A letter from President Roosevelt....here it is....

"White House ,Washington, D. C.

"My Dear Miss Tune:

"This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of May 18 and the accompanying announcement of the commencement exercises of the Cisco high school which you were good enough to send the president. He appreciates your thought of him and has asked me to convey to you and the members of your class his very best wishes.

"Very sincerely yours,

"M. H. McINTYRE,

"Ass't secretary to the president."

And Miss Marie Tune, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tune, has another record to be very proud of ....She is one of the 88 high school seniors to graduate Tuesday evening after 11 years of school life without being absent or tardy....finishing her high school course at the age of 16....And her great grandmother, Mrs. F. A. Cantrell, of Abilene, age 89, here to see her graduate.....

And this is the same young lady whose butterfly collection attracted so much attention recently when Prof. C. C. Duff had his splendid biological display in Collins window ....may we say here without throwing too much bouquets, that when people accomplish things unusual it is because of unusual effort....doing the unusual brings unusual rewards.

Mr. Herron will move his family here about June 1, he said.

Two Killed in One Family By In-Laws

KANSAS CITY, May 25 — (U.P.)— The toll of a family was recorded at two today when John Wubbenhorst, 56, died a victim of the wrath of his brother-in-law, Clarence Ferguson, after he had killed his father-in-law, 64-year-old, Jim Ferguson.

MAN ASSAULTS LITTLE GIRL AND ESCAPES MOB

NEW YORK, May 25 — (U.P.)— A screaming crowd of more than 200 men and women threatened to lynch Samuel Schmerler, 24, today after he was discovered attempting to assault a 4 yearold girl in an east side basement.

Schmerler was arrested by a patrolman who was summoned by the janitor.

A crowd quickly gathered and sought to tear him from policeman's hands. There were cries of "lynch him." The patrolman dragged the battered prisoner into a hallway and held the crowd at bay until policemen enforcements arrived. Girl was not been harmed.

SOUTH TEXAS WATER CASE INVOLVED

WASHINGTON, May 25—(U.P.)—The supreme court today condemned the muncipal bankruptcy act of 1934 designed to permit incorporated municipalities, drainage, irrigation and water improvement districts to reorganize their bonded indebtedness.

The court's decision was handed down in a case involving the reorganization of Cameron county, Texas Water Improvement District No. 1.

While the case involved only the application of the act to this one district, the trend of the court's decision were such that it lent no doubt it applied to the act as a whole.

Justice James McReynolds writing the majority opinion, condemned the act in vigorous terms as an infringement of the constitutional provisions against impairment of the obligation of contracts.

COURT RULES GOLD RESERVE

WASHINGTON, May 25—(U.P.)—The supreme court by implication today held that foreign holders of gold held in the United States by domestic banks at the time the gold reserve act was unacted are obliged to surrender the metal to the government.

G. O. P. LEADERS OPTIMISTIC IN TEXAS MEETING

FORT WORTH, May 25—(U.P.)—George Hopkins, Dallas, Internal Revenue Collector during former President Herbert Hoover's administration, was named temporary chairman at the meeting of the state's executive committee here today.

The republican state convention will open tomorrow.

Republican leaders assembled here were optimistic over prospects for shoving Texas into the G. O. P. column in the coming presidential election.

"If all the republicans in Texas will act as they talk, we will carry Texas," Orville Bullington, Wichita Falls, predicted.

Garrett Motorcade Gathers Strength

The On-to-Sweetwater motorcade in the interest of Clyde Garrett for Congress, scheduled to leave Ranger, Eastland and Cisco next Friday, is meeting with success, apparently.

J. W. Cockrell, Gorman newspaper publisher, is chairman of the Garrett For Congress forces in Eastland county and reports that the county is being organized for the motorcade, May 29.

Rising Star, Gorman and smaller towns expect to feed their motorcades into the larger town groups and be ready to join the whole group at Cisco by 1:30 to proceed to Sweetwater for the formal announcement of Mr. Garrett for congressman for the 17th congressional district.

Thomas L. Blanton has announced for re-election and Fred O. Jaye, of DeLeon, has announced and was endorsed by the Townsend group in convention at Cisco Friday.

J. S. Stockard, Clyde Garrett club chairman for Cisco, urges that all who can join the motorcade to Sweetwater, please notify the chamber of commerce of that fact.

MURDER WARRANTS ISSUED FOR 25 MEMBERS OF THE BLACK LEGION

DETROIT, May 25—(U.P.)—Murder warrants charging twenty-five members of the hooded and robed black legion with the death of Charles Poole, 32, were issued today as authorities extended their investigation of the band's terroristic activities through every populace center of the state.

Thirteen warrants were issued against men under arrest for the cold-blooded murder of Poole on the night of May 12 and twelve were "John Doe" warrants.

Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan McCrea, whose investigators are inquiring into every phase of the band's activities said that "we have sufficient evidence to support the contention that the thirteen men were present when the conspiracy to murder Poole was entered into."

Townsend Caravan at Capitol

Youth rather than old age held the spotlight on arrival of the 13-car Townsend Old Age Pension caravan in Washington, D. C., after a trip from California with a petition said to bear more than 10,000,000 signatures demanding passage of pension legislation. Pretty Lois Jean Johnson, leader of the Townsend youth movement in San Diego is pictured presenting the petition to Representative John Tolan in shadow of the capitol.

Hitler Hailed Ruling By 'Divine Right'

By RICHARD HELMS, United Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, May 25—(U.P.)—"What der Fuehrer does is always right!" This is the slogan which leads a nationwide campaign to deify Adolf Hitler.

Waged by Dr. Goebbels' propaganda machine, this drive hit a high point on Hitler's 47th birthday. As one foreign observer remarked, every element in German life was inspired to hail its "savior."

Such widespread adoration of Hitler is the latest manifestation of a phenomenon existing among members of the party for years. Today the Nazis seek to imbue every German with the same sentiment.

March 7 with the reoccupation of the Rhineland gave the Nazis the chance to extend their Hitler glorification. Holding the election on a national issue, they raised der Fuehrer with it above party or politics. He was the "liberator."

Alfred Dennewitz, an antique dealer on Berlin's Schill Strasse, showed what he thought of the Fuehrer. He burned a light all night every night in front of a Hitler photograph set in his store window. Italian madonnas are similarly honored.

Faith Becomes Stronger

Fritz Hermann, an ardent storm tropper, owner of a flower stall on the Wittenberg Platz, expressed in restaurant conversation the sentiment which the Nazis show. He said:

"I believe firmly that my Fuehrer Adolph Hitler, is a son of God. I trust him to the death. He went to Garmisch-Partenkirchen for the Olympics and it snowed. He left the day the Olympics were over and a long thaw set in."

Not quite so radically, Dr. Werner Sombart, the eminent German economist, voiced this same belief in his book, "German Socialism." In effect, he wrote that the leadership principle (held by the Nazis) cannot exist without the belief that the leader is divinely inspired.

The election propaganda phrased and rephrased this same conception. Hitler himself said more than once in his speeches, "With the certainty of a man walking in his sleep I follow the way which Providence has ordained for me."

Illustrated by Picture

The election issue of the Berliner Illustrierte carried on page 2 a photograph of the Feuhrer leaving one of the meeting halls. The only light showing against a dark background formed an aureole around Hitler's body.

By the time the birthday arrived, newspapers were quoting Dietrich Eckart, the Nazi poet, as a

'FULL HARMONY' SAYS RAYBURN OF STATE MEET

SAN ANTONIO, May 25—(U.P.)—Vice President John Garner hopes that "entire harmony" will prevail in democratic state convention tomorrow, Congressman Sam Rayburn of Texas said today when he arrived as Garner's personal representative at convention.

Discussion among delegates indicated that in spite of several sources of discension, all sides were willing to be peaceful unless others attempted to "start something."

Rayburn said he did not know the vice president's views on abolition of the two-thirds rule for national convention nomination, proposed by National Chairman James Farley. He added that personally he favored majority nomination and believed the national convention at Philadelphia in June would change to that system. The new deal spokesman said he saw no danger of republican states dominating the democratic national convention with the democratic party carrying more than 40 states.

Randolph College Faculty Is Chosen

The faculty members for the Randolph college summer school has been announced as, E. B. Isaacks, Education; H. R. Garrett, Physical Education; Miss Effie King, Science; Miss Florence Pope, Public Speaking.

The school will open, June 1.

SOUTH TEXAS THREATENED BY FLOODS

By United Press

Prospects of more rain in water soaked south Texas and West Texas brought additional threats Monday from flooded rivers and lowlands.

The Colorado River at Columbus already was more than eight feet above flood space of 24 feet, covering the Houston - San Antonio highway, and haulting traffic.

At Wharton, which was inundated by water last December, the Colorado was rising steadily near the flood stage, and the Guadalupe river threatened a rampage near Victoria, covering lowlands.

Residents of Houston anxiously watched the rising water on Buffalo and White Oak creeks as rain continued to fall.

Buffalo Creek which traverses the heart of Houston was swollen by heavy rainfalls in the upper regions of Harris county and was more than 14 feet above normal.

Rainfall oncentrated chiefly in the Houston area and westward to Guadalupe river district.

Danger was believed passed in the Victoria area where thousands of lowland acres were inundated, but little damage done. The stream rose 25 feet in two days.

Other sections of the state reported substantial moisture during the weekend. A slow soaking rain fell in Panhandle which came too late to aid the stunted wheat in some sections, but providing excellent seasoning for summer and fall crops.

Reports from Amarillo indicated the average precipitation in a hundred mile radius was about two inches. Amarillo receive d3.88 inches in the twenty-four hour period, ending at 9 a. m. Monday morning.

Other records showed: Abilene 1.04 inches, and still cloudy; El Paso cloudy but no rain; Del Rio .32 and cloudy; Galveston 2.06 inches; Houston 4.02.

Rain Gauge Shows 2.3 Inches Here

A total of 2.3 inches had fallen today at noon, since the rains began Friday night, it was reported at the city hall today. Saturday, the gague showed .6 inches, Sunday showed .9 and today at the noon hour, the gauge registered .8 inches, Officer Gus reported.

Tanks and creeks are reported full over the country, pastures will take on renewed growth in grass, while crops and gardens will respond by quick growth when the sun begins to shine, farmers say.

Grain that is ripe may be injured if sunshine is too long delayed, it is reported, however, most of the grain is not in a stage to damage but will fill out in heavier seed yields.

The rain has fallen in such slow stages that very little damage from runoff is reported. The summer will start off with a bottom season and with careful shallow cultivation, the present moisture should last far into the summer, even without more rain, farmers state.

Breckenridge Lions To Send Two Girls

Brackenridge Lions are working toward the selecting of two representatives for the Cisco Lions convention June 16-17.

The club is staging an amateur night now and the winners will be allowed to represent them here.

Former district governor D. T. Bowles, makes an optimistic report to his club regarding the number of entrants already registered.

Getting Posted On Stamps

A bit more portly than when he was in the White House, but otherwise looking much the same, former President Herbert Hoover joined stamp collectors in inspecting the exhibits at the stamp show in New York. He's pictured here intently examining some of the rarities.

'DISPLEASED' IS REV. W. H. COLE'S SERMON THEME

Eighty-eight graduates of the senior class of the Cisco high school heard Rev. W. H. Cole, pastor of the First Methodist church, Sunday evening at the high school auditorium when he delivered the baccalaureate address on "Pleased or Displeased" to a gathering of parents and friends, who filled the auditorium to capacity, despite the rain which continued to fall intermittently during the afternoon and evening.

Mrs. S. E. Hitson played the processional as the graduates filed down the aisles into the section reserved for them in the center flanked on each side by sections reserved for parents and friends, and the program began with the congregation singing "Holy, Holy, Holy."

The invocation, by Rev. E. S. James was followed by a solo and scripture reading by Rev. H. H. Applewhite. A male quartet by Messrs Ernest Hitson, Frank Walker, Lory Boyd, Bobbie Kilpatrick, preceded the address by Rev. Cole, closed by benediction by Rev. Luther Pryor.

"The schools are a vital part of our public life," said Rev. Cole in beginning his address. And in choosing this subject drawn from a popular game of the last decade, he said there was discontent or "displeasure" behind every character who caused any amusement or activity in the game. "And yours will be a game of life," he continued.

"We build a world tomorrow because today we are not satisfied. The fact that you are going to enter a difficult world is the more reason you should become partners with Jesus Christ."

Throughout the address he referred to the life of St. Paul, and of his displeasure with the condition of the world as he had found it.

At the close of the sermon Rev. Cole related the story of John Howard Payne composer of the song "Home, Sweet Home."

FARM LAND SETS HIGH FOR U. S. AT $2,556.00 AN ACRE

WASHINGTON, May 25—(U.P.)—The highest-priced farm land in the United States is in the District of Columbia, the census bureau reveals.

District of Columbia farms—89 of them, according to the bureau's 1935 farm census—are valued at $7,183,087 altogether, or $2,556.47 an acre. The average value for each is listed as $80,709.

But the bureau also revealed that farming is gradually dying out in the District of Columbia. There were 104 farms in 1930, or 15 more than last year.

GRAMMARS TO HAVE PROGRAM IN AUDITORIUM

The pageant graduation program for the Grammar school will be presented tonight at the high school auditorium instead of at the football park as previously announced, on account of inclement weather conditions, it was announced today. Program will be at 8 o'clock.

The pageant which depicts the history of Texas under the caption, "Texas, Our Texas," is said by those who have seen the preparations for its display, to be unusually unique in its protrayal of early scenes and conditions of explorations, colonization, independent nation, statehood, rebel state and finally the glorious part of the U. S. A. Costumes will be used and much art work, made by Principal O. L. Stamey and his boys, lady teachers and others, will add realistic glamor to the depicted scenes.

This graduation also carries out the public school idea of a graduation program by the students themselves, rather than by imported speakers.

Aside from the preparations and supervision by the faculty, it will be a program entirely by the pupils of the grammar school, themselves.

Band To Play For Pageant Tonight

It was announced this afternoon by R. L. Maddox, bandmaster, that the Cisco Lobo band will meet tonight at the high school at 7:30 in order to play for the Grammar School Graduation Pageant.

The Nervous Break Down

There is nothing more alarming in American life today than the frequency of "nervous breakdowns." This is merely a modern name for an old ailment, and yet there was nothing in former days like its present prevalence. It seems to strike all around, like a "flu" epidemic. Many a person is appalled as he numbers the friends and acquaintances who have succumbed within a few years. Usually they recover, with good care, but there are many exceptions. Some break down over and over, having less resistance every time. It is the speeding up that does it. Life is geared higher and higher. Interests are spread wider and wider. Minds and bodies expend energy too fast and cover too much ground. "Comparatively few people die of old age," says a level-headed doctor. "We wear our prematurely chasing ambitions that are seldom justified. Take it a little slower. Learn to relax, and do not take your unfinished problems to bed with you. Health is a normal man's birthright. Do not barter it for the vanities of life. A periodic examination by the family physician has saved many a useful man from the scrap heap. Good personal habits, wholesome mental attitudes and responses, restful sleep, regular vacations, adequate food, normal elimination and vigorous vital organs are sign posts along life's journey that lead to health. Those who disregard them are inviting a nervous breakdown."

Boys and Birds

"I wish the boys would stop killing the song birds around here!" said a Cisco woman.

"There ought to be a law against it," declared another woman.

Probably there is a law against it, along with a lot of other laws that nobody knows about or enforces. We are very long on law and very short on enforcement.

But no amount of law will take the place of education in a boy's life. The best way to get at the small boy's instinct to kill birds is through his mother in his home.

"I remember when I was a youngster," said a man, "I was just as crazy about killing birds as any other boy. I would crawl on my stomach for half a mile to get near enough to a bird to shoot him. He might be right in the midst of pouring out the sweetest song that mortal ever heard. I would pull down on him just the same, although I might have no more use for him after I got him than a caterpiller for a crutch. The idea was to get hold of that mysterious, elusive thing, as well as to play the game of hitting him.

"However, there were four kinds of birds about which I was sentimental and which I never harmed. They were the mocking bird, the blue bird, the wren and the red bird. The reason I let these four kinds of birds live was that my mother was fond of them. Before I was big enough to shoot a gun, she had talked to me about them and told me stories about them, so I grew up with a particular liking for those four birds; I would so soon have hurt a friend as one of them."

Any boy, unless particularly bloodthirsty, can be taught to love birds, especially song birds, if his education in that direction is started soon enough. If the boy's mother would get a book on birds—with colored plates—explaining their ways and their interesting peculiarities, and point out the birds to the boy as they come and go, show them building their nests, sitting on their eggs, feeding their young, teaching them to fly, catching insects that destroy the garden, spoil the fruits, and ruin the flowers, an admiration and affection for birds would be developed.

Those trite asinine stories about it being wrong to harm birds just because it is wrong to harm birds, and because it makes the mother bird cry, do not influence boys. If you are going to get a boy to do something that is directly opposed to his very nature, you must give him some compelling reason why, and develop his interest in that reason. It is the boy's nature to kill birds just as it is the cat's.

A law against air guns and target rifles will not protect birds. A policeman would have to be stationed in every block to make such a law work. Besides any boy can make a sling shot with a couple of rubber bands, a fork of a limb, some string and a piece of somebody's shoe top; and a sling shot will knock over a surprising number of birds.

OUT OUR WAY

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondence

AUSTIN, May 25—(U.P.)—Prospects of an overflowing state treasury have become so bright that—were it not for old age pensions—the next session of the legislature would have a greater worry over dividing existing taxes than in thinking up new ones. Even now, distribution of taxes causes almost as much worry as raising them. State funds are segregated rigidly by law. One fund may be overflowing and another empty, or worse. The state cannot dip into any one of its 80 separate funds to pay demands of another.

SHEARER

Acuteness of this situation was demonstrated recently. So much money was reported in the available school fund that an additional disbursement was made. At the same time, Confederate pension warrants were being paid at face value only if they were issued prior to July, 1934—or prior to July, 1934, if they had passed to others than the pensioners.

General debts against the state, including employes' salaries, were payable in cash only to January 26, 1936.

Increased payment of special taxes has been so great that recipients doubt their good luck. The board of education took a "show me" attitude when told that the school fund had a $4,000,000 surplus in sight for the fiscal year. That much surplus would justify paying $2.50 for each public school pupil. The board ventured to pay an additional $1. One member still believes the $4,000,000 figure is largely a myth.

"Someone took a campaign statement too seriously," the board member said.

The $4,000,000 surplus may not be reached, but none can deny that liquor, cigaret, gasoline and oil taxes are producing more than was anticipated.

The first year under the new cigaret tax law, collections have totaled $5,167,847. This is $916,062 more than for the preceding year. State Comptroller George Sheppard estimates that if oil prices keep their existing status, the state's annual income from the oil production tax will be $9,08,210.

Both quantity and price figure in the estimate. The tax is two cents a barrel when oil sells for $1 or less. When it sells for more than $1, the tax changes to two per cent of the market value. If the same sliding plan is used for the 15-cent oil tax proposed by one candidate for governor, the income would be $67,711,575 at the present production and price.

Some other state funds present a less rosy middle-of-May status. In mid-May the highway fund held first place with a $9,343,000 surplus; while the state general fund labored under a $7,603,286 deficit. The Confederate pension fund was $4,727,824 in the red. The available school fund has a $2,107,995 surplus, but a distribution of the regular scholastic apportionment cleaned it out.

Old age assistance funds then were $1,123,521, with the first distribution of pensions scheduled to begin July 1.

Faced with a possible re-arrangement in tax distribution by the next legislature, the various interests are planning to protect themselves.

School men will battle to see that the present occupation taxes are not made excise taxes. The substitution of that one word would take one-fourth of the income now going to public schools.

Highway builders also are alert to protect road funds. They have seen one cent of the gasoline tax diverted to redeem county and district road obligations, without a very loud murmur. They also have seen the state indirectly switch highway funds to pay Confederate pensions by authorizing the investment of highway money in pension warrants. As the old pension warrants are redeemed the money is re-invested in new warrants—so there virtually is a continuing loan.

The surplus in the state highway fund therefore becomes a menace, in view of a likely shortage of money to meet the demand for old age pensions. Matching federal funds, and payment for work already contracted, likely will reduce the highway fund more rapidly than the revenue increases it.

Highway mileage to be maintained also will be increased sharply in a year or so. Much mileage was taken off the state system to make it available for participation in federal road aid. It is to be returned to the state system as soon as construction is finished.

How the ad valorem tax payer will hare in the bettered condition is uncertain. The school ad valorem tax was reduced 15 cents last year to 20 cents on the $100 property valuation. The general tax rate for state purposes remained at the maximum, as did the Confederate pension levy.

A pipe line intangible tax and a chain store tax, both counted upon to help reduce the ad valorem burden, have yielded nothing. Both are tied up in unsettled court contests.

A full treasury will not necessarily mean relief for the taxpayer. Many already are planning to dip into the treasury as soon as there is anything to draw out.

An increased building program for eleemosynary institutions, particularly the hospitals for the insane, is being drafted. Educational institutions plan a united attack in presenting a joint budget. In the past, each school has scrambled for itself.

State departments hope to recoup some of the appropriations cut during the depression years. At least one new state department is being fostered.

Sunning Home Made Mattress

"A home made mattress is just as good as any you buy if you will follow the directions when making and then sun and beat it the required time before using," stated Mrs. E. N. Strickland, bedroom co-operator of the Word Home Demonstration club. One should sun and beat the mattress every day for at least two weeks before using. Turn as frequently as possible, beating thoroughly on both sides. Do not make the mattress and use it immediately because the cotton will pack and the mattress will not be as satisfactory as with the sunning and beating.

Long Sheets Protect Blankets

"A top sheet should be well tucked in at the foot of the bed with the top folded back over the quilts and blankets to protect them" was given by Mrs. Louis Pitcock, bedroom cooperator of the Ranger Co-Workers Home Demonstration club. "Sheets should be one hundred and eight inches long to be able to have them as given above. Long sheets are cheaper in the long run because they protect the bedding and make smooth comfortable beds.

Greyhound Announce Excursion Rates

Mr. A. E. Baldus, general traffic manager of Southwestern Greyhound Lines, Inc., has announced that effective on May 25th excursion fares to California will be put on sale from their stations in Texas, Arkansas, Kansas, Louisana, Missouri and Oklahoma. These new low excursion fares will be on sale daily throughout the duration of the summer, and the return trip may be made any time up to October 31st.

Mr. A. F. Baldus, general traffic manager of Southwestern Greyhound Lines, Inc., has announced that on June 1st special Centennial excursion rates will be put into effect to the following Texas Cities: Dallas; Fort Worth, San Antio and Austin. These special Centennial excursion fares will be lowered to one and one-half times the regular one-way fare for round trips. This reduction represents a substantial savings to all of these principal Texas cities where Centennial Celebrations will be held. The special Centennial excursion fares will be on sale daily until November 29th and will have a return trip limit of thirty days.

Centennial Plans Interesting Start

DALLAS, May 25—The presidents of France and of Spain have been invited to participate in the opening of the Texas Centennial exposition on June 6.

As President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner, Governor James V. Allred and other dignitaries arrive at the main entrance exactly at 12 noon at the head of a mammoth parade, words declaring the $25,000,000 Dallas World's Fair open will flash around the world. Nine seconds after they are spoken in Dallas, those words, after jumping to New York, London, Tokyo, San Francisco and back to Dallas, will set up an electric impulse which will throw open the gates.

The world radio audience will be taken on a tour of the grounds while the president and the parade pass down the Esplanade of State, past the court of honor and into the Cotton Bowl. Then the broadcast will shift to Madrid, Spain, where the president of Spain, if he accepts the invitation, will tell of Spain's discovery of Texas in 1519, and the years the flag of Castile and Aragon flew over it.

This will begin a dramatization of Texas' history under six flags. Next the broadcast shifts to Paris, where the president of France, if he accepts, will tell of La Salle's wanderings over Texas, and his death on Texas soil. The broadcast then will shift for a Mexico City program and thence to Houston and Richmond. From Houston, General Andrew Jackson Houston, grandson of Sam Houston, the father of Texas Independence, will speak for the Republic of Texas and the Lone Star flag, and from Richmond Dr. George Bolling Lee, of New York, a descendant of General Robert E. Lee, will speak for the Confederacy.

The broadcast then will return to Dallas, and President Roosevelt will speak for the United States and the Stars and Stripes, sixth and last flag to fly over Texas.

The parade preceding the opening ceremonies will be like nothing that has ever appeared before in the United States. The only thing which can be compared to it is the Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's Day, and where the floats in that are made of flowers the ones in this parade will be of solid construction. This Centennial parade is being produced at a cost of more than $100,000.

More than 750,000 people are expected to view it. Hundreds of National Guardsmen, State Highway patrol officers and secret service men will help Dallas police handle the traffic. Traffic flow will be directed from airplanes circling above the line of march.

subtitle to Hitler photographs, "Here is the light before which darkness flees." In a nationwide birthday broadcast Dr. Goebbels characterized the Cologne speech as "religion in its deepest and most mystic sense."

The same occasion found Germany plastered with Hitler photographs enshrined in flowers. Every store, every business, even the Deutsche Bank had a display behind the tellers' cage. The German Kaisers ruling by "divine right" were paid similar tribute on their birthdays.

Decisions "Always Right"

Hitler's decisions are "always right." When he first saw the Reichssportfield (where the Olympics will be held) he suggested certain alterations which were made immediately. German newspapers commented favorably on the improvement. Foreign observers, however, were somewhat critical.

Even Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the non-Nazi acting minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank, is quoted by reliable sources to have said that it was astounding how Hitler always picked the best of alternate plans submitted to him.

The Glamorous Adventure

by Jean Selvwright © 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GAIL EVERETT, winner of the John S. Larne costume design prize, comes to New York to find work. Gail's parents are both dead. She has spent the past three years at MISS CRANSTON'S fashionable school for girls—due to Miss Cranston's generosity and friendship for Gail's mother.

Armed with a letter from Larne, Gail goes to his office and is told he is out of town. DEREK MARGRAVES, an artist, overhears this conversation and offers to help Gail. He advises her to go to MADAME LIZETTE'S shop to apply for a job.

Gail arrives there just after temperamental Madame Lizette has learned her designer has gone to Hollywood. Gail gets the job and goes to work next morning. Her lunch hour is cut short and she is hurrying back to the shop when, just ahead, a young man steps from an automobile.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V

THE young man snapped the door of the car shut. He took a step forward and suddenly stopped. "Gail Everett, or I miss my guess!" he exclaimed.

"Why, Dick—Dick Searles!" Gail caught his outstretched hand. "Where in the world did you come from?"

"That's what I should be asking you," the young man said. "We're down on Long Island now, but you're quite a distance from North Carolina."

"Oh, I left Merrywood Hall a day or so ago."

"Rosemary hasn't written me about it. She hasn't been writing home much lately."

"Well, she's busy with examinations. Besides school is going to be over soon. Lucille and some of the others have left already."

"What about you? Did you run away from Merrywood?" Dick's eyes held a caressing look. Then suddenly he grew serious. "You haven't eloped, by any chance?" he demanded, his hand on her arm.

"Oh, Dick! What crazy things you say! I've got a job right on this street—at Madame Lizette's. Oh!" she glanced quickly at her wrist watch. "I must run. It's five minutes to one and she'll fire me if I'm a second late!"

"All right, hop in the bus and I'll take you along. But when am I going to see you again?"

"I don't know, Dick. I'm a working girl now—and punch a time clock every time I go in and out."

DICK made a wry face. "What's the idea, Gail? I don't get it. You know, sweet, you don't have to work. My offer still holds. Marry me and see the world."

"Careful, Dicky!" Gail's eyes were twinkling. "I might take you up on that."

"Oh, Hon, that's what I want you to do. I hate to think of you working in a place like that. How soon do I see you again? What time do you leave this joint?"

"At 5 o'clock!"

"Fine. I'll meet you and drive you home. Dad and the Mater will be tickled to see you."

Gail shook her head. She wanted to go, but she daren't accept this impetuous invitation. A look of dejection spread across Dick's face. Then he smiled. "Maybe you'd prefer a week-end? Do you work Saturdays?"

"But when am I going to see you again?" Dick asked.

"Yes, till 5 o'clock."

"Well, I'll call for you at Madame's, or if you'd prefer I'll stop at your home—wherever that may be."

"All right then. Here's the address of the clubhouse." Gail scribbled it on a scrap of paper. "It's five minutes past one. I must fly."

"I'll wait to see if the dame throws you out," Dick called as Gail raced toward the employees' entrance.

"Don't!" she answered, with head averted so that she did not see the cynical smile that leaped into the eyes of a tall, blond-haired girl who walked briskly toward the car.

HASTILY slipping her things into their locker, Gail dabbed at her face with her powder puff, patted back the curling ends of her hair, and darted from the dressing room.

"Mees E-verett, Mees E-verett," shrilled Madame Lizette.

"I'm here," answered Gail.

"Have you prepared those sketches for me?"

"Yes, here they are." Gail watched, with trembling lips, while Madame's beady brown eyes appraised them.

"Too simple—altogether too simple. How could a lady like Mrs. Travers wear them? Tch!" She tossed the drawings on Gail's desk.

"But, Madame, Miss Carolle told me you wanted something suitable for a young girl. I'd never dream of using such models for an older woman."

Unmindful of Gail's explanation Madame walked away from her, as though nothing she might say would change her snap opinion of her work.

AN hour later Clytie entered the room. "You don't want Ariadne, do you?"

"No," replied Gail.

"That's good, for we've lots of customers and she's needed in the showroom. Mrs. Travers is expected any minute, so if Madame brings her in here, play up to her."

"What do you mean?" questioned Gail.

"Guess I'd better give you the low-down on that. You see Madame is backed by Mrs. Travers, so she thinks it's a good idea to let her get a look at the works now and then. Not that it means a thing to the old lady. She has absolutely no ideas about business, but she's patting herself on the back for being a big shot in the business world!"

"But Mrs. Travers doesn't do anything around here, surely?"

"Nothing, but put up the dough! Isn't that enough? You'd think so if you knew what Madame gets from her."

"What's tthe idea?"

"Oh, it's like this," said Clytie, lighting a cigaret, "Mrs. Travers is one of those neglected wives. The old man trots around with a sporty set—down-and-outers from the 400 who are glad to pocket their pride in exchange for the good times he shows them. And he's not stingy with his money either. Their daughter is ashamed of her parents since they sent her to a swell finishing school, and so Mrs. Travers, who has never caught on in society in spite of her huge contributions to charity and the parties she gives, thinks maybe this is one way of getting publicity."

"I don't see how that would work out—at least so long as the shop is run under Madame's name."

"Oh, well, Madame's made her a director. Just a title, you know, but it pleases the old girl who thinks she's quite on a par with some of the society women who are going in for business instead of bridge."

Gail smiled to herself as she remembered what a surprise Lucille Travers had received when she learned that Rosemary's father was a multimillionaire. Rosemary Searles, accustomed to wealth all her life, was fond of the simple things of life. She never went in for the wild extravagances that some of her schoolmates did. So Lucille, who never took time to go below the surface, had no use for Rosemary Searles.

Then one day when the girls were looking at the morning newspaper she learned that the Roger Searles whose enormous benefactions were listed in its columns, was Rosemary's father. Instantly Lucille's attitude changed, but it made no difference with her schoolmate. Later when Rosemary's brother, Dick, came down to some of the parties, Lucille tried to arouse his interest, but, from the minute he met her, Dick had had eyes for no one but Gail.

The door of the designing room opened. "Madame wants those sketches you made this forenoon," said one of the salesgirls.

Proper Lubrication Makes Safety Cars

In a recent interview, H. P. Hobart, General Manager of Gulf's Lubricating Sales Department, used a report of the Pennsylvania Department of Revenue to substantiate his belief that many accidents are caused by improper lubrication or by the lack of lubrication. In analyzing this report, Mr. Hobart said, "Out of 80,488 motor vehicles involved in accidents, over 90 per cent were apparently in good condition. The condition of drivers in approximately 40 per cent of the accidents was apparently normal. From these facts the conclusion may be drawn that accidents involve machines which have some mechanical imperfection, even though they may appear to be in perfect condition."

Many persons who are driving what they consider to be safe cars are really chauffeuring vehicles that are accident hazards. The lack of proper lubrication, or improper lubrication, causes concealed parts of the steering mechanism, shackle bolts, drag links, and wheel spindles to become so worn that a sudden turn or bump in the road may cause them to snap. When such an event occurs, the driver is left to bring back to cotnr ola vehicle that threatens to involve itself, as well as others, in a serious accident.

Do your part to reduce accidents in Cisco. If your car has not been lubricated recently, perhaps you, too, are unknowingly driving an unsafe car. Play safe—Lubricate for Safety!

DR. F. TOWNSEND CHALLENGED BY HOUSE COUNCIL

WASHINGTON, May 25—(U.P.)—House old age pension investigation accused elderly Dr. Francis Townsend today of attempting to use congress as a sounding board to further his "profitable dream."

The attack on the founder of the $200 a month old age pension organization was made by youthful James Sullivan, council for the house pension investigating committee, whose inquiry Townsend and his followers have bolted.

Sullivan challenged Townsend to appear before the committee and be confronted by "such documentary proof which he cannot deny that his fantastic stories in the past will not stand."

The attorney's charges were the first break in official silence of the committee since Townsend walked out of its session and refused to testify further. Townsend repeatedly has denounced the investigation as "unfair" and challenged the committee to arrest him and bring him to trial before the full house on a contempt citation.

the SANTA MARIA
Columbus' Flag Ship

the ship that brought Columbus to America ..and tobacco to the world

..and now throughout the world smokers are saying They Satisfy

History tells us that when Christopher Columbus' sailors took tobacco back home with them everybody hailed it as one of the first new pleasures in years.

Today tobacco gives more pleasure to more people than ever before.

Many different claims are made for tobacco, but most everybody agrees on this . . .

Smoking is a pleasure and the cigarette is the mildest and purest form in which that pleasure can be enjoyed.
