Two weekend accidents reported

BIG SPRING — Two accidents over the holiday weekend were reported here by the Texas Department of Public Safety. There were no serious injuries.

Javier Garcia, 17, of Jaurez Mexico, and Leonardo Marino, 45, of Arlington, sustained incapacitating injuries when the 1980 Chevrolet Caprice they were in went off an overpass Sunday at 6:30 a.m. in the westbound lane of Interstate 20. Garcia, who was driving, had went to sleep, reports stated.

The vehicle struck a delineater pole, four guardrails, three steel fence posts and then dropped 13-feet off the underpass, blowing out all four tires upon impact, and then struck another guardrail, the report said.

Both men were taken to Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

In another accident on Moss Creek Road, a man driving westbound on a 1975 Black Honda suffered incapacitating injuries when he hit a deer which ran onto the road.

J.C. Ralph Crain III, who was thrown from the bike, was taken by private vehicle to Scenic Mountain Medical Center. The deer died.

Accidents on Texas streets and highways claimed at least 31 lives during the long Memorial Day weekend, according to reports from law enforcement officials.

The Associated Press began its count of holiday traffic fatalities at 6 p.m. Friday. The count extended through midnight Monday. Nationwide, at least 433 people died as of midnight Monday.

Compresser flare prompts calls

BIG SPRING — Fina Oil and Chemical put on a light show for Big Spring residents most of Sunday night.

Big Spring Refinery manager Jeff Morris said a wet gas compressor went off-line at about 4 p.m. Sunday, causing a flare that was "quite a bit larger than normal."

"It did look quite dramatic," Morris said. "We had about four calls from the police department checking on us."

The compressor flared until about midnight, he said, then flared intermittently through the early morning hours as crews put the equipment on-line.

Morris said the flare is a safety feature of the compressor, and each time that piece of equipment goes off-line, the flare will emit flames and smoke.

"There is no need to be concerned," he said, "because the equipment is operating as designed. It wasn't a safety hazard of any sort."

House delays attempt to override veto

By PEGGY FIKAC

If they don't enact a plan by Friday, court-appointed special master William Kilgarlin will propose one.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House today temporarily delayed an attempt to override Gov. Bill Clements' veto of a school finance reform bill after House Speaker Gib Lewis said several lawmakers hadn't yet arrived in the chamber.

But Lewis, D-Fort Worth, earlier said he didn't know if the override attempt would succeed.

"I think members at this point are getting a great deal of pressure from both sides," Lewis said Monday.

The Senate voted last week to override Clements' veto, and House leaders have been trying to muster the required two-thirds vote to do the same.

"We do not at this point have a solidified 100" votes in the 150-member House, Lewis said.

The Republican governor and Democrat-controlled Legislature — now in its third special session on school finance — are trying to address a Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor schools.

If they don't enact a plan by Friday, court-appointed special master William Kilgarlin will propose one. Kilgarlin has said his plan could divert state money from wealthier to poorer school districts, because he lacks the authority to raise taxes.

Such a plan "would be so disastrous on some school districts that many would be having a very difficult time opening in the next school year," Lewis said.

The $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

Clements said he thinks lawmakers actually have until June 21 to come up with a school finance reform bill, because that is the date Kilgarlin files his plan in state court.

The governor said he vetoed the Legislature's latest measure in part because he backs more reforms in the way education is administered. He also opposes the half-cent sales tax increase lawmakers want to help pay for their bill.

Legislative leaders have said that their bill, while not perfect, would improve education and give a boost to poor school districts without crippling wealthier ones.

The measure is designed to use $555 million in new state money. Without sufficient funding, money could be shifted from wealthier to poorer school districts.

BET cable channel gains local support

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A petition with more than 300 signatures in support of adding Black Entertainment Television to area cable service convinced him to approve it, said Big Spring Cable Television general manager Larson Lloyd.

"It definitely made a difference," Lloyd said. "If there are that many people that want it, you bet we'll try to get it." He said it still faces approval by the parent company.

Lloyd said the channel was not one of the most-requested in a survey taken over the past month, but when he saw the petition with about 320 signatures in support of the channel, the decision was made.

A list of proposed channels to be added, including BET, will face a decision by the parent company, TCA Cable Television, this week, Lloyd said. Marketing and engineering personnel will determine the feasibility of each proposal, and the president of the company will approve them, he said.

"We'll know in a week to 10 days whether they approve it," Lloyd said. Then a meeting at the Big Spring cable company will determine the logistics of ordering equipment and finalizing plans.

Lloyd said he was impressed by the support shown for BET and expects it to be added. "I've seen it (BET) and I think it's a good channel. We're going to try to add all the channels that were requested."

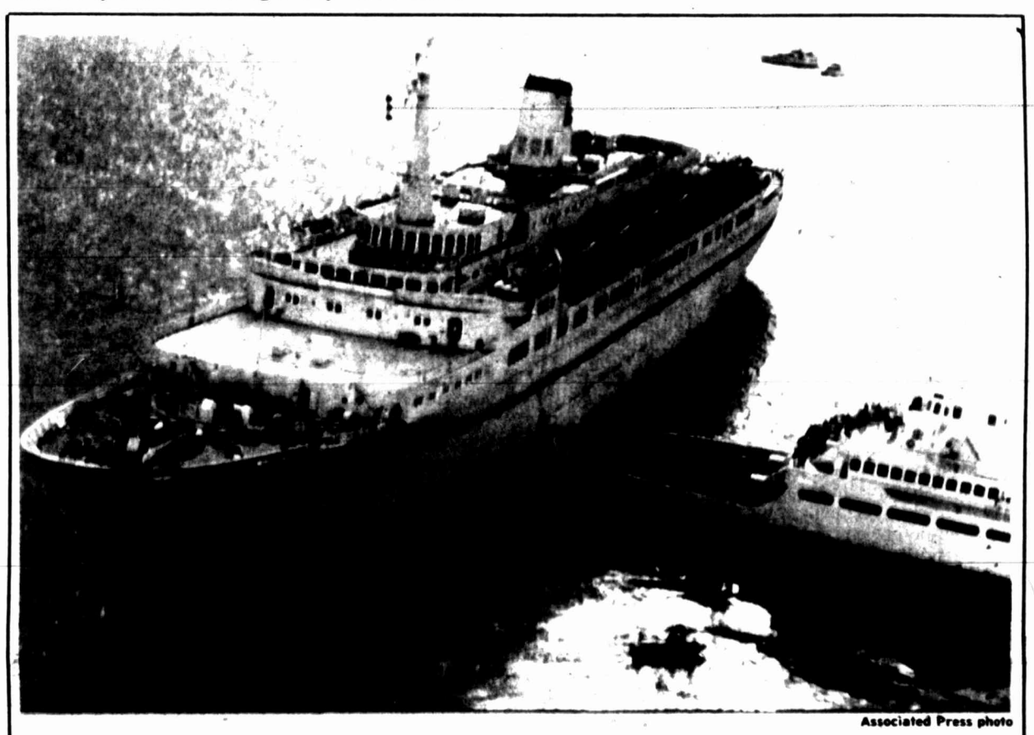

The effort to get BET was the first time he has seen a petition for a cable channel in his four years in Big Spring, Lloyd said.

Danny Sherman, who initiated the petition, said he is pleased with the decision, but wary. "He's told me it's 90 percent sure we'll get it. A lot of people in the community have called me to ask about it. I just hope it comes through."

Sherman said he hopes the effort has shown that activism can get results in the community. "If you want something, you have to open your mouth and say it. I think people, especially blacks, in this community just don't speak out."

Barbara Davis, who signed the petition, said she was pleased to hear that it has drawn some result. "That's the American way, isn't it? I think it (the petition) was a good idea."

Passengers transferred

FORTESCUE, N.J. — The estimated 1,000 passengers aboard the 642-foot Regent Star were brought ashore Monday night after nearly two days aboard the grounded cruise ship. The ship had been headed for Philadelphia on the final leg of a seven-day cruise from Jamaica when a small fire early Sunday knocked out the power and caused the vessel to run onto a sand bar of the Delaware River, a mile off Fortescue, N.J. The ship was finally refloated at high tide today.

Memorial Day melee sends concertgoers fleeing

"You just can't put on a concert any more without any incidents. One bad apple or two bad apples ruined it for the rest of us."

HOUSTON (AP) — At least 11 people were sent to hospitals when a melee that included gunshots erupted among nearly 25,000 overheated Memorial Day revelers at an jampacked outdoor rap concert.

Mothers carried screaming babies under their arms as they ran from the scene of bottle throwings, shootings, a stabbing and fist fights.

The concert at Hermann Park's Miller Outdoor Theater was canceled once the melee began about 4 p.m. Police closed the park, sending hundreds running for parking lots and creating a traffic jam that lasted more than an hour.

Scores of officers on foot and horseback and in helicopters worked to evacuate the area.

Sgt. J.J. Morris, the first high-ranking officer on the scene, asked that all available officers be sent to the park, and more than 200 police converged on the park within minutes and sealed off the theater.

Police said they made more than 20 arrests, and hospitals treated 11 people for injuries, apparently none serious.

Two men were arrested for gun-possession violations and two for disorderly conduct, while others were questioned about how the disturbance began.

Houston City Parks Director Don Olson told the Houston Chronicle the concert was courting disaster by attracting such a large crowd.

"The attendance was well over capacity (17,000)," Olson said. "We have been trying to limit the number attending events here."

City officials will investigate the disturbance and decide what steps to take to avoid a similar one, Olson said.

Houston Fire Chief Robert Clayton said all the injuries, mostly cuts and bruises, came from "blunt objects like bottles and bats" and that none appeared serious.

A Houston rap group, Special Treat, was on stage when the bottle-throwing began from the back of the hillside auditorium. Special Treat was the first of five bands scheduled to perform at the free Mega Jam concert sponsored by KHYS-FM radio station.

"You just can't put on a concert any more without any incidents," said Joe Libios, promotion director for KHYS, which began broadcasting contemporary dance music in Houston in September 1988.

"One bad apple or two bad apples ruined it for the rest of us," Libios told The Houston Post. "Rap and R&B are going to be looked upon negatively."

He said the station had hired about 30 officers from the Houston Police Department and the Harris County Sheriff's Department, which it believed to be adequate

County to negotiate for trash contractor

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — County Commissioners voted Monday morning to attempt to negotiate a deal with city officials to allow a private businessman to haul county trash without paying city landfill dumping and permit fees.

Because county residents do not pay city fees to dump their trash at the landfill in Big Spring, Ronnie Carter told commissioners that he should be exempt from paying fees to dump the trash of his 48 county customers.

A $250 permit fee, $10 per load dumping fee, and operating expenses would leave him with a profit of about $30 to $40 a month, he said. That is not enough to remain in business, he said, even though he increased his charges to customers from $10 a month to $12.50. He is now more than $250 in the red since beginning operations in January, he said.

Carter said he has met with City Public Works Director Tom Decell and addressed the City Council on May 22.

"They're saying I'm making money off the dump," he told commissioners. "I'm not. I'm just making money off that individual that wants their trash (picked up).

"I'm not picking up trash in the city limits so I shouldn't have to buy a permit," he said. Carter also said he has never dumped trash at th landfill that came from out of Howard County.

"I'm just wanting to see if you could overule the situation," he told commissioners.

Carter said his business, which began in January, could possibly grow in the next couple years and employ two or three people but each truck he uses would require a permit fee.

Referring to a ½ cent sales tax increase approved by city voters in May to assist the city in attracting industry, Carter questioned how his treatment could reflect on those efforts.

"Here I am just nobody and

Stormie Jones comes home

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Stormie Jones, the 12-year-old girl who made medical history as the world's first heart-liver transplant recipient, got an early birthday present: She got to come home.

Stormie returned to Texas Monday afternoon after a brief stay at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, where the historic double-transplant was performed six years ago. She celebrates her 13th birthday Thursday.

Stormie entered the Pittsburgh hospital May 20 after routine tests showed high liver enzyme levels, an indication of possible organ rejection.

Further tests revealed the rejection was moderate and could be controlled with increased doses of an experimental anti-rejection medication Stormie has taken since November.

Man uses knife to free wife

TEXAS CITY (AP) — A Houston man used a knife to cut his wife free from her seat belt after his car rolled off a boat ramp into 12 feet of water.

Barbara Henderson, 23, was in guarded but stable condition at Danforth Hospital in Texas City late Monday.

Texas City police officer Doug Warren said Robert Henderson, the woman's husband, had stopped at Dan's Bait and Tackle Camp on the Texas City Dike Road to get fishing bait and had put the car into neutral, rather than park, on the boat launching ramp.

The car plunged down the ramp and into the 12-foot deep water with the Henderson and his wife in the car.

The husband was able to get out and surface, reports state. He cried out for someone to hand him a knife so he could cut his wife loose. She was strapped in by her seat belt.

Henderson managed to reach the submerged car, cut his wife loose and get her out of the car. By then, 10 minutes had passed and the woman was not breathing, witnesses said.

Missing wardens believed dead

CLAYTON (AP) — Authorities are using dogs specially trained to locate bodies even under water in their search for two game wardens believed drowned in Lake Murvaul in Panola County.

The dogs had not been able to find anything by nightfall Monday.

"The search will continue continuously until we find them, however long it takes, be it two days, two months or two years," Frank Hudson, a Texas Parks & Wildlife game warden based in Rusk County, said Monday night.

Hudson said searchers looking for Bruce Hill and Barry Decker, both in their 40s, have been on the lake constantly since shortly after 2 a.m. Sunday except when storms forced them to shore.

Trustees pressured to transfer students

KENDLETON (AP) — About a month remains for officials of Kendleton Independent School District to transfer 240 students to other schools before the state officially shuts down the school.

"They will need to make some type of decision on the transfer of those students, because effective June 30, we are withholding state funds," Joey Lozano, spokesman for the Texas Education Agency, said Monday.

The Texas Board of Education voted in February to revoke the district's accreditation after years of problems with KISD's management, finances and instructional system.

It is the second school district in state history to be axed.

Violent t-storms tarnish holiday

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Millions of Texans kicked off their summer fun and commemorated casualties of war during Memorial Day festivities. But violent thunderstorms dampened many celebrations and a melee erupted at an outdoor rap concert in Houston, sending 11 people to emergency rooms and 25,000 revelers scurrying to safety.

Tourists undeterred by recent devastating floods packed campsites along the rain-swollen Trinity River northeast of Houston. They shared the grounds with people flooded out of their homes.

Fallen veterans were honored statewide, and south of Gatesville visitors to the Friendship Community Cemetery took advantage of the only weekend of the year that the gates are opened to the public.

The memorial park was annexed 40 years ago by the Army and sits on the Fort Hood Military Reservation, sandwiched between tank and helicopter firing ranges.

Elsewhere, unrelenting showers and thunderstorms dampened holiday barbecues and parades in South and East Texas and beach parties on the Gulf Coast. But most of Texas had sunny skies and warm weather.

Thousands of beach-goers packed highways leading to the coast.

Some victims of some of the state's worst flooding this century spent the holiday in shelters and shared campsites with tourists and vacationers or gathered at shelters for assistance.

Earnest Ryan, of Old Snake River, northwest of the Trinity River, spent the day at the Red Cross Service Center in Hardin with his wife and two young children.

GATESVILLE — Bill Powell erects a flag at the Friendship Community Cemetery on the Fort Hood Military Reservation Monday. Since the Army annexed the community about 40 years ago, Powell and others who have family members buried there may visit only once a year.

"Yesterday people on Lake Livingston were skiing and barbecuing and having a good old time, while I've got to go through two and a half miles of water to get to my house.

"If I wasn't flooded out, I'd be home barbecuing, playing horseshoes and playing in my band," he added.

At Houston's Hermann Park, fun turned into fear for thousands who had gathered to hear three bands, including headliner 2 Live Crew.

Mothers carried screaming babies under their arms as they ran from the scene of bottle throwings, shootings, a stabbing and fist fights.

The concert at Hermann Park's Miller Outdoor Theater was canceled once the melee began about 4 p.m. Police closed the park, sending thousands running for parking lots and creating a traffic jam that lasted more than an hour.

Reps endorse social services bailout bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements accused some House lawmakers of trying to "play politics" by making a bailout bill for social service programs contingent on a half-cent sales tax increase becoming law right away.

"It's a sad day when some of our legislators resort to these types of political games," said Clements, who has promised to veto the sales tax increase approved by lawmakers. He vetoed an identical measure in a previous special legislative session.

The social services bill approved Monday by the House would allow spending an additional $162 million to cover shortfalls in the departments of Health, Human Services and Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

The money would continue services for chronically ill children and others in need, and allow the MHMR Department to meet requirements in a federal court order.

Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said of the amendment tying the bailout bill to the tax increase: "I don't think that's too smart."

The bailout bill returns to the Senate, which passed the measure Friday, for consideration of House changes.

Lawmakers want the sales tax increase to help pay for school finance reform as well as social services needs. The Republican governor has said the Democrat-controlled Legislature should find money another way, such as by raising state fees and cutting other state programs.

A two-thirds vote is required for a bill to take effect immediately, and for lawmakers to override a veto by the governor.

If Clements follows through on his tax veto threat, one vote by the House and Senate with the necessary two-thirds margin would allow the tax increase to be enacted over his objections and to take effect right away.

Increasing the sales tax to 6½ cents on the dollar would raise $443.8 million — money lawmakers want to use for court-ordered school finance reform — if it takes effect Oct. 1.

The increase would raise another $154 million, which supporters said could be used for social services, if it takes effect by July 1.

AUSTIN — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis watches as the House gives its approval to a bill allowing the state to spend additional money on social services.

Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, sponsored the amendment making funding for social services contingent on immediate enactment of the sales tax increase. He said he wants to ensure public schools don't get shortchanged, in case Clements decides not to veto the sales tax increase.

If Clements allows the tax bill to become law and legislators don't vote on it again, it would not take effect until Oct. 1, because the 150-member House failed to pass it by 100 votes initially.

"The reason I put that amendment on there was to prevent it (the social services bill) from draining money from education," Colbert said.

Legislative leaders are working to override Clements' veto of their school finance reform bill, which they passed to meet a Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor schools.

Senate begins hearing on Meek appointment

AUSTIN (AP) — Public Utility Commission Chairman Paul Meek defended the prospect of closed-door settlements in high-dollar electric and telephone rate cases as he asked senators to confirm his appointment to the PUC.

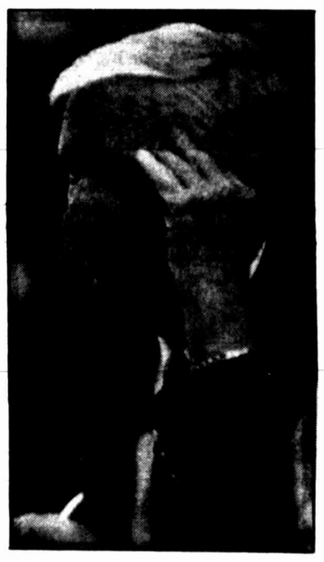

"The main difference between a settlement and fully contested rate case is the spirit of cooperation you send home," said Meek, who is chairman of the board of American Petrofina Inc. and a former manager of the Big Spring Fina Refinery. "It's a much friendlier atmosphere — a much, much better situation, in my opinion."

The three-member PUC, which must approve a proposed settlement among parties for it to take effect, has to be sure the public interest is served, said Meek, of Dallas. He was appointed to the PUC in November by Gov. Bill Clements.

But Sen. Chet Edwards, Nominations Committee chairman, questioned Monday whether utility customers are fairly represented in such settlement negotiations.

"The bottom line is the settlement process could cost businesses and consumers hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars. It is a process carried out behind closed doors," said Edwards, D-Waco.

"There's a spirit of secrecy and a spirit of the Office of Public Counsel and some parties being locked out," he said.

PAUL MEEK

The Office of Public Utility Counsel is the state advocate for residential and small business ratepayers. Meek said no group is meant to be excluded from settlement negotiations, which can shorten or eliminate full-blown rate hearings if an agreement among parties is accepted by the PUC.

Meek said the PUC hasn't ruled on a settlement in a major rate case. One of those pending involves Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s rates.

Food prices lead to welfare cuts

NEW YORK (AP) — Recent sharp increases in the prices of food staples have led several states to cut food allotments or drop people from welfare rolls.

The cost of milk, orange juice, cereal, eggs and infant formula has risen 8 percent in the first half of this fiscal year, four times the rate predicted by the Federal Food and Nutrition Service, The New York Times reported today.

The price increases have stretched the $2.1 billion that the federal Women, Infants and Children program spends on 4.5 million new and expectant mothers.

As a result, the states, which administer the program, have had to either reduce the food allotment, reduce the number of participants or both.

Texas and Missouri are not accepting new cases. Both states said children who show no signs of clinical malnutrition will be cut from the program.

The WIC program provides poor families with food vouchers. It is open to pregnant women, those who have just given birth, and children.

Expert: Gypsy moth is coming

BOSTON (AP) — The leaf-devouring gypsy moth is coming, in numbers never before seen on the continent, scientists and federal officials say.

"You can almost take that to the bank," said Charles P. Schwalbe, a U.S. Department of Agriculture expert.

In 1981, the last time the gypsy moth population exploded, the pest stripped the leaves from 12 million acres of trees and other plants in the Northeast.

Gypsy moth populations rise and fall in cycles averaging about seven years. Now, scientists say, the region is due for another boom — and a huge one.

Since 1981, the moth has been expanding its range about 10 miles a year from New England, stripping foliage as far south as Virginia and Maryland and as far west as Ohio.

Infestations also have been found in California, Oregon, Washington and Colorado, where the larvae apparently were unwittingly transported by humans, said Schwalbe, director of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Ryan White's gravestone dedicated

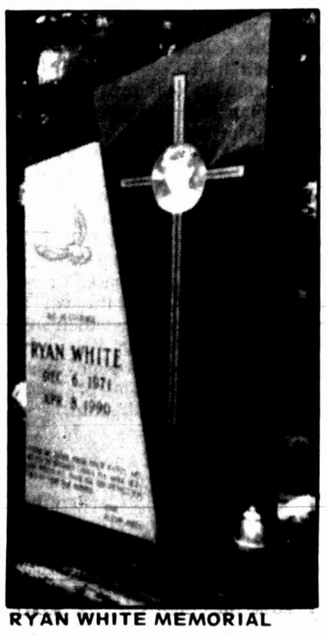

CICERO, Ind. (AP) — A 6-foot-8 granite headstone etched with the words "Kid of Courage" and lyrics from songs by Elton John and Michael Jackson has been erected at the grave of AIDS victim Ryan White.

The headstone was dedicated on Memorial Day, two months after his death at age 18.

Ryan's mother, Jeanne White, said the gravestone was built to represent his dream to be tall. Ryan was less than 5 feet tall.

"He wanted to be big and be like Howie Long," she said. The 6-foot-5 pro football player was a pallbearer at Ryan's funeral and helped raise money for the AIDS organization that bears the boy's name.

The headstone, designed by Ryan's mother, carries inscriptions front and back telling his story. It also carries a picture of the boy, whose battle for acceptance won hearts and improved public understanding of AIDS.

Woman collects millions to erase national debt

NEW BERLIN, Wis. (AP) — Kay Fishburn gets some snickers when she asks people to donate money to erase the national debt — now at more than $3 trillion — but she claims to have collected nearly $11 million.

"We're people of modest means. But we're getting a phenomenal response for the effort we put forward," said Mrs. Fishburn, 50, a suburban Milwaukee housewife who formed Citizens for a Debt-Free America in 1983.

Mrs. Fishburn is under no illusions about how much her group can accomplish — not when the national debt is growing by about $20 million every 34 minutes — but she said, "We're planting an idea."

Paying the debt is a "matter of honor," she said.

The loose-knit group has enlisted 600 volunteers nationwide. The donations, which last week neared $11 million, have been forwarded to the U.S. Treasury.

Donations included $1 million from former President Reagan, under whose administration the national debt more than tripled. Excess funds were donated from his 1985 inauguration committee.

The group's volunteers send out 10,000 invitations annually to addresses taken from telephone books, club rosters and "Who's Who." They receive 800 to 900 gifts each year from housewives to business leaders.

The invitation reads: "You are invited to participate in a historic endeavor. To honor our predecessors, to restore a legacy of liberty and initiative for future generations, citizens of the United States of America have begun to voluntarily retire the public debt of the federal government."

"That's the one thing we didn't anticipate was the degree of ridicule we would face," Mrs. Fishburn said. "People say, 'They'll spend it faster than we'll send it in.' It's the pervasive cynicism. We call it the snicker factor. We ignore the skeptics. We're going for the others."

Those include an Ohio man who sends his Social Security checks. Although the average gift is $50,000 and many citizens included the Treasury as a beneficiary in their wills, the fund also receives envelopes containing pennies.

"They get a lot of 2-cent gifts. People putting in their two cents. It's such a cynical, negative thing to do," Mrs. Fishburn said.

Yeltsin elected president of Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Populist firebrand Boris N. Yeltsin narrowly won election today to the presidency of the Russian Federation, the largest Soviet republic, a powerful forum that Mikhail S. Gorbachev had sought to deny him.

YELTSIN

After three hard-fought ballots in the 1,060-member Russian Congress of People's Deputies, Yeltsin won 535 votes, four more than the majority he needed.

His nearest rival, Russian Premier Alexander Vlasov, received 467 votes.

Yeltsin, a burly 59-year-old Siberian, now has a highly visible platform from which to wage his campaign for more radical economic reforms than those advocated by Gorbachev.

Gorbachev retains the two most powerful jobs in the country, president of the Soviet Union and General Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party. But many people feel Yeltsin's election to the newly created post of Russian president makes him Gorbachev's most serious rival.

Patrons shed clothes at new club

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Patrons of a new nightclub don't have to worry about dressing to impress. In fact, they don't have to dress at all.

The Nude Night Club is the brainchild of promoter Bill Ridley. It recently opened its doors for the first time on the coldest night of the year, just before the start of the Southern Hemisphere winter. About 100 people showed up and were kept warm by a roaring fire.

Patrons remained dressed for the first hour out of fears of a police raid, but no crackdown came.

An all-nude band played a Latin tune to start the festivities and encouraged participants to dance the Brazilian lambada.

Ridley provided a bowl of cigarettes to solve the dilemma of where patrons would put their cigarettes and lighters.

Ridley was encouraged by the positive response to his club and is considering opening a similar club in Sydney.

"I think sophisticated voyeurism has finally come of age," said Ridley, 32.

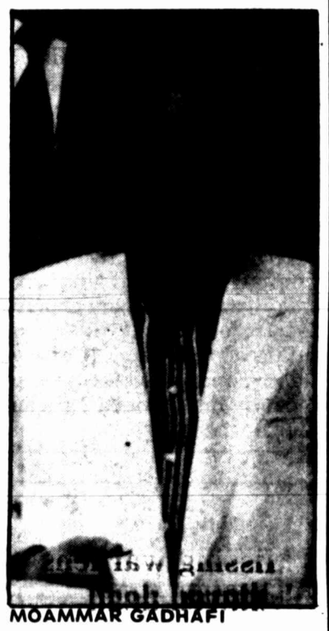

Arafat asks for help in uprising

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Moderate leaders at the Arab summit appeared today to have persuaded hard-liners to take a "balanced and prudent" approach to the United States, under fire for its support of Israel, conference sources said.

But despite their reported acquiescence, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein made belicose speeches against the United States and Israel at Monday's opening session of the two-day summit.

Hard-liners such as Libya's leader, Col. Moammar Gadhafi, were maintaining a low profile, sources said. Syria and Lebanon have boycotted the Arab summit, while Morocco, Algeria and Oman sent senior government officials.

The turnout was seen as a clear sign of discord between hard-liners and the moderates over how tough a line they should take against the United States.

Clown kills woman

WELLINGTON, Fla. (AP) — A woman shot at her front door by someone dressed as a clown has died and detectives say they have several leads in the search for her killer.

Marlene Warren, 40, died at Palms West Hospital in Loxahatchee, where she had been in critical condition since Saturday's shooting in an exclusive Palm Beach County community, detectives said.

She was shot by someone who went to the door of her home carrying a basket of red and white carnations and two balloons floating on ribbons, witnesses told police.

One of the balloons was stamped with the words "You're the Greatest." The other bore a picture of Snow White and the seven dwarfs.

After the shooting, the assailant left in a white Chrysler LeBaron that witnesses said had no license plate.

Sheriff's detectives said they were working on numerous leads in the case but could not discuss details.

"We're still out there going crazy, still plugging away," Palm Beach County Sheriff's Detective Lt. Lou Sessa said Monday.

Mrs. Warren managed rental apartments her family owned. Her husband, Michael, owns a car dealership in West Palm Beach.

The fetid air of dictatorship

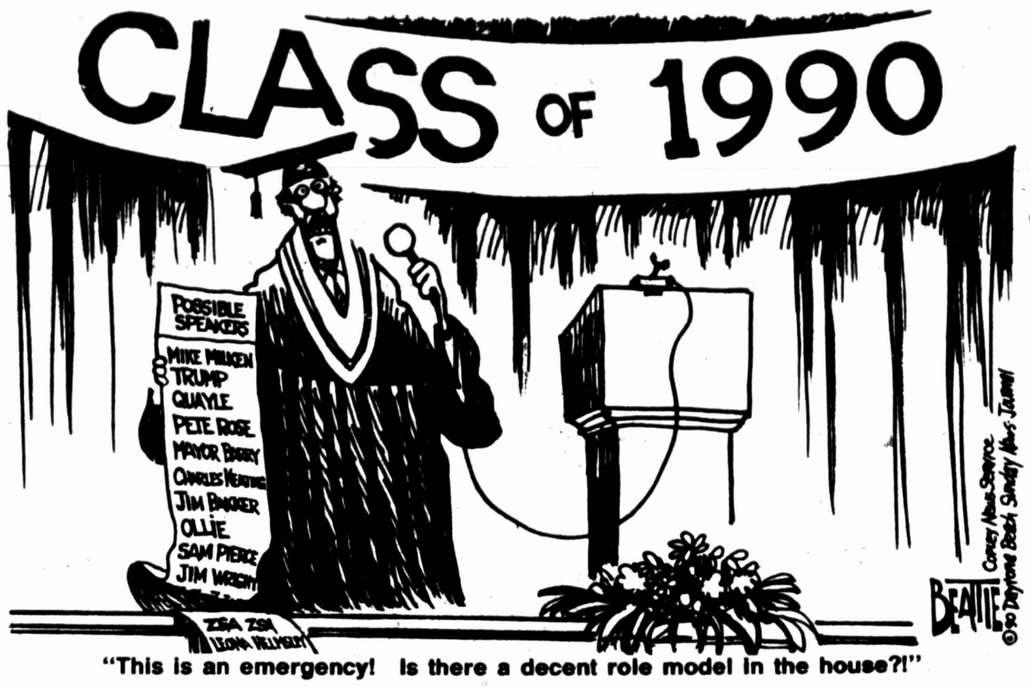

The scenes of environmental devastation emerging from a reopened Eastern Europe are reminiscent of "Soylent Green," the science fiction movie in which the cowed citizens of a barren New York eat a green gluelike substance, the only foodstuff that still can be produced in abundance in the city's fouled atmosphere.

Vast stretches of the Soviet Union, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Czechoslovakia have been laid waste by governments that ignored the environment and their own citizens' health in a single-minded push to maximize industrial output — and then, of course, failed even at that. Receeding communism has left behind not only ruined economies but ruined environments.

The pictures taken from a recent New York Times photo essay, are haunting: the grimy faces of children playing in fields where no grass or trees can grow and all the land and the children, too, are covered with thick black dust; a toddler fitted with a homemade gas mask; and abandoned town made uninhabitable by the toxic emissions from nearby factories and acres and acres of dead forests.

The capitalist democracies of Western Europe, the United States and Japan have been criticized, justifiably in some cases, for allowing the pursuit of profit to threaten the environment. But totalitarian regimes — those behind the crumbling Iron Curtain, where profit was officially outlawed, as well as others — have always been a far greater threat. In response to public concern, the West forced industry to develop cleaner cars and factories, banned some chemicals, restricted the use of others and regulated the disposal of waste.

But because the political commissars in Eastern Europe were not elected by the people they ruled and were not forced to live in the mess they made, they could safely ignore complaints abour dirty air, epidemics of lung disease and cancer, rivers choked with waste and dead forests. Citizens who raised objections risked ruthless repression. It was always known that dictatorship was not good for a citizens's health, but not until recently did the idea gain such a pervasive, and such a literal, meaning.

"This is an emergency! Is there a decent role model in the house?!"

Controversy ahead on China

Capitol report

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — While the cost of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle dolls from China probably won't be going up, there may be an increase in the political price of President Bush's policy toward Beijing.

It could be avoided if there was a gesture from the Chinese government to match the administration's move to maintain trade preferences, but there is no sign of that.

Democratic leaders, and some Republicans, too, are lining up for a congressional challenge to Bush's decision to continue the favorable trade terms that have applied to China since 1980. It is one Bush almost certainly can withstand, just as he blocked by veto an earlier attempt to toughen sanctions against China for the repression of democracy demonstrators.

Even so, his critics have the politically salable side; as the president said himself, there is an "impulse to lash out in outrage that we all feel."

This time the issue is the annual decision on extension of most favored nation trade terms toward China, due on June 3 — the first anniversary of the massacre of demonstrators in Tienanmen Square.

As Bush said in announcing his decision on Thursday, most favored nation treatment is not a special favor or concession, it is the treatment extended to almost every trading partner. It means that no other nation will be extended better tariff and trade terms, and the United States applies it to all but a handful of countries.

But it applies to Communist nations only if the administration certifies that they permit their citizens to emigrate freely, and that determination is subject to annual renewal. The Soviet Union does not have most favored nation status because its emigration laws do not yet meet the requirement. China's do, Bush said.

But Bush critics insist the status should be denied China to punish human rights abuses. Bush says that would hurt the wrong people, and only make things worse, isolating China and damaging the economy of Hong Kong.

Congress could overrule his decision by adopting a disapproval resolution within 60 days. But that would be subject to veto, and it would take two-thirds votes in each house to override Bush.

U.S. imports from China totaled about $12 billion last year, with most of that trade moving through Hong Kong. China buys about $6 billion a year in U.S. products.

Chinese imports would be subject to sharply increased U.S. tariffs without the most favored nation status. The duty on toys, for example, would go from 12 percent to 70 percent.

That's where the Ninja Turtle dolls come in; Hong Kong traders cite that big seller as an example, saying that an end to the current trade status would boost the price from $5 to $9 apiece.

Bush said some opponents of his earlier decision to impose only limited sanctions against China agree with him this time that the favorable trading status should be continued.

But some of those converts had said the renewal should be conditional and accompanied by a firm demand for human rights reform. The administration said the law didn't provide any way to make the extension provisional.

Bush said China had taken modest steps, including the release of 211 people arrested in the democracy demonstrations and the lifting of martial law in Tibet.

"While we welcome these and earlier steps they are, lets face it, far from adequate, and I am not basing my decision on the steps that the Chinese have taken so far," Bush said. "Most important of all, as we mark the anniversary of Tienanmen, we must realize that by maintaining our involvement with China we will continue to promote the reforms for which the victims of Tienanmen gave their lives."

Bush said the only message in his action is that isolation is bad, economic involvement good.

His critics see another message.

"The hope for freedom in China is as remote today as it was 10 months ago," said Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, "and what is worse, the administration has signaled to the Chinese leadership and the watching world that it views their actions with complacency."

Mitchell said Bush's policy has been secretive, inconsistent "and its outcome has been dismal failure."

Shortly after Bush announced the suspension of high-level exchanges of top officials, two of his senior aides went secretly to Beijing. They went back in early December, while their July trip remained secret, even from Mitchell and the other congressional leaders they briefed on the second trip.

Congress passed a bill to extend the visas of about 30,000 Chinese students studying in the United States. Bush vetoed it, saying he would do the same thing by executive order. Instead, he did it with guidelines for immigration authorities, putting it into an executive order this spring.

The difference is largely symbolic, but symbols are part of the message.

"We continue to have serious concerns about the human rights situation in China . . . ," Bush said Wednesday in a report to Congress, which had asked for an account of the impact of U.S. sanctions.

The report skirted the question, saying the impact was difficult to measure precisely.

Precisely or imprecisely, nobody has come up with evidence of real results.

Ensuring that every demonstrator counts

Guest column

By BOB MITCHELL
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — "A policeman's lot is not a happy one," the song says. But surely Gilbert and Sullivan never envisioned what has become one of the most important responsibilities of U.S. Park Police Capt. Hugh Irwin.

It isn't guarding VIPs. It isn't breaking up fistights between rival softball teams or investigating threats to blow up the Washington Monument.

Irwin counts demonstrators.

In a city where pundits and politicians seize upon any indicator of public opinion — no matter how imprecise — to claim the people are on their side, it is a duty that often provokes the same unpleasant reaction as writing a parking ticket.

"People have never liked our crowd estimates," conceded Irwin, a mustachioed Baltimore native and 18-year veteran of the park police.

Exactly how many people make up those crowds has once again become a source of controversy as both sides in the abortion debate have descended on Washington within the past two years.

The debate flared anew earlier this spring when thousands of anti-abortion demonstrators gathered at the Washington Monument for a rally. Organizers wanted a turnout larger than the abortion rights protest last fall.

The next day, the papers quoted park police estimates that put the crowd at 200,000 — a figure three times lower than what organizers claimed. The low crowd estimate angered rally leaders.

In fact, the uproar was so intense that three anti-abortion lawmakers — Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H. and Reps. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., and Christopher Smith, R-N.J. — called Irwin in to account for his counting.

Humphrey said he came away from the meeting less than impressed with police counting methods. "I found out their method is not very scientific or consistently applied," he said.

The New Hampshire lawmaker said the park service should do a better job if only because demonstrators often make considerable sacrifices to come to Washington for their cause. "They deserve to be accurately counted," Humphrey said of demonstrators.

But this wasn't the first time park police had antagonized partisans in the abortion debate. Last fall, park police said 300,000 marchers joined an abortion rights rally — half the size of the crowd estimated by organizers.

In Irwin's view, the methods used by the park police have come a long way from the days of the late 1960s when police employed what has been characterized as the SWAG ("scientific wild-ass guess") approach to estimate the number of Vietnam war protestors.

When the event is small enough, park police use hand-counters and click off the demonstrators one by one to get a tally, Irwin said.

When people are marching, Irwin said, police count the number of demonstrators in each row, compile an average figure and multiply by the number of rows. But when an event like the anti-abortion rally occurs, a more complicated series of measurements are used.

One method involves using maps of the monument grounds divided into grids representing areas of five or 10 square feet. Officers then average the number of people within each grid to come up with an estimate.

Irwin said police will use other methods as well. They fly over in helicopters to get videotape. They peer down from the monument. They count buses. "Everything works together," he said.

The reason for these elaborate procedures has nothing to do with politics, Irwin said. "Our objective is to come up with a number we can use for logistical purposes," he said.

Humphrey, for one, calls park police methods "sort of anecdotal" and has his staff drafting legislation that would specify methods for counting demonstrators in an attempt to get more accurate figures.

One improvement the park service can make is to take high-resolution aerial photographs rather than using videotape or taking snapshots from the Washington Monument, Humphrey said.

"I think they owe it to the people who come these long distances," he said.

This being Washington, Irwin said he isn't oblivious to the reasons behind the uproar. "We recognize numbers drive legislation and form public opinion," he said.

Irwin, who worked on crowd estimate figures for the park police on Long Island, was transferred to Washington in June 1989 — just in time for the most recent round of demonstrations concerning abortion. "I've been really lucky," he laughed.

I'd have bought one but...

By ART BUCHWALD

This summer it's very possible that you will run into people who'll ask, "Why didn't you buy Van Gogh's Dr. Gachet for $82.5 million or Renoir's Moulin de la Galette for $78.1 million?"

You needn't be embarrassed by the question. Just use one of these replies:

"We don't have the wall space for the Van Gogh because our children wouldn't let us take down their Mother's Day drawings."

"I intended to bid, but the Japanese had their heart set on the pictures, and they have so little of anything as it is."

"Renoir's colors didn't go with our drapes."

"Do you know what it costs to frame an Impressionist painting these days?"

"We would have bought the Moulin de la Galette but it wouldn't fit into our Volkswagen."

"I have a friend, Bill Morice, who told me that I didn't have to go to the auction as he would take me to Van Gogh's studio to meet him personally."

"My wife might have been persuaded to buy the Renoir, but she can't stand Mrs. Renoir."

"I'd rather have new patio furniture than an old French painting that has hung on God knows how many people's walls."

"I started to collect Van Goghs the day he cut off his ear."

"We don't have $82.5 million for a picture, but if we did, we'd buy a Mapplethorpe photo instead."

"Renoir's Moulin de la Galette isn't a bad painting, but unfortunately it has too many people in it for our taste."

"Years ago we had a choice of either collecting Rembrandts or baseball cards. Thank God, we chose the baseball cards."

"Lucy Scott asked me not to bid on the Renoir so that she could have it. Then she stopped raising her hand when it reached $330."

"We'll probably buy both works this summer when the Japanese businessman, Ryoei Saito, has his annual garage sale."

"My wife was about to purchase the Dr. Gachet when I pointed out to her that we would then be stuck with two Van Goghs in the rec room."

"Because we are favored customers, we have reserved seats at Sotheby's for any softball game on their schedule."

"I hate the role money is playing in the art game. The halcyon days of paying a lousy $5 million for a White Rock calendar are over."

"I would have bought Renoir's Moulin de la Galette, but the artist refused to retouch it to make it more American."

"The reason we don't buy anything is because the auctioneer at Christie's never looks our way when we're bidding."

"He may have talent but Van Gogh is no friend of the farmer."

"Someday the Japanese are going to come back to New York on their hands and knees and beg us to buy back their paintings."

"Picasso makes me smile, but Norman Rockwell makes me think."

"Ralph went to the auction with me but lost interest when he found out that Van Gogh never painted any landscapes of the Augusta National Golf Course."

BIG SPRING — Local motorcycle enthusiasts are gearing up for Saturday's ride to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

'Love Ride 300' to benefit MDA

BIG SPRING — Hundreds of motorcycle riders from West Texas and New Mexico will ride a 300-mile triangular course Saturday to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association, said Howard Walker, local motorcycle dealer.

A national MDA fund-raising effort for 1990, the event has been dubbed "Love Ride 300." It will be open to riders of all makes of motorcycles, and will take local riders from Walker's shop at 908 W. Third St. to Harley-Davidson dealerships, which are serving as check points, in Odessa and Lubbock. The course may be run in either direction.

At the same time, Walker said, riders from the Lubbock and Midland-Odessa areas will be making the run and stopping in Big Spring.

At each out-of-town check point, each rider will draw two cards from a deck of playing cards. Upon return to his or her starting point, each will draw a final card. Trophies will be awarded for the winning poker hands.

For those not desiring to make the ride and for the general public, other activities will be going on at the three check points. These will include competition in field events, games, entertainment and drawings for prizes. The prizes have been donated by supporting merchants and individuals in the four cities. Food and refreshments will be available at each check point.

Registration charge for riders will be $10 per person. Proceeds will be given to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Non-riders may participate by making donations to sponsor riders. Those not riding motorcycles but desiring to make the run may do in automobiles.

Walker reminded riders that "last bike out" for the 300-mile run will be at 10 a.m.

Assisting with plans for the fun and the local activities are members of the Big Spring chapter of the Harley Owners Group and members of the Big Spring Road Riders Motorcycle Club.

In addition to Walker, sponsors include Guy W. Bates of Guy W's Harley-Davidson, Odessa; and Cletus Graves of Graves Harley-Davidson, Lubbock.

A right to free speech

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: You were absolutely and positively wrong in your advice to "Mother of Six"! I've used such strong language because this goof is monumental; you owe 50 mea culpas on this one.

What if I don't like something I read in your column? Should I write to the publisher of my newspaper and tell him to cancel my subscription? Or should I contact the newspaper's largest advertisers and enlist their aid in coercing the editors to print only what I deem appropriate? Soon we would have either no media or only meaningless fluff, offensive to no one. Also, no Dear Abby.

Let me tell you what offends me: I am offended by this growing idea that we can control what people (media included) say by simply labeling it "offensive." Freedom of speech is our first and foremost civil right, guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. You don't like what someone says? Tough. Don't look, don't listen or don't read it. But don't try to shut them up. Information isn't dangerous. Suppression of information is.

Very little TV programming is intended for 4-year-olds. They don't have jobs, and they don't spend money. I couldn't believe you would encourage economic coercion nationwide as a means of censorship to help one parent abrogate her responsibility.

But don't shut up. Just think a little. And keep on writing. — DAVID MILLER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR MR. MILLER: All right — I'll take 10 whacks with a rolled-up facsimile of the U.S. Constitution. And as one of the original members of People for the American Way (founded by Norman Lear), I ought to be ashamed of myself. And I am.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the pregnant woman who stood on a Boston bus while men were comfortably seated, pretending not to notice her:

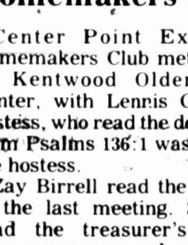

Some years ago, I got on a bus in Japan. I was able to get a seat, but the bus filled rapidly. I noticed a very tired-looking elderly Japanese woman standing, so I got up and offered her my seat — but before she could get to it, a middle-aged Japanese man jumped in front of her and took the seat! He sat there glaring at me for the duration of the trip. Apparently, their customs are not the same as ours. — S.S.T., WISCONSIN RAPIDS

DEAR S.S.T.: Customs do differ in various cultures, but I would have assumed that because Oriental people have a reputation for respecting their elders, Japan would be the last place to witness the scene you described.

We're generating more than electricity.

Jobs Power The Future
Big cities and small towns across the area we serve are stretching their horizons. They're searching out new industries and new companies to bring new jobs. When the companies see what we have here – people who will work hard to build a better future, some of the most attractive electric rates in the nation, and an attitude set on winning – they decide to move here.

Electricity Powers The Jobs
That's why we need to build new generating plants and power lines, and develop alternate fuel sources like nuclear power. To make sure we can keep expanding opportunities for young people who want to raise families here. To make sure you have the electricity you need – today and tomorrow.

Power For Texas
TU Electric is committed to helping make a better future for all of us. And to provide all the power that is needed to fuel the new economy. Electric Power. The Power for Texas.

Lloyd said the major decision involved in adding a particular channel is whether it will have broad appeal. "You don't want to add something and then have to remove it later. You're trying to please a large number of people and keep the price in line."

"If all those people who signed the petition watch it, BET will definitely have an audience," Lloyd said.

The channels to be added this summer, Lloyd said, will be part of the company's "tier package." They will not be not part of the standard basic service, but can be added if the customer wants them, he said.

If BET survives the approval process, it will become one of eight to 12 added, Lloyd said. "We hope to have approximately 30 channels on 'full basic' which includes the tier, for $16-17," Lloyd said.

they're hitting me with this," he said. "What do you think some big industry's going to think?"

Following Carter's request, County Judge John Coffee made a motion for commissioners O.L. "Louis" Brown and Paul Allen to meet with Decell to see what could be worked out.

"I will take it upon myself to talk to the Mayor," Coffee said. The motion passed unanimously.

"I don't know what we can do," Brown said. "But I think this man deserves a break."

Allen and Commissioner Bill Crooker both agreed that it needed more research.

David Barr suggested the commissioners may want to contract with Carter for county trash collection. Crooker said it sounded like a good idea but that would also need more research.

Festival planning proceeding smoothly

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — Organizers have scheduled a full slate of activities for Saturday's Heart of the City Festival, and more are being added each day.

Beverly Franklin, downtown coordinator for Big Spring Main Street Inc., said preparations for the day-long event are going smoothly. Big Spring Main Street is again sponsoring the 6-year-old festival, which is designed to showcase the downtown area and raise funds for its improvement.

Events, booths, contests and entertainment will be spread over a four-block area in the city's downtown from about 10 a.m. until midnight. The festival will be confined to an area hemmed by Second Street on the north and Fourth Street on the south, Scurry Street on the west and Runnels Street on the east.

Franklin said this year's festival will be as big, if not bigger than previous events.

"They're saying that it's doing well against previous Heart of the Citys," she said. "They're telling us we can expect more booths this week. They only had 60 booths last year so we're doing well."

Vela Ross, also with the Main Street group, said the festival will feature booths selling various arts and crafts and foods. Sign ups for booth space have been going well, she said.

"We're doing good. We have over 50 booths and we're having a lot of people call in," Ross said.

She said the arts and crafts booths include merchants selling hair bows, earrings, T-shirts, face-painting, balloons, Southwestern jewelry, ceramics, woodcrafts and toys. Food booths will include Mexican cousine, barbecue, donuts, hamburgers, hotdogs, cotton candy, ice cream, candy apples, snow cones, fish-on-a-stick and shrimp, Ross said.

Ross said the festival still is taking reservations for booth space in the 100 block of Main Street for non-profit groups. The response hasn't been strong, Ross said, but "they are still open to come by and sign up and set up tables."

Franklin said the festival features a strong lineup of entertainment, including a street dance by Jody Nix from 8 a.m. to midnight. There also will be puppet shows throughout the morning and early afternoon and performances by the rap group Capital Kids Band.

Christie West, a country and western singer from Big Spring, will entertain crowds in the early afternoon, and Marv and the Rodeo Cowboys will take over later, Franklin said. There also will be performances by the Fort Wood Gunfighters of Colorado City, and by belly dancers from Lamesa, she said.

Most of the singers will perform on the M.C. stage, which will be on the corner of Third and Main streets, Franklin said. The puppet shows will be held in the pocket park, and Jody Nix will perform from the Auction Stage, which will be set up on Main Street across from the county courthouse, she said.

staffing.

But the turnout was more than promoters expected and disc jockeys began asking people to stay home when crowd estimates reached 25,000 to 30,000, Libios said.

In addition to Special Treat, the Mega Jam was to feature D.O.C. of New York, Queen Latifah of New Jersey, Boogie Down Productions of New York and 2 Live Crew of Miami. The performances were scheduled to begin at 1 p.m., but were delayed as promoters tried to arrange for more security. Special Treat had begun its act when the violence erupted.

The concert, which also was to include a Mazda Miata giveaway, was designed as a promotion tool for the fledgling station ranked No. 16 in Winter 1990 Arbitron ratings for the Houston market. Its main competition, KMJQ-FM, is ranked No. 3.

Olson said an unidentified person threw a bottle into the crowd as the rap music fans surged toward the stage.

Then, Olson said, someone in the crowd fired a gun, apparently angered at the people closing in.

Witnesses said several people sprayed each other with beer in the hot afternoon sun. Temperatures here reached 93 degrees for the second day running.

"Some people apparently started throwing beer bottles and then I heard, pop, pop, pop — someone was shooting — and then everybody started running," said Ron Atkins, program director for KMJQ.

"I heard about four gunshots and just started running," said George Carver, another witness.

Thomas Martin, 13, said he was in the audience when people on the hill overlooking the stage began throwing bottles at the audience inside the theater, eventually hitting a youth with a full bottle.

"He walked from the front of the theater up the aisle with a T-shirt wrapped around his head and blood running down his arm," Martin said.

From that point, what order there had been disintegrated. The bottle throwing increased, and then someone fired the first volley of shots, witnesses said.

"I never saw so much happen so fast," said Carolyn Smith, 32. "I was crying, I was so scared."

Noe Bocanegra, a vendor at the Memorial Day veterans' festivities a few hundred feet from the theater, said at least three guns were fired during the incident.

"One was rapid fire, and two were slower," he said.

After the shots were fired, Bocanegra said, he saw someone throw a gun into a portable toilet near the theater.

A woman helping him take down his booth said as many as 20 shots were fired during a 10- to 15-minute period.

Al Baker, a Houston Police spokesman, said police will investigate whether the concert promoters did everything they could to secure the area.

One man was treated for a stab wound in the leg, said Roger Widmeyer, spokesman at Ben Taub Hospital. He said eight people were treated for injuries at the hospital, which went on disaster alert.

At Hermann Hospital, a 16-year-old boy received stitches after being hit in the head by a baseball bat, said Donna Miller, a triage nurse in the emergency room. She said two other people were treated there.

Jordan stays hot; so do Bulls

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan's locker room tirade woke up the Chicago Bulls. Detroit coach Chuck Daly hopes the Pistons will have the same reaction to his outburst.

How the Pistons respond will determine who advances to the NBA Finals — the Bulls or the defending champions.

The Bulls, bidding to become only the fifth team to overcome an 0-2 deficit in a best-of-7 series, captured their second straight victory Monday, defeating Detroit 108-101, to even the series 2-2.

Game 5 will be played Wednesday night in suburban Auburn Hills, Mich., and Game 6 Friday night back in rowdy Chicago Stadium. Game 7, if needed, would be played in Auburn Hills.

"We did what we wanted to do," said Jordan, whose heated words after Game 2 brought the Bulls back to life. "It's a three-game series right now.

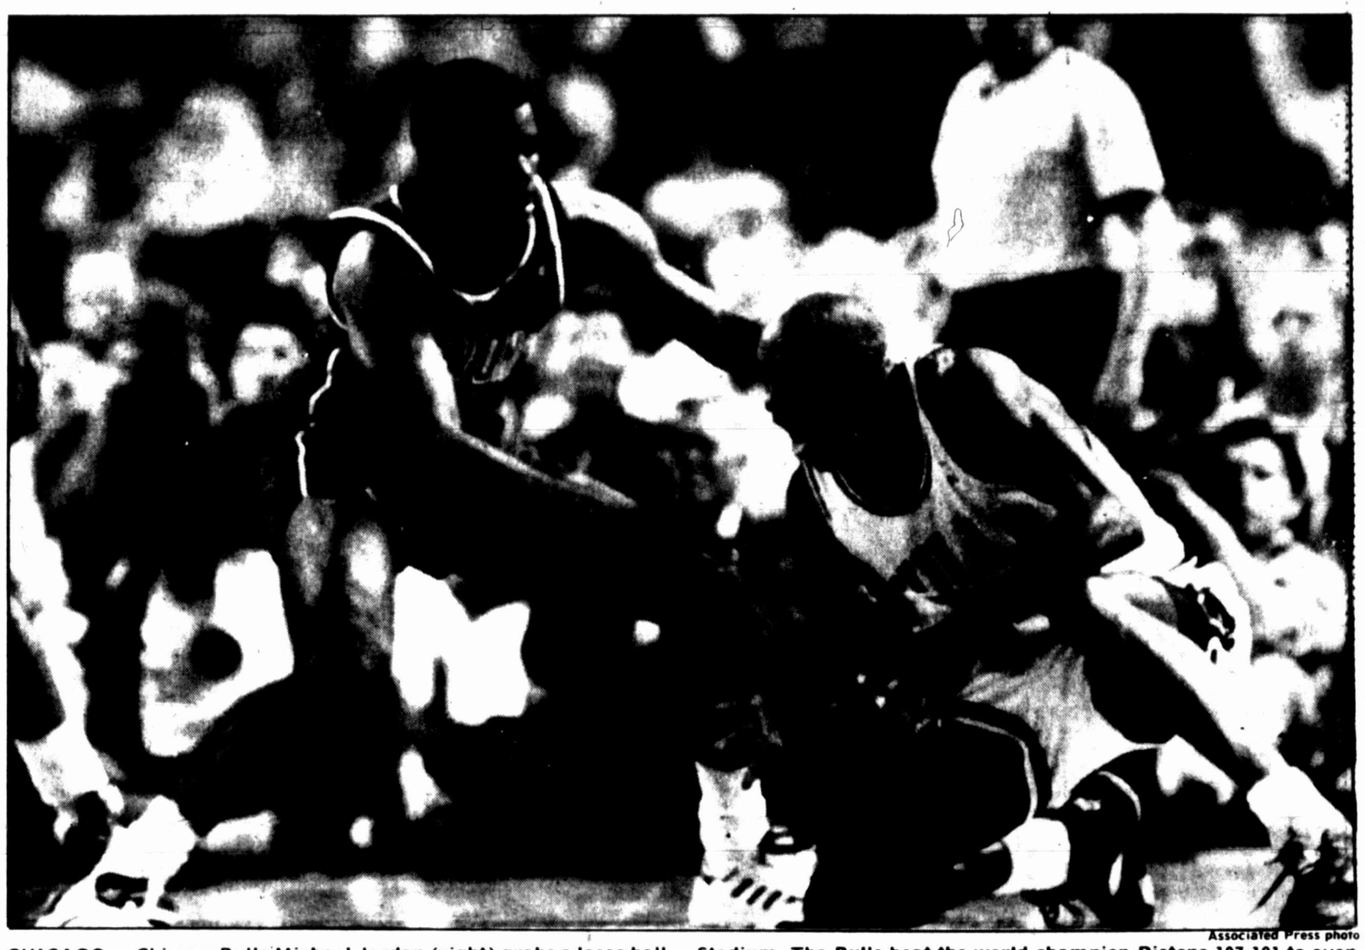

"We have the momentum and the confidence going into the Palace on Wednesday. We have to steal a game from them and win."

Jordan, of course, was the trigger man, scoring 42 points Monday following a 47-point performance in Saturday's Chicago victory after being held to just 54 points combined in the first two games.

But the Pistons, like everyone else in the NBA, expect Jordan to score. After all, he averaged 33.6 points during the regular season, winning his fourth scoring title.

What the Pistons didn't expect was to see the Bulls play defense with the intensity they did over the weekend. Chicago coach Phil

Indy 500 winnings richest in history

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Arie Luyendyk, the fastest and richest Indianapolis 500 winner, now knows what every other champion before him soon found out.

It wasn't the money that brought them back to the Speedway year after year, but the lure of the race itself, the premier showcase of motorsports in the world.

For most drivers, especially the winners, the feeling is overpowering.

"I can see why guys like A.J. (Foyt) and Al Unser keep coming back," said Luyendyk, at 36 still a babe in comparison with Foyt and Unser, the only four-time winners of the race. "It's an incredible high. I feel like going back out there and racing again today. I want to win this race again."

The 55-year-old Foyt was sixth on Sunday in his record 33rd start at Indianapolis. Unser, 51 today, was 13th in his 25th start. But the two grandpas — and the six other former winners in the race, for that matter — were no match for the lean Dutchman, whose victory was his first in 76 Indy-car starts.

"Growing up in Europe, I had heard about the Indy 500 and I was reading about drivers like A.J. Foyt. ... I think I was still eating cereals in the morning as a baby when I read that story that A.J. won," Luyendyk said during the annual Victory Dinner Monday night.

"But I know now why A.J. comes back every year, and I know now why Johnny Rutherford comes back, and Mario Andretti and everybody else that keeps coming back, because this is the greatest race there is in the world, and I feel on cloud nine.

"This morning, when we were taking the pictures, I said to the guys, 'You know, it would be fun to roll out the car and do a couple of 224s, just for the hell of it, because it's so much fun.'"

Luyendyk averaged a record 185.981 mph and beat Bobby Rahal to the checkered flag by 10.878 seconds. Defending champion Emerson Fittipaldi was third; Rahal's teammate, Al Unser Jr., was fourth, and Fittipaldi's teammate, Rick Mears, was fifth.

Monday morning, Luyendyk returned to the Speedway for the traditional winner's photo session, and Monday night he pocketed a record $1,090,940 for the Shierson Racing team from a purse of $6,325,803, the richest prize package in auto racing history.

"I think everybody will have to bear with me. It's a little bit of a shock," Luyendyk, taking the check from Speedway president Tony George, told a crowd of about 2,000 at the Convention Center.

Luyendyk, whose take included $16,650 in lap prizes — $450 for each of 37 laps in front — raised his Indy winnings to $1,606,528, more than triple what he had won in his first five Indy 500s combined.

Associated Press photo

INDIANAPOLIS — 1990 Indianapolis 500 winner Arie Luyendyk gives the Borg-Warner winers trophy a kiss. Luyenyk will earn more than a million dollars for the win.

The prize for first place surpassed the record $1,001,604 won by Fittipaldi last year, and the purse topped last year's record of $5,723,725.

Luyendyk, a native of the Netherlands whose best previous finish at Indianapolis was seventh in his rookie-of-the-year season in 1985, called his victory "incredible."

He started from the outside of the first row, next to Fittipaldi and Mears, and took the lead for good on the 168th lap with a pass of Rahal. Fittipaldi, who started from the pole, led the first 92 laps and 128 of 200 overall but dropped from contention because of a couple of unplanned pit stops to change blistered tires.

Luyendyk, whose crew solved some early handling problems, was always within striking distance and waiting for his chance.

"As the day progressed, after the first few pit stops ... when it was time to go to the front, that's when the car was absolutely great to drive," he said.

Fittipaldi set a record for the largest payoff to a non-winner at $592,874.

Fittipaldi also became only the fourth driver to compile more than $2 million in career winnings at Indianapolis, raising his total to $2,264,368. Mears won $201,610 to push his record total to $2,938,291.

"It was a great run," Fittipaldi said Monday night. "We had been running very strong the whole month. The car was ready to go, always fast and consistent every day. ... I call my car the 'woman in red.' She was beautiful until she had some problem with her shoes (tires). Arie was consistent. He was always strong. He did a great race.

"Last year, as the defending champion, I traveled all over the world and I realized how big this race is outside the United States. For sure, this is the biggest sport event in the world," Fittipaldi said.

Blazers get emotional lift from Ramos

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Ramon Ramos gave the Portland Trail Blazers an emotional boost as they prepared for Game 5 of the Western Conference finals.

Five months after suffering a severe brain injury in a car accident, the Portland power forward watched from the bench as the Trail Blazers practiced on Monday.

"He looks real good," his close friend and Seton Hall teammate Mark Bryant said. "He looks like Ramon. He smiled as soon as he got in the locker room. It was nice to see him there in his own spot."

Ramos' jersey still hangs in the locker. He's still officially a member of the team, although doctors say he almost certainly will never play professional basketball again.

The media was kept away from the practice session and wasn't allowed to enter the playing area until Ramos left.

Ramos was in a coma for more than two months. But doctors are now encouraged by the improvement he's shown since he was transferred to the Rehabilitation Institute of Oregon, where he has undergone daily physical and speech therapy.

Bryant, who visits the institute regularly, said some of the Blazers who haven't seen Ramos lately were surprised by his appearance.

"He's come a long way," Bryant said. "He's starting to talk, you know, on and off. And now he's walking."

During his hospital visits, Bryant said, Ramos has identified him by name, although he usually only talks in a whisper.

Soccer still trying to stifle fan violence

LONDON (AP) — Five years after English hooligans touched off a riot that killed 39 people at Heysel Stadium in Brussels, soccer continues to struggle with the problem of fan violence.

Just 10 days before the start of the World Cup, the quadrennial celebration of the world's most popular and passion-inducing sport, much of the attention again is focused on unruly English fans.

Two English fans already have been expelled from Italy, the host of the World Cup, and police there are preparing for an onslaught of hooligans from England, the Netherlands and possibly other nations.

Tuesday is the fifth anniversary of the European Champions Cup game between English club Liverpool and Italy's Juventus that was stained by tragedy. Thirty-nine Juventus fans trying to escape rioting Englishmen were crushed to death at Heysel.

It led to the banning of English clubs from European club competition, a punishment that has not yet been lifted, and worldwide attention on the problem of hooliganism.

A half-decade later, the nation that suffered most at Heysel is preparing for an invasion of fans from countries still plagued by hooliganism.

Rioting broke out recently at a soccer match in Yugoslavia. England and the Netherlands still experience sporadic incidents of fan violence, as do the Soviet Union and Romania.

So have the lessons of Heysel been ignored?

Renato Orlando, director of club competition for the European soccer governing body UEFA, said major chances have been made but admits the problem has not been solved.

Orlando said significant progress has been made in stadium configurations, ticket allocations and cooperation with security forces to lessen the threat of hooligan violence.

Stadiums used in European club competitions will have to wipe out standing areas, the place preferred by hooligans, by the year 2000. And, he said, the dispersal of tickets now is being more tightly controlled by clubs.

But Orlando warned that until all of society's problems are solved, hooliganism will continue to exist — whether at soccer matches or at other events. UEFA and other organizations are powerless to control fan behavior outside stadiums, he added.

"A very great deal has been accomplished in the past five years," he said in a telephone interview from UEFA headquarters in Zurich. "But you never know, something can happen. There are individuals that try to bring the sport into disrepute."

UEFA has said it is ready to readmit English clubs to European competition, depending on fan behavior at the World Cup.

Gun shot prompts Oilers RB arrest

DICKINSON (AP) — Houston Oilers running back Mike Rozier and a friend were arrested early today after police said a shot was fired from a truck the two were riding in on Interstate 45.

Off-duty police officer Phil Tracy reported seeing a shot fired from a Nissan truck as it passed the officer on the freeway at 12:30 a.m.

"He notified a dispatcher and proceeded to follow the truck," said Dickinson police dispatcher Pam Campbell.

Padres rally to defeat Phillies

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies spoiled Bruce Hurst's holiday. Tony Gwynn made sure they didn't ruin it for the rest of the San Diego Padres.

NL

Hurst took a no-hitter and a 5-0 lead into the seventh inning, but the Phillies knocked him out by scoring five runs on five hits. However, Gwynn broke the tie with an RBI single that keyed a four-run ninth inning as the Padres outlasted the Phillies 9-5 Monday night.

Prior to the five-run rally in the seventh, the Phillies had managed only two hits in their last 15 innings. They were no-hit for 8 1-3 innings on Sunday by Atlanta's John Smoltz before Len Dykstra doubled and Hayes singled for their only run in a 6-1 loss.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 5

Pittsburgh, held to one hit in eight innings by Tim Belcher, rallied for five runs in the ninth, ending Los Angeles' five-game winning streak in a brushback-marred game.

Wally Backman singled off reliever Pat Perry to start the ninth and Jay Bell doubled. Backman scored on Perry's wild pitch and Andy Van Slyke walked before Bobby Bonilla bounced into a run-scoring force play.

Perry got Barry Bonds to pop out, but Sid Bream singled to bring on Jay Howell (1-3), who walked Slaught to load the bases. Jose Lind singled to right, scoring Bonilla and pinch-runner Gary Redus, and Don Slaught was waved home when Brooks' throw eluded catcher Mike Scioscia.

Both benches empted in the bottom of the fifth when Belcher, apparently retaliating for Brooks being hit in the top of the inning by Bob Walk, knocked leadoff hitter Slaught off the plate. An inning later, Randy Kramer nearly hit Belcher with a pitch, prompting the umpires to automatically eject Kramer and manager Jim Leyland.

Astros 5, Cardinals 1

Bill Gullickson got his 100th National League victory and Alex Trevino and Ken Caminiti drove in two runs each as Houston extended St. Louis' losing streak to four games.

Caminiti hit a two-run homer in the eighth, his second of the season and second in as many days, as Houston won for the fourth time in five games and handed Greg Mathews (0-5) his sixth straight loss, dating to last season.

Gullickson (3-3) has won six of his last seven starts against the Cardinals. The right-hander, who pitched in Japan the last two seasons, allowed six hits, struck out four and walked three in 6 2-3 innings. Dave Smith got the last four outs for his ninth save.

Cubs 5, Giants 1

The Cubs won a game and lost a pitcher as rookie Mike Harkey won his fourth straight decision before leaving with a stiff right shoulder.

Harkey (5-1) allowed seven hits and one run in five innings to get the win, but was placed on the 15-day disabled list after the game. Les Lancaster pitched the last four innings for his first save.

Expos 4, Braves 1

Kevin Gross and injured starter Oil Can Boyd combined on a six-hitter and Mike Fitzgerald hit a two-run homer as Montreal beat Atlanta in a rain-interrupted game.

Luckless Rangers continue losing ways

By The Associated Press

Eight is enough for the Texas Rangers, who have lost eight consecutive home games, and the Milwaukee Brewers, who have dropped eight straight on the road.

"That's the first time I've ever walked the go-ahead run in my life," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said after Tony Pena double home the tying and winning runs with two out in the eighth inning, giving the Boston Red Sox a 4-3 victory Monday night.

AL

"Some ugly circumstances reared their head and I did it. Now I wish I didn't."

Texas went ahead 1-0 in the sixth inning, fell behind 2-1 in the top of the seventh and regained the lead 3-2 in the bottom of the inning on Gary Pettris' leadoff homer and Julio Franco's RBI single.

But Boston's Mike Greenwell doubled with one out in the eighth off Kenny Rogers, the second Texas pitcher, bringing on relief ace Jeff Russell. After Russell (1-5) retired Tom Brunansky on a groundout, he intentially walked Dwight Evans. Pena spoiled the strategy with his double.

Boston manager Joe Morgan understood Valentine's decision. Evans has 23 career homers against Texas, 14 at Arlington Stadium.

Mariners 4, Brewers 3

Pinch-hitter Darnell Coles hit a two-run single in the fifth inning, giving Seattle just enough to withstand a late Milwaukee rally and end a four-game losing streak. The Brewers have lost six straight overall.

Blue Jays 1, Athletics 0

Stieb (6-2) struck out three and walked one in pitching the 100th complete game of his career. Manny Lee tripled home the game's only run in the fifth inning following John Olerud's one-out single. Mike Moore (4-4) lost despite pitching a six-hitter. Moore is 4-13 lifetime against Toronto.

White Sox 2, Yankees 1

Chicago raised baseball's best home record to 16-6 by scoring the winning run on seventh-inning singles by Scott Fletcher and Robin Ventura, both of whom started the game hitting under .200. Eric King (4-0) held the Yankees to three hits in eight innings and Bobby Thigpen pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

Indians 3, Angels 0

Brook Jacoby's one-out single in the 10th inning broke a scoreless tie and Cory Snyder followed with a two-run homer off Jim Abbott as Cleveland snapped California's seven-game winning streak. Jacoby's bloop single was the fourth hit off Abbott, who gave up Snyder's fifth homer on the next pitch.

Abbott (2-4) had retired 25 of 26 batters and 16 in a row before Candy Maldonado singled to start the 10th. Pinch-runner Stanley Jefferson was sacrificed to second before Jacoby's hit.

Twins 6, Orioles 4

Kirby Puckett's second homer of the game, a three-run shot in the seventh inning, gave Minnesota its fifth straight victory. The Twins trailed 4-2 when Junior Ortiz hit a one-out double and Dan Gladden singled him to third. After Fred Manrique struck out, Puckett hit Joe Price's 2-2 pitch deep into the left-center field seats.

Royals 3, Tigers 2

Bret Saberhagen (4-3) scattered nine hits for his third straight complete-game victory and Kevin Seitzer hit a pair of doubles, giving him five straight extra-base hits, as Kansas City equaled its longest winning streak of the season at three.

Jackson obviously learned something while studying the so-called "Jordan rules" on the Detroit tapes.

"I told the guys before the game started they get six fouls in the NBA; Use every one of them," Jackson said. "We didn't use all of them, but we let them know we came to play.

"If we keep this intensity up, no one will be able to beat us."

That's the kind of attitude the Pistons generally take into games. Detroit was 4-1 against Chicago during the regular season, holding Jordan to just 26 points per game.

"I'm surprised," Detroit's Joe Dumars said. "I fully expected us to come out with intensity and we didn't. They're obviously locked in on the Detroit Pistons. They kind of remind me of us a few years ago.

"You could see them gaining confidence every trip down the floor. They're doing a hell of a job right now."

The Bulls, who allowed opponents an average of 106.2 points per game during the regular season, held the Pistons to 96.7 points in the first three games.

Then, in the first quarter Monday, the Bulls defense simply smothered the Pistons. Detroit made only 4 of 16 shots during the period while turning the ball over seven times for nine easy Chicago points.

A basket by Scottie Pippen with 7:38 still to play in the first quarter put Chicago ahead 10-8 and the Bulls led the rest of the game, pushing the lead to as many as 19 points early in the third quarter.

The Pistons, who blew a 14-point third-quarter lead in Game 3, tried to turn the tables in Game 4. They got the deficit down to 71-68 at the start of the fourth quarter, but then Jordan took over.

With Jordan scoring 19 points in the final period, the Bulls built their lead back to 14 points and Detroit was forced to spend the last minute of play fouling Chicago players, hoping for a miss and a miracle.

Neither were forthcoming.

"They took us out of everything in the first half. We came back, but they were not to be denied today," Daly said. "We weren't good enough."

Daly was clearly angry with his players during the game. Seldom-used William Bedford even played six minutes as the coach tried to shake things up.

Afterward, Daly said he felt the Pistons had it too easy during the season.

"You have to understand, our club probably has not been pushed, with our backs to the wall, all season," Daly said. "Now we'll see how we respond. You have to understand, we have what every team in the NBA wants. We won the championship last year."

All five Chicago starters were in double figures in Game 4, including Bill Cartwright, who had scored only 17 points in the first three games combined.

Isiah Thomas had 26 points for Detroit, Dumars 24 and Dennis Rodman 20. But the suddenly defensive Bulls held Bill Laimbeer scoreless in Game 3 and allowed him only four points — two on free throws — in Game 4.

"Laimbeer is having problems offensively, but defensively he is still doing a great job," Daly said. "We just haven't been able to get our offense going."

The Chicago coach called it the greatest game the Bulls had played all season.

"But Wednesday, it will be tougher," Jackson said. "We have to make some adjustments for Wednesday."

Over the past two years, the Pistons are 24-5 in postseason play, with four of those losses coming against Chicago.

Portland was the last team to come back from an 0-2 deficit, beating the Philadelphia 76ers in six games during the 1977 NBA Finals.

Top seed eliminated in opening round

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Stefan Edberg, plagued by unforced errors, was eliminated in the first round of the French Open today, losing in straight sets to the patience and passing shots of a skinny Spanish teen-ager named Sergi Bruguera.

Edberg, seeded No. 1 in a Grand Slam tournament for the first time, dropped seven consecutive games to go from a 4-2 lead in the first set to a 3-0 deficit in the second. After that, Bruguera just hung in and let the Swede's mistakes do most of the damage as he posted a 6-4, 6-2, 6-1 upset on center court.

It was the first time the top seed — men's or women's — had lost in the tournament's first round since Manuel Santana defaulted with an injury in his first match in 1965. The last time a men's top seed failed to make it past the first round in any Grand Slam tournament was 1971, when John Newcombe lost to Jan Kodes in his opener at the U.S. Open.

As the clay-court tournament began its second day, 14-year-old sensation Jennifer Capriati made her Grand Slam debut an easy one.

The Florida teen-ager broke Sandrine Testud's serve in the very first game and, watched by a crowd that included seven-time French Open champion Chris Evert, went on to a 6-1, 6-1 victory.

Last year, Capriati won the French Open juniors title. This year she's aiming at the women's championship.

"I sense a difference," Capriati said. "Last year I'd be finished with my play and I'd watch the (women's) final on TV. Now, this year, here's my chance. I could be in it."

Edberg definitely won't be in the men's final of a tournament he had entered as the No. 1 seed, and with a shot at taking over the world's top ranking from absent Ivan Lendl.

Bruguera, a 19-year-old from Barcelona, doesn't have great strength within his 6-foot-1, 160-pound frame. He waits for openings and strikes when they appear, and they were popping up everywhere against Edberg.

Edberg plays better on fast surfaces, such as the grass at Wimbledon where he was champion in 1988. He likes to come to the net and attack, and those tactics can be disastrous on clay.

Edberg tried to volley, especially against Bruguera's fairly weak serve. But the Spaniard usually answered with a backhand passing shot or by keeping the ball in play until Edberg made a mistake.

A stretch in the second set was a microcosm of the match.

Down one set and 1-0, Edberg could not hold serve. He netted an easy volley, sent his first serve near the baseline, followed with a backhand yards long and netted another volley to hand Bruguera a 2-0 lead. He raised that to 3-0 on three Edberg errors and a service winner and held for 4-1 on three more errors and a backhand passing shot.

In the sixth game, Edberg steadied and Bruguera looked vulnerable, with the Swede pouncing on short shots. But Bruguera was back in charge in the seventh game and broke for the set, the last two points coming on a chipped forehand service return and a desperation lob by Edberg that went long.

From there, it was over quickly. Edberg ended it with a backhand wide, and Bruguera — a semifinalist at the Italian Open last year before reaching the fourth round here — had the biggest upset of his career.

Edberg was the second men's seed knocked out of the tournament Tuesday. The first was No. 16 Carl Uwe Steeb of West Germany, who defaulted because of an injury.

In another early match, women's seventh seed Mary Joe Fernandez of the United States advanced with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Kate McDonald of Australia.

On Monday's opening day, an old favorite of French tennis fans, Andre Agassi, turned from a party dude into a creature from the latest "Nightmare on Elm Street."

Boos filled Court 2 at the French Open Monday as Agassi crossed the line between frustration and surliness. He won, but he won ugly.

The 4-6, 7-6, 6-0, 6-1 elimination of little-known Canadian Martin Wostenholme by the No. 3 seed was almost incidental. Featured were yelling at officials, smashing two rackets and hitting his opponent so hard in the back with one shot that Wostenholme turned and walked toward the net to fight.

Agassi was the top men's seed in action on opening day, although he had to share center stage with two other stars — defending men's champion Michael Chang and top-ranked woman Steffi Graf.

Chang, seeded 11th, struggled in the middle of his match before advancing with a 6-2, 7-6, 6-1 victory over Cassio Motta of Brazil.

It was only the third victory for Chang this year and his first on clay. But he said it was great to be back at the scene of his greatest triumph — where he became the youngest men's Grand Slam tournament winner and the first American man to win the French Open in 34 years.

Graf, plagued in recent weeks by family matters and her first loss since the women's final here a year ago, beat Pascale Paradis of France 6-0, 6-2. Her forehand had lost none of its sting as she took just 39 minutes to complete the victory.

Four seeds were eliminated on the first day, including three Americans and a pre-tournament favorite in the men's field.

Emilio Sanchez, the men's sixth seed and a clay-court star, was eliminated by Niclas Kulti of Sweden 4-6, 6-4, 6-7, 6-2, 6-1. Kulti was last year's world junior champion.

Jay Berger, the men's ninth seed, was eliminated by clay-court specialist Alberto Mancini 6-4, 6-2, 6-2. That draw probably was the toughest any seed faced and Berger, who has played constantly since February, just ran out of strength.

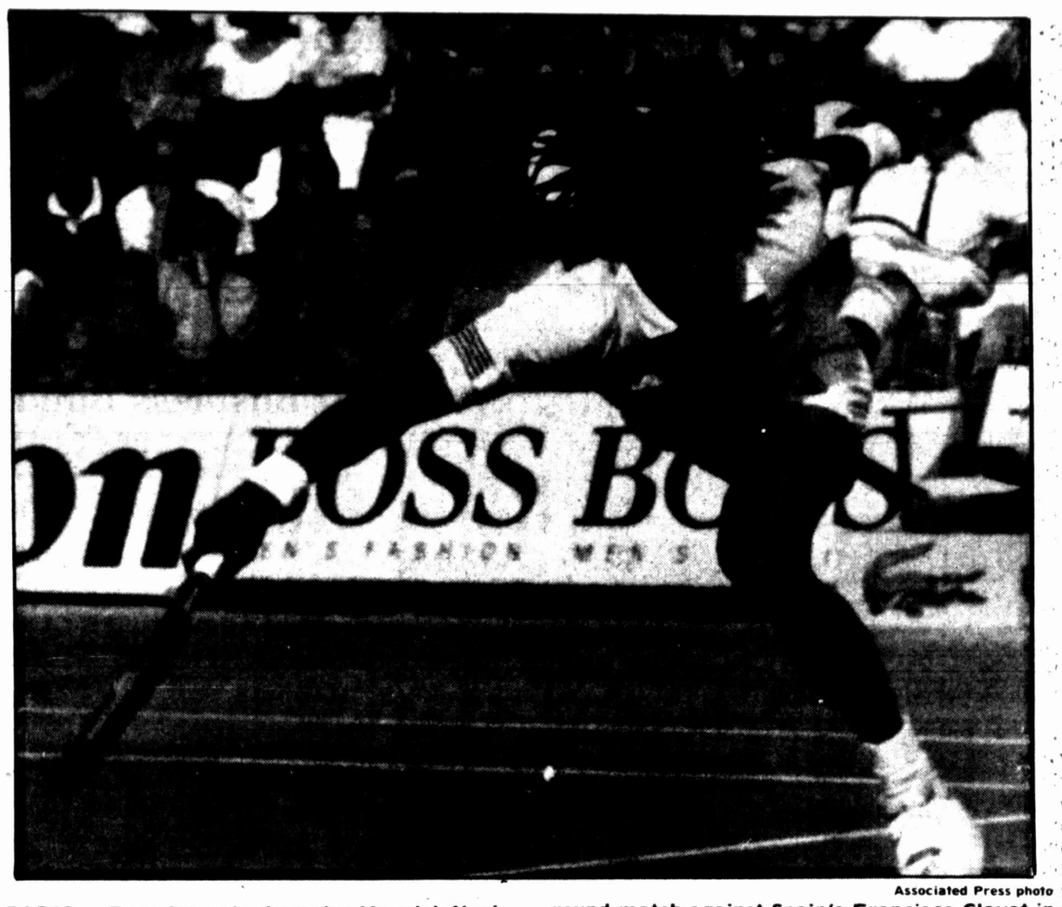

Zina Garrison, seeded fifth in the women's field, blew a match point at 5-4, 40-30 in the third set and lost to Wiltrud Probst of West Germany 6-1, 1-6, 7-5.

Ros Fairbank-Nideffer, a South African now living in San Diego, and the women's 13th seed, lost to Rene Simpson of Canada 6-1, 6-2.

Ten other seeds advanced, including women's No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini, who beat Andrea Vieira of Brazil 6-0, 7-6.

Probably the day's most emotional victory went to former champion Yannick Noah. The Frenchman needed seven match points before beating Francisco Clavet of Spain 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5 on center court, his first match victory since February.

Two years ago, when he was the hot young star in the men's field, Agassi reached the semifinals at Roland Garros and delighted the crowd. He would borrow umbrellas from fans when it started to rain, pretend he was paying off line judges who made favorable calls and whoop like a cowboy during a night on the town.

No World Series for Longhorns

By The Associated Press

After 14 innings and 191 pitches, Miami sophomore Jeff Alkire was tired, but his teammates were alive and well.

Alkire, who pitched five innings in Miami's 6-2 loss to The Citadel on Monday afternoon, came back in the evening with a seven-hitter for his first career complete game. That led the top-seeded Hurricanes to a 6-1 victory over North Carolina State and a berth in today's NCAA Atlantic Regional championship game.

"It was one of those Superman things," Miami coach Ron Fraser said. "I haven't seen anything like that done.We never in our wildest dreams thought he'd go nine innings; we thought, at tops, four."

Alkire (7-1), allowed seven hits and three walks but was helped by three double plays. "My arm doesn't hurt. It's just tired."

Charles Johnson's three-run homer broke a scoreless tie in the fifth inning as the host Hurricanes (52-12) stayed alive in the rain-delayed regional.

Miami added two runs in the eighth and one in the ninth. North Carolina State (48-20) scored its only run on eighth-inning doubles by Paul Borawski and Chris Long.

To advance to the College World Series for the 11th time in 13 years, Miami will have to sweep two games from The Citadel (44-12), which remained undefeated in the tournament.

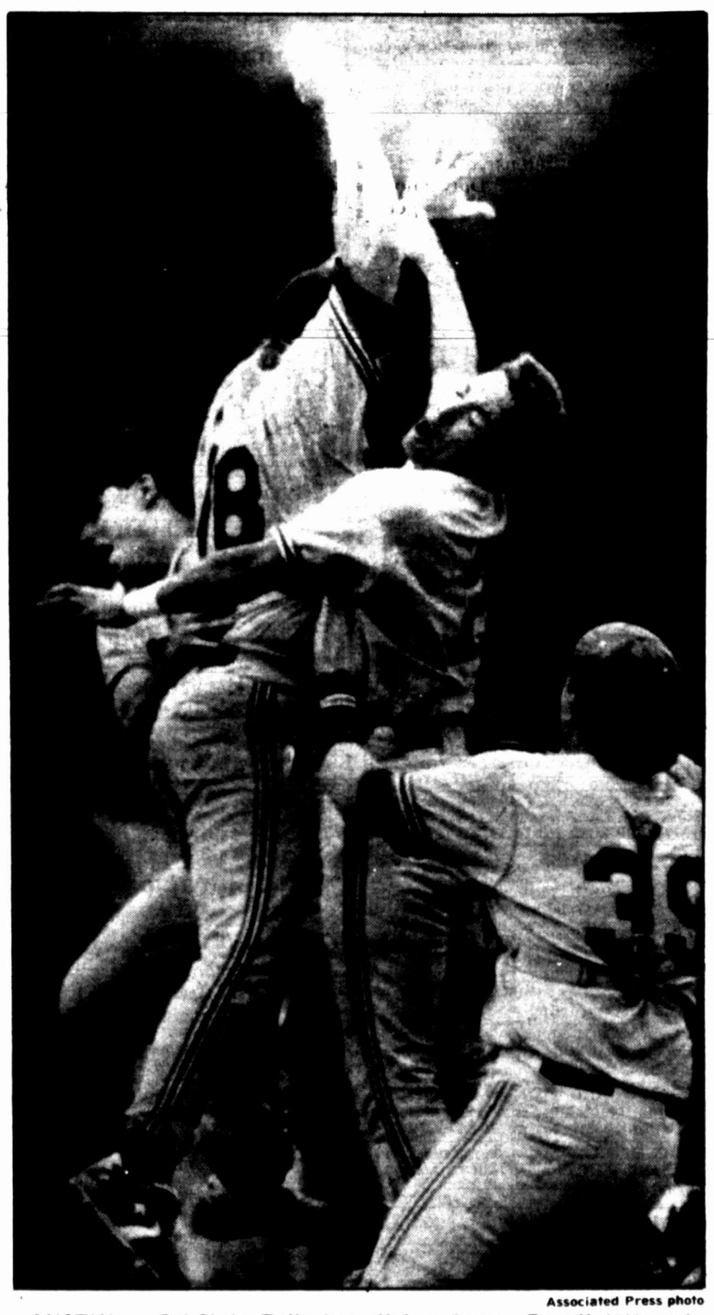

Richard Shirer pitched a seven-hitter and Anthony Jenkins had three hits for the Bulldogs, who've never been as far as the regional finals.

"Playing Miami, I was pretty nervous," Shirer said. "I was fortunate; they were hitting the ball at people and made outs. I got more confidence as we went along."

The Citadel bunched four singles and a walk to break a scoreless tie with four runs in the third. Chris Coker's two-out, two-run single capped the rally.

In the day's first game, Craig Rapp pitched seven strong innings and Scott Snead drove in three runs as N.C. State (48-20) eliminated East Carolina 8-1. The Pirates finished 47-9.

Six regional champions were crowned Monday and joined Georgia, the Northeast champion, in the College World Series. The Miami-Citadel winner will complete the eight-team field for the NCAA championship tournament, which begins Friday in Omaha, Neb.

AUSTIN — Cal-State Fullerton pitcher James Popoff (18) and David Ayala (2) celebrate after beating the University of Texas 3-0 in the championship game of the NCAA Central Regional Tournament.

West I

Stanford 6, San Diego State 2

Mike Mussina took advantage of an extra day of rest caused by rain to pitch Stanford past San Diego State.

Mussina pitched a three-hitter as the top-ranked Cardinal (56-10), playing at home, earned a shot at its third College World Series championship in the past four years. San Diego State finished 49-22.

Mussina pitched a four-hitter on Friday against Middle Tennessee State and was glad for Sunday's rainout.

"If I'd had to pitch yesterday, I could have gone five (innings), maybe," he said. "That one more day got me nine."

Mussina (14-3) struck out four and walked one while tying the school record for victories in one season. He was the tournament MVP.

West II

Oklahoma State 10, Arizona State 5

Playing at home didn't help the five-time national champion Sun Devils, who spotted OSU a seven-run lead and couldn't catch up.

Michael Daniel had a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly for the Cowboys (53-16), who swept through the regional without a loss to earn their 22nd CWS appearance. Second-ranked Arizona State, which had won nine of 10 previous regionals it hosted, ended up 52-16.

"If Oklahoma State goes to Omaha and executes the way they did here, I think they'll have as good a chance as anyone in the nation," Sun Devils coach Jim Brock said.

Central

Cal State-Fullerton 3, Texas 0

The home-field edge also didn't help Texas, last year's national runner-up, as sophomore James Popoff gave up four hits and got 19 groundball outs to lead the Titans to their third College World Series appearance.

Fullerton State (36-21) made only one error in sweeping four games, including a pair of wins over the top-seeded Longhorns (51-17). The Titans, 17-4 after an 18-17 start, allowed only eight runs in the four games.

"It's hard to beat a team that doesn't make mistakes," Texas coach Cliff Gustafson said.

Midwest

Georgia Southern 5, UCLA 4

Georgia Southern 6, South Alabama 5

Rob Fitzpatrick's fifth-inning grand slam helped lead Georgia Southern into the CWS for the first time since 1973.

The Eagles (50-17) overcame South Alabama's 3-1 lead on Fitzpatrick's grand slam, his 21st homer of the season. Mike Miller doubled and scored on an infield hit in the sixth and center fielder Chris Abner threw out the tying run at the plate in the bottom of the sixth to preserve the win for Joey Hamilton, who also won the opener in relief.

In the first game, Steve Siebert doubled in Mike Yuro in the top of the ninth inning to break a 4-4 tie against UCLA (41-26).

South I

Louisiana State 7, Southern California 6

LSU won the rubber game against Southern California on Rich Cordani's two-run homer in the seventh to earn its 11th CWS berth in 13 years.

Southern Cal (40-22), which beat the host Tigers 5-4 on Saturday and lost 5-4 on Sunday, got a three-run homer from Bret Boone.

Player's hitting streak falls one game short

SPRING (AP) — Now that his hitting streak has ended one game shy of a national record, Orangefield's Jeff Granger says he can concentrate on the state schoolboy baseball playoffs.

Granger struck out 13 batters and Bobcats nipped Cameron Yoe, 2-1, Monday night in the Class 3A regional round. The Bobcats are now 22-5 and will meet the winner of the Diboll-Waco Connally game later this week for a state tournament berth.

Granger, a 6-foot-3, 195-pound senior, struck out his first time at the plate and reached base on a fielder's choice the next two trips. Thus, the streak was over at 42 games, one shy of the national mark of 43 set by Jim Imhoff of Lansing, Iowa in 1980. Granger holds the all-time state record.

"Now that the pressure of the streak is over," said Granger, "I can go out in my next game and play my kind of game. The win comes first.

"I still can look back and see I have the state record. We're going to the quarterfinals."

Orangefield scored first, pushing across a run in the bottom of the second inning for a 1-0 lead.

With one out, and Joe McReynolds on base after being hit by a pitch, designated hitter Steve Martin doubled down the left-field line, scoring McReynolds from first base.

The Bobcats added to their lead to make it 2-0 in the third inning. With runners on first and second base, Granger reached on a fielder's choice, and a fielding error at second base allowed Benny Springs to score.

Yoe closed the gap to 2-1 in the fourth inning when Brian Mees singled, took second base on a passed ball and, two errors later, scored.

Cameron Yoe mounted a serious threat in the seventh inning by loading the bases. With two outs, Yoe second baseman Jason Coldiron grounded to Granger and the game was over.

Granger's pitching record is 15-0. He raised his season strikeout total of 192, pitching with just two days rest.

"I was very tired going into this game," Granger said. "My legs were kind of weak, but I settled down after we got that first run and I was really pumped when we scored that second run."

Dallas Baptist ousted

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — St. Francis relief pitcher Don Peters allowed just one hit over the final three innings as the Illinois school took advantage of Lewis-Clark State errors to beat the defending champion Warriors, 9-8, in NAIA World Series action.

In other World Series games Monday, Southeast Oklahoma shut out Auburn-Montgomery 8-0, Grand Canyon eliminated top-ranked Dallas Baptist 4-1, and St. Rose, N.Y., beat Wisconsin-Stout 6-4.

St. Francis advanced to play Southeastern Oklahoma at 3:30 p.m. PDT today in the winner's bracket. Grand Canyon was playing Auburn-Montgomery at noon and Lewis-Clark was meeting St. Rose at 7 p.m., in loser-out games.

John Przybala and Mike Frauenhoffer each singled in two runs during a six-run St. Francis sixth inning Monday night.

Lewis-Clark State pulled within 7-6 in the seventh inning and 9-8 in the eighth, but Peters held them off.

Lewis-Clark State outhit St. Francis 11-8, but St. Francis got five unearned runs on three Warrior errors.

Frauenhoffer led the Saints with two hits and two RBI. Lewis-Clark was led by Mark Rasmussen's three hits, while Greg Umfleet and Todd Anderson each had two.

Grand Canyon pitcher Rick Miller scattered six hits in eight innings as the Antelopes eliminated Dallas Baptist.

Miller walked three batters, struck out four and held Dallas Baptist to one run before walking the leadoff batter in the ninth inning.

He was replaced by Craig Bauer, who surrendered a single before Matt Burcar bounced into a double play, the fourth of the game by Grand Canyon fielders, and Ken Power struck out.

Doug Kimball went 2-for-2 for the Antelopes, including a solo homer.

Dirk Blair allowed just two hits over six innings as Southeast Oklahoma shut out Auburn-Montgomery to remain unbeaten in the series.

Blair walked two and struck out three. Relief pitcher Darren Riddle allowed just one hit until there were two outs in the ninth. Tim Hampton came on to record the final out.

Billy Vestal, Mike Alexander, Donnie Folds and Tim Hightower each had two hits to pace the Savages' 11-hit attack.

Designated hitter Paul Exner hit two home runs, including a first-inning grand slam, to lead St. Rose past Wisconsin-Stout.

Wisconsin-Stout jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning before relief pitcher Darren Renner got a fly out and a strikeout to end the scoring.

Exner's grand slam made it 4-3 St. Rose, and he added a solo homer in the seventh inning. Doug Kimbler accounted for St. Rose's other run with an RBI double in the fifth.

Jay Thompson and Mike Barnard had two hits each for Wisconsin-Stout, including an RBI double by Thompson in the third.

Names in the news

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — A street that runs beside Mickey Spillane's old elementary school now bears the author's name.

One of Hammer's grade school teachers showed up for the dedication ceremony Thursday, along with dozens of young students from nearby Woodrow Roosevelt School 19.

"At least it's paved," the 72-year-old Spillane said of Mickey Spillane Way.

Spillane, who has written more than 40 detective novels featuring the hard-boiled private eye Mike Hammer, said he attended grades three through six at Woodrow Wilson.

The writer's family moved to Elizabeth in 1918, when he was a month old. He lived here until his senior year of high school, he said.

MICKEY SPILLANE

Spillane has been living in Murrell's Inlet, S.C., where he's finishing a novel and rebuilding his home. The novel was lost and the house destroyed last fall in Hurricane Hugo.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Flamboyant attorney William Kunstler split his time this week between being a lawyer and portraying one in Oliver Stone's new movie, "The Doors."

The wild-haired Kunstler, who is defending Marlon Brando's son on murder charges, rubbed acting elbows with Val Kilmer, who is cast as late Doors leader Jim Morrison, and rocker Billy Idol.

Off the set, Kunstler has been busy on behalf of 32-year-old Christian Brando, who is accused of killing Dag Drollet, his sister's Tahitian boyfriend, at his father's hilltop estate last week.

SHS grads to party all night

STANTON — Stanton High School's Class of 1990, with the help of the Texas Department of Public Safety, will have an all-night party after graduation, June 1.

Project Graduation is an alcohol-free and drug-free party that will last all night. The bash will be complete with food, games and music.

"Two years ago, the senior class had a casino night with auction money used to purchase prizes with the winnings. Hopefully we can have that kind of set-up," said senior Brent Swink.

Donations are needed from local individuals and businesses to help make this party a success. Anyone interested in donating gifts or money can contact the Stanton High School office at 756-3326.

Teens arrested in abduction of baby

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Two Dallas teenagers were being held by juvenile authorities in Tarrant County today following their arrest in connection with the abduction of a 3-month-old girl from a flea market booth, police said.

Grand Prairie Police Lt. James M. Gatlin said the infant, Crystal Lee Grau of Arlington, was taken from a booth at Trader's Village Monday when her mother, Tammy Brown, left the booth for a few minutes.

The infant was recovered less than an hour later.

At least 30 die on holiday

(AP) Accidents on Texas streets and highways claimed at least 30 lives during the long Memorial Day weekend, according to reports from law enforcement officials.

The Associated Press began its count of holiday traffic fatalities at 6 p.m. Friday. The count extended through midnight Monday. Nationwide, at least 404 people had died as of midnight Monday.

Some of the Texas deaths included:

John Michael Thomas, 28, of Pharr, died at 2:30 a.m. Monday in a one-vehicle accident on a rural road in Cameron County in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Eusebio Rodriguez, 31, of Vacaville, Calif., died at 2:15 a.m. Monday while attempting to cross a road in front of an oncoming vehicle. The accident occurred on Farm Road 1097 near Stafford in Fort Bend County, the Texas Department of Public Safety reported. Rodriguez was thrown 150 feet by the impact. He was dead at the scene.

A Center Point woman died at 12:30 a.m. Monday while she was trying to cross Junction Highway in Kerrville. Debra Sue Watson, 34, was pronounced dead at the scene.

House delays vote on veto override

By PEGGY FIKAC

—The Republican governor and Democrat-controlled Legislature — now in its third special session on school finance — are trying to address a Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor schools.

AUSTIN — The Texas House today temporarily delayed an attempt to override Gov. Bill Clements' veto of a school finance reform bill after House Speaker Gib Lewis said several lawmakers hadn't yet arrived in the chamber.

But Lewis, D-Fort Worth, earlier said he didn't know if the override attempt would succeed.

"I think members at this point are getting a great deal of pressure from both sides," Lewis said Monday.

The Senate voted last week to override Clements' veto, and House leaders have been trying to muster the required two-thirds vote to do the same.

"We do not at this point have a solidified 100" votes in the 150-member House, Lewis said.

The Republican governor and Democrat-controlled Legislature — now in its third special session on school finance — are trying to address a Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor schools.

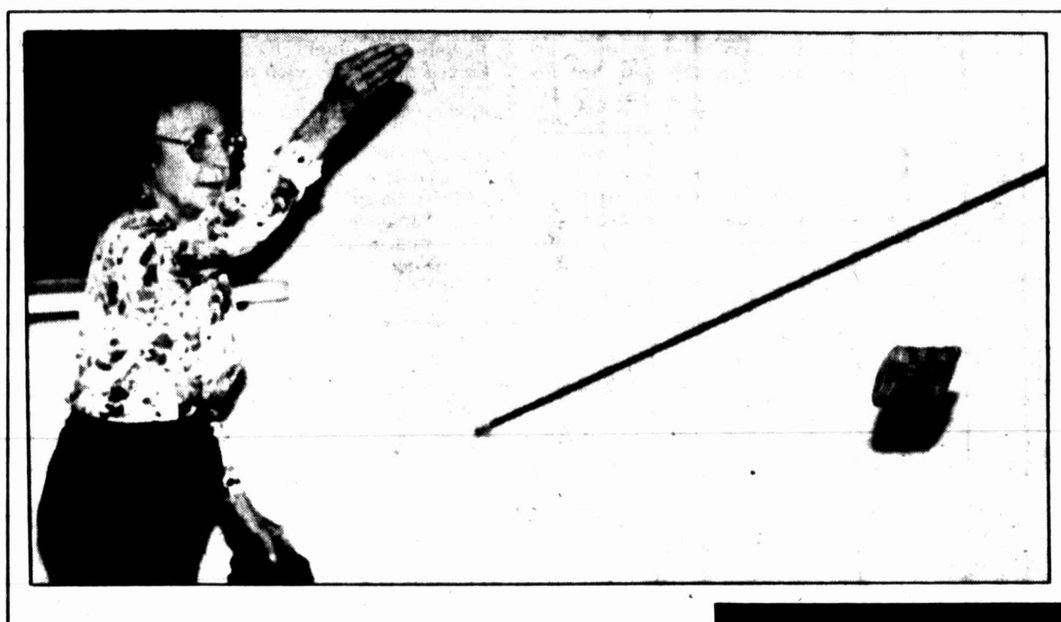

If they don't enact a plan by Friday, court-appointed special master William Kilgarlin will propose one. Kilgarlin has said his plan could divert state money from wealthier to poorer school districts, because he lacks the authority to raise taxes.

Such a plan "would be so disastrous on some school districts that many would be having a very difficult time opening in the next school year," Lewis said.

The $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

Clements said he thinks lawmakers actually have until

High rent hurting popular cafeteria

By GREG HASSELL
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — The three customers sitting down to Monday supper at Allbritton's Cafeteria have been regulars since the place opened in 1962.

The cook at the cafeteria in Bellaire has been an Allbritton's employee since 1948. And owner Jay Allbritton got his start in the family business 10 years before that.

That chain of loyalties is about to be broken. It will be the victim of a recovering economy and its twin sister, rising rents. The Allbritton's at 3835 Bellaire Blvd. has lost its lease.

"Property values have increased to the point where we have to get out," said Jay Allbritton, the 71-year-old owner of the restaurant. "And, at my age, I don't think I am ready to move and start over."

The cafeteria's last day of business will be June 17 — Father's Day.

The closing will whittle down to one the number of Allbritton's in Houston. The Allbritton's at 905 Waugh Drive, which has been in business since 1938, will remain open.

"I am planning to stay here until I die," said Sonny Allbritton, Jay's cousin and the owner of the Waugh Drive cafeteria.

Eleven injured as violence mars park concert

HOUSTON (AP) — At least 11 people were sent to hospitals when a melee that included gunshots erupted among nearly 25,000 overheated Memorial Day revelers at an jampacked outdoor rap concert.

Mothers carried screaming babies under their arms as they ran from the scene of bottle throwings, shootings, a stabbing and fist fights.

The concert at Hermann Park's Miller Outdoor Theater was canceled once the melee began about 4 p.m. Police closed the park, sending hundreds running for parking lots and creating a traffic jam that lasted more than an hour.

Scores of officers on foot and horseback and in helicopters worked to evacuate the area.

Sgt. J.J. Morris, the first high-ranking officer on the scene, asked that all available officers be sent to the park, and more than 200 police converged on the park within minutes and sealed off the theater.

Police said they made more than 20 arrests, and hospitals treated 11 people for injuries, apparently none serious.

Two men were arrested for gun-possession violations and two for disorderly conduct, while others were questioned about how the disturbance began.

Houston City Parks Director Don Olson told the Houston Chronicle the concert was courting disaster by attracting such a large crowd.

"The attendance was well over capacity (17,000)," Olson said. "We have been trying to limit the number attending events here."

City officials will investigate the disturbance and decide what steps to take to avoid a similar one, Olson said.

Houston Fire Chief Robert Clayton said all the injuries, mostly cuts and bruises, came from "blunt objects like bottles and bats" and that none appeared serious.

HOUSTON — People run from a disturbance in Herman Park Monday. A bottle throwing incident turned into a near riot when shots were fired and Houston police had to break up the disturbance. The smoke in the background is from a nearby housefire.

A Houston rap group, Special Treat, was on stage when the bottle-throwing began from the back of the hillside auditorium. Special Treat was the first of five bands scheduled to perform at the free Mega Jam concert sponsored by KHYS-FM radio station.

"You just can't put on a concert any more without any incidents," said Joe Libios, promotion director for KHYS, which began broadcasting contemporary dance music in Houston in September 1988.

"One bad apple or two bad apples ruined it for the rest of us," Libios told The Houston Post. "Rap and R&B are going to be looked upon negatively."

He said the station had hired about 30 officers from the Houston Police Department and the Harris County Sheriff's Department, which it believed to be adequate staffing.

But the turnout was more than promoters expected and disc jockeys began asking people to stay home when crowd estimates reached 25,000 to 30,000, Libios said.

In addition to Special Treat, the Mega Jam was to feature D.O.C. of New York, Queen Latifah of New Jersey, Boogie Down Productions of New York and 2 Live Crew of Miami. The performances were scheduled to begin at 1 p.m., but were delayed as promoters tried to arrange for more security. Special Treat had begun its act when the violence erupted.

The concert, which also was to include a Mazda Miata giveaway, was designed as a promotion tool for the fledgling station ranked No. 16 in Winter 1990 Arbitron ratings for the Houston market. Its main competition, KMJQ-FM, is ranked No. 3.

Olson said an unidentified person threw a bottle into the crowd as the rap music fans surged toward the stage.

Then, Olson said, someone in the crowd fired a gun, apparently angered at the people closing in.

Witnesses said several people sprayed each other with beer in the hot afternoon sun. Temperatures here reached 93 degrees for the second day running.

"Some people apparently started throwing beer bottles and then I heard, pop, pop, pop — someone was shooting — and then everybody started running," said Ron Atkins, program director for KMJQ.

"I heard about four gunshots and just started running," said George Carver, another witness.

Thomas Martin, 13, said he was in the audience when people on the hill overlooking the stage began throwing bottles at the audience inside the theater, eventually hitting a youth with a full bottle.

"He walked from the front of the theater up the aisle with a T-shirt wrapped around his head and blood running down his arm," Martin said.

From that point, what order there had been disintegrated. The bottle throwing increased, and then someone fired the first volley of shots, witnesses said.

"I never saw so much happen so fast," said Carolyn Smith, 32. "I was crying, I was so scared."

Noe Bocanegra, a vendor at the Memorial Day veterans' festivities a few hundred feet from the theater, said at least three guns were fired during the incident.

"One was rapid fire, and two were slower," he said.

After the shots were fired, Bocanegra said, he saw someone throw a gun into a portable toilet near the theater.

A woman helping him take down his booth said as many as 20 shots were fired during a 10- to 15-minute period.

Al Baker, a Houston Police spokesman, said police will investigate whether the concert promoters did everything they could to secure the area.

One man was treated for a stab wound in the leg, said Roger Widmeyer, spokesman at Ben Taub Hospital. He said eight people were treated for injuries at the hospital, which went on disaster alert.

At Hermann Hospital, a 16-year-old boy received stitches after being hit in the head by a baseball bat, said Donna Miller, a triage nurse in the emergency room. She said two other people were treated there.

dent. He owns the building.

The Allbritton's chain traces its history to 1907, when Luther Allbritton moved from Mississippi to Houston and started selling hot dogs, hamburgers and chili out of a wagon. By 1915, Allbritton opened a lunch counter downtown. By 1917, he traded up for a kitchenette at Prairie and Fannin. Later came cafes and, finally, cafeterias.

Two of Luther's sons, including Sonny, and two of Luther's nephews, including Jay, followed him into the business. At its height in the 1940s, Allbritton's had seven restaurants. Four of them were cafeterias.

Allbritton's slide from power has not been from lack of work, the family said. Jay Allbritton works seven days a week and said he hasn't had a vacation in 12 years.

"I don't know what a vacation is," he said. "It's a tough business, but we make a living out of it."

Allbritton said his landlord, Jerry J. Moore Investments, told him two months ago that the cafeteria would no longer be able to afford the rent at 3835 Bellaire.

"He wanted me to move into another one of his centers, but that was cost-prohibitive," Allbritton said.

Spokesmen at Moore Investments said the cafeteria simply is not profitable enough to keep up with rents in the Bellaire area.

"You see a resurgent interest in that area," said Mike Tones, director of maintenance at Moore. "You are talking about a high-profile corridor."

The bad news came hard for people like Sidney Sims Jr., a cook at Allbritton's who started working for the family when he was 17 years old.

"It hurts," he said.

Parents help others cut red tape

HOUSTON (AP) — After years of frustration in trying to get financial help for their multi-handicapped son, Don and Vicki Beasley now want to help others in similar situations make it through the maze of red tape.

"When Derek was born, we had no idea what was going on," said Beasley, 37.

"We were going crazy trying to find some services. We got tired of sitting back and taking no for an answer from everybody," Mrs. Beasley, 33, told The Houston Post. "The last straw was when they told us, 'We ran out of money and you were the next one to be served.'"

Derek, 8, suffers from multiple physical handicaps and is legally blind and deaf. His parents spent years working with the state and insurance companies to get a wheelchair, a medical bed and a hot tub for in-home therapy for their son.

"The jacuzzi straightened out his spine. It was therapeutic. But the insurance company at first had said no," said Beasley, a safety consultant with CNA Insurance Co. After getting letters from physicians and orthopedic surgeons and after an in-home evaluation by a nurse, the Beasleys finally were able to win approval for the whirlpool.

"It will delay surgeries (needed) at a later time. It's an economic saving for them — a one-time cost," Beasley said.

"Insurance companies and state agencies will cooperate as long as they don't feel you will abuse and tear them up," he said. "You have got to know what to ask and who to ask it to."

The Beasleys want to share the knowledge they acquired through frustrating ordeals to help other families get financial aid and to help set up a network of parents to share knowledge of the system.

Beasley recalled that when they began their ordeal, "it was very hard to get information, and you couldn't call one person and try to find out everything. You still can't."

But the family takes its trouble in stride. Mrs. Beasley, who worked for Continental Airlines until her cancer diagnosis, now is in remission and is ready to help others.

While waiting for their lawyer to set up a non-profit corporation for the information center, the Beasleys already have helped a few families burrow through the bureaucratic systems at the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, the Texas Department of Human Services and various insurance companies.

Mexico issues ban on turtle hunting, sale

MEXICO CITY (AP) — No more turtle soup in Mexico as of Monday.

No more turtle steaks, turtle eggs that locals favor as aphrodisiacs or turtle shells for combs, computer boards and vanity cases.

Turtle skin exports to Japan for shoes, belts and handbags are over.

Under pressure from environmental groups, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari signed an executive order declaring an end to Mexico's turtle industry, probably the world's largest.

Until Monday, the country was the world's leading exporter of turtle products, but environmentalists say sea turtles are being hunted to extinction here. Mexico is home to 10 of the world's 11 species of sea turtles, and nine of them lay eggs and nest on its beaches.

Salinas signed the ban at a ceremony Monday in the capital's historic Chapultepec Castle in the presence of environmentalists from the world over, governors whose states are involved with turtles, and fishing industry leaders.

"In signing this decree, we are taking a definite step to help this species continue its biological developments, ... threatened with extinction because its natural habitat has been considerably reduced," Salinas said.

The government will close all turtle slaughterhouses and provide money to help turtle fishermen and their families diversify.

Todd Steiner of Earth Island Institute said Salinas had received more than 70,000 letters in six months protesting lack of protection for turtles.

Steiner said environmentalists talked of declaring a tourism boycott on Mexico and about 10,000 Americans signed a petition saying they would not visit Mexico unless protective laws were passed.

Environmentalists on Monday praised the ban but said the test will come in enforcing it. They said Mexico also must join the 107-nation Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Flora and Fauna, known as CITES.

Every country in the Western Hemisphere except Mexico has signed the accord, which bars trade in endangered species. Mexico is Japan's biggest supplier of turtle skins, and Japan is the world's biggest importer of turtle products.

Japan joined CITES, but excluded turtle products.

Steiner said his organization was happy with Monday's ban that was aimed at stopping "what was the largest killing of an endangered species occurring anywhere in the world."

"But we will be monitoring the situation closely to make sure these wonderful words are fully implemented," he said.

Michael Weber, vice president of the Center for Marine Conservation in Washington, said the ban could help the Olive Ridley turtles, which nest on the Pacific coast, recover from decades of exploitation.

Weber said environmentalists are also urging Mexico to require use of turtle excluder devices in shrimp nets.

"They say it's going to end the killing. We hope it's going to end the killing," said Andrew Davis, a spokesman for Greenpeace International.

But he said enforcement could be difficult on the isolated, remote beaches where turtles lay their eggs.

Energy not important summit topic

HOUSTON (AP) — Energy, an essential element to Houston's economic health, won't be much a topic among delegates from seven nations during July's Economic Summit.

The U.S. State Department has not announced an official agenda for the July 9-11 summit, but officials say it's likely the only energy-related topic will involve environmental concerns.

"Energy and environment are so interrelated, it's a little hard to pull one out from the other," said Penny Adams, Department of Energy spokeswoman. She said her office listed global warming, the need for more efficient energy use and security for energy supplies as DOE concerns for the summit.

"You're not going to have a summit in Houston and not have oil remarked on," said Daniel Yergin of the Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass. But he said it will not be a pressing issue for European delegates.

In the late '70s and early '80s, oil price controls and shipments were major topics at the annual summits. But analysts said it disappeared from the summit worry list in 1985.

"Until then, energy had been a major issue, and at one point, it was by far the most contentious," Yergin said.

Since then, supplies and prices for the most part stabilized internationally, although Texas was struck with a devastating oil bust that has taken nearly five years for recovery.

"Oil's been cheap, and there's a lot of it around," Yergin said.

Conservation and alternative fuels have reduced demand for oil in Europe, while oil prices have rebounded to $15 to $20 a barrel, said Philip Verleger of the Institute for International Economics in Washington.

The development of coal and natural gas reserves in much of Europe also has helped cut dependence on foreign oil. In addition, France now obtains two-thirds of its electricity from nuclear power.

Analysts say that while the Europeans might not be interested in talking supplies, they may push the United States on environmental issues.

"There may be some lecturing at the United States by the Europeans," said Marion Stewart of National Economic Research Associates in White Plains, N.Y.

Some European officials say the general view in Europe is that the United States has not done enough to encourage conservation of fossil fuels. One senior official said Europe would like to see Americans increase their energy taxes to discourage consumption.

June 21 deadline with a school finance reform bill, because that is the date Kilgarlin files his plan in state court.

The governor said he vetoed the Legislature's latest measure in part because he backs more [illegible] administered. He also opposes the half-cent sales tax increase lawmakers want to help pay for their bill.

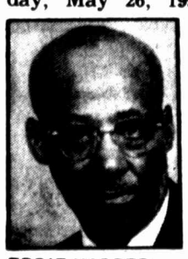

Legislative leaders have said that their bill, while not perfect, would improve education and give a boost to poor school districts without crippling wealthier ones.

The measure is designed to use $555 million in new state money. Without sufficient funding, money could be shifted from wealthier to poorer school districts.
