for the season to $237,957.

And it established Crenshaw as a force to be considered in big tournaments coming up, the $1 million Tournament Players Championship this week and the Masters three weeks away.

Strange, the only man with any realistic hopes of overtaking Crenshaw, had a 67 that left him at 271.

Ronnie Black was third at 70-273. It was another two shots back to Sam Randolph, Dick Mast and rookie Keith Clearwater, tied at 275.

Clearwater had a wildly erratic 71 that included seven birdies, two bogeys and two double bogeys, both the result of shots out of bounds.

UT swimmers tops again

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Texas has won the NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships four consecutive years, and coach Richard Quick says the loss of seven seniors doesn't mean the dynasty is about to end.

"We have some fine juniors, great sophomores and great freshmen. I think we'll be around," Quick said after the Lady Longhorns held off a challenge by Stanford to capture team honors Saturday. "Some people are counting us out next year already."

Olympic silver medalist Betsy Mitchell, the 1986 U.S. swimmer of the year, set NCAA and U.S. Open records in sweeping the 100- and 200-yard backstroke for the second consecutive year.

Mitchell, 22, also won the 200 individual medley and was a member of two record-setting relay teams. She was named NCAA women's swimmer of the year and is one of the juniors expected to return.

Texas retained the team title despite the absence of Tiffany Cohen, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the 400- and 800-meter freestyle, who remained home with a shoulder injury.

The meet ended the college career of California's Mary T. Meagher, who claimed the 200 butterfly for the fourth time Saturday after setting an NCAA mark in the 100 butterfly on Friday.

Meagher claimed six NCAA individual titles, taking top honors in the 100 butterfly in 1985 and 1987 and winning the 200 four times — the first swimmer to sweep an event in the six-year history of the NCAA Division I meet.

Five NCAA individual records and four relay marks were topped in the meet.

Mitchell, who has a street named after her in her hometown of Marietta, Ohio, was nearly two seconds faster in winning the 200 backstroke Saturday than the former U.S. Open mark of 1:57.02 set by Tracy Caulkins in 1981.

More inspirational stories from the badlands of SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Football players at Southern Methodist had sex with sorority women and were guaranteed good grades through an elaborate network of boosters and students that was organized as early as 1979, according to sources quoted by KLIF Radio today.

KLIF sports commentator Norm Hitzges quoted unidentified sources as saying two sorority members initially were paid $400 a weekend to sleep with prospective football recruits.

The woman allegedly lured the young men with the promise of more sex if they signed at SMU, and they sought information about what other schools were offering to have them to sign, Hitzges said on his morning sports show.

Reports of grade-cheating and payments to coeds to have sex with athletes surfaced last week when SMU officials acknowledged they were investigating "unfounded rumors" from an anonymous tipster.

Those reports are the latest to surface in the pay-for-players scandal that resulted in the NCAA banning football at SMU for 1987.

KLIF also quoted sources as saying that former Athletic Director Bob Hitch was paid $500,000 and former coach Bobby Collins was paid $375,000 when they resigned last December. The pair stepped down in the wake of the NCAA investigation.

The radio station said Collins has been guaranteed another $200,000 payment in five years as long as he doesn't talk about the scandal or sue the university.

The number of women offering sexual favors grew to "another six, eight, 10 girls involved" over a period of years, according to Hitzges.

He said sex-for-players and the grade-fixing became known to Gov. Bill Clements and some other members of the SMU Board of Governors, which Clements chaired before stepping down in January for his inauguration.

Clements on Friday denied knowing anything about such information.

"I categorically deny any knowledge whatsoever of such practices. I abhor the idea of these kinds of activities if they exist, which I know nothing about," the governor said.

After leaving a speaking engagement in San Antonio this morning, Clements could not be located immediately for further comment.

The organizer of the sex-for-athletes scheme has "long since left school," Hitzges said, and the person now works for a Dallas law firm. But Hitzges said the sexual favors plan, which started in 1979-80, picked up again in 1982 with more women involved.

Hitzges said his information on the growing scandal at SMU came from one key source and that the story was verified by other sources.

Besides the money, the women received extra gifts, including a Mercedes-Benz, the use of a fur coat for one year and a booster's credit card, Hitzges said. He said the woman who received the credit card in 1983 still has it today.

Hitzges said other students were recruited by boosters and paid to take tests, steal exams and write papers for athletes.

In addition, secretaries in various professors' offices were paid to change the grades of football players before they were sent to the registrar's office, and that most professors were never aware of the grade-fixing changes.

Hitzges said the sex-for-players and grade-fixing schemes were discussed in 1985 at Clements' house at the same time Clements and some other board members made the decision to continue illicit payments to athletes.

Aguirre will say he's sorry

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Aguirre, who was shoved by teammate Derek Harper and called a quitter and a coward by Dallas Coach Dick Motta after being ejected from the Mavericks' NBA game Saturday night with Detroit, was contrite later.

"I think an apology is needed," Aguirre said after the game, which went to the final seconds before Dallas pulled out a 122-118 victory.

"At the earliest convenience, I will apologize to Coach Motta and the team for getting kicked out of such an important game," Aguirre said.

Aguirre had 11 points on 4-of-14 shooting at the time of his ejection, and Dallas had a nine-point lead. Detroit closed to within 67-62 by halftime.

The game was a physical one, and referee Jack Nies had to officiate the game by himself after referee Bill Saar was caught in a scuffle between Mavericks center James Donaldson and Pistons center Bill Laimbeer in the first minute of the game. Saar suffered a hyper-extended knee and couldn't continue.

Nies ejected Aguirre 20 seconds before halftime after Aguirre complained he was being roughed up without fouls being called.

When Aguirre walked by the Mavericks' bench, Motta, kneeling on the sidelines, told Aguirre to stay calm. Aguirre responded by arguing more. That resulted in two technicals and an automatic ejection.

Harper and Dallas guard Rolando Blackman had tried to restrain Aguirre from arguing with Nies, but Aguirre refused to listen. After Aguirre's ejection, as the forward walked past the press table, Motta yelled, "What about the game?"

Aguirre yelled back, "I don't give a (..) about the game."

Harper, who is Aguirre's best friend on the squad, was so upset with Aguirre that as Aguirre left the court, Harper shoved him in the back and muttered, "Jerk." A chorus of boos rang out through the sellout crowd of 17,007 as Aguirre headed up the ramp to the dressing room.

Later, Harper said, "I don't think he was a jerk, but I think it was a jerky situation. I've never seen anything like it."

Moments later, when the Mavericks went into the dressing room at halftime, several players said Motta was enraged. He yelled at Aguirre, calling him, among other things, "coward" and "quitter."

Aguirre yelled back, and at that point, Donaldson positioned himself in front of Aguirre's locker and told him to cool it.

This Tex has his priorities straight

By JACK SHEPPARD
Dallas Times Herald

MAUI, Hawaii (AP) — There is one simple reason why Texas E. Schramm has become a leading power broker in the NFL, and why many expect him to become the next Dallas Cowboy to be enshrined in the Hall of Fame. Priorities.

Schramm may be known primarily as the driving force behind one of the league's premier franchises. But when it comes to priorities, Schramm said, the Cowboys will always rank No. 2.

"It is the league that has to be the strong entity," Schramm said. "The league is the constant. Owners, coaches, everybody comes and goes. Throughout my years I have always been involved in league matters."

"I've just always felt I have a league responsibility as well as a team responsibility."

Schramm chairs the powerful Competition Committee, responsible for keeping the game current and competitive.

His involvement is characterized differently by every owner in the league. Some undoubtedly see it as self-serving: Schramm using his influence to better help the Cowboys. Some agree he may be misunderstood, unfairly criticized when problems arise, unduly praised when problems are solved.

But nearly everyone professes respect for the man who has written several chapters of the NFL success story.

"I have gotten to know Tex real well over the past 10 years," said Miami Coach Don Shula, also a member of the Competition Committee, "and I continue to gain more and more respect for him, not only as a man but for what he's done for the game. This game has meant a lot to me and my family, and a guy like Tex who gives so much of himself to make the game better deserves my respect and admiration."

Al LoCasale, Raiders executive assistant, said, "Outside of my owner (Al Davis) and Paul Brown, who I worked for, I probably feel warmer toward Tex than anybody. He has made major contributions to this league. People talk about how much he and Al are different. But other than different points of view about the responsibility of the league, they are very much alike."

Two words most often associated with Schramm in his leaguewide dealings are persistence and persuasiveness. Never was that combination more apparent than at this past week's NFL owners meetings, where the 1-year-old instant replay system he has spearheaded from the start narrowly survived for another season.

After Wednesday's executive sessions, representatives from as many as 11 of the 28 clubs either had decided to vote against continued use of the replay or were leaning in that direction. But after a heavy night of lobbying by Schramm and Commissioner Pete Rozelle, and a strong speech before the owners the next morning in support of instant replay, the controversial idea survived by a 21-7 vote — the minimum number of votes needed under the NFL's three-quarter majority rule.

Yet when it came to the crucial debate, Schramm stepped back and let Rozelle carry the ball, careful to avoid making instant replay "his" issue.

"My feeling is that he is one of the most misunderstood people in the league," said Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer, who acted as a defensive adviser to the Competition Committee this year.

"I heard there were certain things that he is going to get done and that's the way it is. But I found him very receptive to new ideas and points of view that are different from his own. I was very impressed," Schottenheimer said.

"He's open-minded yet he's very assertive," said 49ers Coach Bill Walsh, in his first year on the four-man Competition Committee. "I think I've learned something from being with him the last few weeks."

Schramm said he is open-minded on most issues. But once he makes up his mind, he said, it's full steam ahead.

"I love innovation, new ideas," Schramm said. "That's why I try to keep young people around me. You have to be aware of what's happening. But once I become convinced, then I'm prepared to take it as far as you can take it."

"He's just a locomotive," New York Giants General Manager George Young said. "I don't always agree with him, but I'll never deny him his opinion. The thing about Tex is that he is consistent. He's the same every day. What you see is what you get."

Schramm, of course, has his critics. When asked about Schramm's influence on the NFL, Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll — a former member of the Competition Committee — said, "He has a way of getting things done. Let's just put it this way. The National Football League has accomplished a lot despite some people."

Schramm is convinced Noll was joking. But the Steelers' coach never cracked a smile, and walked away saying, "I'm serious."

What is it about Schramm that makes him so successful, especially in a room full of millionaires who recognize that what was once a game is now big business as well?

The opinions vary.

"He has total recall, he's very bright, and he has unlimited energy," Shula said. "Just look at the Cowboys. It's one of the great organizations in all of professional sports, and that didn't happen by accident."

"He has a great understanding of the game from all aspects," LoCasale said. "He knows how the game relates to people — not just the fans but the coaches and administrators and secretaries. He was the first guy to say we needed to devote more playoff money to the support staffs around the league."

"It's just the way I am," Schramm said. "I'm willing to pursue things and get things accomplished. I just have that type of personality or something."

That "or something" had several league officials predicting Schramm's dedication will land him in the NFL Hall of Fame.

"He has been very, very influential in the NFL," Walsh said. "He has been a driving force in the competition area of the game. He's been invaluable. He should be in the Hall of Fame."

"I know if I had a vote, that's the way I'd go," Young said. "He has been an outstanding executive in this league."

"All I can say is that I don't know where we'd be without him," said Shula, perhaps Schramm's closest friend outside of the Cowboys' organization. "We've got to have leaders, people who are willing to take some leadership responsibilities. Tex has the talent to do that."

"I think sometimes Tex is misunderstood. I think some people think he's self-serving. But I know he's only thinking about the game. Hopefully, some day he'll be recognized for all his accomplishments, whether it be in the Hall of Fame or whatever."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 24, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today finds you able to make considerable progress. You find a more exciting and electrical atmosphere in effect tonight and can get into progressive activities.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Improve all of your affairs with the aid of a bigwig. Tonight you can be with good friends.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Find more modern methods if you are to be more prosperous in the days ahead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have made promises to others and can keep them now if you use more modern methods.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Learn what it is that your partner expects of you. Keep the promises you have made with enthusiasm.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to do a magnificent job at whatever you're working on. Seek the assistance of a clever partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan recreational activities for the near future. Avoid anyone who is self-seeking and be safe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your home in fine order and later you can go out for the recreation you like. Make your talents more profitable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be direct and practical in answering any communications you receive. Make your abode more exciting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to study where you are going monetarily and make any revisions that may be needed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Decide what you most want of a practical nature. Be with the one you love as long as you can.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Dig your feet into practical interests and stop daydreaming. Be with your mate for a good time tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get in touch with a friend who has a fine idea for your advancement. Enjoy romance with the one you love.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be one of those delightful young persons who will handle practical affairs well and should attend some business college stressing organization. Let your good-looking progeny enjoy the athletics he, or she, likes, thus keeping the body as fit as the mind.

Top posts disappear as industry shrinks

DALLAS (AP) — Six top executives of leading public energy companies in Dallas have stepped down under pressure in the last 13 months, and industry observers say others are likely to follow.

Some say the trend reflects the turmoil in the oil industry, but others say it is a rejection of old-fashioned management — with six-figure executives' salaries — and wasteful wildcat drilling strategies of the past.

"It doesn't have anything to do with some great watershed period, a new crop of managers or whatever," said Charles Ramsey, former president and chief executive of May Petroleum.

"The industry has gotten hammered from all directions," said Ramsey, who now is an investment banker for a brokerage.

Other industry observers, critical of oil company management, say the changes reflect a much-needed shift from outdated strategies to more professional, risk-management approaches.

"The driller mentality has to go," said an oil industry analyst who asked not to be identified. "A lot of oil company executives drilled themselves into bankruptcy and they are trying to drill themselves out."

The departing executives are leaving some of the most prestigious jobs in Dallas at the prime of their careers. Most are in their mid-50s and earn $200,000 to $300,000 annually.

Thomas Goff was the most recent to step down. Triton Energy announced the resignation of the 54-year-old president and chief operating officer without elaboration in a one-sentence press release.

Goff was well-liked in business circles and considered a competent manager during Triton's earlier growth periods. But sources close to the company told the Dallas Times Herald that Goff and his $298,000 salary became expendable with recent Triton acquisitions that brought other experienced managers aboard.

Bill Saxon also stepped down this month as chairman and chief executive officer of Saxon Oil, the company he founded in 1968. Saxon's high-risk Oklahoma gas ventures attracted widespread interest from investors before the market collapsed in 1982.

Glenn Gage, head of the extractive industries group at Arthur Young, said he is not surprised by the changes.

"A level of management has to be eliminated," Gage said. "We are seeing this within most oil and gas companies."

Mike O'Donnell, director of the oil and gas services group for Arthur Andersen & Co., said he would not be surprised to see more changes at the top.

"Within the last two weeks, we have had an increasing number of inquiries for people to fill senior positions," O'Donnell said.

J.F. Pat Gratton, an independent Dallas geologist, said the structural changes could have a positive affect on how the industry does business. But he suggested it might require new faces.

"The people that we have in place are probably not the people at the top who would lead these changes," Gratton said. "They are 'old school,' so to speak."

Bomb experts remove explosives from car

CLARKSVILLE (AP) — U.S. Army bomb experts were able to remove explosives from an automobile early today after police captured a man who had abducted a woman and shoved her into a car he said was loaded with explosives, police reported.

Dwayne Jeffery, a Clarksville Police reserve officer, said the experts from Fort Sill, Okla., were able to remove the explosives without incident. Further details were not immediately available, Jeffery said.

No one was injured, officers said.

Officers said the man abducted the woman Sunday night and threatened to blow up as many people and downtown buildings as possible in this Northeast Texas city.

A Red River County dispatcher who would not give her name said authorities managed to arrest the man before the explosives went off and recovered his kidnapping victim unharmed late Sunday.

Police then cordoned off a large area around the downtown Clarksville used-car lot where the man worked while they awaited the arrival of Army experts from the base at Lawton, Okla. to remove the explosives.

Some residents of homes in the area were evacuated for several hours, but were allowed to return home after the explosives were removed, authorities said. Only a few homes were involved since most of the area cordoned off was a business area, they said.

The man was being held overnight in the city jail and was expected to be taken to the Red River County Jail today, according to Red River County Jailor Jean Cooper.

Roundups net snakes, critical bite

ABILENE — It was a bad weekend for rattlesnakes in the Big Country, where snake-handlers at two rattlesnake roundups bagged 6,774 pounds of the critters.

Held a week after Sweetwater's famous rattlesnake roundup, the two events ending Sunday saw various displays in snake-handling, awards for the most snakes bagged and special honors handed out for snakes of incredible length.

Brownwood's 23rd annual event was marred when Greg R. Anderson, 29, of Irving was hospitalized in critical condition with a rattlesnake bite. He was bitten while alone hunting snakes along the Brown-Comanche county line.

One of the snake-handlers at the first-ever Breckenridge roundup was also bitten, but it was described as a "dry bite" with no venom released.

Breckenridge's roundup was deemed a success by roundup chairman Richard Byers, who said the event would become annual. Roughly 2,500 snakes — or 3,774 pounds — were collected.

First-place winners for the most snakes collected were Richard and Kile Oliver, who bagged 627 pounds of snakes. Charles Wall took second-place honors in the division with 200 pounds, while Arthur and Chester Guinn collected 196 pounds to win third place.

The longest snake at the Breckenridge show was a 68-inch belly-crawler captured by Charles Jennings. Wall had the second-longest reptile, a 66-inch.

All winners were Stephens County residents.
