Curriculum dean named at college

Bettie McQueen, a Western Texas College staffer the past nine years and the director of occupational and technical (occ-tech) education the past 3½, was named dean of instruction Tuesday by the college board.

In addition to her administrative role overseeing the occ-tech studies on campus, she also filled a division chairmanship for vocational education.

This post was filled Tuesday also as trustees named Jerry M. Dennis, who now serves as the instructor for diesel mechanics at the college.

He will continue to teach in this field and will assume the extra duties as a division chairman with the fall semester.

As dean of instruction, McQueen will oversee all curriculum — academic and vocational — offered at the college.

She joined the WTC staff in March of 1977, employed in the college counseling office. For three years, she worked as a vocational counselor and in December of 1982 was named as director of occ-tech education.

In this capacity, she was responsible for developing and evaluating the curriculum of the occ-tech program. In addition, she served as the campus representative with the Texas Education Agency for such programs.

Her degrees include a bachelor in business education received from Texas Tech University and a master of education degree received from Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

Prior to moving to Snyder, she served as a business education instructor at Seminole High School. She and her family moved here in 1976.

She and her husband Roy have one son, Marc, a sophomore at Snyder High School.

Dennis first became associated with the WTC vo-ed department in 1975. He resigned in 1980 and was self-employed for a time before returning this past August as instructor for diesel mechanics.

100,000 may risk cancer at Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 100,000 people risk developing cancer because of exposure to radiation unleashed by the Chernobyl disaster, said an American doctor treating victims of the nuclear power plant accident.

Meanwhile, a Soviet physician, Dr. Angelina Guskova, was quoted by the government newspaper Izvestia on Tuesday as saying that 120 people from the Chernobyl area were being cared for at Moscow's Hospital No. 6.

Of those patients, 70 to 80 "are occupying our hearts and minds permamently," Ms. Guskova, the hospital's chief radiologist, was quoted as saying, indicating that their condition was serious.

According to official Soviet accounts, two workers were killed in the April 26 explosion and fire at Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor, and 17 people have died in hospitals since.

The accident at the power station, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, sent radioactive particles skyward and spread an invisible cloud of radiation over much of Europe that ultimately reached around the world.

Dr. Robert P. Gale, a U.S. bone marrow specialist in Moscow to help treat victims of the worst nuclear accident in history, indicated in an interview Tuesday night that the full human cost of the disaster may not be known for years.

Speaking live from Moscow in the British Broadcasting Corp. program "After Chernobyl," Gale said 300 people had sustained immediate injuries from the reactor blast, and that 35 of them were in danger of dying.

He estimated the total number of people at risk of developing cancer at more than 100,000.

3rd drive nets 450th blood pint

Scurry County's third blood drive of the year netted the 450th pint drawn here during 1986.

Some 162 potential donors registered Tuesday with 143 pints eventually drawn. The last drive April 1 generated 164 pints and the year's first drive in February equaled 142.

Tuesday's effort also had some 31 first time donors and "gallon pin" recognition for six longtime blood drive supporters.

A four-gallon pin was presented to Bob Sealy. Also, two-gallon pins went to Texa Jones Ball, Wayne Winkles and Cheryl Jones; and one-gallon pins to Janet Spence and Angelina Gutierrez.

Local blood drives are jointly sponsored by the advisory committee for United Blood Services of Lubbock and the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

The next blood drive is set for July 22.

The new blood drive chairman effective with this effort is Sallie Tate, who heads the local UBS advisory council.

12.3 percent reduction...

WTC looks at less budget

A reduced college operating budget which approximately follows state-directed cuts equaling some 13 percent was previewed for Western Texas College trustees Tuesday.

Offering the facts and figures to the board was WTC President Dr. Harry Krenek.

The spending estimate as now proposed — with a second budget session set for the June meeting — totals some $4.7 million. This compares to last year's final figure of $5.4 million, a 12.3 percent reduction.

In actual dollars, this would equal a reduction in spending of some $668,000.

State officials have mandated a 13 percent budget decrease for all state agencies next year — a mandate which does not directly affect junior colleges.

College officials have been cautioned, however, to expect state revenue cuts in the 13 percent range. Because of this and other factors, WTC officials say they prepared their budget estimates with a minus 13 percent figure in mind.

Krenek told the board Tuesday the cuts have been in all departments, "a general tightening of the budget," he said.

This includes proposed reductions in the amounts budgeted for staff salaries in both the academic and vocational departments.

Krenek said Wednesday morning these reductions have been mainly through attrition — a philosophy of not replacing college personnel when vacancies occur unless the posts are deemed critical.

Overall, the budget as presented pars some $36,000 in staff salaries from the budget.

Other cuts were made in student travel, part-time student help and reductions in administrative maintenance items, Krenek said.

Board members were also given break-downs on how each department of the college compares "expenses to income." The expenses were based on budget allocations last year and the income on the amount of funds generated by "student contact hours" — the formula used for the college's state allocation of dollars.

Aline observed it was interesting to her that the state song was introduced by a woman who just recently died. "I can remember singing the song as an elementary school student and assuming it was at least as old as "The Star Spangled Banner."

Aline included another clipping which noted that more than 850,000 Texans have lived for at least half of the state's 150-year history, and 1.6 million others are 60 or older.

She added it was interesting, too, to think that many people living in Texas today will likely live to see the state's 200th birthday, and 200 years is not such a long time as history goes.

Critics praise decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lobbyist Michael K. Deaver and some of his most persistent Capitol Hill critics praised the decision by a three-judge panel to appoint an independent counsel to investigate the former White House aide.

A special federal court panel disclosed Tuesday that the Justice Department had five days earlier recommended that the court name an independent counsel to probe whether Deaver broke federal conflict-of-interest laws.

Deaver, who had sought appointment of the counsel, "is pleased that the process toward a fair hearing is on course," said Pam Bailey, a spokeswoman.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., one of five senators seeking an independent counsel, praised the announcement as "good news. ... It takes out the question of partisan politics."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., said an investigation by a House subcommittee that he chairs will continue. He said he hoped the counsel's mandate would be "sufficiently broad to make possible the most thorough investigation," but that the appointment "in no way diminishes the responsibility of my (investigations) subcommittee to continue its own broad investigation."

The court, in its one-page order, gave no schedule for the appointment.

The court's decision follows months of allegations that the former White House deputy chief of staff may have violated conflict-of-interest laws by lobbying his former government colleagues on issues with which he was intimately involved while at the White House, including acid rain.

Deaver has denied abusing his close personal ties to President and Nancy Reagan to build his consulting business, where Deaver represents numerous foreign government and major corporate clients.

The three-member panel, comprising senior judges of the U.S. Court of Appeals appointed by Chief Justice Warren Burger, said that when an independent counsel is named, Attorney General Edwin Meese could "disclose publicly the contents of his report and application filed on May 22, 1986."

The order was issued by Judges George E. MacKinnon, Lewis R. Morgan and Walter R. Mansfield.

Dangerous, drug-resistant salmonella germs increasing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Salmonella bacteria resistant to common drugs are a fast-growing problem in the United States, according to a researcher who says the germs are moving up the food chain from farm animals.

Chickens, cows and other barnyard animals often are fed steady doses of common antibiotics — the same drugs used to treat people — in an effort to keep the animals healthy and make them grow faster.

Some experts believe this practice is speeding up the emergence of drug resistance in the germs that make humans sick. Others say germs are becoming impervious to antibiotics because of overuse of these medicines in people.

The issue is important because drug-resistant germs are more difficult to treat, and some believe they cause especially dangerous bouts of illness.

Dr. Robert V. Tauxe of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control presented findings Tuesday that he said showed the increasing prevalence of resistance among salmonella bacteria, which can cause sometimes fatal food poisoning among humans. The research, he said, implicates the farm use of these antimicrobial drugs.

"Antimicrobial resistance is increasing among salmonella and is of great concern," he said. "In the United States, foods of animal origin are the most important source for both resistant and (drug) sensitive salmonella, and the antimicrobials to which food animals are exposed are the most important pressure leading to the appearance and persistance of resistant strains."

He said that a nationwide CDC survey in 1980 showed that 16 percent of salmonella bacteria were resistant to at least one drug. When the study was repeated five years later, 25 percent were found to be resistant.

Resistance to tetracycline, an antibiotic widely used in animals and humans, has more than doubled in five years in one strain of salmonella, known as typhimurium.

In 1980, less than 1 percent of this strain were resistant to chloramphenical, a drug rarely used to treat humans. By 1985, this had increased to 5 percent.

"Although this drug is not legal for food animals in this country, black market chloramphenical has been used by livestock producers," Tauxe said.

"This rise in resistance is quite disturbing," he added. "We may now be seeing chloramphenical resistance spilling from animal salmonella into human salmonella infections."

Tauxe presented his findings at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

They were disputed by Dr. Victor Lorian of Bronx-Lebanon Hospital Center in New York. Lorian studied 20,000 samples of salmonella gathered between 1975 and 1984 and found that resistance to tetracycline had actually declined.

"I don't believe that bacterial resistance represents a problem in hospitals for treating patients," Lorian said.

"Industry is producing plenty of new antibiotics each year, so antibiotic resistance is not a threat," he said. "Bacterial resistance is relatively stable, and that is the bottom line."

Two cosmonauts making spacewalk

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts who hold the record for the longest time spent walking in space during a single mission took another stroll above the Earth today outside the orbiting Salyut 7, Radio Moscow reported.

The radio said cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovev, who set a 237-day space endurance record in 1984, tested out new spacesuits and installed equipment outside the space station during the walk.

Kizim and Solovev undertook six space walks during their 1984 mission, spending a total of 22 hours, 50 minutes in space.

That feat surpassed the previous American mark of 22 hours, 13 minutes on four space walks during the Skylab 3 mission of 1973-74.

Radio Moscow did not say in its English-language newscast how long Kizim and Solovev spent in space today.

The official news agency Tass said the spacewalk began at 9:43 a.m. Moscow time (1:43 a.m. EDT).

Husband Wants Old Marriage Altered So New One Will Fit

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was divorced three years ago, after a six-year marriage. My husband has remarried, and his new wife is a Catholic. My ex-husband and I were both brought up in the Lutheran church.

I heard from him recently; he tells me that in order for his wife to take communion, his marriage to me must be annulled. (Is that true?)

Abby, I kept my married name for the sake of convenience. If my marriage is annulled, will the legality of all the documents I've signed with my married name be questioned? And how can an annulment be initiated when an individual has already been divorced? I always thought an annulment declared the marriage to be nonexistent, and a divorce acknowledges the fact that it existed but is dissolved.

Is this a process that involves only the church, or does it have legal ramifications as well? There are no children involved. My husband is sending me some "forms" to fill out and I need the above questions answered first.

NO NAME OR TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: Your ex-husband's Catholic wife cannot go to communion since she married a divorced man — that is why your ex is trying to get his marriage to you annulled.

Unless you had your maiden name restored in the divorce decree, you're entitled to use your married name. There's no way any effective question could be raised about the legality of documents you've signed since your divorce.

As for the annulment and the "forms" your husband is sending you, watch out! Annulment and divorce are entirely different. Inasmuch as you were divorced, there must have been a valid marriage that was dissolved by a divorce decree. A valid marriage cannot be annulled. A final word of advice: Do not sign anything that is not true, and see your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I seem to be locking horns on the subject of toothpicks.

Is it proper to pick your teeth in public during or after a meal? My husband started picking his teeth at the table while we were in a restaurant. I politely asked him to go to the restroom to pick his teeth, and he became very upset with me.

Personally, I find it very repulsive. I wonder what other diners think? I don't care if you put this in the paper, but please don't use my name.

MILWAUKEE SENTINEL FAN

DEAR FAN: Not only is it improper to pick one's teeth in public, it's crude, inconsiderate and a show of bad manners.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a friend's husband passed away. The obituary notice read, "No calling hours."

Should I have called? I did not, but I have since learned that other friends did. Please clear this up for me.

PUZZLED IN NEW YORK

DEAR PUZZLED: The obituary notice was confusing. It should have read, "No specific calling hours," which would indicate that those who wished to call could do so at their convenience. "No calling hours" could be interpreted to mean "No callers at any hour."

Treasurer says state can pays its '86 bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White's austerity programs and two hefty revenue windfalls should be enough to help Texas squeak through 1986 without running out of cash, state Treasurer Ann Richards says.

Ms. Richards had warned the Texas Senate March 3 that the budget crunch was so severe that the state might not have enough cash to pay its bills without writing what she called "hot checks."

But she told The Dallas Morning News Tuesday that she believes such dire measures can be avoided, at least until the 70th Legislature convenes in January.

"It's awful close," she said. "But I don't think we'll be short. The cash-flow problem is still there, but the extremity is not there to the point that we fear having to write any kind of 'hot warrant' this year.

A combination of things will keep the state from writing checks it can't cover, she said:

— $425 million from the federal government, Texas' share of revenues from disputed off-shore oil leases;

— $157 million from a judgment against Exxon Corp. for violating federal price controls on domestic crude;

— and the governor's austerity program, which he says already has identified savings of at least $625 million for this two-year budget cycle, ending Aug. 31, 1987.

Together, Ms. Richards said, those three items will ease the short-term effects of the state's budget crunch, brought on largely by falling oil and gas prices and the attendant loss of state revenues.

The actions, however, do little to solve the state's long-term fiscal problems, she warned.

The only way to do that, she said, is for the Legislature and the governor to adjust the state's spending and taxing patterns and adopt a series of cash-management initiatives that will allow the state to issue warrants in anticipation of revenues.

"It is a fact of life that if you are going to budget as closely as both the media and the public are demanding ... you are always going to have cash-flow problems," she said.

But she said she still believes it would be unwise for the Democratic governor, who is running for a second term against former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, to call a special legislative session this summer to consider finances.

Getting there is half the fun

By James Jacoby

The North and South hands of today's deal were held by Lisa and David Berkowitz, the winners of the North American Mixed Pairs Championship in Portland last March. The deal illustrates that partnerships that discuss the myriad situations that can occur in the bidding may have an edge over those who just play "down-the-middle" bridge.

After Lisa's takeout double of West's opening bid and after East's weak jump to two spades, Dave, South, had an easy three-club bid. North now cue-bid three diamonds, a forcing bid that implied a very good hand. David did not care for no-trump and so "raised" the cue-bid, showing the ace. The double by West not only served no purpose but enabled Lisa to redouble, clearly announcing second-round control in diamonds. South could now show his singleton spade. Although Lisa might have believed that the spade cue-bid showed the ace rather than a singleton, she had all the information she needed. She jumped right to six clubs.

There was nothing to the play. With the spade ace onside, declarer could draw two rounds of trumps and claim the contract. It's surprising that their result was a top score in a national championship, but maybe the other pairs in the field knew that David and Lisa wanted a deal that would impress their eight-month-old baby.

Ex-guards, German POWs reunited near Mexia, Tex.

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — Bettye Moncrief was 9 years old when the trucks full of German soldiers rumbled down U.S. Highway 84 on their way to the prison camp near this central Texas town.

"I was scared of them," she said. "My uncle was killed in Salerno (Italy,) and I thought I would always hate the Germans."

But when 23 of those former prisoners of war returned to the camp Tuesday, Mrs. Moncrief said she was glad to see them.

"You grow up and you realize they're just people, just like us," said Mrs. Moncrief, who is now an employee of the state school for the retarded that is housed on the grounds of Camp Mexia.

Cementing friendship between Germany and the United States was the theme of the Tuesday reunion between the former prisoners and some of the American guards who were stationed at the camp.

The barbed wire and the guard towers are gone, but for the POWs touring the camp, the grounds were alive with memories.

"We came here as teen-agers, and we are returning as old men," said former prisoner Louis Klaporth. "We thought we lived in dark days, but looking back we can only confess that we were treated fairly."

Like most of the others, Klaporth was stationed with Rommel's Afrika Korps.

His wife, Gerda, said she spent nine anxious months waiting to hear what had happened to her husband.

"I was bombed out, and I had a little daughter. I was just lost," she said. A year later, she received a post card from her husband at Camp Mexia, "Then I was happy."

Former POWs said while they were imprisoned in Texas they waited out the war in relative comfort.

As they revisited some of the barracks, which are still standing with peeling white paint on the outside and decorated inside to cover the olive drab walls, they pointed out certain places, such as "Little Freedom," where they were allowed to move about until dusk.

At the recreation area, a guard who used to keep armed watch over German officers playing tennis stood in the shade of a tree deep in conversation with his former captives.

The reunion of guards and prisoners stemmed from plans to celebrate Texas' 150 years of independence from Mexico, said Bill Parker, of the Mexia Chamber of Commerce.

The German soldiers hold annual meetings in Europe, and a few had visited the old POW camp independently. Parker said a group of Mexia officials went to the last German reunion and invited the group here this year.

While most of the reunion involved guards and prisoners, Siegfried Heine, who was sent to Camp Trinidad in Colorado, said the event brought him together with his second lieutenant for the first time in 40 years.

"We met last when we were dismissed (from detention) in France," he said. "Now after 40 years, here we are again."

In the years of peace, much has changed, participants at the reunion said.

Romance novels spark mild rebellion against some roles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Romance novels in which beautiful, headstrong women win the undying love of powerful yet sensitive men can help the women who read them cope with changing female roles, a researcher says.

"In many ways you can see that romance reading is a tacit protest against the demands and costs of their jobs" as wives and mothers, said Janice Radway, a literary critic at the University of Pennsylvania who studied the attitudes of romance novel fans and read some herself.

"I was very impressed with the women," Radway said. "I felt they were dealing with issues I've dealt with as a feminist. I just think it doesn't go far enough.

"We need to know what gives the readers hope, makes them happy and gives them pleasure and satisfaction."

More than a third of the 42 romance readers Radway interviewed said they read five to nine romance novels a week, with one reader describing the habit as a kind of harmless alternative to drugs or drinking, she said Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Romance novels make up more than 40 percent of paperback book sales in the United States, said Radway.

She said she was somewhat surprised to find that reading romances was not a reaffirmation of traditional values but a kind of subversive activity, even though the novels seem to affirm male domination and the traditional sex roles in marriage.

She asked the women she interviewed to recommend the romance novels they liked best, and then read 20 of them.

The books follow a very clear pattern: The heroine is cut off from her family and forced to make her way alone in the world. She is invariably independent, strong, beautiful and intelligent, but "completely unaware of her effect on men," Radway said.

She meets a handsome, successful, powerful man who is always gentle beneath his masculine exterior. He comes to realize he needs her. In a dramatic climax he rescues her from some danger and expresses his love.

The readers interpret this transformation from dominant male to one who can be sensitive to a woman's feelings "as the woman's triumph," Radway said.

The books help women realize that a strong, independent woman can also express emotion, she said. "A lot of women assume that to be a feminist you can't have interpersonal relationships."

The romance readers were different from the group of women who watch daytime soap operas, she said. Scholars studying soap operas have found that they are about suffering, and romance readers don't want to read about suffering.

El Paso Border Patrol chief dies during run

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Larry Richardson, chief U.S. Border Patrol agent for the El Paso sector, suffered a fatal heart attack after running in a Special Olympics relay race on the Texas-New Mexico border, officials say.

Richardson, 46, died Tuesday morning after his 10-minute stint in the Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics, in which officers ran in all corners of New Mexico to raise funds for handicapped children.

After finishing his run in Sunland Park, Richardson and Robert Gilbert, assistant chief Border Patrol agent, were driving back to the state line when Richardson grabbed his chest, Border Patrol officials said.

Gilbert rushed Richardson to Sun Towers Hospital in El Paso, where the chief died at about 9:30 a.m. in the hospital, officials said.

Co-workers said Richardson's death shocked them because he either biked or ran several miles daily and was in good health.

"He was in very, very good physical shape. He looked good, and he acted like he felt good," said William Harrington, assistant chief patrol agent. "He would be one of your last candidates to have something like this happen."

Harrington said officials don't believe the heart attack was a result of the torch run.

"He appeared to not even run up a sweat," Harrington said.

New York decisions Dodgers in bench-cleaning NL brawl

by The Associated Press

George Foster swung hard and hit a pitch from Tom Niedenfuer for a grand slam. After the next pitch, Ray Knight swung hard and hit Niedenfuer.

"I charged the mound. He tried to tackle me. I swung at him. Then I hit the ground - people were scratching at my face, so I started swinging again," Knight said, recalling a six-run, fight-interrupted sixth inning Tuesday night that led the New York Mets over the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-1.

The bench-clearing brawl came just after Foster had greeted Niedenfuer with his 13th career grand slam, capping the big inning and giving the Mets a 7-1 lead.

Niedenfuer stood glaring on the mound as Foster rounded the bases, and then hit Knight in the elbow wit his next pitch.

"I felt sure he threw at me," Knight said.

Niedenfuer, who had marks around both his eyes, said the pitch to Foster, "was not where I wanted it to be, and neither was the one to Knight. ... I wanted the pitch to Knight to be up and in."

In other National League games, Houston slipped past St. Louis 5-4, Atlanta beat Pittsburgh 6-2 in 12 innings, Montreal downed San Diego 5-4, Cincinnati topped Chicago 5-4 and Philadelphia defeated San Francisco 6-2.

Ironically, Niedenfuer reportedly was the peacemaker during a pregame scuffle in the Dodgers' dugout between Greg Brock and Steve Sax. Neither Niedenfuer, Sax nor Brock would provide details about the incident, although a team spokesman said it did occur.

Once the game in New York started, Ron Darling raised his record to 6-0 by pitching a five-hitter while striking out 12.

Astros 5, Cardinals 4

St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith threw away a potential double-play relay for an error, allowing Houston's Kevin Bass to score from second in the ninth inning with the winning run.

It was the fourth error in 41 games this season for Smith, a six-time Gold Glove winner.

Phillies 6, Giants 2

Mike Schmidt's hitting and Steve Carlton's pitching once again sparked Philadelphia to victory, this time over visting San Francisco.

Schmidt broke an eighth-inning tie with a two-run homer in the eighth inning off Jeff Robinson, 2-1. It was Schmidt's eighth homer of the season. Greg Gross added a two-run double later in the inning.

Carlton, 3-6, pitched eight innings and gave up two runs on seven hits. He struck out eight and walked none.

Carlton won his 317th career game, tying him for sixth place on the all-time list with Pud Galvin.

Chicago knuckles under to Hough

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Like most knuckleballers, Charlie Hough is flirting with danger when he has to go to his fastball.

In his last outing before Tuesday night, the veteran Texas Rangers right-hander twice tried to blow his "heater" past batters after falling behind in the count, and both ended up in the seats.

But against the Chicago White Sox Tuesday, Hough kept his knuckleball under control and his fastball under wraps in hurling a complete-game 6-3 victory.

"That's as good a knuckler as Charlie's had for a while," Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine said. "He got ahead of most of the hitters and didn't have to come in with his fastball."

The only time Hough, 3-2, tried to throw something hard, it was a knuckler that didn't dance, and White Sox second baseman Tim Hulett sailed it over the wall in left, a two-run shot that gave the Sox a brief 2-1 lead.

"A horrible two-strike pitch," Hough said. "He hit it like he was supposed to. But it was still a 2-1 game, and if you only give up two runs, you're supposed to have a chance to win."

Oddibe McDowell gave Hough that chance by stroking three hits, including his sixth homer of the year, and scoring three runs to lead an 11-hit Texas attack.

The bulk of the damage was done against Chicago starter and loser Richard Dotson, 2-5, who was touched for seven hits and three runs in six innings of work.

"We're not swinging the bats very good right now," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, who was ejected in the seventh inning for the second night in a row. "And Hough had an awful good knuckler tonight, which is hard enough to hit when you're going good."

But "going good" wasn't up the White Sox alley Tuesday night as LaRussa was ejected after going out to tell home plate umpire Rich Garcia that he was making a pitching change.

"He didn't have any particular beef," said Garcia. "He just started complaining about this and about that. And I said, 'I'm tired of you guys complaining about everything'."

LaRussa wasn't around for the final two innings, when Darrell Porter homered for the Rangers, his fifth, and Greg Walker hit his fifth for Chicago.

The victory increased the Rangers' lead in the American League West to one full game over the idle California Angels.

"We're a couple of games over .500 (23-21)," said Hough, "and we haven't played that well yet."

In other American League games, Boston defeated Cleveland 2-0 to earn a two-game lead over the idle New York Yankees in the East; Milwaukee pounded Kansas City 9-1 and Minnesota edged Toronto 7-6 in 11 innings. Besides the Yankees, Baltimore, California, Detroit, Oakland and Seattle were not scheduled.

Brewers 9, Royals 1

Charlie Moore had a bases-loaded triple, Rob Deer hit two home runs and the Milwaukee Brewers scored seven unearned runs to back the seven-hit pitching of Teddy Higuera.

Fielding miscues in the first and third innings by shortstop Angel Salazar, who earlier this season set a Royals team record with 35 consecutive errorless games, led to the seven unearned runs.

TCU could seek adjustment

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Texas Christian University officials can ask for an adjustment in NCAA penalties levied against the school if the football program loses a large number of players.

A clause in the judgement against the school states an adjustment may be applied for "in the event the university experiences excessive attrition for reasons clearly beyond its control."

The clause means that if a large number of players leave for acceptable reasons, such as voluntary transfers or career-ending injuries, the scholarship reductions could be modified, officials said.

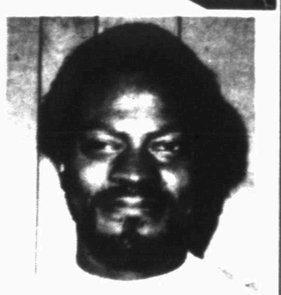

"It gives us the option of going back to the (infractions) committee and seeking relief," Frank Windegger, TCU athletic director, said Tuesday. "Of course, it depends on their interpretation of what is not our fault and what is, but at least we have the option of talking to them about it."

The Horned Frogs were placed on three years probation and lost 35 scholarships over two years.

The national attrition average for schools is about two players per year, according to the College Football Association.

"We told TCU that if they had the average of Division I schools they had no problem. On the other hand, if they have, say, 10 to 14, that's a different story," said Frank J. Remington, chairman of the NCAA Infractions Committee.

Harvard study merely a tool for analysis, testifies Donlan

NEW YORK (AP) - The executive director of the National Football League's Management Council is expected to testify further on the league's labor management seminars as the $1.5 billion antitrust suit between the NFL and USFL continues.

On Tuesday, Jack Donlan testified for an hour in response to questions from United States Football League attorney Harvey Myerson centering on the seminars, specifically a Harvard Business School study entitled "How To Conquer The USFL."

Donlan testified that the Harvard study was merely an analysis tool and not a concerted effort to destroy the fledgling league.

"Its purpose was to teach us how to analyze the competition, so you can get a better handle on (individual player) negotiations," Donlan said as testimony resumed in the three-week-old case after a four-day holiday break.

"It was nothing but what comes out of most labor-management seminars," Donlan said of the study presented to the 65 NFL representatives in February 1984. "I thought it was just to be a lead-in."

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had testified earlier in the trial that he felt "physically ill" when he heard what was contained in the seminar and he added that he had no prior knowledge of the seminar before its presentation.

Myerson concentrated on past NFL labor management seminars with Donlan, asking if he had had any conversations with Al Davis, the Los Angeles Raiders' general partner, and Ed Garvey, the former director of the NFL Players Association, about antitrust violations contained in a 1981 seminar.

"Do you deny having had such conversations?" Myerson said.

"Yes sir," Donlan replied.

During his testimony, Donlan insisted that the 1984 seminar, which included such items as dissuading ABC-TV out of its contract with the USFL and bankrupting financially weak teams, was to be used as a guideline.

Read into the record Tuesday were depositions from Professor Michael Porter, a member of the Harvard Business School faculty who made the presentation to the NFL clubs, and his assistant, Michael Bell.

Porter said he was paid $3,000 for what he admitted was probably only 1¾ hours worth of preparation work before giving his two-hour presentation.

Bell said he was furnished with some background information by the NFL concerning both leagues, such as salary and revenue. Porter described Bell's "limited" research as a "quick and dirty examination of the case."

Plenty of emotion for France at open

PARIS (AP) - French players and fans provided most of the emotion in the first round of the French Open as four of their countrymen advanced, while chances for an American to win the men's title have grown slim.

With Jimmy Arias of Buffalo, N.Y., out of the tournament with a badly sprained right ankle, leaving only one seeded American male, France's Yannick Noah and Tarik Benhabiles provided the most excitement of the round before a cheering, chanting crowd.

With wind gusts swirling the clay of Roland Garros' center court into clouds of red dust Tuesday, Noah, France's top player, and his little-known opponent battled for 3 hours, 47 minutes before Noah served an ace that capped a 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 6-7, 6-4 victory.

"Yah-neek! Yah-neek!" half the crowd chanted. "Tah-reek! Tah-reek!" the other half replied.

On the final changeover, the crowd rose and applauded both players. The cheers continued through the final point moments later.

Today, Noah is to face American Sammy Giammalva in the second round.

The top seeds also were to see action in the second round as Ivan Lendl met Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland, and Martina Navratilova faced Larissa Savchenko of the Soviet Union.

In other second-round matchups, Chris Evert Lloyd, the No. 2 seed among the women, was to face France's Nathalie Herreman, third-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany, was to meet American Gretchen Rush and fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, was to meet Pascale Etchemendy, a wild-card entry from France.

The lone remaining American male seed, South Africa-born Johan Kriek, the 13th seed, was to face Czechoslovakia's Milan Srejber.

Navratilova advanced easily Tuesday in her opening match, beating Sandra Cecchini of Italy, 6-3, 6-3.

Noah, who caused hysteria in this stadium when he won the title in 1983, appeared en route to the easy victory everyone expected. He won the first two sets and was serving with a 3-0 lead in the third. Then, everything fell apart as the Algerian-birn Benhabiles, a wild-card entry, caught fire and Noah let down.

No consolation for a loser says Houston's McCray

BOSTON (AP) - Rodney McCray says he got no satisfaction out of holding Larry Bird to six points under his playoff average in Houston's opening game loss to the Boston Celtics.

"Larry played a great all-around game (21 points, 13 assists and eight rebounds) and his team won," McCray said at practice Tuesday, the day after the Rockets' 112-100 loss in the opener of the NBA championship series.

"There's no consolation when your team loses. I could have done more, but I'm into winning. When we lose, I think about that, not about how well I played. When you lose, it means the whole team played bad."

Bird, meanwhile, was not happy with McCray's 20 points, eight over his playoff average, in Game 1.

"He scored too much, too many dunks and layups," Bird said. "If he's going to beat us with his scoring, we want to make him do it with 15-footers. But we didn't do that bad a job on him. He got a few points because we were double-teaming inside."

What does McCray try to do with Bird, who is expected to be named the NBA's Most Valuable Player today for the third time in his career, in Thursday night's Game 2?

"I can't say to myself, 'He's going to this, he's going to do that,' because he's so unpredictable," McCray said. "He shoots outside and shoots inside, so you can't put your finger on one thing and say, 'I'll stop him from doing that.'

"That doesn't work. I just have to play it by ear and react to what he does, try to slow him down as much as possible."

"He plays me straight up and clean," Bird said. "He relies on quickness. Everyone has their own style of defense and I've seen them all. No one can stop me forever, only slow me down."

Bird said he wasn't surprised that McCray did a good job on him defensively on Monday, even though it was only the seventh time the two teams had met in McCray's three pro seasons.

"In this league, players adjust quickly," Bird said. "I think I know his game pretty well and he knows mine. Seven games are enough."

But McCray indicated that a lack of experience playing Bird could be detrimental.

"I've only played against him a few times but I've seen him a lot on television," McCray said. "You try to see things that can help you play better defense once you get a chance to play him."

McCray said the Rockets wouldn't concern themselves with their first loss, especially after falling behind 1-0 to the Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference finals, then beating the defending champions the next four games.

"We can't do anything about Monday's game," he said. "If we dwell on the past it could cost us another loss. Thursday is a whole new ballgame.

"We've had to battle back in every series. We've got to go to the well for water one more time and hope it won't be dry. Even though this is a different team and a different series, it helps us to know that we have come back before."

To even the series 1-1, the Rockets will have to snap the Celtics' 39-game homecourt winning streak.

"It's in the back of our minds that they've won so many games in a row at home, but if you look at the law of averages it's about time someone comes in here and beats them," McCray said.

Crum will coach USA team for Pan American Games

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Denny Crum, coach of 1986 NCAA basketball champions Louisville, has accepted an offer to coach the United States team in the 1987 Pan American Games, according to a published report.

A copyright story in today's editions of The Courier-Journal said Crum agreed on Tuesday to coach the team in the games to be played Aug. 7-23 next year in Indianapolis.

Crum declined to confirm or deny his Pan Am appointment, deferring to the official announcement to be made later this week. The newspapers quoted a source close to Crum as saying the coach is "going to do it."

Crum, in an interview Tuesday, did say: "You know I love coaching and working with kids. I have enjoyed my past associations with international teams. To coach the Pan Am team would be a great honor for anybody."

A gold medal in the Pan Am games would make Crum a top contender for the job as head coach in the 1992 Olympic Games.

Spurs hire new coach

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - New San Antonio Spurs coach Bobby Weiss promises a return to "old-time Spurs basketball."

But Weiss, who replaced the fired Cotton Fitzsimmons Tuesday to become the seventh head coach in the franchise's 13-year existence in San Antonio, admitted the rebuilding task won't happen overnight.

"We doubt it will be a one-year process," said Weiss, a Dallas Mavericks assistant coach for the last six seasons. "It could take several years."

One of the highest-paid assistant coaches in the NBA, Weiss earned approximately $95,000 this past season. His contract with the Spurs is a multi-year deal, believed to be in excess of $125,000 per year, although the actual length and amount were not disclosed.

Assistants Allan Bristow of Denver and Mike Schuler of Milwaukee also were candidates for the job.

Spurs General Manager Bob Bass said the Spurs did not interview unemployed San Antonio resident Stan Albeck, the winningest coach (62.2 percent) in franchise history. Albeck lost his job in Chicago last week and had phoned the Spurs during the interview process.

The Spurs coaching position became available when Fitzsimmons was fired April 28 after a 35-47 season, which included a last-place finish in the Midwest Division and a three-game playoff loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Cubs, 1-2, were sparked by a triple from Tracy Lentz and a double from Randall Thomas. Wesley Evans, Gaylon Rodriquez and Mike Remington notched a single apiece. Thomas had eight strikeouts as the Cubs pitcher.

Commonly asked questions answered about tax revision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators will square off early next month on a tax-overhaul bill that could affect the taxes paid by Americans for years to come.

Here are answers to some frequently asked questions about the legislation:

Q: After all the efforts at "tax reform" over the years, why is this bill given such a good chance of becoming law?

A. It takes about 6 million of the poorest families and individuals off the income-tax rolls entirely. It cuts tax rates for most individuals and corporations, a goal of conservatives. It reduces the importance of deductions, which are most beneficial to the wealthy; that change pleases liberals. And it seeks to treat businesses more evenhandedly.

Q: So all the loopholes are gone?

A: Not by a long shot. Special provisions benefiting the oil and gas industries, timber, banking, mining and tax-exempt municipal bonds would remain.

Q: Some workers are upset because they would lose their individual retirement account deductions. Aren't those mainly for the rich?

A: Not at all. According to the Internal Revenue Service, 77 percent of the deductions claimed for IRAs in 1984 were on returns filed by people making less than $50,000 a year.

Q: Why take them away?

A: To save money to pay for the lower tax rates. The same could be said for almost every deduction and exemption adversely affected by the bill.

Q: What exactly would happen to my IRA?

A: If you are not eligible for a pension plan sponsored by your employer, you could continue getting an IRA deduction. Otherwise, you lose the deduction. You still could deposit up to $2,000 a year in an IRA but it would not be deductible. Interest earned by that deduction would remain tax-free until withdrawn, as would whatever you already have in your IRA.

Q: Wouldn't I be better off closing out my IRA?

A: That would depend on your age, your present tax bracket and the bracket you expect to be in when you retire. In many cases, you would be better off continuing the IRA even without the deduction. If you withdraw the money before age 59½, the IRS will hit you with a 15 percent penalty.

Q: I keep my mortgage interest deduction. What if I have to borrow money to send my kids to college?

A: That's consumer interest and it would not be deductible. Neither would a car loan. If you borrow to invest, only the investment interest expense that does not exceed investment income could be deducted. For example, if the income from your investment is $1,000, you could deduct up to a maximum of $1,000 of interest on the loan.

Q: Will this bill make things simpler?

A: Several million people who itemize will lose many of their deductions and thus probably will be better off taking the standard deduction. That's simpler. Those who continue to itemize will find little simplification.

Q: What's the timetable?

A: The Senate debate could begin next week and last until early July. Then, a conference committee of senior members of the House and Senate tax-writing committees will spend perhaps a month working out a compromise, which would be submitted to the House and Senate for final action.

Soviet decision is well received

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, which has been pressing the Soviet Union to improve its human rights performance, says a Soviet decision to let 117 citizens join their families in America could help East-West relations.

And a congressional leader on human rights issues says the move shows the Kremlin leadership is starting to heed world opinion.

The State Department announced Tuesday it had received word from the Soviet Union that 36 of 126 divided-family cases on a list submitted by the United States had been resolved. That means Soviet emigration permits are expected to be granted to 117 people over the next few weeks and they will be welcomed to America.

The Soviets also pledged to settle two other cases, one involving a dual nationality and the other a spouse of an American.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said it was not known why the Soviets agreed to the exodus, but that it was welcomed.

"It is a positive step that will contribute to an improved atmosphere in our relations, and will facilitate efforts to build on the progress begun at the Geneva summit last year," Redman said. "It is our hope this significant step signals that the Soviet Union shares our desire to move ahead" in improving relations.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said, "It's a small step forward but a hopeful sign. It shows the Soviet leadership's growing sensitivity to world public opinion."

The 117 would constitute the largest group of Soviets released from the country at U.S. request since the United States began presenting lists of names to the Soviet Union about 30 years ago.

Citing privacy laws, the State Department would not make the names public, but said it expected to notify the American relatives by Tuesday.

In addition to family members separated by Soviet rejection of exit visas, the United States is seeking the re-unification of 21 divided spouses and the release of 20 people with dual nationalities.

After his summit with President Reagan in Geneva, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev promised to resolve 33 cases in the three categories. Of these, 24 have led to people leaving the Soviet Union, but nine are still on the U.S. lists.

Redman said the United States received word of the decision in the closing hours of a conference of human rights experts from the 35 nations that signed the 1975 Helsinki agreement on security and cooperation in Europe.

Delegates in Bern, Switzerland, had been working for six weeks to review the Helsinki provisions calling for easing "cross-border contacts" between people. The United States had used the meeting as a forum for its view that the Soviet Union and its allies have violated agreements pledging to grant such freedoms.

At the final session, the United States vetoed a conference communique on grounds that Eastern bloc countries have failed to adhere to previous pacts.

Noting what he termed "the wide gap between promises undertaken in documents and reality," Redman said: "We strongly support the Helsinki process and the documents that enshrine it. But these documents fulfill these purposes only if they're complied with. Our goal in Bern was not more words."

Death sentence upheld in slaying

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today upheld the death sentence of Eliseo Moreno, who was convicted in the Oct. 11, 1983 murder of Department of Public Safety Trooper Russell Boyd.

Testimony at the trial in Fort Bend County also showed that Moreno killed five other people during what an appeals court judge today called a "short reign of terror."

Most Americans favor organ implants or transplants and wouldn't mind donating their own organs — yet only 19 percent have actually completed an organ-donor card.

New Hampshire's high-school students had the highest average score in the class of '85 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, which helps determine college admission. (Other states — mostly in the West and Midwest — use the American College Testing Program exam, or ACT.)

AIDS spread is problem for transplant physicians

CHICAGO (AP) — As the number of AIDS victims grows, transplant doctors are being forced to decide whether to accept organs from donors who may have been exposed to the deadly virus or simply toss the organs away.

"It's a real problem in the field now — what to do with donor organs," said Dr. Fred Sanfilippo, president of the American Society of Transplant Physicians, which is meeting this week in Chicago.

"We're getting cadaver kidneys, and we don't know them from Adam," agreed Dr. Warren Kupin of Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital.

Fears about the threat of AIDS to transplant patients surfaced in January when surgeons at Presbyterian-University Hospital of Pittsburgh transplanted a liver that initially tested positive for AIDS antibodies. The doctors had transplanted the organ before they learned the test results.

A more comprehensive laboratory test for the antibodies later showed that the donor, an Indiana teen-ager killed in a traffic accident, had not been exposed after all.

Since then, transplant physicians have devoted much of their attention to the possibility of transplant patients being exposed to the deadly HTLV-III virus through blood transfusions and contaminated donor organs.

"You have a patient who's going to die unless an organ is used. (So) you're put in the difficult situation of basing your decision on a test" that probably will turn out to be wrong, Sanfilippo said Tuesday.

The presence of AIDS antibodies indicates a person has been exposed to the virus but does not mean he has the disease, which breaks down the body's immune system and exposes it to a wide variety of illnessses. There is no known cure.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, claimed 11,541 lives as of May 26, most of them male homosexuals or intravenous drug abusers, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

Even though they would seem to fall into the high-risk category because of their numerous blood transfusions and donor organs, transplant patients aren't showing any more evidence of contracting AIDs than other people, said Dr. Ronald H. Kerman of the University of Texas at Houston.

"We expected a higher frequency of incidence, but it really turned out to be not so great," Kerman said in a report to the society Tuesday. "What could have been presumed to be a major scare turns out to be no more than what's been seen" in the general population, he said.

Budget look taken at WTC

Regarding state income for 1986-87, it is now projected at some $1.9 million. Last year, WTC received some $2.2 from the state.

At the June budget session, Krenek said he expects the board to finalize the expense portion of the budget, then to begin work on "what we'll have to do to local taxes."

At Tuesday's meeting, two resignations of college staffers were accepted also.

Marsha Krenek, manager of the college bookstore, indicated she will be resigning her post.

Also set to leave the college is David Harr, who has served as college dormitory director in addition to his service as pastor for Grace Lutheran Church.

Several bid items were considered also. In unanimous voting, trustees:

—Accepted a low bid from Abel Garza to complete repair work at the WTC dorm. The bid was awarded subject to the contractor showing adequate general liability and workman's compensation insurance. Garza's bid for hourly wages was considered the best of the three presented. Also bidding were T.E. Shelburne and Son and Wadleigh Construction.

—Rejected a single bid received to repair a gas line on campus. The estimate of $5,452 to lay a 600 ft. strip of pipe was deemed too high. It was submitted by C.A. Gray Plumbing of Midland. Trustees said they will re-bid the project.

—Accepted the low bid for a truckster-type utility vehicle for the grounds maintenance crews. The bid of $5,900 was awarded to Goldthwaites of Texas Inc. of Fort Worth, one of three out-of-town companies submitting estimates.

—Accepted the low bid for two 16,000 CFM evaporative air-conditioners for the college gymnasium. The bid of $2,112 was submitted by Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning, one of five turned in. The only other local bid was from Cooper Appliance for $2,900.

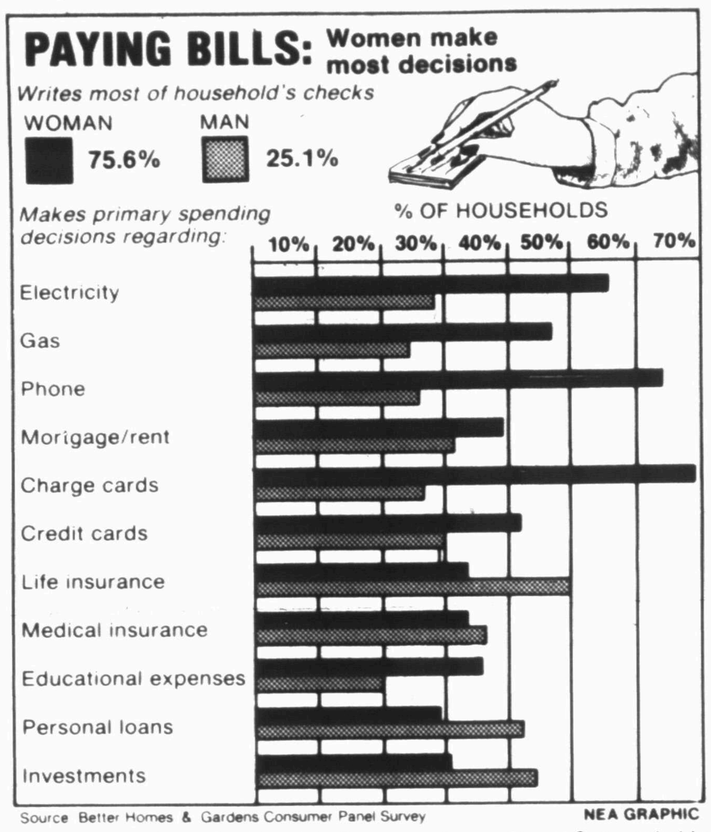

The board met also in executive session for just over one hour. No action was taken after they came back into open session around 6:40 p.m.

Trustees attending Tuesday's meeting were R.C. Patton, who presided, Howard Sterling, Roy Baze, Edwin Parks Jr., Bob Hargrove and Bill Jones. Bill Wilson was absent.

Airlift scheduled Saturday

AUSTIN (AP) — Airlifting the new, 1½-ton Goddess of Liberty statue onto the Capitol dome Saturday is a risky flight that will require extraordinary skill, officials say.

"We are approaching the installation as a very delicate operation that demands every precaution," Capitol architect Roy Graham said Tuesday in announcing details of the airlift.

"It is easier to take it off than to put it back on there," added Col. Herbert Purtle, state aviation officer for the Texas Army National Guard, which will fly the mission.

The original 16-foot statue, holding a lone star in its upraised hand, was removed in a helicopter airlift last November after 97 years on its 311-foot perch.

That zinc statue was so weatherbeaten it had become a safety hazard.

But with proper maintenance, the 1½-ton aluminum replacement that duplicates the original "should last almost indefinitely," said Patrick Rice of Washington University Technology Associates, consultants on the statue restoration.

Purtle said a twin-engine Chinook helicopter will carry the new statue in a nylon harness and arrive over the Capitol about 8 a.m. Saturday.

The helicopter will lower the statue over a vertical mounting pole atop the dome. Barring problems, the statue should be in place by 8:30 a.m., Purtle said.

"This is not as easy as it sounds. It's actually somewhat like threading a nearly invisible needle because the pilot can neither see the statue nor the vertical shaft," said Roy Graham, Capitol architect.

To make the drop easier, a televison camera mounted on the aircraft will let the pilot view the statue and the vertical shaft on a TV monitor in the cockpit.

Also, the inside of the statue has been molded as an inverted cone, giving the pilots a larger opening to drop over the shaft and providing a structure to keep the statue centered as it is lowered.

Four people will be on the Capitol dome to assist as the statue is lowered. The Capitol and grounds will be closed before the airlift begins, officials said.

Purtle said weather conditions must be good so the helicopter can hover about 35 feet above the descending statue.

"We do not want gusty wind conditions," he said. "If you had 3,000 pounds hanging over your head and not knowing that helicopter's going to stay in the same position — it's a danger."

The pilots will be those who plucked the statue off the dome, Chief Warrant Officer Craig Roberts of League City and Lt. Col. Jim Looney of Hitchcock. They have practiced by lowering a 1½-ton pipe over a mounting shaft, Purtle said.

Total cost of the statue project was $523,000, and Graham likened this Sesquicentennial effort to restoration of the Statue of Liberty in New York City.

Researchers say that crisis in education will continue

AUSTIN (AP) — The only "bright spot" in a recent survey of teachers is the increase in salaries over the last several years, according to the researchers who conducted the survey.

The researchers said they could only echo what they have been saying for the past six years — "there is a crisis in education."

Professor David Henderson of Sam Houston State University and Karen Henderson, mathematics coordinator for the Huntsville Independent School District, conducted the survey among 525 teachers.

A total of 329 teachers, or 65 percent, returned the mail questionnaire.

Four in 10 teachers — 41.7 percent — are considering leaving the profession, compared with 38.4 percent in 1980, the survey showed.

Working conditions, not money, was listed as the main reason. The survey included under working conditions "stress, burnout, paperwork and hassles," and 68 percent of the teachers said that was why they were thinking of quitting. This is up from 27 percent six years ago.

Only 17 percent listed money as the reason for leaving, down from 46 percent in 1980. The average teacher salary rose from $14,113 in 1980 to $24,601 this year but almost one-fourth — 22.6 percent — "moonlight" to supplement their salaries.

Responses to new questions in the 1986 teacher survey show that 83.2 percent are dissatisfied with the career ladder, which rewards teachers for experience and educational degrees; 68.2 percent favor mandated negotiation rights for teachers with local school districts; and 54.5 percent are pleased with the no-pass, no-play rule, while 44.6 percent don't like it.

The rule prohibits a student who fails a course from participating in extracurricular activities for six weeks.

Asked whether career ladder provisions should be improved or eliminated, 49.4 percent favored improvements and 46.5 percent would eliminate the provisions.

Sleepiness and diabetes

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 81, a diabetic and get about six hours of sleep a night. I find myself falling asleep quite frequently while reading a newspaper or looking at TV. Is this normal for a man my age?

DEAR READER — To an extent, yes. However, I'm concerned that any treatment you may be getting could be adding to the problem. For example, periods of low blood sugar — caused by insulin shots or diabetes drugs — will often promote sleepiness. I think you probably need to have the status of your diabetes investigated and should try to get eight hours of sleep at night.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My father was a clean person, brushed his teeth, used mints, gargled, and still had the worst breath in the world. Once he started to brush his tongue, he had no more bad breath. Maybe this idea will help some of your readers.

DEAR READER — OK. I can't see that it could do any harm.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am male, 67, and have a full head of nice thick hair. During the last few years, I've lost almost all my underarm and pubic hair. My voice is deeper, too. What's going on?

DEAR READER — You are getting older. Loss of axillary (underarm) and pubic hair are common consequences of aging. (Hooray for the hair on your head!) Aging also causes relaxation of muscles and ligaments in the larynx, resulting in a lower voice for many men. In your 80s and 90s, your voice may tend to become weaker and more high-pitched. That, too, comes with age.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Our daughter, 41, has had a constant brownish discharge from both nipples for about two years. She's had two breast exams and mammograms. Both found nothing wrong. Aren't there additional tests to find out what is causing this?

DEAR READER — Yes. She should probably have her hormone levels checked. The type of discharge you describe is not ordinarily normal. I think she should see an endocrinologist — a medical doctor who specializes in glandular dysfunction.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My problem is that I feel faint and dizzy all the time. Sometime I wake up with the room spinning. All tests have come back negative. I've been to eye doctors, ear doctors, internal-medicine specialists and neurosurgeons. The only thing that shows up is a prolapsed valve. I'm 34. Where do I go from here?

DEAR READER — Patients who have mitral prolapse often suffer from cardiac irregularities that can cause faintness and lightheadedness. Go to a cardiologist, who will probably order a portable 24-hour electrocardiogram (Holter monitor) to investigate your pulse rate during the times you have symptoms. If a heart irregularity can be documented, the problem can be successfully treated.

City plans to bank $4.4 million

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — City officials said they would bank a $4.4 million check today as the first in a series of paybacks from a $20 million investment loss in March 1985.

A federal judge in Florida approved a legal agreement Tuesday that will return Beaumont's share of the bankruptcy settlement of ESM Government Securities.

About 20 ESM creditors shared a $35 million pool recovered from the Fort Lauderdale-based securities dealer, Beaumont city attorney Lane Nichols said. Beaumont lost $20 million when ESM closed its doors March 4.

The agreement guarantees that the city will repay ESM receiver Thomas Tew up to $4.4 million if appeals to the settlement diminish the city's recovery, Nichols said.

The agreement, approved by City Council in April, means the city would levy a tax to repay Tew in the event of appeals. But since the city plans to escrow the money in a special account in Texas Commerce Bank, a tax would not be necessary, Nichols said.
