Iraq fires on U.S. planes

Navy pilots bomb anti-aircraft guns

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the latest in a series of skirmishes between U.S. and Iraqi forces, a Navy plane bombed an Iraqi position Saturday after Iraqi anti-aircraft guns fired at a Navy patrol in the no-flight zone in southern Iraq.

It was the first time that U.S. aircraft had been fired on in southern Iraq since President Clinton took office on Wednesday, and suggested that the Iraqi government has decided not to hold to the cease-fire it announced this week in what it called a gesture of good will to the new president.

U.S. planes made similar air strikes against Iraqi positions on Thursday and Friday in northern Iraq after Baghdad fixed radar on the U.S. planes.

U.S. officials said that it was not clear whether those incidents were ordered by the authorities in Baghdad or were actions taken by local commanders.

But now, they said, a clear pattern has been established in which Iraqi air defense commanders have directed missile radars and ground fire at allied patrols enforcing ban on Iraqi flights in the zones in both

Grass fire scorches 10 square miles

■ 50-mile-per-hour winds whip up blaze.

By Darren J. Waggoner

A grass fire, driven by 50 mile-per-hour gusts of wind Saturday night, scorched about 10 square miles of land northwest of Midland but firefighters coaxed the blaze around several dozen houses and buildings, officials said.

The blaze, which was reported at 5:34 p.m. jumped several county roads before firefighters eventually extinguished the flames three hours later at Highway 158, according to Midland Fire Department Batallion Chief Eddie Klatt.

No one was hurt from fighting the fire but Midland County Fire Marshall Dale Little suffered a minor knee injury while attempting to divert a motorist on Highway 158, fire officials said. Little was released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center later in the evening, hospital officials said.

Fire officials believe a downed electrical transformer in a pasture east of Ranchland Estates near County Road 1240 may have ignited the fire but they had not made an official ruling Saturday night.

Staff looks at replacement for Zoe Baird

■ Clinton talks to Russia's Yeltsin, Israel's Rabin.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Saturday he has his staff looking at "three or four folks" as potential nominees for attorney general and has held his first talks with foreign leaders since the inauguration.

In a 30-minute telephone conversation with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, Clinton agreed that Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev would meet to work out the details of a planned summit between the two leaders, said White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers.

Clinton also spoke for 10 minutes with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, in response to a congratulatory letter from the Israeli leader upon Clinton's inauguration.

Clinton began work on selecting a new nominee for attorney general just hours after Zoe Baird withdrew her name Friday amid mounting opposition because she had hired two illegal aliens to work in her home.

"I did some work on it yesterday afternoon and had several extended conversations with people about potential nominees and gave my staff some in-

Ms. Gabor failed to show up at the honorable judge's court in San Antonio in November, because she has claimed, she wasn't invited.

After her no-show, the jury found Ms. Gabor guilty of breach of contract and fraud, and awarded the Hollywood Fantasy Corp. $3 million.

Last month, Bunton set aside that verdict and ordered a new trial in Midland because of "possible preju-

Chaplain: Many sailors feel guilty about deaths

By William C. Mann
Associated Press writer

ABOARD THE USS KITTY HAWK — Airman William Latham is philosophical about the destruction that the planes he works on deliver out of his sight.

"It's like a fireman. The worst part of a fireman's job is when he has to fight a fire. The worst part of our job is when we have to go to war," said the 22-year-old Baltimore sailor.

That concept — "I'm just doing what I'm trained to do" — is common to most of Kitty Hawk's 100 or so pilots and the 3,000 men aboard ship who fight an enemy they never see by assembling bombs, maintaining the aircraft and catapulting them from the deck toward southern Iraq.

But some of them just can't help thinking.

"For a lot of guys, it hit them while the (air) strike was going on. They were very high getting ready for it, but then they realized that when you do this, people die," Cmdr. Doug Lawson, Kitty Hawk's chaplain, said Saturday.

"They weren't falling apart or anything, but they realized (killing) is a part of it. I don't think they expected to feel that way, because they trained to do it all the time."

Kitty Hawk's aircraft fly daily missions to monitor Iraqi compliance with a flight exclusion zone that U.S.-led Western allies ordered under a U.N. mandate to protect Shiite Muslims below Iraq's 32nd parallel. Another no-fly zone protects Kurds in northern Iraq.

Aside from the daily enforcement missions, the carrier's jets twice have flown air raids over southern Iraq since the aircraft carrier reached its station in the Persian Gulf earlier this month. Saddam Hussein's government called a unilateral cease-fire effective Wednesday, but U.S. planes attacked sites in the northern exclusion zone Thursday and Friday.

On Kitty Hawk's flight deck, aviation ordnance man, Kenneth Clark, 22, of Beaumont, Texas, was attaching a Phoenix missile to the underside of an F-14A Tomcat. The Phoenix is designed to blow up an opposing aircraft and its pilot from 50 miles away.

Was Clark bothered knowing the missile he installs might kill a man?

"I think about it," Clark said. "But it's my job right now."

Aviation technician Todd Saxberg rigs laser guidance systems for the A-6 Intruders' "smart bombs." Saxberg watches videos showing buildings being blown apart by the direct hits made possible by his work." Sometimes he sees footage of damage in Iraq on CNN.

"I know what they do, but I don't really think about it. I just fix these things to the best of my ability," said Saxberg, 27, of Spokane, Wash.

Lawson, 45, of Joplin, Mo., has preached and led Bible studies on the ethics of war and duty since the first strike Jan. 14.

Of the sailors who came to the chaplain, "I didn't get the impression that anybody felt guilty." But they do feel uneasy, he said.

And, he said, "Personally I'm thankful that people do feel that way."

Iraqi paper blames Bush administration holdovers

N.Y. Times News Service

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A government newspaper said Saturday that officials from the Bush administration remaining in the Pentagon and CIA were to blame for the most recent U.S. attacks on Iraqi anti-aircraft missile batteries.

In an editorial titled "Be Aware of Bush's Remains," the daily Al-Jumhuriya accused the officials of trying to "force the new U.S. administration to adopt a hostile policy against Iraq by fabricating the incidents in order to continue aggression against Iraq."

By laying the blame on holdover officials from the Bush administration, President Saddam Hussein appears intent on seeking a dialogue with the Clinton administration.

The Iraqi Defense Department newspaper, Al-Qadessiya, called on "the other party to express its good will in return toward the Iraqi initiative and seek through dialogue to crumble the obstacles placed by the former administration."

The attacks, both of which took place in the northern no-flight zone patrolled by allied warplanes, came after Iraq had declared a cease-fire on Tuesday.

Iraq's Revolutionary Command Council has said the cease-fire was a gesture of good will toward the new administration.

On Thursday the Pentagon said that an F-4G Wild Weasel fighter jet fired a HARM anti-radiation missile on an Iraqi anti-aircraft missile battery south of Mosul after the battery's radar locked on patrolling aircraft. An American F-16 also dropped cluster bombs on the site, Pentagon officials said.

An Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman said the cluster bombs missed their target, hitting a civilian area and setting fire to fertilizer in a field.

The Iraqi government tried to play down the attack, saying Baghdad remained committed to the cease-fire.

Col. Abdul Elah Danoum, the commander of an air defense base in the area, said that the radar installations on nearby hilltops were used only for surveillance.

"We were told to honor the cease-fire and not fire on any planes," he said.

Although the commander said he could never accept enemy aircraft flying over Iraqi air space, he said that the cease-fire was a political decision that he supported.

In the second incident, which took place Friday, the U.S. European Command in Stuttgart, Germany, said an Air Force F-4G jet had fired HARM missiles at an anti-aircraft missile battery 15 miles east of Mosul after radar on the site locked on the U.S. plane.

The missiles missed their target, according to Iraqi officials. Baghdad said the incident was fabricated, adding that there were no missile batteries east of Mosul.

"The HARM missile is one of the best radar missiles in the United States," the Al-Jumhuriya editorial said. "It is programmed to hit its target within 20 seconds, even if the radar were switched off. So how could the missile miss the target?"

BOMB: Guns did not hit Navy planes northern and southern Iraq.

Pentagon officials said the latest incident occurred when three Navy planes — an A-6 bomber and two F-18 fighters — were flying over Nasiriya in southern Iraq.

The pilot of the A-6 detected an Iraqi anti-aircraft battery firing at the plane, a Pentagon official said.

U.S. patrols generally fly at altitudes that are out of the range of most Iraqi guns. But firing the anti-aircraft batteries is viewed as a challenge to U.S. enforcement of the no-flight zones.

In addition to firing their anti-aircraft guns, the Iraqis also directed a radar at the U.S. planes.

The United States considers the use of such radars a threatening act and a possible prelude to firing missiles from a surface-to-air missile battery.

Pentagon officials said the A-6 had responded by dropping a laser-guided bomb on the Iraqi anti-aircraft position.

The A-6 and the two F-18s were not hit by any fire and returned to the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk in the Persian Gulf.

In the waning days of the Bush administration, allied warplanes mounted two raids against Iraqi air defense command centers, radars and mobile surface-to-air missile batteries.

The air strikes heavily damaged the stationary targets, the Pentagon said, adding that it no longer considered the Iraqi air defenses in the south to be a substantial threat to U.S. pilots.

But U.S. planes destroyed only one of the four surface-to-air missile batteries that they targeted in their initial raid. A subsequent strike against a surface-to-air missile battery outside Basra was called off because the Iraqis moved the battery.

The Iraqis have continued to move batteries around, apparently to elude allied attack.

The Navy attack Saturday was carried out under standing orders that allow a pilot to attack an anti-aircraft battery or missile radar after concluding that the Iraqis are using them to threaten allied planes.

The rules of engagement were established during the Bush administration, and the Clinton administration has reaffirmed them.

The Iraqi actions Saturday were of more political than military significance. The Clinton administration could decide that the recent Iraqi challenges to allied air patrols are more of a nuisance than a serious threat, and deal with them accordingly. In that case, the skirmishing could be expected to continue.

Or the administration could also try to devise ways to add to the pressure on the Saddam Hussein's government. regime. Or it could decided to stage launch a bigger military strikes.

Even though Iraqi air defense units are harrassing allied air patrols with their radars and occasional ground fire, Iraq has complied with other allied and U.N. demands by allowing United Nations weapon inspectors to fly to Baghdad on U.N. planes. Iraq has also moved its police posts from territory awarded to Kuwait by the United Nations.

U.N. weapons inspectors have gone into the field to monitor the destruction of Iraq's chemical weapons stocks. The inspectors went Saturday to the Muthanna State Establishment for Pesticide Production, Iraq's major chemical weapons plant.

In recent days, Iraq has blamed the United States for the skirmishes, insisting that it was committed to a cease-fire and saying that the U.S. warplanes that had started the fighting.

Baghdad issued no immediate statement on the exchange of fire Saturday.

Serbs seize UN weapons, violence looms

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Serbs seized heavy weapons from U.N. warehouses and shelled a Croatian port Saturday to retaliate for a Croat attack. The clashes threatened to engulf the former Yugoslav republics in a new spiral of violence.

"They took tanks, mortars, howitzers, multi-barrel rocket launchers, anti-aircraft guns — everything," said U.N. civil affairs chief Cedric Thornberry.

"The situation tonight is extremely grave."

Thornberry did not say how many of the approximately 200 U.N. depots in Croatia had been raided, apparently as part of a Serb declaration of war. Each of the warehouses, which hold weapons surrendered by the Serbs after a cease-fire last year, is guarded by only two or three people, he said.

Lt. Gen. Satish Nambiar, the chief U.N. peacekeeper, said weapons were seized in each of the four U.N.-patrolled zones around Croatia. But for the moment there were only reports of fighting in the Krajina region.

The Croatian attack Friday in Krajina, on the Adriatic coast, broke a cease-fire in the former republic, which had been largely at peace since January. Initial Serb and Croat reports said 21 Serbs were killed.

The violence threatened international efforts to bring peace to the former Yugoslav federation and to Bosnia-Herzegovina, the latest hotspot. At 27,000 people have been killed in the last 18 months.

Peace talks continued in Geneva on Saturday. But Bosnia, too, was swept by battles among Serbs, Croats and Slavic Muslims.

The Serb moves Saturday responded to a Croatian attack on a spot that was a longtime point of contention for the Serbs and Croats.

Croatian forces using tanks and artillery seized of the Serb-held eastern bank of the Maslenica gorge near the port of Zadar, said Elizabeth Baldwin, a spokeswoman for U.N. forces in Zagreb.

Serb forces had held the spot since November 1991 and had destroyed a vital bridge linking the Croatian coast with the hinterland.

The Serbs had refused to allow the bridge to be restored, so humanitarian aid for south Croatia and part of Bosnia has had to be sent on ferries, Croatia's deputy interior minister, Zdrevko Zidovec, said in an interview.

He said it was unreasonable to think 1 million people living in south Croatia, and hundreds of thousands in Bosnia, could depend on two of three ferries.

In response to the Croat attack, the self-styled Serb government of the Krajina region declared a state of war late Friday. And on Saturday, Serb forces pillaged the U.N. weapons depots, said Thornberry.

He said that the United Nations lacked the manpower to halt the Serbs at weapons depots. "There is no way we can stop them, two or three people are guarding these positions," he said.

Serbian gunners also brought heavy weapons to Zadar and fired 20 shells into the city, officials there said.

Serbs captured about one-third of Croatian territory in the 1991 war, mostly along the Adriatic coast, on the border of northwest Bosnia, and in extreme eastern Croatia near the border with Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

About 14,000 U.N. peacekeepers have been deployed in the Serb-held areas to help keep the peace, disarm Serb irregulars and permit refugees to return.

But in many cases the peacekeepers have been able to do little but keep the two sides from clashing again. Croatia has chafed with the lack of progress.

Vietnamese celebrates Tet after offensive

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Earsplitting fireworks explosions resounded through the streets Saturday as Vietnamese celebrated Tet, the start of the lunar New Year.

The festive mood was buoyed by a burgeoning economy and the return for the holiday of tens of thousands of Vietnamese who fled their country around the time of the Communist takeover in 1975.

This Tet "is the happiest in the last 50 years," said Nguyen Xuan Oanh, a Harvard-educated economist and adviser to the Vietnamese government. "We want to look to the future, to let bygones be bygones and work hard to rebuild our country."

"The economic situation is good. The political one is good, and hopefully the American government will lift the (economic) embargo sometime this year," he said.

The celebration over the next several days will be a marked contrast to 25 years ago, when Vietnamese Communist forces launched the bloody "Tet offensive" across South Vietnam, setting the stage for the U.S. withdrawal in the Vietnam War.

But few people were dwelling on memories of the offensive; for them Tet is a tradition of family reunions and spiritual renewal.

Relief officials evacuate Arabs from tent camp

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Red Cross officials evacuated 17 deported Palestinians from a tent camp in southern Lebanon Saturday, flying them aboard three British helicopters to Israel or to territory under its control.

It was the largest movement of exiles in a crisis that began five weeks ago when Israel expelled more than 400 Palestinians from its occupied territories as accused instigators of Islamic fundamentalist violence.

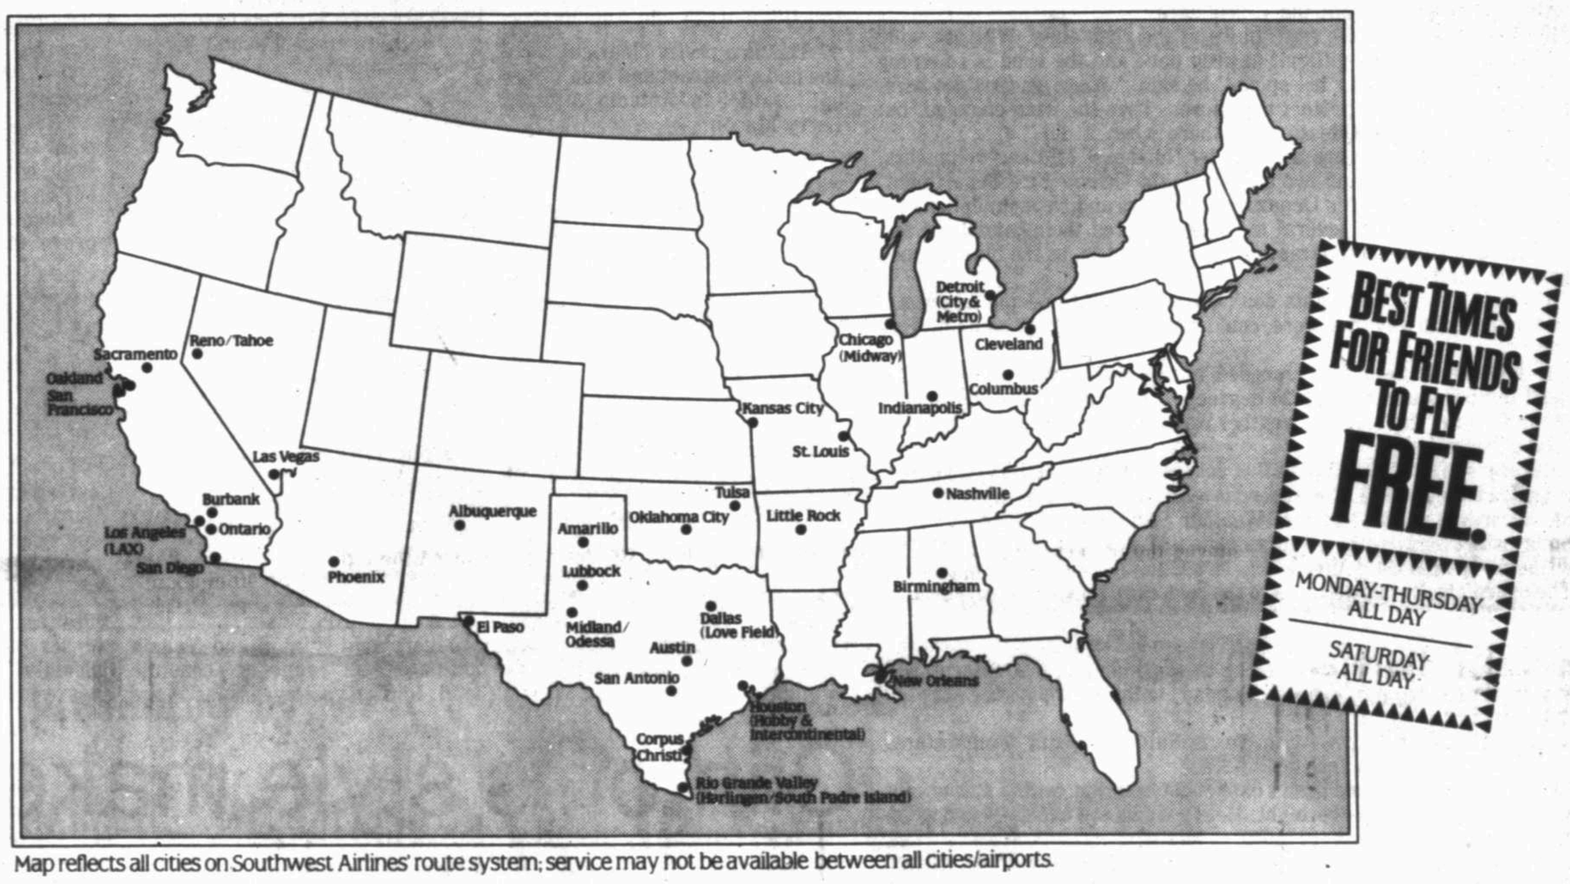

Elsewhere in southern Lebanon, although far west of the tent camp, an Israeli soldier reportedly was killed and two were wounded by a roadside bomb that exploded as an armored patrol passed through the buffer area declared by Israel to be its "security zone." In retaliation, Israeli gunners fired shells at a mountain ridge 25 miles south of Beirut that is controlled by guerrillas of the pro-Iranian Party of God.

Despite the return of the 17 men — 13 who were expelled by mistake and 4 said to be seriously ill — Israeli officials insist that the other deportations stand and that they will not retreat on this issue even though foreign condemnation of them has, if anything, increased in the last few days.

Still, there are signs of widening fissures in the left-leaning Cabinet of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, some of whose members have been uneasy about the deportations almost from the mid-December day they agreed to them. It has become clear to senior officials that the crisis will not simply disappear, as they initially hoped, and that Israel risks new U.N. measures for flouting a Security Council demand that all the Palestinians be brought back.

The Israel television reported on Friday night that it had polled the 18 Cabinet members and found that 10 were ready for a compromise that would involve the early return of all or most of the Palestinians, who were expelled for up to two years. Seven ministers said the government should stick to its original decision, and one official declined to respond, the state-run television said.

BELLI: Clients include Ali, Bakkers said Belli, who frequently works weekends and holidays.

But that dedication has taken its toll on his marriages, said Belli, who has tied the knot five times.

Currently "I'm living with my four children. They're really dogs," he quipped.

In Midland to defend Zsa Zsa Gabor in a breach-of-contract lawsuit, Belli said he enjoyed looking out his hotel window at the flat land and dark sky during the warm Friday evening.

This won't be the first time he has represented Ms. Gabor, said Belli, whose celebrity client list has included Lana Turner, Mae West, the Rolling Stones, Muhammad Ali, and Jim and Tammy Bakker.

Despite reputations of some stars as being difficult, Belli has enjoyed working with all his clients, he said.

"Even the ones that are supposed to be (difficult) I get along with . . . Errol Flynn was one of them," he said.

The late legendary actor was "one of the best. More of a friend than a client," said Belli, who added that he once spent three months in Paris with Flynn.

Other notable cases of Belli's included: Jack Ruby, tried in Dallas in 1964 for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald; torture and beating lawsuits against the late Philippine dictator Ferdinand Marcos; and the Union Carbide chemical disaster in Bhopal, India.

Belli said he hopes to wrap up litigation this year concerning the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska and product liability suits against the makers of L-tryptophan, a dietary supplement.

The active attorney presently has several noteworthy lawsuits pending such as a copyright infringement case against television producer Aaron Spelling for allegedly stealing the idea for the television show "Beverly Hills 90210."

The "people and the diversity" of lawsuits and not the money keeps his interest alive in the business, Belli said.

"Cases are getting more and more interesting" because of new technologies, new drugs, and AIDS, he said.

It "keeps me abreast of what's going on in the world," Belli said.

"It's a slice of life, a synopsis of life," he said.

And Belli said he enjoys the publicity that comes from high-profile cases and celebrity clients.

"That's a lot of fun," he said.

A most memorable case was in the early 1960s, Belli recalled.

"The one I like the best (involved) season tickets to the (San Francisco) Giants," he said.

Belli bought the tickets with the promise of a warm place to watch the game.

That didn't turn out to be the truth so Belli sued the Giants. He was awarded $1,500 and his tickets refunded.

A newspaper stated: "Chilly Belli: 1,500; Giants 0."

Most of the headlines that track Belli tout his expertise in the law.

Belli, who has written 72 books, has been recognized for speeding up the trial process and paving the way for "adequate" awards.

He has been called the "father of demonstrative evidence" for use of vivid evidence to illustrate cases. In 1954, Life magazine labeled him "The King of Torts."

Belli's record has been followed by many in his field.

"I've lectured in every law school in the country almost," he said.

And he's helped found several organizations including the Belli Society, a philanthropic association of top trial lawyers. The society will hold its 50th annual seminar next year.

GRASS: Fire skirts MISD bus complex

dents were left without power for several hours after the high winds knocked down at least two other power poles in the area.

The fire skirted the Midland Independent School District Transportation Complex on County Road 60 where 144 school buses are parked, said Wes Washam, director of transportation for MISD.

At 10:10 p.m. Saturday, fire units were called back to the MISD complex after it was reported that sparks had rekindled near the building. The flames were quickly doused and there were no other reports of flare-ups as of 11 p.m.

Klatt attributed the lack of major injuries and structural damage to a coordinated response from the firefighters.

"We were always in the right place at the right time. With the wind whipping this hard, it's difficult to keep pace and the wind is so strong that it quickly ignites any hot spots," he said. "When we first got here, we sent some trucks to protect the houses. Then the wind changed, but luckily the units from Odessa were there when it did."

Midland firefighters were assisted by Northeast Midland volunteers, Gardendale volunteers and two units from the Odessa Fire Department.

Midland County Sheriff's Department officers and Department of Public Safety troopers said several motorists ignored their barricades and drove through smoke and flames on County Road 60, as the blaze hopped across the road.

"It's as if the flashing lights don't mean a thing to people any more. Those flames, the way they were, could have been deadly," said Cpl. Ray Meek.

The high-winds Saturday preceded a cold front from the west that caused temperatures to drop 20 degrees — from 76 to 56 — between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. The blustery weather was expected to cease in the early morning hours today.

Saturday's high of 77 fell only five degrees short of the record high for the date of 82 set in 1950. The record low for Jan. 23 is nine degrees set in 1963, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Sunny skies and cooler temperatures are expected today with a the high peaking near 50 degrees.

The overnight low should drop to the mid-20s. Monday's high should be in the mid-50s.

STATE

The warm conditions that heated up the beginning of the weekend will give way to cold temperatures by Sunday, with accompanying showers possible.

Skies remained clear in South Texas Saturday, with temperatures mostly in the 70s and a few in the 80s.

But the balmy conditions aren't expected to remain, with a strong cold front entering the region overnight. Heavy winds are expected to accompany the front.

By daybreak Sunday, temperatures should have fallen well into the 30s across the Hill Country and into the 40s across central and eastern sections. The extreme south may still be in the 50s.

There's a chance for showers or thunderstorms across the east and isolated to widely scattered showers are possible elsewhere.

The cold front moved into West Texas by mid-afternoon Saturday, extending from near Wichita Falls southwestward through the plains regions. A few small areas of light snow also were developing across the Panhandle north of the front.

Lows are forecast to be in the teens and 20s in the Panhandles, except for some 30s in the Big Bend area. Highs will be in the 40s and 50s areawide with Sunday night lows generally in the 20s for all sections.

NATION

A low pressure system on Saturday dumped heavy snow across the Great Lakes region and unleashed powerful wind gusts across the Plains and parts of the Midwest.

More snow was forecast for the Great Lakes early Sunday as the storm system moved east across the area.

Nine inches of snow fell Saturday at Deep Portage, Minn., while 8 inches fell at Duluth. Wind gusts of 65 mph were reported at Albany, Minn. Six inches of snow fell at Superior, Wis., and 4 inches covered parts of northern Michigan.

Meanwhile, light snow fell across southern Colorado, the Texas Panhandle and southwest Kansas.

Sunny skies prevailed over the southern Pacific Coast and the southern Atlantic Coast states as high pressure systems brought mild weather to the areas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ZSA ZSA: Gabor in city to defend lawsuit

(From 1A)

dicial publicity" in San Antonio and "in the interest of justice."

Hollywood Fantasy Corp. owner Leonard Saffir sued the former Hungarian beauty queen for failure to satisfy terms of a March 1991 contract.

The actress was supposed to visit and appear in a video with vacationers who paid to spend a week as movie stars at the La Mansion Del Rio hotel in San Antonio.

"This is a pretty clear-cut case: She had a contract and didn't show up," said San Antonio attorney Larry Macon.

Ms. Gabor has said the contract was voided because a clause allowed her to renege if she landed a part in a movie. The actress appeared in "Naked Gun 2½."

Macon said Ms. Gabor initially said she was to be in "Queen of Justice," which never happened and now says "Naked Gun 2½," where her appearance "may last 30 seconds."

As for Ms. Gabor's absence at the San Antonio trial, Macon said he doesn't buy the story that she wasn't notified.

"No, I think she was avoiding the trial . . . I think she was avoiding responsibility," he said.

That apparently won't be the case in Midland.

Ms. Gabor arrived at Midland International Airport late Saturday afternoon to friendly greetings from fellow travelers.

The celebrity stopped several times to acknowledge well-wishers.

One woman wished Ms. Gabor good luck at the hearing to which Ms. Gabor replied, "I sure need it."

The plaintiffs and defendants are staying at the same Midland hotel.

Monday morning in federal court will begin with jury selection followed by testimony, court officials said. Standing room performance may be the case, officials added.

The trial is expected to last two, possibly three, days.

Belli declined to comment on specifics about the trial.

"He (the judge) said he didn't want any pre-trial publicity," said Belli, who has represented Ms. Gabor on several previous occasions.

Macon said the plaintiff will prove their case as in the first trial.

And flattery like "Dahling, I love Midland . . . the men are handsome," won't help the defendant, Macon said. "People of Midland will see through it," he said.

"I'm just happy we are getting this resolved . . . and show that no one is above the law," he said.

Macon claims that Ms. Gabor's no-show at the vacationers' gathering caused the company to fold because of refunds.

"They (the company) put all their money into promoting this one," he said. An earlier vacation plan in Palm Springs with Elliot Gould was a success.

A source close to the defense said only two tickets were refunded because of the failed San Antonio fantasy.

STAFF: Clinton considers 3 or 4 people

structions to go do some work on three or four folks," Clinton said in an Oval Office photo session Saturday.

Asked if those under consideration were men, Clinton said, "Three or four people. I'm not going to say who they were."

Myers said Clinton hoped to move forward quickly on selecting a new attorney general. "He'd like to make an announcement as soon as he has a new nominee but there's no particular timetable," she said.

Myers declined to say whether Clinton had interviewed any new prospects for the job.

Clinton is under pressure from some women's advocates to nominate another woman for attorney general but aides say he will not limit his search by sex.

Myers said Clinton and Yeltsin discussed a "range of economic and foreign policy issues" and Clinton reaffirmed his support for Yeltsin's economic reforms, Myers said.

Yeltsin's office said the two had agreed to hold their summit in a third country, but Myers said no decisions had been made on time or place.

Gad Ben-Air, Rabin's media adviser, said Clinton told the Israeli leader "that he would work very close(ly) with Israel to promote peace in the Middle East."

On another subject, Myers said Clinton remained committed to lifting the ban on gays in the military, despite opposition from top military officials. Clinton will discuss the matter with the Joint Chiefs of Staff on Monday.

"He's going to try to do that in the least disruptive way possible and he'll work with the chiefs to get that done," Myers said. "They may have some disagreements on this but the bottom line is the president is going to lift the ban."

Clinton's style makes for good TV

By Bob Dart

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — Like the teenagers who silently sang with the records they danced to on American Bandstand, the new president lip-synchs when he listens to familiar refrains.

He knew the world was watching, of course, as he mouthed the words of John F. Kennedy during inaugural ceremonies at the Lincoln Memorial and of gospel songs and golden oldies performed at a presidential gala.

He didn't care. Button-lipped just isn't Bill Clinton's style.

As form is function in architecture, so style is substance in politics. President Clinton's personal popularity — to be decided largely by reaction to his style — could be the mortar that holds together the bricks of his legislative agenda.

The lip-synching quirk is part of Clinton's emerging public persona — a confident, beguiling blend of baby boomer hugs, gosh-darn grins, calculated cool, astute political staging and acute appreciation that he is now the most powerful person on Earth.

"If Augustus Caesar hosted the Grammy Awards . . . " is how the Washington Post described the new president's arrival ceremonies last week.

But despite an inaugural extravaganza that was often more pompous than populist, Clinton came across as downright likeable during his first week in Washington.

Like Ronald Reagan, he has a style that televises well.

Indeed, he has an offhand Reaganesque habit of showing appreciation by saluting in military fashion. He has a studied JFK manner of speechmaking. He has Phil Donahue's gift for conveying instantaneous sincerity and rapport, a valuable trait in an era dominated by the images and talk on TV.

"It's going to be a very personal presidency," said William Schneider, a political analyst with the American Enterprise Institute. "But at the same time, he's a very ambitious guy. He dared to wrap himself in the mantle of Jefferson and Lincoln and make comparisons with what they did and what he plans to do."

Clinton's favorite card game is hearts, but his handling of the departure of Zoe Baird, his nominee for attorney general, showed a knack for poker, too — knowing when to hold 'em and when to fold 'em.

On three separate occasions, he said "I take full responsibility" for the ill-fated appointment.

"I'm sad about it," he said, but then showed an ability to put such mistakes quickly behind him. "We're going to begin . . . working on the future. And that's what I intend to focus on."

Clinton is sort of a New Age Southerner, a sensitive Bubba, and it showed when he opened his first cabinet meeting with a prayer, then declared he and the cabinet members would commune soon at a retreat.

Afterwards he indicated he won't be a prisoner of the White House, heading out in late afternoon for a jog in a riverside park.

The new president also knows how to have fun, or at least it certainly seemed so to Americans who viewed his emotions and actions through five marathon days of parties and politics.

He laughed a lot. If he was having a good time someplace, he tarried — schedulers be damned. He blew on a sax, playing "Your Mama Don't Dance and Your Daddy Don't Rock and Roll."

He fast danced — a smooth sort of Arkansas shag. He stayed on the beat when he bopped in his seat at concerts. Sitting in a church pew, his eyes welled up when he heard a favorite hymn.

He spoke the language of the popular culture.

"Do my wife and daughter look good or what?" he asked, introducing Hillary and Chelsea to the crowd at the MTV Inaugural Ball.

He had a presidential mode, too. When the time came for vision and dignity, he stood at the Capitol and delivered.

With style and symbolism as much as speeches, "Clinton has tried to convey an enthusiasm and activism that's been lacking in Washington for some time," said Mark Rozell, a presidential scholar and history professor at Mary Washington College in Fredricksburg, Va.

"So far, he's succeeding pretty well."

French diet phoenom features foie gras, champagne

By Marilyn August
Associated Press writer

PARIS — In the world's gastronomic capital, legions of overweight gourmets have shed unwanted pounds while savoring foie gras, champagne and chocolate mousse.

They follow a diet devised by Michel Montignac, a former corporate personnel director who lost 28 pounds while taking business clients to lunch.

"People don't have to be hungry and frustrated because the method is not based on counting calories," said Montignac, a svelte 48-year-old millionaire thanks to the sale of 1.6 million diet books since 1987.

His diet restricts the eating of certain kinds of foods together. Fat and proteins marry well, but not with carbohydrates. Even a single French fry is a no-no, as is refined white sugar.

The diet's basis is the relationship between insulin, the hormone secreted by the pancreas that enables glucose to penetrate body tissues, and the creation of stored fat. For example, several slices of whole-wheat bread at breakfast will not cause weight gain, but smearing them with butter will.

'My method is not your typical lose-weight-fast, supermarket-magazine-style approach to spare tires and cellulite,'

Michael Montignac
Diet developer

Montignac encourages dieters to eat carbohydrates — lentils, brown rice and pasta among them — but as main courses, not as garnishes to boeuf bourguignon or blanquette de veau.

Fruit, which must be delayed until three hours after a meal, becomes a morning or midnight snack, not a dessert.

Montignac satisfies his sweet tooth with artificially sweetened desserts or low-sugar chocolate mousse.

The "method," as advocates call it, recommends plenty of fresh and cooked vegetables, meat, poultry and fish, and up to three glasses of red wine per meal to wash it down.

"My method is not your typical lose-weight-fast, supermarket-magazine-style approach to spare tires and cellulite," Montignac said in an interview. "It's a question of re-educating your eating habits and establishing new ones you can follow for a lifetime."

Having swept through corporate dining rooms, the diet is now transforming menus in private homes.

At a Thanksgiving dinner given by an American expatriate, five of the 12 French guests were trim Montignac converts who passed up stuffing, sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie.

The diet has even found favor among leading chefs. Paul Bocuse, while expressing disinterest in trimming his generous frame, recently whipped up a six-course Montignac banquet for 160 of France's culinary elite.

"Established nutritionists have chased away your customers," Bocuse told his guests. "Montignac reconciles health, fitness and gastronomy, and is bringing them back."

Weight-conscious gourmets can sip champagne and enjoy foie gras (without toast), a drippy camembert and raspberry souffle, theoretically without gaining an ounce.

Montignac has turned his personal victory over "extra-large" into a stunning commercial success. His gourmet shops offer Montignac-label foie gras, champagne, low-sugar dark chocolate and whole-wheat bread that food critics rank highly. A network of diet centers is planned.

Yet "the man who put France on a diet," as a weekly news magazine put it, has drawn fire from the nutrition establishment.

Gerard Pascal, head of nutrition and food hygiene at the National Institute of Food Research, says Montignac's method is dangerous and scientifically unfounded.

He urged the overweight to eat a bit of everything. "That's difficult and unspectacular, but in the long run, it's the only valid rule to follow."

"The chances of recovering from cancer are greater than losing weight permanently," said Dr. Marian Apfelbaum, an eminent nutritionist.

Other critics say the diet's tolerance of fat consumption could lead to heart attacks.

Montignac's response: "Thousands of people on the diet have written saying their sugar and cholesterol levels decreased." He advises those at high risk to use only fat-free dairy products and eat less red meat.

A typical day on the Montignac diet:

BREAKFAST — Lots of decaffeinated cafe au lait, with 2 percent milk, and unlimited quantities of whole-wheat or whole-rye bread, or a high-protein meal of eggs and bacon with no bread. Cereals are out.

SNACK — Fruit or yogurt.

LUNCH — Grilled steak, fresh green salad with olive oil vinaigrette dressing, steamed green beans, low-fat yogurt. Decaf expresso with artificial sweetener.

SNACK — Fruit.

DINNER — Steamed broccoli with vinaigrette dressing, vegetable soup with no carrots (high in sugar), potatoes, grilled fish or poultry, cheese, wine and chocolate mousse or a few squares of low-sugar dark chocolate.

MIDNIGHT SNACK — Fruit.

COCKTAILS — A glass of champagne, sipped slowly. Beware the sugar in bottled fruit juices.

HORS D'OEUVRES — Fresh vegetables such as cherry tomatoes or celery sticks, low-fat sour cream or cottage cheese dips, cheddar or gruyere cheese cubes.

Montignac recommends drinking 1½ quarts of water a day, none of it during meals.

■ Bus accident kills 21 in Turkish town

AKHISAR, Turkey — A double-decker bus crashed into a parked truck near this western town on Saturday, killing 21 passengers, news reports said.

Witnesses said the driver lost control of the bus and hit the truck, which was stopped alongside the road, the Anatolia news agency reported. Thirty-five passengers were injured, the agency said.

■ Farmers occupy New Zealand embassy

PARIS — About 50 farmers protesting lamb imports occupied New Zealand's embassy for four hours. The French government apologized Saturday and called the takeover "intolerable."

The demonstrators forced their way into the embassy on Friday, breaking a glass door to enter an upper floor of the mission before leaving peacefully.

The French Agriculture Ministry blamed the Peasant Confederation, a militant union, for organizing the protest.

Militant French farmers say agricultural products arriving from abroad compete with their goods and threaten their livelihood. Farmers have also been demonstrating against a proposed world trade agreement that would force the European Community to slash subsidies.

■ Authorities: Swede has been abducted

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Authorities said Saturday that a Swedish member of the national equestrian team, who had been missing for four days, was abducted.

A statement by the prosecutor's office, distributed by the national news agency Belga, said kidnappers "sought a first contact in Belgium on Friday."

The Swedish daily Aftonbladet, citing police, said the kidnappers phoned the father of Lena Ulrika Bidegaard on Thursday and had contacted her parents several times since.

Ms. Bidegaard, 28, disappeared Wednesday night after her house in suburban Brussels was robbed.

■ French mountain climber dies near peak

MENDOZA, Argentina — French mountain climber Claude Dubois, who reached the top of Mount Aconcagua, the western hemisphere's highest peak, died during the descent, the Telam news agency reported Saturday.

Mexican and American climbers who brought the news to Dubois's wife, Lidy, at the base camp said the 44-year-old doctor felt ill and died at a refuge 2,000 feet from the peak, apparently of pulmonary edema, Telam said.

The illness, the filling of the lungs with fluid, strikes mountain climbers.

The 23,000-foot-high Mount Aconcagua is on the Argentina-Chile border.

■ Two bomb explosions kill 22, hurt 100

HYDERABAD, Pakistan — Two bomb blasts ripped through a residential neighborhood and hotel in Hyderabad's old walled city, killing at least 22 people and wounded 100 others, police said Saturday.

Hyderabad, the second-largest city in Sindh Province, has been a center of political and ethnic violence for nearly a decade. The extremist group Jeay Sindh, which demands statehood for Sindh, has been blamed for much of the violence.

Police said they suspected Jeay Sindh set off the bombs Friday night as a warning to a special anti-terrorist court that is expected to sentence a group member on Saturday for the 1988 killings of 200 people.

■ Vatican condemns Clinton's abortion view

VATICAN CITY — President Clinton's decision to eliminate abortion restrictions is a "humiliating defeat" for humanity, the Vatican said Saturday.

"Those who hoped that Clinton's first acts might be towards 'renewal,' involving above all the protection of human rights, have had a strong disappointment," the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said in a brief article.

On Friday, Clinton ended restrictions on abortion counseling and medical research involving fetal tissue. He also permitted abortions at military hospitals and pledged to review a ban on the French abortion pill RU-486.

Relief officials seek protection after attacks

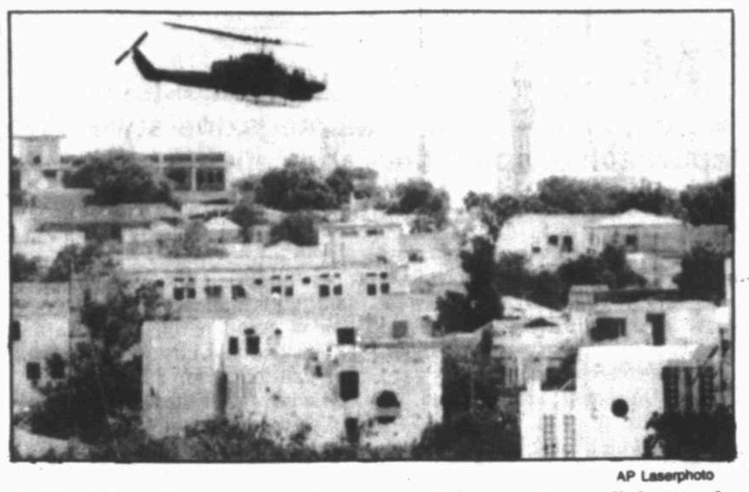

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Relief officials asked the U.S. military for more protection Saturday after a series of attacks on aid workers in the capital. Efforts to feed the hungry could be hurt if the attacks continue, they said.

Meanwhile, preliminary peace talks among Somalia's warring factions have broken off in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, amid accusations of cease-fire violations and the killing of civilians in central Somalia, U.N. spokesman Farouk Mawlawi said.

Bandits attacked aid workers five times in broad daylight within an hour Friday in northern Mogadishu, firing on vehicles of UNICEF, the International Committee of the Red Cross, Save The Children and Swedrelief, a Swedish agency.

One Swedish doctor and three Somali aid workers were injured, and a relief vehicle was looted.

Ian MacLeod, a spokesman for UNICEF, said security in northern Mogadishu has not improved since international forces arrived in December to get food past looters in a country where famine and civil war claimed 350,000 lives last year.

A US Marine Cobra gunship sweeps low over Mogadishu rooftops and past a mosque Saturday providing air support for troops on security patrol below.

The attacks could hobble UNICEF aid to 25 feeding centers and 20 medical clinics and the vaccination of children, he said.

"UNICEF activities will continue in north Mogadishu but it will be increasingly difficult to undertake those if there is not more security provided," said MacLeod, whose agency is the largest operating in the capital's north.

A U.S. military spokesman, Army Lt. Col. Steve Ritter, said he was not aware of the UNICEF request for more security, and he took issue with MacLeod's contention that security in the north hadn't improved since the Marines arrived.

"There are a lot fewer guns on the street and incidents of gunfire," Ritter said. He said troops go out on as many as 30 patrols every day in Mogadishu.

The northern half of Mogadishu is controlled by forces loyal to Ali Mahdi Mohamed. The southern half is held by perhaps the country's most powerful figure, Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

Sunken sub threatens Norway

MOSCOW (AP) — A sunken nuclear submarine is corroding in the Barents Sea and no technology exists to recover it intact or enclose it to prevent leakage, experts say.

The submarine Komsomolets caught fire in 1989 and sank 150 miles north of Norway, killing 42 of the 69 sailors aboard. The submarine lies in rich fishing waters used by Norway, which exports most of its catch.

Filling the submarine with a gel that is supposed to harden and prevent radioactive leakage might solve the problem, said Tengiz Borisov, chairman of a panel trying to identify and dispose of Soviet weapons lost or dumped at sea.

But the gel has never been used on a sunken submarine before, and Borisov and other officials say further studies are needed.

The submarine's two nuclear-tipped torpedoes present the biggest threat because their casings have been corroded by salt water, Borisov told a news conference on Friday.

Cholesterol Discovery Passes Mom's Test

WASHINGTON -- The mother of a research scientist recently lowered her cholesterol more than 20% without changing her eating habits.

After a visit to her doctor, a Florida woman learned that her cholesterol level was an elevated 308 and she was encouraged to change her eating habits. When she returned 10 weeks later, the doctor was astounded that her cholesterol level had dropped to 243. Asked if she achieved the amazing results just by dieting she replied, "No I didn't diet at all, in fact I ate the things I shouldn't eat like bacon, sausage and ice cream. The only thing I did different was take some tablets my son gave me."

The woman's son is Dr. William Morris, director of research and development at National Dietary Research, an organization that seeks nutritional solutions to health problems. Dr. Morris admits that the tablets called Vancol 5000 were designed as a dietary supplement to be used with a low fat diet plan. "She just wanted to put the tablets to the test," says Dr. Morris. "Of course I was pleased with the results she achieved, but now were working on reducing some of the fat in her diet to lower her cholesterol even further."

Vancol 5000 is a chewable food tablet that contains extracts from foods known to lower cholesterol. According to the exclusive distributor for Vancol 5000, inquiries about the new discovery are being received from all over the country and has peaked the interest of doctors used to prescribing expensive cholesterol lowering drugs. A 30 day supply of the Vancol 5000 Chloesterol Lowering Plan is only $29.98.

Chinese celebrate year of the rooster

By Nicholas D. Kristof
N.Y. Times News Service

BEIJING — The Chinese-speaking world is celebrating its new year this weekend with deafening fireworks, homemade dumplings, family reunions and earnest discussions of whether the newly arrived year of the rooster will bring good luck or bad.

The year 4691 on the Chinese calendar formally arrived at midnight Friday, ending the year of the monkey, and Chinese communities from Penang in Malaysia to Taipei in Taiwan erupted in simultaneous explosions of tens of billions of firecrackers.

The firecrackers — which consumers snapped up in boxes of 500 or more — sent acrid smoke throughout Beijing and produced a deep roar in the city that lasted for much of the night. Traditionally, firecrackers were intended to frighten away demons, and setting them off is a responsibility that Chinese boys take on with particular glee.

The Chinese New Year is by far the most important event in the calendar here, and Deng Xiaoping, China's senior leader, made a rare television appearance to wish the nation good health. Deng, who is 88 and very frail, is passing the new year holiday in a parklike compound in Shanghai.

"I wish everybody a happy new year and a great spring festival," Deng declared to a group of Shanghai officials, beaming as he walked slowly in front of the television camera, his youngest daughter holding his arm. "And through you I'd like to wish a happy new year to all the people of Shanghai, especially the working class."

The year of the rooster seems to be beginning on an auspicious note for Deng, for he seemed in no worse health than when he last appeared on television, in October. The few seconds of his voice that could be heard, before the television switched to the announcer's voice-over, sounded strong.

Still, Deng's hand trembled, and his daughter Deng Rong had to repeat what others were saying into his left ear for him to understand. Deng is regularly reported to be dead or nearly so, so his appearance presumably will stave off such rumors for the next month or so.

The Chinese authorities, with a dash of the central planning that is instinctive to them, have carefully insured that the markets are full of goods that people want to buy for the new year — especially fish, which are considered lucky because the word for fish, yu, sounds like the word for abundance.

The State Family Planning Commission issued an emergency circular a few days ago ordering all localities to increase production of condoms and birth control pills to mitigate the baby boomlet that inevitably appears in China nine months after the new year holiday.

"The circular calls on all localities to boost propaganda so that citizens of childbearing age display more self-control and a better awareness of contraception in this holiday period," reported Population News, an official newspaper.

Chinese are still debating whether the year of the rooster will be auspicious. Some people say that roosters are unstable, running this way and that, and that this bodes ill for the year. Young couples raced to be married before this weekend so that they would not have their weddings linked to instability.

On the other hand, optimists note that "ji," the word for chicken, is similar to the word for luck, and that is a good sign. Both words are pronounced "gee," like the American expression, but the chicken "ji" is in a steady tone, while luck is in a rising tone, like a question: Gee?

Optimists also note that roosters traditionally are well regarded. In part this is because they eat centipedes, which according to folklore are among the "five noxious creatures" — the others are scorpions, toads, geckos and snakes.

Roosters also have good associations in Chinese folklore, although experts are divided about whether this will carry over to the year of the rooster. For example, a picture of a red rooster on a door is supposed to prevent fire, while a white rooster on a coffin will keep demons at bay.

Austrian marchers show unity with foreigners

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Tens of thousands of marchers holding candles formed a "sea of light" Saturday to show support for foreigners under attack from a rising right-wing politician.

Groups ranging from the Roman Catholic church to trade unions, the Jewish community and the medical profession urged Austrians to join the protest, which was similar to several staged in Germany in recent weeks.

Austria has not experienced the same wave of attacks against homes for asylum seekers, Jewish memorials and foreign residences as in Germany.

But the increasing popularity of Joerg Haider has raised concerns. Haider has ridden anti-foreigner sentiment to impressive gains in regional elections over the past year.

He charges that foreigners are cheating natives of jobs and apartments in Austria, where the global economic recession is beginning to take effect.

Haider is now staking his political reputation on a petition calling for a national referendum on foreigners that would, among other things, impose quotas on the number of "foreign" children allowed in schools.

His Freedom Party begins collecting signatures for the petition on Monday. Under Austria's constitution, he needs 100,000 signatures to force parliament to consider the motion on tightening Austria's generous asylum policy.

Haider launched his petition drive with a rally of 3,000 supporters this month and a speech that shocked many in Austria for its overt and implied attacks on the Roman Catholic church, intellectuals, Jews and other opponents.

Many priests have warned parishioners not to support Haider's petition, and singers, artists and intellectuals throughout Austria have united against it.

U.N. team returns to inspection sites

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.N. chemical weapons inspectors returned to the field Saturday and said Iraq was cooperating with them after a two-week hiatus caused by the latest confrontation between Baghdad and the West.

"I have no complaints. Cooperation was good," team leader Paul Brough said. He spoke after the inspectors returned from a site north of the capital where thousands of chemical weapons are being destroyed under terms of the Gulf War cease-fire.

Brough's team resumed its field work under new Iraqi promises of cooperation after U.S. bomb and missile strikes that Washington said were meant to force compliance with U.N. resolutions.

In the latest clash, Iraq on Saturday fired at three U.S. warplanes that were patroling the southern no-fly zone, said a Navy official in Washington. One U.S. warplane then bombed the Iraqi position that attacked them, he said.

Brough and his inspectors traveled to the Muthanna State Establishment for Pesticide Production on Saturday. It was Iraq's main chemical plant.

A highly refined form of mustard gas, as well as sarin and tabun nerve agents, were produced at the plant, which covers 68 square miles and is 65 miles northwest of Baghdad.

Doctor resigns position

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — A prominent German physician said Saturday he is withdrawing as head of the World Medical Association in a growing controversy over his Nazi past.

Dr. Hans Joachim Sewering issued a statement saying he would not assume the job next October as scheduled because the World Jewish Congress had threatened to lead a boycott of the international association.

After 25 years of helping to build up the organization, 20 as treasurer, Sewering said it was "my duty to protect the World Medical Association from serious damage that could have been caused just by the threat made by the World Jewish Congress."

Earlier, in an interview published Saturday in the Munich-based Sueddeutsche Zeitung daily, he cited the threat of being banned from the United States as his reason for relinquishing the post.

The German Medical Association, which had backed Sewering for the job until Friday, said Saturday his decision was not an "admission of guilt" but one made in the interest of the world organization.

Sewering, 76, was to hold the honorary post for one year.

Sewering does not dispute that he was a member of the Nazi party and that he joined an arm of the SS, the Cavalry SS, as a teen-ager.

He has been accused of signing an order in 1943, when he was a doctor at a clinic for the handicapped near Munich, that approved the transfer of a 14-year-old retarded girl to a facility known to be a "euthanasia" center, where she was killed.

Clinton expects diplomatic offensive from Saddam Hussein

By Barry Schweid
sociated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, convinced that Saddam Hussein has been weakened by U.S. bombing attacks, is bracing for a diplomatic offensive from the Iraqi president — to divide the United States and its allies and to loosen the grip of U.N. economic sanctions.

"If I had to predict, I would predict he will be on relatively better behavior," an administration official said Friday as the new administration launched its second missile attack on an Iraqi radar site.

Analysts outside the U.S. government are skeptical that the United States can keep the coalition intact. Arab governments, Turkey, Russia and French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas all have criticized the persistent U.S. air strikes. Some are concerned that they may have the unintended effect of strengthening Saddam as a David up against Goliath.

"President Clinton continues to support the coalition. He wants to work with the coalition," Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said during a Saturday briefing at the White House.

"If Iraq takes aggressive action, we will continue to respond. That's been the United States policy and that will continue to be the policy under President Clinton," Myers added.

Asked if Clinton would move to shore up the coalition, Myers said: "It is his intention to keep the coalition together, but I don't know if he is planning any direct action on that."

"A policy that depends on a military response is not sufficient," Donald McHenry, a former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said in an interview.

"The more he can personalize this, the more he can show we are punishing innocent women and children, the more he can make the case we are being reckless in our actions. Those things in the short term lend themselves to strengthening his hand."

And, McHenry said, Saddam has shown he can hold out, for two years against an embargo on purchases of Iraqi oil, for instance.

Similarly, Robert Hunter, a former specialist on the Persian Gulf at the National Security Council, questioned whether the United States "can carry on like this forever" with a policy centered on using force to hold Saddam to the U.N. resolutions.

"My answer is to create a broader policy," Hunter said. "To start figuring out what you really want to do in the Persian Gulf and to try to bring Iraq and Iran back into civilized society."

Even Brent Scowcroft, who was President Bush's national security adviser, said just before stepping down that the U.S. attacks could be creating sympathy for the Iraqi leader.

Bush waged war on Iraq two years ago with the backing of a coalition of more than two dozen nations. He wound up his presidency with a series of blistering bombardments that struck military targets but also a hotel and an inactive nuclear development plant.

Clinton endorsed the offensive and, in his first few days in the White House, kept up the assault. Significantly, it was a measured response to provocation. There was no apparent attempt to lure Iraq into a confrontation on new fronts, and the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Edward Perkins, played down the U.S. attacks.

"At the moment, it seems that Baghdad is complying with the manifestations of the Security Council," Perkins said Friday in New York. "If that's so, I hope that this will cool down the heat, so to speak."

Asked whether Bush's policy was being reconsidered, a U.S. official said no.

"The question is whether Saddam Hussein is reconsidering his policy," the official said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

He said there were indications that Saddam planned all along to be on better behavior once Clinton took office Jan. 20.

Saddam greeted the new President with a ceasefire. And he has admitted U.N. weapons inspectors.

But the Clinton administration will insist on two things: Iraq's compliance with U.N. Security Council resolutions and respect for "no-fly" zones that the United States, Britain and France set up to protect Kurds in the north and Shiites in the south against Saddam's wrath.

The new president is not looking for new ways to confront the Iraqi leader. The two U.S. military actions under Clinton were directed at radar sites only.

Clinton is expected to hold his first National Security Council meeting early this week. The war in Bosnia is the main item on the agenda.

Assessing what Saddam may be up to is central to that analysis.

Two years ago, the Iraqi leader was reaching out across the Arab world to champion the cause of the Palestinians and the poor. But now, U.S. strategists say, his main concern is maintaining control at home, or simply surviving. He has lost much of his military strength while the United Nations has taken on the authority to define his territory and airspace.

Newly compliant with U.N. resolutions, Saddam is expected to launch a new two-part offensive. At the United Nations, Iraqi diplomats are likely to argue that the economic strictures imposed on their country should be eased now that Iraq is observing most of the resolutions.

Pro-, anti-abortion protesters rally

Associated Press

Police arrested hundreds of anti-abortion protesters at demonstrations in several cities Saturday, one day after President Clinton lifted some abortion restrictions to mark the 20th anniversary of the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling.

Protesters in Washington, D.C., glued shut the doors of an abortion clinic, chained themselves to a homemade metal blockade and used cars and a "human wall" to block entrances at others.

Police arrested 165 people for blocking one Washington, D.C., clinic. Another 147 protesters were arrested outside three other clinics in town.

In Dallas, 30 anti-abortion protesters were charged with criminal trespassing at an abortion clinic.

And in Milwaukee, 15 protesters were taken into custody, some of whom tried to block the doors to an abortion clinic.

Clinton's actions were cheered by the medical community and abortion-rights advocates.

"I feel like I have just had the shackles taken off of me," said Dr. Pamela Maraldo, president of Planned Parenthood. "I feel like the president took the White House out of the dinosaur age on this issue."

Clinton signed a series of executive orders that removed restrictions placed by his Republican predecessors on abortion counseling and medical research using fetal tissue.

In Augusta, Maine, a crowd of 2,000 staged an anti-abortion protest.

"God help the politicians who have gone with the popular sway of the pro-abortion movement to get elected," said Pastor Ron Durham of the Abundant Life Church of Bangor in remarks on the statehouse steps.

The demonstrators were urged to speak out to the Legislature this session when pro-abortion forces mount a push for passage of a bill designed to buttress guaranteed access to abortion.

In Melbourne, Fla., 250 anti-abortion demonstrators picketed the Aware Woman Center in central Florida, and 50 pro-abortion pickets also were on hand.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., about 200 abortion demonstrators evenly divided on both sides of the issue marched before dawn.

The clinic blockades were carried out a day after about 75,000 people marched to protest the 20th anniversary of the Supreme Court's landmark Roe vs. Wade decision, which legalized abortion.

New York Post workers may take pay cut for jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — The fate of the 192-year-old New York Post again rested in the hands of its employees Saturday, with union leaders urging workers to take 20 percent pay cuts to keep the feisty tabloid alive for at least a month.

"Here We Go Again: Post Hangs By Thread," read a Page 2 headline after the cash-strapped newspaper's latest lurch toward extinction.

Four of the Post's 10 unions have already agreed to the pay cuts and the remaining six are to vote Sunday.

Union leaders have recommended their members accept the cut — the second 20 percent slash in 2½ years.

"I see that this is the only way to keep our jobs," said George McDonald, president of an umbrella group for eight Post unions.

Without the savings, publisher Peter Kalikow has said, he must fold the nation's oldest continuously published daily on Monday.

The publisher also announced the price of the Post would increase a dime to 50 cents with Monday's paper — if there is one.

The financial difficulties are only the latest for the Post, which has seen its daily circulation tumble to 438,000 from an all-time high of nearly 1 million in the early 1980s.

The paper is famous far beyond New York for such headlines as "Headless Body In Topless Bar," Kalikow received union concessions when he bought the Post in 1988 that saved it from extinction then. Two years later, he said he'd fold it if the unions didn't agree to a 20 percent cut and they complied. About half of that reduction has since been restored.

President uses same desk as JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will use the same desk in the Oval Office as Presidents Kennedy and Reagan.

In his first photo session in the Oval Office, Clinton was seated Saturday at the "Resolute" desk.

The ornate furniture was carved from the timbers of the HMS Resolute, a British vessel that ran aground in U.S. waters in the 1850s. The vessel was refloated and returned to England. In gratitude, the British had a desk made from planks of the ship and gave it to the United States.

President Bush during his four years in the Oval Office used the same desk that he had used as vice president.

Asked how he felt about the Oval Office, Clinton said: "I like it a lot. It's a wonderful office."

A table behind the desk holds Clinton family photos and a small copy of the famed Rodin statue "The Thinker."

Pictures on the wall include portraits of Presidents Andrew Jackson and George Washington. A light blue carpet with a gold-and-blue border and the presidential seal in the center covers the floor.

'Roseanne' wins at Golden Globes

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood was acclaimed best director of 1992 for his western "Unforgiven" at the 50th Golden Globe Awards Saturday night.

The Hollywood Foreign Press Association's award drew a standing ovation from the Beverly Hilton crowd of celebrities.

"All I had to do was just not ruin it," said Eastwood, who thanked his cast, crew and the Warner Bros. studio for the movie's success.

Eastwood also starred in the film about an aging, reformed gunfighter who reluctantly returns to killing for money to save his failing farm.

Gene Hackman, who played the movie's sadistic sheriff, "Little Bill," was honored as best supporting actor.

"Unforgiven" was also among nominees for the best dramatic motion picture award, scheduled to be presented later in the evening. Others included "A Few Good Men," "Howards End," "The Crying Game" and "Scent of a Woman."

The sitcom "Roseanne" won big in the TV categories, scoring victories for best comedy series and winning best actress and actor awards for its stars, Roseanne Arnold and John Goodman.

Miranda Richardson, the carefree vacationer in Italy in "Enchanted April," and Tim Robbins, the unscrupulous film producer in "The Player," were hailed the best actress and actor in a musical or comedy film.

Miss Richardson exlaimed giddily: "I'm really delighted that you have taken this movie to your heart."

The award for best motion picture screenplay was awarded to Bo Goldman for "Scent of a Woman."

Joan Plowright was a double winner, taking best supporting film actress honors for "Enchanted April" and the best supporting actress in a TV series or mini-series award for her role in the HBO special "Stalin." Maximilian Schell won supporting actor for "Stalin."

"I think this is probably the luckiest night of my life. I have seen the other nominees and I think this award should be broken into little pieces and given to all of us," she said of her movie award. Then she added, "But I have a desperate desire to keep it."

"Sinatra," the saga of singer Frank Sinatra's life produced by his daughter Tina, was named best mini-series or movie made for television.

The victory for Mrs. Arnold, who had never been nominated for an Emmy for her popular show, delighted the crowd at the Beverly Hills Hotel. But she wasn't there to enjoy it.

"She's home, she's sick," said her husband, Tom Arnold, who accepted on her behalf.

"Most of all, she'd like to thank her fans — and it's about time," Arnold said.

The winners of the 50th annual Golden Globes were selected by the 90 members of the Hollywood Foreign Press Association. The awards often serve as a bellwether for the Academy Awards.

The Globes' singular best director award was under especially close scrutiny this year because the Academy Award winner in that category usually also wins for best picture.

The candidates included three actor-directors: Eastwood, Reiner and Robert Redford for "A River Runs Through It." Also nominated were James Ivory for "Howards End" and Robert Altman for "The Player."

Dick Clark produced this year's broadcast on TBS.

Advertisers: 'junk mail' deserves look

BOSTON (AP) — Retailers call it direct marketing. Most everyone else calls it junk mail — and many of the advertisements that crowd the mailbox each day go straight to the trash.

Now, retailers are hoping technological advances will better target mailed advertisements so that people will give them a second look.

"The whole point is to get the right message to the right person," said Karen Humphries Sallick, a manager with Harte-Hanks Data Technologies, of Billerica, which develops computer software to track customer shopping trends.

"When I go home at the end of the day and find 20 pieces of junk mail, I want to scream — and I'm in the business," she said. "We are oversaturated."

More than 60 billion pieces of mail, from fashion catalogues to pizza coupons, arrive at American homes each year, according to the Direct Marketing Association, a trade group.

Police track a trail of genes to find rapists and killers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators working on a murder and rape in Minnesota had little to go on except one item the killer left behind — his genes.

That was all they needed.

First, the state crime lab analyzed blood and semen found at the victim's apartment. The samples yielded DNA from inside the killer's own cells. With it, technicians drew up a kind of genetic mug shot of the man they were looking for. Then they checked a computer to see if any recently released prisoners had the same pattern of genetic material, which is as different from person to person as fingerprints.

One man did. Martin Perez was arrested and now awaits trial.

"The case never would have been solved without it," said Steve Redding, a Hennepin County assistant prosecutor. "There was no suspect, no leads, no reason to suspect this guy over virtually anybody else in the city of Minneapolis."

Welcome to the dazzling — some say chilling — new world of laboratory sleuthing. The Minnesota case was the first in the United States to identify a suspect solely by searching a data bank of genetic profiles. What happened there is a model of the way police everywhere will soon pursue criminals, especially rapists.

Twenty states are in various stages of setting up similar computerized catalogues of felons' genes. Soon the FBI will begin testing a nationwide system that eventually will link them all together.

Within a year or two, the FBI hopes to have genetic profiles on file of 100,000 prisoners, most of them sex offenders, robbers and other violent criminals. As more states join the system and cumbersome lab work is streamlined, the genetic mug book should grow.

Police will search the computer for suspects whose genes match the ones left behind at crime scenes in blood splotches, semen stains, hair, saliva, even the skin found under victims' fingernails.

Genetic analysis is nothing new in rape cases. For a few years, labs have routinely checked to see if suspects' genes are the same as those in semen samples. Typically, though, the tests are run only after police have already identified a possible culprit and want to rule him in or out as a suspect.

But using the new data banks, investigators will follow a trail of genes to new entirely suspects, people who simply never would have surfaced in ordinary police work. Like in Minnesota, they can find matches — or "hits" — when they have no idea at all whom they are looking for.

"It will be one of the most powerful law enforcement investigative aids to come along since fingerprints," predicted Dr. Paul Ferrara, head of Virginia's forensic science division.

Powerful, yes. And that troubles some ethicists, attorneys and others who think about such things. Some are concerned about the harm when the system fingers people mistakenly. Others worry about what they see as the ultimate invasion of privacy — rifling through the genes that design the human body.

"Setting up a databank for law enforcement purposes is in theory a good thing," said Barry Scheck, a New York lawyer. "But it should be equally clear that there are serious privacy concerns raised by centralizing all that genetic information, and there are certain guarantees that we must demand in terms of lab reliability."

No two people — except identical twins — have exactly the same genes. Genetic profiles are drawn by looking at this natural variation between individuals.

Lab technicians start by zeroing in on four spots on the strings of genes inside each human cell. Using chemical knives, they slice them up and sort out the pieces. The genetic makeup of each spot is written as an eight-digit number. The results from the four spots are then combined to produce a single 32-digit number. This is the genetic profile.

Some genetic patterns in these four spots occur more often than others. As a result, some people's genetic profiles are more distinct than others. Typically, though, there is about a one-in-a-million chance that two people will have the same 32-digit number.

John Hicks, director of the FBI crime lab, expects the data base to be most useful for catching rapists, since semen is the most abundant genetic material left at crime scenes.

Even when a search of the data bank comes up blank, the process should still help catch criminals. Investigators will see if genetic material from the perpetrators of unsolved crimes matches up.

"Where it will have an immediate impact is in linking serial offenses," Hicks said. "As more labs routinely start putting unsolved rape cases in the system, they will find that this case is linked to some other case, maybe in their own jurisdiction or in another."

Police believe that many seemingly random rapes are committed by the same person. With the data base, they will be able to find these patterns, and this should improve their odds of tracking down the culprit.

Perhaps the biggest practical drawback to the technique is the time needed to run each genetic profile. Although 20 states have laws requiring sex offenders and some other prisoners to give blood samples for genetic analysis, they are typically far behind in processing them. Virginia, for instance, has collected about 50,000 samples since 1989 and so far has analyzed only a few hundred of them.

Each genetic profile takes six weeks. A lab technician working on several at once can finish between 100 and 200 a month. However, many experts believe that new technology on the horizon will greatly speed up the process and lower the cost, which is now about $100 per sample.

Despite the obvious advantages of the system, it troubles people whom bioethicist Ruth Macklin of Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York calls "the ethically worried crowd."

"The question arises whether because this is such a powerful tool it will be accepted and used without safeguards," she says.

Probably the most frequently raised concern is privacy. Who will be able to browse through the library of genetic data? Insurance companies, perhaps, or employers? No, says the FBI.

Only law enforcement agencies that put genetic information into the national data base will be able to search it. The FBI intends to limit the number of investigators authorized to use the system, and even then, the amount of information they find will be very limited.

For instance, the computer will hold just numerical genetic profiles, not names or criminal histories.

Bush tells of insecure, ambitious self in diary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before you relegate him to the history books, meet the George Bush you never got to see: a president-in-waiting who viewed the world through a political prism and himself as a master's apprentice.

Bush intensely tracked public opinion about himself, critiqued the news media in terms of their favor toward him and religiously studied President Ronald Reagan.

"He (Reagan) smiles when the press fire these tough questions. That is something I have got to learn and learn better. I will keep trying," Bush mused in a Nov. 15, 1986, entry to his diary.

It is excerpts from that taped diary, released in Bush's last week in office as part of the Iran-Contra investigation, that give a self-portrait of the man who later became the nation's 41st president.

The passages provide a snapshot of Bush between Nov. 4, 1986, and Jan. 2, 1987, during which he was already ambitiously plotting his bid to take over the White House two years later.

Throughout the period, he viewed the events and people around him in terms of their political implications.

Bush recounted receiving advice from several of his close friends, including James A. Baker III, to distance himself from Reagan during the height of the Iran-Contra scandal. Instead, he said he decided he was "not going to desert the President."

But he occasionally agonized over his position, ultimately rationalizing it by the political good it might do him.

"In the long run .. this whole matter will be resolved. It will be OK and then we can have stories out there 'didn't panic,' 'didn't run,' 'didn't duck away from the president,'" he dictated in one diary excerpt.

Bush other times recounted his experiences with other Reagan administration officials.

In early November 1986, Bush recounted that his concern that then-Secretary of State George Shultz might resign. Bush met with Shultz and said afterward he found the secretary of state "thoughtful" for worrying about the effects of the scandal on his 1988 run for president.

But just two weeks later, Bush described walking into Reagan's office and insisting that Shultz be fired to ensure Reagan "get this all behind him in the next couple of months."

The diary also shows that Bush, who publicly professed indifference to national opinion polls, tracked them studiously as he geared up his bid for the White House.

He stewed over his image, regularly fearing his political ambitions would be crushed by the scandal. "I'm inclined to feel that I have been a loser out of this Iran thing," Bush said at one point. Others times he characterized himself as "bleeding" or "diminished."

Near the end of the diary Bush added: "The irony is that everyone says that the vice president has no power, and yet I am the one damaged."

The diary portrays Bush as carefully monitoring the news media, passing judgment on reporters' work and evaluating how it affected him.

At one point, he referred to Washington Times reporter Ralph Hallow as "a horrible fellow, a right-wing guy" whose story analyzing what Bush knew about the Iran-Contra scandal nonetheless "wasn't bad at all."

Hallow did not return a message left at his office. There was no answer at his home Saturday.

Another time, Bush lamented about the "kind of doubt and meanness that gets into the faces of the reporters when they simply don't think you're telling the truth."

Bush directed some of his diary observations at public officials, once referring to fellow Texan and then-House Speaker Jim Wright as "his oily self."

But many of his diary's personal observations were reserved for Reagan, painted with the careful reverence a student affords his mentor.

New ag chief won't start by closing field offices

YAZOO CITY, Miss. (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy said Saturday he'll start cutting costs from the top in Washington before closing hundreds of field offices as his predecessor had planned.

Bush administration secretary Edward Madigan had proposed closing about 1,200 of the 14,000 field offices to help streamline the nation's fourth-largest agency, which has 124,000 employees and spends $62 billion a year.

"That proposal was submitted by Ed Madigan, who of course is a great man, but he is a former secretary of agriculture," Espy told a hometown crowd of about 250.

"What I'm first going to do before we start closing offices in the field is to examine the operation in Washington, D.C. Because before you start cutting farmers' services and local offices in the rural areas, you ought to send a message first that we ought to clean up our own shop in Washington."

He said he eventually would try to consolidate field offices and make the agency's national computer system more effective.

Espy, confirmed Friday as the nation's first black agriculture secretary, also said the United States must continue supporting Russia, despite its farm loan defaults, because of the country's importance to U.S. exports.

Russia, and the former Soviet Union before it, defaulted on U.S.-backed farm loans to the extent that it owes $228 million to the United States.

"I believe we cannot forsake that market, because the strength of agriculture in the future will depend on the strength of international trade," he said.

Espy spoke Saturday at the same courthouse where he thanked voters in 1986 for electing him as Mississippi's first black congressman this century.

Sessions blames former attorney general for attack

By James Rowley
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — FBI Director William S. Sessions on Saturday dismissed a Justice Department report accusing him of ethical abuses as a "crassly calculated attack" by former Attorney General William P. Barr.

In a 90-minute meeting with reporters, Sessions began a public counteroffensive against the Justice Department report that found he had abused his office for petty financial gain.

The report was the product of "an animus, and an anger and a disaffection by Mr. Barr for Mr. Sessions," the FBI director said. He said Barr "was in league with others who were determined to scuttle the director."

In a telephone interview afterward, Barr dismissed the comments from Sessions. "My assumption is that if he could rebut the facts, he wouldn't have to resort to personal attacks on me," Barr said.

Asked about Sessions at a photo opportunity in the Oval Office, President Clinton said only, "I don't want to talk about it."

Meanwhile, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., suggested it may be time for Sessions to step down.

"While he has a term of office, which is significantly unexpired, I think that there is a sufficient basis to remove him for cause, unless he can come out and exonerate himself," Specter said on CNN's "Newsmaker Saturday."

The 161-page Justice Department report issued Tuesday found, among other things, that Sessions misused his office by taking personal trips aboard FBI planes and billing the government nearly $10,000 for a fence around his home.

The findings, the report said, "raise issues that only the president can resolve" about whether Sessions can continue to serve as FBI director.

Sessions vowed to continue in office but acknowledged that "whether I survive as director of the FBI, the president will decide."

Sessions accused the Justice Department's ethics office of carelessness in the way it conducted the investigation that "was in itself a breach of professional responsibility."

But the director declined to say how the report reflected on the work of FBI agents who conducted much of the investigative work, saying he had seen only a copy of the final report, not the agents' interview notes. The FBI's ethics office also approved the report.

A 25-page reply that Sessions distributed called the report a "crassly calculated attack upon the reputation of a man who has had a long and distinguished career of public service."

"It is they who should hang their heads in shame for their conduct," Sessions said of Barr and the Justice Department ethics officials whom he accused of leaking details of the investigation over the last few months.

"I am not ashamed, my conduct was proper," Sessions told reporters. "My conduct was not unethical."

Sessions disputed a number of findings in the report, including the conclusion that putting an unloaded weapon in a locked briefcase in the trunk of his limousine was a "sham arrangement" contrived to evade taxes on the limousine as a fringe benefit.

But Sessions admitted under questioning that he did not follow the advice of FBI lawyers who said he would have to carry the gun to qualify for the tax exemption for law enforcement officers.

FBI general counsel Joseph R. Davis advised that Sessions should regularly practice firing the gun at a pistol range but the director never did, the report said.

Sessions, however, said he would pay the back taxes as ordered by Barr before he left the attorney general's office Jan. 15.

Sessions also conceded that any FBI agent who used his government car to conduct personal business — even driving a child to school — would be disciplined.

But the director said that because he must be accompanied by a security detail at all times, it is difficult to separate personal matters from official business as he travels about.

On the fence, Sessions said it only cost $3,750 while the balance was spent constructing an electronic iron gate recommended by FBI security experts. The report said the wooden fence was built against the advice of security experts, who recommended one made of iron.

Sessions speculated that Barr may have been motivated by the FBI director's insistence that his agency was politically independent in the way it investigated crime.

But Sessions could provide no examples of any attempts by Barr to try to interfere with investigations. The director did charge that he had been told by many people that Barr was hostile to his efforts to recruit more minorities and women to the ranks of agents, who are overwhelmingly white and male.

"The allegations of misconduct came out of the FBI, they were handled entirely by the career professional staff" in the ethics office. "Anyone who knows anything about the department knows that the attorney general has no control over that office," Barr said.

Sessions received the backing from Coretta Scott King, widow of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., and Andrew Young, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and mayor of Atlanta.

Packwood makes return to state

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — As Sen. Bob Packwood prepares to return to Oregon for the first time since he was accused of sexual misconduct, supporters and detractors here are questioning whether he still can be an effective senator.

"That's certainly a burning question to us right now. I don't think anyone knows," Sharla Moffett, executive vice president of the Southern Oregon Timber Industries Association, said Friday.

Her group meets with Packwood on Monday. "We are still very supportive of the senator," she said.

People who no longer support him have had a harder time making contact, said Tia Plympton, state coordinator for the National Organization for Women.

"He basically has gone into deep, deep hiding," Plympton said. "That is not for me a person who would be an effective senator."

She said Packwood's visit should include an open forum so women can confront him about sexual harassment.

Packwood, 60, has generally admitted allegations by about a dozen women — including several of his former Senate employees — that he made unwanted sexual advances. He apologized and said he would cooperate with a Senate Ethics Committee investigation.

His return to Oregon on Sunday marks his first visit to his home state since the allegations were published in The Washington Post on Nov. 22. In the two months since, Packwood held only one news conference. More recently, he has granted interviews to reporters who promise to stick to a specific agenda.

Packwood, a Republican, was elected to a fifth six-year term in November. Some Oregon residents have challenged his election, contending he defrauded voters with tactics that delayed publication of the allegations until after the vote. The challenge has been referred to the Senate's Rules Committee.

Packwood's office hasn't released much information about his itinerary, as it once did, and Plympton said she was having a hard time planning protests.

"We think it's going to be orchestrated sound bites rather than open communication," Plympton said. "He is trying to do the most safe kind of maneuver to allow him to say, 'I came back to the state,' while at the same time not really coming back to the state."

The secret itinerary prompted Mark Wiener, spokesman for Oregonians for Ethical Representation, which is calling for Packwood's resignation, to dub Packwood's trip "The Stealth Tour."

Packwood spokeswoman Julia Brim-Edwards said the senator's trip is to discuss timber and resources, agriculture and trade.

Foxfire founder apologizes

ATLANTA (AP) — The founder of the innovative Foxfire teaching method, sentenced to a year in prison for fondling a 10-year-old boy, apologized to those he molested and said he's still friends with many of them.

In an interview published Saturday in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Eliot Wigginton said he's writing all of them, "just to say, basically that I'm really sorry."

"The vast majority of this stuff was — way back. And some of these guys are 25, 30? The one I was talking to last night has a wife and five kids," Wigginton said at the Rabun County Jail in northern Georgia.

"The thing is that we had pretty strong relationships, and lots of them have maintained those relationships over the years. There were always wedding cards, you know, birth of the first kid, Christmas cards," he said.

Wigginton, who was national teacher of the year in 1987, pleaded guilty in November to one count of child molestation. He was sentenced to one year in prison and 19 more on probation. He was ordered to stay away from minors until the 20 years are up.

Prosecutors said he fondled a 10-year-old boy who stayed overnight at his cabin in May. They also said they had 23 adults ready to testify that Wigginton either attempted to molest them or had sex with them when they were as young as 12.

Wigginton said his main worry is that his humiliation will reflect badly on the Foxfire organization.

"What people need to understand is that it's one of the great educational experiments in the country," he said.

Wigginton, 50, began Foxfire in 1966 when he allowed his high school English students to decide how they would study grammar and writing. They decided to publish a magazine on mountain folk life — Foxfire.

The still-thriving magazine, named after a luminous mountain plant, spawned a series of 16 best-selling books. Royalties pay scholarships for Foxfire graduates from Rabun County High School and finance seminars for teachers adapting Wigginton's collaborative approach to education.

Fast track

LONDON — Two of the greatest records in track, Carl Lewis's 100-meter sprint and Mike Powell's long jump, were set on a surface which did not conform to international rules, The Sunday Times of London reported.

Tests by a British lab before the 1991 world championships showed the National Stadium track in Tokyo was harder than allowed by International Amateur Athletic Federation rules, the newspaper said.

An unprecedented six men finished the 100 meters in less than 10 seconds and Lewis set a world record of 9.86 seconds. Powell broke Bob Beamon's 23-year-old long jump record with a leap of 29 feet, 4½ inches.

The Sunday Times said the world records will almost certainly stand — despite doubts about the track — because excessive assistance from artificial track surfaces does not prevent ratification.

Initial tests by the London lab MSC on a sample of the track material indicated it was too hard, giving an advantage to sprinters and long jumpers, The Sunday Times said.

IAAF officials suspected before the event that the track did not conform to its rules but allowed it to go ahead to avoid offending the Japanese hosts, the newspaper said.

A tribute

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State basketball player Morgan Wheat wants to make sure he doesn't forget Iowa's Chris Street.

Wheat has changed his jersey number from 00 to 40, which was the number worn by Street, who was killed in a traffic accident Tuesday. He was buried Friday in his hometown of Indianola, Iowa.

An all-stater at West Des Moines Valley, Wheat played with and against Street for much of his basketball career.

"I decided to change my number on the way home from the wake," Wheat said.

Shula scouts the big game

EDITOR'S NOTE — Don Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins, has coached in six Super Bowls, winning two.

By Don Shula
For The Associated Press

The Dallas Cowboys had the No. 1 defense in the NFL this season, but they're going to be put to their stiffest test against the Buffalo Bills in the Super Bowl.

The thing they're going to have to deal with is Buffalo's no-huddle offense, and it's tough to prepare for. It puts relentless pressure on you when the Bills are running a play every 20 seconds. There's no way in practice to get that kind of tempo.

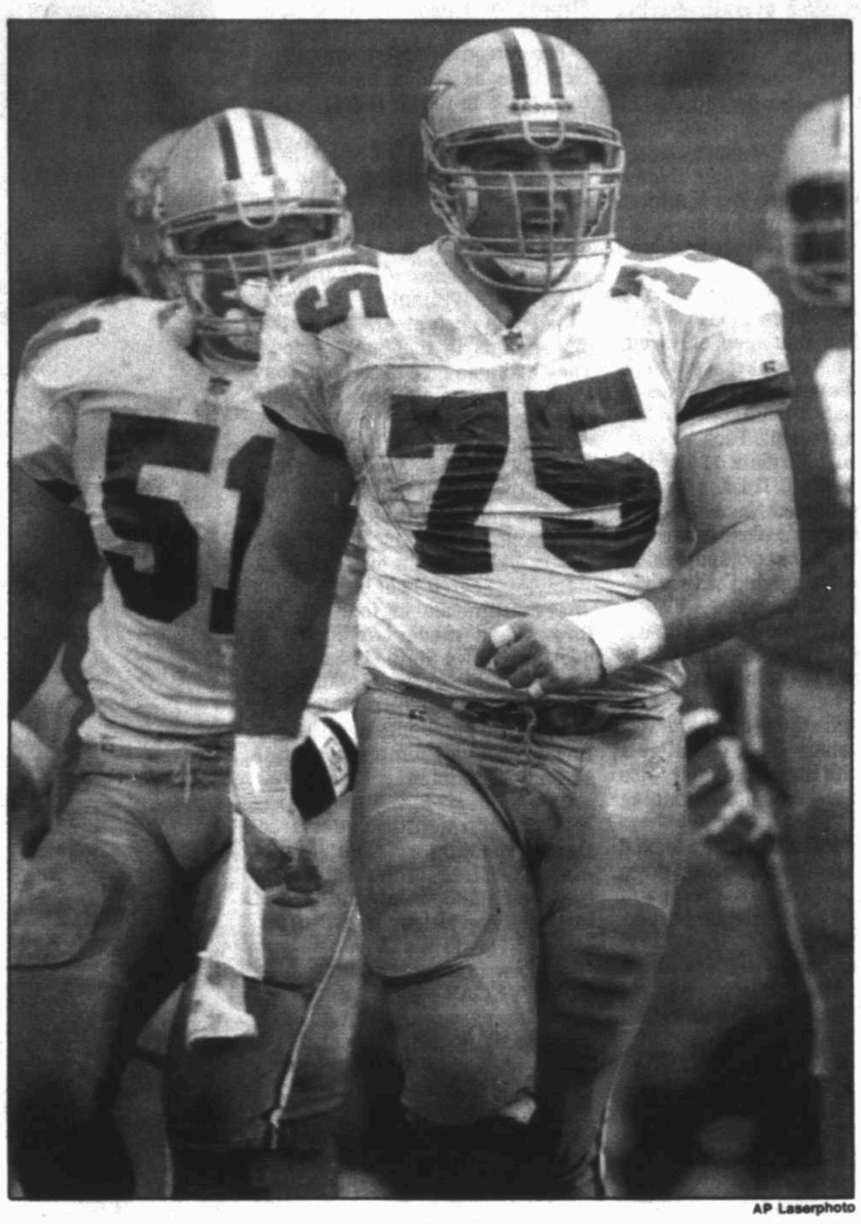

The Cowboys are going to have to make sure they get their signals in there and be ready to play against a fast-break offense.

The Bills have a veteran offensive line with good backups. They have two excellent tight ends, and their wide receivers are proven veterans. They have two of the best running backs in the NFL in Thurman Thomas and Ken Davis, who is really not a backup — he's an alternate. Quarterback Jim Kelly has done it all except win the big one, and I'm sure he's going to be hungry to do that. And every time backup Frank Reich steps in, he's done the job.

I haven't seen the Cowboys play a lot, but they have a lot of great athletes on defense, and defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt has done an outstanding job of bringing them along. I'm sure he'll have them ready.

The Bills' offense has about as much

Cowboy fever reaches new highs, lows

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — After a wild and crazy week at home, the Dallas Cowboys fly to the Super Bowl today and a rendezvous with sinister, uncertain and powerful forces.

No, not the Buffalo Bills. Hollywood. LaLa Land.

After last week, they go prepared for any wackiness that awaits.

Cowboy madness reached a feverish pitch after last weekend's 30-20 upset of San Francisco, and the scramble for tickets and trinkets continues.

But that's not the half of it.

Some guy stole a color TV so he could watch the Cowboys, then returned for the remote control, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Saturday.

The newspaper said the 24-year-old burglar most likely will watch Super Bowl XXVII from a jail cell in suburban Grapevine.

The story, incidentally, made Page 1, as did a yarn in The Dallas Morning News about Cowboys defensive back Kenneth Gant and the "goofy" new dance craze, the Shark.

Gant does his Shark dance after making a big defensive play.

"The Shark has really sunk its teeth in Dallas," the News reported.

At midweek, a Dallas restaurant chain slashed a spicy chicken item called Buffalo wings from its menu. It didn't want to aid and abet the enemy.

Worse still, the mayor of Buffalo, Texas, is changing his town's name.

Questions, guilt haunt Jenkins

■ Former major league pitcher Ferguson Jenkins tries to cope with death of fiance, daughter.

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

GUTHRIE, Okla. — Nearly every day, Ferguson Jenkins drives his pickup truck about eight miles from his ranch into town for an errand. One stop is always the post office.

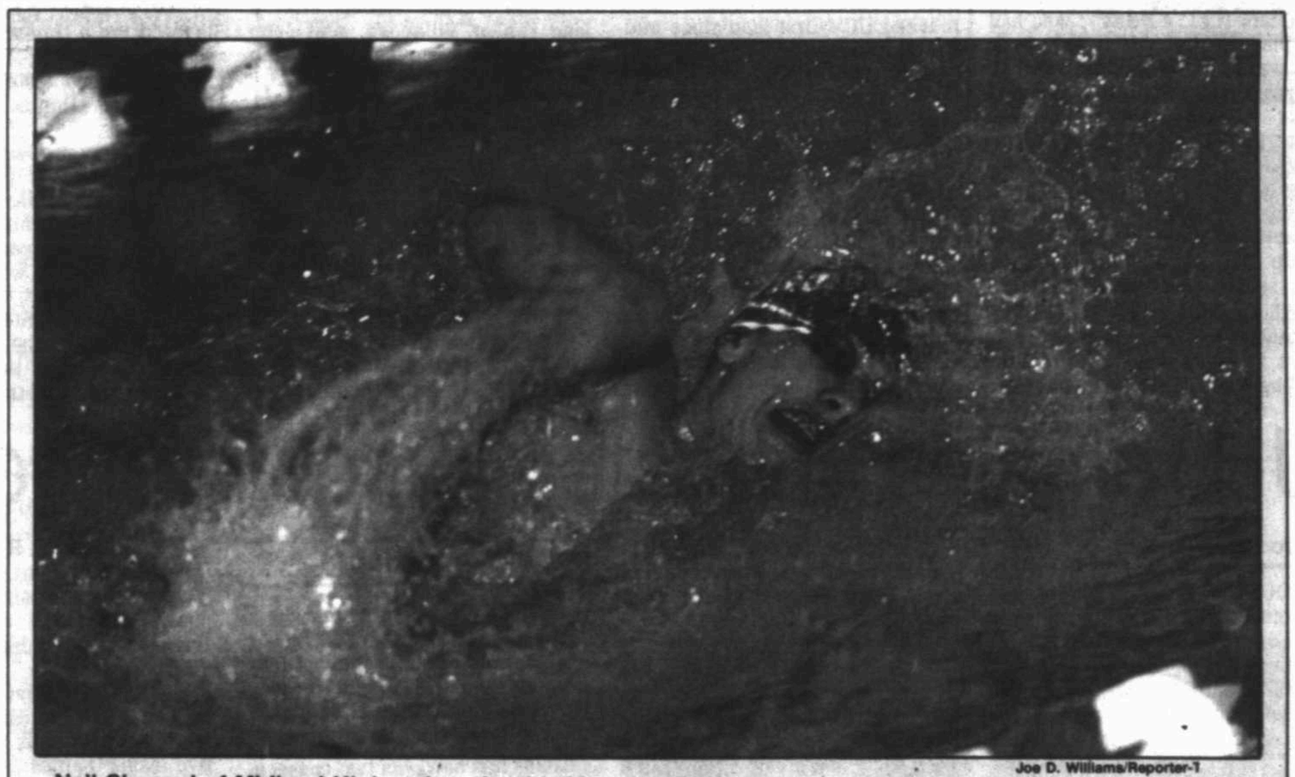

Until two years ago, Jenkins would get only a handful of mail. Not many people knew his address or even that he lived on a 160-acre ranch north of town.

That changed two years ago when the 284-game winner was voted into baseball's Hall of Fame. Fans found Fergie Jenkins again, and soon he began receiving 30 to 40 pieces of mail a day.

The mailbag has been considerably heavier of late, although the autograph requests have been outnumbered by sympathy notes. Hundreds of people have written since Dec. 15, when Jenkins' fiancee and 3-year-old daughter were found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning.

"People write, 'I lost a daughter, I lost a son, I lost a son in Vietnam, I lost a husband, I know what you're going through,' " Jenkins said. "But do you

MHS sweeps swim meet

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

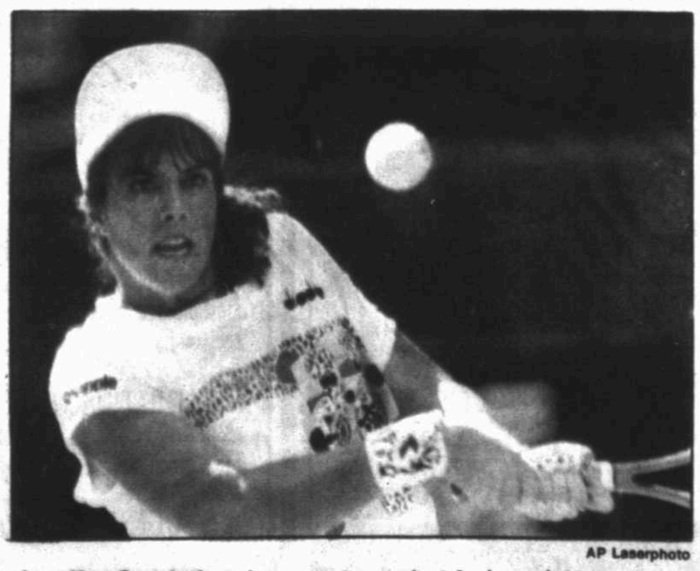

For the first time since the mid-1980s, the Midland High boys and girls swim teams completed a sweep of the Midland Invitational Swimming and Diving Meet, conducted Friday and Saturday at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center.

MHS' girls finished with 366 team points, outdistancing second place San Angelo by 45 points. Midland Lee's girls were close behind in third, with 285.

In the boys division, MHS won with its usual dominance. The Aquadawgs finished with a whopping 555 points, far out-distancing the second place point total of 191 posted by Lubbock High.

The MHS girls were led by Katheryn Krall, who won two events — the 200 and 500 freestyle — and also swam as a member of both the 200 and 400 freestyle relays, both of which finished with first place times. In fact, it was the first-place finishes of both those relay teams to which head coach Larry Ridge attributed MHS' overall success. Not

Edberg leaves doubles match

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Stefan Edberg's injury problems in the Australian Open, which forced him to default in the 1989 quarterfinals and 1990 final, are threatening his chances at a third championship.

The second-seeded Edberg defaulted from a doubles match Sunday, citing back spasms that made him wince in pain on overheads and affected his serves in a tough third-round victory over Amos Mansdorf.

Edberg's coach said his withdrawal from doubles with partner Jan Siemerink was "precautionary," but the Swede might have trouble recovering fully in time to play a fourth-round match Monday against Arnaud Boetsch. If Edberg gets through that match, he would still have to win three more if he is to regain the title he captured in 1985 and 1987.

■ Australian Open

Edberg suffered an abdominal muscle strain here in 1989 and defaulted from the quarters against Thomas Muster. Edberg had the same injury in 1990 when he quit in the fourth set of the final against Ivan Lendl.

If Charles Barkley thinks tennis players get off easy, he should have seen the way Pete Sampras punished his brash opponent Saturday night after an in-your-face exchange.

It was classic intimidation, a confrontation Barkley would have appreciated, administered verbally and physically. If it was mild by NBA standards, it was rare in tennis and still rarer coming from Sampras, the sport's Mr. Congeniality.

Auburn hands Arkansas second SEC loss

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Ronnie Battle scored 26 points and Aaron Swinson added 25 Saturday night as Auburn rebuffed a late Arkansas run to hand the No. 8 Razorbacks their second straight Southeastern Conference loss, 100-89.

The loss snapped a 36-game home conference winning streak dating back to Arkansas' days in the Southwest Conference. It was the Razorbacks' first loss in Barnhill Arena since Missouri defeated them 87-76 in December 1991.

Auburn (8-5, 3-3) built a 24-point lead with eight minutes left and had little trouble with the Razorbacks' press the rest of the way, even though Arkansas (12-3, 3-2) cut the deficit to 11 with 1:28 left.

The Tigers hit 67 percent from the field, compared to just 44 percent for Arkansas.

The Tigers, who never trailed in the game, used a 22-6 first half run to build a 47-31 halftime lead. Auburn had four 3-pointers in the run, including two by Battle.

No. 1 Kansas 82, Colorado 51

BOULDER, Colo. — Richard Scott scored 19 of his 21 points in the second half as top-ranked Kansas beat cold-shooting Colorado.

The Jayhawks led by only four points at halftime, but outscored the Buffaloes 45-18 after intermission. Colorado shot only 28 percent from the field in the second half.

Kansas (16-1 overall, 4-0 Big Eight) went on a 21-5 run early in the second half to take command.

Colorado (8-7, 0-3) kept it close in the first half as Donnie Boyce and Randy Robinson combined for 25 of CU's 33 points.

Scott, who played only 15 minutes because of foul trouble, ignited the Jayhawks early in the second half, hitting a 3-pointer with 19:44 left.

Leading 42-39, the Jayhawks then went on a game-breaking run. Walters, who also finished with 21 points, hit a 3-pointer for a 45-39 advantage and Scott followed with a basket two minutes later for a 47-39 edge.

No. 4 Kentucky 108, South Carolina 82

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Rodney Dent scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half, leading No. 4 Kentucky to a victory over South Carolina.

Dent scored the first seven points of the second half for the Wildcats (13-1, 4-1 SEC), who had six players in double figures.

It was the most points scored by the Wildcats this season, tying their output against Morehead State in December. Kentucky is now tied for the lead in the SEC East with Vanderbilt, which beat the then-No. 1 Wildcats last week.

South Carolina (7-8, 3-3) had given up that many points just once this season, in a 108-67 loss to North Carolina.

Kentucky made eight of 18 3-point attempts in the second half, pulling away from a 51-40 halftime lead.

Top 25 Roundup

lead. The Gamecocks twice got to within 10 points after the break — the first on a four-point play by Terry Bynum — but could get no closer.

No. 5 Michigan 76, Illinois 68

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Jalen Rose scored 25 points as No. 5 Michigan beat Illinois 76-68.

Chris Webber, still wearing a plastic mask to protect his fractured nose, added 13 points for the Wolverines (15-2 overall, 4-1 Big Ten).

Andy Kaufman, who was 2 for 11 from the field in the first half, finished with 27 points for Illinois (10-6, 3-2). Deon Thomas added 18 for the Illini.

Michigan held its biggest lead, 59-40, with 12:53 left. But Kaufman scored seven points during a 13-4 run that cut the Wolverines' lead to 63-53.

Illinois pulled to 71-64 on a 3-pointer by Kaufman with 2:47 left. But the Illini managed only four more points, the last two on a Kaufman layup in the closing seconds.

No. 16 Georgia Tech 75, No. 7 Virginia 71

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Travis Best helped No. 16 Georgia Tech break open a close game and the Yellow Jackets snapped a three-game losing skid with a victory over No. 7 Virginia.

Georgia Tech (10-4, 3-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) defeated Virginia for the seventh consecutive time.

The loss was the second in a row for the Cavaliers (11-2, 4-2) after a 16-game winning streak. It also snapped an 11-game home winning streak.

The Yellow Jackets, who looked sloppy on defense in losing three previous games by an average of 17 points, got a solid defensive performance this time.

They also dominated inside on offense, thanks in large part to Malcolm Mackey's 22 points and eight rebounds.

No. 9 Cincinnati 40, Ala.-Birmingham 38

CINCINNATI — Nick Van Exel hit an off-balance 3-pointer with one second to play to give No. 9 Cincinnati a victory over Alabama-Birmingham.

Van Exel's shot rallied Cincinnati (13-1, 3-0 Great Midwest Conference) from its worst first half in nine years. The final score marked UC's first lead since midway through an 11-point first half.

Alabama-Birmingham (11-8, 1-3 GMC) controlled the game with its slowdown offense and tough man-to-man defense. The Blazers led by as many as 10 points in the second half.

Reginald Allen missed an off-balance 3-point attempt as the shot clock ran down with 25 seconds left in the game, giving UC its last chance. Van Exel, suffering through a 4-for-13 shooting night, tried to pass the ball inside with eight seconds left but had it slapped back to him.

He faked, dribbled, pulled up and threw up the 3-pointer, which went through as the clock ran out, giving UC its 10th straight win. UAB has lost seven of its last eight.

No. 11 Arizona 72, New Orleans 69

NEW ORLEANS — Senior Chris Mills scored 27 points, including Arizona's final seven, to lead the Wildcats to a victory that broke New Orleans' 10-game winning streak, the longest in NCAA Division I.

The outcome left Arizona at 11-2. New Orleans, which made just two field goals in the final 8:31, fell to 13-2.

A jumper by Mills gave Arizona a 67-66 lead with three minutes left, the Wildcats' first lead since early in the first half. A 3-pointer and two free throws by Mills expanded the Wildcats' lead to 72-66.

Gerald Williams' 3-pointer pulled the Privateers to within three points in the final seconds. They had a chance to tie, but Tony Madison's 3-pointer missed with three seconds left.

Iowa St. 81, No. 12 Oklahoma 74

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State rallied in the second half behind Ron Bayless and celebrated the return of coach Johnny Orr by beating No. 12 Oklahoma in overtime.

Bayless scored 16 of his 25 points after halftime and hit four key free throws and made two steals in overtime. Iowa State (11-5 overall, 2-2 Big Eight) overcame an eight-point deficit with 7½ minutes left, sending the game into overtime on Howard Eaton's jump shot with 18 seconds remaining.

Oklahoma (12-5, 1-2) might have held on with a little better free-throw shooting. Bryan Sallier missed two free throws with 52 seconds remaining in regulation and missed three of four in overtime.

No. 15 UNLV 96, No. 18 Georgetown 80

LAS VEGAS — J.R. Rider bettered his career-high for the second straight game, scoring 40 points in No. 15 UNLV's victory over No. 18 Georgetown.

Rider scored on an assortment of drives, dunks and an occasional 3-pointer in becoming the first UNLV player to reach the 40-point mark since Bob Florence did it twice in the 1972-73 season.

The coaching matchup featured Rollie Massimino, in his first year with the Runnin' Rebels after a long run at Villanova, and John Thompson, the Hoyas' head coach for over two decades.

The Big East games between Villanova and Georgetown were usually low-scoring affairs, a far cry from what happened in the desert on Saturday.

The win was the 57th in a row at home for UNLV, the longest current streak in the country. The last time the Runnin' Rebels (11-1) lost at home was Jan. 28, 1989, when Oklahoma beat them 90-89.

No. 20 Pitt 86, Miami 84

MIAMI — Miami huddled too long during a timeout in the final seconds, allowing Pittsburgh to score an uncontested layup that helped the Panthers beat the Hurricanes.

Pitt's Jerry McCullough took an inbounds pass from under his team's basket while Miami players were still returning to the floor following the timeout. The shot tied the game at 84 with 16 seconds left.

After Miami's Steve Edwards dribbled into the frontcourt, McCullough stole the ball from him, starting a fastbreak that resulted in Antoine Jones' game-winning layup with 1.9 seconds left.

A 15-foot shot by Miami's Trevor Burton was blocked at the buzzer.

With its fourth consecutive victory, Pittsburgh improved to 13-2 overall and 6-2 in the Big East Conference. Miami fell to 4-10 and 2-5.

Wisconsin 67, No. 21 Michigan St. 66

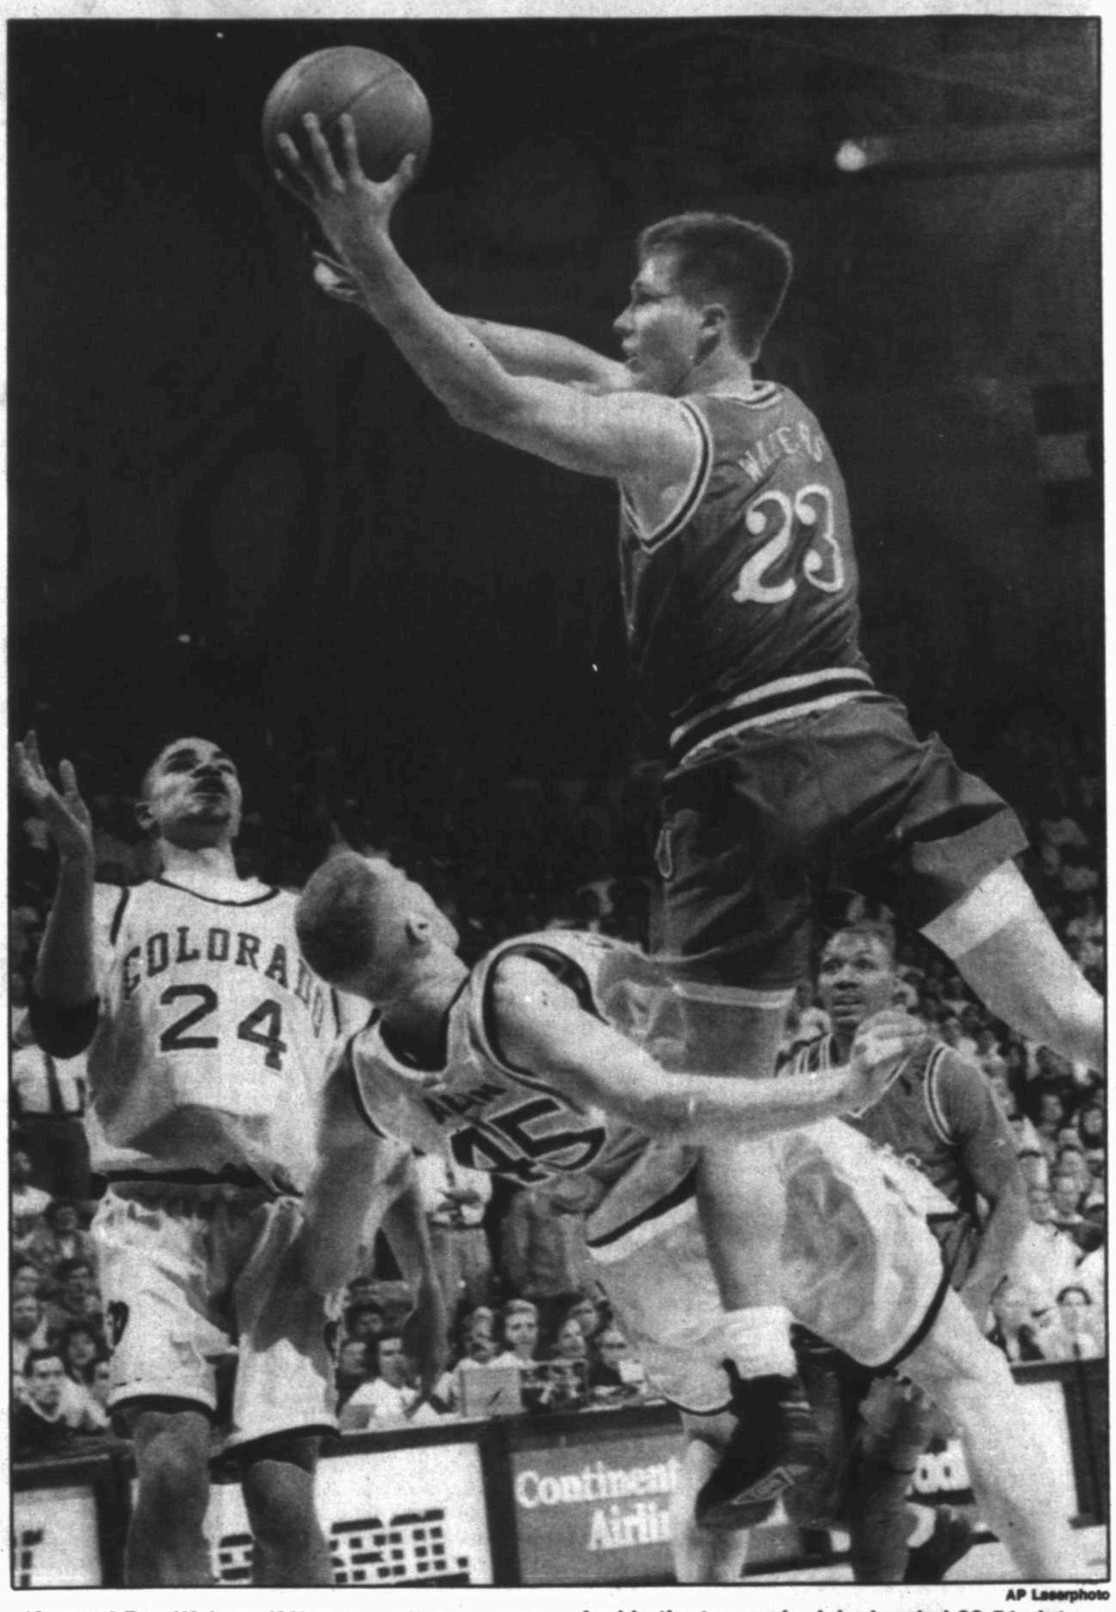

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Jason Johnsen hit a 3-pointer with 3.1 seconds left Saturday to give Wisconsin an upset win over No. 21 Michigan State.

Wisconsin (10-4, 3-2 Big Ten), only led for 18 seconds in the entire game, 15 of those in the game's first minute. Michigan State (10-4, 2-3) didn't score from the field in the final 7:34, and blew a 12-point second-half lead.

No.22 Utah 78, San Diego St. 53

SALT LAKE CITY — Josh Grant scored 18 points and pulled down nine rebounds to lead No. 22 Utah to a victory over out-manned San Diego State.

Grant hit two out of three 3-pointers as Utah improved to 14-2 overall and 7-0 in the WAC.

HOUSTON — David Diaz scored 24 points and led Houston's second half 3-point shooting barrage as the Cougars beat Southern Methodist 85-75 Saturday for their sixth straight victory.

Houston (11-2, 4-0 in the Southwest Conference) scored its first 12 points of the second half on 3-point baskets to put down SMU's early second half charge.

Diaz scored six of Houston's 11 3-point goals for the game.

SMU's frigid shooting in the opening minutes, while Houston was hitting seven of its first nine shots, allowed the Cougars to jump to a 23-8 lead with 11:32 to go in the half. Houston led 42-35 at intermission.

The Mustangs missed their first nine shots from the field and missed their first 14 3-point goal attempts before Chad Allen's 3-point basket with 3:41 left in the half.

SMU didn't score in the first 2:35 of the game and was 1 of 16 from 3-point range at the half.

After Houston got its 23-8 lead, SMU outscored the Cougars 27-19 over the rest of the half.

SMU (10-5, 3-1) pulled within two at 48-46 with 16:59 to play, but Houston's 8-0 spurt kept them at a distance.

Charles Outlaw scored 18 points and seven blocked shots for the Cougars and Derrick Smith added 15. Tim Mason scored 19 point to lead the Mustangs, whose winning streak was snapped at five in a row.

Texas 92, Texas Tech 74

AUSTIN — Michael Richardson scored 33 points and Tony Watson added 27 with sizzling 3-point shooting as Texas defeated Texas Tech 92-74, snapping a four-game Southwest Conference losing streak.

Texas, which hadn't started the conference season 0-4 since 1983-84, won without four key players who have been sidelined with either injuries or academic problems.

The Longhorns (7-7 overall, 1-4 in the SWC) also overcame a 31-point effort by Will Flemons of Texas Tech (8-6, 0-3).

Texas opened an 8-point lead (79-71) with 3:04 left on a 3-pointer by Lamont Hill and Tech quit going inside to Flemons and started bombing from 3-point range.

The Red Raiders hit only one shot from the field in the last four minutes and the Longhorns iced the victory by hitting 11 of 16 free throws in the final three minutes.

Texas has now won two consecutive games since starting center Albert Burditt and star guard Terrence Rencher left the team due to academic problems. Texas beat Murray State 79-74 on Tuesday.

Rencher is expected to return to the team, while Burditt has been suspended for the rest of the year.

Baylor 96, Rice 87

WACO — Anthony Lewis scored a career-high 26 points and pulled down a game-high 13 rebounds for Baylor, which handed Rice its first SWC loss.

The Bears improved to 11-4 overall and 3-1 in the SWC. The Owls fell to 9-5 with their first defeat in five league games.

Baylor built a 44-33 halftime lead on the strength of Lewis' 17 first-half points. The Bears went up 70-52 with 10 minutes remaining.

Marvin Moore, Rice's leading scorer who was held to two first-half points, scored 12 of his team's next 16 points to help close the gap.

Texas A&M 60, TCU 58

FORT WORTH — David Edwards scored 17 points and Texas A&M withstood a furious second-half rally to defeat Texas Christian.

The victory is the Aggies (6-9, 1-2) in the Southwest Conference this season.

Texas A&M led 42-31 with 12:47 to play before the Horned Frogs (3-11, 0-4) started coming back.

TCU closed the gap as Allen Tolley, Myron Gordon and Eric Dailey combined for a 10-4 run that ended with the Horned Frogs down 46-43 with 8:43 remaining. Two of A&M's points during that run came off free throws following a technical foul by TCU coach Moe Iba.

Troy Aikman had flourished at quarterback since Norv Turner became Dallas' offensive coordinator.

Aikman's season should quiet critics

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Troy Aikman has done a good job of burying his critics.

He finally beat the Philadelphia Eagles, twice, took out the defending world champion Washington Redskins, directed the Dallas Cowboys to the NFC East championship and put on a brilliant performance in a 30-20 NFC title victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

"There will still be a few of them out there," Aikman said. "They'll point out I've never won a Super Bowl. If we win the Super Bowl, they'll be saying next year I can't do it back-to-back. It will never end. But I'm comfortable with the way things are going. It's been a good year."

Aikman's performance in the second half of the NFC title game was Roger Staubach, Joe Montana, and Terry Bradshaw quarterbacking all wrapped up in a 30-minute package.

He completed 13 of 16 passes and made the critical throws when the Cowboys needed them the most, including a perfect strike to Alvin Harper on a 71-yard catch-and-run and a 6-yard scoring pass to Kelvin Martin to put the 49ers away.

After the game, coach Jimmy Johnson said, "It's been a great year and I'd like to thank Troy for taking me along with him."

Johnson said later, "That performance should have convinced any critic watching that Troy Aikman is a great quarterback."

In his fourth year, Aikman led the NFC in completions and was second behind the 49ers Steve Young in passing yardage and touchdown passes.

In playoff victories over Philadelphia and San Francisco, Aikman has yet to turn the ball over.

"Troy has been almost flawless," Johnson said. "He hasn't pressed. He's taken what other teams have given him. And he's made big plays when he had to make big plays."

When offensive coordinator Norv Turner arrived on the scene from the Los Angeles Rams, the once-shaky Aikman improved rapidly.

Aikman, who started out with a 1-15 team, said, "There were times when I questioned if I would be around when we (the franchise) got to the point where we wanted to be."

Feeling his career was on the line, Aikman flourished under Turner's system, which relies on quick drops and timing patterns to receivers on the move.

"My confidence took off last year under Norv," Aikman said. "I believe in his system and my progress just kept building each week."

Turner said Aikman has improved dramatically this season.

"It's the second year of the system and he has mastered it," Turner said. "Even bigger things are ahead for him. He's been excellent."

Aikman ignores the pressure which hounds a quarterback in the NFL.

"I feel I don't have anything to prove to anybody but myself," Aikman said. "I know there is a different challenge for me out there every week. That's good for me. I like challenges."

The challenge next Sunday is Buffalo in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena.

"I think I'm going to be comfortable," Aikman said. "We're working out at UCLA where I went to school. I have a lot of friends in the Los Angeles area. I'm going to feel like I'm at home."

Aikman has been bombarded for tickets and quipped, "I may not end up with as many friends in that area as I started out with."

Kelly refuses to hang head

By John F. Bonfatti
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Jim Kelly had a quick correction when somebody derisively referred to his team as "the Buffalo Broncos."

"No, we're the Buffalo Bills and we're proud to be the Buffalo Bills," Kelly said.

It was the first of what promises to be many cracks directed toward the Bills, who would join the Denver Broncos as losers of three Super Bowls in the past decade if they are beaten by the Dallas Cowboys next Sunday.

Kelly hasn't spoken with Broncos quarterback John Elway "but if there's somebody who's pulling for the Cowboys, it might be John because I'm sure he doesn't want to be alone at the top of losing three Super Bowls."

Elway, a member of the famous quarterback Class of 1983 along with Kelly, has led his team to the Super Bowl three times and the AFC title game four times. Yet his failures in the Super Bowl are mentioned before any of his numerous successes.

'We're the Buffalo Bills and we're proud to be the Buffalo Bills.'
Jim Kelly

That doesn't make Elway any less of a great quarterback, Kelly maintains.

"Everybody says quarterbacks are graded on how many Super Bowl rings they have," Kelly said. "They're ... just an ordinary quarterback if they don't have a Super Bowl ring.

"But I look at a couple of the great ones — Fran Tarkenton, John Elway, Dan Marino" who haven't won the Super Bowl, he said. "I think they put a little too much grade on it."

Kelly won't say the Bills are any better this season than they were the past two years. He will say that this team has been forced to overcome more adversity, and could be tougher mentally.

"We had to battle back from a lot of things this year," Kelly said. "I think the character on this team and the will to win is a lot greater than it has been."

That character will be tested this week in Pasadena, where the Bills will surely be reminded of their antics at last year's Super Bowl.

Thurman Thomas, the league's MVP last year, walked out of a press conference and complained he wasn't appreciated by fans and media. Bruce Smith talked about race-related hate mail he had received in Buffalo.

Not only will the Bills handle it, Kelly said, but they are determined not to add any new tales to the catalog of past Super Bowl mis-steps.

"We've learned in the past that nothing's going to come of being very verbal, which people have been in the past," he said.

File it under the category of dealing with the pressure of Super Bowl week, Kelly said.

"The first year (in the Super Bowl), you're almost in awe over the whole situation," he said. "I remember in Tampa saying, 'This is an unbelievable feeling.' You sort of get caught up in all the hoopla and all the fun.

"But I guess this year, we know exactly what it's going to take to win it. I think our concentration level's going to be a lot better."

Kelly knows that while he may consider himself a great quarterback, others won't until he's wearing a Super Bowl ring.

"Of course, I would love to be standing there as the first of the Class of '83 to have one," he said.

If that happens, it would erase most doubts about Kelly's status among the best in history.

More to Levy than just football

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Let other football coaches quote Halas and Lombardi. Marv Levy quotes Churchill and Hemingway.

And sometimes, Joe Louis.

The X's and O's guys are wrapped up in playbooks and game plans. Levy is a renaissance coach, a man who can talk as comfortably about English literature and history as he can about offenses and defenses.

"Every good coach has to be a good teacher," he said, "and he must teach more than just the fundamentals of football."

In the 42 years since earning his Masters in English history at Harvard — his thesis concerned America's Lend Lease Program in the early days of World War II — Levy has taught history, English and World Civilization.

And, oh yes, football.

He is a man who has heroes, the giants of history among them. They include Louis, the heavyweight champion of the world in the years when the coach was growing up.

"I remember listening to his fights on the radio," Levy said. "Louis was modest. He let his performance speak for him. I remember his fight with Billy Conn, how Conn went on and on about how he was going to do this and that and how he would beat Louis.

"When it was Louis' turn to speak, all he said was, 'I'll be there and I'll be on time.' "

The message was clear for the Bills, who occasionally have talked the talk but have not yet walked the walk.

There is a little frenzy in Buffalo at the moment because the Bills are 0-for-2 at the Super Bowl. An amateur analyst suggested to Levy that this upcoming one is a must win for the franchise. The coach snickered at that.

"World War II was a must win," he said.

Often, Levy leans on history to teach his football lessons. In the week after his team won its third straight AFC title, he talked to the Bills, not about Dallas and Pasadena, but rather about Abraham Lincoln.

Lincoln?

"He always knows what to say," quarterback Jim Kelly said. "Sometimes people laugh about him and wonder where he's getting with this. But the more you talk to the man, the more you understand what he's all about."

For Levy, it is not terribly complicated. "You have to have a plan," he said. "Plan your work and work your plan."

Levy's organizational chart has been refined over four decades of coaching from the preps to the pros. That was not his original idea.

After playing football at tiny Coe College, where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa, Levy enrolled in law school at Harvard. He lasted through six weeks of torts and contracts before deciding he'd rather coach. He transferred from law to Arts and Science, specializing in English history. His mind, however, was on sports.

His first coaching job was at St. Louis Country Day School, where he taught history and English and coached basketball and football. "They kept me busy," he said.

He has made myriad stops since then — William and Mary, California-Berkeley, New Mexico, the Canadian Football League, the NFL. His coaching philosophy has evolved and been refined at each place.

"What it takes to win is simple, not easy," Levy said. "You must make players feel prepared. You never use practice as punishment or reward. Practice is practice, a time to prepare for the game. You do what you need to do to get ready for the game."

He has done that at every level, from prep school to the pros, from Coe College to the NFL, where he was fired by the Kansas City Chiefs before arriving in Buffalo to take the Bills to three straight AFC championships.

He still shakes his head over the experience with the Chiefs.

"I felt they made a mistake," he said. "We were getting better. We went from two wins the year before I got there, to four wins, to eight wins, to nine wins. We were 3-6 in the strike year. So was (Mike) Ditka with the Bears and (Bill) Walsh with the 49ers. I got fired."

Football, you see, is not an exact science.

"Some things are politically correct," Levy said. "Some things are popular. Some things are right. What is important is that you do what is right, regardless whether it's unpolitical or unpopular.

Sometimes, the right thing might require talking about Lincoln. Or quoting Churchill, as he did at last year's Super Bowl. Or Hemingway, as he did last week after beating Miami for the AFC title.

"I read a lot," Levy said, "and I try to read good material."

FEVER: burgers turn blue

(From 1B)

"We're avid Dallas Cowboys fans," Byron Ryder explained.

Oh?

"Everywhere there's a Buffalo sign, like on our city limits signs, the Buffalo City Hall, we're going to hang a blue star over the name Buffalo," Ryder said.

"The name of the town, essentially, will be Blue Star, Texas."

The week began with fans buying everything silver and blue in sight, including diaper sets with Cowboys logos and $2,000 designer helmets decorated with the Cowboys star.

In Fort Worth, some joint was serving blue hamburgers.

Travels agents were going bonkers with new and imaginative Super Bowl packages, the most outrageously innovative an 11-day colossus that included airfare and tickets to both the Super Bowl in Pasadena and the Pro Bowl in Honolulu.

The tab: $10,000 per person.

At week's end, scalpers invaded the Cowboys' private domain at Valley Ranch and offered up to a $1,000 apiece for prime tickets. A Dallas writer spotted one guy came armed with cash, a cellular phone and a map of the Rose Bowl.

The players seemed a bit dazzled but told 'em no. Violates NFL rules.

"I got people I don't even know calling and asking me for tickets," said defensive tackle Russell Maryland. "If I had a hundred tickets, it wouldn't be enough."

Each player got two free tickets and could buy 20 more at the set price: $175.

Quarterback Troy Aikman, who played at UCLA, said he felt really comfortable returning to Los Angeles because of all his friends there. But with a rue smile, he added:

"I've got a lot of friends asking me for tickets, and at the rate it's going, they may not be my friends any more."

SHULA: Dolphin coach warns of Bill's pass rush

depth, experience and balance as you can have. They ranked No. 2 in the NFL, and they're very explosive. The only thing that ever stopped them is when they stopped themselves. When we've beaten them, it's been because they turned the ball over.

Dallas' offense doesn't seem to have any weaknesses. The offense is where coach Jimmy Johnson wants it now; they're strong in every area.

The Cowboys throw short and deep, they run the ball, they pass protect and they have the big-play capability. They have a superstar in two-time NFL rushing champion Emmitt Smith and a quarterback who has really come on. Troy Aikman is accurate and has a great arm.

Their offensive line just kept getting better and better this season and has improved tremendously over the last couple of years. They have wide receivers who can get open and take the ball from smaller defensive backs and run with it after they catch it. Tight end Jay Novacek is a very good possession receiver and a competitive guy. Daryl Johnston is an underrated fullback and blocker.

Against Buffalo, the Cowboys will need to have big plays. That's what they got against San Francisco in the second half of the NFC championship game. It was their most critical game since Jimmy has been at Dallas, and they beat an excellent defensive team.

The Buffalo defense has two superstars in Bruce Smith and Cornelius Bennett, and they have a lot of other excellent players, including Darryl Talley, Shane Conlan, Jeff Wright and Phil Hansen. Nate Odomes is a good corner, and strong safety Henry Jones has really upgraded them. It's a solid defense that doesn't give up the big plays. That's what they're going to have to do against Dallas, because Dallas is a big-play team.

Buffalo's pass rush will give the Cowboys everything they can handle. Smith may be the best defensive player in the game today, along with Reggie White of Philadelphia.

If Dallas can run against them, then the Cowboys will be able to do what they want. The biggest challenge Buffalo's defense has is to curb the Cowboys' running attack so they can't dictate.

Rockets win 8th straight

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 18 of his 31 points in the first half as the Houston Rockets took an early lead and never wavered in their eighth consecutive victory, 113-100 Saturday night over the Indiana Pacers.

Olajuwon also had 15 rebounds for Houston, which had lost seven straight games prior to its streak.

■ NBA Roundup

Kenny Smith added 15 points for the Rockets, who outshot the Pacers 53.6 percent to 44.7 percent.

Indiana, which lost for the third time in four games, got a season-high 20 points from Pooh Richardson, 17 from Dale Davis and 16 from Detlef Schrempf. But Reggie Miller, averaging 21.6, was held to four points on 1-of-12 shooting.

After Rik Smits dunked an offensive rebound to cut the Indiana deficit to four points to open the second period, the Rockets ran off 10 straight points to go up 39-25. Houston's lead had reached 47-29 on a basket by Carl Herrera with 5:27 remaining in the first half.

Richardson threw in a 3-pointer from halfcourt at the buzzer to narrow the deficit to 55-44. The Pacers never got closer than 12 points in the third quarter.

Magic 127, Mavericks 106

ORLANDO, Fla. — Rookie Shaquille O'Neal matched a career high with 38 points, and had seven blocked shots as the Orlando Magic beat Dallas, keeping the Mavericks winless on the road this season.

Donald Royal added a career-high 28 points for Orlando, which got the game's first six points and kept rolling. The Magic didn't stop until Dallas' latest horror numbers read 3-32 for the season and 0-16 on the road.

O'Neal, whose 38 points duplicated his total in an overtime loss Monday at Philadelphia, scored 13 in the opening period as the Magic moved to a 38-28 lead. He blocked five shots in the third period to set a team record, and also played his first professional contest without picking up a personal foul.

The loss was the Mavericks' second straight since beating Detroit on Tuesday night in Dallas to snap a 15-game losing streak. Derek Harper led the Mavericks with 18 points and 10 assists.

Suns 110, Hawks 91

ATLANTA — Charles Barkley had 32 points and 16 rebounds as the Phoenix Suns overcame an 11-point third-quarter deficit to beat the Atlanta Hawks.

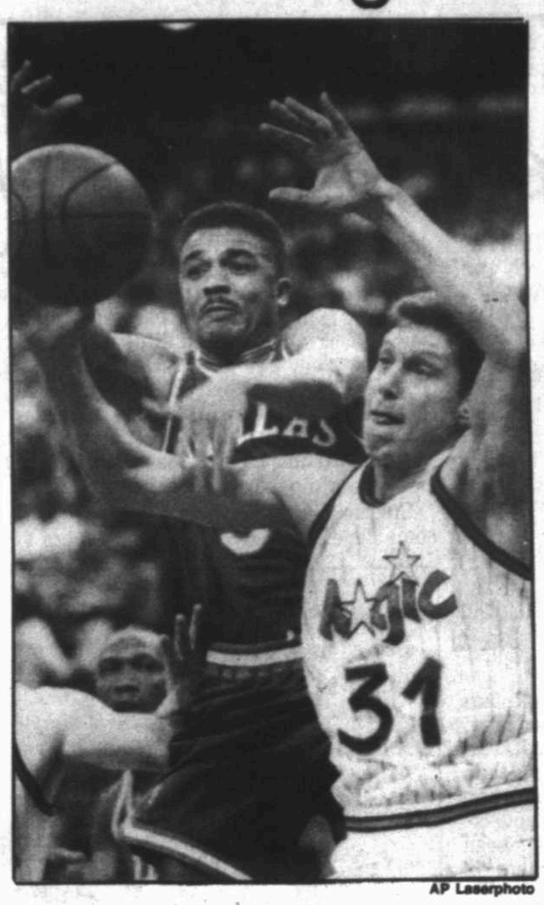

The Suns trailed 71-60 on a basket by Dominique Wilkins with 7:39 left in the third, then went on a 26-7 burst to build an 86-78 lead after three periods. Kevin Johnson and Dan Majerle scored seven points apiece and Barkley six in the surge.

Barkley also had five points in a 10-0 run early in the final quarter that ended on a dunk by Richard Dumas for a 98-71 lead with 7:46 to play. Barkley left the game at that point, and the Hawks never got within 15 points thereafter.

Sixers 113, Bucks 104

MILWAUKEE — Jeff Horacek scored nine of his 33 points in the final 1:41 as the Philadelphia 76ers beat struggling Milkwaukee, handing the Bucks a record sixth straight home loss.

The Bucks, who also lost for the eighth time in nine games, started the season 10-3. They have gone 5-19 since.

Orlando's Jeff Turner (31) takes the ball away from Dallas Maverick Donald Hodge.

Tim Perry scored 18 points and Clarence Weatherspoon 14 for the 76ers, who won for the eighth time in 11 games.

Blue Edwards and Eric Murdock led the Bucks with 21 points each. Frank Brickowski added 20 points.

Hornacek's two free throws followed by Perry's dunk with 6:51 left gave the Sixers their biggest lead, 95-91, since 37-35 early in the second quarter.

The Bucks closed to 99-97 with 1:56 left, but Hornacek made four straight free throws and added a 3-pointer with 42.2 seconds left to put the Sixers ahead 107-97.

Nuggets 97, Cavs 95

DENVER — Chris Jackson scored four of his 28 points in the final 30 seconds as the Denver Nuggets rallied to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Jackson tied the game with a 3-pointer with 29.6 seconds to play, and drove the floor for a decisive layup with 3 ticks left.

The Nuggets trailed 91-82 with 4:08 remaining before their late rally ended the Cavaliers' four-game winning streak.

Reggie Williams added 24 points and 11 rebounds, and LaPhonso Ellis 21 points and 14 rebounds for Denver. Larry Nance and Mark Price had 20 points each, and Gerald Wilkins 19 for Cleveland.

Kerrigan hangs on for win

Associated Press

PHOENIX — The long climb to a national championship is over for Nancy Kerrigan. She'll have to do a lot better to get to the top of the world.

The 23-year-old Kerrigan, a bronze medalist in last year's Olympics, had just enough to beat onrushing Lisa Ervin on Saturday night in the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. While Ervin was putting on an inspired show in the free skate, Kerrigan, of Stoneham, Mass., appeared to play it safe.

Kerrigan, skating in her fifth nationals as a senior, fell on a triple lutz and hit three other triple jumps. Her performance lacked vitality and likely wouldn't hold up in the world championships at Prague in March, where she will be favored.

It held up in the nationals because Tonya Harding Gillooly, the 1991 U.S. champion, had a rough outing. Gillooly fell once, stepped out of another triple jump and did not attempt her trademark triple axel, the toughest jump.

She slipped to fourth and missed out on a trip to the worlds, an upset because Gillooly has been to the world championships the last two years and was fourth in the Albertville Olympics.

Her place on the U.S. team for the world championships went to Ervin, a spunky 15-year-old who surged from fifth with the best free skate of the night. Ervin has gone from fourth in last year's nationals to second in the 1993 world junior championships and now to second in America.

Ervin, of Lakewood, Ohio, stepped out of one triple jump, but otherwise was clean and entertaining. She did not get any first-place votes — Kerrigan swept them — but was second with five judges, just enough to edge her up to second.

Another veteran, Tonia Kwiatkowski of Broadview Heights, Ohio, who trains with Ervin under 1960 Olympic champion Carol Heiss, sneaked into third. Kwiatkowski, 21, has been in the nationals since 1988 but had never won a medal.

Nicole Bobek, another 15-year-old, slipped from third to fifth.

Davis win's men's skating title

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Scott Davis became America's new king of the ice Saturday with a dazzling routine that overshadowed all other men's free skates in the U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

Favorite Mark Mitchell, trying to dodge his run of bad luck in big events, was second after falling on his first jump, and Michael Chack improved from sixth after the technical program to third.

Davis, who turns 21 on Friday, and Mitchell, 24, will represent the United States in the world championships in March. Chack, 21, bidding to join Davis in America's new wave of male skaters, will be an alternate.

Mitchell, Davis and two-time national champion Todd Eldredge ranked 1-2-3 after Friday's technical program.

But Eldredge skated a listless program after an opening triple axel-triple toe loop combination and dropped to sixth, a distressing fall for the 1990 and 1991 U.S. titlist.

Chack vaulted over the others with a strong 4½-minute program and was the talk of the America West Arena until Davis and Mitchell, the last two skaters.

Davis started with a triple axel and went on to complete six other triple jumps.

FERGIE: Tragedy dogs Hall of Famer

really know what I'm going through?"

The events of Dec. 15 and of the past two years swirl through Fergie Jenkins' head each day as he tends to the 11 quarter horses and 51 head of hereford cattle on the solitude of his ranch.

He bought the ranch with his late wife, Maryanne, while serving as pitching coach for the Oklahoma City 89ers, the Triple-A farm club of the Texas Rangers. Jenkins had grown up on a farm in Chatham, Ontario, and knew he would own a ranch after he retired from baseball.

He and Maryanne married in 1988. She had a son from a previous marriage, Raymond, and the couple had a child of their own, Samantha.

"Maryanne and I wanted a lot of things together," he said.

But in December 1990, Maryanne Jenkins was severely injured in a single-car accident while driving between Guthrie and Oklahoma City. She remained in intensive care 35 days, and at one point doctors reassured Jenkins she would pull through.

During the hospital stay, Jenkins received the news that he had been voted into the Hall of Fame. Then Maryanne caught pneumonia and one of her lungs collapsed. She died four days after Jenkins had received his Hall of Fame news.

"I was on my way to the hospital," he said. "She died about 9 something. I got there a little after 10."

It was the second time Jenkins had lost a woman he loved. His mother, Delores, died of cancer when he was 26. She had already been stricken blind after giving birth to him, and when she died, the 5-foot-10, 160-pound woman had withered to 65 pounds.

"I was very angry when my mother died," he said. "It seemed like she was getting punished. It seemed she was suffering more than what a woman should have to suffer."

A short time after Maryanne's death, Jenkins got a phone call from Cindy Takieddine, a woman he first met in 1967 while he was playing with the Chicago Cubs. They became friends, although Jenkins hadn't seen her in about 15 years.

She called to congratulate him about the Hall of Fame. When Jenkins told her about the death of his wife, Takieddine volunteered to come out from California during her vacation to help him out.

Jenkins, faced with the task of raising a 6-month-old girl and a 9-year-old boy on his own, accepted the offer.

"She loved Samantha. Samantha loved her, too," he said. "The first week she came into the home, the first day, Samantha called her 'Mom.'

"Maryanne and Cindy had similar builds and similar voice tones. Samantha just took right to her. She called her 'Mom' and I said, 'What am I going to do here?' Our relationship just started to grow."

For the next year and a half, the family lived a life that was, from all accounts, a normal and happy life. Raymond, who had a difficult time dealing with his mother's death, benefitted a great deal from counseling and had become comfortable with Takieddine, Jenkins said.

The tie between Samantha and Takieddine grew stronger each day. "She guarded that girl, she really did. She loved her," Jenkins said.

As time went on, Jenkins said, Takieddine began to feel pressure from friends to get married. They had planned to do so, he said, but just hadn't talked about it recently.

Jenkins said Takieddine got upset a few months ago because he hadn't discussed with her the possibility of taking a coaching job with the Cincinnati Reds' farm team at Chattanooga, Tenn.

"The first thing that happened is a reporter phoned from Chattanooga and said, 'We're glad to have Fergie Jenkins, I'd like to speak to him,' and she didn't know about it," he said. "I didn't sign a contract. I had OK'd going to spring training."

There also were occasional squabbles over Jenkins' fan mail. Sometimes Takieddine would open a letter, see it was from a woman and throw it away. Jenkins would tell her the letters were his personal property.

On Dec. 15, Jenkins drove into town to pick up water filters for his pumphouse. While in town, he drove by Samantha's day-care center and told one of the teachers he would be by at 5:30 to pick up his daughter.

"I thought Cindy was going Christmas shopping," he said. "She said she was going to take Samantha to a party at the school and then go into town, either Edmond or Oklahoma City, and shop.

"I figured I'd get Samantha, start to make supper and Cindy would come back in a little later on. That wasn't the case."

Instead, authorities say, Takieddine picked up Samantha from daycare and drove to a deserted road near Perry, about 40 miles north of Guthrie. Then she attached a vacuum cleaner hose to the exhaust pipe while the car idled, ran the hose through the back window, got into the back seat and held Samantha in her arms.

The bodies were found a few hours later by an oil-field worker.

The questions and the guilt work on Fergie Jenkins each day. If the family hadn't moved from Oklahoma City, Maryanne wouldn't have had to drive 30 minutes to work each day and maybe the accident wouldn't have happened.

Would Takieddine have done what she did if he had married her? Should he have discussed his baseball future more openly? Why did she take Samantha?

The suicide note Takieddine left didn't answer any questions for Jenkins. The note said she was betrayed and that she couldn't go away without Samantha.

Jenkins attends support groups and goes to counseling for help. He finds that each time he talks about what happened, it helps.

He spends most of his time at his ranch, tending to chores and being with Raymond, now 12. He says he has been awakened several times by a feeling that he isn't alone. It's a friendly feeling, he says, but unsettling nonetheless because he can't get back to sleep.

Jenkins doesn't spend much time inside the house. It's too quiet, almost cold. He might answer some mail or watch sports on TV late at night. Otherwise he's outside.

"Cindy and I always talked. There was just a presence, a warmth in the house," he said. "Now you open the door, you close the door. You go from one room to the next. It's just a room. Pictures on the wall. Just another room."

Nancy Reagan legacy still admirable cause

Former first lady Nancy Reagan was maligned — sometimes quietly, sometimes not — during the 1980's for the anti-drug crusade she began while her husband was serving two terms as president. Yet today, four years after she and her husband left Washington, D.C., Mrs. Reagan's anti-drug efforts are still strongly in evidence — and obviously making a difference with young people.

In fact, the nonprofit Nancy Reagan Foundation has awarded more than $3.7 million since January 1989 for drug education, prevention and treatment. And just this month it distributed nearly $500,000 in grants to organizations across the country, most receiving $50,000 to help them fight their own anti-drug battles. While other Americans may give only lip service to the need for concerted efforts in the battle against illegal drugs, Mrs. Reagan is still waging a war against drugs and making headway with an educational assault.

When her major "Just Say No" campaign was launched, it created derision in some quarters, but today the fruits of that grass-roots-based effort are measurable in the number of young people who fully understand the dangers of illegal drugs and have the personal strength and courage to "just say no" when confronted with the drug threat firsthand. As a result of Mrs. Reagan's efforts, more school-age young people today are aware of the dangers posed by illegal drugs and willing to stand tall against that threat.

Is it worth it? Oh, yes. Anyone who has ever had the opportunity to see a young mind wasted by the poison of drugs or a promising career cut short because of the effects of so-called "socially acceptable" drugs knows that every effort to combat the flood of drugs into the United States, every dollar spent keeping the youth of this nation drug-free is worth every cent.

Nancy Reagan stands head and shoulders above the crowd of good people dedicated to fighting illegal drugs. She took the lumps the ridicule crowd handed out and stayed the course to help all Americans.

Her efforts are deeply appreciated by all those who have been touched by the drug threat.

Brown needs to come completely clean now

Why did Ron Brown accept when President-elect Bill Clinton asked the Democratic National Committee chairman to be his commerce secretary?

Surely, Brown knew that voters would learn he is one of the most powerful lobbyists in the country, that he has represented some of Japan's largest electronics corporations as well as one of the world's greatest moral midgets — Haiti's former head, "Baby Doc" Duvalier.

To keep from embarrassing Clinton further, Brown has canceled a Kennedy Center gala designed to honor Brown for his role as chairman.

According to the Los Angeles Times, businesses hit up for at least $10,000 apiece to underwrite the "Friends of Ron Brown" extravaganza included J.C. Penney, Anheuser Busch, Pepsico, Textron and Sony Music Entertainment.

It's not enough for Brown to promise to keep his hands clean while in the Cabinet.

He should come completely clean now or let someone else have his nomination.

Perot does groundwork for next presidential bid

Ross Perot's reappearance on the political scene may feel like a throwback, but in the short term at least it's a positive thing — part of the natural reshuffling of political alignments in the wake of an incumbent president's defeat.

The ebullient Texan billionaire said his membership organization, United We Stand America, will create a "counter-pressure" lest the new administration succumb to Washington ways.

But disinterested lobbying for deficit reduction and "shared sacrifice" doesn't strike us as Perot's style. More likely he is laying the foundations for another run for president.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 1993. There are 341 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 24, 1848, James W. Marshall discovered a gold nugget at Sutter's Mill in northern California, a discovery that led to the gold rush of '49.

On this date:

In 1742, Charles VII, king of Germany, was elected emperor of the Holy Roman Empire during the War of the Austrian Succession.

In 1908, the first Boy Scout troop was organized in England by Robert Baden-Powell.

In 1916, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the federal income tax.

In 1942, a special court of inquiry into America's lack of preparedness for the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor placed much of the blame on Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel and Lt. Gen Walter C. Short, the Navy and Army commanders.

In 1943, 50 years ago, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill concluded a wartime conference in Casablanca, Morocco.

In 1965, former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill died in London at age 90.

In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down laws that denied welfare benefits to people who had resided in a state for less than a year.

Skin cancer epidemic strikes Australia

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA — Halfway across the globe, this nation of sun worshipers is undergoing a 1990s version of a polio scare.

Anderson

Just as children in 1940s America were warned to stay out of public areas for fear of catching polio, Australia has altered its national agenda to cope with its most serious public health threat in decades: skin cancer. Its citizens have become living guinea pigs for a disease that is growing to epidemic proportions as the earth's ozone layer depletes.

Australia's skyrocketing cancer rate has spawned a minor cultural revolution here, where nearly everyone lives by the coast, and beaches mean more to the local culture than shopping malls do to American suburbia. A persistent campaign by local and national government as well as non-profit groups has been spreading the word about the dangers of overexposure.

As a result, the beaches today are dotted with sunscreen bottles, with sales up 400 percent in the last four years. The lifeguards wear hats, long-sleeved shirts, and long pants to shield themselves from the sun.

"We're trying to change a behavior that's been around for 50 to 70 years," Susie Murray, a spokesperson for the Cancer Institute here, told our associate Melinda Maas. "In a decade we've done a lot to turn things around."

Partly as a result of these efforts, school children are now required to wear hats outdoors, practice times for sports teams have been moved from midday to the late afternoon, and the fashion magazines counsel Australians on how to look and feel beautiful without a tan.

Researchers now predict that two out of three people who spent their childhood and adolescence in Australia will develop some form of skin cancer during their lives. It has the highest rate of skin cancer in the world, with 140,000 new cases diagnosed each year.

Environmentalists and scientists do have some hope. The new White House team of Bill Clinton and Al Gore promises to breathe new life into the battle to reduce the world's dependence on CFCs and other "greenhouse gases."

While George Bush scored some last-minute campaign points by referring to Vice President Al Gore as the "ozone man," 1992 went down as the worst year on record for ozone levels. Scientists say the hole over Antarctica grew to more than 9 million square miles.

In America, change begins at ballot box

WASHINGTON — In the soothing ointment of President Clinton's words on Wednesday, one element was especially welcome to people who worry about the political giddiness encouraged, inevitably, by the civic liturgy of an inauguration. The element was the emphasis placed by Clinton, who as candidate stressed "change" propelled by government, on the autonomy of change: "Profound and powerful forces are shaking and remaking our world. . . ."

Will

The forces to which he was referring — forces of communication, commerce, science, intellectual and religious conviction — are always doing that. But because an inauguration is a festival of government, it is apt to make the political class, and perhaps even normal people, susceptible to a fallacious notion about the importance of politics.

The political class, in its egotism and self-absorption, is particularly apt to find this notion plausible. It is a notion especially pleasing to Democrats, who are disposed to think of government as the sun around which life revolves.

It is a notion stated last summer by Ted Kennedy: "The ballot box is the place where all change begins in America." There is hardly a page of American history that does not refute that insistence, so characteristic of the political class, on the primacy of politics in the making of history.

Change begins in America when a Yale graduate, Eli Whitney, serving as a tutor on a cotton plantation, gets interested in inventing a machine to separate cotton fibers from cotton seeds. Eli Whitney's cotton gin helped produce the economic foundations of slavery. Another change began in America when, in the 1940s, the descendants of slaves, displaced by new cotton-picking machinery, began their migration to Northern cities.

Change begins in America when John Fitch makes the first American vessel powered by steam, and when a Connecticut inventor, Samuel Colt, patents a revolving-breech pistol. Change begins in America when a young blacksmith in Grand Detour, Ill., makes a "self-scouring" steel plow suitable for turning the thick black topsoil of the Middle West. Today you can read the blacksmith's name in yellow print on green machines: John Deere.

Change begins in America when young John Rockefeller, who went to work at a produce-shipping firm in Cleveland at age 16, at age 20 starts trading products, including the black fluid being pumped from under western Pennsylvania.

Change begins in America when a voice crackling down a wire from a nearby room says, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you." Change begins in America when in a garage in Detroit, the young Henry Ford conceives not only a vehicle for the masses but a mode of mass production that will make Americans mobile and prosperous. Change begins in America when two brothers in a Dayton bicycle shop tinker with a contraption that eventually will change how Americans experience America's vast distances.

Change begins in America when Thomas Alva Edison in Menlo Park, N.J., says he has not failed because 80 materials have proved unsatisfactory for making filament for an electric light bulb — he has succeeded in learning 80 things that don't work.

Change in America begins when a 36-year-old Illinois inventor produces a substance that will make possible new ways of experiencing the world. John Wesley Hyatt produced celluloid — which, in due time, produced Hollywood.

Change begins in America when in 1954 a traveling salesman of six-spindled milk-shake machines called Multimixers visits the McDonald brothers' restaurant in San Bernadino, Calif., where eight Multimixers were kept busy. The idea Ray Kroc got that day produced not only a great corporation but an entire industry.

But wait. Material change is not more consequential than intellectual, moral and spiritual changes, which also do not begin at the ballot box.

Change in America begins in 1734 when Jonathan Edwards, a clergyman in Northampton, Mass., ignites the Connecticut Valley, and other preachers throughout the colonies spread the religious revival called the Great Awakening, which stimulated Americans' sense of their distinct identity.

Change begins in America when Harriet Beecher Stowe writes a novel. Meeting her in the White House, Lincoln supposedly said, "So you're the little woman who wrote the book that made this great war." Change continues in America when, in 1960, another woman publishes another novel on the subject of race: Harper Lee, "To Kill a Mockingbird." Change begins in America when Lincoln Steffens writes "The Shame of the Cities," Ida Tarbell writes "The History of the Standard Oil Company" and Upton Sinclair writes "The Jungle."

Change in America begins when Mark Twain, Scott Joplin, Edward Kennedy Ellington and others invent American sounds in language and music.

Change in America begins when. . . .

But enough.

In a good society some change, some of it very important, begins at the ballot box. But in a good society politics is peripheral to much of the pulsing life of the society. It is in America, where, without the instruction or supervision of the political class, change is continuous.

New president lives in 'the big white jail'

Objection has been taken about the origin of the metaphoric place now occupied by our new President: to be in the bubble.

Comes now Philippa Brophy, literary agent: "My client, Richard Ben Cramer, author of 'What It Takes: The Way to the White House' (Random House, 1992), is the journalist who coined the phrase in the bubble, not the two reporters you mentioned. In fact, both these guys called Cramer yesterday to point out the error."

Safire

Sure enough, here it is in the book, predating my citations, describing the way George Bush had been cosseted and cocooned in comfort by 400 people devoted to his security, who made it possible for him to "leave his office, board an airplane, travel halfway across the nation, land in another city, travel overland 30 miles to a ball park and never see one person who was not a friend or someone whose sole purpose it was to serve or protect him. This is living in the bubble."

That's where William Jefferson Clinton is living today, whether he likes it or not. The incarcerated feeling is not new: Harry Truman once pointed to the White House and said, "There is the big white jail." But the bubble is new; I speculated that its origin may be the protective plastic bubble over an open-top car in which the President sometimes rides during motorcades.

A half-dozen Lexicographic Irreg-ulars pointed to a different origin: "Emotional isolation was the major theme," Mark S. Jackson of Rochester writes, "of a made-for-television movie, 'The Boy in the Plastic Bubble,' which aired in 1976." Martin Ostrow of New York also remembered the case on which that John Travolta movie was based: "That young child whose immune system was so delicate that he spent his entire youth in a plastic room or what doctors and the press referred to as a 'plastic bubble.' " (David, the boy from Texas whose life inspired the film, died in 1984 at the age of 12.)

That image was the source of this passage in "What I Saw at the Revolution," the 1990 best seller about the Reagan Administration by Peggy Noonan. This evocative speech writer (who later wrote George Bush's first convention acceptance speech, the most memorable time that insulated figure broke through to a wide audience) was trying to get some anecdote from Ronald Reagan to make a speech more personal:

"Do you ever feel like the boy in the bubble?" Ms. Noonan asked.

"Who was that?" Mr. Reagan replied.

"The boy who had no immune system," said his speech writer, "so he had to live in a plastic bubble where he could see everyone and they could see him, but there was something between him and the people, the plastic. He couldn't touch them."

"Well, no," Mr. Reagan said.

Then he thought it over: "No, but there are times when you stand upstairs and look out at Pennsylvania Avenue and see the people there walking by. And if I wanted to run out and get a newspaper or magazine, or just to walk down to the park and back . . . you miss that, of course."

His speech writer observed, "What I think I perceive is not a feeling of estrangement but a wistfulness about connection."

Now to political etymology: The source of this metaphor of Presidential isolation appears to be the fictional story (based on true circumstances) of the boy in the TV movie, picked up and used in Ms. Noonan's memoir, and popularized in the coverage of political campaigns by Mr. Cramer.

A variant is on the bubble, a sports term: "College basketball prognosticators," writes Robert Hochschild of Brookline, Mass., "have for several years used the phrase on the bubble to describe teams that are in a gray area in terms of ability — talented, but not necessarily deserving of a berth in a tournament. . . . I believe I once heard Peter Jennings describe several candidates as being on the bubble of legitimacy in voters' minds."

Woman knows little about environment

I am a geologist, an outdoorsman and an independent businessman with what I would describe as a balanced attitude concerning economic and environmental matters. Recently I was shocked and insulted by what Margaret Maxey had to say at the Petroleum Club as reported by the Reporter-Telegram. For the second time in recent memory, Maxey was back in the Permian Basin preaching her "Doctrine of Environmental Irresponsibility" plus a few new crack-pot tidbits that surely date back to her days as a nun. I don't know what her credentials are, but it's obvious that she possesses only a dangerous trifle of knowledge concerning earth sciences.

Using twisted logic, her trademark, she compares man-made disasters with natural disasters and then portrays Mother Nature as the cruel villain. I could summarize a large part of her talk with one statement: Any man-made disaster is acceptable if it kills fewer people than the latest earthquake or typhoon. That drivel about the "Wet-grain Maniacs" being killed in early Europe is commonly known as the Inquisition, and was perpetrated by her former employer (the Catholic church). Also, that bunk about getting nosebleeds at 20 MPH, was a fabrication of the contemporary religious establishment, not "environmental extremists."

In other words, I have a problem with Maxey's opinion of Mother Nature and technology. As the debate rages on, let's keep in mind the motto of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen (AAPL): "(The) Land is the Source of all Wealth." Let's take care of it!

Clinton should lead by setting example

The news that Chelsea Clinton will be attending a private Quaker school in Washington may be good for her family, but to the rest of us, the common folk, it is distressing, offensive, even enraging.

Her daddy is one of the lucky ones, with a high-paying job, who can afford to make this choice. But many of the taxpayers, who pay his salary, are stuck with a dysfunctional public school system and no choices. We pay so much in taxes to support Clinton and his Congress that there is nothing left over for us to pay a private school tuition of $10,500 per year.

Clinton has come down squarely on the side of the public education unions and bureaucracies to oppose allowing parents a voice in the way and what their children are taught. They want to suck up our money to hand out condoms, teach that homosexuality is just another "legitimate alternative lifestyle," provide environmentally politically correct anti-industrial indoctrination, and expose our children to a dangerous, uncontrolled undisciplined and academically undemanding school environment, secure in the knowledge that their own offspring are in expensive private schools, safe from the consequences of their disastrous education policies. The media is being incredibly understanding about the Clinton's "difficult choice" because, like them, the Clinton's are liberal Democrats.

One of Clinton's complaints about George Bush is that he was out of touch with America. I happened to agree, but what did we expect from a president who attended Andover Academy before Yale? Now we have a president who attended private Catholic parochial schools before Yale. Clinton has about as much experience with our public schools as did Bush and, unfortunately, does not appear to be doing much to increase his firsthand knowledge of the state of our cities' schools.

While I do not think that Chelsea Clinton should be made into a political pawn, I do think that it would be very good for the Clintons to enroll Chelsea in the Washington, D.C. public schools so that they may experience firsthand the frustration of other parents when dealing with entrenched, unresponsive bureaucrats, politically mandated subject matter, and a school system that is failing to teach our children while exposing them to the terror of potential violence.

If the Clinton's wish to sacrifice our children's future for political gain, let them lead by example, and also sacrifice their own.

Public deserves to know groups plans

Is Planned Parenthood going to open an abortion clinic or not?

For years, via the media, Planned Parenthood of West Texas has insisted that they have not and do not perform abortions in our area.

With recent rumors emerging that Planned Parenthood is possibly going to open an abortion facility in Midland, I called Karen Hildebrand (executive director of Planned Parenthood) an asked her point blank if they were opening an abortion clinic.

Her reply to me was that their board of directors was considering it.

Planned Parenthood of West Texas for years has led the public to believe that they were an "abortion-free' facility in this area.

I would like to know if this "policy" has changed and if so, the public, especially those who donate to Planned Parenthood, should know about it.

City can boast about its high school bands

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the community of Midland for the overwhelming support they have shown the Lee High School Band over the past year. We appreciate the opportunity afforded us by our fellow citizens to represent Midland and the states of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana in this year's Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif.

The trip to California was an absolute success! It provided the students with many educational experiences that otherwise would not have been possible and was the best trip ever taken by this large a group of students at Lee High School. No other city can boast of having itself represented as well as Midland. With both the Midland High School and Lee High School Bands having marched in Rose Parades and the Lee High School Band marching at two Inaugural Parades, it is clear that the bands of Midland are the best "goodwill ambassadors" the city has.

Again, we would like to say, "Thank You!" to the City of Midland and all those who made the dream of this tremendous experience a reality.

TV should stay away from Christian bashing

I had the opportunity to view an episode of the program "The Powers That Be." The particular episode involved the "problems" encountered by the Powers family when the daughter's behavior was drastically affected by exposure to the Bible and Christian teaching. She became a kind, considerate, sharing, caring person apparently at peace with herself. This was all too difficult for the other family members to accept. The irony of the story and contrast of values was not lost on this viewer, but the attitude of attack and derogatory remarks directed toward Christian ideals and principals was reprehensible.

The freedom of artistic license is not at issue here. I think the public is well aware of the "stigma" censorship has in the community and I am aware of my own ability to sensor by means of the off button. My complaint is the lack of responsible sensitive portrayal of a particular minority and their beliefs. The current freedom of the entertainment industry to bash Christians and the values they represent needs to be stopped. This climate of "anything goes" is fueled by liberal idealism embellished with genuine hate for any group who does not applaud tasteless humor poured out at anyone's expense.

I am encouraging others who may agree with me to contact the producers and sponsors of this program. I hope the writers and producers of this episode will be informed that their work is not humorous or acceptable in any way to everyone. I plan to share my disgust with as many as will listen and to encourage others to forgo the "benefits" of the sponsors of programs such as this.

Midland's new wizard needs brain transplant

Lies, taxes and deals. Oh, my! Could Dorothy have been wrong?

About a year ago, in all seriousness, I suggested to a friend in the convention/tourist/economic development arena that we should flood the major buildings of Midland with emerald green lighting. I saw this as a way of calling additional attention to the city that I love and want to see continue developing and growing as a major Texas city. The place I call home.

Well, Toto, we're not in Oz anymore. It seems that our new Wizard has decided that things in this one-horse town should be of a different color. To begin with, our Wizard has arbitrarily eliminated the annual award for community service and involvement. (I can't name the award because the Wizard doesn't want the namesake to "suffer"). The Wizard apparently failed to realize the benefits Midland has received from the award's national publicity: Mention in a widely-read syndicated newspaper column, the national coverage in the electronic media, the positive reaction of the award's recipients and accompanying delegates. It's beside the point that this national publicity might have influenced the Good Witch to relocate her various enterprises to Midland or that her parents might retire to our area.

Now, the Wizard has decided that we should purchase property at the Midland International Airport even though it will revert to us in a few years anyway. The Wizard has also suggested that we purchase a vacant castle, perhaps for use as a throne room. (By the way, I have this bridge for sale. Maybe the Wizard will buy it, pave it with yellow bricks and impose an additional sales tax on people using it. That should increase our economic base and encourage international trade.)

Has our Wizard been out in the Poppy Patch too long? Does he really think we're a bunch of mindless Munchkins? Will our city council persons allow the Wizard to make flying monkeys of them? I suggest that we recall the Wizard and provide him with enough courage to find it in his heart to get a brain transplant.

Hey, Wiz! Get real! Click your heels, come out from behind that backroom curtain and show your true colors or fly away to Lubbock in your hot-air balloon.

Clinton's domestic promise is unrealistic

Candidate Bill Clinton promised "to focus like a laser beam" on domestic problems. The priority was correct; the promise, unrealistic. In his inaugural address on Wednesday, President Clinton set aside the pledge and said: "To renew America, we must meet challenges abroad as well as at home."

But the chaotic world awaiting the new president will demand almost all of his attention. And that he must resist.

To resist, he needs a strategy for weaning everyone off the central organizing principle of world politics — that it is up to the United States to solve all problems, especially the military ones.

Otherwise Clinton, like Woodrow Wilson, will find his nightmares coming true. "It would be an irony of fate," President-elect Wilson said in 1912, "if my administration had to deal chiefly with foreign affairs." Irony soon became reality as Europe plunged into war and his cherished domestic agenda perished in the trenches.

Clinton confronts circumstances almost as fateful, but with fewer choices. Wilson could resist war pressures for a time while other great powers did battle with Germany. Today there is no alternative to Washington's leadership and no substitute for U.S. military power.

If Clinton fails to lead in Somalia, Bosnia, Iraq, etc., no other nation can or will. And if the trouble spots grow still more troublesome, as some surely will, he will be blamed.

The Republicans will start the attack, arguing that the world was a safer place before the Democrats took over. Soon voters will have forgotten President Bush's last two years in office, when he fiddled while all these foreign crises festered. By that time they will be Clinton's crises.

Most Americans will also blame the new president, even though they demonstrated little interest in foreign affairs during the presidential campaign and gave every evidence that they wanted him to concentrate on the home front. They will blame him either way — for committing U.S. forces and neglecting America, or for staying out of harm's way and allowing foreign tinderboxes to ignite.

Clinton showed on Monday that he grasped the dilemma when he told diplomats in one breath that he would strive "to resolve contentious disputes and to meet the challenges of the next century," and in the next that "America cannot and should not bear the world's burdens alone."

The trick for the new president will be to lead in ways that persuade and compel other nations to assume much greater responsibility for their own security — so that, in time, he can focus on domestic priorities.

Three elements must sit at the core of such a strategy:

First, as the sole superpower, the United States will have to continue shouldering undue burdens for a while. And Clinton will have to devote more energy to wrestling with world problems than he wants. Otherwise foreign leaders, Republicans and American opinionmakers will eat him alive. As much as they all realize that the United States needs to pay more attention to its own staggering problems, few can tolerate a world spinning out of control.

Second, other nations must be persuaded to bear far heavier burdens in confronting their own local and regional conflicts. They won't be happy with this notion. They all have a cushy deal now. They simply plead weakness and wait for Uncle Sam to do the dirty work. And they won't give up this deal unless Clinton both corners them and reassures them that America will remain by their side.

Third, collective security has to be built brick by crumbling brick at the United Nations and in regional organizations. Competent international staffs like NATO's have to be developed. Countries will have to earmark forces for joint action and train them together. They must also be made to take hard decisions together — or suffer the consequences. After a transition period, collective security must be made truly collective.

Clinton set the stage for such a strategy in his Inaugural Address. He showed he knew the United States had "to shape change, lest it engulf us." He warned that when vital interests are threatened, "we will act — with peaceful diplomacy whenever possible, with force when necessary."

"But our greatest strength," he continued, "is the power of our ideas." America remains the land of democracy and hope — and to find the time and resources to keep it that way, Clinton, paradoxically, first has to get on top of the world.

Clinton deals with first crisis in his administration

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — A great surge of patriotism was evident across the nation last week when Bill Clinton became the 42nd president of the United States, reciting the oath first taken 204 years ago by George Washington.

Hearst

I believe all inaugurations, with their ceremony and their celebration, help unify our nation because of the excitement of having new leadership. There's great anticipation for the future and hope that the next four years will be better than the last four years.

I also was moved by President Clinton's remarks to President Bush, thanking him for his many years of public service. The new president didn't have to do that, but I suspect he felt that this warm acknowledgment of President Bush's contributions would help heal the wounds from last year's presidential campaign. He was correct.

With the Clinton administration now mapping its plans, I asked Charles J. Lewis, the Washington bureau chief of the Hearst Newspapers, how the new folks are shaping up. Here's his report:

President Clinton got high marks for the way he handled the first crisis of his day-old presidency, the controversy surrounding Zoe Baird, his candidate for attorney general.

Baird withdrew her nomination in the middle of her Senate confirmation hearings when many senators expressed opposition to her because she and her husband had violated federal immigration law by hiring illegal aliens as domestic workers at their home in Connecticut.

The president or his transition team made a mistake by grossly underestimating the public reaction to Baird's legal problem. Congress also was slow to figure that out. When the Senate Judiciary Committee opened hearings on Baird's nomination last week, most senators signaled their acceptance of her apology for breaking the law. They indicated it shouldn't stop her from becoming the first U.S. attorney general who also happened to be a woman.

But growing public hostility toward Baird soon overwhelmed Congress and the White House. The decision by the nominee to withdraw her nomination — and Clinton's move to accept it — showed the new president knew when to cut his losses rather than put up a protracted fight for his nominee.

It's often a predicament for a president of knowing when it is right to cut political losses early by withdrawing an embattled nomination and when it right to stand up and fight and see the issue through.

Baird's decision to withdraw also showed that she and Clinton understood a crucial fact that distinguished her case from other failed nominations. In Baird's case, it wasn't a couple of senators squawking about something in her past record. It was widespread public anger that caught the attention of both branches of government.

Clinton, who has promised to raise the ethical standards of the executive branch, couldn't stand by his nominee in the face of this firestorm of public opinion. The new president correctly read the situation and acted to resolve the problem.

While this episode was a tragedy for Baird and her family, it's likely that the controversy will be only a distant memory in just a couple of months. Indeed, barring another misfire with his new nominee for attorney general, President Clinton and his administration won't lose their stride because of the Baird case. Clinton and his team will now complete the staffing of the executive branch and translate their economic and health-care reform policies into concrete legislative proposals.

Attention then will shift to Congress where the president has been promised a speedy and efficient reception for his programs.

House Majority Leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri last week pledged quick legislative action on Clinton's economic package, saying: "This is the most cooperative Congress I've ever seen."

One reason for that cooperation is that the Democrats know they have to deliver now that they control the White House and Congress. No one can blame Washington gridlock for any failure of the federal government to address festering problems facing the nation.

Now that Clinton has very wisely decided against wasting his political clout with Congress on the hopeless Baird nomination, he can move ahead with his substantive programs with the expectation that they will get a hearty welcome from the Democrats who run Congress.

Torretta seeks an ounce of redemption

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — In recent weeks, Gino Torretta has endured humiliation by Alabama's defensive backs and growing skepticism about his prospects in the NFL. The Miami quarterback's name was even spelled wrong on the plaque he received as winner of the Johnny Unitas Award.

Some way to treat a Heisman Trophy winner.

Torretta's last chance for redemption and respect comes today in the East-West Shrine Game at Stanford Stadium, where he may not even get the starting job. With a dozen NFL head coaches and dozens more scouts watching, Torretta nevertheless denies he's under pressure to do well.

"I'm just looking at it as trying to put on a good show," said Torretta, who skipped the other college all-star games. "I'm going to do my best and see what happens."

What happened in Torretta's final college game was a disaster. Amid the deafening roar of Alabama fans packing the Superdome for the Sugar Bowl, the Crimson Tide wrested the national title from the Hurricanes with a 34-13 beating. Torretta's line: 24 of 56, three interceptions, no touchdowns.

The loss still stings.

"You always think back," Torretta said. "We weren't at the top of our game. That's the painful thing about it — for all the seniors not to play our best in our last game. That's tough to swallow, because we still feel we're one of the best teams in the country, if not the best."

Torretta is still a hero in his hometown of Pinole, Calif., which welcomed him back last weekend by throwing a "Gino Torretta Day."

SWIMMING: District meet next

(From 1B)

to mention the fleetness of Krall.

"Katheryn did an exceptional job in both the 200 and 500," MHS coach Larry Ridge said.

Ridge said the MHS girls program has been steadily improving, rising from last year's second place finish at the invitational to the championship this year.

"We have a bunch of mature seniors," Ridge said. "The way we finished Friday, I told them we'd have to improve our placement today. And almost in every situation and place we did."

Blake Johnson, Howard Flowers and Clay Brown anchored the MHS boys' success. Combined, the three swimmers had seven Top 5 finishes in individual events and three first places. In addition, each swam in MHS' second-place 200 medley relay and first-place 400 relay.

"Both the boys and girls are working real hard," Ridge said. "We're coming off finals and we're still in two-a-days. I think they're going to start pinging off the walls before too long. So parents, watch out, their energy level is starting to come back."

At Lee, coach Jeff Goelz said the success his girls team enjoyed was due largely to the 1-2 finish of divers M'Lee Ditmore and Heather Johnson.

"We got some big time points out of the diving," Goelz said. "Meets like this (where the more individuals a team has, the more points are possible) we tend to get smoked because we don't have the numbers. But for the number of kids we've got, I was hoping for third place. And we should've been fourth in the boys."

Lee's Shannon Conkey had a pair of runner-up finishes, in the 200 and 100 freestyle, while Sara Carnett finished second in the backstroke and fourth in the 200 individual medley.

Lee's Carl Walker finished second in the 500 freestyle, and third in the 200 freestyle.

"Last year," Goelz said, "we graduated seven senior girls. This year, we only have two seniors (Tami Cambell and Lori Jackson). Next year we'll have a half-dozen quality sophomore girls. We've had a good year for the numbers we have."

Both MHS and Lee will now begin shaping up for the district meet, Feb. 19-20 at Odessa Permian.

"It'll be a four-way race at district," Ridge predicted. "Lee, Midland High, Abilene Cooper and San Angelo will all be there. And I think Lee's got the edge because its diving team seems to be coming around."

Educators try to stem drop-out rate

Principals hope to change concept of junior high

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

There is a trend sweeping the country to restructure junior high schools.

Education professionals are scrambling to find ways to boost achievement and self-esteem in secondary schools to stem the nation's rising drop-out rate.

Many junior highs have been modeled after high schools, and represent an abrupt change for students. After years of having one teacher for most or all of the day, many pupils are thrust into an environment with seven teachers, classes taught in different rooms and hordes of unfamiliar peers.

The sense of isolation adolescents experience in a large school with many teachers contributes to the drop out rate in secondary

Two guys named David have a better idea.

Abell principal David E. Adams and Alamo principal David W. Dennis would like to see their junior high schools transformed into middle schools that truly benefit their students.

With the addition of a fourth junior high school, the principals had a unique opportunity to work side-by-side this semester, and explore the possibilities of restructuring their schools. Former Alamo principal Adams has left the school to prepare to bring Abell on line while Dennis has taken the helm of Alamo.

Rather than running junior highs existing as imitation high schools, the principals have embraced the idea of operating middle schools that incorporate a balance of the best concepts of both elementary schools and high schools.

"We want to take the best of both worlds and create a smaller community of learning, and a smaller community of instruction," Dennis said.

"We want to create something much more individualized," Adams said. "You have cases where one kid sits in the middle of the classroom. He never asks questions and gets pass-

Louis Fontenot of Action Wrecker Services, above, unhooks a fresh arrival at the city's impoundment lot. Unpaid parking tickets that lead to impoundment are taken up with Midland Municipal Court Judge Robin D. Smith, right, who stands in his courtroom.

To avoid headache, put quarter in meter

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

The next time you think about quietly parking your car downtown and trying to sneak away from that cold, steel money collector called a parking meter, think again.

Ignoring the parking meter can cost a lot more than a couple of quarters in the long run.

It's $5 for a parking ticket, $10 if it's not paid and, after five of those tickets pile up, the car that you quietly snuck into that parking space will be towed to the impoundment lot.

The whole process begins at the parking meter and the question of whether or not to put the money in. It's simple: if you don't, you get a parking ticket.

Anyone who gets a $5 notice of a parking violation is contacted by the municipal court.

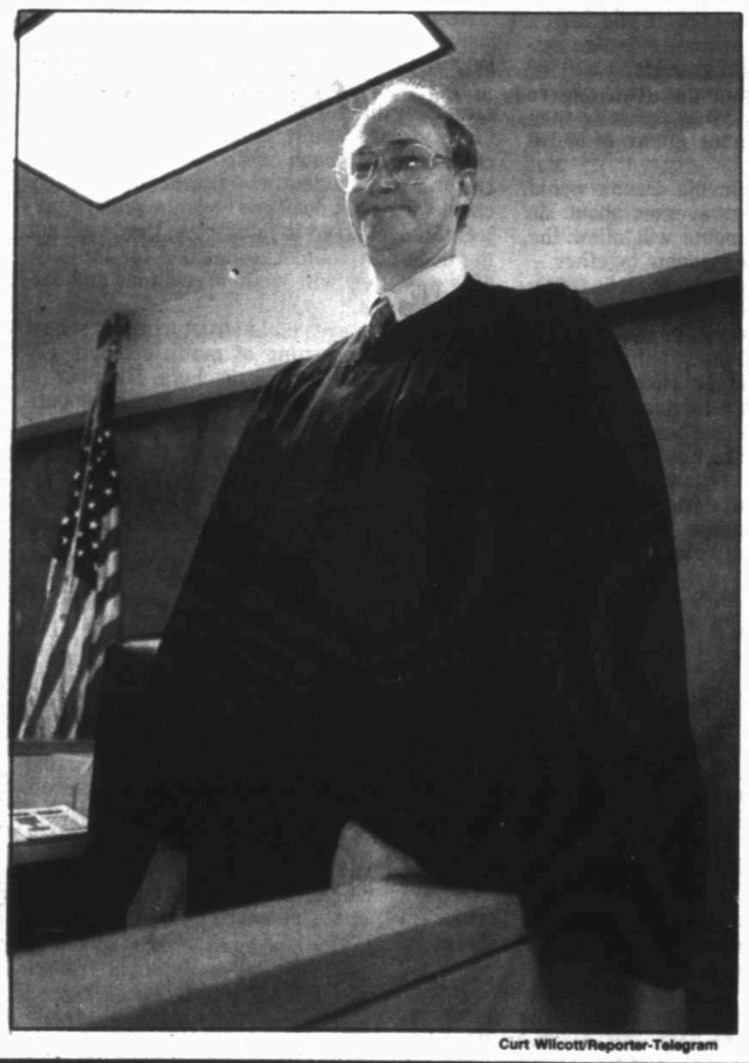

"We mail out notices to anyone who has a ticket or tickets on a quarterly basis," Municipal Court Judge Robin Smith said. "We try to get all the notices out in about a month or two. Then, after everyone has been notified, we start compiling lists of people who have a lot of tickets they have not paid and give the lists to the police department, who give them to the meter attendants."

Meter attendants then watch for vehicles that have $50 worth of unpaid tickets or more. Sometimes, the attendants recognize a car before a notice is put out on it.

"The attendants see the cars and write tickets all the time," Smith said. "They are definitely familiar with the vehicles that park downtown a lot, whether people realize it or not."

Once a meter attendant positively identifies a car, the police notify a towing company and the vehicle is taken to the impoundment lot at 1109 S. Midland Drive.

Secretary retires after many years

■ First Baptist church loses devoted secretary of 47 years.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

A position as assistant secretary at First Baptist Church brought Nellivee Clark to Midland when she was 19 and fresh out of Hardin Simmons University.

"I really felt that I had a call to come here and serve," said Miss Clark, who had just graduated with a degree in business administration. "I started working at $140 a month, and I thought I was wealthy."

That was 47 years ago. World War II was still raging in the Pacific. Midland had a population of around 18,000, and the church was located downtown at Main Street and Illinois Avenue across the street from First Methodist Church.

"When I first came, my title was assistant secretary because up to that point the church had only one secretarial position," Miss Clark said.

When the friend who had recommended her for the job in the first place, Corrine Akins, now Mrs. Don Pinso, left the following year, Miss Clark became church secretary and secretary to the pastor. In the intervening years, she has served four First Baptist Church pastors, including Vernon Wearby, L.L. Morris, who was here for a little more than 20 years, the Rev. Daniel Vestal, who began his 12 years of service in 1976, and the Rev. James C. Denison, current pastor.

This month Miss Clark retired. The church is hosting a reception in her honor following today's 6:30 p.m. service.

"All the pastors have been a source of rich blessings in my life," Miss Clark said. "Each of them was very different in personality and direction of ministry. Though I stayed in one place for 47 years, it was very much like four different jobs."

Transitions are seldom easy.

"Each time one of the pastors would leave the church, we felt devastated, and always God had someone out there on the horizon who came," Miss Clark said.

She never thought seriously about leaving her position or Midland.

"I know when a pastor leaves often the staff leaves just because it's going to be different. Each time a pastor left there were opportunities for me to take another position somewhere else. I never thought that was the thing to do and never seriously considered leaving Midland. I guess by then my roots were so deep."

She also never married.

"There were opportunities along the way, and I even considered some seriously, but I never regretted my decision just to stay and devote all of my time and energy to service at the church," said Miss Clark, who comes from a family not prone to wed.

Her sister, Betty Clark, who moved here in 1950 and worked for several oil companies, never married either. Nor did their brother, Travis Clark, who lives in Dallas and works for Lone Star Gas Co. as a utility rate manager. The two sisters own their home that they now share with their mother, Mrs. Grace Clark, originally from Abilene.

As she looks back over her time at First Baptist Church, the longtime secretary is filled with pleasant memories.

"Through the years, the church has been wonderful to me in observing special anniversaries," Miss Clark said. "In particular, I might mention two trips abroad."

The first trip in 1985 included Germany, Austria and Switzerland. Then, in 1990, Miss Clark went to Germany, Switzerland and Great Britain.

Also, in 1980, she received an expense paid trip to Brasilia, the cap-

GARY OTT

People's 'right to know' can have wrinkled look

Oh, dear, I do believe we are about to be inundated with new stories about a rather untidy first brother.

Remember Billy Carter's beer-drinking antics? Well, apparently we've got us another colorful figure in President Clinton's younger brother, Roger.

Ott

In case you missed it, an article appeared in this newspaper last week that brought this potentially explosive situation to a head. It went like this:

"First brother Roger Clinton was chastised for his casual wardrobe by a fashion-conscious audience member during an appearance in West Palm Beach, Fla.

" 'I'd like to know why you didn't dress properly,' Betty Yeager, 50, of Palm Beach said during a question-and-answer session.

" 'I'm sorry ma'am,' Clinton responded. 'If I'd had time I'd have sewed little rainbows on my pockets like you've got on yours, but I thought judging people by their clothes went out in the 1950s or '60s.'

"Ms. Yeager defended her comments later.

" 'Everything was wrinkled and his hair was unkept. He was dirty,' she said. 'He shouldn't embarrass his brother that way.'

For the record, the younger Clinton was wearing a baggy navy blue jacket, white shirt, brown dress Hush Puppies shoes, a festive Uncle Sam tie and blue jeans.

And that's considered tacky?

It is in the eyes of some high-brow women in West Palm Beach, Fla. They expect your clothes to be both clean and wrinkle-free.

Picky, picky.

But regardless how you come down on the issue of wrinkled clothes, the bottom line remains unchanged: When you are related to the president of the United States, certain people are going to keep close tabs on everything you say, do and wear.

Nothing is too small, too insignificant or too petty for their curiosity.

If you comment on a political issue, for example, it instantly translates into a major news story.

If you scratch yourself in public, your picture will be plastered on the front page of newspapers around the world.

If you butcher the English language, it will be duly noted.

And, yes, if you wear wrinkled clothes, you will be chastised. There are thousands of Betty Yeagers out there just waiting to pounce on your every miscue. So be careful, or, at the very least, set aside $20 a week for dry cleaning services.

This obsession with knowing — and commenting on — everything that happens to members of the first family has always baffled me. Frankly, I'm not sure where I stand on their right to privacy.

A part of me admittedly lusts for the goriest of details, even if it means probing the personal habits of Socks the First Cat. But the other part of me says, "Wait a minute. Give these people a break. Just because we pay their salaries doesn't mean we are entitled to know which brand of deodorant they use." (NOTE: Of course, if they don't use deodorant at all, then we most definitely should be told about that.)

Still, all things considered, one question remains: Do we, the general public, have a right to know every detail about our elected officials, and their loved ones, especially if those loved ones are legitimate family members (like a brother or a sister or family pet) and not some little hot number the elected official met in a motel lounge while working the campaign trail last summer?

That's what we need to determine today. How far does the public's "right to know" really go?

We all agree, I assume, that the president is fair game. If he screws up, it goes on the front page. No questions asked. Same with his wife. It's a hazard that goes with the position.

But what about the others? A brother, a sister, a cousin? Should they come under the same scrutiny? Probably the best way to determine your true feelings on this issue is to put yourself in their place.

Would you want nosy reporters going through your trash in an attempt to determine what magazines you read? Would you be comfortable having them check on your dating habits (or lack thereof) in high school? Would you be willing to take a lie detector test to find out if you ever cheated on a college exam?

Kind of touchy, isn't it?

Still, some of you goody-goody types might be smugly saying, "No problem. My life is an open book. There are no skeletons."

Fine. Would you be willing to let us check your clothes? I do believe I spotted a wrinkle in those new britches you just bought.

ing grades on tests, maybe 75s. His parents are happy that he is passing, but it's not enough. We want to reach for him as well as the outgoing student or the one who sits off in the back of the class."

Students in Midland junior high schools now attend seven periods each day. Their teachers teach five classes. The system is referred to as "departmentalized" since the students are grouped by departments or subjects.

Elementary school classrooms are called "self-contained" since pupils can learn all subjects in one room with one teacher, with the exception of a few classes like music or physical education.

Research indicates that thrusting adolescents from one environment to the other (such as the self-contained to departmentalized) is too abrupt and isolating for students in the phase of life when they desperately need to feel a part of a team or group.

"The peer group used to be important when discussing the lives of 17-year-old students. Now it is critical in the lives of children age 10 and 11, or younger," said Paul S. George, professor of education at the University of Florida and well known leader in the middle school movement.

In a brochure describing the middle school concept, George said, "Parents and teachers who are used to being the absolute center of their children's lives are often shocked and dismayed when they discover this is no longer the case. Most elementary school settings are poorly equipped to deal with this phenomenon ... Schools that revolve around primary grades or high school seniors just don't do the job for today's early adolescent.

"The middle school has to be unique, but it also must be transitional. It has to lead from the elementary to the high school, and still do something special in the middle."

In a position paper prepared by Midland Independent School District staff for the board, the staff stated they would like "to insure that grades seven and eight provide an educational setting that is an effective bridge between the more self-contained, student-centered classroom of elementary schools to the more departmentalized, subject-centered classrooms of the high schools."

So, how can junior high schools in Midland be restructured to provide a more effective setting for seventh and eighth graders?

The principals are pursuing the middle school concept of setting up interdisciplinary teams of teachers to oversee groups of 60-150 students.

Based on current enrollments, Dennis would have one team of teachers oversee about 150 students. Smaller enrollments will allow the principals to group fewer students together.

"The same set of teachers would all be teaching the same group of students," Dennis said. Each team would include a math, science, social studies, English and study skills teacher.

"The classrooms would be close together, and David (Adam's) plan is fundamentally the same as mine. It involves teachers sharing the same kids all day long. The teachers will also get together in planning sessions."

Adams said teachers working together can increase stability. "Imagine teachers on a team all meeting and agreeing to have the same classroom rules and to do headings (on assignments) the same way," he said. "The close-knit group of teachers will meet daily to talk about different kids and what works in one class that could work in another."

He said teachers would benefit by getting help from their peers when needed rather than being "isolated off in a class by themselves all day."

Students would also benefit by belonging to the common team. Each team would have an identity, design logos, and decorate its area with posters and bulletin boards.

"Kids need to be in a group at this age," Adams said.

Dennis said academic benefits would result from teachers planning together and students helping their peers in their respective groups.

"Teachers could identify a need and set up something like a skill of the week," he said. "Every class would have this skill and with classes next to each other, teachers could arrange it so a student who finishes math early could walk next door and finish a science project. Students tend to think when they walk out the door that subject is finished for the day. This way, they will see interrelations and carry-over skills."

Adams is interested in structuring his school with teams consisting of math, science, English and social studies teachers. His plan includes students attending three blocks or periods a day that are two-periods long. He has operated this schedule on a small-scale at Alamo.

"Students are only in some classes every other day," he said. "But it really adds to actual

PARK: Parking meter can cost more than just quarter

(From 1C)

Once a car is in the impoundment lot, the problem becomes an issue to be taken to the municipal court, either to Smith or Municipal Court Judge Sharon Smith. If the owner believes the tickets aren't theirs or there is some other misunderstanding, he or she can choose not to post bond nor pay the cost of the tickets. The matter then goes before the judge.

Or, the owner can pay the outstanding tickets, plus the cost of towing the car. Then the judge issues the owner a receipt that must be taken back to the police department.

Once the police sign a release, the owner takes it to the impoundment lot to get the vehicle.

"Once we get all the notices out, we usually will start having three to five cars towed a day," Smith said. "The issue doesn't go to court that often. The owners normally just come in and pay the ticket."

So, what is the bottom line to the long, drawn-out, often expensive story of vehicle impoundment?

"It's simple," Smith said. "Just put the quarter in the parking meter. It will save a bigger headache later on."

itol of Brazil.

"I also visited in Rio and Rio was a pleasure trip, but we worked almost two weeks. Dr. Vestal led a crusade there in a large village near Brasilia. Those of us who went distributed invitations and did door-to-door visitation inviting people to the crusade."

The expenses for her trips did not come out of the church coffers, Miss Clark said. "I'm sure those expenses were paid by individuals rather than by the church."

She also remembers the church fire during World War II.

"A three-story education building burned, and the auditorium was condemned as being unsafe. During that time, they moved in some army barracks buildings and church services were held in the old Ritz Theater part of that time and part of that time in Midland High School Auditorium," Miss Clark said, recalling that when Morris joined the staff as pastor, services were being held at the high school.

"We were already in the process of a new building. We had chosen the location and had the ground breaking.

"It was special the way our church just held together during that period. We moved way out to the edge of town, out in the prairie, actually," Miss Clark said, referring to the church's current location at Garfield Street and Louisiana Avenue. "When the church moved out there, there were no houses."

The staff as well as the congregation has grown since Miss Clark came here 47 years ago. Then the church had two ministers. Now it has at least 15 on its staff, she said.

One of the highpoints during her years on staff at First Baptist Church came in 1985-86, when the congregation celebrated its centennial. The church was established here Jan. 10, 1886.

"Former pastors, staff members and church members were invited back to participate," she said. "There was an old-fashioned picnic, a banquet at the Midland Center, receptions, special worship services and the setting of the Stone of Remembrance.

"We recognized our wonderful heritage and gave thanks to God for His many blessings to our church through the past century. I felt privileged just to be here and watch that going on."

Life has not always been smooth for Miss Clark, who discovered she had ovarian cancer in the late summer of 1991.

"Following surgery, I had 8 months of chemotherapy, and in a recent CAT scan, I was told that I was clear of the cancer. Everything looked perfect."

She attributes her health today to "God's healing and to the prayers of the people who prayed for me."

The kindnesses of church members and staff through the years, Miss Clark said, "Have just endeared Midland and First Baptist to me."

Now that she is no longer working fulltime, she plans to spend more time with her mother, find volunteer activities and be an active participant at First Baptist.

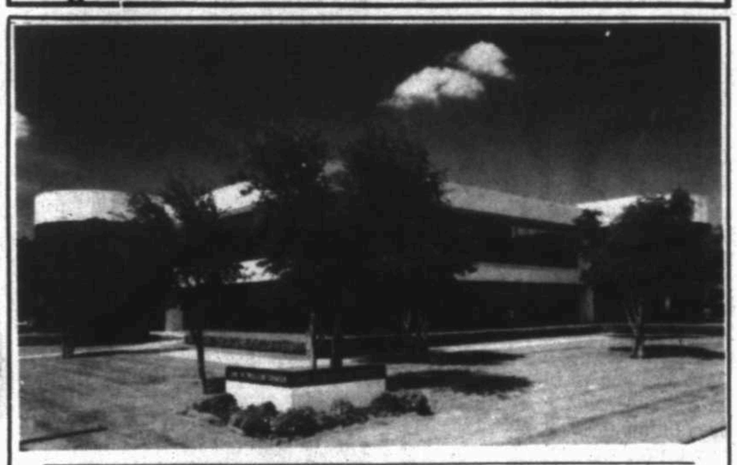

When Miss Clark felt she needed to retire, Denison, the current senior pastor, didn't make the decision easier for her to make.

"He is one of the most scholarly and brilliant individuals I have ever known, so it has been a privilege to work for him. He has really enriched my life. I laughingly told him I wished he wasn't such a nice, kind boss. He made it really hard for me to retire. I just got to work for him for a little over three years, so I was the loser there."

Although Miss Clark spent her last year looking forward to retirement, when the time came to leave, it wasn't easy.

"Because the work has been such a joy to me," she said, "It was a little difficult to walk away that last day."

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC forms Ex Students' Association, calls for members

By H.A. Tuck

Last week's announcement about the formation of the Midland College Ex Students' Association is the culmination of about four months of soul-searching, research, and effort by a number of people. Since MC now is in its 20th year as a separate community college (for the newcomers, the college was once part of the Odessa College system for three years, from 1969-72), it has matured.

Tuck

Many of its students now have been away long enough to realize the role that the college played in their development and success.

Membership is open to all former students, current and former employees, and anyone else with an affinity for MC. You are invited to join while attending any of the next three home basketball games or by calling 685-4793, a permanent office of the Association with Pete Herndon as its coordinator. The office is located in the Student Center, in case you'd like to drop by.

Speaking of basketball, only five home games remain and the next of those is at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Chaparral Center. New Mexico Military Institute, with Reggie Franklin as head coach, will be opposing the Chaps. Franklin was an assistant coach for MC and its head coach for four seasons.

Franklin also is a former player for NMMI.

On Thursday, the Chaparrals are headed for Borger and a game with Frank Phillips College. It also marks the beginning of the second half of action for Midland in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

The following week, the Chaps host Odessa College on Monday, Feb. 1, and Howard College on Thursday, Feb. 4.

And yes, the Chaparrals are adding women's basketball in the fall of 1994.

The decision was made at last week's meeting of the Board of Trustees. The team will compete in the WJCAC, which includes women's teams at Odessa, Howard, South Plains, Western Texas, New Mexico Junior College, and Frank Phillips College.

And if you need more basketball to attend this week, the Midland High versus Midland Lee games are Tuesday at Chap Center. Games are at 4:30, 6:15, and 8 p.m.

You've heard there is always someone who doesn't get the word.

In at least one case, it was the public relations department. Involved was the monthly breakfast for small business owners/operators. It's always held on the third Tuesday of each month . . . except last week.

Almost everyone else knew it had been moved to the fourth Tuesday for this month only.

That means if you slept late last Tuesday, you still have a chance to make the breakfast. Just set your alarm so you can be present at 7:30 a.m. TUESDAY, JAN. 26, at Chaparral Hall in the Student Center. Cost is $5, payable at the door. You don't have to make reservations, but can call 684-4100 if you'd like more information.

Yesterday's "Step Up To Success" youth conference at MC was another big success. The event is conducted by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce with sponsorships from Mobil, Exxon, JTPA, Private Industry Council, and Coca-Cola.

Mary Lopez, the MHCC's vice president for Education, served as chair for the event. She's secretary in the college's Public Relations Department. MC President David E. Daniel welcomed the young delegates to the campus. MC government instructor Jerry Franks was one of the seminar speakers.

The first of three sessions this spring of the popular College Classics series begins in just more than a week. Session I starts Feb. 8 and ends March 5, Session II is March 15-April 8, and Session III is April 13-May 7.

For those who haven't heard, College Classics is a series of four-week classes especially for those at least 50 years of age. There's a single enrollment fee of $25, which covers attending one class or every single class in all three spring sessions. After you've registered, you may enroll in other College Classics courses held during the same semester just by phoning the Continuing Education office.

The classes are arranged so it is possible to attend all of them in each session, 10 classes in Session I, 11 in Session II, and nine in Session III. Most of the classes meet one afternoon per week, usually for an hour or 90 minutes. A couple of classes meet for two hours.

The instructors are recruited from among the college's faculty and staff plus a large number of knowledgeable Midlanders. For the first session, the classes include:

Annie's Cooking Birds of Midland, Community Outreach, Economics, Piano, Power of Imagery, Reasoning About Ethics, Religious Figures, Sociology, and World History.

To register call 685-4518 for more information.

Another entertaining event is the annual Midland Independent School District's Choral Festival. It takes place in Chaparral Center at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Admission is free and you'll hear a considerable amount of vocal talent.

For something to do during gloomy winter evenings, try one or more of these interesting classes being offered through the Continuing Education Department. These classes start this week, so look over the list, then sign up in the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building.

Classes include: Bridge I, Financial Planning, Parenting: Teenage Years Can Be The Best, Photos: From Shoebox to Showcase, Introduction to Records Management, Study Skills, Woman Time Management, Calligraphy I, Long Term Care Planning, Pottery, Russian I, Plumbing for Homeowners, Financial Statements, Bookkeeping II, and Dreams and You.

Don't forget about the always-popular Bass Fishing Seminar, which starts on Tuesday, Feb. 2. The class meets from 7:30-9:30 p.m. on Feb. 2, 4,9, and 11 for a fee of $59. There's always a big demand for this class, which is entertaining and can teach you how to understand bass and how to catch the elusive game fish.

For more information call 685-4518.

Teacher with AIDS leaves his students with warning speech

HOUSTON (AP) — A high school chemistry teacher dying of AIDS has said goodbye and issued a warning in two hour-long speeches to about 800 Spring Woods High School students.

Jim Moore went before the students Thursday to tell them he had AIDS and likely will die within a year.

Moore described in detail his six-year battle with the disease. He told the students he has fought pneumonia, shingles and meningitis and lost 45 pounds in one year. He said he had taken 50 different medications and was hospitalized several times with a 105-degree fever.

"But I'm not a victim. I'm a messenger," Moore said.

"Those of you who contract AIDS from here on out will be victims," he said. "That's because you have a choice."

Moore said about 20 of the students in the auditorium probably already carry the HIV virus that causes AIDS because statistics show that 2 percent in their age group are HIV-positive, about double the general population's level of infection.

He also told the students they stand a good chance of contracting the disease unless they abstain from sex. Condoms are not the answer, he said, adding that he believes he contracted the virus about 10 years ago while having sex using a condom.

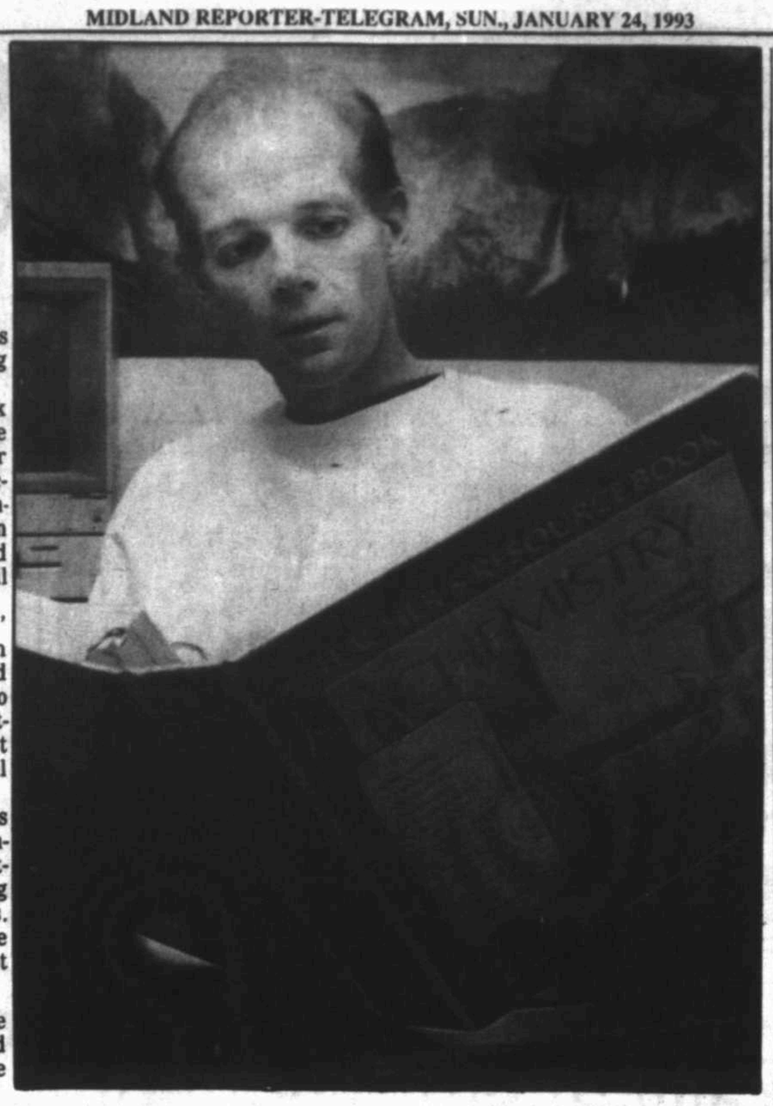

The 42-year-old teacher, on sick leave since December, said the speeches provided students their first official notification he has acquired immune deficiency syndrome. A few teachers had known for some time, he said, but he did not inform administrators until recently.

"I've had a very difficult year," Moore said. "My immune system is at the point of total collapse, and I may not get an opportunity to talk to you again. It's very doubtful I'll beat the odds in this last year, that's what the doctors tell me."

Dr. Perry Pope, Spring Woods principal, allowed Moore to conduct the assemblies after consulting teachers, parents and Spring Branch district administrators. Officials provided an alternative activity for students choosing not to attend, he said.

Pope said he believed only one student skipped the assembly and parents and other teachers have been supportive.

"I had one parent that called. She said her son died of AIDS two years ago and she wanted to thank Mr. Moore for the program," he said.

Texans boast of bed Clinton slept in

By Jeffrey Ball
Associated Press Writer

CORPUS CHRISTI — Nothing outside 310 Camellia Drive suggests the political significance of what lies within.

The house is beige with brown trim. The cars in the driveway are a Subaru and a Honda, not limousines. The front door is encased by a screen, not an iron gate.

It isn't the White House. But Bill Clinton did sleep here.

It was July 1972, and Clinton was a 25-year-old staff member in charge of Texas for George McGovern's presidential campaign. He arrived in Corpus Christi one afternoon, addressed local Democratic leaders, and then returned with Nueces County McGovern campaign director Ken Weatherbie to Weatherbie's house for the night.

The young Clinton's intellect — he had just completed a Rhodes Scholarship at England's Oxford University when he visited Corpus Christi — impressed the Del Mar College history professor.

Before retiring to bed, Clinton pulled a 309-page history book from Weatherbie's shelf — the volume, William Appleton Williams' "The Tragedy of American Diplomacy," is considered a classic, Weatherbie said.

The next morning, over toast and coffee and between campaign phone calls, Clinton discussed the book's thesis with Weatherbie. "That's one thing that really impressed me about him. He's really a bright guy," said Weatherbie, 51.

Those who doubt the professor's story need only look in the guest bedroom of his house. There, in a wing he and his wife, Evie, have dubbed the Presidential Suite, sits the wooden bed on which the nation's 42nd president slept 21 years ago.

The twin bed, which consists of a simple headboard and a box spring, was given to Evie Weatherbie by her mother when she was a teen-ager growing up in Nebraska. The bed was used by the Weatherbies' daughter — her room was then painted pink with fuchsia trim — at the time of Clinton's visit.

The couple's daughter, now 28, recalled Clinton's visit in a chat with her parents last year as allegations of marital infidelities swirled around the presidential candidate.

"She said, 'Daddy, you have to quit telling people that Bill Clinton slept in my bed,' " Ken Weatherbie recalled with a chuckle.

The bed might not still be in the Weatherbie family had it not been for the history professor's political prescience, Evie Weatherbie said.

About 10 years ago the couple relegated the bed to their attic and replaced it with a double brass bed that was more practical for guests. Two years ago, Evie Weatherbie, now a 49-year-old music teacher at Flour Bluff Intermediate School, brought the bed out of storage and prepared to sell it at a garage sale. Her husband couldn't believe his eyes.

"I got it down and proceeded to clean it all up," said Evie Weatherbie, who speculated that she could have gotten between $35 and $50 for the bed. "He came rushing down and said, 'What are you doing? Don't you realize' — and this was long before Clinton was even considered a candidate — Don't you realize that Bill Clinton slept in that bed?' I said, 'He's governor of Arkansas. Big deal.' He said, 'One day he's going to be president of the United States!' I said, 'Yeah. Right.' "

Now the bed sits in the guest room again, draped in the same pink-flowered spread that covered it on that historic night in the summer of '72.

CHANGE: Men propose junior high program

instruction time. There is a gain of 75 minutes per particular subject each week, or an extra day and a half — 11½ days of instruction in a 10-day period — of time on task"

With three classes of two periods each and teachers planning together, students are unlikely to be overloaded with homework.

Rather than having department chairmen, both principals' teams would include a team leader (instructional expert) and a departmental liaison (curriculum expert). The liaison and team leader will be on equal footing. "They will be equals, just with different areas of responsibility," Adams said, noting team members will be involved "in a sharing type of responsibility."

"We have so many teachers who have good ideas," he said.

While both approaches are somewhat different, the principals said their plans are alike in theory.

Dennis said the feeder system is making it possible for both of schools to become middle schools, and for all seventh and eighth grade students to arrive at Lee Freshman High School after being involved in similar programs.

"Middle school teachers — including some at Crockett Junior High School in Odessa — have said, 'I have never worked harder in my life, but I have never been more satisfied,' " Dennis said.

After successfully operating small blocks, Adams said he would like to bring his vision full-scale. "David (Dennis) and I have the same goal — to send all kids to high school on grade level. We had an opportunity to work closely together this semester and share ideas. Our teams will share like we did," he said.

Adams said an academic advantage of the feeder system is that schools can share responsibility. "If a Lee High School exit-exam shows students struggled with decimal problems than that will alert David and I to start working with decimals with the seventh and eighth grade students."

Dennis said the middle school approach is "not a new fad or some revolutionary approach."

"The research is there and the movement has been going on for at least 30 years," he said.

Adams said the approach won't appeal to everybody. "Some teachers have team ability and some work better as individuals, but they can also be leaders."

"We know what should work. The question is: 'How do we do it?' We sometimes get into a mindset that just because we have always done something in the past, we have to keep on doing it," Dennis said. "Now we have an opportunity to enhance learning for students and enrich their needs."

The school board has not approved the middle school plans yet. However, Adams has been given the go-ahead to hire teachers interested in being on teams or serving as team leaders to staff Abell.

Some Midland ISD administrators will tour Crockett Junior High School's middle school program Tuesday.

■ Police arrest 5 boys for alleged gang rape

HOUSTON — Five middle school students remained in custody Saturday for the alleged gang rape of a 13-year-old girl abducted from a bus stop.

Police said a sixth boy allegedly involved in the assault remained at large.

The girl told authorities she was waiting for a school bus near the campus of Ryan Middle School Wednesday when she was accosted by a 16-year-old fellow student who forced her into an apartment at an abandoned complex.

The other suspects — aged 12, 14, 14, 15 and 16 — were waiting inside the apartment and each sexually assaulted her, police said. After the attack, the girl left the building and was walking home when she asked a passing police officer for a ride.

She was taken to Ben Taub Hospital and released.

Five of the suspects were arrested Friday morning and remain at the Harris County Juvenile Probation Department.

School officials, who said they learned of the attack on Friday, said it was unclear whether the girl knew the suspects.

■ Man finds infant abandoned in box on truck

ANGLETON — A newborn girl found abandoned in a box on the hood of a pickup truck has been dubbed "Precious Doe" by nurses caring for her while authorities search for her mother.

The infant was found about 6:30 p.m. Thursday by an Angleton man returning to his vehicle at a Brazoria County Park & Ride lot, about four miles north of Angleton. The man told authorities he was going to throw the box away, but decided to look inside because it was heavy.

The baby, believed to be about 12 hours old, was wrapped in blankets and left with a bottle of formula. Brazoria County Sheriff's Capt. Jeff Adkins said the infant still had traces of placenta and blood on her body, but was healthy when found.

"She is beautiful. Everyone here wants to take her home," Paula Haenchen, spokeswoman for Angleton Danbury General Hospital, said.

She said nurses dropped the customary "Baby Jane Doe" alias in favor of a more personal name.

Sheriff's investigator Randy Rhyne said authorities have no clues to the identity of the child or her mother.

■ Man takes ex girlfriend hostage, kills himself

HOUSTON — A 21-year-old man who took his former girlfriend hostage in a video store and held police at bay for more than 11 hours ended the siege when he shot himself in the head, dying several hours later.

Emanuel Ramirez died at Ben Taub Hospital about 1 p.m. Friday, some 19 hours after he barricaded himself in the store with America Alvaredo, 20, police said.

Ramirez apparently was angered by the woman's decision to end their relationship. He went to the video store where she worked, armed with a semiautomatic handgun and several ammunition clips.

Police negotiators persuaded Ramirez to release the woman about midnight Thursday, but he refused to surrender.

SWAT team members lobbed canister after canister of tear gas through ceiling vents and front windows and even pumped gas in through a hose in an effort to remove him from the store. But Ramirez responded by shooting at officers through the store windows, even as he choked on the gas.

■ Fire kills grandmother, her 2 grandsons

BEAUMONT — A grandmother who tried to free her two grandsons from a fire-ravaged bedroom died early Saturday of her injuries, firefighters said.

Both boys, Byron Jacquette, 3, and his cousin, Shawn McCuene, 4, died of smoke inhalation in the Friday evening fire, Beaumont Fire Department Capt. David Hesser said.

Elvira Jacquette, 69, died about 3:30 a.m. Saturday, also from asphyxiation. Fire Marshall Jack Maddox said Ms. Jacquette and both boys also suffered second- and third-degree burns over their bodies.

Maddox said the two boys were playing with a lighter in an upstairs hallway used as a storage area about 7 p.m. Friday when they ignited the family's Christmas tree.

Another child who witnessed the incident ran downstairs to alert Ms. Jacquette while the young boys ran to a back bedroom.

"The grandmother actually ran through the flames to get to them," Hesser said.

Maddox said all three were trapped in the room by the flames.

"It wasn't a bad fire as far as fires go," Maddox said. "They were just unable to get out of the bedroom."

Three other children escaped the house unharmed, he said.

Abortion protesters rally at state capitol

AUSTIN (AP) — Anti-abortion protesters rallied statewide Saturday in the wake of the 20th anniversary of the landmark Roe v. Wade decision and President Clinton's reversal on abortion restrictions.

Police in Dallas arrested about 30 anti-abortion activists demonstrating at the A to Z Women's Health Services building, said Detective Chris Gilliam. All were charged with criminal trespassing.

"They were taken to Lew Sterrett Criminal Justice Center without incident," Gilliam said.

In Austin, about 800 demonstrators carried placards and chanted "Choose Life" while marching to the Capitol for the fourth annual Texas Rally for Life.

Speakers urged protesters to continue fighting against the proposed Freedom of Choice Act by signing petitions and writing their congressmen. Clinton has promised to sign the bill if Congress approves it.

"This dangerous bill must not become law. Let's not let this happen, and with your help it won't happen," said Lisa Salcedo, spokeswoman for the Texas Right to Life Committee.

U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, stumping for his campaign to replace Lloyd Bentsen in the Senate, said that if elected, he would oppose abortion.

"My position on abortion is the same today as in 1984, and that is that I'm against abortion in all cases except to protect the life of the woman," Barton, R-Ennis, said. "As a conservative, I believe the first thing we must conserve is human life itself."

Clinton used Friday's anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision to lift George Bush's restrictions on abortion counseling and medical research that uses fetal tissue.

The abortion rights activists said they didn't object to their opponents' free speech rights, but they added that it doesn't circumvents a woman's right to choice.

"When a woman chooses that she is unable to care for a child that she is going to be responsible for . . . that is her decision, not these people marching out here," one abortion rights demonstrator said.

Protest also were planned Saturday in El Paso, Fort Worth and San Antonio.

City officials act on brine in water

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Marine life struggling to survive in the salty Nueces Bay has prompted two oil companies to stop releasing brine into those waters.

The Fina Oil and Chemical Co. and Hawthorne Oil and Gas Corp. have asked the Texas Railroad Commission to cancel their discharge permits, said Margaret Allen, a technical examiner.

City officials have pumped reservoir water into the bay to reduce saltiness since shrimp harvesters complained three years ago.

"The city says if they release water from reservoirs, why should we have water discharging into the bay that is very high in brine?" said Timothy Brown, an Austin lawyer representing the city.

The city will ask that all discharge permits be canceled unless oil companies agree to filter out the salt and other chemicals, or dump the brine elsewhere, Brown said.

Nine companies still hold discharge permits for Nueces Bay and must defend them during a July 6 hearing requested by Corpus Christi officials.

Fina will dump its brine in wells, Brown said.

City officials also are keeping a close eye on a proposed Environmental Protection Agency rule that would effectively cancel all state-issued discharge permits in Texas and Louisiana bays, Brown said.

The EPA is conducting hearings for the rule, Brown said, and will decide whether to enact it at a later, unspecified date.

A hearing to review Nueces Bay discharge permits was originally scheduled for last year. But heavy rains reduced salinity in the bay and city officials delayed the hearing, Allen said.

Allen said the high-salt problem in Nueces Bay is apparently caused by drought.

"Unless there's a drought between now and July, Corpus Christi probably won't find hypersalinity, and I expect them to cancel the hearing," Allen said.

CAF unanimously elects new chief of General Staff

Staff report

ODESSA — James J. "Jim" Kaster of Austin was elected chief of the Confederate Air Force's governing General Staff by unanimous vote in the CAF's Winter Staff Conference in the Holiday Day Inn Center Saturday.

He succeeds Joe Mabee, a Midland rancher, oilman, aviator and philanthropist who has been chief of the CAF's 11-member General Staff in recent years. Mabee was influential in relocating the CAF headquarters to Midland from Harlingen in 1990 and 1991.

Kaster is a commissioner on the three-member Texas Employment Commission and is a former Texas legislator from El Paso.

The 1957-founded CAF is an 8,000-member organization that locates, restores, maintains and flies increasingly rare warplanes from both the Allied forces and the Axis powers in the 1939-41 World War II era.

The CAF and its Ghost Squadron "Flying Museum" maintain more than 140 warbirds in squadrons and wings throughout the United States.

The CAF is part of the American Airpower Heritage Group, which includes the American Airpower Heritage Museum and Flying Museum, which are headquartered at Midland International Airport.

SAT changes may be tough on athletes

HOUSTON (AP) — Higher scores on college exams may be the tougher criteria for high school athletes to meet than more stringent restrictions by the NCAA on student payments, a report published Saturday said.

The Scholastic Aptitude Test, which is used to help determine the academic eligibility of incoming freshmen student-athletes, is undergoing major changes beginning in March 1994.

Although the changes were not inspired by the NCAA, they will alter the format under which prospective student-athletes become eligible as freshmen beginning with the 1995-96 school year, The Houston Post reported.

In general, the new SAT will stress problem solving over computation in math and reasoning over memory skills in the verbal portion. Students will be able to use calculators on the math portion and will be required to read longer passages that measure their critical reading skills and vocabulary knowledge.

"The SAT has evolved over time and this is among a series of changes that are reflective of our changing environment," said Jan Gams, spokeswoman for the College Board. "It will not be a more difficult test, but it will be different."

The NCAA's recent emphasis on raising academic requirements for incoming student-athletes has made recruiting more selective. The new SAT format could add to that.

Greg Anrig, president of the Educational Testing Service which administers the SAT, said some groups are concerned that the optional use of calculators could put some students at a disadvantage.

"It's important to remember that a calculator will not be required to answer any question on the revised test," Anrig said. "But if a student is used to using one in math, he might feel more comfortable having one."

Others disagree.

"It won't be equal," Michele Mattricks, academic coordinator for the University of Houston's athletic department. "The SAT is a timed (three-hour) test. If you have a calculator, you can make your computations faster. And if the reading passages become longer, it could hurt the scores because of the time factor."

Under current NCAA rules, a student-athlete must have a minimum SAT score of 700 or a 17 on the American College Test (ACT) in addition to a high school grade-point average of 2.0 on a 4.0 scale with at least 11 core classes to enroll and be eligible as a freshman.

Academic standards will become more stringent by 1995, with freshman athletes must have a 2.5 grade-point average, 13 core classes and the required minimum on the SAT or ACT.

Students who have a GPA between 2.0 and 2.49 will be accepted with a higher minimum score or the SAT or ACT.

STUDENTS: Educators hope to change schools school, according to Paul S. George at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

(From 1C)

George, a professor of education at the university and well-known leader in the middle school movement, said in the "The Case for the Middle School," a video he wrote and produced, that "junior high schools have become the second hand rose of American education."

"In practice, many junior highs are made to look just like high schools," he said. "High schools were made to look like state universities and many states modeled their universities after Harvard and other ivy league schools. When Harvard was established 350-plus years ago, it was set up like the University of Berlin from the Middle Ages.

"As a result — after almost 500 years of educational mimicry — today many junior high school students attend schools organized to educate medieval Germans."

George said today's 13-year-olds "have little in common with 23-year-olds attending a university in Germany 500 years ago."

Some sociologists have noted that children are also "growing up faster" than those of previous generations.

George agrees. In a recent pamphlet he published, he wrote, "Puberty, the arrival of adult sexual abilities, has been appearing earlier and earlier with each passing generation."

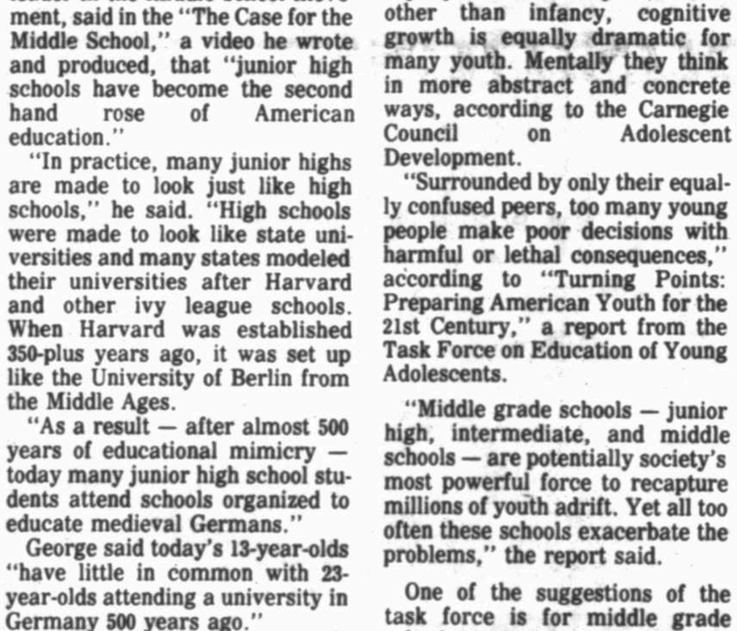

"Medical science says that today our average American girl reaches puberty at 11.5 years old, a drop in five years (from age 16.5) in the last century," he said.

While puberty signals the most rapid period of development in life other than infancy, cognitive growth is equally dramatic for many youth. Mentally they think in more abstract and concrete ways, according to the Carnegie Council on Adolescent Development.

"Surrounded by only their equally confused peers, too many young people make poor decisions with harmful or lethal consequences," according to "Turning Points: Preparing American Youth for the 21st Century," a report from the Task Force on Education of Young Adolescents.

"Middle grade schools — junior high, intermediate, and middle schools — are potentially society's most powerful force to recapture millions of youth adrift. Yet all too often these schools exacerbate the problems," the report said.

One of the suggestions of the task force is for middle grade schools to "create small communities for learning with stable, close, mutually respectful relationships with adults and peers . . . The key elements of these communities are schools-within-schools or houses, students and teachers grouped together as teams, and small group advisories that ensure every student is known well by at least one adult."

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

- Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

- How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases ... even more!

- OK ... but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

- When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday - Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

- Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

- What else?

An initial $100 deposit is required.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Text by Sherry Freeman

Pride of ownership is apparent when you pull into the circular drive and witness the remarkable designs this builder intended for his own use. Recent updates on the interior have transformed this home into a decorator's dream.

Beautiful decorator accents combined wiht the builder's masterful floorplan, make this home ideal for family comfort and convenience.

A dynamic leaded glass front door opens into a tiled foyer, where rich wall coverings create an ambience of luxurious comfort.

To the left, a mirrored pan ceiling adds dimension to the oversized dining room and vibrancy to the colorful wall coverings.

A liberal use of skylights in the spacious living room illuminates the high vaulted ceilings, providing an open and light environment for family entertaining. Built-in bookshelves are great for the "librarian" in the family, while the rest of the family enjoys a crackling fire in the brick fireplace with screen.

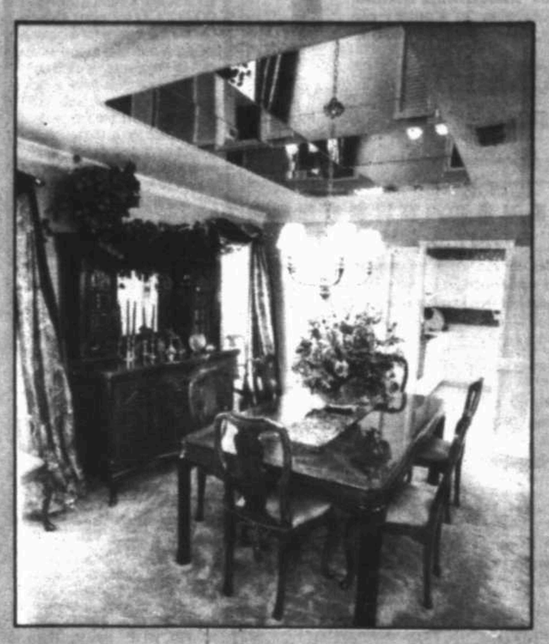

For adult entertaining, a fully-loaded wet bar is conveniently located off the living room. A pass-through window to the covered patio is provided for poolside entertainment.

A well-designed home plans for the future with oversized rooms and an abundance of storage space -- the generous use of cabinets and storage in the dine-in kitchen clearly demonstrate the builder's vision of growth.

Decorator colors bring the walls to life in a dine-in kitchen that is already illuminated by the natural light of the great bay window and skylight.

Off the kitchen, towards the garage, a 1/2 bath is conveniently placed for guests. An added bonus is found in the same hallway, where an additional room, equipped with storage and a work sink, can easily be converted to an artist's studio or hobby room.

The sequestered master bedroom overlooks a welcoming view of the pool. This expansive room leads into a master bath that cleverly splits in two, providing separate walk-in closets and bathing areas for individual use. One side is complete with a jacuzzi tub and vanity area, while the other side has a shower and vanity area of its own.

The other two spacious bedrooms are tastefully decorated and are joined by a connecting bath with designer wallpaper that features a double sink vanity and built-in dressing table.

Patti Wallace of Langston Realtors is featuring this home located in the family-oriented Crestgate "Neighborhood" for $120,900. For a private showing, call Patti at 683-8692 or 685-0400, or stop in for the open house today from 1-4 p.m. at 3901 Crestridge.

Mature landscaped beds surround a wonderful heated lap pool and covered veranda for the family's outdoor enjoyment. With so many extras like the enclosed side yard, automatic sprinklers and thermal paned windows, this home will bring pleasure for years to come!

Sellers' Home Improvements Can Have Benefits

If you are planning on selling your home in the near future there are some benefits to home improvement projects. In most cases, the cost of improvements may reduce the taxes a homeowner eventually pays upon the sale of their home. Improvements can increase the value of the home and make the home easier to sell.

Here is a list of improvements that can have a tax advantage:

INDOOR IMPROVEMENTS -- Alarm systems, built in bookcase, fireplace, flooring (wood/tile), heating and air conditioning, ceiling fans, telephone jack, sink, tub, cabinets, water heater and garbage disposal.

OUTDOOR IMPROVEMENTS -- Decks, landscaping, gutters, hot tub, swimming pool, tennis courts, patio, fence, driveway, screen door.

IMPROVEMENTS SOLD WITH THE HOUSE -- Appliances -- (washer, dryer, microwave), yard equipment, fireplace equipment.

IMPROVEMENTS BEFORE THE SALE (90 Days) -- Carpet, flooring, windows, curtains.

Routine maintenance, such as painting and roofing, have no tax advantages. However, if the improvement is made within 90 days before the sale of your home, to make the home more sellable, the cost can be subtracted from the selling price, which reduces the taxable gain.

Also, the homeowner should keep in mind that improvements do not always pay for themselves. There is no guarantee that the seller will get back the cost of the improvement in the sale of the home.

If you are planning on making some home improvements -- cosnider the area, the overall appeal of the house, and plan improvements. Seek advice from reliable contractors, tax attorneys and Realtors in your neighborhood.

OIL REPORT

Oil & Gas Activity/2-4E
Activity Indicators/5E
Meetings Notices/8E

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Weak prices

Two wells working together. Oil prices were weak most of the week in the face of slack demand and an overabundance of supply.

Prices fell to a 10-month low of $18.33 per barrel before rebounding late in the week largely on technical factors that included expiration of the February contract. The March contract opened at $18.81 and the posted price ended the week at $17.25 per barrel.

Natural gas prices were slightly higher for the week, around $1.67 per thousand cubic feet.

Halliburton buys

DALLAS — Halliburton Co. will acquire the directional drilling systems business of Smith International Inc. for $240 million in stock, the companies said.

The oilfield service and equipment companies expect to close the deal in March, but it is subject to antitrust and other regulatory approvals.

Halliburton and Smith signed a letter of intent for the transaction last month and have now reached definitive terms.

Directional drilling systems accounted for about 40 percent of Smith's revenue. The Houston-based company lost $1.3 million on revenue of $276.4 million in the first nine months of last year.

Dallas-based Halliburton earned $55.2 million on revenue of $4.87 billion in the first nine months of 1992.

Rig count drop

A workover rig, marks a gloomy day. Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts were lower for the wek ended January 15, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that the Basin tally slipped five to 108 during the week; it was 112 a year ago.

The U.S. tally plunged 65 to 838 for the week, but remains above the year-ago tally of 716. Baker Hughes officials blamed both cold weather, primarily in Oklahoma, and the end of Section 29 tax credits for tight sands gas for the slump.

Oklahoma showed the largest drop, 28 rigs, followed by Texas with 18 rigs. Only New Mexico, of the nation's major oil producing states, showed an increase, one rig.

Lotto safety

ANSON — Roy Addison, a Wes-Tex Drilling Co floorhand is $10,000 richer, after his name was drawn in a safety drawing. All Wes-Tex employees who worked all of 1992 without time lost for accidents are eligible for a year-end drawing for a $10,000 grand prize. Wes-Tex says 94 employees qualified for the drawing this year, in which Ruben Castillo of Odessa received $3,000 and Elias Elizondo of Big Lake earned $1,000.

Mulling over the rig drop

■ Drop in rig count triggers concerns, but effect may not be long-lasting.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Following last week's drop of 65 in the rig count and 19 the week before, there was some trepidation and speculation about what might come next.

The rig decline, the fourth in as many weeks, left only 838 rigs actively looking for oil and natural gas. While that number is above the 716 of a year ago, it still conjures fears in an industry that was nearly massacred by falling oil prices.

In the back of many minds is the thought of another disastrous plunge in the number of working rigs or the possibility of a slow painful slide into oblivion. Such painful speculations are to be expected in a shell-shocked industry that has see the industry drop nearly 4,000 rigs in the past decade.

From 1981 through 1983 the rig count fell over 2,000 rigs, and after a brief recovery in 1983 plunged almost another 2,000 rigs in 1985 and 1986, hitting historic highs and lows in a single decade.

According to Baker-Hughes which has been keeping tabs on rigs for 50 years, the historic high came in December 1981 when the count reached 4,530. The low came in the summer of 1992, when the count fell to 596.

While the drilling industry still flinches with each new swing in the rig count, it is unlikely that the industry will suffer the same crashes that happend to the rig count during the 1980s, according to experts.

The sad but simple truth is that there are probably not enough rigs left in this country to mount another massacre like 1982 or 1986. Another economic or political onslaught against the drilling industry would amount to no more than bayoneting the wounded.

Also, many agree that the drilling industry has now been reduced to near a fundamental core necessary to maintain the present declining infrastructure.

Said Leroy Peterson, vice president Peterson Drilling Co. of Midland and president of the Permian Basin Chapter of the International Association of Drilling Contractors: "The problem is that the core level keeps getting revised downward as domestic oil and gas production shrinks. There was a time when we didn't think we could get by in this country with less than 900 working rigs. That has changed."

Peterson said the U.S. drilling industry might be below the core level now. When imports exceed domestic production it is a sign of a declining infrastructure, he noted.

When the number of rigs reaches a core level it is still subject to economic and political variables, but bounces back faster, because a certain number of wells will have to be drilled regardless.

Ike Kerridge, a vice president of Baker-Hughes, credits the variables of bad

FIRST ANNUAL DRILLING CONTRACTOR SURVEY

Drilling poll gives view of rig status

■ Basin rig inventory adequate to meet added demand, but demand will not be significant.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

What is the status of the Permian Basin drilling industry? How many rigs are working? What kind are available? How many are stacked? How many could be made ready in short order? Would there be enough rigs, drill pipe and manpower to answer a sudden upsurge in drilling?

Those are all questions the Permian Basin Oil Report sought to answer with its first Drilling Contractor Survey. To get the answers a list of survey questions were sent to all the listed drilling contractors in the Permian Basin. Also were included Abilene area contractors who often work in the Basin.

Only 17 of the 51 companies who were sent survey questions responded, but fortunately among those responding were the most active drilling companies in the Basin. And while the results are not entirely conclusive, they do present a fairly accurate description of the industry. Here is essentially what we found:

■ Working rigs: First, we found a degree of correlation between longevity and success. Of the drilling contractors still working in the Permian Basin, there was an average age of 30 years service. FWA was the oldest with 55 years and Cleere Drilling with three years the youngest. However, Cleere had a long history as Caraway Drilling before it was purchased.

Comparing working rigs to employees, we found that the average number of employees per working rig was 13.3 employees, with the average varying from three for one company up to 22 for

What could kick off drilling?

■ Drilling contractors differ on what it would take to stimulate drilling.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

What would it take to increase drilling activity in 1993? Drilling contractors working in the Permian Basin expressed a number of views on this subject in the survey, but the words that kept getting repeated the most were incentives and price.

Said Kirk Cleere, president of Cleere Drilling of San Angelo: "The stabilization of oil prices at an economically profitable level is probably the single most-important factor affecting domestic drilling. The second is a lack of incentives to attract independent investment into the industry."

Others agreed: "Less tax," answered Cherokee Drilling Co., while FWA of Midland noted that an energy policy that encourages domestic production, and provides tax credit incentives to that end would help stimulate drilling.

Said Hack Drilling's response: "We need tax incentives for investors wanting to invest in oil and gas prospects."

TMBR/Sharp Drilling of Midland noted that stable oil prices in the $20 to $22 range to be effective for the drilling industry. Exeter Drilling Co. responded that $20 oil and $2 gas would result in increased activity over 1992, noting that most operators are upbeat about 1993.

But natural gas prices also played into the equation. Bandera, Tucker and Grace drilling companies all said higher natural gas prices and demand could stimulate drilling in 1993. One would have thought gas prices would be a first choice for nearly all, given the amount of political play given to an expanded role for natural gas. But to be honest, contractors probably implied natural gas prices when they spoke of oil prices.

Gene Grimes, division president for the Southwestern Division of Grace Drilling said the repeal

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Oil import fee appears highly unlikely

Pitts

According to the Oil Report Survey of Drilling Contractors some see stable oil prices through an import fee or tax as a prime means to perk up drilling activity.

Independents are once again proposing an oil import fee, and while there are more of them expressing support for it this time around, don't look for it to happen.

It was hoped that there might be industry consensus for an oil import fee this time around and that would put a lot of weight behind the proposal. It was speculated that while major oil companies would not openly support it they would at least take a low profile and neutral position on the issue, knowing that the Clinton administration is determined to have either a gasoline tax or an import fee to raise revenues.

But there are already indications that major oil company resistance to an oil import tax or fee is stronger than expected.

It is generally conceded within the oil industry that the Oil & Gas Journal is the de facto voice of the major oil companies, and that the magazine publishes little that is not in editorial sync with integrated, international oil company interests.

That being the case, Oil & Gas Journal this week published an editorial critical of an oil import fee that was neither neutral nor low profile, and may be sending a clear message to independents.

"To oppose an import fee," said the editorial, "is not in any way to scoff at the casualties independents have sustained or to question the contributions they make to the national energy interests. An import fee's disadvantages simply overwhelm whatever benefits might flow to what is, after all, just one part of the industry that delivers petroleum to the market."

Making it even more plain, the editorial notes: "Fee supporters should recognize that the new hope they see for their cause results from a shift of perceptions about petroleum prices." The editorial charges that it has now become more important, in some quarters, to limit oil consumption than to provide the consumers the best fuel at the best price.

It concludes: "An oil import fee has always been bad business. As a vehicle for thoughtless environmentalism, it can only get worse."

Maybe the Oil & Gas Journal is not sending a message from the majors to independents on this issue. Perhaps, it was composed entirely without knowledge or regard for the major oil company pulse, but I wouldn't want to bet on it. The message I get is this: "Import fees are still unacceptable for major oil companies — even if the alternative is a tax on gasoline."

Those looking for industry consensus on this issue probably will not find it, and that is unfortunate.

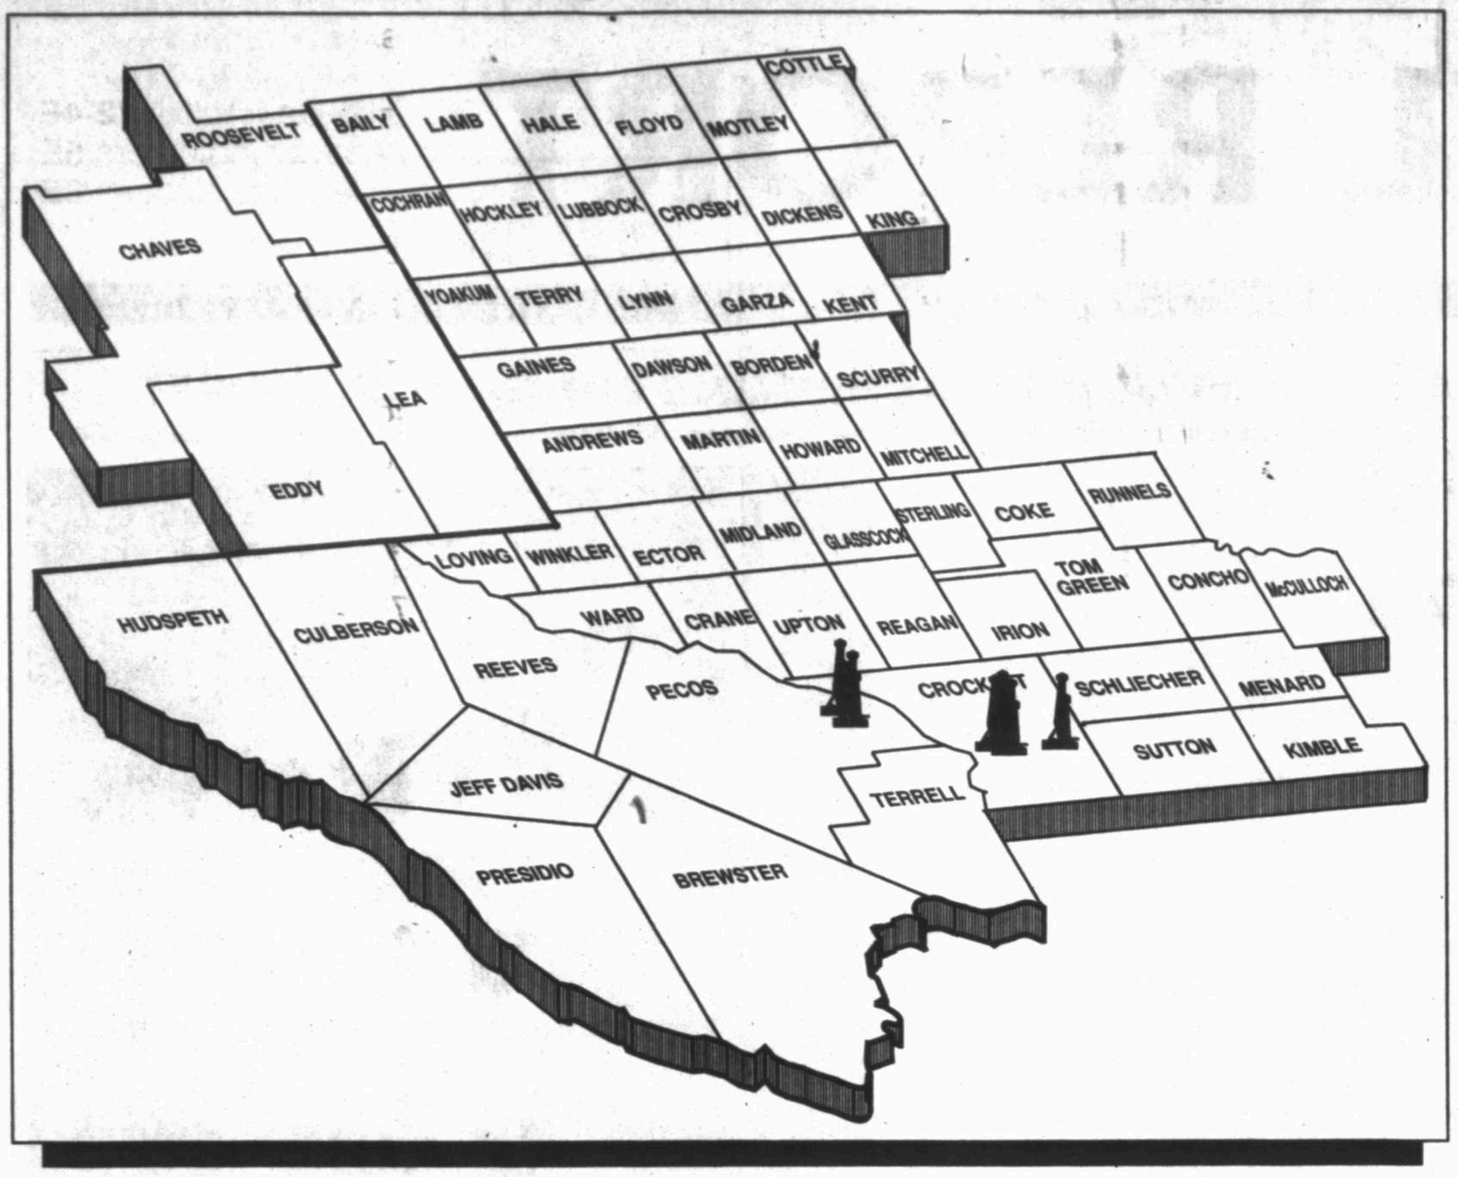

A gasoline tax is the simplest and fastest way to raise federal revenues, but that's all it does. It does nothing to address the problems of the oil industry, moreover it penalizes refiners by discouraging consumption.

An import fee, on the other hand, while more complicated and requiring more bureaucratic mechanisms would stabilize oil prices, restore confidence still suffering from price-shock uncertainty.

Clean-up perforations, remove scales, paraffins and debris with the PerfClean Tool's® powerful shock waves.

Restore the permeability and porosity of your wells by economically treating with the PerfClean Tool. It is a safe and efficient way of cleaning new perforations prior to other stimulation treatments, as well as formation testing, and removal of scales, paraffins and other debris. This lightweight tool has no moving parts and is easily transported to remote or offshore locations.

With the PerfClean® Tool...
• Remove scale from the perforation tunnel and/or wellbore pipe
• Remove skin damage caused by perforating operations and wellbore damage prior to formation testing and/or stimulation
• Lower treating pressures required for stimulation treatments
• Enhance matrix acidizing operations
• Increase effectiveness of chemical treatments
• Increase effectiveness of horizontal well stimulation treatments

Case History 12 '92
Gaines County, Texas: Wolfcamp Formation
Operator called to run the PerfClean tool on a well that had a history of scale and paraffin problems. Production was at 6 bbls of oil, 20 bbls of water/day prior to the PerfClean treatment. The treatment was performed by moving the PerfClean tool through the perforated interval while pumping 190 bbls of an acid/solvent blend at approx. 2.8 bbls/min. Immediately after completing the treatment the operator put the well back on pump.
Following the recovery of the treatment fluid the well produced 60 bbls of oil, 62 bbls of water/day. Forty-five days after the treatment the well stabilized at 100 BBLS OF OIL, 60 bbls of water/day. The operator stated that this single treatment substantially increased the overall production of the lease.

Refinery plans return to operation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso Refinery would obtain oil from a New York company and sell refined products back to the firm in a plan to bring the refinery back in operation in February.

Working with Phibro Energy of New York would be the first phase of El Paso Refinery's recovery from bankruptcy, said Ronald Ardt, vice president and value portfolio specialist for Harris Securities in Dallas.

Later this year the company would have to bring in new investors to pay off about $100 million in debt, he said. Mexico's national oil company, Pemex, is one company interested in a joint venture with El Paso Refinery.

"The company has too much debt and can't make a go of it under current market conditions," Ardt said in a story published in Friday's El Paso Herald Post.

Three top executives have taken 60 percent pay cuts, recommended by a court-appointed examiner. Ardt said company president David Jones' annual pay of $360,000 has been sliced to $140,000.

The pay cuts also affect five managers.

Give your employees an easy way to fill your company vehicles while you maintain cost control on what is charged and where.

Eddins-Walcher has 28 automated self-service fleet fuel centers in the Permian Basin, with more to b built. These Security Fuel Systems are open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

What your employees get is an Eddins-Walcher fuel card and a confidential security code number. They don't waste time standing in line to pay an attendant or sign a ticket. Just pump and go!! Your employees' time is valuable.

What you get is a detailed statement of fuel purchases by vehicle, a chronological, itemized list of purchases by date and time of day, location of fleet fuel centers, quantities and prices. As a control measure, you may require your employees to enter mileage and vehicle numbers. It is an efficient record for tax accounting.

Purchases can be limited to the type(s) fuel you specify. For gasoline, you can choose regular leaded, regular unleaded and premium unleaded -- some locations have plus unleaded. All diesel is premium quality with an additive to improve engine performance. Additional food and cigarette purchases cannot be charged. We sell fuel only! When trading with us, you are saved employee time and truck time. We have no convenience stores attached in which time can be wasted.

Eddins-Walcher makes it simple, convenient, accurate and informative.

J&B Trailers & Equipment Inc. Opens

Odessa based J & B Trailers & Equipment, Inc. is expanding their operations into the Lubbock market according to Jim Boyd, owner and general manager.

The new location will be the old Hobbs-Fruehauf facility located at 5619 Avenue A.

In April of 1990, the Fruehauf Trailer Corp. decided to close the Hobbs-Fruehauf Trailer Branch, which had been located for over 34 years at 5619 Avenue A and whose presence had served the trucking industry in Lubbock for over 50 years.

In May of this year Boyd had the opportunity to purchase the Fruehauf Trailer Operations branch located in Odessa, Texas and has been doing business as "J & B Trailers & Equipment, Inc." as a full-line Fruehauf dealer serving the Odessa-Midland area.

Several of the former Hobbs-Fruehauf employees are going to work for us, and our parts operation will be under the direction of Mauricio Trejo. Mauricio was the Parts Manager for Hobbs/Fruehauf for 5 years before the branch was closed.

Jim has over 24 years experience in the trailer and truck equipment business. He started with Hobbs Trailers in Lubbock in 1968 while attending Texas Tech. He held several positions, including shop foreman and truck equipment manager before transferring to the Fruehauf Branch in Odessa in 1990 when he accepted the position of branch manager.

Jim reports that the parts department in Lubbock was opened and in operation on December 15th and he plans to have a full service and sales staff in place by January 15th and eventually will employ a total of 20-25 full time employees.

We will specialize in a complete line of all trailer parts as well as the full line of Fruehauf Trailer parts. We will feature a complete selection of truck equipment including Mabar dump bodies, Harsh hydraulic hoists, and we are the authorized dealer for STAHL utility truck bodies.

As a full-line Fruehauf Dealer we will offer sales and service on any of the Fruehauf new trailer line as well as all types of used trailers.

We invite all our old friends and customers to give us a call or come by and visit and see if we can be of service to them.

Artificial Lift & Gas Compression

The Most Economical Methods of Artificial Lift and Gas Compression

Permian Production Equipment, Inc. is a local manufacturing and service company that has built its reputation on quality products and excellent service. PPEI has served the Permian Basin since 1978 and has expanded its sales and services with offices and distributors covering the domestic oil industry as well as the International markets. All PPEI products are manufactured at our plant located here in the Basin and are produced from the very best materials available with the highest concern for quality control.

PLUNGER LIFT

As most already know, the most efficient and most economical method of artificial lift is to allow the energy produced by the well to produce the well. During the well closed cycle, the plunger falls to the bottom or the tubing as the pressure builds in the well and the produced fluids are forced past the plunger into the tubing and gas is stored in the casing. When the well is automatically opened, the p0lunger acts as an interface between the fluid slug and the drive gas from the casing allowing the slug to be produced to the surface. The open and closed cycle repeats as the well dictates to produce the maximum production from each well.

Permian Production Equipment, Inc., with its new product development, has improved on seal capability between plunger and tubing wall to the maximum allowing wells that were once excluded as a plunger lift application to now be produced with the formation energy from the well.

PLUNGER LIFT APPLICATIONS

• UNLOADING GAS WELLS. PPEI is using plunger lift to unload gas wells where condensates and liquid restrict gas production.

• PRODUCING OIL WELLS. PPEI is using plunger lift to produce oil wells where the formation has sufficient gas to liquid ratio. When an oil well qualifies for plunger lift it makes the more expensive forms of artificial lift unnecessary. Our plunger lift has replaced rod pumping systems allowing them to be moved to higher liquid rate wells or to be sold to generate cash flow.

• REMOVING PARAFFIN. PPEI is using plunger lift as an inexpensive method of paraffin control in he tubing. When the plunger is cycled through the tubing, the tubing walls are wiped clear of paraffin build up. This eliminates lost production and expensive maintenance programs.

• CONTROLLING ALLOWABLES. PPEI is using Plunger lift with the latest technology in well head control to produce a well with the maximum allowables of both oil and gas by controlling the flow cycles with shut in on arrival and afterflow delay shut in cycles.

Permian Production Equipment, Inc. offers the very latest plunger lift technology with a ledge to give the very best service in the oil patch. Permian Production Equipment, Inc, has pledged to give our clients same day service or at the latest, next day service and we have the trained personnel to keep your well producing.

MEETINGS

Petroleum accountants set meeting

The Petroleum Accounting Society of the Permian Basin will meet Tuesday at the Petroleum Club.

A technical session on "Material Pricing" will be presented by Penny Parten, Bob Burgess and Lance Brock of Texaco Inc. and will begin at 5:30 p.m.

Social hour will begin at 6 p.m., followed by dinner. Guest speaker will be Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. His topic will be "Environmental Extremism: A Threat to the Country."

Complex reservoir study topic for WTGS

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Bob A. Hardage, who will speak on "Combining Seismic Imaging with Geological and Reservoir Engineering Data to Study Complex, Compartmented Reservoirs."

The Bureau of Economic Geology has conducted extensive field studies to analyze the internal structure of Frio gas reservoirs in South Texas. The primary objectives of these studies hae been to develop analytical techniques which result in reliable models that describe how a complex reservoir is segregated into compartments, to determine how reserves are distributed among these compartments and to formulate strategies which best exploit those reserves which are trapped in untapped compartments.

Extensive geologic, seismic, production history and pressure data were collected to pursue this research. This talk describes how these data were blended together to achieve the project objectives and indicate how the same approach used in these studies can be extended to study complex reservoirs in a wide range of depositional environments.

Harken takes second try at Bahrain

N.Y. Times News Service

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas — Harken Energy Corp. is about to play a second chancy hand of Middle East poker.

And once again, the billionaire Bass family of Fort Worth will furnish the chips for Harken's high-stakes game.

In mid-December, Harken began drilling a second exploratory well in the tiny Persian Gulf emirate of Bahrain.

Bass Enterprises Production Co. of Fort Worth, the Basses' oil and gas unit, is bankrolling the project.

Harken drilled its first well in Bahrain last year. It was a $13 million dry hole also funded by the Basses.

Harken is a little Grand Prairie company brimming with big ambitions. It hopes to find a huge cache of oil — maybe even a billion-plus barrels — in the subterranean reaches below Bahrain's Muharraq Island.

Harken is employing a 190-foot-tall drilling rig to probe for crude in the Jurassic Arab formation, at a depth of 7,100 feet, and in the Jurassic Fadhili formation, at 8,600 feet.

Those formations have steadily produced oil in the giant Awali Field some 12 miles away on Bahrain's main island. Awali, with estimated recoverable oil and natural gas reserves of more than 3 billion barrels, is one of the world's 100 largest fields.

Even-bigger fields lie within 75 miles of Harken's drill site just northeast of Bahrain's capital of Manama. Those nearby whoppers include the Ghawar Field of Saudi Arabia, the world's largest, with recoverable reserves estimated at 82 billion barrels of oil and 33 trillion cubic feet of gas.

Despite those neighboring hordes of hydrocarbons, Harken came up empty when drilling its first well in Bahrain. To heighten its chances of drilling a successful second well, Harken did extensive seismic testing and analysis designed to pinpoint the prime drilling location, says company Executive Vice President Monte Swetnam.

The first well, costing $13 million, was unusually expensive because it was exceptionally deep (14,000 feet) and required a $5.7 million dredging project in shallow offshore waters. The second well, expected to cost $4 million to $5 million to drill, is 15 miles southeast of the first one.

The second well is expected to take two months to drill and will require up to 30 additional days of testing before conclusive results are known, Swetnam says.

Harken's Bahrain project is a high-risk venture but offers the potential for huge rewards. As a result, Harken has attracted substantial investor interest even though it is a small company that hasn't turned an annual profit since 1988.

A big discovery in Bahrain could prove a "companymaker" for Harken, dramatically escalating its cash flow and stock price, analysts say. But another dry hole could cause Harken's stock to drop significantly.

The stock skyrocketed from $1.25 a share in late 1990 to $8.75 in the third quarter last year due to speculation about the Bahrain project. The stock has been trading markedly lower since Harken announced the dry hole in March.

Houston energy analyst Chuck Strain says continued speculation over Bahrain is still propping up Harken's stock considerably. Otherwise, it probably would be selling for less than $1, he says.

If Harken makes a big strike in Bahrain, the company's stock could zoom above $20 within two years, Strain said in a recent report.

Analysts and Harken executives say it is extremely difficult to guess the probability of the company hitting a gusher on its second well. But conventional logic dictates that the odds are strongly against such a bonanza. After all, the well is a "wildcat" in an area with no proven oil or gas reserves in the immediate vicinity. Historically, less than 15 percent of wildcats are successful.

Strain speculates that Harken's second well is perhaps "a 1-in-10 kind of shot."

Swetnam acknowledges that the well is probably, at best, what might normally be considered a "1-in-5 shot." But he talks bullishly.

"We have looked at the technical data, evaluated it and we think the prospect is strong enough to drill a $5 million well," he says. "Obviously, that's not a decision that is taken lightly. So we're optimistic."

If the second well is dry, Harken will have at least one more shot in Bahrain. Bass Enterprises has agreed to fund the drilling of at least three Harken wells and may finance six.

If Bass funded six wells, it would win the right to half of any production revenues that Harken would receive under its production-sharing agreement with the national oil company of Bahrain. The Basses will not be eligible to share in any production revenues unless they fund at least six wells.

Strain guesses that the pact calls for Bahrain to get 75 percent and Harken 25 percent of any production revenues resulting from drilling. Under that scenario, Harken and the Basses each would get 12.5 percent of the production revenues if the Basses bankrolled six wells.

Harken won't say specifically how the production pie would be sliced. But Swetnam concedes that Strain's numbers are "probably in the ballpark."

Of course, nobody will get any production revenues unless commercial quantities of oil or gas are discovered.

In a report last month, Strain said a Harken discovery "is likely to be at least 1 billion barrels of recoverable oil and could be several billion barrels," given the prevalence of huge fields in the Persian Gulf region.

A discovery of 2 billion barrels would boost Harken's asset value by $20.75 per share, Strain has estimated. He places the present break-up value of the company — representing what its existing assets would bring if sold — at $1.04 per share.

Swetnam won't speculate on the likely size of a Bahrain discovery. But he's thinking big.

"I can only say we're in a part of the world where billion-barrel fields are not at all uncommon," he says. "If we find oil ... I think it will be a large field, a field that will be significant to Harken and to the Bass family."

There are only about 250 billion-barrel fields worldwide, according to the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. Ten of the world's 20 largest fields are in the Persian Gulf region.

Billion-barrel discoveries are becoming increasingly rare. One of the most recent jumbo finds was that of British Petroleum in the Llanos Basin of Colombia. BP estimates its Cusiana discovery includes 1.5 billion barrels of oil and additional large volumes of natural gas. Some analysts say Cusiana may be a 3 billion-barrel field.

Triton Energy of Dallas, a small independent with a substantial stake in the Cusiana discovery, has seen its stock price make a nearly ninefold increase because of the find.

Many investors have put their money into Harken stock in hopes of a big, quick payoff that could be triggered by a discovery in Bahrain.

"I'm hoping Harken will do the same thing as Triton," says Howard Bottomley, a retired military officer living in Fort Worth.

A forest of masts of vintage drilling rigs at the Petroleum Museum clut ter a West Texas sunset as an unusual reminder of drilling times gone by.

DRILLING

Drilling is the heart of the oil business. Before there is gasoline, refinerys, pipelines, tanks and pumps that bring oil to the surface there is drilling.

While the equipment, techniques and knowledge have changed over the years, the concept of making a hole in the ground to find and extract hydrocarbons has remained unchanged, since the Chinese first used spring poles to drill wells which were cased with bamboo.

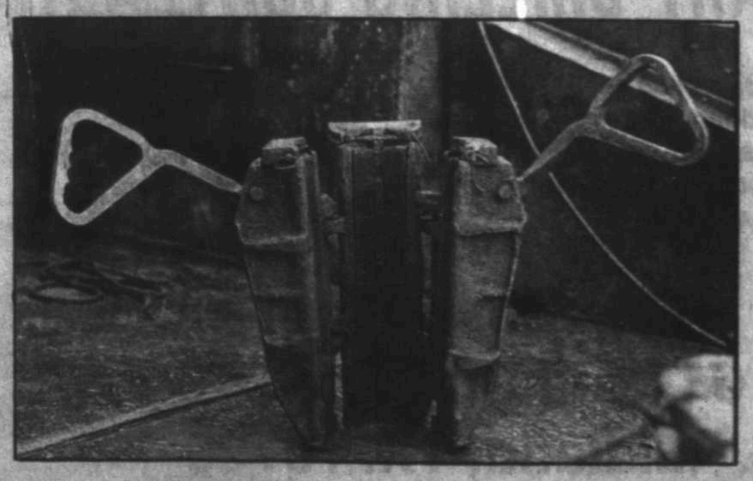

The pictures presented here present a colorful array of the people and equipment around the Permian Basin that comprise the drilling business.

two others. We are not sure what this means if any thing, but it could reflect a considerably pared down industry, considering that it takes three, four-man crews to keep a rig running. Also experts such as Ike Kerridge of Baker-Hughes note that each rig should directly support 30-35 jobs.

But at the same time, the number of operated reflects a slight growth in the business. Almost all of the contractors said they were either operating the same number of rigs as last year or slightly more. We counted 144 active rigs among the reporting companies, close to the 164 the Reed rig census reported last July. To be counted as an active rig in the Reed census a rig must have been working in the last 30 days. Unable to get an accurate total of Permain Basin rigs, we deferred to Reed, which reports 221 available rigs. This does not include stacked rigs. When stacked rigs are added to available rigs the actual number of workable rigs in the Permian Basin is probably around 280.

On footage drilled, it was a mixed report, some companies were up others were down, with the being FWA, which nearly doubled it footage from 2.5 million feet to four million feet. Many chose not to report footage.

Reported utilization rates varied from 30 percent to 80 percent, with the average utilization rate being about 66 percent. This is below the Reed Tool rig census which put utilization at 74 percent, but significantly better than the current national utilization rate which is 46 percent. The national utilization rate is calculated by taking 90 percent of the total rigs available (1,996) and dividing it by the current rig count (838).

■ Stacked rigs: The 17 respondents to our survey indicated they had a total of 43 rigs stacked that could be put back to work within 90 days. Adding to this the estimated number of rigs of those not responding, we calculate the number of stacked but usable, non-cannibalized rigs in the Permian Basin at somewhere between 60 and 75. Reed Tool placed the number of stacked rigs in the Basin at 57.

Nearly all the responding contractors said they could put their stacked rigs back to work within 90 days, but finding experienced crews would be the big problem. Only three of the 17 said they had enough manpower to put rigs back to work, while nearly all indicated they had sufficient drill pipe.

What is the status of the Permian Basin drilling industry? How many rigs are working? What kind are available? How many are stacked? How many could be made ready in short order? Would there be enough rigs, drill pipe and manpower to answer a sudden upsurge in drilling?

Those are all questions the Permian Basin Oil Report sought to answer with its first annual Drilling Contractor Survey. To get the answers a list of survey questions were sent to all the listed drilling contractors in the Permian Basin. Also were included Abilene area contractors who often work in the Basin.

Only 17 of the 51 companies who were sent survey questions responded, but fortunately among those responding were the most active drilling companies in the Basin. And while the results are not entirely conclusive, they do present a fairly accurate description of the industry. Here is essentially what we found.

■ Working rigs: First, we found a degree of correlation between longevity and success. Of the drilling contractors still working in the Permian Basin, there was an average age of 30 years service. FWA was the oldest with 55 years and Cleere Drilling with three years the youngest. However, Cleere had a long history as Caraway Drilling before it was purchased.

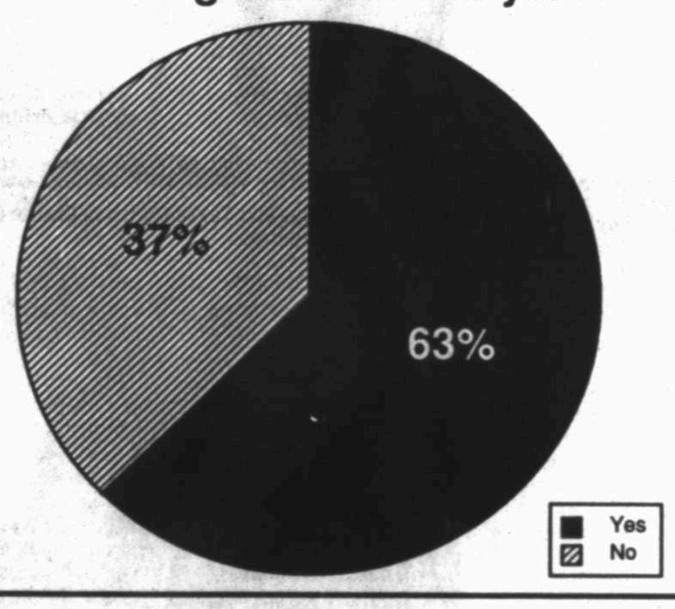

Comparing working rigs to employees, we found that the average number of employees per working rig was 13.3 employees, with the average varying from three for one company upwards to 22 for two others. We are not sure what this means if any thing, but it could reflect a considerably pared down industry, considering that it takes three, four-man crews to keep a rig running. Also experts such as Ike Kerridge of Baker-Hughes note that each rig should directly support 30-35 jobs.

Kerr-McGee president to retire

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Kerr-McGee Corp. President and Chief Operating Officer Jere W. McKenny, credited with leading the company's efforts in the North Sea, will retire Feb. 28, the company said Thursday.

Frank A. McPherson, chairman and chief executive officer, will assume McKenny's responsibilities as president until a successor can be named by the board of directors.

"Jere McKenny's abilities as an explorationist are matched by his talents as a businessman," McPherson said in a statement. "He made his reputation as a geologist and managed the company's exploration program for many years."

He said one of McKenny's major accomplishments was in Kerr-McGee's efforts in the North Sea.

DROP: Rig count drop has several factors

weather in Oklahoma and the end of Section 29 (tight sand) drilling credits for most of the rig count loss during the week ending January 15. Oklahoma accounted for 28 rigs and Texas 18 rigs in the the 65-rig drop.

But he also listed a seasonal beginning of the year drilling decline as another factor. He explained that the seasonal nature of the drilling business is caused by oil companies being slow to drill in beginning of the year until exploration and development drilling budgets are firm, and that year end spurts are caused when oil companies try to spend up their drilling budgets.

He noted that the rig count has risen in the first quarter of the year only three times in the 53 years of the survey.

The reasons for the decline were industry-wide and long-term fundamentals that could keep the drilling rig count down permanently. "A drop in oil prices and no surge in gas prices are the fundamentals the drilling industry fears most, because they could act as a trigger, causing a producer not to drill a well," Peterson said.

Commenting on the tightness of rig availability at year-end Peterson said, "I think we might have had more year-end drilling money in the industry than we anticipated, because it actually got a little tight at the end of the year." The tightness, he said, probably came not from a lack of equipment but a lack of qualified crews.

He thinks that oil companies next year may spread budgets out over the year instead of waiting until year-end, because of the tight rig situation.

But despite the seasonal nature of drilling, Peterson says most of last weeks decline probably came from the release of rigs who had been drilling under Section 29 tax credits. "Those credits ended very abruptly at the end of the year, and as soon as rigs are released from those wells there is no more work for them. Everyone knew that was a short-term situation."

Kerridge estimated that approximately 300 rigs were drilling on tight sand wells by the end of the year, and that about 200 of them will be released without further work.

The Baker-Hughes economist said he expects the decline to continue for the next few weeks as oil companies work out budgets, and as the final rigs drilling for tight sands credits are released.

PITTS: Fee best solution

(From 1E)

Stable oil prices would permit oil companies to accurately plan projects and predict returns, and this in turn would bring investment capital back into the industry.

With an import fee, Clinton could kill two birds with one tax by raising revenues and fixing the oil industry at the same time.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DRILLING: Contractors vote for incentives of the alternative minimum tax and increase demand for natural gas will both help increase drilling during the next year.

There were some votes for 3-D seismic prospect generation, from Tucker Drilling, Cleere and Grace, but Hurt & Associates made the comment: "3-D is great, but a basic increase in the product price will be needed to stimulate across the board drilling activity."

There was also optimism from FWA Drilling Co., Ziadril of Hobbs and others that new drilling technology could help the industry this year. Although the contractors did not specify a specific technology.

Robinson Drilling of Big Spring voted for a tax on foreign oil, as did Wes-Tex of Abilene, who also included an increase in percentage depletion as a stimulator.

Natural gas gaining some respect

NEW YORK (AP) — After more than a century of being viewed as a stepchild to crude oil, natural gas soon could become the fuel of the '90s.

Touted as clean, cheap and abundant, natural gas has captured the attention of the Clinton administration, which plans to encourage its use over imported oil. The new president's chief of staff is a former natural gas company chief and even the new Energy Secretary drives a natural gas-powered car.

"Expectations have always been great and those expectations have never been realized," said T. Boone Pickens, a Texas oilman and natural gas supplier. "I have seen us at this point for 30 years."

But concerns about future supplies lead some energy experts to describe natural gas as more of a "transition fuel" to tide the country over until renewable sources like solar or wind power are further developed.

Then there's the question of cost — as more gas is produced, drillers are likely to require higher prices to go after a product expected to become increasingly less accessible over the next few decades.

And although natural gas burns cleaner than oil or coal, environmental preservation could become an issue as drillers seek access to vast amounts of gas in the outer continental shelf, wildlife areas and marine sanctuaries, areas currently off-limits to drilling.

For now, though, natural gas proponents frequently point to its comparatively lower price.

For example, it costs about $580 a year to heat a mid-size house in a temperate climate, based on government figures and current market prices. It would cost more than $800 to heat that same house with oil, by far the most common method for home heating in the United States, according to Fueloil & Oil Heat, a trade publication.

"There aren't many people who will pay to change the situation for environmental conerns ... Natural gas is cheaper," Pickens said in a recent interview. "There's so much room between today's natural gas price and gasoline."

A recent Department of Energy report, though, indicated natural gas prices would certainly rise in the future.

The study, compiled over two years by the department's advisory National Petroleum Council, estimated, for example, wholesale prices would have to double to $3.50 per 1,000 cubic feet before it would be worth producers' time and money to retrieve 64 percent of the country's gas.

Some of the gas would have to be recovered from between coal seams through horizontal drilling and other unconventional methods that are time-consuming and more expensive.

The wholesale price of natural gas averaged $1.75 per 1,000 cubic feet last year. Retail prices averaged around $5.80 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Wholesale oil prices right now average around $18 per barrel, or the energy equivalent of $3 per 1,000 cubic feet of wholesale natural gas.

The Energy Department study estimates there are 1.3 quadrillion cubic feet of natural gas in the continental United States. The broad estimate assumes drilling technology continues advancing through 2010.

But even if Americans don't increase their consumption of gas, the domestic supply would run out in 65 years, analysts say.

Importing gas from anywhere other than Canada would mean huge transportation costs. To be shipped by tanker, gas has to be cooled to 256 degrees below zero until it turns to liquid.

Japan, which imports nearly all its natural gas as liquid, pays about $4 per 1,000 cubic feet to buy liquified natural gas from Indonesia. Prices likely wouldn't rise high enough to justify transporting gas from Alaska's oil fields, which are also rich in natural gas, the National Petroleum Council said.

About a third of the world's reserves of natural gas is in the Middle East; about 4 percent is in the United States.

U.S. suppliers have been anxiously awaiting an increase in natural gas usage for some time now.

Years of low prices, slack demand and plentiful supply have meant bad times for many natural gas companies, some of which have gone bankrupt over the years.

Since the late 1970s, the government had discouraged the use of natural gas, which it considered to be in short supply. Instead, it gave incentives for drillers to look for unconventional energy sources. The result was natural gas demand dropped off sharply, but supplies rose as more gas was found.

Clinton has been thin on specifics on how to emphasize natural gas use, and any new proposals would have to clear Congress. But with Thomas F. McLarty, former chief of natural gas producer and distributor Arkla Inc. and Hazel O'Leary, a former executive at Northern States Power Company in Minnesotal, chosen for White House chief of staff and energy secretary, respectively, the industry hopes to be heard in Washington.

New markets give the industry its best prospects in years.

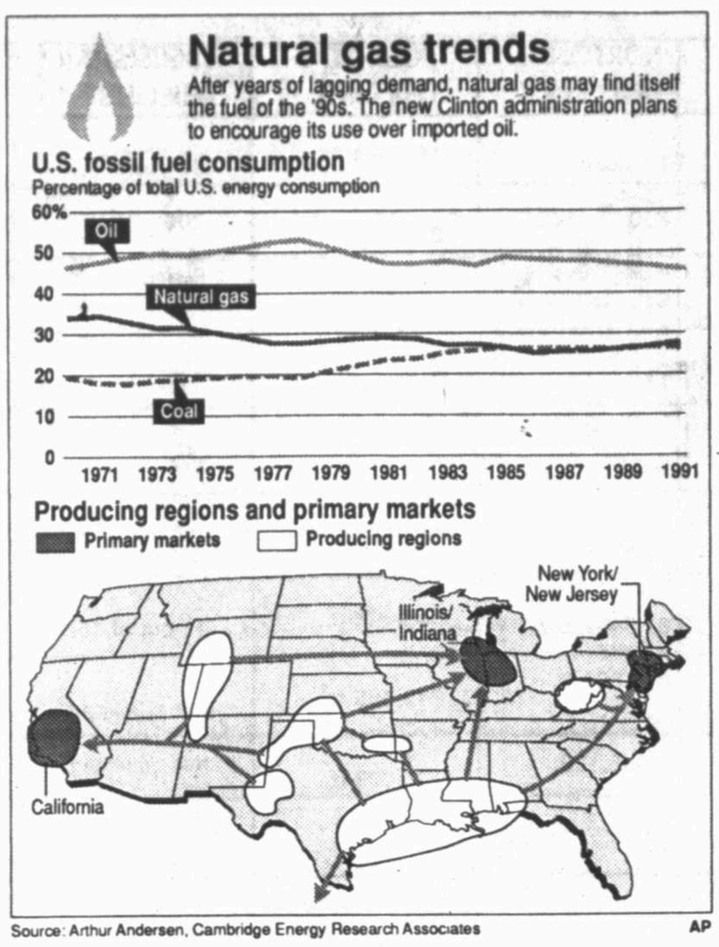

Pickens, with more than a trillion cubic feet of natural gas to sell, has been driving around the country in his natural-gas powered Cadillac recruiting customers. He's offering to convert commercial and government auto fleets to natural gas and install the refueling facilities if they promise to buy his gas at gasoline prices for three years.

Pickens predicts 10 percent of the nation's automobiles will run on natural gas by the end of the decade.

Amoco Corp., which hold's the largest reserves of natural gas in the country, more than 11 trillion cubic feet, has installed compressed natural gas pumps at service stations.

Natural gas utilities also have set up refueling pumps to get gas to motorists and the auto companies have natural gas test vehicles, but haven't begun marketing the autos because of the lack of refueling stations.

Electric utilities also are building new generators that run on natural gas and natural gas air conditioners now are available for industrial and commercial users.

Texaco reports lower profits for 1992

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. said its fourth-quarter earnings fell 3.5 percent, while profits for all of 1992 were down sharply due to the soft market for refined petroleum products worldwide.

The results were in line with expectations and reflected problems throughout the oil industry. Vigorous cost-cutting measures by the oil company helped prevent a more precipitous earnings drop, analysts said.

Texaco earned $313 million, or $1.11 per share, for the last three months of 1992, on revenue of $9.7 billion. That compared with earnings of $324 million, or $1.15 per share, on revenue of $9.76 billion for the same period in 1991.

For all of 1992, Texaco earned $712 million, or $2.37 per share, on revenue of $37.66 billion, compared with earnings of $1.29 billion, or $4.61 per share, on revenue of $38.32 billion for 1991.

Texaco's earnings for the year reflected special charges totaling $156 million, including $34 million in property damage from a fire at its Los Angeles refinery and from Hurricaine Andrew and $58 million to pay for severance and other costs of staff reductions.

The company also set aside $64 million, partly to account for a drop in value of some of its assets.

Chief executive James W. Kinnear, said profits were hurt by weak crude prices early in the year, and depressed markets worldwide for refined oil products throughout 1992 due to the recession. However, stronger fourth-quarter demand for natural gas in the U.S. partially offset those negative trends, he said.

"In light of this difficult business environment, we are continuing to place special emphasis on improving productivity, maintaining operational competitiveness and stregnthening our financial position," Kinnear said in a statement from the company's headquarters in White Plains, N.Y.

Kinnear said Texaco saved $500 million in 1992 through reductions in operating and overhead expenses.

The company realized one-time gains of $40 million due to stock sales and a tax refund last year. Earnings in 1991 were boosted by $224 million in tax refunds.

Analysts said the earnings report was in line with expectations.

"Performance was flat with last year," said Eugene L. Nowack, senior oil analyst at Dean Witter. "We were not expecting Texaco to show any improvement. It's a difficult environment for the whole industry, Texaco isn't doing any better or worse."

Nowack noted that Texaco, which was especially hampered by losses in its chemicals and overseas refining businesses, had done a "superb job in reducing costs" throughout its operations, "otherwise earnings would have deteriorated even further."

ANR, Ontario make gas deal

Staff report

The Coastal Corp. has announced that its subsidiary, ANR Pipeline Co., and Interprovincial Pipe Line System Inc. have reached an agreement with The Consumers' Gas Co. Ltd. of Ontario concerning the proposed InterCoastal Pipe Line, which is planned to be in service by November 1994.

The InterCoastal project is expected to be constructed in two phases. Phase I would involve converting approximately 150 miles of existing pipeline, which is primarily 20 inches in diameter, from oil to natural gas service. The segment planned to be converted originates in Sarnia, Ontario and would extend to a proposed tie-in near Toronto with Consumers' Gas.

In addition, Phase I would require the construction of 11.5 miles of new pipeline.

BRIEFS

Energas names vice president

LUBBOCK — Energas Co. has announced that John H. Ray has been named to the position of executive vice president.

Ray previously was president of Trans Louisiana Gas Company, a sister company of Energas. He joined the company in 1955, and has served in various operations positions in Energas Company. A native of Amarillo, Texas, Ray attended both Amarillo College and Wayland Baptist University. He will be responsible for a number of administrative and marketing functions.

Joint natural gas venture planned

HOUSTON — Brooklyn Interstate Natural Gas Corporation (BRING), a Houston-based subsidiary of Brooklyn Union Gas, and JMC Fuel Services, a subsidiary of J. Makowski Company (JMC) of Boston, have signed a joint venture to market natural gas throughout the Northeast.

JMC plans to market natural gas services on BRING's behalf to gas distributors, electric generators and industrial customers, and BRING will provide the supply and operational support for the marketing initiative.

Triton Energy names new CEO

DALLAS (AP) — Triton Energy Corp. president Thomas G. Finck became chief executive officer on Jan. 1, the company said.

Finck, 46, was hired as president and chief operating officer of the company last August. He replaces William I. Lee, 65, who is retiring but will remain chairman of Triton's board and executive committee.

Finck in 1991 formed American Energy Group, an independent exploration and production company. Before that, he was president and chief executive of Ensign Oil and Gas Inc. and led the petroleum engineering and economic evaluation group of Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

Triton has oil and gas interests in 10 countries. The company's stake in successful wildcat drilling in Colombia has spurred interest among investors.

Elizabeth and Alton Hatfield are president and secretary, respectively, of the United Ostomy Association's Midland/Odessa chapter #590.

REBORN FROM THE ASHES OF DISEASE

Surgical procedures, known as ostomies, bring life to as many as 90,000 a year

It's a life-saving surgery that may be performed as many as 90,000 times this year.

It has helped victims of cancer, birth defects or trauma to live more normal and pain-free lives.

It has been estimated that one in every 200 people, including athletes and world leaders, has one or will have one sometime in his or her lifetime.

"It" is an ostomy.

But, as ostomate Donald H. Fowler wrote, "You don't hear much about our problems. It's acceptable to talk about your triple bypass, arthritis or high blood pressure, but somehow diseases of the small and large intestine don't make for proper dinner conversation." ("More Than a Million," winter 1992 issue of Ostomy Quarterly magazine.)

According to June McNatt, member and newsletter editor for Midland/Odessa chapter #590 of United Ostomy Association (UOA), "An ostomy is the result of surgery performed to provide an alternative means of elimination of body wastes when normal function is impaired."

In other words, an ostomy is a surgically-established opening in the abdomen, called a stoma, designed for the elimination of body wastes when the body's own natural functions have been affected in some way. People who have ostomies wear a pouch on the outside of the abdomen to catch the body's waste products.

"Anybody can have an ostomy," Mrs. McNatt said. Causes can be "birth defects, illnesses, trauma — it's no respecter of persons."

Alton Hatfield, secretary of chapter #590, defined the three most common types of ostomies:

"Colostomy is removal of part or all of the colon because of disease (like cancer) or a defect.

"Ileostomy is removal of all of the colon ... You don't have anything left but the small intestine. It's caused by cancer or some other disease.

"Urostomy is removal of the bladder because of disease or defect."

PEOPLE WITH OSTOMIES come in all ages and sizes, he said. "It hits all ages. In North America there are 1,500,000 ostomates (people who have ostomies), with about 1 million in the U.S. They do quite a bit of surgery every year in that line."

People who face ostomy surgery have fears and questions about how their lives will be changed. Members of UOA's chapter #590 are ready to help.

Paul Wecker, a member of chapter #590 since it was organized in 1979, is one of the group's Certified Visitors who helps new patients by visiting them before or after their surgery and answering any questions they may have about lifestyle changes.

"People facing this kind of surgery are our concern," Wecker said. "It is a difficult surgery with a long convalescence, but you can make it.

"It didn't change my life to that extent," he said, but other patients who fear it will be life-changing "have to convince themselves after the surgery."

Wecker said he enjoys such physical activities as swimming, playing tennis and dancing, and only watches his diet in a common-sense, healthy sort of way. "I try not to build up my cholesterol and I try to drink a lot of juice for health purposes."

HE ALSO HAS MADE several long trips with only "minor limitations," including four or five cruises and a trip to Australia.

Hatfield agreed that having an ostomy doesn't limit one's activities to any great extent. "I do what I want, travel where I want," he said. "I can play golf; I do a lot of walking."

Some ostomates do have to go through some dietary changes, he said, but many do not. "Some people have to watch their diets carefully. I do (watch his diet), to a certain extent." Although he is able to enjoy most of his favorite foods, "if I go out and eat a lot of enchiladas and drink a beer," he has to take extra care in cleaning his stoma. "Most will find out what will do it to them" and adjust their diets and/or stoma care accordingly.

Having an ostomy does not limit a person's activities "if your health is good otherwise," said Mrs. McNatt. "I've had my ileostomy since 1968. I've been to Europe several times; we go tubing at New Braunfels; my husband and I go to water aerobics at the Y. It's too bad so many people think they will be limited in their lifestyles."

As for diet, "for the most part, there is no restriction on diet," she said. For those with ileostomies, "I think possibly, since they have no colon at all, an overabundance of fibrous foods could give you intestinal blockage. For most, there's no problem."

But an ostomy is major surgery and recovery time also means a certain amount of rehabilitation — including learning how to live with a new way of going to the bathroom.

Lois Farris, an enterostomal therapist with Memorial Hospital and Medical Center in Midland, is a professional in the area who new ostomates turn to for help. "I am the person who rehabilitates them," she said, "who teaches them how to live with the stoma. They have to make some lifestyle adjustments, especially if they work. I help them choose the pouch adequate to their needs."

The time of this adjustment varies from person to person, Ms. Farris said. "They have a different waste opening; they have to go to the bathroom in a different way." Adjustments in food and clothing may be needed, and those with ileostomies "have to be a little more conscious of their diet — no nuts or seeds, and they need to drink more fluids."

Mrs. McNatt, who is one of the co-founders of the area chapter of UOA, said, "People tend to do better when they have the support of other ostomates.

"A lot of people have at attitude of the stigma that goes with it, and don't want anyone to know they have one (ostomy)."

Embarrassment and fear of discrimination also can lead many ostomates to hide their condition, but the chapter can help with those fears too, Mrs. McNatt added. "One of the purposes of the organization is to educate the general public and show that ostomates should not be discriminated against in jobs or insurance, because they can do anything."

UOA IS DESIGNED TO help and support not only people with ostomies, but also their friends and relatives. Through the group, they can learn how other people handle living with ostomies and how their lives can remain active. The organization, which has chapters all over the country, will host its 31st annual UOA Conference Aug. 4-7 in San Diego. Activities have been planned for singles, families and children. And World Ostomy Day will be celebrated Oct. 2, Hatfield said.

Changes in appliances, care and the surgery itself in the last several years have helped improve life with an ostomy, said Mrs. McNatt. And people facing ostomy surgery can be helped through their fears by keeping a positive attitude, she said.

"So many people are so worried about having the surgery, they forget it is lifesaving surgery and doesn't affect your lifestyle."

For more information on the Midland/Odessa chapter of UOA, call 570-8822.

The legend of the Phoenix rising from the ashes is an ancient tale of rebirth. This symbol (shown above in shaded color) was chosen in 1966 by the United Ostomy Association's board of directors to represent the association. People with ostomies often emotionally travel from despair and disease through fear of disability and death to feelings of hope, life and health.

June and Jim McNatt have found comfort in each other and through the ostomy support group and its newsletter.

Gallery 1114 hosts artists' reception

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Gallery 1114, a contemporary artists' co-operative, hosted a wine and cheese reception last weekend at its location on North Big Spring Street to honor the artists, whose works are currently on exhibit.

McKnight-Harrison

Entitled "Mixed Metaphors," the exhibit features the paintings of Linda Murray of Abilene, the ceramics of David Hunt of Durango, Colo., and the photographs of Timothy Tracz of Sherman.

Linda's work addresses the urban scene, while that of David, who has lived in the Southwest for more than 20 years and describes himself as a "rural person," has a quieter focus. Timothy has traveled the world in his quest for photos that show the contrast of the naive and sophisticated, the rural and the urban.

Their works will be on exhibit through Feb. 25. The gallery is open Thursday through Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. or by appointment, according to Travis Beckham, president of the co-op.

A few of those seen at the exhibit's opening were Dr. Jim Huddleston, and his wife, Sue Smith; the Rev. Clare Petersberger, Barbara and Frank Schatz, Ramah and Chris Bosecker, Rosa and John Clark, Carol Bailey and Larry Griffin.

Cindy and Peter Botes hosted a preview party at their home the night prior to the gallery reception for Mr. Hunt, a longtime friend. Cindy is one of his former students.

AS ALWAYS, the annual President's Ball at Midland Country Club was one of the club's most outstanding parties of the year.

Members and guests were greeted by the honoree, retiring board president Steve Lindgren and his wife, Denise, in the foyer as they arrived.

The "black tie" affair featured Gentle Persuasion playing Big Band hits as well as country favorites, from eight o'clock until midnight. Hors d'oeuvres and cocktails were served throughout the evening, and at ten o'clock, the assemblage enjoyed a breakfast buffet.

In keeping with the Presidential inauguration, a patriotic theme of red, white and blue was carried out in the decorations.

Among those spotted in the crowd were incoming president Dr. Charles Gaines and his wife, Lavera; Louise and Dr. Garland Lang, Betty Rae and Paul Davis, Sara and Bill St. Clair, Paula and Gary Douglas, Jeanne and Bill Worley and Fran and Grant Billingsley.

TO BENEFIT the Midland-Lee Youth Centers, a family dance was held last weekend at Midland Center. Music for the "boot scootin' " event was provided by Jody Nix and his band.

The western style decorations were by Van Stavern Interiors, Manning's Garden Center and Johnny Carter.

Among those turning out for the fun affair were Beverly and Lloyd Lawson, Teresa and Bill Woodruff and family, Debbie and Sam Bakke and family, Jennifer and Dan Colwell, Jane and Dennis Rambo and family and Lottie and Ken Arnold.

Brenda (Mrs. Jesse) Faught, president of the Youth Centers board, was assisted by the board of directors in making arrangements.

THE MIDLAND WOMAN'S CLUB is off and running with a full schedule of events for 1993. Next up and open to the public is its annual Mexican Fiesta, slated for this Friday evening at the clubhouse in Hogan Park.

Dinner will be served from six to seven o'clock, and the Midland Community Theatre Singers will provide entertainment. For reservations or ticket information, interested persons may contact the club at 684-6811 or ways and means chairman Madge (Mrs. Porter) Wallis at 682-3907.

Magazine: Pill has alternate use

By Michael MacCambridge
N.Y. Times News Service

In the frenetic, cluttered and attention-span-sapping world of the '90s, magazine readers seek their favorite titles to perpetuate something of an illusion: The idea that even in this era, where information has exploded at an almost exponential rate, we can still presume to be "well-informed."

The best magazines fulfill their mission not just by staying on top of the news that their readers already care about but by, occasionally, surprising them with revelations in investigative reporting or research.

One a recent Sunday morning, a lot of Americans who consider themselves at least nominally well-informed (including this one), were roused from their complacency. The jolt came in the Jan. 10 issue of the "New York Times Magazine," in Jan Hoffman's illuminating cover story on "The Morning-After Pill: A Well-Kept Secret."

Hoffman's piece wasn't about the ongoing furor over the French-manufactured abortifacient pill RU-486. She was writing, instead, of the little-known fact "that a similar treatment has been available here (in the U.S.) for at least 15 years."

The treatment, discovered by a team of Canadian and Dutch doctors, requires a woman to take two tablets of a birth-control pill called Ovral (or any of its equivalents) within 72 hours of having sex, and two more tablets 12 hours later. Doing so reduces the possibility of pregnancy to between zero and 8 percent, depending on when the women had intercourse and took the pills.

THE TREATMENT has been a staple of university health centers (Cindy Smith, head nurse at the University of Texas health center, is interviewed for the piece) since its discovery in the 1970s, and has been routinely prescribed to rape victims at emergency rooms for the past decade.

"Ovral combines an estrogen (ethinyl estradiol) and a progestin (norgestrel)," writes Hoffman. "The pills have a Rube-Goldberg-like effect, tripping up signals along the normal route of messages governing hormone release: The egg may not be released in time, the coating of the egg may resist the sperm's penetration or the uterine lining may not be synchronized for implantation. The egg, fertilized or not, will be sloughed off when the woman menstruates."

While this doesn't render irrelevent the battle over RU-486 (whose side effects are fewer, failure rate nearly nonexistent and method simpler, notes Hoffman), it certainly throws it into a new light. RU-486 is effective up to nine weeks after pregnancy, while the use of the morning-after pill is much more limited, to three days after sexual contact.

BUT IN A nation that has been splitting hairs over trimesters, "silent screams" and the viability of the fetus, why isn't the morning-after pill better known? Part of it has to do with the bloated, strangulating bureaucracy that has grown around the drug-approval process (and has recently come to light with patients clamoring for speedy approval of drugs to fight AIDS). "Once a drug has been approved for one purpose — penicillin is a common example — doctors may legally prescribe it for others," Hoffman writes. "But a drug company cannot promote, advertise or label it for those secondary purposes."

Lacking FDA approval, the treatment cannot be dispensed in any of the 4,000 federally funded Title X clinics, whose patients are usually poor and frequently both young and unwed.

"The conundrum of the morning-after pill says something about who can and cannot get certain kinds of birth control in the United States, about the omnipresent threat of product-liability suits and the financial disincentives for getting FDA approval," writes Hoffman. "And, with its strange, contorted name, postcoital contraception opens the door on a debate most Americans would rather not have. If it does not exactly take a stand on the murky, nettlesome question of when life begins, it does take one on when life, and pregnancy, do not. 'It's not contraception or abortion,' remarks one gynecologist who works in a hospital clinic. 'It's in the gray area — so we call it interception.'"

To her credit, Hoffman isn't merely taking an advocacy position to raise awareness of the treatment. She candidly notes the pill's troubling side effects in some women (temporary breast tenderness, nausea and vomiting), many physicians' leeriness about prescribing such a high dosage of hormones and the troubling question of defining where the procedure takes place in the gray area between contraception and abortion.

HOFFMAN'S PIECE is not only well-written and timely, it's the sort of article that promises to exert a powerful influence over future coverage. The procedure has been written about in the national press before ("Glamour," to name one title, has touched on it in the past), but it is certainly not well-known as a birth-control option.

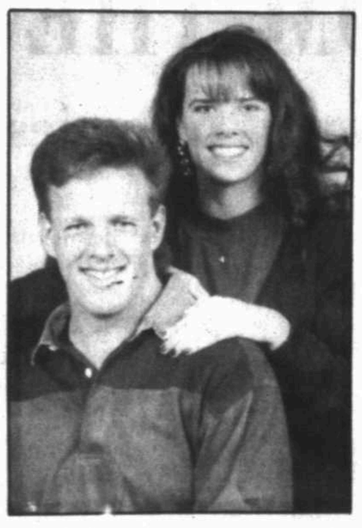

Sadly, the article underscores a failing that afflicts virtually all areas of the news media. It's the habit of taking the hottest topic in any area and treating it like it's the only topic.

Umbrellas have long, varied history

NEW YORK (AP) — Umbrellas, which have been around for centuries, began as a protection against the sun rather than rain. In ancient Egypt and Assyria, slaves held sunshades or ornate oparasols over their masters. In the Greek and Roman empires, only women carried umbrellas as men thought them effeminate. In England, the umbrella's usefulness during heavy rainfalls was recognized by both sexes during the early 1700s. They have been widely used there ever since.

Homeowners pay high energy costs

NEW YORK (AP) — The average American homeowner will spend $1,100 this year in energy costs, according to the U.S. Department of Energy, which adds that this can be a homeowner's highest household expense after mortgage payments.

Since both major presidential candidates supported conservation, renewable energy sources and more efficient technologies, "homeowners could be the real winners after this election," says Frank Glover, vice president of Owens-Corning.

An analysis of their energy platforms by the building material manufacturer found both President Bush and Gov. Clinton will push for decreases in utility regulations. The candidates' aim is to help make energy conservation more feasible and profitable for utilities and homeowners, according to the study.

Homeowners can help by adopting their own energy policy, the company notes. Begin by insulating your home with the right fiber glass insulation to provide maximum energy efficiency and year-round comfort at minimal expense, Glover suggests.

AT WIT'S END

Shopping is only part , not all, of consumer's life — Really!

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

I am not a compulsive shopper! I don't care what you've heard about my asking a car wash operator if he had gift wrapping. OK, so once I tried to give a credit card to a Masai woman in the bush just outside Nairobi for a beaded necklace she was wearing, but I didn't go crazy when it didn't happen.

My husband thinks I'm sick. He said the first sign of obsession is people who shop alone. I shop by myself because most of my friends are nomads. We start out shopping together and having a nice conversation, and the next thing I know I'm talking to myself. My mother has a trick of dropping off and going into another store without telling me. Since she's short enough to hide behind a cardboard box, I spend hours looking for her.

"You have gone beyond buying things you need," my husband pushed. "You buy to be buying." No one said that about Nancy Reagan when she picked out all the expensive china for the White House. What? They didn't have a set of dishes that matched already? The point is maybe I don't need something I buy that very day, but sooner or later I'll need it. I just don't know when.

Frankly, I'm sick of the myth that women are the only ones who shop till they drop. Sure, we have some world-class shoppers such as Leona Helmsley, Jackie Onassis and Imelda Marcos. But why doesn't anyone mention the late Andy Warhol, who decorated his apartment in early garage sale, or Elvis, who bought cars the way most men buy neckties? Let men wear three-inch heels and they'd drop too. Someone even accused Liz Taylor of having the shopper's sickness. I should be that sick and look that good!

Frankly, I can stop shopping any time I want. All I have to do is try something on before I buy it and look at myself in a full-length mirror. I do not wish to do this.

I find that anymore I like to hang out with my own — women who can see SALE signs without their glasses through a brick building. There is a euphoria about finding an item marked 50 percent off that I never got from baking bread or raising children. It's hard to explain. I've shopped with women who drag around for seven hours and end up buying something practical like a spool of thread and a package of dish towels. That's not living.

As I told my husband, "Shopping gets my mind off my problems."

He waved the list of charges in front of me. "You wouldn't have those problems if you didn't shop so much."

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

New parents learn to deal with 'sick baby trap'

Associated Press

Jean Marzollo, author of numerous books and articles on parenting, emphasizes an ounce of prevention in "Your Maternity Leave" (New York: Poseidon Press, $8.95). She has this to say about the "sick-baby trap:"

You know you've fallen into this trap if you are completely thrown each time your baby gets sick. Your baby will get sick, and this inevitability will cause conflicts with your work. Have a backup plan to cope with such emergencies.

Your backup plan should involve your whole baby care team. Perhaps you or your husband could stay home, or alternate days staying home. Perhaps you could do some work while you're home. It's a good idea to always have some "sick baby" work on hand — that is, a project that you can't get to now but will if you ever have to stay home for a day or two.

Ask your baby sitter if she's willing to care for a sick baby. Ask your day care center about their policies for sick babies. Check out the resources in your community. Ask your pediatrician if there's private or public sick-child day care available in your area. Find out about private baby sitters and nurses who might come to your home to care for a sick baby.

Don't feel guilty as a worker when you have a work/sick-baby conflict. Such problems are a part of life, as are snow-day/work conflicts and transportation-strike/work conflicts. Deal with the conflict in a businesslike manner.

By setting up the possibility of your working while you stay home with a sick child, you may not have to take a sick day or a personal day. You might even want to have a fax machine in your home so that you can wire paperwork back and forth. It's also possible that workers could come to your home to work if your baby doesn't need constant care and isn't contagious.

New books gives young readers view of presidential life

By Sally Williams Cook
Associated Press

The arrival of a new administration brings renewed interest in Washington, D.C., the White House and the president. Several books for young readers on these subjects show how the federal government works.

■ "Bill Clinton and Al Gore: The Story of Our Nation's Leaders"

Kate McMullan contrasts the diverse backgrounds of Bill Clinton and Al Gore in her 108-page biography for ages 9 and up. "Bill Clinton and Al Gore: The Story of Our Nation's Leaders" (Dell Yearling, $3.50) chronicles Clinton's bittersweet childhood, youth and adulthood with alternating chapters about Gore's childhood as the son of Sen. Al Gore.

Written in a lively style, McMullan's biography captures the flavor of the "baby boom era" — while Clinton and Gore emerge as highly competent — yet complex — human beings. Eight pages of black-and-white photographs and a glossary at the end of the book provide additional resources.

■ "Our President: Bill Clinton"

For younger children, "Our President: Bill Clinton" by Shelley Bedick (Scholastic, $2.50) introduces Clinton in simple, straightforward language. Beginning readers will enjoy the color photographs opposite or above each of the 32 pages. Some of Clinton's campaign promises — such as making sure children and grownups get the health care they need — are described. The relationship between the Clintons and their daughter Chelsea is sweetly portrayed.

■ "Clinton Portrait of a Victory"

This book (Warner, $19.95) provides a behind-the-scenes glimpse of the candidate's highs and lows in his quest for the presidency. Kids ages 10 and up will revel in more than 125 black-and-white photographs of Clinton on the campaign trail.

Photojournalist P.F. Bentley, on special assignment for Time magazine, was allowed complete access to the Clinton campaign. Some of the more compelling photographs are Clinton fighting to control his emotions after he is welcomed on a return visit to New Hampshire, Clinton meeting with Jesse Jackson and Hillary and Bill Clinton holding hands on a late-night flight home.

Contributions by award-winning writers Roger Rosenblatt and Michael Kramer make this a thought-provoking diary of a tough campaign.

■ "How the White House Really Works"

Although a million people visit the White House yearly, few people see the full-time window washer, the third-floor solarium and greenhouse, or the indoor bowling alley. "How the White House Really Works" by George Sullian (Scholastic, $3.95) provides an entertaining account of life and work inside the Executive Mansion.

■ "City! Washington, D.C."

Our nation's capital comes to life in "City! Washington, D.C." by Shirley Climo, with photographs by George Ancona (Macmillan $16.95). In this third volume of City! series following New York and San Francisco, readers ages 8 through 12 are taken on a fun-filled tour of Washington.

■ "A Capital, Capital City 1790-1814"

For older readers looking for a more in-depth account of the very first years of Washington, D.C., "A Capital, Capital City 1790-1814" by Suzanne Hilton (Macmillan, $14.95) fits the bill. The hardships of the first 24 years are depicted in this 149-page account complete with black-and-white illustrations. Among the hardships: congressmen were forced to share rooms in crowded boardinghouses, residents endured outbreaks of malaria and other fevers, and the city was attacked by the British.

DEAR ABBY

Embers smolder when old flames meet anew

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand another "lost love" story like the one about the woman and her American airman? (She signed her letter with the name of a popular song of the '40s, "It's Been a Long, Long Time.")

Van Buren

She asked if she should try to locate her old love whom she had not seen since World War II. It was about the same time I was involved in a very intense, but brief, relationship. It ended because I had a commitment that had to take precedence over our love.

For the next 40 years, my old love was never very far from my mind, even though I had no idea whether he was dead or alive.

Then, recently, in an unbelievable stroke of fate, we met face to face, and all the intensity of our feelings for each other came flooding back!

Sounds like a happy ending, right? Wrong! We are still committed to others. Nevertheless, we are both aware that the old flame never went out completely.

No city or state, please. Sign me with the name of another popular song of that era ... "THAT OLD FEELING"

DEAR OLD FEELING: This is the stuff of which dreams (and nightmares) are made. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Bill" and I have been married for more than 40 years. About two years ago, he received a long-distance telephone call at home. It was a voice from out of the past! It seems a woman he had known had been recently widowed and was calling to inquire about Bill's marital status — maybe hoping he was also alone, and they could take up where they had left off many years ago. Can you imagine the nerve?

Bill was practically tongue-tied, but he told her politely that he had been very much married for a good many years.

I realize that times have changed, and women are much more aggressive these days and anything goes, but calling a man at his home not knowing the circumstances is a little too much, don't you think? — UPSET ON LONG ISLAND

DEAR UPSET: Don't be upset — the poor woman probably was alone and reminiscing. You can't blame a woman for inquiring. Nothing ventured, nothing gained.

DEAR ABBY: Your "Operation Abby" is a big hit here in Korea. I have picked up several letters that your readers have sent, and I am currently corresponding with 10 people from the U.S.A. I am even writing to a class of schoolchildren.

Without Operation Abby, it would have been a very lonely holiday for many of us. I am a 32-year-old single man, and this isn't my first time being far from home during the holidays.

I want to let the folks back home know that they can sleep soundly at night because there are a lot of dedicated men and women here who are willing to lay down their lives for their country.

And I want to express my heartfelt thanks to you and wish all the caring people of the greatest nation on earth a Happy New Year. Thank you, Abby, from the bottom of our collective hearts. — GRATEFUL IN KOREA

DEAR ABBY: I sent for your booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," and have referred to it many times. I never finished high school and had a hard time expressing myself, so I seldom sent handwritten thank-you notes. I would buy a card saying "Thank you" and sign my name.

With the help from the booklet, I have no hesitation about writing thank-you notes. Thank you for helping me and a lot of other people like me. — MARGARET, LISLE, ILL.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

1993 Permian Basin Turf and Landscape Conference set

By Deborah A. Benge

All plants have plant hormones that regulate certain processes within plants. These same plant hormones can be manufactured and used on plants to enhance certain functions. These manufactured plant hormones are more commonly called plant growth regulators and they can be used on plants to our advantage. For example, they can be used in fruit crops for thinning which will result in larger, better quality of fruit.

Benge

Plant growth regulators are one of those new plant products that we don't hear much about. There are several of these products designed for use on grasses and landscape plants to regulate their growth rate. Used properly, they can reduce labor and maintenance cost drastically. For instance, when used on turfgrass they can alter the plants' growth rates so that mowing is reduced up to 30 percent, clippings up to 50 percent and water use up to 30 percent.

While plant growth regulators can have a dramatic effect on growth rate they have little effect on turf quality. Color and density of turfgrass is not adversely affected by the plant growth regulators.

This is just one of the topics that will be taught at the 1993 Permian Basin Turf and Landscape Conference, 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Wednesday in Odessa.

If you work or are responsible for turfgrass, landscapes and the maintenance of such settings, don't miss an opportunity to attend this educational conference especially designed for the professional grounds keeper.

This program is being brought to you by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Permian Basin Turfgrass Committee. Speakers will be from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, City of Odessa Parks Department, Western Texas College and Sibley Learning Center.

This year's theme is "What's New in Turf and Landscape Management," with several other topics to be covered, including "Africanized Honeybee: Impact and Management," "White Grubs, Pine Tip Moth and Chemicals," "Herbicides, Growth Regulators and Others," "Customizing Turf Care, Water & Fertility," and "West Texas Plant Selection: Featuring Trees and More."

If you have a pesticide license with the Texas Department of Agriculture or with Structural Pest Control Board, you can earn up to 3 CEU's by attending and participating in this educational conference.

Find out more about the newest developments in turf and landscape management by attending this program. You'll want to preregister for the conference. Preregistration conference costs are $20 per person which includes handouts, breaks and lunch. At door registration costs will be $30 per person. Pre-registrations need to be in the Ector County or Midland County Extension offices by 5 p.m. Jan. 26. Find out more about pre-registration by calling the Midland or Ector County Extension offices at 687-1351 or 335-3071. The conference location is 2130 Andrews Hwy. at the South Forty in Odessa.

Steps can help in achieving top personal goals for year

Associated Press

If you're like most people, the New Year's resolutions you made for 1993 will fade rather quickly. Ladies' Home Journal magazine suggests a better way to reach your goals: Prioritize the things you'd like to achieve.

Unlike resolutions, which are often just wishes, setting priorities forces you to examine what's most important to you. Once you've zeroed in on your goals and ranked them on your year's to-do list, you're less likely to become overwhelmed and give up.

To reach your top goals this year, use the following strategy:

■ Think things through. "The more thought you give the priority, the more successful you're apt to be," says Dr. Ronald Nathan, a professor in the department of family practice at Albany Medical College.

■ Be realistic. "When asked why their New Year's resolutions failed, people say it's because they took on a giant goal," says Dr. John Norcross, professor and chairman of the psychology department at the University of Scranton, Pa. A better approach? Break the priority down into possible-to-achieve levels, so you'll be more likely to succeed.

■ Map it out. Write down a plan for achieving your priorities. Setting a time limit can also help. If you're looking for a new job, decide that a couple of weeks from now you'll write your resume and in a month you'll apply to several companies.

■ Reprioritize. Reassess your list. "Ask yourself, 'What if the next six months were my last? Are there things I should take care of now, others that I can delete?'" says Nathan.

■ Ask for help. You're more apt to stick to a diet, for example, if you do it with your husband or a friend.

■ Reward yourself. If getting in shape is your goal, and you've worked out three times a week, treat yourself to a movie.

'Mother Goose' to visit UGW

Staff report

Potpourri Study Group of University Graduate Women of Midland will meet 9:30 a.m. Thursday in the large meeting area of Dellwood Senior Center.

Ritzie Williford as "Mother Goose"

Ritzie Williford, also know as "Mother Goose" in the West Texas Storytelling Guild, will present a program on "Dance Around The World."

Mrs. Williford, who is originally from Tulsa, Okla., studied and did apprentice teaching in dance, drama and music in her parents' Theatre Arts School. For more than 40 years she has taught children and adults the creative arts of drama, arts and dance. She completed her bachelor of fine arts degree at the University of Oklahoma at Norman, and earned a certificate of dance from the Chicago Dance Masters.

Mrs. Williford has been a volunteer in arts for Midland Independent School District, as will as private schools in Texas, Oklahoma, Indiana, Washington D.C., Ohio and Pennsylvania. She has taught dance and drama in other schools as well as maintaining her own school in Andrews, Monahans, Snyder, McCamey, Crane, Norman, Okla.; and Brookhaven, Miss.

She writes children's stories and designes ballet paper dolls. Her credits include directing, writing and stage designing the Miss Oklahoma City Pageant for three years. She has been interested in ecology-art forms of "Treasures From Trash" for 20 years, and has taught weaving and basic arts for children, including her original "Sock-Puppet-Theatre" and storytelling as a public service for schools and nonprofit organizations.

Hotel rooms are buyer's market

By Edwin McDowell
N.Y. Times News Service

Like sticker prices on cars, posted hotel rates (called "rack rates") bear only a passing relationship to reality. To get any of the widely available discounts, prospective guests must ask the right questions before they book a room.

The first thing the customer should know is that a recent study by D.K. Shifflet & Associates, a marketing consulting and research group in McLean, Va., found that consumers now expect lodging discounts of at least 25 percent. The next thing to know is that they usually get them.

Lodging has been a buyer's market for several years and is likely to remain so at least through 1993. Hotel occupancy dropped to 60.9 percent in 1991, its lowest level in two decades, according to Salomon Brothers Inc., and average room rates reached only $58.91 — a 3.5 percent decline in real terms from 1990. With more than one-third of all hotel rooms unoccupied, on average, there is obviously leeway to negotiate prices.

One way is to show up late at night and bargain; since hotel rooms are perishable commodities, some night managers prefer to accept a low rate to letting the room remain empty. But that strategy risks having the traveler arrive in a city only to find all the rooms booked. For even in sluggish times, conventions, inaugurations, parades and Super Bowls can sell out hotels for miles.

The best way to assure both low prices and peace of mind, according to travel consultants and hotel executives, is to telephone the hotel or its toll-free reservations number and ask not only the best price but what specials or packages are available.

Hotels increasingly offer discounts for advance reservations. Hyatt Hotels Corp., for example, offers an average 25 percent off the rack rate for reservations made 21 days in advance at its 86 non-resort hotels in North America.

Howard Johnson and HoJo Inns, with 560 properties, offer guests who are at least 60 years old or members of retirement organizations discounts of up to 30 percent on a space-available basis.

Many hotels allow children to stay free. Many also offer discounts of about 10 percent to guests who arrive on an airline with which the hotel has a tie-in.

Discounts averaging about 10 percent are often available to union members, holders of certain credit cards and members of motor clubs.

'Spending' nights in Disney World

By Nancy Sharkey
N.Y. Times News Service

The Grand Floridian Beach Resort at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., is the newest luxury resort on the property, but also the most expensive.

ORLANDO, Fla. — There is a perverse rule in economics that applies to luxury goods: All else being equal, people believe that when they pay more, they get better quality. This applies to furs, platinum watches, Lamborghinis, Gucci briefcases and, apparently, Walt Disney World. Little else can account for the difference in price between the low-end and high-end hotels at the Walt Disney World complex in Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

In a 10-night visit last summer, our family of three stayed in eight Disney World hotels ranging in price from $85 to $400 a night, excluding taxes. To our surprise, we found that $100 a night buys good accommodations and nearly the same level of comfort that the high-end places offer. At Disney World, a guest at any hotel can use the facilities of any other hotel. No matter where we were staying, we were able to ride throughout the complex on the sophisticated transportation system, including water taxis, monorails and trams; we had our pick of pools, restaurants, parking lots, even laundry facilities and baby-sitting services. As Disney guests we could reserve meals at park restaurants two days in advance.

We also found, not surprisingly, that newer is better at Disney World. The furnishings are spiffier and the amenities more amenable at the brand-new Dixie Landings ($85 or $104 a night) and the Yacht Club (we paid $260 a night) than at their older counterparts, the Caribbean Beach resort at the budget end and the Contemporary in the middle range.

THE LENGTH of our stay, 10 days, solved a big problem: the perceived necessity to see it all, and fast. With a resort-style pool and pleasant accommodations, we didn't feel compelled to spend more than four hours a day in any of the three amusement parks: the Magic Kingdom, Epcot Center or MGM Studios. We arrived at each park early to avoid the heaviest crowds and fled to our hotel by lunchtime for a boat ride, tennis, horseback ride or swim.

While changing hotels every day is few people's idea of relaxation, we had deliberately set out to try as many hotels as possible, and in the process discover how to get the greatest value from the Disney hotel system.

Everywhere, we were ensconsed in a "setting," which of course is the Disney plan. The resorts evoke various benign themes. There's ersatz Louisiana plantation or New England clapboard resort, Polynesian village and faux Fifties Miami Beach.

I chose the eight hotels for their variety of price, location and style. We stayed in every type of accommodation that Disney offers, except a tent site. Many hotels are paired, with slightly different decor but the same price and architecture. We stayed in only one of each pair. We ate lunch or dinner in every resort and were impressed by the quality of the food — far better and more carefully prepared than in the crowded restaurants inside the three amusement parks, and above average for typical hotel restaurants. Food prices generally followed room rates: the Grand Floridian was the most expensive, Dixie Landings among the most reasonable. I traveled anonymously.

Disney World's hotels are priced primarily by location — the closer to the Magic Kingdom, Epcot or MGM, the grander and more expensive. And within each facility, rooms are priced by the view. "Parking lot or lagoon?" one reservations agent inquired.

AT THE HIGH end, paying $250 a night or more, we stayed in the Grand Floridian, the Dolphin, the Yacht Club and the Contemporary. In the midprice category, between $100 and $250, were the Vacation Club and a trailer in Fort Wilderness. At the budget end, less than $100 a night, were Dixie Landings and the Caribbean Beach. The Vacation Club apartment and Fort Wilderness trailer had kitchens and dining areas. The others were large hotel rooms, with two double or queen beds, a terrace, a double sink outside the bathroom, which we appreciated, and an honor bar with reasonably priced sodas and snacks.

We each had our favorites. Chris, who is 12, loved the splashy Dolphin, with a health club, a waterfall pool, pedal boats on the lake, a game room, ice cream parlor with 50s jukeboxes — and swarms of well-behaved teenagers. My husband, Joe, liked the low-key Vacation Club apartment, with a private terrace opening onto shade trees; Jacuzzi room, washer-dryer and well-equipped kitchen. I liked Dixie Landings for its value, with good landscaping, a riverboat ride, bicycle rentals, central children's pool and the quiet adult pools adjacent to each of six clusters of buildings, a fishing pond and a decent, moderately priced Cajun restaurant.

There were specific highlights as well. The best pool was the Yacht Club's serpentine affair, with water slide and beach area for toddlers. The easiest access to the Magic Kingdom was from the Grand Floridian, which has its own monorail station and ferry landing. The best access to MGM was from the Dolphin and Swan, and to Epcot from the Yacht and Beach Club, both within walking distance, though there's a five-minute tram ride available.

THE BEST SERVICE was on the concierge floor at the Dolphin, a section with full-time concierge service, central lounge, breakfast, tea and desserts. The hotel is operated by Sheraton, and the pleasant staff is less frenetically friendly than at hotels operated by Disney. At those, the staff seemed to have a divided mission — part helper, part movie extra. Employee changing rooms and offices are labeled with signs, "Cast Members Only." Dressed as ranch hands, serving wenches or sailors, employees were young and usually desperately eager to please.

All of the hotels we stayed in were inside the vast Disney World complex, which has 17,460 rooms in 20 hotels, campgrounds and apartments. Outside the complex, the highways are lined with an astonishing clutter of hotels and motels, with an additional 53,000 rooms. And Disney plans more hotels.

Theater to present 'My Fair Lady'

Volunteers are backbone of musical

By Georgia Temple

One of the biggest musical comedy hits in theatrical history, "My Fair Lady" will be presented by Midland Community Theatre from Feb. 12 through March 21.

The Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical, adapted from George Bernard Shaw's 1913 comedy "Pygmalion" about a guttersnipe who is turned into a lady by a haughty phonetics professor to win a bet, ran for six and a half years in New York, from March 1956 to September 1962.

Drew Anderson (Henry Higgins) and Julie Sharma (Eliza Doolittle) will be seen in MCT's production as the aristocratic speech professor and the dingy flower girl. Duncan Parish (Alfred Doolittle) will play Eliza's rascally father who sings two of the most famous songs from the show, "With a Little Bit of Luck" and "Get Me to the Church on Time."

Other featured players are John Phillips as Colonel Pickering, Kevin Oyenik as Freddie, Frances Heltzel as Mrs. Higgins, Kelly Newsom as Mrs. Eynsford-Hill and Loree Fitz-Gerald as Mrs. Pearce.

Don Bachmann is directing MCT's production with Darryl Knapp serving as musical director and Jan Collerd as choreographer. Providing the proper atmosphere for pre-World War I Lon-

When "My Fair Lady" opens Feb. 12, Midlanders will be drawn into 1912 London and the life of Henry Higgins and Eliza Doolittle.

Of those attending the musical, few will realize how much backstage work goes into creating any live production.

"For every one actor on stage it takes five volunteers backstage to put a show on," said Sarah Moore, Midland Community Theatre volunteer.

Ms. Moore, a Midland native, has been working backstage as a MCT volunteer since 1983 when she worked as a dresser on "Guys and Dolls." She has worked props, been assistant stage manager and dresser chairman. Since marrying Bruce Moore, a geo tech at Midland Energy Library, and having a baby, Beau, now 2 years old, Ms. Moore is down to working props for one or two shows a year.

She finds herself drawn to the theater because of the camaraderie.

"And it's the reward of knowing that when the final curtain goes down, and that audience shows their pleasure, that applause is as much for you as a volunteer as it is for the actors," said Ms. Moore, who works full time at Qualified Printers.

Not since her high school days has Ms. Moore been onstage. Then, she was part of the Summer Mummers olio.

"No, it doesn't really interest me. I don't need that to shine. I like working behind the scenes."

She isn't the only member of her family who feels this way.

"I have a great time at the theater," said Michael Suzanne Patterson, Mrs. Moore's younger sister who also works backstage. "I'm a good worker. I have a lot of fun with the people and I like what I do. They don't need any more actors. They have lots of actors. They need more people backstage."

Ms. Patterson's case has never been on stage.

"I have dropped more classes because they told me I have to stand up before a class and talk," the full time student said. She laughed then added, "It just freaks me out. I have made it through several plays where I had to go out and change props, but only if there's no one else I can get to do it."

Ms. Patterson enjoys gathering props the most.

"It is like a scavenger hunt," Ms. Patterson said. "Some of the things we have at the theater, but some of the things you have to actually go out and look for. Right now for 'My Fair Lady,' I'm looking for a real heavy ornate wrought iron table and chairs for one of the scenes."

Prop hunt

Michael Suzanne Patterson, top right, searches for baskets in the props area at Theatre Midland. The baskets are for the upcoming Midland Community Theatre production of "My Fair Lady." Bottom right, Tracy Greentree and daughter Courtney, 5, examine a bookshelf as a potential prop. Left, Body parts from mannequins are also used as props.

Professor reads her poem at inauguration

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A hush fell over the usually noisy lobby at Wake Forest University as, hundreds of miles away, poet Maya Angelou stepped up to the podium.

Students gathered in front of TVs to watch one of their professors become the first poet to read at a presidential inauguration since Robert Frost captivated the crowd at John F. Kennedy's swearing-in in 1961.

Just after President Clinton's inaugural address, Angelou read her original 5½-minute work, "On The Pulse of Morning." It's about common themes of the human experience and hope for the future.

When she finished, Clinton gave her one of his famous bear hugs. In Winston-Salem, her friends and colleagues applauded.

"I was very moved by what she had to say," said Mary DeShazer, an associate professor of women's studies and poetry. "It's amazing how her poem complimented the themes President Clinton brought up in his own speech."

"She reached out to everyone, not only Americans," said Craig Nelson, 20, a biology student. "I sensed a call for the U.S. to pull itself together, and also the need for this country to have a strong influence in the world."

Angelou, 64, is popular on this campus, which was the site of the first Bush-Dukakis presidential debate in 1988. Her classes have filled quickly since she joined the faculty in 1982. She now is the Z. Smith Reynolds Professor of American Studies and lives in Winston-Salem.

She grew up in segregated Arkansas and draws heavily on her experiences from the civil rights struggles of the 1960s. She teaches the works of writers including Harriet Beecher Stowe, Frederick Douglass and Langston Hughes.

Her poem was unlike any other inaugural work, with references to gays, native Americans and the homeless.

"Because she is so pro-human rights, some people may look at her selection as something of a risk," said Benedetta Agnoli, 19, a sophomore politics major from Winston-Salem. "But Clinton showed he's not afraid."

"I'm glad she pointed out that the United States is not all white," said Hessam Alimohammadi, 19, a sophomore biology major from Iran.

Johnne Armentrout, a counselor at the school, said Clinton's selection of Angelou sent a message to the country.

"I think it says he is ready to reach out to people who have not been included before," she said.

HELP: Theater depends on backstage volunteers

(From 1G)

Ms. Moore and Ms. Patterson are not the only members of their family currently involved backstage at MCT. Ginger McDonald, their youngest sister and a full time student, is also a backstage volunteer.

"I like it," said Ms. McDonald, whose first backstage experience at MCT was in last year's production of "Big River." "I really enjoyed it. It was a lot of fun."

In Ms. McDonald's case, she might be lured in front of the lights.

"I know we have a lot of fun backstage making it work," Ms. McDonald said. "The actors have a lot of fun out there making it work. It's another side. I think it would be neat to experience the other side of it. I don't know if I have the guts to pursue it."

The three daughters are following a family tradition established by their father, Charles E. Patterson.

"My dad did theater in the '60s," Ms. Patterson said. "He did Mummers as well as one of the stage plays. He was backstage for a long time."

Actually hundreds of area residents volunteer their time at the theater, said Denise Boehm-Walters, volunteer coordinator for MCT.

"The majority of them are Midlanders, but a number of them are from Odessa," she said. "We do frequently get actors from Odessa, and some of them perform on a regular basis."

Currently, MCT needs volunteers to work in the shop area before a show is on stage.

"Our biggest need right now is for people to come and help build and paint sets and gather props," Ms. Boehm-Walters said. "Right now that's probably where the biggest stress is at the theater. We have some volunteers who faithfully come in and work in the shop and are wonderful in the show. We just need to increase the number of them."

Volunteers don't need to have special training to work at MCT, said Ms. Moore.

"I think the first quality required of any volunteers at the theater is being conscientious because whatever task you have, be it props or a dresser or sound, the whole production of the play depends on your part," Ms. Moore said.

"When it comes specifically to props, I think you need to be organized and methodical and you kind of have to be a jack of all trades," Ms. Moore said. "The more you know about how things work, then the better the possibility that if something goes wrong at the last minute, you can fix it."

Paying attention to detail also can be an integral part of volunteer work at MCT.

"Last year when we did 'Big River,' we had to be very careful to make sure that we checked the lantern on the raft and knew that it was full, but not too full, and that the wick was trimmed properly, so that it would actually light when it was supposed to when they were on stage and not smoke out the house."

Ms. Moore considers working as a volunteer at MCT as being a community service.

Volunteers are the backbone of a community theater, and MCT is no exception.

As volunteer coordinator, Ms. Boehn-Walters' job includes providing a backup system for the production board that runs each MCT production. When a show is short of volunteers, the production board chairman calls on Ms. Boehn-Walters.

Dozens of volunteers will be needed for the upcoming "My Fair Lady."

"Not every volunteer is working every night," Ms. Boehm-Walters said. "There are about 40 in the cast, and those people are all volunteers. All our actors are volunteers, and the backstage running crew are all volunteers, and the people who work in the booth, the lights and sound operators, the follow spot operators, the stage manager, the assistant stage managers, and there will probably be for each performance two or three props runners and probably three or four dressers and curtain pullers and stage hands.

"Volunteers help us in every capacity. They make up a bigger part of the effort, especially after the show is underway. The staff works really hard, but there would be no final product without the volunteers."

'Cosby Show' marks passing of TV era

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Almost a year ago, "The Cosby Show" taped its final episode, and there wasn't a dry eye in the house.

The House of General Electric, that is. GE bought NBC, now a 90-pound weakling, when it was boss of the beach, pumped up in part by a scheduling steroid called "Cosby."

But if the end of "Cosby's" network run was a heartbreaker — namely, the heart of NBC's impregnable Thursday night lineup — the era truly ended only three weeks ago, when a freshman series called "Here and Now" was unceremoniously snuffed.

At its death, it ranked a paltry 71st. But to some observers its axing was a rash, even rude act by NBC against its biggest star and savior. For it was Cosby, of course, who had fathered the doomed new show.

A tepid but well-intentioned comedy about an inner-city youth center, "Here and Now" boasted a clear ancestral link to the golden "Cosby" days. It was even produced in Studio H at Kaufman-Astoria Studios, the same sound stage where "The Cosby Show's" Huxtables reigned for eight fabulously successful seasons.

And "Here and Now" star Malcolm-Jamal Warner, formerly "Cosby's" No. 1 son Theo Huxtable, had inherited Cosby's dressing room.

"I changed it around and gave it my flavor," said Warner as he showed a reporter around last month. The cool blue walls were decorated with lots of publicity photos of Warner, now 22, from age 14 up. And lots of photos of Cosby.

Warner made it clear that his old TV dad was no absentee parent of the new show.

"He's in and out a lot," Warner said. "He'll sit there and then, in the middle of a scene, he'll say, 'Oh, oh, wait a minute,' and he comes up with some added element. His involvement keeps that Cosby magic."

But the magic was missing from "Here and Now." Viewers were missing. Only stubborn hope was there.

Around the halls at Kaufman-Astoria, the "Here and Now" company figured that, after all, this was a pet project of the man whose own show helped save NBC, the man who only last fall was looking to buy the network and pump it up again. So who along Executive Row would be sufficiently unmindful to pick off the series produced by the man who might end up as boss?

No need to name names. The bottom line is that Cosby, by his own admission, gave up his bid for NBC. And after Jan. 2, "Here and Now" became "There and Then."

Oddly enough, only days before, Cosby had given himself a pink slip.

Perhaps taking his former role as a physician too literally, Cosby attempted to raise from the dead "You Bet Your Life," the Groucho Marx game show of the '50s.

Sometimes easy DOESN'T do it, and Cosby flopped as the show's sluggish emcee. "Bet's" audience was less than half that guaranteed to stations and advertisers. In December, Cosby announced it wouldn't be back next season.

After three decades as a star, Bill Cosby is known as many things: a humorist. A humanist. A man whose skills and ubiquity as a commercial spokesman could have earned him the name Huckster-ble.

But it was "The Cosby Show" that made him a force of nature. It ran longer than his four preceding prime-time series combined. And when it was sold into syndication, he pocketed one-third of a billion dollars.

Masked gorillas vow to keep fighting discrimination in arts

BOSTON (AP) — Times are changing for women artists but not fast enough, say the Guerrilla Girls, crusaders in gorilla masks who delivered a lecture while sitting at a table piled high with bananas.

They're out to end discrimination against women and minority artists in an art world dominated by white males. Their cause is just and their tactics justified, they say, but the masks are necessary.

"The masks give us the ability to speak out without fear of reprisals," Guerrilla Girl No. 1 told about 350 people packed into the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum on Tuesday.

"Women who complain about sexism in the art world are attacked as being not good enough, not talented enough to make it," added No. 2. "It's the same as when a woman complains of sexual harassment and is attacked for somehow inciting it."

'Women who complain about sexism in the art world are attacked as being not good enough, not talented enough to make it. It's the same as when a woman complains of sexual harassment and is attacked for somehow inciting it.'

—Guerrilla Girl No. 2

Their targets are museums, galleries, art magazines, critics and collectors who neglect women artists and artists from minorities. Their weapons are sarcasm, statistics and posters.

"You're seeing only half the picture without the vision of women artists and artists of color," said one placard.

"Do women have to be naked to get into the Met Museum?" asked another, which featured a nude woman wearing a gorilla mask.

That poster takes issue with the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, where 95 percent of the modern artists displayed are men. There are women, but mostly as nude subjects, No. 1 said.

"We literally walked around and counted them all," she said.

There are some hands where the only real chance to make your contract is so poor that guile becomes a realistic consideration. Besides, if you pull off a swindle, you can crow about it for years—to the discomfiture of your opponents. This hand is from Australia's Grand National Teams competition.

To jump to two no trump with two suits virtually unstopped is not what we consider winning tactics, even if you can be sure partner has at least one of them controlled. The result was a three-no-trump contract which, to put it mildly, was inelegant.

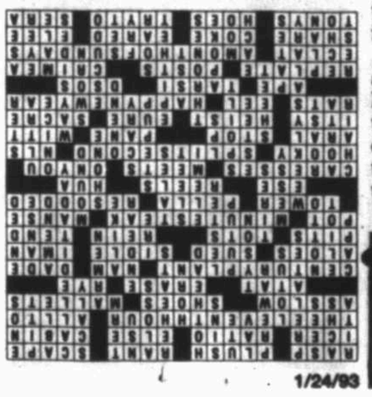

West led the six of spades, ducked around to South's queen. The only legitimate play for the contract was to find East with a doubleton king of clubs, a 4-to-1 against shot. In addition, to take advantage of that distribution, declarer would have to cross to dummy's ace of spades as the entry for the club finesse, leaving North-South wide open in two suits.

Rather than risk such exposure, declarer decided to trade on the enemy's ignorance of the diamond situation by leading the queen of clubs from hand. West, anxious to preserve the king of clubs as an entry and expecting East to hold the ace of clubs, followed low. Declarer continued by banging out the ace of clubs and quickly wrapped up 11 tricks against a red-faced West.

At another table, North became declarer at three no trump after West overcalled one spade. East led a spade to the queen, king and ace and, when the club finesse lost, the defenders took the next 10 tricks in spades and diamonds. Down seven!

Oscar-winning actress gave us more than films

By Alexander G. Higgins
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA — Audrey Hepburn, with her high cheekbones, doe eyes and ravishing elegance, first charmed the world as a renegade young princess seeking a taste of normal life in Rome.

Her Oscar-winning performance in "Roman Holiday" in 1953 epitomized the elfin style that audiences came to adore in films such as "My Fair Lady" and "Breakfast At Tiffany's."

In her last years, the Belgian-born, British-educated actress turned her talents to locales far from palaces and tea parties, however.

As a goodwill ambassador for UNICEF, she traveled across Africa and other continents to work on behalf of needy children.

The work touched her personally. While enduring the harsh winter of 1944-45 under Nazi occupation in Holland, she had little to eat beyond turnips. One agency that brought help after the war was UNICEF.

She died Wednesday at the age of 63 at her house on Lake Geneva, Switzerland after a bout with colon cancer.

She was still traveling until 1992, visiting camps of starving Somalis in Kenya and Somalia in September.

First discovered as a model in London, Hepburn moved rapidly from a bit parts in films to bit starring roles on Broadway and in film.

Hollywood and fashion writers used words like elfin, fragile and innocent to describe the slender, graceful actress.

But she spoke modestly of her acting talents.

"I never had this huge talent or a great technique," she once said. "But somehow I had something that contributed."

In January, too ill to return to Los Angeles to accept a Screen Actors Guild honor, Hepburn instead sent a message thanking all her directors and co-stars.

"It is they," she said, "who helped and honed, triggered and taught, pushed and pulled, dressed and photographed, and with endless patience, and kindness ... guided and nurtured a totally unknown, insecure, inexperienced, skinny broad into a marketable commodity."

She became a movie star in 1953 with her first U.S. film, "Roman Holiday." Time magazine said she was "exquisitely blending queenly dignity and bubbling mischief." Her co-star was Gregory Peck.

"It's just too much," she said when she got the Oscar in March 1954. "It's like being given something to wear that you have to grow into, something to work toward."

She went on to be nominated for Oscars four more times, and in early 1993 it was announced that she had been chosen to receive a special Academy honor, the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award, for her UNICEF work. It was to be presented March 29.

She inspired French and Italian fashion designers, particularly Hubert de Givenchy, who outfitted her for many of her films. In later years, she even looked elegant in a T-shirt, khakis and sneakers.

Working in movies, she said, was "all sort of a big love affair."

She was born Audrey Hepburn-Ruston on May 4, 1929, near Brussels, Belgium. Her father was a banker of English-Irish ancestry, and her mother was a Dutch baroness. After her parents divorced, she was sent to a girls' school near London.

Her mother took her to the Netherlands at the outbreak of World War II, thinking that would be safer than England. But Germany invaded in May 1940.

One of her brothers was taken to a Nazi labor camp, and the Nazis executed her uncle and cousin. She attended school, studied ballet and joined in underground amateur shows to raise money for the Dutch resistance.

Oscar-winning actress, and longtime goodwill ambassador for UNICEF, Audrey Hepburn, has died in Switzerland at the age of 63. In this 1964 photo, Hepburn is shown in costume for her role in 'My Fair Lady.'

Later, Hepburn said one role she had to turn down was that of Anne Frank in the 1959 movie that told the story of the Jewish girl who hid from the Nazis in Amsterdam then died in a concentration camp, leaving behind her famous diary.

"I was so destroyed by it again and I couldn't deal with it," Hepburn said. "It's too close."

After the war, Hepburn won a ballet scholarship and went to London. Long-legged and fragile-looking, she was discovered as a model by fashion photographers in London and began studying acting.

After joining the chorus in a London musical, she won minor roles in British movies. But her break came when the French author Colette met her and insisted she play the part of Gigi when her novel of that name was adapted to the stage. The role took Hepburn to Broadway in 1951.

Another Broadway appearance in "Ondine" won her a Tony award the same spring that she got the Oscar for "Roman Holiday." And it led to her first marriage, to co-star Mel Ferrer, later in 1954.

Despite her petite appearance on screen, she was actually 5-foot-7. Clever filming techniques had to be used to keep her from towering over some of her leading men.

Her other Oscar-nominations were for "Sabrina" with Humphrey Bogart and William Holden in 1954, for "The Nun's Story" with Peter Finch in 1959, as Holly Golightly "Breakfast at Tiffany's" with George Peppard in 1961, and for "Wait until Dark" with Alan Arkin in 1967, in which she played a fast-thinking blind woman terrorized by thieves in her apartment.

Other highlights of her career included "Funny Face" with Fred Astaire, 1957, in which she played a Greenwich Village girl who becomes a fashion model; "Love in the Afternoon" with Gary Cooper, also 1957; and "Charade" with Cary Grant in 1963.

Nashville Sound finds open arms on network TV

By Joe Edwards
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music, long a mainstay on radio, is surging on network TV as well, with Garth Brooks and Billy Ray Cyrus leading the way.

There were five country music specials on network TV in 1992 and three more will be aired early this year.

Programs showcasing "the Nashville Sound" are commanding strong ratings and drawing solid support from advertisers.

"Country music has become an important part of the entertainment world and part of the social fabric, and TV has jumped on it," said Ed Benson, executive director of the Country Music Association.

Brooks had his own highly rated special on NBC last January and also appeared on ABC's "Best of Country '92" on Dec. 10. Cyrus was on "Best of Country '92," and his own ABC special is scheduled to be broadcast in February. He's under contract for two more, thanks to the popularity of his single "Achy Breaky Heart" and his album "Some Gave All."

"With these exciting young artists, they have brought visual imagery to the music," Benson said. "They have attracted a younger and broader audience."

"A Country Music Celebration," a two-hour special marking the 35th anniversary of the CMA, will air on CBS in the first quarter of this year. Vince Gill, Wynonna Judd and Kenny Rogers are among those scheduled to appear on the show.

Another CBS special, "Women of Country," has been taped for broadcast in early 1993. It features Judd, Mary-Chapin Carpenter, Emmylou Harris, Kathy Mattea, Trisha Yearwood and others.

"Country music is capitalizing on things sociologically," Benson said. "There's a return of fundamental values in America. The product is right for the times."

The CMA's annual awards show in September, which included live performances by both Brooks and Cyrus, was the third highest rated program of the week. The two-hour show was seen by 48 million viewers.

"They turned away advertisers for the show," Benson said.

In May, CBS broadcast the special "Country Music Hall of Fame 25," featuring about 50 country performers saluting the silver anniversary of the Nashville shrine.

'Country music has become an important part of the entertainment world and part of the social fabric, and TV has jumped on it.'

—Ed Benson

Also last spring, the Academy of Country Music awards show was broadcast on NBC.

One ratings failure was NBC's "Hot Country Nights" in early 1992, which was not renewed after 12 weeks. It did better than previous NBC shows in that time spot, but still finished in the bottom third of the weekly rankings.

"The time slot (early Sunday night) was one of the worst of the week," Benson said. "It was against 'Murder, She Wrote,' which tied up the older demographic, and Fox Network had a good lineup targeting the younger audience."

Country music got a global boost in October when the cable channel Country Music Television began a European cable network. Both the American and European channels broadcast country music videos.

Also on cable, "Hats Off to Minnie: America Honors Minnie Pearl" in October drew some of the strongest ratings ever on cable's The Nashville Network. One hundred celebrities participated in the 2½-hour special honoring the 80-year-old Grand Ole Opry humorist.

And "Hee Haw," the country stalwart, is celebrating its 25th year on the air with "Hee Haw Silver," reruns of top shows.

"It's one of those things the public demanded," said Roy Clark, host of the program since its inception.

Producer is still setting trends after 30 years

By Jerry Buck
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Nobody lasts forever in television — except, of course, for Aaron Spelling.

Spelling launched long-running dramatic and comedy series before most of the stars of his current hit shows, Fox's "Beverly Hills 90210" and "Melrose Place," were born.

And for most of those three decades or so, he has been setting trends.

In 1968, "The Mod Squad" kicked off television's first youth movement and the so-called "relevant era." "Charlie's Angels" was the centerpiece of the jiggle shows. "The Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island" were in the vanguard of the 1970s feel-good shows that left reality behind.

"Family" in 1976 was one of the first prime-time soap operas. And although rival "Dallas" later gave that genre its panache, Spelling soon had viewers spellbound with "Dynasty."

His 1969 movie "The Ballad of Andy Crocker" was on the cutting edge of dealing with the Vietnam War.

No other producer has been as active for as long, or has had such an impact. It would take more than four months, 24 hours a day, to air every show and movie Spelling has made.

Though he ignited a new youth movement in television with "Beverly Hills 90210" in October 1990, the year before, many people had considered Spelling washed up. It was the first time since "The Mod Squad" that he didn't have a show on the air. "Dynasty" had finally played itself out, and ABC had ended his longtime exclusive contract.

"Everybody I knew at ABC was gone after Capital Cities took over," Spelling said. "After 'Dynasty' was canceled, the headline in Daily Variety was 'Spelling's Dynasty Dead.'"

The headline meant Spelling's own dynasty, not the show. His productions may have sparked trends, but his enormous success — and the titillating nature of some of his shows — at times seemed to draw more brickbats than kudos.

"I would never say other producers were jealous, because it sounds self-serving," Spelling said, "but I think we always like to shoot down a top bird in our town, and I guess I was a top bird. It was like they did it with joy. I know it was very cruel."

Nevertheless, Spelling is back and developing more new shows than at any time in his career. He and Stephen J. Cannell are the last major television producers who are independent of any studio affiliation.

Spelling started the fall season with four shows, but NBC's "The Round Table" and Fox's "The Heights" were canceled. He said he now has four shows in the works at NBC, four at CBS, two at Fox and one at ABC.

He's also going into production with his first cable movie, HBO's "And the Band Played On," based on Randy Shilts' story of the AIDS epidemic. And TriStar wants him to do a feature movie of "The Mod Squad," he said.

These volunteers go beyond the office and into the home. They reach out to people who normally have no other contact for giving to United Way. These are a special group of volunteers who rank high in the eyes of United Way. There is no roadblock that can deter these people. They gave a tremendous amount of energy to the 1992 campaign and came up with creative ways to raise money, such as a fashion/talent show and a pot luck supper.

Many of these volunteers know first-hand where the money given to United Way goes. It provides hot meals to senior citizens like themselves, child care for single parents who want to work, health screenings to keep seniors dancing, and a place for senior citizens to meet.

United Way–it knows no age limits in its giving. And thanks to all these volunteers who know no limits in giving of themselves.

Cows are gone from Cowtown

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH — Cowtown awakened one recent morning to learn it no longer was Cowtown.

Well, sort of.

"Going, going. . .gone," announced a headline decorating the front page of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. A tagline atop the story revealed the chilling news: "The 100-year era of cattle auctions at the Fort Worth Stockyards comes to an end."

No longer economically feasible, a spokesman explained.

Balderdash!

Strip the heart from San Francisco or the French Quarter from New Orleans. Siphon the beer out of Milwaukee or condemn the slot machines in Las Vegas. Black out the moon over Miami, if you must.

But don't take the cows out of Cowtown.

It's true. They're gone. In fact, the final weekly cattle auction ended shortly before Christmas with some 150 animals moving through the Stockyards complex.

"It's sad," said Sue McCafferty, president of the North Fort Worth Historical Society.

"It's terrible," said Jerre Todd, a longtime activist in the Chisholm Trail Roundup, an annual celebration of the city's historic link to the cattle drives of yesteryear.

"The Stockyards are just a dear part of Fort Worth. And those cows were just as important as those sad-eyed country singers up the street at Filthy McNasty's and Billy Bob's."

Billy Bob's and McNasty's are C&W honky-tonks of some notoriety.

Despite the despair, live cattle sales of recent vintage were little more than token affairs anyway — romantic and nostalgic but rarely money makers.

Smaller, convenient auctions remain the bread and butter of the small producers who sell their animals in surrounding places such as Gainesville, Weatherford, Mineral Wells and Cleburne.

On a new level, however, this town's reputation as a cattle marketing center is secure. Unusual and different, but secure.

Still, half a century ago, more than a million cattle were marketed annually at the North Side facility. So were millions of sheep and any number of horses, hogs and mules.

In 1944, the peak year, 5,277,496 head of livestock passed through the Fort Worth Stockyards.

The oldest working stockyards in America, the area along Exchange Ave. was known in its champagne days as the "Wall Street of the West."

More than a century ago, cattlemen gave the town its first economic security. In the 1860s and 1870s, they drove their herds up the Chisholm Trail, through Fort Worth, to railheads in Kansas and Missouri.

"Fort Worth was the last chance for drovers to buy flour, bacon, beans, dried fruit, coffee and other necessities for the long drives across the Indian Nations," author-historian Leonard Sanders says in "How Fort Worth Became the Texasmost City."

Traildrivers returning from Kansas often reloaded in Fort Worth for the final leg of the homeward trip.

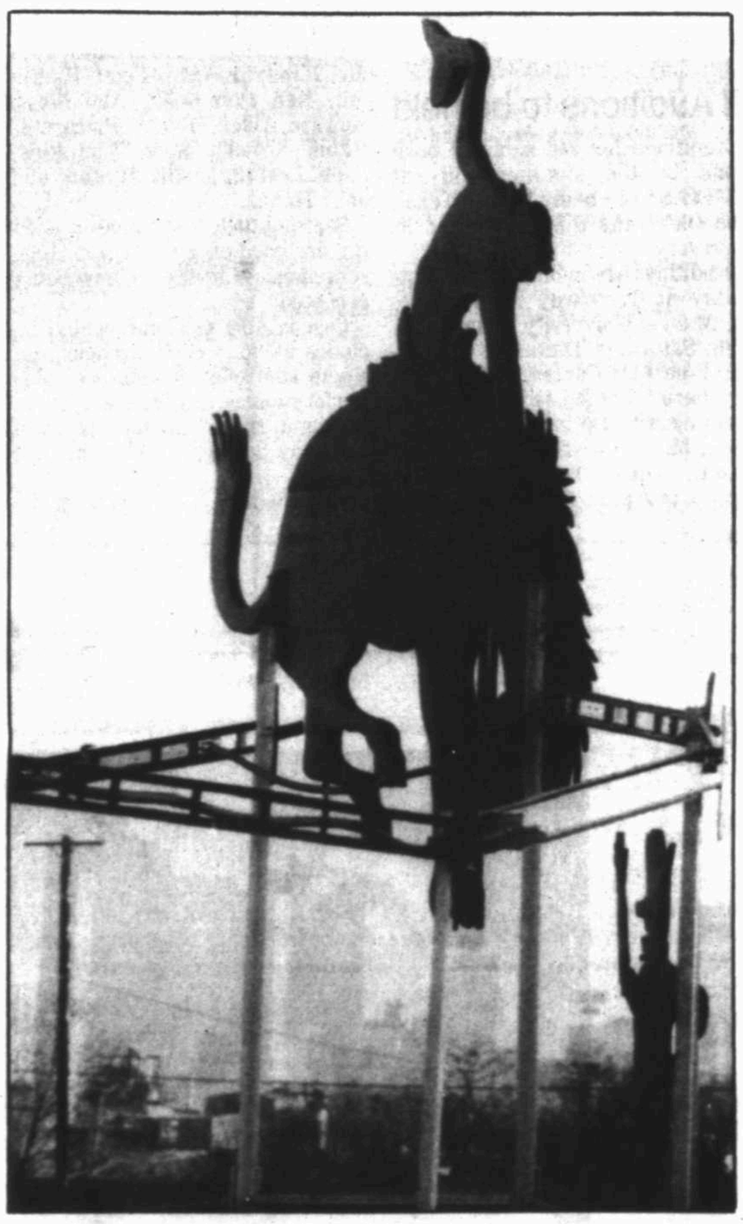

A forerunner of the Fort Worth Stockyards, Union Stockyards, sprang up in 1883, said historian McCafferty. It included a livestock exchange building, hotel and saloon.

She said nearly a quarter million cows were auctioned there in 1896, and Fort Worth "almost became the hog capital of the world."

In the early 1900s, Swift and Armour, the nation's leading meat companies, located plants in Fort Worth, and by 1909 were processing 1.2 million cattle annually.

The town's population nearly tripled to 73,312 between 1900 and 1910.

The meat packing houses, like the cows, are gone now, but the Stockyards complex remains a national historic district, one of the largest in the United States.

And it is anything but dead, some argue.

"The cattle business is not gone, gone, gone from the Stockyards," said Holt Hickman, a key player in the area's tourist, entertainment and business developments. "It's still a cattle center, it's just done differently.

"Buying and selling cattle has changed, like going from an adding machine to a computer or from radio to television."

True.

Superior Livestock Auctions Inc., with offices in the Exchange Building, sold 860,000 head of cattle last year and projects 1993 sales of 920,000.

What's different is, not one of those cows is in Fort Worth.

Superior representatives film the cattle, or offerings, at the ranches, then mail catalogs to 5,000 registered buyers around the country. Via satellite, the company holds auctions twice monthly.

Buyers watch the auctioneer on TV sets and submit bids over 25 incoming phone lines.

"I really think we'll hit the million mark in 1994," said Paul Branch.

New York hopes to win Hollywood

By Greg B. Smith
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — In "Used People," a Shirley MacLaine movie, the characters meet in what is supposed to be a gritty inner city park in Queens. Homeless people wander about, grafiti scars the walls, trash clogs the streets.

But the park actually is in downtown Toronto, 495 miles away from anyone who could legitimately "tawk" with a Queens accent.

This illusion points up a challenge for New York City: producers and directors have virtually abandoned the Big Apple.

Instead, they're filming New York scenes in Toronto, Baltimore, Chicago and Pittsburgh — even Cincinnati.

Officials' frustration reached crisis proportions in 1991 when major Hollywood studios launched a boycott of New York because of their differences with unions. No major pictures were shot here for eight months. Now, more than a year after the boycott officially ended, the city has yet to see a big turn-around in the number of movies shot here.

The city fought back. After a six-month search, Mayor David N. Dinkins picked a new commissioner for his Office of Film, Theater and Broadcasting. He chose a Hollywood insider.

The man he selected for the job, Richard Brick, grew up in Greenwich Village. He produced "Hangin' With The Homeboys" in 1991 (shot in the Bronx). He was location manager on "Ragtime" (1980), and was unit production manager on "Silkwood" (1982) and "Places In The Heart" (1983). He has seen many New York scenes in movies that definitely were not shot in any of the five boroughs.

"I understand the economic compromises that were necessary," he said. "Artistically, it's unfortunate. I can tell if New York is New York. A lot of people can tell," he said. "As a New Yorker, this is absolutely upsetting to me."

The list of ersatz New York movies is long: "Moonstruck" — a love story supposedly set in Brooklyn Heights — was shot mostly in Toronto. "The Babe" — a tribute to Babe Ruth in his New York Yankee years — was shot in Chicago. "Harlem Nights" and "Lost in Yonkers" were shot in Cincinnati.

In the past, hundreds of movies included famous New York scenes: "King Kong" scaling the Empire State Building, Cary Grant rushing through Grand Central Station in "North By Northwest," Gene Hackman careening under the subway tracks in "The French Connection." Practically everything Woody Allen or Spike Lee ever produced was shot in New York. And who could forget "Dracula Bites The Big Apple" or the "New York Disco Massacre"?

For years producers have complained about the New York unions who represent grips, extras, electricians and hundreds of other people who work behind the scenes. Extras make $99 for an 8-hour day in New York compared to $55 a day in Los Angeles. Also, in New York, more extras are required to be on the set for each day's shoot. All of this costs more money.

Producers complain of other costs unique to New York: higher catering and hotel bills, nightmarish rush hour traffic and Kafkaesque parking rules.

Toronto city officials claim costs there are about 30 percent less per movie than in New York City. David W. Plante, Toronto's acting film commissioner, boasts of minor league traffic, no parking problems, lower hotel bills, and unions that aren't used to having their way in every controversy.

Plante says entire industries serving film makers have sprung up in Toronto in the last decade as the city hosted 36 major features supposedly set in New York: companies supply yellow New York cabs, a New York bus, fiberglass New York fire hydrants, ersatz New York newspaper boxes — plus plenty of portable trash.

"Trash it up, paint it up, put in a couple of bagel stores on the corner," he said. "There you have it: New York."

This kind of talk infuriates Alan S. Gordon, eastern executive secretary of the Directors Guild of America, which has launched a "New York initiative" to win back Hollywood's heart.

Grossman says talk of union problems and other hassles is greatly exaggerated. Post-boycott, many of the crafts unions brought their contracts in line with those offered by the Los Angeles unions. Before the boycott, East Coast locals got double time after eight hours of work, while West Coast locals got time-and-a-half. Workers on both coasts now get time-and-a-half pay for overtime work.

The major exception to harmony on the union front is Teamsters Local 817, whose new three-year contract was reportedly settled before a glitch emerged last Friday.

The union and the studios continued to negotiate this weekend, said Thomas J. O'Donnell.

Even the most enthusiastic New York boosters have a few complaints. John McGuire, an executive with the Screen Actors Guild, says the city has failed to spend the money necessary to re-attract filmmakers to the land of "Serpico" and "Mean Streets" despite the promise of about $3 billion a year from the film business.

This week Brick requested "substantially greater" funding of the film office and Dinkins said he will support that request.

Brick promises to pursue smaller independent film makers by visiting festivals in Cannes, Berlin, Toronto and Sundance, Utah, and plans to meet with major studio executives to reel in the big films.
