High court overturns Falwell award

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today overturned a $200,000 award won by evangelist Jerry Falwell against Hustler magazine and its publisher Larry Flynt, extending the legal protections for parody and satire, even when they are pornographic.

The court unanimously ruled that even pornographic spoofs about a public figure enjoy the free-speech protections of the Constitution's First Amendment if those spoofs could not reasonably have been interpreted as stating actual facts about the person.

The justices stripped Falwell of the award he had won for "emotional distress" caused by an advertising parody in Hustler.

"Outrageousness in the area of political and social discourse has an inherent subjectiveness about it which would allow a jury to impose liability on the basis of the jurors' tastes or views, or perhaps on the basis of their dislike of a particular expression," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

"An 'outrageous' standard thus runs afoul of our longstanding refusal to allow damages to be awarded because the speech in question may have an adverse emotional impact on the audience," he said.

Falwell's lawsuit arose out of a full-page "ad parody" that appeared in the November 1983 and March 1984 issues of Hustler, a sexually explicit magazine.

Featuring a photograph of Falwell, the ad purportedly quotes him discussing a sexual encounter with his mother and describing himself as a habitual drunkard.

At the bottom of the page in small print readers are told that the ad is a parody "not to be taken seriously."

Falwell charged Hustler and Flynt with libel, invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress. He asked for $45 million in damages.

A federal jury in Roanoke, Va., in late 1984 ruled that the ad did not libel Falwell, and the presiding judge threw out the invasion-of-privacy allegation.

But the jury ruled for Falwell on his emotional-distress allegation, and awarded him $200,000. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the award, but today's decision threw it out.

Falwell, a Baptist minister and founder of an organization known as the Moral Majority, said he had sued Flynt and his magazine to protect his late mother's reputation. "I can't imagine any red-blooded male in the world not being incensed," he told reporters when attending Supreme Court arguments in the case last December.

Flynt, who also attended the December argument session, had voiced concern about his fate before the high court but added, "My indictment is mainly for bad taste."

Proposed MISD building project may be expanded

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

School district trustees heard reports Tuesday that tentatively laid the groundwork for the implementation of a classroom construction project larger and more costly than previously stated.

Midland Independent School District officials heard reports at the regular board meeting of plans to build anywhere from 74 to 98 new elementary classrooms and perhaps a new primary school.

The additions are needed, Superintendent Joe Baressi said, to comply with a state mandate lowering student-teacher ratios and to accommodate the projected elementary population over the next five years.

Three alternatives were presented to the board of trustees by MISD Director of Computer and Special Services Larry Lusby.

According to Lusby, the three alternatives include:

- The construction of 81 classrooms at 10 elementary campuses including Jones, Long, Milam, Bowie, Crockett, Burnet, Henderson, Bonham, Lamar and Travis elementary schools;
- The construction of 74 classrooms at seven "priority" elementary schools including Jones, Burnet, Lamar, Henderson, Long and Bonham; and the construction of a primary school in the northwest quadrant of the city which would house grades kindergarten through third and relieve population pressures at Santa Rita, Parker and Rusk elementary schools;
- The construction of 98 classrooms at the 10 elementary campuses as well as the construction of the new primary school.

A conceptual prototype eight-classroom "pod" addition has been drafted by Fort Worth architect Terry Harden for the district.

Jones and Crockett elementary schools would have additions of nine classrooms; Long, Bowie, Bonham and Travis schools would have additions of either eight or 10 classrooms; and Milam, Burnet, Henderson and Lamar elementaries would have either six or eight classrooms added.

Those 10 elementary schools — should they undergo the constructions — may or may not get a new learning resource center added, though all would get a new "multipurpose activity center" or mini-gym added.

Harden said the construction would cost about $45 per square foot.

The primary school — should it be built — would have 15 classrooms, Lusby said.

Oil-field equipment sting nets 10 area men

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Ten Midland-Odessa men have been indicted on felony charges of oil field equipment theft as a result of a two-month investigation by Midland County Sheriff's officers, Texas Rangers, Department of Public Safety agents and Petroleum Industry Security Council representatives, the executive director of the PISC said this morning at a news conference.

Boyd Burdett said the indictments came as a result of an undercover sting operation. The indictments alleged the 10 men bought oil field equipment which was represented as stolen property.

However, the equipment that was represented as being stolen property had actually been donated by various companies for use in the sting operation, Burdett said.

Baskin supporters form 'truth squad'

Supporters of District Judge Pat Baskin have formed a "truth squad" to monitor claims made by Nick Taylor, a Midland attorney and Baskin's opponent in the Republican race for the 142nd Judicial District judgeship.

Calling themselves Citizens for Accuracy in Campaigning, the group in a statement released today professed "disappointment at the tactics of Nick Taylor's political campaign."

The group attributes what they call "false and misleading statements" in Taylor's campaign to carelessness, spokesman Ed Runyan said in a press conference today.

"Carelessness with the facts is not a desirable attribute in a person who wants to serve as district judge," said Runyan, a Midland independent oil operator who describes himself as a longtime conservative Republican.

"If the past is any indication, we'll probably see some more of these statements, and if we do, we will speak out again," said Runyan of the group comprised of eight Baskin supporters.

Runyan offered four Taylor campaign statements that he said are examples of the inaccuracies:

- That Baskin supported Sen. George McGovern in the 1972 presidential election;
- That Baskin is a "liberal";
- That three anti-crime organizations — Crime Stoppers, Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs and Mothers Against Drunk Driving — have endorsed Taylor; and
- That Baskin has accepted a campaign contribution from Midland attorney Reagan Legg, who some might call "liberal" for his support of Ralph Yarborough in Texas senatorial campaigns during the '50s and '60s.

Runyan said Baskin supported Richard Nixon in 1972, that Baskin's record throughout his years of public service is one of a "conservative," that the organizations have not endorsed Taylor, and that Baskin did not receive a contribution from Legg.

"Taylor and a group of his supporters are conducting a campaign designed to divert attention from the main issue of this election: that Judge Pat Baskin is vastly better qualified than Nick Taylor to be our judge," the group's prepared statement said.

TRC's Sharp announces new oil-well plugging rules

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp was in Midland today to announce new oil-well plugging rules that could save Texas up to 40,000 marginal wells.

In a press conference at the Midland Petroleum Club, Sharp said a new $100 recompletion permit which is expected to be adopted within two weeks by the commission, would allow operators to extend the life of marginal wells on a year to year basis without plugging.

The recompletion permit would be effectively the same as a drilling permit, allowing the Railroad Commission to inspect the well at anytime to make certain it was not polluting water-bearing formations.

Currently operators may shut-in an uneconomical well for up to a year, after which they must either obtain a bond, a letter of credit or plug the well.

"We don't think a bureaucratic time line should be allowed to kill a well, and remove it from being a potential producer or injection well in the future," said Sharp. "Tertiary (recovery) will play a major role in the future of Texas and many of these wells scheduled for plugging may play a role in that future."

Sharp said there were now 40,000 wells in non-compliance and slated for future plugging that might qualify for a recompletion permit. An estimated 20,000 oil wells in Texas have already been lost through plugging as a result of the downturn in oil prices in 1986.

"We are touring the state to make producers aware of this option that will soon be available. If an operator has a marginal well that is a candidate for plugging, we would urge him to contact the local TRC office to consider a recompletion permit," Sharp said.

Super collider site's selection to be delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Selection of a site for the $4.4 billion "super collider" atom smasher will be delayed by up to four months to prepare a draft environmental impact statement before, instead of after, the choice, the Energy Department said Tuesday.

Word of the delay, from July to November or December, came in budget questioning of Secretary John Herrington before the interior subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

He was asked whether he would pick the site before or after the committee acts on his request for $363 million in construction funds for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

"I don't see us making the decision" before the committee must act, Herrington said. "I would guess a preferred site would be selected in November or December."

The department has planned for more than a year to chose the final site in July and confirm it in January, subject to preparation of an environmental impact statement.

Department spokesman Jeff Sherwood said later that DOE now believes it is better to do more work on the environmental impact statement and complete a draft covering all possible sites before choosing the final site.

"That will be on the street and people will be able to comment on it, and we'll have the benefit of the comments in choosing the final site," Sherwood said.

Swaggart's visit to 'crummy' motel room photographed

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Jimmy Swaggart was followed to a "crummy" motel by men who let air out of his tires and photographed him as he tried to put a spare tire on backwards, visited a reputed prostitute and was confronted by a rival evangelist, a church leader said.

James Hamill of Memphis, Tenn., a member of the general council of the Assemblies of God, the nation's largest Pentecostal denomination, described the pictures in an interview with WBRZ-TV here Tuesday.

He also said he expects the council to strengthen the punishment Swaggart receives from executives of his 2 million-member denomination after admitting "moral failures."

The Louisiana district council has recommended a three-month suspension and counseling for the TV evangelist, whose ministry reaches more than 100 countries and reported $142 million in income last year.

"The constitution and bylaws require at least a year's cessation of active ministry," Hamill said.

The executive presbytery of the Assemblies of God will make the final decision in the Swaggart case. Rev. Everett Stenhouse, Assemblies of God general secretary, said the group was tentatively scheduled to meet Thursday.

Church spokeswoman Juleen Turnage said an extra telephone operator had to be hired at church headquarters in Springfield, Mo., to handle some of the hundreds of calls about the case. She said Swaggart had as many supporters as detractors among the callers.

Hamill described the photographs that led Swaggart to make a tearful confession of sin Sunday, and disclosed that the Rev. Marvin Gorman of New Orleans was directly involved in the picture-taking.

Dole rides high after twin victories

Associated Press

Republican presidential hopeful Bob Dole was riding high today after twin victories over George Bush in Midwestern preludes to next month's Super Tuesday showdowns, but Bush was brushing off his losses. Democrats Richard Gephardt and Michael Dukakis swapped victories and said they were eager to carry their battle to the South.

Meanwhile, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, his campaign teetering, called a news conference to discuss, in a spokesman's words, "the future of his campaign." Simon had said Tuesday night, "There is no way I'll get out of the race tomorrow, absolutely none."

Republican Pat Robertson, campaigning in Georgia, said the news staff at his Christian Broadcasting Network once knew the whereabouts of hostages in Beirut — proving, he said, they could have been rescued.

The U.S. reaction to terrorism, Robertson said, "has to be quick, and it has to be a surprise...We identified in our news department at CBN the location of those hostages in Lebanon very shortly after they were taken, and they were in a position where they could have been rescued. They were in Beirut, and they could have been freed."

Robertson, asked if he had informed the Reagan administration, said, "I broadcast it on national television; they monitor our programs virtually every day."

Bush brushed off his losses in South Dakota and Minnesota, saying today after arriving to campaign in Portland, Maine, "You can't win them all."

The vice president, who made virtually no effort in the two upper Midwestern states, said, "I think the result was somewhat anticipated; you can't go everywhere." He added, "We've done well out there. We've won in Michigan and in Nevada."

Tuesday night, Dukakis said after splitting the two upper Midwestern contests with Gephardt, "This is a marathon. It's going to be a long one."

The Massachusetts governor won in Minnesota on Tuesday, and dealt Simon a crushing defeat. Gephardt was the winner in South Dakota with Dukakis a respectable second.

Dole won both states going away — with Bush far, far behind. In Minnesota, the vice president finished fourth behind Robertson and Rep. Jack Kemp. In South Dakota, with Dole winning all 18 of the delegates at stake, Bush was narrowly edged for second place by Robertson.

The former television evangelist said today in Atlanta, "This helps me enormously as I go into the Super Tuesday states." He added, "I believe that coming out of Super Tuesday I will be the acknowledged front-runner of the Republican Party with delegates."

Wasting no time before heading for the next battleground, Dole was flying to South Carolina today for four quick campaign appearances.

"I hope it can help me in the South," Dole said of his latest victories. "I've got a big hill to climb in the South."

Bush was buried in the Tuesday night returns, running third in South Dakota and fourth in Minnesota. After his embarrassing defeat two weeks ago in Iowa, Bush chose to head South rather than take on Dole again in the Midwest.

South Africa bans anti-apartheid groups

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government today banned all political activities of the country's largest anti-apartheid organization, the United Democratic Front, and 16 other groups in one of its harshest crackdowns on the opposition.

It also ordered that the main black labor federation, the militant Congress of South African Trade Unions, limit its activities only to labor issues and stay out of politics.

"The government has declared war against all peaceful opposition," said Azhar Cachalia, treasurer of the United Democratic Front and one of its few leaders not in detention. The front represents more than 600 anti-apartheid organizations with more than 2 million members.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize for his fight against apartheid, also said many South Africans would see the restrictions as a "declaration of war."

"The government's idea of reform is to smash all effective possible political opposition in the country, no matter how peaceful and lawful, and to rule with a jackboot," Tutu said. He appealed to the United States and other Western countries to intensify economic pressure on South Africa.

The restrictions, announced in a special government gazette, do not technically outlaw the front and the other groups, but effectively ban them by prohibiting them from carrying on any activities not approved by Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok. The affected organizations include virtually all of the largest anti-apartheid groups in South Africa.

Vlok, who signed the order, said the regulations "will contribute to a climate of stability, peaceful coexistence and good neighborliness among all population groups."

He said the groups affected by the regulations encouraged civil disobedience and rebellion, advocated alternatives structures to replace official ones, and waged campaigns of intimidation.

The new regulations permit the organizations only to maintain bank accounts, perform administrative functions and undertake legal action.

The Rev. Allan Boesak, a co-founder of the United Democratic Front, said the government has acted out of frustration because its tough tactics during a 20-month-old state of emergency had failed to quell militant opposition.

"It is not possible, really, to ban the UDF," he said in a telephone interview. "The UDF is much less an organization than a symbol of the determination of South Africa's oppressed people to be free."

Anti-apartheid activists had anticipated some type of crackdown this year, suggesting that President P.W. Botha's National Party government would move to blunt criticism from extreme-right white opponents.

The order comes exactly a week before two parliamentary by-elections in which candidates from the far-right Conservative Party are favored to beat National Party candidates.

SWAGGART

Last year, Gorman sued Swaggart for $90 million charging him with unjustly accusing Gorman of repeatedly committing adultery. Gorman admitted a single "immoral act" with a woman.

The pictures, which ABC News reported last week were given to denomination leaders by Gorman, "showed a motel — a crummy little thing built in an L-shape — they showed the number of this particular room and a woman accused of being a prostitute admitting several different men into the room, and eventually Jimmy Swaggart going into the room and later coming out of the room," Hamill said.

"And she came out a few moments behind him, and (Swaggart) had a flat tire on his car. These men who made the pictures had the let air out of his tires.

"When he went into the room, they called Rev. Gorman and he came down and Jimmy Swaggart was changing his tire, and there's pictures of he and Gorman talking to one another, just pictures, no sound," Hamill said.

Swaggart struggled with the tire and "he put the wheel on backwards," Hamill said.

Swaggart couldn't be reached for comment; church officials wouldn't say where he was.

Gorman attorney Hunter W. Lundy confirmed that he employed a private investigator, Reed Scott Bailey, in connection with the lawsuit against Swaggart.

Bailey and another investigator visited a strip of cheap motels on Airline Highway between Baton Rouge and New Orleans to ask questions about Swaggart, a motel resident said.

The woman, who identified herself as Peggy Carrier, 39, was quoted by the New Orleans Times-Picayune as saying Swaggart on several occasions visited two Airline Highway motels, where he would park his Lincoln Town Car in the rear.

Syndicated columnist Cal Thomas, who specializes in fundamentalist religions, said reports that Swaggart sought pornographic acts rather than sexual intercourse probably led the Louisiana council to conclude that he had not technically committed adultery, which would have resulted in a harsher punishment.

One of the state council members involved in recommending rehabilitation for Swaggart said the presbyters regard his ministry as a gift from God.

"We had to look beyond the man to the ministry God has given him," said the Rev. Jonathan Ziegler of Violet.

"Our objective was not only to rehabilitate a man but to save a unique ministry that feeds thousands of children a day, supports a multitude of missionaries and helps improve countless lives with the Gospel of Jesus Christ," Ziegler said.

The theft of oil field equipment, especially tubular goods, has been a growing problem in the Permian Basin, Burdett said.

Those indicted in Midland County included Joe Edward Wood, 32; Jonny Duane Gartman, 43; Bobby Ray Roberts, 49; Carl W. Bizzell, 35; Mark Allen Bush, 29; James Allen Rice, 39; and an unidentified man known as "Smitty" who is still at large.

The Ector County indictments named Clyde Royden Shugart, 35; Rory G. Edwards, 31; and Deari Madison Flowers, 52.

Bizzell was also indicted in Ector County.

All the men indicted in Midland County have been arraigned and bond was set at $15,000 each. All have posted the bond and been released, local officials said.

Those in Odessa were arraigned and bond was set at $5,000. Each has posted bond and been released, officials said.

Burdett said all of the men indicted are in the oil field equipment supply business.

Most of the indictments, he said, were based on separate transactions.

If convicted of the allegations that they knowingly bought equipment they believed was stolen, each man could face a fine of up to $10,000 and up to 20 years in state prison.

"Law enforcement officials have always known that 'fences,' those who willingly buy stolen property, are the main reason that such thefts are profitable," Burdett said.

"Such individuals not only promote the theft of oil field equipment, but create an atmosphere of unfair competition against legitimate equipment suppliers who must pay market prices for equipment," he added.

Burdett added that knowingly buying stolen property in Texas carries the same penalty as the offense of theft.

The Penal Code allows the state to prosecute a suspect for theft if he buys property that was represented to him as being stolen, he added.

Burdett said that in this undercover operation a suspect was typically approached by a PISC investigator who offered the suspect equipment which was said to be stolen.

According to Burdett, those indicted were alleged to have bought oil field tubing, casing, Barton meters and valves that they were told was stolen property.

The officers, he said, were usually paid only half of the what the equipment was worth. Burdett added that the investigation was backed by Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen and Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, both of whom supplied advice and support.

Burdett credited the Midland County Sheriff's Office with developing the original information that led to the undercover investigation.

PISC is an oil industry association which was formed six years ago to help the industry and law enforcement officials combat oil field-related theft.

Its operations are funded solely by contributions from the oil industry.

Burdett noted that not all of those approached during the investigation would buy the equipment offered by the agent. Many suppliers, he said, refused to have anything to do with equipment they believed to be stolen.

MISD

The school district could build the new primary school on the 10-acre site it owns at the corner of Mockingbird Lane and Oriole Drive, Baressi said.

In late January, Baressi was quoted in a newspaper story as saying the district would only construct 50 new classrooms initially in the first part of a three-phase construction plan over the next ten years.

According to Baressi's estimation Tuesday of "$100,000 a classroom," the cost of phase one would have run about $5 million.

With the notice Tuesday the district wants to build anywhere from 74-96 classrooms and maybe another 15-classroom school, the cost of the "initial" construction phase could cost — according to the $100,000 estimate — anywhere from $7-$15 million.

MISD spokeswoman Maridell Fryar said today she believed trustees think they can build everything they want for the $5 million they hope to raise in bonds, despite Baressi's remark about a classroom costing $100,000.

The superintendent was in Austin today and could not be reached for comment.

The most immediate of needs, Baressi said last January, was phase one — the construction of 50 new elementary classrooms to comply with a Texas Education Agency law calling for a 22-1 student-teacher ratio.

Baressi had said he was hopeful that the first phase would be implemented with the passage of a $3-$5 million bond election in the May elections.

The superintendent had said phase two of the construction plan — adding about 70 more classrooms to accommodate an expected 2,000 additional elementary students over the next five years — would be undertaken later.

Phase three of the plan would address possible classroom additions in freshman and senior high schools over the next five to 10 years.

District officials Tuesday, however, appeared to be meshing the first two phases of their long-term construction plans into one.

Mrs. Fryar said that the board opted to consider building the larger number of classrooms to avoid having to turn around in less than five years and start construction again.

"Rather than going back repeatedly for additional bond issues, they thought they would try — with the pod concept — to come up with a bond issue that would take care of both concerns (the TEA law and the population surge)," Mrs. Fryar explained.

MISD favors the third construction alternative — ten new classrooms and a new primary school, she said, because that "would buy us the greatest amount of space."

The school district expects to obtain a waiver from the TEA so that it would not be penalized for not being in compliance with the 22-1 rule by September 1988.

Currently 39 portable buildings are in use at 20 of the 21 elementaries, Lusby said.

The portable buildings would be removed from elementaries getting the new classroom "pods," and reused on other campuses, Lusby said.

School district trustees also voted Tuesday to redistrict elementary boundaries at Bowie, Burnet, Crockett, DeZavala, Fannin, Houston, Milam, Pease, South, Travis and Washington to balance populations, Baressi said.

A public meeting will be held at Alamo Junior High School Tuesday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium to discuss the construction matter, Baressi said.

Trustees also approved the re-activation of West Elementary — closed last fall due to declining enrollment.

West will become an early childhood center for pre-kindergarten classes and a language immersion center for selected bilingual students, they said.

At the meeting Tuesday, trustees also approved the inclusion of four videotapes to be taught with a seventh grade health class unit.

The health class is currently in progress at Alamo Junior High School and will begin in March at San Jacinto Junior High School, Mrs. Fryar said.

The films are entitled "Aids: Taking Action;" "The Gentle Art of Saying No;" "Drugs: How To Say No;" and "Teen-age Sex: How To Say No."

The last three are for use with the seventh grade "Sex Respect" curriculum, and the AIDS film was produced by the Michigan Department of Education specifically for junior high students, Mrs. Fryar said.

BASKIN

However, Taylor this morning countered the contention, saying that Baskin and the accuracy organization are "throwing up a lot of flack" to divert attention from what he considers to be the campaign's main issue.

In Taylor's mind, that issue is the record of the Baskin court in dealing with criminals harshly.

"Why are the criminals asking him to sentence them," asked Taylor. "Why are the defense attorneys supporting him? I'm not getting any money from criminal defense lawyers."

"In seven years, he has not met with the police. The man doesn't know what's going on as a result," Taylor said.

Taylor referred to a connection between the use of drugs among criminals and their propensity to commit crimes.

He said that Baskin has required drug testing for 20 percent of criminals on probation, whereas he if elected would require the testing for 100 percent of criminals on probation.

SHARP

He said the new rule should have more benefit to independents than majors because majors for the most part are able to execute blanket bonds in lieu of plugging for oil wells.

"In essence," said Sharp, "the Texas Railroad Commission is offering an in-lieu of plugging bond for $100."

He said the new rule would not increase the risk exposure of the commission, because it already has the ultimate burden to plug wells.

Sharp also said that a natural gas summit between producers, pipelines, environmentalists, end-users from the Northeast and representatives from the five major producing states is set to take place sometime in September in Houston.

COLLIDER

The draft should be published in August, as originally planned, he said. Confirmation of the final site still should come in January.

But Michigan Gov. James Blanchard, whose state is still in the running for the super collider, scolded Energy Undersecretary Joseph Salgado for the department's decision to delay announcement of a final site recommendation.

"The longer you go in with this project without getting the funding committed, the more risk there is it won't get funded," Blanchard said at the National Governors' Association winter meeting in Washington. "The more you narrow down the site selection, the less likely Congress is to fund it."

If Congress builds it, the Superconducting Super Collider will investigate exotic scientific theories of the origin of matter by whirling beams of protons into each other at an energy 20 times greater than what is now possible.

Believed to be the largest scientific instrument ever built, state governments are anxious to win the contest for the 53-miles-around tunnel because it will create 3,000 jobs and have an annual operating budget of $270 million.

Besides Michigan, Illinois, Texas, Arizona, Colorado, Tennessee and North Carolina remain in the competition to build the collider.

Arabs in Israel's occupied territories stay home in protest

JERUSALEM (AP) — A general strike gripped the occupied territories today as businesses shut down and Arab workers stayed home in response to a call for stepped up protests before Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrives.

The army reported what it said may be the first armed attack against the military since the Palestinian uprising began 2½ months ago in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

An army spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a bomb exploded on a road near Gaza as a vehicle was passing Tuesday night and shots were fired. There were no injuries. No further details were immediately available.

Extra-tight security arrangements went into effect today at Ben Gurion airport in advance of Shultz's arrival Thursday. Airport police said special riot police units were called in and will stay on duty through Tuesday as Shultz conducts his shuttle mission in the Middle East.

Pessimism prevailed among Israeli officials after another day of violence Tuesday in which two Palestinian teen-agers were shot and killed. According to U.N. figures, the latest slayings brought to 63 the number of Arabs killed by Israelis since the uprising began in the occupied lands on Dec. 8.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin Tuesday said Israel is confronting a "war of citizens" in the Arab uprisings and Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, chief of staff, said he cannot predict an end to Arab unrest in the occupied lands.

Israel captured the Gaza Strip from Egypt and the West Bank from Jordan during the 1967 Middle East war.

In the Gaza Strip today, few people were on the streets and only one or two cars were seen moving. Most Arab laborers stayed away from their jobs in Israel, there was little public transport, and there were reports of a few scattered tire-burning and stone-throwing incidents.

Much of the West Bank was dusted white with a thin layer of snow that fell overnight and some Arab youths in a Jerusalem neighborhood threw snowballs at passing cars, a relief from the stone-throwing of previous days.

Business was at a standstill today. There was little traffic and few workers left home, according to army radio.

The underground "National Leadership of the Uprising," in leaflets distributed throughout the territories over the weekend, called for a comprehensive general strike today and Thursday.

Rabin, speaking to a committee in Parliament, said Tuesday the nation faced "a political confrontation carried out by violent means."

"This is a war of citizens, women and children, to achieve a political aim. That's what's serious about it and against it we have to use force so that the violence would not prevail," Rabin said in remarks broadcast by army radio.

About 3,000 police were stationed in Jerusalem today, about double the normal number, said city spokeswoman Sivana Meryn.

She said the police informed City Hall that if they needed backup during Shultz's visit, they should turn to the army for manpower. If troops were used in Jerusalem, it apparently would be the first time since 1967, she said.

Shultz is coming to launch a new peace initiative he hopes will put an end to the violence of past weeks, bring the Arabs and Israelis to the negotiating table and eventually achieve an overall solution to the Mideast conflict.

The secretary of state has acknowledged he has only a slim chance of accomplishing that goal during his visit. The Shultz initiative, which includes trading territory for peace, is likely to encounter opposition from Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud Bloc.

Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, interviewed on army radio, said on Tuesday the new initiative contradicts the 10-year-old Camp David agreement.

"There is confusion in it and an attempt to sell it to Israel as Camp David and to sell it to the Arabs that will give them almost all of the West Bank and Gaza," he said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has prohibited local Palestinians from meeting Shultz. Fayez Abu Rahme, a Gaza lawyer who was among a group of Arabs who met with a U.S. official on Saturday, said: "As far as we are concerned there won't be a meeting."

David Good, spokesman for the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem, said he did not know if Palestinians will meet with Shultz.

Informed U.S. sources said Shultz would not meet with Palestinians outside Jerusalem.

Radical students take over USIA office in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Five radical students armed with bombs and knives seized a U.S. Information Service office today and detonated two bombs and started a fire before police overpowered them.

Two of the students, brandishing explosive devices and draped in South Korean flags, stood at shattered windows on the second floor yelling "Yankee go home" as riot police ringed the building.

U.S. Embassy officials said they had no reports of injuries, but the attackers smashed windows and set a fire in a periodical storage room. Thick smoke filled part of the building located in the heart of Seoul.

People inside the building at the time of the attack, including at least one American, were not detained by the radicals.

The students, who said they were members of the "Young Student Suicide Group" claimed they had 18 bombs and screamed at surrounding police to stay away. They tossed down a statement charging the United States was attempting to make South Korea a colony.

"Yankees stay out of Korea," the students yelled.

A police officer said it was unclear how many of the explosive devices the attackers had. The bombs were crude chemical devices, possibly some kind of plastic explosive, he said.

About 200 radical students hurling firebombs and rocks clashed with riot police about an hour later outside Myungdong Cathedral. Police fired volleys of tear gas at the students who yelled slogans denouncing President-elect Roh Tae-woo, who is to be sworn in Thursday.

Hundreds of protesters had gathered at the cathedral less than a mile from the U.S. Information Service office earlier in the afternoon for an anti-government protest. "Down with Roh Tae-woo," the students yelled.

Some of the attackers were reading in the office's library when there was a large explosion in a nearby room and they suddenly pulled out bombs and started screaming slogans, eyewitnesses said. At least one of the attackers pulled out a knife and brandished it, they said.

"He was kind of crazy-eyed," said Paul Wadden, a visiting American teacher who was reading in the library at the time.

The attackers smashed three windows overlooking the main street outside and two of them stood shouting slogans out into the street and brandishing bombs and cigarette lighters. Riot police stood on the sidewalk below with shields covering their heads and shattered glass covered the street.

The students tossed at least one bomb into the street where it exploded harmlessly, eyewitnesses said. A second bomb was tossed out, but did not explode, they said.

People caught in the library said the students did not attempt to detain them and they were able to leave after recovering from their initial shock. Wadden said he and other people were prevented from leaving downstairs for up to 10 minutes by building guards.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Rains slow Shiites' search for kidnapped U.S. Marine

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy rains flooded valleys and slowed Shiite militiamen scouring south Lebanon for kidnapped U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, but a spokesman said the search team "is determined to find him."

The weather also forced U.N. Undersecretary-General Marrack Goulding to postpone a helicopter flight from Israel to Beirut, where he planned to make new efforts to push for Higgins' release.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Shiite Amal militia confirmed an earlier account by a security source that three of the gunmen who kidnapped Higgins had been captured and interrogated.

The spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also confirmed that the gunmen had not provided any information about Higgins' whereabouts.

Security sources in the southern port city of Tyre said Amal militiamen continued their search for Higgins, 43, of Danville, Ky., despite the heavy rain.

Higgins was kidnapped near Tyre on Feb. 17. The pro-Iranian Organization of the Oppressed on Earth claimed it abducted him and charged he was an American spy. It released a videotape and identification documents to prove it is holding him.

Salvadoran rebels kill three

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels fired machine guns at a bus traveling in defiance of their first transportation ban of 1988, killing three textile workers and wounding six, authorities reported.

The insurgents, who have fought the U.S.-backed government for eight years, ordered the ban to protest legislative and municipal elections scheduled March 20. They say free and fair elections are impossible because of the civil war.

Rebel broadcasts said the traffic ban began on Monday and would continue indefinitely.

Police officials said the guerrillas attacked a bus belonging to the United Textile Industries Corp. as it traveled Monday night on the Pan-American Highway east of San Salvador.

The victims were identified as workers for the company, which is partly owned by the government.

The guerrillas, grouped as the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, warned people to stay off the nation's roads and highways. They said in a broadcast on their clandestine Radio Venceremos that their troops had orders to attack vehicles violating the ban.

Mexican journalist killed

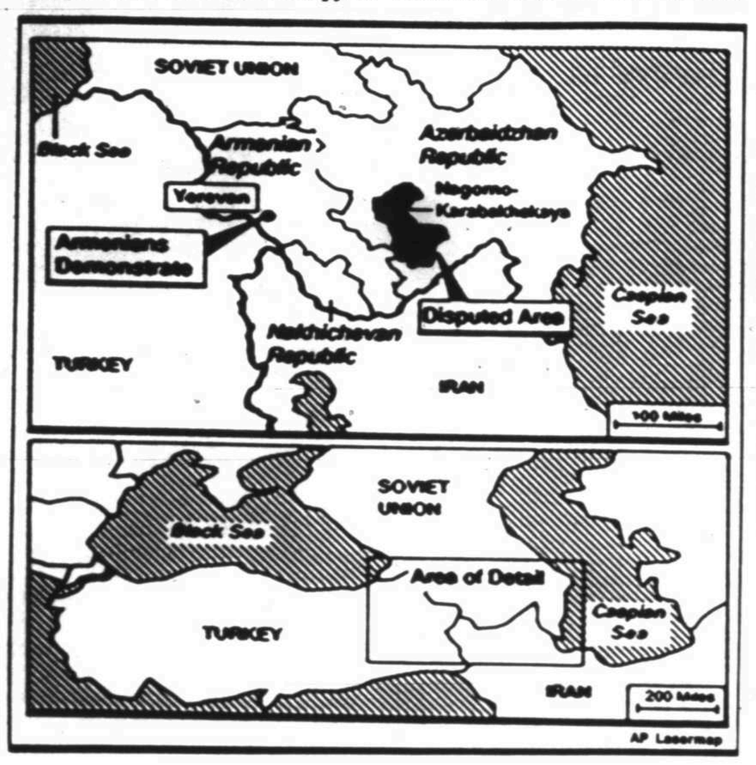
MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP) — Three men burst into the home of a well known journalist in this coastal resort city and shot him dead as he mourned the death of his father with family and a friend, Sinaloa state police said Tuesday.

Manuel Burgueno Orduno, 42, died shortly after he was shot seven times at 3 p.m. Monday, said Raul Corral of the Sinaloa state judicial police here.

His three daughters and two granddaughters were in the home at the time but were ordered out of the room before the slaying, Corral said.

Burgueno was editor of the monthly political magazine Deslinde that circulated in the Gulf of California coastal state. He also wrote a column for the newspaper Sol del Pacifico and taught journalism courses at the Autonomous University of Sinaloa.

He formerly had worked for the daily Mazatlan newspaper Noroeste and had written for several other newspapers there and in the state capital of Culiacan.



Armenian protesters may have been killed by soldiers

MOSCOW (AP) — About 200,000 protesters in Armenia's capital of Yerevan demanded today that Armenia be allowed to annex a region controlled by the neighboring republic of Azerbaidzhan, a former political prisoner said.

In the disputed region of Nagorno-Karabakhskaya, soldiers brought in tanks to put down the protests and rumors reached Yerevan that some demonstrators were killed, activist Paruyr Ayrikyan said in a phone call from Yerevan.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov confirmed that the territory dispute had erupted into a major street demonstration in Yerevan, 1,100 miles south of Moscow, but he said the gathering was peaceful. He said he did not know the number of protesters.

The second day of unrest in the Armenian capital was accompanied by widespread strikes and school boycotts, Ayrikyan said. Gerasimov confirmed reports that four senior officials of the national Communist Party Central Committee were in the Caucasus Mountains region to quell the protests.

Ayrikyan said the demonstrators, angered by the Central Committee's recent refusal to allow the annexation, demanded an extraordinary meeting of Armenia's parliament.

Outbreaks of ethnic tensions have occurred with increasing frequency over the past year as Soviets embrace party chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev's call for "glasnost," or more openness in tackling the nation's social problems.

In a speech to the Central Committee last week, Gorbachev expressed concern over nationalist tendencies among the more than 100 peoples comprising the Soviet Union and called for a special meeting to look into the problem.

Today was also the 70th anniversary of independent Estonia, a small republic on the Baltic coast that was incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940. The official Soviet news agency Tass complained that Western political figures were encouraging unrest there, a sign demonstrations were expected.

The Nagorno-Karabakhskaya region of Azerbaidzhan is 1,760 square miles in area, slightly smaller than Delaware. Most of its 150,000 people are Armenians.

In a Tass dispatch Tuesday, the government took the unusual step of acknowledging unrest in the region over the territory dispute. The report, read on national television, said the demands of the demonstrators "contradict the interests of the working people."

The government newspaper Izvestia on Tuesday night acknowledged a "mass meeting" of protesters in Yerevan, student boycotts and the involvement of national party officials in trying to resolve the conflict.

Today's edition of the Communist Party daily Pravda carried the Tass report, but no commentary on the events.

Ayrikyan said in the telephone interview today that he was speaking from an apartment 100 yards from the protest site.

"There are at least 200,000 people in front of the opera house — I've never seen anything like it," he said.

He said the demonstrators also were angered by the Tass report, which blamed the protest on "extremists."

"These are not extremists, they are Communists," he said. "They are representing the opinion of all the people."

Ayrikyan said two members of the party Central Committee's Secretariat, Vladimir I. Dolgikh and Anatoly I. Lukyanov, arrived in Yerevan on Tuesday "to calm the people."

Today, Lukyanov and Dolgikh persuaded the demonstrators to send a small delegation to party headquarters in Yerevan to discuss the dispute, Ayrikyan said.

Attempts to reach the offices of Sovietskaya Armenia, the republic's main newspaper, for an official account of today's incident were unsuccessful, and calls to other Yerevan telephones also did not go through.

Ayrikyan, 38, spent 17 years in labor camps and exile for heading an underground Armenian nationalist group in the 1960s.

Moscow dissident Tamara Grigoryants said Nagorno-Karabakhskaya, in the Caucasus Mountains north of Turkey, was deeded to Azerbaidzhan in the early 1920s.

Earlier this month, the local government council asked that the region become part of Armenia, citing the Soviet Constitution's guarantee of the right of self-determination, Ayrikyan said. The party Central Committee rejected the request.

The Yerevan demonstrators are demanding that the Armenian Supreme Soviet, the republic's nominal parliament, convene in extraordinary session to decide the annexation question.

Thinning hair and hair loss. As we age, the microcirculation to the hair follicles slows down. Fewer hairs are produced and they tend to be weaker and susceptible to loss.

Foltene® products significantly improve the condition of thinning hair. Following two decades of clinical testing, research scientists noticed that a special compound they were testing had an interesting effect. When used in topical hair treatments, the condition of thinning hair was significantly improved. This unique compound called Tricosaccande®, is the basis for Foltene products.

When massaged into the hair and scalp, Foltene Supplement for Thinning Hair provides a feeling of stimulation to the scalp and penetrates deep, not only into the exposed hair shaft, but into the hair follicle, where healthy looking hair begins. It attracts vital moisture, resulting in hair that looks fuller, thicker and more manageable.

Foltene Shampoo for Thinning Hair gently cleanses the hair removing build-up which could result from sebum, dry scalp flakes or chemicals left behind by styling aids. Treatment results will be maximized when used in conjunction with Foltene Supplement for Thinning Hair.

White House touts new nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has named a soft-spoken Southerner with a reputation as a savvy, behind-the-scenes negotiator to be his new Secretary of the Navy while the Pentagon copes with "difficult and painful" budget cuts.

The president on Tuesday tapped William L. Ball III to replace James H. Webb, the pugnacious and controversial naval secretary who abruptly resigned a day earlier.

Webb took a parting shot at Pentagon chief Frank C. Carlucci, accusing him of bending to congressionally-mandated budget cuts by needlessly scuttling the administration's dream of a 600-ship Navy.

The White House, however, said Reagan intends to stand by his goal, even though he won't be in office to see it realized. It also offered words of encouragement for Carlucci and the new nominee.

"We look to Will Ball to continue working aggressively for a strong U.S. Navy," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Budget constraints have delayed a 600-vessel Navy, which will be reached in fiscal year 1992 rather than in fiscal 1989 as originally planned, Fitzwater said.

"The budget restructuring under way at the Pentagon now is a difficult and painful process," Fitzwater said. "Secretary Carlucci is doing an admirable job. He's quite capable and suitable to the task, and he's carrying out the president's policies in that regard."

Of Ball, he said, "All of us who know him here at the White House know that the Navy is getting a strong advocate and a strong fighter."

Ball is expected to have little difficulty winning Senate confirmation, since the nomination will be reviewed by the Senate Armed Services Committee, where he once was an aide.

President Reagan announced Tuesday his intention to nominate William L. Ball III to be the new Secretary of the Navy, replacing James Webb who announced his resignation on Monday. Since February 1986, Ball has served as Assistant to the President for Legislative Affairs at the White House.

The 39-year-old has been the president's chief congressional lobbyist since February 1986. Before that, he served as the State Department's chief liaison with Congress.

From 1981 to 1985 he was administrative assistant to then Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, serving also as chief clerk of the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1981. He also worked as administrative assistant to former Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., in 1978.

The South Carolina native is a graduate of the Georgia Institute of Technology and was a regular officer in the Navy from 1969 to 1975.

Fitzwater, a longtime friend of Ball's, described him as "the kind of guy who knows how to build coalitions and work with people...He has a great love and respect for the Navy and he knows how to get things done."

The spokesman said Ball earned Carlucci's respect in the wake of the Iran-Contra troubles, when the legislative liaison helped the former National Security Council chief forge a new relationship with Congress and its intelligence oversight committees. He also worked closely with Carlucci on the formulation of the latest budget policies, Fitzwater said.

As secretary of the Navy, Ball will oversee approximately 584,000 Navy personnel and 199,000 Marines.

Several Navy officials said Tuesday that Ball was an unknown who would confront a "show-me" attitude within the Navy.

"We've had two very exceptional secretaries of the Navy in the last seven years," said one official who asked not to be named. "And you just don't find that caliber of individual on every street corner. So there is anxiety."

Another official said Webb's sudden departure on Monday had hurt morale within the Navy, "but hopefully that's only temporary."

"The thing is, we're used now to having an aggressive secretary who really fights for us inside and outside the building. And that's what we want to see in Ball," he added.

Key prosecution witness admits to prophecies, visions from God

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — A key prosecution witness in the sedition trial of members of a white supremacist group testified under cross-examination from a defendant that he receives direct guidance from God.

After the government used Jim Ellison's testimony to implicate many of the 10 men accused of plotting the violent overthrow of the government, defendant Louis Ray Beam Jr. questioned Ellison on his religious beliefs.

Ellison testified Tuesday "a prophet of God" led him to settle in Arkansas, where he was annointed "King of the Ozarks" by Robert Millar, leader of a religious group in Oklahoma.

Ellison also said he has the gift of prophecy and is a descendant of the biblical King David.

"Has anyone ever suggested to you before today that you, sir, might be paranoid?" Beam asked.

"Before today, I've heard it," Ellison said.

Beam, Millar and seven others, including Aryan Nations leader Richard Butler, are accused of sedition. The 10, and four others on trial, espouse white supremacist goals or belong to white supremacist groups.

Those four, and one of the accused conspirators, are charged with plotting to kill a federal judge and an FBI agent. Two also are accused of interstate transportation of stolen money. All the defendants face maximum sentences of 20 years in prison and $20,000 fines on each charge if convicted.

The government contends the conspiracy involved actions to kill Jews, who were seen by the white supremacists as in charge of the United States government.

Ellison has testified that in 1983, members of an Arkansas-based religious-military group he led had participated in a murder, robberies and attempts to blow up utility facilities.

Ellison is serving 20 years for racketeering and weapons violations committed when he led the group, called the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord. He was arrested in 1985 after a four-day standoff.

Richard Wayne Snell, a member of Ellison's group, is on death row in Arkansas for the 1983 murder of Texarkana pawn broker William Stumpp.

Ellison testified that Snell, one of the 14 on trial here, decided to kill the pawn broker because he considered him to be "an evil man, he was a Jew, and that he just needed to die."

Snell also is serving a sentence of life without parole for the 1984 slaying of state Trooper Louis Bryant.

Scientists find dinosaur egg with possible embryo

AMERICAN FORK, Utah (AP) — A dinosaur egg discovered in a central Utah quarry may contain the oldest embryo ever found and change perceptions about how some of the creatures became extinct, a scientist says.

A scan of a partially collapsed egg the size of a human fist has revealed a 2-centimeter-long gray area that appears to be the crude outline of an embryo, said Wade Miller, a Brigham Young University paleontologist.

In the scan, the egg shell appears white. Most of the egg's interior is dark gray except for a tiny area that has the shape of a head and other features, Miller said.

The egg was discovered last September in the Cleveland Lloyd Quarry where scientists have uncovered thousands of allosaurus bones, a meat-eater that stood up to 20 feet high.

Miller said skeletal remains of the dinosaurs that lived during the Jurassic Period, which began around 210 million B.C. and ended 145 million B.C., have ranged from 100-pound juveniles to 3-ton adults.

Miller said the egg could lead to a new theory of how dinosaurs in the area became extinct.

Important races facing state voters

The U.S. Senate seat now held by Lloyd Bentsen of Houston, one seat on the Railroad Commission, now held by Jim Nugent, and a seat on the state Board of Education are up for election March 8th. All the positions are vital to the future well-being of the Lone Star State.

U.S. Senator

After having served as a U.S. senator from Texas for 18 years, Lloyd Bentsen faces opposition to his re-election in both the primary and general elections. Six individuals are seeking the nominations — two Democrats and four Republicans. In the Democratic primary, Bentsen's opponent is San Antonio real estate broker and investor Joe Sullivan.

However, Bentsen's standing in the Senate and his invaluable knowledge of economics and finance, along with other matters crucial to the future of Texas including the oil and gas industry, make his renomination the only logical course.

In recent years particularly, Bentsen's opponents have attempted to discredit him as too "liberal" and not a strong spokesman for the oil and gas industry. That charge isn't borne out by the facts, however. In fact Bentsen has been one of the best supporters of the oil and gas industry on Capitol Hill and during the infamous original debate over the Windfall Profits Tax in 1979 and 1980, his first priority was a full exemption for the smaller independent producers.

On tax cuts, too, Bentsen pushed long and hard for personal tax cuts and reductions in the tax on capital gains, and although it eventually took a Republican president to bring it to fruition, Bentsen could claim helping pave the way.

Bentsen has been good for Texas in his 18 years in the Senate. Voters in the Democratic Primary should renominate him for another term.

In the Republican Primary, the head-and-shoulders standout is U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo. Boulter has quickly learned the ropes in the Congress and gained a reputation as a strong advocate for deficit reduction, reduced government and lower taxation.

"I believe strongly in an America of less taxes and less government spending," says Boulter. The size of our government is becoming an unbearable burden on the backs of the American taxpayers. The answer to the deficit — as almost every Texan will tell you — is not to raise taxes."

Boulter also has led the fight to repeal the Windfall Profits Tax and, in fact, was awarded the highest award in 1987 by the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners' Association for his efforts promoting a national energy policy.

We believe Boulter is the best choice of the four men seeking the Republican nomination for Bentsen's Senate seat.

Railroad Commissioner

The full-term seat on the commission now held by Jim Nugent is being sought by three Democrats and four Republicans. After a notable career in the Texas Legislature, Nugent has served on the commission since January 1979. During that period he has gained widespread support.

But in recent years, we've heard complaints from Midland oilmen who say Nugent does not always represent the interests of the oil industry, and particularly the independents. They believe they can find a more sympathetic and understanding commissioner in one of Nugent's Democratic opponents, Jerry Langdon of Midland.

Langdon, whose father was a Railroad Commissioner for 15 years, is a petroleum consultant who is intimately familiar with navigating the maze of federal regulations energy producers face today.

Says Langdon: "I believe we need a strong advocate on the commission for policies to improve the market position of the Texas oil and gas industry ... We need a commissioner who has the knowledge and ability to bring Texas back."

We agree with local oilmen who say it's time for a change on the Railroad Commission and encourage voters in the Democratic Primary to nominate Langdon.

Voters in the Republican Primary will find four names to choose from and most of the faces are familiar to those who keep up with Texas politics. One of them is that of Ed Emmett of Round Rock.

As a four-term state representative, Emmett served as chairman of the House Energy Committee and a member of the House Transportation Committee. In that respect, he is knowledgeable of the major industries the commission oversees.

Revitalization of the Texas energy industry is one of Emmett's major concerns, as it is ours. He says: "I strongly believe in promoting the use of natural gas, attracting investors back to the drilling industry and relieving the deliverability fears of end users."

We believe voters in the Republican ranks would be wise to nominate Emmett.

Board of Education

The plan to convert to an appointed state Board of Education fell on its face when voters said no to a constitutional amendment that would have approved the change. Now voters must pick board members to fill the seats on the all new board.

Candidates for the position for the district that includes Midland are Democrats Charles Eugene McDonald of Bangs, William Luther Hudson of Wichita Falls, Ben Doyle Sudderth of Comanche and James Lewis Wilks of Sweetwater; and Republicans Peter N. Micale of San Angelo and Donald Ray Dorsett of Stephenville.

After carefully researching the backgrounds of the candidates and discussing the election with those in the field of education, we recommend voters nominate Wilks and Dorsett.

Wilks is a lawyer who has served as president of the Sweetwater school board and has been active in education circles for years. He also says he believes in local control, quality education and neighborhood schools which we find agreeable.

On the Republican ballot Dorsett, along with his wife, owns the North Central Texas Speech and Hearing Center in Stephenville and also is regional director of the Texas State Teachers Association office there. He says that House Bill 72 "is a progressive piece of education legislation" that simply is not being implemented properly. Dorsett also says he wants to work within the system to improve the educational process.

We encourage voters to nominate Wilks and Dorsett.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 24, the 55th day of 1988. There are 311 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 24, 1868, the U.S. House of Representatives impeached President Andrew Johnson following his attempted dismissal of Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton. Johnson was later acquitted by the Senate.

On this date:

In 1868, Arizona was organized as a territory.

Israel may attack nerve gas plant

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency expects Israel will attack and destroy a secret nerve-gas weapons plant in Syria within the next year.

Jack Anderson

Sources inside the CIA, who have access to the latest intelligence from Israel and Syria, say the attack is "extremely likely." Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin is obsessed with the plant and is pushing the operation. The plant will probably be blown up by Israeli bombers — or by Israeli agents on the ground.

The Syrians located the plant in the remote desert north of Damascus believing it would be too far into their territory for the Israelis to risk an air strike like their successful 1981 attack on the Iraqi nuclear reactor near Baghdad (which we also forecast nine months in advance).

But the Syrians forgot they are dealing with the children of Jews who were murdered by gas. "Never again" is more than just a cliche. One intelligence source told us that the Israelis compare the Syrian nerve gas plant with the Nazi gas chambers of the Holocaust.

Intelligence officials have known for some time that the Syrians have chemical weapons. But the new and alarming secret is that they have made a special warhead to carry the gases atop Russian-made Scud B and SS-21 missiles.

Syria has 36 SS-21s, which have a 75-mile range. That allows them to hit some civilian and military targets in Israel from bases in Syria. The Scud Bs have a range of 170 miles. In the elbow-to-elbow Middle East, that puts most of Israel within Syrian sights.

We have seen a highly sensitive, secret CIA report on chemical-weapons proliferation that says that the Syrians have "the most advanced chemical warfare capability in the Arab world."

The chemicals, delivery systems and training came from the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia, according to the CIA. In recent years, the Soviets have cut off some of that support, forcing the Syrians to get creative and produce their own chemical agents.

Other Arab states, including Egypt, Iraq and Libya, also have some chemical-weapons capability.

The buildup of Arab chemical weaponry has not escaped the notice of the Israelis, who may be building up a stockpile of their own. The CIA says it can't be sure, but there are several clues that the Israelis have access to nerve agents and mustard agents, and the weaponry to deliver those chemicals.

"The existence of chemical test grids (in Israel) has been known since the early 1970s and possible tests were detected in January 1976," according to the secret CIA report. "In late 1982, a probable CW (chemical weapons) nerve agent production facility and a storage facility were identified at the Dimona Sensitive Storage Area in the Negev Desert."

Israel's move to develop chemical weaponry was a defensive one. It was made after the Israelis discovered large quantities of Soviet chemical-weapons-related equipment among captured Egyptian materiel in the 1967 and 1973 wars with the Arab world.

Our CIA sources say Rabin has been considering putting chemicals into warheads now that he knows the Syrians have the power to do the same. Military analysts widely believe it was fear that kept the Arabs from using their chemical weapons in the 1967 and 1973 wars — fear that the Israelis could retaliate with their own chemical weapons.

But fear may not be enough of a deterrent to satisfy Rabin. He is fixated on the Syrian plant, our sources say, and is unlikely to settle for anything less than an all-out attack on it, even if it means sending his planes through a barrage of Syrian air defense systems all along the route.

LOOTING HISTORY — Looters at numerous Southwestern archaeological sites are walking off into the desert sunset with an important part of America's heritage. They are stealing Indian artifacts from locations in Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

The government agencies responsible for the sites — the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the National Forest Service — have not pinned down the extent of the problem. At Bandelier National Monument in New Mexico, for example, reports showed that looters were disturbing the site less than 10 times a year. Then the National Park Service set up a time-lapse camera and found that the site was disturbed at least 100 times in one year.

Many looters don't know they are doing anything wrong, and few of them are caught.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The AIDS epidemic began in the United States in 1981. Last year, condom sales were up more than a third, to $200 million. This year, a company called Luc Benoit began selling designer condom cases. They go for $80 to $200 each and come in alligator, crocodile, ostrich, lizard and buffalo. Colors include red, green, black, nicotine, "congo" (medium brown), gray, ordeau and "tundra" (khaki). All of which suggests that there is something moving faster than the epidemic. It's the quick buck.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Church should take lead on 'structures of sin'

WASHINGTON — By issuance of his 20,000-word, personally written encyclical, "The Social Concerns of the Church," Pope John Paul II risks becoming known as the foremost political-moral relativist of our time.

William Safire

Relativism? The pope? Isn't he supposed to be pre-eminent in the struggle against the shifting of values and blurring of responsibility, a world religious leader morally bound to define the difference between right and wrong?

Not this pope when it comes to geopolitics. In his doctrinal instruction, he sees "the existence of two opposing blocs, commonly known as the East and the West." He recognizes that at the base of this antagonism are ideologies with "two very different visions of man and of his freedom and social role."

So far, so simplistic; he is at least a decade out of date on his geopolitics. Both superpowers now face great schisms within each "bloc," and totalitarian ideology is in turmoil. But let us accept his bipolar thesis. We know that the East is statist and atheist, that the West makes an effort to respect the individual's free will rooted in Judeo-Christian precepts. On which side is the Roman Catholic Church?

Apparently on neither side. "...the church's social doctrine," he pontificates, "adopts a critical attitude toward both liberal capitalism and Marxist collectivism." Why? "Each of the two blocs harbors in its own way a tendency toward imperialism..."

He labels the two blocs as "structures of sin": "on the one hand, the all-consuming desire for profit, and on the other, the thirst for power, with the intention of imposing one's will upon others."

In sum, the West's greed is the moral equivalent of the East's power lust, and both are guilty of impoverishing the innocent and exploited Third World. If words have meaning, that is now the official world view of the Vatican. I think it is wrongheaded.

As a political manifesto, the encyclical's purpose is obviously to align the church with the downtrodden, which is proper enough. In so doing, however, the pope curries political favor with the Third World — mainly dictatorships, oligarchies and juntas — in a way that enshrines the rhetoric of resentment.

It's not your fault that you are poor, the pope is saying — nor the fault of your socialist system or your corrupt leaders. No, you were unfairly treated by the imperialists, and deserve right now a share of what the developed world has earned.

That whips up every demagogue of the New World Economic Order, piquing appetites for "the common banquet," called by U.N. powercrats "common heritage," or as the pope put it, "rightful access to the goods meant for all."

Such a stultifying notion of property by entitlement, rather than John Locke's idea of property as the product of labor, places the pope on the side of the collectivists, despite his accompanying praise of "the right of economic initiative."

Sometimes evenhandedness goes too far. He cannot have it both ways; a century's experience has shown that liberal capitalism is infinitely more productive and truer to the spirit of free will than communism.

As a statement of moral theology — a guide to Christian behavior — the pope's statement is as dismaying as it is astounding. In one breath, he extols the "transcendent vocation of the human being, beginning with the right of freedom to profess and practice one's own religious belief."

But the next breath is not taken. Under which system is religious freedom permitted and under which system is it denied? He does not say.

Capitalism is imperfect, but its occasional excesses and predations do not place it in the same moral ballpark as communism. The bloody imperialism of the Soviet Union in Afghanistan is not the same as what the repressive communist regime in Nicaragua tries to call the imperialism of the U.S. The Soviet suppression of workers in Poland is not in the same league with the attempt by U.S. banks to collect a portion of loans to Mexico.

In one area the pope offered a worthy idea. He suggested selling "superfluous church ornaments and costly furnishings...to provide food, drink, clothing and shelter."

For generations, the U.S. has contributed tens of billions to the world's poor, and the Russians little. Perhaps the time has come for a public accounting of assets of all religious denominations, for the sale and lease-back of immensely valuable real estate and the distribution of the proceeds to the neediest. In taking the lead, the Vatican could well emulate the selflessness of one of the "structures of sin."

ART BUCHWALD

Everyone was media star in New Hampshire

New Hampshire can be a lonely place once the primaries are over. I realized this when I saw a sign on the border that said, "Will the last reporter leaving Manchester please turn out the lights?"

Art Buchwald

I stopped for gas at a 7-Eleven in the town of Boot. The gas man, seeing my press credentials on the windshield, put his snow cap on and rushed over.

"If you want a wider shot you can set your TV cameras over there," he said.

"I'm not here to set up cameras," I told him. "I just need some gas."

"Don't you want to know my opinion of George Bush?"

"It's too late. Nobody in the United States cares what you think about Bush anymore."

"Dan Rather cared what I thought. He stuck his mike in my mouth for two minutes."

"Dan's only interest now is South Carolina."

"That isn't what he told me. He told me what people in New Hampshire say about Bush could change the results of the election. I gave him some Twinkies because he let me say hello to my mother."

"I would like a cup of coffee."

"Jack Kemp always had a cup of coffee before he went out on the campaign trail. He sat right on that box over there next to Gary Hart."

"Get off it. Jack Kemp never sat next to Gary Hart."

"Kemp didn't know it was Gary Hart. He thought it was Warren Beatty."

"What was Gary Hart doing in a 7-Eleven?"

"He said he was looking for a voter to talk to — any voter."

"This seems to have been a busy store."

"We're the last 7-Eleven before you get to Concord, so everybody loads up here. Tom Brokaw bought a Spam sandwich from me last month and asked if I was going to vote for Dukakis. I told Tom I would if it assured me of getting on the evening news. I said we in New Hampshire can't make up our minds unless we know we're appearing on prime time.

"I was about to call it a night when Ted Koppel came by with his crew and asked me to go on split screen as a typical Boot, N.H., resident. I told him I'd be delighted since I had already done it for Dan Rather, Bryant Gumbel, Oprah Winfrey and Phil Donahue.

"Ted said he was looking for someone who wasn't so overexposed, so I called up my cousin who had only been on '60 Minutes.' The trouble with you TV fellers is you think that you can just drive up and find a New Hampshire media virgin who has never been interviewed on television."

"You can relax now," I said. "New Hampshire has had its day in the sun."

"Don't sit near the corn flakes," the man cried. "Barbara Walters sat there when she talked to me about Mrs. Dole. She asked me lots of personal questions about her."

"Did you answer them?"

"It was hard because Mrs. Dole only came in a couple of times, bought frozen yogurt and ate it in the car. You can't get a real fix on a candidate's wife from that."

"But Barbara didn't care?"

"She couldn't have been nicer, especially when she found out my brother drives a plow for the Department of Transportation. You want any pictures of me holding up the photo of the Russian missiles in Cuba that the Rev. Robertson left behind?"

"Why did he leave it behind?"

"He said the people of New Hampshire were the only born-again voters who knew he was telling the truth."

An Open Letter to Midlanders Interested in TRUTH IN POLITICS

Dear Fellow Citizens:

We want to express our disappointment at the tactics of Nick Taylor's political campaign.

Taylor and a group of his supporters are conducting a campaign designed to divert attention from the main issue of this election: THAT JUDGE BASKIN IS VASTLY BETTER QUALIFIED THAN NICK TAYLOR TO BE OUR JUDGE.

The Taylor campaign has repeatedly made FALSE and MISLEADING STATEMENTS. Here are some examples:

#1. FALSEHOOD:	Mr. Taylor stated in a letter that "Judge Baskin was chairman of the McGovern for president campaign." At a Taylor news conference it was stated that Judge Baskin had a McGovern bumper sticker on his car.
#2. FALSEHOOD:	Mr. Taylor stated at a news conference that Judge Baskin "is a liberal."
#3. FALSE IMPLICATION:	A Taylor mass mailing implied that Crime Stoppers, Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs, and Mothers Against Drunk Driving are endorsing Mr. Taylor.
#4. FALSE INSINUATION:	Mr. Taylor insinuated at a Meeting of the Republican Women's Club that Judge Baskin had received a $300 contribution from a certain local citizen whom Mr. Taylor claims to be a "liberal.".

NOW TAKE A LOOK AT THE FACTS:

✔ FACT #1: Judge Baskin supported the 1972 Republican candidate. He did not manage, or in any manner whatever, aid, support, vote or contribute to the McGovern campaign.

Nevertheless certain supporters of the Taylor campaign have continued to spread this rumor through phone calls. When one Taylor phonecaller was firmly and correctly informed that Judge Baskin neither chaired nor supported the McGovern campaign, the phonecaller defensively retorted that, "Well if Baskin didn't do it, his wife did!" So, a brand new falsehood was born, this time against Mrs. Baskin (who also supported the 1972 Republican nominee for re-election).

✔ FACT #2: Judge Baskin is a conservative and has been for his 34 years in Midland.

Judge Baskin has long supported conservative candidates, from President Eisenhower to President Reagan.

Judge Baskin has an impeccably conservative voting record as a Midland City Councilman and Mayor Pro-Tem.

Judge Baskin has long supported conservative political positions such as restoring the depletion allowance, opposition to the windfall profits tax, maintaining a strong military defense.

Judge Baskin's court routinely assesses the toughest sentences of any sizeable county in West Texas, brings criminals to trial quickly, and applies the law as a strict-constructionist.

✔ FACT #3: Crime Stoppers, Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs, and Mothers Against Drunk Driving have not endorsed Mr. Taylor and do not intend to do so.

Although the Taylor campaign now says that they did not mean that those groups were endorsing Mr. Taylor, the implication was there.

"The (Taylor mass mailing) letter was so strongly anti-Baskin, there's no way it can look like anything but an endorsement....This was done without our knowledge or consent....We don't endorse any candidate."--President of Crime Stoppers.

"We have had people call us and say they would not support our organization because we were supporting a political candidate...We just want to make it clear we are not endorsing anyone."--President of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

"From the outset NABD has agreed, and it has been etched into steel, that we are non-political as far as personality and individuals are concerned." President of Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs (NABD). (He added the group's membership is comprised of supporters of both Baskin and Taylor).

✔ FACT #4: Judge Baskin never received such a contribution from that person.

This is a trivial item, but it typifies the Taylor campaign's willingness to make statements without checking the facts.

WHY HAS THE TAYLOR CAMPAIGN MADE THESE FALSE STATEMENTS?

WE ASSUME THE EXPLANATION IS CARELESSNESS, NOT DISHONESTY. HOWEVER, CARELESSNESS WITH FACTS IS NOT A DESIRABLE CHARACTERISTIC IN A MAN WHO WISHES TO SERVE AS OUR JUDGE.

Our community deserves an honorable political contest, and our judicial candidates, more than anyone else, should set the highest standard of political behavior.

Henceforth, let us demand through our votes that candidates refrain from attacking their opponents with false statements and innuendos of the kind that the Taylor campaign is using.

We urge you to join us in voting for the best qualified candidate, Pat Baskin.

Sincerely,
Citizens For Accuracy In Campaigning.

Baskin, Taylor 'square off'

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Mirroring the weather of late, the 142nd judicial district race got warmer Tuesday with a claim by contender Nick Taylor that the district attorney — not the judge — is to thank for any dent the court makes against crime in Midland.

Incumbent Judge Pat Baskin and Taylor squared off at the Tuesday debate sponsored by the Leadership Midland Alumni Association before a crowd of about 100.

Taylor practiced at the same Midland law firm with District Attorney Al Schorre before the latter was elected three years ago. Taylor praised Schorre for the estimated 750 hard-line sentences that were levied prior to the accused persons facing trial in Baskin's court.

Only 62 criminal cases were tried in the 142nd court during Schorre's three-year period, Taylor claimed.

Of that number, 24 convicted criminals wanted Baskin to impose a sentence instead of a jury, Taylor said, because the judge is the "judge of choice among drug dealers in Midland."

"I guess you know more drug dealers than I do," retorted the judge.

Baskin denied the charge, saying that a person may not choose which court his case is tried in, though he said the district attorney's office may have some leverage in placing the case in either Baskin's or 238th District Judge Vann Culp's grand jury.

"It's not my goal to see how high I can hang people, but to assess sentences that fit the crime," Baskin said.

To assume punishments should be high is not ethical, the judge said. "To be fair" is.

Furthermore, Baskin said over the past year he's handed out at least two life terms, one for 45 years in prison, one for 38 years, several for 25 or 20 years and maybe "two or three for under 10 years."

The contender said his experience in real estate, oil and gas, securities and tax law would assist him greatly in ruling on the large amount of civil cases that pass through the district courts each year.

Taylor said 90 percent of the cases pending in the judge's court are civil, though Baskin claimed that is because criminal cases are disposed of faster.

Dubbing Taylor "an office lawyer," Baskin said it is courtroom experience — not law office experience — that qualifies a person to be judge.

"It's like asking a foot doctor to perform brain surgery," remarked Baskin on Taylor's qualifications to be a district judge. "Behavior in a courtroom arena is essential in knowing how to be a judge."

Taylor said Tuesday he has been endorsed by former Midland mayors Ernest Angelo Jr., Thane Akins and Ed Magruder, as well as U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, who also gave money to his campaign, he said.

Baskin claimed Taylor has tried two court cases while living in Midland, neither of which were actually in Midland.

The race will be decided in 13 days on Super Tuesday. No Democrats are seeking the post.

Area farmers say they are 'sure short of moisture'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

It's fairly quiet on the farm-and-ranch scene these days, as both farmers and ranchers await rains to increase the underground moisture to produce bountiful cotton and tall, green grass.

"It's pretty slow — sure short of moisture," said Hoot Leonard, who farms and ranches in Midland County.

Most cotton farmers are doing some plowing in preparing land for spring planting. "It's just wet enough now for plowing" to keep the winter winds from eroding the soil, he said.

Last week's mixed snow and rain provided just enough moisture to plow.

"It's helped immensely," Leonard said. Moisture from the previous snowfall in January was "just about gone, and that (recent) mixed snow and rain put us back in business."

Far more moisture by way of spring rains will be needed for planting in early May to early June.

"We are sure in bad shape when it comes to underground moisture," Leonard said.

The 1987 season was far different — pre-planting moisture was abundant from the previous fall and winter rains.

"Last year, we went into the growing season with excellent underground moisture," Leonard said. "We had a dry summer and dry fall. We used up all the moisture we had."

For making a good 1988 crop, farmers need good spring and summer rains. "Summer rains come so hard and fast," Leonard noted, "that the water runs to low places. "The ground doesn't soak it up."

Like the farmlands, cotton prices have been suffering, too.

"The price has been declining pretty heavily," noted Leonard. On Tuesday, the market dropped a cent and pulled cotton down 57 to 59 cents a pound.

"We farmers always miss the boat one way or another," he reflected. Last summer, farmers had a chance to contract cotton for 70 cents a pound.

"There were a few farmers wise enough to take it." Most didn't, Leonard said, because most often, seasonally prices rise above the contract prices. This year, they didn't.

Out on the range, the grasslands are "hurting" from lack of moisture.

"However, we went into the winter with quite a bit of grass," Leonard said. "The cattle wintered good — came out in pretty good shape."

Today, there is not much green on the range.

"We should have some green out there — winter weeds," he said. "And grass should be greening up a little bit about the roots; we're not seeing that. It's too dry."

If and when spring rains come, the rains "will do an old ranch a little more good than it does a farm," Leonard said.

In the marketplaces, cattle prices are "holding real good," Leonard said. "We saw a little decline in market yesterday."

Stocker steers off the range are selling to feedlots for 80 to 90 cents a pound, and stocker heifers are selling for 75 to 80 cents.

"There's a little more demand for it (beef)," Leonard said of the healthy market. "People are eating more beef."

Pastures have produced good fodder for the livestock. "We haven't had to buy much hay," he said. Ranchers have been buying some cake — grain cubes high in protein and vitamins — to supplement the grass.

Fat packer calves out of the feedlot and ready for the slaughterhouses are selling in the 70s. "That's a real good fat market," Leonard said.

Council accepts water treatment plant expansion proposal

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Expansion of the city water treatment plant to handle Midland's share of Stacy Dam water would cost an initial $13.5 million under a plan approved by the City Council Tuesday that won't be needed until 1991 or later.

The council Tuesday heard two proposals for plant expansion from Bill Carroll of the Black and Veatch engineering firm of Dallas.

Council members voted 5-0 to accept the first proposal, which Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said today carries the smallest initial outlay of funds.

Council members Kelly Fish and Oralia Corrales did not attend the meeting.

Under the proposal, the city would expand the plant's water treating capacity from 12 million gallons per day to 16 million gallons per day and build a 94 million gallon holding reservoir for the Stacy water.

That construction would be followed in 2005 with further expansion for an additional eight million gallons per day in treating capacity and in 2015 with another eight million gallons per day in capacity, McGregor said.

While the council is pegging the city's need for the extra capacity on 1991, the need may not materialize until one or two years later, McGregor said.

When the extra capacity would become a necessity depends on when the Colorado River Municipal Water District completes the dam and, when after completion, rain fills the reservoir, he said.

Under the plan, the city would spend about $13.5 million for the initial expansion and construction of the holding reservoir, McGregor said.

After treating capacity is upgraded by the additional 16 million gallons per day in 2015, the total price tag for the project would be about $18.5 million, McGregor said.

The second proposal Carroll presented accomplished the same ends but at a faster pace, McGregor said.

Under that proposal, the plant's treating capacity would be expanded by 24 million gallons per day by 1991, with an additional 8 million gallons treating capacity added by 2000.

In 1985, Midland voters approved the city's involvement in the Stacy Dam project by voting in a $14 million bond issue to build a pipeline to bring the water to the city.

OC president's contract renewed; Property eyed

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Odessa College trustees Tuesday night approved a new one year contract for President Phil Speegle and the purchase of the old Sands Lounge across the street from the OC campus.

This will be Speegle's 15th year as president of Odessa College. Prior to becoming president of the community college district, Speegle served, from 1971 to 1973, as president of the OC campus when it was part of the Permian Junior College System.

Trustees did not consider Speegle's $95,000 per year salary in renewing his contract. Speegle's salary and that of other OC employee's will be considered later in the year.

Following a 15 minute closed door meeting Tuesday night, OC trustees unanimously approved the purchased of the Sands Lounge from owner Jimmy Carter for $80,000. OC Business Manager Roger Coomer said the property will be used to provide much needed additional parking space.

Speegle told trustees a renovation cost of $300,000 has caused administrators to abandon plans to move the cosmetology program to the Cummings Street building purchased from Electronic Service Center last September.

The building would require a second story and would need to be almost completely rewired to accommodate the number of hair dryers required for the program.

Instead, he said, consideration is being given to utilize the building for the college's auto body repair course.

Speegle said OC is in the process of initiating a course to train physical therapists because there is a need for this specialty in the area.

In an effort to save money, Richard Buck, the board's attorney, suggested trustees take advantage of state law that allow the college to publish an abbreviated version of the election call notification, which must be published in the local newspaper of record in English and Spanish.

Buck estimated publication of the shorter version would save the college about $1,100. Trustees approved the recpmmendation.

In other action, trustees gave Speegle formal authority to execute grant proposals and contracts on behalf of OC. Speegle told trustees some entities the college does business with require a formal document specifically setting forth his authority to sign contracts.

Even though his authority in this area is set forth in the OC Handbook, Speegle said, the various entities the college does business with like to have current evidence of board approval of his authority and reproducing a portion of the minutes of a specific meeting would accomplish this, he said.

'Claytie' winning hearts at Texas A&M

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was submitted to the Reporter-Telegram by the Office of Public Information at Texas A&M University.

COLLEGE STATION — Colorful Midland businessman Clayton Williams Jr., has lost a few things in his time, including a hog-calling contest, but he's won the hearts of Texas A&M University business students who would like to follow in his footsteps and make a few dollars — a few million, that is.

For the fifth year in a row, Williams, class of 1954, has come back to his alma mater to help teach a course on entrepreneurship that the students call "How to Make a Million Dollars."

Williams teaches the class with Ella Van Fleet of Texas A&M's College of Business Administration, who designed the course and who last year won an award from the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa., for doing so.

"It's become one of the most popular courses at Texas A&M," said Ms. Van Fleet, who in 1986 also won the Southern Business Administration Association's Innovative Awards Program for designing the course.

During class, about 60 students learn about Williams' business ventures — his experience in insurance and telecommunications, how the rise and fall of oil prices affected his concerns in the industry, his annual Brangus cattle sales and the opening of ClayDesta National Bank in Midland, among other things.

The bank, said Williams, "is worth nearly what I put into it and that ain't too bad for a Texas bank today."

Students get a large dose of Williams' philosophy too, both in class and afterwards at a popular hangout where he treats them to hamburgers, drinks and flowing conversation.

He's a noted Aggie worldwide and has even been called the "ultimate Aggie." The Texas A&M Association of Former Students alumni center, for which he pledged and paid $2.5 million, bears his name.

"In my mind, no Aggie could have his name on a better building than that center," said Williams, who also founded ClayDesta Communications, a digital fiber optic and microwave long distance network.

"I like to have fun and you should have fun, too. You can make a lot of money and have a good time. Also, you'll get further than if you just work all the time," he advised the students.

"Be a good person and things will come to you," he adds. "It sounds like Sunday school, I know, but it's true."

Midland businessman Clayton Williams Jr., center, returns to Texas A&M each year to teach business students the art of being an entrepreneur.

Panel says salary 'realistic'

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of the Texas Racing Commission now say they don't expect difficulty in hiring a director despite earlier concerns about the job's $80,000 annual salary.

Members of the new commission, at their first meeting earlier this month, had said the salary level might be too low to attract a top-flight administrator.

But Chairman James H. Clement of Kingsville said that after some research, the salary figure looks "very realistic."

Clement said a survey shows that racing directors in other states were paid salaries ranging from $31,148 in Louisiana to $77,852 in New York. The survey of 25 states showed most salaries lower than $80,000, he said.

Commissioner Demarious Frye, a Corpus Christi veterinarian, said earlier she had been told that one racing director made $200,000 annually. She did not disclose which state employed him.

"It seems to me we were laboring under some misinformation during our previous meeting, and that the governor's recommendation of $80,000 will be adequate for the position," Clement said in a letter sent to other commission members.

New voters registering for primaries in droves

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Calling the first phase of his "Voter '88" program a "smashing success," Secretary of State Jack Rains said Tuesday that at least 528,000 new voters have registered for the March 8 primaries.

All but 27 of the state's 254 counties reported longer voter rolls as the state's total climbed by 7.2 percent. Figures show Midland County now has 51,470 registered voters, up 3,174 — 6.6 percent — from March 1987.

The secretary of state predicted record turnouts of up to 5 million voters, with Republicans coming close to even with Democrats among voters taking part in the Super Tuesday primaries.

Rains credited the big increase to the 375 businesses that joined the "Voter '88" campaign along with 850 "traditional voter registration groups." He called on those same businesses to help get out the vote on March 8 by encouraging their employees to go to the polls and giving them time off to vote.

In December, Rains set a goal of registering 1 million new Texas voters by November. With new voters signing up for the April 12 runoffs and general election, Rains said he expects to meet that goal and bring Texas up to the national average of registering 68 percent of its eligible voters.

Preliminary figures show Harris County registered the most new voters with 69,249, and Matagorda County earned the largest percent increase at 18.8 percent. Among the regions of the state, Central Texas led with an 11.9-percent increase, while East Texas' 4.4-percent voter growth was the smallest.

In South Texas, considered crucial for many Democratic presidential hopefuls, the voter rolls grew by 80,000 people or 6.7 percent. Many of the 27 counties that lost voters lie in West Texas and the Panhandle, a situation Rains attributed to declining population there.

Figures for other area counties show Ector County added 1,121 voters (2.2 percent), Andrews County added 276 voters (4.4 percent), Crane County added 213 voters (7.4 percent), Martin County added 29 voters (1.2 percent), Upton County added nine voters (0.3 percent), Ward County added 628 voters (12.4 percent), Winkler County added 120 voters (3.8 percent), and Loving County — with the least population in the state — dropped eight voters for a new total of 169.

Policemen remain hospitalized; Transient jailed pending bond

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two undercover policemen who were shot while on patrol to deter downtown crime remained hospitalized and a transient accused of shooting them was jailed in lieu of $1 million bond, authorities said.

Officer Edwin Gorrell, 33, who was shot in the head, was in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Center Tuesday after more than 13 hours of surgery, hospital spokesman Robert Clark said.

Officer Onofre Serna, 26, was in good condition at Medical Center Hospital with a wound to the chest, hospital spokeswoman Inez Eisazadeh said.

David Johnson, 28, was charged with two counts of attempted capital murder Tuesday and was in the Bexar County jail in lieu of $1 million bond set by Night Magistrate Tino Guerra.

Police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said the two officers were working the downtown area in plainclothes about 6:30 p.m. Monday when Gorrell stopped a man and a female companion, who appeared to be intoxicated.

After an argument, Gorrell called for help and a struggle ensued. Serna arrived, but then Gorrell was disarmed and both officers were shot, Buske said.

After the shooting, the gunman went into the Travis Park Plaza building and took two hostages. He released them and went to a third-floor office and took three hostages. Those three escaped when he went to another room with another man, police said.

The last hostage, accountant Jerry Renaud, slipped out of an office about 9 p.m. when the gunman was not looking. The man surrendered about an hour later.

"He seemed disoriented at first, despondent, that he had gotten framed," Renaud said Tuesday. "He said he wasn't there to hurt us. He said he just needed a place to hide out for the night."

Authorities said the suspect is a transient and is familiar to downtown foot patrol officers.

"My understanding is he had some mental problems and it's your typical downtown problem that we've been faced with," City Manager Lou Fox said Monday night.

Police and city officials said Tuesday they are considering ways of dealing with thousands of homeless people like the man charged with wounding the officers.

Fox said he is considering using about $500,000 in the city budget's contingency fund to beef up police patrols and a new proposed "Panhandlers Ordinance" is pending that would outlaw begging on downtown streets and sidewalks.

The man talked to the San Antonio Express-News Monday night.

"I was just walking around a corner and this guy grabbed me and he pulled a gun and a badge of some kind and he was grabbing," the man told the newspaper.

"I didn't mess with nobody. We got...he wasn't wearing no uniform...he tried to get loose, but couldn't, and he let loose with one arm, and got the gun...and pushed me...he pointed that gun right at my head and we was on the ground," the man said.

"After the one guy fell, the other went to grab me. I'm just walking down the street, looking for a piece of hamburger or something from the garbage," he said. "The gun just went off...I didn't mess with nobody."

Talks aimed at ending racial bias in DPS called 'positive'

AUSTIN (AP) — More talks are scheduled for March after initial negotiations aimed at ending alleged racial discrimination in the Texas Department of Public Safety were called positive by participants.

"We made substantial progress," said Gary Bledsoe, president of the Austin branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "There were no thumbs down to any of the demands placed on the table."

Bledsoe said a report on Monday's discussions would be given to the state Public Safety Commission on Thursday. A second meeting between DPS and NAACP officials has been scheduled for the first week in March, he said.

Gerald Carruth, DPS chief of legal services and negotiator for the department, agreed with Bledsoe.

"We made real progress...we opened the lines of communications and both sides have a better understanding of what is needed," Carruth said.

Grover Hankins, general counsel for the NAACP, said he was encouraged "by the department's willingness to negotiate."

Among state troopers attending the meeting was Michael D. Scott, 36, of Houston, who has tried unsuccessfully for several promotions in his 14 years with the DPS.

Scott and other black officers said they have been wrongly denied promotions and transfers and have been subjected to discriminatory remarks by supervisors and other officers.

Museum gets rare Jimmy Rodgers recording

LUFKIN (AP) — Fifty-five years ago, a Lufkin sawmill worker stood in line to buy a new record by a musician who sometimes stopped by his home for a little barbecued goat.

This week, the children of Tony Sanches Sr. gave what may be country music's rarest recording to the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum in Nashville, Tenn.

Ronnie Pugh, head of reference for Country Music Foundation, said the copy of Jimmie Rodgers' "The Cowhand's Last Ride" is "one of a handful" still in existence.

Pugh said the record was the last one made by the Father of Country Music before his death at age 35.

The old 78 rpm was a picture-record, with an image of Rodgers pressed into the acetate.

"They didn't really have the technology to do picture records back then," Pugh said. "It was the middle of the Depression, and records weren't selling well. So they took it off the market. This is the rarest of several rare Rodgers' records. It is probably the rarest recording in country music."

Pugh said the record also had historical value.

"This record was cut in Jimmie's last recording session the week of May 17 to 24, 1933," Pugh said. "He died on the 26th."

Rodgers, a native of Mississippi who performed often in Texas, cut his first record in 1927. For the next six years, Rodgers was the leading recording artist in the country, with the possible exceptions of Al Jolson and Gene Austin, Pugh said.

"He was extremely popular. He recorded 110 songs, all for what was then the Victor Talking Machine Co., which became RCA-Victor in 1929."

Pugh said Rodgers "influenced a whole generation of artists," ranging from Ernest Tubb and Tommy Duncan to Merle Haggard and Razzy Bailey.

"His music wears well. He was a long way ahead of his time."

Sanches' children — Joe Sanches, Linda Burges, Juanita Oliver, Janie Allen, Leon Sanches, Tony Sanches Jr. and Roy Sanches — said their father became a lifelong fan of Rodgers after the musician showed up on his doorstep near the old Long Bell Lumber Company one day.

Mrs. Burges said Rodgers was playing in Lufkin with a tent show.

"We was looking for a place to eat barbecue, and Daddy always barbecued on the weekend. At that time, the great barbecue food was goat."

Mrs. Burges said her father had a secret recipe and an ear for good music, and Rodgers came back the next time he was in town.

Pugh said the story was typical of those told about Rodgers, who was "very much a man of the people."

"We know Rodgers came to Lufkin at least three times: in October 1930, May 1932 and mid February 1933," Pugh said. "His last documented personal appearance was in Lufkin. He took sick here and went to Houston. He had tuberculosis all his professional life.

"He got well enough to go to New York City for his last recording session in May."

Sanches' children recall their father as a man who played Rodgers' "blue yodels" endlessly on an old Victrola.

"Our family enjoyed getting together, and he would play those songs, Mrs. Oliver said. "He was a fan of Jimmie Rodgers until the day he died."

Mrs. Burges said she got the idea of donating the record to the Country Music Hall of Fame when she visited the museum two years ago.

She saw a copy of "The Cowhand's Last Ride" at the musuem, and recognized it as the one her father had played over and over at family get-togethers.

"Their copy was water damaged," she said. "I tried to talk Daddy into donating it then But he wasn't ready yet. He must have played that record a million times.

Testimony against accused killer continues in Ector County

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 161st District Court jury of seven men and five women today will continue hearing evidence against a 31-year-old man accused of killing a 25-year-old woman who was reported missing in July 1984.

Jerry Grey Shelton, formerly of Odessa, was indicted Jan. 11 by an Ector County grand jury after a hunter found a skull, later identified as that of Dorothy Jean Purcell, in a northern Crane County field.

A 26-year-old man, Ricky Lynn Davis, also has been indicted for the murder of Ms. Purcell and has remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of $25,000 bond pending trial. Davis and Shelton were arrested in Houston in December 1987.

The arrests of Shelton and Davis were the result of a nearly three-year investigation by Odessa police, Crane and Ector County sheriff's investigators and Texas Rangers.

Shelton is being represented by former Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes. Assistant District Attorney Howard Whitworth is prosecuting the state's case against Shelton.

The prosecution rested early Tuesday afternoon after calling more than 20 witnesses to testify. The defense called one witness before Judge Tryon Lewis recessed the trial at 4 p.m. to hold a hearing on another case. Holmes is expected to call the last defense witness this morning.

Trustee asks judge to dismiss college's Chapter 11 appeal

DALLAS (AP) — A federal trustee overseeing Bishop College's Chapter 11 bankruptcy case has filed a motion to dismiss the proceeding because the school did not meet its January and February payroll.

"Failure to meet these payrolls is a violation of the United States Trustee's guidelines and constitutes cause...for dismissal of the case," stated the motion filed by trustee George McElreath Tuesday.

If approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Robert McGuire, the school would be forced to begin repaying $12.6 million in debts an audit showed the predominantly black college owes to more than 300 creditors.

Since the school filed its Chapter 11 petition, it has accrued a debt of $84,420.18 in addition to the unpaid payrolls, the motion stated.

Bishop attorney Michael Goldstein said he had expected the motion.

"Our hope is there won't be an early hearing so we can put our financial buttressing in place," said Goldstein of Dow, Lohnes & Albertson in Washington D.C.

Bishop recently raised $450,000 through supporters after an anonymous donor promised matching funds of $300,000. But the donor now says he won't release the money, which was placed in escrow, until the school regains certification to receive federal financial aid.

Three things can occur now that the motion has been filed, Goldstein said. McElreath could press for an early hearing, the motion could be deferred or it could be aprroved by the judge.

"He (McElreath) has an obligation to do what he thinks is necessary to protect the creditors and the process," he said. "We're going to keep trying to put the resources in place to satisfy him, to satisfy the creditors so that the college eventually can wind itself out of Chapter 11."

The council Tuesday also discussed timing of a proposed $15 million bond issue that would fund a variety of capital improvement projects, including a new northside park, reconstruction of Wadley Avenue and new communications equipment for city law enforcement officers.

Of the council members present, all but Bill Williams indicated a preference for a September bond election. Williams said he preferred the issue come before voters in May.

However, no formal action was taken on calling the election.

In other action Tuesday, the council approved:

— Specifications for a new $300,000 ladder truck for the Fire Department,

— A $135,000 contract with Professional Janitorial Services of Midland for one year of janitorial service at the Midland Regional Airport terminal building, — An ordinance defining "private club" and "restaurant" for specific use permits for alcoholic beverage sales,

— A $140,000 appropriation for purchase of tires and tire tubes as needed for the municipal warehouse, and — A resolution declaring a variety of structures sprinkled around the city as dangerous, dilapidated and public nuisances and ordering their destruction.

FARMERS—

Charlie Wright, general manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative, noted that many farmers are preparing their tax reports and figuring paperwork for the coming season while they are awaiting rains to dampened the soil for planting this spring.

The 1987 season was blessed with earlier rains.

"We had rains in February and March last year, and had a real wet (1986) fall, which readied the soil for planting, Wright said. "That's the only reason we made a crop last summer."

After planting last year, rains became scarce, as they are now.

First benefits of superconductivity to be in utilities

HOUSTON (AP) — Many of the most tantalizing potential applications of high-temperature superconductivity may take until the next century to become reality, experts say.

While electrical utilities may be among the first beneficiaries of high-temperature superconductors, uses in medicine, shipping, automobiles and railroads lie in the future, the speakers told the World Congress on Superconductivity on Tuesday.

Among the nearer term applications for higher-temperature superconductors are a $1 billion, 5,000-megawatt hour battery being developed by the Pentagon as part of the so-called Star Wars research program, said D.K. Sharma of the Electric Power Research Institute.

The device might cost up to 20 percent less if high-temperature superconductors are used, Sharma said.

The battery, which would stand about 50 feet high and have a half-mile diameter, could be as much as 97 percent efficient, said University of Wisconsin professor Roger L. Boom.

Widespread use of the batteries by utilities could mean about $20 billion worth of future electrical generating capacity would not be needed, while coal burning utilities could efficiently transmit electricity hundreds of miles, said Randall Ihara, research director for CSX Transportation Inc.

While trains of the future might one day ride above superconducting magnets, that kind of technology is not expected to be feasible before the year 2000, he said.

Automobiles using superconductors also are unlikely to be available in the near future, according to William F. Hayes, senior research officer with the National Research Council of Canada.

Groups say state low on list for addressing environmental issues

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texans should be ashamed over a new national study that ranks the state fourth from the last in addressing six environmental issues, four environmental groups said Tuesday.

The "1988 State of the States" report, prepared by the non-profit Fund for Renewable Energy and the Environment, evaluates the states' efforts in dealing with surface water quality, pesticide regulation, land use planning, indoor pollution, highway safety and energy-related pollution. Massachusetts and Wisconsin scored the highest on the 50-state report card, but the study says residents of all states should worry about the nation's estimated $300 billion "environmental deficit."

"If local and state governments can't cover a significant portion of environmental cleanup costs, an even higher bill will ultimately show up in increased public health risks, degredation of the environment and erosion of the quality of life," said Scott Ridley, author of the report.

The Texas Legislature's refusal to "provide sufficient monetary and other resources to the state agencies" is responsible for the state's receiving only 19 out of a possible 60 points for programs that address the six issues, said Ken Kramer, lobbyist for the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club.

"The report was generally on target in documenting that despite progress made on some fronts the overall record of the state of Texas in addressing environmental issues is still woefully inadequate," Kramer said. The 19 points tie Texas with Nevada and Oklahoma for 45th place among the states, better than only Arkansas, Mississippi and Wyoming.

"Texas is fourth from the bottom, tied for 45th, a record to be ashamed of," said Tom Smith, Texas director of the Ralph Nader group Public Citizen.

The lone bright spot in the report for Texas ranks the state tied for second with Massachusetts in its efforts to reduce pesticide contamination. The report praises Texas' bilingual program that informs farmworkers of the hazards involved in pesticides used on crops in the fields.

Kramer attributed that good news to "the increased attention given to that issue by...Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower," who is a director of the Fund for Renewable Energy and the Environment.

Commenting on other portions of the report, Smith and Kramer said:

— Blame for the state's last-place ranking on surface water protection falls with the Texas Water Commission's failure to control runoff pollution and establish water quality standards for "the vast majority of streams in Texas."

— The last-place ranking on energy pollution control comes mainly from acid rain produced by the 14 coal and lignite power plants in East Texas. "Texas is one of the top four consumers of coal to generate electricity in the country and is beginning to pay the price of its consumption in increased acidity of rainfall," Smith said.

— Texas tied for 40th place on highway safety because the state "spends far less than other states on mass transit," which leaves Texans to get around in heavily polluting automobiles, and because of 147 accidents involving the transportation of hazardous or toxic chemicals last year.

MHMR workers, relatives air complaints

EL PASO (AP) — State mental health-mental retardation workers say wages are low and there are few prospects for job advancement.

And relatives of patients said better transportation is needed, along with a possible reevaluation of policies involving overnight guests.

Workers and relatives took their complaints Tuesday to members of the citizens' planning advisory committee for the state Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

The hearing was the first of eight meetings to be held in the next three weeks in eight cities.

"I feel frustrated and somewhat angry at the fact that I've heard so many excuses," said Laura Isermia, who helps care for the mentally retarded at El Paso State Center. She was one of several people who appeared before the committee.

The meetings are designed to field comment about a recently released six-year plan written by advisory committee members. The plan says the state should emphasize caring for the most seriously retarded and mentally ill, eliminate the "revolving door cycle," and try to prevent some types of mental retardation.

One of the most ambitious sections of the six-year plan would require mental hospitals to assure patients would continue receiving care after leaving the hospital. The committee also recommends upgrading programs for children and adolescents, which the six-year plan termed badly deficient.

The plan says about half the cases of mental retardation are preventable through better nutrition and prenatal care, and that prevention programs should be started.

Several people testifying before the committee said the recommendations are sound, but that they didn't expect the Legislature to allocate enough money, especially in light of the need for more prisons.

Every two years, the committee comes up with ambitious ideas, "but implementation and follow-through on those plans are a whole different story," Ms. Isermia said.

City employees scolded for petty cash abuses

BIG LAKE (AP) — The mayor of this West Texas town said six city employees accused of petty cash abuse will be kept on the payroll — because they "are all good people and good workers" — but they will lose vacations and other benefits for periods ranging up to 2 years.

The Big Lake City Council unanimously approved the action against the employees, including City Secretary Tony Wille and Utility Director Bobby Gay, in a meeting that began Monday night and continued until after 1 a.m. Tuesday.

Also reprimanded were a bookkeeper and three shop workers in the utility department.

Big Lake is the seat of Reagan County, about 70 miles west of San Angelo.

Mayor H.F. Ritchie said the action against the six employees was prompted by some testimony in a recent district court trial of a former city employee, Sherri Chestnut, who was accused of misapplication of funds.

The testimony revealed that various city employees had taken money from city petty cash over several years and left IOUs for the loan and had done so with the knowledge of supervisors, believing that the policy had council approval. Ms. Chestnut is now appealing her conviction.

Ritchie said the employees were reprimanded for mismanagement in the city office, poor supervision in the field and misuse of city funds in the past.

The employees also lost various pay allowances and job benefits.

The employees were put on probation for various lengths of time, ranging from 10 months to two years, vacations were forfeited, and raises and utility allowances were stopped or reduced.

The mayor said all city employees and members of the City Council normally receive utility credits ranging from $40 to $80 per month, depending on the time of year. Each employee will get a re-evaluation every few months, the mayor said.

Ritchie said the City Council had been under intensive pressure during the past two weeks, and council members have spent "a lot of hours trying to correct this problem. It was causing friction in a lot of ways," he said.

More talk urged between WTSU faculty, regents

CANYON (AP) — The president of WTSU's faculty senate says faculty members and the board of regents should talk to each other more to smooth over troubled relations between the two groups.

WTSU psychology professor Gary Byrd told the board of regents during its meeting Tuesday that some faculty members are publishing anonymously an underground newspaper that has criticized the school's president.

"The individuals may believe that this is a way of creating awareness to a set of problems that they feel exist."

The newsletter, called "The Rest of The Prairie," appeared on campus last fall and contains editorials and letters highly critical of WTSU President Ed Roach.

"The Prairie" is the name of the school's student-run newspaper.

Last week, Roach and his wife, Darlene, filed suit against the paper's anonymous publishers, asking a state district judge to use subpoena powers to learn the identities of the authors and bring them to trial.

In the suit, Roach claims the publiction has caused him "intentional infliction of emotional distress" and seeks unspecified monetary damages.

Pilot's license improper

EL PASO (AP) — The pilot of a private twin-engine plane who died along with two passengers in a crash last week had no previous problems or accidents but was licensed to fly only single-engine planes, an official said.

Donald McCoy, a licensed pilot since 1982, died along with two passengers in the crash of his twin-engine Aero Commander 680 Friday. McCoy was licensed to fly only single-engine planes, said Armond Edwards, National Transportation Safety Board investigator.

Edwards also said McCoy's medical certification had expired and he was licensed to fly only in clear weather. The 55-year-old pilot and businessman tried to take off in snow and fog from El Paso International Airport.

"This is very rare," Edwards told the El Paso Times by phone from his Fort Worth office Monday. "Most pilots are very conscientious about safety. Very rarely do our investigations find pilots flying something they aren't licensed to."

McCoy flew about three miles before narrowly missing rush-hour traffic on Interstate 10 and slamming into the highway's access road near a gas station and a row of houses.

McCoy, who was carrying his secretary, Rosa Linda Puentes, 31, and her son, Jesus Aaron Puentes, 11, had just taken off en route to Palm Springs, Calif., when he radioed the control tower to report trouble with his landing gear. He tried to return to the airport.

"He got in the clouds and simply lost control of the airplane," Edwards said, adding that McCoy might have lost all sense of direction.

Girl suing for beauty title

Wilson

GALVESTON (AP) — Karen Anita Wilson wants a beauty title and a chance to finish high school as planned, and she's suing to get it.

Miss Wilson, 18, placed first last fall in the Miss Galveston USA pageant. She has made three public appearances in that role, but has yet to receive her crown or all her prizes, she said.

In a petition filed Monday in state district court, the Texas City resident asked that pageant director Michelle Hatmaker be directed to give her the title and certify her for the statewide contest.

Miss Wilson also asked the court to allow her to complete her senior year in high school without losing her title. The junior at Texas City High School claims Mrs. Hatmaker told her she could keep the beauty crown if she quit school and obtained an equivalency diploma.

Priest accused again of sexual misconduct

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio priest who was accused last year of molesting two brothers is the same priest who was accused five years ago of exposing himself to young girls, a newspaper reported today.

The man who filed the complaint in 1983 told the San Antonio Express-News that he dropped the charge as part of an agreement in which the priest was to be transferred to New Mexico.

Instead, the priest was moved to another parish in San Antonio and promoted, said Chris Petit, a swimming coach and manager of an aquatics center in San Antonio.

A family in south San Antonio has accused the same priest of molesting two brothers, ages 10 and 16, last year, the Express-News said.

The priest was an associate pastor when the first incident was reported on May 19, 1983. Last June, he was named priest at another church just a couple of miles away, the newspaper said.

The parish the priest was transferred to had only one opening, and the opening was for a priest, church officials explained. San Antonio Archdiocese officials said this week they were not aware of the 1983 arrest — a claim disputed by Petit.

Church officials said the priest, 39, was sent to a treatment facility in St. Louis last September after the complaints that he had molested the two boys. One of the incidents reportedly took place in July.

In the 1983 incident, Petit said the priest exposed himself to two young girls and was chased and detained by pool employees. The priest was nude, Petit said.

Petit said when he went to Municipal Court for a trial on the incident in August of that year, he was met outside the court by attorney Hector Mendez, who promised that if the charges were dropped, the priest would be sent to New Mexico.

Petit agreed to the offer, and the charges were dropped. He said Mendez told him that the archbishop was aware of the problem.

"He (Mendez) said he was working for the archbishop," Petit said. "They wanted to handle the thing internally. They specifically said he (the priest) would not be in Texas anymore. I went ahead and dropped the charges."

Mendez, named in 1985 as president of the Catholic Lawyers Guild, told the Express-News he was not acting for the archdiocese, but for the priest alone.

He said of the conversation with Petit: "I can't tell you I told him that. I can't tell you I didn't. I do not recall. It was five years ago."

San Antonio police, the district attorney's office and the Texas Department of Human Services are investigating the case, the newspaper said.

A Franciscan official confirmed that the order is investigating the priest's conduct. Church officials refused to confirm that the priest has returned to San Antonio after receiving treatment in St. Louis.

Records in St. Louis, however, indicate he was assigned to a San Antonio parish effective this year, the Express-News reported.

The Rev. David Garcia, Chancery spokesman in San Antonio, denied there was any type of cover-up. He said the archdiocese has only nominal control over Franciscans.

Vice president of business at Pan Am U relieved of duties

EDINBURG (AP) — Pan American University's president refused to say why the vice president for business affairs, who figures in an internal review of contract procedures, was relieved of his duties.

Vice President Roy Flores was placed on leave with pay Monday, university spokesman Bruce Erickson said.

"Dr. Flores is on leave with pay until further notice on this," President Miguel Nevarez said Tuesday. "It's a personnel matter and I just don't care to comment on that."

Flores could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

At a regents meeting in December, Flores announced his resignation from the vice president's position, effective Aug. 31. He said he wanted to return to full-time teaching and research in the School of Business.

At the same Dec. 8 board meeting, the regents formed a special committee to investigate some of the university's business dealings, particularly contracts with the Austin-based consulting firm MFC & Associates.

Regents at the time said formation of the contract review committee did not imply any wrongdoing on the part of university officials.

The contract review committee hired Harlingen attorney J. Edward Mann Jr. to determine whether university policies were violated in the school's dealings with MFC.

Flores later acknowledged that he served on an advisory board for MFC & Associates, but said he never received any type of compensation from the company.

Regent Robert Shepard of Harlingen, chairman of the contract review committee, said he did not know why Flores was placed on leave, and that he learned of the action when Nevarez called him Monday.

Collapsed oil rig still usable

GALVESTON (AP) — A spokesman for an offshore drilling company said an oil rig that partially collapsed in the Gulf of Mexico, causing 34 workers to evacuate, probably can be used again.

"It appears to be salvageable," said Bill Flores, spokesman for Keyes Offshore Inc. of Sugar Land, which owns the rig. "It doesn't appear as bad as it originally looked."

The workers on rig E-302 about 82 miles south of Galveston evacuated Monday night in special watertight capsules, officials said.

They were taken to Galveston after being transferred to the workboat "Casey Chouest," company president Bill Keyes said.

The vessel radioed the U.S. Coast Guard at 1:17 a.m. Tuesday that it had picked up the workers, Coast Guard duty officer Don Merwin said.

Arrests, filibuster mark Senate session on campaign spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arrest warrants were as plentiful as talk today as the Senate struggled past dawn with a partisan filibuster over campaign financing legislation.

The Democratic-Republican standoff, which began Tuesday afternoon, turned into a game of hardball early this morning when a posse headed by Sergeant-at-Arms Henry Guigni seized Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., and carried the lawmaker into the chamber.

Bob Dove, a former Senate parliamentarian advising the Republicans, said the arrest was the first of its kind since 1944.

Packwood, a leader of GOP opposition to a Democratic campaign finance bill, was brought in feet first by four U.S. Capitol police officers under terms of an unusual motion approved through late Tuesday by the majority Democrats.

The Democrats, who were forcing the Republicans to wage the filibuster in an effort to subdue the GOP opposition to the Democrats' proposed limits on campaign spending and contributions from political action committees, employed the rarely used procedure to require absent members to answer quorum bells or face arrest.

Republicans had been taking turns holding the floor to prevent the Democrats from bringing the bill to a vote they can win. This upset the Democrats, who had been forced to stay close to the chamber, maintain a quorum and keep the Senate in session.

When most Republicans stopped answering quorum calls, the Democrats resorted to ordering Guigni to scour the hallways and offices and arrest absent senators. He carried warrants for each of the 46 Republicans.

Packwood was found in his Russell Building office, Guigni said.

"I had to shove in a door to get into his office," Guigni said. "I think he hurt his finger. He was very courteous."

Packwood was not available for immediate comment.

Some 13 hours after the filibuster began, the two sides called a truce of sorts. Republicans would continue to talk, but there would be no more quorum calls until 10 a.m., giving most members a chance to sleep.

As dawn broke, Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., wound up an hour of holding the floor, speaking against the bill in a steady, conversational tone.

"I've immensely enjoyed this, particularly at this time of day. There's nothing I'd rather be doing," Durenberger said as turned control of the floor over to Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I.

Durenberger spoke to an almost-empty chamber. Freshman Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., sat at the podium, while Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., represented the Democratic side of the aisle.

Eight teen-aged pages sat quietly on the carpeted steps leading to the podium and a few detectives sat in the otherwise empty gallery.

The "full-fledged filibuster" was formally proclaimed by Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., on Tuesday after Republicans had done for five days what they had done for 22 days last year — prevent a vote on the Democrats' campaign spending bill.

Byrd has the votes to pass the bill, which would set voluntary spending limits for Senate general elections. But he is still about five votes short of the 60 he needs to shut off debate and force a roll call.

Early today, Democrats filed a cloture petition, which probably will be considered on Friday.

Dove said the filibuster is the chamber's first knock-down test of attrition since a nine-day battle in 1960 over civil rights legislation.

Investigators say 'Quid Pro Quo' Latin for Israeli 'Planned Payoff'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "quid pro quo" in a memo to Attorney General Edwin Meese III may be a planned payoff to the Israeli Labor Party, say government sources familiar with a criminal investigation of Meese.

The Sept. 25, 1985, memo from longtime Meese friend E. Robert Wallach discusses an Israeli commitment not to bomb a proposed $1 billion Iraqi oil pipeline.

"We all recognize that there would be no progress to this point" had Israeli-born Swiss oilman Bruce Rappaport "not been able to obtain the security package which involves the never-to-be-stated but fully understood quid pro quo which helped to produce that commitment," said Wallach's memo. The memo doesn't elaborate.

Meese's attorneys say the "quid pro quo" is a reference to an agreement that Rappaport, a partner in the proposed pipeline, would make available to Israel substantial amounts of oil generated from the project. Wallach was Rappaport's lawyer.

However, investigators for independent counsel James McKay question the explanation of Meese's lawyers and are seeking to determine whether the language may be a reference to planned payments to the Labor Party, said the government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Wallach gave Meese the "quid pro quo" memo, along with a handwritten letter from then-Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres in which Peres said he "would go a long way to help" the pipeline.

One of Meese's lawyers, James Rocap, said the attorney general doesn't recall any discussion of the memo with Wallach, who hand-delivered the documents to the attorney general. Rocap said Meese did not read the memo closely.

Wallach's memo urged Meese to enlist support for the pipeline project from top U.S. officials, hinting that he might talk to Secretary of State George Shultz about it and then proposing a discussion with President Reagan.

Meese's lawyers say he took none of the initiatives suggested by Wallach, but only referred Peres to the office of then-National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane.

A separate Wallach-to-Meese memo also dated Sept. 25, 1985, spells out Rappaport's close ties to Peres, saying the businessman described an arrangement in which Israel will receive up to $700 million over 10 years from the pipeline.

"What was also indicated to me, and which would be denied everywhere, is that a portion of those funds will go directly to Labor," says the second memo, the focal point of McKay's criminal investigation. Meese says he doesn't recall reading the portion of the document relating to Labor Party payments.

The independent counsel is investigating whether Meese knew of a possibly improper payment plan involving the Israeli political party and, if so, why he did not do something about it.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act makes it illegal for U.S. citizens, companies or their agents to offer foreign officials anything of value to influence them to provide help in business matters.

The law states that the attorney general may file a civil suit if it appears the person or company is about to engage in an act that would violate the law.

Both memos were publicly released Monday, along with an exchange of notes between Peres and Meese.

Peres, now Israel's foreign minister, on Tuesday defended his communications with Meese, saying: "We all agree that we favor the laying of the pipeline. So why would anyone need to use bribes?

HAMILTON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A suitcase reportedly containing $30,000 has been recovered from a plane that crashed in the woods here, killing three people, authorities said.

The suitcase of Simon Siegel, 66, of Brookline, Mass., was found Saturday, said police Lt. Frank Lentz.

He would not discuss the contents, saying only that it contained personal belongings. The Press of Atlantic City on Tuesday quoted sources as saying it contained $30,000.

French in furor over philosopher's links to Nazism

By MARILYN AUGUST

PARIS (AP) — The normally staid community of French philosophers is in an uproar over the Nazi past of Martin Heidegger, the late West German whose philosophy had a wide following in France.

Specialists have long known that Heidegger, whose classic "Being and Time" in 1927 influenced a whole generation of existentialist philosophers, was once a member of the Nazi Party.

It has not been clear just how deep his fascist sympathies ran, or how his disciples contributed — knowingly or unknowingly — to protecting his reputation.

Heidegger, one of the ranking philosophers of the 20th century, has been a particularly dominant figure in France, where his writings helped shape the thought of Jean-Paul Sartre and other thinkers.

Twelve years after his death, his standing is now threatened by the mushrooming controversy, which focuses on the question: Were Heidegger's Nazi ties a matter of opportunism, self-preservation and a weak character — or a poisonous reflection of his lifelong belief in the superiority of the German people, language and culture?

The book "Heidegger and Nazism" by Victor Farias, a Chilean philosopher and former student of Heidegger at the University of Freiburg in Germany, goes far beyond anything previously published about the German thinker.

Farias found documents indicating that Heidegger was a card-carrying, dues-paying member of the Nazi Party until 1945, the year World War II ended. He argues that Heidegger acted not out of circumstance or opportunism, but out of a commitment to the principles of National Socialism: elitism, discrimination and anti-Semitism.

He further maintains that Heidegger resigned as rector of the University of Freiburg in 1934 not because official university policy was pro-Nazi, but because it was too moderate. Farias says others later became the official party ideologues at the university only because Heidegger was considered too radical.

While reaction to Farias' book has been loud and varied, French philosophers are perhaps most troubled by the idea that Heidegger's Nazi beliefs are the underpinnings of his thought.

Francois Fedier, a devoted Heideggerian, called Ferias' book a "shameless falsification" and accused the author of "tampering with documents."

Heidegger "was not a hero, but neither was he the partisan activist and anti-Semitic denouncer of Jews who emerges from the imaginary portrait painted by Victor Farias," Fedier wrote in the latest issue of Debat, a philosophy journal.

Fedier did not deny Heidegger's attraction to Nazism, but called it merely a "serious error in judgment. Heidegger did not see how dangerous Hitler was. He let himself be fooled."

In two recently published books, the French deconstructionist Jacques Derrida traced the links between Heideggerian thought and Nazism. Critics praised the strength of Derrida's analysis, but said he did not go far enough.

"One would have liked to see Derrida...express his own moral indignation," wrote Robert Maggiori in the newspaper Liberation. "Why be so polite? Why does Heidegger's work, like a sword, command its victim's respect?"

Farias is less polite. He devotes a chapter to Heidegger's first essay, written in 1910, which extols the virtues of Abraham a Sancta Clara, a 17th century Viennese monk known for his virulent anti-Semitism and xenophobia.

"Important people like Abraham a Sancta Clara should remain alive in our hearts, working silently in the soul of the people," Heidegger wrote then. Heidegger discussed Sancta Clara again in 1964 and was no less laudatory.

Heidegger's later work denounced dehumanization in modern society. Yet, as Farias and others, including Maurice Blanchot and Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe, point out, he never denounced the Holocaust or uttered a single word of sorrow or regret over the death of millions of Jews.

"Heidegger's irreparable mistake was his silence on The Extermination," Blanchot wrote in a letter published in Le Nouvel Observateur, a French weekly.

Senators ask Canadian assurances

Ending subsidies crucial to trade pact

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A group of 20 senators, most from Western states, called on President Reagan Tuesday to provide guarantees that Canada will end subsidies to its natural resource producers as American tariffs are lowered under a free-trade pact recently concluded by the two governments.

The negotiated pact calls for the two governments to study the subsidies over the next five years, but the legislators want something more binding.

In a letter to the president, the senators, led by Max Baucus, D-Mont., said the United States had "tied its hands" on countering subsidies with countervailing duties, "while obtaining no assurances from Canada that it will discontinue its present subsidy programs or refrain from initiating new ones."

The guarantees that the senators are seeking might require Reagan to reopen negotiations, which both governments are loath to do.

The senators proposed that the reduction of American tariffs be tied specifically to the elimination of those subsidies that the pact leaves untouched.

A Canadian official said his government had no comment on the proposal. Roger Bolton, a spokesman for the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, said he found the letter "cooperative in tone," adding that "this is the beginning of a process" of drafting the implementing legislation. But he stressed that "we must be careful not to let the drafting process supersede what we agreed to."

The agreement calls for panels to settle disputes betweeen the two countries. A spokesman for Baucus said the senators believed that the panels would never permit the United States to retaliate against the Canadian subsidies.

"Perhaps it is too late to address this problem completely, but steps can be taken to minimize these problems and build momentum for further market openings," the letter said.

It added, "The implementing language for the agreement must be drafted so as to put pressure on both the U.S. and Canada to eliminate subsidy programs and trade barriers that are not covered by the agreement."

The senators who signed the letter represent states that produce nonferrous metals, plywood, wheat, coal and natural gas, which face stiff competition from Canadian producers.

Since the pact was signed on Jan. 2, legislators have expressed a number of reservations reflecting complaints of particular industries that might feel intensified competition from Canada. Supporters of the accord argue that there will be many more winners than losers. The winners include a wide range of manufacturers that will be able to sell more products in Canada, as well as providers of financial serives and high-technology goods.

Texas, DOE fund energy consortium

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — A new agreement between Texas and the U.S. Department of Energy will allow the state to take the lead in 21st century energy developments, Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday.

The "memo of understanding" authorizes the department to finance, on a matching basis, state research funds for enhanced energy production techniques.

The governor and Assistant Energy Secretary Allen Wampler also signed a "statement of intent" that would direct $500,000 to the new national Geosciences Institute for Oil and Gas Recovery Research to be located at the University of Texas at Austin.

Quarterly trade figures confirm gap narrowing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 6 percent boost in U.S. overseas sales helped nudge the nation's foreign trade deficit down to $40.2 billion in the final three months of 1987, the Commerce Department reported today.

That was a smaller gap than the $40.4 billion record deficit sustained from July through September. Still, the year finished with a record $159.3 billion deficit for all of 1987, calculated on a balance-of-payments basis.

Today's figures confirmed an end-of-year narrowing of the trade shortfall that already had shown up in the department's monthly merchandise trade reports.

Those parallel figures showed a $43 billion deficit for the fourth quarter and a $171.9 deficit for all of 1987.

Today's figures are smaller because they subtract factors such as the cost of shipping, insurance and military sales from the monthly numbers.

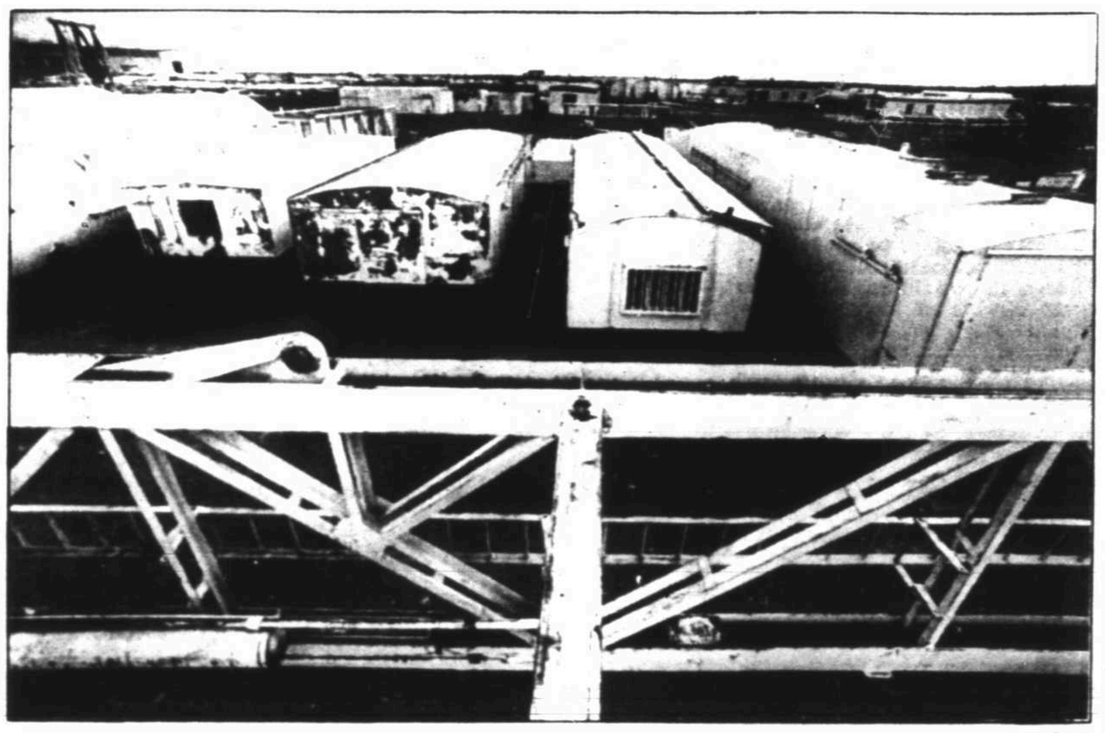
EQUIPMENT SALES



File Photo

After slack sales in 1987, auctioneer Daniel Kruse expects to see more drilling rigs on the block this year as banks ' holding rigs for too long a time will have to dispose of them."

Rig prices firming slightly

More rigs will be sold in 1988

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Prices for oil field drilling equipment are firming, and the demise of the U.S. rig fleet has slowed, but the U.S. drilling industry remains "crippled" according to a San Antonio auction company.

"Overall prices for surplus drilling rigs and related equipment were up about 14 percent in 1987," said Daniel J. Kruse, chief auctioneer and owner of Superior Auctioneers & Marketing of San Antonio. But Kruse, whose firm sells about 76 percent of the rigs sold at auction in the U.S., added that the number of rigs sold last year was only about half the 300 rigs sold in 1986.

Kruse indicated also that 1987 reflected a steady increase in prices, while 1986 was characterized by erratic swings. "I think this calming and firming of prices and the decrease in rig sales is because the major players who were buying rigs for speculation in 1986 have already made their play," said Kruse.

Despite fewer rigs being sold in 1987, he expects to see an increase in sales this year. "There are a lot of banks that have been holding rigs for too long a time and will have to dispose of them in 1988," he said. "Also, contractors will attempt to trim fleets for cash flow and speculators will be putting rigs back on the market in an attempt to capitalize on the low prices they paid for equipment in 1986."

IRS, taxpayers stumble over tax law

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service is making mistakes on one-fourth of the telephoned questions it answers this year while taxpayers are showing they, too, are not up to speed on some basic provisions of the new tax law.

The errors of the 4,500 IRS employees who answer taxpayers' telephoned questions are documented by a comprehensive check by the IRS itself and by a less-detailed survey by the General Accounting office. At best, you can expect the IRS to be right 74.8 percent of the time; at worst, you could get a correct, complete answer 57 percent of the time.

No one has figures on how many taxpayers are making their own mistakes, but the IRS has found three areas in which errors are cropping up consistently. All three areas were changed by the 1986 tax overhaul. They are:

—Some non-itemizing taxpayers are using the wrong standard deduction. For most single people under 65, the deduction is $2,540; for joint returns, $3,760. Those blind or over 65 get larger deductions.

—Some single filers of the simplest form, the 1040EZ, are failing to indicate on line 4 whether they are eligible to be claimed as a dependent by someone else, usually a parent. If you are eligible, your standard deduction may be less than $2,540.

—Some itemizers are ignoring a new rule that limits the deduction of miscellaneous expenses, such as union dues. Only the portion of such expenses exceeding 2 percent of adjusted gross income may be deducted.

The Hilton recently completed installing a new sprinkler system, redesigning corridors and elevators — including wall coverings and carpets — and redecorating guest rooms to achieve a contemporary look. Also added was a new outdoor spa with two hot tubs, and renovation and landscaping of the pool area.

Decorator touches were also added throughout the common areas of the hotel to offer a more contemporary look.

Employees of HORIZON MUD CO. INC. have settled into new, larger offices in the Century Plaza office building on the corner of Big Spring and Wall.

In addition, the company has just completed a $40,000 liquid mud plant at their warehouse in Hobbs, N.M. that added two jobs to that city's economy.

Tony Farish, president of Horizon, explained "The mud plant was built to enhance our position in the drilling side of the business. It will allow us to be more serviceable to the companies drilling deeper wells in the area."

The plant's secondary purpose, he said, was to allow Horizon to produce workover and completion fluids, he noted.

Midland Park Mall is looking forward to a new tenant: B DALTON SOFTWARE.

Susan Jacinto, marketing director at the mall, said the new store — offering software and other computer accessories — will be located in the former Kiddily Winks space, near Dillard's. Construction is expected to begin in March, with the store opening in May, she said.

SECOND SKIN, formerly located at Northwest Crossing, has relocated to Midland Plaza, between the Light House and Hastings.

Owner Janice Black said she will continue to carry dance, aerobics and casual fashions, but the new, larger location will allow her to add a line of cosmetics.

Black noted that she has been pleased with business at her store, and she expects the new location's higher visibility and traffic count to benefit sales.

SCHLOTZSKY'S is returning to Midland, with a new store in the Plaza Shopping Center at Wadley and Garfield — the former Big Cheese Pizza location.

Owner Cleve West said the store, which will open in early March, will offer six varieties of sandwiches on sourdough or wheat bread, as well as soups and salads. There will be indoor seating, a drive-through window, and "we encourage phone-in orders," West said.

West owns the Schlotzsky's in San Angelo, and his partner in the Midland store, Eddie Boykin, owns four Schlotzsky's in Abilene. West said there is a possibility that he and Boykin will open an Odessa Schlotzsky's as well as an additional Midland store.

Oil prices rise in quiet trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose slightly in quiet trading Tuesday, driven largely by technical factors, analysts said.

"The market seems to be in a holding pattern," said Peter Beutel, assistant director at Elders Futures Inc. "There's a lot of different signals. (But) more people seem to be in a buying mood rather than a selling mood."

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed at $16.60 per barrel, up 12 cents from Monday.

Among March contracts for refined products, wholesale heating oil settled at 46.46 cents a gallon, up 0.67 cent from Monday, while wholesale unleaded gasoline closed up 0.58 cent at 46.90 cents a gallon.

Beutel attributed the improvement to technical factors prior to the American Petroleum Institute's weekly report on oil production.

Dollar mixed, gold trades lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in dull European trading today as dealers waited for new factors to get the market out of the doldrums.

Gold prices fell in London following a large sell order from the Middle East, which had a big impact because the market was so thin, dealers said.

Dealers said Tuesday's congressional testimony in Washington by U.S. Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan failed to give the market new directions and they didn't expect his repeat performance for the Senate Banking Committee today to have much more impact.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.25 yen to a closing 128.75. Later, in London, it was quoted slightly higher at 128.85 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday's rates:

—1.69225 West German marks, down from 1.6945

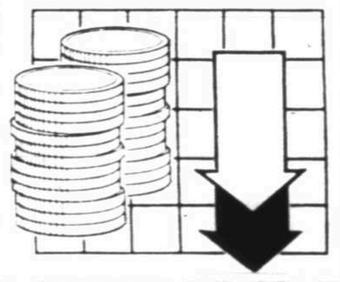
—1.3905 Swiss francs, up from 1.3895

—5.72675 French francs, up from 5.7240

—1.89775 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9000

—1,247.00 Italian lire, up from 1,246.60

—1.2673 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2712



In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.7665 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.7655 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $441.70 a troy ounce and at midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a lower recommended price of $438. Both were down from late Tuesday's bid of $442.50.

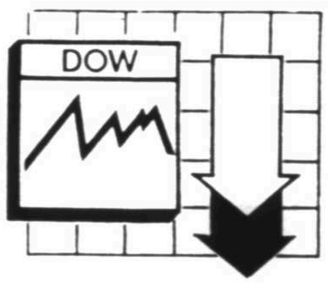
In Zurich, the bid price was $438.50, down from $442 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.60 to close at a bid $444.20.

Silver also fell in London where the bid price was $6.28 a troy ounce at midmorning today compared with late Tuesday's $6.33.

Stocks slip 1.17 points Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished little changed Tuesday as it ran into some resistance trying to extend its recent rally.



The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 25.70 points on Monday to its highest level in six weeks, slipped back 1.17 to 2,039.12.

The market's best-known indicator had risen more than 144 points between Feb. 8 and Monday's close which was its highest finish since Jan. 7.

Advancing issues outpaced losers by a narrow margin among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 767 up, 725 down and 493 unchanged.

Big Board volume rose to 192.26 million shares from 178.93 million shares on Monday.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market fell $2.83 billion, or 0.11 percent, in value.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 219.41 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 0.57 to 305.77, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was off 0.62 to 285.02.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.29 to 282.72. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 361.08, up 1.10.

Court rules in OKC partnership

Nation's largest energy unions talk merger

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Governing boards of two of the nation's largest energy unions have met separately in Denver to discuss a possible merger, according to a union source.

Executive boards of the United Mine Workers of America and the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union have been meeting privately in Denver since Monday, the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday.

Experts said the combination of the unions — each of which report about 100,000 active members — would consolidate the bargaining power of the two unions in their dealings with major oil companies.

Black & Decker sweetens takeover bid

BALTIMORE (AP) — Black & Decker Corp. has sweetened a hostile bid for American Standard Inc. a second time, raising its offer to $68 from $65 per share and promising court action to block the target's recapitalization plan.

The latest offer from Black & Decker on Tuesday — worth about $2.11 billion — surprised some analysts who said the bidding was becoming inflated.

Occidental liable for Love Canal clean up

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled Occidental Chemical Corp. is liable for the estimated $250 million cost of cleaning up the Love Canal landfill that became synonymous with environmental disaster.

After nine years of deliberations, U.S. District Judge John Curtin said Tuesday that Occidental produced the wastes that created the disaster and stored them in a way that would eventually result in toxic leakage.

While prices have improved slightly, Kruse describes the drilling industry as still deep in depression. "We are still fighting salvage prices in some categories," he said.

One of those categories is draw works and derricks. Kruse doesn't like to use 1981 dollars as a comparison because of the highly inflated prices at that time, but he concedes that it has become the industry standard. Derricks which sold for a penny on the 1981 dollar in 1986 are now up to about three cents on the dollar, says Kruse, and drawworks which sold for three cents on the dollar in 1986 sold for five cents in 1987. "Drawworks which sold for $300,000 in 1981 could have been purchased at auction for $7,500 in 1986 and about $17,000 in 1987," he said.

A three-tank mud systems system which sold for over $300,000 in 1981 has shown little improvement, going for about five cents on the dollar as compared to three cents on the dollar in 1986, but Kruse says significant improvement has been made with well control equipment and engines.

Blow out preventers, and choke manifolds which might have sold for three cents on the dollars in 1986, brought about 14 cents in 1987. Engines have fared better because of their uses outside the oil field and because they were price-supported by dealers who bid up the price at auctions.

Drill pipe, drill collars and tubulars have fared the best in price, as a result of a dwindling supply. He says that drill pipe is selling for about 50-70 percent of new, but new is selling for less than 1981 dollars.

The 1981 rig inventory was estimated at about 5,200 and Kruse says about 1,800 of that inventory has disappeared through cannibalization by contractors and piecemeal auction sales, a position he calls critical for the domestic oil industry.

"If we were to have an upturn in oil prices or a crisis in the Middle East, it would take the U.S. drilling industry several years to be able to come up with enough rigs and crews to respond," says Kruse.

He calculates that about 800 rigs have been sold at auction piece meal and another 1,000 cannibalized by contractors. "A big problem will be coming up with the crews to man rigs," said Kruse. "Most of the experience has left the oil patch and a lot of it won't come back."

Kruse sees value returning to drilling rigs within the next two years, as the result of an upturn led by improving natural gas prices: "The deep gas rigs are the most undervalued in the market today. I think we rigs bought today for $375,000 selling for $1.5 to $2 million by 1991. It has to happen." He said it would happen when the natural gas supply and demand curve crossed sometime within the next two to three years.

That institute, a consortium of 12 other states and universities, which will develop a national plan for oil and gas recovery research will be based at UT's Bureau of Economic Geology at the Balcones Research Center.

"This agreement will enable Texas to position ourselves as world leaders in the development of the technology needed to boost the production of existing resources," said Clements, in Washington for the National Governors Association conference.

The governor said new research could increase the recovery ratio of oil in a reservoir from one-third to two-thirds. "The ultimate goal of this partnership is simple," he said.

"We will work together to enhance our nation's domestic energy supplies. By doing so we will bolster the Texas economy, safeguard the national economy and help ensure a strong national defense."

Robert Finley, a research scientist at the Bureau of Economic Geology, said the agreement for the matching program sets up a framework for the Energy Department to match research expenditures during the next five years at any Texas university.

Current programs at the bureau that could qualify for matching funds include a $2 million-a-year research effort in natural gas recovery and a $500,000-a-year program for improving oil and gas production on university lands in West Texas, Finley said.

In addition to UT, 12 other states and academic institutions will form a consortium that will participate in the institute. The members represent all the petroleum-producing regions of the country, and include Texas A&M University, the Colorado School of Mines, the New Mexico Institute of Mining Technologies and the University of Wyoming, Clements' office said.

The balance-of-payments deficit is also adjusted for seasonal variations, while the monthly merchandise figures are not.

Exports, becoming more price-competitive under the weakening exchange value of the dollar, increased $3.9 billion, or 6 percent, in the final quarter of 1987, to $69.1 billion.

Imports were also up, but by a smaller 4 percent, to $109.2 billon, a $3.8 billon rise over third-quarter figures.

Both imports and exports reached record levels during the October-December quarter, the government said.

The trade deficit with Japan increased $1.3 billion to $15 billion; the deficit with Western Europe was up $1.5 billion to $8.2 billion, and the shortfall with Canada rose $100 million to $1.8 billion.

Non-petroleum imports increased $5.3 billion, or 6 percent, to $98.1 billion in the fourth quarter. Passenger cars from Canada were up 52 percent, a $1 billion increase. Auto imports from all other countries, including Japan, fell by 7 percent, or $700 million, over the period.

Petroleum imports decreased $1.5 billion, or 12 perdcent, to $11.1 billion, with both price and volume down.

New Zealand: Economics lab down under

'Rogernomics' faces criticism as long-standing rules are relaxed

By SETH MYDANS
New York Times News Service

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — In its rapid shift over the last few years from one of the most tightly regulated economies outside the Eastern European bloc to one of the most free and open, New Zealand has been experiencing what people here call "speed wobbles."

Manufacturing enterprises, stripped of their subsidies, closed down. Farmers, who form the base of the New Zealand economy, suffered from the sudden removal of government support, and a population shift toward the cities began.

But it was not until economic policy began to cross over into social policy last December, with the announcement of a flat tax and income-maintenance plan, that serious speed wobbles set in.

Now, after a public spat within the ruling Labor Party, the government has drawn back from a proposed flat income tax rate, the first major setback for "Rogernomics," as the new policy has come to be known.

Under this policy, which takes its nickname from Finance Minister Roger Douglas, New Zealand has discarded government restrictions on wages, prices, banking, rents and foreign currency exchange, along with import barriers and high subsidies.

For more than three years since Prime Minister David Lange took over, the nation has largely supported the policy, priding itself on its role as something of a laboratory for economic theory. Indeed, debate here has focused less on the correctness of the policy than on the speed with which it has been carried out.

Last July, Lange's government was overwhelmingly re-elected on a Rogernomics platform even though the policy had not yet borne much fruit.

"I couldn't believe a government could be re-elected on these indicator numbers," a Western diplomat said. "Nineteen percent inflation, unemployment at its highest point in history, real incomes down. Just about every number that could be wrong was wrong."

At the time of the election, interest rates stood at 22 percent and unemployment had climbed to 6 percent in a country that had in the past enjoyed almost full employment. Interest rates and unemployment have since come down a bit.

Lange, whose politics embody the traditional Labor Party social conscience, had accepted Douglas' rigorous approach as an economic necessity, but there have been signs that the marriage has been uneasy. The debate over the flat tax proposal brought this into the open.

In an exchange of policy statements in recent weeks, Lange said that not even 10 families should suffer from a flat tax, while Douglas said he was prepared to accept adverse effects on 30,000 people. The adverse effects would mostly result from higher taxes paid by lower-income people coupled with a planned increased in value-added taxes.

The difficulties began when Douglas announced his plan for a single income tax rate, which he later said would be about 23 percent, along with a guaranteed minimum income.

Lange waited until Douglas was outside the country at the end of January to announce that the plan would be shelved. Douglas cut short his trip to defend his policy, in what commentators here called the first major rift in the Labor Party.

Finally, in a compromise, the flat tax proposal was shelved in favor of a two-tiered tax structure that would replace three tiers. Under the Cabinet's new plan, the top personal tax rate would drop to 33 percent from 48 percent and the corporate tax rate would fall from to 28 percent from 48 percent.

The rift goes to the heart of the paradox of Rogernomics, in which a party still dedicated to the social welfare program it put in place decades ago is busily engaged in dismantling the economic policies that have supported it.

The introduction of politics into the highest levels of the economic debate is perhaps itself a lesson in New Zealand's laboratory experiment with economic theory, the Western diplomat said.

"I think the lesson has been brought home to Mr. Douglas," he said. "It is impossible to proceed with economic theory free of politics."

For a while, it had seemed that this might be possible. New Zealand, with a population of just 3.3 million, is a mostly homogeneous, well-to-do society, mostly well educated and with few serious social problems.

It has what one local analyst called "a nice, neat little government" with a one-house legislature, no state governments and few of the special-interest pressures that hamper economic daring in other nations.

"This is pure textbook economics Mr. Douglas has been doing," the Western diplomat said. "People say economics is not a science because we have no laboratories to test it in," he continued. "But here we have a little laboratory down in the bottom of the world where all these textbook theories can be put into practice. It's quite exciting to stand here and watch."

The theories under observation are close to those of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in Britain, who has also trimmed government regulations and subsidies and opened the market to obtain a leaner and more effective economy.

"There is nothing new in all this; it is sort of an amalgam of all the theories that have been thrown around the world," the diplomat said. "But no single country has been able to put them together as well as the New Zealanders have up to now."

The hardships suffered by the agricultural and manufacturing sectors have to an extent been balanced by urban growth and a construction boom, along with a burst of trading in stocks and bonds.

By the start of this year, inflation had dropped to less than 10 percent for the first time since the early 1970s, largely in response to the introduction of a 10 percent value-added tax.

According to the economic theory Douglas has followed so closely, interest rates should come down and the economy will get stronger.

In the long term, the most serious threat that Rogernomics may face is out of its control: the prospect of a worldwide recession that would damage New Zealand's export-oriented economy and slow financial trading.

Perhaps that is the final lesson of New Zealand's economic laboratory, that in today's small world, there is no such thing as a pure laboratory environment.

Corporate citizens get out the vote

By BARBARA SCHERR TRENK
New York Times News Service

It's far too early to tell whether voter turnout for the 1988 presidential election will be greater than the 53.1 percent of eligible voters who turned out for the 1984 presidential election. But if it is, a number of businesses will be able take some of the credit.

Voter registration procedures are more complicated in the United States than in most other democracies. Each state sets its own rules, making it difficult for companies that operate in more than one state to mount a companywide registration effort. But with help from the League of Women Voters, county election officials and various secretaries of state, many corporate public affairs departments are helping their employees and the general public make their way to the ballot box. Federal Election Commission rules require that a qualified nonprofit, nonpartisan organization or appropriate government agency jointly sponsor any corporate voter registration campaign.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the retailing giant, has asked its more than 1,000 stores to act as customer voter registration sites for a few days during 1988. Companies like Blount Inc., an international manufacturing and construction company with permanent operations in 14 states, will be trying to make it easier for far-flung employees to register.

Once people are registered, they may still need reminders to vote. If they work at Hallmark Cards Inc., however, they won't be able to miss the red white and blue notices in the company's hallways and on cafeteria tables on election day — and on the menu such patriotic favorites as Yankee Doodle noodles and American apple pie.

Non-partisan information on the candidates — and frequently, opportunities to meet local and presidential candidates -- are available to employees at the Nationwide Insurance Cos.' corporate headquarters in Cleveland. In fact, Ohio Public Television will be broadcasting an April 27 debate among presidential primary candidates direct from the auditorium at the company's headquarters, according to June G. Ebner, civic action program coordinator.

Some corporate efforts simply encourage employees to register and vote; others go further. At Nationwide, for instance, all election-related programs are non-partisan, but the company sometimes encourages workers who choose to join its Civic Action Program to get in touch with their legislators on specific issues that affect their industry.

WAL-MART STORES, the nation's third-largest retail chain, held a major voter registration drive in late January in its 650 stores in 12 of the Southern states that will be participating in the March 8 "Super Tuesday" presidential primary. The remainder of the chain's 1,114 outlets in the Southwest and Midwest will hold voter registration campaigns in September, in time to enable new registrants to vote in the November presidential election.

Wal-Mart is not new to registration efforts; in 1984, the chain signed up 150,000 registrants — "more new voters than any other private company in America," according to James von Gremp, the former director of corporate and public affairs, who ran the program. The stores provided space for registration tables on Fridays and Saturdays. Many county clerks worked at voter registration tables in Wal-Mart stores instead of town halls on those days.

Later this year, Lord & Taylor, the retail chain, will repeat its 1984 in-store voter registration event. Before the last presidential election, the chain set up registration tables at 17 of its 46 stores: Shoppers were able to register in the chain's flagship Fifth Avenue and metropolitan area suburban stores, as well as those in Boston, Philadelphia and Florida.

In Texas, where Secretary of State Jack M. Rains has vowed to register a million new voters, citizens can sign up to vote by dropping a completed application postcard in the mail. Rains said he has received strong support from businesses. For instance, the Southland Corp.'s 1,100 Texas 7-Eleven stores are displaying window posters in English and Spanish, noting that sign-up cards are available inside the stores.

To help Texans who travel frequently, Southwest Airlines is placing registration forms at their ticket counters. And title companies are now handing registration cards to homeowners at closings. Texas businesses are also encouraging registration by mailing reminders with utility, telephone and gasoline credit card bills, Rains said.

In California, companies that regularly have registration cards available include McDonald's, Yum-Yum Donuts and Chief Auto Parts Stores.

Many corporations are encouraging registration by providing financial support to the League of Women Voters for its Sept. 9 National Voter Registration Day. Other companies have promised to help cover the cost of the league-sponsored presidential debates — and Herman Miller Inc. is supplying furniture for the events.

WHEN LARGE employers sponsor voter registration drives for their workers, the number of new registrants can be as large as the voting population of an entire small town. The Nationwide Insurance Cos., with 14 regional offices, has registered or reregistered an average of 3,000 voters a year since 1984.

At Hallmark Cards, which has its headquarters in Kansas City, Mo., retired Hallmarkers are often deputized by county clerks to enable them to handle in-company voter registration responsibilities. Such drives usually garner about 1,600 new names. Reminders to register take many forms at Hallmark, including displays of posters made by elementary school students to help their elders remember their civic responsibility.

At Blount Inc., with headquarters in Montgomery, Ala., and permanent operations in 14 states, some employees live in one state and commute to another, while still others are assigned to construction field sites across the country. Blount estimates that its work force may be living and voting in up to 40 states, so it makes information on local registration procedures available in all locations.

Equifax Inc., an Atlanta company that provides credit checks, insurance risk and pre-employment evaluations, is arranging for sample ballots to be available in the home office for employees, and for a demonstration voting booth to be temporarily moved to corporate headquarters to "help put people at ease when they go to the polls," said Mary Mayhew, a legislative analyst in the company's government Relations and Corporate Public Affairs department.

New York City's League of Women Voters holds voter registration days at work sites on request, when the organization has sufficient volunteers available. Metropolitan Life Insurance, Philip Morris and Westvaco are among the local businesses that have invited the League to provide on-the-job registration.

Companies that want to reward employees for registering to vote should proceed carefully, advises William L. Fisher, a legislative advisor for the Southland Corp. The company held a popular drawing for a trip to Acapulco, Mexico, open to any Dallas corporate headquarters worker who could show a voter registration card. Such programs must include both old and new registered voters, Fisher said, in order not to violate regulations against paying people to register.

THERE'S PLENTY of help available to businesses that want to encourage employees or customers to register and vote, or to participate more actively in the political process.

Both Hallmark and Nationwide Insurance are eager to share their experiences with other companies. Nationwide's 20-minute award-winning videotape describes both its voter registration effort and its voluntary political education program for employees who want to learn more about the legislative process — and perhaps join letter-writing campaigns and other efforts to support corporate legislative objectives. About 300 companies have responded to Nationwide's offer to circulate the tape for a $30 fee. Hallmark's six-minute tape, "The Vote: A New Challenge for American Business," released in August, and its looseleaf handbook, "Voter Registration and Get-Out-The-Vote," are also available to businesses.

The League of Women Voters, while primarily a volunteer organization with 110,000 members throughout the country, has a paid staff of 70 in its Washington headquarters that supplies voter registration information to corporations and other organizations.

The league's election services specialist, Marlene Cohn, says that companies running registration and voter education programs often use three of the league's publications — "Easy Does It" (a chart showing voter registration deadlines in each state), "Getting Out the Vote" (a how-to guide for voter registration campaigns), and "Pick-a-Candidate" (a guide to evaluating candidates' stands on the issues). Many businesses also buy "Voters' Guides" in bulk to distribute to employees.

U.S. voter turnout

The percentage of voting-aged Americans who participated in Congressional elections declined from 55 percent in 1966 to 46 percent in 1986. The level of voter registration has also dropped during the past two decades.

Presidential campaigns: candidate spending

In 1960, candidates for the U.S. presidency spent a total of $30 million, compared to $325 million spent by presidential contenders during the 1984 election campaign. When the figures are adjusted for inflation, however, the spending gap between the 1960 and 1984 elections is less dramatic. According to the Citizens Research Foundation, campaign spending for 1984 was the equivalent of $96.3 million in 1960 dollars.

Ad specialties may fuel big election $$$ returns

By SHARON BENOIT
Copley News Service

Election '88 may be heating up in the political arena, but in advertising specialty houses all is quiet in anticipation of which presidential candidate will ring up the most product sales for catalogs, mass merchandise retail stores and boutiques in the months ahead.

Most of the half-dozen ad specialty houses queried also are reporting few, if any, major breakthroughs in the political product field this year. However, Shazzam Visuals Inc. believes it has a winner with its colorful, large-sized bath sponges that feature prestamped names of presidential hopefuls.

"We tried this product out last year without an election, and it did very well," stated Bob Lamberg, president of the Beverly Hills-based specialty house. "People really seem to get a kick out of the sponges... maybe it's because instead of a lot of hot air, the candidate is full of hot water."

Lamberg, a 22-year veteran ad specialty buyer, says the hottest items expected to sell during this election year are rather dull.

Bob Waldorf, president of The Idea Man in Los Angeles, agrees with Lamberg. Both ad specialty experts are predicting just about the same results.

"Traditional items always seem to do pretty well, such as door hangers, T-shirts, pens, bumper stickers, refrigerator magnets, cocktail glasses, visors and straw hats," stated Waldorf.

In addition, Lamberg expects to capitalize on the popularity of the "Sun Buster" car shades, which "more than likely will be spotlighting the names (and possibly mug shots?) of the front-runners in election '88."

One unusual pre-election item doing quite well this early in the race is a Reagan Countdown Calendar. This hot product was created and published by Laurence McGilvery, owner of an antiquarian book store in La Jolla, Calif. McGilvery was a late entry into the calendar race for 1988. He didn't go to press with the calendar until after Thanksgiving. Distribution was limited, through independent specialty book stores in Oregon, Washington and California in early December.

Quick sales of the calendar on the West Coast prompted McGilvery to take the Reagan Countdown Calendar to Washington, D.C., and New York City. Now, he says, this product is popping up in bookstores all over the United States, and he's received inquiries from stores in Holland, Italy, England, France and Japan.

In March, McGilvery plans to set up a booth for the popular calendar item at the California State Democratic Party convention to be held in Palm Springs.

The Countdown Calendar features a compilation of 746 Reagan quotes from his eight-year term as president. McGilvery considers the quotes to be "edifying, astonishing, hilarious and appalling."

He says this satirical calendar is a "gathering and collection of political rope, allowing Reagan administrators to hang themselves all over again."

Originally, McGilvery published 25,000 calendars. So far, he's sold 18,000, and he expects to sell out within the next couple of months.

In the meantime, manufacturers and retailers are awaiting results from the upcoming state primaries and, of course, the national conventions planned during the summer of '88.

So far, no one is reporting any run on diamond-studded donkey earrings, stuffed Dole pineapples, fancy Hart-shaped lingerie or New Age burning Bushes.

Outdated accounting overlooks intangibles

By ROBERT POOL
Hearst News Service

In the 1980s, a company's physical assets indicate only a part of a firm's worth — sometimes a very small part. For many companies, their most important asset is their human capital — the knowledge and abilities of their employees. But accounting systems are not designed to track human capital.

Most businesses use accounting systems with features that are 100 years old or older, productivity experts say. The experts contend that our accounting systems are one of the least modern and least efficient parts of business today, and slow the introduction of new technology and new ways of doing things.

C. Jackson Grayson, chairman of the Houston-based American Productivity Center, says most accounting systems are hybrids of century-old concepts of financial transactions, manufacturing reporting methods from the 1800s, generally accepted accounting principles and Security and Exchange Commission requirements.

"Most financial and cost-accounting systems were designed for an earlier era labor-intensive manufacturing," he writes in his recent book, "American Business: A Two-Minute Warning." "Trying to make 20th century decisions based on 18th century accounting principles is like driving a car with the emergency brakes on. You can do it, but there is a lot of smoke and screeching."

The problems with accounting systems, Grayson says, stem from the original intention of these systems — to let shareholders watch how a company's physical assets were being used. A hundred years ago, manufacturing had one measure of productivity: how many man-hours it took to turn out a given amount of product. The most important capital investments were machines that could provide more output with fewer hours. Accounting systems were designed to reflect that.

Today, although such labor-saving devices are still important, labor-enhancing machines and techniques play an increasingly larger role in improving productivity. Such devices improve the quality of employees' work, which is much harder to quantify than the number of hours worked.

Standard accounting systems were not designed to measure such intangibles as quality or customer satisfaction. Without being able to put a dollar value on them, businesses often have a hard time justifying them, Grayson says.

As an example, he mentioned a company board meeting he had attended. At the meeting, an employee was trying to convince the board to invest in a quality-improving machine and system. With the new system in place, the company could expect better lead times on its product, fewer factory rejects, greater customer satisfaction and fewer product recalls — in short, higher quality.

But the employee had a hard time convincing the board, Grayson says, because the calculated return on investment wasn't high enough. There was no way the company's accounting system could put a value on the intangible benefits of increased productivity.

Over the long run, the company could expect to improve its market share, perhaps, or increase its prices because its customers would be willing to pay for higher quality. More important, if it didn't make such investments, it might find itself unable to compete with company's that did.

"He couldn't put numbers on this in the traditional terms of our accounting system," Grayson says.

In the end, the board put the issue on hold and asked the person making the argument to come back with some numbers on the intangibles. Even Grayson, a well-known productivity expert, could not convince the board it would be a good idea to make the investment.

Grayson says he knows of a number of companies that decided against increased spending on training because of the way the money would show up on their books. Standard accounting practices report employee training dollars as an expense, so increasing spending on training means reporting lower profits. Grayson says businesses should treat money spent on training as an investment rather than an expense.

The traditional distinction between an investment and an expense is that an investment leaves a business with something of tangible value over a long period of time. Buying a building, for example, is an investment because that building will contribute to the business's earnings for many years.

Employee training, on the other hand, is listed as an expense. But Grayson says that if a business trains its employees, it has something of long term value just as surely as if it had bought a building. He suggests investments in "human capital" be treated just as investments in physical assets are treated. The expenditures should be capitalized as part of the company's net worth, and then depreciated over time.

This idea clashes with the traditional accounting goal of making everything as tangible as possible.

"Human capital — more than plants, equipment and inventory —is the cornerstone of competitiveness, growth and productivity," he writes in his book. "It is time that business began to measure the value of that wealth."

Reagan said the pact would save American consumers "hundreds of millions of dollars while also improving our export opportunities."

The administration is expected to sit down shortly with the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means committees — the panels with trade responsibility — to begin drafting the legislation to put the accord into effect.

Once the legislation is submitted it must be voted on without amendments within 90 legislative days under special "fast-track" rules. The agreement is not a treaty and thus requires majority approval in both houses, not two-thirds approval of the Senate.

Separately, the National Governors Association voted to support the agreement despite fears that some industries could suffer. The vote was 30 to 5, with the negative votes being cast by the Governors of Kentucky, Michigan, North Dakota, West Virginia and Wyoming.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Revocable trust provides for grandson's education

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. I am 74, a widower and alone, except for a divorced son and a 9-year-old grandson. The boy was the apple of my wife's eye and, as I like him very much, I wish him to have something of his own when he is old enough to know what money is all about. Perhaps he can buy himself a good education.

However, I'm surely going to kick the bucket before he becomes an advanced student. I will soon receive a few hundred thousand dollars from the sale of property and wish to put it someplace where it will be available to my grandson 10 years down the road.

I can't bury the money by the third tree in the park and leave instructions for him to dig it up. I thought of a trust fund but the banks would gobble up most of it. I thought of certificates of deposit and other things. You are the expert. What is the best answer?

A. I have long held to the theory that there is no such thing as an "expert" who knows everything about the world of finance. Instead, there are people with varying degrees of ignorance.

With that in mind and being aware of the many different types of investments available, you should realize that no one can tell you, for sure, "the best" place to invest for 10 years or any other period of time.

Setting up a trust in your will for your grandson would be a logical move. The trust's investments can be turned over to a bank or any other organization or individual you designate. My vote would be for a bank experienced in such matters.

Fees for handling trusts and investment management vary from bank to bank. But they are no where near as high as you seem to think. Those fees won't "gobble up" what you leave to your grandson.

Set up appointments with the trust departments of a number of banks. Find out what they have to offer and ask to see the performance results of their pooled trust funds. That will give you a pretty good idea how well they handle investments. Pick the bank you like and have the trust documents drawn up by a lawyer who specializes in trusts.

It would be a good idea to sample the bank's investment management ability by setting up a revocable trust right now. You'll probably need help investing the money from the property sale. If the bank doesn't handle that well, you can revoke the trust and look elsewhere for a place to put your grandson's inheritance.

And let's look on the bright side and assume you will be breathing Earth's air when that boy is ready for college. Rather than dealing with a trust officer, he could be giving a hug to a proud grandfather as he heads off to school.

Q. We have a daughter who is rather lacking in ability to invest money. Would setting up a trust fund for her at a local bank be a good way to invest money for her?

A. Certainly, assuming the bank has a trust department capable of handling investments. Check it out, as outlined in this column's previous answer.

If you do some investigating and come to the conclusion your local bank lacks investment management ability, you can always set up the trust with a bank in a different city. Most trust affairs are handled by telephone and mail.

Q. My son is 32 and unable to handle money matters. I am 65 and would like to invest approximately $100,000 to provide him monthly or quarterly income by mail. What options are available?

A. Many, many. However, if you suspect your son will squander the $100,000 if he gets his hands on it, I suggest a trust which specifies that he is to receive only the income the money produces and that he is not allowed to touch the principal.

You might also consider a "sprinkling" trust which empowers the trustee to distribute the trust's principal to the trust's beneficiary — your son — as needed.

TAX

At a hearing before a House Ways and Means subcommittee Tuesday, IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs said he is not satisfied that his telephone "assistors" are giving correct answers to only three out of four questions. But he said he is not surprised, since the 1986 tax law made so many changes.

The 74.8 percent accuracy rate compares with 79 percent about this time last year, before most of the new tax law had gone into effect.

The IRS has spent more than 2.5 million hours training employees on points of the new law, and the agency has set up a sophisticated system to test whether the people who answer questions by phone are doing a good job. The first 5,000 calls made under that system produced the 74.8 percent accuracy rate.

GAO, an arm of Congress, noted that only 61 percent of the answers gathered in the IRS check were complete and correct; the remainder of the correct answers were incomplete.

GAO did its own survey, making 224 calls, and concluded that 57 percent of questions were answered completely and correctly and 4 percent were answered correctly but incompletely. Those results were so preliminary, said Jennie S. Stathis of GAO, that they might not be statistically valid.

Overall, Ms. Stathis said, "IRS did a good job in trying to prepare its employees and the taxpaying public for the 1988 filing season."

No matter the source of advice on filling out a tax return, the taxpayer has the responsibility to see that the return is correct. Even if the IRS makes a mistake in its advice, a taxpayer can be subject to a penalty and interest for underpaying.

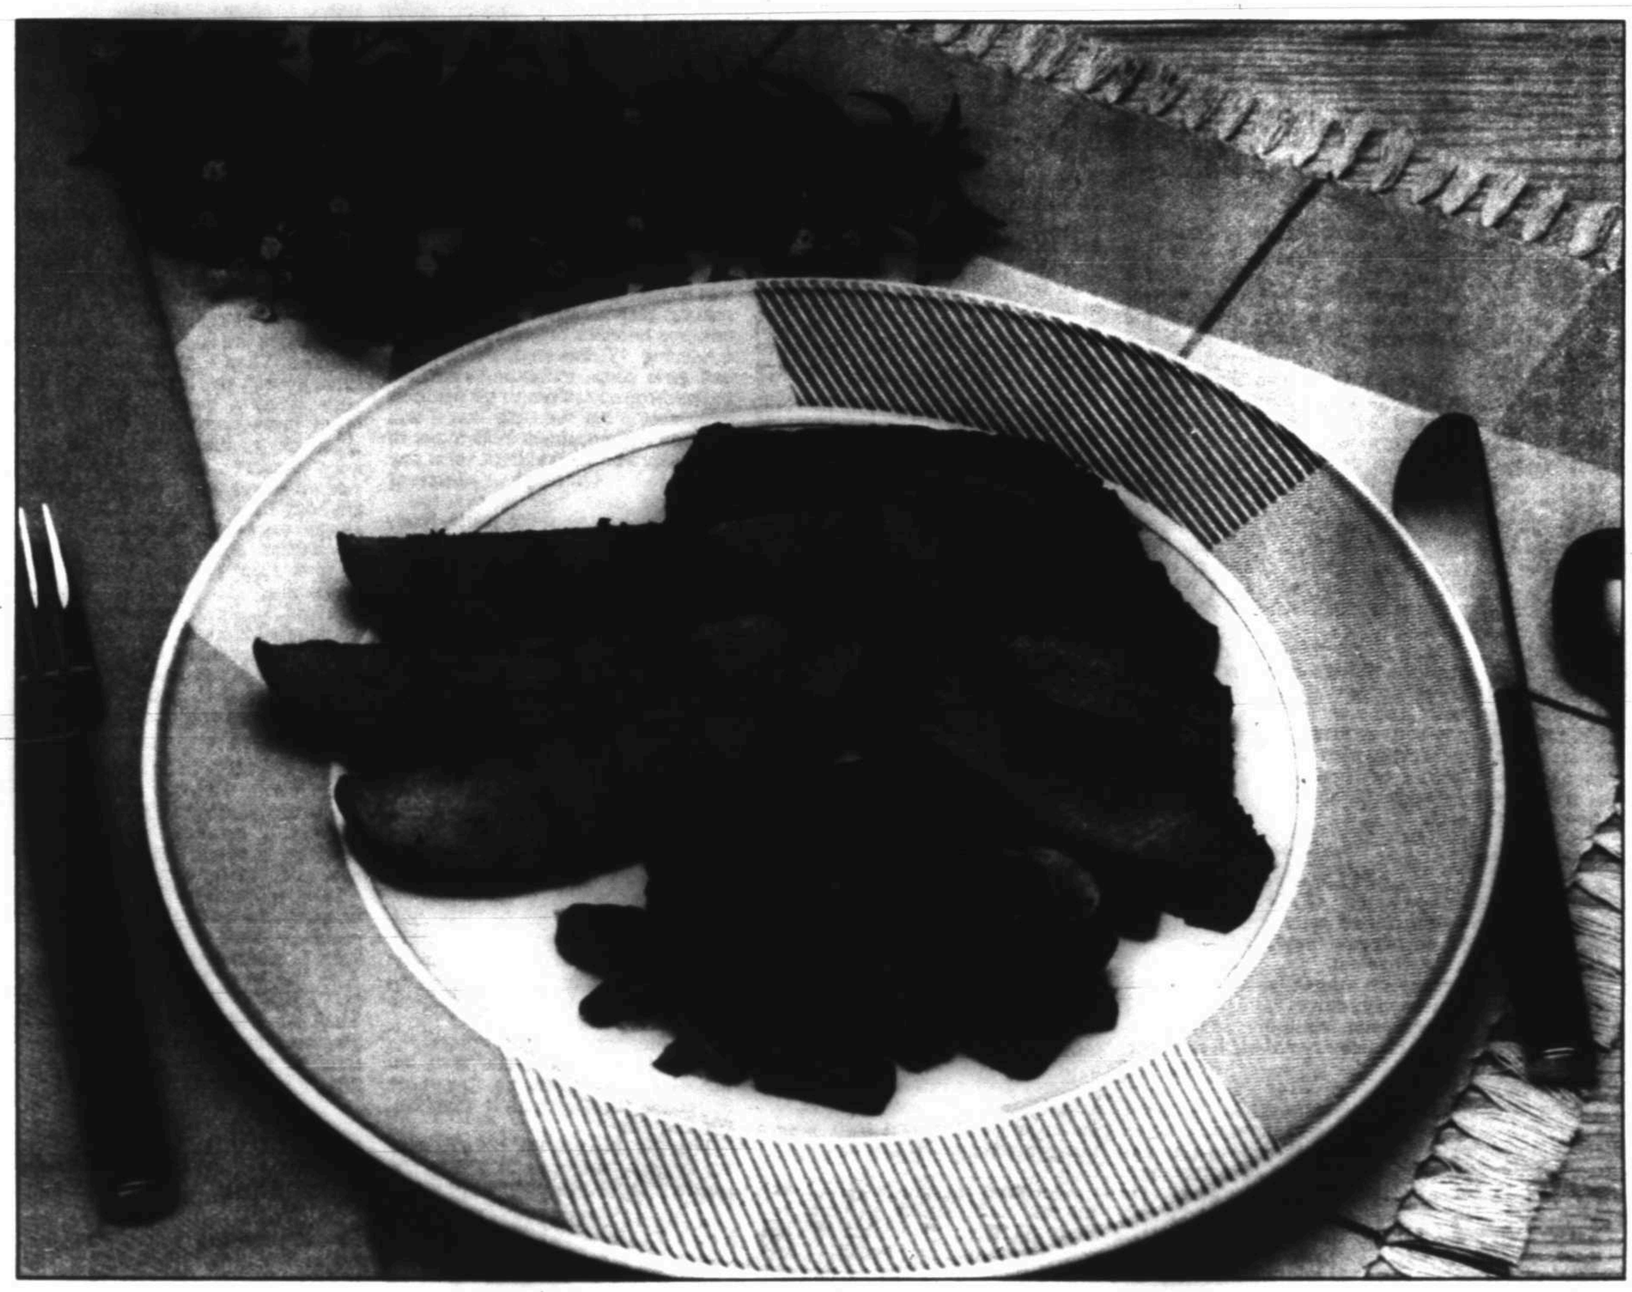
Dispelling NUTRITION MYTHS



Sodium, cholesterol and fat are the latest "in" topics of conversation. You'll hear these nutrition topics discussed over the dinner table, on the bus or train and on almost every television or radio talk show. Everyone has an opinion, but who has the facts?

Health issues are definitely a trendy topic, but there's also a lot of confusing and conflicting information. Almost every day we hear of another food that is "bad" for us, making it hard to know what we should eat.

Most nutritionists recommend that meals be planned using a variety of foods from four basic groups – milk, meat, fruit-vegetable and grain-cereal. When eaten in moderation, this variety of food will supply you with a good balance of all the nutrients you need in your diet every day.

As a general guideline, nutritionists recommend that calories be obtained from the following food groups:

2 servings from the milk group
2 servings from the meat group
4 servings from the fruit-vegetable group
4 servings from the grain-cereal group

These guidelines are easy to meet when you prepare an enticing entree like Herbed Sirloin Steak, accompanied by a colorful Green Bean Medley and tasty Broiled Potato Wedges. These dishes will provide you with one serving from the meat group and two from the fruit-vegetable group – all for under 400 calories.

Another nutritious mealtime alternative is Easy Stir-Fried Beef and Vegetable Stuffed Potato. Serve this flavorful beef and vegetable topping over baked Washington Russet potato halves. It provides you with one serving from the meat group and two from the fruit-vegetable group for about 450 calories. Round out this nutritious meal with a tossed salad and a fruit compote.

Herbed Sirloin Steak

Broiled Potato Wedges Green Bean Medley

Fruit Sorbet

Skim Milk

Broiled Potato Wedges

2 (10 to 12 ounces each) Washington Russet potatoes
1 tablespoon each olive oil and malt vinegar
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon each minced parsley and green onion

Scrub potatoes. Cut lengthwise into 6 to 8 wedge-shaped slices. Place on steaming rack and steam over gently boiling water 15 to 20 minutes or until barely tender. Combine oil, vinegar, paprika, salt and pepper; mix well. Brush mixture on cut sides of partially cooked potatoes. Broil about 4 inches from heat 7 to 10 minutes.* Sprinkle potatoes with parsley and green onion. Makes 4 servings.

*Place potato wedges on broiler rack when steak is turned and broil with second side of steak.

Green Bean Medley

1 package (10 ounces) or 2 1/2 cups frozen cut green beans
1/2 cup each sliced mushrooms, sliced red pepper* and frozen chopped onion
1/2 cup salted water
1 tablespoon each olive oil, white wine vinegar and dry white wine
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1/4 teaspoon each oregano, crushed, and garlic salt
1/8 teaspoon bottled hot pepper sauce
Dash pepper

Combine beans, mushrooms, red pepper and onion in salted water. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer 6 minutes or until barely tender. Drain. Add remaining ingredients; mix well.
Makes 4 to 5 servings.

*Sliced pimiento can be substituted and added with seasonings.

Herbed Sirloin Steak

1 1/4 pounds beef top sirloin steak, cut 1 inch thick
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning
1/2 teaspoon each paprika and salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Combine garlic, Italian seasoning, paprika, salt and pepper in a small bowl; mix well. Press seasoning mixture evenly into both sides of beef top sirloin steak. Place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 2 to 3 inches from heat. Broil steak about 15 minutes for rare and about 20 minutes for medium; turn once about halfway through cooking time. Carve steak into thin slices. Makes 4 servings.

Easy Stir-Fried Beef and Vegetable Stuffed Potatoes

(Not Shown)

2 (about 10 ounces each) Washington Russet potatoes
1 1/4 pounds beef top round steak, cut 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon minced ginger root
1/8 teaspoon crushed red pepper pods
2 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
1 package (16 ounces) frozen mixed vegetable combination
1 tablespoon Chinese rice wine or dry sherry
1/2 teaspoon sesame oil (optional)

Scrub potatoes; pierce several times with fork. Bake* at 400°F. 50 to 60 minutes or until tender. Partially freeze top round steak to firm; slice diagonally across the grain into strips 1/8 inch thick. Combine soy sauce, cornstarch, brown sugar, ginger root and red pepper pods. Pour mixture over strips, turning to coat; marinate at least 5 minutes. Heat wok or large frying pan over medium-high heat. Add 1 tablespoon oil; add vegetables and stir-fry 3 to 4 minutes. Remove from pan and keep warm. Add remaining oil and stir-fry half of beef strips 2 to 3 minutes; repeat with remaining beef. Combine rice wine and sesame oil; mix well. Return vegetables to frying pan; add wine mixture. Cook and stir 30 seconds or until sauce is slightly thickened. Divide each potato into two portions; spoon meat and vegetables over each half. Makes 4 servings.

*Scrubbed, pierced potatoes may be microcooked at HIGH (100%), in a 600 to 700 watt microwave oven, 10 to 12 minutes; turn once halfway through cooking time.

Nutrition Myths

Myth: Beef is high in calories.

Fact: Three ounces of lean beef top round steak contain 162 calories; three ounces of broiled beef sirloin steak contain 177 calories. Three ounces of baked chicken, without skin, contain 161 calories while three ounces of fried chicken, with skin, contain 246 calories. Actually, beef is ideal for modern, low-calorie diets because today's leaner cattle provide beef that is lower in calories than it was in years past.

Myth: Potatoes are high in calories.

Fact: A medium (about one-third pound) potato, baked, contains just 110 calories and provides 32% of the US RDA of vitamin C. It also offers significant amounts of other nutrients such as niacin, copper and iodine, and is virtually fat-free. It has been the high-fat toppings – butter and sour cream – that have given rise to this myth. Just one tablespoon of butter doubles the calorie content of a medium baked potato. Discover a whole new world with low-fat toppings such as salsa, yogurt and fresh chives.

Myth: Frozen vegetables are not as nutritious as fresh vegetables.

Fact: Frozen vegetables may be considered "fresher" than unprocessed vegetables since they do not continue to lose their nutritive value during transit and storage if held properly. Picked and packed within hours of harvesting, the just-picked flavor is sealed in. Frozen quickly and held at 0°F. or below, quality loss is negligible.

Myth: Beef is high in saturated fat and cholesterol.

Fact: Beef actually contains less fat and cholesterol than is generally assumed. Three ounces of cooked, trimmed lean beef contain about nine grams of fat, of which less than half is saturated, and 76 milligrams of cholesterol. The level of saturated fat in meat compares favorably with the American Heart Association's (AHA) recommendation that less than 10 percent of daily calories come from saturated fat. In terms of cholesterol, a cooked, trimmed serving of lean beef is also well within the AHA recommendation that we consume no more than 300 milligrams daily.

'Diet' not always four-letter word

By LINDA SUSAN DUDLEY
Copley News Service

Anyone who has stared down at a plate containing a skinned broiled chicken breast and some carrot sticks knows that "diet" is a four-letter word.

And that's the way most of the United States' estimated 33 million overweight people approach it. Like drudgery. What can't I have to eat. (Until I get off this diet, that is, and then I can eat all the good things I'm denying myself now!) Right?

The American desire to lose weight and get in shape has spawned a diet and exercise industry reported to be worth $8 billion annually.

One day it's doughnuts and double cheeseburgers, don't hold the mayo, and the next it's hard-boiled eggs, no salt.

Dieting — successful dieting — need not be that way, according to registered dietitian Janice Baker, who for five years has been helping people get healthy and lose weight. Baker is assistant director of nutritional services at Pomerado Hospital in Poway, Calif. She's also a volunteer with the American Heart Association.

"The single largest mistake dieters make is to go to extremes and swear off all the foods they enjoy.

"That leads to negative emotions, deprivation, guilt and depression," she says.

Generally, these are people who are using food to make themselves feel good anyway or, if they're bored, they go to the refrigerator for entertainment.

"Concentrate on what you can have instead of what you can't," says Baker.

She recommends making a plan for the coming week. That way, diet meals will already be in the house and ready to eat after a long day at the office.

But don't, stresses Baker, just stick to humdrum foods, like the proverbial broiled chicken.

Dieters, she said, can have exciting foods such as pizza. Just exchange the high-fat traditional toppings, such as pepperoni or Italian sausage for lean ham or Canadian bacon slices and vegetables, such as sun-dried tomatoes and frozen artichoke hearts (not the ones packed in oily marinade).

Baker doesn't believe in using weight scales as a measure of a dieter's success. "That leads to concentration on the numbers instead of changing habits," she says. "Dieters might eat nothing the day before weigh-in so they'll lose weight, even though they've been eating too much during the week."

Baker doesn't emphasize counting calories, either. "Usually, if they cut down on fat, the calories will take care of themselves, because fat, at 9 calories per gram, is more than twice the number of calories as protein or carbohydrates at 4 calories per gram."

For a calorie-free break, Baker and the American Heart Association suggest trying these diversions:

Drink a large glass of ice water, hot tea or another calorie-free beverage. Garnish with a twist of lemon or lime and sip slowly.

Refresh yourself by taking a shower or brushing and flossing your teeth.

Become physically more active. Take a 15- to 20-minute brisk walk, sweep the sidewalk or pull the weeds.

Keep a list of enjoyable activities handy and choose one to accomplish. For example: catch up on correspondence, work on a crossword puzzle, organize a photo album or read. Keep the list posted in a strategic spot, have the necessary materials readily available and refer to it when the urge to snack occurs.

Following are recipes for treats that are low in calories and nutritious but about as far away from celery stalks as possible.

RASPBERRY CHEESECAKE

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons margarine, melted
1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
1 cup part skim ricotta cheese
2 egg whites
⅓ cup egg substitute or 2 whole eggs
⅓ cup evaporated skim milk
⅓ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon rind, grated
⅓ cup fresh lemon juice
¼ cup flour
1½ cups fresh or frozen raspberries (or a combination of raspberries and blueberries) for garnish

In small bowl, combine crumbs and margarine. Press into bottom of greased 9-inch, loose-bottomed or springform pan. Place pan in freezer while you prepare filling.

In blender or food processor, place all remaining ingredients except the flour and raspberries or blueberries and blend until smooth. Add flour and blend for 10 seconds until ingredients are thoroughly mixed. Remove crust from freezer and pour in filling.

Bake at 300 degrees for 1 hour or until the filling is set. Cool on a rack. Loosen edges of cheesecake with a knife and remove sides of pan, but not bottom, from cheesecake. Place on serving platter and top with raspberries or combination of fruit.

Yields 12 servings, 158 calories each.

CRUNCHY APPLE COBBLER

6 cups apples, thinly sliced
½ cup rolled oats
⅓ cup frozen apple juice concentrate (thawed)
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
2 tablespoons raisins
⅓ cup crunchy cereal (such as Grape Nuts)

Into 8-inch-square pan sprayed with non-stick cooking spray, layer oats. Add apple slices. Combine apple juice concentrate, cinnamon and cloves; pour over apples and oats. Sprinkle with raisins. Cover with foil and bake at 350 degees for 1 hour. Remove foil. Sprinkle crunchy cereal over the top and bake another 10 minutes.

Yields 6 servings, 172 calories each.

TIJUANA TRIANGLES

Cut corn tortillas into 6 triangles. Top with canned chopped green chilies and a little grated mozzarella cheese. Place in 350 degree oven to crisp tortilla and melt cheese. Serve at once.

BEEF STEW

2 pounds lean beef chunks, cut into cubes
¼ cup flour
2 tablespoons oil
1 cup onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
⅔ cup celery, diced
¼ cup parsley, chopped
½ teaspoon rosemary
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon oregano
½ cup dry red wine
1 cup water
2 cups tomatoes, chopped
4 medium potatoes, quartered
4 cups carrots, diced

Coat beef with flour and brown in oil in large Dutch oven. Add onion and garlic and cook until vegetables are softened. Pour off fat.

Add remaining ingredients (except tomatoes, potatoes and carrots); bring to boil; cover and simmer for 1 hour. Add tomatoes, potatoes and carrots and simmmer 45 minutes or until potatoes and carrots are tender.

Yields 8 servings, 220 calories each.

BARBECUED HAMBURGER

1 pound lean ground beef
1 onion, peeled and diced
⅓ cup ketchup
2 tablespoons chili sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar

Brown meat and onions in large skillet. Pour off fat that accumulates.

Add all other ingredients, mixing well and simmer 20 to 30 minutes, uncovered. Spoon onto hamburger buns.

Yields 6 ½-cup servings, 200 calories each or 320 with hamburger bun.

ORANGE FUN SICKLES

6 ounces orange juice concentrate
6 ounces water
1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Blend all ingredients and pour into ice cube trays. Put a drinking straw (which has been cut in half) into each cube. Freeze several hours.

GELATIN GEMS

4 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1¾ cups unsweetened fruit juice
1 cup boiling water

Add juice to gelatin. Add water and stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Pour into a 9-x13-inch pan and chill until firm. Cut into 1-inch squares.

Stir-frying in microwave can trim calories

Associated Press

With a microwave-safe browning dish you'll need just half the oil you'd use in a conventional wok, a real calorie saver.

BEEF CHERRY-YAKI

¾ pound boneless beef sirloin steak, trimmed of fat
1½ cups frozen unsweetened pitted dark sweet cherries
2 tablespoons dry sherry
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Three ¼-inch-thick slices gingerroot
1 tablespoon cooking oil
2 medium carrots, thinly bias sliced
6 green onions, bias sliced into 1-inch pieces
1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅓ of an 8-ounce can sliced water chestnuts, drained
2 cups hot cooked rice

Partially freeze meat. Thinly slice across the grain into bite-size strips. Thaw cherries; drain, reserving juice. In a small deep bowl combine sherry, soy sauce, lemon juice and ginger. Add beef. Cover; chill 1 hour, stirring once. Drain meat, reserving marinade; discard ginger.

Heat a 10-inch browning dish on 100 percent power (high) for 5 minutes. Add oil; swirl to coat dish. Add meat. Cook, uncovered, on high for 2 to 3 minutes or until meat is tender, stirring after every minute. Remove meat from dish, reserving juices.

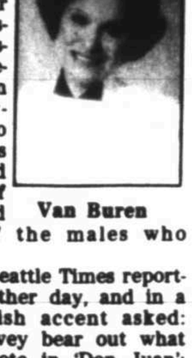
Add reserved marinade to juices in dish. Stir in carrots. Cook, covered, for 1 minute. Add onions. Cook, covered, for 1 to 2 minutes more or until tender.

Add water to reserved cherry juice to make ¼ cup. Blend into cornstarch. Stir cornstarch mixture into vegetable mixture. Cook, uncovered, on high for 2 to 4 minutes or until mixture is thickened and bubbly, stirring every minute. Stir in meat, cherries and water chestnuts. Cook, covered, for 2 to 3 minutes or until heated through. Serve over rice. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Fidelity survey draws out faithful, philanderers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN



Van Buren

DEAR READERS: In my fidelity survey that brought over 210,000 responses, I was both astonished and reassured to learn that the marriage vow — to forsake all others — is still honored by 85 percent of the females and 74 percent of the males who responded.

Fred Case, a Seattle Times reporter, called the other day, and in a charming British accent asked: "Does your survey bear out what Lord Byron wrote in 'Don Juan': 'There's more adultery where the climate's sultry'?"

I told Fred that we were not tabulating the findings regionally, so his guess was as good as mine. I did, however, observe that Canadian behavior appeared to be no different than American, though the climate is somewhat sultrier in our southern states.

Many respondents aired their frustrations in order to justify their philandering: "Occasional affairs with call girls keeps me sane," confided an investment broker on his business stationery. "It's the only way I can tolerate the emptiness of living with a woman who is unable to show any affection through physical intimacy."

Women, too, wrote to justify their infidelities. The most common complaint: "Sex with my husband is so mechanical and unromantic. No caresses, no compliments, no love talk. He never talks to me. It's so humiliating!"

Another unfulfilled wife wrote: "Yes, I cheated on my husband. After nine years of marriage, I got bored and curious and wanted to see what else was out there. I had a real estate agent, an accountant, a jeweler, a commercial airline pilot, a construction worker and a magazine editor. The construction worker was the best and the editor was the worst. Thank God this was long before AIDS."

A Denver wife wrote: "My husband doesn't know how to make love, but he sure knows how to make money. I'd try to teach him a few things, but I'm afraid he'll ask me where I learned it."

The number of faithful older lovers was heartening. Letter after letter described enduring, true-blue marriages from couples in their 60s, 70s and 80s:

From St. Paul, Minn.: "We're writing because we want to add to the number of couples who have never cheated. I'm 92 and my wife is 88. We've been married for 71 years, still have all our marbles and enjoy every aspect of married life, though we have slowed up some in recent years (arthritis)."

A 60-year-old farmer from Lexington, Ky., wrote: "Married 36 years, never cheated. No sex relations for eight years now. The wife says she's through with that kind of stuff. If opportunity ever knocks, I'm afraid I'll be too old and deaf to hear it."

Some men admit to cheating – but only occasionally. From Philadelphia: "I've been married for 24 years and cheated twice. Once when I went back to my hometown for my 10th high school reunion, then again when I went back for my 20th (same girl). Now I'm looking forward to my 25th reunion."

I have enough material from this survey to write a book. And if I do, I will certainly include the following. Some short takes:

■ "Abby, please send me a list of females who have cheated in the Tampa Bay area. (I'm lonely but not necessarily desperate.)"

■ "Female, married 66 years. I have never cheated on my husband. I am 83 and my husband is 89 and says he can't remember."

■ "There are so many mismatched couples. When a man wants sex six times a week and his wife is satisfied with twice a month, that doesn't mean there's anything wrong with either one of them; they just have a lousy marriage. I have made a lot of women happy and I never broke up anybody's home — and I never neglected my own wife, either. If there is a hall of fame for lovers, I should be in it. I have to go now; my wife wants me."

■ And finally: "I am a woman now 40, married 21 years and have cheated more times than I can count, but I will never cheat again. Why? Because I fear God, damnation, pregnancy, herpes and AIDS. Besides, I found Jesus."

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't help but chuckle over the letter from the lady whose husband gets a headache during sex. I laughed because that's been my problem for several years now and I'm female!

I read somewhere that this was not unusual, especially if the person has problems with vascular headaches such as migraines. (I do.)

By the way, my husband always gets a stuffy nose from sex. It's become our little private joke that if his nose stops up and I have a headache, we must have had a real good time. — HEADACHY BUT HAPPY

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook is well-known for her desserts

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the last article in a series of interviews with members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

Although Diana Younger loves to entertain friends, she said she is no longer interested in catering.

Ms. Younger is well-known among friends for her desserts. At parties in her home, she prepares three or four different types of dessert and lets her guests choose which they would prefer. She particularly enjoys making pastries — the fancy kinds with toppings and fillings.

So, when she was asked to cater the pastries for a large fund-raiser, she was flattered and agreed to do it. Ms. Younger said she had done her shopping and most of the baking prior to the event. There were some odds and ends — such as icing some of the pastries and placing them on trays — that she was going to do on the Friday the event was to occur.

But, at 8 p.m. on the Thursday prior to the Friday she thought the fund-raiser was, Ms. Younger found out that the event was that night — not the following evening — and she had exactly an hour and a half to get the pastries finished and to the location of the event. The pastries were to be served at intermission, around 9:30 p.m.

"I had about 15 to 20 neighbors at our house helping me get everything together," Mrs. Younger said. "There were 6-foot-4 men over here icing little tiny mushrooms and men putting doilies on trays. Everybody was helping me ... and we made it. Everything was ready and in place at 9:30 and they ate every morsel."

The Mrs. Younger said she had a big dinner party for all her neighbors who "helped a friend in need."

But after that experience, she vowed to never cater again.

She reserves her culinary talents for her family and guests.

"I love to try out new recipes on company," Mrs. Younger said. "I never have the motivation to try something new just every day."

Although she said she rarely bakes desserts for regular meals, Mrs. Younger likes to bake what she calls a "smorgasbord of desserts" when she has guests.

"To me, presentation of food is very important. Presentation can make the mundane more exciting," Ms. Younger said.

Mrs. Younger has a theory about having guests to dinner.

"I think sometimes we almost force guests to eat more than they really want, so I fix a lot of desserts and just put them out. They can eat them if they want to," Mrs. Younger said. "I like to make dessert available for those who want it."

Mrs. Younger was raised in Washington D.C. She has lived in Midland 13 years with her husband Charlie, an orthopedic surgeon and native Midlander. They have three children, Tom, 16, Meredith, 7, and Katy, 23 months.

"I figured out that by the time Katy is out of Trinity, I will have been car pooling for 25 years," Mrs. Younger said.

The Youngers are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where Mrs. Younger is currently working with a Sunday School class of 11-year-old girls.

"I've really enjoyed working with these young girls," Mrs. Younger said.

In the past, she has also worked in the Relief Society and in Primary, including children of all ages. "There is always something to do."

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Diana Younger

Mrs. Younger said.

She also helps at Trinity School, where her oldest daughter attends, is a first year sustaining member in Junior League of Midland and has been active in the theater and Act IX, the theatre auxiliary.

In addition to all of these activities and family matters, Mrs. Younger also is a student at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin working on her master's degree in psychology.

Because of her busy schedule, meals at the Younger household are simple lately, Mrs. Younger said.

"My husband is pretty much a meat and potatoes man," she said, "although the kids are pretty good about eating anything."

One of Mrs. Younger's favorite meals is Leg of Lamb. "There is just nothing better than Leg of Lamb."

The following are some of Mrs. Youngers favorite recipes.

COCONUT CREAM CHEESECAKE

2⅓ cups finely grated fresh coconut
1 cup whipping cream, scalded

Puree coconut with hot cream in blender until finely shredded. Cool while preparing crust.

CRUST
⅔ cups all purpose flour
5 tablespoons, plus 1 teaspoon well-chilled butter, cut into ½-inch pieces
4 teaspoons sugar

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Butter bottom of 10-inch springform pan. Blend flour, butter and sugar until mixture begins to gather together. Press evenly into bottom of prepared pan. Bake until golden brown, about 25 minutes. Set on rack to cool.

FILLING
20 ounces cream cheese at room temperature
1⅓ cups sugar
4 eggs, room temperature
2 egg yolks, room temperature
2⅓ tablespoons cream of coconut
1 teaspoon fresh lemon
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ teaspoon almond extract

Using electric mixer on low, beat cream cheese with sugar until blended. Mix in cooled coconut and cream mixture. Blend in eggs, and yolks one at a time. Mix in 2⅓ tablespoons cream of coconut, lemon juice, and vanilla and almond extracts. Pour into prepared crust. Return to 325 degree oven and bake until side of cake are dry and center no longer moves when shaken, about 1 to 1¼ hours. Let cake cool on rack until depression firms in center, about 35 minutes.

TOPPING:
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup cream of coconut
Coconut flakes, lightly toasted

Mix sour cream and cream of coconut. Spread on top of cake, covering all but ½-inch from the sides. Bake 10 minutes in a 325 degree oven to set topping. Cool completely on rack. Chill well, about 4 hours. Cover tightly and refrigerate. Allow one day to mellow flavors.

To serve, spread coconut flakes on top in 1-inch band around rim.

OYSTERS ITALIANO

3 to 4 dozen oysters, well drained
Italian Bread Crumbs (recipe follows)
⅓ cup olive oil
⅓ stick butter
Grated Romano or Parmesan cheese (optional)

Butter a rectanguler pan. Put ¼-inch layer of Italian Bread Crumbs in pan. Place oysters on top of bread crumbs. Cover oysters with ½-inch Italian Bread Crumbs. Dribble olive oil over all. Dot with butter. Extra grated Romano or Parmesan cheese can be added on top, if desired.

Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

ITALIAN BREAD CRUMBS

Loaf of French or Italian bread (4 to 5 days old), grated
Wedge of Romano cheese (5 to 6 ounces), grated
1 large onion (or 2 medium), chopped fine
3 to 4 large cloves of garlic, chopped fine
¾ cup chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix together and store in tightly covered container in refrigerator. Will last several weeks.

NOTE: Good to use for meat loaf, to bread pork chops or to stuff mushrooms or artichokes.

HORSERADISH CARROTS

8 large, peeled and sliced carrots
⅓ cup water
4 generous tablespoons horseradish
1 cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt
¼ to ½ teaspoon pepper
½ cup cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons butter

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Steam carrots until tender. Place carrots in a 9x9-inch buttered glass baking dish. Mix water, horseradish, mayonnaise, salt and pepper well. Spread mixture over carrots and top with cracker crumbs and thin pats of butter. Bake at 375 for 15-20 minutes.

SHRIMP DIP

8 ounces cream cheese, softened
1 tablespoon grated onion
2 rounded tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 light shake of Worcestershire sauce
1 good shake of Tabasco
1 can drained but not rinsed small shrimp, veins removed

Soften cream cheese and add onion. Add mayonnaise, lemon juice, Worcestershire and Tabasco. Mix well and fold in shrimp. Make at least three hours ahead, or even the day before. Can be frozen. Serve with king size corn chips or crackers.

BAKALAVA

1 box phyllodough (found in the frozen section of grocery)
1 pound butter, melted

FILLING:
3 cups ground pecans or walnuts
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon rose water (found in grocery or liquor store)

TOPPING:
1 cup water
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon lemon
1 teaspoon rose water

Thaw phyllodough and carefully unroll. Using a jelly roll pan, put one sheet of phyllodough in pan, brush with melted butter, add another sheet of dough and brush with butter. Continue this until about ⅓ of the dough has been used.

NOTE: Sheets of phyllodough will dry out quickly, so if you have to stop during this procedure, be sure to cover dough.

Mix together well all filling ingredients and spread evenly over buttered sheets. Apply remainder of dough, sheet by sheet, brushing each one with butter.

Cut diagonally to form diamond shaped pieces before cooking. Bake at 350 degrees until golden brown, approximately 20-30 minutes.

While dough is baking, mix topping ingredients together and heat until all sugar is dissolved. Do not boil. Pour topping over bakalava evenly, using about 1⅓ cups. Let cool. Can be frozen.

Pizza, lasagna, cheeseburgers all melting and oozing cheese — who can live without it?

Cheese brings variety, flavor and deliciousness to cooking and eating, and when enjoyed in moderation, good nutrition, too.

For all the nutritional pluses in cheese, such as calcium, protein, riboflavin, vitamin A and zinc, it can be a source of hidden fat. In fact, 65 to 75 percent of the calories in most cheeses come from fat. Even "low-fat" cheese products average about 40 percent of their calories from fat.

The truth is that the very nature of cheese depends on fat. Without it, cheese can become dry and crumbly. Fortunately, many dairies have successfully created natural cheeses that are lower in fat. Look for these products in the cheese case. Another alternative is to use pasteurized processed cheeses, which have less fat. Unfortunately, they have a little more sodium.

Be aware of the fat in cheese and select lower fat varieties or substitute cheese for meat in a meal. Search out cheeses made with skim milk instead of whole milk. Here's what the American Heart Association suggests in Better Homes and Gardens magazine:

Enjoy any cheese with less than two grams of fat per ounce and made primarily from skim milk. These cheeses include pot cheese, part-skim ricotta, cottage cheese, skim farmer cheeses and many diet cheeses.

Substitute cheeses with three to five grams fat per ounce (such as whole milk ricotta, sapsago, and part-skim mozzarella) for meat in a meal. Ounce for ounce, the two are similar in fat and protein.

For occasional treats cheeses in the six to eight grams of fat per ounce range are usually made from whole milk and are high in saturated fats and cholesterol. Use cheeses such as blue, Brie, feta, pasteurized cheese spread, fontina, Gouda, Jarlsberg, Limburger, Monterey Jack, Neufchatel, Parmesan, pasteurized processed cheese and Swiss, sparingly in place of meat.

For rare treats savor higher fat cheeses — in the range of nine to 11 grams of fat per ounce — infrequently. These cheeses, made with whole milk and added butterfat, include gjetost, cheddar, colby, cream cheese, Roquefort, and many soft cheeses with seasonings.

Follow these ideas for cheese lovers:

- In dips and spreads calling for cream cheese, use pot cheese instead.
- Spread pot cheese on wheat crackers instead of triple cream ciese.
- Grate sapsago onto pasta instead of Parmesan.
- Always use low-fat ricotta, cottage cheese and mozzarella when making recipes that call for these ingredients.
- To get the rich flavors of cheddar, Swiss, colby and Monterey Jack and lower fat, use less and supplement with skim milk farmer cheese.
- Use scamorze to make cheese sandwiches. Or, use a cheese like mozzarella.

Swiss restaurants offer world-class cuisine

By CAROL CUTLER
Copley News Service

Celebrity chefs, especially French, are the new international jet-setters. They crisscross the globe doing guest stints in foreign kitchens, rarely delivering the culinary magic of their home base. The reputation is there and the hype, but star quality doesn't automatically get translated onto the palate.

Meanwhile, some of the finest chefs around remain quietly and contentedly cooking and creating stunning food at their own stoves. Lucky citizens of the picturesque Swiss city of Basel have two celebrated chefs whose first loyalty is to their in-house clientele. Since Basel sits in the corner of Switzerland that borders both France and Germany, the dining rooms usually buzz with a whole range of accents.

Hans Stucki's name has reached far beyond Swiss borders. His two-star rating in the severe Michelin Guide and the 19½ out of 20 in the breezier Gault & Millaut book have brought connoisseurs from far afield to his Restaurant Bruderholz Stucki. The restaurant has the feel of a private home, which it once was. The beautifully landscaped gardens are open for dining in pleasant weather.

Stucki is a modest man and a perfectionist. He serves 70 to 80 diners at a meal, no more. If the garden is open for dining, he closes one of the three inside rooms. He does not want to be "pulled by my hair," and he wants to give each client the full measure of his attention. That attitude won't make you a millionaire, but it does garner fierce loyalty and respect.

CMS Graphic

NOR WILL he bother importing exotic products by plane or train; customs formalities are just too much trouble. Instead, he uses local produce and depends on buyers with whom he has dealt for a long time. Since he finds that people are going back to plain food, serving them simpler ingredients is right in keeping.

For example, take the humble Italian soup minestrone, usually a main dish at family tables. Stucki's preparation is far from peasant fare, though the idea definitely is. He uses a strong vegetable stock, adds fresh beans and tosses in a few shrimp tails. Instead of dried macaroni, ravioli with sweet garlic filling are afloat. A pinch of saffron is strewn at the end, basil and oil slipped on top. So much for a simple soup, but it emerges as a celestial combination of flavors. Best of all, though the dish was attractive, it did not look as though a painter had tortuously arranged it in the kitchen.

Stucki does not believe in selling a philosophy; in fact, he doesn't much like the word. He doesn't strive to be too intellectual in the culinary sense. All he wants to do is produce pure natural tastes. The fact that his skills improve upon nature is all to the benefit of the diners.

Take, for example, a local specialty — Fish Baloise. In his case, monkfish is used. What turns any fish into Baloise is a bed of fried onions. In most restaurants the onions are tasty, but limp and a bit greasy. Stucki's kitchen cuts young onions paper-thin, in fact, so thin that a machine has to be used. Then, instead of slowly sauteeing the strands, they are quickly deep-fried. The result is sweet, dry and crisp, a perfect foil against the firm-textured fish.

Susi Stucki oversees the dining rooms, the garden and the staff. The fact that this restaurant is known for its warmth and friendliness is largely due to her untiring efforts. When two dedicated people work to elevate a single meal to a memorable dining experience, it is easy to understand the long distances that are driven to come to this golden address.

Restaurant Stucki Bruderbolz, Bruderbolzallee 42: (061) 35-82-22. Closed Sunday and Monday. Dinner for two with wine about $180.

RESTAURANT NUSSBAUMER, on the outskirts of Basel in nearby Aesch, is different in many respects from Stucki; still the cooking receives the same degree of care and finesse. But this time it's the wife in the kitchen and the husband directing the dining room, as well as overseeing the prize-winning vineyards. In fact, the restaurant sits smack in the middle of its own vineyards.

One can look out the window and see a chef, knife in hand, culling sprigs from the herb plot right below the neat vineyard terraces. The mood is very relaxed and jovial, which does not mean that the patrons are any less serious about food. And Josy Nussbaumer delivers dish after dish of inventive delights.

Josy is the second Nussbaumer running the kitchen. Her mother-in-law was the original guardian of the range when the restaurant served simpler food to nibble with local wines. Josy has been in the kitchen since 1972 (the day after her wedding) and has steadily changed the character and quality of the cooking.

For one unexpected example one can look at the asparagus salad. From experience one is led to expect cold cooked spears with a dressing of some sort. Surprise! Fat white raw asparagus is cut into crunchy julienne and bound together with a light, creamy mayonnaise. This was a revelation that, surprisingly, works very well, equally well with our native green asparagus.

Humble kohlrabi is given an upscale treatment. It is hollowed, stuffed and braised.

THE IMPECCABLY fresh fish is grilled to the proper degree of moistness or at times incorporated into a briny stew. Meats are of excellent quality and appropriately garnished with vegetables and potatoes. But don't expect ordinary potatoes: these will be thin, crisp little "allumettes" (matchsticks) or Switzerland's beloved roesti, a well-browned pancake of grated boiled potatoes.

Desserts incorporate a lot of fruit in season. Pastries of every tempting sort will also be paraded before you. But I shall not forget the experience of Josy Nussbaumer preparing a new dessert because of a client's disappointment that the elderberry gratin was all gone. Out to the garden the chef went again to snip some clusters of elderberry blossoms that shortly emerged as hot fritters. Wunderbar.

Restaurant Nussbaumer in Aesch: (061) 781685. Dinner for two with wine about $140.

USDA-funded program studies safety of home canning methods

Associated Press

The surge in home gardening has spurred research toward safer methods of food canning and freezing.

Grandma's canned pickles or tomatoes may not have sickened or killed anyone, but that doesn't prove that her methods were safe, says Dr. Gerald D. Kuhn, professor of food science and director of Penn State's Center of Excellence in Home Food Preservation.

As many as 65 million Americans are eating home-canned food today, and more than 100 million are eating home-frozen food, Kuhn said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is funding a study of home canning and freezing methods at Penn State's center.

"We want to help people preserve higher quality food that has better color, cleaner flavor, longer shelf life and more nutrients than previous canning and freezing methods were capable of producing," Kuhn said.

"We also want to re-educate people about safe preservation. Renewed interest in canning and freezing in 1975 resulted in a high incidence of botulism that was traced to some home-canning methods."

Clostridium botulinum, a spore-forming bacteria, grows in foods nearly depleted of oxygen, Kuhn explained, and when conditions favorable for growth occur, the cells multiply and produce a deadly toxin.

"You don't want to take risks in canning," he warned.

Kuhn and graduate student Tom Dimick are conducting tests and will draft for the U.S. Department of Agriculture two comprehensive publications with national standards. One publication will be on canning; the other, on freezing. Kuhn also has started a supplemental series called "Let's Preserve" that covers in brief form preservation methods for foods not commonly grown in the home garden.

Pizza-style main dish made with cheese-topped poultry, vegetables

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Give cooked chicken or turkey the red-carpet treatment in this pizza-like main dish with a rich, cheesy topper. Biscuit mix makes the easy crust.

CHICKEN AND PEPPER WEDGES

1 cup packaged biscuit mix
1 beaten egg
1⅓ teaspoons cooking oil
2 cups coarsely chopped cooked chicken or turkey
2 medium sweet red or green peppers, cut into thin strips
3 medium tomatoes, halved and sliced
1 medium red onion, chopped
1⅓ cups shredded Swiss cheese
⅓ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
⅓ cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon snipped parsley
Dash pepper

In a small bowl stir together biscuit mix, egg and oil just until blended; shape into ball. On lightly floured surface knead a few times until smooth. Roll into 12-inch circle; place on greased 12-inch pizza pan. Top with half the chicken, peppers, tomatoes and onion.

In a small bowl combine cheese, mayonnaise, sour cream, parsley and pepper. Spread half the mixture over chicken and vegetables. Repeat layers. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 minutes or until golden. Serve warm. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 489 cal., 26 g pro., 21 g carbo., 34 g fat, 127 mg chol., 289 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 66 percent vit. A, 99 percent vit. C, 14 percent thiamine, 20 percent riboflavin, 19 percent niacin, 33 percent calcium, 15 percent iron.

Children's diets may lack calcium

Associated Press

Many youngsters aren't getting enough calcium, especially if they're skipping that little carton of milk that used to be a part of every school lunch.

The availability of fruit drinks or soda in many schools today means children don't have to buy milk to go with their lunches, says Dr. Dympie Cooksey, nutritionist with the Texas A & M University Extension Service.

"According to U.S. Department of Agriculture studies, many young people don't get enough calcium daily," Cooksey said. "In fact, females over 11 years of age were reported at greatest risk of calcium deficiency, which can lead to osteoporosis in later years."

"Children ages 1 through 10 need 800 milligrams of calcium a day. This requirement can be met with three servings of dairy foods as part of the everyday diet," she said.

"Due to increasing bone length and development, adolescents 11 to 18 years old need 1,200 milligrams of calcium, which can be met by eating four servings of dairy foods daily."

An 8-ounce carton of milk is one serving. A 1⅓-ounce piece of cheese or a cup of yogurt also is equal to one serving.

"If your child drinks milk at breakfast and dinner and eats other dairy products throughout the day, a sweetened fruit drink at lunch may not interfere with adequate calcium intake," Cooksey said.

If children don't drink milk at school or home, offer them more dairy products in meals and snacks, she suggested.

Cheese sandwiches, cheeseburgers, cheese and crackers, cheese pizza, flavored yogurt, milk shakes, ice cream and milk-based puddings will add calcium to a child's diet.

Cooksey frowns on giving children calcium supplements in pill form, saying this can have side effects. She suggests checking with a physician before using such supplements.

"Dairy foods are the best and most abundant source of calcium in our food supply," says Cooksey. "In addition, they contain lactose and vitamin D that enhance calcium usage by the body."

Cindi's Seafood Tips

When I was growing up here in West Texas, my Mama always insisted that we have fish at least once a week. That's a real good idea. But at the time, about the only fish available was frozen from the supermarket, and it almost always wound up being fried.

Well, now you can get a great variety of fresh fish here in the South Point Seafood Market. There's really nothing wrong with fried fish, but there are so many different ways to fix delicious fish and seafood dinners that the entire family will look forward to it. If you're looking for variety, I've got plenty of fish recipes to keep you going for a while. Come on by!

Cindi's Fillets au Gratin

Rinse 2 pounds of fillets (flounder, sole, snapper, grouper, mahi mahi, tuna, etc.) and pat dry. Fold fillets in half and arrange in large ovenproof dish. Pour ¼ cup dry white wine and ¼ cup lemon juice over fish. Sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon of Knorr Swiss Lemon Dill Sauce Mix (or substitute ¼ teaspoon each salt & pepper and 1 teaspoon dried dill weed). Cover with foil and bake for 10 minutes at 350 degrees.

In a large skillet, melt 2 tablespoons margarine over medium heat, and cook ½ pound sliced fresh mushrooms for 5 minutes. Remove fish from oven and drain liquid into a glass measurer. Add water to equal 1½ cups liquid. Add ¼ cup flour to mushrooms and stir until smooth. Stir in fish liquid and 1 cup light cream. Bring to a boil and simmer for 5 minutes, stirring continuously. Pour sauce over fish.

Beat 1 egg into 4 cups mash potatoes and fill pastry bag. With a number 6 tip, make lattice pattern over fish and around edge. (If you don't have a pastry bag, place small scoops of potatoes around edges and over sauce.) Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until potatoes are lightly browned. Makes 6 servings.

If you have any questions about fish or seafood, or a recipe you'd like to share, please write to Cindi's Seafood Tips, 2800 N. Big Spring, Midland, TX 79701.

Book designed to tame kids' candy 'monster'

By CAROL DEEGAN
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Vicki Lansky, author of 16 books for parents and children, has updated her "The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster," a cookbook "to get kids to eat less junk food."

Lansky defines C.A.N.D.Y. as "Continuously Advertised Nutritionally Deficient Yummies."

She says hundreds of millions of advertising dollars are aimed directly at children, making nutrition "a secret war waged by parents using direct commands, camouflage and constant guard duty."

Nutrition relates directly to growth, health, learning ability and general well-being, Lansky says. Parents, who are the shoppers and providers, nourish their children by the foods they serve them.

"The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster" is as timely today as it was when it was first published in 1978, when the use of additives in children's diets became major concerns.The book has been revised, Lansky said in an interview here, to reflect a new interest in fats and cholesterol.

This new edition contains many additions: easy ways to cut back on fats and cholesterol; new ways to use vanilla as a sweetener, and how to figure the percentage of sugar in a box of cereal from the label.

Topics and items included that weren't around 10 years ago when the book was first published range from Nutra-Sweet and ADD (Attention Deficit Disorder) to kiwi fruits and boxed drinks for children.

NEW RECIPES include Apple Snow Fluff, Mexican Chili Casserole and Almost Fried Chicken.

The book also includes suggestions for school lunches, bringing treats to school, nutritious desserts, cooking for kids in a microwave, food selections for babysitters and much, much more.

Lansky says "kid acceptability" was an important criterion in selecting recipes for the book.

"Three things make foods taste good," she said, "sugar, salt and fats."

"I have tried to use recipes that are consistently lower in refined sugar, but it has not always been possible. Some recipes contain more sweeteners than I like to serve, but these at least have some nutritional advantage over C.A.N.D.Y. — the foods they are meant to replace."

She says salt is only used in recipes where she thought it was important.

"I haven't been as successful in reducing fats in recipes," Lansky says. "It will be necessary for you to use your judgment in the number and frequency of recipes you choose to make and serve."

Lansky says her selections are intended to give readers a range of alternatives from which to choose — not to earn them "a certificate of nutritional purity, whatever that may be."

She says parents must weigh cost, preparation time and nutritional value against what will actually be consumed.

SOME OF HER OTHER suggestions:

■ To reduce the amount of sugar in home-cooked foods, decrease the amount of sugar that is called for in recipes.

■ To reduce the intake of salt, use other seasonings, such as lemon juice, vinegar, onion, chives, herbs and garlic.

As far as fats are concerned, Lansky says, remember that a certain amount of fat is necessary for growth and development in young children.

But if your family's diet is "saturated" with fats, use non-stick cookware during food preparation; a bulb-baster to skim off fat from dishes as they cook, and serve meat less often than you do chicken and fish.

Other suggestions: refrigerate sauces, soups or gravies before serving (as fat cools, it rises to the top and hardens and is then easy to remove); broil, stew, stir-fry, steam or broil foods rather than frying them; and buy natural peanut butter that lets the oil float to the top. Pour off the oil before beginning to use the jar.

Lansky will have another new book this spring, "Fat-Proofing Your Children" (Bantam). She is the mother of two teens and lives in suburban Minneapolis. Her previously published books include "Feed Me I'm Yours," "Kids Cooking" and a series of "Practical Parenting" tip books.

"The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster" by Vicky Lanski is available from The Book Peddlers, 144 Pages, $7.95.

Nutritious foods please parents, infants

Cookbook offers recipes for babies, their families

By CHARLES BRITTON
Copley News Service

Here's a high-concept cookbook that also turns out to be very useful, even if you don't have small children at your mealtime table.

While it is aimed at parents who want to offer their toddlers nutritious food that will not extinguish their budding interest in eating, many of the dishes, particularly those proposed for older progeny, would be acceptable to many age groups.

The Beef Stroganoff reprinted here is an example. Though not a classic version, it emphasizes good flavors and interesting combinations and, as we often see in the pages of this book, herbs are used with an uninhibited hand. This recipe comes from the last chapter, designed for children in their second and third years.

CNS Graphic

THE STEAMED SPINACH with Pears appears in the first recipe section, for children from 6 to 12 months. But it's such an interesting combination — designed to encourage the tots not to reject their veggies — that it might well be included as a general family side dish, with the alteration that the ingredients would be chopped together instead of pureed.

Special problems — such as an inability to digest milk, a condition that can appear without warning but often proves to be temporary — are given due attention, as is excessive fat, a worry of many parents. Those concerned about their children's weight would perhaps be well-advised to seek a medical opinion, because it turns out that there's a real danger of parents projecting their own weight obsessions onto their offspring and undernourishing them.

OVERALL, COYLE adopts the tacit theme that youngsters given well-prepared dishes will grow up with a healthy interest in what they eat and will develop a bare minimum of irrational aversions. Little is known about why children eat what they do, she writes.

We don't know why most children go through periods of favoring certain foods and refusing others.

Babies come into the world with a sweet tooth, an indifference to salt and a dislike of bitterness. Children who refuse to eat vegetables on the grounds that they are yucky actually may want food with some texture that isn't overcooked.

Remember too, Coyle said, that tastes can change. The foods your baby hated at 1 year old might taste pretty good after a year of further tasting experiences.

That could apply to people of other ages as well.

STEAMED SPINACH WITH PEARS

¾ pound fresh spinach, thoroughly rinsed and stems removed
2 ripe pears, peeled, cored and coarsely chopped

Rinse spinach leaves 1 last time, shake off excess water and place in heavy medium saucepan. Add pears, cover; steam over medium-high heat for 6 minutes.

Transfer pears and spinach to blender or food processor. Process 1 minute, adding 1 teaspoon of water, if needed, to make puree smoother or thinner. Freeze any puree that you are not using right away.

The recipe yields 1⅓ cups.

BEEF STROGANOFF

1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon safflower oil
1⅓ medium onions, thinly sliced
1¼ pounds beef sirloin or rump, cut across the grain into ½x¼-inch strips
2 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon all-purpose flour
2 cups salt-free beef broth (preferably homemade)
¼ cup plain yogurt
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
¾ pound broad egg noodles, freshly cooked
2 teaspoons unsalted butter
¼ teaspoon dried tarragon

Heat 1 tablespoon oil in large skillet over medium heat. Add onions, lower heat and cook slowly until brown, about 15 minutes. Remove onions from skillet and set aside.

Add beef to pan and, stirring continually, quickly saute until browned all over, about 2 minutes per side. Remove meat from skillet and add to onions.

Add remaining teaspoon oil to skillet and heat. Add flour and whisk to blend. Gradually add beef broth. Whisk continually until broth thickens, about 5 minutes.

Return beef and onions to skillet with sauce. Cook until heated through. Remove skillet from heat, stir in yogurt and sprinkle chopped parsley over top.

Toss noodles with butter and tarragon. Arrange on platter and spoon beef over noodles.

Heart Association, specialists produce healthier cookbooks

By JUDY SHEPARD
Hearst News Service

There is so much new information about diet and health that it is hard to keep up.

For instance, first we were told to avoid saturated fats and use polyunsaturated fats instead. New research now indicates another fat — monounsaturated — bears watching by those committed to heart-healthy diets.

How can we keep up, and how do you start to modify a diet on your own? Here are books, booklets and cookbooks I have come to count on for the answers. Keep in mind that some of the older publications may not reflect the most recent research.

Both the American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society publish paperback cookbooks that are a boon to anyone who has been told by a doctor to modify his or her eating habits. Both books include a good general introduction to good nutritional practices and supply guidelines, definitions, recipes and tips to get you started.

"The American Heart Association Cookbook" has been published in paperback by Ballantine ($3.95).

"Simply Nutritious" is the American Cancer Society's collection of "recipes and recommendation to reduce your risk of cancer." It is available for $5 from the American Cancer Society.

"Eat Smart for a Healthy Heart" (Barron's, $18.95) is the cookbook by heart specialist Dr. Denton A. Cooley. This book is an ambitious one; it includes his own program for heart-healthy eating in addition to lots of recipes.

If you want just one cookbook, let it be Jane Brody's "Good Food Book," an excellent guide to sound nutrition, along with recipes by the award-winning nutritionist/New York Times food writer. An updated version of her earlier "Nutrition Book" ($12.95, Bantam Books,) is available now in paperback, although it doesn't have as many recipes.

There are a number of tools to help you figure things out for yourself. Indispensable is "Nutritive Value of Foods" (U.S. Department of Agriculture, $2.75), a booklet of tables for hundreds of foods, showing their amounts of calories, cholestrol, fats, carbohydrates, calcium, sodium, and various other minerals and vitamins. For a copy, send your name, address and payment to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 115R, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

"The Food Book" (Dell, $9.95) is a guide to the most popular brand name foods in the U.S. This book has dietary guidelines, followed by profiles of everything from cake mixes to fish.

A government booklet, "Meat and Poultry Labels Wrap It Up." is available free by writing to F. James Dept. 600R, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. This publication explains the terms "lite," "lean," "natural," "sodium-free" and "low-sodium." It also explains what the dates on the packages mean.

U.S. Government pamphlets are available on osteoporosis, diet and cancer, dietary guidelines, food additives, food labels, health foods, calcium, iron, vitamins, artificial sweeteners and low-sodium diets. Many are free; none are costly. They're all listed in the Consumer Information Catalog, a free publication. For a copy, write to S.M. Woods, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The advice you get from family and friends may confuse you. That is why you have to chart your own path to success. Do what makes sense to YOU. Quit complaining about a partner and see what you personally can do to enhance your relationship. Take steps to help a child find the right answers on his own. It may be time to cut some family ties. It could bring a parent and child closer together. Travel to learn.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV host Sally Jessy Raphael, actor Jim Backus, roving ambassador Philip Habib, opera star Enrico Caruso, singer George Harrison, comedian Zeppo Marx, artist Pierre Renoir, tennis' Bobby Riggs.

5 ♠	Pass	5 NT	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

Do not commit yourself to a particular line earlier than necessary. The more information you have about the hand, the more informed a decision you can reach.

You have bid well to reach an excellent grand slam. After partner's artificial and strong two-club opening bid, you made a waiting response and he showed a powerful balanced hand. When he supported your suit, you confirmed all four aces with your bid of five no trump, and partner decided that his prime cards, ruffing value and good five-card suit merited a jump to the grand slam.

The first bit of information you need is how the trumps break. So win the ace of spades at trick one and cash the ace-king of trumps. When both defenders follow, you realize that you can afford to ruff your spade loser on the table and try for a 4-3 club split, which will see you home. Cash the ace of clubs and ruff a club, then cash the king of spades and ruff a spade. Now ruff a club high, when West discards a spade, draw the last trump. (East discards a diamond on the third round of each major suit.) Cross to the king of diamonds and sluff a diamond on the king of clubs; the queen does not drop. You are down to the ace-jack of diamonds, and when you lead a diamond from dummy, East follows with a low card. Do you finesse?

If you have been following the proceedings, you know that East's remaining card must be the queen of clubs. So rise with the ace and watch West's queen of diamonds come tumbling down to allow you to bag your grand slam.

Wolfman Jack finds country home

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Radio personality Wolfman Jack has been named host of a new "Rock 'n' Roll Palace" cable television show on The Nashville Network.

The weekly 30-minute program beginning April 2 will feature music stars from the 1950s and 1960s, including the Coasters, the Shirelles, Del Shannon, the Diamonds, Paul Revere, Bobby Vee, the Comets, and Joey Dee and the Starliters, TNN announced Tuesday.

Wolfman Jack was host of the "Midnight Special" show on NBC-TV for nine years and now has various radio programs. He played himself in the movie "American Graffiti."

His new show will be taped at Little Darlin's Rock 'n' Roll Palace in Kissimmee, Fla.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz pianist-composer Billy Taylor says money spent sending American artists to festivals abroad is money well spent.

"In traveling to places like a jazz festival in India, I've seen Russia, Japan, France, Australia, sent their best," Taylor said Tuesday. Other nations know about American music through records, but "that knowledge is flawed if they don't get some of our very best. We have to find measures to at least be competitive in this way."

Taylor was attending an announcement by the Rockefeller Foundation, U.S. Information Agency and National Endowment for the Arts of a fund to support the sending of U.S. artists to international festivals and exhibitions.

"One of the things I find, traveling around the world, is that I become intensely patriotic," said Taylor.

LONDON (AP) — Aston Martin, the U.S.-owned purveyor of expensive sports cars, kept up its ties with the British royal family by giving scaled-down cars to the young sons of Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

Company chairman and chief executive Victor Gauntlett made the presentation Tuesday. But 5-year-old Prince William and 3-year-old Prince Harry may have to wait a while before getting behind the wheels. Asked if his children are ready to drive, the Prince of Wales said, "Gracious, no."

The 8.5-foot-long, 4/7-scale Aston Martins each cost about $17,500. They are equipped with stereo radios and cassette players, electrically powered aerials, five-speed gearboxes, leather upholstery, headlights and turn signals.

Aston Martin, which is controlled by the American manufacturer Ford, said the junior cars are like the Aston Martin V-8 Volante that Charles drives in virtually every detail. Instead of a V-8 British-built engine capable of a maximum speed of 153 mph, however, they are powered by a Honda engine made in Japan and tuned to reach 25 mph.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Norman Loyd, who plays the grandfatherly Dr. Auschlander in television's "St. Elsewhere," has joined a hospital's drive to recruit nurses.

"I must say this is a little nicer than St. Elsewhere," the fictional inner-city Boston hospital featured in the NBC-TV series, Loyd observed Tuesday as he walked down the corridor at Heartland Hospital East. "I think I'll ask them to change the set."

Loyd will star in a 10-minute video to be distributed nationwide in Heartland's search for nursing personnel. He took time between takes to shake hands with Heartland employees.

"Having him in it will be an attention getter — something we hope will catch the eye of nurses who might be looking for a position," said Debi Yancer, associate director of patient care services.

The video will be shown at career days, placement fairs and at recruitment dinners that have been spurred by the nationwide shortage of nurses.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "People's Court" Judge Joseph Wapner's word is the law on television, but not necessarily off camera, where the popular show's lawyers have agreed to pay a $2,500 settlement to a man the judge ruled against.

The show's producers said the $2,500, awarded i 72-year-old former Mr. America Rex Ravelle, marked the first time the judge has settled out of court with someone who has sued over a TV decision.

"The judge's decision was so bad it was unbelievable," said Ravelle, who had sought $2,000 in back rent and return of a bedroom set he said was taken by a woman he evicted from his house.

Ravelle said in a recent interview that he was set up to look like a bully and a buffoon and then Wapner ruled against him for dramatic effect when the show was taped Dec. 4, 1985.

"I was instructed to project my voice and assert myself, while the defendant was submissive and scarcely audible," Ravelle said. "This obvious ploy clearly established me as the big, macho villain."

Wapner said he couldn't recall Ravelle's case and was unaware of the settlement, but added he tries to be fair to all people on the show.

"I try to be fair, and our track record is there," said Wapner, former presiding judge of Los Angeles Superior Court. "I try to make sure that each side gets a fair shot."

Ravelle, who had sued the show for $1 million, agreed to drop the suit in exchange for the settlement last week.

Of approximately 2,000 small claims cases Wapner has heard during the show's seven years, Ravelle is one of only three disgruntled litigants to sue, said James B. Pollock, vice president for Ralph Edwards Productions, the show's producer. He is the only one to win a settlement, Pollock added.

Participants on "People's Court" are selected from among those who file for damages in small claims courts in 36 Southern California localities.

Pasta-sausage dish voted teens' favorite

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

When we invited teens to our test kitchen for a microwave cooking session, this recipe was the one they liked best and wanted to make at home. The timings are for ovens with fewer than 600 watts.

HOT 'N' HEARTY PASTA BAKE
1⅓ cups corkscrew macaroni
1 pound bulk Italian sausage
1 (15½-ounce) jar meatless spaghetti sauce
2 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon crushed red pepper
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Cook macaroni according to package directions; drain. Crumble sausage into a 1½-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cook in a low-wattage microwave oven, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 7 to 8 minutes or until no longer pink, stirring once. Drain. Stir in sauce, water and pepper. Stir in macaroni. Cook, covered, on high 4 minutes or until heated through, stirring once. Sprinkle with cheese. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 460 cal., 21 g pro., 52 g carbo., 18 g fat, 44 mg chol., 1293 mg sodium.

Party appetizer can be stored month in freezer

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Stow a party's worth of make-ahead appetizers in your freezer.

These meatballs can be prepared up to a month ahead and frozen until you want to serve them.

Then add the sauce and vegetables and they'll be ready for the party in less than a half hour.

STOW-AWAY APPETIZER MEATBALLS
1 beaten egg
⅛ cup milk
⅛ cup corn bread stuffing mix
¼ cup finely chopped celery
1 teaspoon dry mustard
Dash pepper
¾ pound ground fully cooked ham
½ pound ground pork
1 cup maple-flavored syrup
⅛ cup vinegar
2 teaspoons dry mustard
2 cups bias-sliced carrots or bite-size cauliflower flowerets
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
1 green pepper, cut into bite-size pieces

In a mixing bowl combine egg and milk. Stir in stuffing mix, celery, 1 teaspoon dry mustard and pepper. Let stand 3 minutes.

Add ham and pork; mix well. Shape into 1-inch meatballs; place in shallow baking pan. Bake in 350-degree oven 15 to 18 minutes or until done.

Drain on paper towels. Cool. Place on baking sheet and freeze. When frozen, place in moisture- and vapor-proof container or bag. Seal, label and freeze.

In a saucepan combine maple-flavored syrup, vinegar and remaining dry mustard. Bring to boiling.

Stir in meatballs; cover and simmer 8 to 10 minutes or until meatballs are heated through.

Meanwhile, cook carrots or cauliflower, covered, in a small amount of boiling water 10 to 15 minutes or until just tender. Drain well.

Combine cornstarch and water. Add carrots or cauliflower, cornstarch mixture and green pepper to meatballs.

Cook and stir until bubbly. Cook 2 minutes more. Keep warm in chafing dish. Serve with wooden toothpicks. Makes about 25 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 94 cal., 5 g pro., 12 g carbo., 2 g fat, 25 mg chol., 217 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 56 percent vit. A, 16 percent vit. C, 14 percent thiamine.

MC's unbeaten women face tough Odessa test

From Staff Reports

Midland College's undefeated women's tennis team ventures to Odessa Thursday for its first action of the spring, and one of its toughest tests of the year.

The Chaparral women raced to a nifty 8-0 mark last fall...and did it with just five players. That meant they were forfeiting two matches against each team. But Coach Joe Williams added another player in January, so the team will be at full strength against the OC Lady Wranglers.

"It's been four months since we've played a match and that's a long time to go without competition," Williams noted. "We played a limited chedule in the fall, but will have more matches this spring. Odessa has one of its better teams this year and we'll have to be ready if we are going to win over there."

Freshman Raquel Colvin, a graduate of Abilene Cooper, heads the Chaparral squad. She had an 8-1 mark in the fall; the only loss a disputed three-setter in Monterrey, Mexico. She qualified for the ITCA Rolex Small College championships in Minnesota last month, where she won the consolation title after losing her first match.

Ex-Yankee Fisher happy as a Pirate

By ALAN ROBINSON

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Brian Fisher's year of transition took him from the New York Yankees to the Pittsburgh Pirates, from the bullpen to the starting rotation, from being miserable to being happy.

It's amazing what escaping George Steinbrenner's team can do for a ballplayer's frame of mind, Fisher, a one-time Midland Angel, said Tuesday at the Pirates' spring training camp.

'I had a lot more fun in Pittsburgh, I had a lot better time and I learned a lot more," Fisher said. "The manager and coaches aren't worried about their jobs or getting fired, the front office people, they don't have a maniac running around, firing you the minute you drop a pencil.

"That's why I think I pitched so much better here. I was more relaxed. ... The coaches don't run around here saying 'We've got to win, we've got to win, we've got to win.' "

Fisher, obtained from the Yankees in the Rick Rhoden deal in November 1986, was expected to team with Don Robinson and give the Pirates the solid bullpen they had lacked since Kent Tekulve was traded away.

Instead, neither was effective and Fisher was converted to a starter while Robinson was dealt to the San Francisco Giants.

Fisher developed into one of the National League's best starters after the All-Star break, going 7-3 with a 3.98 earned run average and winning his last four decisions. He had three shutouts — including a September two-hitter over the St. Louis Cardinals — and finished 11-9 with a 4.52 ERA and six complete games.

Fisher wonders whether the Yankees would have had the patience to steer him through his move from stopper to starter.

"Nobody panicked in Pittsburgh, but in New York it would have been, 'Uh, oh, he hasn't pitched well in two games,' " he said.

"There's not as much pressure in Pittsburgh, there's not as many reporters to answer to, it's a little easier place to play than New York. The media isn't as hyped up as it is in New York. Now, I enjoy every minute I'm at the park."

Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said the 6-foot-4, 210-pound Fisher became a success when he began using all of his pitches, not just the 90-mph fastball that helped him record 14 saves for the Yankees in 1985.

"He's not home free yet, but now he's learning how to pitch," Leyland said. "When he was a reliever and the game was on the line, he had a tendency to go just a certain way. Now, he knows when he's going to pitch, he knows how to prepare himself and that's been beneficial."

Early last season, Fisher said, he was too concerned with making a favorable impression on Pirates fans, with trying to prove he could be an extinguisher of rallies rather than an ignitor of them.

"In the pen, you always want that stopper job, but for me to get that stopper job here I had to go through Donnie Robinson and that was a tough thing," Fisher said. "I put a lot of pressure on myself.

The acquisition of relievers Jim Gott and Jeff Robinson from the Giants relaxed all of the Pirates' starters, Fisher said.

"Early in the season, Sid Bream asked me what the difference was between the Pirates and the Yankees. I said that in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings with the Yankees, the game was over once you got the lead," Fisher said..

"When we got Jeff Robinson and Jim Gott it was the same thing over here. That makes a big difference to a starter, knowing when you come out in the eighth inning that you're going to get that 'W.'"

Flying Finn joins double-medal winners

By JOHN NELSON

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Flying Finn Matti Nykanen and Frank-Peter Roetsch of East Germany became double gold medalists, while B&B spun a sultry dance to victory at the Winter Olympics' Soviet bloc party Tuesday night.

The beer from Bonnie Blair's victory bash hadn't even gone flat before America's day of glory turned into another day of gold for the East.

Natalia Bestemianova and Andrei Bukin, three-time world champions from the Soviet Union, won the ice dancing competition. With Bestemianova displaying a wide range of theatrical expressions, B&B skated to an easy victory over Soviets Marina Klimov and Sergei Ponomarenko. Tracy Wilson and Robert McCall of Canada won the bronze.

The volatile Matti Nukes, who already won the 70-meter jump, won the 90 with a hill record jump of 118.5 meters, becoming the first double jumping gold medalist at an Olympics.

"I knew I'd won after the first jump," said Nykanen, who won the 90-meter jump at Sarajevo four years ago and can get a third this time in the 90-meter team competition Wednesday.

Roetsch won the 10-kilometer biathlon, adding that gold to his 20K victory, staging the first Olympic sweep of the two individual biathlon events. Soviets finished 2-3.

"After the relay, we'll drink much more beer," Roetsch said, looking forward to the prospect of a third gold medal. "Hopefully, we'll have a reason to celebrate."

SPEED skater Yvonne van Gennip of Holland won the women's 3,000-meter race in world-record time, and East Germans finished 2-3. Karin Kania of East Germany made a painful bid to become the most successful woman speed skater in Olympic history, but she finished more than six seconds behind van Gennip and in fourth.

"Yesterday, Bonnie Blair beat them," van Gennip said of the East Germans. "I said to her, 'I'll try tomorrow.' So I did it."

The Soviets now have a leading 22 medals, East Germany 17. The Soviets have eight golds to seven for East Germany, and the two countries have won 39 of 90 medals offered so far.

Kania, a bronze medalist to Blair's gold in the 500 meters Monday night, slipped late in the 3,000, then stood up on the last lap, running out of steam and obviously in pain.

She has won six Olympics medals, including one in 1980 and four in 1984. Kania currently is tied for most medals with Lidija Skoblikova of the Soviet Union.

Make up your mind, Winter or Summer Olympics....fans dress for both in springlike weather in Calgary.

Van Gennip's time was 4 minutes, 11.94 seconds. Andrea Ehrig was second by .15 seconds, and Gabi Zange won the bronze for East Germany.

AMERICA'S best hope in the biathlon, Josh Thompson of Gunnison, Colo., was a disappointment again, unable to add to the U.S. medal count that Blair pushed to four when she won the 500.

Thompson, who was 25th in the 20 kilometers, was 27th on Tuesday after missing five targets.

Tascosa, Monterey advance

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Class 5A girls state basketball playoffs has been a breeze so far for District 3-5A members Amarillo Tascosa and Lubbock Monterey, but a challenge is quickly on the way.

Tascosa buried El Paso Hanks 63-40 and Monterey clubbed once beaten El Paso Eastwood 64-42 in an area playoff doubleheader at Chaparral Center Tuesday night.

For the Rebels of Tascosa, now 27-3 on the season, and Monterey, 24-7, the area playoffs were no more trouble than they had in bi-district play against the District 4-5A teams of Midland Lee and San Angelo, both routs.

But Tascosa and Monterey return to Chap Center Friday night against two state ranked teams in the first round of the Region I girls tournament.

Tascosa will face the No. 3 team in the state in North Richland Hills Richland, who will carry a 34-1 record into the tournament, at 6 p.m. Friday while Monterey will square off against No. 4 ranked Duncanville, who has an impressive 31-2 mark, in the 8 p.m. nightcap.

The two winners will advance to Saturday's 11 a.m. finals.

Tuesday Richland ran past Lewisville 61-44 while Duncanville plastered Fort Worth Dunbar 82-54 in separate area playoff outings.

At Chap Center, Monterey got 15 points from April Simpson, 13 from Sherry Blackwell and 10 from Susanne Copeland against the Lady Troopers of Eastwood, who fall from the playoffs with a 24-2 record. Eastwood got a game high 18 points from Ann Carroll, but had little else to throw at the Plainsmen.

Tascosa also used a balanced attack as Tiffany Hobbs scored 16 points, Jennifer Fritz 12 and Shawn Strange 10 off the bench. Tracey Whitfield led the Hanks Knights with 14 points. Hanks ends the season with a 21-5 record.

Pistons Laimbeer plays the way Mafia collects bills

Murray

You'd think he shot Jesse James. Invaded Afghanistan. Kept a picture of Stalin over his fireplace. He comes into focus like a guy wearing a spiked helmet and goose-stepping. Compared to him, Al Capone was a victim of society. In the little world of basketball, he's Public Enemy No. 1 — and 2 and 3 and 4. Take every villain of every movie you've ever seen, multiply him by two — and you have some idea of the venom Bill Laimbeer arouses in an audience. People are sure he poisons canaries for kicks. He gets the same lovable press notices as a pit bull.

Consider the playoffs last year. In one tangle under a basket in the Boston Garden, suddenly Larry Bird — Larry Bird! — was hurled to the floor. By Bill Laimbeer. You would have thought he burned Joan of Arc at the stake. Replays on television compounded the outrage. Boston center Robert Parish came in the game frowning and all but hung Laimbeer by his heels from a tall building — and let go. But the officials pretended not to see.

BILL LAIMBEER, in short, plays basketball the way the Mafia collects bills. Cossacks were kinder. His approach is part-caveman, part-mugger.

What's a nice Notre Dame boy doing with this kind of reputation?

Well, at first, the league thought he was just clumsy. After all, Bill is 6-foot-11, he weighs 250, he has these thick, heavy legs and he can't jump very high or run very fast. He bumped into more people than a Paris pickpocket. And for somewhat the same reasons, they found. Laimbeer isn't trying to separate you from your senses, he's trying to separate you from the ball.

If you're Magic Johnson, you do this niftily. Painlessly.

If you're Bill Laimbeer, you do this with a bludgeon. Or a forearm. Or an elbow. It's pretty hard to get rebounds politely in this league. And Bill Laimbeer gets 1,000 or so a year. He never looks up to see whether he's getting them from Larry Bird — or some backup center. Nor does he pick on guys less than his size. He took a swipe at a ball in Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's hand in the Detroit-Laker game at the Forum Sunday. He missed the ball — but not Kareem's head.

NOW THERE are easier ways to try suicide than hitting Kareem in the head. Jumping off a bridge comes to mind. Kareem has been known to get homicidal over an elbow in the ribs. So, you can imagine what a rap upside the head might evoke.

Confrontations like that not only solidify Laimbeer's reputation but bring the whole team into the light as a kind of an outlaw gang riding into town to take it over with a reign of terror. You picture the Detroit Pistons screaming into town on motorcycles. Or tiger tanks. The Wehrmacht of the NBA.

So, the next question is, what pool hall did the Pistons get Bill Laimbeer out of after he left Notre Dame. The answer is none.

It's really called playing the cards you're dealt. When you can run the 40 in 4-flat, jump 7 feet in the air from a standing start and have the peripheral vision of a shark, you can play the finesse game of basketball. When you can make the ball materialize out of thin air like a Magic Johnson or take those flying takeoffs to the basket from mid-court like a Michael Jordan, you can play the game the way Dr. Naismith intended. When you can run just faster than paint can dry and jump just high enough not to trip on a crack in the sidewalk, you call on other skills.

"HEY!" exclaims Bill Laimbeer. "I know I'm not a pretty basketball player. I know I play ugly. But I play with what I have."

What he has, actually, is a pretty good perimeter game on offense.

"You can't leave him out there," explains the Laker assistant, Bill Bertka. "He shoots like a forward. He can't jump an inch but if you leave him out at the top of the key, he has this jump shot. He's made himself into a pro player." The Lakers' James Worthy agrees. "He has evolved this style of play and it works for him. Detroit has this modified attack they take your head off and Laimbeer leads it."

Adds Bertka: "He puts this game face on and he slips into this role. An enforcer? No, just kind of the leader of a wolf pack. He plays smart. He blocks out. He's one of the top rebounders in the NBA, he gets good position. He never quits. Off the court, I'll bet he's a teddy bear. On it, he's a grizzly."

Owls escape 62-61 at West Virginia

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Temple Coach John Chaney knows his Owls carry a tag as the No. 1 team in college basketball. But he didn't think they would come close to losing to West Virginia.

The Owls beat the Mountaineers 62-61 Tuesday night and clinched the Atlantic 10 title, but not until Mike Vreeswyk made two free throws with six seconds left.

It was Temple's second one-point victory in a week and came two days after the Owls beat North Carolina 83-66 at the Dean Smith Center.

But Temple, 23-1 and 15-0 in the conference, must return to Morgantown in two weeks for the Atlantic 10 tournament. The Owls will be the top seed.

Hawks cut off Pacers

Associated Press

The French Connection carried the Atlanta Hawks and cut off the Indiana Pacers.

Jacques Dominique Wilkins scored 43 points and Antoine Labotte Carr had a career-high 22 Tuesday night as Atlanta ended the Pacers' seven-game winning streak, 131-111.

Wilkins, born in France, made 18 of 30 field-goal tries and reached the 40-point mark for the 10th time this season. Carr, a reserve in his fourth year, was 9-for-13 from the field and got eight rebounds.

"I try to be productive with my playing time," Carr said. "I'm one of the best in the low post. When I'm on a roll, nobody can stop me."

Indiana lost for the first time since before the All-Star break.

Wilkins scored 15 points and Carr 13 in the second quarter when the host Hawks took a 13-point lead. The closest Indiana got thereafter was when Reggie Miller hit a 3-pointer from halfcourt at the halftime buzzer and made it 67-57.

Wilkins, second in the NBA with a 30-point average, got 15 points in the third quarter as Atlanta pulled away.

NBA

Lakers 111, Bullets 100

Los Angeles extended its winning streak to eight as James Worthy scored 23 points against Washington.

Pistons 121, Kings 105

Detroit handed Sacramento its fourth straight loss as Isiah Thomas had 26 points and 11 assists. The Pistons shot 78.3 percent from the field while outscoring the Kings 37-22 in the third period, and Detroit took a 95-74 lead into the fourth quarter.

Bulls 104, SuperSonics 97

Michael Jordan scored 39 points, including six in overtime for Chicago. Seattle's Xavier McDaniel sent the game into overtime at 95-95 with a 35-foot, 3-point shot with one second left in regulation.

Jordan, who had 15 points in the fourth quarter, put the Bulls ahead 99-97 with a layup with 1:34 remaining in overtime.

Knicks 89, Bucks 87

Trail Blazers 114, Nets 102

Portland's Clyde Drexler scored 29 points and ignited a crucial 12-0 run in the second half. The loss was the fourth straight for New Jersey, which learned before the game that second-leading scorer Orlando Woolridge has a drug problem and must undergo rehabilitation.

Rehabilitation changes life, view of Mets' pitcher

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A month in an alcohol rehabilitation changed Floyd Youmans' perspective and his life.

During his treatment last fall, Youmans learned his problem was hereditary, and that his difficult 1987 season didn't cause the drinking. Doctors taught him to face his disease and to avoid situations that may be harmful.

"That's why things have to be dull for me, so I won't drink," Youmans said Tuesday, the first day Montreal pitchers worked out. "I have to stay away from the things and the places that will give me the temptations."

Johnson may return in '89

Time heals Mets' players' wounds

Associated Press

The New York Mets, the preseason favorite to win the National League East, have received a new lift from the news that Davey Johnson may not be a lame-duck manager after all.

"I was the one who was saying last year Davey would be back," said Darryl Strawberry, who has had some well-publicized battles with Johnson but rebounded to have his best season last year. "If we do our job and win like we're supposed to, he'll be back."

The reaction of Strawberry and other Mets followed the announcement Tuesday by president Frank Cashen that in effect rescinded last September's decision that this would be the last season for the man who has been baseball's winningest manager the last four years.

It was a heartening reconciliation to most of the team's key players.

"I'm glad it's been taken care of," catcher Gary Carter said. "We didn't need to have the issue keep coming up."

"Time heals all wounds. It was kind of predictable, wasn't it?" said pitcher Ron Darling, another frequent Johnson target. "Maybe Frank attended Davey's fishing camp this winter. You certainly can't argue with Davey's record of success."

Johnson enters his fifth season with a 388-260 record that includes the 1986 world title and three second-place finishes in the National League East. The 388 wins averages out to 97 per season.

SIGNINGS

Mike LaValliere, the National League's Gold Glove catcher last year, agreed to a one-year contract with Pittsburgh. Lavalliere, obtained from St. Louis at the start of the season, hit .300 with one home run and 36 RBI and threw out 49 of 115 runners attempting to steal to lead the major leagues.

Pitcher David Cone and infielder Dave Magadan agreed to one-year contracts for their second seasons with the Mets. Cone was 5-6 with an ERA of 3.71 last year while Magadan hit .318 with three homers and 24 RBI.

The Phillies signed rookie outfielder Steve DeAngelis ... The Orioles named former major-league outfielder Bobby Tolan manager of their new Class A affiliate in Erie, Pa. and signed pitcher Oswald Peraza to a one-year contract.

HELP!!

The Baltimore Orioles, whose pitching staff had a 5.01 ERA last year, have turned for help to Jim Palmer, their ace for two decades. But the 42-year-old Palmer will pitch only batting practice and serve as an assistant pitching coach to Herm Starrette.

"I just want the Orioles to do better," Palmer said. "The bottom line is, if I'm going to be in Baltimore, reading about the travails and transgressions of the Orioles, why not try and help them be more successful? I don't want to see any team that had such a great past flounder."

REPENTING

There will be no more sandpaper in the glove of Phillies pitcher Kevin Gross, who was suspended for 10 days last season for scuffing up a ball.

"Guys have been doing things to the ball — scratching it, scuffing it, putting grease on it — forever," Gross said. "For me it's an idea that I had for two weeks, and now it's something that I guess is going to haunt me forever.

"It was very embarrassing for me at the time and a lot of baloney came out of it, but I have to keep it in the past. Let's just say I was reaching for something that wasn't there."

EARLY STEALS

Jamie Nelson, a nonroster catcher at the Baltimore Orioles' camp in Miami, went back to his car in the parking lot after Monday's workout and found that the rear window of his truck was shattered. Someone broke in and stole his television set. The Orioles said later they would hire a security guard to watch the lot.

ABC ON TOP— ABC topped the overnight ratings with Winter Olympic coverage again Monday night, helped by the sport it says it relies on for the most viewers. The short program of dance figure skating was among the sports covered in the 7-10 p.m. package, which drew a rating of 22.3 and a share of 32 in 15 major television markets. NBC was second at 16.3-24 with CBS third at 12.1-17.

BOOM BOOM BACK— Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini will come out of retirement to fight Hector "Macho" Camacho in May for $2.25 million plus training expenses while Camacho, a former WBC super featherweight champion who recently relinquished the WBC lightweigfht title, will get $1.3 million plus training expenses. Camacho faces gun and drug possession charges in Clewiston, Fla., but Rappaport said, "There won't be any legal impediment to the fight."

OZZIE TO RETURN— Ozzie Newsome, all-time leading receiver among tight ends in the NFL, says he'll attempt to play another season with the Cleveland Browns. "At the end of that playoff game (the AFC Championship game in Denver), I stood out on the field and wondered whether it was my very last game. I didn't know at that point. But a month later I came to the decision I wanted to play again."

Newsome has been voted three times to the Pro Bowl and owns eight Cleveland receiving records. He has not fumbled in eight seasons.

RICHARDSON TRIES AGAIN — Michael Ray Richardson, New Jersey Nets guard who was kicked out of the NBA two years ago for cocaine abuse, will apply for reinstatement, the Los Angeles Times. The NBA will have 120 days to make a decision on Richardson, who was banned on Feb. 25, 1986. Richardson, who signed a four-year, $3 million contract with the Nets in 1985, was the first player under contract to be banned under the NBA's drug policy.

Flyers Peter Zezel, left, keeps pressure on Islanders goalie Kelly Hrudey in NHL action.

Flyers outweird Wing s, 11-6

Associated Press

To say the game between the Philadelphia Flyers and Detroit Red Wings wasn't your average, run-of-the-mill, National Hockey League contest, would be a gross understatement.

NHL

"That is one of the strangest games I've ever been involved in," Flyers Coach Mike Keenan said.

Beyond that, Keenan was at a loss for words to describe Philadelphia's 11-6 victory over Detroit.

"You don't explain it," Keenan said after the Flyers rallied from a 5-1 deficit with 10 goals in a 21:59 span over the final two periods.

It was a night of unusual happenings in Detroit.

The Flyers' announced starting goalie, Ron Hextall, didn't enter the game until the 45-second mark of the first period, then left after surrendering three goals on 13 first-period shots.

Philadelphia scored on seven of 13 shots in the final period as two of the better defensive teams in the NHL combined to put a defensive display that was nothing short of horrible.

Canadiens 3, Nordiques 1

Mats Naslund and Claude Lemieux scored goals within 1:20 midway through the second period to lead Montreal to its third straight victory.

A pregame fight between Montreal's John Kordic and Quebec's Gord Donnelly will result in the assessment of an automatic $25,000 fine against both teams, the second such penalty against the Canadiens in a week.

Jets 4, Penguins 3

Mario Marois scored at 2:40 of overtime as Winnipeg ended a three-game losing streak.

Marois' winning goal came on a slapshot from the right point after Dale Hawerchuk, who scored his 38th goal of the season in the second period, won a faceoff.

Whalers 3, Bruins 2

Kevin Dineen scored his 21st goal and fourth game-winner of the season with 55 seconds left to lift Hartford.

Reed Larson and Ken Linseman scored for the Bruins, who fell one point behind first-place Montreal in the Adams Division.

Islanders 6, Canucks 1

Bryan Trottier scored twice and assisted on two short-handed goals by Mikko Makela as the Islanders extended their unbeaten streak to six games (4-0-2) and moved into sole possession of second place in the Patrick Division.

The Islanders are two points ahead of the Washington Capitals, who were idle Tuesday. Both teams have played 61 games.

Oilers 6, Blues 4

Craig Simpson scored his 39th and 40th goals of the season to lead Edmonton.

He scored his first goal in the first period and then the game winner at 4:20 of the third period on a slapshot past Blues goalie Greg Millen from 15 feet out.

The Oilers were playing without their leading scorer, Wayne Gretzky, for the second straight game. He a bruised cornea in his left eye in a game against Pittsburgh on Feb. 19.

Olympic Results

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Tuesday's highlights at the Winter Olympics:

MEDALS

The Soviet Union increased its leading medals total to 20 with a silver and a bronze in the 10-kilometer biathlon, but East Germany won the event to tie the Soviets for most golds with seven. The Soviets have won seven golds, seven silvers and six bronzes. East Germany has 16 medals overall, seven golds, five silvers and three bronzes. The United States has two golds, a silver and a bronze.

MULTIPLE MEDALISTS

East Germany's Frank-Peter Roetsch became the first man to sweep the individual Olympics biathlon events. He won the 10-kilometer race Tuesday after winning the 20K Saturday. Roetsch is the second double gold medalist in these Games.

AMERICANS

U.S. medal hope Josh Thompson of Gunnison, Colo., missed four targets and finished a disappointing 27th in the 10-kilometer biathlon. Thompson, whose silver in last year's World Championships at Lake Placid, N.Y. was the first American medal in the history of the sport, had finished 25th in the 20K after missing five targets.

WEDNESDAY'S HIGHLIGHTS

Medals at stake in three events: Women's giant slalom skiing, 90-meter team ski jumping and team Nordic combined skiing.

Alpine Skiing

The Swiss, disappointments with only one gold medal after six events, are favorites in the women's giant slalom, with Vreni Schneider, Maria Walliser and Michela Figini.

Ski Jumping

Finland's Matti Nykanen goes after another gold medal in the 90-meter team jump, a new event in the Olympics. He won the 70-meter individual event. Czechoslovakia is the major opposition.

Hockey

The medals round begins, and host Canada meets the unbeaten and defending champion Soviets in the last game. Other matchups: top-seeded Sweden, the world champion vs. third-seeded Czechoslovakia and Finland vs. West Germany, which knocked out the U.S. team.

GAMES

"I've bought myself another four years with these two bad races," Thompson said. "I can't remember two races I've had so bad back to back ... and I don't want to either."

The 90-meter jump, originally scheduled for Saturday, was delayed twice this week by winds, which died down Tuesday. Nykanen, who said the waiting was making him jumpy, followed up on his record jump with a second-round effort of 107 meters after the starting point was lowered.

Erik Johnsen of Norway won the silver, and Matjaz Debelak of Yugoslavia got the bronze.

In a sort of reverse double, English jumper Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards added a last-place finish on the 90-meter hill to his last in the 70. And the cry of admiring spectators rang out: "The Eagle has landed!"

Roetsch and Nykanen joined speed skater Tomas Gustafson of Sweden as a double gold medal winners.

Roetsch had a time of 25 minutes, 8.1 seconds — 15.6 seconds ahead of Medvedtsev, who won a silver in the 20K. Roetsch had one miss on the target range, forcing him to ski a 150-meter penalty lap. Neither Medvedtsev nor Tchepikov missed.

France beat Norway 2-0 in the first shootout in Olympic hockey history when the teams were tied 6-6 after a scoreless 10-minute overtime. The victory gave France 11th place in the 12-team tournament. Austria beat Poland 3-2 for ninth place.

THE SOVIETS weren't winning everything, although it seemed that way sometimes.

In fact, their heavily favored Nordic combined jumpers were last after the first part this new team event. One got sick and didn't compete, and the other two didn't even bother to take all their jumps.

The world champion West Germans took a narrow lead over Austria after the 70-meter jumping portion of the event, and Norway was third. The skiing part of the event, a three-man 30-kilometer will be Wednesday.

Blair went into her race Monday night knowing she would have to break a world record to win, and she came out with America's second gold medal, boosting the morale of a U.S. Olympic team embarrassed and humbled by the East.

MURRAY

Off the court, if he's not exactly a teddy bear, Bill Laimbeer is at least a long way from the Attila the Hun. "Look!" he protests. "I've never been arrested. I never hit a bartender or even picked a fight on the street. In basketball, I play to win. But I play within the rules. When I don't, I get a technical. I go for the ball, not the jugular."

There once was a biography of the former German rocket expert, Werner Von Braun called "I Aim For The Stars," and the film studio wanted scenarist Herman Mankiewicz to adapt it for the screen. Mankiewicz said he would — if he could make one slight change in the title. He wanted to call it "I Aim For The Stars —But Sometimes I Hit London."

Bill Laimbeer aims for the ball. But sometimes he hits Kareem Jabbar in the head. Sometimes, he knocks Larry Bird to the floor.

Nobody's perfect.

Big East cracks down

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Big East Conference, reacting to an increasing number of brawls in college basketball, inacted on Tuesday new policies against violence, including one-game suspensions for participants.

In a teleconference, the conference's executive committee drafted a five-point policy regarding unsportsmanlike conduct which calls for:

—An automatic suspension for the next conference game for players or bench personnel other than head coaches who enter the basketball court during a skirmish.

—A one-game suspension for players ejected from Big East games, subject to the affirmation of the commissioner.

—Reaffirmed committment on the part of conference athletic directors to ensure that games at their home sites will be "in accordance with the highest standards of sportsmanship and sound principles of game management."

—Reaffirmed support of the conference's officials in their efforts to "control physical play, particularly as it relates to the calling of flagrant and intentional fouls."

—The implementation at the conclusion of the season of a "major program aimed to provide positive leadership — by conference administrators, coaches and athletes — to ensure all competition be conducted to the highest standards of ethics and sportsmanship."

The policies, which go into effect Wednesday, were drafted by the Big East executive committee, which includes Commissioner Dave Gavitt, and athletic directors Todd Turner of Connecticut, Frank Rienzo of Georgetown and Larry Keating of Seton Hall.

All nine Big East athletic directors approved the policies, a statement from the conference said.

"The Big East Conference views its high visibility, which tends to magnify any problem areas, as an opportunity to be an innovative leader in addressing national trends," Gavitt said, prefacing the new policies.

A brawl between Georgetown and Pittsburgh last Saturday highlighted the need for new rules.

Aggies, station gird for battle

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University and Host Communications are preparing for a possible legal battle over the Aggies' attempt to find another network to broadcast its athletic events, the San Antonio Express-News reported Tuesday.

The nine-member Southwest Conference's contract with Host Communications expires at the end of the 1989 football season.

But Texas A&M is hoping to get out of its contract as soon as possible and sell the rights to broadcast its football, basketball and baseball games to another network, the newspaper said.

"We have sent out (bid) proposals to eight or nine people. We are just trying to determine what our rights are," said Wally Groff, Texas A&M's athletic director in charge of finance.

"We are definitely exploring the possibility of selling our radio rights.

"We made $92,000 last school year from the contract with Host and we should make anywhere from $95,000 to $100,000 this year," Groff said. "Compare that to what other schools are making and you can see we are shooting ourselves in the foot."

A SWC source told the newspaper that the Aggies are trying to take advantage of their recent success in football. The Aggies have appeared in the last three Cotton Bowls, winning twice.

Jackie Sherill, A&M's athletic director and head football coach, was not available for comment Monday or Tuesday.

Host President Jim Host said the Aggies are bound to the contract that was signed by SWC schools in 1983.

"We think they are legally wrong and we are going to try and prove that through the conference office," Host said. "Our legal counsel has already been in touch with the Southwest Conference legal counsel and hopefully, it will be worked out soon."

WEST TEXAS RUNNER

Pseudo spring brings out pseudo runners

This is the time of year when the weather teases us into believing spring is finally here, warm one day, cool the next and snowing the following day.

The warmer days bring out the pseudo athletes who participate only when the weather is nice. These people jog once or twice a week during the spring, but won't exercise in the summer because it is too hot. They usually enter the two-mile at the Septemberfest so they can get their free glass of beer, then they hibernate until the next year.

These people are not to be criticized because most of us have fallen into that category at one time or another. If asked these people would call themselves runners. There is, however, a big difference between these casual joggers and real runners.

THERE ARE signs to help uneducated individuals recognize a real runner. Some people would tell you to report these real runners to the nearest authorities because they are a crazy and dangerous bunch.

Real runners will participate in their sport regardless of the weather. Last week 78 of them ran in the I Love to Run 5K in spite of the dust storm and 40 mph winds.

To a real runner, any form of natural terrain is something to run around, through, across or next to. Some might marvel at the majestic beauty of the Grand Canyon, but a real runner would consider it an excellent place to get some hill training.

REAL RUNNERS can also be recognized by their clothes. Real runners never wear a race t-shirt that is less than two years old. Real runners consider proper dress at a black tie affair to be a pair of warmups with their shorts and singlet. Real runners never wear sweat pants, black socks, walking shorts or blank t-shirts.

Real runners will always spend more on their running shoes than they will on their dress shoes. In fact, most real runners pay more for their shoes than they do for their houses.

In spite of what you might have read about vegetarianism or carbo loading, real runners will eat anything and everything. Pizza, Big Macs and ice cream are much more likely to be consumed than sprouts.

Women glow, men perspire, but real runners sweat. Real runners wear big black watches with lots of buttons that do everything but tell the time. Real runners consider ice packs and ace bandages, along with telephones and toilets, as the necessities of life. Real runners are always injured.

Real runners think that a great literary classic is the fall shoe preview issue of Runner's World. They have their own language which includes splits, PRs, fartleks and other useless words.

REAL RUNNERS are quick to work running into any conversation and treat non-runners with complete disdain. A group of runners was eating at a local restaurant recently when a woman approached and asked for a match. One of the runners pointedly replied, "we don't smoke, ever. We're runners." The woman need the match to light the candles on her daughter's birthday cake but that didn't seem to phase the runner.

Regardless of the speed or distance, real runners never jog. The most insulting name any runner can be called is a jogger. Most importantly, real runners know that they are real runners and have a herculean indifference to what anybody else may think about nit.

NOTES- Midland's next race will be the RRCA Challenge Series race March 5 at the North Park Shopping Center. Every runner will receive an award based on how they compare to national age group standards...Entries to the Capital 10,000 in Austin March 28, the nation's largest 10k, must be postmarked by Feb. 24. 'Moonlighting' stars losing their sparkle as well as audience

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If loyal fans of ABC's "Moonlighting" are gluttons for punishment, that may be an asset for watching the show this season.

Not within memory have television viewers had to put up with so much and gotten so little.

"Moonlighting" is the most disappointing show this season, and for those who loved the show it is a terrible thing to see it self-destruct right on the screen.

What made this show go, what gave it its charm and appeal, were the scenes between Cybill Shepherd as Maddie Hayes and Bruce Willis as David Addison. These two opposites, irresistibly drawn to each other in a love-hate relationship, made the screen sparkle with their witty repartee.

But Shepherd's pregnancy caused a dilemma for the show's producers. Instead of shooting around it, as most series do, they made it a part of the story. Allyce Beasley, who plays Miss Dipesto, was also pregnant, but on the show she ignored it. Besides, with her layered look, it was hard to tell.

It might have seemed a smart move at the time to incorporate Shepherd's pregnancy into the story. But it has turned into labor for the viewers.

Maddie, telling no one she was pregnant, went off to Chicago to brood with her parents. David was left to deal with her absence.

"Moonlighting" was left to slowly twist in the wind.

It was embarrassing watching the show deal with her absence. It squirmed and made up stories like someone caught in a lie. The whole point of watching "Moonlighting" was to see those two carry on like Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn in "Woman of the Year." The cases they solved were merely an excuse to get them together so they could disagree.

And when Shepherd and Willis finally got back together, it wasn't any better. Forget the witty dialogue. "Moonlighting" turned into "Days of Whine and Roses."

Although Shepherd had twins, Maddie is still pregnant. She told David the baby's not his.

But the clincher was when she announced she had married a stranger — a whole new character, Dennis Dugan as a businessman she met on the train from Chicago — on impulse. Maddie, married on impulse? Maddie, the woman who wouldn't cross the street on impulse? David is standing there with egg on his face, trying to grin through it. What a low blow. What a letdown for the audience.

Where is the famous "Dallas" shower when we need it? Tell us the season was only a dream and not a nightmare.

Maddie and David have become an unfunny, bickering couple who have overstayed their welcome. It was nice while it lasted, but the magic is gone.

Meanwhile, ABC has removed another show from its schedule. "Sledge Hammer!" a spoof on all those macho detectives, started out in the Nielsen cellar and never got out. The show deserved better.

It made its debut in September 1986 against CBS' "Dallas" and NBC's "Miami Vice." After that introduction to obscurity, ABC transferred the show to 8 o'clock Thursday, where it went up against NBC's "The Cosby Show." There it stayed until it was moved again, back to Friday against "Dallas" and "Miami Vice."

David Rasche stars as the title character, a one-man anti-crime crusade, whose idea of crime prevention is shooting a jaywalker. The show has parodied such movies as "Vertigo," "Play It Again, Sam," "A Clockwork Orange," "Dressed To Kill" and "Robocop."

It's a funny show, although its brand of satire may be difficult for some people to understand. But the main reason the show never gained an audience was its time period. It has never had a chance.

ABC says it will bring the show back later. It deserves a chance to be seen by a wider audience and not merely to be brought back in another bad time slot to play out its commitment.

Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd, as David Addison and Maddie Hayes in ABC's "Moonlighting," are finding themselves out of the news this season and a disappointment to true fans who have found this season's show traveling down a path to a self-destruction.

New CBS talk show to feature 'Wheel of Fortune' host

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS plans to launch a late-night talk show with "Wheel of Fortune" host Pat Sajak next season that would compete with NBC's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Meanwhile in New York, NBC announced Monday it is launching "Later with Bob Costas" in August, a half-hour talk show that will follow "Late Night with David Letterman."

The Sajak show means cancellation of the network's late-night line-up of action shows and music, said a source at CBS. The shows are expected to remain on the air until at least September, said the source, who is close to the productions and spoke on condition of anonymity.

They include the original series "Adderly," "Night Heat," "Diamonds" and "Top of the Pops" and reruns of "Hunter."

"At least 20 percent of the CBS affiliates are not carrying the late-night shows," the source said. "CBS is turning to Sajak in hopes of finding a format all its affiliates will stay with."

Sajak is host of "Wheel of Fortune," the most successful syndicated show ever.
