Libya decides to evacuate embassy

LONDON (AP) — Libya reportedly has decided to evacuate its besieged embassy in London next Sunday just a few hours before a deadline set by Britain when it broke diplomatic relations with the North African nation.

"We will go on the last day, on the Sunday, in the afternoon," Britain's domestic news agency, the Press Association, quoted a Libyan spokesman as saying today. The spokesman, reached by telephone in the embassy, declined to be identified.

There was no official confirmation from Tripoli, the Libyan capital.

A Scotland Yard spokesman who declined to be identified told The Associated Press, "They have to make plans to leave and we are making plans to assist them. As for where, when and how they leave, we know the answers to most of these questions, but we cannot make them public."

Britain broke relations and ordered the evacuation Sunday in a move designed to end a diplomatic standoff that began last Tuesday when a submachine gun was fired from an embassy window at Libyan exiles demonstrating against Col. Moammar Khadafy's regime.

Constable Yvonne Fletcher was killed and 11 protesters were injured. The embassy has been ringed by police marksmen since then.

Libya expressed "astonishment and displeasure" at the British order and declared it "holds the British government responsible for this decision and its consequences."

Nevertheless, Britain said the building in St. James's Square will lose its diplomatic status, — and immunity from assault — at midnight Sunday, freeing police to search the embassy.

Home Secretary Leon Brittan said the emerging Libyans would be searched for arms but will be given safe passage home.

Britain conceded the Libyans would be able to move out any arms in diplomatic bags, which are inviolate under the 1961 Vienna Convention on diplomatic relations, and official sources said there was little chance of finding the killer of Constable Fletcher.

Brittain said the investigation into the shooting would continue as a "matter of record." He said police would be free to search the embassy, officially known as the Libyan People's Bureau, after Sunday.

"Taking account of the need to rid the country of this dangerous presence in that bureau and the safety of our fellow countrymen in Libya, we concluded that what we're doing is the right thing," he said.

In Libya's capital of Tripoli, the Foreign Ministry issued a statement which said: "The British decision has come amid an atmosphere of acute tension created by the British government, which paved the way for it by launching a racialist campaign of hatred against the Libyan Arab people."

However, the Libyan ministry said "the Libyan people are anxious to provide all security and care" for the 8,000 Britons living in Libya.

Jumpathon aims at goal of 108 hours

An event which might land Snyder in the Guinness Book of World Records is planned here beginning Wednesday.

The gymnasium at Western Texas College will be the setting as members of the WTC chapter of Phi Theta Kappa join with the local chapter of the American Heart Association for an 108-hour Jumpathon.

According to event coordinator Randy Perkins, the student members of PTK as well as other community residents will be seeking pledges ranging from 10 cents to $1-per-hour.

In addition, they hope to set a record for most hours jumped for the world record book.

According to Perkins, there is no established record for group rope jumping. The local jumpers will be attempting to have their efforts recognized.

If all goes according to schedule, the participants in the event will begin jumping at noon Wednesday and go non-stop through midnight Sunday for a total of 108 hours.

Perkins emphasized that the WTC students will be collecting pledges for their efforts only on the college campus. Others wishing to sponsor a jumper or make a pledge should call him at The Shack Restaurant or Dr. Mary Hood at Western Texas College.

Also, those who would like to participate in the event as jumpers should contact Dr. Hood for more information and scheduling.

Jurors excused Monday

Some 90 Scurry County citizens, summoned for jury duty in 132nd District Court Monday morning, were released shortly before 10 a.m. after a defendant accepted a plea bargain agreement offered by District Attorney Pete Greene.

James Jasper White, 31, of Snyder entered a guilty plea Monday morning to a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. He was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

White had been indicted by a Scurry County grand jury in Feburary in connection with a Jan. 24 episode. The defendant allegedly threatened a city police officer with a knife while the officer was placing White under arrest.

The suspect was on parole from TDC at the time of the incident. The five-year sentence assesed against him will be served concurrently with time remaining on his earlier conviction.

He was represented by local attorney Mike Line in Monday's proceedings.

The jury panel dismissed this morning was asked to return to court Wednesday morning when jury selection will begin in a civil action lawsuit styled First National Bank vs Paul Condit.

Centennial plans reported to court

Scurry County commissioners were updated Monday on Centennial events now planned by both the Scurry County Historical Commission and Historic Scurry County Inc.

Lois Bartels met with the court to give the report.

She said she expects a date to be announced this week for a beard growing contest to be conducted in connection with a Centennial Week celebration here.

The activities are to begin June 28 and continue through July 4.

In addition, she noted that Historic Scurry County Inc. is planning tours of the Dodson House, the old county jail and a walking tour of historic homes in Snyder.

She noted also plans to unveil a plaque at the Dodson House to the memory of the late Paul Sizemore, an early supporter of that project.

The historical commission plans to offer a prize also for the best docorated float in the July 4th parade with a Centennial theme.

An old-timers reunion is slated also in connection with a July 3 barbecue and "Hootennany" in Towle Park.

For the ladies, an authenic costume contest is planned. A display of historic photos will be on view at the Scurry County Museum as well.

Propose nuclear cooperation...

U.S.-China near agreement

HONOLULU (AP) — American and Chinese negotiators are close to hammering out an interim nuclear cooperation agreement that may be ready for President Reagan to sign on his visit to China this week, senior U.S. officials say.

"It is more than possible," said a senior aide traveling with Reagan, who arrived here Sunday. Such an agreement would be significant because it would clear the way for American contractors to bid on billions of dollars in lucrative nuclear equipment contracts.

But the aide, who insisted on anonymity, said the agreement would only partly address the major outstanding dispute, which is whether China will meet the U.S. requirement giving Washington final say over the disposition of nuclear fuel processed by American supplied equipment.

U.S. officials are anxious to have a major accord for Reagan to sign during his visit to China, which begins Thursday.

Reagan, making his second rest stop on his way to China, arrived here Easter Sunday on a flight from Santa Barbara, Calif., saying in an arrival statement he was on "a long journey for peace."

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, later attended Easter services at St. Andrew's Cathedral, one of the few times in recent months Reagan has attended public church services.

At Hickam Air Force Base, the lei-bedecked Reagan told a crowd of about 2,000 that "our prayers this afternoon will not just be for the success of this mission, but for an enduring peace among the peoples of all nations."

The traditional flower leis were placed around Reagan's neck by Jean Ariyoshi, wife of Hawaii's Democratic governor, George Ariyoshi, who greeted the president in the bright sunshine. A U.S. Navy band played various songs, including "Easter Parade."

The 73-year-old president planned to remain here until Tuesday to rest and make additional preparations for his journey to Peking.

Home health aimed at fed shortfall

(This is the last of a three-part series related to how local hospital officials are adjusting to new Medicare guidelines which have substantially reduced the federal dollar flow into Cogdell Memorial Hospital.)

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Later this week, Cogdell Memorial Hospital officials are expecting to advance services offered through the facility into a new area of medical treatment.

The addition will be home health care — a change which officials hope will address two situations created by the same source.

The source is the newly implemented Medicare Prospective Pricing System (PPS) and its related DRG-formula method of payment — a plan that pays a set one-time fee based upon diagnosis.

The result has been fewer federal dollars to reimburse Cogdell for the treatment of Medicare patients — a $74,000 shortfall during the first three months of 1984.

Along with this, the PPS plan will pay only for "medically necessary" hospital treatment — a narrowing of payment guidelines which has prompted all U.S. hospitals to take a closer look at how long a Medicare patient should be hospitalized.

According to Cy Miller, administrator at Cogdell, the move to home health care services is one means to address both situations.

With home health care services, a patient at Cogdell can be released with the assurance that treatment can continue in their home under the supervision of the same medical staff.

These services will include physical therapy, speech therapy, occupational therapy and in general the "skilled services" associated with the hospital nursing staff.

"What we call primary treatment will still be performed only in the hospital," Miller said. "The followup treatment can then be given in the home."

All such services will be performed based upon a doctor's orders and supervision.

Medicare will pay for such services in addition to the payments received for the hospital stay. Miller said the Medicare-related home health services at Cogdell will likely be a "break-even proposition."

But he predicts that home health care overall will generate additional income for the facility — a move that will help offset the future loss of dollars related to changes in the Medicare law.

Ask Us

Q. — I've read in area papers that people below the poverty level in Abilene have been given such commodities as milk, flour, meal, cheese and butter. Are Scurry County citizens entitled to this program also?

A. — At the last distribution of federal surplus food, local citizens who have qualified were given cheese, butter, honey and flour. County officials say they expect other food items in addition to cheese and butter to be distributed at future dates. The county serves as the distributor for such items, however, not as the supplier. Because of this, they note they do not know exactly what items will be available here.

In Brief

Jurors to decide sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — An eight-man, four-woman jury decides today whether 24-year-old Karla Faye Tucker should receive life in prison or death by injection for killing a man with 21 blows from a pick ax.

The Harris County jury on Thursday found the Houston woman guilty of capital murder in the slaying of Jerry Lynn Dean as Dean lay in his bed last June. Deborah Thornton, 32, also was slain in the incident at Dean's apartment, apparently because she witnessed the Dean slaying, prosecutors said.

Ms. Tucker, however, was tried only for the Dean killing.

Defense attorney Mack Arnold, who told the jury in closing arguments Thursday that his client was guilty, has said he will argue that she was intoxicated and temporarily insane during the killing and should be given life in prison.

Among the evidence in the case was a tape recording on which Ms. Tucker explained she received sexual gratification with each swing of the ax.

Faction denies killing aide

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Popular Liberation Force, one of the five leftist rebel groups fighting in El Salvador, has denied responsibility for killing the Salvadoran who was a top security chief at the U.S. Embassy.

The security officer, Joaquim Alfredo Zapata Romero, was shot and killed a week ago, and a note left at a San Salvador radio station the next day said members of the Popular Liberation Force killed him because of alleged links with right-wing death squads.

However, a communique from Popular Liberation Force commander Leonel Gonzalez, read Sunday over the rebels' clandestine radio station, said the organization "is not responsible for the assassination of Zapata." It did not explain the delay in denying responsibility.

Reporters who saw the note left at the radio station said the message did not have the official emblem of the Popular Liberation Force and carried an outdated slogan.

Iraq-Iran might end war

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq's information minister says the 3½-year-old war with Iran could be settled even if Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini remains in power in Iran.

Latif Nsayef Jassem, in an interview this weekend with The Associated Press, disagreed with those who contend that Khomeini's hatred for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is so great that the war cannot end before the death of Iran's 84-year-old patriarch.

Khomeini has said the war will end only when Hussein is overthrown.

Jassam said: "When Khomeini feels that the war will cost him his life and the life of his government regime, he will turn to peace. He is a politician, not an ideologue."

Celebrate traditional Easter holiday

By the Associated Press

From tornado-flattened churches to the decks of a luxury cruise ship, from the Hollywood Bowl to the Atlantic City Boardwalk, Americans celebrated Easter with traditional egg hunts, religious services, fancy hats and parades.

"On this Easter Sunday, we're thinking about the power of God and the Resurrection," the Rev. Guy Reedy told parishioners in Water Valley, Miss., where a tornado killed seven people Saturday and ripped the top off the First Baptist Church.

Gazing at his small flock sitting on chunks of broken concrete, piles of brick and wooden chairs pulled from the ravaged church, Reedy added: "We can look around at all this, and see the hand of God. He has spared us."

Meanwhile, in New York City, more than 40 children boarded the Queen Elizabeth 2 in search of 500 chocolate-covered marshmallow eggs and one bonus egg redeemable for a three-day cruise on Long Island Sound.

After being handed a basket and a fluffy, stuff bunny, the children scurried from room to room of the huge luxury liner. Five-year-old Tara Schein of Manhattan was the lucky winner of the three-day cruise.

Across town, thousands of people lined up in cool but sunny weather to march in the Big Apple's annual Easter parade.

Thousands of Los Angeles-area residents began their Easter Sunday at the traditional daybreak nondenominational service at the Hollywood Bowl. The program included a reading by actor Mickey Rooney and chorale singing of hymns and gospel music in the open-air bowl.

Holiday celebrators also donned Easter bonnets and spring clothes in parades and promenades in Philadelphia's Rittenhouse Square and along Atlantic City's famous Boardwalk.

In Wilmington, Mass., five anti-nuclear protesters were arrested for trespassing at the Avco Systems Division plant after slipping through a fence about 3:30 a.m. to celebrate Easter Mass, police said.

The five, including a Roman Catholic priest, refused to pay $20 bail and spent their holiday in jail, police said. Avco makes components used in the construction of nuclear missiles.

About two dozen protesters interrupted a morning service at Shadyside Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh to lecture worshipers about corporate responsibility for laid-off workers.

The protesters, members of a coalition of union leaders and ministers, said they selected Shadyside because its congregation includes the vice chairman and chief operating officer of U.S. Steel Corp., Thomas C. Graham, and several other corporate leaders. Churchgoers tried in vain to drown out the speech with song.

An estimated 1,200 people attended a sunrise Easter service on the south rim of the Grand Canyon in Arizona, a tradition since 1902.

In Wayne, N.J., hard hit by floods earlier in the month, the American Red Cross prepared an Easter dinner and show for about 75 people who have been unable to return to their homes.

Paul Harvey

If cave men invented the art of "make-do," it was refined by farmers.

And to this day, nobody more than a farmer knows how to "make-do" with whatever he has. He'll improvise a fence-puller from a hank of wire and a hickory limb. A horseshoe from a hunk of car tire, an ax handle from a persimmon sprout — and he'll make harnesses out of hay wire, feed sacks and shoe parts.

Leastwise, he used to.

Farmers, like the rest of us, have lost their genius for improvisation in direct proportion to the availability of store-bought implements and hired mechanics.

But east of Hickman in Lancaster County, Nebraska, is a father-and-son farm of 2,000 acres where Dale and Todd Harlan still know how to make-do.

When they need a farm implement, they invent it.

Todd Harlan thought pig feeding with a wheelbarrow and bucket was a tedious waste of time, so he automated it. He invented what he calls a "Choreboy." On wheels it moves among the farrowing pens, dispensing balanced rations automatically.

Nobody likes to stir manure — yet it has to be stirred to ripen and digest itself. So the Harlans invented a lagoon manure stirrer.

They designed and built their own field cultivator.

During the Nebraska drought of the last two years, just being an efficient farmer was not good enough. Profitable farming required efficiency-plus.

So the Harlans adapted to their 1480 International Combine a 12-row air planter.

"When in the world do you find time both to manufacture and to farm?" I asked.

Todd said, "This is what we do on rainy days."

And this year's long winter gave them time to invent and build "The Amazing Bean Machine."

From scrap iron, propane tanks and an old grain dryer — and 1,300 hours — Dale and Todd built a machine which, right out in the field, cooks soybeans, vaporizes the oil, converts raw beans into more palatable high-protein stock feed.

What's next: A double-crop planter with which the Harlans can combine wheat and plant beans at the same time! I've not heard of more ingenious improvisors since LeTorneau than the Harlans of Hickman, Nebraska. I hope they get rich. But then, in the ways that count, they already are.

Gas and bloating

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there a cure for excess gas and bloating? This problem has tormented me for several years and the doctors are unable to find out the cause. It has me running to the bathroom continuously.

My bowel movements are normal. I've had a barium enema and X-rays of the small bowel, allergy tests and a lactose tolerance test. The lactose tolerance test was normal, but actually caused tremendous gas during the latter part of the test.

I'm a female, early 30s, in good health otherwise.

DEAR READER — Your problem is more common that you might think. Some reports indicate that as many as half of the patients who consult a gastroenterologist do so because of gas and its symptoms of distention and abdominal cramping.

There are two main ways gas problems can occur. One is from swallowing air. Many people do this and it's been proven by measuring the gas. If it includes a lot of nitrogen, it's from swallowed air. A person may not be aware of swallowing air.

The other way gas develops is from fermentation of foods. That's usually undigested foods fermented by bacteria in the colon. Milk and milk products are frequently offenders. In that case it's the undigested milk sugar — lactose — that causes the problem.

If you had so much gas during the lactose tolerance test I'd be suspicious of a problem with lactose, regardless of the other measurements that may have been done during the test. You can check this out by eliminating all milk and milk products from your diet. If your symptoms subside you may have solved your problem.

Otherwise it's a question of a diligent search for any foods you can't tolerate and eliminating them from your diet.

To help you understand the problem I'm sending you the Health Letter 6-8, Controlling Gaseousness. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What causes a very slight yellowing on the inside of the eye? The yellowing is on the white of the eye, not the pupil or iris. It's on both eyes near the tear ducts. Otherwise my eyes seem fine. They're not red and they don't hurt. I don't wear glasses.

DEAR READER — Yellowing is from pigment accumulation. Your letter suggests a faint amount of jaundice. A very faint jaundice effect usually means a slightly increased amount of red blood cell destruction so that the body is overloaded in processing the iron pigment in red blood cells. Or it may mean a minor abnormality in liver function. In the absence of any symptoms it's not likely to be serious.

You should have it checked. A blood test that measures the amount of bile pigment in the blood can determine whether you really have jaundice or not.

The other possibility is that you're taking a medicine that may result in an increased pigment formation. Some of the anti-malarial drugs have this effect.

Victim changes her mind

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Elizabeth Bouvia, the quadraplegic cerebral palsy victim who staged a lengthy legal battle to be allowed to die, changed her mind Easter morning and asked for help "to get better," a newspaper reported today.

At a motel she had her first solid food in seven months — a Mexican sweet roll, the San Diego Union reported.

She later had french fries, part of an egg and muffin and two burritos at the Mexican hospital where she returned for treatment of a possible infection, the paper said.

According to the report, Ms. Bouvia felt frustrated in being unable to carry out her death wish and gave in to the advice of friends to seek medical help during an intensely emotional nightlong discussion in a Mexican motel room.

In 1864, Abraham Lincoln was elected to a second term as president.

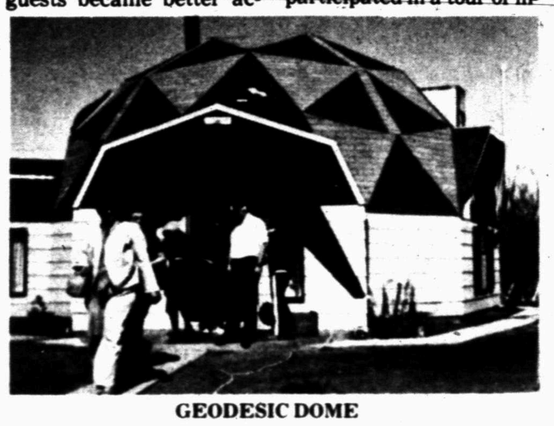
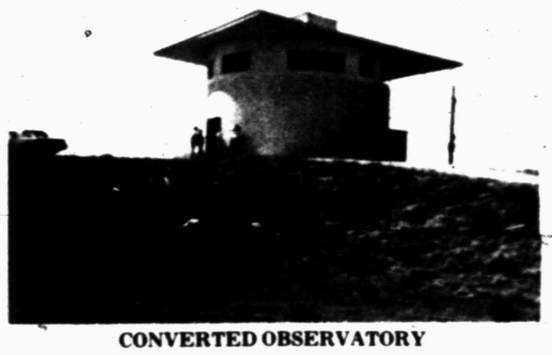
Unusual homes seen by extension homemakers

Twenty-four extension homemakers and their guests became better acquainted with their own county April 14 as they participated in a tour of interesting and unusual homes.



GEODESIC DOME



CONVERTED OBSERVATORY

COWBOY CHURCH

Their first stop was at the geodesic dome residence of Frank and Mary Beauchamp in Snyder. The house, which looked small from the outside, was surprisingly spacious and bright on the inside. The convenience of practical storage areas tucked into unusual places and especially the carousel clothes closet were appreciated by the visiting homemakers as well as the energy efficiency of the home.

Jucticeberg was the next stop where members of the Miller family escorted the ladies to the Cowboy Church and related stories concerning most of the furnishings in the small rustic structure. The ladies then toured the no-yet-completed Fort Justice, the log structure being built on Highway 84 by the Millers. Lunch was eaten at the Riley Miller ranch amidst antique wagons and carriages.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Priest at Lake Thomas was the first afternoon stop. The Priests converted the concrete and cement block circular structure that once housed a large telescope into an attractive and interesting home with a far-reaching view. The home is warmed with passive solar heating during the winter months.

Leaving the ranch country behind, the tour continued to China Grove. Here the group visited the earth sheltered home which is being built by Ronnie and Laura Hall.

Interesting sidelights of "Scurry County Day" were seeing buffalo and longhorn cattle, wildflowers in bloom, and driving across the dry bed of what was once Lake J. B. Thomas.

Lovely Lisa Whelchel of television's hit comedy "Facts Of Life" likes to keep her fitness routines simple. What to wear? "I have a great collection of T-shirts," she revealed to Beauty Digest magazine. "So I just pull one out, jump into a pair of jogging pants and I'm off. It's simple — that's the way I like it."

Jim: "South opened one of those 15-point no-trumps. North bid a very conservative two no-trump."

Oswald: "East stuck in a three-spade overcall and South passed. North bid three no-trump, realizing too late that he should have bid three no-trump at his first turn."

Jim: "West opened his third-best spade. Spades were continued, with South winning the third one. Now it was up to South to attack clubs. To take a finesse was the normal play, but South, who liked to overbid, saw that if East held the king (as was likely from the bidding), the losing finesse would cost South his contract."

Oswald: "South also saw that he might make his contract if East's king of clubs was a singleton, so South clattered up with his ace. The king dropped and the rest of the tricks went to South."

Jim: "We don't like to see bad bidding rewarded. However, we heartily approve of good dummy play, so we must give this South full credit for his safety play."

Oswald: "It is also worthy of note that if North had immediately raised to three no-trump, as he should have, East would have been shut out and West would have had to guess what suit to lead."

Dear Abby

Sometimes Teachers Need Thanks for Not Giving Up

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the president of the South Philadelphia High School Alumni Association, and I have a confession to make.

We saw this item in your column in the Philadelphia Daily News, and we liked it so much we used it in our newsletter:

"Dear Abby: What a thrill I just had! A former student of many years just telephoned from across the country to tell me that I had made a difference in his life. He wanted to thank me for not giving up on him.

"He began his conversation by saying, 'You probably won't even remember me ...' How wrong he was. Not only did I remember what he looked like, I even remembered his small, neat handwriting.

"Abby, if any of your readers had a schoolteacher who has made a difference in their lives, please urge them to take a few minutes to let that teacher know.

"One call from a former student has inspired me to hang in there with students I now have and will have in the future.—Ula Pendelton, Los Angeles

"Dear Ula: Thank you for inspiring the following: Readers: Did you have a teacher who made a difference in your life? A teacher who encouraged you to stay in school when you wanted to quit? A teacher who believed in you and your ability to succeed when you had no confidence in yourself? A teacher who stayed late to give you the extra help you needed? If so, please phone or write that teacher and say thank you. It will make that teacher's day."

Abby, because of that write-up, a lot of former South Philadelphia students contacted their former teachers, and it really made their day. Keep up the good work. I hope you don't mind.

BILL ESHER, HADDONFIELD, N.J.

DEAR BILL: It's a great idea that deserves to be repeated, and I'm delighted you found it useful.

However, copyrighted material (and mine is) should never be reproduced without the permission of the author.

DEAR ABBY: It's class reunion time again, and I have a gripe to air. I've attended five reunions of my high school class (mid-'50s), and at each one prizes were given to the "longest married," "member with the oldest child," "member with the most children," "member with the eldest grandchild," "person with the most grandchildren," and "person who has traveled the farthest distance to attend."

Year after year, the winner of the first five categories has been the same lady! As a girl she created the scandal of the town when she eloped in the 10th grade and carried a baby during her junior year. Now she is being "honored" for her "reproduction" record. (Tacky, tacky!)

We have alumni who have distinguished themselves. One was recently elected to a state office, another has published a book, another was just honored for outstanding volunteer service to his community, and we have a nurse who started a special program for disabled people in the hospital where she works. These people sit quietly and are not even acknowledged at our reunions.

Another thing: The planners always schedule a costly dinner dance. Most of the kids I knew were poor then, and are poor now! Why can't they schedule a bring-your-own picnic somewhere in a park? I don't travel 500 miles to see everyone's new clothes and jewelry. I want to see old friends.

Sign me "Miss Virginia" or I won't be able to go to any more reunions.

MISS VIRGINIA

Self-professed mass murderer says he belonged to death cult

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, a self-professed mass murderer sentenced to die for killing a hitchhiker, says he was inspired by a cult known as "The Hands of Death" which has hundreds of followers.

A key law enforcement officer involved in the Lucas case would only say that the claim is being investigated, while a Catholic lay worker says Lucas is not the first prisoner who has claimed membership in the cult.

"I belonged to a cult," Lucas told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in an interview from the Williamson County Jail, published Sunday. "It was a devil's organization. For initiation, you would have to go out and kill a person."

Lucas, a 47-year-old drifter convicted in four killings, claims to have slain about 360 people during an interstate spree of terror from 1975 until his arrest in Texas in 1983. Investigators say they have cleared over 100 killings following interviews with Lucas, who now faces murder charges in six states.

A jury in San Angelo sentenced him to death April 13 for the slaying of an unidentified female hitchhiker near this Central Texas city.

According to Lucas, the cult killed by contract and performed ritual cremations and crucifixions of animals and humans to promote "a reincarnation of the devil."

Now, Lucas says he has had a religious experience and has decided to embrace Christianity.

A Texas Ranger who has worked with the Lucas case since November said Lucas told law enforcement officials about the cult some time ago.

"We are aware of (Lucas' story) and it is being investigated by the proper authorities," said Ranger Sgt. Bob Prince, who declined to say what agency is handling the probe or whether corroborating evidence has been found to back Lucas' story.

Lucas and his traveling companion, Ottis Toole, who has been implicated in several killings, began mentioning the cult several months ago during interviews with law officers across the country, the Star-Telegram reported.

Toole, who faces trial in Florida on Monday in connection with an arson-related death, also claimed cult membership, investigators said.

During the interview, Lucas referred repeatedly to a companion who was involved "even more deeply than I was," in the cult. Toole is the only man known to have traveled frequently with Lucas.

A Catholic lay worker who has befriended Lucas said she was aware of stories about the cult. The church worker, who has ministered to prisoners in the Williamson County Jail, said she heard of the cult from two other prisoners long before she met Lucas.

Sister Clemmie, who asked that her surname not be used, said two prisoners told her that they could not convert to Christianity because they feared they would be killed for disavowing the cult.

Lucas said his imprisonment last summer on a charge of killing an 80-year-old Ringgold woman led to a transformation in his life.

Since becoming a Christian, Lucas said he is "pushing" law enforcement agencies to uncover and destroy the cult. The cult's activities "all tie in with what the Bible is against," he said.

Lucas said Sister Clemmie has helped him realize that God gave him the memory to recall details of murder scenes and the appearances of victims even in slayings that he committed five or six years ago.

A bitterness toward society began in his childhood and led to his years of repeated murder, Lucas said. Lucas said his mother's practice of prostitution led to his hatred of women.

Lucas was convicted of killing his mother in 1960 and spent 10 years in prison and a mental hospital in Michigan.

Lucas said a man in Shreveport, La., first approached him about joining the cult, to which, he later learned, his "companion" already belonged.

Wife abuse noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women attacked by their husbands or ex-husbands are the most common victims of family violence, and crimes between spouses are more likely to be repeated and to produce injuries than violent crimes by other relatives or strangers, the Justice Department says.

Reporting Sunday on massive survey results from 1973 through 1981, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said crimes by spouses or ex-spouses make up 57 percent of all violent crimes committed between relatives. And 91 percent of the attacks on spouses were committed by the husband or ex-husband.

One quarter of the victims of spousal attacks had suffered at least three similar attacks within the previous six months. By comparison, victims of attacks by their parents, siblings, other relatives and strangers reported repeated attacks in only 15 percent, 13 percent, 11 percent and 9 percent of the cases, respectively.

Nearly 58 percent of the victims of attacks by spouses or ex-spouses reported injuries, most of them minor, compared to only 38 percent of the victims of the attacks by other relatives and 27 percent of the victims of attacks by non-relatives.

Based on results of its National Crime Survey for the nine-year period, the bureau estimated there were 4,108,000 cases of violence in which the offender was a spouse, ex-spouse, parent, child, brother, sister or other relative of the victim. This is an average of 456,000 cases a year, but the bureau said that number understates the extent of family violence because many instances are not reported.

The bureau said this total represented 7.2 percent of all the violent crimes uncovered by the survey during the nine years, by far the smallest source of violence measured.

By comparison, strangers were responsible for 58.2 percent of the violent crimes during the period, and acquaintances were blamed for 32.7 percent of them. The relationship between victim and offender could not be determined in 1.9 percent of the cases.

Houston couple loses 2 black market babies

HOUSTON (AP) — Adoption officials say a shortage of babies may be tempting more people to consider black market adoptions, but a Houston couple warn that private adoptions can be heartbreaking and risky.

"Private adoption obviously is an easier way, but it's very dangerous," said Ron Moore, who with his wife, Cindy, adopted two children privately.

Desperate for a baby, the couple twice adopted infants through the black market and lost one when the baby's natural mother changed her mind.

Mrs. Moore has experienced both sides of the adoption process. She married while she was still a teen-ager. The short-lived marriage produced one baby, whom Mrs. Moore, then 18, decided to give up for adoption.

But Mrs. Moore, now 25, learned after she married Ron that she could not have any more children.

Houston officials say offers for black market adoptions — especially for healthy white babies — are growing at an alarming rate.

"All of our waiting adoptive parents get approached with an offer of private adoption," said Lynn Waldeman, a social worker at the DePelchin Faith Home adoption agency.

One or two teen mothers in DePelchin's maternity care division receive private adoption offers each year, said Agnes Zaccarro, a DePelchin social worker. But she said at least 11 mothers received such offers over the past year, more than half of them during the past month.

The Moores said they received one of their first black market adoption offers from a from a lawyer — who also was a priest. The man claimed he had a baby available for $12,000, said Moore. He said their lawyer refused the offer and tried to have the man prosecuted.

Then the Moores said their rabbi told them of a baby girl they could adopt privately.

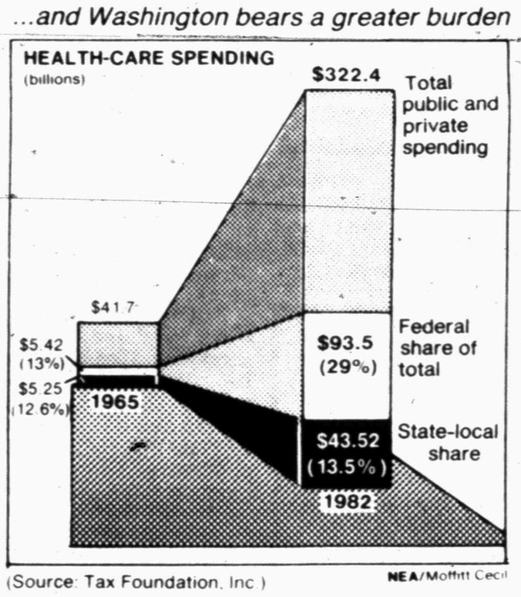
"You want a baby so bad, you ignore everything," Mrs. Moore said.

Moore said he and his wife "spread the word across the continent" that they were desperate for a child to adopt.

"It's not what you know, it's who you know," Moore said.

HEALTH COSTS SKYROCKET

...and Washington bears a greater burden



(Source: Tax Foundation, Inc.) NEA/Moffitt Cecil

The bill for U.S. health care is nearly eight times higher today than it was in 1965, and the burden of payment has shifted from the private sector to the government — particularly the federal government.

Back from vacation, Congress faces new money headaches

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the administration scrambles for ways to salvage its policies in Central America, Congress returns to work on Tuesday to face the necessity of raising the government's borrowing authority by hundreds of billions of dollars to pay the bills for another year.

Despite general congressional agreement on tax and spending cuts designed to shrink federal deficits by up to $182 billion over the next three years, the Treasury is just days away from bumping up against the current national debt ceiling of $1.49 trillion.

So the Senate, back from a 10-day Easter recess, must act soon on the administration's request to lift the debt limit to just under $1.6 trillion over the next five months and to $1.83 trillion through Sept. 30, 1985, the end of the next fiscal year. The new levels already have cleared the House.

Regardless of how the debate over current spending and taxes evolves, the bureaucracy could grind to a halt early next month without the new line of credit.

Meanwhile, the White House is searching for new approaches in its efforts to salvage an aid package for El Salvador and other Central American nations, especially in the wake of severe congressional fallout over the disclosure that the CIA played a direct role in the war being fought by rebels against the leftist regime in Nicaragua.

Before taking the Easter break, both the House and Senate passed non-binding resolutions that effectively condemned the mining of Nicaraguan harbors and expressed the sense of Congress that no such activities would be financed by U.S. funds in the future.

The administration wanted to provide $21 million in direct aid to Nicaraguan rebels, but that package is all but dead in the House, where Democratic leaders had steadfastly opposed it even before the disclosures about direct CIA involvement in the harbor mining and commando attacks against port facilities.

Moreover, President Reagan has dipped into discretionary accounts to send assistance to El Salvador, lacking specific approval by Congress, and his broader program of $8 billion in aid to the Caribbean region over the next five years is mired in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., asserted over the weekend that there are "serious questions about whether U.S. military personnel in El Salvador and Honduras are being intentionally and systematically introduced into situations involving direct combat or other hostilities."

In a letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, Kennedy said that "Congress and the country are already deeply concerned over the administration's secret war in Nicaragua and our lack of knowledge about the direct and growing role of CIA personnel in that area. There is no justification whatever for the administration to defy the Constitution and laws of the United States by permitting the escalation of similar combat activities by U.S. forces."

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were higher at midday dealings today.

The average price for strict low middling 1 & 1-16 inch spot cotton advanced 49 points to 74.53 cents a pound Thursday for the eight markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were $1.40 to $2.75 a bale higher than the previous close, May 79.55, Jul 79.67, Aug b77.60,Oct 76.80, Dec 74.45, Mar 76.00, May b76.40 and Jul b76.60.

Theft noted at residence

Snyder police were called to investigate a single theft complaint over the weekend.

Bill Caldwell of 207 Elm St. called city police at 4:50 p.m. Sunday and told investigators that three rings and two knives had been stolen from his residence sometime between 10 a.m. Thursday and 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Total value of the missing items was listed at $220.

In other action, local officers filed a report for assault Saturday night after being called to a domestic disturbance at a North Snyder residence around 11 p.m.

No formal charges had been filed or arrests made by Monday morning, however.

City police also arrested six subjects for public intoxication and one for DWI over the weekend.

Possible AIDS cause found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers announced today they have discovered and isolated a virus they say is likely to be the primary cause of AIDS, the mysterious and deadly disease that destroys the body's protective immune system.

Details of the research, which closely parallels work by French scientists reported last week, were to be released today at a news conference held by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Scientists at the National Institutes of Health, which is part of HEW, and other institutions also were announcing that they have devised a system to routinely detect and grow the elusive virus, a major step for future research.

This system of specially cultured human cells provides large quantities of the virus that can be used for detailed analysis, as well as future work on a potential preventive vaccine and treatments for the disease itself, experts say.

In addition to today's announcement, four papers describing the work by Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute and many colleagues will be published this week in the journal Science.

According to the papers and scientists familiar with the work, the virus in question appears to be a member of a family of viruses called human T-cell leukemia virus (HTLV) previously suspected of having a role in AIDS.

The NIH researchers said the new virus, called HTLV-3, shares so many characteristics with other HTLV viruses that it has to belong to this family despite some structural differences.

Scientists said they suspect HTLV-3 is very closely related, if not identical, to a recently publicized AIDS candidate virus called lymphadenopathy associated virus. LAV was discovered last year by French researchers at the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

Cogdell plans home health

To add home health services, Cogdell must first be licensed through the state, and a visit from state officials is expected this Wednesday regarding this licensing.

If approved — and Miller said he forsees no problems regarding this — Cogdell will be in the home health care business as soon as Thursday.

In the past, privately-operated home health care agencies have been in Snyder. These are closed now, including the former West Texas Home Health Agency and a second such service operated in addition to a local nursing home.

Looking toward the future, Miller said he expects adjustments in the new Medicare laws. "A lot of the rules were written with big city hospitals in mind. But what might work in Dallas isn't going to make it in Snyder."

The "working assumption" for the future, however, is that Medicare reimbursement to Cogdell is going to be substantially less.

And that this reduction in federal dollars will be the final blow to many "struggling" hospitals in Texas and the U.S.

"Since hospitals know they may wind up eating a bunch of Medicare expenses, they're going to be reluctant to take an out-of-county patient.

"The bottom line is that all hospitals are going to have to take care of their own first," Miller said. "For Cogdell, that means Scurry County."

Change noticed

RICHWOOD, W.Va. (AP) — For years, a weekly newspaper here has included Bible excerpts in its columns. But last week, not trusting faith, the publisher decided to see if anybody was reading the feature.

"So one day when I found the staff out for lunch after final proofing, I found the Gettysburg Address and slipped it between paragraphs of verses of the book of Joshua," Jim Comstock, publisher of the Nicholas County News Leader, said Saturday.

"The idea was, if nobody called at all we would stop running it," he said.

Well, the Bible column will stay, Comstock says, even though only one person noticed the switch.

That reader, in a terse letter, wrote: "You certainly don't use the same version of the Bible as I do."

The World Health Organization announced in 1975 that Asia was free of smallpox for the first time in history.

Now second in region...

Western wins HSU rodeo

ABILENE -- Shane Smith grabbed all-around champion honors in leading Western Texas College to an important victory in the Hardin-Simmons NIRA rodeo over the weekend here.

Western accumulated 358 points to win the rodeo - but more importantly to move into second place in the Southwest Region with 1,055 total points. First and second place teams in the final region standings will advance to the College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont.

I don't know if I should make reservations for Bozeman yet or not. I think I'll wait a week," laughed WTC rodeo coach Bob Doty. "But it's a lot better to be winning second than to be winning fifth. Let everybody else chase us for awhile."

Sul Ross State University is a runaway first place with 1,998. Third is New Mexico Junior College with 991.33. Tarleton has 953.5 for fourth and EMNU has 857 for fifth.

Despite leading NMJC by only a handful of points with two rodeos left, Doty explained that Western appeared to be in good shape.

"You count your best five rodeos and we have one that was just 90 points. New Mexico's lowest rodeo (of the five) has been 150 so they have to get 150 points before they can even begin to catch us. Hopefully we can get in another real good rodeo and that will really help," he said.

Smith took second in bareback and saddle bronc, and tied for fourth in bull riding to claim all-around honors.

His effort, and those of his teammates, gave WTC 358 points to outdistance runnerup Sul Ross State University's 323. Tarleton State University - which will host a rodeo this weekend - was third with 178.5 points. New Mexico Junior College was fourth with 137.

Smith scored a 76 in the bareback, a 72 in saddle bronc and a 68 in bull riding. Greg Rhodes, of WTC also scored a 68 to tie with Smith for fourth.

Gary Rowe took second in the calf roping with a 10.8 while Randy Bomar's 12.4 was good enough for fourth place.

Rowdy Rasberry scored a 73 for second place in the bull riding. Donnie Yorks placed sixth in steer wrestling with a 7.4 second run.

Western Texas' women did not place as a Canita Case was the only girl to land in the standings. She took fourth in goat tying with a 10.8 run.

Sul Ross won the women's division with 325 points, followed by Eastern New Mexico University with 173 and Howard College with 99.

As a result, the women's region standings now have SRSU in first with 1,174.5. Western's women have 1,033. Howard has 794.75 points for third.

"The girls and the boys both are postioned to make the finals or not, depending on what we do the last two rodeos," said Doty. "Besides Sul Ross, nobody has had that big a rodeo (358 points) all year. The guys have been way over due. We drew well and that helped."

In individual region standings, Smith moved into first place in the bareback and Rasberry is now second in the bull riding.

Kellie Kyle continued to hold down second in the barrels and all-around in the women's regional standings.

Tarleton will be a single-go rodeo, beginning Thursday. Performances are 8 nightly through Saturday.

WTC men's team members are Rowe, Smith, Bomar, Rasberry, Van Hale and Todd Whatley. Women's members will be chosen from Judy Cox, Canita Cass, Sheila Fifer and Kyle.

The final rodeo will be at Hobbs, N.M. (New Mexico JC) the 4-5-6 of May and will also be a single-go rodeo.

2-4A baseball action begins again Tuesday

PECOS -- District 2-4A baseball action heats up again Tuesday after taking a day off Friday.

The action features a game between the Snyder Tigers and Pecos Eagles here at 7:30 in what could lead to a district championship for one of the teams.

Snyder comes into the game with a league-leading 6-0 record while Pecos is 5-1. In other contests, Andrews is at Monahans, also at 7:30, and Lamesa hosts Fort Stockton at 4.

Andrews, 3-3 and feasibly the only other team besides Snyder and Pecos left with a chance for post-season playoff work, is 3-3. Lamesa is 2-4 and Fort Stockton and Monahans are both 1-5.

A Pecos win over Snyder would throw the district lead into a two-way tie. A win for Snyder however, would give the Tigers a two-game cushion with only three games left to play.

Rangers blank Yanks; Darwin keys victory

NEW YORK (AP) - During the off-season, Danny Darwin learned to throw a change-up and he's already beginning to see its results.

"The batters don't look as steady up at the plate as they used to," said the 28-year-old right-handed pitcher, who scattered seven hits over seven innings Sunday in the Texas Rangers' 4-0 victory over the New York Yankees.

"His off-speed pitch really made the difference," said Texas catcher Ned Yost. "He always had the hard stuff and now they have to look for something else. He made the important outs look easy."

Darwin, 2-0, walked two and struck out two in his stint, throwing 103 pitches. Left-hander Mike Mason followed with two innings of hitless relief.

"We don't have the big name pitchers," said Darwin, "but we can pitch."

Texas hurlers shut out the Yankees for two straight games and have not allowed a New York run for 24 consecutive innings. Saturday, starter Frank Tanana and Dave Tobik defeated New York 1-0.

Darwin forced Butch Wynegar into an inning-ending double play with the bases loaded in the fourth and got Willie Randolph to fly out with two men on in the seventh.

The Rangers broke a scoreless deadlock with four runs in the eighth inning off relievers Jose Rijo, 0-1, and Dale Murray.

Designated hitter Mickey Rivers drove in the first run with a single to center. George Wright singled in another, and pinch hitter Pete O'Brien capped the scoring by lining a two-run single to right as Texas sent nine batters to the plate.

Yankee starter Shane Rawley, who hadn't pitched since April 5, threw two-hit ball for seven innings before he was yanked.

Texas converted a freak double play in the bottom of the eighth inning. Following a one-out walk to Steve Kemp, pinch hitter Don Baylor popped a short fly ball to right. With second baseman Wayne Tolleson on the ground, the ball bounced out of the webbing of his glove and into hands of right fielder Larry Parrish, who ran in and stepped on first base for a 4-9 double play.

Tolleson said the ball popped out when his glove hit an outfield water sprinkler.

Berra argued about the play and was ejected.

Cruz lifts Astros to win

ATLANTA (AP) - Manager Bob Lillis of the Houston Astros says hot-hitting by Jose Cruz "helps us go and he's hot right now."

Cruz, who hit a solo homer to win a game Saturday night, drove in a ninth-inning insurance run with his fourth single on a rainy Sunday as the Astros downed the Atlanta Braves 3-1.

Cruz arrived in Atlanta for the three-game series with an anemic .209 batting average. He went nine for 13 in the series, lifting his average to .321.

The ninth inning run made things a little easier for Frank DiPino, the Astros' reliever who retired the last five Atlanta batters in order to gain his third save of the year. DiPino worked out of eighth inning trouble by retiring Bob Watson on a tap to the mound and Dale Murphy on a strikeout with two runners aboard.

Houston built a 2-0 lead in the third on a pair of homers - the second of the year by Craig Reynolds and the first of the season by Enos Cabell.

Chris Chambliss drilled his second homer into the right field seats to cut the lead to 2-1 in the fifth, just before a 41-minute rain delay. The teams played another inning before the game was held up again for 29 minutes.

Heritage Classic

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) - Nick Faldo turned back the charge of Tom Kite with a 2-under-par 69 and became the first Englishman to win on American soil in 12 years Sunday when he scored a one-stroke victory in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

There were 6,163 extra-base hits made in the American League in 1983, a major-league record.

Rare tree discovered

LONDON (AP) — Along with blue blood, the British royal family must have green thumbs.

The Buckingham Palace gardener says he's found a tree at the royal residence that's the only one of its kind in the world.

"Experts have studied it and its leaves, but none can put a name to it or even as to what family it belongs," gardener Douglas Sutherland wrote in a new book published Monday called "The Art of Gentle Gardening."

The tree's branches have a spread of 35 feet.

"It must have sprung up as a sport (deviation from the normal) or mutation.
