American fired on

■ The U.S. State Department reveals reports that an American citizen was shot while trying to elude Iraqi troops apparently acting on Saddam Hussein's call Wednesday for a holy war against Western allies gathered in the Persian Gulf.

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press Writer

An American citizen was reported shot in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait but details were sketchy.

Meanwhile, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein on Wednesday urged Arabs to rise up in a holy war against the West and former allies who turned against him, and said world trade sanctions are imperiling the lives of Iraqi children.

The State Department said Wednesday night in Washington that it received a report an Iraqi soldier fired on an American who was trying to avoid capture, adding, "We have no information on how serious his injuries might be."

Iraqi troops have been rounding up Westerners in Kuwait since Iraq invaded and seized the small oil state on Aug. 2. Embassies in Kuwait have been ordered closed and diplomats transferred to Baghdad.

Western women and children detained in Kuwait and Iraq trickled out in small groups Wednesday, leaving behind hundreds who lack permission to depart. Iraq, criticized for blocking releases with red tape, said it was doing everything it could to expedite departures.

On Thursday, an Air France jet flew into Paris from Jordan carrying 153 Westerners allowed to leave Iraq, including three pregnant women. Those aboard included 105 French women and children, 28 Britons and at least nine Americans. The American women had Arabic names, indicating they had married Arabs.

Japan and the Soviet Union asked Iraq on Wednesday to withdraw at once from Kuwait and free all foreigners held in Iraq and Kuwait. A joint statement issued in Tokyo by Foreign Minister Taro

Margo Dinkha, 33, of Midland didn't know when — if ever — she'd see her husband again.

But her husband, Joseph Dinkha, 30, — who was stranded in Baghdad, Iraq — came home Tuesday night.

And if it wasn't for a pot of dolma — a popular Middle Eastern dish made from vegetables and spices rolled in grape leaves — Dinka might not be home today with his son Matthew, 7, and 2-year-old daughter Martha. The Dinkhas also are expecting another child in October.

Dinkha was able to cross the Iraq border into Jordan last week only after a taxi driver bribed a customs agent, who he knew, with his favorite meal.

"The customs office didn't have a lot of food. He (the taxi driver) took this food to the customs guy and said his mother (the taxi driver's) sent it," Dinkha said.

Embargo-tied shortages may arrive with winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil shortages from the embargo against Iraq and Kuwait may develop late this year, Bush administration officials said Wednesday.

"The last half of the fourth quarter gives us concern," Assistant Energy Secretary John J. Easton Jr. told the House Government Operations Committee. "We see the potential for greater uncertainty as winter develops."

Despite record high inventories and commitments by OPEC producers to make up much of the Iraqi-Kuwaiti production, both government and private analysts said they expect a world shortage to develop by late November or early December.

The 21-nation International Energy Agency estimates a shortage of 500,000 barrels a day could develop by December.

But private analysts say the shortage could be worse because demand for oil is expected to increase by several million barrels a day with cold weather.

"We are convinced that useable commercial crude oil stocks will be depleted by the end of October," said Edward N. Krapels, president of Energy Security Analysis Inc. of Washington.

Krapels, whose company tracks world oil supplies, said the shortfall "could easily" reach up to 2 million barrels a day, possibly sending oil prices to above $40 a barrel.

"Anticipation of the shortage will result in a run-up of crude oil prices that will be translated into higher heating oil prices as the winter develops," he said.

If so, consumers can expect a repeat of last winter when an early, severe cold snap and transportation bottlenecks doubled home heating oil prices in some regions and tripled propane prices.

Krapels said the government could preempt a spiraling of home heating oil prices by immediately drafting a contin-

Local school enrollment sets record

A Lee High School sophomore received detention twice the first few days of school for being late to class following lunch. "The lines were so long to get food, that I have had to run to class eating pizza on the way," he said.

A seventh grader at Goddard Junior High School has also been late to class several times. "The halls are so crowded you can barely squeeze through," she said.

A mother with a first grader in Bowie Elementary School lamented that there were 26 students in her daughter's first grade class. "Whatever, happened to the state-mandated 22 students per teacher?" she asked.

Another mother with two hyperactive sons attending Santa Rita Elementary School said she was appalled to find out her boys would only be attending two physical education classes per week due to overcrowding and lack of teachers.

A father of another child attending Santa Rita complained that there were no bathrooms in the portable buildings where his child attended class. "They have to leave the buildings, fight the traffic in the hall, try to go to the bathroom and get to their next class in just a few minutes," he said. "What is going on?"

Dylan McGowen (foreground) works diligently as substitute teacher Ingrid Miller assists Tiffany Nunamaker and fields a question from Dominic Salazar. The first grade class of 26 students at Bowie Elementary School and its teacher are experiencing the effects of the school district's record enrollment figure of 21,062. The state mandates 22 students per teacher.

MISD administrators' projected peak enrollment figure of 20,480 for the year has already been surpassed by 821 students in the second week of school. Current enrollment also isn't far behind the 1995 projection of 21,527.

As of Wednesday Goddard had an enrollment of 1,111 and Santa Rita had an enrollment of 843. The burgeoning enrollment figures have many campuses surpassing capacity. "Unlike other buildings, a school is 'full' at 90 percent capacity," according to Joe Cummins, executive director of planning, evaluation and testing.

Last year, 19 Midland campuses were at or above 90 percent utilization rates. Goddard operated at a 102 percent utilization rate last year with 62 fewer students than are enrolled this year.

Midland's economy isn't booming, but its population managed to increase during bust times and is continuing to increase, according to Superintendent Joe Baressi. "Even in Midland's darkest days during the early '80s, enrollment continued to grow," he said.

Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and special services, agreed.

Smith urges plan to trim budget deficit

■ Republican Rep. Lamar Smith suggests that federal managers cut their overhead by 10 percent to help reduce government spending.

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Lamar Smith, a San Antonio Republican, on Wednesday urged White House and congressional budget negotiators to require all federal managers to cut overhead expenses by 10 percent, thereby saving $27 billion in the coming fiscal year.

Smith

Smith called his proposal a "radical idea that would change the way we look at government spending," and said it could save the taxpayers as much as $141 billion over five years while enabling the government to retain programs without raising taxes.

Smith dispatched a messenger with his proposal to White House and congressional negotiators seeking a way to trim this year's $169 billion deficit.

He defined "overhead" as indirect costs, including travel and transportation, rent, communications, utilities and printing. Research and development expenses would be exempt from 10 percent reduction. And, for the next four years,

Pipeline hit

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist guerrillas bombed the country's main oil pipeline Wednesday, forcing the state-run oil company Ecopetrol to suspend pumping of 235,000 barrels daily — almost half its daily output..

Guerrillas of the National Liberation Army, known as the ELN, blew up a section of the Cano Limon oil pipeline in northeastern Colombia, Ecopetrol said.

The pro-Cuban National Liberation Army has bombed the pipeline scores of times since 1986, causing losses estimated at $520 million.

PTL sale?

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has thrown into jeopardy the $52 million deal by a San Diego evangelist to purchase the assets of the PTL ministry once headed by Jim Bakker.

"This deal is in big, big trouble," said Dennis Shedd, the court-appointed trustee overseeing the sale of the defunct religious empire near Fort Mill, 10 miles south of Charlotte, N.C.

Judge Thurmond Bishop ruled against the preferential right that evangelist Morris Cerullo claimed to negotiate an extension of PTL's contract for satellite time from Home Box Office.

HBO officials said they can strike a better deal for their satellite time from someone else.

FREED: City employee returns

had put Dinkha's American passport aside and told him to wait.

"If you wait like they tell you, you'll stay there forever," Dinka said about Iraqi government employees.

After reaching Amman, Jordan, on Saturday, Dinkha was home free.

"I was all the time scared in Iraq ... you never know when you are going to be taken, arrested, or disappear," Dinkha said.

"I thought sometimes I would never see them (his wife and children) again. I still have some nightmares but it's OK," Dinkha said.

"It feels real good (to be back in Midland). The people of America are real lucky to have this government," said Dinkha, who just this year became a naturalized citizen. Dinkha and his wife, who have resided in the United States more than 10 years, are Assyrian Christians whose homeland was in Iraq.

Dinkha set out for Baghdad on June 14 to visit his father and five sisters.

Initially, Dinkha was not able to return on July 21 because customs agents at the airport accused him of smuggling — gifts, including gold jewelry, his family gave him to bring back to his wife and kids.

"They searched my suitcase and told me I was smuggling all this stuff. They said I had to go to jail," Dinkha said, adding that at the same time his passport was confiscated.

From that time on, Dinkha was constantly handing out money — bribes — to expedite his departure from the country.

"I didn't care about the money. I just wanted to get out of there," Dinkha said. "After the second of August, I said 'here we go, I'm not going to get out of here,' " he added.

"We gave them enough money that they put on the paper that I was in jail for four days when I was there only a few hours," he said.

In addition, Dinkha said he paid a $3,000 (American equivalent) fine and went through a load of paperwork.

Still he could not get his passport back.

At one time when he went to retrieve his passport from the secret police-type agency he was put in a small room with about 30 others. "I said 'Oh no, this is the end of me,' " he said.

But with the help of his cousin, Dinkha was able to leave — and with his passport. His cousin, who owns a restaurant in Baghdad, had some clout with agents because he sometimes served them meals for free or at discounted prices.

"(One of the secret police) kind of felt sorry for me. He said he would help me out and give me 72 hours to leave the country and said you are not allowed to come back for three years. I said 'you can make it 30 years'," Dinkha said.

Things were a little shaky until Dinkha finally crossed the border. He ended up driving the cab most the distance while the driver slept.

"The taxi driver told me he had a feeling they (customs) were going to send me back," Dinkha said.

Ms. Dinkha, who had limited conversations via telephone with her husband while he was in Iraq, feared the worse for him.

"We didn't really believe he'd make it home," she said.

"We are glad he is home ... nothing else matters," Ms. Dinkha said.

"We didn't believe he'd come home till we saw him at the airport," his brother, Wilson, added.

Dinkha, who works for Midland's street department, is going back to work today, he said.

"I thank my bosses ... they called my wife and told her that I still have my job," Dinkha said.

Dinkha said he feels the people of Iraq don't approve of Saddam Hussein but are in a situation where they are afraid to speak out.

Dinkha added that he fears for his family in Iraq because of his status as an American citizen.

OIL: Shortages may be seasonal

gency plan to begin drawing down the nation's 590-million-barrel Strategic Petroleum Reserve in November.

"A reasonable, organized, modest drawdown will send a signal not only to the oil industry and to consumers but also to the financial markets that the winter will be a difficult one, but not an economy-breaking one," he said.

Administration officials have said they will tap the stockpile only if a real shortage occurs and not as a "price mechanism."

Calvin Kent, director of the government's Energy Information Administration, said a slight, brief shortfall might develop later this month, reflecting the gap between when the embargo began and when the increased OPEC production came on line.

"Oil now coming on the market is going to take a while to get here," he said, referring to commitments by Saudi Arabia, Venezuela and the United Arab Emirates to increase production by a total of slightly more than 3 million barrels a day. "Commercial stocks are going to have to be drawn down some ... and that's reflected in the price today."

The price of benchmark West Texas intermediate crude jumped from $21.55 a barrel the day before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 to more than $28.30 six days later, then fell to just under $26 a barrel. More recently, the price has seesawed from the $26 range to above $30, standing Wednesday at $29.65 a barrel.

IRAQ: Blocking of hostage releases criticized

Nakayama and visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was the first ever by the two nations on an international issue, Foreign Ministry officials there said.

As a multinational armada grew in the Persian Gulf, U.S. Army officials in Saudi Arabia said the military was using night convoys to move heavy firepower — including ground-to-air missiles and rocket launchers — into the northern Saudi desert.

Although Washington says its troops are deployed to defend the Saudis, the recent moves increase the offensive capabilities of U.S. forces.

President Bush indicated Wednesday the United States has not ruled out an offensive role, telling lawmakers back from the gulf that if sanctions do not succeed, "we will review our options."

Secretary of State James A. Baker III was headed for the Middle East, where he said he planned to discuss with U.S. allies a proposed new regional security structure for the Persian Gulf.

In the Gulf of Oman, U.S. forces released an Iraqi-flagged freighter they intercepted and boarded Tuesday as it headed for Iraq with a cargo of tea.

The Navy said the ship was allowed to proceed to an unspecified port after a 30-hour search. Shipping sources said it headed for Yemen.

Saddam has promised to free all foreign women and children but to keep the men as human shields against attack at strategic sites. In another attempt to play on Western anxiety about the captives, he released messages Tuesday purported to be from seven such hostages, including an American.

Also, London-based Kurdish dissidents from Iraq pinpointed six installations where they said hostages were held. They included a chemical weapons factory, an air force training college and other military bases.

In other developments:

■ Iraq called up its reserve officers Wednesday, the Iraqi News Agency reported. A statement issued by the Defense Ministry said reserve officers in all specialties except chemical warfare would be subject to the call-up.

■ Diplomatic efforts continued, with King Hussein of Jordan conferring in Baghdad with Saddam and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz meeting in Moscow with Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Soviet President Gorbachev meets Bush on Sunday in Helsinki, Finland, to discuss the crisis. Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, who met Gorbachev on Wednesday, said later he thought Aziz may pass a message to Gorbachev to relay to Bush at the summit.

■ Britons paid nearly $40 million in purchase taxes on gasoline in August because of higher pump prices triggered by the crisis, Britain's Automobile Association said Wednesday.

■ Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, the exiled emir of Kuwait, reassured Kuwaitis on Saudi television Wednesday of worldwide support for an Iraqi pullout from Kuwait and restoration of his family's rule.

■ Bush placed a morale-boosting call to U.S. Ambassador Nathaniel Howell at the besieged U.S. Embassy in Kuwait City, where a skeleton staff remains.

Saddam, in his televised statement Wednesday, said the U.N. embargo imposed on Iraq on Aug. 6 may be imperiling the lives of Iraqi children.

He also called upon "all Arabs, within the teachings of Allah and according to the Moslem Holy War of Jihad, to fight this U.S. presence of non-believers and to fight the stance taken by Arab agents who have followed these foreigners."

MISD: Students, parents worried by crowding

(From 1A)

"Midland was one of the few school districts in West Texas which didn't drop students in the early '80s and gained more in the late '80s," Lusby said. "Midland just showed a continued increase. Even in the lean years of '83, '84 and '85 we continued to have more students than each previous year."

Lusby said the school district's enrollment figures support the recent federal Census Bureau report which claims that Midland's population has grown 28 percent in the last 10 years.

"Midland is unique because of its continued population growth," Lusby said.

Baressi said that even though conditions are crowded, parents needn't despair. "We have more students than were projected at some schools and less than were projected at others," he said.

The superintendent said administrators were waiting for this week's figures before making decisions on transferring teachers or portable buildings from one campus to another. "Traditionally, enrollment numbers are up the day after Labor Day," Baressi said. "Some children just don't start school until then."

W. Ray Schulze, assistant principal of Goddard, said the junior high school's halls have always been crowded. "It doesn't seem much more crowded than last year," he noted. "There are lockers on both sides of the hall, however, and when students line up at lockers on both sides, it slows traffic."

As for Santa Rita students being limited to having only a few physical education classes per week, Baressi said he didn't know the details of that particular instance. "I do know that we will be adding staff at Santa Rita, including an assistant P.E. teacher," he said.

The superintendent added that administrators will know by Tuesday if new teachers need to be hired.

Lusby said, "Although an additional 821 students sounds like a lot," he said. "They are spread over 30 campuses. About 677 of those students are in grades kindergarten through twelve."

Lusby said topping 21,000 enrollment was a milestone for the school district. "The problem is," he said, "we are staffed based on the lower projected enrollment figure."

Baressi said current enrollment reaffirms the school board's decision to call for an Oct. 6 bond issue election.

Ken Morrison, school board president, added, "With today's figures, the district needs the additions and new buildings proposed now, not in the near future."

Correction

In Wednesday's edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, an article on teen pregnancies carried an erroneous headline.

As the article stated, 18.4 percent of births in the Permian Basin in 1989 were to mothers under 19 years of age. This figure was up 3.6 percent from the previous year, when 14.8 percent of new mothers were teen-agers.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

SMITH: Cutting overhead suggested

increases in overhead costs could not exceed the rate of inflation under his proposal, said Smith, a two-term member of Congress.

"The beauty of it is that it does leave it up to individual federal managers to cut spending," Smith told reporters as he unveiled his plan. "It will go a long way toward meeting the Gramm-Rudman targets."

Under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law, spending cuts will take place automatically if Congress and the White House cannot agree on a combination of spending cuts and revenue increases to cut the deficit back to $64 billion by Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

All government programs except for Social Security would be subject to deep across-the-board cuts to reach the target if automatic cuts are triggered.

"This proposal will focus everyone's attention on the part of the budget that's never been looked at before," Smith said.

To illustrate his point, Smith said that neither the House Budget Committee nor the Library of Congress was able to provide him with an analysis of the federal government's indirect costs, which he said would amount to $340 billion next year.

Reacting to Smith's proposal, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, chief designer of the deficit reduction law that bears his name, said: "Lamar's concept makes a lot of common sense. I intend to get a copy of his proposal and take it with me to the budget summit meeting on Friday."

Carol Cox, president of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, a bipartisan watchdog group, also applauded Smith's concept but was skeptical about its chances of success.

"On one level, he's absolutely right," she said. "It would make more sense for Congress to say to the executive branch, 'We want you to save X amount of dollars.'

"But he's grossly exaggerating the actual amount of money that we would save by doing that — and you'd end up cutting things Congress doesn't want to cut."

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

'Blackout' ending for troops in Saudi Arabia

By Stewart Powell
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

BEDOUIN ONE, Saudi Arabia — When U.S. warships fired on Iraqi tankers in the Persian Gulf not long ago, word of the incident took more than an hour to reach the commanding officer of this remote desert outpost where Marines could have faced an Iraqi counterattack.

To deal with similar problems, the Pentagon moved Wednesday to keep front line American forces abreast of developments in the U.S.-Iraq standoff by rushing battery-powered radios to troops on the front lines and testing a radio transmitter to relay newscasts from the United States.

"In the whole process of moving thousands of troops thousands of miles, you can lose touch with the big picture," said Marine Lt. Col. Chris Cortez, commander of a Marine battalion from Camp Pendleton, Calif., working out of an encampment situated along a potential Iraqi invasion route. "Out here, there's great interest in knowing everything you can."

Cortez, whose encampment is named for the nomads who live in this desert peninsula, expressed no complaints about timely intelligence briefings he receives during desert operations here in northeastern Saudi Arabia.

But visits to a variety of U.S. sites quickly illustrate that U.S. troops like Cortez and his men are often the last to learn about day-to-day developments in Iraq or at sea along the tightening U.S. naval blockade or the latest escalation of rhetoric between President Bush and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Marines in the Cortez unit, for example, were circulating misinformation gleaned from news broadcasts picked up on one Marine's short wave radio. The mistaken information included rumors that Bush had given Iraq either 30 or 45 days to vacate Kuwait, seized in an Aug. 2 invasion, and a third rumor that 380,000 Soviet troops stationed in East Germany were moving across Turkey to open a potential second front against Iraq in the event of combat.

The news blackout came to the Pentagon's attention in no uncertain terms last week when the president tried to address troops from the White House via radio and hardly any troops could hear the broadcast.

A U.S. Embassy transmitter in nearby Bahrain was used to beam the presidential address to U.S. forces along the coastline with the Persian Gulf. But few troops inland, isolated from news or amenities, could hear the president's words.

The inadvertent isolation was so bad that as late as last Friday, Army Lt. Col. Larry Icenogle hand carried a tape recorder with the president's speech and a transcript of the chief executive's remarks to a port facility on the Persian Gulf so that soldiers from the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division based in Fort Stewart, Ga., could hear their commander in chief.

Jordan "Buzz" Rizer, head of the American Forces Information Service (AFIS), said his organization has distributed up to 600 radios so far as part of an effort to put as many as 6,000 into the hands of troops in the weeks ahead so that each major military unit will have access to the commercial radio network news broadcasts.

A radio transmitter for the American Forces Information Service is being tested as well at King Fahd City to relay latest news broadcasts from commercial networks in the United States to front-line troops, Rizer said. Additional transmitters are on the way.

"We want to make sure that American troops overseas receive the same information that every other U.S. serviceman receives, no matter where he is," Rizer said.

The Pentagon is providing 20,000 free copies of a special edition of European Stars and Stripes to U.S. forces stationed in Saudi Arabia as well. The newspaper usually costs soldiers 25 cents a copy.

Military commanders and rank-in-file soldiers alike have appealed for speedy access to information in a fast changing situation where tough words in Washington or Baghdad can spark hostilities here.

"Everybody and his brother wants information," Rizer said.

The AFIS supervises the publication of editions of Stars and Stripes in Europe and the Pacific with a total circulation of 170,000, as well as the operations of 1,100 radio and 1,100 television stations serving personnel worldwide.

Dallas area group deployed

DALLAS (AP) — Eighty volunteers from the Texas Air National Guard on Wednesday were winging their way toward an undisclosed destination "in the vicinity of southwest Asia," officials said.

The troops, part of the 130th Provisional Tactical Airlift Squadron, were deployed from the Dallas Air Naval Station shortly before midnight Tuesday.

Three C-130 cargo planes left from the air station's Hensley Field at 10:45 p.m., 11:15 p.m. and 11:45 p.m. Tuesday night, said Col. Ray Inman, deputy commander for support.

The troops included air crews, maintenance workers, logistics and intelligence personnel and a photographer, he said.

"They are gone," Inman said Wednesday. "It's just kind of back to business as usual today, but we're certainly in a standby mode and ready to react if we're called."

The troops were made up of the Dallas unit and four other units from across the country, he said.

Guidelines given for sending letters to U.S. military personnel in Mideast

Staff Report

Neither rain nor sleet nor gloom of night will prevent the post office from delivering mail, but war may cause a few delays.

The United States Postal Service has suspended international mail service to Kuwait and Iraq because of transportation difficulties in reaching the two countries.

Until further notice, all international mail to Kuwait and Iraq addresses will be returned to senders endorsed "Service temporarily suspended." Customers can file applications for a refund on mail returned because of the suspension of service.

The suspension will remain in effect until mail transportation to Kuwait and Iraq is again possible.

Mail service to military personnel deployed in Saudi Arabia and other parts of the Mideast is unaffected by the ban.

The Military Postal Service Agency reported that first class mail is taking about 10 days to reach Saudi Arabia.

Because of the military situation, personal mail service is limited to first class mail of less than 12 ounces, including audio tapes. The weight restriction applies to all APO mail and some Marine FPO mail going to U.S. service people in Saudi Arabia.

Information on normal Saudi Arabian customs restrictions is available at U.S. post offices and must be followed by military mail senders.

Those sending mail to deployed personnel should use the provided APO/FPO number, if one has been assigned. If the APO/FPO number is not known, the mail should be sent to the service person's address prior to deployment. It will be forwarded as quickly as possible.

If members of the community or organizations want to send "any servicemember" mail to deployed military personnel, the Department of Defense and the U.S. Postal Service have established the following addresses for the general public to send mail not addressed to a specific service person.

For the Navy and Marine Corps onboard ships in the Saudi Arabian region, address mail to: Any Servicemember, Operation Desert Shield, FPO New York 09866-0006.

"Any servicemember" mail is subject to the 12 ounce first class mail and Saudi Arabian customs restrictions. "Any servicemember" mail sent to any other addresses may encounter significant delays and may be returned.

WORLD

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea on Thursday proposed that the two Koreas officially recognize each other's governments, but the communist North was not likely to accept.

South Korean Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon initially made the offer Wednesday at the first talks ever between prime ministers of the hostile nations, but the proposal was not acted upon.

Their final closed-door session started Thursday morning with the seven official delegates of both sides sitting across from one another at a conference table in a hotel ballroom.

North Korea has steadfastly refused to recognize the legitimacy of the Seoul government, maintaining that such a policy would perpetuate the division of the peninsula, split in 1945.

South Korea believes mutual recognition would be practical and allow both nations to coexit until unification of the peninsula could be achieved.

Moreover, the South says the North has given tacit recognition by agreeing to hold the historic talks, the highest-level contact ever held between the nations.

South Korean spokesman Kim Hyung-ki told a briefing that mutual recognition is "necessary to ease mutual distrust and improve relations" between the counties.

He also said 10 North Koreans, including Prime Minister Yon Hyong Muk, would visit South Korean President Roh Tae-woo later Thursday at the presidential mansion.

That meeting would mark the first time the leader of South Korea has received an official representative of the rival communist North Korean government since separate governments were formed in 1948.

During Wednesday's meeting, about 1,000 radical students marched through Seoul, shouting anti-U.S., anti-government slogans and hurling rocks and firebombs at riot police.

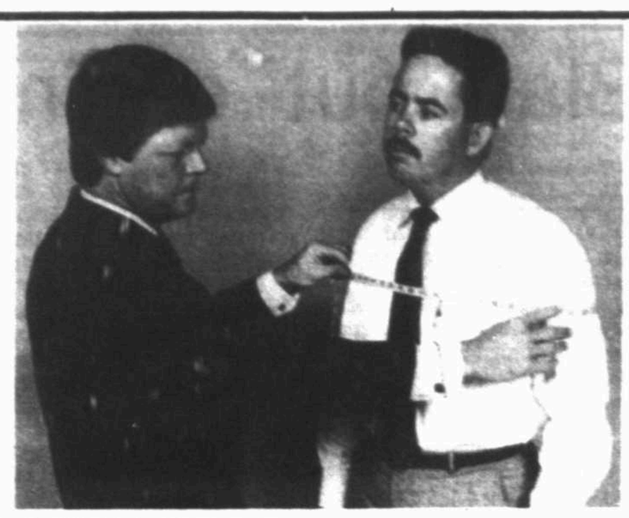

"No prime ministers' talks without release of unification prisoners!" shouted the students at Seoul National University. "U.S. troops, get out!" Riot police fired tear gas to block the students from marching off campus. Several students and police were injured and at least five students were arrested.

In addition, eight radicals were arrested for staging illegal demonstrations in front of the hotel where the prime ministers were meeting. A North Korean television cameraman trying to film the scene was roughed up by riot police trying to stop him.

The radical students, a small but vocal minority in South Korea, oppose the presence of the 43,000 U.S. troops in their country, saying it hinders chances for unification of North and South Korea. The Americans are here under a mutual defense pact with South Korea.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — American journalist Terry Anderson marked another grim milestone Wednesday in his 5¼ years in captivity — his 2,000th day as a hostage.

Anderson, 42, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, is the longest-held of the six Americans, four Britons, two West Germans and one Italian who are captives in Lebanon. Most are held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militants.

Anderson, of Lorain, Ohio, was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut on March 16, 1985, by Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

The last information on Anderson came from former Irish hostage Brian Keenan, who said after his release Aug. 24 that he had seen Anderson during his four years in captivity.

"I saw Terry Anderson some time ago. He's in good form," Keenan said after he was freed by a group calling itself the Organization of Islamic Dawn.

The Irishman said he spent part of his time in captivity with Anderson, noting they were in chains and blindfolded much of the time.

Keenan said Anderson "appreciates the letters that he received from his family. He has a picture of his daughter, Sulome, which is some great companionship for him."

Sulome, Anderson's younger daughter, has never met her father. She was born nearly three months after he was kidnapped.

Lebanese newspapers have published several pictures and letters from Sulome, her Lebanese mother, Madeleine, and the hostage's sister, Peggy Say.

In Dublin, the papal nuncio to Ireland pleaded with Iran's outgoing ambassador on Wednesday to undertake all possible efforts to obtain the release of the remaining Western hostages in Lebanon.

Islamic Jihad and other Shiite kidnappers are linked to Hezbollah, or Party of God. The fundamentalist movement is Iran's main ally in Lebanon and is closely linked with radical figures in Tehran.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Truck kills 12 in New Delhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A speeding truck crushed to death 10 schoolchildren who were waiting at a bus stop to go home Wednesday, a news agency reported. Two other people at the bus stop also were killed, it said.

Press Trust of India said at least 19 children were injured in the accident in Tamil Nadu state's Tiruchirapalli district, 1,200 miles south of New Delhi.

It said the injured were in serious condition.

The news agency did not give details about the children but said they were in elementary school, indicating they were between five and 10 years of age. A woman and an unidentified person also were killed.

Press Trust quoted local police as saying the truck driver was arrested.

Jet returns to London

LONDON (AP) — A Pan Am jumbo jet returned to London shortly after takeoff today when a fiberglass panel fell off a wing, an airline spokesman said.

The San Francisco-bound Boeing 747 landed without incident at Heathrow Airport with 392 passengers and a crew of 16. The passengers left later today on another plane, said Pan Am spokesman Stephen Heckscher.

The captain of Flight 125 noticed the panel had fallen off about 30 minutes into the flight, Heckscher said.

He said the panel fit between the fuselage and the wing flaps.

Quake rocks Cuba

MADRID, Spain (AP) — An earthquake measuring 5 on the Richter scale caused some damage to buildings in the southeastern Cuban city of Santiago, but no injuries were reported, a Spanish news agency reported today.

The state-run Spanish agency EFE cited a Cuban news report as saying Cuban seismologists rated the earthquake as one of the strongest in the quake-prone area in the last 10 years.

EFE did not report an exact time for the start of the earthquake, which occurred Tuesday evening.

The U.S. National Earthquake Information Center said a quake of magnitude 4.3 was felt Tuesday at Santiago de Cuba and Guantanamo Bay. The different Richter readings could not immediately be reconciled.

De Klerk seeks talks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Calling South Africa's anti-apartheid course "irreversible," President F.W. de Klerk on Wednesday invited groups of all races to join negotiations on a new constitution.

"Now is the time to wipe out petty differences," he said.

The government and African National Congress were scheduled to continue talks Thursday, despite tension over the army's involvement in a township shooting that killed 11 people.

An ANC spokeswoman said she knew of no change in the plans for Thursday's meeting.

ANC leader Nelson Mandela visited black townships near Johannesburg wracked by fighting that has killed more than 550 people since Aug. 12.

Mandela repeated accusations that police fueled the fighting by siding with Zulu backers of the conservative Inkatha movement against Xhosas and other blacks loyal to the ANC. Police deny the charges and say they have prevented the violence from escalating.

Bush should offer Soviets a choice

When President George Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev meet in Helsinki, Finland, Sunday to talk about the crisis in the Middle East, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein no doubt will be foremost on their minds.

The Iraq-initiated crisis finds the United States and Soviet Union both in the position, politically, of pushing for a stable Middle East. Unlike past confrontations that put the two superpowers at odds or backing opposing sides in that region — as they were in the 1982-83 Lebanon crisis — the Iraq invasion of Kuwait which led to a commitment of U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia actually finds the interests of the Soviet Union and United States much the same.

Moscow and Baghdad have military ties dating to 1958, and in 1972 representatives of the two nations signed the "Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation" under which the Soviets have, in effect, backed and condoned Iraqi aggression. Since the signing of the treaty Moscow had remained Iraq's largest arms supplier until it cut off shipments in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Through the years, the Soviets have continued to supply arms to Hussein, Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, the Palestine Liberation Organization's Yasir Arafat and Syria's Hafez Assad. For Moscow, the role of Mideast arms supplier has been a matter of economics. War and instability in the Middle East have traditionally led to higher oil prices and those higher prices have pumped badly-needed hard currency into Moscow. In fact, in a recent memorandum for the Heritage Foundation, Jay P. Kosminsky, deputy director of Defense Policy Studies, and Michael Johns, policy analyst, noted that "for every dollar increase in the price of a barrel of crude, Moscow gains some $1 billion annually in badly needed hard currency from its export of oil."

But today's political trends speak of a different set of rules. On one hand Moscow's unequivocal support for expansionist tyrants has failed to dislodge the United States from the region. Secondly — and possibly most important — Gorbachev's wooing of Western aid conflicts with that nation's role as arms supplier and aggressor. If he continues to fuel Hussein's war-making ability, it would be difficult at best for Gorbachev to go seeking the Western money his nation sorely needs.

At Sunday's summit, President Bush should make it clear to Gorbachev that he must choose between continuing to stir up strife in the Middle East or cutting his ties to Saddam Hussein in the interest of looking like a peacemaker.

Bush should also call for Gorbachev to terminate the Soviets' 1972 treaty with Iraq and the president should introduce a resolution to the United Nations' Security Council calling for withdrawal of all foreign military advisors from Iraq. How Gorbachev responds will show Moscow's true intentions in the region.

What Bush must guard against is being drawn into the trap of a joint U.S.-Soviet military command in the Persian Gulf or for putting U.S. forces in the region under the U.N. flag. We have sent our troops there to stop aggression and defend Western interests. Countries without interests in the region — or with opposing interests — would only complicate matters and make the confrontation worse.

Ring up your tax complaints

Did you know that there is not a government body to regulate our county commissioners or has jurisdiction to oversee their actions? Did you know that once elected our county commissioners cannot be impeached or barred from office during their term?

I would like the voting citizens of Midland County to realize that they have no say or no voting power in the rulings of the county commissioners. We can protest as much as we want, but it does not mean a thing to the county commissioners. They can continue stuffing their pockets with money, while raising taxes, but they cannot give decent raises to the people that deserve them, including the employees of the sheriff's department along with other county employees.

Since we cannot impeach the county commissioners, it is your civic duty to call your county commissioner and let him know your feeling toward their raise and the tax increase.

Your county commissioners and telephone numbers are as follows:

Precinct 1 — Durwood Wright — 683-7485
Precinct 2 — Guy McCrary — 687-5526
Precinct 3 — Louisa Valencia — 697-3911
Precinct 4 — Winfree Brown — 682-5002

These are our elected officials, not dictators that raise taxes without regard of the voting public. Remember this when our county commissioners, along with other public officials, come up for re-election.

Hyde, supporters brought UTPB program

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association salutes Dr. Thomas A. Hyde of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin for his superior leadership in intiating the "first ever" Master of Science degree program in Petroleum Engineering to be offered to West Texas qualifying students. While representatives from U.T. Austin and the UTPB greatly assisted in establishing the program of professional study, it was Tom Hyde who took the lead in establishing the need, gaining local business financial support and in arranging for the logistical and faculty services in support of the program.

The U.T. Austin/UTPB Petroleum Engineering Masters program is one of many steps leading to our area's progress and prosperity. It is made possible by the financial assistance of ARCO, Chevron, Conoco, Exxon, Fina, Halliburton, Marathon, Mobil, Oryx, Oxy, Phillips, Schlumberger, Texaco, Unocal, Union Texas, Southwest Airlines and the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

This outstanding group of community supporters and achievers is to also be commended for their contributions for making this exciting and needed program a reality.

Fraud threatens honest research

WASHINGTON — Medical research is one of America's sacred callings. We think of Jonas Salk laboring into the night on a polio vaccine or Alexander Fleming discovering the wonder drug penicillin. It all seems so noble.

Anderson

What's missing from this picture? Millions of dollars in research fraud by con artists in lab coats who take federal grants and fake their findings for money or for ego.

Honest research, not to mention your tax dollars, is endangered by it, and it happens more often than you might think. In fact, the government regularly retraces the paper trails of researchers on its payroll looking for hanky-panky on grants totaling millions of dollars.

Ego and greed can short circuit scientific inquiry, especially when so much research hinges on limited federal funding. Some scientists fake their results simply so they can look productive and stay on the government gravy train.

Only the celebrated cases get any press. The most recent example is Dr. John Ninnemann, whom the government has accused of falsifying reports in connection with $1.2 million in grants from the National Institutes of Health. The Justice Department recently joined a private suit against Ninnemann to recover the money.

Ninnemann is alleged to have faked the results of his study on how the human immune system is affected by burn injuries. Two universities where he did his work are named in the suit because they signed off on the research.

The details are under seal in a San Francisco federal court. The government, in hyping its effort to recoup the loss, revealed that the original suit was actually brought by a former assistant of Ninnemann's under a federal law that allows a 15 percent finder's fee for those who successfully file suits claiming the government has been defrauded.

For as little as the bureaucracy says about these cases, one would think the Ninnemann case was an isolated incident. It is not. There are others who all too frequently see the NIH as a patsy.

The NIH is the government's premier medical research agency. At any given time, its investigators are looking into 70 cases involving allegations of research fraud by scientists who are using NIH money. NIH spokesman Don Ralbovsky told our associate Dan Njegomir that the current caseload is about 75.

How much of your money is at risk in those cases? The NIH says it's hard to nail down a dollar figure because not all of the cases involve a flat-out rip-off of all of the grant money, and not all of the allegations pan out. Still, given that the average NIH grant is $85,000, a conservative estimate is that $6.3 million in federal research money on the average is under scrutiny at any time.

The scientific community is loath to acknowledge theft in its ranks, but legitimate scientists fear the implications for science. A publication by the Association of American Medical Colleges notes that even a handful of bogus research projects, "may undermine the scientific enterprise in ways that go far beyond the waste of public funds."

A series of seminars by scientists over the last decade has resulted in guidelines for investigating phony research. NIH has expanded its own Office of Scientific Integrity from one person to 12 in recent years.

Even for a dozen people, the work is daunting. NIH spends $7.6 billion a year and 80 percent of that goes to research grants that must be monitored like a merchant watches for common shoplifters.

THE UPPER HAND — George Bush believes that communism will soon collapse in Cuba. He has told intimates that now is the time to intensify, not ease the pressure on Fidel Castro. But Castro will not easily be pressured out of power by bullying. In an economic crunch, however, he may be amenable to adopting some democratic reforms as long as he can stay in the driver's seat. Castro is a committed Marxist, but he is also a survivor, and when the rest of the communist world is collapsing, he may be willing to negotiate.

Taking family vacation can be a real pain

WASHINGTON — Having just now, with the help of the healing arts, recovered enough use of my right arm to grip a pen, I wield that pen to write this warning (to be pondered all winter) against the folly of summer vacations.

Will

The phrase "family vacation" is, of course, an oxymoron. Children, with their unresting energy, overwhelm the adult pleasure from vacations. But for children, summer is supposed to be a souffle of delights, both diverting and instructive. To that ambitious end I spared no expense of time and treasure.

I took the three Will siblings — boys 18 and 16, and the Prodigy, 9 — first on an Alaskan cruise, then to California. There, disaster, having bided its time, struck, to the delight of the children.

The cruise, a Dutch ship magnificently crewed by Indonesians with exotic names like Bambang, suited father who, lost in a deep deck chair and a shallow novel, knew the children would not leave the ship or, while on it, escape the captain's dread sovereignty. The cruise was grand, but nothing lasts forever, alas, and a few days after docking I and the three were in Southern California, at the top of a water slide in one of those infernal amusement parks featuring water tortures that people inexplicably find fun.

Amusement parks refute the notion that ours in a species suited to self-government. What can be said in extenuation of people who pay to be whirled and flung about in ways that wrench joints and induce headaches and queasiness? Water parks are particularly Dantesque. There, you broil in long lines in the sun for the pleasure of plunging down a plastic chute into cold water.

When seating myself at the top of one such slide I tore something, or several somethings, in my upper arm. The next day that arm was useless, but the bicep had a pretty shade of indigo, with bright yellow trim. Soon I was in the fell clutches of modern medicine and fitted with a sling. Then I was subjected to the merciless merriment of the three ingrates to whom I improvidently helped give the gift of life.

Human beings differ in tastes. Some do and others do not like operas, popsicles, democracy, poetry. But there is one uniformity: All children adore seeing father brought low by injury. Not too low or for too long, but sufficiently to be semi-incapacitated and awkward.

This allows them to poke the injured portion of him, inquiring with feigned innocence, "Daddy, does that hurt?" And they miss no opportunity to explain, loudly, to friends and even strangers, the silliness — "It was on a water slide!" — that got daddy the injury that they clearly think serves him right.

The pleasure children derive from a father's physical incapacity is political. Power is linked to authority, which is inextricably bound up with competence and dignity. An injury, particularly one that father suffers in ridiculous circumstances and that makes him fumble with doorknobs, subtracts from parent majesty and thus advances the emancipation of children.

Which is bad enough. Worse is the encounter with medicine and its intimation of mortality.

"Let me show you," says an orthopedist whose patients include Washington Redskins. He leads this victim of a parenting injury to a corner of his office and there patiently explains the shoulder mechanism by manipulating an alarming lifelike (deathlike, actually) skeleton. Just what I least want: another reminder of the skull beneath the skin of life.

There is nothing like a little bodily breakdown to make a middle-aged man feel the cold grip of withering age. Another doctor, preparing to pump air and dye into the shoulder joint (for a CAT scan), says something Torquemada probably said to victims of the Inquisition of the rack: "You are going to feel a certain tightness in the shoulder." This doctor says he is just a year younger than I, and last year he suffered a herniated disc. "We are just at the age," he says cheerfully, "when we begin to fall apart."

It helps having the right kind of friends

An Arizona businessman received almost $2 billion in government subsidies to invest in a savings and loan institution through the lobbying efforts of a former aide to President Bush. The same businessman was also able to buy a bank in Oklahoma, despite his failure to meet federal standards. He did this with a personal investment of $1,000.

Buchwald

I am sure that the question you're asking is, how does anyone manage to get a deal like that? Strangely enough, a lot of it involves friendship, or one man's love for another. I'm not talking about homosexual love, but rather the love someone has for a person who attended the same school, or who served in the same outfit in the armed services, or who belongs to the same country club.

It is this bonding that's responsible for billions of dollars flying out the window and ending up on the taxpayers' floor.

Let me give you an illustration: Winterbottom has always had his heart set on buying an S&L. So he calls up Duquesne, his old roommate from Dancy Tech, who happens to be a consultant in Washington with reputed connections to the Lincoln Room in the White House.

Winterbottom says, "I'd like to strike it rich by purchasing an S&L, and I thought that for old times' sake, you could help me out. I am willing to put up $14.50 of my own money so that the government regulators know I'm serious."

Duquesne replies, "I'd be happy to help you acquire an S&L. You are a good friend of mine, and the people I'll be talking to are also good friends of mine. That's the beauty of the consulting business — you only deal with friends. Of course, if you get the bank, I hope that I can borrow a few bucks when I need them."

Winterbottom asks, "How much?"

"Eight or $9 million. I'll put up my tennis racquet as collateral."

Winterbottom responds, "I don't see any problem with that kind of loan. How are you going to arrange for me to get my bank?"

"First, I'll go to the FDIC and talk to Scooter. You remember Scooter. He played halfback at Dancy the year we went there. I'll tell him that one of our boys needs an S&L in the worst way, and if he doesn't come up with a bank, he has made a mockery of our friendship."

"Will that be persuasive enough?" Winterbottom wants to know.

Duquesne assures him it will. "Scooter owes me one. I treated him and his wife to a trip to Paris on the Concorde. What's more, I'm taking him duck-shooting for Thanksgiving. When it comes to S&Ls, Scooter is like my brother."

"When do you think Scooter will give me an S&L?"

"He can't give you one. He can only recommend that you get one from Hogarth, who also happens to be a good friend of mine. Hogarth and I are in the same PTA, so he trusts me. He can't actually give you one, either, but he can make sure that no one sits on your application."

Winterbottom declares, "I didn't know that acquiring one lousy S&L involved so much work."

Duquesne says, "It's not a lot of work, but you have to touch a lot of bases. That's what consultants do. The one thing Washington hates is dealing with people it doesn't know."

Bush sees 'signs of progress' in drug war

By Dan Freedman
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Marking the first anniversary of the war on drugs, President Bush on Wednesday said "there are clear signs of progress" against narcotics trafficking and consumption, even though "the crisis is far from over."

Bush told reporters the administration's $10.6 billion drug war is helping to turn American public opinion against drugs. The president added that stiff law enforcement has made cocaine "harder to find, more expensive, less pure than it was a year ago."

Referring to the the amount of attention the administration is giving the Iraq crisis, Bush said: "I know that other subjects are preoccupying all of us these days. But this one remains No. 1. It will continue to remain No. 1 when the international situation calms down."

Bush's upbeat assessment of the war on drugs wasn't shared by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., author of the law that requires the White House to issue a yearly report on strategy to fight illegal drug use.

After the president and White House drug policy director William J. Bennett gave their progress report, Biden told a Senate hearing that "changes in the administration's drug strategy indisputably are needed."

Biden said the administration's program has underestimated the number of hardcore crack cocaine users in inner cities, failed to significantly increase treatment for drug addicts, and neglected pregnant drug-users who have given birth to about 300,000 drug-addicted infants since the strategy was issued.

Bennett, who appeared with Bush at a White House briefing, said the drug problem nationwide "is no longer getting worse ... In some very significant aspects it is now getting better — not victory but success."

The survey singled out Seattle and seven other cities as making significant progress in combating drugs. Cocaine prices in Seattle went up from $17,000 a kilogram last year to a high of $32,000 earlier this summer.

In his separate evaluation of the first year of Bush's war on drugs, Biden said administration claims of progress were distorting the grim legacy of drugs in American cities.

Biden praised the efforts of Bush as well as the "immeasurable contribution" of Bennett.

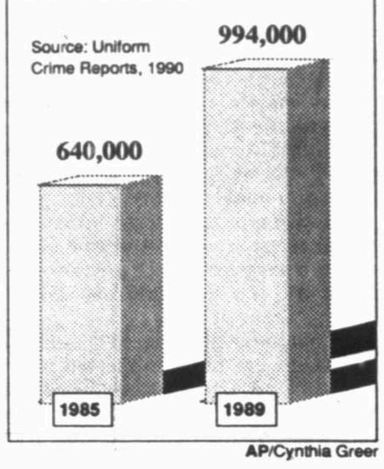

Biden released a survey by members of the Senate Judiciary Committee staff, which concluded there are 2.4 million hardcore cocaine addicts in the United States -- roughly three times the number recognized by the administration.

The survey, based on data drawn from the Justice Department and state drug treatment directors, showed New York leading the nation with 436,000 addicts. California was second with 337,000 and Texas third with 173,000. Michigan ranked ninth with 67,000.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed an application with the Texas Public Utility Commission to introduce new optional services – Call Control Options. The initial service areas will be Laredo, McAllen and Austin. Expansion into other service areas will be based on availability. Customers in other areas will be notified when these services become available.

Call Control Options include six new services – Call Blocker, Call Cue, Call Return, Priority Call, Call Trace and Selective Call Forwarding. The features will be available to single-line residence and business customers.

Call Blocker – enables the customer to block incoming calls from a maximum of three specified telephone numbers and/or to block the last incoming call.

Call Cue – enables the customer to automatically redial the last outgoing telephone number dialed. If the recalled number is busy, equipment will monitor the line for a maximum of 30 minutes and will let the customer know when the call can go through.

Call Return – enables the customer to automatically redial the telephone number of the most recent incoming call. If the number is busy, Call Return will continue to dial the number for up to 30 minutes, or until it completes the call.

Priority Call – provides the customer with a distinctive alerting signal, ring or Call Waiting Tone (if the customer has subscribed to Call Waiting), when the customer is called from a maximum of three preselected telephone numbers.*

Call Trace – enables the customer to initiate a trace of the last incoming call received. The number, date and time will be recorded by Southwestern Bell Telephone so that the call's origin can be identified.

Selective Call Forwarding – enables the customer to forward incoming calls from specified telephone numbers (maximum of three) to another telephone number.

Proposed Rates (monthly)

	Residence		Business
	Individual	Packaged	Individual	Packaged
Call Blocker	$3.00	3.00	$3.00	2.00
Call Return	3.00	3.00	4.00	3.50
Priority Call	2.50	1.00	3.00	2.00
Call Cue	2.00	2.00	4.00	3.50
Selective Call Forwarding	2.00	1.00	2.65	1.00
Call Trace	1.00	1.00	1.00	1.00

Installation charges for residence customers will be $2.70 per feature,with a maximum installation charge of $5.40 per request per line. Installation charges for business customers will be $5.40 per feature, with a maximum installation charge of $10.75 per request per line.

The proposed date for Call Control Options to be offered is October 7, 1990. These services, however, will not immediately be available to all customers in all areas of the state. Customers in other areas will be notified when these services become available.

Call Control Options are projected to generate first-year annual revenues of $1,900,000.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the commission by September 27, 1990. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

Gainesville crime scene tested forensic pro

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A forensic specialist said Wednesday the three apartments where the bodies of five college students were found "the most difficult" crime scenes he has ever seen.

Dr. Michael West made the comment after hunting for fingerprints at the apartments with high-tech equipment. West, a dentist and deputy medical examiner from Hattiesburg, Miss., said the apartments gave clues of a careful, cautious killer.

"I've never been associated with a crime scene that had so many violent attacks and so litle evidence left behind," West said. "This individual that perpetrated these crimes is not your average criminal. He's very methodical, and very neat. He doesn't leave any traces of his presence in the crime scenes."

Students in Gainesville remembered their dead classmates at a memorial service in a 10,000-seat sports center. Also Wednesday, the University of Florida announced scholarships in memory of the students.

Three of the victims were students at the University of Florida and two were from Santa Fe Community College. One of the two later enrolled in the university but hadn't attended classes. Their bodies were found late last month.

"We are struggling with the conflicting emotions of grief, anger and fear," college President John Lombardi told about 600 people attending the memorial service.

Dr. Larry W. Tyree, president of Santa Fe Community College, said: "With each horrible tragedy ... the sense of helplessness has grown in each of us."

As the grisly job of examining evidence and looking for a killer continued, investigators divulged more brief glimpses into what they have learned about the crimes.

West used an experimental reflective ultraviolet imaging system that intensifies light 70,000 times to examine two of the three crime scenes Tuesday for fingerprints; he returned Wednesday to look at the final apartment.

The Miami Herald on Wednesday quoted sources as saying the killer cruelly posed his victims for maximum shock value.

The killer placed Santa Fe Community College student Christa Hoyt's severed head in the direct line of vision of anyone entering the apartment and positioned a mirror in one of the apartments to show a victim's body to any passerby who happened to look in the window, the Herald reported.

The killer also reportedly poured bleach onto the genitals of the four female victims in an apparent attempt to confuse investigators about whether the women were sexually assaulted, the newspaper said. Police would not confirm the report.

Fluids removed from the murder scenes are being subjected to sophisticated DNA testing. Those tests are to be completed in a few days.

The bodies of Sonja Larson, 18, and Christina Powell, 17, were found Aug. 26. The body of Miss Hoyt, 19, was found the next day; the bodies of Tracy Paules, 23, and Manuel Taboada, 23, were found Aug. 28.

"This is the most difficult crime scene I've ever seen," said West, who has been a medical examiner for 13 years.

He said he's been able to turn up some fingerprints "but the odds are they belonged to the residents" of the apartments. He said he hasn't been able to find any prints "on the areas we believe the perpetrator to have touched, moved or manipulated."

Despite the filing of unrelated new charges in Indian River County against Edward Lewis Humphrey for armed burglary and attempted sexual battery, police said it has not affected his position on their pool of eight suspects.

"An arrest is not imminent" in the slayings, said Lt. Spencer Mann, a spokesman with the Alachua County Sheriff's Office. "We still have no timetable on arrests or legal options."

Only Humphrey and Stephen Michael Bates, a 30-year-old Lakeland short-order cook, have been publicly mentioned as being on the list.

Parole facility plan replaces halfway idea

■ Leisure Colony Motel would become a for-profit correctional facility for parolees who have dodged meetings with their parole officers under the proposal.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A proposal to build a halfway house in Midland apparently has flown out the window, but a plan to detain wayward parolees has marched in the door to take its place.

A former associate of The Otus Group, which wanted to open a halfway house for non-violent criminals, has decided to pursue his own plans to submit a bid to the state for an intermediate sanction facility contract.

Under the proposal, the Leisure Colony Motel would become a for-profit correctional facility for parolees who have dodged meetings with their parole officers, James Prince, the motel's owner, said Wednesday.

The Otus Group, a coalition of local businessmen, had been negotiating with Prince to open a halfway house at his 1000 W. Interstate Highway 20 motel. However, Prince said talks with group representatives fell through after they became discouraged by red tape from city officials.

"They felt that with the time delays and uncertainty they could no longer continue," Prince said. "We couldn't find any evidence of their financial security."

Neither Gene Easly, The Otus Group's chairman and chief executive officer, nor anyone else with the group could be reached for comment Wednesday. Their answering service said no one with the group had checked in since Aug. 8. Few of the group's members have allowed themselves to be identified.

Prince, whose hotel may be closed within a month because of a lack of business, said he has the financial security to back his proposal for an intermediate sanction facility.

The facility, through a state contract, would house more than 300 male and female convicts from various criminal backgrounds, Prince said.

"All of these would be individuals who violated their paroles, but they didn't violate it by committing a felony," he said.

Unlike the proposed halfway house, the inmates would not be allowed to come and go as they please, he said. "It would be a secure situation," he said.

The facility would create more than 30 jobs and pump up to $3 million a year into the local economy, Prince estimated. Experienced security guards and counselors would be needed to oversee prisoners, he said.

The state will accept proposals for the facility until Oct. 22. But before Prince can submit his bid,

Secretary of Education Lauro F. Cavazos addresses the student body of Crockett Junior High School before presenting it with the National Drug Free School Award Wednesday. The school was one of three Texas schools receiving the award this year.

Education Secretary Cavazos presents award to Crockett Junior High School

■ The former president of Texas Tech University said this is an example of what can happen when the community works together.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Students and teachers of Crockett Junior High School let out a whoop of approval Wednesday afternoon when they received the National Drug Free School Award from Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos.

Although Crockett students and staff were notified that they were one of three Texas schools nationwide to receive the award in June, the actual presentation by Cavazos was worth the wait, according to several students. And it certainly wasn't presented without fanfare.

The mood was jubilant as music from the school band filled the school gymnasium and majorettes performed for the assembly, which included Cavazos, Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner and the Ector County Independent School District board members.

Hundreds of students and school staff wore red and white T-shirts emblazoned with "Crocket Colts Care," the slogan of the school's drug-free program.

Cavazos addressed the assembly, calling for a national goal of drug free schools by the year 2000.

"Think of what you can achieve," he told the students. "Think of what this would be like."

In a news conference following the presentation, Cavazos said Crockett Junior High School is a model for other West Texas Schools. "This is an example of what can happen when the community — teachers, students and parents — work together," Cavazos said.

The former president of Texas Tech University said he is concentrating on six goals for America. "The first five are academic goals," he said. "The academic goals concern the problem of America's students being last in math and science in the world. The sixth goal, however, is that all America's schools be drug free, and that has been achieved here (at Crockett)."

Cavazos said that keeping schools drug free decreases violence and disruptions in the learning environment.

The education professional said he would like to see drug education integrated into other classroom curriculum in grades kindergarten through 12th. "For example, when teaching science," he said, "why not explore the impact of drugs on the nervous system?"

As for Texas' school reforms, Cavazos said, "Texas has a long way to go, yet." He decried increasing spending to solve problems. "The United States spends more money per student than any other country in the world," he said. "The problem is in the school system. It's time to look at site-based management, school choice and other areas where research indicates success.

"We keep spending more and more money, yet the dropout rate is increasing and S.A.T. scores remain flat," he said. "It's time to change the system."

Cavazos also said he has "never been a supporter of tracking — pulling students out of the classroom for instruction."

"Curriculum can be individualized. It's time we treated students as individuals and prepared each child to be successful," he said. "But, we have to start with getting drugs out of the schools."

Cavazos said that a drug education curriculum has been mailed to every school in the nation.

Criteria for winning the National Drug Free School Award included:

- Showing evidence of parental and community support for anti-drug programs.
- Calling police for every drug or alcohol infraction discovered on campus.
- Having a high level of student involvement in anti-drug programs.
- Having a clear "non-use message."
- Training all school staff, including janitors and bus drivers, in drug abuse recognition techniques.

Federal employees may face required furloughs

By David Morris
Staff Writer

As the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget axe prepares to fall, local federal outposts — including the National Weather Service and the U.S. Attorney's Office — are bracing for the possibility of furloughs.

Federal employees nationwide received warnings by mail last week that beginning in October they could be temporarily laid off in a government cost-cutting move.

NWS officials expressed concern that cutbacks could reduce the agency's ability to issue timely storm warnings and provide weather reports for pilots and airports.

Walter Anderson, NWS West Texas area manager, said the Department of Commerce warned weather service employees that they could be furloughed for up to 22 days beginning Oct. 1.

"We're looking at the possibility of having to close some offices part-time," said Anderson, who is based in Lubbock. "I think the main question right now is how much they would be closed."

Anderson said furloughs could result in a temporary 50 percent reduction in West Texas area NWS personnel, who number 65. West Texas area NWS offices are located in Midland, Lubbock, Amarillo, San Angelo and El Paso.

"If staffing were reduced by half, I see no way in the world that we could operate any office 24 hours a day with the possible exception of the forecast office here," Anderson said.

He said the area office in Lubbock would be hard-pressed, especially with a reduced staff, to issue warnings on behalf of NWS posts elsewhere.

Jump in oil prices hasn't changed Goldsmith

Todd

GOLDSMITH — Windmills turn into the wind. Dust travels like wildfire down dirt roads and across prairies. Pump jacks, like jackknifing robots, bow and rise to the flow of oil. And everything else is about the same.

"Pretty slow. Not much stirring," says Jane Bradley, as she sits, almost languid from the lack of bustle, at the grocery store she minds off Scharbaurer Street.

Trucks pulling oil-field pipe and rigs, and pickups carrying crews pass on by. Some stop. Doors open and close, and drivers and crews saunter in.

That's most of her business.

Mostly, they come in to buy beer, cigarettes, soda water and some snacks.

Goldsmith, an oil boom town dating back to the mid-1930s, once had 40 businesses that thrived on traffic from the old petroleum-company camps from here to Andrews. The town once had three motion-picture shows. One, the old Ector, moved into town, Odessa. The second, the Goldsmith, burned. And the third, the Gay, which came later, fizzled out in the mid-1950s when television sets kept people at home and out of the movie houses.

It's not that there's nothing to do here. There's much about: a swimming pool, tennis court, fire station, park, community center, churches, school, cafe, and production plants, such as Amoco, Phillips, Chevron, and Shell down the road. And there's the Buckhorn, reputed to be the oldest saloon in Ector County.

And, of course, there's TV.

But Mrs. Bradley seems somewhat bored in a town that boasts 409 people, but, she says, "It's not (that much). I'm pretty sure."

Living here is not her favorite pastime.

"My husband loves it," she says. "Anybody who wants to retire here would have to love it. He has his horses and buggies."

Her husband, Roy Bradley, is a retired pipe-liner. He wouldn't trade Goldsmith for "anything."

A witty sort, Bradley occupies himself by doing "just as little as I can." Beside piddling with his horses, he does some gardening and yard work.

"We play tennis. We play football. We run races. We have a heckuva time," Bradley says with hardly a hint of telling fibs. "I'm about the fastest guy in Goldsmith. They (the others) are pretty slow."

Meanwhile, the town "is booming," he dreams. "On a roll. Lots of times, my wife gets out there and directs traffic."

She hardly pays him any mind.

Paul Morris, who is a petroleum field technician out of Midland, drops by the grocery store for a soft drink while he's getting a flat fixed on his pickup truck.

"It's pretty good here (in Goldsmith)," he figures. "Most people here are of retirement age. Some people are stuck here. I just put in my eight hours and go back to Midland. There's a lot better things to do in Midland than there are out here."

Once, just once, he brought his wife, Debbie, a physical therapist in Midland, out to the field at Goldsmith on a 30-minute job that turned into three hours.

It was night, and she stayed in the truck and slept.

"She never came back," Morris, 35, recalls.

Somebody else, an engineer out of Houston, came to Goldsmith for pay but moved on to Chicago.

"He said he had never seen a rattlesnake before," Morris says of the engineer. "He said the biggest thing he had ever chased before was a cockroach."

Engineers are pretty smart, Morris says, but sometimes, they are short on common sense.

"Engineers are a dime a dozen," Morris reckons. "Everybody wants to be an engineer. They are the first to go (in a bust)."

Bernice Cranfill, who now is well into her 70s, moved to a booming Goldsmith in 1938. She's widowed now.

Despite the recent boost in West Texas crude-oil prices, Goldsmith is still "about the same.

"It's been busy out in the field," she says matter-of-factly. "Those wells have to be attended to."

Up the street, Sharon Sickles, a 48-year-old former route saleswoman originally out of "Yankee Land," bought the old Buckhorn Bar a couple of years ago. She had holed up in Decatur and Indianapolis and traveled "coast to coast" before she settled on West Texas and its people but mostly the people who, she suggests, are far more appealing than the West Texas deserts and plains.

Antlers, old license plates, and Western art dress up the walls. The oiled hardwood floor hardly creaks.

"It's kind of an old landmark," says the friendly barkeep with a full head of coal-black hair. "As far as I can tell, it's the oldest bar in Ector County."

Her place attracts locals, drifters and bikers.

"I get a lot of bikers that come in here," she says. "I've got to put in a good word for the bikers. They may look raggedy, but, by golly, they are good people, good customers, and good, hard-working people."

"If you own a Harley-Davidson, you've got to work to keep one of those things up."

Mid-afternoon to late night, "We get our old regulars that come through about everyday," Ms. Sickles says. "We get drifters. Once in awhile, one of the locals gets a little rowdy, so we send him home to his wife."

Ms. Sickles finds her tavern homey and full of mundane wonder.

"Sometimes, the old bar reminds me of 'Old Dogs and Watermelon Wine,'" she says. "I wish this old floor could talk. It could tell some stories: Whose bones are buried down below?"

DEATHS

John Wilbur DeFore

Services for John Wilbur DeFore have been set for 3 p.m. Friday at St. Luke's United Methodist Church. The Rev. Jarrell Sharp will officiate. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday in a local hospital.

He was born Aug. 21, 1911 in Atlanta, Kan., where he was raised. He also attended high school in Atlanta. Following graduation he attended Southwestern College in Winfield, Kan. He was a farmer before working for Cities Service, and later, Texaco. DeFore worked for Texaco in several cities in Kansas, Illinois and Texas. He retired in February of 1976 as assistant division manager of the Midland division gas department, after more than 36 years with Texaco.

DeFore married the former Evelyn White in January of 1931. She died in 1943. He later married the former Rosalie Gross March 4, 1944 in Corning, Ark. The couple moved to Midland in 1959 and were members of St. Luke's Methodist Church for over 30 years. DeFore's son, Max DeFore, preceded him in death.

Survivors include his wife, Rosalie DeFore of Midland; his son, John DeFore of Midland; his daughter, Sandra DeFore Wegner of Midland; five grandchildren, one great grandchild, two nieces and a nephew.

The family requests memorials be directed to St. Luke's United Methodi Church or the Midland County Public Library.

Ella Pearl Nixon

Services for Ella Pearl Nixon of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. today in Ellis Chapel. The Rev. Clydell Chapman will officiate. Interment will follow at Resthaven North under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nixon died Tuesday in a local hospital.

She was born Aug. 10, 1917 in Reagan Wells. She attended school there and in Utopia. She married J.H. "Nick" Nixon June 25, 1948. She was employed by Midland Independent School District, Midland Country Club, Terrace Gardens Nursing Home and Trinity Towers.

Survivors include her sons, Ray Bailey, Robert Nixon and Joe Nixon, all of Midland; her brother, Clarence Luxton of Odessa; her sisters, Irene Martin of Midland, Nola Rogers of Odessa and Maggie Chapman of Willis; two grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be nephews Kelly Luxton, David Askew, James Stacy, Robbie Luxton, J.A. Luxton and Martin Mayberry.

Willie Alvin Long

Willie Alvin Long, 65, formerly of Midland, died last Thursday in Modesto, Calif., following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. M.R. DeVaughn, pastor of St. Paul's A.M.E. Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Thomas Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He was born April 6, 1925 in Waco. He lived in Dallas and Midland before moving to Modesto 25 years ago.

Survivors include his wife, Gertie Long of Modesto; one daughter, Sheila Weems of Oakland, Calif.; one son, Willie A. Long, Jr., of Midland; three sisters, Kirby McCalister and Mary Long, both of Midland, and Ethel Williams of Sudan; and one brother, Unell Long of Midland; 13 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Elbert L. McCalister, Jr., Ervin McCalister, Willie Long, III, Lenny Long, Dennis Sterling and Dwight Anders.

Jaime Ochoa

A memorial service for Jaime Ochoa, 28, is set for 7:30 p.m. today at Cottonflat Baptist Church with the Rev. Jim Fields officaiting.

Funeral services were Wednesday in El Paso.

An employee of Steward Cable Repair, Ochoa died Saturday in an accident at Oak Creek Reservoir in Coke County.

Survivors include his wife, Karla Ochoa of Midland; two sons, Justin K. Ochoa and Dustin J. Ochoa, of Midland; his parents, Ignacio and Sabina Ochoa of El Paso; two brothers, Arturo Ochoa and Juan Ochoa, of El Paso; and two sisters, Patricia Ochoa and Alicia Ochoa, of El Paso.

Ethel K. May

Funeral services for Ethel K. May of Tyler are scheduled for 11 a.m. today at the First United Methodist Church Glass Chapel with Dr. Charles Lutrick officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

AXE: Budget deficit may require furloughs

(From 1B)

"If we don't have somebody (locally) operating the radar, it's pretty difficult to imagine how a warning is going to get issued."

Rick Davis, meteorological technician at Midland's NWS office, said furloughs would necessitate cutting operating hours in half.

"If we did operate from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., it would basically mean that every man, woman and child in Midland after 6 p.m. would be pretty much on their own in terms of keeping track of severe weather," he said. "If severe weather began brewing at 8 or 9 o'clock that evening there wouldn't be anyone here to issue a warning or to detect it."

Davis said NWS closures could force operating-hour reductions at Midland International Airport. However, airport spokesperson Marcy Blauvelt said it is too early to tell what effects NWS cutbacks would have.

"I think we could probably get our aviation services covered," she said. "I think we'll be able to operate, but we may be receiving our (weather) information from different sources."

Ms. Blauvelt said Federal Aviation Administration employees at the airport also have received furlough notices.

"Any kind of a severe cutback we don't want to see at all, be it in the FAA or the National Weather Service," she said.

Other Midland federal offices, meanwhile, are preparing for the possibility of furloughs.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said he and the other four members of his office plan to continue working even if the furlough order comes down. Budget cuts should not be allowed to curtail the Justice Department's war on drugs, he said.

"It's not going to have an effect up here whether it comes to pass or not," Beery said. "I'm not going to close up shop just because we're ordered out on furlough. There wouldn't be anybody to authorize the arrests."

Thomas O. Kirspel, senior agent with the Midland FBI office, said FBI employees nationwide have been warned about possible furloughs.

"We have been told that that does not mean that it is going to happen," he said.

A spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget in Washington, D.C., said furloughs may be necessary to bring the federal budget deficit within targeted limits.

The 1985 Gramm-Rudman law calls for a maximum $64 billion deficit this year. However, the projected deficit is $149.4 billion.

"Because of that, the law requires that $85.4 billion in cuts come in to bring the deficit down to the $64 billion level," said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "The cuts would begin starting on Oct. 1."

Those cuts could necessitate temporary furloughs for federal employees, he said, although agencies are being encouraged to use furloughs only as a last resort. Military personnel are exempt from possible furloughs, he said.

Meanwhile, Congress and the president are working to hammer out a budget agreement which might neutralize Gramm-Rudman.

"If they do reach an agreement, it may be that they will be able to avoid these cuts," he said. "So it's still up in the air."

In its five-year history, he said, Gramm-Rudman has not triggered furloughs of government employees.

"It (Gramm-Rudman) kicked in last year, but cuts were smaller last year and didn't require furloughs," he said. "It happens that the deficit we're predicting for this year is a very large deficit. And also, the targets are getting smaller."

Midland YMCA planning its fall parent-child orientations

Staff Report

The Midland YMCA will be holding organizational meetings for its fall parent-child programs this month.

These are designed to let parents spend quality time with their children in activities that interest both the children and parents. Programs include Indian Guides, Indian Princess and Y-Trail Blazers.

Indian Guides is for fathers and their kindergarten through 4th-grade sons. Indian Princess is for fathers and their kindergarten through 4th-grade daughters. Trail Blazers is an outgrowth of Guides and Princess for both girls and boys, from kindergarten through 4th grades.

Activities for both groups include out-of-town campouts, monthly tribal meetings, arts and crafts projects and in-town activities, such as bowling, miniature golf, carnivals and sporting events. Trail Blazers participate in more adventurous activities, such as community exploration, camping, rafting and outdoor recreation.

Tribes are formed on the basis of neighborhood and age. The two organizational meetings will be held 7 p.m. Monday at the Alamo YMCA, 901 N. Midland Dr., and 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring St.

For more information, call the Metropolitan YMCA at 699-0182.

Barbershop contest Saturday

RUIDOSO, N.M. — The public is invited to hear barbershop quartets from five cities during Division One Competition for the Southwest District of Barbershop Quartets Saturday.

The event is co-sponsored by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce and the El Paso Border Chorders Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America.

Five choruses and nine quartets from San Angelo, Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, Abilene and El Paso will compete for points to qualify for future district and and international competitions.

Registration will be from 8 a.m. until noon Saturday at Ruidoso Middle School, 200 Horton Circle. Quartet semi-finals begin at 1:30 p.m. with the chorus competition following at 3:30 p.m. Cost for both events is $3.50 per person.

The evening performance, which will consist of quartet finals, will begin at 8 p.m. and be followed by Mountain Glow Showtime. Cost for this event is $7 per person.

The Afterglow party — featuring entertainment, a cash bar and a buffet — will follow at the Ruidoso Inn at 10:30 p.m. Cost is $6 per person.

Further information is available from the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, (505) 257-7395.

PAROLE: New proposal made for Leisure Colony

(From 1B)

he must first secure the Midland City Council's approval of a zoning change for the site. The city has no zoning code which covers privately owned group care facilities such as a halfway house.

"It has to be supported by the community leaders," Prince said. "I need the city council's support."

Councilman J.D. Faircloth, however, said that support is unlikely.

"I think less of this proposal than I did the first one," Faircloth said. "I think conceptually that the halfway house as planned might have worked. There's totally no support for the latest plan."

Citing a 400-signature petition and a complaint by Permian Basin Petroleum Museum representatives, councilmen said last week that they would not approve The Otus Group's halfway house proposal. The museum is about a quarter mile west of the Leisure Colony Motel.

Museum officials complained that the halfway house would hurt attendance, while neighbors living near Leisure Colony submitted a petition opposing the plan.

Councilman John Castro said Prince's proposal may receive an even more caustic reception than The Otus Group's plan. "The people out there don't want any kind of facility out there at all," Castro said.

Councilman Tom Johnston said Prince's proposal is more objectionable than its predecessor because all types of criminals may be housed at the facility.

"They're for sure a two-time loser and escape from this place would be foremost in their minds," Johnston said. "If I'm reading this right, there could be some violent-type criminals in there."

GSU rate request studied

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utilities Commission's hearings division will review a proposed $56.5 million temporary rate increase for Gulf States Utilities.

The three-member PUC agreed Wednesday to turn the matter over to its hearings division and instructed its staff to finish the review promptly.

Officials of the Beaumont-based utility company requested the temporary rate increase in late July to cover increased costs.

What Cityline provides

With Cityline, the Midland Reporter-Telegram's free telephone-based news, information and entertainment service, callers have access to dozens of categories of prerecorded data — everything from horoscopes and soap opera updates to local news and sports headlines and stock quotes — 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Once on line with the free system at 560-2400, touch-tone telephone callers will be presented step-by-step menus of informational choices. On-line assistance is available by pressing 6955.

Slowly and firmly pressing telephone buttons will help ensure operation of the system.

Other four-digit codes access other specific categories. For example, in order to find out what's for lunch at MISD, call 560-2400. After Cityline's welcoming message, enter 1831 to hear about the lunch menus at area schools.

How Cityline works

After touch-tone telephone callers have dialed 560-2400, selected an information category and pressed the corresponding four-digit code — or made menu selections — the telephone keypad takes on a new function once "inside" the data category:

- To jump forward in a category, press J (the 5 key);
- To repeat the category press R (the 7 key);
- To go to a new category choice press G (the 4 key);
- To back up to the previous information item, press B (the 2 key)

Year's last gun, knife show this weekend

Staff Report

The Texas Gun & Knife Association will be holding its last show of 1990 in Midland Saturday and Sunday at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, 4300 W. Highway 80.

Collectors and exhibitors throughout the area will come to buy, sell and trade some of the most unique guns, knives and accessories ever made.

In addition, the show offers a great selection of wildlife art, historical artifacts, Indian and military memorabilia, "Texana" items and a displays of reasonably priced gold and silver jewelry.

Don Hill, association president, is a staff writer for Knife World magazine. Hill also designs knives in his spare time. He is well-known by exhibitors and visits with the public at each show.

This is the last of three shows scheduled for Midland this year. Hours for the show are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

The public is invited to bring their own guns and buy, sell, trade or just browse.

Nation's counties vary greatly

WASHINGON (AP) — The smallest county in the United States is New York, N.Y., also known as Manhattan Island, at 22 square miles.

The largest county is San Bernadino, Calif., which covers 20,102 square miles.

The nation's highest city is Climax, Colo., at 11,560 feet. The lowest is Calipatria, Calif., which is 184 feet below sea level.

Man jailed

Staff Report

ODESSA — An Odessa man remained in jail Wednesday in connection with an attempted murder, police said.

Bond for Bobby H. Segura, 22, was set at $20,000 by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

Segura's arrest was in connection with the stabbing of James K. Clampit, 30, of Odessa about 7:15 p.m. Tuesday. Clampit, who was found in the 2500 block of N. Dixie, was stabbed once in the chest, police said.

A knife believed used in the crime was recovered near 31st Street and Eisenhower, where Segura was apprehended, officers said.

Police believe the incident may have stemmed from an argument earlier in the day.

Clampit was transported to Medical Center Hospital and remained in the intensive care unit Wednesday.

Sentencing

Staff Report

ODESSA — A karate instructor who was acquitted in Midland of sexually assaulting a child pleaded guilty here last week to a similar crime, court officials said.

Juan Antonio Lopez pleaded guilty Aug. 29 in 358th District Court to sexual assault of a child, Ector County Assistant District Attorney Dolores Abalos said.

District Judge Bill McCoy sentenced Lopez to 10 years probation and fined him $350.

Lopez pleaded guilty as part of an agreement in which charges were reduced from aggravated sexual assault to sexual assault of a child, Ms. Abalos said.

Sexual assault is a second-degree felony with a maximum punishment of 20 years in prison. Aggravated sexual assault is a first-degree felony with a maximum punishment of life in prison.

The assault reportedly occurred Dec. 20, 1983, at an Odessa apartment complex. The victim, one of Lopez' karate students, was an 11-year-old girl.

Lopez, 35, was acquitted in Midland in January on two counts of sexual assault in a case involving the same victim. A mistrial was declared after jurors could not reach a decision on a third count against Lopez.

Home fire

Staff Report

Midland firefighters responded to a home fire that caused heavy damage to a bedroom about 12:56 p.m. Wednesday.

The fire occurred at 207 W. Cowden Ave. after an iron that was left on while laying on a bed apparently caused the blaze, officials said.

Although no one was injured, two cats apparently died of smoke inhalation as a result, officials said.

Unpaid garment workers disrupt IRS auction

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Shouts of protest by unpaid garment workers Wednesday forced a tax collector to temporarily halt a public auction and throw out demonstrators on a threat of arrest.

Six police officers and four U.S. Border Patrol agents who make up a downtown foot patrol were called in to make sure the protesters did not try to re-enter the Internal Revenue Service auction. About a dozen bidders attended.

Before they were thrown out, about 20 demonstrators began pleading with the bidders and shouting protests at the IRS auctioneer when he offered sewing machines for sale. The protesters were primarily women who have worked in El Paso's garment industry. According to the women, unscrupulous garment business owners and contractors hire workers, don't pay them, then shut down and reopen later under a new name.

Several garment business owners have been subpoenaed by a grand jury investigating the women's claims.

"Please don't buy the machines," yelled Guillermo Glenn, a member of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

"What kind of backbone do you have to come in and take the money from the workers?" Glenn asked the bidders.

The property auctioned belonged to Diana Fashions, an El Paso garment maker that has been the site of protest by La Mujer Obrera, The Working Woman, in the past. On June 27, workers chained themselves to machines and six were arrested.

The now-defunct company, formerly owned by Carlos Loeza, recently emerged from five years of Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Diana Fashions owes more than $200,000 from over two years of unpaid payroll taxes to the IRS, said William P. Sinclair, the revenue officer who auctioned the equipment. And it also owes 17 workers $13,759.

"I had to write a note to a teacher telling her I did not have enough money to buy school supplies for my son," said Magdalena Olveras, who said she is owed more than $1,500.

On Aug. 24, a judge ordered the sheriff's office to seize Diana Fashion's property, valued at $70,000, and sell it to pay workers. But the IRS had seized the property about a month ago, said William Sinclair, a tax collector.

Cindy Arnold, development specialist for La Mujer Obrera, said the protesters fear all money from the sale will go to paying the company's tax bill and none will be used to pay salaries.

"You know IRS liens always get priority," she said.

The protesters had remained quiet during the early part of the auction, showing their placards to television and newspaper cameras. But as Sinclair started offering the industrial sewing machines, some for as little as $75, the shouting began.

Sinclair tried to reason with the group telling the protesters they could file a claim with the Labor Department. But workers said they wanted the sale delayed until they are guaranteed they would receive money from the sale.

When the protesters would not quiet down, the room was cleared. Those who had registered for the auction and media were allowed to return. But the protesters were told if they tried to enter they would be charged with obstructing a federal officer in his duty.

A few of the bidders left. Those who returned were jeered by demonstrators who called them thieves and bandits and told them they were betraying their race.

Ann Newman, right, who will be working for the Peace Corps in Poland at the end of the year, has become friends with Kasia Jamroszcyk, a native of Poland, who is visiting Waco, Texas. The pose recently near the suspension bridge in Waco.

Businesswoman, Polish student form friendship

WACO, Texas (AP) — Anyone needing proof that the Cold War is thawing out should spend some time with Ann Newman and Kasia Jamroszczyk.

Newman is a 55-year-old businesswoman from Waco, and Jamroszczyk is a 17-year-old schoolgirl from Zielona Gora, Poland, yet the two have struck up a friendship that transcends age and geographic boundaries.

Newman and Jamroszczyk are both students of a sort.

After nine months of interviews, testing and paper work, the Peace Corps accepted Newman and assigned her to Poland. At the same time, Jamroszczyk's aunt and uncle invited her to spend her summer vacation in Waco.

They were united by Monsignor Mark Deering, pastor of St. Louis Catholic Church.

"Meeting Kasia has really made me more anxious to get to Poland," Newman said.

While Jamroszczyk only spent the summer in Waco, Newman will be in Poland for two years to help fledgling businesses stand on their own while the country struggles with new economic and social reforms.

Newman has no idea if she will be teaching or actually working hands-on with a business of some kind.

She said because the country is undergoing many changes, the Peace Corps is sending only older and more experienced volunteers.

"This is kind of a reversal — most of the people in the Peace Corps are younger," she said.

Space tomatoes taste the same

HOUSTON (AP) — Tomatoes grown from seeds that spent years in space appear to be no different from home grown, researchers at the Johnson Space Center said.

"I've noticed that the space seeds germinate earlier," James Poindexter, an education specialist at Johnson Space Center, said Tuesday.

Ingredient in wine may help avoid heart attacks

Wine may have a magic ingredient that discourages heart disease. So say some scientists.

Carper

Wine drinking may be one reason the French have half the rate of heart attacks as Americans, even among those with identical cholesterol levels and blood pressure, experts suggest. Further, Dr. Alun Evans, Queens University in Belfast, recently noted that French men have less than one-third the risk of heart attack as Irish men. Although both drink the same amount of alcohol, there's one big difference, he says: The French drink wine; the Irish, hard liquor.

French scientists in Pessac have even turned up new clues about how wine, especially red wine, may combat heart disease. In a test, 16 healthy men drank two cups a day of either white wine, red wine or an alcoholic fake wine for 15-day periods.

Both the white and red wine raised good-type HDL-cholesterol, thought to protect against heart attack. Moreover, red wine reduced blood-platelet stickiness, which lessens the chance of clots that trigger heart attacks. The scientists credit tannins in red wine as a major heart-disease-fighting factor. They also warn that wine-drinking should be "moderate" which usually means no more than two glasses of wine per day.

More Cheers for Vitamin C

More scientists are finding that vitamin C may ward off heart attacks and strokes by helping keep arteries unclogged.

Their new theory is that bad-type LDL-cholesterol circulating in the blood becomes dangerous to arteries only if it is chemically changed or "oxidized." Thus, blocking this LDL oxidation should help keep arteries clear. What can do that? Chemicals called antioxidants of which vitamin C is a potent one.

"Adequate vitamin C may stop the artery-damaging process before it starts," contends Dr. Ishwarial Jialal, University of Texas at Dallas. In recent laboratory tests, Dr. Jialal simulated the artery-clogging process. When he added vitamin C or vitamin E, another antioxidant, the disease-process slowed down dramatically. However, vitamin C is by far more potent, says Dr. Jialal. "Vitamin C, unlike E, was working 24 hours later."

Dr. Jialal thinks "adequate" vitamin C for people at high risk of heart disease may be at least 120 milligrams per day — twice that generally recommended. "Vitamin C is particularly important for smokers who are depleted in the vitamin," he says. In his new study, he is giving humans a dose of 1,000 mg of vitamin C to see how it affects the artery-clogging process.

Dieters Beware Gallstones

Lose weight too fast and you may end up with gallstones, warn experts. And it's not uncommon for a dieter's gallbladder to become inflamed, requiring its removal.

A new study by Gloria Petersen, assistant professor of medicine at the University of California, Los Angeles, found that 11 percent of those on a 520-calorie-per-day diet developed gallstones within four months. Those who were heaviest and lost pounds most rapidly were at high risk.

Further, says Dr. C. Wayne Callaway, George Washington University weight-control authority, dieters often have gallstones but never experience symptoms until they get off the drastic diet and try to eat normally.

Nor does it matter what type of weight-loss diet you follow. If the weight-loss is rapid, the risk of gallstones is there, says Dr. Callaway.

How much weight loss is safe? Current government health guidelines say no more than a couple of pounds a week. But even that may be too much. Many experts think the guidelines should be changed to say it's safe to lose only one-half to one pound a week.

Public given facts to help fight cancer

Professor reports disease caused by genetics and environment

Hearst News Service

HAMBURG, West Germany — In Australia, cancer control has a slogan: "Slip, slop, slap" — slip on a shirt, slop on sunscreen and slap on a hat to protect against skin cancer.

Elsewhere, cancer control is coming in a cocktail of taxes, education and laws to fight tobacco use.

The fight is on to give people clear, accurate anticancer information in a form they can accept, said Dr. John Seffrin, chairman of applied health at Indiana University.

"In its simplest forms, cancer is caused by genetics and environment," said Dr. Harmann Eyre, a professor at the University of Utah and a former president of the American Cancer Society, during the 15th International Cancer Congress here.

When people didn't live beyond their 30s or 40s, they didn't develop cancers in large numbers, Eyre said. "Cancer is a disease of older people," he said.

He pointed out that lung cancer was a rare disease in the U.S. until the 1930s because only then had people smoked long enough to develop the disease.

Experts estimate that 30 percent of all cancers are caused by cigarette smoking. Another 35 percent has a dietary link, and 10 percent arise from infection with some kind of virus.

Sexual habits account for another 7 percent and occupational exposures account for another 4 percent of cancer cases, he said.

Changing habits can reduce the cancer risk, Eyre said.

The rate of cancer in the United States is about 171 cases per 100,000 population, he said. But in his state of Utah, where Mormons dominate the population, the rate is only 121 cases per 100,000.

He attributes the difference to the fact that Mormons don't smoke, use caffeine or drink alcoholic beverages, and because they eat healthy foods.

Dr. Kjell Bjartveit, a Norwegian cancer specialist and a consultant to the International Union Against Cancer, said one-fourth of smokers die prematurely.

Governments are fighting tobacco use around the world, he said.

"There are regular tax increases in the United Kingdom. A price increase will usually cause a decrease in demand," Bjartveit said.

'In its simplest forms, cancer is caused by genetics and environment.'

— Dr. Harmann Eyre, Professor, University of Utah and a former president of the American Cancer Society

Health education programs in the U.S., Australia and Canada have lowered tobacco use considerably, he said.

In Perth, Australia, a lighted sign counted the year's death toll from smoking and invited smokers to call a special telephone number, "the quit line."

In Sweden, Bjartveit said, legislation requires cigarette companies to print 16 different warnings prominently on cigarette packages. The warnings are rotated yearly so that since 1987, Swedish cigarette smokers have been exposed to dozens of different messages.

One read: "If one person smokes, everyone smokes. Your smoking harms others."

Iceland requires that warnings take up 25 percent of the room on one side of the pack, Bjartveit said. One American cigarette maker found the regulations so cumbersome, he said, that it withdrew its products.

Some countries, including Finland, Iceland and parts of Australia, have required that part of tobacco revenues be earmarked for health promotion, he said.

In countries like Norway, where the battle against smoking started earlier, smoking declined early.

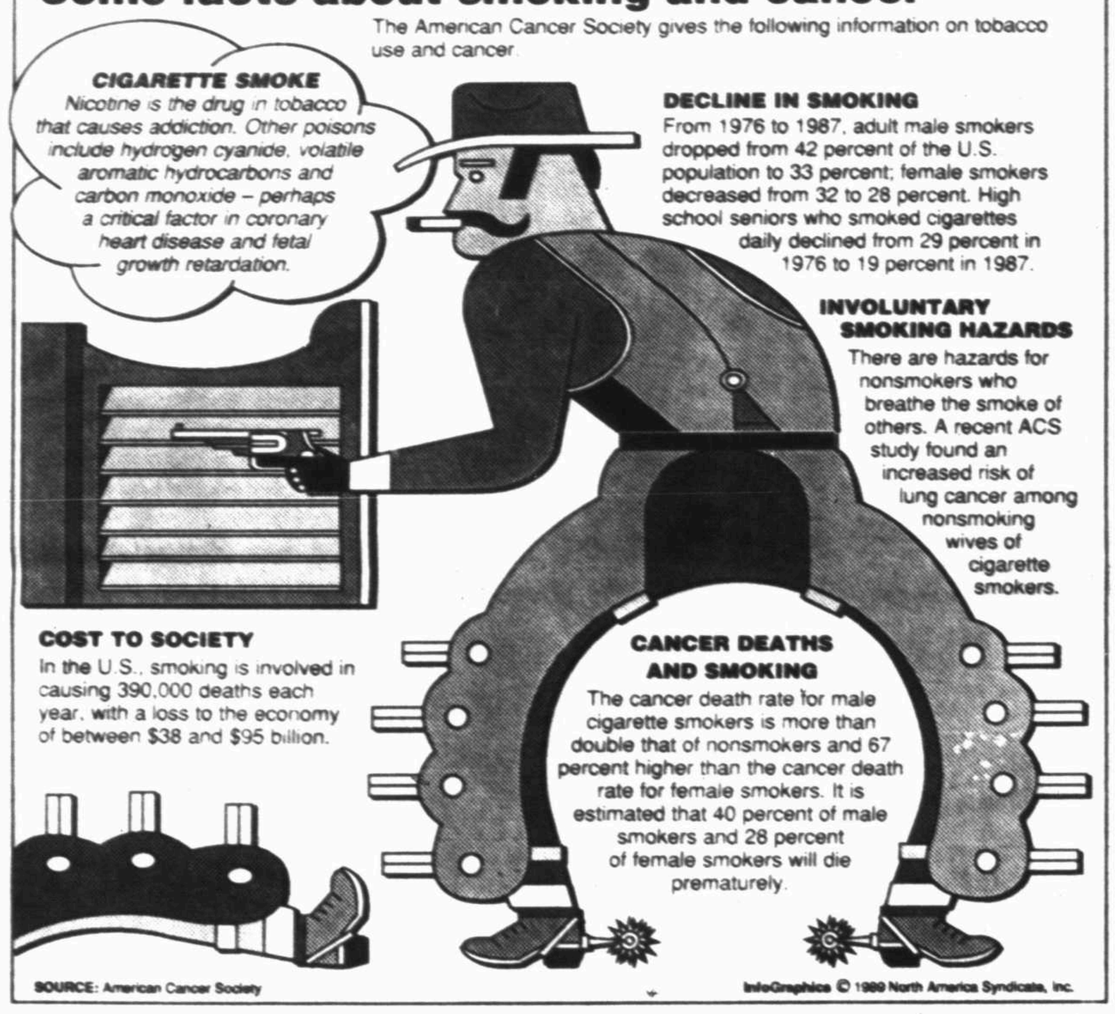

"This means we will never reach the rates of lung cancer that are now seen in Canada and the United States," Bjartveit said.

But while the attack on smoking is continuing around the world, people are just beginning to get a handle on dietary changes to fight cancer, Indiana University's Seffrin said.

Studies all say the same thing: If you want to lower your cancer risk, reduce the fat in your diet and increase your intake of whole-grain bread, cereals, fruits and vegetables.

Some facts about smoking and cancer

Report indicates ultrasound tests for spinal defects

BOSTON (AP) — Ultrasound scans can be accurate enough to take the place of amniocentesis for checking fetuses for spinal abnormalities and some other severe birth defects, researchers say.

Amniocentesis, while generally safe, carries a small risk of triggering a miscarriage. Ultrasound poses no known risk to the growing fetus.

However, amniocentesis is often recommended when routine blood tests given to pregnant women raise the possibility that their unborn children have major birth defects.

The blood test checks for elevated levels of alpha-fetoprotein. While many things can cause this protein to be higher than normal, there is a 1 percent chance that it means the baby has a defect.

To make sure the fetus is healthy, doctors frequently withdraw a sample of amniotic fluid with a needle to see if it, too, contains elevated levels of alpha-fetoprotein, a sign of spina bifida, abdominal wall malformations and other serious birth defects.

The new study found that by using ultrasound to take pictures of the fetus, doctors can see these defects directly and accurately judge whether or not the fetus is healthy.

Virus linked to chronic fatigue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chronic fatigue syndrome, a mysterious disabling disease sometimes dismissed as psychosomatic "yuppie flu," has been linked to a family of viruses that disrupts the immune system, researchers said Tuesday.

Evidence of a "retrovirus" was found in the blood of 23 of 30 patients suffering from the disease, and in many of their healthy relatives and close friends, the scientists said. That suggests the disease is contagious.

"If it turns out to be the agent causing this, then we learn something about treatment and something about prevention," said Walter J. Gunn, who heads the investigation into chronic fatigue syndrome for the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. "It has the potential to be a very important study."

The disease, which may affect millions of Americans, usually starts with flu-like symptoms and can develop into overwhelming fatigue. Other symptoms include muscle and joint pain, headaches, fever, sore throat, memory lapses and depression.

Small firm to provide phone service in Webb County

AUSTIN (AP) — A small family-owned phone company, Alenco Communications Inc., successfully competed Wednesday against Southwestern Bell to provide the first-ever phone service to a wide area of South Texas in Webb County.

The six-employee phone company from Joshua, Texas, will initially serve about 400 rural households and businesses that had for years pleaded with Southwestern Bell to provide reasonably priced phone service, said Robby Allen, company co-owner with his wife, Modeana.

Texas has more residents without access to phone service than does the nation as a whole. Public Utility Commission statistics indicate that as of last Novamber, slightly more than 10 percent of all Texas households — mostly in West and South Texas and the Panhandle — were not served by phone companies, compared to the national average of slightly less than 7 percent.

"I consider it poor to be below the national average," said Rowland Curry, director of the PUC's telephone analysis program.

Generally, Southwestern Bell serves urban areas of Texas, and 61 smaller phone companies serve rural areas, where Bell believes it cannot operate profitably, Curry said. "Bell has not been aggressive in serving distant, rural areas of Texas," he said.

Allen said he got the idea to expand his 500-line North Texas phone company into South Texas when he stopped at a rural Webb County cafe in September 1988. "We were having a hamburger one day and were talking to the cook, who said there was no telephone service in the whole area," he said.

Allen said he checked with Bell officials in San Antonio to determine why they weren't offering service in Webb County. Bell officials told him "there was nothing out there but a bunch of poor houses," Allen said.

Southwestern Bell officials say they did not use those words, but did tell Allen they considered Webb County an unprofitable area.

The Public Utility Commission, which on Wednesday finalized its order allowing Alenco to se.ve the area, also had harsh words for Southwestern Bell.

Commissioners Marta Greytok and Jo Campbell said that Bell had been uninterested in serving the rural area until company officials learned that a new international bridge would be built over the Rio Grande near Laredo. The bridge is expected to spur demand for telephone service by 650 lines over the next five years.

"Without the bridge, Southwestern Bell wouldn't be there," Ms. Campbell complained.

"Other companies had an opportunity to serve this area for years and did nothing," Ms. Greytok said.

Bell officials conceded that without the bridge customers, Webb County was not economically attractive to them.

"It's not fair to say we are not interested in serving rural areas," said Cindy Brinkley, area public relations manager for Southwestern Bell. "We have to ask if it's cost-effective. Unfortunately, it was not."

PUC Chairman Paul Meek said he supported Bell's application to serve Webb County because Alenco is an "understaffed and underfinanced company."

But Allen said he had a $3.5 million, low-interest loan from the federal Rural Electrification Administration that will allow him to finance construction of telephone lines in Webb County without charging customers for the project. Customers will be charged only a $37.50 connection fee, plus the fee for monthly phone service, which at about $10 per residence is lower than the average Bell fee, Allen said.

Bell officials said they could finance construction into the rural area for about $1 million. But they sought to recoup much of their investment from ratepayers, a proposal opposed by the PUC hearings examiner who presided over the case.

Bell agreed to finance its own construction costs after the PUC staff recommended it. The company was willing to charge customers only the standard service connection fee, Brinkley said.

Southwestern Bell serves 80 percent of the state's telephone customers, or about 6.9 million households and businesses. The smaller companies serve about 1.8 million customers.

In remote areas, laying telephone cable to unserved households can cost "hundreds of thousands of dollars," Curry said.

Country singer George Strait, who has a Webb County home, would have been forced to pay Southwestern Bell nearly $900,000 to get phone service, Allen said.

A group of compatible people that calls itself simply "Wednesday Night Volleyball" pose for a group picture in La Marque's Carbide County Park. Between 30 and 40 people show up to play on most Wednesdays.

Wednesday Night Volleyball has been meeting 16 years

LA MARQUE (AP) — There's a volleyball team in Galveston County that may never make the Olympics.

But in terms of longevity, they already hold the gold medal.

Calling themselves simply "Wednesday Night Volleyball" and featuring a core of compatible people, according to member Pam Jahnke, the group congregates every Wednesday night on a court at Carbide County Park.

As the membership has changed through the years, so the court has changed and improved, thanks to the efforts of both Galveston County and team members.

They now boast lights and a built-up sand surface, properly marked.

"Back in 1974, when we began, we had to start early so we would be through before it got dark," says one of the "founding mothers," Jerry Simpson.

"We began as a physical fitness thing for some Monsanto employees," Simpson said. "Or at least, that was our excuse."

At the time — 16 years ago — she said the group was lucky if they had enough people to make two teams. "But we left gaps and played anyway," she said.

Most Wednesdays these days, between 30 and 40 people show up to play, so whole teams take turns at the court. The most anyone can remember was 60. Scores are kept as the game progresses, but there doesn't seem to be any serious attempt at maintaining records.

Yet the members of the group are serious about their game.

Ask one of them to a social function on Wednesday and their normal response will be, "That's volleyball night."

Every year, they sign up with the county for the season.

"The county began to make improvements after we got some of the influential people in," said J.L. "Flash" Neely. "I'm talking about the lawyers and the doctors and architects like Joe Hoover."

They play in the heat, in the cold, in the mosquitoes.

They twist ankles and sprain knees — then they sit and watch until they are healthy enough to play again.

As some have gotten older, they come just to watch. Their kids play. Their grandchildren play.

Couples have come and gone — and changed.

Some have been through more than one marriage — but both halves of a former set sometimes continue to come to the volleyball games.

The same situation exists with girlfriends and boyfriends. They break up — but they come to volleyball like moths to the flame.

"When we were fairly new in the group," said Pam Jahnke, "Tim and I and Tom and Jan Winnike both had baby girls 10 days apart who shared a playpen at the park. Those little girls are almost eight years old," she said.

When the Jahnkes moved away for a while to Louisiana, they missed their friends. But one of many "big trips" of the group took care of some of that loneliness.

"Every year we have a big cookout called the Oyster Orgy," she said.

"When we were in Louisiana, in 1988, we had it at our house, and about 20 people, plus all their kids, came from Texas to Louisiana for three days. We had a blast," she said.

That's not the only trip various members of this group have taken together.

In 1983, the Jahnkes and the Winnikes went to the west coast of Mexico, two in a jeep, two on a motorcycle. That trip seemed to pave the way for other forays into Mexico, because larger contingents have followed.

Valley cotton crop doubles last year

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — This year's cotton crop in the Lower Rio Grande Valley is expected to be double last year's output — but last year was a lousy year, industry observers said Wednesday.

The season for the Valley cotton crop ended Friday at midnight, the deadline for stalks to be destroyed to reduce pests in next year's crop.

Valley cotton is the nation's first to be harvested each year.

Industry officials credit a break in a three-year drought for helping boost 1990 estimates from 320,000 to 325,000 bales, said Ted Proske, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's cotton classing office in Harlingen. He said that crop is about average, but it's about double last year's 165,000 harvest.

A bale is 500 pounds of cotton.

As of Monday, 314,027 bales had been ginned, said Libby Castillo, who conducts the weekly survey each Monday for the Valley Co-Op Oil Mill in Harlingen.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: All employment possibilities and financial deals deserve careful consideration now. A new romance will make the December holidays unusually happy. Mix work with pleasure when you travel in early 1991. A stroke of luck next March or April will help secure your financial future. Sell property in May. A career change in June will make your summer very stimulating.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: showman Billy Rose, actress Jane Curtin, baseball's Vince DiMaggio, comedian Jo Anne Worley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Revising your budget is one good way to reduce stress. A message from a friend or potential romantic partner will bring you good luck. The right social setting will help you meet influential people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Others see that you are truly loyal and send good things your way. Take control of your personal life. The affection you seek is within easy reach. Express the deep love you feel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Curb a tendency to clash with your kin; neither you nor they need that now. Friends or neighbors add sparkle to your day, making your outlook much brighter. Romance should be exciting!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to the tried and true today. Even routine affairs could be tricky. Travel, shopping and candid chats are favored. Relax at home this evening. Dependability counts big with your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home life may not be all you would like today. The social scene seems to hold more promise. Be careful not to neglect your work. Your laughter proves contagious in a romantic relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Showing others that you care for them brings out their trust. The more cheerful you are, the more allies you will attract. Romance beckons. Answer letters and return phone calls promptly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be very clear when giving directions or instructions; an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. A special lunch could be the highlight of your day. Show your true feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If others are stalling, force them to make a choice. Your involvement with a questionable figure must end. Stop waiting around for the phone to ring. Take the initiative and throw a party!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Bold action will attract good luck and success. Be willing to go all out for something you believe in. Focus on new priorities. Do not let details absorb too much of your time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go out of your way to help a friend who in turn will help you. A unique gift is featured. Be very discreet about a new romance. Check contracts for hidden clauses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A new job offer puts your plans up in the air. Accept the aid of a close friend without regrets. New sources of income can be found. Choose your confidants with care.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Participating in group projects helps you make valuable friendships. Romance thrives on privacy. Spend more time alone with a new love. Who you know gives you a tremendous advantage over your competitors.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are exceedingly conscientious, filled with a desire to be of service. Count on these youngsters to help out around the house with good cheer. They have a strong interest in history and rely on lessons from the past. Skilled with their hands, these Virgos will enjoy crafts or carpentry. They have a positive genius for breaking a thing down into its component parts. Good on details, they make wonderful engineers, doctors and lawyers.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

North's raise of the Stayman response was invitational. With all his points in primes and a ruffing value in clubs, South's hand easily merited continuing on to game.

West's queen of clubs opening lead hit declarer's weak spot. With two sure losers in trumps, declarer had to hold his black-suit losers to one if he was going to get home. So declarer won the first trick in hand with the ace and tried to take a club discard on the third round of diamonds. Unfortunately, East ruffed with the nine, cashed the ace of hearts and exited with a club, leaving declarer in a sore predicament.

The defenders already had two tricks in the bag and the king of trumps was a sure loser. That meant declarer was not only going to need a winning spade finesse, but since he had at least three spades in each hand, he would have to engineer an endplay as well.

Timing was important. South ruffed the club in dummy and ran the queen of spades, which held. Declarer came to hand with the ace of spades and then made the key play of cashing his remaining high diamond. Next, declarer threw West on lead with the master trump.

The cards lay as declarer had hoped—West had started with a doubleton spade. That defender was forced to return a minor suit, which declarer ruffed in dummy while discarding the remaining spade loser from hand. Making four-odd.

Payola trial ends suddenly with 'prejudiced' dismissal

LOS ANGELES — A federal judge has dismissed all charges against the record promoter Joseph Isgro and two other defendants, bringing an early end to the biggest music payola trial in 30 years.

Accusing the government of "outrageous misconduct," Judge James M. Ideman of Federal District Court on Tuesday said he had been left with no choice after prosecutors had withheld from defense lawyers the transcript of testimony their main witness had offered in an earlier case.

He said the government had "usurped its function and caused fundamental unfairness" by telling the defense no such document existed and withholding it from the grand jury that indicted Isgro.

The government, Ideman said, was "caught with a smoking gun" when defense lawyers discovered the transcript on file in another court in late August. After the prosecution first "claimed it had no pistol," Ideman said, it reversed course and "now argues the pistol does not smoke."

Lawyers here describe Ideman's decision as a stunning reversal for the federal government, which had viewed the case as so important that it had sent a senior counsel from the Justice Department in Washington, William S. Lynch, to prosecute the case with Drew Pitt, head of the Los Angeles Organized Crime Strike Force.

"We believe he is wrong and we will make the appropriate recommendation for appeal," Lynch said of the judge as he left court, declining further comment.

By dismissing the charges "with prejudice," an extremely unusual measure, Ideman has made it virtually impossible for a new indictment to be brought against Isgro.

A 57-count indictment had accused Isgro, 43, of making "illicit and illegal payments" to radio stations in California and Texas in return for the broadcast of records he was promoting on behalf of major record companies.

CENTERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Kara Kennedy, the 30-year-old daughter of Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy and ex-wife Joan, will marry Washington, D.C., architect Michael Allen to the tune of gospel music this weekend.

Singers from Boston's Twelfth Baptist Church will croon hymns and spirituals during Saturday's Roman Catholic ceremony at Our Lady of Victory Church in Centerville, Cape Cod.

The wedding reception will be held at the house of Kara's grandmother, Rose Kennedy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ray Charles and B.B. King will lead an 18-piece band on a world tour that begins Sept. 29 in Taiwan and finishes Nov. 10 in New York.

Charles

King

"Lucille and I can't wait for the tour to begin," King said in a statement Tuesday. "Lucille" is the name of King's guitar.

"Playing with Ray Charles is like dying and going to heaven."

Concerts are also planned for the Philippines, South Korea, Japan, Australia, Turkey, Germany, The Netherlands, France and Italy. The tour is part of the sixth-annual Philip Morris Superband Series, which features some of the world's top jazz musisians.

Charles, who turns 60 on Sept. 23, will be in New York the week before the tour gets under way for a series of concerts at the jazz club The Blue Note.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss America has had a lucrative reign and when she gives up her crown this weekend, she won't walk away poor, she said Wednesday.

Turner

"My mindset has always been to make money, not to spend it," said Debbye Turner, Miss America 1990. She said she made at least $200,000 in personal appearances during her reign.

Turner said she averaged 20,000 miles of travel a month since winning the title last year and changed cities every 18-36 hours.

"I've learned to sleep anywhere and in any position," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Alden Whitman, who profiled the world's major political and cultural figures as The New York Times' chief obituary writer during the 1960s and '70s, died Tuesday of a stroke. He was 76.

Whitman joined the Times in 1951. He began writing obituaries in 1964 and traveled the world to speak with such figures as Pablo Casals, Helen Keller, Charles Lindbergh, Ho Chi Minh, Pablo Picasso, Haile Selassie, Charlie Chaplin, Anthony Eden and Earl Warren.

The Polk Memorial Awards of 1980 included a special award to Whitman for setting "new standards of excellence at what had been considered a routine assignment."

Study says acid rain not a 'flat-out crisis'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $537 million, decade-long study ordered by Congress concluded Wednesday that acid rain should be "viewed as a long-term problem" requiring pollution controls but is not the environmental crisis some scientists have suggested.

The report by the National Acid Precipitation Assessment Program was embraced both by those who support steep cuts in sulfur dioxide emissions and by critics of such cuts. The critics have long claimed that severe pollution controls, costing as much as $5 billion a year, are an overreaction to the acid rain problem.

In its final draft report, the scientific group, known as NAPAP, reiterated that pollution-control measures are needed to return hundreds of lakes and streams — especially in the Northeast and the mid-Atlantic states — to healthy conditions.

The report also acknowledged that acid rain is affecting visibility across much of the East; causes damage to some forests, particularly red spruce at higher elevations; reduces soil nutrients; kills some aquatic life; erodes buildings and statutes, and poses health problems to some humans exposed to acidic aerosols.

James Mahoney, director of NAPAP, outlined the draft report to a final meeting of the group and said its findings have "reduced the scientific uncertainties" about acid rain.

"Acid rain is correctly viewed as a long-term problem which should be resolved by permanent measures," he concluded, summarizing the findings.

Mahoney said that while the study supports many of the scientific views expressed over the years on acid rain it also rejected other, "more extreme views" such as those that consider it "a flat-out crisis" or those "who would say there's no problem at all."

NAPAP was established by Congress in 1980 to improve the understanding of acid rain. During its decade of work it spent $537 million.

The report stopped short of endorsing specific control requirements, including the 10-million-ton cut in sulfur dioxide emissions required by legislation nearing approval in Congress.

The study said, however, that if annual sulfur dioxide emissions were cut by 10 million tons the damaging trends would be reversed. Such emission controls would lead to the "chemical recovery" of lakes in the Adirondacks, where the acid rain problem is said to be most severe, and protect lakes in the higher elevations of the mid-Atlantic states. It also would reduce other damages caused by acid rain and improve visibility.

But the pollution controls would not be cheap, with the expense increasing sharply as steeper emission reductions are put in place. An 8-million-ton reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions would cost $1.7 billion to $2.7 billion a year, while cuts of 10 million tons would cost as much as $4 billion a year, the study estimated.

The most severe pollution control requirements would have to be imposed on electric utilities, especially those burning high-sulfur coal in the Midwest, for the results to be effective, the study said.

Shuttle launch scrubbed; Fuel line leaks

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA scrubbed the launch of space shuttle Columbia for the third time after discovering a leak as liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen were being poured into the fuel tank on Wednesday.

The decision was made after 10 times the normal amount of hydrogen was found in the shuttle's aft compartment, said shuttle director Robert Crippen.

The launch crew immediately began trying to trace the leak. No new launch date was set.

NASA canceled the first launch attempt in May after sensors detected an unusual buildup of liquid hydrogen during fueling in the aft compartment and around a valve in plumbing between the orbiter and external tank. The second scrub was last week because mission control had trouble communicating with one of the four telescopes in Columbia's cargo bay.

"I think we got fooled by the fact we had two leaks," Crippen said. "I think this leak has been there all along."

Crippen said there was no leak this time in the connecting link between shuttle and tank. The aft compartment, where the explosive hydrogen was found, contains the shuttle's main engines.

Thursday's attempt would have been the 36th shuttle flight and the first in four months.

'I think we got fooled by the fact we had two leaks. I think this leak has been there all along.'

— Robert Crippen, NASA shuttle director

■ Scientists continue search for ultimate weapon to battle nature's ultimate survivor, the cockroach/4D

In the three months since the first leak was discovered, NASA has tested and retested the lines between the fuel tank and its three shuttles, but never with a tankload of fuel.

Crippen said he didn't regret his decision against a tanking test. Such a test would have required five or six days.

"It wouldn't have given me that much lead time," Crippen said.

The line being used on Columbia is new, having been taken from the orbiter Endeavour, which is under construction in California.

Space shuttles rely on two sources of power to get into orbit. Two solid fuel rockets burn for two minutes to get the vehicle off the ground. At the same time — and continuing for eight minutes — the orbiter engines burn a combination of liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen.

The shuttle's 154-foot-long tank holds 385,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen which is cooled to 423 degrees Fahrenheit below zero, and 144,000 gallons of liquid oxygen at 297 degrees below zero.

Columbia was to have carried an array of four telescopes into orbit. Four astronomers in the crew of seven would have operated the instruments, which would remain in the shuttle's cargo bay. The launch, with the $150 million Astro observatory aboard, had been scheduled for 12:20 a.m. CDT.

"Dozens of us are dying to see this thing get launched," said Arthur Davidsen, principle investigator of one of Astro's four telescopes.

It was only the fifth time NASA scheduled a shuttle launch at night and the first shuttle mission in five years devoted entirely to scientific research. The night launch was planned because of the demands of the astronomy mission. Speaking to NASA employees via closed-circuit television from the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Vice President Dan Quayle called the mission "cutting-edge space activity."

He said that despite its recent problems, NASA is up to doing the job it was assigned to do.

Brando lawyer wants murder charge reduced

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — A lawyer for Christian Brando has filed a motion in Santa Monica Superior Court asking that the murder charge against actor Marlon Brando's son be reduced to a lesser crime of manslaughter.

Robert Shapiro, attorney for Christian Brando, will argue the motion Sept. 14 before Judge Robert Thomas, who was named as trial judge after Judge David Perez was removed from the case, said Sandi Gibbons, spokeswoman for the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office.

Perez — who last month reduced Christian Brando's bail by $8 million — was replaced by Thomas on Wednesday after prosecutors filed an affidavit Tuesday accusing him of prejudice, officials said.

Under the law, both prosecutors and defense attorneys are provided one opportunity to challenge a judge's ability to be impartial without stating their reasons or providing proof of their claim.

Brando, 32, is charged with murder in the May 16 shooting of Dag Drollet, 26, the boyfriend of his half-sister, Cheyenne Brando.

During an earlier preliminary hearing, Shapiro argued unsuccessfully that the charge against his client should be reduced to manslaughter because there was no evidence Christian Brando intended to kill Drollet.

Shapiro cited Christian Brando's statements to police upon his arrest that the shooting occurred accidentally as he and Drollet struggled for a gun.

But in charging the actor's son with murder, prosecutors cited reports that Drollet had been clutching a television channel-changer and other items when his body was discovered.

In a second action Wednesday, Shapiro filed a motion to suppress a tape-recorded interview between Christian Brando and police sometime after the arrest, Gibbons said.

During the preliminary hearing, a judge had ruled the statements were inadmissible because a detective failed to fully advise Christian Brando of his rights to an attorney at no cost.

Vincent upheld

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge upheld the authority of Fay Vincent for the second time in 2½ weeks on Wednesday, forcing a top New York Yankees official to appear at a disciplinary hearing Thursday before the baseball commissioner.

Vincent

Following a two-hour hearing in Manhattan federal court, U.S. District Judge Leonard B. Sand rejected a request from Yankees executive vice president Leonard L. Kleinman for a temporary restraining order.

Kleinman wanted to stop Vincent's hearing on his relationship with gambler Howard Spira and his role in a $40,000 payment made by the Yankees and George Steinbrenner to Spira last January.

Steinbrenner resigned as managing general partner of team on Aug. 20 because of the charges. U.S. District Judge Alice M. Batchelder that day refused to issue a temporary restraining order against Vincent that would have kept Steinbrenner in power.

Kleinman, who filed the $22 million suit Tuesday, claimed Vincent's hearing would be a sham because the commissioner was biased against him and had prejudged his case.

Kleinman also claimed the commissioner did not have technical jurisdiction over him because his contract did not contain a specific clause agreeing to submit to the power of the commissioner.

Taylor sacks Giants' bank

■ Lawrence Taylor's new three-year pact with New York makes him the highest paid defensive player in the NFL.

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bill Parcells didn't mind being upstaged at his own news conference, especially when Lawrence Taylor was doing the upstaging.

"I'm home," Taylor said Wednesday as he interrupted the Giants' coach in mid-conference.

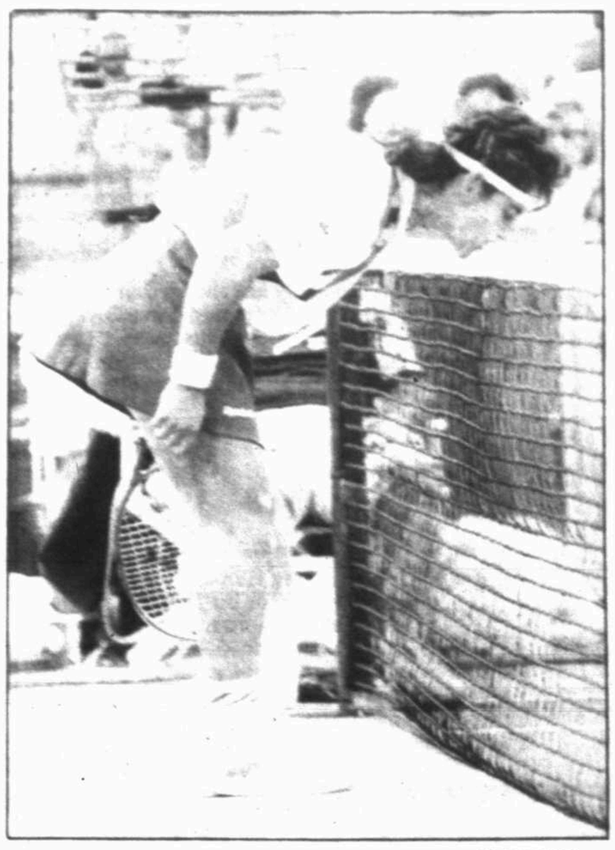

With those words, the Giants' All-Pro linebacker was back with the team he refused to report to during the preseason because of a contract dispute. The holdout ended when Taylor signed a three-year contract that made him the highest paid defensive player in the NFL.

Taylor promises to be ready for Sunday's opener against the Philadelphia Eagles but added, "I would have liked a little contact before the first game.

"One thing I do have and I think it's to my advantage is that I do have heart, I do have desire and enthusiasm. I'd guess you'd have to say I also have the false belief that I can't be beaten and I can't be stopped. Hopefully that will take me on into Sunday."

Parcells said he would seek a two-week roster exemption for Taylor, who reportedly will be paid more than $1.6 million per year. The 31-year-old Taylor was in the final year of his contract, which would have paid him $1.21 million, but he and his

4-5A coaches find way to Tech

■ All District 4-5A trails seem to lead to the Lubbock campus when it comes to hiring college football coaches.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Three of many former District 4-5A high school coaches who now work at Texas Tech: Dick Winder (left), Red Raider head coach Spike Dykes (center) and Gary Gaines.

The trip from Midland to Lubbock is only a couple of hours, depending on how fast you drive. The proximity of the two cities, as well as the lack of other large towns within a decent distance may have something to do with what this story concerns.

For skeptics, it could all be coincidence.

But most probably, it has to do with talent.

Presently, there are five members of the Texas Tech Red Raider coaching staff who list experience coaching in District 4-5A on their resumes.

Doyle Parker, former assistant coach at Abilene Cooper and Big Spring, is now Tech's recruiting coordinator.

And then there's Tech's head coach, Spike Dykes, he of Midland Lee head coaching fame, not to mention stints as an assistant at San Angelo Central and head coach at Big Spring when the Steers were members of 4-5A.

"Everybody's got their own thoughts about what it takes, but that's a great football district," Dyke said of District 4-5A. "The coaches in that district are as good as in 90 percent of the colleges. I just don't see where you can find coaches with better backgrounds."

When Dykes became Tech's head coach at the end of the 1986 season, he had already had three years experience as the school's defensive coordinator. Winder and Maskew also knew their ways around Jones Stadium. Winder began his collegiate career with Tech in 1984 after 13 seasons in the high school ranks; Maskew began at Tech in 1985.

Dykes signed on the services of Parker in 1987, a relationship that began again after it was first sparked during Dykes' days at Big Spring in 1967.

No rest for the road weary grid fans

After months of relative rest where the family sedan thought it had been given some sort of refuge, it's that time again.

Price

That's right, get the oil changed, check the tires' air pressure, maybe change the spark plugs, air filter and PCV valve, and for Heaven's sake get that tape player fixed because FM reception in the Middle of Nowhere is nil. But even if you don't stop that tape-hungry machine from eating your favorite Asleep at the Wheel recording, maybe you can hum "Miles and Miles of Texas" to yourself, because that's what you're going to be seeing.

As Class 5A high school football fans in West Texas are painfully aware, tedious travel is an integral part of following the local team. There's just no getting around the simple fact that miles are going to be tallied by the hundreds, and making all the favorite team's games is tantamount to being a roving Willie Loman incarnate. It's just too bad nobody has figured out how to award frequent driver miles.

Of course, travel is part of football in all classes and a case could be made that 4A, where there are so few teams, schools rack up plenty of miles. But even though Andrews may not feel compelled to schedule Class 3A Seminole, the option to play a non-district game against a team 30 or so miles down the road is still available. Not the case in 5A in this very large corner of the world.

Just last week, Midland High bused over 150 miles to Carlsbad, N.M. for a neutral site scrimmage against El Paso Jefferson and Midland Lee went a mere 100 miles (yawn) to scuffle in Lubbock against Lubbock Monterey.

But that, my friends, is just the beginning. Now Lee has the dubious honor of opening its regular season at El Paso Andress — a hop, skip and Dan Marino bomb away at 300 plus miles. The Rebels did get lucky enough to host both Del Rio and Amarillo Palo Duro this year. MHS gets off the travel hook hosting Monterey in Week 1, then playing at 4A powers Monahans and Andrews.

But the local schools are just examples of the West Texas football way of life. Looking through the District 4-5A non-district schedule, you may find that Odessa High opens at Amarillo Palo Duro, hosts Killeen then hits the road again for a Homeric excursion to El Paso Eastwood. The Bronchos also scheduled a non-district game on their 4-5A open date Nov. 1, and got the worst of the deal when their game against Amarillo High was moved from Odessa to Jones Stadium in Lubbock. OHS parents had better break out the Polaroid, because they may not see their offspring until after the season is over.

Odessa Permian has an easier schedule — at least as far as travel is concerned — by virtue of its one non-district road trip to Tyler. The Panthers host El Paso Irvin, Amarillo High and Alamogordo, N.M. Meanwhile, San Angelo, Abilene High and Abilene Cooper have opted to go the other direction for non-district play, taking on such schools as Victoria and San Antonio Clark (San Angelo), Mansfield and Richland (Cooper), and Stephenville (AHS).

I somehow envision truckloads full of chicken fried steaks and hamburgers in these boys' near future.

But by the fourth week of the season, district play will have begun and everybody in 4-5A but San Angelo will get a break by playing their cross-town rivals. Then, just when the family sedan thought it was safe to come out of the garage again, we get to go to Abilene (about 150 miles) and San Angelo (120). Hey, it's West Texas.

Iraan seeks revenge for last meeting with Rankin

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

While Iraan head football coach Mickey Finley is worried about first-game jitters, Rankin mentor Troy Kennedy just wants 11 healthy bodies for the 48th renewal of the gridiron rivalry between the two neighboring schools Friday in Rankin.

In other season-opening football action Friday, Greenwood travels to Coahoma, Big Spring hosts Amarillo Caprock, Stanton entertains Seagraves, Midland Christian hosts Grady, Andrews hosts Wolfforth Frenship, Lamesa entertains Denver City, McCamey hosts Wink, and Garden City travels to Forsan.

The last time Rankin hosted Iraan in football, the Red Devils romped to a 41-13 win in the 1988 season opener for both teams. But two things are different this season. One, Finley went with several sophomores and freshmen against the veteran Red Devils in that game and those players are two years older.

Secondly, Kennedy isn't going to have everybody at full strength.

"We're not clicking on all cylinders," he said. "We have an ankle plague around here."

Several Red Devils are hobbling because of sprained ankles. Kennedy won't say whom, because all will see action Friday despite their ills.

"Iraan will run at the people they know are hurt," Kennedy said.

Kennedy would say that a couple of the hurt ankles belong to running backs, which hurt the team's offensive productivity in scrimmages.

"We can't get all of our running backs healthy at the same time, so we're not exactly where we ought to be," Kennedy said. That means that son-quarterback Kirk Kennedy might feel a little added pressure.

The younger Kennedy has shown that he can handle the heat, though. He passed for 985 yards and ran for 888 more as a sophomore to lead Rankin to its second straight district championship.

Finley doesn't have any injury problems. In fact, the Braves' mentor is pleased with the way his team has responded in pre-season scrimmages.

"We're a lot closer to be ready than we have been in previous seasons," Finley said. "We have a lot of kids coming back that have worked with our system for two years."

So, Finley's goal is to cut down on the little mistakes that often plague teams in the first week.

"We have to avoid turnovers and cut down on our mistakes in the kicking game," he said.

The Braves have built their offense around a pair of juniors, fullback Riley Malone and quarterback Corby Maurer. Malone rushed for 1,275 yards last season, while Maurer was the starter at quarterback in the Braves' playoff appearances last season. He also intercepted nine passes from his cornerback position as a soph.

In addition to his obvious athletic ability, Maurer is football-wise beyond his years, because dad Steve was Finley's predecessor as the Braves' head coach.

"Unfinished business" is the pet phrase for the McCamey Badgers, after Coach Randy Adair's first Upton County team lost out to Iraan in a coin flip to determine the second playoff participant in District 5-2A.

The Badgers were clobbered by Class 3A Sonora in their second pre-season scrimmage, but Adair said the long-term effect of the drubbing may be beneficial.

"We had our weaknesses exposed," Adair said. "We have a good football team, but Sonora did a good job of playing to our weaknesses."

Adair's things-to-do list this week has included improving defensively against the option and in the secondary."

Class A Wink is a run-oriented team that lost to Garden City in the second round of the playoffs last season. Adair is wary of the Wildcats' tradition — and the fact that Wink mentor David Burnett is a McCamey native.

"They have every reason in the world to come here and upset us."

The Wildcats are expected to be led by tailback Jason Bounds, who ran for 1,494 yards and 11 touchdowns last year.

A's decimate Bosox, 10-0

Associated Press

Bob Welch scattered five hits in eight innings for his major league-leading 23rd victory Wednesday night as the Oakland Athletics routed the Boston Red Sox 10-0 for a sweep of the three-game series between division leaders.

Mark McGwire hit a two-run homer, his 34th, and a two-run double and Doug Jennings, filling in for Jose Canseco, also homered and doubled in powering Oakland to its fourth straight victory and sixth in seven games. The Athletics began the night with a 6½-game lead in the American League West, the same margin Boston held in the AL East.

Welch (23-5) struck out four and didn't issue a walk. Only two Boston runners reached second base against him.

Greg Harris (12-6) was tagged for 10 hits and six runs as the Red Sox dropped a season series at home to Oakland (4-2) for the first time since 1973.

Rangers 3, Indians 2

Pinch hitter Jack Daugherty singled home the tying run and pinch hitter Kevin Reimer followed with an RBI double as the Texas Rangers scored twice in the ninth inning and rallied past the Cleveland Indians.

The Indians, who lost for the ninth time in 10 games, took a 2-1 lead in the top of the ninth on Sandy Alomar's two-out, two-run double.

Yankees 2, Angels 1

Jesse Barfield hit a two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning, rallying New York over the California Angels and ending the Yankees' five-game losing streak.

Barfield's 21st home run came on a 2-0 pitch from Bryan Harvey (3-3), who relieved starter Jim Abbott after a one-out walk to Kevin Maas. Abbott matched a career-high with nine strikeouts.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 3

Rance Mulliniks and Fred McGriff homered for Toronto, offsetting Cecil Fielder's 44th home run for Detroit, as the Blue Jays beat the Tigers and averted a sweep in the three-game series.

Rob Ducey, making his first start since the Blue Jays called him up a day earlier, had three hits and two RBIs in five at-bats.

David Wells (10-4), who has three wins over the Tigers this season, gave up three runs on four hits in seven innings. He struck out six, walked two and retired 13 consecutive batters.

White Sox 3, Royals 0

Greg Hibbard pitched a four-hitter for his first major-league shutout and Robin Ventura's bases-loaded single broke open a scoreless game in the eighth inning as the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals.

Hibbard (12-8) walked five, struck out six and worked out of bases-loaded jams in the seventh and eighth innings. Mel Stottlemyre Jr. made his first big-league start and shut out Chicago on one hit for seven innings.

Brewers 7, Twins 4

Paul Molitor's three-run homer capped a five-run rally in the eighth inning and led the Milwaukee Brewers over the Minnesota Twins.

The Brewers trailed 3-2 before bouncing back against three pitchers. Greg Vaughn singled home the tying run, Rick Aguilera's wild pitch enabled Milwaukee to take the lead and Molitor hit his 11th home run.

Gary Wayne (0-1) got the loss. Ron Robinson (9-3) was the winner and reliever Chuck Crim gave up a run in the ninth.

Mariners 9, Orioles 5

Harold Reynolds' first career grand slam broke a ninth-inning tie and the Seattle Mariners beat Baltimore, the Orioles' sixth straight loss.

The Pittsburgh Pirates continued their doubleheader dominance Wednesday night, sweeping the New York Mets 1-0 on Zane Smith's career-best one-hitter and 3-1 on Jeff King's first two-homer game.

The Pirates have swept all five doubleheaders this season and took a 2½-game lead over the Mets in the National League East.

Smith yielded a single to Keith Miller leading off the game and permitted only one more baserunner the rest of the way — a two-out walk to Miller in the third. He struckout seven and retired the last 19 batters.

The Pirates won it in the bottom of the ninth when Barry Bonds hit a bases-loaded one-out single off Mets relief ace John Franco (4-1) for his 100th RBI.

King drove in all the Pitsburgh runs in the nightcap with a solo homer in the first inning and a two-run shot in the third off Bob Ojeda (7-6), getting a start for the first time in more than a month.

Neal Heaton (12-8), making his first start since Aug. 20, went five innings and gave up Darryl Strawberry's 31st homer in the fourth. It was the first run in 21 innings for the Mets, who lost 1-0 in St. Louis on Tuesday night.

"That's probably the best game I've ever pitched," said Smith, who is 10-7, including 4-0 with a 1.42 ERA for Pittsburgh. "It's been a long road back for me, and I can't tell you how much it means to me to be pitching in a pennant race."

Smith is 3-0 with a 1.12 ERA against the Mets. New York's starter Frank Viola struggled throughout but matched Smith with eight shutout innings before being lifted for a pinch hitter.

Franco took over in the ninth and Gary Redus singled. Jay Bell bunted and Redus was safe at second when catcher Charlie O'Brien threw low for an error. Andy Van Slyke sacrificed the runners to second and third and Bobby Bonilla was intentionally walked. On 2-2, Bonds hit a drive over the head of drawn-in left fielder Kevin McReynolds.

Phillies 4, Cubs 1

After being shut out on one hit by Chicago's Mike Harkey until he experienced stiffness in his pitching shoulder in the seventh inning, the Phillies scored four times in the eighth against Steve Wilson, Mitch Williams and Les Lancaster. Lenny Dykstra singled home the tying run, Darren Daulton's RBI double put the Phillies ahead and Charlie Hayes capped the rally with a two-run single.

Expos 6, Cardinals 2

Rookie Chris Nabholz raised his record to 4-0 and Tim Wallach and Larry Walker hit two-run homers as the Montreal Expos defeated the St. Louis Cardinals.

Nabholz started the season in Class AA and was 0-6 with a 4.83 ERA at Triple A Indianapolis, but has a 2.78 ERA in two stints with the Expos.

Padres 5, Astros 2

Roberto Alomar was 3-for-3 with a triple, double and two RBIs and Dennis Rasmussen won for only the second time in his last 11 decisions as the San Diego Padres beat the Houston Astros.

The victory moved the Padres back ahead of the Astros into fourth place in the National League West by one-half game.

Braves 6, Dodgers 2

Oddibe McDowell's leadoff home run ignited an early four-homer barrage against Mike Morgan in the first four innings and John Smoltz won his fourth game in a row as the Atlanta Braves beat the Los Angeles Dodgers for a season-high sixth straight victory.

Reds 5, Giants 3

Hal Morris homered to snap a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning and doubled twice and scored both times as the Cincinnati Reds won for the first time in eight games at Candlestick Park this season, beating the San Francisco Giants.

Blast opens competition

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — The Midland Blast F.C. Soccer Club competed in its first-ever competitive tournament this weekend, taking five teams to semifinal action in the Vandergriff Labor Day Shootout in Arlington. Of those five, two advanced to the finals in their division.

A breakdown of how those teams who advanced to the semifinals and finals performed:

- The '73 Boys team, comprised of youngsters born in 1973, accumulated enough points in three games to advance to the semifinal round, losing to the Dallas Eagles, 1-0.
- The '76 Boys outscored their two early round opponenets by a 7-0 total, but lost in the semis to the Dallas Kicks.
- The '79 Boys won their semifinal game against the C.C. Strikers, 1-0, but were defeated in the final by the Waco Blast, 1-0.
- The '80 Boys advanced to the championship round having enough points accumulated to qualify as a wild card. The Midland Blast won their semifinal match against the Texas Tornado in a shootout to advance to the finals round, only to lose, 7-2, to the Arlington Kickers.
- The under-16 Girls team, was placed into the under-19 division at the tournament and promptly defeated two under-19 squads and tie another to land themselves in the semis. The Blast under-16 Girls lost its only game, a 1-0 barnburner to the Arlington Zykes.

With some car repair guarantees, the only thing you can bank on if something goes wrong is another withdrawal from the bank down the road. But not with the Lifetime Service Guarantee.
The Lifetime Service Guarantee puts Peace of Mind℠ in writing. Here's how it works. Once you pay for a covered repair at any participating Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer nationwide, the bill will be stamped as an LSG repair. Then, if the same repair ever needs to be done again, just show your receipt and we'll fix it free for as long as you own your car. Free parts. Free labor. For life. It's that simple.
The Lifetime Service Guarantee, America's best car repair guarantee, covers virtually everything except normal wear and maintenance items like wiper blades and tires. It's Peace of Mind that's available only to Ford, Lincoln and Mercury owners.
So ask us for a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. Because when it comes to paying for car repairs, once is enough.

Chaparral golfers begin new season

Staff Report

Midland College golfers get their first action of the 1990-91 season today and Friday in Hobbs, N.M., at the 54-hole New Mexico Junior College Invitational.

Today's play is 18 holes during an afternoon round, with 36 holes scheduled on Friday. The Chaparrals, who finished third at the National Junior College Athletic Association's championship in Scottsdale, Ariz., in June, are led by sophomore Dean Robertson. After that, things get skimpy on intercollegiate competition experience.

The slender Scottish player won the tournament for the 24 NJCAA regional medalists in Scottsdale, then finished in second place for medalist honors in the tourney. He played in several British and European tournaments this summer and was on the four-member Scottish junior team which won the European championship.

Since this is an invitational event, Poss will be taking all his players, letting them play on the MC Green or MC Gold teams, or as individuals. Freshman players for the Chaparrals this fall include: Shaun Bishop, San Angelo; Justin Jacobsen, Edmond, Okla.; J.C. Hernandez, San Angelo; Chris Englebrecht, Spring, South Africa; Darren McMillan, Winnipeg, Canada; Darren Eckhardt, Cohuna, Australia; Michael Keiner, Surrey, Canada; and Darren Griff, Nanaimo, Canada.

Thomas, Cobb take SWC's weekly honors

HOUSTON (AP) — A pair of quarterback sacks and four tackles in last weekend's 28-13 win over Hawaii earned Texas A&M's William Thomas honors as The Associated Press Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week.

Rice University's Trevor Cobb, who piled up 175 yards on 30 carries and scored two touchdowns in the Owls' 33-17 win over Wake Forest last week, is the AP's SWC Offensive Player of the Week.

Thomas, at 6-feet-3 and 210 pounds, "is a little bit of an undersized linebacker, but he relies more on quickness," Davie said.

Penn State drops Notre Dame from grid schedule

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State will break off its football series with Notre Dame two years early to schedule Iowa in 1993-94, its first Big Ten opponent since joining the conference.

"We had a great series with Notre Dame but, as I've said on numerous occasions, the face of our football schedule is changing with the move to the Big Ten," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said Wednesday.

The games with Iowa are on Sept. 18, 1993 at Iowa City and Sept. 17, 1994 at Beaver Stadium.

Penn State is not expected to play a full Big Ten football schedule until the mid-1990s because schedules are made up many years in advance.

"As members of the Big Ten conference, our goal is to become as heavily involved in conference play as quickly as possible," athletic director Jim Tarman said in a statement.

"We are looking at the rapid integration of a number of our athletic teams in 1991-2 and, while the football process is more complex, want to avail ourselves of as many Big Ten opportunities as we can."

Penn State had games with Notre Dame scheduled through 1994.

"When the possibility arose, we had conversations with Notre Dame and the athletic administration there expressed a willingness to help us expedite the scheduling of a Big Ten opponent by seeking another rival for 1993-94," Tarman said.

"Since our current Notre Dame series was scheduled to end following the 1994 game and, given the prospect future contests with the Irish would be difficult to arrange once full conference integration is complete, we elected to take advantage of the chance to get an early start in the Big Ten,"

Prices boosted

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose to nearly $30 per barrel Wednesday as traders began buying in response to Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's televised call for an Arab holy war against the West.

Light sweet crude for October delivery rose 65 cents to close at $29.77 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The price rose as high as $29.89 before falling back. The Permian Corp. and Marathon Oil reported a $1.25 in their posted prices which reached $28.25.

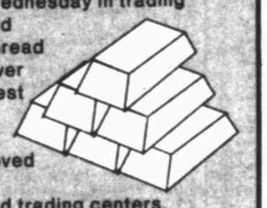

"It was full of religious fanaticism, and I think people kind of got nervous and started bidding the market back up," said Brian Tagler, a broker with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

"We're getting close to that $30 mark, and it looks like people might want to get up there and test that $30 area," he said.

Crude imports were up to 6.8 million barrels a day, compared with imports of 6.6 million barrels a week earlier and 6.4 million barrels a year earlier, API said.

Gold climbs

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar sank against all major foreign currencies Wednesday in trading punctuated by widespread talk of lower U.S. interest rates.

Gold prices moved higher in most world trading centers.

Heavy dollar selling began in Asia and carried over into later European and U.S. dealing.

One of the most pronounced moves of the day was the dollar's drop against the yen. It was quoted at 141.65 yen late in New York trading, down from 143.40 on Tuesday. The British pound gained against the dollar. Sterling strengthened in New York with a pound fetching $1.9055 in late trading, compared to $1.8810 Tuesday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.5580 German marks, 1.2945 Swiss francs, 5.2180 French francs, 1,162.00 Italian lire and 1.15245 Canadian dollars.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, a troy ounce of gold for September delivery added $2.40 to settle at $386.10.

Silver rose in New York and London.

Earnings up

Elcor Corp. announced that results for both its fourth quarter and fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, were improved over the prior year periods.

A small loss in this year's fourth quarter was in line with the company's June 25, 1990, announcement regarding its outlook for fiscal 1990.

ARCO plans debut of green gasoline

■ Arco says it will go forward with a, more costly, gasoline that is expected to reduce emissions by 15 percent.

By Jeff Pelline
San Francisco Chronicle

The recent spike in prices at the pump has hampered efforts by major oil companies to sell low-emission gasoline, which costs more than other grades. But Atlantic Richfield Co. still plans to proceed with the launch of its own premium-priced, low-emission brew.

On Thursday, Arco — only the eighth-largest U.S. oil company but California's No. 1 gasoline marketer — will introduce a 92-octane substitute for the 91-octane, premium-unleaded grade that it currently sells in Southern California.

Its green gasoline, as the industry calls such products, is supposed to cut emissions by well over 15 percent — more than any other low-emission gasoline.

It will go beyond competing products in reducing cancer-causing benzene and high-pollution aromatics, according to people familiar with the Arco entry.

Another prominent producer, Chevron, has postponed plans to launch reformulated fuel in the East, largely because of the Mideast crisis.

Bold actions are common at Arco, which makes the most of its strengths in production and marketing to out-hustle much-bigger companies, such as Chevron and Shell.

In California, according to figures for the pre-Iraqi-invasion period, Arco held 17.85 percent of the market, compared with 16.7 percent for Chevron, 13.1 percent for Unocal and 11.9 percent for Shell.

Arco's edge is price. It has used relatively low prices to climb from fifth place in the California market as recently as 1982.

In the case of low-emission gasoline, Arco will charge about 3 to 5 cents less per gallon than the competition.

It is accomplishing that in part by limiting the introduction of low-emission gasoline to Southern California — close to its largest refining and marketing network.

"If I could put together the ideal oil producer and marketer, it would look like Arco, except for better exposure in the international area," said Peter Ting, who follows Arco for Oppenheimer & Co., a New York investment firm.

Last month, Arco scored a public-relations coup when it became the first producer to announce a freeze on gasoline prices after the price run-up that followed the invasion of Kuwait.

The action was in response to President Bush's call for "price restraint, and Bush, a friend of Arco Chairman Lodwrick Cook, publicly praised Arco.

Texas puts embargo on Heartwise

■ In a labeling dispute over psyllium, the Texas Health Department has halted distribution of Kellog's Heartwise cereal.

Associated Press

Texas officials have imposed a distribution embargo on Kellogg Co.'s Heartwise cereal in Texas in a dispute over labeling.

On Tuesday, the Texas Health Department ordered warehouses to halt distribution of the cereal. It accused Kellogg of deceptive labeling and of failing to warn consumers about potential allergic reactions to psyllium, a whole grain touted by Kellogg as a cholesterol fighter.

Texas is the only state that has sought to ban sales of Heartwise, which was introduced last year by the Battle Creek, Mich.-based cereal maker and has prompted a federal inquiry into the safety of psyllium.

Last week, Kellogg filed a federal lawsuit in Dallas against the Texas Health Department and the attorney general's office to try to ward off the embargo and allow the company to retain its current labeling on the product.

"For the state of Texas to detain Heartwise on the basis of their belief that it's an unapproved drug is totally ridiculous and a total disregard for the science behind psyllium," Kellogg spokesman Joseph Stewart said.

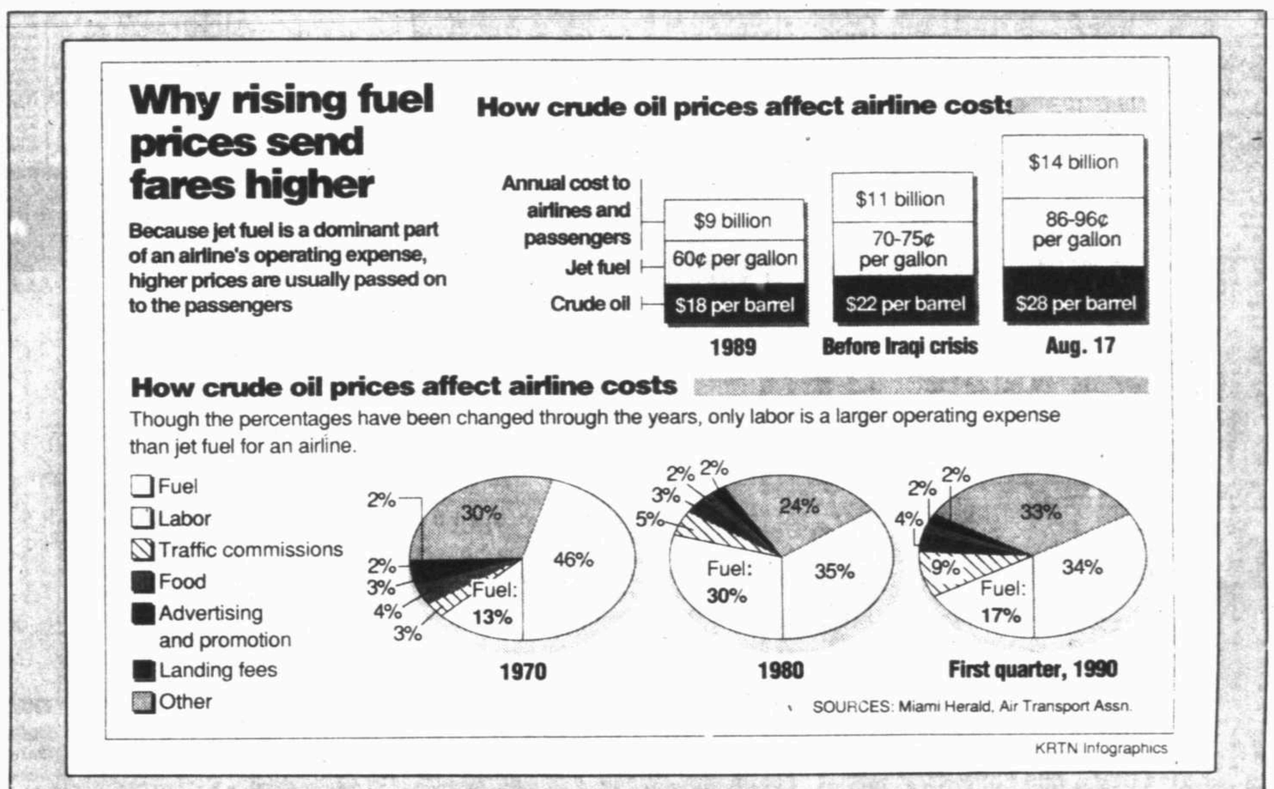

Kellogg maintains that psyllium, a grain grown mainly in India, has been scientifically shown to help reduce cholesterol when used as part of a complete nutritional diet. The soluble fiber is used in laxatives and its inclusion in Heartwise has led to a controversy in the food industry about whether the cereal should be considered a drug or food.

The Food and Drug Administration is currently reviewing data on psyllium's safety and the company's cholesterol-fighting claims.

"I think this goes back to the labeling of foods with drug-like claims," said Dan Sowards, chief of the food branch for the Texas Department of Health. "The FDA ... has said products that continued to make health claims would be subject to scrutiny."

Sowards said his department has asked Kellogg to change the product's name and remove heart symbols from the box as well as references to hospital endorse-

Airlines set to hike fares

N.Y. Times News Service

Most of the world's airlines will seek to increase fares on international routes by about 7 percent to 8 percent by Oct. 1 to help cope with the rapid rise in fuel costs in the wake of the Persian Gulf crisis.

Domestic carriers put through a fare increase of 5.3 percent effective last Friday to help offset higher fuel costs.

Several executives of leading airlines said, however, that the increase might not be enough and that another price rise might be needed.

British Airways, one of the largest international carriers, moved quickly and raised its fares 6 percent for trips from the United States to Britain, effective last Saturday.

Fares from Britain to the United States will go up on Sept. 15.

Under the British Airways increases, the one-way business-class fare from New York to London has gone up to $1,802, from $1,700, while the full one-way coach fare during midweek travel has gone to $578, from $546. The one-way business-class fare from Los Angeles to London is now $2,424, up from $2,287, while the one-way full coach fare has gone to $792, from $747.

Prices for jet fuel in the United States have risen from about 55 cents a gallon before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 to as high as $1 a gallon and have recently fluctuated between 70 and 80 cents.

A spokesman for Pan American World Airways said Tuesday that it would match the British Airways increase, effective Thursday.

Other leading carriers on the routes are expected to match the increase or to put through their own increases soon.

The decision to seek the higher fares, the first for quickly rising fuel prices since the early 1980s, was made at a gathering of representatives of 200 airlines of the International Air Transport Association in Geneva last week.

The group, a worldwide trade association for international airlines, decided to seek increases of 5 percent to 8 percent.

Most of rises are expected to be about 7 percent, with fares to some areas of the world going as high as 8 percent.

While the increases are subject to approval by the governments of the nations where a carrier flies, such approval is expected quickly.

The carriers in the United States are expected to seek antitrust immunity from the Transportation Department to consult with one another and raise their fares.

The airlines have a strong argument in seeking the higher fares, since increased fuel prices quickly affect the cost of an airline's operations.

Fuel makes up 20 percent to 30 percent of an airline's operating cost, depending upon the age of the fleet and the length of the carrier's routes.

Carriers have little capacity to store fuel and therefore have little choice but to pay market prices.

Dennis Eklof, a senior consultant at Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass., said Tuesday that Kuwait had invested heavily in sophisticated refining capacity and had become a big supplier of jet fuel.

The loss of the capacity, along with the added demand for jet fuel created by the military buildup of the United States in the Middle East, he said, was "severely straining the capacity to make jet fuel on a worldwide basis."

Thus the pressure on prices for jet fuel have been greater than other products like gasoline, which is in less demand after the peak summer driving season.

Edward J. Starkmann, an analyst at Paine Webber Inc., said Tuesday that the latest increases would not cover the airlines' added costs and that they might have to seek additional increases if the crisis in the Middle East persisted.

Starkmann said that the fare increases on internation-

SCOTT BURNS

U.S. Treasury, safest invesment avenue

By Scott Burns

Q. A very reputable investment broker recently told me that the FSLIC and the FDILC are privately owned, can go under, and be unable to insure CDs and other deposits in banks and savings and loan companies. Is this a true statement?

Burns

He also said he was unable to get much information on this subject from the banks or whomever he was checking with about this. I thought these corporations were federally or government owned, and we could always be assured of their protection for up to $100,000 deposits. Are we or aren't we?

The broker wanted me to invest in U.S. Treasury Bonds or Bills, which I am reluctant to do. — V.T., Dallas, Texas.

A. Both the FDIC and the FSLIC were established in 1933 as independent federal agencies to insure deposits — the FDIC for banks, the FSLIC for savings and loans. To make good on their commitment to insure deposits both agencies collected a small premium on deposits from each bank or savings and loan and built a fund that was expected to cover failures of individual deposit institutions. As a second line of defense, each agency is backed by Congress. Since Congress makes its guarantees with our money, we are the ultimate guarantors of our deposits.

In fact, the FSLIC insurance fund was overwhelmed with what amounts to a systemic failure of thrift institutions and the problem is now being financed by additional public debt. When, and if, the government reneges on its guarantees on deposits you can rest assured that the situation will be very, very extreme. You will be concerned for your life, not just your bank accounts. Your broker needs to do some homework.

The U.S. Treasury is the safest place to invest your money in terms of credit risk because the Treasury is backed by the unlimited taxing power of the United States Congress. If you invest in U.S. Treasury issues you will always get your money back. It may not have the purchasing power that you put in, but if you put in $10,0000 you will get $10,000 back.

It is unlikely that your broker wanted you to buy Treasury issues directly since he would starve to death if you did. If he is recommending a mutual fund that specializes in U.S. Treasury issues, make certain that you learn the commissions and the annual expenses of the fund. Make certain that you buy a "plain vanilla" fund, not one that has expensive bells and whistles such as options, etc.

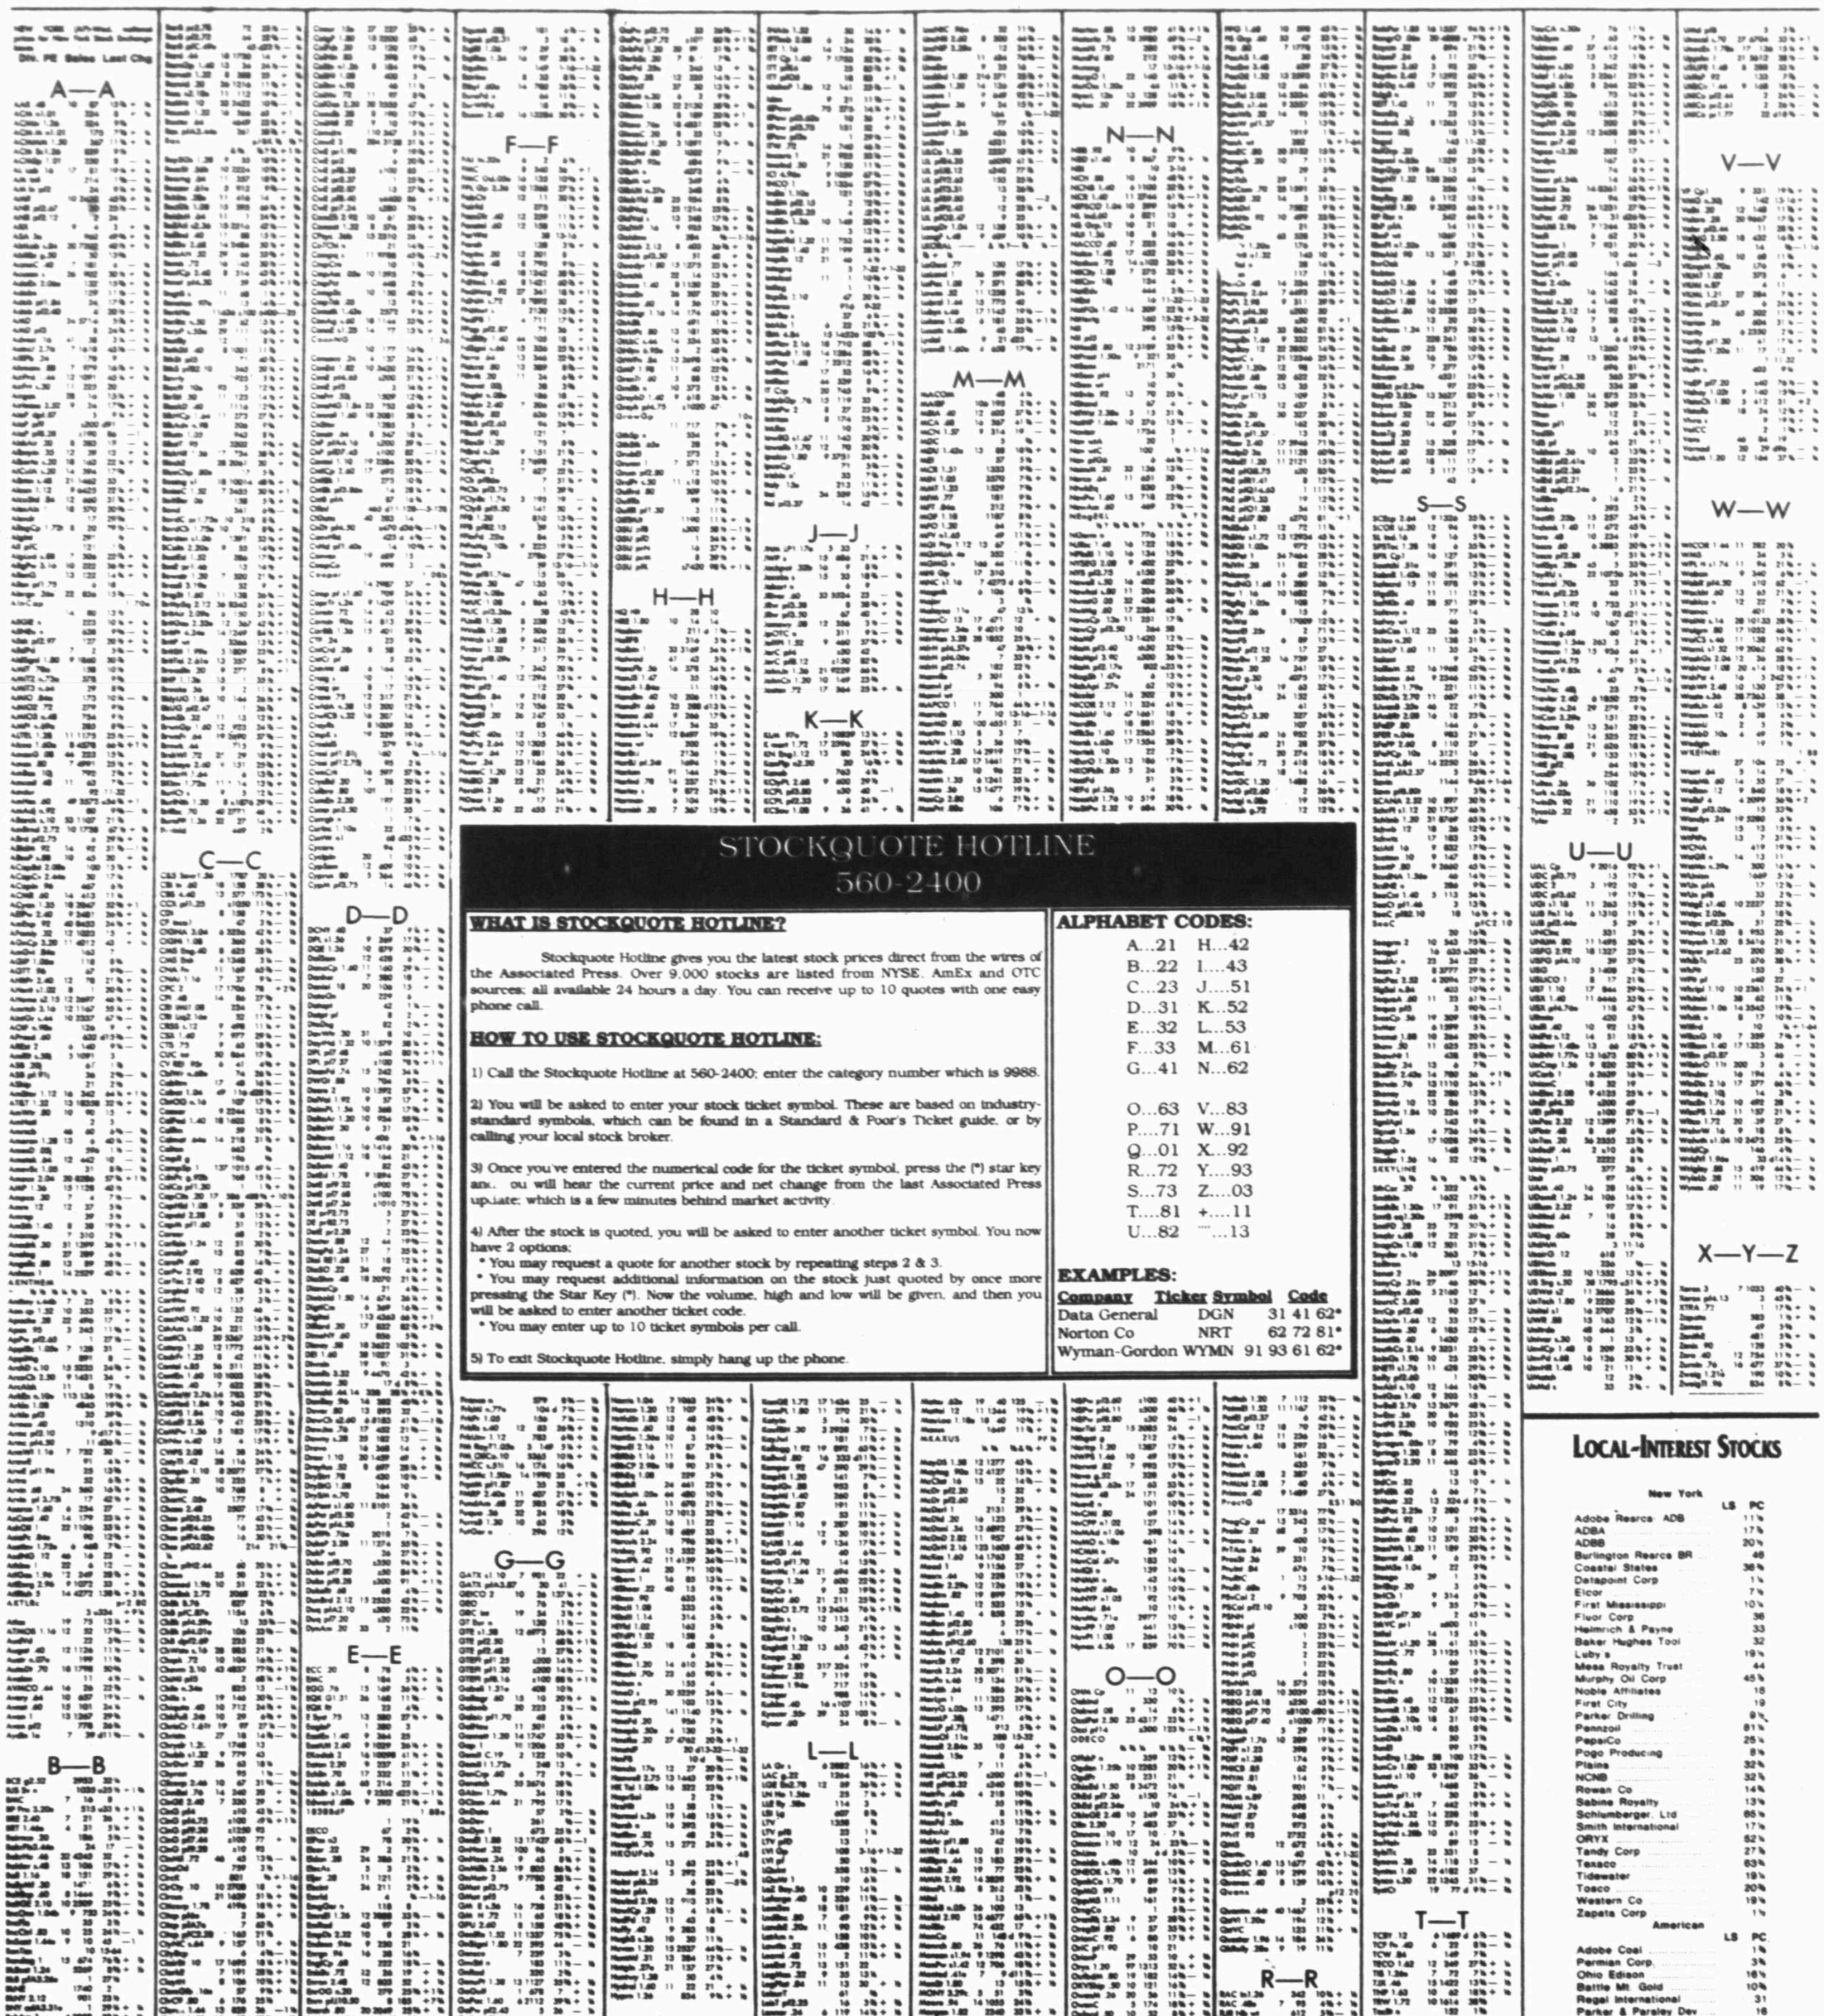

Q. In a number of your columns you have recommended CDs as a safe and easy investment for senior citizens. What is your opinion now that it appears the insurance will be limited to $100,000 per person rather than per account? I have $750,000 in CDs, so, of course, I will have to make changes when this insurance is reduced. Do you recommend Treasury notes as an alternative? — R.K, Dallas, Texas.

A. While there is discussion of reducing deposit insurance limits, current limits are still generous. Care must be taken in the styling of the accounts — how they are registered. A husband and wife, by using combinations can still have a total of $500,000 insured in 5 different $100,000 accounts. A family with children can have more. A booklet on deposit insurance rules is available at most deposit institutions. You can also call the FDIC office of consumer affairs at 1-800-424-5488.

For about 18 months now I have been telling readers that U.S. Treasury issues are providing a higher yield than comparable maturity CDs. In addition, you can buy them through no-load mutual funds that give you checking privileges and instant access to your funds with no selling

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticket symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticket guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticket symbol, press the (*) star key and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticket symbol. You now have 2 options:
* You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
* You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticket code.
* You may enter up to 10 ticket symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a modest gain today, contining the sluggish pattern of the past couple of sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 7.92 to 2,621.29 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 828 up, 581 down and 484 unchanged.

Traders appeared to find little cause in the economic and financial news to make many big changes in their positions.

Oil prices were moderately higher today as they continued to respond to events in the month-old showdown in the Middle East. But interest rates declined a bit in the credit markets.

Analysts said stock-market investors were awaiting Friday's monthly report from the Labor Department on the employment situation.

The data are expected to add a new factor to the Federal Reserve's equations as it calculates the next step in its monetary policy.

Among actively traded blue chips, Johnson & Johnson rose ¼ to 66⅜; Eastman Kodak gained ¾ to 41½; Philip Morris was unchanged at 45⅛, and General Electric was down 1¼ at 60.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .48 to 177.61. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.52 at 324.26.

Volume on the Big Board came to 83.75 million shares with two hours to go.

FARES: Set to increase

international routes tended to be more "monolithic" and that they would be felt by the business traveler as well as vacationers paying discount fares.

The increases would also come during a slow period of travel for the industry but one during which most travelers are going on business. Such fliers generally have less ability to put off or cancel a trip.

The trade group represents most of the world's primary international carriers except Northwest Airlines.

International passengers made up about a fourth of the 1.1 billion passengers carried by airlines in 1989.

Of the 260 million international passengers carried that year, about 230 million traveled on airlines that are part of the trade group.

International travel has also been growing faster than travel to most domestic markets, by 7 percent in 1989 over the previous year.

Increases of 8 percent are being sought on flights from Canada to the rest of the world, flights between destinations in the southwestern Pacific, those from the southwestern Pacific to North and Central America and Europe, and international flights within Africa and to the outside.

International flights within Europe would go up by 5 percent.

International flights in Venezuela to North and Central America, the Caribbean and Europe would go up by 3 percent.

International flights to Libya would not go up at all.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Saving habits hard to break later in life

By Bill Doyle

Q. You advise senior citizens to stop saving and start spending. My wife, 71, and I, 73, should probably be taking that advice but we have ingrained habits to save, save, save.

We have accumulated $32,000 in cash items such as U.S. Treasury bills and money market mutual funds, $34,000 in conservative common stocks, $33,000 in long-term Treasury bonds and zero-coupon bond mutual funds, $30,000 in gold coins and gold mining stocks and $5,600 in cash value life insurance policies.

Our house would probably bring $55,000 in the market and a few months ago we paid $14,800 cash for a new car. We have no debts. Our two daughters have good jobs and can take care of themselves.

I am a retired federal employee and have a good annuity. We both get Social Security checks, as well as interest and dividend checks. We have been saving between $3,000 and $8,000 every year.

If we do start spending more than our annual income, how much should we hold against the possibility of such things as entering a nursing home? We can hardly spend down to zero.

A. Of course not. And that has never been urged by this column. It has advocated here that seniors stop socking away money they never will use and that they start using some of their savings to enjoy life.

Doyle

How much? There's nothing resembling a sure formula. Each family has to make its own decision, based on its individual situation.

In your case, it would be prudent to hang on to most of what you have as an emergency reserve and simply start spending all your income. Increasing your spending by $3,000 to $8,000 per year won't result in a wild old time but it should make life a good deal more enjoyable.

I do advise you to sell those gold coins, which are an out-and-out speculation. That makes them unsuitable for folks such as you who should be cautious and conservative. Sure, gold rose in price as a result of the Persian Gulf crisis. That could be a lucky break for you in selling now.

Q. My wife and I own shares of stock in two companies. We are in the process of being divorced and dividing property. We need to change the ownership of one stock from my name to her name and half of the other stock to her name.

I have written both companies, without receiving answers. How can we make this name-ownership change?

A. That's accomplished through each stock's transfer agent. The transfer agent's name and correct address is printed in the annual reports companies send to their "stockholders of record."

Since the stocks are registered in your name, you must have received those reports. If you chucked them out, as many people do, visit a big public library's reference section, where you will find financial manuals containing such information.

Fill in the assignment form on the back of the stock certificates, listing exactly how you want new certificates issued. Have your signature guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company. Send the certificates to the transfer agents — by registered mail, return receipt requested, for safety sake. The transfer agents will cancel the old certificates, issue new certificates and mail them back.

If you don't want to take this on as a do-it-yourself project, you can have a brokerage or bank handle it — for a fee.

Q. When I turn 40, I will come into approximately $2 million. I plan to invest the entire amount, continue to work and live on my salary. If you were me, how would you invest this money?

A. If I were in your position and had your intentions, I would put the money into zero-coupon municipal bonds due to mature at the time I retire. No income tax would be due on interest building up on the bonds annually. And there would be a bundle there at retirement time.

Two sides of the oil reserves coin

By Bill Hendrick
Cox News Service

With gasoline prices rising and the economy wobbling, some energy experts and politicians say the U.S. government should begin pumping oil out of its 600 million barrel stockpile to hold prices down at the pump.

By ordering even a minuscule amount of the reserves sold on the open market, President Bush could relieve upward pressure on fuel costs and possibly stave off a recession, said Cheryl Trench, executive vice president for the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation Inc. in New York.

Other experts, however, oppose dipping into the reserves, contending that the stockpile was intended to be used in a national emergency, which doesn't exist, and not to hold down gasoline prices or boost consumer confidence.

Since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, gasoline prices have soared to nine-year highs, although they fell slightly last week when hopes for a peaceful resolution of the crisis escalated.

The national average for regular unleaded gasoline, which was $1.075 before the invasion, fell last week to $1.307 from an Aug. 8 peak of $1.309, the highest level since 1981, according to the American Automobile Association.

Without a peaceful resolution to the gulf crisis, Ms. Trench said, gasoline prices are likely to rise again in coming weeks because "in the fourth quarter, cold weather brings higher demand for oil and you have upward pressure on prices."

Politicians such as Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.), Rep. Ed Markey (D-Mass.) and Rep. Philip R. Sharp (D-Ind.), have urged the president to sell some of the oil.

However, other analysts and the American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry's trade group, agreed with Bush that oil from the reserves should not be sold, at least not yet.

"I don't think it should be touched," said Stephen A. Smith, an analyst for Bear Stearns & Co. in New York. "You should keep the reserve until you are physically short."

Some experts said no one knows what the market effect would be of turning on a new oil spigot. The markets might read it as a sign of trouble and panic.

Joseph A. Lastelic, a spokesman for the Washington-based petroleum institute, said the loss of 750,000 barrels a day from Iraq and Kuwait hasn't caused a shortfall in this country. But the oil market is global, he said, and the world's loss of millions of barrels daily affects the United States.

Ms. Trench agreed, but said if the United States began selling some oil reserves, "people wouldn't have to bid as high to get crude oil" on world markets and gasoline prices would decline.

Currently, Smith said, oil companies have about 9 billion gallons of gasoline in inventory, enough to fuel America's cars for about 25 days.

More than 90 percent of the current gasoline inventory is needed "for just the bare functioning level," he said, and if a shooting war developed, a shortage could develop within a month and a half.

"We're sitting at the edge, and so far, we're in balance," Smith said. "But it's a balance with no slack. If it went out of balance due to bombing of the Saudi oil fields, you are just plain out of capacity."

The government could put a maximum of 3.5 million barrels of crude oil per day from the reserves on the market within a week, said Howard Borgstrom, spokesman for the U.S. Office of Petroleum Reserves. It would schedule an auction for oil refiners a day or two after an order from the president, he said.

The petroleum institute's Lastelic denied that the oil industry stands to reap huge profits from the increases in prices in recent weeks. Rather, he said, refiners are not recovering all of their added cost related to the Iraqi invasion, and gasoline prices legitimately could be higher.

Although millions of Americans aren't old enough to remember, turmoil in the Mideast caused severe gasoline shortages in 1973 and again in 1979. Both oil crises threw the economies of the United States and most Western democracies into recession.

BURNS: Federal debt impossible to manage costs or penalties. In recent columns I have pointed out that the interest rate spread between U.S. Treasury issues and CDs is now almost irresistible.

Q. In a recent column you pointed out that government spending had grown faster than workers' wages. It is also true that the money supply has more than doubled in the last 10 years. The average compound growth rate of M3, a measure of money, is 8.7 percent a year.

Who has all this money? The VERY rich? They lend money to Uncle Sam while the working middle-class person pays the tab PLUS THE INTEREST. Is your bank account twice as big as it was 10 years ago? Mine is not. — R.C., Princeton, Texas.

A. Good point. As other observers have commented, we have replaced "tax and spend" Democratic administrations with "borrow and spend" Republican administrations. In the '60s and '70s, we subsidized borrowers; in the '80s we took those subsidies away and started rewarding savers. Some were poor or of modest means but most savers, of necessity, would be considered well-off.

Whether you are rich or poor, however, the most important fact is the our future is looking more dismal by the minute, thanks to the mismanagement brought to us by both parties.

ARCO: Analysts suggest ARCO could afford freeze

the Mideast crisis began, a spokesman reports.

Analysts pointed out that Arco could best afford a price freeze because it is the most self-sufficient of all the majors, pumping most of its crude from its own Alaskan oil fields and purchasing very little from the Mideast or on the spot market.

While it's too soon to know for sure, the public-relations stunt is expected to add permanently to Arco's share in the cutthroat gasoline market, according to an analyst with the Lundberg Survey, a prominent oil-industry newsletter.

In 1982, Arco eliminated the company credit card in a well-publicized action that sharply reduced overhead. In another effort to keep costs low, it converted entirely to self-serve, and installed extra-fast pumps which allow customers to get in and out of service stations quickly.

EMBARGO: Cereal halted

endorsement. It also has asked for inclusion of warnings about potential allergic reactions to psyllium.

Sowards said data given to the FDA by Kellogg include at least 50 cases of allergic reactions to the grain and some of them required hospitalization.

Kellogg maintains Heartwise has been shown to be safe. Most grains, including wheat, cause allergic reactions in a very small percentage of people, Stewart said.

Three independent university studies released in April found psyllium to be more effective in fighting cholesterol than wheat or oat bran cereals.

Stewart said the embargo's timing — less than a week after the lawsuit was filed — shows that it is "politically motivated and not out of any concern for public safety."

He said the company is worried about the controversy.

Partnership on pipeline

FORT WORTH, Texas (SWN) — Union Pacific Resources Company (UPRC) of Fort Worth, the oil, gas and minerals subsidiary of Union Pacific Corporation of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, along with its partners, announced today its intention to form a new intrastate pipeline partnership called East Texas Gas Systems.

The East Texas area is a rapidly developing major natural gas marketing center, and the pipeline partnership plans to provide needed transportation services. The new pipeline company will operate facilities located within Panola County.

A new UPRC subsidiary, Union Pacific Intrastate Pipeline Company, is the operating partner with 52 percent. The other co-owners are Damson Oil of Houston, with 41 percent and several other independent producers with the remaining 7 percent.

The partnership will be connected to seven intrastate and five interstate pipelines.

Fragrance, makeup are must-haves

By Trish Barr
Copley News Service

The modern woman knows she has to protect her skin — including the 90 percent that is below the chin. And the very modern woman wants a light fragrance to complement her perfume. It is for those ladies that Carolina Herrera says she introduced her new Bath and Body Dreams collection.

"This is very fresh," Herrera said of her new line.

Scented with the delicate Carolina Herrera perfume, the new bath and body wardrobe softens, silkens, smooths and scents the skin. The line includes body creme, bath and shower gel, body lotion, dusting powder and soap. Prices range from $16 to $45.

■ THE CLASSIC mechanical watch is enjoying renewed popularity. Sales of classic and vintage timepieces increased up to 60 percent in 1989 and sales of new watches that look old were up, too.

Popular picks include two almost matching Hamilton Ventura models with abstract triangular faces, which date back to 1959. Other picks are a Lucien Piccard skeleton watch with a see-through case top, also dating from the 1950s, and pre-owned Rolexes.

■ The charm bracelet, de rigueur in the 1950s, reappears this year as fashion jewelry. Savvy offers a version with caged and dropped pearls with twisted rope chains. Matching earrings are available.

■ Twenty-five jewellike shades make up Max Factor's new eyeshadow collection, Visual Eyes Picture Perfect Shadows. The shadows are made with creamy micromilled powder for extra-silkiness and superior blending. Max says the color you see is the color you get and it stays put.

The color range includes 12 matte and 13 perle single-pan shades, plus five dual shadows. Each has a suggested retail price of $2.75.

■ BABY GOES fashionable with Stride Rite's new colorful, contemporary baby shoes. Shoes are offered in three infant footwear categories: sport, athletic and traditional. Prices range from $33 to $37.

■ For a natural way to protect skin from the harmful effects of the sun, the Body Shop offers the "Carrot Factor," claiming carrots are a natural choice for skin protection.

"Carrot oil, a deep orange-colored oil refined from carrot juice, is rich in beta-carotene, a substance that converts to vitamin A and helps combat the premature aging of the skin caused by sun damage," says the company.

The line includes Carrot Sun Oil, Carrot Sun Milk and Carrot Soothing Gel, each $5.65.

■ With today's hectic pace it's hard to find the time or the energy to shop, even for necessities.

For the harried shopper, Sears has developed a series of Focus catalogs for shopping-at-home convenience. Catalog titles include "Interiors," "Big & Tall" and "Menswear," "Great American Style" women's wear, "Back to Summer" children's wear, "Power & Hand Tools," to name a few.

To receive a copy, call 1-800-366-3000 from any U.S. location or stop by a Sears store.

■ VANS FOOTWEAR is entering the corduroy market with new corduroy shoes available in black and white for back to school. Additional colors will be added for the holidays. They are expected to retail for less than $40.

■ Sometimes the product you use to cover dark eye circles or blotchy red marks makes the situation worse than the original problem.

Now Hollywood makeup artist Bob Sidell says he has the solution in Bob Sidell's SilkSkin Cover Color, designed to neutralize offending colors rather than mask them. It comes in either a blue blocker, designed to color blue-black, or a red blocker to cover red in the skin. It also comes in a split pan, including half of each in the same compact.

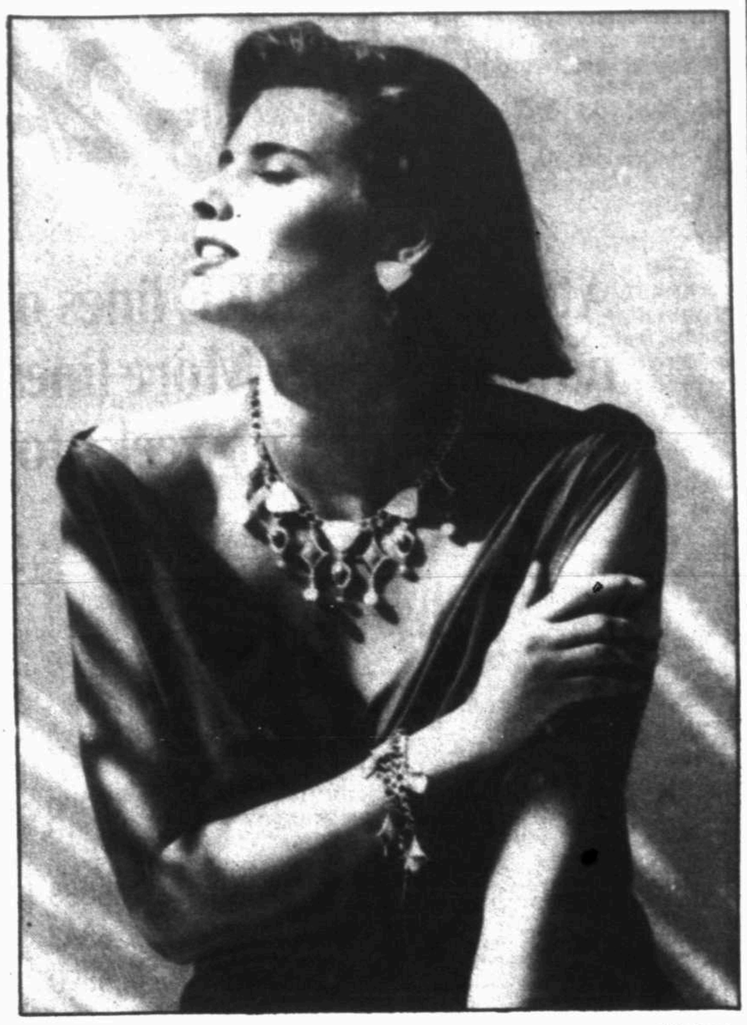

It will retail for $19.95.

■ Black was the fashion byword of the '80s, and, following that Dark Decade, aren't we all ready for some bodacious color? The designers certainly are; they're tossing us rainbows this fall.

Pucci is making a swirling comeback, Charlotte Neuville is doing '60s chic and Gianfranco Ferre in his Dior collection has taken his cues from Faberge's eggs. It's not a moment too soon.

■ JUST WHEN you thought it was safe to go back in the water, this time in that suit you just got last week, come the 1991 swimwear trend reports from Los Angeles and New York. And the word is that next season's suits will take on the aura of street wear.

Some, we're told, will look too good to get wet: suits embellished with mirrors and embroidery from Esther Williams and Hot Sauce or with a black skirt or leggings to take to the nightlife.

Lauder marketing environmental line

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Natural cosmetics created with the environment in mind aren't new to California, but a major cosmetics company has developed a line that combines the trend for natural-looking skin with the newfound environmental consciousness.

The line, Origins, a division of the Estee Lauder Cos., is a distinctive entry into the crowded cosmetics field beginning with its packaging (recyclable glass bottles and corrugated cardboard for shipping) and ending with its global approach to skin care. The ingredients don't involve animal testing or use animal byproducts; all ingredients are natural, not petrochemical; and, where possible, containers are recyclable and printed with soy-based inks for easier recycling, company representatives said.

According to William Lauder, vice president/general manager and grandson of Estee Lauder, the line incorporates ideas from aromatherapy, naturalists, Eastern philosophies and years of American cosmetic testing. During a prelaunch visit to Century City, Lauder said the company began researching the foundations of Origins six years ago.

Origins is a skin-care, color-cosmetics and sensory-therapy line that retails for $8.50 to $25. Its skin-care products address not just skin type but skin behavior, with pairs of products aimed to cleanse complexions that are oily, dry, mature, sensitive or confused (dry cheeks with oily nose, chin and forehead). The products aim to let the skin balance itself, instead of the products masking the cause of imbalances, Lauder said. For problem areas, the company makes specific products, such as scrubs, masks and deep moisturizers, to combat lines, puffy eyes, rough skin and generally grime-assaulted skin.

The color cosmetics are arranged by three color groups and include coordinating accent colors for eyes. A gift line that echoes the environmental theme includes stationery — "green sheets" with a green pencil — roll-your-own beeswax-candle kits, potpourri neckrolls and books for adults and children.

The Origins Sensory Therapy products are based on principles of aromatherapy, which uses pure plant extracts to stimulate the parasympathetic nervous system. The names of the $10 to $17.50 oils and gels are self-explanatory: Energy Boost, Sleep Time, Stress Buffer, Muscle Easing and Peace of Mind.

SENIOR CLOUT: It could be the start of a revolution in orthopaedic shoes, elastic waists and comfy, baggy clothes. When the 60 million Americans who make up the over-50 market exert their economic power, the word to reckon with will be muppie — mature urban professions. They are already beginning to outnumber their younger counterparts, the yuppies, and, as the baby boomers age, the muppies are destined to become the country's largest age group.

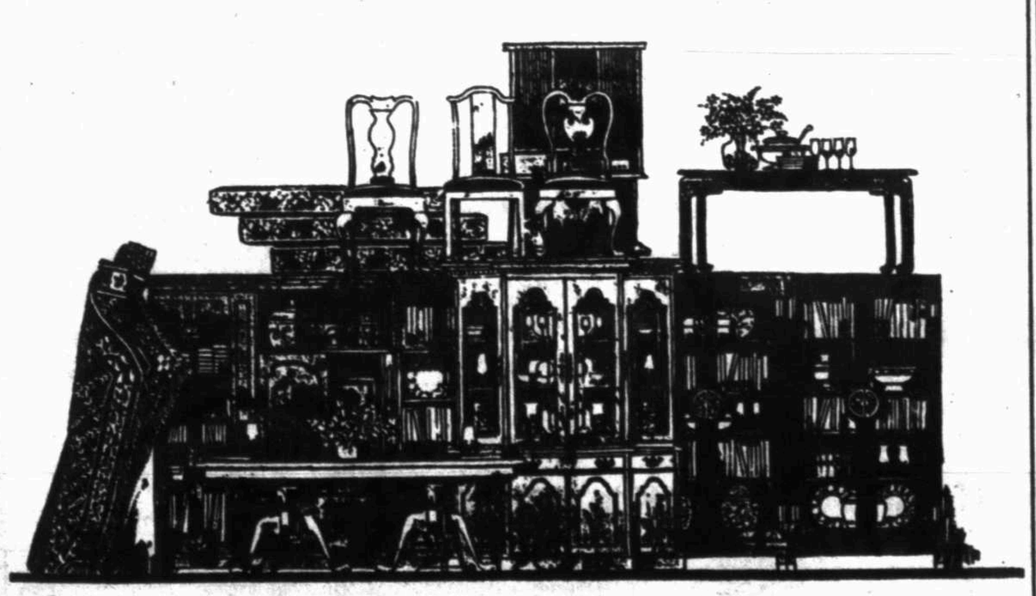

According to the Ready-to-Wear Review, a trade publication, older women spend more on apparel than younger women; muppies hold 42 percent of the country's disposable income and account for 20 percent of all apparel purchases.

AT WIT'S END

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left a few of her favorite columns behind.

By Erma Bombeck

For the past eight working days, my secretary has brought the same lunch: pasta salad. This is not one of those new trendy diets, nor is she crazy for pasta salad. She is a mother who is paying the price for daring to serve her family something "different." She either dumps the excess in herself or the disposal.

Bombeck

I don't want to be dramatic, but I was responsible for getting my children shots against diphtheria, polio, tetanus, whooping cough, measles and mumps. I made their fevers subside, cured their upset stomachs, and rushed them to the hospital to mend broken bones.

Yet I put a casserole in front of them that they've never seen before, and they turn on me like a stranger offering them a candy bar to get in the car.

"What is this stuff?"

"It's called 'Seafood Fiesta,'" I say, "and you'll love it."

"Are you sure?"

"Trust me."

Minutes later, their tongues will ease out of their mouths and touch the contents ever so slightly. Then they will spit, gag, grab their throats, drink an extra pitcher of water, and stage the biggest dying scene since Ali MacGraw in "Love Story."

Every child is born wanting his own food taster. And parents comply. A baby who can't even focus will refuse to open his mouth until you are smiling reassuringly with strained lamb on your teeth. Even then, he might taste it and then blow it back in your face.

Generally, children do not like anything you have to eat with a fork or a spoon. If it doesn't squirt, spray or squish to the touch, stain the tablecloth or excite the dog when dropped on the floor, it is boring.

Children do not like white food. When it is served, they tend to make comments about it like, "This looks like the time Ronnie Stonslag had a cold." It is wise to stop them.

Children refuse to eat cereal that offers free African violets or pantyhose with each label. They're "into" plastic toys.

They never eat anything cheap or in season. They may bring school lunches home where the seal has never been broken. In a restaurant, however, they can eat twice their body weight and still want dessert.

A mother will dish out more than a thousand meals a year. If it isn't hamburger, hot dogs or pizza, it will be eaten only if there is a threat that it will eat them first.

My kids never liked pasta salad either, until they found you could dangle it from your nose — like French fries.

DEAR ABBY

Man's best friends make enemy of neighbor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice on a problem I have. Barking dogs! Within 100 feet of my home, there are four different families with dogs, either chained or fenced near my property, and they bark darn near 24 hours a day.

Van Buren

I realize it's natural for dogs to bark, but I don't believe it should be allowed constantly. It's nice to have a dog alert you when a stranger comes on your property, but these dogs bark at everything. A bird flies low: "bark, bark, bark!" The wind blows: "bark, bark, bark!" A car drives down the street: "bark, bark, bark!" One dog barks and the rest join in, each dog trying to outdo the others.

I can't sleep, read, watch television or entertain friends without interference from this canine quartet! I've called the police, but they can't do anything unless the animals are loose and invading my property.

My question: Do dogs have more rights than people? I work, pay my taxes, support my family, and I'm a contributing member of my community. What do these dogs contribute? Nothing. So what do I do?

If you publish this letter, don't use my name or address, or I'll have every animal rights activist in Oklahoma marching in my yard — barking! — DOG-TIRED

DEAR DOG-TIRED: You're mistaken if you say the police can't "do" anything. If dogs bark "darn near" 24 hours a day, they are disturbing the peace, which is prohibited by law. You could also call on the dog owners personally and state your case. That's what I'd do.

DEAR ABBY: Each year I have sent out Christmas cards to friends and family. With the cost of postage and greeting cards constantly rising, I would like to inform everyone that this will be the last year that I will send out cards.

How do I tactfully tell them? Should I enclose a note with each card? I have been an avid reader of "Dear Abby" for more than 30 years. — A MEDFORD, N.J., FAITHFUL

DEAR FAITHFUL: You need not inform anyone that you will not be sending out cards in the future. Sending holiday greetings is optional, not mandatory. But if anyone asks in subsequent years — which I doubt will happen — be honest and say, "It just became too expensive."

DEAR ABBY: This concerns "Sorrow in San Francisco" whose friend had died at 21 and was buried in a wedding gown by her bereaved parents.

"Sorrow" said, "Apparently time had dimmed their grief, as her grave was neglected and void of flowers."

Abby, neglected graves are not always the result of "dimmed grief." Some people's loved ones live great distances away, some are in poor health themselves, and others do not visit graves because they fear they will collapse in tears at the grave site — even after many years. (I know; I've been there.)

Incidentally, my own mother is gone, and time has not "dimmed" my grief. I gave her flowers while she lived. — SORROW UNDERSTOOD

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Men's fashion may not seem to change much, but men's attitudes toward clothing and appearance are changing, according to a national survey conducted for GQ magazine.

Erase the image of a man wearing whatever his wife tells him to wear and replace it with a man who dresses to suit his own expectations.

Those and other findings were key findings of the survey, said GQ merchandising editor Edward Cortese, who was in Los Angeles recently to promote men's cotton clothing.

This year's survey, called the American Male Opinion Index, tracked changes that may have occurred in past years.

Congressman wants tighter regulations for cosmetics

By Deborah Mesce

WASHINGTON (AP) — More effective and consistent regulation is needed to ensure the safety of cosmetics that do more than cleanse and beautify, a House subcommittee chairman said.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., chairman of the House Small Business subcommittee on regulation, said too many products that meet the definitions for both cosmetics and drugs slip through regulatory cracks in current law.

This group of "cosmeceuticals" — including anti-wrinkle and anti-aging creams, moisturizers, astringents and skin firmers — are regulated on the basis of marketing claims.

Wyden released a Congressional Research Service report that he said shows "two products with exactly the same ingredients can fall under entirely different regulations based on the fancy wording of smart advertisers."

Current law defines a cosmetic as something that is used to clean and beautify. A drug, under the law, is something used to diagnose, cure, treat, prevent disease or alter the structure or function of the body.

While drugs must undergo safety and effectiveness testing before they can be marketed, cosmetics "are the least regulated articles under the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act," the report said.

Wyden said the ambiguity in the current law, which dates to 1938, needs to be corrected to ensure that all cosmetics are safe.

The report offered several legislative options to clarify the classification of drugs and cosmetics.

Wyden will use it to help draft legislation providing for minimal regulation of the $18 billion a year cosmetics industry. Provisions are expected to include registration of manufacturers and requirements that they submit injury and testing reports to the Food and Drug Administration, a spokeswoman for the congressman said.

Ultimate bomb sought in war against roach

N.Y. Times News Service

An army of architects, immunologists, epidemiologists and medical anthropologists has begun an ambitious attack on a ubiquitous plague: cockroaches.

The bane of urban dwellers, the cockroach has long been implicated in spreading disease-causing microbes to people by contaminating food or cooking utensils.

But now scientists are finding that 10 million to 15 million Americans are allergic to cockroaches. And researchers say the problem is getting worse.

Reactions range from a runny nose and skin irritation to difficulty breathing. People who are very sensitive can go into life-threatening shock, the researchers say.

At the Department of Agriculture's Insects Affecting Man and Animals Research Laboratory in Gainesville, Fla., scientists are monitoring the insect's behavior, eating and sleeping habits.

They are studying how different types of construction and airflow patterns affect cockroach concentrations. And they are freezing and grinding up roaches and extracting proteins in an intricate search for the offending allergens.

"The more we know about the enemy, the more likely we will be able to defeat it," said Dr. Richard J. Brenner, an Agriculture Department entomologist who heads the effort in which research is conducted from purposely infested buildings at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Every year, homeowners and apartment dwellers spend about $1.5 billion on pesticides, but so far cockroaches have resisted every assault nature and man have mounted.

In a study of six aprtment complexes in Florida, Agriculture Department researchers found that about half the 1,022 apartments harbored more than 13,000 German cockroaches each. Brenner said that in those apartments, pest control, if provided, was with the cheapest, most common pesticides, to which many cockroaches are now resistant.

Researchers believe that developing an allergy to cockroaches is dependent on genetic predisposition, large infestations and chronic exposure to certain cockroach proteins that adhere to dust particles and become airborne.

Studies by Bann C. Kang, chief of allergy and clinical immunology at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, show that exposure to these cockroach allergens can lead to a severe asthma attack in 61 percent of asthmatics.

Studies have found that more than a third of people with other allergies are also hypersensitive to cockroaches and even 12 percent of people without any histories of allergies are allergic to some roaches. Hypersensitivity to cockroaches is even more common than such reactions to ragweed, Kang has found.

Treatment for allergy sufferers mainly involves alleviating symptoms. Allergists usually prescribe antihistamines for nasal discomfort or bronchial medication for asthma attacks. Immunotherapy is still in its infancy for combating this allergy, butKang has had some encouraging results producing blocking antibodies and reducing sensitivity.

Brenner said that the steady increase in reports of cockroach allergies over the past 25 years is partly a result of efforts to make homes more airtight. Cockroaches, it seems, like dark, cozy spaces where there is warm, moist, stagnant air. Attics and wall voids are perfect.

In a recent study, Brenner and Kathleen Barnes, a medical anthropologist at the University of Florida, compared the quality of home construction with the incidence of allergy in the Dominican Republic, where homes range from huts to luxury apartments.

Brenner is collaborating with Air Vent Inc., a company in Peoria, Ill., that plans to market ventilation systems to make homes cockroach-proof. He and his colleagues have also developed stronger repellents that could be impregnated into insulation or other construction material.

"We haven't developed a silver bullet," Brenner said. "but it's going to be very hard for these cockroaches to survive these multiple strategies."

NATION IN BRIEF

Dubcek meets with 'family'

NEW PRAGUE, Minn. (AP) — Czechoslovakian leader Alexander Dubcek feasted on sausages and potato dumplings Wednesday and told residents of a town founded by Czech immigrants they were like "members of my family."

"I am glad that many of you have found a new mother country in the United States," the president of the Czechoslovakian parliament told a crowd of about 1,200 — half the population of the southern Minnesota farming community.

Children chanted "Dubcek, Dubcek!" and waved Czechoslovakian and American flags.

"I am especially glad that the new generation that is here does not forget the old country," he said through a translator.

In an effort to inject life into Czechoslovakia's sagging economy, a six-member delegation including top ministers of industry and science is visiting Minnesota to learn about medical and computer technology.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev made a one-day visit to the state in June for similar reasons.

Dubcek, now 68, led the 1968 Prague Spring liberalization movement that was crushed by Warsaw Pact forces. Last year, he regained his post as head of parliament following two decades of political exile and relative obscurity.

Peace talks to resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said Wednesday their governments agreed to revive the stalled Middle East peace process with no links to the crisis in the Persian Gulf.

The Baker-Levy meeting marked the first substantive talks between the Bush administration and Israel's new right-of-center government, and the secretary of state called them "useful, friendly and productive."

Baker said he and Levy "also agreed that we should not link the situation between Israel and the Palestinians and the situation in the Persian Gulf," where Iraq's armed forces continue to occupy Kuwait.

At issue in the Shamir plan, which Baker long has sought to implement, is the future of the 1.7 million Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War.

NEW YORK (AP) — The parents of a tourist from Utah who was stabbed to death in a subway mugging testified to a grand jury Wednesday before heading home for the funeral.

Sherwin and Karen Watkins looked tired and pained as they entered Manhattan Criminal Court shortly before noon to testify about how their son, Brian, was stabbed to death chasing youths who robbed his father.

Funeral services for Brian Watkins were scheduled for Saturday in Provo.

On Sunday, the 22-year-old tennis buff, his parents, his brother, Todd, and Todd's wife, Michelle, had been at the U.S. Open in Queens and were waiting for a train in a midtown subway station at around 10:20 p.m. when they were attacked.

The family was approached by a group of youths who sliced open Sherwin Watkins' pants and took a money clip containing about $200 and some credit cards. One punched Mrs. Watkins in the face.

The brothers interceded and Brian was stabbed, but started to give chase before collapsing. He died 40 minutes later.

The youths robbed the Watkinses because they wanted money to go dancing at the nearby Roseland Ballroom, police said.

Strait not on board

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bus in country singer George Strait's entourage collided with a car Wednesday, resulting in the minor injury of one person on board, a spokeswoman said.

Strait was not on the bus, which was carrying T-shirts and other concert souvenirs, said Dottie Herndon, a spokeswoman for Strait's manager in Nashville, Tenn.

One person suffered a cut and was taken to a nearby hospital, she said.

DEAR KIDS.

WE NEED YOUR HELP!

WE'RE ASKING ALL FAMILIES TO GET READY FOR NEWSPAPER-IN-THE-WINDOW DAY. SATURDAY. SEPTEMBER 8TH TO HELP CELEBRATE FAMILY READING AND LAUNCH NATIONAL LITERACY MONTH. HERE'S WHAT YOU DO:

ONE. GET THE FRONT PAGE OF THE NEWSPAPER AND SOME SCOTCH TAPE. PICK OUT YOUR FAVORITE WINDOW (THE ONE YOU ALWAYS LOOK OUT TO SEE WHAT'S GOING ON). THEN TAPE THE NEWSPAPER TO THE WINDOW LIKE A FLAG.

TWO. MAKE A LIST OF FIVE FRIENDS YOU ARE GOING TO GET TO DO THE SAME THING.

THE FUN PART IS ON SATURDAY MORNING. SEPTEMBER 8TH. TELL EVERYBODY YOUR NEWSPAPER IS IN THE WINDOW BECAUSE

FRIENDS TO TELL

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____
4. _____
5. _____

YOURS TRULY.
