Two slain

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A gunman shot four people, killing two, in a rampage through a hospital emergency room Saturday night and was arrested by police about an hour later, officials said.

Police believed the marauder was a 42-year-old man whose father had been treated at Mission Bay Memorial Hospital Friday night. While identities of the gunman and the victims were not released, police said that an emergency room physician, a nurse, an emergency medical technician and a patient's relative were among the victims.

Mailer's mind

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Best-selling authors often know little about people and get away with it because "they have no shame," Norman Mailer says.

Mailer

Among his observations during a talk Friday night at the University of Iowa was that "liberals are tiresome."

"The most difficult thing about being a writer is there are no answers. There are only questions," said the 67-year-old author of "The Naked and the Dead" and "The Executioner's Song."

"Best-sellers are usually written by people who know very little about people," he said. "They get away with it because they have no shame."

Timely trumpets

Easter lilies trumpet the Good News of Christ's resurrection and the newness of life spring promises. Their white blooms herald the end of Lent.

A Holy Season

■ The convergence of Holy Days — Easter, Passover and Ramadan — should remind us that faith — Christian, Jewish and Muslim — exists in cycles like the seasons ... and our lives.

By Peter Steinfels
N.Y. Times News Service

Three of the world's major faiths are in the midst of holy seasons.

This year Easter falls on the same day for both Eastern and Western Christians, and the rituals of Holy Week are moving quickly toward their climax.

Between nightfall Saturday evening and dawn on Sunday, many churches will hold vigils.

Candles will be lit in darkness, infants and adults will be baptized, the bread and wine of the Lord's Table will be shared, sunrise will be greeted, Lenten fasts will be elaborately ended with congregational repasts — all in celebration of the risen Christ.

Meanwhile, it is the fifth day of Passover.

The seders of the first two days are past; in the synagogue on the seventh day Israel's miraculous escape through parted waters will be recounted once again in the Torah reading.

For observant Muslims, the month-long fast of Ramadan is more than half over; next week they will enter its most intense phase, the final 10 days that include Laylat al-Quadr, "the night of power" when the Koran was first revealed to Muhammad.

There are, of course, profound links between two of these holy days, Passover and Easter, and a superficial resemblance between the fasting of Christian Lent and that of Muslim Ramadan.

While each observance, like that of the religious tradition in which it is rooted, has its particular meaning, the convergence of holy days is reminiscent of something about religious life easily forgotten in the din of debates over doctrines or the rise and fall of organizations.

Religion shapes time as well as ideas and morals.

It has its cycles: its yearly seasons and holidays, its weekly worship, its daily prayers, its rites of passage from one stage of life to another.

School finance talks begin Monday

■ Early closures of schools threatened if compromise of finance can't be reached.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House and Senate lawmakers start their first substantive talks on the school finance problem Monday, but prospects for a compromise that will satisfy Gov. Bill Clements look increasingly dim, prompting the specter of early school closings.

Clements last week predicted the Legislature will fail to meet a May 1 deadline set by the Texas Supreme Court, which has ruled the state's current school finance system unconstitutional and illegal.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and co-chairman of a joint conference committee negotiating a compromise, thought lawmakers could reach agreement among themselves, but whether Clements will be happy with the result is an open question, he said.

The governor has promised to veto any bill that calls for new taxes, but Parker thought Clements, "faced with the choice of closing Texas schools," would sign on to "a decent bill that includes a small tax increase."

Both sides in the debate were invoking their impression of public opinion. "The people of Texas fully understand that the Legislature is playing some kind of game," said Clements.

Parker said that if schools close, "I think he may hear what the people of Texas think about it."

Asked when he thought lawmakers might develop a bill to his liking, Clements said, "I have no idea.

"If it takes us through the summer and through Thanksgiving or up until Christmas, I'm right here," he said.

Lawmakers already are nearing the mid-point of their second special session on school finance with more progress in hand than during their first session.

That session ended with House members unable to find common ground on a bill at all, making negotiations with the Senate impossible.

The House last week endorsed substantially the same legislation, but the bill was shorn of mandates that would have increased local education costs and the property taxes that pay for them.

One architect of the House measure, Rep. Nick Perez, D-El Paso, credited Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, one of the most vocal critics of the mandates, with molding the compromise.

During the first session Stiles helped kill House school finance efforts by speaking against the mandates, but in debate last week, Stiles sponsored a key amendment that deleted the objectionable provisions.

Southeast seniors getting home

Building of facility will end wandering group's twenty-year struggle

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

More than 20 years have passed since Myrtle Hall and other southeast Midland residents attempted to establish a place where the elderly could meet and enjoy each other's company.

The predominantly black members of the senior citizens group has had to meet in schools, homes and most recently in the Hollowell United Methodist Church.

But the group will finally have a place of its own, hopefully, in less than a year. Midland City Council last week approved seeking $378,000 in certificates of obligation to build a new center.

The council also approved $35,000 in expenditures for architectural services for the facility, which will be built in Washington Park, located south of East Highway 80 off East Indiana Avenue.

Construction is expected to start in late July or early August and be completed in January 1991, councilmen said.

The final product will represent two decades of waiting and hoping for Ms. Hall, now 72, and her fellow senior citizens who have been meeting since 1968. The road has been bumpy all the way, Ms. Hall said.

"Back then, people said there was no poverty in Midland, so we had trouble getting federal funding," she said. "We had to prove there was poverty."

After landing some federal funds, the group of about 50 senior citizens held programs for the elderly in various Midland Independent School District schools.

Summer-like day forecast

Staff Report

A summer-like spring day is in the offing for today and Monday.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport call for sunny and warm days and fair nights today and Monday.

The high temperature today is to be in the upper 80s, and the low temperature tonight is to be in the upper 50s. Winds are to be southerly at 5 to 15 mph today.

Monday's high temperature is to be near 90 degrees.

Saturday's peak temperature was 82 degrees, and the overnight low was 59 degrees.

The record high temperature for April 14 is 85 degrees in 1935, and the record low for April 15 is 27 degrees in 1933.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms and showers fell over the upper and middle coastal waters Saturday afternoon. A few light showers lingered from near San Antonio to Victoria.

Skies were cloudy in the southeast and eastern sections. But sunny skies prevailed over much of the high plains, low rolling plains and western Trans-Pecos.

A weak cold front stretched from the upper coastal plains westward to South Central Texas, and into the Permian Basin. A weak ridge of high pressure was behind the front.

Northerly winds blew over much of North Central and East Texas. Easterly winds were common in South Texas and much of the Southwest. The high plains and western Red River Valley had southerly winds. Wind speeds statewide ranged from 5 to 15 mph.

The forecast for Sunday called for a chance of showers and thunderstorms in North Texas and in southern West Texas. A chance of afternoon thunderstorms also is predicted for North Texas.

NATION

Large hail fell along a fast-moving cold front in Texas on Saturday, and rain fell across the South and into the Great Lakes region.

A few showers and thunderstorms were scattered from eastern North Carolina to southern Florida. Showers also scattered rain along the northern Rockies and upper Plains.

Rainshowers prevailed from Kentucky northward to the lower Great Lakes region, and the cold front pushed showers and thunderstorms from coastal Texas to western Tennessee.

A twister damaged several buildings in southeast Texas, and funnel clouds were sighted in northern Texas, but no injuries were reported.

Large hail fell Friday in central Oklahoma, where golf ball-size hail was reported six inches deep along Interstate 40 near El Reno, Okla., the National Weather Service said.

A tornado also was spawned southeast of Watonga, and winds gusted to 75 mph at Okarche in Oklahoma.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

HOLY: Confluence sets rhythm of religion

(From 1A)

The religious calendar, by contrast, signals that existence has a script, a meaning.

In Judaism, Christianity and Islam, time is purposeful, redeemable, a story that moves from divine creation to divine culmination.

God acts in history — in the Exodus, in Jesus, in the revelation of the Koran.

According to one's belief, the plot takes a definite turn.

The sacred time of holy days recalls this plot.

It also challenges everyday life and all its inevitable compromises with an alternative, Greenberg said in an interview.

"In the everyday world there are compromises with many kinds of slavery," he said, "but for this period of Passover, Jews re-enact a primordial liberation and go back to daily life changed.

In Easter, Christians experience the triumph of life over death that challenges the triumphs of death they witness every day."

Megan McKenna, a Roman Catholic theologian, said something similar. Sacred time, she said, is "time out to time," when what happened in the past happens again in the present so that the future will be different."

Although Ramadan does not look to the past in the same way as Passover or Easter, the rigors of its fast from daybreak to nightfall are obviously an upending of routine, a disciplining of daily desires and a fostering of solidarity with those in need.

Non-believers may admire the psychological effects or moral pedagogy of the religious calendar.

They may also regret the modern "homogenization of time," as Greenberg calls it, that adjusts even our national holidays so that their historic significance is swallowed up by the simple message "long weekend."

But for believers, holy days are something more — or should be.

God's power is not just remembered. It is recognized as present.

"The culture conditions you to treat this as theater rather than experience," said Greenberg.

"That is the illusion of contemporary culture."

Sinai happened "but it also happens today," he added.

Christians on Saturday night will say "alleluia" not only because they believe God raised Jesus to new life almost two milennia ago but also because they believe those who are baptized this weekend are raised to new life now.

Of course, believers are far from successful in marching to the beat of their different calendar.

The rhythms of prayer and fasting are not easily sustained against the pressures of secular time.

There is, however, a consoling sermon of the 4th-century church father, St. John Chrysostom, to be read at the end of the Orthodox Easter service on Sunday morning.

Those who have fasted and "toiled from the first hour" are invited to "enjoy this beautiful bright festival."

So are "any who have come after the third hour."

And those "that arrived after the sixth hour" or "delayed to the ninth hour" or "arrived only at the eleventh hour" are told not to hesitate — "for the Lord is gracious and receiveth the last even as the first."

"The deed he honoreth and the intention he commendeth," the Saint declared.

"Ye sober and ye slothful, celebrate the day. Ye that have kept the fast, and ye that have not, rejoice today; for the table is richly laden."

No injuries reported as twisters dip into state

Associated Press

A twister spawned by a line of fast moving thunderstorms damaged several buildings, including a school, in Southeast Texas Saturday and funnel clouds dipped down in northern regions but authorities reported no injuries.

A police dispatcher in Bay City said the tornado broke windows at Pierce Elementary School and a sporting goods company, while one wall of a wholesale distributing company was demolished.

"We've got trees down all over town, and one fell on a vehicle, but there was no one in it," said dispatcher Isa Cox.

Several funnel clouds and large hail created by fast moving thunderstorms struck North Central Texas, along with wind gusts up to 55 mph, before moving southeastward through the state.

The National Weather Service posted advisories for the Houston area and East Texas as the line of severe storms triggered by a low-pressure system moved through the state.

Several other funnel clouds were reported in the Bay City area by the Matagorda County Sheriff's Department, along with strong thunderstorms and 40 mph winds.

The weather service said golf-ball-size hail covered roads and fields south of Fort Worth, and similar hailstorms were also reported in Breckenridge, Keller, Lake Palo Pinto, Lake Weatherford and south of Gordon.

The Ranger Fire Department said a funnel cloud was reported north of Strawn at about 1:30 a.m. Another funnel was sighted shortly before 2 a.m. at Eastland, but authorities said there was no apparent touchdown or damage.

More funnel clouds spotted in Erath County did not touch down, said a dispatcher at the Sheriff's Department. There were no reports of injuries.

Authorities said 1.25-inch hail fell at River Oaks in northwest Fort Worth.

Dallas County now preparing 20,000 measles vaccinations

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County and city health officials are preparing for what they claim could be the nation's largest single-day inoculation campaign against measles.

On Monday, county and city workers will go door-to-door seeking volunteers to help with Saturday's "Project: Stop Measles," said Sharon Turnley, the project's coordinator.

Ms. Turnley says officials are trying to vaccinate young children who are at the highest risk of contracting measles.

"We're in an epidemic state," Ms. Turnley said Saturday in an interview with WFAA-TV in Dallas. "We don't want this epidemic to become endemic, where it's a way of life."

If successful, 20,000 pre-school-aged kids will be vaccinated during the daylong event.

SESSION: Compromise won't be easy

(From 1A)

Whether conferees will maintain the House compromise is unclear. The Senate measure calls for the state to shoulder 50 percent of increased education costs. "It has traditionally been a partnership," said Parker.

After an organizational meeting on Thursday, House and Senate conferees are scheduled to meet again 10 a.m. Monday.

Clements said the Senate proposal, which calls for $1.2 billion in new education spending next year, is "nonsense." The House measure includes $450 million in new spending next year.

Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston and chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, has said even the $450 million level assures the need for new taxes.

While the House Appropriations Committee has identified $167 million in budget cuts that could go toward increased education spending, Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and committee chairman, has said no further cuts are likely to be forthcoming.

Clements said that "poll after poll after poll" has shown that Texas residents "do not want an increase in taxes, period."

However, the most recent Texas Poll, one conducted at the end of February, determined that nearly six in ten residents support an income tax to raise money for education if they also see reductions in property taxes.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has endorsed such a plan and predicted last week lawmakers will approve a tax bill of some kind "that I assume will go to the governor's desk." Aside from an income tax, other revenue increasing measures under investigation include hikes in sales, severance and franchise taxes and a state lottery.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, has proposed a series of "small, incremental" hikes in a broad range of state fees, but Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, was unsure whether the idea would provide enough revenue.

Meanwhile, the governor's chief of staff, Mike Toomey, decried school superintendents who are "unjustifiably talking about (school) closings."

Plaintiff school districts who won the Edgewood v. Kirby lawsuit, which precipitated current legislative efforts, are seeking to prohibit state education allocations to local districts under the illegal system if the state fails to meet the May 1 deadline.

Districts that have enough reserve money to cover the losses probably would not have to close. Poorer districts that have few or no reserves would be most affected.

Toomey acknowledged that districts may not receive their May 25 checks, but he said teachers should conduct classes whether they get paid on time or not.

"They're going to get paid. It's just a matter of when they get paid," he said.

A May 1 hearing is scheduled in Travis County district court on the matter. The date coincides with the last day of the current special session.

In an effort to avoid the crunch, two lawmakers — Reps. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne, and Harvey Hilderbran, R-Uvalde — have filed legislation that would allow the state to make May, June, July and August payments on April 28.

The lump-sum payment amounts to $1.6 billion and is contingent on the state treasury having the money available.

The treasury likely will have enough to cover the $529 million sum due in May, but a four-month payment would be difficult to find, agency officials have said.

The president of the Texas State Teachers Association, Ollie Besteiro, has said her organization will file lawsuits if teachers fail to receive their summer paychecks.

Lithuanian leader Landsbergis pursues peaceful resistance

WORLD

In just two years, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis and the leaders of the Sajudis people's front have organized their staid people into an unswerving mass determined to be free of the Soviet Union. How? Not with the charisma of Poland's Lech Walesa or Czechoslovakia's Vaclav Havel. The most likely comparison is to Mohandas K. Gandhi's strategy of unarmed resistance.

MOSCOW (AP) — The man leading Lithuania's peaceful drive to win its independence from the Soviet Union is a soft-spoken, 57-year-old music professor.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis lacks the charisma of Poland's Lech Walesa or Czechoslovakia's Vaclav Havel. His efforts are more likely to evoke comparisons to Mohandas K. Gandhi's strategy of unarmed resistance.

Yet in just two years, Landsbergis and other leaders of the Sajudis people's front have organized the staid Lithuanians into an unswerving mass determined to be free of the Soviet Union.

Some call him unflinching. Others say he is obstinate, risking revival of the superpowers' Cold War for the sake of his small nation that declared independence a month ago.

Gandhi won India's independence by trading on the British sense of fair play. Landsbergis is gambling that Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has rejected the ruthless violence of his predecessors. He hopes Gorbachev will admit that Lithuania was unjustly, forcibly annexed into the Soviet Union in 1940 and that this wrong should be righted.

He says that only by letting Lithuania go will Gorbachev succeed in forging a Soviet Union held together by its inhabitants' will instead of the army's force.

But there are indications that Gorbachev is focusing his anger at Lithuania on Landsbergis, and wants him removed before he will sit down and talk.

"The president of the U.S.S.R. does not intend to sit at a table of negotiations with Landsbergis," Leonid Mikhailov said in the journal New Times, a Soviet political magazine.

There is no guarantee that the ouster of Landsbergis alone will be enough to bring Gorbachev to compromise, not when he insists that Lithuanian success would spark more separatism across the Soviet Union, leading to bloody ethnic violence.

Mikhailov's analysis of the tense standoff was remarkably even-handed compared with the anti-Lithuanian articles filling the Soviet press in the past month. He concluded that the Soviet campaign of intimidating military maneuvers, occupation of key buildings by soldiers, and attempts to block implementation of laws is designed to destroy the credibility of the government.

Soviet supply cut could prove painful

MOSCOW (AP) — Lithuanian officials acknowledged Saturday that an economic blockade threatened by Mikhail S. Gorbachev could cause huge layoffs, but hoped that sympathetic Soviet republics would balk at the president's order.

In Leningrad, 5,000 people gathered at the Winter Palace for a protest rally that included appeals to strike in support of Lithuania if Gorbachev pursues a blockade, according to Leningrad journalist Maxim Korzhov.

Gorbachev gave Lithuania until Sunday to back away from its declaration of independence or face a halt in deliveries of exportable goods. That could include all the oil and gas used in the small Baltic republic, as well as metal, machinery, chemicals, cotton and automobiles.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis has said the March 11 declaration of independence will not be revoked.

Landsbergis, speaking at a news conference shown on the Soviet evening TV news, said Gorbachev's ultimatum would not even be discussed until Tuesday, since predominantly Roman Catholic Lithuania will still be celebrating the Easter holiday Monday.

SENIOR: Facility may open in January

(From 1A)

The activities stopped in 1979 when the federal government cut off the money, she said. But that did not dampen the elderly citizen's spirits, she said.

"A bunch of us senior citizens stuck together and met in our homes to keep the idea alive," Ms. Hall said.

Community and Senior Services of Midland, through a contract with the city of Midland, brought the Southeast Senior Citizens Center to Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., in 1987.

Voters in 1988 turned down a $400,000 referendum to pay for expanding the city's senior citizens centers. The defeat did not stop the November 1989 opening of a senior citizen facility in Dellwood Mall, 3303 W. Illinois Ave.

That center's pool tables, ceramics classes, exercise machines and other services are used by about 120 elderly citizens.

Ellen Smith, southeast center program director since March 1989, said the new facility will accommodate more than 150 people.

About 103 senior citizens come regularly to Hollowell. On an average day, about 50 people take part in the activities.

"When we get 50 people in here per day, we are crowded," Ms. Smith said. "If 60 people show up here, we cannot accommodate them. We don't have the space."

The new center, which will be open Mondays through Fridays, also will provide transportation to bring senior citizens from their homes to the facility, she said.

"We constantly get calls from people who would come if we had transportation, but we haven't been able to supply it," Ms. Smith said. "There are a bunch of lonely people out there."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Mary Wallace puts the finishing touches on a ceramic vase she is making at the center.

The current center is only open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Activities include ceramics, painting, exercise, quilting, table games, card games and puzzles.

Recreation, however, is not the facility's most important aspect, Ms. Smith said.

"The nucleus of the senior program is nutrition and health education," Ms. Smith said. "There's such a lack of health education in southeast Midland."

To make sure the seniors have proper nutrition, a lunch is served every day the center is open, she said. "For some of them, this is the only hot, well-balanced they have all day," Ms. Smith said.

Nurses who come to the facility twice a month offer health screening and advice on proper nutrition and health care.

"It's available to any senior citizens in the community," she said. "A lot of those people are very low income and would not otherwise get those services."

Ms. Smith estimated that 30 percent of those who come to the facility suffer from diabetes.

"This is not uncommon," Ms. Smith said. "Among the black ethnic population, diabetes is common."

In addition, the facility offers assistance in voter registration, filling out census forms and referrals to other area help agencies, Ms. Smith said.

But the primary reason the elderly come to the center is for the company, Ms. Smith said.

"For some, these are the only other people they see during the week," she said. "This is their home away from home. Most of these people are widows or widowers. If we didn't have these activities for them, they'd just be sitting at home" to delay negotiations and try to present it as if Lithuania doesn't want negotiations," he said.

He said it was unclear whether the Soviets planned a full or partial blockade or some other sort of limitation on Lithuania's economic activities.

Lithuanian economist and legislator Kazimieras Antanavicius said a Soviet blockade would close factories, and laid-off workers may not be able to handle losing their paychecks indefinitely. "Many workers live only from paycheck to paycheck, without savings."

That hardship could cause the republic's government to consider a temporary suspension of the independence declaration if necessary to persuade Gorbachev to negotiate, Antanavicius said.

Western advisers to the Lithuanian government have said the republic's economic survival is tied to its ability to maintain its trade with the Soviet Union.

But with at least four other Soviet republics and numerous localities now controlled by progressives who support Lithuania's bid for independence, Lithuania is hoping for gaping holes in Gorbachev's blockade.

Lithuanian leaders said they expected some republics with their own independence movements to resist Gorbachev's order.

"We don't think individual republics will go along with this, especially republics like Azerbaijan and Georgia, which want independence," said Aidas Palubinskas, a spokesman for the Lithuanian parliament. "They understand they are going to be in the same boat."

Dinner meeting

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and U.S. President George Bush chat before a dinner at Government House, in Hamilton, Bermuda, on Friday. The dinner concluded two days of talks between the leaders.

Bush awaits account of threat

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — President Bush sought more detailed information Saturday on Moscow's threat of economic retaliation against Lithuania, while Senate Democrats condemned Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev for taking "precisely the wrong approach" to the latest crisis.

During a rain-soaked game of golf, Bush told reporters he wanted to withhold further comment on the situation until he received "a clarification" on Gorbachev's ultimatum to the independence-seeking Baltic republic.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, meanwhile, said the administration was taking a 'wait and see" attitude.

"It's not entirely easy to know what the next moves are going to be," Baker said in an interview on Cable News Network. Imposition of sanctions, he added, "would have an adverse impact" on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Baker would not speculate on what form a U.S. response to sanctions would take.

Bush and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Friday they were deeply disturbed by Gorbachev's threat to cut off supplies to Lithuania if it did not rescind laws passed since it asserted independence on March 11.

A senior administration official said that the Soviet ultimatum caught U.S. strategists off guard and that Gorbachev's move was undergoing close analysis and scrutiny in the United States.

The official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said that there would probably be a further U.S. response to the action before the end of the weekend.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and six Democratic colleagues, just returned to Washington from a visit with Gorbachev in Moscow, condemned the economic ultimatum as "precisely the wrong approach in such a delicate and dangerous situation."

WORLD in brief

Mayor uneasy about settlers

JERUSALEM (AP) — Mayor Teddy Kollek on Saturday denounced as "extremists" a group of Jewish nationalists who moved into the city's Christian sector and prompted a protest, his spokeswoman said.

She said the mayor also told five visiting U.S. senators he fears the furor over the new settlement will dissuade Soviet immigrants from moving to the city.

Kollek, who is Jewish, criticized Wednesday's move of about 150 Jewish nationalists into the building complex in the Christian section of the walled Old City, municipal spokeswoman Bonnie Boxer said. She quoted him as characterizing the settlers as "extremists who concentrate only on themselves and their religious fervor."

"Once again, Jerusalem will be portrayed as a violent city and this will harm tourism, scare away potential investors and dissuade Soviet immigrants from choosing Jerusalem as their home," she also quoted him as saying.

On Saturday, about 50 Christian and Moslem Palestinians demonstrated outside the 72-room complex settled by the Jews.

Use for tube traced

LONDON (AP) — The steel tube sections seized en route to Iraq and suspected by Customs officials to be parts of a huge gun could be connected with a space satellite launch system, government sources were quoted as saying Saturday.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, quoted unidentified "reliable government sources" as saying they had correspondence linking British industry with the Brussels company Space Research Projects, described as dealing in international arms sales.

The correspondence refers to orders for the manufacture of smoothbore pipes that experts believe match the specification detailed in the Belgian company's design for a space satellite launch system, the sources were quoted as saying.

It was not clear from the report whether the link consisted of more than a match in specifications. The report did not name the British manufacturer allegedly involved.

Camel breeding tried

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The ancient desert sport of camel racing is going high-tech with the first artificial insemination of the breed, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Scientists at the Sheik Khalifa Genetic Research Laboratory have successfully removed and artificially fertilized ova of famous racing camel breeds, said the state-run newspaper Al-Ittihad.

The report described the artificial impregnation as "a scientific breakthrough in the field of racing camels."

Camel racing, a former nomadic pastime, is a big sport in the Arab Gulf states, where millions of dollars are spent on races each year.

Supplies flown in

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — The air force on Saturday flew emergency Easter supplies to two small outback towns cut off by two weeks of heavy rain in southwest Queensland state, where flood warnings were posted for seven rivers.

Overflowing rivers isolated the towns of Quilpie and Thargomindah, both about 670 miles west of Brisbane, police said.

For two weeks, all supplies have had to be either flown into the towns or ferried across the swollen rivers. Police at Quilpie said the air force had flown 15 tons of food supplies to the town using Hercules transport planes.

Both Quilpie, an opal mining town with a population of 700, and Thargomindah, a small farming community, had more rain Friday night, keeping the rivers high but not causing any serious flooding in the towns themselves, police said.

Soldier dies in mishap

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A single-car accident killed a U.S. Army soldier and critically injured another, American military officials said Saturday.

The officials said the accident happened at Tagwon south of Seoul shortly before noon Friday but gave no other details.

The driver of the car was pronounced dead at the scene and the other soldier remained in critical condition at a hospital in Seoul, they said.

At Jan Smuts Airport in Johannesburg, South Africa, prior to their Saturday departure for London are Nelson Mandela, deputy president of the African National Congress, and his wife Winnie. They will attend a pop concert in Mandela's honor on Monday.

Mandela admits ANC had tortured guerrillas

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela admitted Saturday that his African National Congress had tortured dissident guerrillas, but said the officials involved were punished and any further torture had been banned.

Mandela made the surprising admission in a brief airport statement. He said the claims of some ANC guerrillas that they had been tortured were true, that he deplored the action and promised it would not happen again.

"Unfortunately, it is true that some of these people who have complained were in fact tortured. But once the ANC became aware ... immediate steps were taken to discipline those who were guilty of torturing other people," he said.

Mandela did not specify the punishment inflicted on those responsible for the torture, but he said the commanders of the camps where the torture took place had been dismissed.

"The ANC is against torture or any form of coercion in order to extract information from those who are suspected of having broken the laws and the regulations which they are required to obey," he said.

In Nairobi, Kenya Saturday, seven former South African guerrillas said they had been tortured by ANC commanders as mutineers.

The guerrillas said they were tortured at two punishment camps in Angola called Pango and Quatro. They said they were tied to trees and flogged with whips, locked into metal transport containers that were left out in the searing African sun, and were beaten and kicked by ANC commanders and their jailers.

The seven were attached to the ANC's military wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe (Spear of the Nation), in Angola after training in East Germany and the Soviet Union in the early 1980s.

They said they mutinied against their leaders in 1984, were held in detention centers and Angolan prisons for four years and then moved to a Dakawa camp in Tanzania after being freed on "humanitarian" grounds.

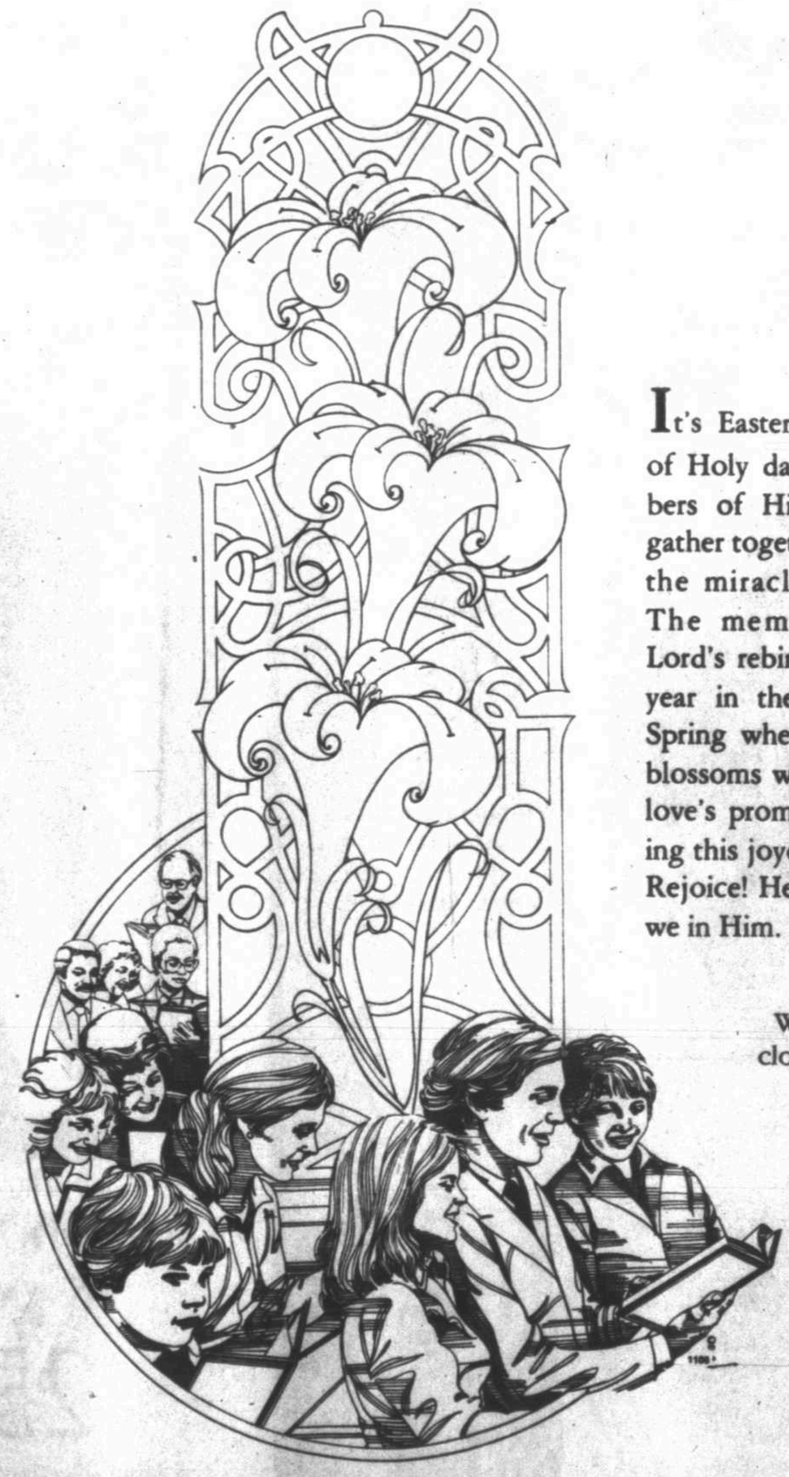

They quit the military wing in Tanzania last December and fled to Nairobi, they said. They added that they were eager to return to South Africa after seeking sanctuary in Kenya early this year.

"We're still waiting for word when we can go," Luvo Mbengo, 28, one of the ANC recruits, told The Associated Press. "But we still don't know what our future is."

KATYN MASSACRE:

Jaruzelski believes 'truth is healing the wounds'

MOSCOW (AP) — Polish President Wojciech Jaruzelski went to the Katyn Forest on Saturday and paid tribute to the thousands of Polish army officers killed and buried there by the Soviet Union's secret police during World War II.

His visit came one day after the Soviet government reversed nearly 50 years of official denial and admitted committing the massacre. The Soviet Union had long blamed Nazi Germany.

"The truth was said about Katyn, and the truth is healing the wounds," Jaruzelski said in Russian, his voice soft and wavering with emotion.

"Now it will be easier for us to understand each other," he told Soviet reporters. The Katyn massacre has long been a strain on relations between the Soviet Union and Poland.

Jaruzelski was accompanied by an honor guard of the Polish army at the memorial site in the forest near the western town of Smolensk as he honored the more than 4,000 officers killed in 1940 by Stalin's secret police, the Polish PAP news agency reported.

A "roll call of the dead" was intoned — a ceremony in which the names of victims are read, PAP said.

In footage broadcast on Soviet TV's evening newscast "Vremya," Jaruzelski, wearing a green army overcoat, green scarf and military cap, stood ramrod straight as two soldiers carried a large wreath of red and white carnations and laid it in front of a memorial to the dead.

Polish radio reported Saturday night that the wording on the monument was changed three days ago, removing the words that blamed Nazi Germany. The Soviets had long said the Nazis were responsible for the massacre, in which the Polish President Wojciech Jaruselski, second from right, pays tribute Saturday at the memorial to officers murdered by the Soviet in 1940.

Polish officers were shot in the back of the head and stacked on top of each other in mass graves.

The honor guard fired a rifle salute, Polish radio said.

PAP added that Jaruzelski wrote in the visitor's book:

"They fought for an independent Poland. They died innocently, far-removed from their families and homeland. They were faithful to Poland and to military honor until they breathed their last. In tribute and in lasting memory to Polish officers, victims of the cruel Stalinist crime."

Jaruzelski also went to the town of Lenino in the nearby republic of Byelorussia and laid wreaths on the graves of Soviet and Polish soldiers at a memorial there, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Peace protesters from both Germanys join Easter marches

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Peace activists from both Germanys protested together for the first time during traditional Easter marches Saturday, while guards waved tens of thousands of cars through the border to prevent traffic jams.

The custom of Easter marches for peace dates back to the 1950s, but protests were held separately in East and West Germany for decades until the border opened during East Germany's revolution last fall.

East Germans were among nearly 1,000 marchers who began a three-day march in the West German city of Duisburg under the slogan "to live without armaments." The demonstrators plan to march from town to town through the industrialized Ruhr region.

More than 1,000 protesters set out from the East German Baltic port of Rostock for the West German port of Luebeck, demanding that a unified Germany contribute to making peace more secure in Europe.

Some 5,000 residents of the East German districts of Rathenow and Havelberg, about 37 miles west of Berlin, marched to a military training field near the Elbe river demanding that trees be planted and the land recultivated.

Similar marches and rallies took place in about a dozen cities and towns throughout the two Germanys, but most of the Easter marches were scheduled for Sunday.

Tens of thousands of Germans from East and West poured through the border for the second day in a row for Easter weekend holiday trips with family and friends.

A decision by newly elected Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere to ease passport checks appeared to speed up the process of crossing the border.

"We only waited five minutes on the border. At Christmas it was awful, and now it goes so smoothly," said political scientist Roland Freudentstein.

Poll shows few East Germans foresee Kohl leading unified land

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl, hoping to be the first leader of a unified Germany, is far less popular in the East than his top opponent in West Germany's upcoming election, a poll indicates.

The Bild am Sonntag newspaper said Oskar LaFontaine, the left-leaning Social Democratic candidate chosen to run against Kohl in December, far outstripped the chancellor in a recent poll of 1,000 East German voters.

LaFontaine, the outspoken governor of West Germany's southern Saarland state, was favored by 46 percent for chancellor of a unified Germany, the newspaper said. It said Kohl was chosen by only 24 percent of a cross-section of voters from East Germany's major parties that formed the country's newly elected coalition government on Thursday.

The poll comes just four weeks after East Germany's first free elections on March 18. A conservative alliance headed by East Germany's new prime minister, Lothar de Maiziere, strongly backed by Kohl and promises of speedy monetary and economic union, easily won with 48 percent of the vote.

Career diplomat plans to coordinate agencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since taking over as coordinator of the State Department's new office of U.S.-Mexico border affairs last month, Irwin Rubenstein has been asked to investigate cattle rustling on a rancher's border spread and gridlock in Laredo.

As sympathetic as he is to the rancher's concerns, the career diplomat says, he's "not going to be a personal problem solver for everybody who's got something cooking on the border."

Instead, says Rubenstein, he intends to do just what his title says — be a coordinator among the many U.S. agencies that deal with issues on the 2,000-mile border.

"You have to deal with not only our own national interests, but the concerns and sensitivities of another sovereign state," Rubenstein said in an interview at the State Department last week.

Rubenstein, who has spent some 30 years in Latin America with the Foreign Service, including the past eight in Mexico, points to the creation of his job within the State Department's office of Mexican Affairs as one example of an increasing awareness in the Bush administration of the border's role.

The U.S.-Mexico border is the only place in the world where a major industrialized country shares a boundary with a developing nation, says Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who a year ago asked the State Department to create the position Rubenstein now holds.

Army may cut fourth of troops

Officials under pressure for sharp reduction in Pentagon spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Army officials, pressured to meet demands for sharp reductions in Pentagon spending, have agreed to a proposal that would cut about one soldier in four from the service by 1997, senior Pentagon sources say.

Army Secretary Michael Stone and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl Vuono gave their final approval to the proposal on Wednesday, said the sources, who spoke on condition of not being identified by name.

Under the proposal, active duty forces would plummet from the current 764,000 to 580,000 by the beginning of fiscal year 1997.

The number of National Guard and Reserve forces would be slashed as well, although not as precipitously, dropping from the present 776,000 to 645,000 slots over the same time period, the sources said.

Even though the move cuts tens of thousands of soldiers from Army rolls — beyond what the service projected it would do in the last Pentagon budget — the proposal may not placate demands on Capitol Hill for even more severe layoffs.

In hot pursuit of a so-called peace dividend amid lessened superpower tension, some lawmakers have called for cutbacks or even outright cancellation of high-cost weapons programs, such as the $530 million B-2 stealth bomber. But savings can't be gleaned as quickly from long-term weapons programs as they can from personnel accounts because weaponry costs are stretched over a period of many years.

So that leaves the manpower-intensive Army, with the largest segment of the nation's 2.1 million-member military force, as the biggest target for possible budget savings.

"It's painful," said one senior Pentagon planner who is knowledgeable about the Army's proposal. "It took some gut-wrenching decisions. But at least we have a plan."

Another source, who also spoke privately, said the proposal was forced upon the service by "fiscal reality," even as he expressed concerns about pressures to go beyond the 580,000 level.

"That would bring us pretty close to a dysfunctional Army," he said, given the national security requirement for a "trained and ready" force.

The senior official did not say how much savings were being projected from the manpower cut. It is difficult to project near-term savings from force reductions because of the possibility that severance pay may be allocated to more senior servicemen and women.

The new proposal is contained in the Army's long-term budget proposal formally known in Pentagon jargon as the "POM," or program objective memorandum. It contains the service's spending desires through the years 1992 to 1997, in line with top-line budget numbers handed down by the civilian Pentagon leadership.

At a recent hearing before the House Armed Services Committee, Vuono warned that making precipitous cuts in personnel would lead to serious morale and readiness problems.

Over 400 arrested at abortion rallies

And in Southern California on Friday, 48 people were arrested in Tustin when anti-abortion demonstrators blocked a medical clinic during one of a series of Easter weekend protests planned by the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue.

It was not clear how many of the people arrested were anti-abortion demonstrators and how many were pro-choice.

The demonstrators in Philadelphia were charged with obstructing traffic, which was rerouted. They face fines of up to $300, police said.

"We are allowed to break a law to save a life," said Gloria Romana, 48, of Norristown. She said she had been arrested at least 18 times before during anti-abortion protests.

In California, Operation Rescue members clashed with pro-choice advocates at Doctors Family Planning clinic in the Orange County city of Tustin, about 50 miles south of Los Angeles.

Tustin Councilman John Kelly, who was defeated for re-election last week and leaves office Tuesday, was among those arrested on a misdemeanor trespassing charge. He is an abortion opponent.

The charge is punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Border back to normal after quake

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Traffic at border crossings returned to normal Saturday after a moderately strong earthquake shifted the walls of a Canada Customs office, shutting it down temporarily, authorities said.

U.S. Customs Inspector John Nolte said the crossing between Blaine and Douglas, British Columbia was closed to northbound trucks after the quake, which registered 5.1 on the Richter scale at 10:33 p.m. PDT Friday.

The quake was followed by about a dozen aftershocks, the strongest registering 4.1 on the Richter scale, said scientists at the University of Washington geophysics center.

Unloaded trucks were diverted to the Peace Arch crossing and loaded trucks to the crossing between Sumas and Huntington, British Columbia, about 20 miles to the east.

A few trucks were allowed to pass after about 9 a.m., and traffic was back to normal by noon without major delays or backups, Nolte said.

Geophysicist Steve Malone said the quake occurred about three miles underground and three miles northeast of Deming, a town about 10 miles east of Bellingham.

Walls at the Canada Customs office in Surrey, south of Vancouver, were moved "about a quarter of an inch," said superintendent Glenn Bonnett.

The building was closed overnight but was reopened after a structural inspection and operations appeared to be normal by midday, said U.S. Customs agent Randy Reed.

Earthquake monitors at the university said there were reports of minor damage in three Washington counties, including broken glass and items jolted from shelves. A canopy at the Blaine border-crossing also was cracked, they said.

County officials said callers who said they felt the quake reported no damage was reported other than pictures falling off a wall.

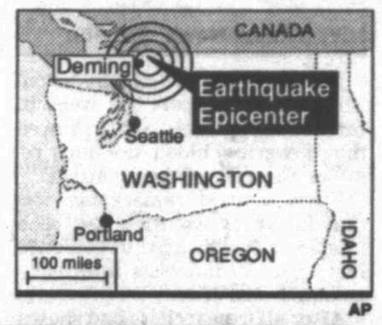

Linda Twitchell, a Bellingham Herald copy editor, said she was in her recreation room when the quake hit and wondered briefly whether it would ruin the new addition to her home.

"It actually looked like the walls were moving in different directions," she said.

"I couldn't believe it," said Wally Beketa of nearby Custer. "The bed shook. The mirrors danced on the walls."

There were no reports of damage in British Columbia.

The Richter scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

Gunman missing, one man arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — The subway gunman who fatally shot a mugger two days ago ignored pleas to surrender on Saturday, but police charged a 17-year-old with being one of four men who attacked him.

The gunman's whereabouts remained a mystery as officers continued searching garbage cans and subway stations for a clue to his identity.

The arrested youth, Melvin Kirkland of Brooklyn, was charged late Friday with second degree robbery and second degree assault in connection with the subway incident.

Kirkland allegedly was one of four men who attacked the subway rider Thursday night. The victim retaliated by pulling a gun from his waist and firing three times, hitting and killing one of the assailants.

Vreeland said he had no details on how police tracked down Kirkland.

Report links high blood pressure to heart disease

N.Y. Times News Service

Doctors were not exactly astonished when a report last week in the British journal Lancet showed that lowering blood pressure reduces the risk of heart attack.

What seemed remarkable was that for years scientists had been unable to find a shred of evidence for what cardiologists intuitively assumed was true.

After all, researchers had shown beyond doubt that people with high blood pressure are more likely to develop heart disease.

But every time they conducted clinical trials, they came up empty handed.

The problem, it turned out, was too few patients in each study group.

By combining the results of 14 of these inconclusive trials, doctors were able to magnify effects that had been too subtle to measure.

When data from all 37,000 patients in the trials was analyzed together, solid evidence emerged that reducing blood pressure indeed lowers heart disease risk.

"If you are trying to tell the difference between a modest effect and no effect, you must look at data from a lot of people," said a leader of the study, Dr. Richard Peto, who heads the clinical trials unit at Oxford University.

Although this conclusion might sound self-evident, behind it lies what many statisticians see as a revolution in the way drugs and other treatments are tested.

Ever since Sir Bradford Hill, a British investigator, performed the first modern clinical drug trials shortly after World War II, studies have typically included only a couple hundred patients.

Doctors randomly give the patients one drug or another (one might be a placebo) and closely study the results.

In the beginning, the groups were kept small partly for practical reasons.

It was the keypunch, not the computer age and managing data from 200 patients was burden enough.

But more important were theoretical concerns.

Scientists believed it was crucial to compare patients who were as similar as possible in age, sex, symptoms, life style and so forth.

In theory, the only difference should be that some were taking the drug and some were not.

Achieving this purity meant small patient populations.

Gradually, computers became more powerful, so more data could be processed.

But rather than cast their nets more widely, researchers focused more closely on the smaller groups, gathering more data in the hopes of coming closer to approaching the ideal of homogeneity.

"It had become more and more elaborate," said Dr. Paul Meier, a statistician at the University of Chicago who has been analyzing trials since the earliest days.

"Studies began taking everything into account and costing a couple of thousand dollars per patient per year."

But many studies were not yielding definitive results.

About 15 years ago, Peto began reasoning that he could use statistics to combine them.

It was not until 1980 that he got a chance to put his beliefs to a test.

Researchers had tried again and again to show that aspirin can prevent recurrences of heart attacks.

But each trial was inconclusive.

Peto put them all together and concluded that aspirin was indeed preventing heart attacks.

Not everyone was persuaded that his methods, which are called meta-analysis, were sound.

Combining data from several trials "was considered a very suspect idea," Meier recalled.

Newer studies like the one on blood pressure and heart disease should sweep away much of the lingering resistance.

"It places meta-analysis in a new degree of respect in the community," said Dr. Myron L. Weisfeldt, president of the American Heart Association.

Recently Peto has begun designing trials that are enormous in the first place, including as many people as possible.

But instead of trying to control every variable, he argues that data collection can be stripped to the essentials: which patient is taking which drug and is he or she getting better?

Critics complain that he is comparing apples and oranges, but he believes that with a large enough population, differences in age, sex and other factors will average out.

The new trials are being used to test other heart drugs, such as clot dissolving agents, and include tens of thousands of patients.

Past trials were usually limited to a few hundred middle-aged men whose chest pains had started six hours or less before treatment and whose heart attacks were confirmed by changes in their electrocardiograms.

Others, it was assumed, would not benefit from the treatment.

Poisoning case details revealed

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — A secret torture pit, drug manufacturing equipment and poison were found in the homes of a man accused of the 1988 poisoning of his next-door neighbors, leaving one dead and two paralyzed, authorities said.

Prosecutors presented the evidence during hearings Friday in Polk County Circuit Court, where bail was denied for George James Trepal. He was arrested a week ago on murder, attempted murder and product-tampering charges.

Circuit Judge Dennis P. Maloney denied the request for bail, saying Trepal had motive, opportunity and the peculiar ability to commit this crime.

The prosecution believes the evidence will prove Trepal, 41, spiked bottles of Coca-Cola to kill Peggy Carr and poison her husband and five others.

But Trepal's attorney, Jonathan Stidham, said the evidence was circumstantial, and failed to prove that Trepal, a member of the Mensa high-IQ club, was involved in illicit activities.

He had a cracked skull, a crushed larynx, a shattered face and too many bloody bruises to count, according to the autopsy his family commissioned.

"There is no question: This man was beaten to death," the family's attorney, Mary Howell, said last week at a news conference. "If I may be more specific, he was stomped to death."

The allegations have led to investigations by police, Orleans Parish District Attorney Harry Connick and U.S. Attorney John Volz.

Arraignment date set

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A man described as "real likable" and concerned over the safety of older residents of his homeless shelter was arraigned Saturday on charges of killing six of seven black women found strangled here.

The arrest of Ray Shawn Jackson, 22, came after another incident Monday in which a black woman was attacked and choked by an assailant who was scared away by a man out walking his dog.

Associate Jackson County Circuit Judge George Aylward appointed the public defender's office to represent Jackson and scheduled his formal arraignment for April 25.

Aylward continued bond at $700,000 — $100,000 each on the six first-degree murder charges and the same amount for first-degree assault in the Monday attack.

SEALs to join drug war

SAN DIEGO (CNS) — SEAL commandos will be given a direct role for the first time in the South American drug wars, the Navy's special operations chief said Friday.

Speaking to graduates of the six-month basic SEAL training course at the Coronado Amphibious Base, Rear Adm. George Worthington said that some SEALs will work as advisers with commando elements of some South American countries.

"You guys will be working in the counternarcotics efforts of the Department of Defense and the Navy," said Worthington, who heads the Naval Special Warfare Command. His headquarters are at Coronado.

"This will probably entail going upcountry in South America to help train their special forces people."

He did not elaborate on the nature of the operations or name the nations involved.

Death investigated

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Adolph Archie died, messily, after 13 hours in the custody of police who arrested him for the fatal shooting of a police officer.

Four shot, 2 die in hospital rampage

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A gunman shot four people, killing two, in a rampage through a hospital emergency room Saturday night and was arrested by police about an hour later, officials said.

Police believed the marauder was a 42-year-old man whose father had been treated at Mission Bay Memorial Hospital Friday night, police spokesman Dave Cohen said. Cohen could not say what happened to the gunman's relative.

"He walked into the emergency room," Cohen said. "He approached the nurses' station, pulled out a handgun and started firing."

Identities of the gunman and the victims were not released. Police said that an emergency room physician, a nurse, an emergency medical technician and a patient's relative were among the victims.

One victim died at the scene and the second, a woman, died after being transported in critical condition to Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla, about 10 miles from San Diego.

Another victim taken to Scripps, a man, was in serious condition with an abdominable wound, said Karen McFarlane, a nursing supervisor.

The third wounded victim was being treated inside the hospital where the 5 p.m. shooting spree took place.

The gunman later was reported arrested by police in Oceanside, about 40 miles north of San Diego.

"I don't know if he walked into the police department or they picked him up, but he is in police custody," Cohen said.

Natom Ohannes, who was across the street from the hospital at a used car lot, said he was looking at cars when he heard three to four gunshots.

"All of a sudden there were all these police cars and helicopters overhead. They closed off this road and haven't been letting anyone out." he said.

"There were two to three patients in the emergency room at the time of the shooting," said Steve Hall, executive director of the hospital. "We immediately closed down our emergency room operations. ... The patients here at the hospital are being taken care of."

"I think it's very calm inside right now," Hall said. "I think people are just now starting to reflect on what things took place. Things are in order, except for the emergency room."

Nine Colombians convicted

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Nine Colombians arrested on a ship carrying a record six tons of cocaine have been convicted of possessing the drug with intent to distribute it.

The ship's master, seven crewmen and the 26-year-old cook, who is 8½ months pregnant, could be sentenced to life in prison. They were convicted Thursday by a federal court jury.

All nine were arrested Oct. 2 by the Coast Guard, which said the 12,000 pounds of cocaine was a record confiscation from a ship boarded at sea.

Jurors in U.S. District Judge Charles Schwartz's court returned the verdict after a seven-day trial.

The defendants said they did not know there was cocaine in the locked containers loaded onto the Zedom Sea before it left Barranquilla, Colombia, on Sept. 23.

Prosecutors said it is doubtful the owner of $600 million worth of cocaine would have entrusted it to a crew he did not know. They said the cocaine was to have been transferred to another ship before the Zedom Sea reached Mexico.

The Colombian-owned ship was flying the Panamanian flag when it was seized in the Gulf of Mexico.

Man with guide dog to sue because eatery refused to serve him

■ Blind man says most restaurants in Midland comply with the law that says Seeing Eye dogs must be allowed.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

An attorney representing a blind Midland man said he plans on suing a local restaurant for not complying with a state law that prohibits discrimination against those with Seeing Eye dogs.

Lynn Sanders of Advocacy Inc., a non-profit disability rights organization, said he plans on filing the damages suit in Midland County Court of Law by the end of next week on behalf of Lewis Crozier.

Crozier, 34, claims he and his guide dog, Thor, were refused access to a local Chinese restaurant last month.

After the incident, Sanders wrote a letter on March 19 to the restaurant expressing Crozier's position that he was wrongfully refused service and attached a copy of the state law. The letter also asked that a reply be made by the restaurant or a representing attorney within 10 days. There wasn't a reply.

Copies of the letter were also sent to the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the local Better Business Bureau, Sanders said. Again, Sanders said, he did not receive a reply.

The manager for the restaurant was not available for comment.

An employee at the restaurant, who did not identify himself, said he would not say whether someone with a Seeing Eye dog would be allowed to dine there. "I don't know what to do. If the dog does something in my restaurant like bite someone, who takes care of it? I don't know what to do," he said.

This is the third restaurant in town, which Crozier said has denied him service.

"All the other places in Midland I have no trouble with except these. When I explain the state law they get angry. They all say the same thing: They just don't like dogs in their restaurants," Crozier said.

After visiting one eatery last summer that refused him service, Crozier said he talked with the police department and was told they were not interested. An official at the Midland Police Department, however, said local police would enforce laws that prohibit discrimination against those with Seeing Eye dogs.

After the latest incident at the local restaurant, Crozier said he felt he had no alternative but to contact Advocacy Inc. for the second time.

"I've dined in these restaurants all my life and when I got this guide dog last July, they've treated me like a hobo," Crozier said.

Crozier, whose vision is very limited, is legally blind. Thor, a German shepherd, was specially trained by the Lions Club International School for leader dogs for the blind.

Program teaches parents better parenting techniques

By David Morris
Staff Writer

With four children, no job and no husband, Treva Walker was concerned about her ability to be a good parent.

"I wanted something better for them," Ms. Walker said of her three sons and one daughter, who range in age from 2 to 8. "Just being a single mother, it's hard to communicate with all your children — they're all totally different."

And sometimes difficult to control. While she has never spanked any of her children, Ms. Walker said she had trouble inventing alternatives to corporal punishment.

Then she learned about Parent Partners.

The project, sponsored by Midland's Child Abuse Prevention Program (CAPP), dispatches volunteers to teach parents like Ms. Walker how to improve their parenting techniques.

"A lot of people spank their kids," she said. "That's not something you have to do — (this program) shows how you can go around that."

Margaret Thomas Mouton, Parent Partners coordinator, said 10 Midland families have been served by the program during its one-year existence.

She said two-member teams of volunteers visit participants' homes weekly and offer instruction on child development and parenting.

"It's a preventive program," she said. "We work with people who say 'I need help raising my children.' We work with people who say, 'I don't want to spank my kids but I don't know how to discipline them.' "

She said the program, designed for parents of infants through 5-year-olds, is tailored to the needs of each family participating.

"When the child is a year old, parents are more interested in child development, physical things," she said. "After that, they're more interested in emotional (development)."

She said volunteers teach "nurturing" and communication skills and how to interact with children.

"Most parents that are in our program have not been nurtured themselves as kids and so they don't know what to do and how to nurture their kids," she said. "We raise our kids the way we were raised."

Woman trades briefcase for dog biscuits and catnip

■ Woman with three academic degrees decides to give up the fast-paced city life and make her hobby her career.

By Brenda Masengill
Staff Writer

It doesn't take a genius to operate a kennel. But with a doctorate degree in statistics, a master's in mathematics and a bachelor's in industrial engineering, Ann Brickner of Midland may be the most educated kennel owner in Texas — maybe in the whole doggone country.

A Tulsa native, Ms. Brickner arrived in Midland in 1978 by way of New York and Chicago, by way of commuter trains and deadlines, by way of high stress and poor weather.

"Everybody says what they really want to do is make their hobby their career," Ms. Brickner said. "When I reached the point where I could afford it, I did.

"I explored the return on investment on kennels in Chicago and New York," she said, and considered starting her business north of Chicago, "but the climate is so horrendous."

She also investigated Arizona and the Atlanta area, before settling on Midland. It was "mostly climate" that attracted her to West Texas, but Midland also "is a nice town from the standpoint of what it has to offer for its size."

She has not been disappointed. Her kennel, known simply as The Kennel on County Road 58, stays booked year-round. "It seemed reasonably logical, simple and direct," she said of the name.

Ms. Brickner has been showing dogs since the 1960s, starting first with standard poodles, then boxers and currently, Pharaoh hounds, winning championships with all three breeds. It was not an abrupt change then from show dog owner to kennel owner.

Helping Ms. Brickner with day-to-day operations are "Potato," a boxer, "Dracula," a three-legged orange tabby, and "Nemo," an African Gray parrot. Dracula, 12, lost a back leg, most of his hip and part of his tail to buckshot about four years ago.

"I'd thought he'd be a whipped, pathetic little thing, but after about three days, he figured it out. Animals don't have all the psychological hang-ups that people do" about physical losses, Ms. Brickner said. "Within three or four months, he was catching mice and chasing other cats out of the yard," she said.

Potato, 6, is one of four generations of the same line of boxers owned by Ms. Brickner over the last 20 years. Potato is a faithful companion, but the real character is Nemo, who can say, among other

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

VALLEY VIEW — The view from the valley appeals to the preacher.

"I wouldn't want anything else," said the pastor, Robert Dee Frazier, whose view is that of a missionary in his own land.

The Valley View community is on "the edge of town," — southeast of Midland. And Frazier's pastorate at the Valley View Baptist Church enables him to "reach out" to the farmers, ranchers, oil field people and some town folks.

"I don't believe a person could have it any better" from the opportunity of witnessing for the Lord, said the 48-year-old Frazier. "I'm out in the field — the oil patch," said Frazier, who also is in oil field sales. "This is one of the greatest places to be."

Valley View is a farming and ranching community that started taking shape in the 1920s, when settlers were lured to the "virgin land," developed their farms and ranches, built houses and barns, and pitched in to build the schoolhouse and the church.

The rural church, which was established as the First Baptist Church of Valley View, is still out in the country but not as far as it used to be. The original schoolhouse is gone. But the new "old" red brick schoolhouse is now the community center and site of the annual Valley View Old-Settlers Reunion, which this year will be on June 3.

Frazier was "called" to the ministry at age 18, pastored for about three years in Comanche County, later labored in oil field work and then got "solid in the ministry" three years ago when he accepted the Valley View pastorate.

"I was called when I was young," he said, "and I got away" from the ministry. Years later, he "turned around."

And Frazier doesn't view his years away from the ministry as wasted time.

Tradition is what makes baseball so special

It is generally this time of the year when sportswriters — normally the worst of cynics — get carried away with life and start dusting off all of their favorite adjectives and adverbs to describe the beginning of baseball season.

They genuflect, is what they do.

They call ballparks "cathedrals;" they compare opening day to "the birth of a child," and on occasion even refer to the sport as a "real life drama being performed in an open-air theater for all the world to see."

Ott

For whatever reason, baseball does that to people. Even George Will, the sometimes-crusty political pundit and always-fanatical Chicago Cub fan, has written a book about the sport. Hollywood has discovered the game, as well. In the past few years numerous motion pictures, including at least two that were nominated for Academy Awards, have been made about baseball. The sport has become an art form. Suddenly, it is fashionable to be a baseball fan.

Other sports may be more popular, but for whatever reason they lack that certain charm to make grown men write long flowing prose in tribute to the game and its players.

Indeed, a recent nationwide poll on the subject revealed that professional football continues to be the sport of choice for most Americans, but you rarely hear about serious pieces of literature being written about it.

Same thing with basketball. And golf and tennis and any other sport you can think of.

Only baseball gets the creative juices flowing.

Best I can tell, there are two reasons for that — little boys and old men. They are as much a part of baseball as hot dogs and beer. They are a part of the lore of the game, the history, the tradition.

The stereotypes stick in our minds forever.

The white-haired man stretched out in the bleacher seats recalling the glory days of the old Brooklyn Dodgers and screaming insults at the umpire.

It's the stuff that Norman Rockwell used to put on a canvas. It lives forever. And should.

It is particularly pleasing to see the two — young boys and old men — watching a game together, maybe a grandfather and his grandson.

The old man points to the shortstop and says things like, "They don't make ballplayers like Pee Wee Reese any more," and his young companion smiles knowingly and stares intently at the action on the field.

Then they have another bag of peanuts and a Coca-Cola.

When you think about it, it's that tradition that makes baseball so special. Every neighborhood kid, even the sissies, played the game. Most collected baseball cards and to this day bemoan the fact their mother gave the cards away in a church raffle.

"I'd be a rich man today if I still had my Mickey Mantle cards," they say repeatedly when someone brings up the subject.

Likewise, we all have fond memories of the old neighborhood games played in a vacant lot down the street. Games would become marathons, often lasting until the sun had finally faded into the west. No one kept score. No one cared who won. You played because it was fun. In your mind you were Mickey Mantle chasing a high fly ball in center field. That's all that mattered.

It made life worthwhile.

No wonder sportswriters get carried away. They are re-living their dreams. And it doesn't get any better than that.

DEATHS

Wayne Harrison

DENVER CITY — Wayne C. Harrison, 86, father of Sharon Goodman of Midland, died Saturday at his home here following an illness.

Services will be held at 4:30 p.m. Monday in the Denver City Church of Christ with Tommy Allison, of El Paso, and Skip Rodgers, minister of the Denver City Church of Christ, officiating.

Burial will be in Denver City Memorial Park under direction of Singleton Funeral Home.

Harrison was born on April 9, 1904, in Blackwell, was married to Cleo V. Hilterbrand on Feb. 6, 1927, in Aspermont, and had lived in Aspermont and Garden City, before moving to Denver City in 1940.

He retired from Shell Pipe Line in 1957 and later owned and operated Harrison Car Lot until his retirement in 1989. Harrison had served on the Denver City City Council for 12 years and on the Board of Equalization for 10 years. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

He was preceded in death by a son, Dub Harrison, in 1986.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Dennis G. Harrison of Denver City; two other daughters, Lois Marie Reed of Abilene, Mary Alice Allison of El Paso and 14 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

Mary Dueease

Graveside services for Mary (Mrs. Walter J.) Dueease, 74, are set for 10:30 a.m. Monday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Mike Slattery officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Saturday at a local hospital.

She was born Oct. 3, 1915 in Denton and grew up in Fort Worth where she attended Our Lady of Victory Catholic School. She attended Barnard College in New York City and graduated from the University of Texas.

She married Walter J. Dueease July 22, 1943, in Fort Worth. The couple moved to Midland in 1948.

She was a charter member of the Midland Junior League, Friends of the Library; and a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, John Woodson Chapter XVII Century Colonial Dames and the San Jacinto Descendants. She was also a descendant of one of the 12 English barons who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta in June 1215.

Survivors include her husband of Midland; one son, Walter J. Dueease Jr.; one daughter, Paula D. Schur of Munday; two sisters, Alice M. Red of Houston and Loretta M. Marsh of Austin; three nieces and a nephew.

Memorials should be directed to the Midland County Library, 301 W. Missouri, Midland or a charity of choice.

Arthur Howland

HOLYOKE, Colo. — Funeral services for Arthur Pearly Howland, 69, father of Allen Howland of Midland, are set for 10 a.m. Tuesday at the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Scott Hood officiating. Burial will follow in the Holyoke Cemetery under the direction of Thompson Mortuary.

He died Saturday at a Greeley, Colo., hospital after a lengthy illness.

Born Nov. 14, 1920, in Littleton, N.H., Howland was an Army Air Corps veteran of the European Theater of Operations during World War II.

He married Vivian L. Haynes in 1945 in Denver.

He was retired from Great Western Sugar Co. and was a farmer.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Connie Sue Howland on Aug. 1, 1974.

Survivors include: his wife, of Holyoke; one daughter, Patricia Ann Garwatoski of Alexandria, La.; two sons, Dennis A. Howland of Gregory, S.D., and Allen Howland of Midland; and six grandchildren.

Calvin Wright

Services for Calvin Wright, 64, of Kilgore are set for 3 p.m. Tuesday at First Presbyterian Church with the Revs. O.D. Oliver and William L. Borron officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

A memorial will be at 11 a.m. Monday in the Radar Funeral Home Chapel, Kilgore, with the Rev. Chuck Warnock officiating.

Wright died Saturday in Kilgore.

He was born Jan. 31, 1926, in Scurry County. A longtime Midland resident, he moved to Kilgore in 1982.

He retired from Shell Oil Co. in 1986 after 40 years' service and was an oil field consultant at the time of his death.

He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Kilgore and was a Marine in the Pacific in World War II and was on Iwo Jima in early 1945.

Survivors include his wife Beverly of Kilgore; one son, Michael Wright, of Midland; one duaghter, Gail Marcum of Midland; his mother, Effie C. Wright of Hermleigh; two sisters, Ruth Davis of Hermleigh and Mrs. Kenneth Reeves of Abilene; one granddaughter; one grandson and many nieces and nephews.

Memorials should be directed to the American Cancer Society.

Lessie Crenshaw

STANTON — Graveside services for Lessie B. Crenshaw, 96, of Lubbock are set for 11 a.m. Monday at Evergreen Cemetery with Dan Stevens of Midland officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

She died Friday at a Lubbock hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born Sept. 10, 1893, in Sweetwater and had been a resident of Lubbock since 1949.

She married Fred J. Crenshaw Sept. 7, 1922, in Tombstone, Ariz. He preceded her in death in 1946.

She was retired school teacher and a member of Christadelphian Church.

Survivors include one son, Douglas Crenshaw of Lovington, N.M.; one daughter, Mary Jo McClendon of Lubbock; one brother, Paul Hopkins of McNeal, Ariz.; two sisters Ina McCloud of Meadows, Idaho, and Jamsey Hudzietz of Douglas, Ariz.; six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Firefighters complete training

Staff Report

Seven Northeast Midland County Volunteer firefighters recently completed training exercises at the Lubbock Fire Training Academy.

The training, which was open to departments across West Texas, included six hours of rescue and extrication training and six hours of fire-fighting instruction against house fires, and oil and other petroleum fires.

Participants are working toward state certification. Attending from the Northeast Midland County Department were Greg Ashcraft, Ashley Chandler, Bradley Chandler, Andy Chandler, Jason Lee, Ellen Marquez and Darrell Siems.

Genealogical seminar to be held

The annual Midland Genealogical Spring Seminar is scheduled for 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday at the Ramada Hotel ballroom, 3100 W. Wall.

Ella Lee Sheffield, noted author, will lecture on family history research. The seminar will also include lectures on "Wars and the Records They Created," "Pennsylvania," and "Tennessee."

Coffee and late registration is scheduled for 8:30 a.m.

Buffet lunch is included in the $15 registration fee. To register, write to P.O. Box 1911, Midland 79702.

things, "Birds can't talk."

Seventy-five to 80 dogs and 18 to 20 cats can be boarded at the kennel, and on a recent visit, all seemed relatively happy in their temporary home.

Each animal's dietary needs are accommodated from vitamins to snacks.

"If a dog is a problem, I won't keep them a second time," Ms. Brickner said. She will not accept chow chows, pit bulls, bull terriers or Staffordshire terriers for boarding. Chow chows can be "people-aggressive," while the other three breeds "are very dog-aggressive. They are very apt to attack a dog that is next to them. They are very determined" and can even "rip off a chain link fence.

"Most of the dogs I keep, I keep repeatedly," she said, noting that while she may not be able to remember an owner's name during a chance meeting at the grocery store, she always recalls the animal's name.

She has kept rabbits for Midlanders, guinea pigs, parakeets and on one occasion — a snake.

There has been little regret about giving up a job with IBM's publishing division in Chicago, where she was director of the test division. Before Chicago, she worked nine years for the New York publishing firm of McGraw-Hill.

She admitted, however, that it's not been all dog biscuits and cat toys. "Insurance is just horrendous" and "it's very difficult to hire help in a real small business." Taxes, she said, "are excessive on a small business," with owners forced to pay unemployment, social security and worker's compensation taxes. "With a small business, you're paying almost 50 percent in addition to (a worker's) salary," she said.

And when you're the only boss, "you can't get sick," she added.

People dream about pursuing their true interests in life "but they become involved in their career pattern and also emeshed in that insurance thing — dental and health — and their four weeks vacation," Ms. Brickner said. "In a sense, it's easier once you've become enmeshed. It's easier to stay in a lot of ways."

Still, she wouldn't trade in her cats and dogs for another briefcase, Ms. Brickner said. "Commuting is so hard. With the business I was in, you had to live in a big city. I did a lot of traveling" — up to three or four cross-country air trips a month. "And I really don't like to fly," she said.

With the exception of days off, "I've never really missed" the bright lights, she said, and at least three friends — Nemo, Potato and Dracula — are happy about that.

VALLEY: Baptist preacher witnesses to oil field workers

(From 1B)

"I look at those years as an education," said the pastor, who is a field representative for Tommy White Supply Co. in Midland.

Today, as he witnesses to people "in the oil field," Frazier said he can identify with their hard times, with their trials and heartaches, and with their wayward ways.

"I've walked that same road," he confessed. "I've been there."

And it was through the "love and prayers" of his "wife, good friends and sons that pulled me out of it."

Today, the little white Southern Baptist church in the cotton patch is growing in membership, getting a new roof and air conditioning and faring so well that the offering plate is not passed around, noted Baptist deacon Gene Jones, who farms and ranches in the community.

"We don't 'thump' the plate," said Jones, whose father, G.S. Jones, helped build the church "board by board" in 1927. The offering plate is kept by the door for the folks to drop their tithes and offerings.

"The good Lord has blessed us," said Jones. "We haven't hurt for operating money" even while the 63-year-old church building is in a "fixing-up mode."

The church is friendly, the way churches, especially small country churches, are supposed to be.

"There's not any sweeter people," said Frazier. "The way the Lord has blessed the church, God gets the glory. We're just there to praise God and give God the glory."

Though Frazier is not from a preacher's family, his wife, Virginia, is. Frazier's folks farmed peanuts in Comanche County.

"I have a husband who's a preacher," Mrs. Frazier noted. "I have a father (Gilbert Webb) who's a preacher, though retired. Daddy still 'preaches' at us quite often. We have a son (Rusty) who's a preacher. He surrendered to the ministry a couple of years ago."

Besides "being a preacher by calling," her 80-year-old father was U.S. Army Gen. Douglas MacArthur's public relations man at Japan's surrender ceremony on the battleship USS Missouri at the end of World War II in 1945.

Her father had "surrendered to the ministry before the war started" and had "worked at whatever he could find" to keep the family going in the 1930s Depression years. After the war, her father built radio stations in Comanche and San Saba and operated a radio station at Graham, did some newspaper writing, and kept up his preaching. "When he wasn't preaching, he was teaching."

And when Frazier married into "the family" in 1963, "the good Lord blessed me," Frazier said.

His father-in-law, the preacher, "was like another Dad to me," Frazier said. Webb was "one of the humblest men I ever knew. He was straightforward and had a heart as big as he was."

Gilbert Webb "took a liking right off" to her husband, Mrs. Frazier recalled.

Both preachers are blessed with "openness and honesty," Mrs. Frazier said, and their "word is as good as money in the bank."

Exercise planned to prepare in case of oil spill

AUSTIN (AP) — Government and private industry have joined together to help the state prepare in case of a major oil spill.

The "Oil Spill '90" exercise will be April 25 in the Corpus Christi area, said the Texas Department of Public Safety's emergency management division.

"What makes this exercise so dramatically different from most is that the exercise design team included members of all those agencies, governments and private industry that would be called on to deal with such a problem," said Robert Lansford, state coordinator for the emergency management division.

"This will allow all of us to be better prepared in the event of a real situation," said Lansford, who heads the Governor's Oil Spill Advisory Committee.

The exercise includes the simulated release of oil from a storage facility in the Corpus Christi Bay area. Participants will deal with concerns from containment of the oil to diverting land and water traffic.

State agencies participating in the exercise, besides the DPS emergency management division, include the General Land Office, Water Commission, Railroad Commission, Department of Parks and Wildlife, Department of Highways and Public Transportation and Department of Health.

PARENTS: Volunteers work on changing behaviors

has worked in the Parent Partners program since last August, said the program teaches the most basic parenting skills — including how to play with children.

"Parents learn to interact with children in a positive way. You can do art projects, sitting down and drawing with your children ... or playing basic games. Anything so that you're having fun."

Each week of the 45-session program, Ms. Roberts said, volunteers address topics ranging from family stress to the importance of self-esteem for both parents and children.

The children, she said, receive as much instruction about family life as their parents.

"It's not just changing the parents' behavior, but teaching the kids skills, too," Ms. Roberts said. "You're working with the entire family. And the way each member of the family acts affects everybody else."

Ms. Roberts said she received a weekend of intense training prior to her first Parent Partners assignment. She is about halfway through the Parent Partners course with her assigned family, she said.

"You've got a lot to cover," she said. "It's a commitment in time — you can't learn to be a good parent in a week or two. Plus it's nice to see your families change in the time that you're around them."

Ms. Walker, for one, said her attitude toward her children has improved in the seven months she has taken part in Parent Partners. Her childrens' attitudes have improved too, she said.

"There's been less fighting, fussing," she said. "They all try to get along with each other. We talk more, we give more hugs, we tell each other we love each other. They share more, they take turns doing things.

"It's a good program, it really is. It shows you many ways to better your children so they'll know what to do when they have children."

Ms. Mouton said CAPP and Parent Partners are funded by the United Way. She said 23 volunteers are taking part in Parent Partners.

DOG: Man says he was humiliated

(From 1B)

Crozier claims he was yelled at when refused service at the restaurant. He was asked to either leave, tie up the dog outside or take out food.

"The manager was screaming and the people in the dining room were looking at us," Crozier said. "I was so embarrassed," he said.

"Thor had his head down real low and drooped his tail. We were both very humilated," added Crozier.

Lynn Sanders said he plans on suing for statutory damages plus damages for civil rights violation. Sanders said he would leave it up to the judge or jury to decide on the amount awarded for the civil rights violation, if he wins. The maximum award in a county court proceeding in Midland County is $50,000.

Besides winning the suit, Lynn said he hopes to educate local restaurants concerning the law.

Other Midland restaurant owners contacted said they would allow someone with a guide dog to eat there and were aware of the law.

Bill Henkel, manager of Cattlemans Steak House said, "I called the proper authorities about nine or 10 years ago and they said you've got to accept the dogs." Henkel said his restaurant does occasionally have people with guide dogs come to eat.

Employees at the two Chinese restaurants that Cozier said also denied him access said they were not sure whether that Cozier and his dog would be allowed in. A cashier and hostess at one of the restaurants said she would call the police for information if the situation ever arose. At the other eatery, the manager said he never ran into the situation and doesn't know what he would do.

6 caught in drug raid

Staff Report

Six people who were arrested and jailed Friday night for possession of $336,000 in marijuana and $14,000 in cash are to be charged Monday, according to the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

They were arrested by sheriff's deputies west of Midland of Highway 80.

The arrests were made following a Crime Stopper's tip, said a spokesman for the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

Sons of Confederate Veterans to convene

Staff Report

The 1990 state convention of the Texas Division, Sons of Confederate Veterans, and the Texas Society, Military Order of the Stars & Bars, will be held June 15 and 16 in Midland, according to convention chairman Marshall Surratt.

This will mark the first time that the convention has been held in West Texas, noted Evetts Haley Jr., who serves as West Texas brigade commander of the Texas Division, SCV, and as commander of the Texas Society, Military Order of the Star & Bars.

In fact, Surratt noted, Midland didn't even exist during the Civil War.

Guest speaker for the Saturday evening banquet will be B. Byron Price, executive director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Other distinguished guests will include Texas Division Commander Pete Orlebeke of Dallas and Dr. M.E. Bradford, professor of English at the University of Dallas.

Activities will get under way with registration at 2 p.m. Friday, June 15, at the Midland Hilton, 117 W. Wall Ave., which will serve as convention headquarters.

An executive council meeting will be held between 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m., and will be followed by a reception in Suite 121 of the hotel between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

A barbecue will be held at 7:30 p.m. on the grounds of the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana.

Saturday's activities get under way with registration at 8 a.m. followed by opening ceremonies at 8:30 a.m. The first business session begins at 9:30 a.m.

Dr. Bradford will be guest speaker for a noon luncheon, which will be followed at 1:30 p.m. with the second business session.

At 4:30 p.m., a business session of the Military Order of the Stars & Bars will begin, followed by a 6:30 p.m. reception honoring national and division officers.

Activities for women present will include a tour of the Museum of the Southwest at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, June 16; a tour of the Brown-Dorsey Home at 2 p.m. followed by a tour of the Scarborough Home.

More than 100 conventioneers are expected to attend the activities, Surratt noted.

The convention is being hosted by Dunn-Holt-Midkiff Camp 1441 of the Sons of the Confederate Veterans and the Haley-Holt Chapter of the Military Order of the Stars & Bars.

Credit for new jail belongs to many

When ribbon-cutting ceremonies were held April 7th for Midland Detention Center, it marked the end of a long and difficult quest for a new county jail that touched almost every county resident in some manner.

The new jail is a tribute to the perseverence and community spirit of a wide segment of the Midland County populace. Even President and Mrs. George Bush, former residents of Midland, got in on the ribbon-cutting event with a message read by Midlander Bobby Holt.

Bush's message said the new jail "attests to the respect of law enforcement in Midland County. " He is correct, of course. Midlanders have been known for years for their strong support of the law enforcement community.

Over the span of nearly a decade, while they faced stringent requirements from the Texas Commission on Jail Standards to upgrade the facility, county officials attempted to get a new jail, but ran into resistance at the ballot box, as county voters nixed their funding designs.

The new facility, which incorporates both the county and city jails, an adjacent building with offices for Sheriff Gary Painter, Constable Ron Rice and justices of the peace Robert Pine and Keith Jobe, and additional jail cells to house federal prisoners, will be able to house 202 prisoners immediately and can be enlarged to eventually hold as many as 576 inmates.

Besides bringing Midland County into compliance with state and federal requirements, the new jail also will benefit the county's taxpayers in that it permits the county to "rent" jail space to the federal government, which will mean a significant reduction in the county's cost of operating the facility.

The modern jail design promises to make the facility a safe and efficient operation. While jails may not be the most appealing structures to a community's citizenry, this one is both physically attractive and apparently financially sound. The cost was $3.9 million, which in today's economy is commendably low.

There are numerous Midlanders who deserve some degree of credit for the jail's approval — Sheriff Gary Painter, County Judge Bill Ahders, the commissioner's court, particularly Commissioner Durward Wright who worked long and hard to get the jail built, Police Chief Richard Czech, Mayor Carroll Thomas and the Midland City Council and, of course, Mrs. Clayton Williams who served as chairman of the Citizens for a New Jail.

All played an important part over the past several years in making the new jail a reality. It truly was a communitywide endeavor.

Multimillion-dollar awards scandalous

One of the scandalous changes in the U.S. judicial system is the increasingly common practice of juries ordering businesses and governmental units to pay multimillion-dollar "punitive damages" that are so excessively disproportionate to the damage suffered by the victim as to be ludicrous.

Jurors who would reel at the thought of inflicting a cruel or unusual punishment on even the most heinous of criminals do not even blink at the thought of socking a company or government with an outrageous financial penalty.

It does not seem to bother these jurors that such unfair "punitive damages" could put a company out of business or force a cutback of government services to the detriment of the general public.

The U.S. Supreme Court has, however, agreed to hear a case that could help the justices determine whether extremely high punitive-damage awards that are made in personal-damage and other cases are unconstitutional.

The case the court has agreed to hear involves Pacific Mutual, an insurance company, and a $1,040,000 punitive damage award the company was ordered in 1987 to pay to Cleopatra Haslip, an employee of Roosevelt City, Ala.

There is no question that Ms. Haslip had been injured by an agent of the company, one Lemmie Ruffin, who had sold health insurance policies to the woman and several others, and then pocketed the money.

The woman did not learn that she was not covered by an insurance policy until 1982 when she ran up $2,500 worth of hospital and medical bills. She had problems paying the bills and her credit suffered because of it.

While Pacific Mutual said it did not sanction the actions of its agent, we would assume that the company should and is probably willing to make good on the damage done to Ms. Haslip as the result of Ruffin's actions.

But to force the company to pay more than $1 million just to punish it for an action that resulted in a few thousand dollars worth of damage to a person is like demanding that someone's head be cut off for stealing a loaf of bread.

There are some parts of the world where such cruel and unusual punishments are handed out, but thankfully the United States is not one of them — unless jurors are bashing a company.

In Browning-Ferris vs. Kelco, a case decided by the Supreme Court last June, the justices rejected the cruel and unusual punishment argument involving the 8th Amendment, deciding that the amendment applies only to criminal cases and not civil disputes — the source of the high punitive awards.

But the justices left the door open for relief. Several justices said such awards may violate the "due process of law" provisions of the Constitution.

Hopefuly, the Pacific Mutual case will provide the vehicle for some limitation to be placed on runaway punitive awards.

While many naive jurors see businesses and governmental units as cash cows that can be tapped for unlimited amounts of funds, the truth is that such unfair awards have a crippling effect on the economy and cost us all in the form of higher prices, higher taxes, lost jobs and lost services.

The job of the justice system is to dispense justice and right wrongs, not to pile wrongs on top of wrongs and injure additional innocent people.

We hope the Supreme Court will act expeditiously to end the "deep pockets" abuse that has become a part of the judicial system.

Bush opposes 'motor voter' bill

WASHINGTON — The White House secretly pushed for the "motor voter" registration bill last year because a confidential poll taken for President Bush showed that it would boost his re-election prospects in 1992. What Bush failed to tell his fellow Republicans is that the same poll showed GOP senators and representatives would probably net fewer votes from the same massive voter registration program.

Anderson

And now this year, when it is clear that any registration bill passed would not take effect until 1993, Bush is back on the GOP bandwagon opposing the bill. An increase in registered voters won't help in 1993 because he will run for the last time in 1992.

Several Senate Republican leaders are furious because they have gotten wind of the presidential poll and have caught onto Bush's self-serving strategy.

The "motor voter" registration bill was conceived as a way of energizing the electoral process by allowing Americans 18 and over to automatically register to vote at the same time they get a driver's license. Any time the electorate is expanded, democracy is served.

But politics may not necessarily be served, and Bush knows it because of his polls.

In January 1989, before Bush was inaugurated, several House Democrats began making noises about pushing through a massive voter registration bill that would be difficult for the president to veto.

Democrats have always figured they benefit from a large voter turnout, and Republicans privately agree.

So normally, a Republican president would find a way to oppose a bill expanding voter registration. The best tactic is to claim that liberalized registration leaves the system wide open to fraud.

But Bush, to the surprise of both parties, early on began speaking favorably of a "motor voter" bill.

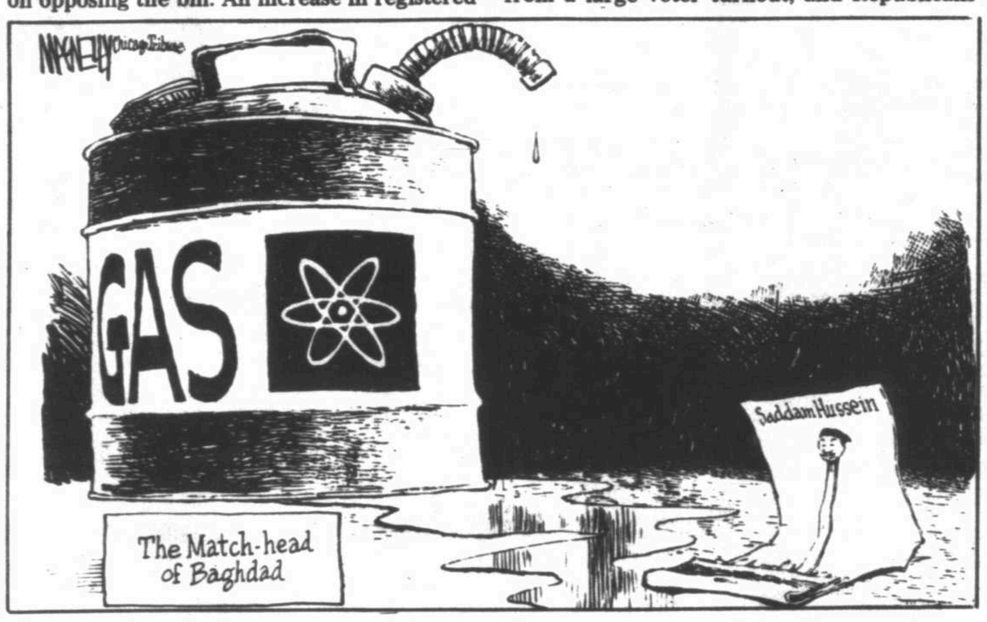

What Congress didn't know was that the president's interest was fueled by a poll taken by his personal pollster, Robert Teeter. The poll showed that if all the people who were old enough to vote in 1988, but were not registered, had been able to vote, Bush would have won by a much wider margin than he did. Bush was tantalized by what that might mean to him in the 1992 election.

One source familiar with Teeter's poll told us that it also turned up bad news for Republican politicians other than the president. The poll showed 62 percent of the congressional vote going to Democrats.

Bush's support for the bill came to naught. The House bogged down in the ethics debate over then-Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and the "motor voter" bill never came to the floor.

Now the bill is hot news again, but if it is passed this session, it would not take effect until 1993. Bush's big problem now is how he will veto it without looking like he opposes more voter registration.

Richard Wirthlin, Ronald Reagan's favorite pollster, took a poll and concluded that younger voters, ages 18 to 24, when asked to vote on a generic congressional ballot, favored the generic Republican candidate over the Democrat 57 percent to 35 percent. Many of the young people are unregistered, but would be automatically signed up under the "motor voter" bill.

Bush's no-new-taxes promise is malarkey

The president's no-new-taxes promise is malarkey, of course. On my home ground, which is probably much like yours, the gasoline tax has gone up 5 cents since the president made his famous pledge and the property tax is being raised.

Baker

Local politicians, desperate for money that no longer comes from the Feds, are now resorting to a fiendish way of getting blood out of the property tax.

First they send a notice that your house has increased prodigiously in value. Translation: tax increase. While you're absorbing this news, the paper hits the front door bringing more bleakness: They are also raising the tax rate.

They have nailed you two ways. Not only have they inflated your taxable base, they have also raised the percentage you must pay for enjoying your rounder, fuller figure.

I am using "they" as though there were a sinister conspiracy afoot in all this, which is unfair to local governments. Somebody has to keep the schools going, the roads open, the police and fire departments on duty.

Somebody has to provide a primitive minimum of health care for the unrich. Somebody ought to be trying to catch those people who are falling through the net.

The net is what the Reagan people used to call it. It was erected by presidents Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford and Carter to stop people from falling into bottomless pits.

Adlai Stevenson cautioned way back in 1960 that our century's problems could not be "met with better detergents and more toothpaste — with private opulence and public squalor."

Twenty years later, private opulence and public squalor was precisely what the Reagan philosophers offered as the cure for what ailed us, and we bought it with gusto.

Still, even the hardest-hearted, young tough guys leading the fight for public squalor never went all the way. The net, the safety net, would not be destroyed by their exertions, they promised.

It would still be there to catch people who failed to thrive on this new onset of social Darwinism. Public squalor, yes; bottomless pit, no.

Age and youth were mated in a covenant to stop government from impeding the fullest success of the most dynamic individuals. The way to do that was to cripple government's power to intervene on behalf of the not-so-dynamic, and the way to do that was to cut off the government's money. Hence the big income-tax cut of 1981.

As heir to this philosophy, President Bush was only doing the inescapable when he said, "Read my lips."

Nine years into Reaganism, however, the public squalor has become embarrassing: homeless people making city streets feel like Calcutta after dark, hospital emergency services in collapse, medical insurance programs approaching catastrophe and bridges and highways crumbling.

We are like an invasion army pinned down on the beach. We need somebody heroic to stand up and lead us off this beach and up the cliff where we can get rolling.

With Bush paralyzed by the government's self-induced poverty, it is the local government people — mayors, governors, county supervisors, state legislators — who must do the heroic work, if it is to be done at all.

To do it with so little help from Washington, they are raising taxes hither and yon, any way they can. This makes nonsense of the president's no-new-taxes pledge.

All "Read my lips" means anymore is that somebody else will have to raise some tax other than the federal income tax. This of course conforms to the Reagan philosophy that there's nothing wrong with a regressive tax system as long as it doesn't regress against the well heeled.

Will

So he shoves his booted feet beneath an oak table already laden with fried onion rings and, knowing that barbeque splatters, flips his tie over his shoulder, under his suit jacket.

This good ol' boy, whose drive for the governor's mansion is powered in part by the energies of Aggiedom (the network of Texas A&M graduates), is a fourth-generation Texan who would be the state's first governor fluent in Spanish. And Aggie-ese. "Gig 'em, Aggies!" he says, with gestures. He owns two maroon-and-white (Aggie colors) tuxedos, and matching boots.

Clayton Williams, 58, roared out of West Texas on a wave of his own money ($6.5 million of the $8.5 million his campaign has spent) to sweep the Republican gubernatorial primary without a run-off, getting 61 percent of the vote while his closest competitor got 15 percent. Motivated by the drug problems of one of his two adopted sons (he has three other children), his ideological signature was a commercial promising to introduce drug offenders to "the joys of busting rocks."

The more the condescenders criticize his rough edges — yes, he has had several fist fights — the more his popularity soars. "Dang right I'll fight. It's a pretty good management tool." When one of the Republicans he whomped accused him of "playing to the 'Bubba vote,' " Williams replied, "I am Bubba."

Some Bubba. He has prospered, right through the Texas bust, in oil, gas, ranching, banking, real estate and high-tech communications.

Williams is West Texas Reagan, right down to the science information plucked from Reader's Digest, the indifference to the opinions of the intelligentsia, his capacity for blurting out thoughts that cause his handlers to cringe, his warm feelings for Franklin D. Roosevelt (for giving Texas roads and parks). And most of all, Williams is Reaganesque in being a political force because he embodies a mood.

The mood is: Let's get on with it — Texas is back and standing tall. What the Iranian hostage crisis was to the nation, emotionally deflating, the 1980s were to Texas. Williams wants to be what Reagan was: the Great Inspiration.

He also itches to do things, about drugs and education and courts and the business climate, so he is a conservative who wants to concentrate central power, that of the governor. He denounces as "archaic" the weakness of that office, which resulted when Texans codified in their Constitution their resentment of Reconstruction governors.

However, Texas is one of just 10 states with no income tax, and every candidate vows to die in the last ditch to prevent one. Therefore, every candidate is a Reaganite in insisting that "reorganization" and "efficiency" and "growth" will work wonders.

It had better. Texas, which by 1995 will pass New York as the second most populous state, ranks 49th in per-capita spending on public welfare, 47th on health care, 29th on per-pupil expenditure, and about one-third of Texas students drop out of school.

Williams' Democratic opponent is State Treasurer Ann Richards, who last week won — well, survived — the Democratic run-off against Attorney General Jim Mattox, who may be the meanest campaigner in America, even meaner than Richards. She got into the run-off by running ahead of former Gov. Mark White, who she accused, in an ad long on innuendo, short of fact, of getting rich off public office. He now compares her to Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler (perhaps he means propaganda chief Joseph Goebbels?).

In the run-off, Mattox accused her of using hard drugs. She, a recovered alcoholic, refused to respond, saying such inquiries discourage people with chemical dependencies from solving their problems. Then several people swore they saw Mattox use drugs more than a decade ago. By their scratching and gouging in the gutter, the Democrats have immunized Williams against the charge that he lacks the requisite grace to be governor.

Six of the 10 largest Texas cities have women mayors, and Texas elected a woman governor in 1924. It is too soon to say Texas will not elect another in 1990. Both Williams and Richards are mistake-prone, but she is the more experienced campaigner, and has the majority with her on the abortion issue. (She is pro-choice; he has been emphatically right-to-life, but probably is about to get blurry on that subject.)

But with drugs the dominating issue, and politics increasingly functioning as a mood-altering drug, bet on Bubba. Both he and she are stimulants, but she never has fist fights.

SPEAKING OUT

Volunteers stand up for children's rights

By Bonnie Howard

Sixty-four million children live in the United States today. Of that 64 million, 2.5 million are suspected victims of child abuse or neglect. Almost 500,000 are separated from their families and living under the foster care system.

Child Protective Services is responsible for protecting these children and overseeing their cases. Because of increasing costs, Child Protective Services is forced to handle growing numbers of cases with fewer workers.

What is the solution? Taxpayers do not want to spend more money to hire more workers, but they want something done about abuse. Child advocates are the answer to this problem.

In 47 of the 48 continental states, 15,000 volunteers work in 387 Court-Appointed Special Advocates programs. They have a 10-point agenda:

1. All children have a right to a safe, loving, permanent home.

2. Society has a responsibility to protect its children from neglect and harm.

3. The health and safety of the child is paramount in a family crisis.

4. Every abused and neglected child must have a voice in court.

5. That voice should be a volunteer advocate.

6. Thorough review of the case and prompt action for a permanent resolution are in the child's best interests.

7. Efforts of agencies which work with abused and neglected children should be coordinated to prevent undue stress on the child.

8. The wide variety of community services available should be utilized to help these children and their families.

9. Frequent movement from one temporary place to another is detrimental to the well-being and development of a child.

10. The public and business community along with public and private agencies must commit time and resources to help abused and neglected children and their families.

In the Permian Basin, Permian Basin CAPP has adopted this agenda for its CAPP-Child Advocates program. CAPP-Child Advocates are volunteers from the local community. They are appointed by the judge who must decide the future of these abused and neglected children. The volunteer gathers information on a child's case, reports findings and makes a recommendation to the judge. After a decision is made, the volunteer monitors the case to insure all decisions made by the judge are carried out.

To prepare for his or her duties, the volunteer receives extensive training, including child development, family dynamics and family law, physical and sexual abuse, and substance abuse. Other necessary training involves hospital and school procedures, law enforcement procedures, court procedures, and procedures for working with attorneys.

A clear understanding of Child Protective Services, foster care and adoption are also necessary; therefore, training also covers these areas. Since communication skills are a necessity, training in interviewing, information gathering and report writing is provided.

When the volunteer completes this training, he or she is sworn in by the judge as a friend of the court to represent the best interests of the child. The child advocate is then appointed a child to represent.

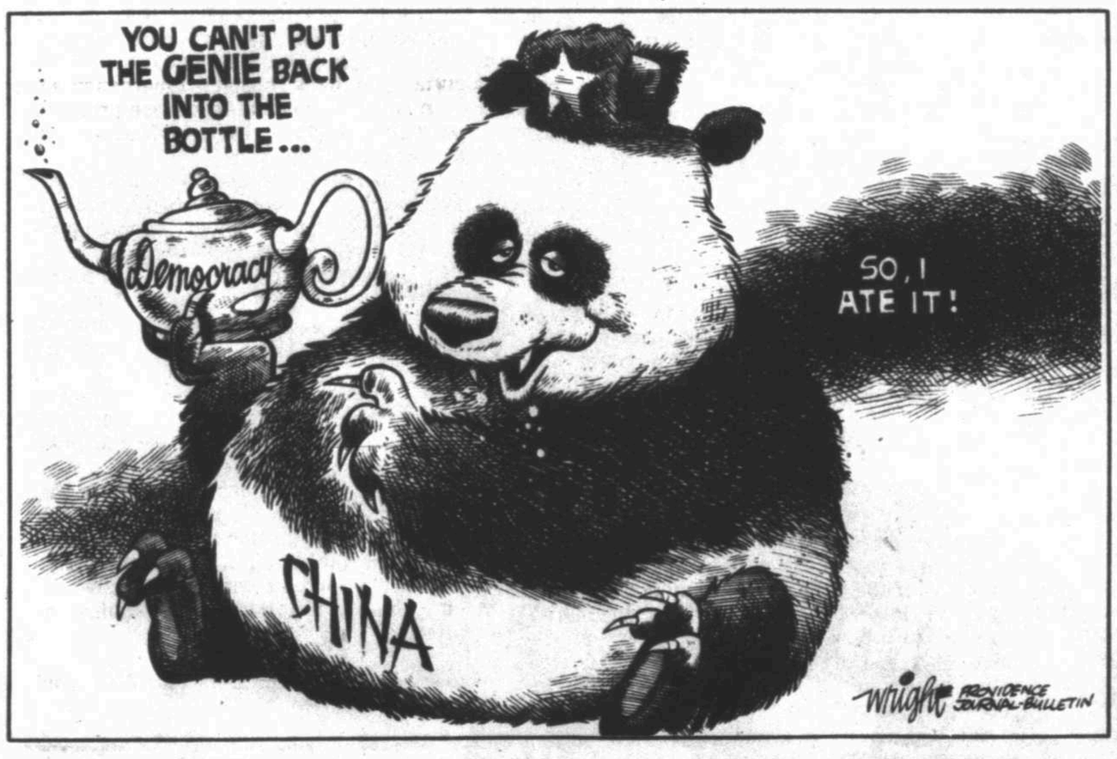

The appointment of an advocate alleviates both the time and money deficits which hamper Child Protective Services. When an advocate is appointed to a case the average cost is $355 a year, while the state spends about $4,000 a year per case.

Fifteen months is an eternity to a small child. Without an advocate the average case lasts 2.5 years, but with an advocate the average time is 9.4 months. What does all of this mean to you and me?

We hear about child abuse daily in the media and shake our heads. We worry about rising taxes and lack of necessary services. We say we care, but words are cheap. Here is our chance to do something about a problem.

We the public, we the business community need to get involved. Programs such as CAPP-Child Advocates yield a maximum result for minimum efforts and funds. We can volunteer. We can contribute and support these programs. We can speak up for a child!

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 700 words or less.

Medical personnel caring appreciated

I would like to express my thanks to the 911 paramedics, the emergency room staff, the medical staff, nursing staff and the staff and therapists of the rehabilitation unit of the Midland Memorial Hospital.

On Feb. 18, we stopped at the Lexington Hotel Suites for our last night on the road before reaching home in Durant, Okla. from a vacation in California.

My husband suffered a heart attack about 9:45 p.m. Because of the quick response of the 911 paramedics and their expertise in handling emergencies, my husband was taken to the emergency room, Midland Memorial Hospital, where the staff there handled the situation quickly and efficiently, with caring, tenderness and professional competency. My husband was stabilized and transferred into ICU.

He was progressing nicely, considering his condition, but suffered a second heart attack followed by a quadruple bypass. Shortly thereafter, he suffered a stroke and other complications which necessitated two weeks recovery treatment in the CCU unit, a week in the PCC unit and another week in the regular nursing unit. Finally, he was well enough to go to rehab where he has made tremendous progress.

We are very grateful to all who had a part in his care, recovery and rehabilitation. So many people have been involved, I dare not mention individuals for fear of missing someone. Each of you know who you are. We thank you.

To the people of Midland, I want to say "I hope you know what a great hospital and dedicated staff that you have here, including the hospital auxiliary volunteers.

Our special thanks also to John and Mary Tomlinson with whom I have stayed the past five weeks.

There is so much sadness and sorrow in this world while we hear more about than the good news, but, trust me, there is a lot of love, compassion and goodness too. Believe that and know where it comes from — belief and faith in God.

Glad Bag-A-Thon coverage lacking

This letter is in reference to the lack of coverage by The Midland Reporter-Telegram on the Glad Bag-A-Thon, a very important event in the campaign to keep Midland beautiful.

Yes, the Sunday April 1 article did mention a general reference to all groups that participated, but it failed to mention a very special group of individuals. These individuals needed some type of recognition. First of all let's give the Midland county inmates a very special and hearty congratulations for their fine job of collecting 73 bags of garbage. These gentlemen deserve credit because they gave something back to the community instead of doing time in a jail cell. The second group we would like to commend is the Girl Scout troop that finished second in the competition. These young individuals did such an extraordinary job in accumulating over 100 bags of trash. For such a young and small group they had to work extremely hard to gather so much trash in such a short amount of time. The third group I would like to honor is the Keystone Club from The Midland Boys and Girls Club. This group of young people in under four hours obtained 231 bags of trash. This is quite an accomplishment in comparison to our last year's total of 153 bags which we managed with the same amount of effort.

What really shocked and dismayed me was the article your paper ran on the Odessa Litter Busters. They received more recognition for their endeavors in Odessa than the Bag-A-Thon received in Midland.

Remarks deliberately cause pain and grief

I have been trying for several days to frame a reply to Ms. Lou Harwell's attack on Clayton Williams. It is difficult for me to understand the motivation of someone who could use the recent tragic plane crash that took the lives of five close friends to launch such a personal attack.

Clayton's remark about the weather was not a deliberate attempt to hurt anyone; it was simply thoughtless. He recognized this and apologized. Ms. Harwell's remarks, however, were deliberately designed to cause pain and further grief, not only to Clayton but to the friends and families of those involved in the accident.

Insensitivity isn't confined to the male gender. I'll be surprised if Ms. Harwell is big enough to apologize for the additional pain she has inflicted on these families.

VAN supported by time, money

Visual Aids News-Mobile (VAN) was founded in 1973 by Mayme Kroenlein Martin to provide services for the visually and physically handicapped. One primary service of VAN is visiting elderly persons who reside alone and have little or no contact with relatives, friends or neighbors.

Since becoming associated with VAN a few months ago, I have been amazed and delighted at the generous support this organization receives from Midlanders in terms of both time and financial assistance.

One example of this support has been exemplary and, I think, should be recognized. Dr. Pamela Howell, professor of English at Midland College, requires that each of her students spend two hours weekly in community service involvement. As a result of Dr. Howell's program, several students have been referred to VAN through The Volunteer Center.

The energy and warmth displayed by these students in making "house calls" to VAN clients is greatly appreciated by all with whom they come in contact. Hopefully the seed that has been planted by Dr. Howell's volunteer program will continue to grow and multiply throughout the lives of her students.

Thank you, Dr. Howell, for this fine service to our community.

Executive Director

Girl Scout cookie sale successful

The Permian Basin Girl Scouts recently completed their annual cookie sale. Thanks to the support of the citizens of Midland, we had a successful sale.

The purchase of each box of Girl Scout cookies helps Girl Scouts in three ways. First, each girl earns "Cookie Credit" to be used for camp, family events, programs, or the purchase of Girl Scout equipment.

Second, troops earn money for troop projects, trips, and troop supplies.

Third, the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council receives funds that help to provide camps, program centers, training for volunteer support, and program activities for the Girl Scouts of the Permian Basin.

On behalf of the Girl Scouts of Midland, I would like to thank the citizens of Midland for the wonderful support of Girl Scout cookies.

The girls will be out selling those cookies again, next year.

Boys & Girls Club fund-raiser success

The Boys & Girls Club of Midland recently held a very successful fundraiser, our First Annual Steak & Burger Dinner, held on Thursday, March 29 at the Midland Center. The event was a tremendous financial success as well as an evening of fun and entertainment.

The staff and members of the Club would like to thank the Checkpoint Band and Miss West Texas, Darcey Rushing for providing the wonderful musical entertainment; the Boys & Girls Club Folklorico Dancers, Golf Course Road Church of Christ for the transportation of 120 kids, and the fine keynote speaker Coach Spike Dykes, who came all the way from Texas Tech to deliver an inspirational speech aimed directly to the kids. We sincerely appreciate each of these donations of time and energy on behalf of such a great cause.

The Dinner was also an awards recognition and I would like to take this opportunity to salute the following individuals: Youth of the Year, Jose Rios; Junior Boy of the Year, Sevriano Pena Jr.; Thomas J. Lipton Sportsmanship, Roy Bermea Jr.; Volunteer of the Year, Sophie Sotelo; and Outstanding Board Member of the Year, Pete Binggeli. Congratulations to these outstanding individuals.

Child care measure unconstitutional

In response to an article by Charley Reese concerning the child care bill before Congress, published in the Tuesday, April 10, Midland Reporter-Telegram, as a concerned parent and one of those little citizens, I want Congress to take note that this bill in unconstitutional.

All the little people should contact the newspapers and their U.S. representatives and senators to tell them to stop playing with the Constitution and violating it. The politicians will not listen to a little taxpayer.

Zurich newspaper editorial tribute to Bush, U.S.

Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

SAN SIMEON, Calif. — The most cheerful report I can give you on this Easter Sunday comes from Switzerland.

It is a great tribute to America and to President Bush's leadership from Zurich's leading newspaper, the Neue Zurcher Zeitung.

The editorial, sent to me by Bernard Kaplan, our chief European correspondent and foreign affairs writer, makes such gratifying reading that I am quoting it as follows:

"Seldom in its brief history as a world power has the United States had more grounds for satisfaction than it does today. The principles of its national existence and political nature — freedom, democracy, human rights — are spreading with explosive force even to places where they have been most deeply despised by governments and bureaucracies...

"At this point, no one knows just where the turbulent upheavals in the Soviet empire will lead. But the task which America assumed after World War II, that of containing communist expansion and promoting democratic, pluralistic, market-oriented values, appears to be culminating now in historic triumph.

"What, then, is America's next task?

"There are some understandable arguments on the side of America's 'coming home.' The question is raised, for example, of whether it is worthy of a great power to trouble itself about the small details of history, once it has so splendidly fulfilled its over-arching mission of facilitating the breakthrough of democracy? Given all the domestic, social and economic challenges facing it, would it not make more sense to strengthen itself and prove itself at home?

"There is as yet little justification for isolationist idylls or triumphal cries about the end of history. One central reality in today's Realpolitik is that American remains a factor of magnitude, a superpower (perhaps, the only one deserving of the name at this point) with a definite place in the structure of the world.

"America's role today must be less a missionary one, as Reagan saw it, than that of a force for order, pacification and security. President Bush appears to have grasped this fact quite clearly. When there is great agitation on one side, it is surely better for the other side to remain calm and clear-headed. Bush may be just the sober, realistic-minded helmsman needed to steer America on its new course between the trumpets of the crusaders and the siren song of the isolationists....

"What American policy cannot do is to resolve the internal tensions in Soviet reform policy or stake everything on Gorbachev's personal success.

"With respect to the latter, up to now Bush has been able to clearly differentiate between the historically legitimate desire for sovereignty of the Baltic states and the violent disorder in the Caucasus. For the moment, he cannot do more than urge the Kremlin to exercise the same discrimination.

"This makes American steps in the traditional realm of policy toward Western Europe all the more urgent.

"Bush's assurances that America intends to remain a European power and Washington's increasing inclination to regard the single European market of 1992 as an opportunity for intensified Atlantic cooperation, rather than as a threat to its own economy, reveal the present administration's priorities.

"Particularly under the impact of the moves toward unification of East and West Germany, Bush has filled the old American rhetoric about a united Europe with concrete political content. The role of NATO is being re-evaluated and the political component always inherent in it is to be given greater importance.

"As newly free Eastern European countries seek links to the economic power of Western Europe, and as the 'German question' in a new form moves to the center of all European thought about the future, Europe once more becomes central to American foreign policy.

"If, as it appears, America needs a new challenge, it may be found in strengthening of old ties so that they can be made ready to take on new partnerships. From these, new international structures may grow. For the foreseeable future, they are unthinkable without American participation."

That's the best greetings for a Happy Easter I can send to you and your family.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Classes resume Tuesday; Exams soon follow

By H.A. TUCK

The college finishes Spring/Easter break tomorrow, with classes resuming Tuesday. Because of the late holiday, students and faculty face a fast three weeks of classes prior to finals week. Semester exams are scheduled for May 7-10, with graduation on May 12.

Midland College's Board of Trustees meets this week, but on a different day than usual. Because of conflicts, the board meeting is set for 4 p.m. on Thursday. Regular stated meeting of the board is the third Tuesday of each month. The agenda is rather routine.

Winners of the annual Creative Writing Contest are due to be announced at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. Cash prizes of $60, $40 and $20, plus plaques, are given to winners in each of the three categories: poetry, essay, and short story. Some honorable mention awards also are presented. Entrants then may meet with the judges for a critique session.

The contest is a bit unique, in that former students — within the past two years — are allowed to enter. This was instituted since English and creative writing instructors felt that students often did better work after leaving college than while they were attending. In other words, instructional advice sometimes takes a while to sink in!

If you aren't at least 55 years of age, please skip to the next item since you aren't eligible for this. Now, those of you with some maturity (and perhaps some wisdom) should be aware that Midland College provides special classes just for you. Called College Classics, they are four-week courses, meeting one or two afternoons a week for an hour or two. Best of all, the cost is a flat $25 for unlimited class registration.

MC has offered College Classics the past three semesters with great response. There have been two previous sessions this spring. The courses for this session are: Comprehensive Financial Planning, Fat Busters, 55 Alive (defensive driving), Flying, Gourmet Cooking, Making the Most of Your Money, Enjoyment of Music, The Performing Arts, Piano, Potpourri Workshop, Power of Imagery, Stress and the Family, Tennis, The How, When, Where and Why of Travel, and World History.

You should register for any or several of these classes on Tuesday in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building.

OK, youngsters, you can resume reading now. Some of MC's brightest students are selected for membership in Phi Theta Kappa, the national junior college honorary academic society.

And five of these PTK members and their sponsor were in San Francisco April 6-10 attending the national PTK convention. (Who says being bright doesn't pay off?) Attending were chapter president Kirk Olson, vice president Susie Reed, Beth Chynoweth, Debbie Tanner, Joseph Gibson and sponsor Aline Collins.

It's back-and-forth for the Midland College and Odessa College tennis teams this week. The OC men come to Midland Wednesday for a 2 p.m. conference match, then everyone gathers at Odessa Thursday for a 2 p.m. women's match.

The more mature readers we addressed just a few moments ago probably recall a mentalist, magician, illusionist named Kreskin. Younger folks might not have know of The Amazing Kreskin, but he provides great entertainment. Chaparral Center is hosting The Amazing Kreskin on Saturday for a 7:30 p.m. show. It's well worth seeing for the whole family.

Final exhibition for the academic year in McCormick Gallery is the Spring Student Show, which opens Saturday and remains on display through May 7. You'll see some truly talented results in drawing, watercolors, oils, ceramics, mixed media, and photography. Nor is it unusual for the architecture students to have some of their drawings and models on display at the same time.

Reception for the student artists is scheduled for Tuesday, April 24, from 7-9 p.m. in the gallery.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, 1-5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday.

The five Continuing Education classes starting this week offer a lot of choice. There's a class on financial planning, one on how to create those great-smelling potpourri concotions, beginning flyfishing, watercolor, and Professional Growth Seminar for Working Women.

If one or more of these grabs your attention, register Tuesday at the Continuing Education office, located in the Administration Building. The phone number is 685-4518 if you need any other information.

LHS PSTA names two 'Super Teachers'

Paula Huckabay and Margaret Saunders have joined the ranks of "Super Teachers" selected by the Lee High School PSTA in recognition of professional excellence and dedication to their students.

Huckaby

Saunders

Ms. Huckabay, who teaches junior English, began her teaching career 11 years ago at LHS and is herself an LHS graduate. She earned her B.S. degree from Texas Tech and is completing her master's degree at UTPB. She is a member of the Texas Joint Council of Teachers of English.

She also serves as sponsor of the LHS literary magazine, "A Pebble Cast," and coordinated the sale of football programs for Rebel games last fall. She is a past sponsor of Key Club, varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders and Future Teachers of America.

Ms. Saunders, a 10-year LHS veteran, teaches Business Information Processing. She co-sponsors the Business Professionals of America Club and has had at least one student advance to the club's state contest every year since 1981. Four of her students have advanced to the national contest in nine years.

Ms. Saunders has a B.B.A. degree from Texas Tech, a master's degree in counseling from UTPB and Vocational Certification from North Texas State University. During her 20-year career, she has taught at the high school, community college and business college level.

She is a State Advisory member of the Vocational Office Education Teachers Association of Texas and a past board member. She is past president of Region 18 TBEA and has received the Teacher of the Year award from both the TBEA and the Permian Basin Counselor's Association.

Best way to study

Associated Press

According to the Washington-based American Institutes for Research (AIR), the best way to get ready for a test is to study from the beginning of the course, preparing for a test gradually — which lets the student absorb the material, make connections between concepts and draw conclusions.

MC schedules interim session

Staff Report

Seventeen classes are listed for Midland College's Spring Interim Session, scheduled May 14-31.

"The Interim Session is an intensive 12-day mini-semester, during which time students can earn one, two, or three hours of college credit. For the three-hour courses, students must attend class four hours daily Monday through Thursday," said Dr. Ray Yell, academic vice president.

For the interim, there are five computer classes, four English classes and one each for real estate, legal assistant, speech, economics, government, history, and sociology. Three of the computer classes have one-hour credit and the legal assistant class offers two hours of credit.

There is no advance registration for the Spring Interim. Registration will be at 8 a.m. Monday, May 14, in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Students will pay fees and begin classes that morning.

"Many people want or need interim sessions. We revised an earlier schedule in order to include the spring interim this year. In order to make room for it, we moved the starting dates of the two summer session back by one week for each," Yell said.

Summer I early registration begins May 14. Summer I classes begin June 5 and end July 10. Summer II registration opens June 25, with classes scheduled July 12-August 15. Summer session classes meet Monday through Thursday.

Bulletins listing interim and summer session course offerings, along with registration information, are available at local banks, the Midland County Library, or the Student Services Office, Administration Building. Midland College is closed for Spring Break until Tuesday.

Youths named Eagle Scouts

Staff Report

Two local youths have recently been named Eagle Scouts and a third is scheduled to receive the award.

Jim Crose, son of Mike and Marianna Crose of Midland, has been awarded Eagle Scout rank by Troop 19.

Crose

Crose, an eighth grader at San Jacinto Junior High, chose as his Eagle project painting addresses on alley fences in his neighborhood.

First chair trombone player in the San Jacinto concert and jazz bands, Crose has paticipated in the all-city Junior High Band and in the youth choir, State Bible Drill Competition and president of Royal Ambassador Pioneers at First Baptist Church.

His hobbies include computers, snow skiing, piano and science fiction books.

Chris Jensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Jensen of Midland, was awarded the Eagle Scout rank during a Court of Honor held April 4 at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 4805 Gateway St.

Jensen

Westbrook

Jensen, a seventh grader at Goddard Junior High, chose as his Eagle project to provide Terrace West Nursing Center with a merrier Christmas by decorating the room, assisting with Christmas card mailings, and arranged for an activity period for the patients to help celebrate Christmas.

Jensen is the third of three brothers to receive the Eagle rank.

Mark Westbrook of Midland will receive the Eagle Scout award on May 12.

He is the son of Roger and Debbie Westbrook.

He is a Senior Patrol Leader for Troop 175.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

MC students to give recital

Staff Report

Midland College sophomores Abigail Johnson and Danny Koonce will present a dual recital on April 22. The free recital will be in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium at 2 p.m.

Johnson, a graduate of Midland Lee High School, and Koonce, a graduate of Stanton High School, are presenting operatic arias, German lieder, and English songs for their recital program.

"Abigail and Danny have worked very hard of the past few years in order to be ready for this event. They have participated in the Chorale, the MC Jazz Singers, and in other campus events. Both are considering careers in the music field," said Dr. Michael Jordan, coordinator of vocal music at Midland College.

Rusk PTA will meet

Rusk Elementary School's PTA will meet April 24 at Lee High School Auditorium. Fifth-grade strings program will be presented at 7:30 p.m., followed by general PTA meeting and election of officers at 7:45 p.m. At 8 p.m., the fifth grade will present the program.

Lee parent group to meet

Lee High Parent Teacher Student Association general meeting and board meeting will be Tuesday noon at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 3309 Neely.

The "Empowering Parent Series" will continue and LHS counselors will present "Myths and Facts" about adolescent suicide.

The public is invited.

Ex-board member arrested

HOUSTON (AP) — Former State Board of Education member Volly C. Bastine was arrested and charged with narcotics possession after he blocked traffic on a southeast Houston street, police said.

Bastine, 45, was arrested at 11:30 p.m. Thursday after illegally stopping in a street to talk to two pedestrians, police said.

Police approached Bastine and asked for his identification and proof of car insurance because he was blocking traffic, authorities said. When he told officers he had none, he was arrested.

A subsequent search of his car turned up a pipe with residue of cocaine in it, police said. He was charged with possession of cocaine and released on $5,000 bond.

Just a couple of hours a week with a caring, certified teacher can make a world of difference in subjects ranging from reading and writing to basic math and algebra. Your child will benefit from renewed confidence and self-esteem.

MC to have Teens on Campus

Staff Report

Special summer programs for children at Midland College are being enlarged to provide classes for students who have finished the seventh and eighth grades.

Called Teens On Campus (TOC), the classes will be held on the second week of June, July, and August. Classes will be held Monday through Thursday, with two classes daily. The first class session is 1-3 p.m. and the other from 3-5 p.m.

Midland College began offering special summer programs originally for fourth through sixth graders. Kids' College was expanded two years ago to include students who had completed first through third grades.

"Expanding Kids' College to include the first, second, and third graders was done in response to parents whose older children were in Kids' College, as well as those parents who had heard about it," said program coordinator Jan Reed.

"The expansion to include the seventh and eighth graders also is in response to needs, mostly suggested by those students who have been in Kids' College the past two or three years."

Kids' College for 1990 has Session I scheduled June 18-28 and Session II from July 16-26. There are 76 different classes being offered during Kids' College, many of them during both sessions.

Registration for Kids' College will be held on campus on May 23. Brochures listing course offerings and registration information will be distributed the week of May 1 through all public and private elementary schools in the county. Registration procedures for TOC are still being finalized and will be announced later.

In addition to the traditional instructional areas of science, art, and foreign language, the TOC program includes innovative classes. One such class is called "It's A Small World." The class will include a mock United Nations, with students learning practical aspects of history, government, geography, and international trade. Another class is "Computers for Making Good Grades." It moves students from video games to such skills as word processing, preparing term papers, information storage and graphics.

Kids' College provides appropriate skill-level courses for two different age-groups, the first through third graders, and fourth through sixth. There are three different class sessions each afternoon for those taking Kids' College: 12:40-2 p.m., 2:10-3:30 p.m., and 3:40-5 p.m. By enrolling for both sessions, a child could take six different subjects during Kids' College.

The classes being offered during the first period of Session I for those who have finished grades one through three are: Aerobics, Strategies of Baseball, Cheerleading, Creative Dramatics, Creative Writing, Exploring the Weather, It's Up To Me (developing potential), Money Magic, Noah's Ark, Beginning Piano, Printmaking Design, Wonderful World of Reading, Sorcerer's Apprentice, Introductory Spanish, Tennis, Tae Kwon Do (1st and 2nd grades only), Typing/Keyboarding (3rd and 4th grades only), Wild Things (environmental), and Wind Works.

At the same time, for those who have completed grades four through six, the class offerings are: Babysitting, Strategies of Baseball, Bicycle Repair, Bowling, Clowning Around, Computers for Kids, Cooking Kids, Handbuilt Clay, Earth Science is a Blast, Kids' College Gazette (writing), Jazz, Modeling/Personal Development, Nutrient Express, Radio and TV Broadcasting, Rag to Riches (rag purses), Sign Language, Space Stations, Sweet Creations, Tennis, Typing/Keyboarding (3rd and 4th grades only), and Wood Carving.

First freshman registers at UTD

DALLAS (AP) — William McDowell II hasn't even gotten out of high school and already he's No. 1 in his university class.

McDowell turned over his admissions card to the university registrar last week, and became the first freshman to enroll at the University of Texas at Dallas. Until this year, UTD served only juniors, seniors and graduate students.

"They said I was one of the first 10 applicants to be accepted," McDowell said, "and if I returned the card, I could be the first one to enroll."

McDowell, a senior at Berkner High School in Dallas, said he hopped in his Subaru and sped toward campus to grab the honor.

By week's end, UTD had enrolled 17 students in its first freshman class.

The university, which joined the state system in 1969, enrolls about 8,000 upperclassmen and graduate students. In January, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board gave final approval for UTD to begin admitting underclassmen this fall.

STATE

NAACP member proposes changing offensive names

AUSTIN (AP) — Names such as "Nigger Creek" and "Dead Negro Draw" should be wiped off the Texas map, says an NAACP chapter president who is making the first concerted effort in the nation to change an entire state's racially offensive geographic names.

The idea was born two years ago when Bledsoe, on an outing in the countryside, discovered "Nigger Creek" and "Niggerhead Hill" within an hour's drive of the Capitol.

"I couldn't believe what I saw and how totally offensive that was," Bledsoe said. He found the creek's name all the more ominous because three black youths drowned there while in police custody in 1980.

"I guess we don't have 'Caucasian Mountain' or 'Japanese Mountain,'" he said. "It does lead one to believe that one group is being treated differently because of their skin color."

Many locations have been tagged with racial names because blacks have lived there. One example: the "Colored Subdivision" in nearby Pflugerville, an area that locals say was given to blacks after the Civil War.

The three-street community near Pflugerville High School now houses the town's school buses, a drive-in beer barn, a church and a few homes.

There are six "Negro Creeks" in Texas, as "Negro Crossing" in Tom Green County near San Angelo and "Negros Liberty Settlement," "Negro Bend" and "Negro Gully," all in Liberty County east of Houston.

"Negro" was substituted for "nigger" in a comprehensive 1962 name switch by the Board of Geographic Names in Reston, Va. The board decides which names are used on all maps produced in the United States.

Others honor individuals.

A few changes are already under way, though not necessarily as Bledsoe wishes.

The Travis County Commissioner's Court has worked for months to change "Nigger Creek" and "Niggerhead Hill" to "Warbler Creek" and "Warbler Hill."

Those new names are awaiting a nod from the Board of Geographic Names, which relies on community approval to decide such requests.

In Yellowstone National Park, "Chinaman Spring" is being changed to "Chinese Spring."

Two more shootings reported in bus strike

DALLAS (AP) — Two more Greyhound bus shootings were reported to federal and state authorities this weekend, but the strike-plagued company says no injuries have been reported and the union denies any responsibility.

A bullet ricocheted off a San Antonio-bound bus at a Dallas area freeway interchange shortly before midnight Saturday, a Greyhound Lines Inc. spokesman said. Hours later another gunshot struck a bus traveling from Birmingham, Ala. to Nashville, he said.

The company has decried the violence directed against its buses, which now includes more than 32 shooting attacks, saying it won't negotiate with striking drivers and other employees until a week goes by without incident.

An Amalgamated Transit Union representative in Dallas denied that strikers were responsible for the latest violence and said he had doubts about the Texas report.

"The word I got was it was just a little indentation" on the side of the San Antonio-bound bus, said ATU representative Donald Hardin. "I have very serious doubts about that one. If it was a bullet, it wasn't from any of our guys. We have been very peaceful here."

A $100,000 reward for information leading to arrests in violence against buses applies to the latest shootings, said Greyhound spokesman George Gravley in Dallas.

The Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions in Washington, D.C. did not immediately return telephone calls Saturday from The Associated Press.

The bus in Texas had no passengers on board at the time of the shooting, said Kevin Fry, a company spokesman in Dallas. The bullet struck the bus about 5 feet, 10 inches off the ground, near an American flag painted on its right side.

"Upon their preliminary investigation, they determined it was a small- to mid-caliber bullet fired from a handgun, fired from behind the bus and it ricocheted off the bus, never penetrating the skin," said Fry.

He said the driver heard a "noise" at the interchange with Interstates 35 and 635 at the Dallas suburb of DeSoto but continued driving to Troy, between Waco and Temple, where he noticed the damage and contacted the company.

The driver was told to drive to San Antonio, where he was met by the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and police in that Central Texas city, said Fry.

He said the second shooting occurred on a Nashville-bound bus with six passengers aboard. Its driver was at an undetermined location on Interstate 65 when gunfire hit the eastbound bus about 3:20 a.m. CDT.

Agents from the ATF and FBI were investigating the shooting along with state and local authorities, said Fry. Both agencies did not immediately return calls from The AP.

Mexican police to investigate Alvarez capture

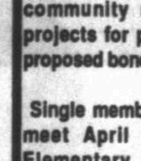

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mexico will investigate the alleged kidnapping of a man brought to El Paso and charged with killing a federal drug agent in 1985, the Mexican attorney general says.

U.S. investigators say Humberto Alvarez Machain may have been kidnapped by Mexican bounty hunters before being brought to El Paso on April 3, the El Paso Herald-Post reported Saturday.

But La Prensa, a Mexico City newspaper, alleged that Mexican federal agents had participated in the abduction.

STATE IN BRIEF

Court refuses to delay trial

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal appeals court has refused to delay the murder trial of three white Sabine County lawmen acquitted nearly two years ago of violating the civil rights of a black man who died after being beaten and left without medical care.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Friday rejected a defense motion to delay the trial pending appeal on grounds that a second trial would constitute double jeopardy.

On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb in Beaumont issued a similar ruling allowing the murder trial set for Tuesday in Tyler to proceed on schedule.

"The district attorney's office is pleased," said Kenneth Nash, an assistant district attorney in Smith County, where Loyal Garner Jr. died two days after the beating on Christmas Day 1987.

Pari-mutuel track in red

BRADY, Texas (AP) — Deep in the heart of Texas, the state's only operating pari-mutuel racetrack has finished its season in the red, prompting many to re-evaluate the future of an industry that was to have helped the state out of its economic woes.

Pari-mutuel betting on horse racing has floundered across the state, with plans for many proposed tracks abandoned or put on hold.

"Everybody had high hopes, being the first track to open in the state," said Richard Lerma, a general manager brought in from Pennsylvania to run G. Rollie White Downs, located about 280 miles southwest of Dallas.

Traffic lights go out

AUSTIN — Friday the 13th turned out to be unlucky for some Austin motorists who found themselves the victims of a computer glitch that knocked out more than half of the city's traffic lights.

Austin Mayor Lee Cooke says public works officials told him the problem, the result of an attempt to program enhancements into the system, has been located.

Austin police spokesmen said Saturday that it will be several days before they know how many traffic accidents were caused by the foul-up.

A programming error was entered Thursday night. Just before noon Friday, more than 300 lights began flashing. Others just got stuck.

Judge rejects Hearn-Haynes lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawsuit filed by former Democratic gubernatorial candidate Theresa Hearn-Haynes charging that state elections are unfairly biased in favor of the wealthy has been rejected by a state district judge.

Ms. Hearn-Haynes, who ran in the March 13 primary race, had sued Democratic gubernatorial candidates Jim Mattox and Ann Richards to try to stop last Tuesday's runoff election.

Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, won last week's runoff, earning 57 percent of the vote to 43 percent for Mattox, the state attorney general.

After a brief hearing Friday morning, District Judge Pete Lowry of Austin dismissed the lawsuit on the grounds that the runoff election was already over, and therefore he had no jurisdiction in the case.

In the suit, Ms. Hearn-Haynes had alleged that wealth discrimination limits access to campaign contributions and the media. Less-wealthy candidates are excluded from televised debates and from buying high-priced media advertising, she charged.

"I think the entire process is unfair," she said.

Pats just say no

DALLAS (AP) — Joe Mendes, New England's director of player personnel, says Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson has called him several times in recent weeks to see if the Patriots would be interested in trading for quarterback Steve Walsh.

Johnson

The Patriots' response, thus far, has been a resounding "no."

"We've talked several times concerning Steve Walsh. I don't think he's in our plans at this time. We think our best approach in terms of quarterback at this time is to go through the draft."

The Patriots own the third pick in the draft, which Dallas would like to acquire.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Odessa Permian beat San Angelo by three points, Odessa High's Dallas "Big D" Cowan was sensational as usual, Permian's Lloyd Hill completed his three-year sweep, four records were set and Midland High pulled a rabbit out of the hat.

In other words, Saturday's track clan gathering at Memorial Stadium had a little of everything — as usual.

Permian held off a furious San Angelo rally in the last two events to win the team title by a 146-143 margin, even though the Bobcats produced a record breaking 3:14.11 in the 1600 relay, the last event of the night.

But the star, as expected, was OHS' Cowan, who for the second year in a row won both the 100 (10.47) and 200 (21.60) and may be headed back to the state meet in both events. Cowan was pushed by Abilene High's Doug Sims in the 200, but easily won the 100.

"I'm just trying to get into the regionals at this point," said Cowan, who did so with the two victories, "but I don't feel like I'm running what I'm capable of at this point."

Cowan was also part of OHS' sprint relay team, which posted a district record and state best 40.62 with David Skinner, Patrick Brown and Davorick Taylor.

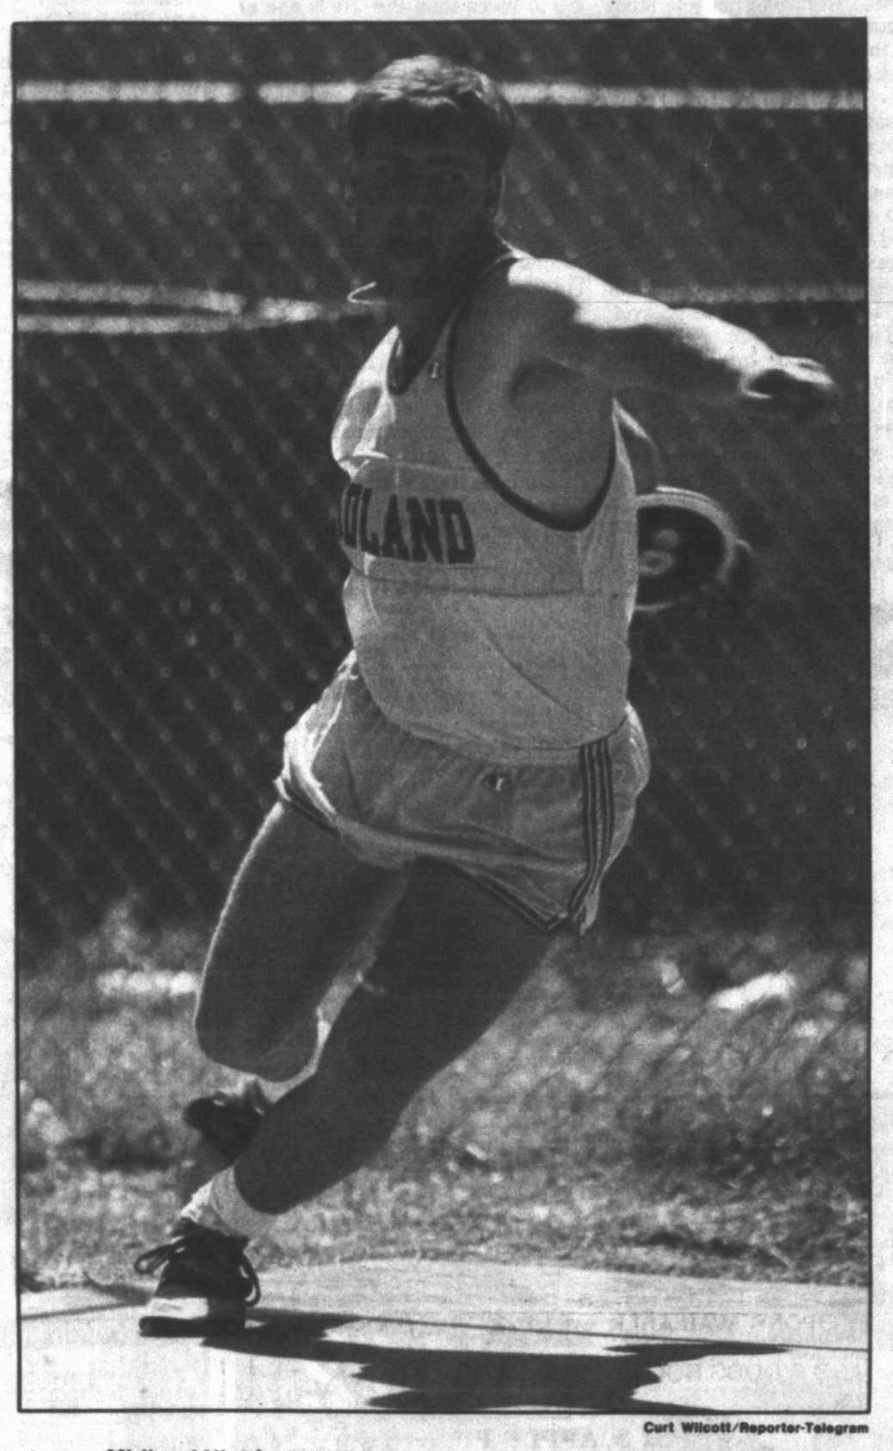

"We didn't take any chances. The time was probably around 40.8 with the Accutrack. The time we had was hand held," said Cowan. "We can do more, but we didn't want to make a mistake here."

Permian's Hill won the 400 in 47.77, the third year in a row for the senior who is headed to Texas Tech on a football scholarship to win in this event. Last year he jumped off a house and injured a leg after winning district, but he promised not to let that happen this year.

"I won't be jumping off any houses," said Hill. "I'll be ready for the region meet."

San Angelo super star Joey Bonds won the 110 hurdles in 14.28, but was beaten

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Neither Midland Lee nor Midland High made much of a splash in the girls team standings at Saturday's District 4-5A track meet on the Memorial Stadium oval, but several local individuals qualified for the Region I meet.

Lee athletes making the trip to Lubbock for regional competition in two weeks include sophomore Traci Logan and seniors Sheena Parker and Marcia del Llano. Logan won her 300-meter hurdle event, while Parker and del Llano placed second in the triple jump and 800-meter run, respectively.

Lee placed fifth in the team race with 69 points, while MHS was last with 26 points. Glover, who was shooting for a second straight regional berth, scored 18 of the Lady Bulldogs' points. MHS' Cindy Carullo narrowly missed a regional berth with a personal best 5:35 in the 1,600-meter run, and the Lady Bulldogs got their other two points with a sixth-place finish in the 400-meter relay.

Abilene High ran (and jumped) away with the team crown. The War Eagles outscored second-place Odessa Permian 170-110, thanks in part to three wins by jumping and hurdling standout Ernestine Pyle. AHS scored 46 points in the field events, as Pyle won the long and triple jumps, later adding a win in the 100-meter hurdles.

Glover was hoping to eclipse former MHS standout Ethel Edwards' meet record in the 200, but ended up almost a half-second behind Abilene High sphomore LaRhonda Kendrick — who didn't come close to Edwards' 1987 time of 24.31, either. Kendrick finished with a time of 24.92 seconds, while Glover checked in at 25.39.

"She (Kendrick) was stronger at the top of the curve," Glover said. The MHS senior still set a personal best 25.39, a Midland High's Elizabeth Ameel staved off the valiant efforts of teammate Susan Johnson in a three-set singles final Saturday to cap the District 4-5A tennis tournament at the Bulldog courts where five Midlanders earned berths in the Region I tourney.

Harper Essex of Midland High, a state doubles champion last year, used a daring mixture of power and finesse to dispatch San Angelo's Patrick Root in the boys' singles finale.

And Jason Gooch and Ben Bacon of Midland Lee will also be in attendance at the regional event two weeks hence in Lubbock thanks to a second-place finish in boys' doubles. The unseeded Rebel duo got by third seeds Colin Harrison and Blake Bassett of Abilene Cooper 6-3, 6-2 in the semifinals before falling 7-6, 6-1 to San Angelo's Brian Mees and Justin Cobb in the championship match.

"I know we'll have to play a lot better at regionals," Gooch said. "But this is great. We'll just play the best we can."

The Lee boys lost a first-set tie-breaker, 7-3, on Bacon's double fault, something from which they never fully recovered.

"I knew coming in that there would be a lot of pressure, and I tried to overcome it," said Bacon, a sophomore. "But it got to me there at the end."

Pressure is nothing new to Essex, the top seed in boys' singles. The Midland senior endured tie-breakers in the opening set of both the semifinal and final rounds before establishing himself as 4-5A's best in straight sets.

Essex downed Antwine Smith of Lee 7-6, 6-0 in the semis, then overpowered Root 7-6, 6-2 for the title.

"If I win the first set I usually gain confidence," said Essex. "Winning that first one in the finals gave me something to fall back on, and I just went for it."

Bulldog tennis coach Steve Hoover smiled as he handed Essex the championship medal. "In both matches they came out gunning for you because you're the top dog," Hoover told his star.

MC ladies win abbreviated duel

■ The Lady Chaps dominate again, even though Janneke Garos, fighing a knee injury, drops the only MC match of the tournament.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

After a slow start Saturday in the Midland College Women's Invitational tennis tournament, Lady Chaparral Sharla Barone rebounded for a 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 win over Tyler Junior College's Lisa Beard at the MC courts.

That win gave MC a 5-1 advantage over the Apaches and may have done more for the Chaps' morale than any other event Saturday with Tyler's decision, having conceding the loss in the nine-match duel between the two teams, to start the long trip home without playing doubles.

Not that MC minds playing doubles against anybody, but the abbreviated competition made for a nice respite before the Chaps host Western Junior College Athletic Conference rival Odessa College Thursday.

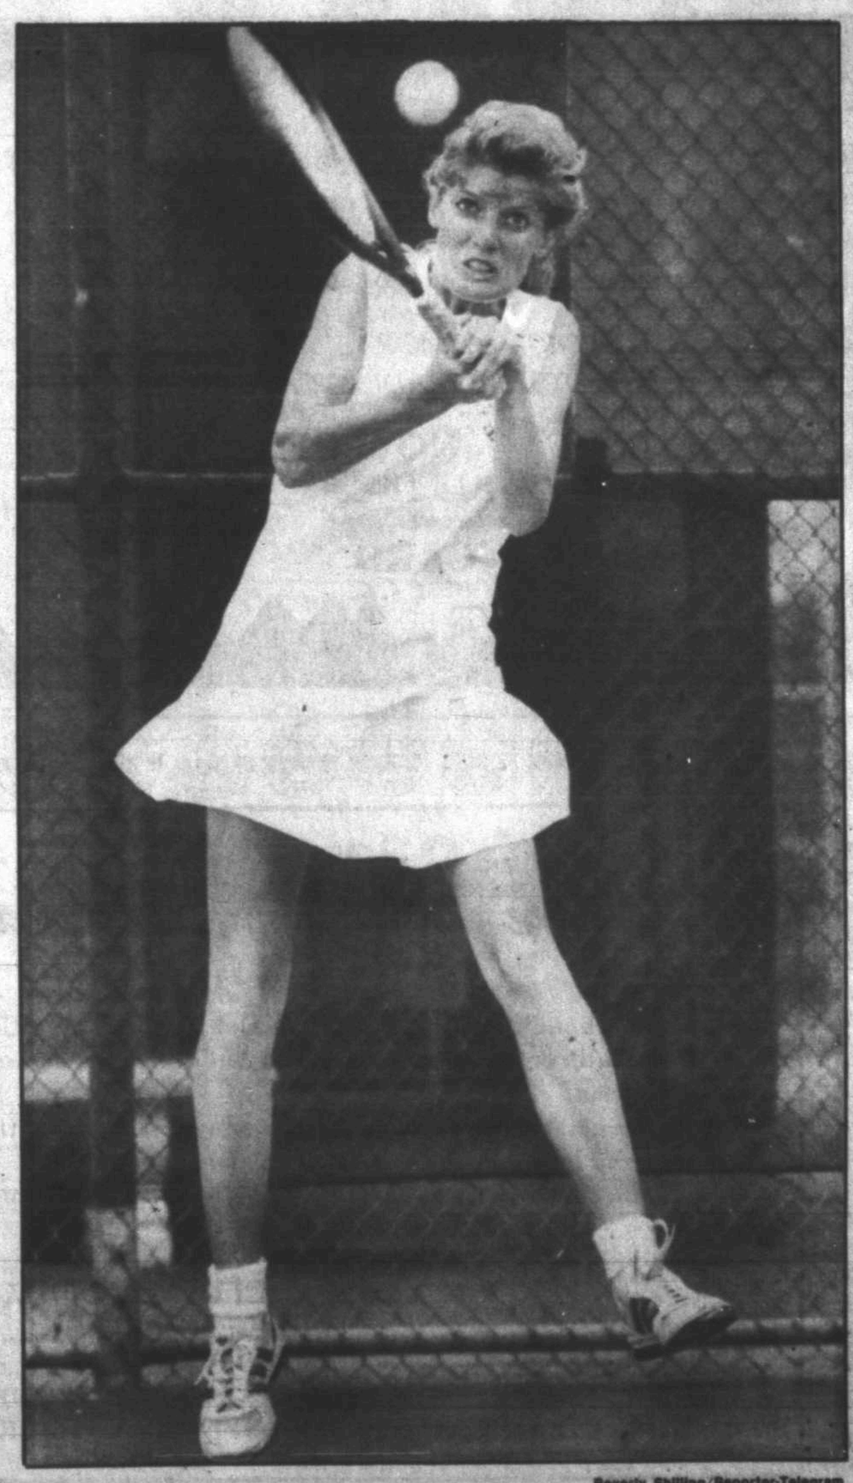

As soon as Barone, playing the No. 1 spot Saturday, saw that teammate Janneke Garos had been defeated on the adjacent court, she knew the onus was on her to make the day a short one for MC.

"I knew it was up to me. I was pretty nervous in the first set, and was playing too tentatively," Barone said. "But then I started getting more aggressive, and started really charging in as the match went along."

After dropping the opening set by four games, Barone made effective use of the lob and cross-court shots to stay close in the second. She eventually broke Beard's service to go on top 5-3, but could not hold her own serve. However, she came right back to break Beard again to carry a wealth of momentum into the final set.

"Sharla's always been a slow starter," said MC coach Joe Wilby teammate Gary Owens in the 300 hurdles as Owens turned in a district record time of 37.12.

San Angelo added a third record to its book when Marcus Bibbs went 44-9½ in the triple jump. That was a record since it was the first year for boys to compete in the triple jump.

San Angelo also had a double winner in Daren Childs, who won both the discus and shot put.

But for Tall City entrants, it was not a glorious day. Midland High finished sixth with 39 points and Midland Lee was last with 14 points since sophomore sprint star Brett Sullivan was all but sidelined with a pulled leg muscle. Still, it was the first time in the last two decades that a Midland team has not won at least one district event.

However, MHS did land two Region I berths for Lubbock in two weeks when John Braun placed second in the discus and Jack Kelso placed second in the pole vault.

Lee's Bill Swearingen, a hard working senior, was finally rewarded with a region berth with a second to Hill in the 400.

But Kelso's 13-6 in the pole vault was one of the meet's big surprises. The junior had never been over 11-6 in a meet and broke his pole Monday. He wasn't even listed on anyone's depth chart going into the event. Cooper's Michael Hamm won the event with the same 13-6 height, but had fewer misses than Kelso.

"Jack has been over 13-feet in practice, but had never done so in a meet," said MHS coach Johnny Williams. "He broke his pole Monday and it may have been the best thing that could have happened. Instead of buying a new pole, we used one we had and it really worked for him. Now we need to get him a backup in case he breaks this one."

Braun had a personal best of 152-10 in the discus. He was pleased with the region berth, but that was the extent of it.

"My first throw was around 158 or 59, but I scratched and I never scratch," said Braun. "I'm not where I want to be, but I have two weeks and I think I can be over 160 by the regionals. A lot of people thought I would make it to the region meet last year, but I didn't do well in district, so this does make me feel good."

Swearingen, too, had to erase the memory of a year ago when he stepped off the track in the 800 and was disqualified in the district meet. He came back to win the region berth in the 400 this year.

"The 48.33 was my best time ever, so I felt really good about the race," said Swearingen. "I had my mind completely clear of last year before the race and just wanted to do the job this year. I've got it all behind me now."

"No one deserves the region berth more than Bill. He is one of the hardest workers you will ever see," said Lee track coach Mike Quimby. "It wasn't just this year either. He worked hard all three years and had some tough luck last year in the 800."

Lee lost a bid to qualify its sprint relay team when third leg Farris Strambler and anchor Sullivan had a handoff out of the zone.

"Brett has had a pulled leg muscle, so we decided to pull him from the 100 and 200 and try to get the relay team in," said Mike Quimby. "We were in second place, but we've been working Sullivan on a slide start because of his leg, but he got pumped up and took off too fast."

Midland High's Albert Ray, who was a Region I qualifier in the 100 last year, failed to gain a return trip to Lubbock by placing fifth this year. However, the sprints this year is a District 4-5A trademark and the competition was really stiff.

In the region qualifying race, San Angelo landed nine individuals and a relay for Lubbock while Permian had seven individuals and two relays. Odessa High had two individuals and a relay while Abilene High qualified four individuals. Cooper qualified three individuals.

The Region I meet will be held April 27-28 at the Texas Tech oval.

Angels win first

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels tagged Missions pitching for three runs in the top of the 13th inning Saturday and held on to record their initial win of the 1990 campaign, 8-5.

The Angels, after four straight losses to San Antonio, head to Wichita with a 1-4 mark. The Missions settled for a 4-1 record in the season's first series.

Steve DeAngelis hit a solo home run on the first pitch of the 13th, and Ruben Amaro doubled in two additional insurance runs in the inning.

(From 1C)

liams. "But she always finds a way to win."

That statement was upheld by the fact that Barone, MC's top singles player since Garos was hobbled by a knee injury in February, had more than her share of missed first serves and double faults.

"I wasn't getting as many first serves in as I would have liked, but you never do," the Chicago sophomore said. "But on the big points, I had some good serves that got me on the offensive."

All the other MC-Tyler matches were completed in straight sets, and the only other competition that featured an iota of suspense was Garos' loss to Susheel Gulati. Garos quickly lost the first set 6-1, but battled back in the second before falling 7-5.

Despite losing, Saturday's match was exactly what the doctor ordered for Garos, according to Williams.

"The tournament went pretty much as I expected. I didn't think Janneke would win today. She has just been out so long and hasn't had a chance to get into good shape yet," he said of Garos, who had been the top-ranked junior college woman until her injury. "But Gulati was good for her. That girl puts pressure on every shot, and that's exactly what Janneke needed to see."

Also making an impressive showing for MC Saturday was Alison Bradford, who devastated Neili Wilcox 6-1, 6-3.

"That girl beat Alison back in the fall, so it was a great match for her. But Alison has improved a lot since then," Williams said.

In three other routs, MC's Maria Vago won 6-3, 6-0; Missy O'Neill claimed a 6-1, 6-3 victory; and Mara Lencina came out on top 6-1, 6-1.

In other team play, Tyler beat Texas-San Antonio, then UTSA dropped Texas El Paso.

At long last, the Astros find the win column

Bill Doran singled home the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning and the Houston Astros became the final major league team to win this season, beating the Los Angeles Dodgers, 7-3, after opening with four straight losses.

Orel Hershiser and Mike Scott each made their second starts of the season, and again neither got a decision. Scott went five innings, giving up one run on two hits, and Hershiser pitched six innings and allowed three Houston runs on eight hits.

Doran, whose error at second base helped Los Angeles score twice in the seventh for a 3-all tie, hit a two-out single that scored Craig Biggio, who had singled and stole second. Glenn Wilson followed with a three-run homer off John Wetteland (1-1).

Larry Andersen (1-0) got the victory and Dave Smith went 1 2-3 innings for a save.

The Dodgers rallied in the seventh on a two-out single by Jeff Hamilton, Doran's error and a sinking liner to center field by pinch hitter Chris Gwynn that went for a two-run double.

Glenn Davis and Wilson hit RBI singles in the sixth that put Houston ahead 3-1. The Astros had gotten only one run in their previous 22 innings before scoring in the fifth on a single by Rafael Ramirez.

Mike Scioscia homered for the second straight game, connecting for a solo shot off Scott in the fourth. Hershiser retired the first 10 batters before Biggio singled in the fourth.

NL Roundup

Expos 6, Mets 5

Nelson Santovenia's bases-loaded double highlighted a five-run second inning against Dwight Gooden as the Montreal Expos beat the New York Mets.

The loss was the second straight for Gooden, who sat out the second half of the 1989 season with shoulder problems. He has now allowed 10 runs in 7 2-3 innings in two starts.

The Expos sent nine men to the plate in the second against Gooden, who surrendered consecutive singles to Tim Wallach, Andres Galarraga and Larry Walker before Santovenia cleared the bases with a double down the third-base line.

Spike Owen followed with the fifth straight hit, a triple to score Santovenia. Delino DeShields singled Owen home.

Gooden left in favor of Bob Ojeda, who allowed one unearned run in two innings, to start the fourth.

Dennis Martinez, 1-0, allowed four runs, two earned, in six innings.

New York built a 3-0 lead, scoring once in the first on Darryl Strawberry's RBI single, and adding two in the second when Wallach made errors on two straight ground balls to third.

With Mike Marshall on first with a lead-off single, Wallach booted a Barry Lyons' grounder. Kevin Elster followed with a bouncer to Wallach who forced Marshall at third, but threw past Galarraga, moving the runners to second and third.

Gooden's sacrifice fly brought Lyons home, and Gregg Jefferies followed with an RBI single.

The Mets made it 6-4 in the fourth when pinch-hitter Dave Magadan hit into a double play with the bases loaded and none out.

Howard Johnson's second homer of the year off Steve Frey made it 6-5 in the seventh, but Kevin McReynolds and Marshall couldn't bring Strawberry home from third with after the Mets' right-fielder doubled with one out and moved up on a passed ball by Santovenia.

Cubs 4, Pirates 1

Rookie Mike Harkey, making his first start since September 1988, won his first major league game and first baseman Sid Bream's throwing error keyed Chicago's three-run third inning as the Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Harkey (1-0) went six innings before Paul Assenmacher and Mitch Williams, who has saved all four Chicago victories this season, finished up. The Cubs' bullpen ran its scoreless innings streak to 17 innings, having allowed six hits and no runs in five games.

Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg played his 95th consecutive game without an error, two short of the major league record for an infielder set by San Francisco's Jim Davenport from 1966-68.

The Cubs have won five in a row and eight of their last 11 games in Pittsburgh dating to last season, when their 6-3 record was the best since Three Rivers Stadium opened in 1970. The Cubs were 59-112 in Three Rivers before this year.

Padres 5, Giants 3

Mike Pagliarulo's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning gave the San Diego Padres a victory over the San Francisco Giants, whose bullpen failed to hold a late lead for the second straight game.

The Padres scored once in the eighth against Atlee Hammaker, tied it in the ninth on Garry Templeton's two-out single off Jeff Brantley and won it in the ninth on Pagliarulo's fly and Benito Santiago's squeeze.

On Friday night, the Padres scored the tying run in the eighth on Joe Carter's homer off Dan Quisenberry and then won 8-3 with five runs in the ninth. The Giants are without relief ace Steve Bedrosian, who left the team Friday after his 2-year-old son was diagnosed with leukemia.

Kevin Mitchell's first home run of the season and Eric Gunderson's six impressive innings in his major-league debut helped the Giants take a 3-1 lead.

The Padres pulled to 3-2 in the eighth against Atlee Hammaker on one-out singles by Fred Lynn and Bip Roberts and an RBI forceout by Roberto Alomar. Hammaker had retired all 16 batters he faced this season before Lynn's hit.

Phillies 6, Cardinals 2

Tommy Herr and Von Hayes hit home runs and the Philadelphia Phillies, who had not homered in their first four games, beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2.

Bruce Ruffin (1-0) gave up two runs on six hits in 7 1-3 innings. Jeff Parrett finished for his first save.

Herr had three hits, including a two-run homer in the seventh off Cris Carpenter that made it 5-2. Hayes hit a solo shot shot in the eighth.

Joe Magrane (0-1) allowed three runs on six hits in six innings.

Staff Report

Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper both won Saturday in District 4-5A baseball play to take a ½ game lead over idle Midland High.

Permian trounced hapless Abilene High at the Permian field, 22-8, while Cooper squeaked past Odessa High 3-2 in Abilene. Going into Satuday, MHS, Cooper and Permian were tied for the 4-5A lead with 6-2 league records.

MHS is back on the diamond Tuesday, when the Bulldogs play host to Cooper at 4:30 p.m. in Angels Stadium.

Clemens chops down 10 in 6⅔

Former Longhorn pitcher also chalks up second victory of short season

Associated Press

Roger Clemens struck out 10 batters in 6⅔ innings and won his second start of the season as the Boston Red Sox rallied to beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Clemens allowed three runs on eight hits and one walk, and fanned 10 batters for the 39th time in his career. He won on opening day against Detroit, giving up three hits in 6 2-3 innings.

AL

Lee Smith, the third Boston pitcher, went 1 1-3 innings for his third save. He preserved Clemens' first victory in four decisions against Milwaukee since July 30, 1988.

Chris Bosio blanked Boston on two hits for five innings and left after throwing 94 pitches. The Red Sox promptly jumped on relievers Don August (0-1) and Tony Fossas for four runs in the sixth.

With one out, Ellis Burks walked and took second on Dwight Evans' hard single off August's pitching hand. Billy Jo Robidoux doubled off the left-field wall for one run and Tony Pena's RBI single mae it 2-2.

The Brewers took a 2-0 lead in the fifth on a double by Greg Brock, an RBI single by Edgar Diaz, a hit batter, and infield hit by Gary Sheffield and Billy Bates' sacrifice fly.

Clemens gave up singles to Diaz and Charlie O'Brien to start the seventh. He retired the next two batters, but Robin Yount singled home Diaz and Robb Murphy was summoned.

Rangers 8, Yankees 4

Nolan Ryan struggled to his 291st career victory and Rafael Palmeiro drove in three runs, leading the Texas Rangers past the New York Yankees.

Ryan, who pitched five hitless innings in a Monday's opening day victory against Toronto, retired the Yankees in order in the first before allowing Roberto Kelly's RBI double in the second.

Ryan is 6-0 in his last eight starts against the Yankees since losing on May 14, 1977, at Anaheim, Calif.

Ryan, 43, allowed 10 hits, struck out four and walked one and hit a batter in seven innings. He went to a three-ball count five times and threw 109 pitches. Gary Mielke pitched the last two innings for the Rangers.

Don Mattingly had three hits off Ryan, including an RBI single in the seventh. Mattingly, usually a slow starter, is 6-for-12 in three games.

Palmeiro had a run-scoring double in the first and a two-run single in fourth to give Texas a 6-3 lead and chase starter Andy Hawkins. The double snapped a streak of 18 consecutive innings without an extra base hit by the Rangers.

Hawkins (0-1) pitched 3 2-3 innings and allowed six runs and six hits. The right-hander is 1-4 lifetime against the Rangers, allowing 22 runs in 28 2-3 innings. One of Hawkins' losses to the Rangers last season was to Ryan on July 20 at Texas.

Royals 3, Blue Jays 1

Bret Saberhagen held Toronto to six hits through 7⅓ innings and Bo Jackson doubled twice and scored two runs to lift the Kansas City Royals past the Blue Jays.

Saberhagen, the 1989 American League Cy Young winner, struck out five and walked one in his first decision of the season. Mark Davis, the third Royals pitcher, worked a perfect ninth for his second save.

Orioles 7, Tigers 4

Bob Melvin homered and tied a team record by scoring four runs and the Baltimore Orioles took advantage of five errors to beat Detroit, preventing the Tigers from reaching .500 for the first time since 1988.

White Sox 9, Indians 4

Sammy Sosa led an extra-base barrage with two triples and the Chicago White Sox got 15 hits Saturday night and romped past the Cleveland Indians 9-4.

Sosa scored twice and drove in a run while Ivan Calderon and Lance Johnson each drove in two runs.

Dallas-area teams take soccer titles

AUSTIN (AP) — The Duncanville girls beat San Antonio Madison 4-3 while the Grapevine boys defeated Tyler Lee 3-0 Saturday in the 1990 Interscholastic League State Soccer Tournament.

Duncanville (23-3-1) wiped away three different Madison leads and won in a sudden death shootout to claim the girls state championship.

The Grapevine boys scored once in the first half and twice in the second to claim the boys title.

Stewart looks for a piece of Heritage history

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Defending champion Payne Stewart, seeking to become the first golfer ever to win the Heritage Classic in consecutive years, fired a 5-under-par 66 on Saturday to take the third-round lead.

PGA

Stewart, who shot a record 16-under-par 268 to win last year's Heritage, was at 8-under 205 going into Sunday's final round at Harbour Town Golf Links. But a host of players were well within striking distance, including 1988 champion Greg Norman, who had a hole-in-one on Saturday.

Norman, who had a 67, was at 207 along with Masters champ Nick Faldo and Steve Jones.

NBA ROUNDUP

San Antonio spurs Kings, 105-94

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Star rookie David Robinson was held to a season-low five points Saturday night but Terry Cummings came off the bench to score 25 and lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 105-94 victory over the Sacramento Kings.

Cummings regularly starts at forward but yielded his spot to Frank Brickowski because of a bruised left foot. A 12-0 run in the third quarter gave the Spurs a 71-57 lead and they were never threatened thereafter.

The Spurs, who won 21 games all last season, have a 52-26 record. If they win two of their remaining four games, they will become the most improved team in NBA history. The record is Boston's 32-game turnaround from 1978-79 to 1979-80.

Rockets 103, Jazz 99

Mitchell Wiggins scored all 14 of his points in the fourth quarter, lifting the Houston Rockets to a 103-99 victory over the Utah Jazz.

With the victory, the Rockets stayed in eighth place — the last playoff spot — in the Western Conference standings. Houston is a half-game ahead of ninth-place Seattle.

Utah, which lost for only the fifth in 40 home games, led 77-72 going into the fourth quarter, but with Wiggins scoring eight points, the Rockets opened the period with a 13-2 run to go ahead 85-79 with 8:11 left in the game.

Bullets 113, Bulls 103

Bernard King scored 30 points, 11 of them in the third quarter, helping the Washington Bullets snap Chicago's nine-game winning streak with a 113-103 victory over the Bulls.

Harvey Grant scored 10 of his 23 points in the third period as the Bullets stretched their eight-point halftime lead to 93-80.

Pistons 111, Magic 107

Bill Laimbeer hit a decisive 3-pointer with 1:10 left and then blocked a shot by Reggie Theus with 19 seconds remaining, lifting the Detroit Pistons to a 111-107 victory over Orlando, the Magic's 12th consecutive loss.

76ers 109, Hornets 102

Charles Barkley scored 32 points before his fourth-quarter ejection and the Philadelphia 76ers hung on to defeat the Charlotte Hornets 109-102.

The victory reduces Philadelphia's magic number to two games in an attempt to win its first Atlantic Division title in seven years.

Pacers 124, Nets 113

Chuck Person scored 28 points as the Indiana Pacers moved closer to an Eastern Conference playoff berth with a 124-113 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Indiana, which has won four of its last five games, is battling Cleveland and Atlanta for the two remaining conference playoff spots.

Cavaliers 93, Heat 85

Chucky Brown's dunk started a critical six-point run at the beginning of the fourth quarter and the Cleveland Cavaliers outscored Miami 28-9 at the free-throw line beating the Heat 93-85.

Bucks 109, Hawks 93

Jay Humphries sparked a 13-2 fourth-quarter run with six of his 27 points and the Milwaukee Bucks clinched a playoff berth for the 11th straight year by defeating the Atlanta Hawks 109-93.

SuperSonics 96, Suns 89

Dale Ellis hit eight shots in a row in the second half and finished with 30 points, leading the Seattle SuperSonics to a 96-89 victory over the Phoenix Suns.

Nicklaus returns to top form

Jack Nicklaus, who opened the tournament with a 68, and Lee Trevino, who rallied with a 67 Friday, were the only others under par entering Sunday's final round.

"Gary played the front in 29 and was running away with the golf tournament," said Nicklaus, who once trailed by nine.

Gee lays claim to SWC medalist honors

Associated Press

LAKEWAY, Texas — The University of Texas fired a 294 Saturday to open a 10-stroke lead and walk away with the 1990 Southwest Conference Men's Post-Season Golf Tournament at The Hills of Lakeway.

Texas finished the three-day tournament with a 54-hole total of 893, 10 strokes ahead of second-place and 13th-ranked Texas Christian University (903), as the Longhorns claimed their second straight SWC Tournament championship.

UT became the first team since Houston (1984 and 1985) to capture back-to-back SWC Tournament titles.

Texas A&M's Bobby Gee whose best 1990 finish had been 19th, fired an even-par 72 Saturday to claim individual honors with his two-over-par three-day total of 218. Gee, who also starred on the course in his days at Midland Lee, edged Houston's Dee Green, who finished strong with a one-under-par 71, but fell one stroke short (219).

Defending individual champion Mark Pfingston of Rice finished in a three-way tie for third place at 6-over 222 with Texas' Omar Uresti and SMU's Jon Whittemore.

"I had really been playing solid, but the confidence level hadn't been there for me," said Gee, who became the first Aggie golfer since 1982 to claim SWC individual honors.

"I've been working hard and I knew my game would come around sometime. It's fortunate that it came in this tournament. It probably won it for me," Gee said of his birdie on No. 15.

"I hit my tee shot a little bit left, and then hit a good second shot but had a little too-much club. Then I chipped it in. As I hit it, I liked the way it looked and thought it might go in if I got it on line. And it did," he said.

Gee also became only the seventh Texas A&M player in the 65-year history of SWC men's golf to win individual honors. Gee also earned an invitation to the 1990 Southwestern Bell Colonial in Fort Worth next month.

This marks the 12th straight year the SWC individual champion has received an invitation to the annual PGA event. The team title was Texas' third under Coach Jimmy Clayton and the Longhorns' seventh in the 19-year history of the SWC Tournament.

UT also completed its 1990 sweep as the Longhorns claimed the SWC's regular-season championship with its victory at the All-America Intercollegiate last week in Houston.

"I'm very proud of our players," Clayton said. "We didn't play very well yesterday (Friday) but came back (Saturday) to post a solid score. I knew Omar (Uresti) would come back and play well. He's an outstanding player and I had every bit of confidence in him."

Texas, ranked seventh nationally, will now receive top consideration for an invitation to the NCAA Central Regional Tournament May 24-26 in Columbus, Ohio.

DISTRICT: Five make it to region

(From 1C)

"But you did what you had to do."

It took three grueling sets to establish a champion in girls' singles, with No. 1 seed Ameel finally out-gunning Johnson, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

"It was one of those matches that could have gone either way," Hoover said. "The match focused around who could be the most agressive, but it was an emotional battle too.

"These two girls have a lot of comradery, they've cheered for each other all season long and it's very hard to compete against each other with that kind of friendship," he said.

Knotted at 3-3 in the final set, Ameel held service to take the lead, then broke Johnson's serve. She won the last points of the deciding game with an ace and a stiff backhand.

"Susan played really well today. I had to give it everything I had," said Ameel, last year's district runnerup who placed third at regionals. "I don't think I was fully on my game, but if I meet her (Johnson) at regionals she could reach the finals."

Johnson left the court weary but excited at the prospect of going to regionals.

"I'm very excited about it," she said. "I played good tennis today, just not good enough to beat Elizabeth.

"But we've played a lot together, and it's hard to be ferocious against a teammate and friend."

In Saturday's other finals, Sheri Gilreath and Tracy Broyles of Abilene Cooper defeated Odessa Permian sisters Kathy and Mary Burian, 6-2, 6-3 in girls' doubles.

Earlier, Glover scored a runaway win in the 100 meters with a time of 12.31. She was so sure of victory in the shorter race that she raised her arm in joy during the last 10 yards.

Glover said she wants to join the nine state runners who had broken the 12-second barrier in the 100 through last week. And, she thinks that's realistic.

"I want to run at least an 11.7 or 11.8, and it I come out of the blocks well, I think I can do it."

For Lee, Logan may also have a legitimate shot at a state meet berth in her sophomore season.

And as far as Logan is concerned, her hurdling form can't get any worse, despite her success this season.

"My speed was okay, but my form was so bad," Logan said. "I can improve on my speed and technique in the next two weeks."

Both del Llano and Parker extended their high school careers for at least two more weeks with personal record performances Saturday.

del Llano moved into first place at the 200-meter mark and started

"I was told to go out fast, but I think that was a little too fast," she said. The senior traveled the first lap in 65 seconds, after doing 70-72 seconds for most of the season.

In the triple jump, Parker hit her eventual runnerup distance of 34-10 on her first leap. Even though she couldn't better that mark, it was enough to keep third-place Laniece Gindratt of Abilene High and Lee's Keyshia Crisp in third and fourth, respectively.

Parker hopes to have some bugs worked out of her technique in time to challenge Pyle, who won with a 36-6, and others at the regional meet.

"I need to stretch more when I get into my hop," she said. "I also need to get more height."

Results in the girls division of the Dis=trict 4-5A track meet at Memorial Stadium:

ORDER CALLING ELECTION FOR THREE MIDLAND COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICTS; DIRECTING ESTABLISHING ELECTION PRECINCTS AND POLLING PLACES; PROVIDING FOR ABSENTEE VOTING AND APPOINTING ELECTION OFFICIALS FOR SAID ELECTION

WHEREAS, the laws of the State of Texas require that an election of certain public officials, including the hereinafter designated officials of Midland County Hospital District of Midland County, Texas, be held on the first Saturday in May during 1990, and WHEREAS, said date falls on Saturday, May 5, 1990, and;

WHEREAS, the terms of three Directors, James Rasmussen, Patricia Ann Estes, and Margaret Purvis, expire on the first Saturday in May of the year 1990, and

WHEREAS, pursuant to resolutions and orders previously adopted by the Board in accordance with law, Directors shall be elected from single-member districts, being Single-Member Districts 3, 4, and 7 in the year 1990, NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDERED by the Board of Directors of Midland County Hospital District of Midland County, Texas:

SECTION ONE. That an election be, and is, hereby ordered to be held on Saturday, May 5, 1990, during the hours of 7:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M. for the offices of Director of each of the Single-Member Districts numbered 3, 4, and 7 of Midland County Hospital District of Midland County, Texas. The said single-member districts are by this compass that portion of the District which is encompassed within the Midland County Voting Precincts described below:

SECTION TWO. That in accordance with the provisions of the Texas Election Code, Article 4512d1, the election precincts and polling places for said single-member district elections be, and are hereby designated as follows:

HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION PRECINCT NO. 3, containing Midland County Voting Precinct Nos. 202, with polling place at Greenwood Schools Administration Building, 2700 FM 1379, Midland Texas; (Single-Member District No. 3) and

HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION PRECINCT NO. 4, containing Midland County Voting Precinct Nos. 104, 205, 208, 212 and 307, with polling place at Midland Parks and Recreation Building, 300 Baldwin Street, Midland, Texas; (Single-Member District No.4)

HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION PRECINCT NO. 5, containing Midland County Voting Precinct Nos. 204, 408 and 409, with polling place at Sam Rayburn Elementary School, 5306 Whitman Drive, Midland, Texas; (Single-Member District No. 7) and

SECTION THREE. That absentee votes for residents of the above specified Hospital District Election Precincts shall be cast at the office of the Clerk for Absentee Voting, Midland County, which is the office of Midland County Elections Administrator, 709 W. Washington Street, Midland, Texas, who are eligible to vote absentee by reason of illness or disability or expect ballots. Requests for absentee ballots by mail should be directed in writing to the Clerk for Absentee Voting, Midland County Elections Administrator, P.O. Box 2068, Midland, Texas 79702, attention: Absentee Voting. The paper ballots shall be counted by a centralized optical scanner vote counting system with the Texas Election Code. Absentee balloting will begin April 16, 1990, at 8:00 A.M. and continue through May 1, 1990, concluding at 5:00 P.M. The hours for absentee voting will be those of the regular working hours of the Midland County Elections Administrator office wherein absentee balloting is conducted.

SECTION FOUR. That this election shall be held and conducted pursuant to and in conformity with the Texas Election Code. All resident, qualified electors of said Hospital Districts Numbers 3, 4, and 7 of Midland County, Hospital District of Midland County, Texas, shall be entitled to vote at such election.

SECTION FIVE. That in accordance with the foregoing, the following election officials are hereby appointed for the respective election precincts for said election at Article A, 1990;

HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION PRECINCT NO. 1, Henderson Elementary School, Judy Chandler, Presiding Judge; Linda K. Collins, Alternate Presiding Judge

HOSPITAL DISTRICT ELECTION PRECINCT NO. 2, Ranchland Heights Baptist Church, Pattie M. Lominack, Presiding Judge; Alma Phillips, Alternate Presiding Judge

CLICK and CLACK TALK CARS

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

PULL OVER, DONNA!

Dear Tom and Ray:

I would like to know if you have heard about any problems concerning 1987 and 1988 Pontiac Firebirds. — Kevin

RAY: No. Other than the fact that they can't be driven in snow and you can't see out of them, we haven't heard any mechanical complaints about these cars. But we have heard complaints about Firebird drivers.

TOM: To find out whether there was any truth to these complaints, we commissioned a far-reaching study. We considered the Gallup and Roper organizations, but finally settled on none other than the famous Paul Murky, of Murky Research, Inc. The results were very surprising.

RAY: Previous research had shown that the most aggressive and inconsiderate drivers in the country were men between 25 and 35 who drove BMWs. These were the people most likely to drive up onto the sidewalk and scatter pedestrians in order to beat you into the parking space you were preparing to back into.

TOM: But after much investigation, Murky's new conclusion is that the most aggressive and inconsiderate drivers in the country are now certain women between the ages of 21 and 26. The Murky profile revealed that these drivers tend to chew gum incessantly, paint their stick-on fingernails fire-engine red and make liberal use of purple sparkle eye shadow.

RAY: Seventy-one percent of them wear short fur coats year round, and 94 percent have elaborate bouffant hairstyles. And what kind of car do you think nine out of 10 of them drive, Kevin? That's right, a Pontiac Firebird.

TOM: Even more surprising, if you ask me, is that 98 percent of these aggressive drivers answer to the name Donna. The other 2 percent, by the way, call themselves Jim Rockford.

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 1985 Mercury Marquis with a V-8 engine. When I pull out the dipstick to check the oil level, I sometimes see beads of moisture on the stick. What causes this? — Bill

RAY: This is caused by condensation inside the crankcase — that's the bottom end of the engine where the oil is. One of the products of combustion is water, and a little bit of water always manages to sneak into the crankcase.

TOM: Normally, when the engine stays at operating temperature for a long time, that moisture escapes through the crankcase ventilation system. But after a short trip, in which the engine never fully heats up, the moisture gets trapped inside and condenses. If you see a little bit on the dipstick or on the inside of the oil fill cap, it's nothing to worry about.

RAY: This condition is worsened, however, by frequent short trips. My guess is that's the kind of driving you do, Bill. If the engine never gets hot enough to ventilate the moisture, the condensation builds up over time, and that's not good. Cutting down on those short trips will help reduce the condensation.

TOM: So next time you need a quart of milk, try walking to the corner store instead of driving. Since you drive a Mercury Marquis with a V-8 engine, you're probably not the walking type. But try it, you might like it. It'll be good for your cardiovascular system, and in this case, good for your car's engine as well.

PART-TIME $$$$$ AVAILABLE

April 2 the Midland Reporter-Telegram became a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 60% adult and 40% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a part time job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

ADVENTURES IN LIVING

Cover design by ROBERT BROCK

This home was built by Bill Brown Construction less than two years ago in Trinity Meadows.

By JILL HANCOCK

Generously proportioned rooms and bountiful amenities highlight this week's featured home which contains over 3,500 square feet. This family-minded home encourages both quiet evenings at home and times for entertaining.

Located in Trinity Meadows, this four-bedroom home has two living areas, a formal dining room and three-and-a-half baths. The openness between the kitchen, breakfast room and adjacent family room, promotes family time together.

Please see HOME/2D

The formal dining room is situated to the left of the entrance and flows into the living area.

(From 1D)

Beveled glass panels are inlaid in the front door and provides visitors a glimpse into this well-designed home. The tile entrance hall flows into the dining room, to the left, and into the living room. The tile pathway also visually divides the neutral-colored carpeting that is displayed throughout the house.

A floor-to-ceiling window, a cathedral ceiling and crown moulding make the formal dining room very inviting to guests. It is hard to determine the focal point in the adjoining living room. A brick fireplace with cabinets is inset along the left wall and a French door is surrounded by windows which frame the patio in the back yard.

To the right of the entrance, a corridor filled with storage cabinets leads to two of the home's bedrooms. Both of these spacious rooms have tall windows and walk-in closets. They are connected by a full-bath that is highlighted by a striped wallpaper and border in shades of blue, green and deep rose. The two-sink, marble vanity is divided into two areas by a cabinet with a laundry hamper. A window, not only brightens the bath, but it also frames the side yard.

The breakfast room and kitchen are situated to the left of the formal living areas. This part of the home is papered in a floral wallcovering with a white background, adding to the expansive feeling. Shades of rose, blue and green accent the wallpaper. A large window overlooks the well-maintained front lawn. A ceiling fan descends from the tiered ceiling, with a complementary wallpaper lining the interior.

A raised breakfast bar that can accommodate three stools, divides these two areas. The kitchen sink is situated across from the bar and a Whirlpool dishwasher and trash compactor are conveniently located on both sides. The kitchen also features a cooktop with European burners, a microwave and a double, self-cleaning oven. A skylight above the central work island allows lots of sunlight into this area.

The family room is adjacent to the kitchen, with a fireplace and cabinets built-in along the far wall. The glow from a welcoming fire can also be enjoyed from the kitchen. A French door also leads outside to the back yard.

A short hallway provides access into the sequestered master bedroom from the breakfast room. Two windows view the front yard and a sitting area will provide a quiet place for parents.

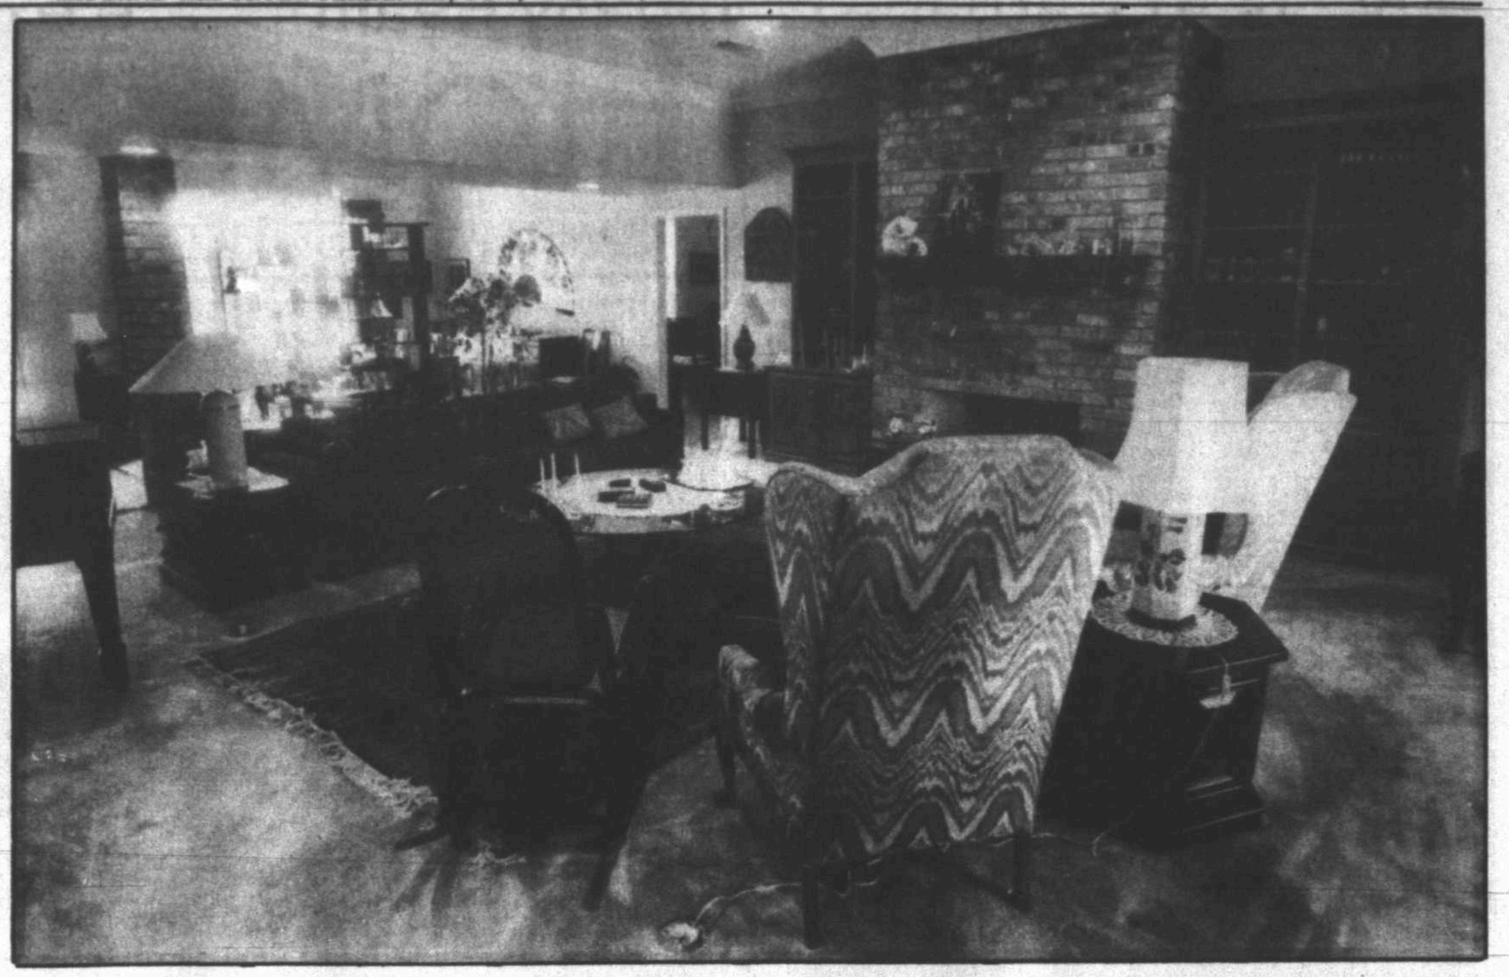

Double doors lead into a luxurious bath, identifying this home as one that was built by Bill Brown because of the design and appointments. A marble whirlpool tub is centered in the bath and the beveled mirror above reflects the stylish wallpaper. This his-and-her bath features two separate vanity areas, a built-in shower, laundry/storage cabinets and an enormous customized closet.

The home's fourth bedroom is located in the right corner of the living room. This area is ideal for an older child, a guest room or a study. Windows frame the side yard and a private bath includes a walk-in closet.

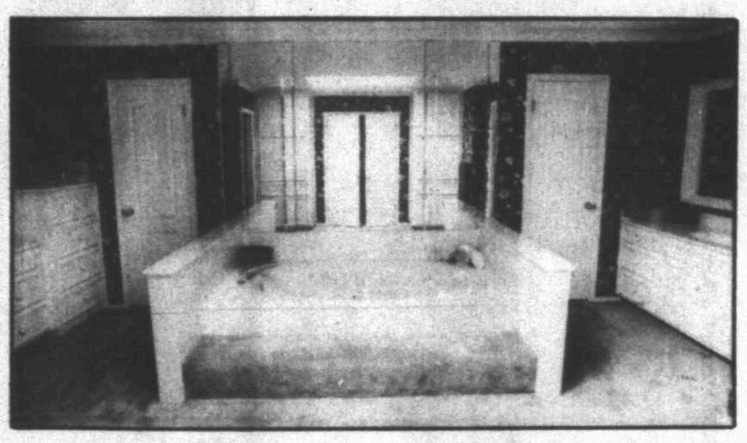

A utility area is situated to the left of the kitchen. A half-bath is also located in this area. The utility room can accommodate a freezer and includes a sink, built-in ironing board and window. The rear-entry, three-car garage with an automatic door opener is also found off this hallway.

The other added features in this custom, one-year-old home are plantation shutters, intercom system, professionally landscaped yard, sprinkler system, ceiling fans and recessed lighting.

RE/MAX of Midland is offering this home for $229,000.

Midland is having another boom, this time in Trinity West

By Jill Hancock
Advertising Feature Writer

A "little boom" is occurring in Midland that many residents may not have heard about. A new subdivision has become a rising star on the northwest horizon and because so many homes are selling it feels like Midland is having another boom, according to Dene Kelly, owner, of Dene Kelly Inc., Realtors.

Trinity West is situated north of Wadley Avenue and east of Midland Drive. It is in walking distance of two schools, Quannah Parker Elementary and Trinity School, and is the only subdivision that is currently being developed that is located inside of Loop 250. Bill Brown, one of the Trinity West developers, feels that many homeowners like to be in an area with existing town around them and in Trinity West. "Not only can a mother watch her child walk up the street to school, but she is only just minutes away from Albertsons. This area is proving to be just as popular as the last one I was involved in developing, Trinity Meadows, because many homeowners want to build or buy a new home that is located inside of the Loop."

Kelly has sold between 35 to 40 homes which Brown has built. One year, she sold four of his homes in less than four weeks. "A home which Bill has built is easy to sell because of the quality of construction and amenities. But there is another reason that his homes are so popular and his wife, Rosemary, is responsible for that. Rosemary decides the color scheme that will be used in each home. She chooses the wallpaper, carpeting, tile, counter tops and fixtures that complement his homes so beautifully," explained Kelly. "I think people also feel very comfortable working with Bill and Rosemary because they like working with a family."

There are approximately 16 lots left in Trinity West that have not been purchased by a prospective homeowner or builder. Brown has a home currently under construction at 4004 Springfield Court. This house in an excellent example of the type of home that is being offered throughout Trinity West. The front door to this four-bedroom and three-bath home is surrounded by beveled glass. The tile entry flows past the formal dining room, to the left, and into the formal living room. A free standing fireplace with a carved mantle is displayed as the left wall in this room. An atrium door opens onto the back patio.

The formal dining room has a tall window that frames the front yard and is highlighted by a brass chandelier.

A doorway in the dining room opens into the wonderful kitchen that is designed around a central work island. The kitchen features white wash cabinets and Whirlpool appliances. These appliances include a double, self-cleaning oven, spacesaver microwave, cooktop with European-style burners, dishwasher and trash compactor. The adjoining breakfast room is brightened by large windows.

A corridor on both sides of the fireplace in the living room open into the paneled family room. One corridor conceals a wet bar with brass fixtures, a marble counter top, glass shelves and a wine rack.

Ash paneling with picture frame moulding adorns the walls in the family room. A brick fireplace is situated at one end and an atrium door opens onto a side patio. Built-in bookcases are inset on both sides of the door. A powder room is conveniently located off of the family room.

A sequestered bedroom and a private bath, which are ideal for guests or an older child, is located in a hallway next to the family room. A spacious utility room is across the hall from the bedroom and features a sink, built-in ironing board and a window that views the back yard. A rear-entry, three-car garage is also situated in this part of the house.

To the right of the entrance, a hall leads to two bedrooms which are connected by a bath and feature walk-in closets.

The master bedroom is situated off of the right corner in the living room. This spacious room can easily accommodate a sitting area and is highlighted by a wonderful bath. A marble whirlpool tub, two separate marble vanities, an oversized shower with a seat and an enormous customized closet are the amenities in the bath.

Rosemary will use accents of mauve, blue and gray throughout this home. The other amenities include Marvin wood windows, high ceilings, crown moulding, linen and storage cabinets, a cedar closet and a landscaped yard.

Dene Kelly Inc., Realtors is offering this home for $229,000. For more information about previewing this home call 687-0595.

Groce

In all the confusion of and excitement about an upcoming move, pets are often given last-minute consideration, according to Marlene Groce, an associate of Don Harvey Realtors. "If the move isn't within driving distance and if temporary boards and/or pet transportation hasn't already been arranged," says Ms. Groce, "This could create a problem for the transferee, the transferee's children and the animal(s). The children will be sorely disappointed with their animal friend(s) are not able to join them immediately in their new home to 'protect' them in their strange new surrounding as well as play with them and help them meet new friends. The pet will have no idea why its family has not only vacated its home but has also 'abandoned' it." Here are some tips to help avoid this scenario:

■ Arrange for the pet's needs as far in advance as possible. Relocating is trying for all, even pets. Animals react to change just like people, some take it well — others do not.

■ To alleviate the hassles of transporting the pet to another city, contract a pet transportation service to do it for you. Services can include pet pick-up and delivery, pet car rental, air flight arrangements, boarding, bathing and grooming. Some companies will also procure health certificates and provide necessary vaccinations. Rates are usually based on the size of the pet carrier or animal's weight, the destination and the degree of service contracted. There is usually a minimum fee for pick-up/delivery, with an extra cost for any mileage that goes over the limit.

■ If you would rather make arrangements yourself, the most common means of transporting pets is by air. There are three ways to ship on commercial airlines: air cargo, where the pet does not travel on the same flight as the transferee; excess baggage, where the pet travels with passengers' luggage in a pressurized and temperature-controlled area; and carry on, where the pet must be small enough to fit in a carrier beneath the seat.

■ Before making reservations, check each airline's rules concerning pet transportation. Some do not ship animals at all, while others will not ship of the outside temperature is considered too high or too low (for the animals protection).

■ When selecting a pet carrier, make sure it meets USDA standards — large enough so the animal can stand up and move around, as well as provide adequate ventilation. Label the carrier "live animal" and mark which side is up. Most airlines sell USDA-approved carriers. (A mid-sized carrier for a 25 lb. dog averages about $35.)

■ Plan the flight with a minimum number of stops and transfers.

■ Be sure to exercise the pet before placing it in a carrier for shipping.

■ Do not feed the pet for six-eight hours before the flight. Also, do not give the pet water within two hours of shipping.

■ If the pet tends to be high-strung, check with its veterinarian to see if the animal should be tranquilized before the flight.

■ If the move is to a foreign country, be sure to check the quarantine requirements and conditions. Some countries have such lengthy quarantine periods that you may want to consider leaving your pet with family or friends.

■ Be sure to follow all the guidelines, as an airline can refuse to ship an animal if the cage is unsafe or if the pet is unhealthy.

Marlene Groce has been an associate with Don Harvey, Realtors since 1981. She is married to Bill Groce, with Texas Instruments, and they have two sons. Jeff is with Texas Instruments in Dallas and is a graduate of Texas A&M University. Darren is a second-year law student at the University of Texas. Marlene is on the board of the Permian Basin Alzheimers Association. Bill and Marlene are active members of First United Methodist Church.

Homeowners have tough decision regarding older windows

By Andree Brooks

A homeowner with an aging house and no restrictions on exterior modifications can find all this quite tempting.

The old windows may have unsightly rotted frames, which can let moisture and insects in.

They may have deteriorated sashes, which make them hard to open and close.

They may leak air, which results in heat loss.

And the wooden muntins — the vertical and horizontal dividing bars — can be an annoying visual barrier and make cleaning difficult, although they also may add style and authenticity to a facade.

But before deciding to plunge ahead there are less expensive alternatives to weigh, for even the most economical job is likely to cost an average of $300 a window, plus installation.

In addition, there are so many types of replacement windows on the market that it is important to know the questions that need to be asked.

(It is also possible, by shopping around for dealers and installers, to replace the glass alone.)

First, some claims need to be discounted.

Heat conservation experts insist that, assuming the house already has a full set of storm windows, even old ones, there is no evidence to confirm manufacturers' statements that there will be a major saving on fuel costs.

"There will be virtually no difference unless your windows leak and you don't already have storms," said Peter Judd, an assistant commissioner in the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development.

Thus having the job done just to lower heating bills may be misguided.

Further, brokers say, replacement windows will probably not add to resale value.

"It doesn't make much difference," said Ruth Brewster, president of Brewster Realty of Elizabeth, N.J., unless the existing windows are so decayed, rusted or warped that the house looks shabby and the fuel bills are far above average.

Typically, therefore, Jared Edwards, a partner in Smith Edwards Architects of Hartford, Conn., recommends replacing existing windows only when the owner wants more light or wants to escape the burden of maintenance.

For replacement windows truly are easier to maintain. Most have panes that can be tilted for easy cleaning from the inside, lessening the need for professional window services.

If the new windows are double-glazed, which they should be, this eliminates the need for storm windows.

And the frames are now being "clad" — permanently coated with vinyl or enamel-covered aluminium — to eliminate the need for periodic repainting.

In addition, the muntins will be slimmer and may be "optional," meaning they can be clipped in or out at will. Or they can be embedded between the layers of glass for greater cleanliness and ease of maintenance.

Homeowners who opt for replacement windows need to decide if they wish to replace only the sashes — the movable frames holding the glass — or the sashes and the entire stationary frame within which the sashes move.

Most prices quoted cover only sash replacement, and this may not suffice.

Replacement windows can be bought in either vinyl or alutninum for about the same price.

Agents at Carriage Company Realtors are experiencing busy spring

The associates of Carriage Company Realtors are busy listing and selling as spring continues to beautify our homes. Curb appeal still makes a customer want to look inside. T.L.C. inside makes a buyer look longer. Add a fair market price and a Realtor with a qualified buyer and the combination usually results in a sale!

"Listings continue to be in short supply with the second Multiple Listings Service book for April showing 37 new homes, 95 suburban and 937 pre-owned residential houses," explained Louise Culver, owner of the Carriage Company. "That's a total of 1,069 listings."

For a bit of personal news, Culver noted that Carol Henson recently placed her listing at 2010 Centerview, located in the Grasslands Estates addition, under contract. She has a new listing located near Goddard and Emerson schools at 3005 Meadowbrook. This wonderful family home has four bedrooms and a sparkling pool for the hot summer months ahead. Carol is a lifetime resident of Midland and has been in the real estate industry for the past 14 years. She welcomes your real estate related questions and will be happy to list your home or find one that will suit your needs.

Beverly Bullen has had a very busy spring and recently put three homes under contract. One located on McDonald, a co-op listing and 3333 Cimmaron listed by Clemmie Sorge at Carriage. The third contract was on her own listing at 3519 W. Ohio, sold by Lee Denny, another active Carriage Company associate. Lee then sold another home on Tanner street. Beverly has closed several homes this past week which have include 1607 Ventura and 1607 N. "K". Both Lee and Beverly have been with Carriage for several years and have been active in the Midland real estate market for a combined total of 36 years.

Marilyn Yeager joined Carriage this past November, has held her real estate license for 14 years and her Broker's license for the past nine years. Marilyn is a native West Texan and has the knowledge of the Midland real estate market that a newcomer can take advantage of. Recently, Marilyn placed one of her bank-owned listings at 3502 Hyde Park under contract in less than 30 days.

Lee, Carol, Beverly and Marilyn are active in their community and are caring professionals ready to solve your buying and selling requirements. Our 100 percent concept is that you get 100 percent satisfaction and service from each and everyone of the associates at Carriage Company Realtors.

The disruption of Earth's habitats has been called a ticking time bomb by scientists.

Time to Turn it Around

"Once a photograph of the Earth, taken from the outside, is available ... a new idea as powerful as any in history will let loose."

— Fred Hoyle, 1948, "The Home Planet"

The environmental destruction of Planet Earth has been receiving constant media attention, yet Midland seems far removed from environmental issues such as the oil spill in Alaska, the burning of the rainforests in Brazil and the pollution in Beijing.

Despite the Permian Basin's apparent isolation from global environmental concerns, the environmental destruction of the Planet — if left unchecked — will eventually take its toll on all areas and habitats.

Nearly every habitat is at risk, according to a recent issue of Science News. Forests in the northern hemisphere have been devastated by lumbering, developing and acid rain. Marine ecosystems around the world are being poisoned with pollution and coastal development. Worst of all, the rainforests — which cover only 7 percent of the Earth's surface, yet harbor between 50 percent and 80 percent of the planet's species — are being destroyed.

The controversial "greenhouse effect" (global warming as a result of the buildup of carbon dioxide and other gases in the atmosphere) threatens man's very existence.

"We do not have generations, we only have years in which to attempt to turn things around," said Lester Brown, president of the Washington-based Worldwatch Institute, in a recent issue of Time magazine. Because of this, a global concern is emerging in scientific quarters throughout the world.

Think globally, act locally

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO

Permian Basin residents don't have to deal with the problems most metropolitan areas have such as clouds of pollution, congested freeways or expensive fines for not sorting their trash into separate receptacles marked "aluminum," "glass," "paper" or "other." They also don't have to worry about laws dictating what type of trees or vegetation can be planted, and the city does not restrict the quantities of water permitted for residential use.

Nonetheless, just because the residents of the Permian Basin aren't experiencing an environmental crisis is no reason for them not be responsible stewards for the planet, according to members of the local Earth Day Committee.

The committee, an offshoot of Keep Midland Beautiful, is sponsoring a host of activities April 22 intended to inspire Tall City residents to "Think Globally, and Act Locally." These Midland events are a part of the world-wide celebration for the 20th anniversary of Earth Day.

Earth Day was founded in the fall of 1969 when then-Sen. Gaylord Nelson offhandedly suggested in a speech in Seattle that Americans hold a "teach-in" to promote concern for their air, land and water. Nelson's teach-in, dubbed Earth Day, resulted in 20 million participants attending rallies and campus music festivals which launched the American environmental movement.

In the decade following Earth Day, Congress created the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and passed the Clean Water Act, the Endangered Species

Midlanders return from another fabulous trip

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

World travelers Lottie and Ed Eubanks have returned from yet another fabulous trip. They traveled to Hong Kong, Communist China, Bangkok, Thailand; Taiwan and Seoul, Korea, with a group accompanying the Southwest Texas State University Strutters. The girls' drill team was invited to perform on television in Hong Kong.

McKnight-Harrison

Others in their party were Ed's daughter, Eddye Eubanks and her husband, Oren Winn of Austin; Lottie's son, O.C. Haley of San Antonio and Mrs. Barbara Tidwell of San Marcos, choreographer of the drill team.

In a recent visit, Lottie told of the colorful sights to be seen in Hong Kong, where there are four million people living in 480 square miles. Their guide said that 50,000 people are leaving there per year, as it will revert from British to Chinese rule in 1997. Highlights included historical sightseeing trips, a tram ride up the mountains and a boat tour on the river.

Their journey into China with an English speaking, Chinese college student as their guide was a unique experience. They spent a day touring the countryside and saw the farmers plowing their rice fields with water buffaloes.

From there, they went to Taiwan for a brief visit and then to Bangkok. They were awed by all the sights, particularly the sidewalks crowded with the natives' cooking equipment and wares for sale. On a boat trip, it was interesting to see how many of the natives live in huts extending over the water and sell produce and handicrafts from canoes in an area called the "Floating Market."

There were visits to a silk factory, zoo and a temple. The complex where it is housed features buildings of gold and silver. They also saw furniture carvers at work, making some of the most beautiful furniture Lottie has ever seen.

In Seoul, the group visited the Olympic complex, which took nine years to build, and the King's Palace, which covers several acres.

Lottie says it was one of the most educational trips they have ever taken. "We don't know how fortunate we are to live in a country as great as the U.S. There's no way to describe the hardships those people endure."

THE 50TH WEDDING anniversary of Jodie and Edward N. Gideon was celebrated recently with a reception at Green Tree Country Club.

Receiving guests with the couple were their children, Marilyn and Edward Gideon Jr. of Greensboro, N.C.; Barbara and Michael Gideon of Harker Heights, Texas, and Rebecca and Craig Johnson of Salem, Ore.

Three of their five grandchildren, Patrick and Ashley Gideon and Jordan Johnson, were present, but busy school schedules kept Drew and Griff Burris of Arlington, Va., from attending.

Arrangements of spring flowers were used on the serving tables. Serving in the house party were Marge (Mrs. George T.) Holland, Fredna (Mrs. Clyde D.) McHam and Mrs. Mickey German.

A number of out-of-town guests attended, including former Midlanders Joanne (Mrs. David C., III) Smith of Lafayette, La., Mary and Hastings Pannill of Elkins Lake Texas, and Molly Cole Fowler of Denver, Colo.

The Gideons were married March 30, 1940, in Houston and have resided in Midland for the past 42 years. Mr. Gideon is retired from Dresser Industries. Mrs. Gideon is affiliated with various patriotic organizations, including Daughters of the American Revolution, Colonial Dames of the 17th Century and Daughters of the American Colonies.

Held in the Garden Room, the luncheon also honored the graduates' mothers, Kay (Mrs. David) Jones, Gayle (Mrs. Doc) Dodson, Fan Delene (Mrs. Jimmy) Mowles and Donna (Mrs. Don) Hewett, who were presented long-stemmed pink roses.

PATSY WELMAKER of Adventure Travel had the opportunity in March to attend an international travel conferenace in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, where there were 750 delegates from 52 countries.

After the conference, she went on a tour of the Republic of Montenegro, up through mountainous roads to the ski area of Zabljak, and down the mountains to the lovely towns and beaches on the Adriatic Coast. She returned to Dubrovnik for sightseeing and shopping before enplaning for home.

Chocolate eggs may be safer; No yoke

By Bobbi Ignelzi
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Those gooey, chocolate Easter eggs, loaded with fat and empty calories, may be the safest eggs you can eat right now.

As egg-related salmonella outbreaks crop up across the country, the Food and Drug Administration recommends eating only thoroughly cooked eggs, preferably hard-boiled until the yolk is very firm. Although most of the outbreaks have been in the the Northeast and South, scientists believe the bacteria contamination is heading west.

"The old way of eating eggs — sunny side up, soft boiled, poached or even loosely scrambled — is just too risky these days. Unfortunately, the only safe way to prepare eggs is by cooking the heck out of them. And most people don't find that very appetizing," said Joseph Madden, director of the FDA's microbiology division here.

Scientists have found the latest strain of bacteria in eggs, salmonella enteritidis, is not only tougher to detect, but also harder to kill.

In the past, salmonella was associated only with cracked eggs or eggs dirty with fecal matter. When a law was passed in 1970 requiring the washing, disinfecting and grading of eggs before packaging, FDA officials thought they had solved the problem. But when 65 egg-related salmonella outbreaks were reported in the Northeast in the mid-1980s, resulting in 11 deaths and nearly 2,500 illnesses, the FDA got worried. This time the source of the illness was uncracked, disinfected Grade A eggs, or foods containing such eggs.

Experts found the undamaged eggs had become contaminated by a relatively new way — from the mother hen during ovulation, before the egg shell was even formed.

"What we're seeing here is an example of bacteria adapting and coexisting with the host. Chickens are carrying this organism in their ovaries, and no one knows until someone gets sick, because the chicken shows no signs of sickness," Madden said.

"Even more frightening is the fact that contaminated eggs look, smell, taste and feel like healthy eggs. The only way you can tell a bad egg is to break it open and test it in the lab," he said. "Or, of course, there's the less desirable method — wait until someone gets sick."

Food-borne illnesses can be serious in anyone, usually causing severe diarrhea, vomiting, fever and cramps. Some people, however, face a greater risk from eating eggs and need to be extra careful. These people include the elderly, children younger than 3 months, pregnant women and people with weakened immune systems.

IN THE FIVE-YEAR period ending January 1990, there have been 6,604 illnesses and 43 deaths attributed to the new strain of salmonella, reports the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Just last July, in Suffolk County, N.Y., 21 people at a baby shower became severely ill after eating a homemade pasta dish made with a single egg containing the salmonella.

Also, last summer in Knox County, Tenn., 27 restaurant patrons became ill after consuming foods with hollandaise or bernaise sauce that was prepared with eggs and "gently heated" but not thoroughly cooked.

And, last August, 12 people at an office party in Carbon County, Pa., became ill — and one died — after eating egg-based custard pies that had not been refrigerated for 21 hours. The person who died was a healthy 40-year-old man.

"When it starts killing normal, healthy individuals, such as the man in Pennsylvania, it's time for people to start paying attention," he said.

The Centers for Disease Control estimate that one out of every 10,000 eggs in the grocery store is contaminated with the bacteria. Although a person's chance of eating a bad egg may seem insignificant, Madden says the risk is greatly increased when eggs are "pooled" together.

"Often, in restaurants and nursing homes they prepare large batches of eggs for omelets or scrambled eggs. One infected egg will contaminate the entire batch, especially if allowed to sit a bit at room temperature. This could result in a lot of very sick people all at one time," he said.

FIVE YEARS AGO, salmonella enteritidis was basically restricted to flocks in the Northeast. In the last couple of years infected flocks were found in the Midwest and South, and there are unconfirmed reports of two infected flocks in Northern California. In fact, the only two states that haven't reported contaminated chickens are Hawaii and Alaska. But Madden says it's only a matter of time.

"Because we're still in the early phases of testing flocks, it's probably going to get worse before it gets better," he said.

Madden believes, however, that relief is in sight.

"I think we'll be able to go back to eating our sunny-side-up, soft-boiled eggs and egg nog, but it's going to take a while. Hopefully in another year and a half to two years, the problem will be gone," he said.

To eradicate the new strain of salmonella, the FDA has joined with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in a mandatory testing program of poultry flocks.

"Until we get the salmonella problem in hand, it's going to be up to the consumer," Madden said. "With thousands of people getting sick, it's crucial for people to think before they eat."

Rabbits are being seen more often than at Easter

By Steven Long
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When Rebecca Howard was growing up on a farm in Kentucky, she always got a rabbit for Easter. When she grew up, the bunnies were left on the farm.

But Howard never forgot the furry lop-eared creatures of her childhood.

She became a collector of just about anything she could find that had something to do with rabbits. Last Easter, a friend decided that it was time she had a live one again. That's when she got Rumer.

In the year she has had her Holland Mini-Lop, Rumer hasn't been in a cage.

Rabbits are becoming increasingly popular as pets for apartment and condominium dwellers. And smaller rabbits, such as the minis, make perfect pets, says Cindy D'Auria, manager of the Petland store in a Houston shopping mall.

Her store stocks up to 10 varieties of rabbits and sales peak during the Easter season.

And they aren't as expensive as a pedigreed dog or cat, she said, ranging in price from $34.99 to $69.99.

Caring for a rabbit is easier than caring for a dog or cat. And rabbits don't bark, seldom bite, don't have many fleas and, best of all, are easily trained to use a litter box. Even if an accident happens, you might find a few little odorless dry pellets on the floor.

"I read that they could be litterbox trained. The only thing you have to do is get a box, put it on the floor and show them where it is," she said. "They are very smart animals."

Of Rumer, she said, "He is increasing his vocabulary. He knows 'No,' and when I take him outside and want him to be still, I say, 'Easy' so that I can pick him up."

Howard said Rumer is a great traveling companion.

"I drove across the country with him," she said. "He was leash-trained to go outside in the park originally, but when I started across the country with him, I would get out of the car and just let him hop around at the rest stop."

Rabbits like people, Howard said.

"He is a very social rabbit. He likes to eat when you are eating, and he likes to be in the same room when people are talking.

D'Auria said a rabbit needs a minimum of care.

"They are a pretty easy pet to have because they don't require bathing on a regular basis like a dog. They will take care of most of their own grooming," she said. "Occasionally, if they were to get fleas from another household pet, you would need to flea-bathe them."

Fashion industry jumps on environmental bandwagon

By Catherine Crocker

NEW YORK (AP) — The Earth is in style.

Alarmed by the planet's dwindling resources, or propelled by the belief that ecology helps sell clothes, fashion designers and retailers have latched onto environmental issues with a gusto that recalls the stampede to short skirts.

Tags on sportswear declare "Don't Bungle the Jungle." Whales, black panthers, tigers and giant pandas adorn T-shirts. Popular fabric colors include earth tones and the bright hues of the rain forest. Catalogs are printed on recycled paper. Glossy ads for fashion designers invite consumers to donate money to environmental groups.

"So many companies are getting on the environmental bandwagon, because many polls indicate that the environment is the predominant social issue of the '90s," said Leslie Gottlieb of the Council on Economic Priorities.

WOMEN'S WEAR Daily has been swamped with news releases announcing the introduction of new lines of clothing with an eco-conscience, said Maryellen Gordon, a WWD sportswear news editor.

"The industry does have a history of being involved in humanitarian causes," she said. "But I don't believe every one of these companies is concerned with the environment. ... By printing 'Save the Whale' on a T-shirt, they think they can bring in a lot of money."

"I'm sure part of it is corporations wanting to position themselves in a positive way with the public," said Ron Geatz, a spokesman for the Nature Conservancy, a private foundation that buys parcels of threatened land to protect the habitats of rare and endangered plants and animals.

Geatz added that the corporate heads leading the way seem to be those most personally involved.

Charles Dayan, president of Bonjour clothing, became a corporate activist for the environment several summers ago when syringes and other debris washed up on the beach at his New Jersey vacation home.

"We couldn't go to the water. We couldn't let the kids play there," he said. "That's when we realized it was getting too close to us and something had to be done."

Now each item of Bonjour merchandise — jeans and shirts, sunglasses and socks — bears a tag with tips on how to save water and reduce pollutants. The cost to Bonjour, Dayan said, is "in the millions."

"I really don't know if it will sell one extra jean or watch," Dayan said. "I doubt it."

OTHER COMPANIES like Ninety, Esprit, Ellen Tracy and the United Stars of America division of J.G. Hook are donating profits to environmental causes.

Patagonia, an outdoor outfitter based in Ventura, Calif., has donated 10 percent of its annual pretax profits to environmental groups since 1984. This year, the total will reach about $1 million.

Patagonia's catalogs feature essays on the environment. The company has reduced waste output at its headquarters by 62 percent by cutting back on paper products and recycling whatever it can.

Some customers choose Patagonia products "because of where the profits go," said Kevin Sweeney, a company spokesman. "Last year, we gave away twice as much as we spent in advertising."

But the line often blurs between promoting environmental causes and promoting a product. The Nature Conservancy struck deals with two fashion companies, Ellen Tracy and Esprit, after being approached with "a couple dozen" offers, Geatz said.

AP LaserPhoto

"We've always shot our (spring) ads on the beach. ... We added the tagline to tie into the Nature Conservancy thing — kind of cute to bring it all together," said Claire Fay, a spokeswoman for Ellen Tracy.

She said the company's owner, Herbert Gallen, made "a substantial donation" to the Nature Conservancy and paid a $15 membership fee for each of Ellen Tracy's 200 employees.

ESPRIT CONTRIBUTES $1 each time it sells a $25 tote bag imprinted with images of bighorn sheep and Little Kern golden trout. The company's spring catalog, printed on recycled paper, opens with a discourse on the environment. The background is a photograph of a swimsuit-clad model playing in a spray of water.

"Pollution is by and large the result of an economic system gone out of control," the ad says. "Consumers should evaluate carefully what they need, and buy accordingly."

The ad implores people "to temper their appetites." Esprit, it notes, has already begun to do so — at its San Francisco headquarters, it has reduced the use of paper in the business department and the cafeteria. The company plans to hire an eco-manager to head environmental programs.

"Before telling our customers what to do, we need to do our own homework," said Esprit spokeswoman Celeste Alleyne.

But critics scoff at the notion of the fashion industry being a friend of the environment.

"The irony is that we're talking about a business based on premeditated waste," said Stuart Ewen, the chairman of the Communications Department at Hunter College in New York City. "If you were to do a study of the history of product obsolescence, the model would be fashion."

At factory level, other ecological concerns surface.

"The next step we have to take is to move to our suppliers, to make sure (the clothes) are made in an environmentally safe way," said Sweeney, the Patagonia spokesman.

Esprit and Ellen Tracy are studying how to make production of their clothes eco-friendly. Bonjour president Dayan said he wrote to manufacturers all over the world instructing them to use biodegradable plastic bags and soaps, as well as recycled cardboard.

However, he acknowledged, "We can't force them to do it."

N.Y. Times News Service

Into the ever-expanding world of environmentally conscious businesses comes Carolee Designs Inc., a jeweler with a heart. The company has pledged to donate a percentage of sales from its Outrageous Faux Ivory collection toward efforts to preserve the African elephant.

The number of African elephants reportedly has diminished from as many as 3 million 20 years ago to fewer than 650,000 today. The population is being halved each decade.

Ivory was banned from sale and import in the United States last June and subsequently in Canada, Western Europe and Japan. A worldwide ban adopted by the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species went into effect Jan. 18.

Fears needn't scramble egg decorating

NEW YORK (AP) — Fears of salmonella and cholesterol needn't scramble Easter egg decorating plans, if eggs are handled properly and eaten sparingly.

The Blue Bird Circle, a Texas organization that has sold hand-painted Easter eggs for 66 years, is taking no chances. It canceled this year's sale on the advice of its lawyers, who worried children would eat spoiled eggs and get sick.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture recommends that eggs hidden for an egg hunt be prepared carefully to make sure that there are no cracks in the shells and that they are protected from dirt, pets and other sources of bacteria.

Hard-cooked eggs eventually will spoil, and should not be left at room temperature for more than two hours if they are to be eaten, USDA said.

Much of the recent worry has concerned raw eggs, in such dishes as caesar salad, or lightly cooked eggs. Blowing raw eggs for decorating could pose a slight risk because of the possibility of ingesting bacteria. If you don't plan to eat the eggs, wash the shell.

If a raw egg shell is cracked, bacteria on the shell could enter the egg.

Scientists also suspect that certain salmonella bacteria can be transmitted from an infected hen directly to the egg interior. While the extent of the problem is not known, the risk of illness remains small, according to the USDA.

In February, the agency announced a $6.8 million program to help curb the spread of salmonella enteritidis by testing and certifying breeding flocks that produce table-egg layers and tracing and testing flocks if they are implicated in human cases of salmonella enteritidis.

The problem in the nation's $3.2 billion egg industry emerged in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states, but has spread to the Midwest and Northwest.

The bacteria can cause cramps, diarrhea, fever, nausea and vomiting. The elderly and those with compromised immune systems could suffer serious and life-threatening effects.

Last year, salmonella poisoning struck more than 1,600 people and killed 13, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said. Contaminated food was implicated in 64 percent of the outbreaks, and 73 percent of those involved eggs.

From the USDA:

■ Buy eggs from a refrigerated display case, and only those with clean uncracked shells. Check the expiration date. Don't use eggs with cracked or stained shells.

■ Store eggs in the refrigerator at home. Temperatures below 40 degrees help slow the loss of moisture from the eggs and inhibit the growth of most bacteria that cause food-borne illness.

■ Don't wash eggs. Most eggs sold commercially have been washed and sprayed with oil. Washing them can remove the protective oil and enable bacteria to penetrate the porous shell.

■ Raw eggs will keep in the refrigerator about three weeks without significant loss of quality. Separated whites and yolks should be stored in covered containers and used within four days. Hard-cooked eggs should be eaten within a week.

■ Wash hands, cooking surfaces and all equipment that come in contact with eggs to prevent cross-contamination. Even if contamination in an egg is counteracted in cooking, the bacteria could be spread by the hands, for example.

■ Thoroughly cook eggs and egg-rich dishes. Eggs generally are sufficiently cooked if the yolks and whites are not runny or if they are used in a baked food. Most harmful bacteria grow at temperatures of 40 to 140 degrees. Most are destroyed at 160 degrees or higher, the USDA said.

The USDA operates the toll-free Meat and Poultry Hot Line, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time, 1-800-535-4555, or in the Washington, D.C., area, 202-447-3333.

Lifestyle policies

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only for winners, not runnerups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Anniversaries

Former Midlanders mark anniversary

MINDEN, La. — Former Midlanders Mr. and Mrs. J.P. Johnson of Minden were guests of honor at a 50th wedding anniversary celebration Saturday at First United Methodist Church in Minden. Hosts were their children and grandchilden.

The couple lived in Midland, Texas, from 1964 until 1988. Johnson retired from Gulf Oil Corporation in 1981 after 39 years. His wife was employed with Walgreen's from 1964 until she retired in 1976.

While they lived in Midland, the couple was active in the Norman Read Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star; St. Mark's United Methodist Church; Midland High Sky Square Dance Club; and the Eastern Star chapter in Stanton, Texas.

Jansens celebrate silver anniversary

George A. and Carol L. Jansen of Midland celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with a trip to Cloudcroft and Ruidoso, N.M.

Jansen and the former Carol L. Fraser were married April 14, 1965, at First Baptist Church of Midland. The couple has two daughters — Lorrie L. Daniel who is in Ramstein, Germany, and Christie D. Arbuckle of Midland — and one granddaughter.

Jansen served in the U.S. Air Force, and was stationed at Webb Air Force Base, Howard Air Force Base, the Panama Canal Zone and Grissom Air Force Base. They moved to Midland in 1981, where Jansen is self-employed with Jansen Safety Consultants.

Embroidered symbols have meanings

Copley News Service

Figuring out the embroidered symbols of a Chinese decorative wedding collar is difficult because there are few ground rules. But one can be sure that pomegranate, lotus and watermelon stand for fertility, coins for wealth, a basket of fruit that includes a peach means long life, and the open hand of the Buddha indicates riches.

Taste in music makes a difference

Copley News Service

Music makes a difference when it comes to dating, according to a study conducted in Indiana.

Professor Azra Bhatia and colleagues showed Indiana University students videos of an actor talking about tasting food, clothes, music and other biographical information. The information was identical on each video — except for taste in music. Student then rated the actor as a desirable date.

The results according to Bhatia:

- Country and western lovers of either sex are seen as unappealing, unsophisticated bumpkins.
- Men like women into classical music because they seem stable, more caring and lovers for the long haul.
- Whereas, women like men into heavy metal because they seem more macho. Psychology Today reports that these guys, "translate their preoccupation with unrestrained, emotionally excessive rock music into potency and power."

Of course, this doesn't guarantee that a switch from Beethoven to Black Sabbath will attract women.

First cookbook in English printed in 1500

Copley News Service

Every bride needs a cookbook or two, and she might be interested to know that the first one printed in English appeared in 1500 in England with the title, "The Boke of Cokery, for a Pryncis Household or Any Other Estates."

Create a perfect look for wedding day photos

Associated Press

You want to look terrific at your wedding, not just because it's your day in the spotlight, but because the pictures made will be among the most tangible mementos of the event. But just like every other detail of the celebration, getting your hair, makeup and skin ready takes planning and care.

"Hair and makeup are the keys to a bride's beauty, and she should devcte as much care and attention to them as she does to the selection of her dress," says Denise O'Donoghue, Bride's magazine beauty editor.

She advises getting hair into shape early. If you plan to color, highlight or permanent your hair, do it well enough in advance to fine tune the result. Preliminary shaping should be done about three or four months in advance and a fresh cut done about three weeks before the wedding. Freshly washed and conditioned hair will look fullest and best in the photographs. Smooth wispy flyaway strands with hairspray, but be sure to do so before stepping into your gown to avoid staining or spotting on light-colored, delicate fabrics.

Also plan your makeup, which may be different from your daily wear. "Remember, you will be wearing white from head to toe. Since the only color will be on your face, your palette has to be just right," said O'Donoghue.

She recommended experimenting ahead of time, using a white sheet to simulate the effect of the gown. This will help you discover whether you'll look better in peach- or pink-tinted makeup. She advises forgoing frosted or pearlized makeup items, since the resulting iridescence reflects too much and will make your skin photograph unnaturally.

Choose a light foundation toned to your skin and soften blusher and eyeshadow by blending the edges. Soft black or brown mascara should be lightly applied, since the white of the gown will intensify its impact. Mascara should be waterproof to avoid streaking from tears.

Then, have a friend make test pictures to see how the makeup choices do on film.

Nails should be professionally manicured every three or four weeks, with the last session the day before the wedding. Choose pastel pink or peach shades consistent with your makeup.

Part of the preparation is getting skin into shape, according to L'Oreal Cosmetics, which recently introduced a top French skincare collection called Plenitude. According to Linda Harris, vice president of product development, the key to healthy skin is cleansing and moisturizing.

JOHNSON-RODRIGUEZ

Deborah S. Norton Johnson and Albert S. Rodriguez of Midkiff were married 7:30 p.m. March 17 at Grace Lutheran Church in Midland. The Rev. Ray E. Johansen officiated.

The bride is the daughter of James D. Norton of Midland and Bonnie S. Moses of Athens, Tenn. Parents of the bridegroom are Albert H. and Amalia Rodriguez of McCamey.

Debbie R. Moore of Midland was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mary Irene Rodriguez of Denver City and Jinnett Evon Rodriguez of Crane. Flower girl was Jennifer Kay Rodriguez of Crane, daughter of the bridegroom.

Blas Rodriguez of Denver City was best man for his brother. Groomsmen were James Ray Norton of Midland, brother of the bride, and Michael Allen Rodriguez of Crane, son of the bridegroom. Ushers were Santos Flores Jr. of Odessa, nephew of the bridegroom, and Justin D. Norton of Springbranch, brother of the bride. Ring bearer was Jake Thomas Norton of Midland, brother of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Rodriguez

The bride is a 1978 graduate of Lee High School. Her husband graduated from McCamey High School in 1974, attended Odessa College and is employed with Western Gas Processors in Midkiff.

EUSTON-SAWYER

Carolyn Baker Euston of Midland became the bride of Logan Everett Sawyer Jr., also of Midland, 4:30 p.m. March 24 at the Chapel of First Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Russell Ritchel officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Baker of Phoenix, Ariz. Parents of the bridegroom are Winifred Maxwell Sawyer of Elizabeth City, N.C., and the late Dr. L. Everett Sawyer.

Cari Meador Dillon of Lubbock was matron of honor. Steven F. Huggins of Richmond, Va., served as best man. Groomsmen and ushers were Logan E. Sawyer III, Brent M. Sawyer and John Slade Sawyer, all of Midland and all sons of the bridegroom. Ring bearers were John Charles Euston of Midland and Virginia Sherrill of Jacksonville, Fla.

After a wedding trip to Carmel and San Francisco, Calif., the couple lives in Midland.

Military wives 'expect the unexpected'

By Elizabeth Kaufman

LUBBOCK (AP) — They are mothers, teen-agers, nurses, teachers, students, Southerners and Northerners. They reflect the wholesomeness of country fields and sparkle of city lights.

But one thing draws them together. They are married to the military.

When they take their vows of marriage, military spouses accept a collage of roles: long or unexpected absences of their mates; helping a spouse or child survive pressure-filled times; sometimes living out of a U-Haul.

And while the wives may have differing backgrounds, the similar situations they face draw them together, says Kristi Norris, 25.

As president of the Officers' Wives Club at Reese Air Force Base, Mrs. Norris serves as caretaker during the new wives' initiation into Air Force life.

Since Reese is a pilot training base, many are "student's wives," whose husbands are undergoing a year of flight training.

"We get girls who are married a week," she said. "They're (the husbands) getting their first taste (of flying). One minute minute he's on top of the world thinking,'I get to fly and they pay me for this,' to thinking they're one minute away from the bus ride home," Mrs. Norris said.

"It is a real stressful time. I can't even explain to you how much," she said.

MRS. NORRIS recalled her own story. "We got married a semester before we graduated (from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville) because we thought we'd go immediately after graduation and we wanted three or four months just to get used to married life," she said.

"I was (pregnant) when we got here. That's another trauma. The people (in charge) were so supportive about Chris being there. He missed a lot of the childbirth class, but he was there when it was important. Our baby was born the day before Chris' first check ride. I was in labor for 30 hours and had an emergency C-section, so they delayed his check ride a day," she said.

"As a student wife I got up every morning on early weeks at 3, 4 o'clock in the morning to talk to him, and make his lunch, because I knew it was important. When he became a flight pilot, I started saying 'Honey, I think there's some sandwich meat in there,' " she recalled, laughing.

The Malvern, Ark., native said she knew virtually nothing about any branch of the military until she joined Angel Flight, the honorary college organization that supports Air Force ROTC. The group "became my whole life. I was the protocol representative for a three-state area, so I got to know a lot of people in ROTC. My relationship with Chris then started developing."

"We talked a lot about it (his joining the Air Force). Chris knew that was his heart's desire. He didn't even want to get seriously involved with someone who wouldn't understand. Actually, he tried to make it sound as bad as he could so I wouldn't say later, 'oh, you never told me about that,' Mrs. Norris recalls.

"There are advantages and disadvantages. There are times when you can't even converse. If you're in some of these top secret deals, someone may call you and say 'He's on a mission.' You say (on his return) 'How was it?' and all he can say is,'Fine,' and that's it.

"In our case what time he's home is quality time. It's kind of a series of absences and reunions. There's time to think, 'I really appreciate him.' There are times when I feel like a single parent, not to complain," she said. The Norrises' son is now almost two years old.

She said she is considering the compatibility of a future in banking with the couple's lifestyle. "It can be hard, especially if you're moving up and wanting management jobs. It's difficult because I can't promise them that I'll stay," Mrs. Norris said. She is the vice president of marketing for Reese Federal Credit Union.

Her husband, who is a class commander for the student squadron, is up for a new assignment in late 1990. While she said it isn't likely that they'll have to move before the designated date, sometimes things happen. She said this possibility leads to an advantage — their personal affairs always have to be in order.

While other wives may be able to empathize with their husbands' situations, Peggy Burkhardt often knows what her spouse is experiencing firsthand.

When she met her husband, Bill, more than seven years ago at Eglin Air Force Base in Fort Walton Beach, Fla., she was a member of the Air Force's security police. And although she said the military works to put dual career military couples together, she said she chose to put her career aside.

The Chicago native said she hasn't had time to miss her career. She raises two sons and goes to school full time on the GI bill.

SHE SAID THAT it's good that she's busy because her husband, the superintendent of fuels, is in the midst of a 15-month assignment in the Azores Islands, 900 miles off the coast of Portugal. "He's a chief. That's the highest you can go as an enlisted man," she said proudly.

Usually, the couple talks once a month for about 10 or 15 minutes, "human welfare calls, they're called," she said.

"We write once a month. It's not like we're single and we have nothing to do but write love letters," she said, laughing.

But that doesn't mean that she doesn't miss her husband. "I turned toward my religion lot more," she said, fingering a slender silver religious pendant hanging on a chain around her neck. She said that sometimes she has to put on airs about her confidence in various obligations to assure her children's security.

In the past, she said, it was difficult for her older son Sean, 6, to adjust when his father went away.

"He'd (her husband) be gone a week or two weeks. One time it was a month, and Sean wouldn't talk to him when he came home. Now Sean knows; he expects it," she said.

And he did get to see his father this Christmas, when Burkhardt was given a month's leave.

In April, the family will be reunited at a new assignment.

KELLY MIDDLEBROOKS is facing a temporary separation from her husband, Gary, assigned for two months of officer training. She says if she were single, she'd accompany him, but with twin 18-month-old sons, she will wait in her hometown of Houston to join him at his next assignment in Tampa, Fla.

Mrs. Middlebrooks said she went into her marriage three years ago knowing that as part of the military they would see many places. And, as she was told by her husband's grandmother, "The best friends you'll make are in the Air Force, even if you know them a short time.

"You meet so many people with the same thing in common. They understand what you're going through," she said.

Seasoned by patience, loyalty, courage, and humor, Patsy Deakin has only been in Lubbock since July, but she and her husband, Col. Gerald Deakin, have been base-trotting for 23 years.

"We've had about 15 moves, not counting the short ones. Some of those moves have been a year. Del Rio was four years. San Antonio was five years."

As a result of their lifestyle, she said, she and her daughters are very independent, a trait she treasures in her children.

As deputy commander of operations, Deakin no longer travels. Just as she found the benefits in his absence, she can see a whole lot of advantages in his presence.

Mrs. Norris said, "You have to admire Air Force wives because of what they have to sacrifice."

She refers to a song by B.J. Thomas, "You're the Wind Beneath my Wings."

"He sings, 'I can fly higher than an Eagle; But you're the wind beneath my wings; Did you ever know that you were my hero?'

"I can't believe that he didn't write that for Air Force officers' wives," she said.

Mothers of brides look lovely too

By Marylin Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

When it comes to a member of the wedding, the mother of the bride (MOB) often has the most difficulty finding just the right outfit.

"There's a void of MOB looks in the market," said Sharon Trense, owner of Sharon's of Dunwoody. "Women want a dress they can wear again. And they want it to be unique, sophisticated and youthful-looking."

She also pointed out that price plays a part. "I find there are two types of customers," said Mrs. Trense. "One says, 'I don't want to spend too much money since I will probably wear the dress only once.' The other type says, 'I don't care how much it (the dress) costs. My daughter's wedding is a special occasion.' " Mrs. Trense also noted most of her customers find dresses for $300 to $600.

Tamela Allen, a JC Penney spokeswoman, said many younger mothers are opting to buy a bridesmaid dress, especially if it's a sophisticated two-piece style.

GLOBAL: Space flights change some astronauts' perceptions

(From 1E)

"We are still in transition from the notion of Man as master of Earth to the notion of Man as a part of it," according to Wallace Stegner, in the April issue of the Smithsonian magazine.

"Unlike the 18th century scientific viewpoint of the universe being discrete pieces and parts, the current view of the universe is that of it being a rather uniform whole, with all parts of it being intimately connected," said Ted Windecker of Midland.

According to Windecker, who has a bachelor of science degree in engineering with a specialization in aerospace engineering, "Earth is our life support system, put here by God to nurture and support us, and we are plugging it up, clogging it up and destroying our own life support system. It's time that we change this. It's time that we turn the world around and take that global view and save the planet."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Ted Windecker, who has a bachelors of science degree with a specialization in aerospace engineering, has taken the global viewpoint of protecting the planet.

WINDECKER IS NOT alone in his viewpoint. Others with backgrounds in aerospace engineering, including many astronauts, have taken a global viewpoint concerning the environment. Astronauts world-wide have traveled into space and returned to Earth with a common perspective; one of concerned environmentalists. In "The Home Planet," a book of observations recently published by the Association of Space Explorers, the view of Earth as a fragile life support system and awesome creation is mentioned repeatedly.

In "The Home Planet," Yuri Artyukhin, astronaut for the USSR, said, "It isn't important in which sea or lake you observe a slick of pollution, or in the forests of which country a fire breaks out, or on which continent a hurricane arises. You are standing guard over the whole of our Earth."

According to many of the astronauts, the planet's peril is much more evident from space. Ernst Messerschmid of the Federal Republic of Germany, said, "When the Russian cosmonaut tells me that the atmosphere over Lake Baikal is as polluted as it is over Europe, and when the American astronaut tells me that 15 years ago he could take much clearer pictures of the industrial centers than today, then I am getting concerned."

Although space photographs of Earth have enabled scientists to see the full magnitude of destruction from pollution and deforestation, one doesn't need to take a space flight to know the destruction is going on. Environmentalists are most concerned about two issues, the destruction of the ozone layer of the atmosphere — which filters out ultra-violet rays — and the deforestation of the planet.

The most visible problem is pollution, which results in the less visable problem of certain pollutants destroying the ozone layer of the atmosphere. The ozone, an ionized form of oxygen which occurs in the stratosphere at about 43,000 feet (between 10-30 miles up), protects the Earth by filtering out harmful ultraviolet radiation from the sun. Ultraviolet light carries enough energy to damage DNA and thus disrupts the workings of cells, which is why excessive exposure to sunlight is thought to be the primary cause of some skin cancers.

OZONE LOSS has been called a ticking time bomb by Daniel Albritton, director of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Aeronomy Laboratory. "The Arctic is prime for destruction," Albritton said in a recent USA Today article.

Ozone is destroyed by chemicals called cholorofluorocarbons (CFCs), which have a life of 100 years. CFCs were synthesized in the late 1920s from chlorine, fluorine and carbon atoms (see illustration). They are used in items such as refrigeration devices utilized in air conditioning and refrigerators, aerosal cans made outside the USA, and in the making styrofoam cups and fast food containers.

CFSs destroy the ozone, and destruction of the ozone causes everything biological to be at risk; humans, crops and animals.

Recent studies revealed an overall ozone loss of 60 percent over the Antarctic.

Another problem with the ozone is the greenhouse effect, whereby heat is trapped in the atmosphere resulting in global warming. According to G. Tyler Miller Jr. in "Living in the Environment," normally about 70 percent of the incoming radiant energy from the sun passes through the atmosphere and strikes the surface of the Earth, much like light passing through glass. Miller said this incoming radiation is absorbed by the land and water and radiated back toward space as heat energy.

But not all this infrared heat makes it back into space. Instead, some is absorbed primarily by carbon dioxide and water vapor in the atmosphere and is reradiated toward the Earth's surface to warm the lower atmosphere.

This warming effect is known as the greenhouse effect, because the atmosphere acts similarly to the glass in a greenhouse or a car window, which allows visible light to enter but hinders the escape of long-wavelength infrared heat.

TREES AND PLANTS remove much of the carbon dioxide in the air through natural processes. However, the continual destruction of trees without replanting them is causing an increase in the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere.

According to Miller, the mean global atmospheric temperature today is about 10 degrees centigrade (18 degrees Farenheit) warmer than it would be without any carbon dioxide or water vapor in the atmosphere.

The greenhouse effect, according to Windecker, can be seen most clearly when studing Venus, "our nearest neighbor."

Windecker said, "Venus is the same size as Earth and is in the same relative place in the universe as the Earth. But Venus has a massively thick cloud cover of carbon dioxide and that carbon dioxide keeps heat from the sun from es-

"The temperature on the surface of Venus is 430 degrees celsius (hot enough to melt some metals) and sulfuric acid rain has been detected there," he said.

As if it isn't enough that the atmosphere is being affected by man-made chemicals, man also is destroying trees which naturally cleanse the atmosphere of some chemicals.

"We are deforesting our planet at the rate of 6 square miles a minute," Windecker said. "The forests on this planet are important because trees create the oxygen that we breathe and the trees clean out the carbon dioxide that we emit. Yet we are destroying the forests in the name of progress and deforestation is threatening the very survival of the planet.

"We can't befoul Earth and leave," he said. "In this solar system we are 'it.' As Buckminister Fuller, a great visionary said, 'We are each of us astronauts on this spaceship Planet Earth. We are each members of the crew and we are each of us remanded to take care of our spacecraft.' We are not just killing the planet," Windecker said, "we are killing ourselves.

"We have been the violators of the planet. Now we need to become its protectors. We are crew members, not hitchhikers on this planet," he continued. "One does not have to take a space flight to change his perceptions."

Windecker said being an environmentalist often carries a negative connotation. "People think of environmentalists as being alarmists. But being environmentally concerned is positive. We can save the planet," he said.

EARTH: Citizens gear up to clean up environment

(From 1E)

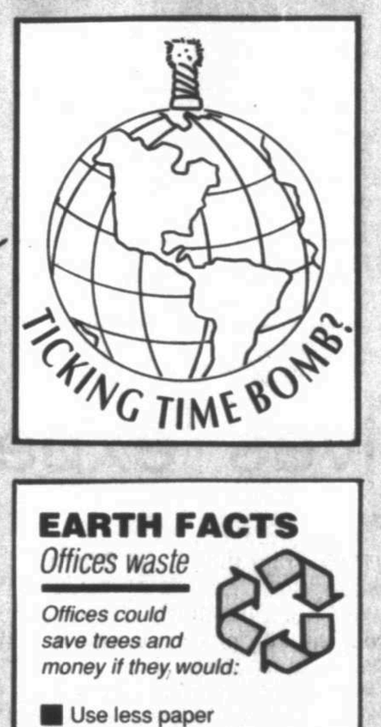

Act, a tougher Clean Air Act and other landmark legislation.

Some of the environmental furor died off during Ronald Reagan's administration, however. According to Associated Press reports, Reagan's secretary of the interior, James Watt, fought to open western lands to development, over environmentalists' objections. EPA Administrator Anne Burford presided over substantial cuts in the agency's budget, and the White House Council on Environmental Quality was cut from 50 people to eight. To make matters worse for environmentalists, one of Reagan's most quoted observations was that trees produce pollution.

But the environment, a hot topic this year, promises to stay in the limelight in the '90s. Once relegated to long-haired factions of citizens in Earth Shoes, environmental concerns have been taken to heart by the average American citizen.

Environmental problems such as the global warming and the destruction of the ozone layer were once elusive topics. But now, with overflowing landfills, diminishing water supplies, and pollution of air, land and water, environmental problems are more visible. Although the connection between aerosol cans, chlorofluorocarbons (chemicals consisting of chlorine, fluorine and carbon atoms) and the ozone layer are complex and difficult to visualize, the sight of massive freighters carrying tons of trash with no place to dump it suddenly makes the crisis a reality.

ALTHOUGH IT MAY be many years before area landfills are overflowing, measures can be taken to prevent a future garbage crisis. Since America has evolved into a disposable society, convincing people to be less wasteful may be nearly impossible, but convincing people to recycle items will benefit the entire planet, according to Faye Beery of Midland's Earth Day Committee.

EARTH FACTS

Offices waste

Offices could save trees and money if they would:

- Use less paper
- Use two-sided mode when copying documents
- Reuse mailing envelopes
- Print on recycled paper
- Use white paper, which is easier to recycle
- Use the computer to send electronic messages
- Circulate a single document instead of making multiple copies

Some cities in the Eastern United States have forced recycling and residents are fined for items which aren't disposed of properly. While Midlanders aren't required to recycle, members of several area environmental organizations think they should. "We must remember that the Earth is a finite resource," Ms. Beery said. "Earth itself is a huge recycling mechanism. Nature never wastes anything. We must remember that the same air and water we use today is the same air and water used by the dinosaurs. There is no 'new' air or water.

"When man disrupts this cycle by creating products like certain plastics that cannot be recycled or pollutes the air and water to the extent that nature cannot cleanse it during the recycling process, we are wasting precious resources that cannot be replaced. The United States isn't called the 'Throw-Away Society' for nothing," she said.

"Talk about waste," said Yvonne Harris of Greater Odessa Litter Busters, "I recently read in the Recycling Coalition of Texas newsletter that 16,000 trees are used to produce one issue of Time magazine (a weekly)." Ms. Harris said the same newsletter states that 13,000 acres of natural forest pine in Texas are thinned each year by loggers to make pulp for paper. "Recycling makes sense, to save the trees if nothing else," she said.

NOT ONLY SHOULD citizens collect items to recycle, they should begin purchasing items made from recycled products as well, according to Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful. "Buying recycled products will create a demand for recycled products. For example, Keep Midland Beautiful only uses recycled paper. It's costs a little more, but if recycled paper isn't used, recycling paper will not be commercially viable," Ms. Hotchkiss said.

Several organizations in Midland and Odessa (see related story on the Time Machine, Page 7E) are gearing up for a host of local events to encourage recycling and increase public awareness of local environmental concerns. "Our objective is to make the community aware of the need for a clean, healthy environment as well as encouraging citizens to use natural resources in a responsible manner," Ms. Beery said. "The future is not a door we pass through, it is something that we are creating here and now."

Brazil ablaze with 6,803 points of light

Copley News Service

While the President Bush talks of 1,000 points of light, satellites zooming over Brazil recently noticed 6,803 points of light. Each of these lights was located in Brazil's rain forest, where humans are cutting and burning woodlands to create new settlements or provide pasture for grazing cattle.

Scientists have warned for decades now that clearing the Amazon would change world climates and cause the extinction of half the world's animal species.

ODESSA — 'It's about time ... time to turn tomorrow's problems into today's resources," according to Greater Odessa Litterbusters, an organization comprised of environmentally-conscious citizens who are responsible for developing the "Time Machine" recycling center, 816 W. 42nd St.

The Time Machine building — which will feature painted panels depicting periods of time, such as the Dinosaur Age and medieval times — debuts from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday. Recyclables can be deposited in receptacles built into the wall mural, according to Yvonne Harris, chairman of public relations for Litterbusters. "Children will be able to place recyclables into the dinosaur's mouth or into the opening of a teepee, or other openings in the mural," Ms. Harris said.

THE ENTIRE CONCEPT of the Time Machine resulted from a poster contest for elementary school children in Ector County Independent School District (ECISD), according to Grace King of Litterbusters. "One young man, a 12-year-old, came up with the idea of having a time tunnel to pass through while delivering recyclable items," Ms. King said. "The time theme was designed to attract children to recycle. It is necessary to appeal to our youth — they are the promise of the future."

Finishing touches will be put on the Time Machine this week. The building, a brick edifice which resembles a children's museum, features a reception window, time panels and drive-through Time Tunnel.

According to Ms. Harris, the public is asked to bring high density polyethylene plastics — such as milk jugs and soft drink liter bottles — aluminum cans, glass containers and newspapers to the center to be sent to appropriate plants for recycling. The Time Machine will pay about 2¢ per pound for glass, 1¢ per pound for plastic and 35¢ per pound for alumninum, according to Bill Dimler, executive director and administrator of the Time Machine. Dimler said that fair market value of recyclables may fluctuate daily, however. "Glass will go down to a penny a pound as of July 1 because manufacturers are dropping the price they will pay for glass," Dimler said.

After three years of work, Time Machine volunteers and a paid staff of disabled workers will be ready to accept recyclable items.

THE NONPROFIT recycling center was funded by a Community Development Block Grant of $175,000 from the City of Odessa. Litterbusters leased property on 42nd Street for $1 for 10 years from the City of Odessa. The Junior League of Odessa donated $15,000 to the organization to purchase a computer, printer, cash register and other supplies. Additional funding included $30,000 in cash donations from the community and $40,000 worth of building materials and office furnishings.

"Although we (Litterbusters) are just one nonprofit organization staffed by volunteers, we are a broad-based, grass roots effort involving the city and county governments, the highway department, the school district (ECISD), the Chamber of Commerce, local businesses, and civic, social and professional organizations, and the public" Ms. Harris said. "We hope to save citizens tax dollars (by reducing the amount of waste sent to landfills), make our city look better, create new jobs and channel money to local charitable organizations."

THE TIME MACHINE will function as an intermediary between the public and recycling plants. It is a collection center only and no actual recycling will take place on site.

Litterbusters estimates that the recycling center will save citizens $60,000 a year in tax dollars in landfill space if only 3 percent of Odessa's estimated waste is recycled.

An unusual aspect of the Time Machine is that it will be one of the few places in the Permian Basin that will accept newspapers. Due to the high cost of transporting newspapers (transportation fees are charged by weight) most area recycling centers won't take them.

"Since we are a multi-purpose collection center, we can afford to accept newspapers," Ms. Harris said. "We can't pay people to bring them in, but we can accept them and ensure that they are recycled." Ms. Harris said that the center will buy recyclable items at a fair market price and send them to be recycled. Any profits the center makes will be channeled back into the community to fund other environmental or beautification projects.

"We hope to generate funding over our operating costs," Ms. Harris said, "but our primary concern is the environment."

PERSONS WHO want to recycle but don't need the cash may request that their money be given to a charitable organization (a nonprofit partner). The Time Machine will send checks quarterly to nonprofit partners and issue receipts to donors for tax purposes.

The "Time Machine" Recycling Center will accept various aluminum, plastic and glass containers, and newspaper. Time Machine hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturdays and 3-6 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

The following are requirements for recyclable items:

■ PLASTICS — must be high density polyethylene plastic which is used in milk jugs and clear or green plastic soft drink bottles, squeezable bottles and bottles which contained drinking water. This type of plastic also is found in 6-pack holder rings. Polyethylene is made from ethylene, a gaseous byproduct of the petroleum refinement process. Although this type of plastic is photodegradable (it will break down if exposed to direct sunlight over a period of time), most objects in landfills are covered and are not exposed to sunlight. Recycling polyethylene is preferable to disposing of it in landfills.

■ GLASS — must be containers, no plate glass. Lids and rings should be removed, but it is not necessary to remove labels. Plate glass, ceramics and light bulbs are not acceptable.

The process for taking recyclable items to the Time Machine is as follows:

■ GATHER UP recyclable items and separate them, setting aside a few items if you have a child who would like to put items into one of the openings in the murals. Drive into the time tunnel. The on-site workers will assist people in unloading and weighing items.

■ A COMPUTER will print out the weight and the price of the items.

Recycling a good habit

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Americans generate 160 million tons of garbage a year — that's 3.5 pounds of garbage per person, per day, and there is increasingly less landfill area to dispose of it, according to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The EPA has estimated that only 6,500 landfills exist in the United States today, compared to 18,500 in 1979.

America's resources also suffer when paper is wasted, since it takes half a million trees to produce the nation's Sunday papers each week and only 88 percent of the paper is recycled, according ot a recent issue of the "New Age Journal."

One of the best ways to cut down on litter is to create less waste by not using single-serve packages and convenience packaging. The use of biodegradable products also is misleading, according to several sources. Although many products may be biodegradable, products need light, water, oxygen, or a combination of all three in order to biodegrade. Unfortunately, many landfills (including Midland's) are often packed tightly and covered with dirt to keep dumps dry so they won't create conditions conducive to breeding mosquitos and vermin. Little sunlight, water and oxygen are allowed to penetrate, hence, items are slow to biodegrade. Scientists have found 15-year-old vegetables and newspapers in sanitary landfills that have barely started to degrade because of insufficient oxygen and water. Therefore, many scientists agree that biodegradable products don't appear to be the short-term solution to landfill problems.

Several organizations believe the answer to landfill problems lies in the three "R's" of Global education "reducing, reusing and recycling."

People need to acquire a recycling habit, according to Yvonne Harris, public relations chairman for Greater Odessa Litterbusters. "People have habits about littering," she said. "Research reveals that most people seem to feel littering is acceptable when someone else cleans up, where they feel no sense of ownership for property, or where litter has already accumulated."

Ms. Harris said "litter is dynamic — it moves, travels sometimes for blocks, carried along by wind (especially here in West Texas), water, traffic ... moving until it is trapped and just invites the passerby to add his trash to whatever is already there."

While littering is easy, recycling requires some thought and extra effort. "Even better than recycling is making an effort to generate less trash," according to Faye Beery of Midland's Earth Day Committee.

Tips to reduce waste follow:

■ BUY PRODUCTS in recycled boxes which are indicated by a logo on the box or a gray paper interior. Buy in bulk when possible.

■ BUY PRODUCTS in containers than can be used for another purpose once emptied of the food product.

■ RESELL. Garage sales give articles a second life.

■ MAINTAIN and repair items whenever possible.

GARBAGE DECOMPOSES SLOWLY

Under natural conditions garbage decomposes slowly. The practice of sealing most landfills with layers of dirt to keep them dry also inhibits the biodegrading process.

Banana peel	1-6 months
Foam cup	10-20 years
Plastic bottle	50-80 years
Tin can	100 years

SOLID WASTE COMPONENTS

The nation's solid waste is estimated to be composed of:

30%	paper and paperboard

Earth Day Activities planned

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Area organizations have planned a host of activities in the Permian Basin to celebrate Earth Day next Sunday. Some of these include:

TODAY — M System grocery stores will begin giving three cents per bag rebates to customers who bring their own grocery bags to the store, according to Faye Beery of the Earth Day Committee. Environmental information on store products will be available.

THURSDAY — Aaron Kaye of KGEE radio will ride his bike and broadcast his ride from points along a route from downtown Midland to his Odessa studio. Kaye will be undertaking the ride to encourage area residents to participate in Friday's "Low Pollute Commute" day.

FRIDAY — Midlanders are invited to participate in a "Low Pollute Commute" by riding their bicycles or walking to work. The Flying Armadillos and the Permian Basin Cycling clubs will participate in riding bicycles to work. The Midland Police Department safety bike, equipped with flashing lights and sirens, will also participate. For information call 682-5326.

SATURDAY — The Time Machine (815 W. 42nd St. in Odessa) will accept recyclables from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. (For details on acceptable items and how to deliver them see related story.)

A panel of Midland and Odessa specialists will discuss environmental problems and their solutions 6-7 p.m. on Channel 36, KOCV-TV public broadcasting. A moderator from the League of Women Voters will lead the discussion. Phone lines will be opened for viewers to call in their opinions during the show. Phone line numbers are 563-3633 or (915) 335-6336. The event is sponsored by Keep Midland Beautiful, Midland Council of Garden Clubs and the League of Women Voters.

APRIL 22 — Keep Midland Beautiful will gather recyclables at five locations from 1-5 p.m. Acceptable items include aluminum, plastics, glass, metal cans (with the exception of food cans), white ledger paper and computer paper. The locations are Midland College, Wadley-Barron Park, Grafa Park, Midland Boys and Girls Clubs and Casa de Amigos. For information call 682-5326.

Midland College will have a family day in the plaza. Participants are invited to picnic, fly kites, play games or take an educational earth walk around campus. A tree will be planted and registered with the Environmental Protection Agency.

EARTH FACTS

Recycle at home

Cut down on the garbage that piles up at home:

- Use cloth napkins, not paper
- Use cloth rags or sponges, not paper towels
- Use a canvas grocery bag
- Use glass dishware and silverware, not paper or plastic
- Recycle giftwrap and ribbon or make wrap from newspaper
- Reuse plastic bags and aluminim foil
- Avoid products packaged in all-steel cans or plastic; choose reusable glass and aluminum

DEAR ABBY

Wife feels lonely in marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice. I've put off writing to you for several years, but now it's time.

Van Buren

I've been married to my husband for 27 years. We have a son, 26, who is married to a lovely girl, and a daughter, engaged to be married in June. We are very proud of them. So, you ask, what's the problem?

It's my husband. He's a good provider and a good husband, but he's a lousy lover. We make love once every seven or eight weeks. I'm 49, keep myself immaculate, exercise regularly and weigh only five pounds more than I did on my wedding day.

My husband is 52 and still working regularly. He's healthy and hardworking, and we go to church every Sunday. He was never what I would call a passionate lover, but I feel as though I'm living with my brother. If I feel romantic, he says, "Not tonight, maybe tomorrow." I miss the closeness we once had.

I know he loves me, Abby, but I feel so empty and alone. Please help me. No name or town, please. Sign me ... LONELY

DEAR LONELY: Since you go to church every Sunday, look into Marriage Encounter. It's a weekend refresher course for couples who would like to renew the excitement and intimacy they once had.

I have had wonderful reports from Catholic, Protestant and Jewish couples of all ages who have benefited enormously from the Marriage Encounter experience.

Ask your clergyperson what's available in your area. You have nothing to lose but your emptiness and loneliness. Please write again. I'd like a progress report.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was looking for a birthday card for my son and, as usual, it was hard for me to find one with the proper words. You see, he is an alcoholic and lives in a shelter in northwest Oregon.

His brother is an officer in the U.S. Navy, and although I love them both equally, my heart goes out to the one with the problem.

It's difficult to find a card that expresses exactly how I feel. Most cards say, "I'm so proud of you," etc. Abby, please print this so the greeting card people will take notice. — OREGON MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Must it be a store-bought card? A handwritten note could say it all in four words: "I love you, Son."

DEAR ABBY: I appreciated your letter concerning the minister's fee for performing a marriage ceremony. As a minister, I am well aware of this situation. I work from 15 to 20 hours on each marriage I perform, for which I am usually given about $20.

You said, "A minister cannot have his suit cleaned and pressed, get a haircut, and pay to get his car gassed up to get him to the church and back for $20."

You could have said, "She can't get her dress cleaned and pressed, her hair fixed, and drive her car several times to the church in order to help this couple begin their life together," etc.

Abby, 50 percent of the students of the United Methodist seminaries today are women. I know. I was one of them. — THE REV. LIN JENNEWEIN, McCOOK LAKE, S.D.

DEAR LIN JENNEWEIN: Forgive me. When I hear "minister," I'm programmed to think "male"!

DEAR ABBY: The letters I see printed in your column are remarkably well-written — brief, concise and to the point. Are they edited and/or rewritten by you or your staff?

I find it rather difficult to believe that so many people can, or are able to, write such well-composed letters. Please set me straight. — JESSICA W. LEY, MILFORD, PA.

DEAR JESSICA: Neither I nor my staff would presume to "rewrite" a letter, but some must be edited. Offensive language is laundered, errors in grammar are corrected and non-essential details are omitted to conserve space. Occasionally, a letter can be printed without changing a word.

BILL AND JENNY BARTLETT

While Bill Bartlett is the new store manager for Dunlaps in Midland's Dellwood Mall store. He is certainly no stranger to the Midland area, having begin his Dunlaps career here in 1970.

Bartlett's wife Jenny, is the store's merchandise manager and she brings 15 years experience to her position.

In 1975 they transferred from the Midland store to the Big Spring store where they stayed for 10 years before relocating to Manage the store in Abilene.

In 1984, while in Big Spring, Bartlett was named Dunlaps Manager of the year. Both Bill and Jenny were raised in the Lamesa area so they say this is "Coming Home to them as They have always loved Midland."

Bartlett said that as our Motto implies, Dunlaps will continue to carry on the tradition in the community of being a customer-oriented store and will work hard to provide the customer with better and better service.

"We will always strive to have the best products available at the best possible value" Bartlett reminded, "We are extremely proud of our store, our associates in the store, the city of Midland, and surrounding area."

Bill and Jenny ask you to "Please come in and browse our store, we certainly appreciate the warm response we've had from our friends and customers."

PARADE OF HOMES

The den is a comfortable family room featuring a family heirloom quilt on the wall.

The Castellos living area features a variety of patterns and colors uniquely combined.

FAMILY IN MIND

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Midland Junior Woman's Club will present its 21st annual Parade of Homes 1-5:30 p.m. April 22. Tickets are $7.50 and can be purchased from any club member or by calling 697-4506 or 684-0993. No tickets will be sold at the door and children under 12 will not be admitted. The proceeds will benefit the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Special Care Infants, The Problem Pregnancy Center and Attention Deficit Disorder Association of Parents and Teachers. This is the last home to be presented.

Although most people form an attachment to their homes, Joel and Norma Castello seem to have a little extra feeling for their new 5,000 square foot home in Green Tree.

"I birthed this house," Mrs. Castello said, and so far everything is exactly the way she wanted it to be. The Castellos built their home "from the ground up," from the planning stages on paper to the final touches of decorating.

Mrs. Castello describes the decor of the home as English Winsor Traditional. But it has a twist here and there that can easily be spotted as a trademark style of Van Stavern Interiors, her decorator.

Mrs. Castello said the home was designed to reflect their very private family life. The four bedroom, four bath, two-story home features three bricked patio areas where the Castellos enjoy relaxing and entertaining for small groups. They also enjoy the beautiful views of the sunset from the patios.

THE DOWNSTAIRS of the Castello home encompasses the dining room, living room, kitchen and breakfast area, small bathroom, den, laundry room, pantry, study and master bedroom and bath. The upstairs features the children's bedrooms and baths and a guest room. Stairways from the entry way and from the den provide access to the upstairs areas.

Upon entering the home, the dining room and kitchen/breakfast area are to the left, the living area is straight in front and a study is to the right. Beyond the study is the master bedroom and bath.

CASTELLO: Rooms' decors fit personalities

four-poster bed. Plantation shutters and bedside tables topped with crystal-based lamps flank the king-sized bed.

Double doors at the end of the room open to the master bath. The large bath areas focal point is the windowed alcove containing the raised whirlpool bath with marble steps leading up to it. The windows are covered with ballooned curtains with lace. On one side of the bath is the water closet, the other a shower. Directly across from the bath is a large walk-in closet.

The living area houses the only true antique in the house, a breakfront. Solid, striped, floral and geometric patterned fabrics that are uniquely tied together in color combinations of teals, reds and beige adorn the furniture in this room.

The kitchen and breakfast area are much brighter, with winter white painted walls and pine cabinets, complete with the refrigerator paneled to look like a cabinets as well. Other amenities include an appliance garage and an island with sink. White tile with hand-painted fruits cover the area above the sink cabinets.

The breakfast table chairs — positioned around a glass topped table — are spatter-painted, offering a colorful, whimsical look to the room. Touches of blues and reds are used as accent colors.

The den is situated behind the kitchen and is a cozy area for family entertainment. A quilt — which was made by Mrs. Castello's aunt and is a family heirloom — hangs on one wall. Several dolls and children's creations decorate the hutch and a peak out of the plantation shutters offers a beautiful view of the Green Tree Country Club Golf Course and one of the home's patios, which features a fountain.

Marissa's bedroom is all ruffles and lace in pinks, lavenders and blues. Matching bedspread and curtains feature Bishop sleeve design.

The bath area shared by Marissa and Afton features hand-painted flowers around the edge of the sink and on some tiles. Colors for the bath are pink and blue.

Although the girls' rooms are designed to suit their individual tastes, the guest bedroom takes on a personality of its own. Tropical decor dominates, but the room is not decorated in shades of blue as one might expect. Walls are painted a bright red and the three doors in the room are decorated with hand-painted tropical fish around the moldings or above the door. The day bed is covered by a dark spread that has been hand-painted with tropical fish as well. Around the edge of the spread, there are hand-painted fish scales. Throw pillows, one in the shape of a fish, studded with rhinestones top the bed. Wall-to-wall storage cabinets — painted white — cover one wall. Because this is an interior room, it is lit by a skylight and studio lights.

The circle drive in front of the red brick home provides easy access an parking for visitors and the state-of-the-art security system makes entry difficult for intruders.

Overall, Mrs. Castello said she has not found one thing she would change in the design of the home, a design conceived with family in mind.

Sun costs money

Copley News Service

Some people say you can't put a price on sunshine. Tokyo apartment dwellers say sunshine is worth about $9,000.

That's the price for ane electronic mirror that bounces sunlight into apartments blocked off from the sun.

It seems high-rise construction in Tokyo is cutting out sunshine to most apartment dwellers. So residents are fighting back with special mirrors that follow the sun and bounce light into their living rooms.

The mirrors are the latest in high tech with sensors, computers and electronic motors. They are mounted on the building next door. The first mirror catches sun rays and then reflects them onto a second mirror that zaps the rays into the apartment.

Most of the mirrors are installed free of charge by high-rise developers who wish to avoid legal battles over stealing the sun.

Villiage is home to Colonial homes

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — This picturesque village in Western Connecticut, settled in 1720, has many well-preserved Colonial homes.

It was the birthplace of Ethan Allen, Henry Ward Beecher and Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Begonias brighten spring

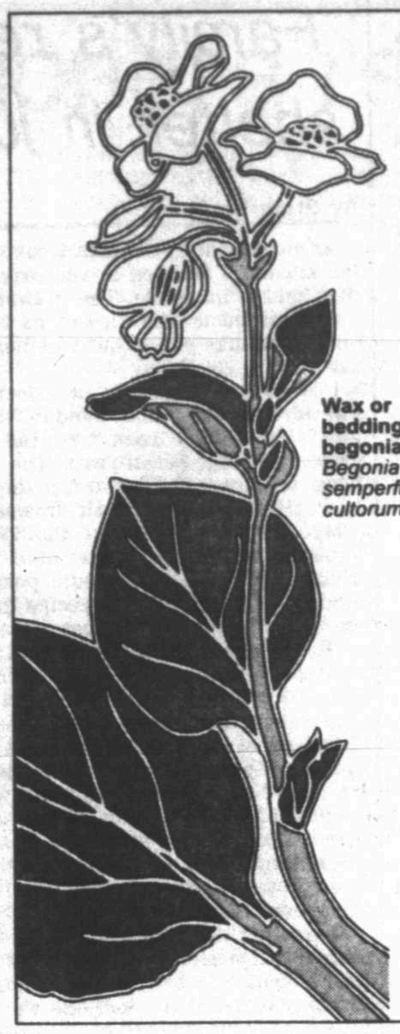

By Patrick Denton
Copley News Service

For flamboyant splashes of vibrant summer color in lightly shaded, wind-sheltered sites nothing surpasses the tuberous begonia. Garden flower beds, window boxes, planters and hanging baskets can all be dressed in class with these plants.

Any shallow container with drainage holes may be used for starting begonia tubers. This could be individual pots, plastic flats you've purchased plants in, shallow boxes, milk cartons with a side removed and slits made in the bottom.

Fill your chosen container almost to the rim with a sterile planting mix that has plenty of peat in it. It's traditional to use peat and sharp sand, but I find that a sandy, sterile potting soil mixed half and half with the peat works fine, too.

Nestle the tubers into the mix, barely covering their tops and leaving about 2 inches between them. Make sure the tubers are settled in place right side up. Their bottoms are the rounded side. The dished-in side is the top. It's from this bowl-like indentation that the little pink growth buds will emerge.

Wax or bedding begonia
Begonia X semperflorens-cultorum

Starting begonia tubers

- Use shallow container for drainage holes.
- Fill container almost to rim with sterile planting mix with plenty of peat in it.
- Nestle tubers, rounded side down, into mix, barely covering tops and leaving 2 inches between them.
- Place containers in good light on warm surface; keep humid, in moist mix.

SOURCE: The Annual Garden, Peter Loewer

CNS Graphic

COVERING THE tuber tops lightly will encourage root development from almost the entire tuber surface, and this root formation will be further encouraged by warmth. If you have a warm surface upon which to place the containers, so much the better for delivering gentle heat directly to the soil. During this initial rooting and sprouting stage the tubers should also be kept humid in a moist mix. Place the containers in good light but not direct sun.

Some gardeners like to pot their begonia tubers right away in peat or plastic pots, so that the roots may grow undisturbed right up to the time they are set outdoors. Otherwise, the tubers should be set into pots 5 inches wide once the shoots are 3 inches high.

A word about tubers that produce, as many do, more than one sprout. This raises the obvious question whether such a tuber can be divided to produce more than one plant. Unless the tuber is very small, it can be divided.

Slice the tuber through cleanly, into two or more pieces, each piece having a shoot. This is done when the shoots are around ½ inch long. Rub each cut surface with powdered sulfur as a precaution against disease, and pot each portion.

Another method of increasing your stock of begonia tubers is to wait until the shoots are a bit longer, at around 1½ inches. At this time, any extra shoots can be removed from the parent tuber along with a small piece of the tuber. This is then potted and kept humid with a plastic canopy over it, in subdued light for about a week while it makes roots.

WHEN THE tubers are moved up into the peat or plastic pots where they will grow until the plants are set outdoors, use a nourishing, moisture-retaining mix that is well aerated and drains efficiently. To achieve all these qualities, I combine roughly equal parts of a sandy, sterile potting soil, damp peat, perlite, bagged, processed manure. I give these ingredients a thorough mixing, and add bone meal at the rate of about 1 tablespoon per quart of the mix.

Firm the little begonia plants gently into their pots, keeping the tuber top near the soil surface. Grow the plants in good light out of direct sun, and cool, for stocky, strong plants. Fertilize weekly with a quarter-strength solution of a balanced liquid plant food.

Begonias can be set outdoors into garden beds or containers when the weather and soil have thoroughly warmed in spring, at tomato transplanting time. In short-summer climates, be ready to cover the plants or bring the baskets or pots into shelter if a frost threatens.

Whether you plan to grow begonias in the open garden or in containers, position the plants so that the points of the leaves face outward, toward the front of the bed or the rim of the pots or baskets. This will be the direction the flowers will face, too.

For a continuous supply of flowers on healthy plants all summer, keep the soil for begonias consistently dampened, and fertilize weekly as for the potted transplants. Two or three feedings of fish fertilizer will help to keep tuberous begonias in top shape through the summer.

Couple plants 'rare and endangered' seeds

Associated Press

One might say John and Cindy Meyer have green thumbs the size of giant zucchini.

Their big, country garden near the northeast Wisconsin hamlet of Kellnersville overflows with old-time crops: white kerneled Howling Mob sweet corn, Danish Flathead cabbage, yellow-speckled Moon and Stars watermelon and dozens of other varieties that seldom show up anymore in seed company catalogs.

As members of the international Seed Savers Exchange, the soft-spoken heritage gardeners grow old-time vegetables — not only for their flavor, but also to save their rare and endangered seeds from extinction.

The Meyers advise novice gardeners to plant and care for heirloom vegetables just as any other vegetables. The couple spread cattle manure on their garden every couple of years and mulch plants with straw.

"Mulch keeps the soil from splashing onto the leaves when it rains and spreading soil-born diseases," Cindy explains.

When it comes to saving old-fashioned seeds, however, the Meyers told Midwest Living magazine that there are some tricks to help vegetable gardeners do it better:

- Save seed from so-called standard varieties of plants, not from hybrids. (The seeds of hybrids, which result from cross-breeding, either will be sterile or will revert to just one of their parent varieties.)
- For starters, try saving bean seeds. They're easy to dry: just leave the pods on the plants to sun-dry.
- Place the dried seeds in labeled envelopes. Put the envelopes in glass jars sealed with rubber-gasketed lids. Then, store the jars in the refrigerator or freezer.
- Before planting, let the sealed containers sit out for a day or so until they reach room temperature. Otherwise, moisture will condense on the cold seeds and damage them.

For information about saving seeds and obtaining old seed varieties, contact Seed Savers Exchange, Rte. 3, Box 239, Decorah, Iowa 52101.

Steiff bears popular collectibles

By Linda Rosenkrantz
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

When a Steiff teddy bear sold for the sum of $88,000 at Sotheby's last year — beating the previous record by $68,370 — it made headline news, focusing attention on both this enduringly endearing consummate stuffed animal itself and on the German firm that produced it.

The founder of the company had seemed, at first glance, an unlikely candidate. Margarete Steiff had been disabled by polio at the age of 18 months, and was confined to a wheelchair for the rest of her life. After working as a seamstress for several years, she opened a small felt factory in 1877, making underskirts and other articles of clothing.

Finally, in 1880, she made her first toy — a small felt elephant, following a pattern in a magazine. She continued making a few toy animals as a sideline to the felt business for several years, until her brother Fritz encouraged her to expand her menagerie — the elephant was joined by a monkey, donkey, horse, camel, pig, dog, mouse, cat, rabbit and giraffe — setting up a mail-order business that soon flourished. The enterprise, strengthened by the input of several of her nephews, continued to grow.

AND WHEN did the teddy bear enter the picture? As early as 1892, "soft-filled bears for small children" were being offered by the firm. In 1902, movable joints gave the animals considerably more flexibility. A representative of the George Borgfeldt & Co. department store in New York, seeing the Steiff bears at a fair in Leipzig in 1903, led to their invasion of America. Nephew Franz Steiff brought them to the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair, where — now made of light-colored mohair plush — they were a great success, and that year the firm sold 12,000 bears.

Teddy, of course, was named in honor of then-President Theodore Roosevelt. The association began in a 1902 Washington Post cartoon that depicted Roosevelt refusing to shoot a little bear cub. The Steiff bear was first nicknamed Teddy's bear and then, in 1906, the Teddy bear. Almost instantly, the Americans adopted the Teddy as a mascot, not only played with by children, but also becoming a fashion accessory for stylish women who would dress him appropriately to accompany them on shopping expeditions.

Two new books tell the Steiff story in greater and lesser detail. "Button in His Ear: The History of the Teddy Bear and His Friends" by Jurgen and Marianne Cieslik has been translated from the German and published by Theriault's (P.O. Box 151, Annapolis, Md.), as both a regular 264-page edition (at $105) and in a limited, signed and numbered edition that features a Steiff button, a special protective sleeve and a record of "Teddy Bear's Picnic" (at $175).

ALTHOUGH THE price is steep, this book is both an invaluable reference tool and a delight to look through. There are more than 800 beautifully reproduced color and black-and-white photos and a mass of documentary data — luckily for the arctophile, the Steiff family were meticulous record-keepers and diarists.

And Teddy was just part of the picture. Considerable attention is also given to the other products of the Steiff factory — the innovative Roloplan kite, designed by Richard Steiff (who also fathered the Teddy bear), Roly Poly toys, many animals on wheels and countless character dolls.

A particularly interesting feature of the book is the 10-page Collectors Service section, which includes a color-illustrated list of material used, an explanation of the complex Steiff numbering system and extremely useful analyses of specific bear and doll characteristics and markings.

The second volume, "Steiff Toys Revisited" by Jean Wilson (Wallace-Homestead Book Co., Radnor, Pa., 176 pages) is, at $18.95, a book of a different — paler — color, but is also of value to the collector. Especially useful are the chronicle of Steiff toys auctioned over the past five bear-boom years, a list of limited editions with current market prices and reports on the Festivals of Steiff through 1989.

Linda Rosenkrantz edited Auction magazine and authored five books, including "Auction Antiques Annual." Write Collect, c/o Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, Calif. 92112-0190.

Family's refuse finds shelter in junk drawer

By Erma Bombeck

As my daughter, the neat freak, tugged to free a stuck drawer in the kitchen, I reached in and expertly removed a church calendar that held it immobile. The drawer slid out easily.

Bombeck

She gasped as she viewed its contents. "How long did it take you to put together a drawer like this?"

I looked at the array of eclectic junk, from screwdrivers to birthday candles. "I have to apologize," I said. "I've been throwing things in this drawer for only seven years. The one at the old house was great! I tossed stuff in there for 15 years. Now THAT was a catch-all drawer!"

My eyes proudly took in the VFW poppy, old lottery ticket, Christmas tree bulb, plastic packets of ketchup from McDonald's, poker chips, corn holders, pruning shears, a recipe for Cajun chicken, and a telephone number written on a blank check.

"How can you find anything in here?" she persisted.

"That's the point of a catch-all drawer," I said. "An item is never lost — it's just never really found."

You show me a woman who does not have a junk drawer and I'll show you a woman who launders her lint. I grew up with these drawers. My grandma had one of the most impressive catch-all drawers I have ever seen. Hers came with a warning. Every time you opened it to look for something, her voice would come out of nowhere, "Don't hurt yourself!" It was like an arsenal: old razor blades rested innocently by a ball of crochet thread, rusty pins burrowed under roach traps, and paring knives were buried among buttons that never matched anything and keys that never fit anything.

My mother's junk drawer wasn't as large as Grandma's, but it was more creative. Hers held empty cardboard spindles that at one time held ribbon. She had rolls of pennies that she was going to check someday to see if she had one worth a thousand dollars. She kept piles of coupons that had expired years ago and jar lids that she hung onto after the jars to them had broken. There was a pile of warranties for appliances that had died of old age and a booklet of Christmas carols for the piano. We didn't own a piano.

I have tried to uphold the family tradition of the catch-all drawer. The family has been supportive, occasionally throwing in a watch that doesn't run anymore or a half-stick of gum that hardens and crumbles.

I told my daughter, "I'd like to bequeath all of this to you, but you have to amass your own." She was probably more upset than she let on.

TRAVEL

Vacationers reluctant to leave New Zealand

By Sharon Achatz
Copley News Service

A trip to New Zealand is going to leave you disappointed — not in the scenery, nor the attractions, nor the people, but in the realization that no matter how much time you arrange to spend in this South Pacific nation, it will not be enough.

From rain forest hiking to geyser-watching, from flightseeing to bungy-jumping, from jetboating to historical touring — we tried to fit in as much as possible during a recent 10-day trip. We raced from city to city with an itinerary that would have made the most neurotic schedule-freak proud. But still, we left wanting more.

And, despite the hectic pace, we could not help but get caught up in the calming influences of the clear cool waters of Milford Sound, the enchanting tales of the native Maori people, the relaxed lifestyle of this island nation.

For the record, New Zealand actually is made up of three islands — the North and South islands and tiny Stewart Island off its southern tip. And, for the record, this is not like Hawaii or any other tropical paradise you may imagine.

This island nation is big — twice the size of Florida — and diverse. Sure, you've got your breathtakingly beautiful rain forests with deafening waterfalls and golden beaches standard to any tropical paradise.

But you'll also find craggily majestic mountain peaks that house glaciers year-round. And starkly arid plains laced with turquoise-blue rivers panned for gold. And angry, mineral-stained earth hissing up natural steam and shooting up 50-foot-tall geysers.

Of course, you have to travel around to experience this diversity, but travel within New Zealand is a breeze, whether you select airplane, motor coach or rental car. If you drive yourself, be prepared for some confusing yet laughable moments, as you'll be driving on the left side of the road.

Here are city-by-city highlights of our recent tour.

AUCKLAND, NORTH ISLAND

The nation's largest city with a population of about 1 million, Auckland also is a city of water. Located on a thin finger of land sandwiched between two bays, it offers pristine air, bracing breezes and sailing opportunities galore — which helped earn it the nickname City of Sails.

One of the first impulses you feel in Auckland is to get out on the harbor, one way or another. Take a lunchtime cruise on the million-dollar catamaran The Pride of Auckland. Hop a ferry over to the quaint village of Devonport for dinner. Rent a catamaran and head out on your own. Experience Kelly's Tariton's Underwater World, where you'll walk down the world's largest acrylic tunnel for underwater viewing of sharks, stingrays and other assorted sea creatures. Or just hop in for a swim at Mission Bay, a popular inner-city beach.

To get a comprehensive overview of the city, drive to the top of Mount Eden, one of 60 extinct volcanic mounds dotted throughout the city. Now covered with intensely green vegetation, the mounds offer gently terraced hiking, which you may have to share with grazing sheep and cattle. You'll look out over Waitemata Harbour to Rangitoto, the last of the city's volcanoes to erupt, just 750 years ago.

For nightlife, check out pubs along the downtown harborfront or in colonial-style Parnell Village. Metropole's the hot spot for dining, and Rick's Blue Falcon is a hip place for happy hour, dinner and after-dinner jazz. Even in this metropolitan area, pubs often are not open on Sundays and usually close early by U.S. standards. Carefully check hours of operation in planning your days and nights.

While in Auckland, take a day trip to the Waitakere Ranges. You can stop for an informative walk at the Araraki Nature Trail to learn about the various plants and how a rain forest develops. You'll get a much better feel for the density of the forest, however, by taking any one of dozens of trails off the main road. Just look for a signpost, park your car along the road and go on a trek. Signs indicate the estimated duration of each trek, but even names such as Fairy Falls can do no justice to the scenery that will unfold.

Everywhere you look is some shade of green, some sort of plant. The brownish decay of the forest floor sends forth a chaos of green, from inch-tall ferns to 100-foot-tall Kauri trees. Interwoven branches and vines form an emerald ceiling to the walking paths, where you're not only surrounded by vegetation, you're also surrounded by the chirps, clicks and caws of insects and birds.

Your scenic drive through the rain forest eventually will take you to the black-sand beach of Piha. With strong waves and currents, Piha and other west coast beaches are primarily considered surfing terrain but provide challengingly enjoyable body-surfing and swimming for experienced swimmers.

WAITOMO, NORTH ISLAND

A three-hour drive from Auckland, Waitomo's big attraction is caves. The Museum of Caves has an interpretation center that explains the development of caves, their exploration and their inhabitants — including the glowworm, an insect that hangs from cave ceilings by the thousands, emitting a greenish glow.

To view the glowworms, you can take a 45-minute boat tour through the caves or go for the more daring option of black-water rafting — where you hike, jump off waterfalls and float in an innertube on the Huhunui Stream in a two-hour subterranean experience that lands you in a cave in the company of thousands of glowworms.

A short drive from Waitomo is the starting point for a walk to the Mangapohue Natural Bridge. This five-minute trek leads you into a mossy canyon, where you cross gurgling streams via swaying catwalk footbridges and duck under vines and tree branches till you reach a rock formation that looks like a 100-foot-tall bridge. Bring lunch for a picnic in a pasture just beyond the bridge if you have more time.

A short drive farther is a pullout on the road from which you can view Marakopa Falls. Beautiful and loud, but distant compared to what you'll see if you're planning a trip to Milford Sound on the South Island.

ROTORUA, NORTH ISLAND

A two-hour drive from Waitomo brings you to New Zealand's heavenly hell. Natural thermal activity has blessed this area with majestic geysers, simmering lakes and natural hot pools.

Rotorua also is center for the Polynesian culture of the native Maori people, as this is a stronghold where several tribes have banded together to preserve their heritage.

Don't miss the Whakarewarewa Thermal Reserve and N.Z. Maori Arts and Crafts Institute, dedicated to preserving the arts and crafts of the Maori through an internship program for their intricate wood-carving techniques. You'll have the opportunity to see artisans at work, not only at woodcarving, but also at weaving.

At the reserve you'll see the Rotowhio Pa, a fortified Maori village designed to protect its inhabitants from enemy attack. The meetinghouse, with its ornate wood carvings depicting legend and history, and a fearsome war canoe are highlights of the village tour.

Throughout the reserve you'll experience the unusual smells of thermal activity, the warmth of the ground, the bubbling of mud pools and the rumblings of geysers. The largest is Pohutu geyser, which spouts 60 feet high 10 to 25 times a day.

At the end of a tour through the reserve, you'll visit an active Maori village, where the people still cook food in natural steam from pits in the ground, and the children dive 30 feet from a bridge to collect coins tossed into a stream by tourists.

If you want a more intense and diverse experience of the thermal activity and its beautifully scarring effects on nature, take a half-day or day sightseeing walk through nearby Waimangu Valley.

Just over 100 years old, Waimangu is constantly changing and therefore is under careful observation, but the walkways safely guide you past the Waimangu Caldron, a simmering lake, on to colorful Warbrick Terrace, where algae and mineral deposits give a brilliant display of orange, brown, black, white and green colorings. You finally reach Lake Rotomahana, which is lined with steaming cliffs in excess of 2,000 feet tall, where you bojoy a buffet feast of traditionally prepared Maori food, but you'll also never forget the entertainment — a Maori concert featuring enchanting songs, twirling poi-poi dances, rhythmic stick games and audience participation in hokeypokey with the body parts sung in Maori.

After the hangi, get soaked at any one of dozens of natural hot springs.

QUEENSTOWN, SOUTH ISLAND

A flight from North Island to South Island brings you to this town on the go. This is New Zealand's mecca of activity — whether bungy-jumping, rafting, skiing, paragliding, trekking, flightseeing — although the superb setting of Queenstown, beside Lake Wakatipu and surrounded by mountains, is a draw in itself.

Crafts from kayaks to jetboats utilize the lake, but it is dominated by the elegant steamer Earnslaw — a cruise which takes you back in time to the early 1900s. The lakefront also is a gathering point for tour providers of other activities, as is the mall — a cobblestone central district lined with restaurants, pubs and retail businesses.

Don't miss this chance to take a thrilling 30-minute jetboat ride on Shotover River. The flat-bottomed boat is engineered so that it can maneuver with incredible agility in only inches of water. The result: Your driver races the boat through jade-green water, darting "dangerously" close to boulders jutting up out of the river and within inches of the jagged walls of the narrow gorge.

Passengers, about 10 per boat, feel the urge to duck as the boat speeds at up to 45 mph toward craggy overhangs, just to have the driver turn away at the last instant. The trip is topped off with several 360-degree turns that shower the boat's occupants with a fine mist of spray from churned-up river water.

The hottest Queenstown thrill, however, is bungy-jumping — which is diving off of a 140-foot bridge toward the raging Kawarau River with essentially a large rubber band tied to your ankles so that you finish upside down, bobbing under the bridge.

Crazy to watch, crazier to do! But people are lining up by the dozens daily at A.J. Hackett Bungy on the Kawarau bridge about 15 minutes out of Queenstown to take the leap.

For a more sedate daytime activity, don't miss the historical gold mining community of Arrowtown, about 10 minutes from Queenstown. Explore the shops and browse through the pioneer museum in this town of vintage buildings with tree-lined streets patrolled by a horse and carriage.

As a half-day trip from Queenstown, we hopped a scenic flight to Milford Sound on a six-seater aircraft. Flying at eye-level to rugged peaks lined with glacial formations, we saw them melt into thousand-foot waterfalls that crash down to form blue-green lakes pocketed away in rocky crags.

Milford Sound is part of Fiordland National Park, the largest park in New Zealand, and was formed by glaciers 20,000 to 30,000 years ago. Icy fingers of water lace through mountains toward the Tasman Sea, forming a serene water maze. Its peaks range to nearly 6,000 feet tall, rising straight up from fiords that are, on the average, 1,000-feet deep.

We took an hourlong tour on a cruise boat, which allowed us to see four of the sound's 10 permanent waterfalls and various wildlife, including seals and dolphins.

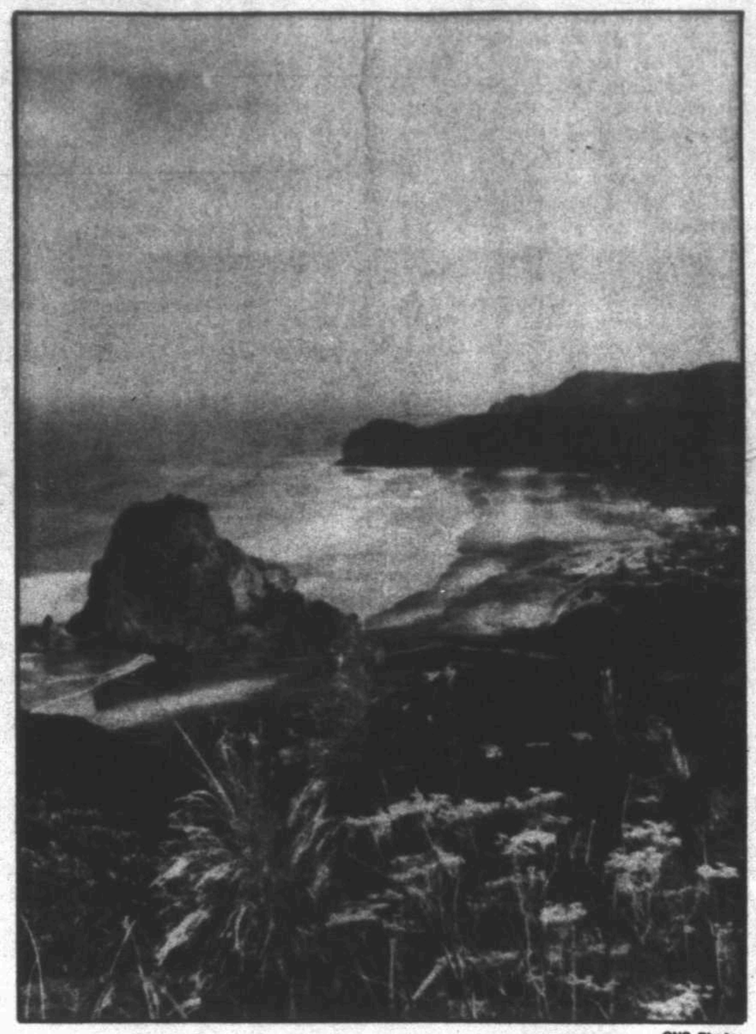

DUNEDIN, SOUTH ISLAND

A four-hour drive from Queenstown through historic gold-mining territory brings you to the architectural glories of the town of Dunedin. Founded by Scots in the 1840s, this is a city of history featuring finely preserved brickwork mansions, stone spires and cast-iron lacework.

Walking tours guide you through the architectural adornment, beginning at the Octagon — an eight-sided garden from which radiate the main streets of the city. Don't miss the gingerbread of Dunedin's Railway Station, the 160-foot spire of the First Presbyterian Church, the Gothic charm of the clock tower at the University of Otago, which is New Zealand's oldest campus.

Of the many museums, art galleries and historic mansions in the area, two are not to be missed — Olveston and Larnach Castle.

For culinary connoisseurs, don't miss tours of the Cadbury chocolate factory and Speight's Brewery — both offer samples of their wares.

Thrill-seekers 'take the plunge' in Waitomo

By Gregg Achatz
Copley News Service

All I knew about the adventure I was about undertake was that I had to squirm into an already wet and chilly wet suit, then head off on a short hike, squeeze myself through a cave opening and jump into a subterranean river with nothing but an inner tube for flotation.

The reasonable response probably would have been no, I wasn't sure, but in retrospect, I'm glad I was able to suspend reason for a while.

My adventure began in the quiet New Zealand village of Waitomo, about two hours south of Auckland, New Zealand, and led me 200 feet under the earth to experience a relaxing, peaceful, yet thrilling view of a part of Mother Nature one rarely considers.

Waitomo's caves have been explored for more than a century, as the town's Museum of Caves can attest through its excellent displays explaining how caves are formed and chronicling the study of Waitomo's caves.

Yet only within the last few years have adventurers added an exciting twist to this exploration. At the museum, you can sign up to journey with expert guides on a two-hour black-water rafting trek through a world of stalactites and stalagmites, narrow passages, rushing water and glowworms.

Groups of 10 adventurers are driven in a van to the caves area, where they are fitted with wet suits and miner's hats. After donning this subterranean regalia, the travelers embark on a 10-minute van ride and 10-minute walk to the entrance of Ruakuri Cave, where they are issued inner tubes.

The cave is accessed via a hole in the earth barely large enough to fit through. Once the group is within the glistening walls, it's time for an introductory session to the caves and a few last-minute instructions from the guides, with good-natured joking to watch out for eel attacks and falling rocks.

From there, the underground trip begins. Floating in an inner tube through these pitch-black channels, where the only illumination comes from the miner's cap, is just plain fun. As I float along, bouncing off fellow trekkers with my inner tube, I notice Mother Nature's beauty all around me — stalactites crying tears that drip into the water, stalagmites reaching from the floor of the cave to its rugged ceiling.

But the best part of the trip is yet to come. After floating along for what may have been 20 minutes, the tour guides stop us and instruct us to sit in our inner tubes and form a human chain, attaching our feet to the tube in front of us. Once all is secure, we are told to disconnect the lights in our miner's caps.

CNS Photo

Suddenly, an entire new world is presented to us. What until now had been brownish-gray cave ceilings are transformed into a fluorescent speckled show. In the darkness, the luminescence of thousands of glowworms, which spawn in these caves, is in full view. The sight is reminiscent of stargazing away from the influence of city lights, but even more intense. The members of the group relax back in their tubes as the guides steer us through caves whose contours they know perfectly.

After the glowworm viewing, lights are turned back on and the trip is nearly over. It's a short inner tube float down the creek, which emerges from the cave to the drop-off point. From there, it's back into the van for the return ride to the museum area, where hot showers are available.

Once dressed, one might expect that the experience is over. Not exactly. We are in New Zealand, which means hospitality is everywhere, including the Waitomo caves. The group is invited back to the kitchen, where everyone is served a typically New Zealand snack: pumpkin soup and toast.

Steiff bears popular collectibles

By Linda Rosenkrantz
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

When a Steiff teddy bear sold for the sum of $88,000 at Sotheby's last year — beating the previous record by $68,370 — it made headline news, focusing attention on both this enduringly endearing consummate stuffed animal itself and on the German firm that produced it.

The founder of the company had seemed, at first glance, an unlikely candidate. Margarete Steiff had been disabled by polio at the age of 18 months, and was confined to a wheelchair for the rest of her life. After working as a seamstress for several years, she opened a small felt factory in 1877, making underskirts and other articles of clothing.

Finally, in 1880, she made her first toy — a small felt elephant, following a pattern in a magazine. She continued making a few toy animals as a sideline to the felt business for several years, until her brother Fritz encouraged her to expand her menagerie — the elephant was joined by a monkey, donkey, horse, camel, pig, dog, mouse, cat, rabbit and giraffe — setting up a mail-order business that soon flourished. The enterprise, strengthened by the input of several of her nephews, continued to grow.

AND WHEN did the teddy bear enter the picture? As early as 1892, "soft-filled bears for small children" were being offered by the firm. In 1902, movable joints gave the animals considerably more flexibility. A representative of the George Borgfeldt & Co. department store in New York, seeing the Steiff bears at a fair in Leipzig in 1903, led to their invasion of America. Nephew Franz Steiff brought them to the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair, where — now made of light-colored mohair plush — they were a great success, and that year the firm sold 12,000 bears.

Teddy, of course, was named in honor of then-President Theodore Roosevelt. The association began in a 1902 Washington Post cartoon that depicted Roosevelt refusing to shoot a little bear cub. The Steiff bear was first nicknamed Teddy's bear and then, in 1906, the Teddy bear. Almost instantly, the Americans adopted the Teddy as a mascot, not only played with by children, but also becoming a fashion accessory for stylish women who would dress him appropriately to accompany them on shopping expeditions.

Two new books tell the Steiff story in greater and lesser detail. "Button in His Ear: The History of the Teddy Bear and His Friends" by Jurgen and Marianne Cieslik has been translated from the German and published by Theriault's (P.O. Box 151, Annapolis, Md.), as both a regular 264-page edition (at $105) and in a limited, signed and numbered edition that features a Steiff button, a special protective sleeve and a record of "Teddy Bear's Picnic" (at $175).

ALTHOUGH THE price is steep, this book is both an invaluable reference tool and a delight to look through. There are more than 800 beautifully reproduced color and black-and-white photos and a mass of documentary data — luckily for the arctophile, the Steiff family were meticulous record-keepers and diarists.

And Teddy was just part of the picture. Considerable attention is also given to the other products of the Steiff factory — the innovative Roloplan kite, designed by Richard Steiff (who also fathered the Teddy bear), Roly Poly toys, many animals on wheels and countless character dolls.

A particularly interesting feature of the book is the 10-page Collectors Service section, which includes a color-illustrated list of material used, an explanation of the complex Steiff numbering system and extremely useful analyses of specific bear and doll characteristics and markings.

The second volume, "Steiff Toys Revisited" by Jean Wilson (Wallace-Homestead Book Co., Radnor, Pa., 176 pages) is, at $18.95, a book of a different — paler — color, but is also of value to the collector. Especially useful are the chronicle of Steiff toys auctioned over the past five bear-boom years, a list of limited editions with current market prices and reports on the Festivals of Steiff through 1989.

Linda Rosenkrantz edited Auction magazine and authored five books, including "Auction Antiques Annual." Write Collect, c/o Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, Calif. 92112-0190.

Family's refuse finds shelter in junk drawer

By Erma Bombeck

As my daughter, the neat freak, tugged to free a stuck drawer in the kitchen, I reached in and expertly removed a church calendar that held it immobile. The drawer slid out easily.

Bombeck

She gasped as she viewed its contents. "How long did it take you to put together a drawer like this?"

I looked at the array of eclectic junk, from screwdrivers to birthday candles. "I have to apologize," I said. "I've been throwing things in this drawer for only seven years. The one at the old house was great! I tossed stuff in there for 15 years. Now THAT was a catch-all drawer!"

My eyes proudly took in the VFW poppy, old lottery ticket, Christmas tree bulb, plastic packets of ketchup from McDonald's, poker chips, corn holders, pruning shears, a recipe for Cajun chicken, and a telephone number written on a blank check.

"How can you find anything in here?" she persisted.

"That's the point of a catch-all drawer," I said. "An item is never lost — it's just never really found."

You show me a woman who does not have a junk drawer and I'll show you a woman who launders her lint. I grew up with these drawers. My grandma had one of the most impressive catch-all drawers I have ever seen. Hers came with a warning. Every time you opened it to look for something, her voice would come out of nowhere, "Don't hurt yourself!" It was like an arsenal: old razor blades rested innocently by a ball of crochet thread, rusty pins burrowed under roach traps, and paring knives were buried among buttons that never matched anything and keys that never fit anything.

My mother's junk drawer wasn't as large as Grandma's, but it was more creative. Hers held empty cardboard spindles that at one time held ribbon. She had rolls of pennies that she was going to check someday to see if she had one worth a thousand dollars. She kept piles of coupons that had expired years ago and jar lids that she hung onto after the jars to them had broken. There was a pile of warranties for appliances that had died of old age and a booklet of Christmas carols for the piano. We didn't own a piano.

I have tried to uphold the family tradition of the catch-all drawer. The family has been supportive, occasionally throwing in a watch that doesn't run anymore or a half-stick of gum that hardens and crumbles.

I told my daughter, "I'd like to bequeath all of this to you, but you have to amass your own." She was probably more upset than she let on.

Vacationers reluctant to leave New Zealand

By Sharon Achatz
Copley News Service

A trip to New Zealand is going to leave you disappointed — not in the scenery, nor the attractions, nor the people, but in the realization that no matter how much time you arrange to spend in this South Pacific nation, it will not be enough.

From rain forest hiking to geyser-watching, from flightseeing to bungy-jumping, from jetboating to historical touring — we tried to fit in as much as possible during a recent 10-day trip. We raced from city to city with an itinerary that would have made the most neurotic schedule-freak proud. But still, we left wanting more.

And, despite the hectic pace, we could not help but get caught up in the calming influences of the clear cool waters of Milford Sound, the enchanting tales of the native Maori people, the relaxed lifestyle of this island nation.

For the record, New Zealand actually is made up of three islands — the North and South islands and tiny Stewart Island off its southern tip. And, for the record, this is not like Hawaii or any other tropical paradise you may imagine.

This island nation is big — twice the size of Florida — and diverse. Sure, you've got your breathtakingly beautiful rain forests with deafening waterfalls and golden beaches standard to any tropical paradise.

But you'll also find craggily majestic mountain peaks that house glaciers year-round. And starkly arid plains laced with turquoise-blue rivers panned for gold. And angry, mineral-stained earth hissing up natural steam and shooting up 50-foot-tall geysers.

Of course, you have to travel around to experience this diversity, but travel within New Zealand is a breeze, whether you select airplane, motor coach or rental car. If you drive yourself, be prepared for some confusing yet laughable moments, as you'll be driving on the left side of the road.

Here are city-by-city highlights of our recent tour.

AUCKLAND, NORTH ISLAND

The nation's largest city with a population of about 1 million, Auckland also is a city of water. Located on a thin finger of land sandwiched between two bays, it offers pristine air, bracing breezes and sailing opportunities galore — which helped earn it the nickname City of Sails.

One of the first impulses you feel in Auckland is to get out on the harbor, one way or another. Take a lunchtime cruise on the million-dollar catamaran The Pride of Auckland. Hop a ferry over to the quaint village of Devonport for dinner. Rent a catamaran and head out on your own. Experience Kelly's Tarlton's Underwater World, where you'll walk down the world's largest acrylic tunnel for underwater viewing of sharks, stingrays and other assorted sea creatures. Or just hop in for a swim at Mission Bay, a popular inner-city beach.

To get a comprehensive overview of the city, drive to the top of Mount Eden, one of 60 extinct volcanic mounds dotted throughout the city. Now covered with intensely green vegetation, the mounds offer gently terraced hiking, which you may have to share with grazing sheep and cattle. You'll look out over Waitemata Harbour to Rangitoto, the last of the city's volcanoes to erupt, just 750 years ago.

For nightlife, check out pubs along the downtown harborfront or in colonial-style Parnell Village. Metropole's the hot spot for dining, and Rick's Blue Falcon is a hip place for happy hour, dinner and after-dinner jazz. Even in this metropolitan area, pubs often are not open on Sundays and usually close early by U.S. standards. Carefully check hours of operation in planning your days and nights.

While in Auckland, take a day trip to the Waitakere Ranges. You can stop for an informative walk at the Araraki Nature Trail to learn about the various plants and how a rain forest develops. You'll get a much better feel for the density of the forest, however, by taking any one of dozens of trails off the main road. Just look for a signpost, park your car along the road and go on a trek. Signs indicate the estimated duration of each trek, but even names such as Fairy Falls can do no justice to the scenery that will unfold.

Everywhere you look is some shade of green, some sort of plant. The brownish decay of the forest floor sends forth a chaos of green, from inch-tall ferns to 100-foot-tall Kauri trees. Interwoven branches and vines form an emerald ceiling to the walking paths, where you're not only surrounded by vegetation, you're also surrounded by the chirps, clicks and caws of insects and birds.

Your scenic drive through the rain forest eventually will take you to the black-sand beach of Piha. With strong waves and currents, Piha and other west coast beaches are primarily considered surfing terrain but provide challengingly enjoyable body-surfing and swimming for experienced swimmers.

WAITOMO, NORTH ISLAND

A three-hour drive from Auckland, Waitomo's big attraction is caves. The Museum of Caves has an interpretation center that explains the development of caves, their exploration and their inhabitants — including the glowworm, an insect that hangs from cave ceilings by the thousands, emitting a greenish glow.

To view the glowworms, you can take a 45-minute boat tour through the caves or go for the more daring option of black-water rafting — where you hike, jump off waterfalls and float in an innertube on the Huhunui Stream in a two-hour subterranean experience that lands you in a cave in the company of thousands of glowworms.

A short drive from Waitomo is the starting point for a walk to the Mangapohue Natural Bridge. This five-minute trek leads you into a mossy canyon, where you cross gurgling streams via swaying catwalk footbridges and duck under vines and tree branches till you reach a rock formation that looks like a 100-foot-tall bridge. Bring lunch for a picnic in a pasture just beyond the bridge if you have more time.

A short drive farther is a pullout on the road from which you can view Marakopa Falls. Beautiful and loud, but distant compared to what you'll see if you're planning a trip to Milford Sound on the South Island.

ROTORUA, NORTH ISLAND

A two-hour drive from Waitomo brings you to New Zealand's heavenly hell. Natural thermal activity has blessed this area with majestic geysers, simmering lakes and natural hot pools.

Rotorua also is center for the Polynesian culture of the native Maori people, as this is a stronghold where several tribes have banded together to preserve their heritage.

Don't miss the Whakarewarewa Thermal Reserve and N.Z. Maori Arts and Crafts Institute, dedicated to preserving the arts and crafts of the Maori through an internship program for their intricate wood-carving techniques. You'll have the opportunity to see artisans at work, not only at wood-carving, but also at weaving.

At the reserve you'll see the Rotowhio Pa, a fortified Maori village designed to protect its inhabitants from enemy attack. The meetinghouse, with its ornate wood carvings depicting legend and history, and a fearsome war canoe are highlights of the village tour.

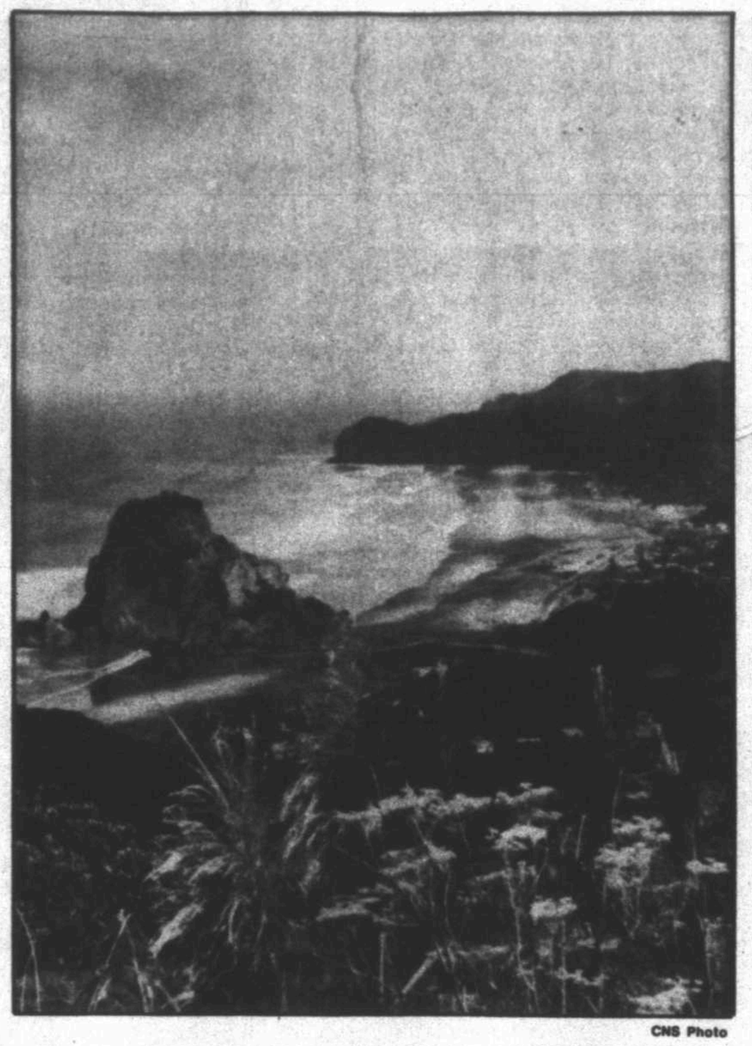

Throughout the reserve you'll experience the unusual smells of thermal activity, the warmth of the ground, the bubbling of mud pools and the rumblings of geysers. The largest is Pohutu geyser, which spouts 60 feet high 10 to 25 times a day.

At the end of a tour through the reserve, you'll visit an active Maori village, where the people still cook food in natural steam from pits in the ground, and the children dive 30 feet from a bridge to collect coins tossed into a stream by tourists.

If you want a more intense and diverse experience of the thermal activity and its beautifully scarring effects on nature, take a half-day or day sightseeing walk through nearby Waimangu Valley.

Just over 100 years old, Waimangu is constantly changing and therefore is under careful observation, but the walkways safely guide you past the Waimangu Caldron, a simmering lake, on to colorful Warbrick Terrace, where algae and mineral deposits give a brilliant display of orange, brown, black, white and green colorings. You finally reach Lake Rotomahana, which is lined with steaming cliffs in excess of 2,000 feet tall, where you bojoy a buffet feast of traditionally prepared Maori food, but you'll also never forget the entertainment — a Maori concert featuring enchanting songs, twirling poi-poi dances, rhythmic stick games and audience participation in hokeypokey with the body parts sung in Maori.

After the hangi, get soaked at any one of dozens of natural hot springs.

CNS Photo

QUEENSTOWN, SOUTH ISLAND

A flight from North Island to South Island brings you to this town on the go. This is New Zealand's mecca of activity — whether bungy-jumping, rafting, skiing, paragliding, trekking, flightseeing — although the superb setting of Queenstown, beside Lake Wakatipu and surrounded by mountains, is a draw in itself.

Crafts from kayaks to jetboats utilize the lake, but it is dominated by the elegant steamer Earnslaw — a cruise which takes you back in time to the early 1900s. The lakefront also is a gathering point for tour providers of other activities, as is the mall — a cobblestone central district lined with restaurants, pubs and retail businesses.

Don't miss this chance to take a thrilling 30-minute jetboat ride on Shotover River. The flat-bottomed boat is engineered so that it can maneuver with incredible agility in only inches of water. The result: Your driver races the boat through jade-green water, darting "dangerously" close to boulders jutting up out of the river and within inches of the jagged walls of the narrow gorge.

Passengers, about 10 per boat, feel the urge to duck as the boat speeds at up to 45 mph toward craggy overhangs, just to have the driver turn away at the last instant. The trip is topped off with several 360-degree turns that shower the boat's occupants with a fine mist of spray from churned-up river water.

The hottest Queenstown thrill, however, is bungy-jumping — which is diving off of a 140-foot bridge toward the raging Kawarau River with essentially a large rubber band tied to your ankles so that you finish upside down, bobbing under the bridge.

Crazy to watch, crazier to do! But people are lining up by the dozens daily at A.J. Hackett Bungy on the Kawarau bridge about 15 minutes out of Queenstown to take the leap.

For a more sedate daytime activity, don't miss the historical gold mining community of Arrowtown, about 10 minutes from Queenstown. Explore the shops and browse through the pioneer museum in this town of vintage buildings with tree-lined streets patrolled by a horse and carriage.

As a half-day trip from Queenstown, we hopped a scenic flight to Milford Sound on a six-seater aircraft. Flying at eye-level to rugged peaks lined with glacial formations, we saw them melt into thousand-foot waterfalls that crash down to form blue-green lakes pocketed away in rocky crags.

Milford Sound is part of Fiordland National Park, the largest park in New Zealand, and was formed by glaciers 20,000 to 30,000 years ago. Icy fingers of water lace through mountains toward the Tasman Sea, forming a serene water maze. Its peaks range to nearly 6,000 feet tall, rising straight up from fiords that are, on the average, 1,000-feet deep.

We took an hourlong tour on a cruise boat, which allowed us to see four of the sound's 10 permanent waterfalls and various wildlife, including seals and dolphins.

DUNEDIN, SOUTH ISLAND

A four-hour drive from Queenstown through historic gold-mining territory brings you to the architectural glories of the town of Dunedin. Founded by Scots in the 1840s, this is a city of history featuring finely preserved brickwork mansions, stone spires and cast-iron lacework.

Walking tours guide you through the architectural adornment, beginning at the Octagon — an eight-sided garden from which radiate the main streets of the city. Don't miss the gingerbread of Dunedin's Railway Station, the 160-foot spire of the First Presbyterian Church, the Gothic charm of the clock tower at the University of Otago, which is New Zealand's oldest campus.

Of the many museums, art galleries and historic mansions in the area, two are not to be missed — Olveston and Larnach Castle.

For culinary connoisseurs, don't miss tours of the Cadbury chocolate factory and Speight's Brewery — both offer samples of their wares.

Thrill-seekers 'take the plunge' in Waitomo

By Gregg Achatz
Copley News Service

All I knew about the adventure I was about undertake was that I had to squirm into an already wet and chilly wet suit, then head off on a short hike, squeeze myself through a cave opening and jump into a subterranean river with nothing but an inner tube for flotation.

The reasonable response probably would have been no, I wasn't sure, but in retrospect, I'm glad I was able to suspend reason for a while.

My adventure began in the quiet New Zealand village of Waitomo, about two hours south of Auckland, New Zealand, and led me 200 feet under the earth to experience a relaxing, peaceful, yet thrilling view of a part of Mother Nature one rarely considers.

Waitomo's caves have been explored for more than a century, as the town's Museum of Caves can attest through its excellent displays explaining how caves are formed and chronicling the study of Waitomo's caves.

Yet only within the last few years have adventurers added an exciting twist to this exploration. At the museum, you can sign up to journey with expert guides on a two-hour black-water rafting trek through a world of stalactites and stalagmites, narrow passages, rushing water and glowworms.

Groups of 10 adventurers are driven in a van to the caves area, where they are fitted with wet suits and miner's hats. After donning this subterranean regalia, the travelers embark on a 10-minute van ride and 10-minute walk to the entrance of Ruakuri Cave, where they are issued inner tubes.

The cave is accessed via a hole in the earth barely large enough to fit through. Once the group is within the glistening walls, it's time for an introductory session to the caves and a few last-minute instructions from the guides, with good-natured joking to watch out for eel attacks and falling rocks.

From there, the underground trip begins. Floating in an inner tube through these pitch-black channels, where the only illumination comes from the miner's cap, is just plain fun. As I float along, bouncing off fellow trekkers with my inner tube, I notice Mother Nature's beauty all around me — stalactites crying tears that drip into the water, stalagmites reaching from the floor of the cave to its rugged ceiling.

But the best part of the trip is yet to come. After floating along for what may have been 20 minutes, the tour guides stop us and instruct us to sit in our inner tubes and form a human chain, attaching our feet to the tube in front of us. Once all is secure, we are told to disconnect the lights in our miner's caps.

Adventurous folks take the plunge into black-water rafting at Waitomo, New Zealand.

Suddenly, an entire new world is presented to us. What until now had been brownish-gray cave ceilings are transformed into a fluorescent speckled show. In the darkness, the luminescence of thousands of glowworms, which spawn in these caves, is in full view. The sight is reminiscent of stargazing away from the influence of city lights, but even more intense. The members of the group relax back in their tubes as the guides steer us through caves whose contours they know perfectly.

After the glowworm viewing, lights are turned back on and the trip is nearly over. It's a short inner tube float down the creek, which emerges from the cave to the drop-off point. From there, it's back into the van for the return ride to the museum area, where hot showers are available.

Once dressed, one might expect that the experience is over. Not exactly. We are in New Zealand, which means hospitality is everywhere, including the Waitomo caves. The group is invited back to the kitchen, where everyone is served a typically New Zealand snack: pumpkin soup and toast.

Woman's Club luncheon planned

Twentieth Century Study Club will host the Midland Woman's Club luncheon Thursday. The event will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs (GFWC).

The theme for the centennial celebration is "A Past to Remember — A Future to Mold." Katheryn B. Steen of Marfa will review the book "Reaching Out" by Mary Jean Houde.

Ms. Steen is the Western District president of the GFWC/Texas Federation of Woman's Clubs. She is a University of Texas graduate and has taught mathematics at Marfa High School. Ms. Steen was nominated as Outstanding Secondary Mathematics Teacher in Texas. She has been active in Federation clubwork and the American Hereford Auxiliary.

Traditional items are must-buys

By Sharon Achatz
Copley News Service

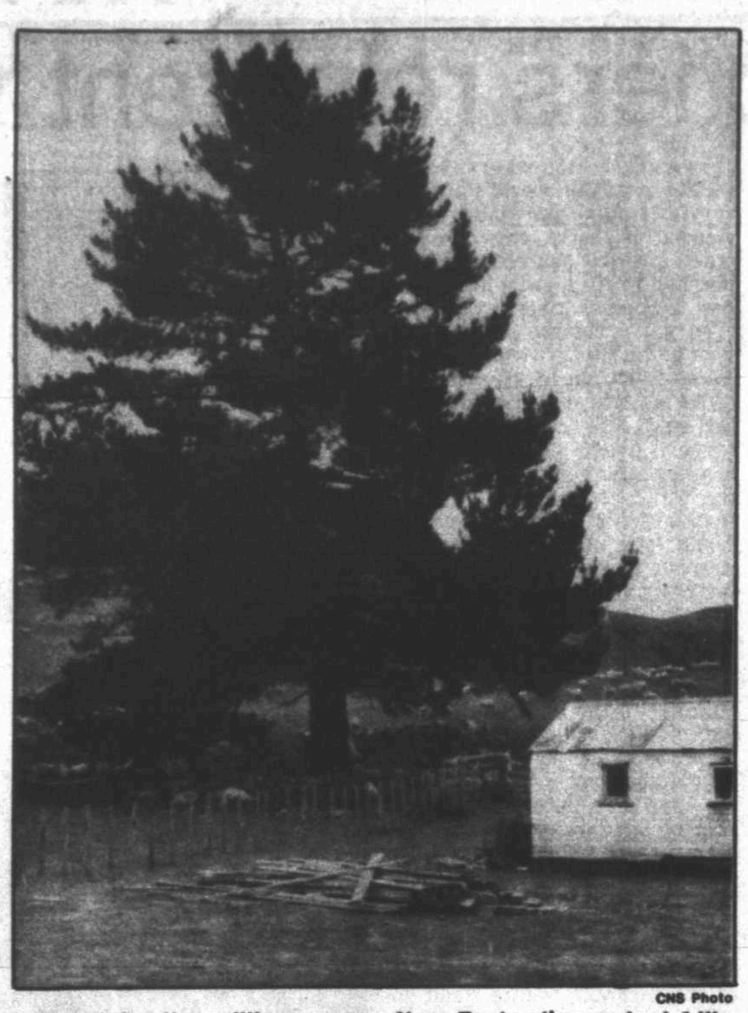

Souvenir-hunting in New Zealand is bound to please even the most jaded travel shopper. No need to compromise your tastes here for the sake of getting a souvenir that bespeaks the tradition of the nation. The agricultural and cultural wealth of this island nation offers such a diversity of delights that you'll be able to find something that not only suits your tastes but also is uniquely New Zealand.

If you're a traditionalist, you can't leave the country without some product derived from the nation's sheep industry — whether it be a sheepskin, a sweater or pure wool yarn.

If you're a jewelry fan, your options range from New Zealand's own jade, called greenstone, to less-expensive but stunning paua-shell ornaments.

For craft enthusiasts or budding sociologists, look to wood and bone carvings of the Maori, the native Polynesian people of New Zealand.

And if you literally want to bring home a taste of New Zealand, pack up some exotic foods and wines.

CNS Photo

Sheep by the millions grace New Zealand's verdant hills, making woll and sheepskin two must-buys when you visit that nation.

WOOL

Perhaps the easiest and least expensive way to bring home wool is in the form of pure wool yarn. Unless you are a knitter or weaver, however, you'll not find much use for your souvenir.

Look instead for a hand-knitted, bulky sweater to envelop you with memories of your journey — perhaps one with a design reminiscent of your favorite New Zealand adventure, whether it be yachting, skiing or a gorgeous mountainscape. You could go for an entire ensemble, with mittens and ski cap to match.

For an impressive display of a variety of yarn textures and colors, select a hand-woven rug. These vary in size and functionality from floor mats to innovative wall hangings — look for those created from home-spun yarn and colored with natural local dyes.

SHEEPSKINS AND LEATHER

The perfect year-round tactile treasure from New Zealand is a sheepskin. Warm in the winter and cool in the summer, these full-fleece rugs can be purchased as car-seat covers, floor rugs, mattress covers and baby rugs.

New Zealand produces some of the world's finest leathers and suedes, not only from sheep but also from deer and cattle. Clothing selections range from jackets and country clothes to belts, gloves or boots.

CRAFTS

Maori wood carving is an important expression of a relationship with the spirits of the land. In his carvings, such as teku-teku figurines or pou-pou panels, the individual artist tells traditional stories or depicts cultural symbols and genealogical lines.

The spiritual force of Maori carving is found only in pieces individually carved by initiated Maori carvers. Their cost is high and availability is limited — the easiest place to find them is at the Maori Arts and Crafts Institute in Rotorua. There are, however, inexpensive replicas available nationwide, which constitute attractive examples of this intricate and ancient skill.

Smaller items include pendants, hair combs, teku-teku figurines and clubs traditionally used as weapons. If you're willing to pay shipping charges, you can bring home a Maori legend on a large pou-pou panel.

JEWELRY

Greenstone, geologically known as nephrite, has a high monetary and traditional value. Once highly prized by the Maoris who used it for ornaments and weapons, it now is used primarily for jewelry.

Bone carving also derived from ancient Maori skills, and bone carved into traditional forms makes unique neck pendants and earrings.

The shell of the paua fish (abalone), shot with opalescent colors, is less valuable than either of the above-mentioned jewelry options, but its beauty appeals to almost all who view it.

BOOKS

One of the surest ways to buy well in New Zealand is to buy books. Not only do they provide a visual reminder of your travels, but they also fill in gaps in your knowledge, contributing to your understanding of the country and its people as you travel.

Plan on buying a Maori dictionary or a book of Maori legends — you'll be delighted with legends such as that of Ngatoroirangi, a navigator who was beset by a storm and freezing to death. He used an incantation to call his sisters to bring him warmth to save him.

His sisters heard his plea and departed from their homeland of Hawaiiki, carrying the warmth he required. They traveled under the oceans and under land, surfacing from time to time to check on their direction. At these areas, they left a little of their fire, which explains the origins of New Zealand's geothermal belt.

Because of its dramatic scenery, New Zealand produces a large number of excellent photographic publications featuring the landscapes, architecture, seascapes and faces of the country.

FOOD

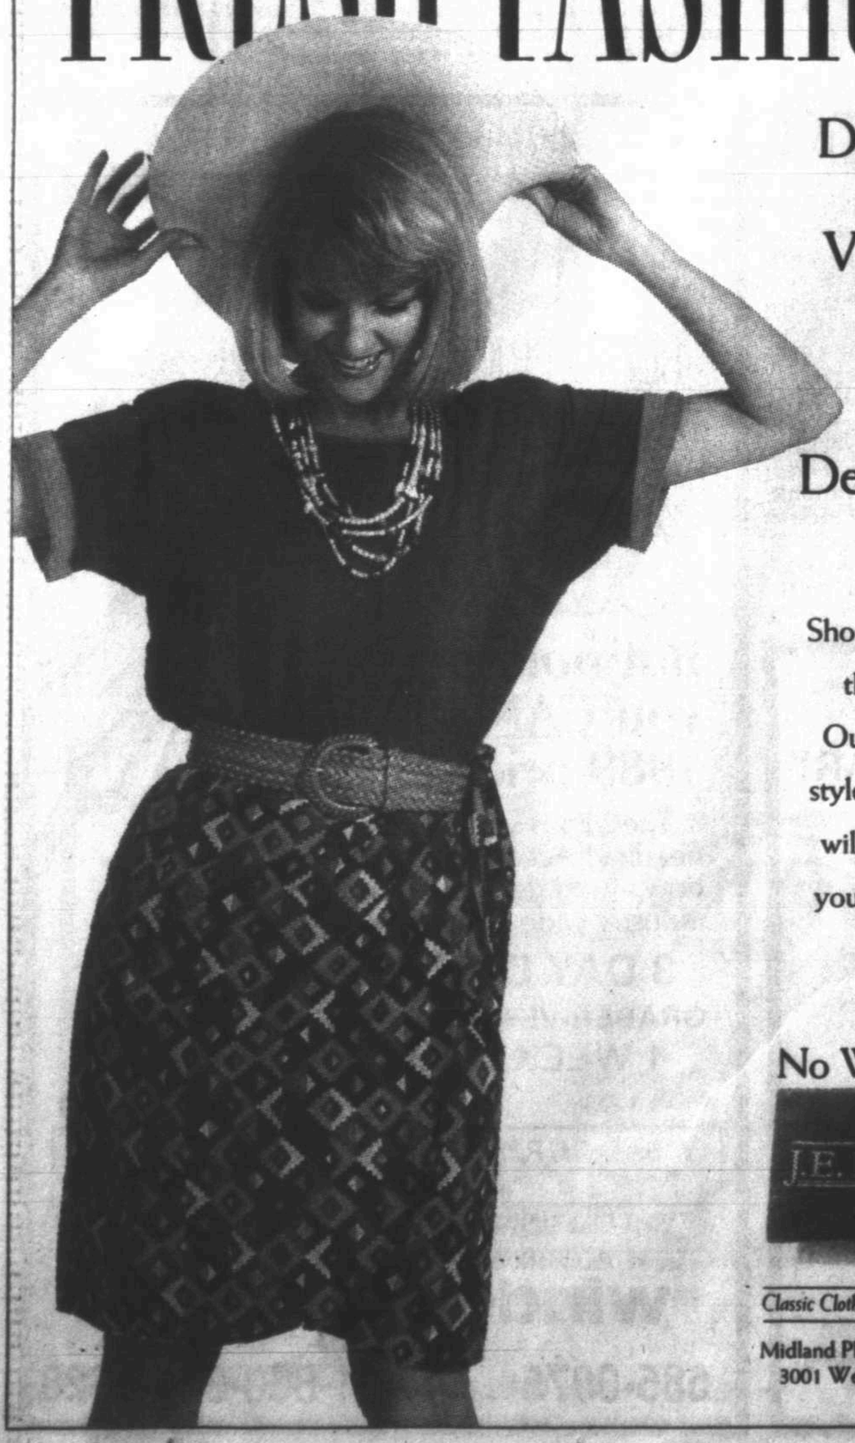

Perhaps the surest way to bring home a taste of New Zealand is to package up some of the local food.

Specialty shops can provide products such as venison, lamb, beef, oysters and scallops vacuum-packed, and frozen, ready to take with you. Ask prior to purchase if there are restrictions as to what you can bring into your home country upon return.

Processed foods such as local jams, chutneys, pates, smoked beef or honey do not need documentation to be brought into the United States. And they often are attractively packaged to make excellent take-home gifts.

Local wines also provide a real taste of the countryside. Although New Zealand is one of the youngest wine-producing countries, it produces some excellent world-class wines — mostly in the style of German whites.

Booming back

Texas real estate people, dazed after the debacle of the 1980s, are now daring to brag of a rebound.

The office market in the Northeast came back, so why not Texas, they ask.

"I really believe that great fortunes will be made over the next decade in Texas real estate to rival when Olympia & York made their big hit in New York in the 1970s," said Charles G. Dannis, president of Crosson Dannis Inc., a Dallas real estate appraiser.

Many large investors are in fact betting on Texas as Dallas and Houston, its largest cities, begin to fill the acres of office space built in the early 80s.

Only a few years ago, desperate developers offered months of free rent.

Now, the freebies are gone, vacancies are down, rents are up and buyers want in while buildings are still relatively cheap.

Bucking Boone

Pickens

Dallas investor T. Boone Pickens Jr., turning to antitrust laws to beef up his attack on monopolistic practices in Japan, says Japanese auto parts suppliers have told him their country's markets are designed to exclude U.S. competition.

"We went to auto parts manufacturers in Japan and asked them to respond about the keiretsu system," Pickens said. "They said it was real and they did not like it. They said it knocks our companies out so that they can't compete."

Japanese auto makers and parts suppliers may violate U.S. antitrust laws through "keiretsus," Japan's system of corporate cross-ownership, members of Congress say.

Pizza ad

ATLANTA — Best-known for his Pepsi commercials and as the scriptwriter for the baseball movie "The Natural," Phil Dusenberry is the man behind a new Pizza Hut commercial called "Right Field."

As the viewer sees the kid make the great catch, shocking his teammates and winning the day, the commercial ends with the tagline: "As a proud sponsor of Little League Baseball, Pizza Hut welcomes all the kids who make it great."

Monthly sale

AUSTIN — The parent company of Texas Monthly magazine is selling book publishing and marketing rights of its Texas Monthly Press subsidiary to a Houston-based publishing company.

Gulf Publishing Co. of Houston also is buying the rights to the Texas Monthly name used on the 30 field guides and other guidebooks published by Texas Monthly Press.

Businesses find literacy fundamental to bottom line

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

This past February, teams from 10 Midland corporations participated in a fund-raising event, the First Annual Corporate Spelling Bee.

The event, which raised more than $6,000 for Midland Need to Read, underscored a growing awareness by local businesses that now, more than ever, illiteracy affects not only the person who can't read but the corporate bottom line.

Patti Groce, executive director of Midland Need to Read, says local businesses have been very supportive with funding, encouraging employees to volunteer, and offering office space for tutoring sessions.

Currently, she says, 126 are in the program and adds that there are other illiterate adults in the area, "it's just getting them to come forward. People tend to be secretive, to keep their problem within the family."

One student, who definitely is not secretive, is Petra Costillo, a cafeteria worker at Lamar Elementary. She has been with Need to Read for a couple of years, joining because she wanted to improve her reading skills.

The daughter of migrant farm workers, she said she would enroll in school, then leave, then return. "It was very hard to keep up that way."

Her tutor is Dottie Whitehead, an administrative assistant at a law office. She volunteered, she says, because she has always loved to read and because she has a daughter with a learning disability. "I thought it would be a way to better understand her problem and a way to help others," she explains.

Statistics show that one out of every five adult Texans is illiterate and approximately 15 percent of Midland County adults. Other statistics show that:

America's energy plan shaping up

■ After 15 public meetings and months of testimony, the long awaited National Energy Strategy is moving closer to reality and may offer some surprises when finaled.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The long awaited National Energy Strategy, a comprehensive document, that will attempt to assess America's energy needs and resources for the next 30 years is set to be debuted later this year, but is already generating much speculation about which directions it might or might not take.

McElwrath

While it is still too early to tell for certain what tact the strategy will take, Michael McElwrath, principal deputy assistant secretary for fossil energy in the Department of Energy, was able this week to offer a few "knowns" that will be included in the long range energy plan and some insight into how it will be formulated.

One of the knowns that will be included in the National Energy Stategy is a Department of Energy plan to expand oil and gas reservoir research in order to prevent the premature plugging of marginal oil wells. It is a tenant of the Strategy that is already underway.

"When it was learned that as much as 70 percent of our current oil wells could be plugged by the year 2,000, we knew we could not wait for consensus or analysis, but had to act immediately," said McElwrath, a former Midland lawyer.

He said DOE planned crash research on major reservoirs that stood the greatest potential for abandonment and an information network to get the technical information into the hands of operators as fast as possible.

"One plan is to have a network of 'petroleum extension agents' at the state level that could pass on information and

Self storage business booming with lifestyles

■ The self storage business is booming because of changes in American lifestyle. People are wanting more room in their homes for office space, multi-media rooms and exercise areas.

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

Moving from that big house to a smaller condominium will be nice. No more grass to cut, there's no need to worry about watering the shrubs or planting flowers, but what about all those prized possessions; Aunt Mable's antique desk or Grandma's brass bed. Will they have to be sold or given away just because there's not enough room for them?

Chances are they will go into storage. The changing and affluent lifestlyes of Americans are creating a boom in the self storage business.

According to the Self Storage Association, In the decade spanning 1977 to 1987, the weight of the typical family's personal property grew more than 20 percent.

In 1989 the average American owned four and one half tons of "stuff", not including their automobiles.

Both individuals and businesspeople are badly in need of additional working and living space, the association says. Self storage may be the alternative to overcrowded homes, apartments and offices.

"We have a real boom, from now until about June 1. People are storing everything, from antique cars to business files," says Pat Abbott, manager of Advantage Storage.

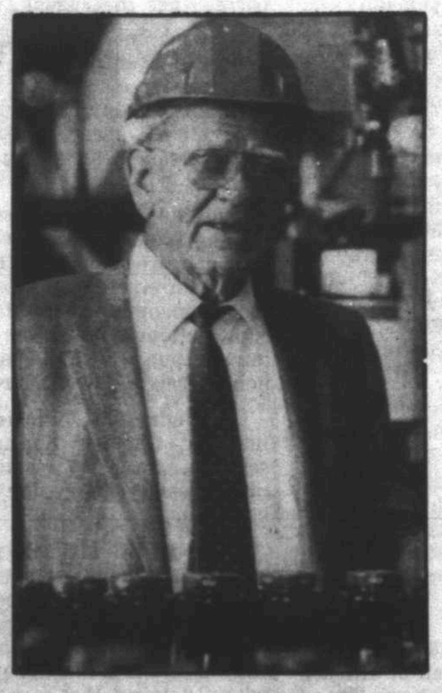

The storage association says people shouldn't be forced to give up cherished mementos, important documents or enjoyable hobbies because they have no room available in their small apartments or overflowing households.

Pace paves way with sauce

■ In more ways than one David Pace has actually set the "pace" when it comes to manufacturing a successful and spicy hot sauce to compliment the growing popularity of Mexican food.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — More than 40 years ago, David Pace threw together some peppers, onions and garlic, then shared it with his golfing buddies.

Millions of bottles of picante sauce later, his concoction is a staple in many homes, helping found a $317 million industry that has expahded American tastes, surpassing mustard and barbecue sauce and threatening ketchup as favorite condiments.

The 75-year-old patriarch of Pace Picante Sauce attributes his success to ingenuity, fresh ingredients and a little help from the booming popularity of Mexican food.

"I realized that a thing that would be good would be something new and something flavorful," said Pace, one of the first picante sauce makers. "People liked it."

These days people like it so much that the Pace Foods plant in San Antonio turns out 250,000 pounds of picante sauce a day, or about 600,000 bottles of its hot, medium and mild salsa.

But it wasn't always that way.

Pace ventured into the food business as a youngster, when his family in north Louisiana produced and sold syrup, jellies and candies.

After studying dentistry, playing college football, serving in the Air Force during World War II and working a brief stint at a San Antonio brewery, Pace decided once again to sell sweet things.

The choice was a natural, given his family background and, by virtue of his GI status, his broader access to rationed sugar. Pace acquired space in the back of an old liquor store, and he and his family made syrup, jellies and peppers.

When sugar was widely accessible again, a part-time employee of Pace's offered a family recipe for a hot sauce — picante is a Spanish adjective meaning biting, racy or highly seasoned — and Pace gave it a try.

The new sauce, not yet the red salsa Pace now sells, got a good reception. "I made some up and we really sold it," Pace said. But it didn't take over the marketplace immediately.

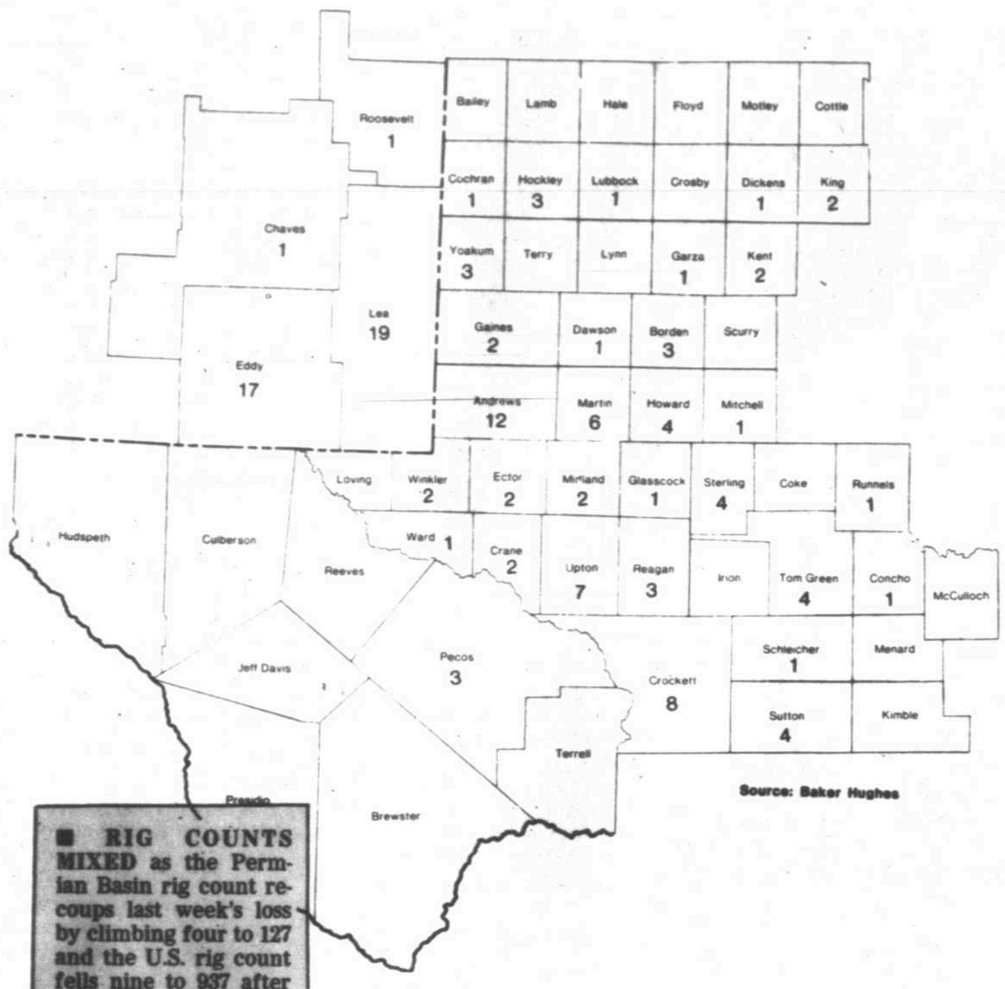

"There was a merchant over there in Corpus Christi who said, 'I'm going to buy it, but I don't think it's going to last,' " Pace now says with a grin. "Later on, he changed his tune on that."

The first day, Pace said, he peddled 20 dozen bottles. The next day he sold 30 dozen.

OPEC concerned as prices sag

PARIS — A number of OPEC oil ministers expressed anxiety Thursday at the sharp fall in oil prices over the last few days, hinting at the possibility of holding a special meeting to look into ways of propping prices up.

"Various options are being considered, including an urgent meeting of the eight-member ministerial monitoring committee and an extraordinary meeting" of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Sadek Boussena, Algeria's oil minister and the group's current president, said in a statement Thursday.

The organization is scheduled to hold a regular meeting of its 13 oil ministers May 25 in Geneva to discuss production and pricing policies for the rest of this year, and a majority of its officials appeared reluctant to meet before that date unless, they said, prices weakened much further.

OPEC officials cautioned that Boussena's suggestion of an earlier emergency meeting was intended mainly to reassure world oil markets the group was intent on addressing the recent weakness of oil prices.

Prices have fallen by about $3 a barrel since the end of March.

"The market has become worried by the reluctance of the key producers to curtail production," said Peter Gigoux, director of the international energy department at Shearson Lehman Hutton in London.

Leading OPEC producers, including Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq, appeared reluctant Thursday to call an emergency meeting of the group, opting instead for quiet consultations to rein in the group's total output, which topped 24 million barrels a day in March.

On Wednesday, Indonesia's oil minister, Ginanjar Kartasasmita, said an emergency meeting was not necessary before the May 25 gathering.

Many OPEC officials pointed out during their last meeting in March they fully expected prices to weaken in the second quarter.

"It has gone much further than they expected because they counted on demand that is not there and on a fall in supplies from independent producers that did not materialize," said Gary N. Ross, head of consulting services at Petroleum Industry Research Associates in New York.

The excess production has pushed the average OPEC oil price to about $15 a barrel, substantially beneath the organization's preferred target price of $18.

Oil traders said these were the lowest levels in 14 months for the group's crude.

At the close of the New York Mercantile Exchange, the largest energy market, the spot May crude oil contract settled at $17.78 a barrel, off 28 cents on the day.

Senior OPEC officials said Thursday the primary issue now was to cut back the high level of production by the group, which was described in this week's issue of the authoritative Middle East Economic Survey oil newsletter as "the highest monthly OPEC crude output registered since 1981."

The organization's official level of production, agreed to in November, is 22.1 million barrels a day.

'Brave New World of bonds' confusing

By Scott Burns

Burns

"It isn't over until the fat lady sings."

In the meantime, like watching Italian opera, you may need a program to understand what's happening in the Brave New World of bonds. Here are some windows for observation:

■ BONDS ARE (WERE) THE HOT NEW ISSUES OF THE EIGHTIES: There are good times to float new investments and bad times. There was a period in the late fifties, for instance, when many small companies issued common stock, only to crash in 1972. In the late sixties there was another such period: greed and hope were mixed to launch hundreds of new companies at extravagant prices. As the bull market climaxed in 1971, investment bankers joked about companies "not knowing whether to go bankrupt...or public." It happed all over again in the '82-'83 Technology Rush.

What happened to all those companies?

Many went bankrupt and disappeared. Some went private, buying in their equity shares at pennies on the dollar.

That may be what we are about to witness in the $200 billion junk bond market. Some excesses will disappear in bankruptcy. Other bonds will be bought back at pennies on the dollar. In the end, the high-yield junk bond market of the eighties will be a hot new issue market in disguise, with a large coupon replacing the "story" that sold high flying shares of common stock.

■ THEY MAY CALL IT A "RESETABLE, PAYMENT IN KIND, JUNIOR SUBORDINATED DEBENTURE"...BUT IT'S STILL A PROMISE: While the complexities of today's debt instruments can be mind numbing, it helps to remember that underneath all the words there is a promise. One party has borrowed money from another and has promised, in return to pay interest at specified times and to return the original money at an agreed upon time. The market value of the bond will rise or fall with the assessment investors make of the borrower's ability or intention to fulfill the promise.

It's that simple.

■ RETURN OF PRINCIPAL ISN'T NEARLY AS IMPORTANT AS MOST PEOPLE THINK: Ask most people what is important loans about loans and they will say, "getting my money back."

Not so. The most important book on bonds ever written is called "Inside the Yield Book" by Sidney Homer and Martin L. Leibowitz (Prentice Hall, $19.95) Originally published in 1972, this 200 page book was the cornerstone for prolific innovation in financial instruments that characterized the seventies and eighties.

The most important lesson in the book is that the return on a bond (or any sum earning interest), is composed of three parts:

The return of the original investment, the interest earned and the interest on interest.

Of those three, the LEAST important is the return of principal. Yes, I know that's hard to believe. So consider an example. Suppose you invest $1,000 in a 20 year bond earning 8 percent. At the end of 20 years you well have received: $1,000 in principal, $1,600 and $2,201 in interest on interest if you reinvest at 8 percent. What happens if you don't reinvest your interest at 5 percent, your interest on interest will be only $1,416. If you reinvest at 10 percent, it will be $3,232. What ever the interest rate, the SMALLEST part of your investment is the return of your original principal.

■ THE HIGHER THE INTEREST RATE, THE LESS IMPORTANT THE RETURN OF PRINCIPAL: Another way to analyze a bond is to break it into parts, a series of interest payments and a final principal payment. If you lend $1,000 at 8 percent interest and then discount each payment by 8 percent, the total value of all payments, in today's dollars, will always be $1,000.

But how much of that value is interest, how much principal, depends on the interest rate. Here is how the importance of the final principal payment changes as interest rates rise: At 0 percent, the coupons are $0 and principal is $1,000; at 5 percent, the coupons are $523 and the principal is $477; at 10 percent, the coupons are $769 and principal is $231; at 15 percent, the coupons are $886 and principal is $114; at 20 percent, the coupons are $943 and principal is $57.

Lend money at 5 percent and principal is almost as important as interest; raise the rate to 15 percent, and interest is almost eight TIMES as important.

■ IF PRINCIPAL ISN'T AS IMPORTANT AT HIGH INTEREST RATES, THE THING TO WATCH IS COUPONS: The junk bonds yielding 15 percent of your return will be superior to a U.S. Treasury obligation 8 percent even if you THROW AWAY the return of principal. Indeed, after 10 years of collecting coupons, your return on the Treasury...further coupons will increase the return over a Treasury.

Is the risk premium?

The extra yield to offset the risk of default high enough? No one knows. But at the current bond prices, some high yield bonds have got to be considered bargains.

■ EXCESSIVE BUYING IS BEING REPLACED BY EXCESSIVE SELLING: Since last fall, net redemptions of junk bond mutual funds have grown from a small trickle to a torrent. Worried investors, watching the decline in net asset value of their shares as the junk bond market disintegrated, rushed for the exits. According to Investment Company Institute data for February, high yield bond funds suffered $410 million in net redemptions. Between redemptions and lower bond prices, high yield bond fund assets have declined from $34.8 billion to $24.9 billion in the last year.

It remains that the most appropriate concern for fund holders is whether or not their interest payments will continue. Will they? It depends on two things: The business that generates the cash for interest payments. The legal environment. If major borrowers learn that breaking promises has no consequences or, worse, is a way for them to MAKE money, our court system will be notifying investors that the only safe investment is a coffee can or mattress.

Southland Life leaving Plano

PLANO, Texas (AP) — After a three-year stint here, Southland Life Insurance Co. will formally vacate its Plano headquarters in June, lay off more than 200 employees and move 80 employees to a Dallas claims office.

Brad Bradford, communications officer for GeorgiaUS, said an additional unspecified number of employees will relocate from Plano, north of Dallas, to Georgia in an ongoing consolidation of operations.

Atlanta-based GeorgiaUS acquired Southland Life in March 1989 from its parent company, American Brands Inc., for $440 million in cash.

For the past several months, GeorgiaUS has moved employees from Plano to Atlanta as Southland's operations were formally merged with its new parent.

Food Lion chain plans entry into North Texas

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — In a major westward expansion, Food Lion Inc. said this week it will open up to 40 stores and a grocery distribution center in North Texas next year.

The North Carolina-based company, one of the nation's 10 largest supermarket chains, plans to initially invest $100 million in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, a Food Lion executive said.

Food Lion, which operates 680 stores, is now negotiating for sites and plans to open the facilities during the summer of 1991, according to Spencer Storie, vice president of store planning and development.

The supermarket chain, which adheres to an everyday low price strategy supported by an aggressive buying program, usually forces competitors' prices to fall by at least 6 percent when it enters a new market, company officials said.

"Food Lion stores are what you would expect from a typical full-service supermarket except the frills," said spokesman Mike Mozingo.

The company operates 25,000-square-foot stores that are smaller than the typical supermarket. The no-frills stores do not offer specialty meat cases, deli-bakery counters or floral departments.

Permian Basin group plans annual measurement school

Staff Report

The Permian Basin Measurement Society will be holding its third annual Measurement School on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 24 - 25 at the Holiday Inn Center in Odessa.

The school will be held from 9 a.m - 4 p.m. on Tuesday and 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. on Wednesday. Exhibitor booths will be set up with information on oil and gas equipment. There are classes scheduled to address such topics as flow computers, Co2 measurement, gas meter calibrations plus several hand-on classes.

Registration is $50 per participant. For more information call 915-563-2256.

AP Laserphoto

By John M. Doyle

WASHINGTON (AP) — It happens every spring: the first robin appears, baseball players return to the diamond and Evelyn Y. Davis heckles corporate honchos at annual shareholders' meetings across the country.

She has exasperated Chrysler Corp.'s Lee Iacocca with unsought diet advice. Her diatribes helped convince Citicorp to limit shareholder questions to three minutes each. She once gave May Department Stores Co. Chairman David C. Farrell a $1,600 check and the warning: "David, please make sure your man is on time when he comes to hang my drapes. I'm a busy woman."

Several years ago, she nominated soft-porn actress Koo Stark — then romantically linked with Britain's Prince Andrew — to ITT Corp.'s board of directors to give the communications conglomerate "some much needed influence with the British royal family."

Since 1959 when she first stood — "shaking like a leaf" — to ask a question at an IBM Corp. shareholders meeting, the 60-year-old diminutive redhead with the abrasive high-pitched voice has been questioning, needling, cajoling, cursing and irritating corporate America's top guns in front of hundreds of other stockholders at about 60 meetings a year.

Moreover, the executives listen. They don't like it, but they listen because Evelyn Y. Davis has clout.

How much clout?

Well, for example, she got General Motors Corp., the nation's largest industrial company, to agree last month to adopt an anti-greenmail policy she'd been pushing since 1986 when the automaker paid $700 million to Texas businessman H. Ross Perot so he would leave GM's board of directors.

Greenmail, a play on the term blackmail, is a company's re-purchase of its own stock from a corporate takeover strategist or other unwanted stockholder at a price above the fair market rate.

Shareholder activists such as Davis complain that these payments are unfair and unnecessary expenditures made by executives more concerned with keeping their own jobs than increasing shareholders' dividends.

"Sometimes it takes that type of person or that type of approach to get management's attention," said Ralph Whitworth, director of United Shareholders Association.

"I think some of the things she has done have been constructive," said Whitworth, whose own group has advocated proposals it says are intended to keep management honest and responsible.

"It's unfortunate that management has been able to put in place the belief that anyone who gets up and asks a question at a meeting is a gadfly," he said.

Davis doesn't mind.

"A gadfly with a fortune," she reminded in an emphatic voice, still heavy with the accent of her native Amsterdam. "You know this stuff has made me quite wealthy," she said.

"But what I like too is this power that this gives me. The power — that's really what life is all about. It's all how you use it. It's better than being a nonentity. I couldn't stand being a nonentity."

Davis, however, is not just another eccentric, comfortably fixed senior citizen with a few shares of stock and time on her hands.

She's a millionaire a couple of times over, with small holdings in about 120 blue-chip companies ranging from the Big Three automakers to IBM, CBS Inc. and USX Corp.

The seed money came from some securities left by her late father and settlements from two divorces.

"My stocks are my children," said Davis, who is childless. "I sort of just fell into it."

Her early personal history remains somewhat of a mystery, and Davis is reluctant to talk about it. She emigrated to the United States after World War II and studied business administration at George Washington University, and said she honed her public-speaking skills with a $20 YMCA course.

From a tiny, windowless office in Washington's Watergate complex, she publishes an annual newsletter called "Highlights and Lowlights," sold only to top corporate executives, which she says earns about $250,000 a year.

"I started from nothing. The first few copies were maybe 20 bucks a copy. Now I get $260 a copy with a minimum order of two copies. Its only sold to chairmen of the board and presidents," she said. "I don't deal with flunkies."

The 20-page newsletter is packed with corporate commentary, social notes and eccentric punctuation that rivals Superman comics for the number of exclamation points — all vintage Evelyn Y. Davis, who says the Y does not stand for anything.

A sampling from the 1989 edition:

— "At one of the most important meetings of the year only ONE 'outside' director, the son of the founder, attended!!! Time Inc.!!!! This showed disrespect for the chairman, the stockholders and other attendees!!"

— "What happened in China was very unfortunate indeed, BUT business MUST go on as usual. As long as we have diplomatic relations with a country, we should continue to do business even with unpopular regimes!!!"

— "In Mexico City and Acapulco one STILL has to worry about the food and water. We were there once before in 1966!! With all the taxpayers' money that is going to Mexico, why not insist that it is spent on water PURIFICATION!!"

Despite her vociferous push for shareholder rights, Davis remains largely a loner, with no clearly defined political leanings. But she bluntly has distanced herself from shareholder groups pushing social resolutions such as South African divestment and sensitivity to the environment.

"After all, a company is there to make money, not to be socially responsible," she said. "That's for the government to do."

Davis' office is cluttered with letters, annual reports and some of the five newspapers she reads each day to keep tabs on her stocks as well as nearly 1,000 other companies.

Time proves widow was right not to sell company

Now revenues and market share are rising at Owen Healthcare

By Ruth Rendon

HOUSTON (AP) — Dian Owen refused to sell 14 years ago, preferring instead to keep and run Owen Healthcare Inc. after her husband was killed in a plane crash.

While some may have questioned the decision of the 36-year-old widow, who had no college degree and little management experience, time has proved her right as the company has seen revenues soar and market share climb.

"I could see the potential," said Mrs. Owen, now 49 years old. "Had I sold at that time in a distressed atmosphere, I would not have begun to have realize on a sale what the company was worth.

"And certainly not what it could potentially be worth. The potential was there," she said. "We had proven the idea worked. We had something of a track record.

"I was going to have to work for someone, so I might as well work for myself," said Mrs. Owen, who sold her family's Abilene home after her husband's death in order to pump more capital into the company.

Owen Healthcare, based in Houston, runs pharmacies for hospitals, an unheard of concept when the Owens founded the company in 1969.

"Hospital management companies were beginning to make an impact and were becoming known," Mrs. Owen said. "They were doing hospital management and we came in saying we do hospital pharmacy management. Many people had never even heard of the concept of contracting your hospital, let alone contracting your pharmacy."

She says hospital administrators then did not realize the revenue potential in their pharmacies.

"And quite frankly, if we had not had the good fortune to have a few people take a chance with us and let us truly illustrate the difference that we could make and to document that as we continued our sales efforts with other hospitals, of course, this could not have succeeded," she said.

Since she took over the reins when her husband was killed in an 1974 plane crash, Owen Healthcare revenues steadily have grown from $8 million in 1977 to $131.8 million in 1989 — a growth of 25 percent annually.

The company also has grown in size from 50 employees to 1,600, about half of them pharmacists. The employees own about 33 percent of the private company through a stock option plan.

Owen Healthcare is the largest hospital pharmacy management company, with contracts at 200 hospitals in 40 states, primarily in large urban areas. The company assists administrators in the struggle to control escalating medical costs in four areas: pharmacy management, materials management, healthcare centers and home care services.

'I was going to have to work for someone, so I might as well work for myself.'

Dian Owen,
owner, Owen Healthcare

Its size enables Owen Healthcare to purchase drugs directly from manufacturers at significant discounts. The company also trains its own pharmacists in a model pharmacy on top of the office building in southwest Houston that houses its corporate headquarters.

One of the suitors Mrs. Owen rejected was Medeco, a now-defunct hospital management company that provided 75 percent of Owen Healthcare business at the time.

Because of her refusal to sell, Medeco quit doing business with Owen Healthcare, providing Mrs. Owen with her first challenge.

In her first year at the helm, the company acquired 22 new agreements with hospitals, which was more than the company had previously, she said.

Owen Healthcare also enjoys a good reputation in the industry.

"We're just finishing a four-year contract at the end of month and have signed up for an additional four years," said Thomas R. Rice, administrator of Rosewood Medical Center in Houston. "They are very credible people. Very seldom do people keep contracts that long."

Rice, who had dealings with Owen Healthcare while at other hospitals since 1975, said Rosewood officials looked at other companies before signing with Owen four years ago, but "this time around we looked but never had any hard negotiations with anyone."

Larry Carter, administrator of Houston International Hospital, said satisfaction from other hospitals was one of the reasons his hospital decided to contract with Owen last year.

"We looked at a number of different companies but from the minute we walked in the door, they were very customer-driven," he said. "The communication was flawless. We felt very good with what they had to offer."

Although she would not sell out 14 years ago, Mrs. Owen said there have been discussions recently of selling shares to the public.

"Quite frankly I won't say we've stayed poised for that but I think that the company is so well run and so successful that at a given time should we make that decision it could be done relatively efficiently and effectively," she said. "And yes, I am looking at that right now, things that need to be done for the good of the company and the good of the employees."

He is available to provide professional legal services and counseling to help ease the financial burden of an unexpected injury.

LITERACY: New jobs require more skills

lost income, lost tax revenue, unemployment insurance, adult training and education, not to mention increased costs in crime, welfare and incarceration.

■ Texas ranks 47th in the U.S. in adult literacy.

■ Texas is one of six states where between 30 and 35 percent of the population lacks a high school population, ranking it 42nd in the nation.

■ More than 91 percent of all Texas prison inmates are high school dropouts.

Now, more than ever, American businesses must compete in a global marketplace and the jobs that are being created require more and more highly skilled, educated workers. The same holds true for Texas as it competes in both the U.S. and world economies.

Floyd Edwards, regional administrator of the U.S. Department of Labor's Employment and Training Administration, acknowledges that illiteracy is not a new problem.

"What is new," he said in a phone interview from his Dallas office, "is that there are no more jobs out there that don't require literacy skills. The jobs that don't require basic communications skills have gone the way of the dinosaur."

"(Illiteracy) is becoming an urgent problem, because we're heading into a labor shortage; we're running out of baby boomers," he explains. "It's a paradox because, while the rate of increase in the workforce is slowing, the number of new jobs is rising. We project there will be 23 million new jobs created between now and the year 2000. And that net gain will be in the service sector, jobs like paramedics, paralegals, computer technicians and operators."

America is going to be hard-pressed to compete in the world marketplace unless its labor force is properly trained. As Dr. Jerry Jones, chairman of the Business Studies department at Midland College puts it, "Either we reassess and redirect, or accept that we won't be as competitive as we once were."

The nation's illiteracy problem — and experts say it is one of the worst among industrialized nations — has many roots. Says Dr. Jones: "The list of people who can share the blame is lengthy."

Jones points out that Americans spend less time in school than any other industrialized country. "This means we have to be more efficient and effective, and I'm not sure we're doing that."

He adds that education's importance has been de-emphasized in recent years, and that education is no longer a joint effort of the schools and families, and that there's less motivation to learn or acquire a skill.

There are several remedies, he says, emphasizing that, first and foremost, children need to be motivated to learn. This, he says, can be accomplished by re-emphasizing education's importance and increased school-family cooperation.

"If there's no motivation," he states, "the greatest education system and the greatest expenditures in the world won't work."

He also points out that the current workforce should be evaluated and brought up to standard, and potential future problems be corrected. After all, he says, "We can't just write off today's workforce."

No, indeed, says the Department of Labor's Edwards, who cites the statistic that the federal government spends $4 billion on training a year, compared to the $200 billion spent by the private sector, training that includes remedial education. "We're on the beginning of a tidal wave of this," he says.

If corporations and the government can effectively battle illiteracy, Edwards says future workers have a bright future.

"What people don't realize is computers create new jobs — higher paying, higher-skilled jobs. With the diminishing workforce, we can actually realize our ultimate goal of good jobs for every man, woman and child. But they have to be skilled workers."

San Angelo firm is corporation of year

AUSTIN (AP) — Mother Frances Hospital of Tyler and GTE Southwest, Inc., of San Angelo and Irving were recognized by the Texas Association of Business at its annual awards luncheon.

The hospital on Thursday received the TAB's Business of the Year award in the privately held company division, while GTE Southwest won the award among publicly held businesses.

GTE Southwest, with approximately 8,800 employees, serves 1.4 million customers in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

According to the TAB, the telephone company has awarded 160 grants totaling $780,000 since 1983 to fund teachers' continuing education and last year contributed $230,000 to 45 United Way branches in its operating area.

The hospital's achievements, according to the TAB, included introduction of a mobile diagnostic heart van; completion of a 28-bed critical care facility; Health Fair; and community programs, such as stress management and smoke stoppers.

STORAGE: Unusual items, prized possessions stored

(From 1G)

"We have a lot of hobbies out here. People come out and work on their cars or refinish furniture. Those who live in apartments don't have garages so they use their storage unit as a garage. Businesses also store their files and work out of the units," Abbott says.

She noted that another reason people turn to self storage is when a family member dies. "Relatives pass away and the heirs don't have room in their homes to store all the furniture.

The Storage Association notes that self storage is a term applied to facilities which offer convenient, do-it-yourself, month-to-month storage space, at reasonable prices. Tenants can often drive right up to their unit, to which they alone have access (providing their own lock), for as long as they rent the unit.

Families and entrepreneurs cramped for space are finding out how self storage can actually create new space in their homes and businesses, storage professionals say.

Opal Mattlin, manager of Colonial Storage says the season for family storage is just getting started. "The season is coming, we're just picking up right now and will probably go until after schools out, but we have more businesses in the winter because we have a lot of people that store special things for Christmas," she says.

Mattlin notes that while many businesses use the storage facilites, there are still more individuals storing items. "We had one couple that went to China to teach school and they just stored everything, even their car."

Tom Canton, owner of Canton's Mini Storage says his 48 storage units are full now and usually stay that way. "I have some plumbers, electricians and painters that store their supplies here. They can work out of it anytime,seven days a week. We have lights and electricity," Canton says he rents more units to families than to businesses. "It's probably a 25 to 75 percent mix, but I do have one unit I rent to the Boy Scouts, to store their camping equipment."

Abbott says some storage units are rented from one month up to several years. "Two years is probably normal, but we have people who have stored here for seven years," Abbott said.

The Storage Association claims that mobility is a mojor factor fueling the need for self storage. The entire population pulls up stakes every six years.

POLICY: National energy plan shaping up assist operators in saving marginal wells," he said.

Another known that will most likely be in the energy document is the lack of a plan to stabilize oil prices through import fees or taxes.

"While we recognize the problem of increasing oil imports and our growing dependency on foreign crude, it is not likely the plan will call for some import tax," noted McElwrath. "It's impossible to get consensus on this issue — even in the energy industry."

McElwrath said the policy of formulating an energy plan would be a consensus building process. He said the first stage was to achieve a full range of input. "This we did with 15 public meetings in various parts of the nation and testimony from 385 expert witnesses," he said.

This input was released April 2 in what was called an interim document, and McElwrath said the next stage would be to let the public study the input document then make more comments.

"After the comments have been further distilled, we will then go to an inter-agency process to come up with firm recommendations. I think the nation will be surprised at some of the recommendations. They will be strong," he predicted.

At some point along the way, McElwrath said the President would become involved with formulating the policy with his own personal input.

(From 1G)

A popular Pace advertisement touts its Texas roots and pokes fun at Northern competitors. "New York City?" shout disbelieving voices on the commercial responding to where another picante sauce is made.

To locate the 15 million pounds of fresh peppers Pace Foods needs each year, workers in the Pepper Products division follow a 2,000-mile trail of jalapeno harvests in the southwest United States and Mexico. They also look to Florida and California during the off-season.

Although Pace himself still promotes the company he founded, in 1982 he sold the business to his daughter and son-in-law, Linda Pace Goldsbury and Kit Goldsbury. Company officials declined to disclose the amount of annual sales at the private firm.

To honor Pace's contribution to the food industry, the Texas Food Processors Association plans to induct him into its Hall of Fame April 12, citing his contribution to the state's food industry.

"He's one of the originals," said Al Wagner, executive director of the association.

In the coming months, Pace Foods plans to introduce a new variety of picante sauce known as "thick and chunky."

But perhaps the best marketing tool Pace Foods has is its founder, who eats some of his creation almost every day. Pace said he prefers the medium sauce, which he eats on eggs, hamburgers, in soups and as a spice with "most everything I have."

Demand grew, but then some Pace sauce spoiled as it sat on store shelves waiting to be sold. That prompted Pace to do away with the oil he had used to saute the ingredients.

Pace continued experimenting, often using his golf- buddies for taste testing. He brought corn chips and six to eight bottles of hot sauce along to his golf games. Afterward, while his friends snacked, Pace observed which samples they devoured and which they left alone.

"They were my guinea pigs," Pace said. "They got to the point where they'd go, 'Hey, where's the picante sauce?' "

Hearst names new chief operating officer

Staff Report

Gilbert C. Mauer, 61, executive vice president of The Hearst Corp. and president of Hearst Magaznes Division, has been named chief operating officer of the parent corporation. Big Oil tries to clean its image in Alaska

By ROB TAYLOR
Hearst News Service

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A recent oil industry ad in the Homer (Alaska) News reminded readers of Alaska's oil-based prosperity and urged people to speak up for the industry.

"Face the facts," it said. "Four of every five Alaskans feel that oil development is good for Alaska."

A few days later, ads appeared in response. Paid for by a group of Homer residents, they branded the industry message as "misleading and offensive." The Homerites asserted that most Alaskans oppose oil industry development unless it is "proven responsible."

A year after the Exxon Valdez accident blackened their image, oil interests are struggling to regain political dominance in Alaska. But they are finding that the stain of 10.8 million gallons of crude oil is almost as hard to scrub from their logos as from the Alaskan coastline. They have made progress, but they have a long way to go.

Today, the oil industry faces the threat here of higher liability and tougher regulation. Its hopes of opening a sensitive new area of the North Slope to drilling have been put on hold. And it faces skeptics where its statements were once accepted on faith.

"People in Alaska are sadder but wiser," said Ernie Piper, an assistant to Gov. Steve Cowper. "They are going to demand deeds, not words."

Regardless, the industry is investing heavily in public relations. Image-burnishing ads blare from Alaskan TVs, radios and newspapers. Arco Alaska Inc. is sending every high school in the state applications for new, richer, college scholarships.

In tiny towns such as Cordova, previously haughty Alyeska Pipeline officials are buying their critics drinks and dinners. In Juneau, deeper ranks of better-paid lobbyists prowl the state Capitol.

In its recovery bid, the oil industry has mounted at least three different ad campaigns.

Arco has televised misty-eyed scenes of old Alaskan Natives, farmers, scenery — and an occasional oil rig. Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. has painstakingly detailed its environmental safeguards. And the Alaska Oil and Gas Association placed newspaper ads urging the "quiet majority" to stand up for truth and the oil industry.

Aside from its public relations campaign, the industry has made huge investments inspired by the spill.

Exxon Corp., owner of the ill-fated tanker that bore its name, has spent more than $2 billion on oil cleanup and related expenses.

The Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., caught unprepared when the spill occurred, has brought in about 30 miles of oil boom and new skimming gear. It escorts each tanker with two tugs, and is spending freely to fix corrosion in its 800-mile pipeline and improve pollution control.

Skeptics question whether Alaska can ever tightly regulate Big Oil.

Last winter, the state's Department of Environmental Conservation curtailed its Prince William Sound beach monitoring for lack of money. Local department officials were holed up in their offices — housed free in an Exxon Corp. building in Valdez.

Meanwhile, money was no impediment to Exxon, whose helicopters and vessels continued to prowl the sound's beaches, gathering data.

Some department employees worried that the contrast in resources would handicap them in the debate over this year's cleanup work.

"That's what happens," complained one worker, "in a state where almost everything is paid for by the oil industry."

'People in Alaska are sadder but wiser.'

Kreskin offering his gift

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

ESP — extra sensory perception — is a way of life for The Amazing Kreskin.

For more than 30 years, Kreskin has entertained and intrigued audiences worldwide by introducing them to the unusual powers of the human mind.

"I am sharing in an extravagant way a great joy I have in life, a zest to demonstrate and have them experience the fascinating phenomenon of mental communication with the idea that they will leave with just as much excitement as if they had heard an opera or a concert or a rock show or a comedy show," Kreskin says in a recent telephone interview.

"I'm always hoping that I get this across. I can't get it across by saying, 'Well, if you've seen this you'll understand. I don't have a point of reference except myself. I 've made it my own art form, and I've walked in my own shoes and beat my own drum."

Kreskin considers his audiences more than spectators.

"They are sitting as people that are involved. That, to me, is kind of rare in show business."

The mentalist brings his full evening, one-man show to Midland's Chaparral Center Saturday. Showtime is 8 p.m.

Tickets, priced at $16, may be purchased at the center. The performance is sponsored by Chaparral Center in cooperation with KTPX Channel 9 and KODM FM-98. For more information call 685-4584.

He has been described in non-show-biz terms as an ultra communicator.

"This is an intuitive phenomenon in which I involve psychological principles in order to sensitize myself to people so I can pick up their thoughts," Kreskin says.

Kreskin also gambles on his own abilities by risking the fee for his performances. He asks to have his check hidden anywhere on the premises. If he fails to find it, he forfeits his fee. Some of the more elaborate attempts have included cooking the check into the stuffing of a turkey, sewing it into a tablecloth and suspending it in a chandelier.

Thus far, in more than 6,000 performances, he has failed to locate his check only nine times. Kreskin says he will retire this test if he fails a 10th time.

In addition to appearing on more than 500 television programs, including 88 times on The Western works

Richard Mason finds himself surrounded by bronzes. These pieces are among those in the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library's annual art show and sale, set for Saturday at Midland Center.

Haley library's place in history

Lincoln County, New Mexico territory, late 1870s. Fueled by greed and corruption, an incident erupts into bloodshed and dishonor and leaves in its path death and devastation.

Open violence begins with the murder of rancher John G. Tunstall. Billy the Kid and other outlaws take a leading part in the fighting, which history records as the Lincoln County War.

"That was a strange conflict," says Richard Mason. "By the time it was finished, it was impossible to distill who was right and who was wrong. Everybody wound up with hands of blood.

"Beyond that Billy the Kid became memorialized in a Hollywood style reputation and became a type of folk figure in the American West.

"You find this with Western history. In the end, simple incidents become involved myths. There's this big West in people's minds that's timeless based upon simple values that people find attractive that translate easily in venues like motion pictures or dime novels and capture the public's imagination."

Three significant collections on the Lincoln County War exist. Of those collections, one is in Midland.

"What makes ours valuable is its totality," Mason says.

The collection, which includes information on all the characters involved, attracts people from as far away as Great Britain, says Mason. A recent book published by the University of Nebraska Press on "Billy the Kid," which was a national selection for the History Book Club, was based primarily on materials found here.

Midland?

One of this city's institutions — the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library — is due a higher local profile. Mason has been hired to achieve this goal.

"It's really one of the best kept secrets, unfortunately, in Midland," he says. "It's a credit to the community and actually enjoys a larger reputation outside the community among historians than it does within the city.

"Some of the unique things that are here that you cannot find anywhere else on the face of the earth include the interviews Mr. Haley compiled beginning 60 years ago with buffalo hunters, trail drivers, cowmen and a host of frontier characters both good and bad. We probably have in our files the material for 20 books awaiting someone with initiative, perseverance and creativity to come write.

"In addition, we've got 16,000 books on all phases of the cattle industry, Texas history and the Southwest. It's ideal for a rainy afternoon; it's a good way for some armchair adventure into the past."

Also, the Haley Library is a week away from its major yearly fund raising event.

"This reportedly is the fourth largest event of its kind in the United States," Mason says. "This represents our ideal of service because we're able to bring to the community high quality art work from across the United States both for sale and for viewing."

The 12th annual art show and sale begins with a 6 p.m. preview Saturday at Midland Center, Main Street and Wall Avenue. The event features work by more than 50 artists, including Clark Hulings, Glenna Goodacre, Veryl Goodnight, Wayne Baize and Wayne E. Wolfe. Admission is $50 per person.

Since "a lot of the patrons at the art sale come from out of town, in a sense a lot of our

'Lear' crowns season

— King Lear. Act I, Sc.4, 310-311

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Shakespeare's tragic view of mankind unfolds on the Globe Theatre stage as "King Lear" plays the fool Thursday through Saturday for the final production of the 22nd annual Odessa Shakespeare Festival.

The production, which is staged by the University of North Texas, features Clyde Butter as guest artist. Butter, owner and general manager of KRIL radio, 1410 A.M., is a member of the 1990 Globe resident acting company.

His opportunity to play Lear came about by surprise. The story starts a year ago when Butter was asked by the Globe's director to bring a cutting from Shakespeare for "A Little Evening of Shakespeare."

"I had a piece of Shakespeare that I had done previously," Butter says. "I brushed it up. The director seemed rather impressed with it."

This director recommended Butter to Robert B. Culp, chairman of the Division of Dance and Drama at North Texas, when they were discussing what production North Texas would bring to the Odessa Shakespeare Festival.

"Dr. Culp mentioned that his university wanted him to do something challenging like 'King Lear,' " Butter says. "And he didn't know how he could do that. He didn't have anyone to play King Lear. The director told him, 'Well, we have someone here who can play King Lear.' "

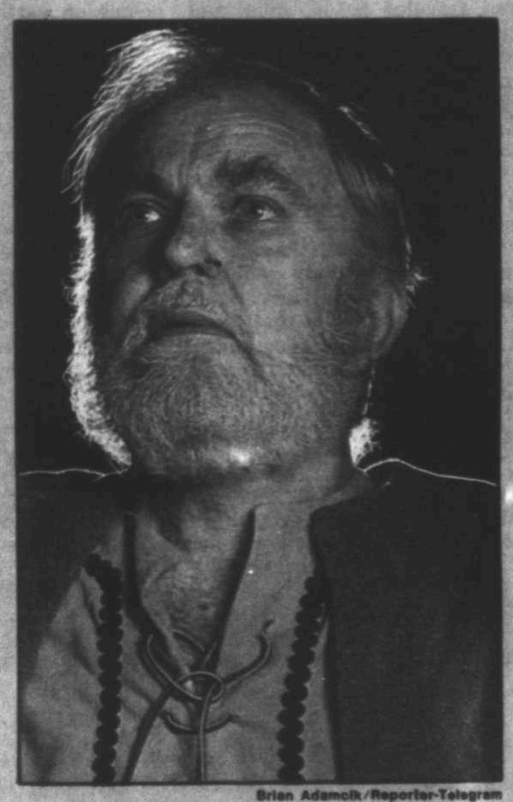

Butter's first time on stage, he recalls having "great tenseness and great nervousness and great excitement." Those feelings haven't changed much during the years, at least not on opening night. He knows he is facing his greatest challenge Thursday when the curtain rises on "King Lear."

"All of my previous theatrical experience has led up to this epitome of acting roles. There's probably not a more challenging acting role than the part of Lear, his moods are absolutely mercurial — all the nuances and mood changes. To get all meanings Shakespeare has written into it it is an enormously exciting and challenging undertaking."

Butter began preparing for this role by studying the play and seeing every production he could find on video.

"It doesn't mean that I am copying what

'Overnight success' story a bit familiar

Patty Loveless comes to the Permian Basin Friday to open George Strait's 8 p.m. concert at Ector County Coliseum. Her "overnight discovery" story started with a songwriting job at age 14.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The road to becoming Nashville's newest overnight discovery stretches more years than a decade into the past for honky-tonk angel Patty Loveless.

Ms. Loveless was born Patty Ramey 32 years ago in Pikeville, Ky. From the time she watched her sister sing at a small jamboree in Fort Knox, Ky., when she was 8, she knew what dream she wanted to make her own.

"I just saw what it did, and it made me feel good," Ms. Loveless says in a recent telephone interview. "This is what I want to do — get up in front of people and sing. And by the time I was 13, this is what I did."

She credits her brother, Roger Ramey, who is 10 years older, with giving her the "little push" she needed to be "on the stage doing the things that" she "wanted to do."

The daughter of a coal miner, like her cousin Loretta Lynn, Ms. Loveless had moved when she was 10 with her family to Louisville, Ky., where her father could receive needed medical treatment. The summer she was 14 her brother took her to Nashville, where they walked into Porter Wagoner's office. By this time, Ms. Loveless had written 30 songs.

"We spoke with his secretary, and she pretty much got Porter to come out. I played some songs for him. He was impressed. For some reason, he took to both of us. He asked us to go over to the television taping of his show." Dolly Parton was appearing with him at the time.

"We went to the taping and met Dolly, and we all became friends," says Ms. Loveless, who opens the George Strait concert at Ector County Coliseum Friday. Tickets may be purchased at Endless Horizons.

A year later, Ms. Loveless signed a publishing deal with the Wilburn Brothers. They signed her as a staff songwriter for their Sure Fire publishing company and as a replacement for their departing female singer — Loretta Lynn, who was leaving to pursue a solo career.

Ms. Loveless was 16. She spent about three years "kicking around Nashville like a lot of people here in Nashville do — trying to write, trying to get demos, and it just didn't happen. Maybe I didn't give it enough time."

Shortly after her high school graduation, she married Terry Lovelace, the drummer who played for the Wilburn Brothers when they were on the road. Patty since changed the spelling of the name.

KRESKIN: He hears from early backers

(From 1H)

Tonight Show alone, Kreskin will be seen by viewers in late October in a one-hour special, "Kreskin's Amazing Mysteries." Produced by MCA Television, the special serves as the pilot for a planned weekly series in which the mentalist explores mysteries which conflict with rational explanation.

He doesn't test his mental abilities over the phone.

"It's hard to do it on the phone. There are rare occasions, but it's hard. I need to really get a feel for them.

"If I can see someone 1,000 feet away at the other end of the stadium, I probably could do something, but I need the whole of them. I like to really pinpoint things and get more accurate. I can do it to a degree but not to a degree that ever satisfies me."

When Kreskin is in front of an audience, 'it's a super-charged situation.

"I have a few minutes to amass that audience into a single mass personality. Audiences take on moods, take on personalities. I have to harness it so they can be with me and they can be part of me so that what I am doing with them is going to work."

Although telepathy is hard to put "into a definitive structure because we know so little about the phenomenon," Kreskin says he thinks his talents are more common than generally realized.

"Dr. Margaret Mead used to call me a sensitive because in the old days in Europe people who showed telepathic ability were considered sensitives. I think it's much more common than people realize, and I think it's often experienced by individuals when there's an intense emotional crises."

He cites as examples, the mother who knows when her son is in trouble and the family member who know a tragedy has befallen a loved one who is a great distance away.

"I have amassed hundreds of such anecdotes from people who have written me," Kreskin says. "I just have to feel that telepathic phenomenon, while it is a part of my life, it seems so unique to people, but I think it's more common."

He credits the lack of closeness among humans and the noise level in our worlds with being responsible for people being out of touch with their psychic abilities.

"You're not as sensitive when you are being over-blasted or over-intensified. It would be like being hit with tremendous bright light, your senses become dull because you have to protect yourself from the onslaught.

"So kids protect themselves by going partially deaf. It's a shame because we're not as tuned in to each other as we once were. People don't feel the feeling of others in modern society. Of course, they don't touch as much in the American society as they would in the Latin society and the Spanish society and the Italian culture."

Kreskin also feels some adults stifle children.

"Sometimes people stifle kids who are highly imaginative and creative in their thinking. And certainly if a kid came along and said, 'Gee, I'm trying to tell you what you are thinking. I think I can do it,' some parents would say, 'Oh, come on now. Let's not play games.'

"We shouldn't really discourage kids. At least in childhood kids don't know the rules, they don't know limitations. Let them wait a little longer before they find out they can't do such things.

"I was fortunate as a kid. As many people as tried to discourage me, there were others who were so fascinated with what I did they encouraged me."

To this day, Kreskin receives a nice letter from Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," about every two months.

"I always read that kind of literature when I was a kid. I didn't pay attention to the negative comments made to me."

Had he not held onto his positive perspective, Kreskin says he would not have made it.

"I would have been stifled because nobody's a self-made man. I am not self-made.

"I had no teachers. No one taught me to do what I did, but from third grade to ninth grade, certain teachers in my homerooms were so enamored with what I did that they set aside about 15 minutes a week for me to practice on fellow students.

"One teacher, Miss Galloway, who was my forth and sixth grade teacher, has amassed everything she could on me. She's with us today; she's still living in the town and writes to me once in a while. These people were supportive. If someone is supportive, then you didn't do it by yourself. You had help along the way."

The roots of Kreskin's theories concerning ESP and telepathy can be traced to a simple childhood game.

While playing a game of finding a hidden object in response to verbal hints of "hot" or "cold," Kreskin discovered hidden objects could be found without verbal communication, provided those who hid the object also concentrated on its location.

Kreskin began performing when he was 11. From his early experiments, he arrived at an idea which forms the cornerstone of his career today.

"In most cases, the phenomenon of though transference can be explained as a kind of hyperaestesia — an almost unconscious raising of one senses to a degree far exceeding one's everyday feelings."

Kreskin says his deep belief in what he does kept him from answering Mike Wallace's remark on "60 Minutes," when the program did a segment on Kreskin.

Wallace said, "I don't know whether to call Kreskin an entertaining scientist or a scientific entertainer."

"I've embraced both of them," Kreskin says. "And done something that no one really felt would be conceivable — take a unique phenomenon and make it a theatrical phenomenon."

SINGER: Brother gave her backing she needed

(From 1H)

"When the Wilburn Brothers weren't working, we had to keep on working. We would stay on road sometimes five weeks at a time.

"I got married at 19. I ended up moving to North Carolina with him. We played a lot of the late night clubs to keep working — speakeasies. We started at 11 and played to 6 o'clock in the morning."

Ms. Loveless was grateful she and her husband stayed in the music business, but the kind of music they were playing changed.

"For a period of almost seven years, I did a different form of music — pop and rock and roll."

She had moved to North Carolina in 1976. A decade later, she would find herself back in Nashville, her marriage over. Again, her older brother would talk his way into a Music City office.

In 1986, MCA Records, after signing her in July of 1985, produced her first album "Patty Loveless," which yielded two Top 40 country hits — "After All" and "Lonely Days, Lonely Nights" and praise from critics as the "most promising new female vocalist."

"We had been recording ever since '85, and finally I got a band together in the summer of '86,' she says. she laughs. "It took a little while to get things rolling."

Ms. Loveless, who says it took two years to be recognized for who she was in Nashville, credits her video, "If My Heart Had Windows," with helping the public put "a face with the music."

Since the release of her second album, "Honky Tonk Angel" in the fall of 1988, she has received the Best New Artist award in the American Music Awards country category and Star of Tomorrow honors from the Music City News Awards.

"People are always saying, 'How do you go about choosing songs?' In the beginning, it was pretty hard to me. Now, I go on what my heart feels, trust my own judgment. If this songs feels good to me, somebody is going to feel the same way I felt when I actually heard the song myself."

At this time in her career, her dream is twofold.

"I want security in my life. That's one thing that I do worry about. I think it comes from watching my parents struggle so much trying to raise seven children. Security is the number one thing.

"And I guess mainly I just want the music to be successful. It pleases me more than anything anybody could possibly buy me to know people are enjoying the music. It makes me feel good."

Ms. Loveless, the first female country artist to be chosen to endorse Justin Boots, also wants a platinum record.

"If I ever have a record to go platinum — that is my main goal right now — because it's so hard for women in country music to sell. I would be on cloud nine. I could die tomorrow and feel that I've done something."

LIBRARY: Mason works on image

funding is provided by individuals from out of the community," Mason says. "We're always been fairly low profile in approaching the community for funds, although we receive no state or federal monies. About a third of the sale price actually goes to benefit the library's operating fund."

The art in the show ranges from detailed and historically accurate replicas and paintings to those executed in a contemporary Southwest style. For more information or an invitation call the library, 682-5785 between 9 a.m. and noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The work will hang at the library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., for a month beginning April 23.

Hired this year as the Haley Library's director, Mason has spent 10 years working as a field representative for the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech University.

"I had done 500 taped interviews, traveled 100,000 miles and acquired several million pages worth of manuscript donations for Texas Tech when I received a phone call from the Haley Library board."

While at Texas Tech, Mason was finding and collecting material for the archives. His job here is almost reverse.

"A lot of the material has been collected, but is not very frequently used," he says. "So we're wanting to let people know that it exists. We're wanting to come up with methods to attract them to Midland to utilize what's already available."

His schedule is busy. He is married to Penny Mason, communications administrator for Texas Instruments who works weekly in Midland and Lubbock, and they are the parents of two daughters, Laura, 5, and Emily, 15 months, who live in Midland full time.

In addition, he is working on the first book in a series entitled "West Texas Images" to be published by Texas Tech University Press. He is collaborating on the project with Ashton Thornhill, associate professor of photography at Texas Tech. Mason writes the text, which is focused on West Texas style themes. Thornhill takes the pictures.

Mason has lived in Midland before. From April through October 1979 he was a feature writer for the Midland Reporter-Telegram. He left Midland with the goal of working at Texas Tech for 10 years.

"I'm probably one of the few people on earth able to make a living through an interest in history. In fact, collecting and compiling history has always been high adventure."

Mason remembers when he was first made aware that history is about people not facts. He was a sophomore at Sycamore High School, Montgomery, Ohio.

Then when he went to Ohio University at Athens, graduating cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree, he received an assignment to read six months of a daily newspaper. The newspaper had been published in 1906.

"There was the San Francisco earthquake happening day by day before my eyes," Mason says. "It was much more interesting to read those accounts as they were happening than to have to read about the earthquake in a published history. There's nothing more interesting than the story of people. And basically history is the story of people over time."

The primary source has always been the most intriguing when dealing with history, Mason says. "And we've got a library full of it."

For example, no one knows for certain what happened to Billy the Kid. Pat Garrett claimed to have killed him.

"There's no reason to doubt Mr. Garrett's claim," Mason says.

And yet there are other claims.

"It was claimed that he (Billy the Kid) actually lived in Hico, Texas and passed away in the late 1950s. But, who can say really? The alleged Billy the Kid in Hico denied it all his life until shortly before he died. Then he ceased to deny it. He didn't say one way or the other at that time.

"Of course, we'll never know. But, certainly it's an intriguing possibility.

"Westerns and our Western heritage become sort of the archetype for the ideal American — someone simple but of strong values, self-sufficient and generally benevolent towards the downtrodden. The cowboy really ends up as a chivalric ideal."

Gun, knife, coin show planned

JUNCTION — The fourth annual Kimble County Gun, Knife, Coin and Indian Artifact Show is set for April 21 and 22 at the Coke Stevenson Center, on Highway 83 one mile north of Junction.

The show will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days. Admission is $2 per person. Children under 12 will be admitted free when accompanied by their parents.

Exhibitors include dealers, collectors and hobbyists from Texas and surrounding states. About 80 trade tables will be set up inside where visitors can buy, sell or trade their modern or antique guns, Indian artifacts and knives.

"Following the dramatic increase in the price of guns in the last three months, the gun show provides an excellent opportunity to find just the right gun at just the right price," says a release from the event's sponsor, the Junction Rotary Club and the Kimble County Senior Citizens Foundation.

This year's show hopes to have items of interest to the growing number of archery enthusiasts.

In addition, a two-day flea market will be held in conjunction with the gun show. No admission is charged for the flea market.

National Geographic photos displayed

HOUSTON — The Museum of Fine Arts, Houston presents "Odyssey: The Art of Photography at National Geographic" on view from May 27 - August 19.

The works in the presentation date from the 1880s to the present and are the exotic, mysterious, visionary photographs from all over the world that made National Geographic an educational and cultural institution. The images chosen for the exhibition were selected from among the hundreds of thousands of images in National Geographic's vast photographic archives.

The variety of the photos in the exhibition mirrors the vast scope of the magazine. There are portraits of American hobos, Cambodian monks, and African warriors; photographs of underwater hippos, tropical fish, African flamingos; penguins, sharks, plow horses, and miniature insects; and scenic shots of such places as Bangkok, Brazil, Madagascar, Australia, Antarctica, Uganda, USSR, and even the moon.

The exhibition commemorates the National Geographic Society's centennial anniversary, which began publication in October 1888 as a scientific journal with no photographic illustrations.

Over the next 100 years, the magazine introduced black and white photos into its format and later became a pioneer in the development of color photography. The magazine was also a forerunner in promoting photojournalism and underwater photography.

Poems sought for contest

Creative Endeavors of Independence, Kan., is accepting entries for its second annual Spring Poetry Competition.

Entrants will be eligible for more than $200 in prizes including the $50 first prize.

An individual may enter up to three original poems on any topic. Poems will be judged on originality, sincerity and artistic appeal.

No entry fees are charged; however, a self-addressed, stamped envelope must be included with entries. The entrant's name and address must be placed at the top of each page of poetry.

A separate category is offered for children age 12 and under. First prize is $10. Children's entries need to include their age and the signature of a parent or teacher verifying the poem as an original work.

Entry deadline is April 30. Entries are to be mailed to Poetry Contest, Creative Endeavors, Rt. 2, Box 73A, Independence, Kan., 67301.

High's work at gallery

The art of Timothy High is on display through May 17 at Gallery 1114.

The graphic work of Tim High — color pencil with enamel drawings and serigraphs — is notable for its polish and striking technical accomplishment. In the vanity Fair series, High used the carnival as metaphor for contemporary life.

High received his bachelor of fine arts degree from Texas Tech University and his master of fine arts from the University of Wisconsin. He is an associate professor of art at the University of Texas at Austin.

His works are in the collections of the Art Institute of Chicago, the Brooklyn Museum and the museums of fine art in Boston and Houston.

In addition, Gallery 114 has several prints by Dianne Kuzyns of New York. The prints focus on the Chaparral cars, designed by Jim Hall.

Gallery 1114 is a contemporary artist's co-operative. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Family Concert planned

Tickets are on sale for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Family Concert April 28 at Lee High School.

"Entitled 'We Are All Ears,' this concert literally and figuratively will 'stretch the listener's ears' as we are challenged to 'hear through our mind's eyes and ears' while listening and watching numerous 'mini-capades' as brought to us by Maestro Don Th. Jaeger and the orchestra," says a release from the organization.

Tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $3 for students or senior citizens, may be purchased at Team Bank in Midland or at the symphony office, 3100 LaForce Blvd, Terminal. For more information on this concert, which is sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, call the Symphony Concert Line, 563-5269.

MCC seeking members

Midland Community Concerts Association has extended its membership drive to April 23.

The cost for a membership is $25 for adults and $10 for students through high school. The four performances included in the membership season are The Jose Greco Dance Company; pianist Lincoln Mayorga; Linda Maxey, marimba; and A Broadway Celebration, musical.

The first concert will be presented in November. Please mail checks to Community Concerts, P.O. Box 10836, Midland, Texas 79702.

A release from MCC says checks may be postdated through June. For more information call 694-7843.

Admission to all concerts is by season membership only. All performances are at Midland High.

The event features visual, performing, cultural and culinary arts. A Run for the Arts is scheduled April 28.

No admission is charged except for the Preview Night April 26. For more information on the preview call 1-806-763-4666.

Performing artists include Rita Moreno and the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra April 27 and 28. Dan Crow also performs those two days.

For more information call Russell Hughes, executive director of the Lubbock Cultural Affairs Council, Inc., 1-806-763-4666.

Literary contest planned

Five categories will be featured in prose as well as poetry for adult writers. Young writers are split into two age levels: young er writers through 12, and 13 through 18. Prose and poetry divisions have three categories.

For a copy of the contest rules, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to marianne McNeil, 7003 Amarillo Blvd., E., Amarillo, Texas 79107, or to Helen Luecke, 2921 S. Dallas, Amarillo, Texas 79103. Those needing the rules for young writers need to so state in their request.

Hours at the OC gallery are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Student art at UTPB

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin's annual Student Art Exhibition opens with a free wine and cheese reception at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the third floor gallery.

A variety of students' work from the past year will be on display, such as sculptures, ceramics, oil paintings, water colors, drawings and prints. The exhibit will be on display through May 14.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Mexico tour planned

A deposit of $250 is due Monday for the tour which includes round trip air fare through San Antonio, 14 nights accommodations at the Aristos Hotel and tuition for two weeks at the Instituto Allende.

Participants will have the opportunity to study with well-known artists who are a part of the resident colony of painters, craftsmen and writers from around the world. Classes are offered in painting, sculpture, batik, traditional Mexican weaving, drawing, printmaking, silverwork and textile designs. Students also are invited to visit the artists' studios and the bronze foundry.

Tour price is $995. The balance is due by May 15.

For more information call Laguna Gloria Art School, 1-512-458-8191 or Mary Paige Huey, 1-512-323-2817.

Astrodome opens

The opening of the Houston Astrodome, a glass-domed air-conditioned sports stadium, took place on April 9, 1965.

John Clement Trube 'castle' to be part of historic home tour

Staff Report

HOUSTON — For 100 years people have marveled at the "castle" in the shady Galveston Island neighborhood, a picture out of an ancient fairy tale.

This year, the 1890 John Clement Trube "castle" is among the private historic homes open for tour during the 16th annual galveston Historic Homes Tour, May 5 and 6 and 12 and 13.

Built by a Danish immigrant turned millionaire, the Trube Home was meant to resemble the castles of his homeland. Trube selected architect Alfred Muller to create the exterior with its gables, elaborate ornamentation and stained glass. The interior includes a guard's room.

Seven other private homes and three apartment spaces, recently created during the major restoration of the U.S. Appraisers Building in Galveston's Victorian business discrict, will be shown on the two weekends of touring. Ticket purchasers also will be treated to preview tours of the restoration-in-progress of the 1898 St. Patrick's Church, designed by Nicholas Clayton.

The massive Gothic Revival-style church was completed over a span of nearly 25 years, only to have the nave destroyed when the tower collapsed onto the church roof during the 1900 storm. Clayton's love for his parish is evident in his completion of drawings for the repair seven months after the devastating hurricane.

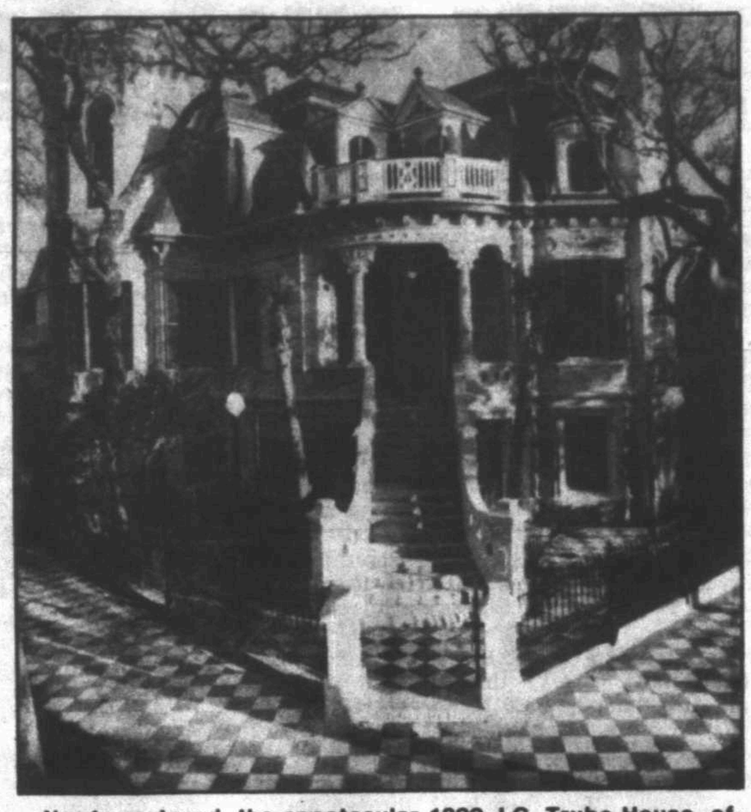

Trained docents at all sites on the tour will furnish visitors with accounts of the people who built these homes. More stories of heroism and survival will unfold at the 1888 Frederick K. Fisher Home. Here visitors will learn how the storm spared one small boy in a galveston family and how his legacy founded a park for orphans.

More information is imparted during the daily 1 p.m. lectures featuring preservation architect Killis Almond Jr., each Sunday, and landscape architect Nancy Volkman and quilting instructor Gloria Adriance May 5 and 12.

Free shuttle transportation serves the homes on tour, St. Patrick's Church, Ashton Villa, The Strand Visitors Center and the 1839 Samuel May Williams Home, the site of the Saturday lectures. Tour hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays and noon to 6 p.m. Sundays.

Historic Galveston Island is recognized throughout the country for its number and variety of 19th and early 20th century homes.

"Over 1,500 of these historic residences have been preserved, reminding us of a time past, or beauty and romance, of quality and tranquility," says a release from the Galveston Historic Foundation, the event's sponsor.

Newly restored, the spectacular 1890 J.C. Trube House, often called a castle, will be one of nine historic residences on tour during the Galveston Historic Homes Tour.

Galveston Historic Homes Tour tickets are available at the advance price of $12 each from Galveston Historical Foundation. Write to 2016 Strand, Galveston, Texas 77550 or call (409) 765-7834 or (713) 280-3907.

McRaney loses phony tooth

While Gerald McRaney was practicing a hand-to-hand combat training scene for "Major Dad," he lost a tooth, and producers went crazy.

In fact, they called a doctor, who wasn't needed since the tooth was a phony — part of a practical joke. (CNS).

LEAR: Actor's involvement began year ago

(From 1H)

they have done with it, but it is instructive to see what other great actors through the years have done with that part."

Also, Butter has found Culp's "guidance and suggestions enormously insightful and helpful."

Culp has produced or directed more than 100 plays, published two books and is author of numerous articles published in scholarly journals. He has held his current position since 1984.

Tickets to the performance, which is sponsored by Mrs. Nellie McConnell Jones, are $8 for adults and $6 for senior citizens and students. Ector County Independent School District students receive a special rate. Group rates also are available.

For reservations or more information call the Globe, 1-332-1586, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

In looking back over his career, he remembers the night acting hooked him.

He was starring in Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" in an intimate theater in which the dressing rooms were in a separate building. At the close of the production each evening, the actors would be walking back to their dressing rooms as the audience was leaving the theater.

"A lady and her escort were standing across the street," Butter says. "She came across the street to tell me how much she appreciated and enjoyed my performance and how much she had been moved by my portrayal of Ethraim. She said she hadn't had tears in her eyes or cried in the theater for such a long time.

"When we are able to evoke laughter or tears, that's what makes it all worthwhile."

Butter has been told he grasps the character he is portraying rather quickly.

"When I was doing Ethraim in "Desire Under the Elms," after we'd been in rehearsal for two or three days, the producer called me aside. He said, 'How can you fathom the character so quickly? It usually takes weeks before someone has the grasp of the emotions of the character that you have.'

"I have always been able to read a play and pretty well understand. If there's a character there that I'm interested in, that I'm attracted to, that I would like to play, somehow I immediately feel a real rapport and empathy with that character.

"Then, for me, the real work begins in trying to learn all the lines and assimilate all the blocking and interact with the actors. That's all work. The fun of it, to me, is the immediate understanding of the character that I have."

Butter, who first began acting about 35 years ago when he was around 20, finds the Globe of the Great Southwest an important part of the "rich theater heritage" in the Permian Basin.

"I'm very pleased and very proud to be able to appear on the stage of this replica of the Globe in London doing Shakespeare."

He also is excited about the resident acting company started this season at the Globe. When he first came to Odessa two and a half years ago, he was pleased to hear the Globe had an annual Shakespeare festival and disappointed that there was no resident company.

"Steve (Peters) and the Globe board, I think, are moving in a very gratifying direction to be coming back to using local talent in productions. So 'Othello' and 'Lear' are a move in that direction of re-establishing local acting in Shakespeare at the Globe."

GRAND PRAIRIE — The Palace of Wax replaces the Wax Museum of the Southwest which was destroyed by an electrical fire in September 1988.

The Palace of Wax, now open for business, will showcase a new collection of wax figures depicting the worlds most recognized personalities of fact and fiction, both the famous as well as the infamous, all created by resident wax artist Peter carsillo.

In "A Galaxy of Stars" visitors wil find themselves among the most famous personalities of Hollywood, including Bette Davis, Eddie Murphy, Sylvester Stallonem and The Three Stooges.

"Dr. Blood's Asylum of Fear" will admit only the bravest visitors into scenes from Hollywood's most terrifying films, including "Frankenstein," "Phantom of the Opera," and "Night of the Living Dead," "Alien" and "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre."

They will walk into memorable scens from classic motion pictures such as "Gone With the Wind" with Clark Gable and Vivia Leigh, "Casablanca" with Hur phrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergma and "The Wizard of Oz" with Jud Garland.

While viewing the best an worst of "The Spirit of Man" vis tors will meet heroes such as Abr ham Lincoln, Martin Luther King and Mother Theresa and vi lains such as Adolph Hitler an Jack the Ripper.

"Col. Bill's Wonderful Wil West Waxworks" will be exhibite as a touring tent show circa 190 and will bring to life famous pe ple from the American frontie like Billy the Kid, Belle Starr an Geronimo.

A major area is devoted to "Pi grimage: A Journey through th Life of Christ," with scenes fro the nativity, Jesus as a youth wit the elders in the temple, the Se mon on the Mount, Jesus with th children, the Last Supper, the Cr cifixion, Christ in the tomb an the Resurrection.

Midland Community Theatre is presenting "The Boys Next Door" through April 21 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Written by Tom Griffin, the story centers on four men with mental handicaps living in a group house.

"This heartwarming play shows the residents as people with potential for self-fulfillment on their own levels," says a release from the theater.

For information or reservations, call 682-4111 or come by Theatre Midland.

'The Wizard of Oz' to be presented

Showtime is 7 p.m. for this production, an original adaptation of the classic.

"The musical production will bring to life Dorothy and her unique companions, re-creating their famous adventures," says a release from the PBCF Parent Support Group. "The Tinman, The Scarecrow and The Cowardly Lion are among the most remarkable and unforgettable characters in all literature. Their thoughs and feelings, uncertainties and achievements reflect the growing up experience of every child."

For more information or to purchase tickets call Jeff or Leslie, 694-2150.

Amazing exhibit at institute

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University Blvd., is featuring an exhibition for children entitled "SIMPLY A-MAZE-ING."

The exhibit features a child-sized sensory sculpture created by Bruce and Susan Hamilton of New Mexico. Visitors will reach the sculpture by going through a colorful maze which carries out the Child's Play mouse theme.

Children may climb or crawl through the multi-level, three dimensional sculpture which is designed to pique their senes of spatial, visual, tactile and auditory awareness.

Hours at the institute are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free. For more information call 1-368-7222.

"SIMPLY A-MAZE-ING" is part of "Child's Play '90," which is being held in conjunction with this month as Child Abuse Prevention Month. The Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Project is supporting a public awareness campaign during the month.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Forget about past mistakes and look to the future! A new job could become yours by accident. Do what you know is right. You need not justify your actions to others. Romance will be especially memorable in September. Make a special effort to keep a love relationship from going stale. Someone who has helped you in the past will do so again in December. January 1991 will be a banner month for free-lancers or anyone who works in the arts. Do not let false pride keep you from promoting your talents.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: French actress Claudia Cardinale, newspaper columnist "Heloise" Cruse Evans, novelist Henry James, country singer Roy Clark, Iceland's President Vigdis Finnbogadottir, rock star Dave Edmunds, actress Elizabeth Montgomery, artist-inventor Leonardo da Vinci, "Matlock" actress Julie Sommars, American portrait painter Charles Wilson Peale, jazz singer Bessie Smith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid doing or saying anything that could make you enemies or land you in legal hot water. A change of scenery puts you in a great mood. Take the neighbors along.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Habits can be changed if the incentive is strong enough. Level with your loved ones. Forget halfway measures when it comes to helping a family member or an old friend. Romance turns serious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day to catch up on your reading. A new trend is revealed. Plan to jump on the bandwagon early tomorrow. Listen carefully to what someone at a distance has to say.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A romantic triangle ends and you make a fresh start. Do not waste any more time. Intellectual pursuits captivate you. The tension caused by an unsettling situation drains away. Have faith.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Perform more services for yourself to save money. Others understand your desire to cut expenses. A blind date could be the start of something great. Do not reveal too much too soon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cash flow improves. Show good judgment when questioning a visiting friend or relative. You might be better off without the answers! An imaginative approach kindles the fires of romance. Be creative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take advantage of an invitation to spend the day with a caring friend. Write letters to offspring away at college. Rest up so that you can return to work tomorrow raring to go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try not to be so hard on yourself. There is no need to feel guilty about spending more time with one family member than with another. Speak from your heart in romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be patient with a teen-ager who is trying to do the right thing. Areas that were previously closed to discussion are now fair game. A loving, imaginative mate brings you special happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go ahead and do some traveling if you have the cash and time. You do not have to tolerate boorish behavior in your home. Romance seems more exciting in a new setting.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curb a tendency to be overly critical or you could spoil a family reunion. A friend suddenly turns romantic. Visit an older person confined to a hospital or resting home. Take a gift.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Resist a family member's efforts to draw you into a no-win situation. A spur-of-the-moment outing proves to be more fun than your original plans. Do not misuse your credit.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

From time to time, the writers of this column have been accused of being male chauvinists. While that might hold true of our belief that the best players are men, let us assure you that there are no more ardent admirers of the fair sex than we. This hand was played by a young Israeli, Ilana Barness, in the Women's Pairs at the 1989 European Championship.

North-South were using a 15–17 range for their opening no trumps. South's jump to four hearts denied interest in anything beyond game.

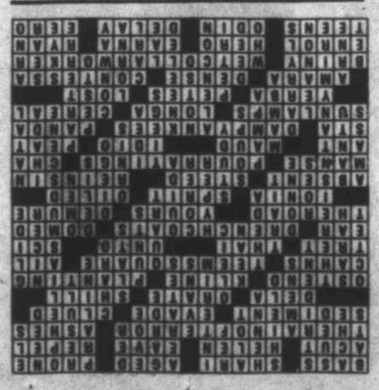

Declarer won the opening club lead in dummy, discarding a diamond from hand. The ace of hearts was cashed, followed by a low heart to East's king. Another diamond was sluffed on the club return, and when the king of spades was cashed, East dropped a tell-tale jack.

A club ruff in hand and a heart ruff in dummy were followed by the ace of diamonds and another club ruff. A second heart ruff reduced West to nothing but trumps, while there were three diamonds on the board and declarer was down to A 10 of trumps and 10 of hearts.

Declarer led a diamond from dummy and discarded the winning heart from hand. With nothing but trumps, West was forced to ruff and return a trump into declarer's tenace. As a result, South romped home with 11 tricks on a hand where many were going down at four spades because they drew two rounds of trumps too early.

PUZZLE ANSWER

Cellist, pianist will perform

ODESSA — Cellist Stephen Harrison and pianist Clive Swansbourne will give recitals Monday and Tuesday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The programs wil feature music by Bach, Beethoven, Messiaen and Rachmaninoff.

Monday's 8 p.m. will be held in the University Performing Arts Center. Tuesday's concerts are slated for 6:45 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. in the Mesa Building courtyard.

Harrison was the founding member of the Stanford String Quartet which has toured major cities in the United States and Europe.

Air Force Band will be performing

One of the most traveled musical organizations in the world, the United States Air Force Band and Singing Sergeants from Washington, D.C., will appear in a special free concert at Midland High School Auditorium at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Bankhead

The United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants have acted as America's international music ambassadors in 55 countries on five continents during 12 international goodwill tours. The commander and conductor, Lt. Col. James M. Bankhead, has chosen a program which includes a wide variety of musical selections ranging from the classics to the music of today.

This band's official military life began Sept. 24, 1941, with the formation of the Bolling Army Corps Base Bands. Some of America's finest musicians perform with the organization.

Morris misses U.S. society

Phil Morris of "Mission: Impossible," which is shot in Australia, says what he misses most when he's away from the United States "is all the funk and rhythm" of America.

"In Los Angeles," Phil says, "I can drive for just a few minutes and go through a black neighborhood, a Hispanic neighborhood, an Oriental neighborhood. We have a rich, textured society of many races, religions and cultural backgrounds.

"In Australia, almost everything is Anglican."

GRAND PRAIRIE — The Palace of Wax replaces the Wax Museum of the Southwest which was destroyed by an electrical fire in September 1988.

The Palace of Wax, now open for business, will showcase a new collection of wax figures depicting the worlds most recognized personalities of fact and fiction, both the famous as well as the infamous, all created by resident wax artist Peter carsillo.

In "A Galaxy of Stars" visitors wil find themselves among the most famous personalities of Hollywood, including Bette Davis, Eddie Murphy, Sylvester Stallonem and The Three Stooges.

"Dr. Blood's Asylum of Fear" will admit only the bravest visitors into scenes from Hollywood's most terrifying films, including "Frankenstein," "Phantom of the Opera," and "Night of the Living Dead," "Alien" and "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre."

They will walk into memorable scens from classic motion pictures such as "Gone With the Wind" with Clark Gable and Vivian Leigh, "Casablanca" with Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman and "The Wizard of Oz" with Judy Garland.

While viewing the best and worst of "The Spirit of Man" visitors will meet heroes such as Abraham Lincoln, Martin Luthern King and Mother Theresa and villains such as Adolph Hitler and Jack the Ripper.

"Col. Bill's Wonderful Wild West Waxworks" will be exhibited as a touring tent show circa 1900 and will bring to life famous people from the American frontier like Billy the Kid, Belle Starr and Geronimo.

A major area is devoted to "Pilgrimage: A Journey through the Life of Christ," with scenes from the nativity, Jesus as a youth with the elders in the temple, the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus with the children, the Last Supper, the Crucifixion, Christ in the tomb and the Resurrection.

Written by Tom Griffin, the story centers on four men with mental handicaps living in a group house.

"This heartwarming play shows the residents as people with potential for self-fulfillment on their own levels," says a release from the theater.

For information or reservations, call 682-4111 or come by Theatre Midland.

'The Wizard of Oz' to be presented

Showtime is 7 p.m. for this production, an original adaptation of the classic.

"The musical production will bring to life Dorothy and her unique companions, re-creating their famous adventures," says a release from the PBCF Parent Support Group. "The Tinman, The Scarecrow and The Cowardly Lion are among the most remarkable and unforgettable characters in all literature. Their thoughs and feelings, uncertainties and achievements reflect the growing up experience of every child."

For more information or to purchase tickets call Jeff or Leslie, 694-2150.

Amazing exhibit at institute

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University Blvd., is featuring an exhibition for children entitled "SIMPLY A-MAZE-ING."

The exhibit features a child-sized sensory sculpture created by Bruce and Susan Hamilton of New Mexico. Visitors will reach the sculpture by going through a colorful maze which carries out the Child's Play mouse theme.

Children may climb or crawl through the multi-level, three dimensional sculpture which is designed to pique their senes of spatial, visual, tactile and auditory awareness.

Hours at the institute are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free. For more information call 1-368-7222.

"SIMPLY A-MAZE-ING" is part of "Child's Play '90," which is being held in conjunction with this month as Child Abuse Prevention Month. The Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Project is supporting a public awareness campaign during the month.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Forget about past mistakes and look to the future! A new job could become yours by accident. Do what you know is right. You need not justify your actions to others. Romance will be especially memorable in September. Make a special effort to keep a love relationship from going stale. Someone who has helped you in the past will do so again in December. January 1991 will be a banner month for free-lancers or anyone who works in the arts. Do not let false pride keep you from promoting your talents.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: French actress Claudia Cardinale, newspaper columnist "Heloise" Cruse Evans, novelist Henry James, country singer Roy Clark, Iceland's President Vigdis Finnbogadottir, rock star Dave Edmunds, actress Elizabeth Montgomery, artist-inventor Leonardo da Vinci, "Matlock" actress Julie Sommars, American portrait painter Charles Wilson Peale, jazz singer Bessie Smith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid doing or saying anything that could make you enemies or land you in legal hot water. A change of scenery puts you in a great mood. Take the neighbors along.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Habits can be changed if the incentive is strong enough. Level with your loved ones. Forget halfway measures when it comes to helping a family member or an old friend. Romance turns serious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day to catch up on your reading. A new trend is revealed. Plan to jump on the bandwagon early tomorrow. Listen carefully to what someone at a distance has to say.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A romantic triangle ends and you make a fresh start. Do not waste any more time. Intellectual pursuits captivate you. The tension caused by an unsettling situation drains away. Have faith.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Perform more services for yourself to save money. Others understand your desire to cut expenses. A blind date could be the start of something great. Do not reveal too much too soon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cash flow improves. Show good judgment when questioning a visiting friend or relative. You might be better off without the answers! An imaginative approach kindles the fires of romance. Be creative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take advantage of an invitation to spend the day with a caring friend. Write letters to offspring away at college. Rest up so that you can return to work tomorrow raring to go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try not to be so hard on yourself. There is no need to feel guilty about spending more time with one family member than with another. Speak from your heart in romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be patient with a teen-ager who is trying to do the right thing. Areas that were previously closed to discussion are now fair game. A loving, imaginative mate brings you special happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go ahead and do some traveling if you have the cash and time. You do not have to tolerate boorish behavior in your home. Romance seems more exciting in a new setting.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curb a tendency to be overly critical or you could spoil a family reunion. A friend suddenly turns romantic. Visit an older person confined to a hospital or resting home. Take a gift.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Resist a family member's efforts to draw you into a no-win situation. A spur-of-the-moment outing proves to be more fun than your original plans. Do not misuse your credit.

From time to time, the writers of this column have been accused of being male chauvinists. While that might hold true of our belief that the best players are men, let us assure you that there are no more ardent admirers of the fair sex than we. This hand was played by a young Israeli, Ilana Barness, in the Women's Pairs at the 1989 European Championship.

North-South were using a 15-17 range for their opening no trumps. South's jump to four hearts denied interest in anything beyond game.

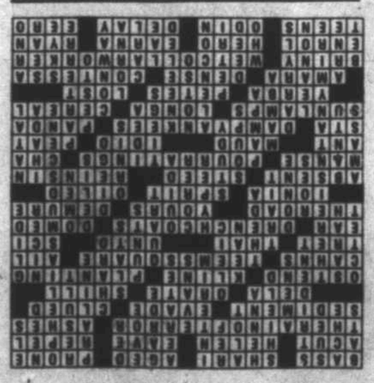

Declarer won the opening club lead in dummy, discarding a diamond from hand. The ace of hearts was cashed, followed by a low heart to East's king. Another diamond was sluffed on the club return, and when the king of spades was cashed, East dropped a tell-tale jack.

A club ruff in hand and a heart ruff in dummy were followed by the ace of diamonds and another club ruff. A second heart ruff reduced West to nothing but trumps, while there were three diamonds on the board and declarer was down to A 10 of trumps and 10 of hearts.

Declarer led a diamond from dummy and discarded the winning heart from hand. With nothing but trumps, West was forced to ruff and return a trump into declarer's tenace. As a result, South romped home with 11 tricks on a hand where many were going down at four spades because they drew two rounds of trumps too early.

PUZZLE ANSWER

Cellist, pianist will perform

ODESSA — Cellist Stephen Harrison and pianist Clive Swansbourne will give recitals Monday and Tuesday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The programs wil feature music by Bach, Beethoven, Messiaen and Rachmaninoff.

Monday's 8 p.m. will be held in the University Performing Arts Center. Tuesday's concerts are slated for 6:45 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. in the Mesa Building courtyard.

Harrison was the founding member of the Stanford String Quartet which has toured major cities in the United States and Europe.

Air Force Band will be performing

One of the most traveled musical organizations in the world, the United States Air Force Band and Singing Sergeants from Washington, D.C., will appear in a special free concert at Midland High School Auditorium at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Bankhead

The United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants have acted as America's international music ambassadors in 55 countries on five continents during 12 international goodwill tours. The commander and conductor, Lt. Col. James M. Bankhead, has chosen a program which includes a wide variety of musical selections ranging from the classics to the music of today.

This band's official military life began Sept. 24, 1941, with the formation of the Bolling Army Corps Base Bands. Some of America's finest musicians perform with the organization.

Morris misses U.S. society

Phil Morris of "Mission: Impossible," which is shot in Australia, says what he misses most when he's away from the United States "is all the funk and rhythm" of America.

"In Los Angeles," Phil says, "I can drive for just a few minutes and go through a black neighborhood, a Hispanic neighborhood, an Oriental neighborhood. We have a rich, textured society of many races, religions and cultural backgrounds.

"In Australia, almost everything is Anglican."

Roosevelt biography 'just, penetrating' portrait

Dale Nelson
Associated Press

An American who entered the first grade in the year Franklin D. Roosevelt entered the White House was two months short of high school graduation when FDR died. In all of this student's formative school years, "the president" meant Roosevelt.

By contrast, a student graduating from high school this June will have been in class during the presidencies of Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

By his tenure in office, if for no other reason, Roosevelt bestrode the American scene as no other 20th-century president — not Reagan nor Dwight Eisenhower after him, nor Woodrow Wilson nor Theodore Roosevelt before him — quite managed to do.

The biography "Franklin D. Roosevelt: A Rendezvous With Destiny" shows that he had a lot more going for him than his ability to get elected four times. Author Frank Freidel, a professor emeritus of history at Harvard University and the University of Washington, has distilled a lifetime of Roosevelt scholarship into a portrait that is just and penetrating and, in the end, places his subject securely among the great.

Freidel, who has previously written four highly praised volumes taking FDR up to the brink of the White House, is not a spectacularly colorful writer. His strength is in careful attention to detail and in judicious appraisal.

Where other scholars have depicted Roosevelt as moving to the right and steering a confused course after the end of the first New Deal period, with its response to the Depression emergency, Freidel shows a skilled political craftsman tacking and veering to obtain legislation that would stand for generations.

At the same time, he depicts a president heeding the political need to satisfy isolationist sentiment while moving relentlessly toward boycotts and blockades as World War II took shape.

As Freidel notes, Roosevelt could be an "amateur diplomatist" who sometimes was carried away by his enthusiasms. In a finely etched vignette, the author shows how FDR and the brilliant, urbane William Bullitt let themselves be snookered by the Kremlin's wily Maxim Litvinov in talks on U.S. recognition of the Soviet Union.

The author notes the curious similarities between Roosevelt and Hitler, the two leaders eyeing each other across the abyss of the '30s, each at times "hazy about immediate details in his plans, ready to improvise or retreat if he ran into difficulties and then thrust forward again at a propitious time, always working toward basic long-range ends."

Their ends, however, were vastly different.

Roosevelt sought through his flawed Good Neighbor Policy to rebuild Latin America in the image of the American dream. He failed, but, says Freidel, remains a hero in the hemisphere.

His stance regarding the Spanish Civil War was "unheroic and ineffective," but he had little choice, the author says.

He joined in the wishful thinking that America could stay out of the larger conflict in Europe and gave his qualified backing to appeasement — not yet a dirty word — as a corollary of rearmament.

In domestic affairs, he was willing, unlike some of his successors, to undertake sustained negotiations with Congress on a tax bill when faced with a growing federal deficit as the 1936 elections approached.

The occasional deviousness that many have noted led him astray when he botched his Supreme Court packing plan by pretending it was designed to speed the court's business rather than to stop it from overturning his popular social programs.

By the same token, the author describes him as simply "appalling" in his efforts to appease French rightists during the war by speaking of the "understandable complaints" the Germans bore toward Jews in Germany.

In civil rights, he probably went as far as he could in the political climate of his day, although the author makes clear that his policies were affected by his paternalistic attitudes toward black people — which were not much different from his paternalistic attitudes toward most white people.

The author believes that as both the war and Roosevelt's life neared their ends, FDR was turning his attention to a further extension of the New Deal. The president who had spoken in the '30s of an ill-housed and ill-fed "one-third of a nation" said in 1944 that no fraction of Americans should be left in such a plight.

In a vivid account of the shock waves touched off by Roosevelt's death, Freidel quotes a tearful Winston Churchill telling journalist Edward R. Murrow, "One day the world, and history, will know what it owes to your president."

Cookbook written for bachelors

NEW YORK (AP) — There's help for the single man who wants to give that special woman in his life a unique gift — a home-cooked meal.

It's in a paperback book called "Eating In: The Official Single Man's Cookbook" (Corkscrew Press, $8.95). The book is the work of two 30ish bachelors, Rich Lippman and Jose Maldonado, who claim it "fills the gap between Mrs. Paul and Julia Child."

The book addresses the age-old question of why men — who have "the potential to start World War III (and) explore the galaxies" — can't follow a simple recipe:

"As a child, odds are you were ordered 'out of the kitchen till dinner's ready,' thus preventing you from acquiring the many culinary secrets passed from mother to daughter," it explains.

The tone of much of the book is tongue-in-cheek — not the customarily recommended position for eating. But once the reader has boiled off the funny stuff, he'll discover some genuinely helpful tips and authentic recipes that promise to be relatively simple.

The initial step, according to the guide, is to stock your kitchen with the necessary basic implements, which are described and even illustrated to minimize the guesswork. In order to make the special evening a success, the authors urge the proper table setting in place of such haphazard fare as mismatched plastic utensils, fast-food paper cups and placemats fashioned from the Sunday funnies.

In the book, the authors stress the important contribution a clean kitchen makes to the atmosphere of the dinner: "Imagine how she'll recoil in horror if she catches you shaking out the toaster to bread her pork chops (or) sees that the baking pans on your shelf are already greased."

Once all the preliminary tidying up and stocking up have been accomplished, the book's handy menus will help the novice chef coordinate his meal, from appetizer and salad to entree, side dish and dessert.

The recipes include such seemingly impossible creations as fettuccini alfredo, orange steak sunrise, shrimp scampi, stir-fried garlic green beans and hot buttered beer bread. Recipes for main courses include cooking times, preparation hints, lists of ingredients and equipment, and step-by-step illustrated instructions to instill confidence in the hesitant chef.

However, as easy as the recipes are made to seem, none is as simple and foolproof as the one the authors provide for chocolate truffles:

"Stop off at the local gourmet or chocolate shoppe and buy some on your way home."

Brother writes of Elvis

Here's another tidbit from stepbrother Bill Stanley's book, "Elvis, My Brother:"

Stanley recalls Priscilla Presley's unladylike behavior the night Elvis' dad, Vernon, passed away. She looked at Stanley's mother and said, "Why are you crying for him, Dee? You didn't see me shed a tear when Elvis died."

The night of Vernon's funeral, says Billy, Priscilla got drunk and suggested that she and some of Elvis' male kin go skinny-dipping at Graceland.

Stanley says he nixed the idea — what "with Elvis' grave next to the pool and Vernon fresh in his."

McGuane says latest novel 'most humane yet'

By Tom Laceky

BIG TIMBER, Mont. (AP) — The gravel road to Tom McGuane's ranch runs by snow-dusted pastures aswarm with browsing mule deer and antelope, the Absaroka Mountains looming over all.

It isn't painted on velvet: McGuane the rancher really lives in the pastoral Montana splendor that McGuane the novelist writes about so lovingly.

McGuane the man, however, seems to have achieved some of the serenity that the angst-ridden, quirky characters of his seven novels only long for.

He takes no credit for it. The rage that drove him in his early career, he says, has simply run its course.

The rage flared and guttered in the '70s, when McGuane became a celebrity in the worst sense — he says "sociopath" — with drugs, booze, actresses, fast cars and famous friends.

The change has made his latest novel, "Keep the Change," his most humane yet, he said.

It has been selling better than any of his earlier books, and nearly all the reviews are good. It has made several regional best-seller lists, including those of Denver, Seattle and the Village Voice in New York. It's being sold in translation in 10 foreign countries.

"The reader response is what has been best," McGuane said, citing letters and personal comments.

McGuane was not yet 30 when "The Sporting Club" burst onto the scene in 1969 and introduced him as a flamboyant, satirical writer to watch. "The Bushwhacked Piano" in 1971 and "Ninety-two in the Shade" in 1973 proved he was no flash in the pan, but a disappointing amount of fortune came with the fame.

His fourth novel, "Panama," in 1977, was widely vilified as a self-indulgent, autobiographical howl of despair. But now, sitting in his ranch house, McGuane says it was mostly funny: "I remember laughing a lot while I was writing it, at least."

"Nobody's Angel," in 1982, marked a slight turn toward a kinder, gentler McGuane, and "Something To Be Desired," in 1984, continued that shift. "Keep the Change" closes on a typically ambiguous note, but, untypically, the ambiguity is hopeful.

McGuane, now 50, deals with familiar themes in "Keep the Change," but he spins them out in unexpected ways.

Joe Starling Jr. is a successful but alienated young New York painter struggling with his memories of an overpowering, alcoholic father and vacillating between two beautiful women, one the wife of another man.

When an emotional block stymies his art career, he flees to the family-owned Montana ranch where he worked as a teen-ager and where he first bedded one of his two loves, Ellen.

The eventual defeats that McGuane inflicts on Joe are typical McGuane, but relieved this time by elements of forgiveness and hope, at least, for reconciliation.

The fact that all of his books are still in print shows that he has a loyal following of serious fiction devotees, McGuane said. He added that some of them may not get around to buying his books for two years after they come out, but they do read them.

A lot of writers can do one thing amazingly well but fail to put together all the elements necessary to sustain readers' interest, he said.

"The trick is to stay alive, really, not to knock one out of the park."

Despite his admiration for the Montana landscape, McGuane's novels have a recurrent theme of decadence in the culture of the American West. He noted that many so-called "Montana" writers, such as Norman Maclean and Wallace Stegner, have been gone from the state for decades.

"There is a kind of ironic gap between the landscape and the civilization of the West," he said.

McGuane does not dispute a recent magazine article that included him among a "new breed" of writer showing a darker side of the West. It's high time that side was examined, he said.

"There was a time when cowboys around here would come to town to see Gene Autry movies," he said. "This sort of self-adulatory view needs revising."

His friends and neighbors in the Boulder River Valley know little about his novels, and most would not care for them anyway, McGuane said without complaint or criticism. He described his novels as "almost experimental fiction" with little appeal for the average reader.

If they ask about his writing, he said, he gives them "An Outside Chance," his 1984 book of essays on sports.

"I have to be careful," he said. "I don't want to start writing things just so they can understand them."

"The other ranchers help me at branding time, and we help them," he said. Writing is his principal occupation, but the ranch is more than an expensive hobby. He plans to stay with it.

"It would be unbearable to write all the time," he said.
