House ups government debt ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, warned that June Social Security checks may bounce unless Congress acts, today reversed an earlier vote and narrowly approved a boost in the government's debt ceiling, now at its $1.49 trillion limit.

The Senate was expected to act later in the day.

With almost no debate, the House voted 211-198 to add $30 billion to the debt limit, the government's authority to borrow money to meet its obligations. Only 69 Republicans voted to support the Reagan administration's plea to raise the borrowing authority.

"Now that we have done the spending, we have to do the borrowing to pay for it," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., before the vote.

The administration said that, without the increase, the government could not pay its bills.

"Current projections indicate that Treasury cash balances will be virtually exhausted on May 24," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said in a letter to congressional leaders. "If Congress does not act, over $9 billion in Social Security checks scheduled to be mailed later this week may not be honored when presented for payment."

A move in the House to increase the debt limit Tuesday became entangled in election-year politics and was rejected, 263-150.

The Democratic majority there withheld its votes for the administration's request to boost the national debt. Democrats said they wanted to see President Reagan's Republican allies line up behind the administration request as well.

Only 46 of the 166 Republicans in the House voted for the increase Tuesday.

Despite the defeat, leaders in both houses indicated they expected the increase to be approved before Congress adjourns this week for its Memorial Day recess.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, indicated before the vote today that Democrats would go along with the increase, but added:

"I have told my colleagues, 'We bailed them (the GOP) out before and we may have to do it again."

Congress has granted an increase in the debt limit 21 times in the last decade.

Regan warned that failure to act would jeopardize payments to military and federal retirees and other government obligations, in addition to Social Security benefits.

Regan's letter urged "all members" to support raising the ceiling.

Raising the debt limit does not commit the government to further deficit spending. Instead, it simply allows the government to borrow to pay debts run up previously and cover the interest on those debts. The House measure would cover those borrowing needs through June 22.

Garza N-site studied

Negotiations are now underway in neighboring Garza County to the northwest between a landowner and representatives of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority.

The Garza County site is one of two which authority spokesmen say have "surfaced recently." Both were characterized as "serious negotiations at this point."

These are in connection with the ongoing search for suitable land to locate Texas' first dumping ground for the state's low-level radioactive waste.

Tom Blackburn, director of special projects for the agency, said the second potential site is located in South Texas in McMullen County.

He said the Garza County negotiations are in the preliminary stage. He said the agency is completing title searches to determine if the property owner has clear title to both surface and mineral rights to the property.

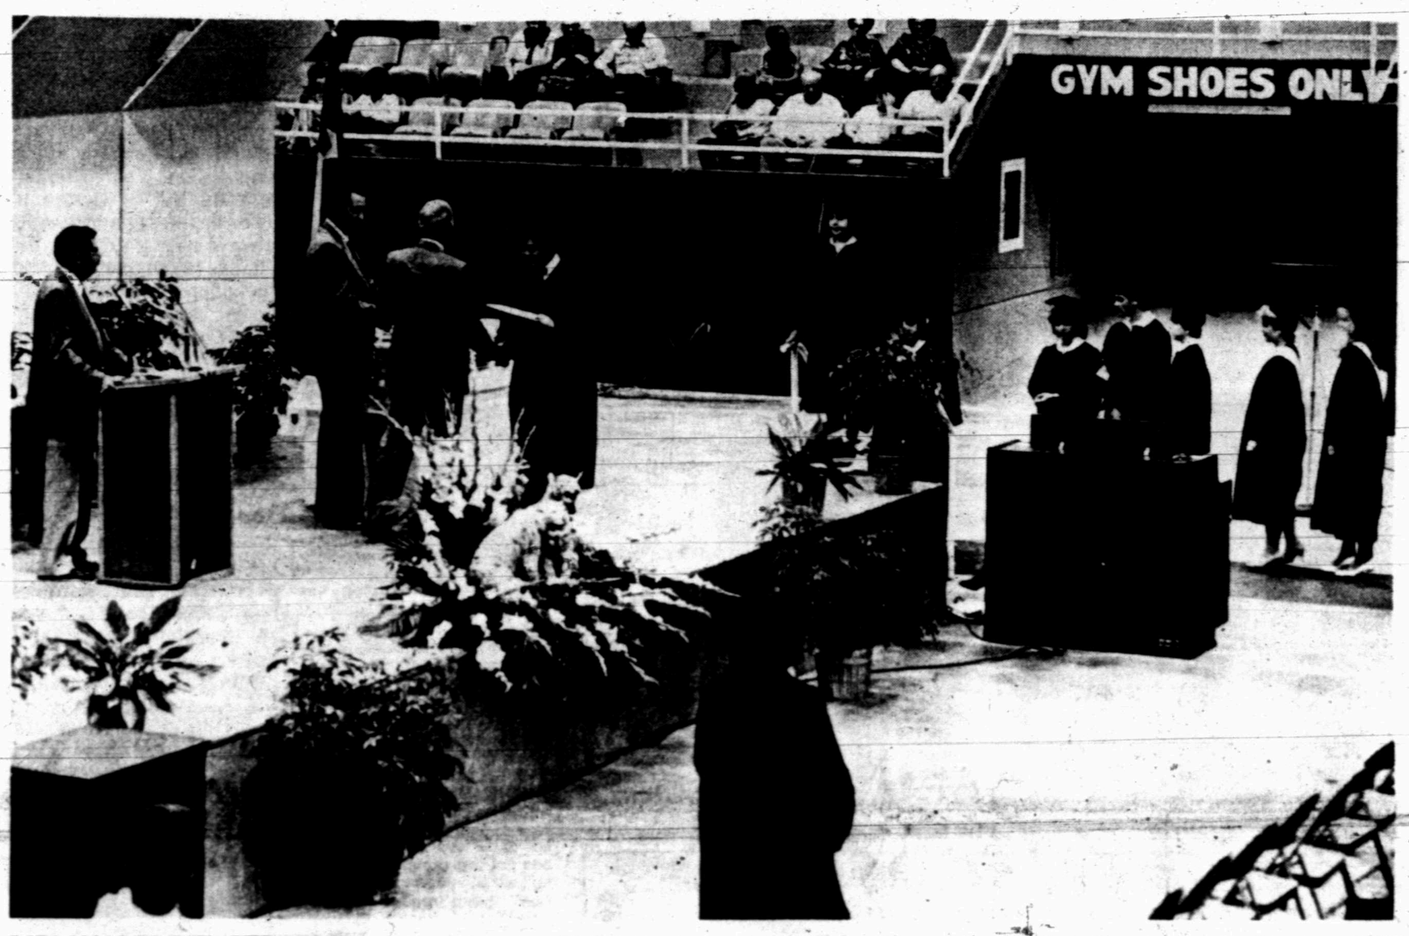

Once this is completed, he said the agency will negotiate for permission to conduct geological testing on-site.

Blackburn said Garza was the only county where active land sale negotiations are now underway in those identified as the Red Bed Plains area.

Other counties included in this group are Scurry, Borden, Howard and Mitchell.

He noted the agency had also been contacted by a Mitchell County landowner regarding a possible sale. He said this site was discarded after testing indicated water levels were too shallow.

Blackburn said Thursday morning from his Austin office that to his knowledge no offers of land sales have surfaced in Scurry County.

Grads told rise above mistakes

The 170 graduates of the Snyder High School class of 1984 were told to "rise from the ashes of defeat" during combined Baccalaureate-Commencement exercises Wednesday evening.

The Rev. Miller Robinson of the Colonial Hill Baptist Church told the graduates to expect to slip at sometime before their lives are over in our "pressure cooker" world and to be prepared to get up and try again.

The secret to success, Robinson said, is to admit your mistakes, learn from them and try again.

Those who blame bad luck for their failings will never succeed, he told the graduates. A responsible person will admit their mistakes, learn and profit from them and look ahead to future possibilites for achievement.

Robinson's address opened the ceremonies in the Scurry County Coliseum. The evening included a performance of the class song by a choral group composed of graduating seniors and the announcement of scholarships awarded to class members.

Total value of college scholarships granted for the class of '84 and announced Wednesday exceeded $32,000.

School Board President J.D. Hinton presented each of the graduates with their diplomas to conclude the ceremonies.

Snyder High School graduates receiving scholarship awards announced at commencement Wednesday included:

Guy Staton: highest ranking student in the graduating class — a tuition scholarship to the college of his choice granted by the State Legislature; one of the select students chosen to receive the $3,000 Carr Academic Scholarship to Angelo State University; and the T.D. Wiman, Jr. Memorial Scholarship given in memory of T.D. Wiman, Jr., principal of Snyder High School from 1948-1961. This $400 award is made annually to a graduating student who typifies the characteristics Wiman encouraged in his students: scholarship, leadership, personal integrity and social awareness.

Susan Brim: second highest ranking graduate, a scholarship certificate from the members of the Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas.

Ray Alarcon: a $100 per semester scholarship to Western Texas College from The Shack.

Ray Canales: a $200 music scholarship to West Texas State University from the music department.

Robert "Sonny" Cobb: a $1,000 scholarship to Lubbock Christian College awarded by the Christian College Memorial Scholarship Fund provided by individuals of the 37th St. Church of Christ.

David Cook: three scholarships from West Texas State University, a $200 music scholarship, a $200 academic scholarship and a $200 President's Honor Scholarship.

Jerry Comstock: a $100 a semester scholarship to Western Texas College from The Shack.

Kristi Cox: a $100 scholarship to the college of her choice from the Gene McGee Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Cherie Curfman: a $200 Cunningham Academic Scholarship to Western Texas College.

Teka Eicke: a Presidential Scholarship of one-half tuition to Oklahoma Christian College. This award is given for ACT score, leadership qualities, and evidence of promise in the major field and is valued at $6,000.

SHS art entries in running

Two Snyder High School artists have been included in the top 10 finalists in the Congressional Art Contest sponsored by 17th District Congressman Charles Stenholm.

Art works by Jeff Barrett and Rhonda Dusten were chosen from among 40 entries in the competition last Saturday in Abilene.

The overall winner from the top 10 will be announced at a dinner hosted by Stenholm in Abilene Saturday.

The winning selection will hang in the Capitol building in Washington D.C. as part of an exhibit sponsored by the Congressional Arts Caucus.

Other finalists in the competition, open to high school-age students, were from Abilene, Alvord, Paint Rock and Bridgeport.

Centennial's contest lists now 'growing'

Both the Centennial beard growing contest and the window display competition have begun to draw entries.

The event is under the joint-sponsorship of the Scurry County Historical Commission and the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber staffers reported beard contest entries Thursday. In addition, plans for the Centennial were reviewed Thursday morning at a commission meeting.

The celebration is planned June 28-July 4.

The following men have entered the beard growing contest: Mickey Nunley, Amado Montalvo, Fred Castillo, Marvin McClanahan, Clint Potts, Rodger Sullenger, Rick Connor, Benny Hollis, Steve Whittenburg, Roy McQueen, David C. Kattes, B.J. Bartels, Wayne Burney, Roy Bailey, Tim Riggan and Joe Jackson.

In addition, eight businesses have indicated they will participate in the window and in-store display contest being planned. Already signed up for

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There's one good thing about living in the past--it's cheaper.

Ed Owens of Owens Department Store on College Ave. gave us a clipping from the May 17, 1884 Warrick Enquirer in Indiana.

There were great medical discoveries then--and the price was right. It read:

"A great discovery that is bringing joy to homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave is Dr. King's new discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, tickling in the throat, pain in the side and chest, or any disease of the throat and lungs. Positive cure guaranteed."

All types of organizations are getting into politics these days. Employee groups, professional organizations and business associations all have political action committees to help favorite candidates.

The computer has been a great aid to organizations who want to communicate with their members. Sometimes, however, modern technology hurts rather than than helps.

Last week, local members of TSTA received a computer-typed letter from their Austin headquarters. The letter urged local educators to be sure and vote on May 5 and to participate in precinct conventions.

There was nothing wrong with the effort, except that it arrived in local mail boxes almost two weeks too late.

We're confident that the resolution to invite Congressman Charles Stenholm to leave the Democratic party is not representative of the feelings of most Democrats in Scurry County.

The action which came at last Saturday's county convention happens when only a handful participate in local party politics. The convention system will work only if there is wide-spread participation.

Participation may be a thing of the past, therefore the move to a presidential primary in Texas will receive increasing attention.

In Brief

House may nix rebels' aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders predict the House will stand by its opposition to any money for undercover aid in Nicaragua, casting a cloud over President Reagan's effort to get a quick infusion of military funds for El Salvador.

"It seems to me a majority are for not giving any more funds whatsoever" for covert assistance to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government, Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Wednesday.

May revive missile sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, eager to stop Iranian attacks on Persian Gulf oil shipments without direct U.S. intervention, is revising plans to send Stinger anti-aircaft missiles to Saudi Arabia.

The Pentagon asked Congress for permission to send 1,200 of the weapons to Saudi Arabia and 1,613 to Jordan earlier this year, but the proposal was withdrawn in March after Israel recoiled at the possibility of Stingers in the hands of its Jordanian neighbors.

All defendants judged guilty

ZACATECOLUCA, El Salvador (AP) — The jury hearing the case of five former national guardsmen charged in the murder of four American churchwomen today found them guilty on all counts.

The five-member jury, which had sat through an all-night court session, deliberated one hour before reaching its verdict. The guardsmen had been taken back to their jail cells and were not in the courtroom when the verdict was read.

The trial was considered crucial to U.S.-Salvadoran relations. Congress has withheld $19 million in military aid to El Salvador this year pending a verdict.

The defendants each faced three criminal charges — aggravated homicide, aggravated destruction of property, and theft. The final two charges stem from the burning of a van in which the churchwomen were riding when they were abducted.

The jury started deliberations at 5 a.m. EDT, after a trial that started Wednesday morning and continued through the night with only short recesses.

The only one of the defendants who had confessed to the murders told reporters Wednesday he was coerced and offered money for his confession. But Judge Bernardo Rauda Murcia said he would not allow the confession to be retracted at the trial.

"The prosecution and defense have to analyze the case as is stated in the (prepared) proceedings," the judge said. "They cannot veer from them .... Immediately, I will call it to their attention that they have no right to do it."

The jurors sat in straight-backed chairs throughout the long session, listening to pre-trial testimony being read, then to arguments by prosecutors and defense attorneys.

Michael Posner, executive director of the New York-based Lawyers Committee for International Human Rights which has represented the victims' families, said U.S. Embassy officials were pressing for a trial without recess to make sure the jurors were not subject to any outside pressures.

Cots had been brought into the courthouse in the evening in case jurors decided to sleep, but they were never unfolded.

Defendant Carlos Joaquin Contreras Palacios, 27, told reporters he was innocent despite his pre-trial confession.

"It isn't the truth, because they have tortured us, threatened us, offered us money not to tell the truth," he said.

Three other defendants, who have maintained their innocence, also claimed they had been offered money by members of the armed forces to admit involvement in or confess to the Dec. 2, 1980, murders of the churchwomen.

Maryknoll nuns Ita Ford, 40, and Maura Clarke, 49, both of New York, and Ursuline Sister Dorothy Kazel, 41, and lay worker Jean Donovan, 27, both of Cleveland, were found shot to death and buried in a shallow grave two days after they were last seen driving from El Salvador international airport to San Salvador.

"I have to tell you the truth. We were offered a bribe while in custody to confess to these crimes which we did not commit," said former Sgt. Luis Antonio Colindres Aleman, 28, accused of leading the other guardsmen in the crime.

"The American officials have been pressuring us to confess to a crime we did not commit, through the use of money," Jose Roberto Moreno Canjura, 28, said.

The two other defendants are Francisco Orlando Contreras, 36, and Daniel Canales, 27. The guardsmen face a maximum sentence of 30 years imprisonment if convicted.

There's a reason why homemaking has never been taken seriously as a profession.

It has nothing to do with pride, performance, goals or respect. We never made it big because we don't have business cards. We may be the last of the professionals who don't.

I've answered doors where Willy Loman was standing there in the hot sun in a 30-year-old three-piece suit selling vegetable slicers, talcum powder, firewood and storm doors from a pick-up truck and the moment he reached in his pocket and said, "Here's my card," he turned into Lee Iacocca.

Somehow the business card gave him a snoutful of respectability.

I've been given a lot of business cards in my time. They are pressed into my hand at parties, tucked inside programs, and left in my message box at hotels. They all have something in common. They are always edited. The formal name is crossed out and "Bubba" or "Giggles" is written in. The business address is always wrong and has the change inked in over it and the phone number is different. Also, there are instructions as to the time of day it is best to call and another number is listed on the back. Sometimes, there is a high school graduation picture that bears no resemblance to the owner of the card.

The problem, the way I understand it, is that business cards are like oversexed coat hangers and rubber bands stored on doorknobs. Left in a drawer or a suit pocket, business cards multiply faster than the name cards left over from graduation announcements. Everyone is too cheap to throw them away.

A housewife in Wichita, Kans., got sick of everybody else flipping out those little suckers with an authoritative air and instructions to "call if you need something," so she had her own cards printed up. At the top of it was her slogan, "Every Mother is a Working Mother," and underneath she listed heself as Lynn Groner, Homemaker, Licensed. In the lower lefthand corner were her address and phone number and the right hand her promise, "years of experience turning out quality products."

She said the reason a lot of housewives don't have business cards is a small card $3\frac{1}{2}$ by 2 inches isn't room enough to list all of our services.

Lynn may be right. On the other hand, I like to think we're a group too exclusive to go public and too smart to advertise for more work.

If you want something pressed, flushed, cooked, waxed, warmed over, bleached, delivered, hemmed, or picked up, you know where to find me, Sweetie. I'm in the book!

West's queen with his king. At trick two, he ruffed East's return of a low heart. Then he led his queen of spades, which West ducked. East won with his singleton king and led another heart, which South had to ruff. South was now down to three trumps, the same number as West. South led his jack of trumps. West took his ace and led his jack of hearts. South could do no better than to ruff, and West's long trump set the contract.

Now look what happens if South plays low from dummy at trick one. West holds the trick but cannot afford a second heart lead, since that will establish dummy's 10 or king as a winner, depending on which card West leads. So West has to lead some other suit. When South gets in, he can lead his queen of spades. East takes his king but cannot afford to lead a heart. South can now clear the trumps and score his game.

Declarer's careless play at trick one was unlucky in that East could win the first trump lead with his singleton king, but a more astute declarer dodges the bullet by making the correct play at trick one.

Poetry Society meets

The Scurry County Poetry Society met with Ina Fargason Monday night. President Garnet Quiett called the meeting to order and chaplain Mayzelle Fenton gave the invocation.

The program was on writing the French villanelle and the cinquain, a short French poem. Janelle Burk told about the villanelle which is composed of five tercets and one quartrain. Christene Kilgo presented the cinquain and read one she had composed.

Ms. Burk reported that Mature Living magazine has accepted her poem, "Prayer for Growing Old," for publication. She also won a prize in an April monthly contest of the Poetry Society of Texas with her poem, "Seashore."

Ms. Fargason's poem, "The Walk," won a monetary award in a contest by Poetry Press. It was published in a chapbook of the best 100 poems received by Poetry Press in 1983.

Ms. Quiett reported that her poem, "Sky Travelers," won an award in a March monthly contest of the Poetry Society of Texas. Also her poem, "Some Day My Love," was accepted for publication by the Association of American Poetry of Honolulu, Hawaii in their "Anthology of American Poetry."

Members read their poems and Geneva Williamson, a visitor, read several poems which she composed.

The society dismissed until September when Mr. and Mrs. George Montandon will host the group.

In spite of controversy judge held murder trail

ZACATECOLUCA, El Salvador (AP) — The judge presiding over the trial of five former national guardsmen accused of murdering four American churchwomen is a reformed alcoholic and a modest man who rides the bus to work.

But Bernardo Rauda Murcia, 46, has pushed forward with the highly controversial trial despite the dangers that jurists here often face: several judges and justices of the peace have been killed during this Central American nation's 4½-year-old civil war.

Some Americans, working on behalf of the families of the slain women, have complained that Rauda Murcia has been unimaginative and sluggish in moving the case through the court.

These lawyers say that Rauda Murcia was unable to complete a full investigation into the crime and that important details implicating higher-ups have been omitted.

Michael Posner and R. Scott Greathead, of the New York-based Lawyers Committee for International Human Rights, complainedin a letter to Assistant Secretary of State Langhorne Motley that the court had failed to complete "a number of basic investigative steps."

But others here have expressed admiration for Rauda Murcia's doggedness.

"He's a fair, decent and honest guy," said one U.S. official, who insisted on anonymity. "He's handled the case as best he could."

"He's the kind of guy who dives into the water head first, without knowing how deep it is or if there are sharks at the bottom," said a prominent local attorney. "He's doing it out of economic need."

The lawyer, who has known Rauda Murcia for several years, asked not to be identified for security reasons.

Rauda Murcia admitted the limitations of his courthouse, which he said lacks the basic tools necessary to conduct an ivestigation.

"You know, we don't even have the money to hire a bicycle messenger," he told reporters recently.

Rauda Murcia earns a salary of $437 a month. His wife died suddenly two weeks ago, leaving him with three small children to care for. They live with his parents in a lower-middle class neighborhood of San Salvador, the capital, and he rides a bus 35 miles southeast each morning to work.

Standing less than five feet high, Rauda Murcia appeared in the courtroom Wednesday in a gray polyester suit that looked at least one size too big.

He is missing three fingers from an accident in 1966. He said a passing horse-cart mangled his right hand, which was hanging out the window of a car in which he was slumped back on a seat in a drunken stupor.

Since then, Rauda Murcia said, he and three of his court secretaries have joined Alcoholics Anonymous and stopped drinking.

Rauda Murcia said in a recent interview that he does not fear reprisals for handling what has become known here as "the nuns' case because he is acting on good conscience.

"If they detected I was acting with partiality, they could blame me," Rauda said. "But I'm acting impartially. It's not my fault."

Cough won't go away

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is 81 years old and when he gets tired or overdoes it, he starts coughing. It can keep him awake all night. As this goes on he gets more exhausted and loses his voice. We thought this was bronchitis but the doctors didn't seem to help him. He's in good health otherwise. He doesn't sleep very well at night and seems to require a great deal of rest and sleep.

DEAR READER — It's common to think a cough means you have a cold, a respiratory infection or sinus trouble. Post nasal drip is rarely the cause of a cough and if a cough accompanies drainage from the nasal passages it's usually because there's also inflammation of the throat.

But a cough can be a symptom of many other problems. A serious cause can be cancer of the lungs, which is one reason why an unexplained cough that persists needs to be evaluated by a physician. Chronic bronchitis is a more common cause for a cough and the most common cause is cigarette smoking.

A frequently overlooked cause for a mild cough is congestive heart failure. An accumulation of even a small amount of fluid in the lungs can stimulate the cough reflex. The fluid may be such a small amount that it doesn't show on a chest X-ray so it can be overlooked if not suspected.

That could be a problem in your husband's case. Extra activity may be more than his heart can handle, causing mild failure with just enough fluid in the lungs to cause problems. Lying down can aggravate the breathing problem in such cases. Digitalis or medicines to strengthen the heartbeat, and eliminating retained salt and water with salt restriction or diuretics often make a big difference.

The main causes for cough are discussed in more detail in the Health Letter 8-10, Cough: How and When to Treat It, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The bottom line is that your husband needs to keep checking with his doctors to identify what's causing his problem and what can be done about it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A woman has had a sexual affair with a man who has a chronic condition of genital herpes. They've never had sex during an outbreak or even within a few weeks before or after an occurrence. She has never had signs or symptoms of genital herpes.

She had a cervical biopsy of an area that showed moderate dysplasia, yet the Pap smear was normal. Is this related to, or could perhaps be, herpes? Could a herpes blister on the cervix be confused with dysplasia by the pathologist? Can this woman safely assume she doesn't have herpes virus or should she pursue this with tests?

DEAR READER — Dysplasia merely means abnormal cells. The abnormalities can be mild or severe. They may disappear spontaneously. Or they may progress into abnormal cells of early cervical cancer. Dysplasia doesn't mean cancer or that a person will ever develop cancer. It's quite common. A biopsy is done to be sure it's just dysplasia. And dysplasia doesn't mean herpes either.

I'd be reluctant to assure anyone who has sex with someone who has herpes that he or she doesn't also have herpes. Making the diagnosis isn't always easy. Tests on blisters or acute lesions is one of the best ways to make the diagnosis.

Program targets strays

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — Health officials in this Mexican border city have vaccinated more than 4,000 dogs in an effort to control a rabies epidemic that has resulted in treatments of 28 people so far this year.

Dr. Guillermo Garcia Aguirre, city health center director, declared the epidemic Wednesday, warning that officials must speed up efforts to vaccinate the city's 40,000 dogs and round up strays.

The World Health Organization has offered to send personnel to the city and provide other assistance, Aguirre said.

In the latest case, a dog attacked 13 people, including its owners, prompting doctors at the city's health center to begin antirabies treatment for all, authorities said Wednesday.

The victims included 11 children from a lower middle-class neighborhood on the city's south side. It was the ninth rabies case of the year and the third in two weeks.

Officials at a rabies testing center in Reynosa said examination of the dog's brain showed evidence of rabies.

Aguirre said a cow was also exposed to rabies during the early stages of the epidemic.

He said about 60 percent of the city's dog population are strays. Aguirre said that 4,580 dogs have been vaccinated since a rabies control program began two weeks ago. He said 8,221 dogs have now been vaccinated.

The vaccination goal is 26,233, said Dr. Alberto Ramon Castillo Muniz, chief of preventive medicine at the Nuevo Laredo Health Center.

Only 90 stray dogs have been picked up by animal control officials so far, and 66 of the animals have been destroyed. City officials said they plan to round up 6,556 of the animals in the control program.

A Tamaulipas health official said only a week ago that rabies was under control in Nuevo Laredo.

Report shows shortage of Texas prison guards

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for Texas prisoners says he will ask a judge to find the state's prison officials in contempt of court if new figures agree with January data which showed too few guards are working at five prison units.

William Bennett Turner said Wednesday he may ask U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to find the state in contempt of his sweeping prison reform order issued in 1981.

Papers filed by the office of Vincent Nathan, whom Justice appointed to oversee prison reforms, found five units of the prison system were 149 guards short of the levels they were supposed to meet by January.

Turner said he will seek updated statistics before asking for the hearing.

Prison officials maintain the shortages have been corrected since the first of the year.

Banks to compensate victims of robberies

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of two banks that had refused to reimburse victims of automatic teller machine robberies have reversed their policy following complaints by federal authorities.

Texas Federal Savings and Union Bank and Trust Co., which refused earlier this month to reimburse three victims of automatic teller robberies, will make compensations in the future, their officials said.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Board told The Dallas Morning News the victims were entitled to reimbursement, and the two banks then reversed their decisions. Officials of a third institution, Capital Bank, said they were uncertain whether they would reconsider their policy.

Women in three separate cases were accosted, robbed of their jewelry and cash, then forced at gunpoint to drive to an automatic teller machine. In another case, Texas Federal depositor Mark Carter said he was jabbed in the ribs with a gun and ordered to turn over his MPACT card or die.

"We've refunded their money and expressed our regret about this," said Texas Federal vice president Jerry Jameson.

Reserve Board officials in Washington said customers' losses due to theft, loss of cards or robbery are limited to $50. Victims of the four recent Dallas teller-machine robberies lost $140 to $500 each.

At Union Bank, cashier Howard Conine said, "I anticipate we will refund her money. The main thing is to make the customer happy, and we're not talking about a whole lot of money here."

Conine said the bank does not expect many such robberies will occur.

"We're still studying it," said Marvin H. Hancock Jr., president and chief executive officer of Capital Bank. "There are a lot of ramifications."

Dolores Smith, assistant director of the Federal Reserve Board's division of consumer and community affairs, said the banks' responsibility to reimburse customers robbed at teller machines is "pretty clear."

She said the procedure in such cases was outlined in a 1983 reserve board policy bulletin sent to banks.

"I would hope that the publicity surrounding this would encourage the banks to take the initiative and settle this," she said.

Any victim unsatisfied with a bank's decision may complain in writing to the reserve board's Washington office, she said.

Hamilton aided outlaw pair during the 1930s

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Floyd Hamilton says his friendship with Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker meant more to him than the $5,000 reward money he could have reaped for turning the notorious bank robbers in to authorities.

"But I told them what they could do with their $5,000. I wouldn't do it," said Hamilton, reflecting on the ambush 50 years ago Wednesday that killed his old friends. " ... I give 'em (Bonnie and Clyde) my word, and there never was any question I'd go agin' it."

Hamilton, from west Dallas, served 22 years in Texas and federal prisons, including two years for harboring Bonnie and Clyde.

He said his friendship with the couple dated back to his childhood.

"Bill Decker (a sheriff's deputy then) and Winter King (the prosecuting attorney) offered it to me to put Bonnie and Clyde on the spot, you know, to tell where they'd be at a certain time," he said.

The 75-year-old Hamilton said he saw Bonnie and Clyde at least once a week from 1932 to 1934, when they were on the run. He said he was their accomplice.

"I've always believed your word is your bond; it's the one thing you own that no one can take away from you no matter how poor you are," Hamilton, who was himself an outlaw, said. "I've believed that come thick and thin."

Current Soviet Afghan actions may cause widespread famine

LONDON (AP) — The current Soviet offensive in Afghanistan could cause widespread famine, according to a British study which says two out of three Afghan children examined by researchers were starving or malnourished.

In another report issued here Wednesday, Jane's Defense Weekly said Soviet planes are dropping "liquid fire" bombs on Afghan rebels and also are using fuel-air bombs that kill anyone within a quarter-mile radius.

The magazine, part of the authoritative Jane's Publications, said the Soviets have been using the weapons since the summer in eastern Afghanistan in a major battlefield testing program. It said the "liquid-fire" bombs shower a tar-like substance on the ground that can burst into flames when stepped on.

The former Afghan charge d'affaires in Moscow defected to Pakistan on Wednesday and condemned the Soviets for "the genocide of my countrymen." The diplomat, Abdul Majid Mangal, returned to Kabul from Moscow six months ago and had been working in the Foreign Ministry.

The report on hunger in Afghanistan came from a government-financed study led by an anthropologist, Frances D'Souza of London University's School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

She said she did not go to Afghanistan herself but directed researchers who slipped into the country last year without the knowledge of the Soviet-backed regime in Kabul. Most of the researchers were university graduates, including refugees and others working with guerrilla groups in Afghanistan.

Ms. D'Souza said much information came from some of the 3 million refugees who have fled to Pakistan since the Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan in 1979 to back the Kabul regime against rebels.

The survey urged the United Nations to ship in food via insurgents.

"The threat of widespread famine is very, very serious and recent unprecedented offensives by the Soviets mean the situation has almost certainly got worse within the past six weeks," Ms. D'Souza said.

Last month the Soviets began a major offensive against guerrillas in the Panjsher Valley north of Kabul.

The report said researchers weighed and measured 5,126 children between 1 and 5 years old and found that 62 percent of them were severely underfed or risked malnourishment.

Before 1979, Afghanistan was practically self-sufficient in most foodstuffs, including wheat, but the Soviet Union now provides wheat, sugar and other items, said Ms. D'Souza. She said cotton production, the major cash producer, has dropped 70 percent and rice production by nearly 75 percent.

The report said food prices have risen sharply since the Soviet intervention.

Asked how many Afghans were starving or malnourished, Ms. D'Souza said: "I estimate there are about 500,000 now, over 250,000 in the northwest province and the rest scattered in other regions." She did not give the overall population of the areas surveyed. Afghanistan's population is about 12 million.

EPA decision has pleased factions

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Texas environmentalists and public officials cheered a decision by the Environmental Protection Agency to deny offshore toxic waste incineration permits that would have allowed tons of waste to be dumped off the state coast.

"This is a great victory," said Connie Reisinger, spokeswoman for the Gulf Coast Coalition for Public Health, a group representing some of the most vocal opponents of offshore incineration.

"It shows we really do have a voice in government and that government will listen. But the issue of ocean incineration is far from closed."

In denying ocean incineration permits to Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Oakbrook, Ill., EPA assistant administrator Jack Ravan said the agency would be conducting additional research and considering other offshore sites for future waste disposal.

The EPA plan would have allowed the burning of 3.3 million tons of toxic wastes on two ships 195 miles off the Texas coast.

More than 6,000 people attended EPA hearings in Brownsville last November to express opposition to the plan, including commercial and sport fishermen, farmworkers, tourist industry groups, doctors, representatives from the states of Alabama and Texas and environmentalists.

EPA officials said the hearing was the largest such meeting on an environmental issue in a decade.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, who said he had sued EPA in November for going ahead with hearings before making public their criteria for ocean incinerations, said he was happy with the EPA's decision.

"I told EPA they'd be way out of line if they issued PCB research permits, because they did not give us proper notice or the opportunity to comment on those. There is a violation of fundamental fairness when an agency changes theories in midstream."

J.J. Jacobsen, chairman of the pesticide committee of the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club, gave credit "to the thousands of people who volunteered to work long hours over the past two years, to force a government agency to do its job according to the law."

U.S. Rep. Samuel Ortiz, (D-Corpus Christi), who represents the 27th congressional district along the lower Gulf Coast, called the decision "good news for South Texas."

He praised citizen groups for organizing effective testimony against the burnings and said Ravan's decsion would restore citizen's faith in the system.

"This is what people can do," he said. "It's very refreshing to see this happen."

Ortiz applauded Ravan for "keeping his word" that he would consider objections from citizen groups.

Gov. Mark White said Ravan's decision was "a victory for common sense."

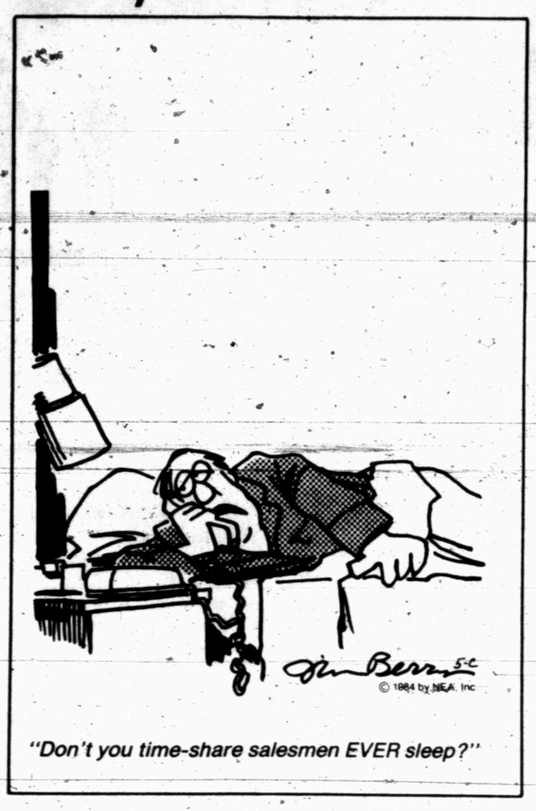

The governor said he would "continue to monitor the EPA's" plans for offshore waste-burning.

"We must continue to insure that the health and safety of citizens and the environmental balance of the Gulf of Mexico will be protected," White said.

Frontera Audubon Society member Cindy Chapman said the EPA ruling "awards shore birds, wading birds and pelagic birds a better chance of survival"

Opponents of offshore incineration had complained that the EPA has no standards by which to measure the safety of ocean burns.

Districts question financial program

AUSTIN (AP) — One million school children in Texas are being discriminated against and are not getting equal education opportunities because of discrepancies in the way the state distributes funds to poor and wealthy districts, according to a suit filed by eight school districts.

"One million children in Texas are discriminated against and deprived of rights to equal educational opportunity under the system of financing the Texas public school system," said the suit filed against the state Wednesday in an Austin district court.

Gov. Mark White and other state officials said inequities between tax-wealthy and tax-poor districts could be handled by the Legislature without court action.

White has said he would call a special session of the Legislature this summer to deal with education reform.

State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum said he was sure the suit would be a "conscience" to Texas lawmakers, no matter when they meet.

Plaintiffs in the suit are the eight districts and 25 individuals, mostly parents and students in Mexican-American and low-income areas.

Defendants are White, Bynum, Comptroller Bob Bullock, and the entire state government.

The court action, brought under the leadership of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund (MALDEF), asks a court order that would require Texas to maintain "a constitutional system of public school finance which assures equal financial and educational opportunities in school districts without regard to their wealth."

"We do not want our children at the bottom of the education ladder," said Estela Padilla of the Socorro district, near El Paso, one of the parent plaintiffs.

"We do not believe the special session will bring adequate changes in school financing," said Demetrio Rodriguez of the Edgewood district, San Antonio.

"We are slapping the state with this suit to wake them up," Rodriguez told a news conference.

White said later that he understood the concerns of those bringing the suit "though I feel that the best avenue for correcting the situation for the state's poor and needy school districts still remains in the legislative process ... I am firmly committed to seeing the problem of equalization resolved by the Legislature."

The districts filing the suit included San Antonio Edgewood; Bexar County; Socorro, El Paso County; Eagle Pass, Maverick County; Brownsville, Cameron County; San Elizario, El Paso County; South San Antonio; La Vega, McLennan County, and Pharr-San Juan-Alamo, Hidalgo County.

Rodriguez was a plaintiff in a federal court suit 11 years ago when the U.S. Supreme Court decided that Sexas' school financing method did not violate the federal constitution and it was up to Texas to correct the "chaotic and unjust" financing.

Alfred Kauffman, MALDEF lead attorney, said the plaintiffs in the suit were not taking any position on the education reform plans recommended by White and now being considered by House and Senate education committees.

Joaquin G. Avila, national president and general counsel of MALDEF, said Texas was just one of a number of states where his organization is working for more equal financing of schools.

"We are looking into a similar situation in the Los Angeles schools now," he said.

Non-Mexican aliens flood border area

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Border patrol officials would like to reach a cooperative arrangement with Mexican authorities to help fight a rising tide of non-Mexican aliens illegally crossing the Rio Grande into the United States.

A similar agreement between Laredo and Nuevo Laredo officials was put to the test last month and has already helped authorities stem the flow of aliens other than Mexican nationals, said Oscar Garza, criminal investigator with the U.S. Border Patrol in Laredo.

He said this arrangement could be the model for future cooperation between Mexican and U.S. officials.

Officers of the Direccion Federal de Seguridad in Nuevo Laredo, headed by Alejandro Cordoba, are now actively working to stop the new breed of aliens, referred by the border patrol as OTMs (other than Mexicans) before they cross the border into the United States.

Garza said the agreement was needed because of recent increases in the number of OTMs arrested in the United States.

"Before the agreement, we had about 78 arrests one week (of OTMs) and 48 another week. The first week of the agreement we had only 14 arrests," Garza said.

Border patrol agents in Laredo credit Mexican authorities with apprehending at least 12 Cubans, several Colombians and one Iranian, although precise figures were not available.

About 1,800 OTMs were arrested in the Laredo area in 1983, roughly 3 percent of the total alien arrests. In the first four months of 1984, 842 OTMs have already been arrested.

Most of the non-Mexican aliens are fleeing El Salvador, but arrests have also included Poles, Cubans, Yugoslavs and Iranians.

Garza said the Laredo-Nuevo Laredo agreement is the only one of which he is aware between the U.S. Border Patrol and any Mexican federal agency.

Racing, lobbyists paid for vacation to Ruidoso

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Times Herald reported today that House Speaker Gib Lewis and five legislative leaders spent a weekend at Ruidoso, N.M., earlier this month on a vacation financed by trucking and horse racing lobbyists.

Accompanied by several lobbyists, the legislators — all Democrats — flew to Ruidoso May 7 for golfing at the Inn of the Mountain Gods resort and the Alto Village Country Club, the Times Herald said.

Other legislators getting a vacation courtesy the lobbyists were State Sen. Robert Glasgow of Stephenville and State Reps. Mike Millsap of Fort Worth, Clint Hackney of Houston, Charles Evans of Hurst and Jim Rudd of Brownfield, the newspaper said.

Others on the trip were Robert Kelly, executive director of the Texas Legislative Council; Neal T. "Buddy" Jones, Lewis' executive assistant; Moncrief; and Austin lobbyists Robert Floyd, Robert Spellings, and Rob Johnson.

Johnson lobbies for commercial bus company interests, and Floyd and Spellings lobby for trucking interests.

Robert Blakeman, a Fort Worth trucking company executive and horse breeder, said he organized the trip and paid for the legislators' expenses, the Times Herald added.

Air transportation to the mountain resort was provided by him, horse racing lobbyist Robert E. Johnson, Tarrant County Judge Mike Moncrief and Track magazine, a publication for horse racing enthusiasts, the newspaper said.

Lewis was out of the country on vacation, but Jones said there is nothing illegal about the trip and that he sees nothing wrong with it.

"We felt it would be a good time for some of the leaders of the House to get together to discuss issues they are going to be facing in a special session: taxes, highway funding and education," Jones said. "And to get together and have some fellowship and some relaxation."

Blakeman said the upcoming session and White's proposals for tax increases to finance education reform were discussed during the weekend, but strongly denied that the purpose of the trip was to lobby the legislators, the Times Herald said.

"Every time I have gone to visit them it's always been in offices and it's always, 'Bobby I've got 10 minutes, I've got five minutes,' because they had 15 other people out there waiting," Blakeman said.

Radio-telephone service was opened between New York and London in 1927.

Doctors quit during protest

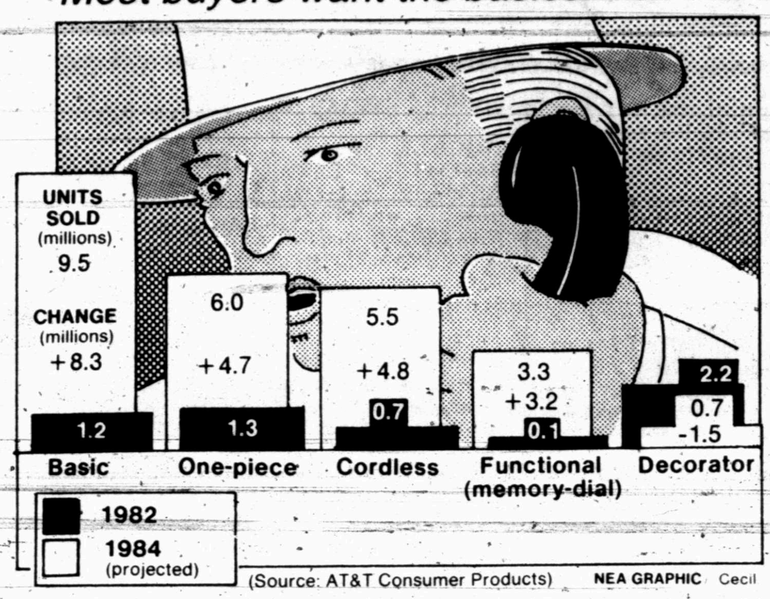

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Orange Memorial Hospital, Orange County's only hospital, had a new manager but less than a third of its doctors after a decision to lease the facility to a management company.

Twenty-two of the hospital's 31 doctors quit this week to protest the leasing of the facility to Houston-based Hospital Equities Inc.

The firm offered the Southeast Texas county $1.8 million a year for the first five years of a lease and $2 million a year after that, County Judge James Stringer said. The company also has offered to pay $600,000 a year, or 3 percent of gross revenues, for indigent health care.

Most buyers want the basics

Telephone gadgetry has grown, yet most people prefer basic dial or Touch-Tone phones. So says AT&T, which dominates the phone-sale business. There's virtually no interest in decorator models, such as Pac-Man, cartoon-character or novelty phones.

House wants Reagan to keep troops word

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has blocked Reagan administration plans for key anti-satellite weapons tests and followed the setback with a vote to hold the president to his pledge not to send combat troops to El Salvador.

The votes late Wednesday came as the House worked its way through a huge bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend a record $285 billion in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, the fourth year of President Reagan's five-year plan to "rearm America."

Although the Democrat-controlled House hasn't yet finished the bill, it has already given Reagan fewer than half the MX nuclear weapons he wanted and has refused for a third straight year to approve new nerve gas weapons. The bill will be sent later to the Republican-controlled Senate.

The House decided, 238-181, to ban testing of anti-satellite weapons against a fixed target in space unless the Soviet Union resumes tests of its weapon.

The Soviets have halted their anti-satellite tests and have called for a treaty banning the weapons.

But Reagan told Congress earlier this year that such a pact couldn't be verified and the U.S. program should go ahead.

Hours later, the House approved, 341-64, a ban on sending U.S. troops "into or over El Salvador or Nicaragua for combat" unless those forces are needed to save U.S. embassy personnel or other American citizens.

A day earlier, Reagan told a nationally televised news conference that "we have never had any consideration" of sending combat troops to aid the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government in its fight against leftist rebels.

If upheld by the Senate, the anti-satellite vote would permit the Pentagon to only fire the weapon into space and would bar any attempts to hit satellite-like targets. It would also extend a ban written into law last year by Congress.

The Pentagon has already twice this year successfully test fired the weapon, a small three-stage rocket carried aloft by an F-15 jet. But it was only aimed at an imaginary "point in space" and the Pentagon had planned a test later in the year.

Ragin' Tigers merit praise from Tomlin

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

When the Snyder High School football team sprints on the field next August, it won't be known as the Fightin' Tigers or as simply the Tigers.

It will be the "Ragin' Tigers."

"To us, that means we'll take the field fired up and as enthusiastic and as wild as we can. We're not going to settle for anything but the best effort," said Coach Dennis Tomlin, new head football coach. "In turn, I'd like to ask Tiger fans to be wild and crazy about their kids - and we'll just see what happens."

After 1-9 and 0-10 seasons, injecting enthusiasm into the Tiger football program has been a high priority task for Coach Tomlin and his assistant, Buddy Comer. But the former Plainview coach hasn't found the challenge to be unrewarding.

"When we first came here we didn't know what to expect. But we found a great bunch of kids that are hungry to make something happen. They expressed a desire to do whatever it takes to turn the program around in a positive direction. They are working and doing everything we've asked them to do. Some have improved as much as 100 pounds on weights, four-tenths of a second in the 40, or gained as much as 20 pounds or lost as much as 20 pounds - whatever they needed. They have great enthusiasm and a lot of energy."

"We found a great bunch of kids that are ready to make something happen."

"We're very optimistic. Along with our "Ragin' Tigers" name, we're giving the kids what we call a "Tigers Eye", a gold dot that stresses love and respect for their teammates and unity. It means we're going to stick together and stick this out until we get it turned around like we want it. That's the reason our numbers haved stayed through the offseason. The players know that's what it will take. They all want the best for one another."

There are currently 121 freshmen, sophomores and juniors signed up for football next fall. The young athletes have gotten in some good work and he is pleased with the way the program is shaping up at this early stage.

"I think we've got more depth and size than the program has had in the past few years. Experience is obviously the main weakness of the team. We plan on our intensity overcoming that. Right now, we'll have to wait until the fall to be any more specific.

"One of the things that has made my transition and coach Comer's transition easier is the cooperation among the coaches, faculity and administration here. The key was being here early enough to get it done, knowing the kids and them getting to know me and my philosophies," he said.

In addition to Comer, Tomlin's assistants will be Kevin Wiseman, Rod Cottrell and Levon Webb. Wiseman, from Muleshoe, will also serve as boy's track coach.

First workouts will be held Aug. 13. Shoes can be issued on Aug. 8.

Indy getting final touches

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The giant 250-gallon refueling tanks are in place and the drivers' names already are painted on the walls behind their respective pits as work crews put pre-race finishing touches on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The track, closed since the end of qualifications last weekend, had one more scheduled practice session today before shutting down again until Sunday's 68th running of the Indianapolis 500.

Seven former winners and five rookies are among the drivers who comprise the fastest starting lineup in automobile racing history. A sixth rookie, Jacques Villeneuve of Canada, qualified for the race but was ruled medically unfit on Wednesday because of the lingering effects of a concussion he suffered last week in practice.

Chris Kneifel, a second-year driver who was the 34th-fastest qualifier before he was bumped from the field by Johnny Rutherford, was the first alternate driver and stood the most to gain by Villeneuve's disqualification.

"I'm very happy for me and sad for Jacques," Kneifel said of the possibility he would be restored to the starting lineup. "We are such good friends. We were (Formula Atlantic) teammates in 1981.

"I feel sorry for Jacques. He's a crazy little dude, but a good person. It's too bad because I knew how much he wanted to be there," Kneifel said of Villeneuve.

"He told me that Indy was the one thing that (his brother) Gilles never did and that's why he wanted it so much."

Villeneuve's brother, a Formula One driver, was killed during qualifications for the Belgian Grand Prix in 1982.

Kneifel said his crew has continued preparations and planned on being here for today's final tests. His team manager, former driver Lee Kunzman, reportedly was one of several team representatives trying to work a deal with Villeneuve's Canadian Tire team to buy the already-qualified car to ensure a starting berth.

Although Villeneuve will not be in car, his team still has the option of naming another driver, withdrawing the entry or selling it to another team, U.S. Auto Club steward Art Meyers said.

Meyers said a decision was expected today.

Suns stun Los Angeles to force another game

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - The Phoenix Suns, given up for dead in the Western Conference NBA final, played a suburb game Wednesday night to ambush the Lakers 126-121 and trim Los Angeles' lead in the best-of-seven semi-final series to 3-2.

The Lakers still can keep a date Sunday in Boston with the Celtics, but they must win Friday night in Phoenix, where the Suns already have dealt them one defeat in the series. A seventh Suns-Lakers game, if necessary, would be back at the Forum on Sunday afternoon.

"There was no tomorrow for us," said the Suns' Walter Davis, who pumped in 27 points and had 10 assists in Wednesday's upset. "We had a job to do and we just went out and did it."

The Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 28 points, said, "We think we can win on Friday; we put the burden on ourselves, now we have to go out and do the job."

The Suns never trailed, but they did have to stave off a rally by the Lakers in the waning moments of the contest. Los Angeles, which went into the final period down 100-87, came roaring back to pull to within 120-119 on James Worthy's layup with 53 seconds remaining.

Davis then hit a jumper, Bob McAdoo sank one of his own for Los Angeles, then Maurice Lucas - firing with one second left on the shot clock - made a 20-footer to give the Suns a 124-121 pad. McAdoo's three-point attempt missed, and the Suns' Kyle Macy made a pair of free throws to finish the scoring.

Macy, who had 20 points and 12 assists, said, "We're not out of the hole yet, but we have them on our court now."

All five Phoenix starters scored 20 points or more. Larry Nance had 25, Maurice Lucas 23 and James Edwards 20 for the Suns, who hit 60.7 percent of their floor shots to the Lakers' 53.1 percent. Nance also had a game-high 13 rebounds.

Magic Johnson had 26 points and 13 assists for the Lakers, who had won all seven of their previous playoff games at home this year. Reserves James Worthy and Bob McAdoo added 23 points and 19 points for Los Angeles.

Celtics clinch conference title

BOSTON (AP) - They swept through the East, then conquered the Midwest. Now the empire builders of the National Basketball Association are casting their greedy eyes westward for the final battle.

"We've won half the nation," said Cedric Maxwell. "The Los Angeles-Boston matchup will be a Civil War series . . . It might cut the country in half."

Boston, which beat Washington and New York in its first two series, had balanced scoring, dominant rebounding, strong inside play by its guards and a 13-point run that was enough to blunt a Bucks' comeback.

Guards Gerald Henderson and Dennis Johnson scored five of Boston's first six baskets on layups. Henderson had 19 points for the game and Johnson had 17 points and nine rebounds.

Larry Bird led Boston in scoring for the 11th consecutive game, with 21 points.

Marques Johnson had 24 for the Bucks. Alton Lister came off the bench to score 17 for Milwaukee, which also got 15 from Sidney Moncrief.

With the Bucks out of the way, Boston is looking ahead, somewhat prematurely, to the Lakers.

Cuba joins Olympic boycott

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Cuba became the 11th country to pull out of the Summer Olympics, claiming the organizers had "committed a series of irregularities and violations of Olympic regulations."

In following the lead of the Soviet Union and other communist countries, Cuba's pullout will deprive the Games of several top Cuban athletes, including heavyweight boxer Teofilo Stevenson, who was going to try for his fourth Olympic gold medal.

Detroit still smokin'; win 16th game on road

by The Associated Press

The only record concerning Lance Parrish and his Detroit Tigers teammates is the won in the standings. The way the club is going, it's headed for the kind of records athletes only dream about . . . and pennants are made of.

The Tigers upped their season's mark to 34-5 Wednesday night with their 16th consecutive road victory, a 4-2 triumph over California in which Parrish broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer in the seventh inning. The win tied the 1912 Washington Senators' American League record and is one short of the major league standard, set by the 1917 New York Giants.

Detroit, which is unbeaten on the road and leads second-place Toronto by eight games, can equal that achievement with a win in Anaheim tonight.

"I guess there's some significance to the record but we haven't really had time to think about it," said Parrish, who followed Barbaro Garbey's infield single with his sixth homer of the season and first since April 16. It came off reliever Frank Lacorte, 0-2, to give Detroit it's eighth consecutive overall triumph.

Doug DeCinces had a two-run homer for California.

Elsewhere, it was Kansas City 1, Chicago 0; New York 3, Seattle 0; Toronto 4, Minnesota 1; Baltimore 9, Oakland 5; Cleveland 5, Boston 4 and Texas 6, Milwaukee 1.

In the National League, the Chicago Cubs downed the Atlanta Braves 3-1, the San Diego Padres edged the Montreal Expos 2-1 on Kevin McReynolds' 11th-inning homer, the Houston Astros blanked the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0, the Los Angeles Dodgers topped the Philadelphia Phillies 1-0, the Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed the Cincinnati Reds 7-2 and the San Francisco-New York game was rained out.

Rangers 6, Brewers 1

Frank Tanana threw his third three complete game in a row and has allowed only two earned runs in the last 27 innings. He retired 13 Brewers in a row until Robin Yount opened the ninth with a single and eventually scored on Ben Oglivie's RBI single.

Buddy Bell homered and Pete O'Brien knocked in three runs with three hits for host Texas.

"I struggled early in the year," Tanana said, "but I'm starting to get a lot of confidence and my arm feels great. It feels good to pitch well against a tough hitting team like the Brewers."

Astros 4, Cardinals 0

Harry Spilman belted a three-run homer to cap a four-run first inning and Bob Knepper scattered nine hits and struck out seven in pitching his second shutout of the season. Loser Joaquin Andujar walked Terry Puhl to start the game. Craig Reynolds and Jose Cruz followed with singles for the first run and and one out later Spilman cracked his first homer of the year.

Relief pitching has become a bigger part of baseball with almost every year since World War II, but as far back as 1921 Jesse Barnes of the Giants won two games in relief against the Yankees in the World Series.

Peterson will play in all-star contest

Chad Peterson, all-district centerfielder for the District 2-4A champion Snyder Tigers, has been chosen to play in the June 23 Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association All-Star game.

The contest will be played at 4 p.m. in the Astrodome and will precede the Astros-Giants game.

Peterson was leadoff batter for the Tigers, and hit .576 as the team posted a 10-0 district record. He hit .435 for the season and led the team in stolen bases with 28. He also hit one home run.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Peterson, he is the fourth Snyder High School senior to play in the annual game. Others were George Alderete, Kelly Ragland and Sid Everton.

Man interrupts silent journey through eternity

WASHINGTON (AP) — For 1,500 years the man had lain in his circular tomb, surrounded by paintings of his time, an arm's length from the fine pottery that held food for his journey through eternity.

Time seemed to leave the chamber undisturbed; looters never found it. Then, last week, an archaeologist's assistant put his foot through the roof and almost fell into the tomb.

Now, with great joy about their remarkable discovery, scientists are confident that the vault near the Rio Azul in northeastern Guatemala is a find of great historical significance.

"I was so thrilled when I saw this, I started crying," said George E. Stuart, chief archaeologist of the National Geographic Society, which helped pay for the expedition.

Inside the tomb, the first such find in the area in 20 years, were an intact skeleton, 15 ceramic vessels, and several carved jade beads. The paintings on the limestone walls dated the burial between 450 and 500 A.D., a period of the advanced Maya Indian civilization of which very little is known.

"I felt a little bit guilty because this guy had been laying here for 1,500 years," said Stuart, one of the first to enter the tomb. "He was lying here when Rome fell, he was here at the time of Charlemagne. He was there through our civil war, the Spanish civil war, through World War I and II and here we came barging in and disturbed him. I felt a little like I as trespassing."

The archaeologists knew the remains were those of a male; the spine of a stingray was in the pelvic area. Mayas believed in bloodletting and the stingray probably was a prized possession.

The most valuable object was a ceramic pot with a stirrup handle on a top that unscrewed. Nothing like it had ever been found for thatoperiod, the Geographic sdd, ding that the flange arrangevent resembled today'shchildproof medicine botiles.

A joint U.S.-Guatemalan expedition, headed by R.E.W. (Dick) Adams, professor of anthropology at the University of Texas at San Antonio, entered the tomb — in the dense, remote Peten jungle area on the Guatemalan panhandle — on May 15, after first dropping a miniature television camera inside to make certain that creating an opening would not disturb the site.

The find was announced in Washington and Guatemala City.

The tomb is part of a temple complex among hundreds of buildings in an early classic Maya settlement covering about 500 acres, said Wilbur E. Garrett, editor of National Geographic Magazine.

Nursery stock losses heavy

AUSTIN (AP) — A new survey shows that the December freeze destroyed more than $430 million in nursery and floral stock — a loss so severe that it will take years for the industry to recover, says Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"Seventy percent of the available live plant material in the state was destroyed in that freeze. For nurseries suffering severe losses, it will take several years to restore their replacement and parent stock," Hightower said Wednesday.

He said much of the losses were uninsured.

"Sadly, virtually all of the losses of container-grown and field-grown stock must be absorbed by growers, wholesalers and retailers," he added.

The agriculture department and the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service surveyed businesses that grow, sell and use nursery and floral stock.

The survey determined that statewide loss of plant materials from the freeze was $437.8 million, with 69.58 percent of the live plant materials destroyed.

Hightower said that before the freeze, almost no insurance company was willing to cover such products. Those that would cover them charged premiums of 20 percent to 25 percent of gross annual sales — more than most businesses could pay, he said.

It won't be until late this year that container-grown horticultural products can be covered under the U.S. Agriculture Department's crop insurance program, Hightower said, and coverage for field-grown stock won't be available for two more years.

Richard Aldridge, a nurseryman from Van Ormy who serves on the American Association of Nurserymen's national insurance committee, said federal crop insurance would have kept many Texans in business.

"Had there been insurance coverage, where growers could recover 60 to 70 percent of their investment, the situation now would be quite different," Aldridge said.

Radio-telephone service was opened between New York and London in 1927.

Dear Abby

Doctor Who Needs His Space Keeps Woman in Waiting Room

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the man I've been dating exclusively for nearly a year. He's been divorced for nine years and I've been divorced for a year. I'm 37 and he's 40. He is also my doctor. I switched to him about a year ago. He says he "cares for me" and "needs me," but he never says, "I love you." (I tell him I love him constantly.) He has told me that his practice will always come first and he doesn't want to be pushed. His favorite expression is, "I need my space."

We live 50 miles apart, and I always have to drive to his place because he's always busy, his time is so valuable and he's too tired to drive. I am very much in love with him and will take him on his terms and he knows it.

What hurts me more than anything is that he charges me for my visits to his office. He has a thriving practice and doesn't need the money. Why do you suppose he does this? Should I hang in there, Abby? I want to be his wife.

DOCTOR'S SLAVE

DEAR SLAVE: Perhaps he doesn't want his office employees to know that he is seeing you outside of the office.

As for "hanging in there," I think you're about as close to marriage with this man as you're ever going to get.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter lives in another state, and we try to visit her as often as possible. She has two children, and we would like to be part of their lives. Our visits are flawed because of our son-in-law. He's very hospitable to us, but he is very short-tempered with our daughter and talks to her in a tone we are not accustomed to. It is not an exaggeration to say that he is verbally abusive.

This is very upsetting to my husband and me. What worries us is that if he talks to her that way when we are there, what does he do when nobody else is around? She has always been very outspoken, but she doesn't say anything to him when he talks to her that way. Maybe she is submissive because we are there and she doesn't want to create a scene.

I would like to talk to her about it, but I don't want to upset her any more than she already is. My husband thinks I should speak to our son-in-law; but I don't want to be a typical meddling mother-in-law. What do you suggest?

LOVING PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Don't speak to your son-in-law. And please resist the temptation to criticize him to your daughter. If she's "upset" and feels verbally abused, it's up to her to handle it. Just let her know that you are always there for her if she needs you, but don't offer any help unless it's asked for.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: "Not Curious in Florida" inspired a lot of interesting mail for your column when he asked readers to write in and tell about their experiences having to do with adoptees searching for birth parents. I hope it's not too late to put in my 2 cents.

As an adopted child, all I've ever known about my biological parents was that they were both music majors at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

How lovely! Outside of making babies, I do hope they at least learned how to play the piano while they were "fiddling around" at Northwestern.

The parents who adopted me, raised me and loved me are the only parents I've ever known or want to know. Sign me ...
