Mid-Continent Oil Men Present Need Of Tariff To White House And Solons

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

The weather man has been kind—although he seems to have forecasted fair weather when we have had rain and cold when we have had warm and vice versa—and the Wichita Falls area is soggy with mud and dripping with moisture.

What we need now is a dashing shower to wash the slime off streets and put water into tanks and ponds, and then some days of sunshine.

Talker has it all worked out if he can have co-operation from the weather man, but right here is reminded that Mark Twain said that everybody talked about the weather but noobdy did anything about it.

Of course, Talker will hasten to disclaim any responsibility for the weather we have been having for the past four weeks. But even if the weather has been bad and uncomfortable this is the season when we ought to expect it.

Talker has heard a lot of talk today about the appointment of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice in the Untied States supreme court. Everybody is glad to see such a man chief justice but there are a lot of folks who regret that the appointment means that he must resign from the world court. Judge Hughes' radio talk on the world court was heard by many Wichitans the other night and was pronounced a masterly exposition of that international organization.

The appointment, too, means that Charles Evans Hughes Jr. will probably resign as solicitor general of the United States. The appointment of young Hughes to this position was acclaimed by everyone. Hughes has made his own reputation as an able lawyer and a courageous man entirely on his own merits. New York state Republicans are said to be looking to him as their candidate for governor. Young Hughes would be a formidable opponent for the Democrats of the Empire state.

The pronunciamento, or whatever it is, of the "bolters" in Wichita county calling their meeting Thursday night sounds rather sophomoric, but then the "bolters" had a lot on their chest and evidently tried to get it off in one heave.

If that was a gesture of peace and harmony then all regular Democrats are red handed villains fit only for bastigation and banishment.

Talker imagines that the Republicans are laughing in the sleeves of their raincoats, and planning to vote in the Democratic primaries as usual.

He would have been glad to have seen a fairly strong—not too strong—Republican party develop in Texas as a result of the state's departure from its traditions in 1928, but to hear them talk all these voters who voted for Hoover were Democrats and there is nothing they want to do so much as vote in the Democratic primaries this year.

Yessir, and they claim to be the only real, simon pure Democrats and all of us who voted the Democratic ticket and Raskobites or something worse—and they've got a name for everything and everybody. But remember that's what they said over in Virginia a few months ago and you know what happened there.

Maybe you haven't heard the story of the judge's examination of the applicant for citizenship. The applicant appeared to be a man of more than ordinary intelligence and information. He had answered every question put to him satisfactorily until the judge asked him who was president of the United States. "Al Smith," answered the applicant.

"Why, my good man," exclaimed the judge, "I can't understand it; you have answered all my other questions correctly and satisfactorily and I can't understand your failure on this one. Now, tell me

WIRT FRANKLIN SCORES MAJORS FOR POLICIES

'Mussolini' of Independents Acts as Spokesman For Delegation

WHITE HOUSE SILENT

Hoover Calls Two Aides To Hear Plea for $1 Crude Duty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (US)—Selfish big oil companies are using "conservation" as a catchword to block the proposed duty on oil, Wirt Franklin of Oklahoma, head of the Independent Oil Men's association in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas and Louisiana, told 200 senators, representatives and others in the house caucus room today.

Independent oil operators swarmed the capitol in quest of a dollar a barrel tariff on their product. The house turned down their plea when the tariff bill was pending there. The senate has yet to vote upon it.

Later the delegation, accompanied by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur and Secretary of War Hurley, was received at the White House.

Policy Scored

Franklin savagely attacked the administration's oil conservation program, declaring there are enough oil reserves in the United States to last 1,000 years.

Abandonment faces 300,000 steady producing wells as a result of the administration's policy, he said. In Oklahoma last year 6,000 such wells were capped, he said.

"The result is that the little fellows are being driven out of business to further swell the rich coffers of the four or five big importing oil companies," Franklin said.

Shell Attacked

Applause came from the assemblage when Franklin attacked the Dutch-Shell, English and Dutch owned company. These interests are fast spreading in the United

Little Hope Remains For Recovery Of Taft After Physicians Hold Parley

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (AP)—William Howard Taft, his long and illustrious public career ended, was making a courageous fight for life tonight.

The former president and chief justice of the United States, is dangerously ill at his home with a complication of diseases which his physicians long ago gave up hope of curing. Their efforts now are to prolong life and they were not prepared to say how long this might be done.

Specialist Called

Brought back from Asheville in a bleak, gray dawn, the 73-year-old patient was taken to his residence. A specialist was called in by the family physician who had spent three weeks with Mr. Taft in the North Carolina mountains, in the hope that the air and climate there might bring a measure of improvement.

The doctors later issued this bulletin:

"For some years Chief Justice Taft has had a very high blood pressure associated with general arterio sclerosis and myocarditis. Together with these conditions, he has had a chronic cystitis. He has no fever and suffers no pain. His present serious condition is the result of general arterio sclerotic changes."

Complication of Ailments

The bulletin was signed by Dr. Francis Hagner, Mr. Taft's physician, and Dr. William Sidney Thayer, of the Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, a heart and blood specialist, who was summoned soon after the former president returned home.

The complication of ailments which have shattered the once robust health of Mr. Taft consists of hardening of the arteries inflammation of the lining of the heart and inflammation of the bladder.

Colleague Calls

Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, the 88-year-old acting chief justice, and dean of the court, was among several callers who offered their sympathy. Mrs. Taft, who is severely shaken by the strain of bringing her husband back from

ELECTRA CRASH FATAL TO MAN

Victim Tentatively Identified as R. E. Fuller

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Feb. 4.—A man tentatively identified as R. E. Fuller, about 30, was killed instantly tonight when the car he was driving and a truck collided on the Electra-Vernon highway four miles west of here.

The accident was said to have resulted when Fuller passed a car in front of him, unaware of the approach of the truck further ahead. His efforts to miss the truck were unavailing, it was said, and the two vehicles crashed head-on. Fuller's head was crushed.

The truck, owned by a Frederick, Okla., trucking company, was driven by J. V. Rotramel of Frederick, and Wayne Vaughn of Harrold. They reported the accident to Electra officers, who went to the scene for an investigation. Meanwhile an ambulance from the Frost & Dobbs mortuary at Vernon took charge of the body and removed it to Vernon, where it will be held pending final identification.

Chief Night Deputy Roy Hart and Police Officer T. E. Lewis said the name Roy Fuller was on papers found on the victim, but added that they were told by a Harrold filling station proprietor that the victim a short while before the accident had stopped at his place and had given the name of Robinson.

The information secured by the Electra police was forwarded to Vernon officers, who tonight were attempting to identify the man. His car bore a Missouri license.

Neither of the men riding in the truck was injured.

Mrs. Mary Frances Day In Critical Condition

Mrs. Mary Frances Day, pioneer citizen of Wichita Falls, was in a critical condition at the Wichita General hospital Tuesday night suffering from pneumonia, according to friends of the aged woman. Physicians stated her age and the severity of the illness had made her recovery doubtful.

Mrs. Day, who is 72 years old and who lived alone at 2313 Eighth street, became ill several days ago and was taken to the home of a friend, Mrs. W. A. Luper, 1308 Travis street. The seriousness of her condition made transfer to the hospital necessary.

DEMO RULING AFFECTS ONLY STATE OFFICES

Precinct, District, County Races Not Involved, Says Wilcox

MEETING HERE OPEN

Regular Democrats Asked To Attend Protest Rally

Candidates for district, county and precinct offices are not affected by the ruling of the State Democratic Executive committee barring the candidacy of Sen. Thomas B. Love for governor, according to a statement issued at Georgetown Tuesday by D. W. Wilcox, chairman of the state committee.

The Wilcox statement, received from the Associated Press by The Record News, is of particular interest to Wichita county residents in view of the mass meeting called here for Thursday to protest against the state ruling. Simultaneously with the Wilcox statement, leaders of the Hoovercrat forces here announced that the Wichita mass meeting, the first called in the state, will be open to both regular and bolting Democrats.

Harmony Sought, Say Leaders

This new bid for harmony among county Democratic forces was made known by B. D. Sartin, spokesman for those calling the meeting and vice chairman of the Hoover Democrats. Mr. Sartin, although not a signer of the call for the mass meeting, said that it was his understanding that those in charge were anxious for the attendance of both those who voted the ticket straight and those who scratched the presidential electors. The meeting will open Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in the courthouse. Speakers have not been announced.

The Wilcox statement, clearing up the status of county races for the time being at least, was issued as a reply to a statement of Senator Love, criticising the committee for ruling that state candidates on the Democratic ballot must be limited to those who supported the Democratic ticket in 1928.

The statement, as reported by the Associated Press, follows:

Wilcox Replies

"Senator Love, in the statement of his views on the effect of the action of the state executive committee leaves the impression that the committee barred as candidates for office those who voted for the Republican presidential electors in 1928.

"This is not correct. The resolution applied only to candidates for state office, and does not apply to candidates for district, county or precinct office.

"Senator Love also said the committee invited negroes to vote in the Democratic primaries. It is true

Paved Road From Burk to Lawton Assured for 1930, Says Oklahoman

Closing of Gaps in Highway to Draw International Travel Through Wichita Falls

Definite assurance that work on the hard-surfacing of the highway between Burkburnett and Lawton, Okla., will be provided for or under way before the end of this year, and that in the near future Wichita Falls will be on a designated international highway, was voiced Tuesday by E. J. Price, good roads representative of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce, who was in this city for conference with local chamber of commerce officials on the project.

Prediction that conversion of the Burkburnett-Lawton road into an all-weather highway will be inaugurated in 1930, Mr. Price said, was based upon endorsement registered at the semi-annual meeting of the American Association of State Highway officials at San Antonio in December, and upon active support now being given the project in practically every city and town concerned. At the December meeting, it was stated, representatives of the Oklahoma and Texas state highway commissions reported that those bodies were definitely purposed to effect the paving of the Burkburnett-Lawton strip within the near future. Designation of road for interstate travel and marking required the endorsement of the two commissions, Mr. Price pointed out, and said that plans now under way will doubtless effect the beginning of work within the next few months.

Opening of the new paved highway between Oklahoma City and Lawton, by way of Cement and Fort Sill, will occur about June 1, according to Mr. Price. Completion of hard-surfaced highway across Haskell county, Texas, which voted bonds for that purpose in December, will complete a straight all-weather road extending from Wichita, Kan., to Del Rio, and into Mexico. Mr. Price predicted that by next summer, 1,000 automobiles daily will be directed by the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce through Wichita Falls to points in South and West Texas, and on the Pacific coast.

Support of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce in every possible way to expedite the early completion of improved highways from Burkburnett to Lawton was assured by officials of the local organization, it was said.

BOY ATTORNEY CLIMAXES DAY OF ORATORY

Henry Brooks Makes Colorful Appeal for Death To Jurist

SANITY MAIN ISSUE

Case Goes to Jury at 4:55 With Defendant Tired, His Ears Burning

AUSTIN, Feb. 5. (Wednesday) (AP)—The last juror in the murder trial of John W. Brady went to bed at 12:35 a. m. today. One by one his colleagues had preceded him and when he turned out the light the possibility of a verdict before 9 a. m. at the earliest was gone.

COURTROOM, Austin, Feb. 4. (AP)—The jury in John W. Brady's murder trial asked shortly after 11 o'clock tonight to see the judge that he might clear up a point in the charge.

Judge J. D. Moore, called at his home, instructed the jurors through the sheriff that their request for information must be submitted to him in writing and in open court tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, there were reports that if the issue concerning the charge were cleared up satisfactorily to all concerned, the jury would "get together."

At 8:20 p. m. the jurors started getting ready to retire but they continued to argue, as a line of spectators across the street from the old courthouse could observe.

District Attorney Henry Brooks, the slim young son of Brady's former law partner, made the state's final accusation that the former appellate court judge in sound mind and with an intention to murder, stabbed Miss Lehlia Highsmith, a stenographer half his age, to death.

"It is as much your duty to give justice to John Brady, your friend, as it is mine to stand here and prosecute John Brady, my friend," Brooks, white-faced and trembling, said in conclusion of the closing argument.

"This is a death penalty case if there ever was one.

"On the one hand you have John Brady and the crime he committed; on the other hand you have little Lehlia Highsmith, who fell under his knife. The blackness of the crime would make the ages shudder."

E. A. Berry, chief of the defense, an elderly man himself and friend of Brady's through long years pleaded for the mercy of "Him who spake as no mortal ever spake," and said as he turned slowly away:

"I submit into your hands the fate of John W. Brady. I submit with it all he has ever been."

As the jurors walked away upstairs, Brady walked away, too—to the jail where he had been held since he killed the 28-year-old woman on the night of last Nov. 9.

The defense presented Dr. W. F. West, county health officer, who declared that in his opinion Riley was mentally subnormal, with the mind of a 7-year-old boy.

Committee Declines to Act on Offer Of Oklahoma to Buy Land Strip

AUSTIN, Feb. 4. (AP)—The joint legislative committee on the Oklahoma-Texas Panhandle boundary today declined to make a recommendation on the offer of Oklahoma to purchase the land which would become a part of Texas under a survey by a commission of the United States supreme court.

While the committee report, submitted to the legislature, did not make a recommendation on that matter it did urge that in the event the offer was rejected the claimants to the land in the territory affected be allowed to have prior right to purchase for a nominal consideration. This was done to protect the property owners in that area.

Oklahoma had offered $150,000 for the approximately 28,500 acres. Senator Walter C. Woodward of Coleman, chairman of the committee, introduced a resolution in the senate to reject the offer. It was tabled subject to call with the understanding that it would be taken up on agreement of Woodward and Senator Clint Small of Wellington, who favors acceptance of the proposal.

Since the United States supreme court is due to ratify the survey of its commission Feb. 24 the legislature is expected either to accept or reject the offer before that date.

JURORS SEEK BRADY VERDICT

Brilliant Arguments End Spectacular Trial

strength and made insane by long use of bootleg liquor; the state insisting that he employed his knife as a jealously elderly lover—had echoed here.

The controversy raged chiefly around the insanity issue, the defense lawyers conceding again that Brady slew the girl but claiming it was the act of a mad John Brady, not that of the Brady who used to sit here on the prosecution side of the table as a county attorney and later an assistant attorney general.

Brooks struck, too, the motion for a suspended sentence in the event of conviction.

"Did that little girl get a suspended sentence?" he called out in a high voice. "No, she got the death penalty."

"Yes, John Brady thought she was trying to throw him down for a younger man. And John Brady killed her even as she pleaded for her life."

There had been laughter in this courtroom many times during this trial, but there were tears this afternoon—the tears of A. G. B. Highsmith as Brooks described the wounds in Lehlia's body; the tears of Brady as counsel eulogized his wife.

Three men, Assistant County Attorney Hardy Hollers, County Attorney Roy Archer and Brooks, spoke for the state, and three men Lon Curtis of Belton, Dayton Moses of Fort Worth, and Berry talked for Brady's cause.

"Son of the Gods"

Hollers opened with a bitter attack on Brady as "an eminent man a son of the gods," who stabbed "an ignorant little country girl" because he had decided she was "trying to get away from the life he had been leading her."

Curtis, lank, nearly bald and ageing, said the man who killed the girl could not have been "the John Brady we know." This man, he said, quietly, his voice slightly tremuously, died to his friends years ago when he began a descent that ended in the slaying. Curtis was speaking for a friend of decades with whom he had shared confidences in Texas university in their student days long ago.

Archer paced up and down just in front of the jurors, leaning over and half whispering to them.

He dwelt on the girl's death, calling on the jury to imagine "those red wounds in that white body," saying "no more will the sun come up for Lehlia Highsmith," attacking the insanity plea as a "lame, lame, lame excuse."

Moses Speaks

Moses merely rose from his seat as he began, not going over in front of the jury box.

"There is no dispute, there is no controversy concerning the tragedy. There has been no denial and there will be none that this defendant killed Miss Highsmith," he said softly.

"We were not selected to defend John Brady, and I am no churchman; but I believe somehow that a man who stays by his friend in adversity will receive some credit when the last roll call is taken. I came here 600 miles to help John Brady.

"I remembered the change in as brilliant a man as ever came to our state university. Let me be frank with you: If John Brady was sane at the time of this killing there should be but one verdict, and that would be one assessing the death penalty."

"Let me say as solemnly as if I knew my life would be taken tonight that the evidence shows John Brady was incapable of conceiving malice on that night."

Berry was next, announcing: "I come here to speak as the last man for John Brady.

"John Brady was a drunken raving maniac on that night."

why you think Al Smith is president."

"Well, judge, it's this way" answered the applicant, "during the campaign I heard a lot of folks say that if Al Smith was elected president we'd have hard times, a lot of us fellows would be out of jobs, there would be a stock market crash, there would be a lot of bootlegging and all sorts of trouble. I've noticed all these things have happened and I just naturally thought Al Smith must be president."

When things do not run along so prosperously it's always embarrassing to the party in power, but Talker doesn't intend to say anything more about this and would join with the staunchest Republican and the most loyal Democrat, whether a Hoovercrat or a Raskobite, in hoping for improved business conditions and better law enforcement.

Wichita Falls' name is in the pot for an appropriation for a new federal building if the bill favored by the postoffice and treasury departments is passed at the present session of congress, we are told in a Washington dispatch. That's good news for Republicans who vote in the Democratic primary, or who stay out, and for Democrats of all brands alike. Talker is glad to mention one thing on which everybody is agreed.

Reorganization of the business council of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce is to be undertaken immediately, says a news item. The business council was dissolved some time ago after a referendum of the membership of the chamber of commerce voted that way. After some months without a business council the need of such an organization was realized and on another referendum the vote was favorable to reorganization. Two representatives from each business and professional classification are to be chosen by the chamber of commerce members as their representatives in the business council. Nominations are to be made within a few days. All members are urged to take part in the selection.

that the resolution inviting those who voted the Republican national ticket in 1928 to vote in the Democratic primaries this year is on its face subject to that construction, but that was not the intent of the resolution.

"The question of whether or not negroes would be allowed to vote was not discussed or considered by the committee. The committee was called to meet for the purpose of deciding what action it might take in regard to candidates and voters who participated in the conventions and primaries in 1928 and then failed to support the Democratic presidential electors. The meeting was called over four months before the time for the first meeting as fixed by law, in a spirit of fairness and in order to give any person who desired to do so plenty of time to go into court if he considered the committee exceeded its authority.

"Three negroes were in Austin and wished to appear before the committee and ask that negroes be permitted to vote in the primaries, but I told them the committee was not considering that question at that meeting and that action in reference to negroes voting would be taken, as in the past, at the regular meeting of the committee, to be held June 9.

"So far as I know only one member knew that these negroes wanted to appear before the committee until they afterwards saw it in the papers. This matter will be before the committee at its regular meeting in June. And there is no doubt about the fact that, as in the past, negroes will not be allowed to vote in our primaries.

"As to the other things in the senator's statement, I will say that as far as I am concerned, the question as to whether or not the committee has the legal authority to bar him and others in the same position from the state ticket will be tried in the courts and not in the newspapers."

Scurry Approves Ruling

Judge Edgar Scurry, chairman of the Wichita county Democratic executive committee, while taking no official cognizance of the protest move, Tuesday again invited the rank and file of Democrats who voted for Herbert Hoover to "come home." He said he expected to call no meetings and to make no immediate move. He expressed approval of the action of the state committee, and the belief that Texas Democrats would "come on in and vote" under the ruling of the committee.

"The committee did not refuse the bolters a place on the ticket in the next primary because they bolted," he declared, "but because they went into the Democratic primaries and conventions in 1928 and solemnly pledged themselves to vote for the Democratic nominees in the general election. This they did not do, but broke that pledge. In this way they were guilty of an act carrying moral turpitude, and for this immoral act the committee has refused to permit their names on the ticket. The rank and file are cordially invited to come home. Only the misleaders are barred from our ticket."

OIL MEN URGE DOLLAR TARIFF

States, without paying the production tax assessed against domestic production in Texas, Oklahoma, and other states.

"If the United States had half the grit that Great Britain has, this company would not even be allowed to do business here," he said.

Secretaries Hurley and Wilson were called in by the president to talk with the group at the White House, but later no comment was forthcoming from any source.

Attorney Speaks

Others who urged congress to "preserve the American market for American producers and refiners" were Robert Winborun, attorney general of Colorado, the personal representative of Governor Adams of that state and James H. Gardner, president of the Gardner Petroleum corporation.

Franklin said a protective tariff on oil was "essential to national defense, the life of the domestic industry and the welfare of all business enterprises in producing sections of the nation."

"The United States market should be saved for the domestic industry and not given to a handful of firms importing foreign oils," Franklin contended.

"The oil industry is not the only one to consider. If it had not been for oil revenues, hundreds of thousands of farmers in producing states would have starved to death. Bankers, merchants, schools, highways, in fact every business enterprise in oil states, depends to a great extent on oil revenues. In Oklahoma alone, the loss to schools and highways from oil revenue in 1928 amounted to $5,000,000."

Kaysee Air Tourists Spend Night in Dallas

Millions More stop "dosing" COLDS

EVERY year since the introduction of Vicks VapoRub, more and more people have given up the old-fashioned way of "dosing" colds and turned to this modern external method. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from "needless "dosing."

Mothers of young children especially appreciate Vicks, because it cannot upset delicate stomachs as "dosing" is so apt to do. Just rubbed on, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster; and, at the same time, it gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

To keep pace with the ever-increasing demand for this better method of treating colds, the famous Vick slogan has again been changed, as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

Doctors Despair Of Saving Taft

Asheville, N. C., went for an automobile ride this afternoon.

President Hoover announced acceptance of his resignation, proffered yesterday, a few hours after his arrival. Mr. Hoover praised Mr. Taft for his long and distinguished service for the nation, in a letter to the jurist.

Taft Taken Home

The retiring chief justice, whose resignation was announced yesterday a few hours before President Hoover appointed Charles Evans Hughes to his place, arrived today from Asheville, N. C., and was taken from his train in a wheelchair. He was taken immediately to his Wyoming avenue home and placed in bed.

A wan smile, a mere shadow of the white-whiskered Taft countenance, greeted attendants who lifted him from the train. He was wheeled out under the great marble arch he entered in 1909 when he was inaugurated president. Only a handful, including two secretaries and a group of newspaper men, were there, in contrast with the great crowds which cheered him in that inauguration long ago.

"Always in Good Humor" says Bill "and my Folks, too"

Happy Days' Message for all Grown-Ups in Letter from Baby

YOUNG Bill Freeman, Jr., of 707 South Street, Key West, Florida, has started in early telling the world his secret of health. "I don't know that I would have been the cause for divorce" writes Bill, through his mother, "but certainly the first three months of my life my mother was a nervous wreck, and so was I. I never saw father because he didn't like my disposition—and every day it was a fight at our house—either castor oil or an enema, and I was just about ready to quit home.

"Finally, they started in giving me a half teaspoonful of Nujol night and morning. I am five months old now, and I take Nujol every other night, which keeps me so well regulated that I am always in good humor, and so are my folks. Mother says she will be glad to answer any questions regarding my health and happiness."

William's mother has discovered for him, as you see, the simple secret that many a person never finds, even in a long lifetime—the secret of the brimming, buoyant, joyous happiness that comes from bodily health.

How simple it is, after all. No drugs, no medicines, no irritating cathartics. Just simple and natural lubrication which our bodies need as much as any machine.

Nujol is not absorbed by the body; it is non-fattening; it can form no habit; it cannot hurt the smallest baby. What it does is keep our bodies internally clean of the poisons we all have and which, unless they are swept away as regularly as clock work, give us headaches, make us feel sick, low in our minds, blue down on the world.

Nujol is as tasteless and colorless as pure water. Start this very night and see how different you will feel after a few days. Keep your body clean inside with Nujol. You can buy it at any drug store in a sealed package. It costs but a few cents and it makes you feel like a million dollars. With millions of people all over the world keeping well with Nujol there is no reason why you, too, should not be joyous, full of pep, with the happiness that comes of good health. Get a bottle today!

VETS TO FORM CHOW LINE

200 Expected at Legion Party Tonight

"Nicky, Nicky, Nicky,
"Come and get your soup!"

And at the sound of this familiar old army bugle call, ex-service men at the special meeting of Pat Carrigan post, American Legion, at the memorial auditorium Wednesday evening, will form chow lines and pass by huge steaming kettles of regular army feed, beans and all, to have their mess cans filled.

The entire affair will be conducted in old-time army style, according to J. F. Friberg, adjutant of Pat Carrigan post. The mess sergeant and his kitchen police will be outfitted in white caps and aprons, dipping the chow with big ladles. Fancy serving and trimmings will be "entirely bunko," Adjutant Friberg said. "It's going to be a regular feed, to bring back old-times."

One of the principal speakers will be Luther Hoffman. Entertainment features will be under the direction of Robert L. Mathis. Ex-service men from Burkburnett, Electra, Iowa Park, Henrietta, Archer City and all other surrounding towns have been invited to attend, whether they belong to the legion or not. A crowd of about 200 is expected, Adjutant Friberg said.

Measure Would Stop Gambling in Cotton

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (INS)—Designed to end gambling on the cotton market, a bill defining and prohibiting manipulation was introduced in the senate today by Senator Ransdell, Democrat of Louisiana.

Providing for licensing of all cotton future exchanges, the measure would allow one notice and one delivery day each month, would eliminate New York as a delivery center for cotton and limit future contract deliveries to four deep seaports in cotton growing states.

Penalties, including fines and imprisonment, would be provided to insure observance of the Ransdell bill, introduced as an amendment to the Smith-Lever cotton futures law.

Mrs. Hutchinson Denied $300,000 Heart Balm

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4. (UP)—It required only 20 minutes for a jury of four men and eight women to decide that Mrs. Edith P. Taylor did not steal the love of Samuel S. Hutchinson, wealthy Chicago and Hollywood film distributor, with whom she lived for 20 years.

Prior to the verdict, Mrs. Mattie Dean Hutchinson, who was suing Mrs. Taylor for $300,000 on grounds of alienation of affections, heard herself branded by Defense Attorney Byron Hanna as a vindicative woman who sought to avenge herself for loss of a husband's love by impoverishing her rival.

Farm Board Approves Plan of Cooperative

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (UP)—Approval of arrangements completed by the American Cotton Cooperative association for taking over all marketing activities of various member state cooperative associations has been given here by the federal farm board.

The association's plan to finance the handling of all cotton of the various state member associations also were approved by the board. Ample loans have been made by the board to enable the association to carry out this program.

Capper Sees Success For London Conference

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (INS)—Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, predicted in a radio speech today that the naval limitations conference now in session in London would be a success. He also remarked about Senator Robinson's admonition over an international radio hookup Sunday for the peoples of the world to be patient. Robinson, Democratic floor leader from Arkansas, is an American delegate at the conference.

Capper said the "be patient plea" caused many senators to laugh because "Senator Robinson's patience during the protracted debate and deliberations in the senate is well known to all his colleagues."

Coolidge's Tabloid History Confined To Eight Events and Three Names

Admission of Texas Gets Call Over World War and Cal's Name Will Outrank That of Lincoln

By WALTER BROWN

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 4. (AP)—Former President Coolidge's tabloid history for the Mount Rushmore, S. D., memorial is to be as limited in historical references as it will be sparing in words.

Eight events, considered the most epochal in the evolution of the colonies, are listed for inscription. These were selected by the design committee of memorial commission, Gutzon Borglum, designer of the project, and one of the committee, said. The sculptor is spending the winter here.

The names of Washington and Lincoln may not appear in the engraved history; the names of Jefferson and Roosevelt likely will, while Mr. Coolidge's name is certain to be etched in the granite wall of the Black hill's peak.

The memorial will consist of colossal figures of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, and the Coolidge history, hewn upon the 1,000-foot side of the mountain.

The eight events which Mr. Coolidge will touch upon include:

1776—Declaration of Independence.
1787—Framing of the constitution.
1803—Louisiana purchase.
1846—Admission of Texas as a state.
1848—Oregon boundary settlement.
1849—Admission of California.
1865—Civil war ends.
1907—Completion of the Panama canal.

Mr. Coolidge's wordage is limited to the number that can be inscribed in a space 90 feet by 130 feet and cut in such dimensions that they may be read three miles away. Those conditions limit the history to 500 words.

Water 11 Feet Beneath Surface of Ground Freezes Over

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, Texas, Feb. 4.—This is a "well story"—not a fish story—which is vouched for by reliable citizens of Nocona and farmers residing near here.

During the severe spell of cold weather which recently gripped Texas, a well about four miles from Nocona froze over and on investigation, it was found to be 11 feet from top of ground to the water and the ice measured almost two inches in thickness. The water in the well is about 17 feet deep. Well is boxed in and a square opening through which water is drawn. It has been dug 40 years, used all the time and never known to be dry or frozen over before.

Chest Leader Warns Of Fake Solicitors

A warning was issued Tuesday to citizens of Wichita Falls who have in the past few days contributed to persons soliciting financial aid in the name of the Salvation Army.

No campaign for funds is being conducted at this time by the Salvation Army, according to Miss Myrle Neely, executive secretary of the community chest, and none of the chest organizations at any time conduct campaigns without the consent of the chest board and in time of actual need. Each of the organizations obtains its funds from the general chest fund which is raised by a single drive, none of them staging an individual campaign, Miss Neely said. It has been reported, she said, that a woman has been going about the city soliciting funds and giving the impression the money was for the Salvation Army.

Trial of Plumber in Alleged Attempted Attack Set Feb. 10

Trial of R. J. Simpson, 25-year-old plumber charged with attempted criminal assault, has been tentatively set in the 89th district court during the week of Feb. 10, according to an announcement from Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, Tuesday afternoon.

Simpson was indicted by the 30th district grand jury last week on charges brought by a 12-year-old Wichita Falls girl. He is under a $10,000 bond.

Settings for the week include the trial of Josephine Nichols, negress, charged with a second burglary offense under the habitual criminal act, scheduled to be called on Monday morning. The indictment drawn against the defendant specifically alleges a former burglary conviction in Dallas. She is charged here with burglarizing the home of Nora Calico, another negress, on Thanksgiving night. The maximum penalty under the indictment as drawn involves a life term sentence, Mr. Anglin explained.

Hallie Speer, negress indicted with Jennie Lou Boyd, on robbery by assault charges, is also to be tried during the week, the attorney said. Jennie Lou Boyd was given a five-yer sentence in her trial here several weeks ago.

Other cases set for the week, with the names of the defendants and the charges brought against them follow: Marvin Lawrence, robbery; Johnnie Ivey, burglary and theft; Jim H. Kimes, burglary; Dorothy Erwin, burglary; Odell Chambless, two liquor counts; Dan Norwood and Taz Lockes, possession of a still; Roy Allen, transporting whisky; Alonzo Rogers, forgery; Alfred Jennings, driving while drunk; J. C. Grider, whisky; J. R. Zimmerman, whisky; Irwin Price, forgery; L. D. Randel, burglary; Raymond Holt, forbery; Deward McCune, disposing of mortgaged property; H. J. Fuller, forgery; Paul Krieter, theft.

"There is one item of my home treatment which never varies—the preliminary cleansing of the skin with pure soap and water at least twice a day. For this purpose I always recommend Palmolive Soap."

Antoine
5 RUE CAMBON, PARIS

"The vegetable oils of Palmolive Soap leave the skin soft, refreshed, responsive"

says the celebrated ANTOINE of Paris, who symbolizes the height of beauty culture for lovely women of two continents

Olive oil, as combined with palm oil in Palmolive Soap, produces a lather which brings out natural loveliness. It protects the skin... is safe, soothing, delicate.

"SOME clients seem to think," says Antoine of Paris, "that my treatment will give them a beautiful complexion with no more effort on their part than an occasional visit to my salon. 'You compliment me too much, madame,' I say. 'It is necessary for you to do your share between visits to my salon.'"

Antoine continues by stressing the need for soap and water cleanliness . . . and he prescribes, for this purpose, "just one soap—Palmolive."

"Its delicate yet penetrating lather," he says, "is the most effective means of clearing away every trace of dust and rouge and powder from the tiny pores of the skin."

Beauty specialist to Paris society

Paris society, New York society, the better-known figures in the theatrical world, form Antoine's exclusive clientele. He is one of the most far-famed of all Parisian beauty specialists with a reputation which extends to both England and America.

Antoine has, of course, experimented with various home beauty methods to determine which would be best. And he is convinced that nothing is so satisfactory as Palmolive.

Pure soap—olive and palm oils

Palmolive is pure. Its color is the natural color of olive and palm oils. It contains no other fats whatever. The natural odor of these oils makes unnecessary the addition of heavy perfumes.

And more than 18,900 beauty experts recognize its special advantages. They find that it cleanses as other soaps can not—that it removes impurities without skin irritation.

You should follow the advice of Antoine of Paris, who numbers among his patrons the world's smartest women.

Massage a lather of Palmolive Soap gently into the pores for two minutes. Then rinse it away with warm water, till you can actually feel the pores being freed of impurities, dirt, make-up. Then rinse with cold water . . . almost to icy temperature. There! Isn't that refreshing?

"I always recommend Palmolive Soap," says Antoine. And his clients find it ideal for the bath, as well. You will, too.

Three Art Exhibits Open To Public At Woman's Forum

An open house at the Woman's Forum Sunday, when members of the Unity club and the regular exhibit committee of the art department served as hostesses in showing the canvases of the Southern States league, did not end the interest of the public in the pictures being shown there.

A large crowd went in and out all day Sunday, and Tuesday groups were coming all the time to see the canvases in the foyer, auditorium and dining room and also the water color and etching exhibits that still hang in the upstairs club rooms.

Art teachers at several of the schools are arranging to bring groups of students to see the exhibit and in a spirit of cooperation and reciprocity, the art department has loaned the local high and both the Junior high schools a few of the water colors so the art classes may be able to study them.

The Southern States league exhibit numbers about 30 canvases. Several Texas artists are among those having work on the walls, but Polly Hoffman is the only one of Wichita Falls whose work is entered.

The last ninth annual meeting of the association was in San Antonio when artists showed their pictures and the jury passed on them. At that time, the present exhibit was chosen.

The public is invited to take advantage of the showing at any hour. The forum is open from 9 to 5 o'clock, each day.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

The person who goes through life without curiosity is, to our mind, unfortunate. For what is life if the passing show does not rouse your interest?

There's Will Durant, the philosopher of the day, writing about Modern Marriage in the last Mentor, saying that it is the greatest failure in history.

Mr. Durant alludes to the apartment that has taken the place of the individual home, as a "spiritual abomination."

So decided a statement sometimes gets on our nerves, any one has a right to his own view, even if he isn't a lecturer and philosopher.

Mr. Durant did say one thing with which we agree. In effect, he declares a childless home is one of the worst things that can happen. "Loneliness is worse than war," he states.

A home that has known children is the loneliest thing on earth when children are gone. And some one said that so long as there are children in the home one does not grow old—which we believe.

Loneliness and being alone are quite different things. Being alone at times is absolutely necessary to our existence.

We would choose being alone when it is possible; far from the noise of town and beneath trees; there we would be "bathed in stillness," as we have heard it expressed.

There's nothing quite so full of repose as a spot where the skies are almost hidden by green overhead and the only sounds are those of squirrels busy in the branches and a twitter of birds and the distant lowing of a cow and the tinkling of a cowbell.

Next, we would choose an empty church with stained glass windows. Dim lights and shadows and quietness, particularly in a Gothic church, give us the knowledge that the words were "God's first churches."

Yet we have known people who could not stand to be alone; who must be amused in every waking hour and postpone the hour for sleeping.

People who read seldom; people who find no pleasure in conversation, whom other people do not interest save in society contact or if scandal touches them. They are those who go through life without curiosity about other's minds. And we feel they are to be pitied.

And it strikes us that although everyone has a right to his own opinion, some of those opinions need correcting for we have just remembered an old man in a little town in the Mississippi delta who argued the world did not revolve around the sun, because he had hung a bucket of water on the limb of a tree to find out, and that bucket was full the next morning. At least, that old man was interesting.

Skirt Compromise Features Patou's Style Premiere

PRINCESS ALI FAZIL

PARIS, Feb. 4. (UP)—The French fashion dictators have been forced to surrender to the passive resistance of the American woman, and the short skirt will remain at least for another season.

The first style premiere, Jean Patou's opening, showed a compromise between the extreme demands for curtailment of skirts by American girls, and the original proposals of the French fashion experts, which were for "heavy armament."

As a result legs will be seen in the morning and afternoon, but will be swathed in the evening. The official skirt limits are: Afternoon dresses, 15 inches above the floor; sports clothes, 17 inches above ground; evening gowns to the ground, with an occasional five-foot train.

M. Patou stresses colors of pink, blue and a new watery green.

The most startling innovation, however, is the introduction of extremely modest bathing suits, which give the feminine beach habitue the appearance of a prim boarding school miss.

Popularity Has Price Tag on It, Miss Dix Writes

What Is the Price of Popularity?—Why This Wife Should Encourage Her Husband's Wanderlust. Shall the Middle-Aged Widower Remarry?

Dear Miss Dix—Does popularity have a price? Is a certain amount of hospitality necessary to popularity? Does a girl who is good-looking, who has a charming personality need to entertain? Does it add to a girl's popularity to have a presentable home, congenial parents and to be able to bring a boy or girl home to a meal or invite them to spend the evening?

A lot of us girls have been discussing this topic. Some think that a girl does not have to entertain at all to be popular. Others think that it helps. What do you think?

—MARY ANN.

Answer: There certainly is a price tag on popularity, and it is a staggering one. The liking of our fellow creatures is never a thing we get at bargain rates. It always comes high, and we have to pay for it not only in dollars and cents but in self-sacrifice, in self-control, in doing the things we don't want to do and in leaving undone the things we do want to do and in generally preferring others before ourselves. Let us consider some of the items on the bill for popularity:

First. There is unselfishness. No egotist, no self-centered person is ever popular. You must forgo grabbing what you want for yourself. You must consider others' pleasure and comfort before your own. You must let them have the spotlight. You must adapt yourself to others. You must jolly them instead of expecting them to jolly you. Self-abnegation is a pretty heavy price to pay for the glad hand, but you have to pay it if you get it.

Then there is attention to detail. The price of popularity is ceaseless vigilance. You have to follow up a good impression by a thousand little attentions. By remembering who people are and what they like and dislike. By writing notes of condolence and letters of congratulation. By making others feel that you have a real interest in them and their affairs.

Then you have to watch your step and keep off people's toes. Blunt-spoken people are never popular nor are those who feel that they have a sacred duty to tell people the truths they would rather die than hear. No girl is popular who goes around telling other girls that their new hats are unbecoming or that their old dresses lengthened out well. Nor does any body ever come twice to see the girl who criticizes his flivver or corrects his grammar.

To be popular you must bite back the wise crack that trembles on the tip of your tongue, no matter how witty it is. You must refrain from saying to people the things you are dying to say. You must learn to avoid an argument as you would the leprosy and you must acquire the art of walking on eggs, and all this requires not only skill and adroitness, but involves an amount of self-sacrifice that entitles one to be canonized among the martyrs.

And, finally, in order to be popular, you must learn how to endure boredom patiently and heroically. You must learn to laugh with apparent spontaneity at the joke you have heard a thousand times. You must listen with rapt attention to a thrice-told tale. You must ask for more when mothers relate to you the smart things their children said and you must beg men to tell you just how it was they pulled off that wonderful deal in stocks or made 50 miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

Oh, believe me, my child, popularity comes high, and whether it is worth the price you have to pay, goodness only knows.

As to your other question as to what part entertainment plays in a girl's popularity, I would say it is one of the most valuable first aids to getting there. Of course, a girl who never entertains may be popular with boys and have plenty of dates to go places of paid amusement, but she will soon find the doors of private houses shut in her face.

And this is only fair, for why should other girls spend their money entertaining her when she never makes any return? She becomes nothing but a social deadbeat and deserves to be dropped.

Wise mothers know that a girl never looks so attractive as against the background of home and that there is no better way to bait the mantrap than with good food, and so they see to it that their daughters' friends always find welcome on the doormat and something good to eat in the icebox. Many a girl's popularity rests upon her mother's cooking.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—My husband and I are discontented and unhappy. We are both 26 years old and have been married six years. We still love each other, but this is our trouble: My husband always had the desire to travel and never had a chance. He says he has missed a whole lot by not traveling before he was married and now he feels he is tied down and can't go, and it makes him miserable. I try to make a happy home for him, but it is no good. He wants to travel and see the world. It makes me unhappy to see him unhappy, so last night we talked it over and hit on this plan:

We are going to break up housekeeping, sell our furniture and separate. I want him to feel as free as if he were single and travel to his heart's content. I will keep on working and board somewhere. I know it will break my heart for a while, but it will be better than to go on living the way we are now. We have no children. Never will have any. What shall we do?

TWO BABES IN THE WOODS.

Answer—I think you are taking a very wise and practical way of settling your trouble and the only way of curing your husband of his wanderlust.

A suppressed desire can eat the very heart out of any of us and not only ruin our hapiness, but make us so cantankerous that we are a curse to those who have to live with us, and so the best thing we can do is to get it out of our systems as quickly as we can.

Therefore, if I were a man married to a woman who thought that she was wasting a grand-opera voice singing babies to sleep or that she was a second Dolores Costello who should be making films instead of making biscuits and that she sacrificed a great career by getting married, why, I would buy her a ticket on the first train out that left for Hollywood or the Metropolitan, and I would let her go up against professionals and try herself out and get rid of her yearning once and for all.

And that is the way with your husband. As long as you keep him nailed down to his own hearthstone he will be miserable and discontented longing for the far places of the earth, and he will be really farther from you across the table than he would be if he were in Singapore or Kamchatka with his thoughts turning toward you.

Let him go, and the chances are a hundred to one that he will be glad enough to come back in a year's time and stay put.

And if he really has the wandering foot urge him to get into some business that will require much traveling. Thus you will keep him and keep your love and the few weeks or months that you have him a year will be worth more to you than his whole time would be if he was discontented and felt himself a prisoner.

Also remember that blessings brighten as they fade, and the home that is so distasteful to him now will look mighty good to him when he is away from it.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Favorite Books of Wichita Women

MRS. BEN G. ONEAL

With a wealth of good literature at hand, Mrs. Ben G. Oneal declared it is a hard thing to name her favorite book. In the classification of them, she says immediately that books of travel are her first choice and of all the books of travel, she likes best the journey with Steffanson into "The Friendly Arctic." And then she quickly qualified that statement by saying at least she did until Texas became the arctic itself; she might feel different now, but anyway, she has traveled with him hours and hours in that fascinating book.

Next to books of travel, Mrs. Oneal chooses biography. She quoted the writer who said that reading biography had become America's favorite indoor sport, laughingly declaring it hers and her favorite biography "The Americanization of Edward Bok."

Mrs. Oneal's choice of fiction shows the lover of outdoor life, for she names as her favorite that beautiful little story of James Lane Allen's "The Kentucky Cardinal." She never sees a redbird, that the beautiful spirit of that story is not expressed to her. The caging of a redbird, the putting to torture of that wild, free bird because the woman willed it, is a thing the lover of nature and out-of-doors can never forget.

Rites Held for Young Victim of Rifle Shot

Funeral services for William D. Nichols, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Nichols, 1415 Thirty-fourth street, who died in a local hospital late Monday as a result of the accidental discharge of a rifle in his home Sunday night, were held Tuesday afternoon from the chapel of the Hines mortuary with Rev. T. J. Furniss, pastor of the South Side Baptist church, officiating. Interment was in Rosemont.

Besides the parents, the boy is survived by a 14-month-old sister, Mary Ella.

The child died about 7:35 o'clock Monday evening as a result of complications which resulted from the wound in the neck caused by the rifle bullet. Loss of blood from the wound, which at first was not considered serious, also contributed to a weakening of the boy's resistance, physicians said.

"ROUNDED SLIMNESS" DECREE OF FASHION

Changes in Style Demand Return to Normal Diet

The flat, skinny figure is no longer in vogue. Slimness is to be desired, but in the words of an international authority "rounded slimness" should be the goal of every woman.

In attaining "rounded slimness," diet plays a very important part. Foods formerly avoided are recommended in every day's menu. These include meat, eggs, milk and plenty of vegetables and fruit. Cereals with milk or cream and sprinkled with sugar are also important in the diet for "rounded slimness."

Particular attention should be paid to desserts. Puddings, custards, fruit pies and ice cream not only have food value but complete the meal in a most satisfying way. Candy is also an ideal dessert. And for variation try cream cheese and crackers with jelly or jam.

To avoid monotony in the diet, many foods can be improved by a little sugar. This is especially true of vegetables which often are tasteless because they do not reach the home immediately after they are picked. For example—spinach, tomatoes, carrots, cabbage and peas are much improved in flavor by adding a dash of sugar. A pinch of salt to a dash of sugar is a good rule to follow.

Aside from the enjoyment that sugar brings, it plays two important roles. First, it furnishes energy; and second, it helps consume excess fat which might otherwise be added to the body. Good food promotes health and beauty. The Sugar Institute.

Hospital Preference
proves the importance of Kotex to your health

AMERICA'S great hospitals (85% of them) are now using Kotex absorbent. Think what assurance of safety and comfort this gives you.

Cellucotton—not cotton

This is sometimes known as Cellucotton absorbent wadding. It is not cotton, but a cellulose product which, for sanitary purposes, performs the same function as the softest of cotton, with 5 times the absorbency.

It is well designed, it won't twist and bulge, it can't pack. Sometimes there is a deceptive softness about a pad which soon turns to chafing, uncomfortable stiffness after it's worn. That isn't true of Kotex, as you will soon discover when you try it.

NEGRO YOUTH SHOT TO DEATH

Ed Spriggs, 56, Jailed After Boy of 17 Dies

Isaac Johnson, 17, negro, died at 9:45 Tuesday night from four bullet wounds received in a cafe at 707 Fort Worth street about two hours earlier. Ed Spriggs, another negro, is being held in the Wichita county jail pending the filing of charges Wednesday morning.

The boy died as he was being taken from the operating room at the Wichita General hospital. Two shots had pierced his chest, and a bullet went through each arm. Spriggs, who is 56 years old, made no statement.

Eye-witnesses told Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, and Sheriff W. G. Bralley that the shots were fired before any word was exchanged between the two men. Johnson, they said, had been seated in the cafe when Spriggs entered. When the young man rose from his table to borrow a cigaret from another man, the shooting began. After the first two shots, fired from a .41 single action Colt pistol, Johnson dived for a table, pulling it over him as a shelter, the witnesses said.

No motive for the shooting was disclosed Tuesday night. Police officers said Johnson had come to headquarters about 30 minutes before he was shot, declaring that another negro was after him with a gun. The quarrel, he told officers, developed when the other man took seriously something Johnson had said in jest.

Spriggs was arrested by Motorcycle Officer J. A. Pogue and M. A. Purdue, employe of a detective agency, as he left the cafe. Murder charges will be filed Wednesday morning, Mr. Anglin said.

Senior Vaudeville Headliner Proves Dazzling Number

By MARGARET FLEMING

Hearty acclaim from a near-capacity audience of approximately 1,400 persons greeted the seven-act bill of vaudeville entertainment presented by the Wichita Falls High school seniors in the Junior college auditorium Tuesday night under the direction of Miss Juanita Kinsey.

The program consisted of a variety of vocal talent, and acrobatic stunts with slap-stick comedy mixed throughout.

"American Beauties," the crowning feature of the night's program, kept the audience in suspense as to what was to happen next. The 30 most beautiful girls in the high school, selected by Harry Olsen, artist of the Southwestern Engraving company, presented an array of color which dazzled the eyes of the onlookers. John Flynn, the master artist in the act soon became aware that the beauty which he was looking for could be found among the 20 young ladies. John had as his assistants Orville Medford, Pat Henry Jr. and Joe Handcock with Homer Lee as the studio boy.

Screen sighs from looking at the shimmering flounces of the beauties the crowd was kept in good spirits by the two high school students who were looking for Harry Olsen. "The Man Hunt" lightened the evening's entertainment by several appearances of Vernon Black and Thomas Beaty in search of Mr. Olsen, who had helped them to select the beauties.

All music was furnished by the high school orchestra under the direction of Miss Hortense Vaughn.

All children love the rich, fruity flavor of California Fig Syrup. A pure vegetable product, it doesn't gripe or sicken. Well-Drilled Bandit Squad Loots Main Telegraph Office in Detroit

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 4. (UP)—Ten bandits lugged a machine gun into the main office of the Western Union Telegraph company here tonight, held up half a dozen clerks and one woman customer and escaped with $3,000.

The office is on the main floor of a downtown skyscraper in the center of Detroit's banking district. The leader of the gang covered every one in the office with the gun while his nine assistants ransacked cash drawers for their loot.

Hugh M. Griffin, office manager, had locked most of the day's receipts in the safe. The robbers apparently were afraid to take time enough to attempt to open it. Griffin said they seemed to have thorough knowledge of the office lay-out and that they went through the routine of holding it up much as soldiers would go through a military drill.

RUBIO ENTERS OFFICE TODAY

Many Americans Attracted To Inauguration

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 4. (AP)—Pascual Ortiz Rubio, a typical example of the Mexican leaders developed in the revolutionary period since 1911, will be inaugurated tomorrow as president of the Mexican republic.

In the prime of life when Francisco Madero became the first revolutionary president after the overthrow of the Porfirio Diaz dictatorship, Ortiz Rubio has risen to the supreme office of the republic through a series of important civilian posts.

The term to which he was elected last November was to fill out that of the assassinated President-elect Obregon. As the candidate of the national revolutionary party, he overwhelmingly defeated his principal rival, Jose Vasconcelos.

Provisional President Portes Gil, whom he succeeds, will hold the office of secretary of the interior in Ortiz Rubio's cabinet.

The inaugural ceremonies have brought the greatest gathering of Americans to Mexico City in 20 years. Hotels were so crowded tonight that many visitors had to return to the United States. Seventy excursionists from Wichita, Kan., and other Midwestern cities were among them.

The overflow extended even to the railroad yards, which were crowded with long lines of Pullman cars serving as temporary hotels. Special trains from San Diego, St. Louis, San Antonio, New Orleans and other American cities arrived today to swell the crowds.

'The Enemy' Again Brings Out Fine Characterization

By W. L. UNDERWOOD

Presenting before a near-capacity crowd the second performance of by far the heaviest production accomplished during its current history, Wichita Falls Little theater Tuesday night amply justified its continued existence as a valuable cultural asset to the community.

Channing Pollock's "The Enemy," frankly if not radically devoted to the theme of war's abolition, carries dramatic possibilities so heavy that few if any Little theater casts might be found able to compass its full reach. But one of the most commendable features of the February season of the Little theater is that it chose so worth while a play, and afforded it not only a highly creditable interpretation, but one which contained numerous climaxes worthy of ranking professional talent.

Miss Margarite Fisher as Paull, Jimmie Fox as Jan, and Wheeler Patterson in the role of Fritz Winkleman each were given one opportunity Tuesday night, and each took full advantage of the moment to present characterizations as poignant in effect as they were impassioned in delivery.

For consistent performances throughout the play, little better enactment of character could be asked than that supplied by J. W. Thorne and Edward Smith. Mr. Thorne was excellently cast as Prof. Arndt, sincerely idealistic pacifist, while the always suave Mr. Smith made even the English Bruce Gordon loved in Vienna. Virgil Childress, Mrs. Sterling Crumpler, and Roy E. Carter contributed effective supporting impersonations. The play still may be seen, Wednesday and Thursday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (INS)—A group of senators and congressmen from southern states told President Hoover today the proposed $3,000,000 the budget bureau has affixed as an appropriation to aid southern farmers in the flood-swept area was utterly inadequate.

They explained Secretary of Agriculture Hyde approved a $6,000,000 loan but this amount was cut in half by the budget bureau.

U. S. KEEPS ITS 'SAXON SOUL'

Scotch Clergyman Speaks To Omahans

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 4. (AP)—The United States still retains "its Anglo-Saxon soul," despite the contention that the nation is a "melting pot," Right Rev. F. L. Deane, Episcopal bishop of Aberdeen, Scotland, told professional men here.

"We joke about America and Americans at times, but we feel we are privileged because of our friendship," he stated in an address last night.

"You Americans invented the League of Nations, you know, and then wouldn't join it; you invented the treaty of Vervailles and wouldn't sign it; you invented the cocktail and now you won't drink it.

"Despite these occasional inconsistencies we admire you immensely," Bishop Deane added.

"We admire the cheerfulness and fortitude with which you met that Wall street crash that would most certainly have spread ruin in any other nation.

"We love your ambassador at London because he smokes a pipe upside down and because he always uses picturesque language. He has captured the heart of England."

The Scotch bishop urged that the United States "abandon its ridiculous tradition of isolation and assume responsibility for leadership of the human race."

Cooperative Cafe Venture Fails

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (INS)—The principles of Trotsky and Lenin don't work out in New York.

That was revealed today when it was announced Leon Dobkin, a "capitalistic" restauranteur had taken over the cooperative cafeteria of New York communists and would operate on the usual cafe business line. Under the operation of the communists the cafeteria failed to pay.

"More eating and not so much talking" will be Dobkin's business motto, he said.

Seventy-five per cent of American industry is now electrified.

Herbert Kaufman's PROHIBITION PLAYS A JOKER Daily Editorial

A large body of citizens object to the 18th amendment because they do not believe in prohibition in any form.

Another considerable group holds that moral regulation is not a constitutional function. Many of the country's very distinguished lawyers insist that the federal government has no more inherent right to declare what we shall drink than to determine what we shall eat.

And there are millions of Americans, still strongly opposed to the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, who have grown so disgusted with the hypocrisies and ruthlessness of enforcement, that they would rather see the Volstead act liberalized and the Jones act repealed, than suffer an indefinite continuance of the undemocratic processes through which the 18th amendment must apparently be validated.

The president is not privileged to express a private opinion on these matters.

His oath of office specifically designates him as the dispassionate servant and sworn defender of the constitution; and under that oath, he is committed to execute every enactment of congress, which body alone may establish federal legislation and penalties—or revoke them.

But it is the president's constant duty to investigate the circumstances of all administration, and his prerogative to submit conclusions based upon such surveys for house and senate consideration.

Accordingly, he has requested congress to consider certain recommendations from the Wickersham commission, among which is partial abolition of the immemorial right of jury trial for misdemeanors.

The Wickersham committee, however, seems ill-advised in urging that minor prohibition offenses be tried before united commissioner.

If congress consents to this expedient for the clearing of crowded dockets, the sacredest franchise of the Anglo-Saxon peoples will be imperiled.

Since the days of King John, English-speaking folk have never been denied recourse to trial by their peers.

And because we continue to control that bulwark against judicial extremity and incompetence, the rabidities of Puritanism and the tyrannical purposes of the Anti-Saloon league have been largely defeated.

The sudden willingness of the house judiciary committee—notoriously under bluenose control—to report the Dyer and Sabbath bills—after 10 years' refusal to submit similar measures to open debate—is a subtly laid trap for the wets—a finesse borrowed from military strategy.

The drys are offering Greek gifts to modification. They haven't the slightest intention of seriously considering 2.75 beer, or of setting Uncle Sam up in the dispensary business. They simply aim to distract popular attention from the commissioner issue.

Bishop Cannon and Clarence True Wilson would rather capture the hip flask and cocktail shaker in that politically controlled office, than in any precedent-restricted courtroom.

Once they succeed, the entire influence of militant churchdom and all its allies will be concentrated upon securing the exclusive appointment of hanging commissioners—bigots chosen with a record of life-long zeal for the White Ribbon cause.

And it's dollars to crullers that they'll get by with it.

The prohibition muddle appears destined to pass from bad to worse before the republic wakes to the realisation of its betrayal by false stewards.

Meanwhile, that haircloth shirt wardrobe in the White House bids fair to find another ticklish situation added to the collection.

Only prohibitionists and teetotalers will be appointed as federal prohibition enforcement officers, says Attorney General Mitchell. They'll be in bad company, won't they?

Surely the scientist who says there are 21,000 causes of annoyance never has met her relatives.

Who Will Profit?

THIS NEWSPAPER has no quarrel with those Democrats who saw fit to leave the party in the last presidential election; neither does it hold brief for the state Democratic executive committee which has refused to allow bolters to become candidates in the 1930 primary. It has printed many communications urging that the party primary be thrown open to both candidates and bolters who refused to support the ticket in 1928.

A somewhat different matter, however, is presented in the resolutions for a mass meeting here. This petition claims that the action of the state executive committee is in effect the disfranchisement of some 375,000 qualified voters. In this newspaper's opinion, such a statement is a flagrant misrepresentation of the committee's ruling. It is apparently designed to mislead and deceive all those who left the Democratic party because of the candidacy of Alfred E. Smith, the majority of whom may now be ready to return to the ranks of the party which, in Texas at least, is charged with the duty of giving this state good government.

Whether we voted the Democratic ticket straight in 1928, or whether we left the party for Mr. Hoover, we should keep in mind in selecting our officials in the coming primary that neither Mr. Smith nor Mr. Hoover is running for office in Texas. We have no intelligent reason for believing that any of the qualities of Mr. Hoover have been conferred on candidates by the mere fact of their support of him, nor can we believe that the evil many attributed to the cause of Mr. Smith has come to repose in the hearts of the thousands of Texans who gave him their support.

Who, then, would have us revive the bitter feeling of 1928 on the false charge that citizens have been disfranchised? It seems to this newspaper it could be only those who are fearful of their own petty success if their candidates are given intelligent analysis on the basis of merit. If the rights of any candidate have been violated, there is ample time for the state courts to rectify the wrong. After that the candidate may have recourse to the general election, where the voter, independent, Republican and Democrat, may pass upon his qualifications as a man and as a candidate, without benefit of hokum.

Those who left the party in 1928 have a work in 1930 which is as important as that they conceived two years ago. Theirs is the duty of being not led by small men into a consideration of false issues, but of aplying the test to all candidates: "Is this the man to give Texas and Wichita county the best government in the next two years?" The Record News is not particularly disturbed at the prospect of such a verdict. It is fearful of the revival of the bitter feeling which divided us two years ago.

The Hunt for Romance

IN DENVER a man named Louis Kiefer is about to celebrate his 90th birthday.

Ninety is a fairly advanced age: not exactly uncommon, but still rather noteworthy. What makes Mr. Keifer's birthday interesting, however, is the memories that he has to talk about.

This man came to the United States in 1856 on an old square-rigger. He became a river pilot on the Mississippi; in 1862 his ship got caught in the jam below New Orleans when Farragut brought his fleet up past the forts and seized the Confederacy's greatest seaport, and so Keifer got an excellent view of that spectacular affair.

Then, in 1868, he crossed the plains to Santa Fe, traveling at night through a region where ranch houses lay in smouldering ruins from the attacks of Indians. He became a miner in the mountains of Colorado and New Mexico, and had enough narrow escapes from Indians to fill a book.

All in all, an exciting and colorful past. Yet this is what Keifer told Denver newspaper reporters:

"Those were thrilling days, but there is more romance and adventure in the world today."

That is an attitude that few of the old-timers take. Generally they tell us that the world has fallen on evil days. They consider this a soft and flabby generation, devoid of thrills and many leagues removed from anything like real adventure.

But not this man. His life is a regular adventure story, yet he believes today a more adventuresome and exciting time than yesterday. And this ought to be rather consoling for those of us who feel that we have been cheated out of our share of romance by being born too late.

Adventure and romance, after all, are things that are found inside of a man's head and heart. They don't depend on externals. A young man who comes to town from a farm, gets a job in a railroad office and works his way up by slow degrees can make of his experience a romance as gaudy as anything out of Marryat or Stevenson; and, conversely, a man who has not got romance in his heart could go by dog sledge from Nome to Hudson's Bay and be as bored as if he were riding downtown on a street car.

This chap in Denver has the right idea. He had an exciting life, but he knows he could do just as well if he were starting in again right now, even if the windjammers and yelling Indians have gone to join the dodo. Romance is strictly up to us. If we have it in us we'll find it. If we haven't it is no use for us to go looking for it.

The Chemist's Responsibility

A LONDON chemist predicts that news print paper may eventually be made out of air, so that exhaustion of the pulp wood forests which now constitute the source of supply will not put all the newspapers out of business.

His statement recalls, once again, the supreme importance to this modern world of synthetic materials. We are using up our natural resources at a terrific rate. Within a few decades some of our most essential raw materials will be practically gone; wood pulp, out of which news print is made, is only one of them.

If the chemist can find new ways to make these things we shall not have to worry. If they can't, the world is going to face some extremely tough problems during the next century.

Quotations Worth Noting

"If Christ were to appear on the earth today and attend a wedding feast in the nation's capital . . . and again perform his miracle of transforming water into wine, some fanatical prohibition demagogue would no doubt appear before a grand jury two years later and demand that the Savior be indicted on no other evidence than a keen sense of smell and laboratory experience."—Representative W. C. Schafer.

"I hope that divorce will be made easier in the sense that there will be a uniform set of valid reasons for divorce, intelligently written, in all the states of the Union."—Dudley Field Malone.

Query

Time is healing the poignant sting,
Hurts mend quickly when lads are young;
Vague the songs that we used to sing,
Dim the night when we kissed and clung.
Yet at times when the low winds sigh,
Visions drift in a ghostly train;
Love and laughter—and you and I
Eyes a-glow in a rose-swamped lane.

Now the bruise is trifling thing,
Gay and eager I face the day;
Fear and sorrow are on the wing,
New lures call in a breathless way.
Yet at night when the moon rides high,
Thoughts turn back to a vanished year—
Broken vows, and a low good-bye,
And was it worth it, my dear, my dear?
—J. P. S.

Oap!

Lester Allen of "Top Speed" would have you believe he actually overheard this repartee between a dramatic critic and his girl friend during a first-night.

"I suppose," she said, "you've seen worse shows than this."

The critic didn't answer.

"I said," she repeated, "that you've probably seen worse ones than this."

"I heard you the first time," he replied, "I was just trying to think."

The Tragedy of It

Some players can find the most amusing things to say about the tragedy of failure. There is this overheard repartee between two actors near Forty-seventh street.

"How long you been in show business?"

"Seven years. Three with Pantages, Gus Sun and the Orpheum Circuits, and four in front of the Palace theater."

Reason Enough

Two dialecticians met on Delancey street yesterday. "Poor Sem Goldberg met mit hen hawful haccident last night and hizz in de hasspital," moaned the first, "so why dun't you sending heem a talegrem uff sympatee?"

The following day they met again. "Did you send Sam a talegrem?" asked the one who did the suggesting the day before.

"Nope, I deedn't, was the reply, "I wrutt a letter instead, because hell gatt it just as soon as a talegrem."

"How can dis be?"

"Because hizz still unconscious!"

Kidding a Kidder

Of course we don't believe he said it, or anything of the sort, but according to an unreliable eye-witness to the "Mysterious-Person"-Who-punched-Dorothy-Knapp-at-the Beaux-Arts-Ball-incident, Rudy Vallee was asked why he didn't rush to her defense. Rudy is supposed to have replied: "I got enough trouble as it is—but if anyone thinks I'm afraid then I'll fight any woman in the house who is my weight!"

In Rebuttal

Robert E. Sherwood, fed up with "people who wouldn't live in New York if you gave it to them," argues that New York is not interpreted to him in terms of vice, crime, chorus girls and lobster palaces. It is, he says, purely and simply a pleasant place in which to live. He cannot think of New York as a great forbidding mass of cold, grey granite or a city that "has no heart." O. Henry found on Manhattan island beauty and warmth and the frail tissue of which humanity is made. He alone, of all the strangers who sought shelter in our midst, managed to see us as we really are. He pried beneath the skin and discovered flesh and blood. And Mr. Sherwood says that he has a daughter who is destined to grow up in New York and he doesn't plan to get her away from the false gayety and hypocrisy as soon as she graduates from the kindergarten.

"I promise this," thunders Sherwood, "not because of callousness, but because I know my little girl will be as safe in New York City as she would be, in let us say—Herrin, Illinois."

Scene

He was considered a man about town (wise guy to you!) when Rector's was one of the Broadway museums. He isn't as spry as he was then, but he still has a lot of coin and often frequents the messier speakeasies where the big idea is to get a sucker drunk quick and then "clip" him for all his pockets contain. The other 5 o'clock in the yawning he was being yessed by four hoc'.sses and the "wine" for which he was paying $36 per quart was going to his knees.

"Yeshiree," he boasted, "you girlish think you're shmart. Why—I've forgotten more than you'll ever know!"

"But," cooed one of them as she lifted his Waltham, "you shouldn't have."

Newspaper Man Stuff

Speaking of Walter Hoban's father, as we frequently do, there was the time when Hoban Sr. was doing politics for the Philadelphia Record (don't stop me if you've written it) and he drew $300 for expenses to cover a national convention. Making out his swindle sheet upon his return to town he accounted for all the money except $50. After much head-wagging he finally jotted down: "For upholding the dignity of the Philadelphia Record—$50."

The city editor blue-penciled that item and shot it back to Hoban, who then went to see the managing editor about it. The managing editor went to see William Singerly, the owner, and placed it on his desk.

"Pay it," instructed the boss; "it's damb cheap!"

After All These Months!

According to a writer named Bide Dudley of the Indianapolis (Ind.) Star: "When St. John Ervine came to New York 15 months ago, arguments were soon going on between St. John and Walter Winchell and between St. John and Heywood Broun. The reason was, the Britisher had his own ideas and spoke right out with them. He became the butt of much ridicule but none of it was deserved."

Merrily we roll a log.

It Could Happen

Then there's the one about the theatrical manager who was on his death bed. His grief-stricken frau, at his bedside, turned to the dramatic critic who was trying to register sorrow, and she spoke regretfully because there had been no mention in the newspapers of her husband's illness.

"You must be mistaken, my dear," comforted the old meanie, "did you look under the head of 'Amusements'?"

"LOVEJOY" : — : By : Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER XXVIII

Steve was not in his office.

"He'll be down in about a half hour," said the girl who answered his telephone.

"When he comes in please ask him to call Mrs. Nicholson, and tell him that it's important," Lovejoy told her, and she gave her the number of the beauty shop.

"I'm expecting an important telephone message," she said to the girl at the appointment desk. "When it comes please let me know. I'm Mrs. Nicholson."

"Yes, I remember you, Mrs. Nicholson," the girl answered with a quick smile. "You're Mrs. Alderson's friend, aren't you?"

It was Aline who had brought Lovejoy to Dorby and Johansson's in the first place.

"They'll do wonders for you," she had said to her. "They touch up my hair once a month—and they give me a milk pack every week of my life. You ought to have your hair rinsed with henna to make it just a little redder, Lovejoy. You'd be a knock-out with red hair."

Lovejoy had scorned the idea at the time.

But it had kept coming back to her . . . . Perhaps it would improve her looks to have a henna rinse. To have her hair "brightened up" just the least bit.

"Could I have a shampoo and a henna rinse after my manicure?" she asked the appointment girl suddenly.

The girl nodded and shouted for another girl named Betty.

Betty was small and dark and pretty. Her hair had the gloss and color of ripe chestnuts, and it looked as if it never had had any henna or curling irons on it.

She said that she had time to give Lovejoy a rinse, and she went to work in a most business-like manner.

By half past eleven Lovejoy's lovely hair was two shades redder than it ever had been before, and the effect was startling. Her skin seemed whiter than usual and her eyebrows and thick lashes looked as black as jet.

But her hair held the smell of the henna even after two washings. So on her way out of the shop she bought a little bottle of rose perfume and emptied it over her head.

"Didn't anyone telephone for me?" she asked the girl at the appointment desk, glancing down at the little watch on her wrist.

It was ten minutes before twelve now. Surely Steve must have come down to his office by this time.

The girl shook her elaborately-waved head. "No one called for you," she said blankly.

Steve's office was in the Meridian building, only two blocks away.

On her way there Lovejoy stopped in at a flower shop and paid $3 for a little bunch of white gardenias for the front of her new green linen coat.

There was a full length mirror in the shop. She stood before it while the clerk was getting the gardenias for her and smiled at her reflection . . . The red hair surely was an improvement, she told herself—especially against the background of her green hat and suit.

There always are moments in every woman's life when she feels pretty.

And Lovejoy never had been so sure of her own beauty as she was that noon when she walked into Steve Ogleby's office.

His office girl was at her desk in the middle of the room. Beyond her the door of Steve's private office stood open and Steve was standing with his back to it, staring out of the window.

He swung around at the sound of her voice and stood waiting for her, his hands in his pockets and an old puzzled look on his face.

"I left word here for you to call me at Dorby's," Lovejoy said, coming into the room and closing the door behind her.

"I know you did," Steve answered after a moment.

He did not smile and he did not ask her to sit down. He just stood there against the bright light from the windows, looking at her.

"Weren't you going to call me?" Lovejoy asked him.

He shook his head.

"Why not?"

Steve pulled his hands out of his pockets and sat down on the corner of his desk.

"Well," he said slowly, measuring his words, "this sort of thing isn't in my line. A lot of fellows do play around with married women and think it's okeh, but—well, it just isn't in my line."

He spoke awkwardly, but his eyes met hers levelly and coolly. She saw that he meant what he was saying, and that he had thought it all out and was very sure of himself.

"But isn't it rather late in the day to decide that?" Lovejoy asked him. "This isn't the first time you and I have met each other without letting anyone know about it, Steve—"

"I know, I know," he interrupted her. "But it's the last time, Lovejoy. You see, all this winter you've been telling me how unhappy you were with your husband and letting me think that you were going to leave him—and all winter I've been falling for it."

Lovejoy felt a hot flush coming up into her face.

"But a woman who's unhappy with her husband doesn't move into a new house with him and buy a lot of new furniture—not if she's planning to divorce him at any rate," Steve's slow deep voice went on. "And I'm not messing around with any married women, thank you."

"You mean that you won't have anything to do with me so long as I live with Tom?" Lovejoy asked him. "I was only going to ask you to take me to the movies or for a drive or something harmless like that, Steve."

He didn't say a word.

"Steve, we can't talk all this over in this office," she went on after a second. "Put on your hat and let's go away out in the country somewhere and thresh it all out . . . . Steve, I don't want you to think I've been playing with you just for the fun there was in it. Steve, you know how much I think of you."

She put her head to one side and walked across the floor to him. She hated to lose him this way, and she wasn't going to if she could help it.

"I'm going to telephone the house and see if the baby's all right," she said, her hands on his coat sleeves. "And then we'll get into your car and go somewhere. Won't we, Steve?"

He did not try to stop her when she picked up the telephone from his desk and gave the number of the new house.

Norrie answered the telephone.

"I just called to see if everything was all right," Lovejoy said to her.

"Everything's just fine!" Norrie's voice was light and it sounded as if Norrie was filled just then with the joy of living. "Tom came home for lunch a few minutes ago. I'm putting the baby down for his nap and then I'm going to get a sandwich ready for Tom . . . I've ordered all the things for his party tonight."

"Good-by," said Lovejoy, and without another word she hung up.

"Tom's having a cozy little lunch at home with Norrie Shane," she said to Steve with a hard little laugh, "so I guess it's not so wicked for you and me to be here together."

She shut her eyes for just a second . . . . She could picture Tom and Norrie having lunch together at home. She could see the little cream-colored breakfast room with its flowered chints curtains and its little table set with the new blue-and-cream dishes.

Norrie would be serving the sandwiches and pouring iced tea into the new tumblers with their gold rims—Norrie, smiling and sweet-faced and eager in her crisp white clothes—

"Well, let's go." Steve's voice brought her out of her dream and back to the office. He had his hat in his hand and his light overcoat over his arm.

Lovejoy was trembling as if the summer day had suddenly turned cold when she walked out into the corridor of the building beside him.

Gasoline and the F. O. B. Idea

It is announced that the Standard Oil Company, applying the principle used in the automobile industry, will fix its prices of gasoline on a "factory" basis, plus a fixed handling charge, plus freight. The price of gas to the ultimate consumer will be figured to the tenth of a cent. Thus the price in a seaport city may be 16.3 per gallon and in a town 50 miles away 17.6.

The outlook for misunderstandings and arguments at pumping stations this spring and summer in a case when the motorists or the gas-station attendant isn't quick at fractions is splendid.

Thanks to Standard Oil, any lengthy stay at the wheel of an automobile from now on will combine the features of a tour, a mathematical workout and an anagram party.

In New York City for instance, a gallon of gas will cost you seventeen and three-tenths cents. In Yorkers, a few miles outside you must pay eighteen and three-tenths and if you go on to Brewster you will have to come across with eighteen and eight-tenths cents per gallon.

In other words no matter where you buy your gas you will come home with a vestful of pennies and only a vague idea whether you've made any errors in arithmetic or not.

Pumping Station Dialogue

"What can I get five gallons of gas for?"

"F. O. B. or delivered?"

"Delivered right in the tank."

"Seventeen and three-tenths cents a gallon, mister."

"Any extras?"

"Only the tax."

"No charge for funnel, removing and replacing the gas-cap, turning the crank or ringing the bell?"

"None."

"All right. I'll take it."

It seems like a good idea. Why not apply it to tires, pennants, pinwheels, road maps, goggles, monkey-wrenches, frankfurters, soda pop and all the other commodities that come under the head of automobile supplies. For example:

Hot Dogs

New York	10.3
Coney Island	15.6
Rockaway Beach	16.2
Staten Island	18.4
Bridgeport, Conn.	25.7

Excuse My Dust Pennants

Cleveland Ohio	50.2
Chicago, Ill.	62.4
San Francisco	73.6
Boston, Mass.	70.9
Delaware Water Gap	32.7

And how about the garage interests getting together and agreeing on overnight rates and car-washings? It would be interesting to know that you could get the b[illegible] washed in Providence, R. I. for $2.32½ cents and that by going on as far as Pawtucket you can save four and a tenth cents.

And this would be an innovation, too:

Police Fines Speeding

Charleston, S. C.	$25.32 and costs.
Richmond, Va.	$24.12
Perth Amboy, N. J.	$19.11 2-3

Slogan: "Do your reckless driving in Perth Amboy and save five dollars!"

NEW SHOOTING CHILLS CHICAGO

Beer Hustler Shot Down as Officials Wrangle

CHICAGO, Feb. 4. (INS)—Less than 10 hours after State's Attorney John A. Swanson summoned Commissioner of Police William A. Russell for a "show-down" on conditions of terrorism in Chicago which in the last four days have brought six gang murders, seven bombings, kidnapings and numerous robberies, the underworld today roared another defiance to law and order.

William Healey, 37, known as a beer hustler and minor racketeer, was lured to an alley by friends and his body pumped full of bullets. He was rushed to a hospital where physicians said he could live only a few hours.

Swanson charged flatly that known hoodlums and gunmen are allowed to congregate nightly in downtown hotels to plot acts of violence and are not disturbed by police. He demanded that drastic steps be taken immediately to end the terrorism that has existed in Chicago for the past 10 years.

The latest victim of gunmen, Healey, refused to tell police the names of his assailants although he talked freely with a brother. Detectives believe he incurred the enmity of a gang of beer runners with whom he was formerly affiliated and that his changing to a new gang prompted the shooting.

"Conditions have become positively alarming," said Swanson in explaining his conference. "Something will have to be done to stop this 'murder a day' in Chicago. Gunmen have become more open, bold and daring than ever before in the city's history."

CHICAGO'S CRIME RECORD MOUNTS

CHICAGO, Feb. 4. (INS)—Crime generally has increased in Chicago, according to figures released today by State's Attorney John A. Swanson.

His report indicates more persons were sent to prison last year than the year before, that more had been arrested and more were convicted.

Six hundred and twenty-eight were sent to the state penitentiary in 1928 and 1,004 in 1929. Three hundred and fifty-six were sent to reformatories in 1928 and the following year 536 were ordered to a reform institution.

A total of 2,154 were found guilty of crimes in 1928 and 2,774 in 1929. Of those found not guilty there were 560 in 1928 and 735 the following year.

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas, Feb. 4. (INS)—Whether or not Rebecca Bradley Rogers, who at the point of a big pistol held up and robbed the Buda National bank four years ago, will be tried for that crime again will be known in a day or two.

District Attorney Fred L. Blundell expected to announce shortly whether Rebecca will face her third trial, this time in district court here. She was tried first in Lagrange and assessed 14 years in prison, but the case was remanded and on another trial here the jury failed to agree.

Rebecca was a student at the University of Texas at the time of the robbery.

Witnesses in Druggist's Slaying Are Sought

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 4. (INS)—Three witnesses were sought today and one arrest appeared imminent as police and deputy sheriffs pressed a new investigation into the murder of John L. Glab, wealthy retired druggist who was shot to death at the door of his home on the night of June 18, 1928.

One of the witnesses sought by authorities was believed to be in Oklahoma, where Glab's widow, Hazel Glab, formerly lived. Mrs. Glab, who was held for several days after the slaying, is now in Oklahoma.

Abilene Man at Nursery Praises It

"Just Send 'Em to Me About Orgatone for This Medicine Is a Knockout," Declares Massey

East, west, north and south, all over Abilene, Orgatone is the talk of the town. People by the thousands are now using this famous medicine that is creating such a sensation, and are receiving remarkable results in restored energy.

Statements such as the following from J. D. Massey of 3317 South Third street, Abilene, Texas, while apparently amazing, are heard on all sides every day. In his statement of remarkable results his wife has obtained from Orgatone, Mr. Massey says:

"Believe me, Orgatone is just the best medicine that ever came to Abilene—it's a knockout.

"I not only praise it but my wife does, too, and we will continue to do so for many a day for it has put her in the very best of health again.

"I tell you, after every meal she used to bloat up with gas as tight as a drum and cramp up with sharp shooting pains through her stomach. It just seems like she couldn't digest a thing she ate.

"Constipation caused her no end of trouble, and she was bothered with biliousness and felt sluggish and tired all the time. Her sleep wasn't any good either, and she just felt pretty much 'all in.'

"Well, sir, when she began taking Orgatone this medicine lost no time in getting right down to the root of her trouble and now it has fixed her up so she can eat whatever she pleases, and lots of it, without a trace of gas pains, stomach cramps or indigestion afterward. Everything agrees with her now and she sleeps good, feels good and is in A-1 condition in every way.

"I know dozens of people right here in Abilene who praise and boost Orgatone just like we do and I don't hesitate to recommend this medicine to everybody. Just send 'em to me."

Genuine Orgatone is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison Drug sto e, 716 Indiana avenue.—Adv.

Finding of Diamonds Ends Silence Of 'Black Sister' of 1910 Murder

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. Feb. 4. (UP)—One of the "three black sisters" of the famous Wardlaw-Snead-Martin murder trial of 20 years ago, has revealed herself, after a long period of shunning publicity, by laying claim to two diamonds found recently in a bank vault here, it was learned today.

A telegram from Oakland, Calif., was received here signed Mary Snead. It read:

"Miss Virginia Wardlaw's diamonds were lost or stolen from Soule college. I am her heir."

The diamonds valued at several thousand dollars, were found wrapped in a black glove, such as was fashionable among women of the early years of the century.

Mrs. Snead is the surviving member of the "Black sisters," so named because of the sombre clothing they wore while wealthy residents of this small city. Her sister, Virginia, to whom the jewels apparently belonged, died in a New Jersey prison while awaiting trial for the murder of her niece, Ocey Snead. The other sister, Mrs. Caroline Martin, died in prison shortly after being sentenced. Mrs. Snead was acquitted.

Ocey Snead's nude body was found in a bath tub in a deserted East Orange, N. J., house.

National Grange Against Quota on Immigration

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.(AP)—Frederic Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, today presented the opposition of that organization to the placing of a quota limit on new world immigration to the house immigration committee.

The Grange in 1927 adopted a resolution setting forth this position, he said, adding that its members favored appointment of a commission to study the farm labor situation in the Southwest before the entry of Mexican laborers were restricted.

"If the Mexicans are partially excluded," he testified, "the farmers will have to fall back on the American and Porto Rican negroes and the Filipinos. They consider the Mexican more desirable."

EASTEP'S TRIAL TO TISHOMINGO

Attorneys Unable to Get Jury at Durant

Eastep, charged with the murder of his wife, Sarah Eastep, and Will Hughes, husband of his alleged paramour, will be tried at Tishomingo, Okla., District Judge Porter Newman ruled here today in granting a change of venue.

Judge Newman did not set a date for the trial.

Following the introduction of testimony of defense counsel in which five witnesses testified, J. A. Shirkey, county attorney, announced that he believed the selection of a jury would be difficult here because of the widespread publicity given the crime.

John Moreland and Earl Zion, deputy sheriffs, testified Eastep was rushed to the state prison immediately after his arrest for fear of mob violence.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

You

ARE PAYING FOR A PACKARD

Why not own one?

If you are driving a car similar in size to the Packard Standard Eight

—but lower in price, even by half

—then you are paying the costs of Packard transportation.

And without enjoying the advantages of Packard performance, Packard comfort, beauty and distinction.

A surprising statement! Yes. But the conservative statement of a conservative company.

It all reduces to this:

Because first cost is lower it does not follow that operation and maintenance costs are lower. They are virtually the same for the Packard Standard Eight and any car down to half its price.

And even if first cost is twice as much for the Packard Standard Eight, final cost is no greater if the Packard is kept twice as long. And it generally is.

You will want to keep your Packard, too. Its characteristic beauty of design is not depreciated from year to year by frequent and radical changes. Its motor and chassis are protected by automatic lubrication, insuring long and trouble-free life.

Let us work out the exact figures with you—comparing costs of the car you are now driving with costs of the distinguished Packard Standard Eight.

Then let us appraise your present car. If it is of average value it will make or exceed the down payment on your new Standard Eight. The remainder may be arranged in convenient monthly payments, if you prefer.

Saving Your Eyesight

For thousands of years man roamed out of doors, using his eyes constantly, looking at things far and near. His eyes were in the manner given a constant and varied exercise and as a result the sight was good because of its active use and a consequent circulation of good blood.

Within recent years those individuals living in towns and cities lead a more unnatural existence, being cooped up inside of four walls most of the time so that the eyes do not have the opportunities of constantly changing focus. This leads to a never ending strain that is responsible for much eye trouble.

The eye is the most delicate of all the exposed portions of the body and for this reason has been supplied by nature with eyelids, lashes and eyebrows to protect it. We have, especially in our industries, a serious hazard to the eyes from industrial accidents. It is estimated that in 1924 over 91,000 injuries to the eyes occurred with the loss of at least 3,000,000 working days.

It is very important after any injury to the eye to be sure that it receives the right care. Sometimes even a slight injury may lead on to the loss of sight. A total loss of sight is a very serious impairment, and even when protected by a good insurance policy, the eye cannot be replaced nor the sense of pleasure which the eye gave.

There have been steps to prevent unnecessary eye hazards, such as having the worker wear a helmet with goggles if he is working with very hot or corrosive fluids. Having him wear unbreakable goggles if he is in a trade where particles of hard substances are scattered about. Most of the latest factories are also designed to give the best light and the one most likely to leave the eyes rested.

Serious injuries to the eye are particularly plentiful in steel and iron industries. Workers on buildings are endangered by bits of stone, cement, wood and metal which are always flying about where much construction is going on. Tearing down is even more dangerous to the eye than building. Those who polish or use turning lathes may have small particles whirl into the eyes. Farmers may suffering from injuries from being struck by branches or from insect bites, or from particles of rock and clods. The farmer is all the more likely to have serious eye complications because he is not near a doctor and neglects his eyes rather than his work.

The most common of the minor eye accidents is the entrance of small particles, which may cause great pain and even infection. Such objects should be removed in a clean and careful way. In treating the minor eye injuries it is always safe to wash the eye with running water. An excellent way of doing this is to hold the eye over a drinking fountain and let the water rush up into it. This applies both for particles in the eye and for burns from acids and alkalies. After the water treatment it is always safest to take no chances with anything so valuable as the eye, but to take the patient to a good doctor. Do not let anyone whose hands are soiled with work touch the eye.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Nervousness

Question—S. C. R. writes "I wonder if you could give me any advice concerning my son. He is 21 years old and in fairly good health, but the trouble is when he goes to bed he seems to roar and shout and it gets worse when he rolls on his back, and he has not got a nail on his fingers but what he has bitten off. He is very hot tempered. I think this is all I can say until I see your answer."

Answer—Your son is no doubt suffering from some disorder of his alimentary canal, but of course he may not be distressed enough by this to notice it. However, when he is asleep he is made nervous by the internal irritation. During the day time such nervousness is shown by the habit of biting his fingernails. If your son is willing to follow certain definite rules about eating exercising, etc., I will be glad to send him instructions. Unless he is willing to receive such advice it would be folly for you to try to force it upon him. Talk to him about the matter and have him write me personally if he desires to do so.

Meat Substitutes

Question—Miss M. G. asks: "Do nuts, eggs or cheese take the place of meat at a meal?"

Answer—There are many foods which contain proteins besides meat. Nuts, eggs and cheese contain large amounts of certain kinds of proteins, but are lacking in amino acids which are contained in fresh meat. Many people get along quite well on a diet entirely free from animal proteins, but have more difficulty in keeping their diet well balanced due to the fact that so many of the vegetable foods containing proteins also have too much starch in their composition.

Three Americans Injured in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Feb 4 (UP)—Three American tourists were injured in an automobile collision yesterday, 100 miles from Mexico City on the Puebla road.

C. O. Parrott of Wichita, Kan., received a broken arm and was in the American hospital here today. Mrs. J. M. Noble of Oklahoma City and Mrs. H. H. Champlin of Enid, Okla., were bruised but returned to their Mexico City hotel. Jack Barry of Mexico City, and formerly of Omaha, Neb., also was in the automobile, but was uninjured.

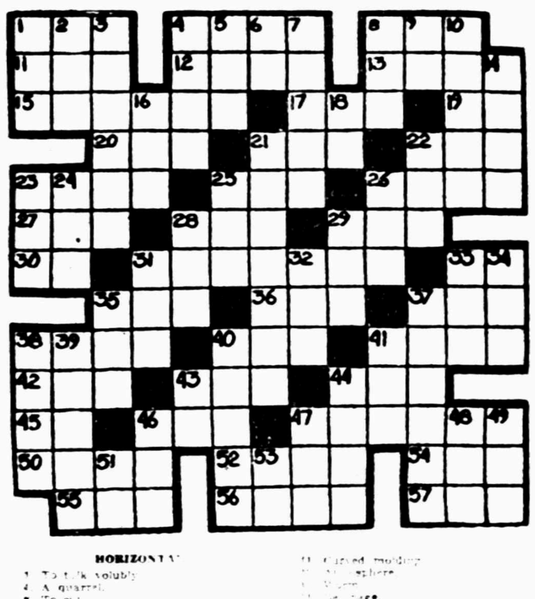

Doran Defends Poison Denaturants for Alcohol

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (INS)—Answering congressional forces making a drive against poison liquor, Dr. James M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, today declared congress must continue to permit the use of wood alcohol as an industrial alcohol denaturant.

He specifically assailed the Sirovich bill for substitute denaturants declaring that it would make it impossible to comply with the industrial alcohol needs of legitimate industry.

VERNON CUBS BEAT REAGAN JUNIOR HIGH QUINTET, 43 TO 9

VISITORS FAIL TO TOE MARK

Snyder Stars for Winners In Fielding

VERNON, Texas, Feb. 4.—The Reagan Junior High school basketeers of Wichita Falls failed to click together tonight and the young Vernon Cubs, playing in top-top form, defeated the Wichitans, 43 to 9.

It was a one-sided game from beginning to end, with the Reaganites playing in miserable style, not even being able to handle the ball from the foul line. They got 11 free chances at the basket and made only three.

Their work in the field was about as bad. Ballard, center, with two field goals and Phillips with one being the only ones to show any kind of handiwork.

For the Cubs though, things were different. Snyder, center, tossed in nine from the field, B. Phillips, forward, got three, and Taylor, substitute center, got four.

It was the second time the Cubs had trounced the Reaganites, the first victory being on the Wichita Falls court recently.

The lineup:

Vernon (43)	G	F	P	Reagan (9)	G	F	P
B. Phillips,f-3	3		9	Phillips,f	1	1	3
Richards,f	1	0	2	Stevens,f	0	1	1

HENRIETTANS WIN TWO TILTS HERE

One point margins ruled the roost last night when the Zundelowitz Junior high quintet was nosed out in a last minute rally, 22 to 21, by the Henrietta Juniors while the Henrietta high school first team also rallied to pull the game out of the fire in an overtime period from the Seymour Roadsters, local team, by a 14 to 13 count.

The Zundy lads stacked up a big lead but the visitors put on all steam and passed the lagging red and gray team with only a few seconds to play.

With one minute left to play the Henrietta first team cagers got hot and sank two shots to tie the score. A flip of the coin added three minutes to the playing time and a Roadster fouled and the visiting player sank his gift shot to win the game as the final whistle blew.

Crowell was outstanding for the Zundy team. He sank shot after shot from every spot on the court and time and time again broke up Bearcat plays with uncanny skill. Mabrey also turned in a nice game from the center position.

The Roadsters were without the services of their star scorer and mainstay of the team, Walter Cope. Mulligan, regular center, was also out. Ray was high point man for the losers with five points with Allen and Patton close behind with four and three points respectively. The Roadsters will meet Vernon Junior high on the Cub court Wednesday night.

Giant Primo's Last Victim Suspended

CHICAGO, Feb. 4. (AP)—The Illinois State Athletic commission today fined Elzear Rioux, French-Canadian heavyweight from Montreal $1,000 and suspended him indefinitely for making an unsatisfactory showing against Primo Carnera, Italian at the stadium Friday night. No action was taken against Carnera, the commission holding him blameless.

After questioning principals of the match or their representatives, the commission concluded there was no evidence of a conspiracy for Rioux to take a "dive," but that he was so frightened at Carnera's size and reputation as a mauler that he was unable to fight.

Carnera won the fight by a knockout after 47 seconds, flooring Rioux six times.

T. C. U. Cagers Defeat Baylor

FORT WORTH, Feb. 4. (AP)—Showing a complete reversal of form and playing the brand of basket ball of which they are truly capable, Francis Schmidt's T. C. U. cagers showed up in impressive fashion tonight to turn back the Baylor Bears to the tune of 33-22 on the Horned Frog court. It was a great exhibition of the indoor sport from the first whistle until the final gun.

Card for Sharkey-Scott Boxing Bout Announced

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (AP)—The supporting card for Jack Sharkey's heavyweight match with Phil Scott in Miami, Fla., Feb. 27, was announced today at Madison Square garden.

In accordance with general forecasts, Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker boy, will meet Vittorio Campolo, husky Argentine, in the 10-round semi-final. This match was ruled out for the garden here by the New York state athletic commission which decided that Johnny was "too small" for the South American.

Another 10-round match, previously announced, brings together Tommy Loughran, former light heavyweight champion, and Pierre Charles of Belgium. The first 10-rounder pairs Jimmy Maloney of Boston and Moise Bouquillon, French heavyweight. George Cook, British veteran, opens the card in a six-round bout with Paul Bianchi of the Argentine.

TRAPS RESTRICTED

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Well, being a former church editor and theater critic, we decided all of a sudden today that we'd had enough training to write a sports column.

Sports columns are all alike. They are all placed in the most prominent part of the sports pages, and are made up, alas, of the whims and opinions of a bunch of guys who think they know all about sports, and who think they can predict the result of anything from a checker game to a presidential election. As a matter of fact we think they're a bunch of fourflushers.

So we decided that in this, our first column we would bravely announce that in the foregoing bull we know nothing whereof we speak.

The only reason for this col., in fact, is a queer urge that seems to goad all sports editors, the urge, in fact, of vanity. Among all the phenoms that go to make up a newspaper staff, the sports scribe is always, we have found, the most touchy. Ere the first down blossomed on our youthful cheek, we thought of sporting editors as robust fellows with hair on their chests, able to stage a prize fight as well as write about one; but the years have brought their sorrows, and today we weep over the spectacle of dainty fellows with manicured nails sitting on plush cushions covering a stern, manly game of football.

Well, as we said, we're plenty vain and we're going to write. But since we haven't had a manicure we can venture no predictions on the outcome of sporting events, unless we were to venture the guess that Primo Carnera next Thursday night is going to knock a certain Cherokee Indian into something as flat as this column is.

The baseball season is coming on apace, as is the season for political skullduggery. The two will mix fine, at least in one instance, for whereas Dan Moody, who might be in the race, releases his excess energy in a shooting gallery down on Congress avenue in Austin, Earle B. Mayfield, who announced his candidacy recently, revels in a baseball game. And do you know what? Ole Earle, when he goes to a game, sits in the bleachers with his shoes off and eats peanuts and just goes hog wild all during the game, like a kid. He takes his shoes off, really. He says it makes him feel like a youngster again.

Who knows? Maybe if we elect Earle governor he'll sponsor a law providing free peanuts and parking places for shoes at all baseball games.

C. R. Owens of Childress writes in to this column pleadingly, saying that since the Texas league has banned broadcasting of games, the folk in the Panhandle this season are just not going to know What To Do. "Last year," writes Mr. Owens, "when we were getting all the games over the radio during the week, the majority of the fans would drive to Wichita Falls, a distance of 115 miles, to see the games on Sunday when Wichita Falls was playing at home, but I believe that if they hold to their decision not to broadcast the games this season that interest in the game will die to such an extent that very few will be interested enough to make the drive to Wichita to see a game. As a sport fan, I would like to know what we people in the Panhandle can do to get them to give us the Texas league games over the radio this year."

Well, Mr. Owens, your problem is one that could not be solved even if Dorothy Dix and Walter Winchell were called into consultation. For here is the latest development in baseball, as seen in the theme song of the box office:

"We're out to get the dough, boys,
And make the turnstile turn,
We're out to get the dough, boys,
And never again will we burn
The other up with hits and strikes
For the fans of radioland
For we want to see the turnstile turn
And get the cash in hand."

Crackers Have Plenty Material for Managers

ATLANTA, Feb. 4. (AP)—The Atlanta Crackers of the Southern league won't have to worry about managerial material this year.

"Head" Manager Johnny Dobbs, the new Cracker boss who won the Southern title for Birmingham last year, has four former pilots on his roster.

They are Milton Stock, former pilot of the Dallas Steers for the Texas league, third base; Jimmy Johnston, former Chattanooga boss, shortstop; Jack Sheehan, manager of Elmira of the New York-Pennsylvania league in 1928, second base; and Red Wingo, ex-manager of Columbus of the American Association, catcher.

Commerce Interferes With Basket Ball Fans

ANDERSON, Ind., Feb. 4. (AP)—Interstate commerce ran smack into basket ball here.

High school fans, rushing to the game, parked their cars on a Big Four railroad side track.

Grumblingly, they left the game to move the cars when the railroad insisted on doing some switching on the track.

Scribe Runyon Gossips About Folk Parading the Beach Down at Miami

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4.—Phil Scott really says "cheerio" by way of goodbye, though ye scribe always thought that was strictly for stage Englishmen.

Jawn Buckley, manager of the terrible Sharkey man, is ambling around Miami Beach in golf makeup, which is awful attire for a short, fat bloke.

This Is Ballyhooey

Rose Cecil O'Neill, who invented the kewpies, was wandering through Burdine's department store the other afternoon with one of her own dolls under her arm, which comes under the head of ballyhooey.

Henry J. Smith, manager of the Alcasar hotel, which fronts on Biscayne boulevard, is drawing the Scott following to his hostelry.

Billy Wellman, once famed as the "boy promoter," who handled the late Arnold Rothstein's business affairs in recent years, and was named as a legatee in the gambler's will, has been peering at Havana with a view to putting in auto races there.

E. Phocian Howard, editor of the New York Press, is here with his famous fat valet, Ben Jones, a Rolls Royce car, 62 shirts, nearly all pink, 44 suits of clothes, nearly all checkered, and a bank roll that keeps his pants out of shape.

Benny Bennett, for years with the Madison Square garden ticket office, and recently working for Jack Dempsey out in Chicago, is listening to the sad sea waves on Miami beach and acquiring a rich tan.

Moe Shapoff, out of Loueyville, who popped out of a haberdashery to win turf fame with the scorpions and centipedes belonging to Frank Croissant, when Frank was the real estate king of this section of Florida, is racing a small string of his own at Hialeah.

Kid Bebee, who owns the B. B. stable, is said to have hooked a horse to bet on his Prickly Heat the other day, and Prickly Heat rewarded the kid's confidence quite some.

Joe Gould, out of New York, is making one of the biggest books at the track, and who do you suppose is one of his clerks? Nobody but Little Solly Harris, the wandering Jew of the turf.

Big Solly, red hot from the roaring forties, is bustling about the dog track at the beach of nights trying to pick a few winners, which is a very tough dodge, indeed.

Blanche Savoy, who is always everywhere, is here.

Eddie Rollins of Chicago, dapper and youthful looking, and very calm, has a stable here, and occasionally puts in with E. Phocian Howard on sorties against Mr. Pharoah's bank.

Wally Sullivan is bouncing about the community snatching items for Sime Silverman's Variety.

Dave Roth's restaurant on Flagler street, is the Lindy's of Miami where all the night owls hang out to cut up the day's scores.

Izzy Kaplan, the demon photographer of the Daily Mirror, is so subdued this trip that a vague hope is stirring that it may last out the meeting.

Joe Bannon and Hughy Murray are the real sartorial treats of the season in these parts.

Benny Snow of the Volney club in New York, views the parade each evening from a rocker on the veranda of the hotel McAllister, and has become one of the best rockers in town.

Eddie Frayne, sports editor of the New York American, who came here for a single week, has taken three, which is somehow regarded as a bit of treason to his own southern California.

Willie K. Vanderbilt and wife took in the beach resorts the other night and everybody reports him a nice guy.

Lou Magnolia, the New York referee, is making a big thing of the Jai Lai house which he is managing here, the same being called "Hi La" in our language. Plenty of money changes hands in the joint every night.

Indians and Coyotes Meet Cage Foes in Double-Header Tonight

A double-header is to be the card for basket ball play Wednesday night, the Junior college Indians battling with the Clara High school five, while the local high school will scrap it out with the F-H-V insurance quintet. The first game is to start at 7 o'clock sharp between the weavers of the red and black and the F-H-V tossers.

Coach E. A. Baggett's warriors are expected to send the Clara High pivoters back home with an empty sack. After receiving three drubbings on their recent road trip the redskins are realizing the need for work and are putting forth their best efforts in preparation for the coming championship tournament. The Clara dribblers are expected to fall an easy prey to the scalpers, but anything can happen.

Continuing their hard work of becoming oriented with each other, the fighting Pack will put forth their best efforts to give the Travelers a tough battle. Competition with college stars may give the prep sharpshooters a chance to learn the short turns of the game and give the Red and Black some valuable experience.

Thursday night the Junior college passers meet the Holliday High loopers on the latter's court. Holliday looms as the sure winner of the Archer county eliminations and will probably represents that county in the district meet here soon. They can give the Indians plenty of competition and the outcome is doubtful. The following Thursday, Feb. 13, the public is promised another novelty when another double-header will be played on the local Junior college floor. Coch Baggett's hoopsters again tangle with the North Texas Agricultural college quintet in a return game while the second team of the Indian machine will scrap it out with the second team of the Aggie aggregation. The Aggies defeated the Indians by an overwhelming margin at Arlington last week and are heavy favorites to wallop the Indians again.

Proration Cuts Down Output

Special to The Record News.

BIG SPRING, Texas, Feb. 4.—Although the book potential of producing wells in the 2800 and 3000 feet pay horizons of Howard and Glasscock counties increased more than 1,000 barrels from 57,594 to 58,669 barrels, the allowed output was curtailed from 27,774 barrels to 25,093 barrels, according to the February schedule issued by E. E. Andrews, proration umpire.

The total allowed output figured on a percentage basis is approximately 22.5 per cent of the book potential. Pipe line companies purchasing oil from this section have a verbal agreement with operators that proration will be based on the total amount of oil purchasers can handle during the month.

With a total potential of 38,806 barrels daily, the 2200 feet pay is gradually pulling ahead of the 3,000 feet pay which has an estimated potential of 19,863 barrels during February.

Dressmakers Go on Strike

Few Disorders Mark Huge Walk-Out

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (INS)—The garment strike went on today, indirectly affecting the entire clothing industry of America.

The first arrests were of two strikers armed with sawed-off billiard cues. A number of men and women workers were taken to police station for distributing handbills.

The strike call was issued to 35,000 garment workers, the majority being women.

The exodus began a few hours after the clothing workers reported to their jobs. The number who answered the call cannot be estimated perhaps for several days.

The purpose of the strike was announced as the abolishment of the sweatshops and the "hole-in-the-wall" manufacturer. The walkout was under the direction of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

Benjamin Schresinger, president of the union, was jeered by Communists when he set out today on a tour of the strike district in an automobile.

The attitude of the Communist element of the union was a matter of doubt.

Other demands of the strikers include rigid enforcement of a five-day, 40-hour week; creation of an unemployment insurance fund; an impartial commission to regulate the industry; and production to be confined to union shops.

Elaborate police precautions were made throughout the strike district.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (AP)—Some further liquidation and foreign selling was absorbed on a moderate opening decline in the cotton market today, and prices rallied later on covering or rebuying by recent sellers who appeared to be influenced by talk of an improved technical position and overnight developments in the cooperative marketing situation. May contracts advanced from 16.08 to 16.40 or 20 points net higher and closed at 16.34, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 12 to 17 points.

The opening was easy at a decline of 5 to 15 points under overnight selling orders, together with further liquidation promoted by the relatively easy showing of Liverpool, and reports of further declines in Bombay. Houses with foreign connections were credited with selling here, and the initial pressure was sufficient to send most of the active months into new low ground for the movement with March selling off to 15.80 and October to 16.49.

This decline was checked by trade buying and covering, however, and the market steadied up sharply as soon as the initial selling orders were absorbed. The bulges met some further liquidation, but the volume of business tapered off later and a steadier tone developed with March selling up to 16.14 and October to 16.76, making net advances of about 18 to 20 points on the more active months.

Closing prices were several points off from the best under realizing.

Exports today 25,926, making 5,044,199 so far this season. Port receipts 17,262. U. S. port stocks 2,374,068.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 4. (AP)—Following an early decline the cotton market rallied rather sharply later today under demand stimulated by Washington advices stating that the federal farm loan board had decided to aid cooperative associations in supporting the commodity. May contracts sold up from 15.90 to 16.22 and closed at 16.17 for a net gain of 16 points. The general market closed steady at net advances of 13 to 16 points.

The market opened easy in sympathy with lower Liverpool cables than expected. First trades showed losses of 5 to 8 points and the market continued to ease after the start until March traded to 15.63, May 15.90 and July 16.15 or 11 to 12 points below yesterday's close.

When the reported action of the federal board became known the market became firmer and prices advanced rapidly and despite occasional reactions due to realizing reached levels 28 to 34 points above the lows with March at 15.97, May at 16.21 and July 16.43.

For the remainder of the session the market was steady and months later than July made new highs during the afternoon with May at 16.22 and July 16.45, or 30 to 32 points above the early lows. There was a renewal of realizing in final trading and last prices showed recessions of 5 to 7 points from the top with March closing at 15.90 and July 16.39.

Spirited Stock Rally Comes From Expectation of Rediscount Slice

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (US)—Belief that the reserve board would permit the local bank to reduce its rediscount rate this week terminated the reaction and influenced spirited rally in the stock market this afternoon. Condition of the local bank more than warrants such reduction, it was felt, while monetary developments abroad apparently make the action necessary at this time. All groups shared in the comeback except the Oils which remained quietly irregular. Steel finished a point higher, while Columbia Gas gained 6½, Warner 2½, Consolidated Gas 3, Loew 3½, Chrysler 1½, Celotex 3, Westinghouse 3, Can 1⅞, Simmons 2⅜, Colorado Fuel 3, Allis Chalmers 2⅜, Chespeake & Ohio 3¾, and Chespeake corporation closed 2 points higher. Call money remained at 4½ per cent throughout. Turnover fell off to 3,200,000 shares.

Reduction in the Reichsbank rate has strengthened belief that the Bank of England will announce reduction of at least one-half of one per cent in its rate Thursday morning. Such action would indicate that the local reserve bank would be permitted to reduce its rate. From the talk in banking circles it would seem that the most powerful interests in the bank have been desirous of taking such action for more than a fortnight but that Washington would not permit. None knows definitely what is in the minds of the reserve board nor who pulls the strings that make it jump but there is no longer any doubt that our monetary affairs are so interwined with Europe's that it would be almost impossible to sever relations. Lower rediscount rates naturally would help to coax back public interest in securities with the best demand first evidenced in the bond market.

Continued voicing of expectations for "building boom" in the spring brought in even better buying of Celotex and others in the group. Celotex is said to be showing better earnings than any of the others. At current rate of income, it is estimated net this year would run close to $15 a share and if improvement expected were experienced net might run as high as $20 a share. Revival of interest in the Rails appeared centered around the Alleghany Corporation. Group work in the stock started prior to the October-November cataclysm and met an untimely end. Now it is emphasized that the company is the "natural vehicle for the Van Sweringen merger."

Allis Chalmers strength resulted from expectation of benefits to be derived from arrangements with Advance Rumely. It was reported that the same crowd that skyrocketed Rumely last year were at work in Allis. The Simmons financing turned out to be offering of debentures that were authorized before the bottom fell out of the market in October. Most selling recently has been influenced by expectation of unfavorable report for 1929. Estimates place earnings to be shown at "less than $6 a share" but none will state whether that means a few cents or a few dollars less. There are indications that the Chicago group interested in the stock plan bull work after the report is out "if the market is right." Continental diamond fiber has been helped by pool work based on reports that earnings are running ahead of those of last year.

Chrysler remained the speculative favorite of the motor group with further reports of sales running better than expected. There was similar talk regarding General Motors but the most interesting rumors indicated there would be several changes in the executive lineup of the coroporation over the next several months. It appears that the "great minds" in the management are dissatisfied with the attitude of some of the millionaire officials. They think that efficiency was not enhanced by the rapidity with which some officials became independently wealthy and are said to plan to take steps accordingly.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Facing commencement of the 1930 crop scare season, wheat jumped higher today, although suffering temporary setbacks to below any level since July 1 last. Damage to domestic winter wheat by persistent alternate freezing and thawing weather was reported today from eastern Illinois, western Indiana, and from Texas. Under such circumstances, broadened speculative buying of wheat future deliveries set in, and the upward swing of the market was also given impetus through action of the Farmers National Grain corporation in making big purchases of rural arrivals of wheat at various leading grain centers.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were firm at nearly the day's top figures, 1¼c to 1⅝c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1⅛ to 1½c to 2⅛c advanced, oats ⅛c to 1⅛c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10c.

Corn values developed independent strength today. Affected by temporary weakness, May and July corn sold at new low price record for the season, but country offerings were small and decided gains ensued, helped by emphasis given to the fact that the corn visible supply is 11,000,000 bushels less than last year and that there are no burdensome stocks at primary markets. Oats followed corn.

Provisions were responsive to an increase of only 5,400,000 pounds in western lard stocks in the last month compared with 44,200,000 pounds increase last year.

Governing Board Of Assembly Resigns Spain

MADRID, Feb. 4. (UP)—King Alfonso signed a decree today accepting the resignation of the governing board of the national assembly.

The assembly, as established under the regime of Primo de Rivera, was merely a consultative body with no legislative powers.

XENIA, FREED, IN LOVE ANEW

Russian Princess Rides With Horseman

NEW YORK, Feb. 4. (INS)—Park avenue is wondering today whether the aristocratic Princess Xenia of Russia is going to marry young Charles Plumb, son of Harold Plumb, society horse trainer, or if she was just taking him for a ride.

Now that "the daughter of a thousand earls," as the social registerites refer to the princess, has received an interlocutory decree of divorce from William B. Leeds, heir apparent to the tinplate fortune, many of her friends anticipate her re-marriage as soon as the law allows.

For a year and more, she and handsome Charlie Plumb have been riding and dancing and dining together. Long Island meadows and Long Island roadhouses know them well.

Her one-time royal highness didn't seem to be nearly as lonesome as might have been expected during her husband's frequent absences during the past 12-month. While he was riding the Graf Zeppelin on the round-the-world cruise, the princess was riding a spirited jumper across the flat and rough of Suffolk county farmlands.

Young Plumb, who lives at his father's home at East Norwich, L. I., not so far distant from the mansion Leeds provided for his princess at Oyster Bay, taught Xenia how to ride. Under his careful tutelage she became an expert and daring horsewoman.

Evenings would often find them together with a party of fashionable debs and debbies at Rothman's inn, East Norwich, just enjoying a plumb good time.

The divorce proceedings, incidentally, have established a record for speediness around these parts. Just about 30 days after they were started Supreme Court Justice Strong signed the interlocutory decree. The records and testimony are to be filed today in Mineola.

The makers advise it

Don't blame your radio set for poor reception with worn-out tubes. Once a year, at least, it needs a brand new set of tubes. The set builders advise RCA Radiotrons.

Good cheer! Huzzah! Likewise pax vobiscum. Despite Herr Groundhog's thumbs up or thumbs down, despite the aristocratic price of butter and eggs, all our clouds now take on the well known silvered interior. For a discriminating critic has cast eulogistic words of gigantic import upon our joie d'vivre. Upon viewing the limber Lupino Lane vigorously clog his allegiance to Prince Alfred, in "The Love Parade," this connoisseur of personality declared Lupino's exuberant gait identical with the bouncing buoyancy which carries our middle-aged person through the day's duties both professional and domestic. Our diet? Well, the morning meal usually consists of oatmeal (without salt), five ounces, and toast (three slices) brought slowly to a rich Buff-Cochin brown.

Which brings us seriously to the hilarious elements of Mons. Chevalier's charming comedy. The presence of Lupino Lane and Lillian Roth in any cast promises, without assertion, the injection of raucous humor. It remained only for their near-slapstick animation to be refined for the lyric atmosphere of "The Love Parade." While Lillian may, in her own right, offer little to be really excited about, paired with the agile Lupino she supplies delightful variety in the constant flow of comedy.

Regardless of the fact that he did not write the book for the "Love Parade," Ernest Lubitsch, its director, must be credited with the highly effective side-talk furnished by the obsequious cabinet members. Illuminating comments issuing from the bewhiskered ministers of this and that as they peer expectantly through key-holes, curtained windows, and doors ajar provide an appetizing narration of how the royal romance progresses. And what an experience it is to see Eugene Pallette in formal attire.

Satire is not the predominant mood of the book. But there are numerous insertions of satirical reference to prerogatives of royalty, and to more universal current customs, which contribute much quiet amusement. The vein of humor is strongly akin to the rollicking texts of W. S. Gilbert, who wrote the lines for Sir Arthur Sullivan's still popular light operas. Gilbert and Sullivan consistently poked fun directly at the court of the straight-laced old Queen Victoria, but laughed so slyly and with such delectable humor that John Bull and all the world snickered good-naturedly. "The Love Parade" aims its darts at a fast-vanishing institution in its picture of prostration before the crown. Prince consort or no, hunger notwithstanding, breakfast can not be served until the queen raises her pretty left eyebrow in command. And the queen happens to be absent.

The turning point in "The Love Parade," a disaffection between Louise and Alfred, may indeed have been suggested by a reputedly true story of Queen Victoria's household. A story worthy, perhaps, of re-telling. Her prince consort, Albert, himself found the position of mere husband to a self-willed queen slightly galling. Reprisal finally took the form, one lovesome day in spring, of locking himself in his own modest room. Victoria called, peremptorily, and received the reply, "Who is there?" "The Queen." No results. Hours passed. Again, "Albert!" And again, "Who is there?" Not so harsh, "Your Queen." Status quo without change. Finally, gentle rapping at the door again. "Who calls?" demanded the determined consort. "Your wife, Albert," in dove-like tones. Then emerges Albert, with shoulders squared and eyes alight with victory.

Support for the theory that nature provides the man for the moment may be drawn from a 10-second episode in "The Love Parade." During a brief passage of word-play anent cracked mirrors and crossed-eyes, fitting property in the form of old Ben Turpin's face projects itself into the scene. The unfortunate eyes which formerly were worth a generous weekly stipend enjoyed complete conquest during their momentary reign. They got their laugh.

So far as public comment may be accepted as indicative of public reception, the use of Graham McNamee as a bally-hooer for sound news reels is no big crash. Comment deliberately composed and timed to synchronize with photography of events lacks the verve and spontaneity of Mr. McNamee's running description of Cagle's dashes or Sharkey's punches for radio broadcast. We expect to hear little of him in the sound-screen.

Oil Field Worker Wins Compensation Claim

C. C. Hamilton was awarded an $8,020 judgment against the Guardian Securities corporation, acting for Banker Lloyd's Insurers, by the verdict of a jury in the 78th district court Tuesday.

Mr. Hamilton sought the compensation award in connection with injuries he claims to have suffered in a fall from a 25-foot "gin pole" in the oil fields in 1928. The verdict of the jury gave him the full amount asked in his petition.

SCORES VIEW HUGE LION

Leo to Give Performance At 12:30 Today

Several hundred persons gathered in front of the Strand theater at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to greet Leo, the 756-pound Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer motion picture lion, who arrived in the city on his round-the-world tour for a one day visit.

The famous trade-mark lion, reputed to be the largest known beast of its kind in existence, travels in a 28-foot ornamental cage of the usual circus type, mounted on a truck. Walls of non-shatter glass afford the huge cat protection against Texas' record-breaking winter without impairing Leo's vision of the unfamiliar scenery along his route.

Rousing from a seeming stupor, induced possibly by the long ride from Fort Worth Tuesday, the renowned visitor treated his audience to several of his widest yawns, which at close range proved even more enormous than they appear on the screen, and produced more than one terrified exclamation from children nearest the cage.

Following brief exercises under the persuasion of his trainer, Capt. Jack Phifer, Leo proceeded to the formality of 5 o'clock dinner. Dainty morsels of fresh beefsteak, weighing perhaps a pound each, appeared not to tax the capacity of his cavernous mouth.

He will stage a brief performance in front of the Majestic theater at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday, it was announced, before beginning his journey toward Amarillo.

The world's largest paper machine is in the Fort William, Ont., Canada, mill of the Great Lakes Paper company, Ltd. It produces a ribbon of paper 304 inches wide at the rate of 900 to 1,200 feet a minute.

Amarillo Man Sees Good Business Year

Ray B. Wheatley, president of the Amarillo Bank & Trust company, was a visitor in this city Tuesday, and expressed himself as optimistic relative to commercial and industrial conditions in this section during the coming year.

"Speaking from the standpoint of one who watches Wichita Falls with interest from the outside," said Mr. Wheatley, "my opinion is that the city is now rising satisfactorily from a depression which unquestionably prevailed here a few months ago. General business conditions here, as elsewhere in this section of the state, should continue to improve. Great benefit will be derived throughout all of Northwest Texas as a result of the moisture received during the past month. It should mean considerable gains in wheat, as well as in other important crops."

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

To end a stubborn cough quickly, it is important to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the trouble.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 3 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly, and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. First, it loosens the germ-laden phlegm. Second, it soothes away the inflammation. Third, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in the obstinate bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.
