New Search For Famed Flier Set

HONOLULU (AP) — A former Air Force pilot who found a plane wreck on a Pacific atoll 25 years ago hopes to find it again and prove it is that of famed aviator Amelia Earhart, who disappeared in 1937.

Vincent Loomis of Orlando, Fla., is leading a seven-member expedition today for an atoll in the Marshall Islands, where he believes Miss Earhart's plane still rests.

"We are very excited about this and are optimistic that we will find the plane and be able to identify it as that of Amelia Earhart," said Loomis, a businessman and former aerospace worker.

While many authorities believe the twin-engine Lockheed Electra crashed at sea in that area, Loomis believes it landed northwest of Howland.

Miss Earhart was quoted as saying before leaving New Guinea that if she and Noonan did not locate Howland, they would fly back into the Gilbert Islands and find "a

Carter Raps Big Wage, Price Hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today ruled out wage and price controls to fight inflation, but called on labor and industry to keep price and salary hikes below the average rate of the past two years.

At the same time, he threatened administrative action to hold down oil imports if Congress does not act on his energy legislation "without further delay."

"Our nation's economic health can be protected only if we can cope with the two developments that now threaten it most seriously — the high level of oil imports and the increasing rate of inflation," Carter said in a speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

While asking for voluntary restraints in the private sector, Carter said he would propose limiting federal white-collar salary increases to about 5.5 percent in 1978, "thereby setting an example for labor and industry to moderate price and wage increases."

"It is a myth that the government itself can stop inflation," the president said. "Success or failure in this overall effort will largely be determined by the actions of the private sector of the economy."

"Let me be blunt about this point," he said. "I am asking American workers to follow the example of federal workers and accept a lower rate of wage increase."

He said that in return for this, American workers "have a right to expect a comparable restraint in price increases for the goods and services they buy."

The president avoided any drastic administrative action to deal with the energy problems, which he said "are an active threat to the economic well-being of our people."

He called members of the House and Senate conference committee working on energy legislation to the White House for a meeting late in the afternoon after the speech.

"We must have meaningful energy legislation without further delay. Our security depends on it, and our economy demands it," Carter said.

"If Congress does not act, then oil imports will have to be limited by administrative action under present law, which is not the most desirable solution," he said. "One way or the other, oil imports must be reduced."

The United States currently imports approximately 50 percent of its oil. Ten years ago, oil imports cost approximately $2 billion but, Carter said, such imports will cost more than $45 billion in 1978.

This, he said, was "the primary reason for our problems with the balance of trade and the decreasing value of the dollar."

The $4.5-billion balance of payments deficit in February was the worst trade deficit in U.S. history.

Carter told the newspaper editors and a national broadcast audience that he was naming his special trade representative, Robert Strauss, as a special counselor on inflation, expanding the role in the administration of the former Democratic Party chairman.

Among the specific actions the president said he would take were these:

Israeli Troops Pull Back

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The first stage of Israel's pullback in southern Lebanon was reported proceeding smoothly today, and one Israeli soldier said his unit was "happy as hell" to be leaving a bomb-damaged village.

But Syrian troops opened fire in this capital in an attempt to end a new outbreak of Moslem-Christian fighting.

Both a U.N. spokesman here and an army spokesman in Israel reported no hitches as Israeli troops moved back 1.2 to 3 miles at seven points in the eastern sector of invaded Lebanon. The pullback stretched from the Khardali Bridge eastward along the Litani River to the Arkoub region in the foothills of Mount Hermon.

"Norwegian peacekeepers replaced Israeli forces in all vacated areas and by midmorning we had no report of any violence," the U.N. spokesman said.

"Everything is going well, according to plan," said Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Erskine of Ghana, commander of the U.N. peacekeeping force, at the southeastern Lebanese village of Rashaya el-Fukhar.

He shook hands with an Israeli lieutenant colonel at noon (4 a.m. CST) and a group of Israeli tanks, armored personnel carriers and other vehicles then moved a little more than one mile back to their new line.

Erskine told reporters that Rashaya el-Fukhar, five miles east of Marjayoun, was the third of seven positions the U.N. was taking over today.

One Israeli private said his tank crew was "happy as hell" to be leaving the village after two weeks, and that the night before, "we celebrated and slaughtered a sheep and had a barbecue."

Rashaya el-Fukhar was home to 800 people, including a number of Christians, but most of them left when Israeli warplanes and tanks bombarded it during the Israeli invasion to push Palestinian guerrillas north of the Litani.

A local official and an Israeli officer escorting reporters both said Palestinian guerrillas had been stationed in the village, but the official — the mukhtar — said they had left before the attack.

On Friday, Israeli troops are to hand over control of a second area west from Marjayoun to the Aqiya Bridge, in the central sector of the Israeli-held area. At that point, the Israelis will have left one-fourth of the 500 square miles of Lebanese territory they occupied during their invasion that began March 15.

Consumers Demonstrate Against Farm Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Passage of emergency one-year aid to grain and cotton farmers by the Senate brought organized consumers to the steps of the Capitol today and a stern letter from protesting farmers to President Carter.

Imitating the tactics of the American Agriculture protest group, which brought tractors and farm animals to the congressional doorsteps in its campaign for farm-aid legislation, the Consumer Federation of America organized a demonstration with shopping carts to protest the measure.

Supporters and opponents of the bill, meanwhile, gathered at the House Rules Committee, first of several hurdles for the legislation in the urban-dominated House, where the administration hopes it will be voted down. House debate is set for later this week.

The Senate passed the bill, drafted last week by House-Senate conferees, Monday by a 49-41 margin. A two-thirds majority of each house is needed to override a presidential veto, an event that has never occurred with a rejected farm bill.

Carter has promised to veto the bill as inflationary and a threat to the farm economy's stability, if it reaches him.

American Agriculture delegates wrote the president that their precarious financial status is a greater threat. They said Carter has "been led to believe some mistaken information" on the bill and they demanded an end to what they called contradictory statements and "bewildering logic" from the White House.

"When American family farmers no longer have any economic incentive to produce food, the structure upon which this nation stands will be seriously weakened," the letter said.

Bus Wrecks Kill Three, Injure 65

A-J News Services

A bus carrying 75 Boys Club members from Michigan skidded off a superhighway in Georgia and overturned today, killing three boys and injuring dozens of others. Meanwhile, as many as 40 people were hurt when a Los Angeles city bus careened onto a sidewalk.

The Boys Club bus was traveling through south-central Georgia, en route from Ypsilanti, Mich., to Disney World in Florida. The brakes appeared to have failed as the driver headed for a rest area on Interstate 75 at Inaha, State Trooper David Scarborough said.

The bus overturned down a six-foot embankment and slammed into a tree.

The bus carried 75 children and adults. The state patrol said at least 25 persons were taken to Turner County Hospital in Ashburn. At least two of the injured were pinned in the wreckage for a time.

At the site of the crash, debris was everywhere. Clothing and other personal belongings were strewn about the area.

Ray Mercer, general manager of radio station WMES in Ashburn, said the bus skidded on its side before hitting the tree, which crushed the roof down to the seats just behind the driver.

Molly Cavazos, secretary at the Boys Club in Ypsilanti, said the group had set out in two buses, but one had apparently broken down along the way. Six staff members were escorting the boys, she said.

In Los Angeles, a city bus packed with 65 persons during the morning rush-hour collided with a car on downtown Wilshire Boulevard today and crashed into a wall, authorities said.

Fire Department ambulance crews removed some injured passengers through bus windows and took them in six ambulances to Queen of Angels and California hospitals. Spokeswomen at both hospitals said the injuries ranged from cuts and bruises to fractures.

No one on the sidewalk was injured, authorities said.

"People were tumbling all over each other," said bus passenger Linda MacDonald, who was not injured. "Everyone was scared. Some were screaming. And then everybody tried to help each other out of the windows."

Officers at the scene said the Rapid Transit District bus was driving down Wilshire Boulevard when a car turned left in front of it. Bus driver Mingo Jones, 49, blew the horn and veered to avoid a collision, but could not, officers said.

Frost Nips Wide Area Of Plains

A-J News Services

Just when everybody thought Old Man Winter had gone back into hiding for the summer, he exhaled a frosty breath to show it is still only mid-April and he doesn't have to leave if he doesn't want to.

He certainly let Lubbock and the South Plains know he was still around Monday night and this morning, as temperatures fell into the middle and lower 30s over the region.

Lubbock had an overnight low of 34, but missed the 1932 record for the date of 25.

Area readings included 31 at Morton, Muleshoe, Spur and Hereford, 32 at Abernathy, Friona, Lamesa, Seminole, Silverton, Snyder, Tahoka and Tulia and 33 at Brownfield, Crosbyton, Jayton and Littlefield.

Another front, a combination of polar and northwestern fronts, is expected to move across the Panhandle Wednesday but will not have much effect here, weathermen said today.

"It's a relatively weak front," a Lubbock weatherman said. "By the time it gets here, it will be pretty well modified, so temperatures aren't going to drop all that much."

Fair skies and warmer weather are forecast for today and Wednesday.

Temperatures will be in the low 70s today, mid-40s tonight and near 80 Wednesday, weathermen predict.

April 9 is the average last freeze date for the Lubbock area, and forecasters said this morning it still could freeze again before summer comes for good.

Burger Refuses To Block Canal Treaties

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of House members who contend that both chambers of Congress must vote on the Panama Canal treaties was turned away today by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

The legislators had asked Burger on Monday to issue an injunction prohibiting President Carter from signing treaties approved only by the Senate. They contend the approval of both houses of Congress is needed because the canal treaties involve the disposal of federal property.

Meanwhile today, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd hinted that new language might be added to the treaties to deal with Panamanian objections to a provision giving the United States the right to intervene to keep the waterway open in the event of internal disruptions in Panama.

The West Virginia Democrat insisted to reporters that "I have neither seen, nor heard, nor read any indications that the Panamanian government would reject the treaties as they stand."

But he added that "there may be further language offered as explanation."

Byrd said he believes that the treaties, as they now stand "sustain the fundamental principle that there wouldn't be any interference in the internal affairs of Panama."

At the Supreme Court, Burger said he was denying the request "without prejudice" — leaving open the option to take it before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington.

That court last week dismissed the lawsuit by 60 members of the House against Carter. Instead of asking the appeals court to preserve the status quo until a Supreme Court challenge could be mounted, the legislators came straight to Burger.

Treaty supporters have been keeping an eye on the court developments while trying to hold on to several key votes on the canal treaty, and at the same time reassure Panama that the United States does not intend to interfere in its internal affairs.

The Panamanian government objected to the reservation giving the United States a future right to use any means, including military force, to keep the canal open.

The provision was attached to the neutrality treaty by the Senate before approving it last month.

President Carter reluctantly accepted the change, despite the Panamanian objections, to get the vote of its sponsor, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

Since then, Panama has complained to other governments and to the United Nations about the provision, and reportedly has asked the White House to disavow the reservation as an "interventionist" move.

How to do this without risking the loss of Senate support for the second treaty, to be voted on a week from today, was Carter's dilemma.

Privately, Senate treaty backers have expressed dismay over the administration's handling of the matter and over the timing of Panama's complaints. Meanwhile, treaty foes who missed defeating the first pact by two votes say they are encouraged that the controversy is helping them on the second one.

Coroner Adds Life To Morgue

By RICK SPRATLING

MIAMI (AP) — Through the morning routine at the Dade County morgue comes a voice of disconcerting good cheer, followed by a blaze of color. Dr. Ronald Wright has arrived at the office — working on the run and dressed, um, fit to kill.

"There's a sheriff coming down from Tallahassee with a subpoena," Wright yells as he passes a secretary. "Don't let him find me."

Wright's jacket doesn't draw a second glance from the morgue regulars. It's a dazzling red, white and blue plaid. No one even stares at his pipe, the one with the grinning skull carved in a white meerschaum bowl.

"What'll I tell him?" the secretary asks.

"Tell him anything," Wright says over his shoulder, heading through a door. "Tell him I died."

Little in the scene is out of character for Wright, 33, who as deputy chief medical examiner here has exhibited a flair that jolts away cobwebbed stereotypes of coroners.

An anomaly in the bureaucratic world, Wright is outspoken, and more: He's a student of England's 19th Century "Jack the Ripper" murders, is attending law school at night, sometimes shows up for work in a three-piece, canary yellow suit and has been known to absent-mindedly munch a ham sandwich at the autopsy table. He's also been featured in a local home design article showing a do-it-yourself townhouse decor Wright calls "early divorce."

But Wright is more than a novelty. He's a serious medical detective who believes society can learn much about its failings by studying its dead.

"Deaths represent the breakdown of the system at its extreme," he says. "Perhaps some of society's problems don't have deaths associated with them, but damn few."

The Dade examiner's office investigates about 5,000 deaths a year, and Wright personally performs about 500 autopsies. He approaches his task with a sense of history.

"Coroners were a kind of unique invention in English law," he says. "The sheriff was the highest local official in Norman times. And the coroner position was invented as a means to deal with the corruption that had occurred in the sheriff's office throughout the shires in England."

A native of Springfield, Mo., Wright came to the Dade County job in 1974 after serving as a chief deputy medical examiner in Vermont.

In 1976, he was accepted by the University of Miami law school. After law, he says, he'll study engineering. But Wright says he's not looking for a new job and has turned down several offers at double the $40,000 he makes here. He says he wants to remain a medical examiner.

"The thing about doing this kind of work," he says, "is that you come to relish life, knowing how incredibly short it is, and how at any particular moment you may not be living any more. It brings home your mortality."

TO BECOME CHAPEL

NEW YORK (AP) — The Fine Arts Theater here, which opened in October 1951 with the premiere of "The Lavender Hill Mob," starring Alec Guinness, will be converted into a chapel, according to the Walter Reade Organization. The Archdiocese of New York has rented the theater and the three floors of office space above for use as a chapel and religious offices, the organization said.

Today is Tuesday, April 11, the 101st day of 1978 with 264 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

There is no morning star.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.

American statesman and orator Edward Everett was born April 11, 1794.

On this day in history:

In 1947, Jackie Robinson became the first black in major league baseball when he played for the Brooklyn Dodgers against the New York Yankees in an exhibition game.

In 1968, President Lyndon Johnson ordered 24,500 military reservists called up, half of them for duty in Vietnam.

In 1970, the Apollo 13 spacecraft headed for the third U.S. landing on the moon. The attempt was aborted when a faulty oxygen tank exploded. The astronauts returned to earth safely.

In 1975, the United States closed its embassy in Phnom Penh as Communist forces closed in on the Cambodian capital city. Several hundred Americans and Cambodians were evacuated.

A thought for the day:

Water Bug Labeled Endangered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 14-legged water bug called the Socorro isopod, that now numbers only 2,500 or so living in an open drainpipe in New Mexico, is the newest addition to the list of endangered species.

The isopod is only about a half-inch long and its head is nearly three times as broad as it is long. It has survived millions of years from the Pleistocene Period, when what is now the Southwest United States was ocean.

Most of the marine creatures were stranded inland and died when the seas receded and the remaining lakes and pool lost salinity.

Not the isopods, although over the millenia their habitats disappeared until they were narrowed to a single spring in the Socorro mountains of New Mexico.

They adapted to the warm fresh water — but although that alone was a sizable evolutionary feat, it was not the end of their travail.

In 1947, Sedillo Spring, where the isopods resided, was capped off and the water piped away. Some escaped into drain pipes to continue their precarious existence.

Today only 2,500 remain, all confined to a 90-foot section of open drain pipe that leads to an abandoned bath house.

As an endangered species they are protected from such encroachments as the geothermal projects in the area. John Paradiso of the Endangered Species Office hopes to find them a safer and more commodius home.

Husband-Wife Tiff Scares Onlookers

LONDON (UPI) — Police and firemen rushed to a south London high-rise block Sunday when passers-by reported a man yelling and threatening to jump from the 20th story.

But the figure waving his arms and shouting frantically from the balcony was in no danger, police discovered. He was cleaning the windows and at the same time arguing with his wife.

Service Station Robbed In Lubbock's 85th Heist

A gun-wielding bandit and an accomplice made off with $135 from a local service station late Monday in the city's 85th reported heist this year.

Attendant Jacky Lynn Barnett said he was at a grease rack when two men entered the office area of the Exxon Station at 2602 50th St. about 9:30 p.m.

According to the 21-year-old clerk, one of the men asked for change and as Barnett opened the register the other stranger moved behind him and pressed a snubnose .38-caliber revolver to his head.

After Barnett complied with the demand to hand over the station's money, he was forced into the rear of the business as the robbers fled west from the scene.

Police today still were seeking the suspects.

Robert Pagierna said he was outside an Idalou Road motel about 2:15 a.m. waiting for fares when two men approached him.

Since he was waiting for riders, Pagierna said he asked the men if he could help them. One of them reportedly responded, "Yeah, give us your bread," while the other made sure the driver noticed the hand hidden in his pocket as if he had a weapon.

The cab driver said the two men allowed him to get back in his vehicle after taking $46 from his billfold.

Two other men still were being sought in connection with a robbery at the Godwin's Service Station at 2829 Clovis Road about 10:50 p.m. Sunday.

Attendant Chester Gudez, 45, said the pair forced him to lie on the floor, then emptied the register and fled with about $40. He said one bandit, who held a revolver, wore a bandana over his face.

In recently reported break-ins, Joe Hefley of 8010 Clinton Ave. told officers someone broke through a garage door at his home during the weekend and made off with more than $4,000 worth of property, consisting mostly of firearms.

Robert Howard Bell of El Paso said a car burglar used a coat hanger to get inside his vehicle parked in the 2300-block of 19th Street late Sunday or early Monday and stole $1,160 worth of clothing.

Burglars reportedly broke into three trailers parked at a loading dock at Sears Warehouse at 26th Street and Avenue C during the weekend and hauled off five outboard motors and some miscellaneous sports equipment. According to reports, an attempt also was made on the warehouse itself, but the burglars apparently were discouraged when they encountered bars on the inside of a window.

William M. Sands, manager of the Blue Boar at 5023 34th St., reported about $400 taken from some pool tables after someone broke through a front door of the building early Monday. The complainant told police about $300 damage was caused.

Jordan Carow of 2129 56th St. and Arthur Coleman of 1912 E. Brown St. reported that pistols were stolen from their vehicles in Lubbock recently.

According to Mozella Carthron of 2501 E. 4th St., No. 33, a television was taken from her apartment Monday. Reports indicated no sign of forced entry was found.

Neither was the point of entry determined at the 1909 Parkway Drive home of Margaret Urive, who said a box containing four rings was stolen Monday. The complainant set a value of $155 on the loss.

Robert William Haskin Jr. of 5601 19th St., No. 274, told officers someone stole a watch and ring from his apartment Saturday. Reportedly no sign of forced entry was visible.

Sheriff's deputies about 1:50 a.m. Sunday found James Craig Burns of 2114 20th St. on the seat of his automobile west of Shallowater on a dirt road. Reports indicated the man had been stabbed in the left chest. He was treated at Methodist Hospital and released.

James Cary Strawbridge of 2403 22nd Place told police he was outside a Main Street and Avenue X club about 1:25 a.m. Monday when a man struck him with a pool cue because he had earlier said another man could have beaten his assailant at the game.

Several Mexican-American men reportedly attacked Lorenzo Robles, Jr., 20, of 3011-A 2nd St. while the group was at a club at 4th Street and Avenue R about 12:05 a.m. Monday.

Robles told police a man came up and accused him of having fought with a friend. When Robles replied he was not the same person, he said the man struck him with a pool cue.

Burglars took a $90 coat, a $35 pen and $17 from a car owned by Steve Mangan of 5416 50th St. No. 142 between 8 p.m. Sunday and 6:45 a.m. Monday, he told police.

Cruz Ramirez Jr., told officers someone removed about $50 worth of tools and a $300 stereo from his home at 2412 Ave. K Rear between 8 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Sunday.

Ricky Eugene Hipp of 9226 Belton Ave. told police he was missing about $1,300 in power tools from his pickup parked outside an apartment complex north of Wolfforth.

Veda Flores of Levelland told police she and a friend were dancing at a club at 4th Street and Quirt Avenue when she notice her purse containing about $100 missing about 10 p.m. Sunday.

Phone Rate Hike Request Denied

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Pay phone calls have always cost a nickel in Louisiana, and that is not about to change.

South Central Bell had asked for an increase to as much as 20 cents as part of a $105 million rate hike. But the Public Service Commission denied the payphone jump Monday and give the firm only a $39 million increase.

Threatened City Builds Flood Dikes

By GORDON HANSON

EAST GRAND FORKS, Minn. (AP) — Heeding warnings from the weather bureau, East Grand Forks officials decided to build another dike today to protect a portion of the city against a predicted near-record flood crest Thursday on the swollen Red River.

Only a few homes have been evacuated, but scores of homes on both sides of the river are threatened.

Mayor Louis Murray expressed confidence Monday night the dikes would hold. "I'm personally sure we are not going to have water in East Grand Forks," Murray said. "These dikes will hold 47 to 48 feet of water. After that, we'll pray."

The river continued its relentless rise Monday night to 47½ feet over flood stage at East Grand Forks, population 9,000, and at its sister city, Grand Forks, N.D., (50,000).

The National Weather Service said the Red will crest here at 47 feet Thursday. East Grand Forks may be in more danger because it is at a slightly lower elevation.

"We've never believed that 47-foot prediction, but the weather bureau never changed it so we've got to believe it," said Orley Gunderson, East Grand Forks Civil Defense director, following a meeting of flood control officials Monday night.

"We're going to build a 150-yard earthen dike in a residential part of town that's never had 47-foot water before."

The Minnesota National Guard, U.S. Coast Guard, and U.S. Corps of Engineers were standing by to assist if evacuation of homes became necessary.

For some 80 miles north to the Canadian border, thousands of acres of farmland were underwater as the river spread to widths of four and five miles into the lush farmland of western Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich was to inspect the Red River Valley flooding Tuesday, following by a day a similar helicopter check by North Dakota Gov. Arthur A. Link.

An interstate squabble broke out following Link's tour. North Dakota officials maintain that miles of rural dikes built over the years by Minnesota farmers helped keep Minnesota land relatively dry, but pushed the spreading waters over thousand of acres of the flat North Dakota farmland.

Official Proclaims 'Holocaust Week'

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — To coincide with a nationally televised dramatization of the systematic slaughter of 6 million Jews during World War II, Gov. James R. Thompson has proclaimed the week of April 16 "Holocaust Remembrance Week" in Illinois.

The NBC telecast will run Sunday through April 19. It focuses on the lives of two families, one Jewish and one Nazi. Thompson noted that neo-Nazis are planning to march in Skokie, Ill., and in his proclamation called them "a band of bigots."

SHIP SINKS

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — An engine room explosion set fire to the 9,500-ton Greek freighter Maira on Monday and the ship sank off the west coast of Australia, the marine operations headquarters reported. But all 20 crew members and passengers were rescued by the Norwegian freighter Team Augwi, which reported they were in good shape. They were expected in Singapore Saturday.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Loophole Is Dirty Trick

IN AN ERA when even the most reprehensible activities enjoy euphemistic descriptions designed to provide an aura of respectability, perhaps we shouldn't be disgusted to learn that erstwhile dirty tricks or clandestine operations henceforth will be "special activities."

That phrase is worth remembering because the next time the CIA tries to topple another country's government, bribe a foreign politician or subvert a political movement in a distant nation, officially it will only be engaged in a "special activity."

THE NEW TERM surfaced in a highly touted executive order signed recently by President Carter and ostensibly designed to impose effective oversight, direction and management of foreign intelligence activities.

While the order imposes a number of restrictions on intelligence agency activities conducted in this country, any guidelines or restrictions on "dirty tricks" overseas are notably absent.

There is one exception: "No person employed by or acting in behalf of the U.S. government shall engage in assassinations."

THE ORDER does establish a procedure under which plans for all other special activities are to be submitted to the Special Coordination Committee, a high-ranking, top-secret unit of the National Security Council.

Although the SCC must pass along its recommendations to the President, the order does not specifically require that either the SCC or the President approve the special activities before they are undertaken.

Furthermore, sensitive foreign intelligence collection operations must only be reported to the SCC chairman "for appropriate review and approval."

THUS, IT WOULD be possible that neither the President nor the members of the SCC (including the attorney general and the secretaries of state and defense) would even be informed about those highly sensitive activities.

The executive order leaves a great deal to be desired in terms of gaining control of potentially reckless, improper or illegal intelligence activities.

Congress is now writing its own legislative charter for the country's intelligence agencies, and it's imperative that the loopholes in the President's order be closed.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The 'Good Guys'

AS HE STEPPED down from the job of mayor last week, Roy Bass said that one of his and the city's biggest problems has been the amount of governmental red tape imposed from Washington.

"But, thank goodness," he added, "we aren't getting all we're paying for."

★

In my Friday comments about Bass' tenure as mayor, I meant to say that a $26.4 million "Back to Basics" bond issue had been approved last year. "Approved" came out as "opposed." It was still accurate but, for the record, it was approved with Bass' help despite being opposed.

ONE ARGUMENT used by proponents of legalized parimutuel betting at Texas racetracks has been shot out of the saddle by a federally financed study.

"There is no evidence that legalized wagering decreases illegal gambling," the research arm of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration concluded.

The LEAA conducted a 22-month $227,503 study through the University of Massachusetts and the Joint Center for Urban Studies of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard University.

Conducted in 17 major cities, the study "found that local police and prosecutors, rather than state statutes, determine the way gambling laws are enforced."

The LEAA adds that "most police officers and private citizens rank gambling violations very low in criminal justice system priorities (but) they are concerned about gambling's relation to corruption and organized crime."

The study also found that "citizens are more likely to be concerned about non-enforcement of gambling than about overly aggressive enforcement."

A COUPLE OF Texas Court of Criminal Appeals judges who believe that the public has as much right to a fair trial as do the defendants were in the office the other day.

Jim Vollers and W.C. Davis are a couple of "Good Guy" names to remember in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Vollers and Davis, along with Judge Leon Douglas, dissented recently when the appeals court ruled, 6-3, that the evidence in a Dallas case was "insufficient" to prove that a knife with a four-inch blade is a deadly weapon.

We need to keep judges like Vollers, Davis and Douglas on the court and—first chance we get—put some more on there with them who will apply commonsense to the law.

DAVIS AND VOLLERS agree that the Court of Criminal Appeals often goes too far in reversing a conviction because of some technical point of law that had no bearing on the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

"If the man still got a fair trial, that ought to be enough," Davis points out.

"Technicalities which do not serve to protect individual rights" should be done away with, Vollers adds.

One recent example when the Court's majority disagreed had to do with an indictment accusing a man of taking "corporeal personal property" from a victim at gunpoint.

THE COURT HELD, 7-2, that the man's conviction was invalid because the property was not described in the indictment.

Vollers, disagreeing, pointed out that the man pleaded guilty and, anyway, taking any property whatsoever at the point of a gun is against the law.

Vollers and Davis have liberal-minded opponents in the May 6 primary.

If you believe that the law should be designed to get at the truth and see justice done—rather than be a game that lawyers play in the courtroom to see if they can get a reversible technical error into the record—Davis and Vollers are good names to remember.

Holmes Alexander:

'Love Can Conquer All'--Sadat

WASHINGTON—President Anwar el-Sadat would do well to lay low and say nothing about his suspended Peace Initiative until his April-published autobiography (Harper & Row) can make the rounds and do the speaking for him.

A lot of answers are in the book, subtitled "In Search of Identity." More accurately, there is just one answer, but an extended one.

It takes the author from his childhood as a peasant boy at the quiet village of Mit Abul-Kum in the Nile Delta, tending cattle, to the daring visit to Jerusalem and to his talks merely a few weeks ago with Jimmy Carter.

The gist of Sadat's life story is that, despite times of defeat and dismay, misapprehension and mistakes, he finds that religion, not politics, is leadership. Love conquers all, that is his message. This book should help him put it across.

AT FIRST, HE would learn ideas, and then events or persons would cause him to unlearn it. He with the other village boys worked a partnership in "statutory" irrigation.

That is, the whole region had but two weeks a season to water the fields, and this meant the people working together at top speed to open the pipes and see to it that everybody's patch, not just one's own, received the precious fluid.

But, born in 1918, Sadat was growing up during the British occupation, and he learned hatred as well as love.

There was the incident, fixed in his mind by a popular ballad, when British soldiers at a pigeon-shoot, accidentally set fire to a wheat silo, which caused a scuffle and the death of a soldier.

Courts martial were held, scaffolds raised and the first Egyptian farmer to be hanged. Zahran acquitted himself so bravely that young Anwar would say to himself, "I wish I were Zahran."

EGYPT MUST BE liberated, and it would only be done, the boy reasoned, by armed force and popular hatred. His heroes became the British enemies, first Napoleon in story, then Hitler as history rolled on.

The British jailed him during World War II, and the 31 months in prison became the time of rebirth, the sort that Jimmy Carter experienced at the time of an unfair political defeat.

"What I suffered most in Cell 54," Sadat says, "was perhaps the lack of a love relation. For a man's life to be complete, he must have a female partner to whom he is bound in mutual love.

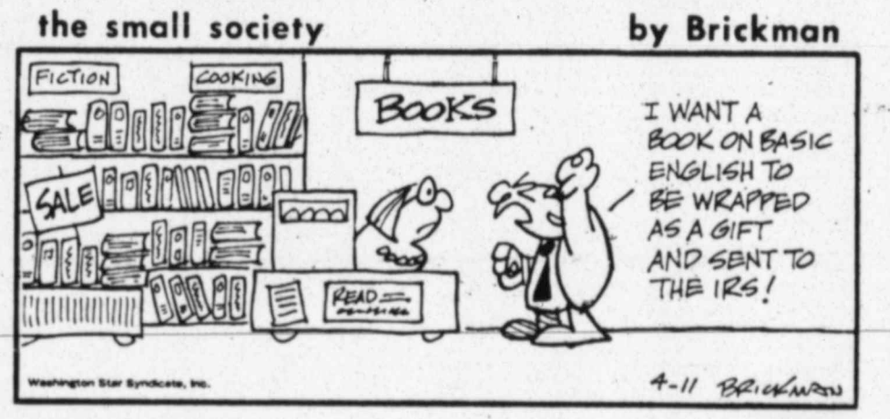

"(But) when the heavy shackles that bound me to my narrow self were removed, I began to enjoy God's love...

"I am a tireless advocate of love. Love is a human safeguard against all social pitfalls."

Let not worldly cynicism mock this simple faith. Sadat says toward the end of the book that he can't foresee what the situation would be at its publication, but he vows to stand by his Peace Initiative. Whatever happens, there will be no more wars between Egypt and Israel while he is in charge on his side of the once-embattled canal. There's at least, a beginning.

What the book amounts to is another voice, but this one in the gentle tones of God, telling Premier Begin that he's got to give a little.

Coop Banks Can Lend Help, Not Hand-Out

ITEM: THE GROUP Health Cooperative of Puget Sound, Wash., is the largest consumer-owned health care cooperative in the nation, serving more than 240,000 local residents through a network of two hospitals, 10 medical centers and an extended care facility.

The coop has been in existence for 30 years, but was unable to get a major loan from a commercial bank until 10 years ago, when its enrollment exceeded 100,000 people.

Item: Co-Op Auto of Washtenaw, Mich., is among the busiest auto repair shops of its size in the area. In addition to repairing cars, the coop runs consumer education classes and a U-Do-It program for customers who want to work on their cars themselves.

Today, the repair shop does $40,000 of business each month. But five years ago, Co-Op Auto was on the edge of bankruptcy, and was saved only by its present president's management ability and luck at obtaining credit from a coop life insurance company as well as the Cooperative Foundation.

ITEM: UNTIL 1975, when a cooperative grocery store opened on isolated Daufuskie Island, off the South Carolina shore, the only thing the 140 permanent residents could buy on the island was a postage stamp. There was no bridge connecting the island to the mainland.

Transportation is still iffy and many problems threaten to close this struggling coop grocery. As of now, there are no government or private sources willing or able to provide capital or training or transportation to help the island grocery coop survive.

Launching and maintaining a cooperative is tough — even though an estimated 3 million Americans belong to cooperatives providing members everything from eyeglasses to TV repair services.

The organizing skills and experience required are hard to obtain. The availability of bank financing at the initial stages is limited or nonexistent.

EVEN MORE established coops have trouble getting loans to expand. Government aid for coops is "fundamentally deficient," testified Roger C. Altman, Asst. Treasury Secretary, recently.

With the exception of housing coops, most cooperatives are small businesses, yet they are not eligible for the loans and training assistance provided by the Small Business Administration.

The situation soon may change, though, for the Senate is to consider a bill to establish a National Consumer Cooperative Bank, eventually to be owned by its borrowers and designed to provide nonfarm cooperatives with technical help and loans at prevailing interest rate levels.

THIS MONEY eventually would be repaid through borrowers' investments in the bank as well as the bank's earnings. To obtain most of its funds, the bank would sell its securities to investors in the open capital markets.

The bill also calls for the bank to run a "Self-Help Development Fund," to make low-interest loans to poorer cooperatives and to administer a counseling and training program for fledgling or faltering coops which need this training more than anything else.

A similar version of the Coop Bank bill was passed last year by a one-vote margin in the House.

Earlier in its term, the Carter White House questioned the need for an independent bank and merely supported a $20 million pilot program. But it has since revised its position on the proposal.

Now, after many visits to cooperatives throughout the U.S. and after meetings with informed officials of other agencies, President Carter is enthusiastically backing the concept — although in a scaled-down form.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S modified turnabout plus the widespread and persistent support of a diverse collection of urban, farm, labor and consumer organizations suggest that this proposal for a National Consumer Coopertive Bank has a fair chance of passage.

The key points that appeal both to groups adamantly opposed to more government organizations and those fervently in favor of such expansions as this are:

* The Coop Bank would provide an alternative to government hand-out programs instead of adding to them;

* It would help precisely those Americans who resent hand-out deals and who want only to get the essential technical aid and fair-interest loans to be able to help themselves.

John D. Lofton:

Kooks Contaminate Nuke Debate

WASHINGTON—Considering all the kooky anti-nuke misinformation being spread around, the wonder is that anybody supports nuclear power.

The following item is from the newsletter published by the Washington chapter of the Women Strike for Peace, a left-wing group who fought long and hard during the 1960s and early '70s to make Indochina safe for communism.

Under the headline: "Beware Americium 241. It's in Your Ionization-Type Smoke Detector!" the reader is told:

"SELLING THE American public on smoke detectors containing radioactive Americium is just one more ploy to get us to accept the peaceful atom.

"Amid snow flakes, the loudspeaker from the Peace Van, sandwich posters and nose masks drew approximately 400 passersby to take leaflets drawing a connection between the familiar ionizing smoke detectors containing Americium 241 and cancer-causing low-radiation from commercial nuclear power plants and the Nagasaki bomb.

"This demonstration was set up as a model for actions elsewhere." The item includes "Louise's" phone number and advises the reader to call her "to help plan your neighborhood demonstration."

SO, IN MY NEVER-ending quest for truth, I call Louise. What is it people should beware of, I ask? Why, cancer, of course, she says.

Dr. John Gofman of the University of California has told her that smoke detectors with Americium 241 will "inevitably give smokers 1,047 lung cancers; non-smokers about 11, maybe." All right, so who's behind this plot to push ionized smoke detectors to get us to accept the peaceful atom? Louise replies:

"Well, that's a long story. I'm not going to say their names. This is not a baby plan, you know. It started a long time ago. It's a tremendous thing.

"It started with your gauges, your watch dial, to make it tick all night long while you sleep, like the Air Force guarding you, so you can have sweet dreams." And what does this mean. I ask?

"Well, what do you think? It means we're sleeping sweetly because our Air Force is up there all night," she says.

YOU MEAN WATCH dials cause cancer? "Oh, my goodness," says Louise. "Don't you remember those stories about all those women who died of cancer after painting all those dials? A lot of people put their watches next to their faces when they sleep."

And this will cause cancer? "Of course, eventually. It's called low-level constant intrusion into the body." I ask: "Can you give me the name of a medical authority who agrees with you?"

Louise responds: "No, I wouldn't, because these rays are too short and they stop. I shouldn't say that." Watch dials can cause cancer, however, if there's a "leakage," she says.

WHEN I ASK George Anikis, head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission's Fire and Thermal Burn Programs, if there's any danger from smoke detectors containing Americium 241, he tells me there is not, referring me to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC).

John Kopeck of the NRC's public affairs office backs up what Anikis has told me.

Kopeck reads me a September 1976 letter from Kenneth Chapman, director of the NRC's Office of Nuclear Material, Safety and Safeguards, to Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the Public Citizen Health Research Group, an outfit affiliated with Ralph Nader.

Rejecting Wolfe's call for an immediate halt to the manufacture and sale of ionization-type smoke detectors, and for their recall, Chapman brushes off the Nader group's evidence because it "excludes relevant technical information which, when considered in a competent technical analysis, leads to quite different conclusions about risks from ionization-type smoke detectors than those you implied." Chapman tells Wolfe:

"WE FOUND THAT radioactive exposures were very small and well within acceptable limits."

At the end of our conversation, Louise suggests that I come to see her in person to discuss my questions. I decline, saying I wouldn't want to endanger her. When she asks what I mean, I say:

"Well, you see, I am irreversibly contaminated, having slept for the past several years not only with my watch to my face but also with an ionized smoke detector strapped to my head." Why, she asks? I reply:

"Why do you think? If my radium dial sets my face on fire, I'd like my wife and kids to be warned so they can get out of the house."

New Retirement Age Seen As Problem For Youth

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The President signed last Thursday a law raising the retirement age from 65 to 70. The next day the Labor Department reported teen-age unemployment in March was 17.3 percent.

It doesn't take any analytical ability to see the association. If exit from the labor force is delayed, no matter that it be for the noblest of motives, entrance is made that much more difficult.

The elderly have their own problems these days, and they are to be commended for resolving one of them last week, but for teen-agers the elderly unintentionally made it just a bit worse than before.

These are among the worst of times for youngsters seeking their first real jobs, and little seems to be done for them. Unable to vote, unable to form their own power bloc, they sit idle and disillusioned.

Analysis

Many are sprung from big-city schools without economic understanding, direction, or vocational skills. To make them hireable at the lowest level some companies must run their own classes.

Repeated increases in the minimum wage are said by small-business executives to be another deterent to hiring. And then there are the forms to fill out.

Writes a St. Paul businessman, "Please take some time to study the wasteful amount of government forms and taxes an employer must suffer to hire a teenager.

"No wonder the employer looks for some other way. The government bureaucracy is forcing him to find some machine to replace him."

He offers a suggestion: teen-age unemployment would drop if employment taxes were eliminated from teen-age pay. Particularly bad, he says, are state-federal income taxes and Social Security withholdings.

"If the withholdings were eliminated, many small employers — including homeowners — would seek out teen-age help because they would be relieved of the grudging government paperwork required today.

And making it easier, he says, wouldn't be costly to the government. "Most teenagers don't earn enough to pay taxes anyway — so why burden their employers with time-consuming withholdings?"

If the government offers an investment tax credit to employers as an incentive to buy new machinery, why not an incentive to hire teen-agers, he asks?

Small business, claims its representatives, can do a lot toward training teenagers, but they also say they are too often ignored by the Washington bureaucracy.

A recent study found that from 1969 to 1976 a total of 9,583,000 new jobs were created. All but 1 percent of them, says the National Small Business Association, were in small businesses.

Small business is labor intensive, the association reminds us. It relies on labor to a greater degree than does large business. In fact, 66 percent of the work force is in firms of 250 workers or less.

But, say the small-business representatives, they are being squeezed out of existence by big business, big labor and big government. Like the teen-ager, they say, they have relatively little representation.

In that sense both the teen-agers and small businesses which seek to employ them are quite unlike the elderly, who have become a unified, effective voting bloc which demands it be listened to.

Program Helps Retirees

By CHARLOTTE COOPER

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — At many companies, top executives who reach retirement age are given a pat on the back and sent off with their stock options to vacation in the sun.

But Textron Inc., an international conglomerate which racked up $2.8 billion in sales last year, is an exception. Last October, it started the Textron Advisory Group, a subsidiary dedicated to the proposition that talents which take a lifetime to cultivate shouldn't go to waste.

TAG's 30 members are retired top executives who undertake consulting jobs for outside firms whenever a particular project strikes their fancy.

They are paid on a per diem basis by the company hiring them. They rarely work 40 hours a week and can refuse an assignment if they'd rather play golf.

TAG is similar to the federally-funded Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) in which retired executives volunteer their time to counsel small businessmen.

TAG President Samuel Ryburn said that so far as he knows, Textron is the only private company with such a subsidiary. But other firms — including Union Carbide, Honeywell and IBM — are considering similar projects.

Franklin Atwater, who retired as president of Textron's Homelite division last July, is one of TAG's founders. He worked with two other retired executives and Ryburn to form an organization that would "make a worthwhile contribution to a client's business plus offer the retired a rewarding experience."

"When people reach retirement age, they drop off a precipice from work to leisure. That transition is very sudden for some and they welcome the idea of ongoing, useful work," Atwater said.

Now a TAG director and employee, Atwater is working on one of the subsidiary's consulting contracts: a review of energy conservation procedures within the Textron organization. The project is one of six TAG selected from a list of 22 proposed by various companies.

Atwater said he feels the project has been so successful because "there's a definite need in the business world for tried and true talent that can step into an emergency situation."

Ryburn said Textron hopes its newest subsidiary will turn a profit in the near future. But he said the project was started for more than monetary concerns.

"We realize the real, human need some people have to stay active in business after retirement. And that need is probably strongest in people like TAG employees," he said.

"To rise to the top of any big organization you have to have a strong work ethic, a lot of drive. You get geared to working at a certain speed and then suddenly, after retirement, you have no reason to get out of bed. In some ways, asking a person who's worked hard all his life to retire is like kicking him out of a club, or even his country."

Ryburn, 62, said the subsidiary will have at least one new employee in three years. "I plan to join when I retire," he said. "I've been a hardworking type all my life. Being involved in something like TAG would probably help me adjust to retirement's less frantic pace."

Foreclosure Sale Reset

ATLANTA (AP) — The foreclosure sale of Omni International's hotel, entertainment and shopping complex, postponed from last month, has been rescheduled for May 2.

A group of creditors began advertising the sale Thursday, but spokesmen for the Omni and the lenders said negotiations are continuing for a restructuring of the complex's debt.

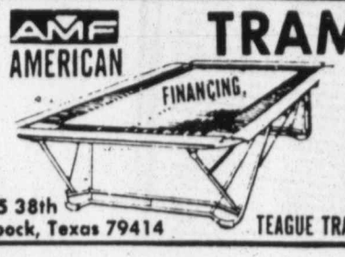

Stephen A. Brown, president of Omni International Inc., a subsidiary of International City Corp., and general partner in Omni International Ltd., which owns the complex, said he did not know why the creditors began the foreclosure proceedings Thursday.

"We're continuing to negotiate every day, and we're very optimistic we'll reach a settlement," he said. "It gets closer and closer every day."

A spokesman for Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, the major lender, refused to say why the foreclosure sale was rescheduled.

The owners of the Omni owe $76 million in construction money and $14 million in interest to five banks and the Ford Foundation.

Feature Movies To Be Offered Hotels Via Satellite

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — By next year, hotel guests around the country may be able to watch feature films in their rooms, via satellite, 20th Century-Fox has announced.

The service, a joint venture by 20th Century-Fox Telecommunications, Bell Howell, Holiday Inns, and Southern Satellite Systems, would be offered to the entire hotel industry, officials said Friday.

Kemmons Wilson, chairman of the board of Holiday Inns, said his company has studied the idea and concluded the films would be a significant attraction.

Once the satellite network is in place, other uses — such as video conferences — may become feasible, said Robert Pfannkuch, president of Bell Howell's video division.

"But movies are the best vehicle to justify the initial capital investment," he added.

Within two years, up to 500 receiving stations could be installed across the country to pick up the satellite transmissions, Pfannkuch said.

During 1976, a total of 7,146,177 passengers enplaned at LaGuardia Airport in New York.

Privileges Come With Seniority

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Capitol is a treasure chest of nooks and crannies, of hidden corridors and unmarked doors behind which the most senior and powerful members of Congress have quiet, hideaway offices known to only a priviledged few.

The outside of the Capitol has still other nooks and crannies that house a vast number of pigeons.

The feathered and the powerful coexist uneasily, often only a windowpane apart.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., is high on the list of the powerful and recently moved a notch higher. The death of Sen. John L. McClellan brought about a realignment in the ranks of senior senators.

He showed off his new office to a group of reporters who asked why he had given up one of the best views in Washington.

"It was the pigeons," confided the senator, who noted that the windowsill beyond which was the view, was covered with many years' accumulation of droppings.

• • •

The Senate-House conferees were meeting in Jackson's hideaway office. For four months they have sought a formula that could command enough votes to produce a bill.

As Jackson, chairman of the Senate conferees, entered a committee meeting, reporters asked if the group was near agreement.

Not yet, said the senator "we're just involved in preliminary probing at this stage."

"Preliminary?" asked a reporter. "How can you say 'preliminary' after four months?"

Jackson glared at the reporter, turned and strode into the room, slamming the door behind him.

• • •

The energy conferees aren't always easy to find. In their frustrating efforts to reach agreement, they often have tried to evade reporters by meeting in unannounced locations throughout the Capitol.

Their evasive tactics rarely succeed.

Recently reporters standing outside the hideaway office where the conferees planned to meet had to assure some confused members of the conference committee that they had found the right office.

Getting your shots off early, or senators who couldn't wait until they saw the whites of their eyes:

Sen. Bill Roth, R-Del., issued a statement on April 6, in which he criticized President Carter's anti-inflation message, scheduled to be delivered on April 13.

And, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., told a San Francisco audience on April 7, that the compromise energy bill was a failure. No one has yet come up with a compromise energy bill.

The Rose by Any Other Name Award goes to Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah.

Hatch labored long and hard for support for an amendment to the Panama Canal treaty. But when the vote was taken last week it was 58 to 37 in favor of a motion to kill the Hatch proposal.

Undaunted, the senator put out a press release that was headlined: "Hatch calls defeat a victory."

Add former CIA Director William Colby to your list of people who say they have no idea who is "Deep Throat."

Colby assured the House Intelligence Committee that he couldn't identify the source of all those Washington Post stories about Watergate.

CAB Asks Public To Define Word

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board is planning to allow lower air fares for elderly, retired and handicapped persons, and wants suggestions from the public on how to define the handicaps.

Tentatively the board is defining handicapped as a person with a physical or mental impairment, except alcoholism and drug addiction, which limits one or more major life activity.

If you have any suggestions or additions to this definition the board is interested, and it wants to know if immigrant orphans should be considered handicapped.

Send your comments by April 10 to the CAB, Dockets Section, Washington, D.C., 20428.

Wayne Hays Has Cast Removed

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Now that he's gotten back full use of an injured leg, former U.S. Rep. Wayne L. Hays says it's time to get a leg up on his opponents if he wants to succeed in his political comeback.

HAYS

Hays, who fell from congressional power two years ago as a result of the Elizabeth Ray sex scandal, tore a knee tendon on Feb. 6. The cast was removed Monday.

Hays, 66, is seeking the Democratic nomination for a seat in the Ohio House of Representatives.

"I haven't been able to spend very much time on the campaign so far, except on the telephone," Hays said. "But I'll be spending full time on it from now on."

Hays has competition from five other Democrats in his bid for the 99th District seat.

"I have a gut feeling," Hays said of his chances for victory. "But I don't want to be quoted on it, let's put it that way."

Mark Phillips Fined

LONDON (AP) — One more speeding conviction and Mark Phillips may find himself without a drivers license.

Phillips, husband of Princess Anne, was fined 15 pounds — $28.50 — in a London court Monday for speeding, his second conviction in little over a year.

With two convictions against him, Phillips needs only one more to have his license taken away.

Phillips pleaded guilty to driving in London at speeds of 36 to 60 mph. The legal limit in London is 30 mph. Phillips was not in court.

Both Phillips and Princess Anne have had trouble keeping their speeds down while driving along Britain's roads. Phillips was fined $57 a year ago March for speeding and Princess Anne, 27, was fined $76 in January 1977 for driving at 96 mph on a 70 mph expressway.

Mitchell Undergoes Surgery

MITCHELL

Monday's operation was the second for Mitchell since his medical furlough last Christmas from the prison camp at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama. The first operation was to repair an artery.

Mitchell is serving 2½ to 8 years in jail for obstructing justice and lying under oath in connection with the Watergate scandal.

The former U.S. official entered the hospital last Thursday. He was given in an unguarded private room costing something more than $200 a day in the Harkness Pavilion.

Princess Resumes Duties

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, undaunted by criticism of her relationship with a young pop singer, has resumed her royal duties after a week-long bout with the flu.

A small crowd cheered the smiling, 47-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II as she arrived Monday at London's Westminster Cathedral to attend a charity concert. It was her first public appearance since taking ill.

Mandel Visits State House

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Marvin Mandel said he was simply stopping by the basement canteen at the Maryland House "only to get a cup of coffee." He wound up spending a few hours reminiscing about his old days as governor.

A steady stream of legislators and staff members stopped by Monday to greet the suspended governor, who insisted he had only come by "to get a cup of coffee."

Mandel, 57, and five others were convicted last August of mail fraud and racketeering. He was suspended from the governorship last October after being sentenced to four years in prison.

Charge Deferred Against Actress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A cocaine possession charge against actress Gail Fisher has been deferred for at least six months while she participates in a drug diversion program.

MISS FISHER

Miss Fisher, best known for her role as Peggy in the "Mannix" television series, was placed on 12-months probation and fined $350 for using an illegal "blue box" on her telephone, said Deputy District Attorney Leonard Levine.

Levine said she also was ordered to pay $1,026 to Pacific Telephone Co. to cover charges she avoided.

Police said they found a small quantity of cocaine in the actress' home Jan. 19 while they were investigating reports that she was using a blue box.

If Miss Fisher, 42, successfully completes the drug program, the felony narcotics charge against her will be dropped, the district attorney said. Municipal Court Judge David Perez scheduled an Oct. 8 hearing on Miss Fisher's progress.

No Plate Like Home

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Meldrim Thomson, citing "complaints from all over the state," has ordered the immediate restoration of New Hampshire's traditional green and white automobile license plates.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

It seems that New Hampshire residents are upset because the interim red and white plates that the Motor Vehicle Division began issuing several months ago look too much like Massachusetts' tags.

The Legislature last year approved special five-year reflectorized plates which will become available later this year. The red and white plates were issued for interim registrations of new cars.

Thomson said Monday that "most of those objecting say the red and white plates look like Massachusetts' registration plates and that they don't want to be identified as Massachusetts drivers."

Union Officials Say 40-Hour Week Outdated

DETROIT (UPI) — The head of a group of union officials says the 40-hour workweek is out of date and that shortening the workweek would not feed inflation.

The group, the All Unions Committee to Shorten the Work Week, today hosted a meeting in suburban Dearborn so officials from 15 unions across the nation could map strategy for the drive.

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser was among those slated to address the more than 600 union delegates expected. Workshops also were scheduled to discuss methods of pressing for a shorter workweek.

The goal of the drive, which began when the committee was formed last fall in Detroit, is to cut unemployment, said Fran Runnels, committee chairman and president of UAW Local 22.

"The basic thrust of the whole thing is to create enough jobs where we can put this country back to work," Runnels said Monday.

"We've been pussyfooting around for years and we have spent billions and billions of dollars that have not been effective," he said. "Nothing is going to be effective until we reduce the workweek."

Every hour that the 40-hour work week is trimmed could create jobs for an additional 1.5 million people, Runnels contended.

"We need to reduce it down until the jobs increase and these two factors meet and level off into as near a zero unemployment situation as we could expect," he said.

Runnels rejected the argument that the plan could fuel inflation, saying only full employmet would slow the wage-price spiral significantly.

"It is no inflationary to put people to work," he said.

HEW Eyes Requests For Student Grants

By CHRIS CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare says it will require 200,000 college students each year to submit extra evidence to back up their requests for federal grants.

Leo Kornfeld, HEW's student aid chief, said the applications "will be randomly selected by computer in the way federal income tax returns are selected for validation."

An HEW audit report last week estimated that the department paid out $120 million in Basic Educational Opportunity Grants in fiscal 1977 to students who were not eligible or who got too much.

The 200,000 students will not be able to receive their grants from college financial aid officers until they provide information to back up their application. A spokeswoman for the Office of Education said that might include copies of their parents' federal income tax return and more detailed information about where other children in the family attend school.

Some 4.5 million students applied for Basic Grants for this college year. Nearly two million received them at a cost to the government of $1.7 billion. The average grant was $850, and 90 percent of the recipients were from families with adjusted income of less than $14,000.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. also warned Monday that students' applications will be returned for correction if any information is incomplete or questionable. He said all applications now are screened before processing for errors or omissions.

Any forms that are sent back corrected will undergo further checking, Califano added.

The 200,000 students who will get extra scrutiny will be chosen from among those who pass the initial hurdle and are considered eligible for grants, the HEW announcement said.

President Carter has proposed expanding the Basic Grant program next year to reach three million more students, primarily from middle-income families.

Mrs. Presley Wins Claim

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Priscilla Presley has won her $750,000 divorce claim against the estate of Elvis Presley.

However, details of the agreement were kept secret by Probate Judge Joseph Evans.

D. Beecher Smith II, attorney for the estate of the late singer, said the agreement was "sealed out of respect for the parties." He declined to elaborate, but it is not uncommon for divorce settlements to be kept secret by the courts.

Among other things, Mrs. Presley had asked for half the money received from the sale of furnishings of the couple's Los Angeles home; 5 percent of the stock in Elvis Presley Music Inc. and Whitehaven Music Inc.; and $4,000 monthly for support and education of the couple's 9-year-old daughter, Lisa Marie.

An exception to Mrs. Presley's claim filed by Vernon Presley, executor of his son's estate, said that "prior to his death, Elvis A. Presley is believed to have complied with the provisions of the interlocutory judgment of dissolution of marriage" and that he "has provided through life insurance proceeds and under his last will and testament most adequately for his minor child."

Presley and Priscilla Beaulieu were married in Las Vegas in 1967 and divorced in 1973. Presley died last Aug. 16.

Scientist Says Island Sinking

GALVESTON, Texas (UPI) — A scientist warned western Galveston Island may disappear beneath the sea unless vegetation loss and beach erosion are stopped.

Dr. Arthur R. Benton Jr. of Texas A&M University reported results of a year-long study showing the death of vegetation and rapid beach erosion due to man-made changes in the landscape.

He said erosion — up to 60 feet per year — was due to the damming of streams north and east of the island cutting off the flow of sands that previously replenished the west end beaches.

He blamed the death of vegetation "which holds the islands together" on too much use of land for cattle grazing. He said the resultant disappearance of grass also has reduced marine life in area marshes.

Benton said the most visible sign of erosion may be undermining of a toll plaza for the Galveston end of the San Luis Pass-Vacek bridge.

"We figure six to seven years at the toll plaza before things start falling down," he said, warning storms might reduce that grace period to "perhaps three or four years."

He said Corps of Engineers construction might solve the problems "but they won't be cheap solutions."

FARES TO BE CUT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — South African Airways has announced that the Australian government has approved its plans to slash fares between South Africa and Australia in June. The airline, which has a monopoly on the run across the Indian Ocean, said the round-trip excursion fare between Johannesburg and Sydney would be cut from $1,700 to $990.

Oil Industry To Spend $1 Billion On New Rigs

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Nearly $1 billion will be spent this year on new domestic oil drilling rigs and replacement parts, the Oil and Gas Journal reports in its April 10 issue.

A survey by the national petroleum publication reveals contractors are planning to build at least 254 rotary rigs and are considering ordering another 197 new rigs during the next two years.

Ninety percent of the spending will be by U.S. contractors, the weekly magazine reports, and more than half the new rigs have been ordered by contractors headquartered in Texas and Oklahoma.

The Tulsa-based magazine said the heavy spending is needed to keep pace with a drilling surge in North America. But contractors told the publication that land rig supply would probably catch up with demand next year and that a surplus is possible by 1980. Meanwhile, offshore rig supply was expected to keep in step with demand through 1980.

The U.S. active rig count was expected to average 2,196 this year, 2,371 in 1979 and 2,462 in 1980.

Contractors said they faced obstacles because of equipment delivery delays of 15 months, shortages of trained drilling crews and confusion over government policy.

Cosmic Object Found

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists at California Institute of Technology say they have discovered a cosmic "blowtorch" with as much energy as 10 billion suns.

The newly discovered object spews out a cloud of gas 36 trillion miles long, the scientists determined.

Caltech spokesman Dennis Meredith said recently the findings were published in the March 9 issue of Nature Magazine.

"There's an object that spews matter out in a long, tight jet, like a blowtorch," Meredith said.

He said the jet is six light years long. A light-year is the distance light travels in a year — about 6 trillion miles.

"Astronomers are discovering more and more that galaxies are not just quiet collections of stars, but in some galaxies there are extremely violent processes going on in the center," Meredith said. "There are about a dozen of these huge jets known in other galaxies, but this is the best mapped one so far."

He said the object is in a galaxy that already has another such "blowtorch" about 100,000 times larger. The larger object was discovered last year.

He said the galaxy is about 400 million light years from Earth in the constellation Ursa Minor.

The two jets together supply energy to a huge cloud of gas, which lies outside the galaxy itself, Meredith said. The cloud, in turn, gives off radiation at radio frequencies.

DR. LAMB

Back Problems Vary

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is my back and legs. After one whole year of going to the doctors and about $500 they have decided it is caused from sitting all day. I'm a typist. I get up from my desk and walk around as much as I possibly can, and I walk half an hour at lunch time.

The doctor told me to sit on a foam rubber cushion and I use one three inches thick but it doesn't seem to help much. I don't feel I can quit working, and I don't know how to do anything else. Any suggestions would be greatly appreciated.

I'm 45, not overweight, 127 pounds for 5 feet 6 and I had a total hysterectomy about three years ago.

DEAR READER — It is difficult to be helpful from the story alone, as it is probably a mechanical problem. I have my doubts the foam rubber cushion will do the trick. If you can see a specialist in physical medicine he might help you.

Sometimes the pelvic bones are of different size and this tilts the pelvis abnormally and makes sitting a long time uncomfortable. The seat of the chair must be firm and tilted just a bit forward so the hip bones sit squarely and firmly on the seat. The seat should not be so low that you bend your hips too much nor so high that you compress the muscles at the back of the thighs. You should have good firm back support when you are properly seated.

Then the other thing you need is a properly fitted desk for you. Furniture is a bit like clothes. Some people need different sizes and all out-of-the-warehouse furniture doesn't fit all sizes of people.

Then I would recommend a set of exercise to strenghten your abdominal muscles. That should include sit ups and properly done leg lifts. I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle because it includes in it exercise information you can use — not because you need to decrease your abdominal size. Go over your exercise plan with your doctor to be sure you exercise safely. Others who want this issue can send 50 cent with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

When you do leg lifts, stretch out flat on your back and then as you lift the feet, bend the knees and bring the feet straight back toward your buttocks as you jackknife your knees. Raise the feet up and push them out as the heels come back to the floor. Be sure and consciously tighten your muscles in the lower abdomen each time you lift your feet off the floor and keep them tight until the maneuver is over.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I want to know if alfalfa tablets benefit arthritis. Some people claim taking 30 tablets will cure crippling arthritis.

DEAR READER — What a hoax! If it were not so tragic it would be comic. There are multiple things suggested for arthritis that have no health benefit at all. Alfalfa tablets fall into that category. You need to be seen by a good specialist in internal medicine or if available a specialist in rheumatology.

Researchers Battle Sickle Cell Anemia

By Robert Musel

LONDON (UPI) — Sickle cell anemia, a hereditary blood disease, kills some 100,000 persons around the world every year. Most of them are blacks, and scientists are working in many laboratories to try to solve the problem.

One of the promising lines of research is being pursued at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by a team which includes Dr. Joseph R. Votano, Dr. Alexander Rich and Dr. Marian Gorecki of the Weizmann Institute of Science at Rehovot in Israel.

Gorecki has spent the past two years studying the effects of various compounds called peptides on the defective red blood cells characteristic of the disease. According to a Weizmann Institute publication, the hope is that some day certain easy-to-produce safe peptides may provide the key to control of the condition.

Sickle cell hemoglobin, while functioning normally in the distribution of oxygen to the body's organs, tends after such delivery to crystallize and deform red blood cells which then, can clog small blood vessels and cause tissue damage to the heart, spleen, lungs, nervous system and joints.

Chronic leg ulcers due to deficient circulation are also common and there are other complications involving considerable pain.

"Because the culprits of the disease are misshapen blood cells, resembling sickles or crescent moons," The Weizmann document said, "any substance that prevents nonsickled cells from deforming represents an important step forward in finding drugs to control the disease and enable patients to lead normal productive lives.

"The peptides examined so far, however, cannot be used in therapy since they are not naturally absorbed by red blood cells. Gorecki is now planning modifications of these peptides in the hope of enabling their facile passage through the blood cell's outer membrane."

The Weizmann report, confined only to the work of its own scientist, said there is optimism among researchers working on sickle cell anemia because the defect in sickle hemoglobin is extremely small.

Stock Mart Shows Dip In Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned downward today as traders awaited President Carter's speech on the economy.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 4.33 at 769.32.

Losers held a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The President was scheduled to deliver an important message on inflation, energy and other economic issues this afternoon in Washington.

The Dow Jones industrial average had gained 22.61 points over the past week in a rally attributed to hopes that Carter might propose strong inflation-fighting measures.

But today traders seemed to take a more cautious attitude as they waited for the speech.

British Petroleum was the most active NYSE issue, up ⅛ at 14¼. Blocks of 150,000 and 99,900 shares traded at that price.

The Big Board's composite index slipped .18 to 50.40. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .07 to 132.34.

Volume on the Big Board reached 11.25 million shares by noontime, against 10.55 million at the same point Monday.

Cutler-Hammer rose 1 to 41. Koppers Co. acquired a 10 percent stake in the company Monday and said it would soon seek to increase its holdings to 20 percent. Cutler-Hammer, meanwhile, said it filed suit against purchases of its stock by Tyco Laboratories.

Texas Owns Good Clean Air Record

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — An official of the Environmental Protection Agency says Texas has a good record toward achieving federal clean air standards and could be granted an extension if the 1982 deadline is not met.

David Hawkins, assistant administrator for air and waste management, and other EPA officials told a legislative hearing Monday that some Texas cities, such as Corpus Christi, have been allowed to go ahead with expansion of industry if they are making sufficient progress to assure clean air in other areas, such as automobile emission control.

"If it is demonstrated that in spite of work and progress the federally established goal is not achievable by 1982, Congress will have to look at the goal again," Hawkins told the House Select Committee on Emission Offset Standards.

Hawkins answered quetions about the offset policy, which would allow new industry in an area not meeting federal air pollution standards if that industry was "offset" by elimating other pollution-causing elements.

Committee members, including Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, questioned Hawkins about the effects of the offset regulations on San Antonio and Texas.

Mayor Lila Cockrell told the committee that air pollution in San Antonio was caused mostly by automobiles and not industry. She cited the new Metropolitan Transit Authority and the encouraging of car pooling as examples San Antonio was willing to comply, "if the standards are realistic."

"If the standards are imposed without regard to economic consequences, they are opposed to consumer well being," the mayor said, adding strict enforcement could have "potentially devastating impact" on the city's growth.

EPA officials denied that the air standards meant that San Antonio could not look forward to any industrial expansion in coming years, again saying Congress might take another look at the standards as applied to cities that qere making good faith efforts to comply.

Adlene Harrison, Region 5 EPA administrator and a native Texan, admitted under committee question that "on the surface" the offset policies appeared to penalize Sun Belt states such as Texas which had made strides toward achieving the air pollution standards.

"On the surface, it seems like Texas could be at an economic disadvantage because it is not as industrially developed as some other states," she said, because heavily industrialized areas "would have more emissions to trade off" in the offset program.

But Mrs. Harrison said Texas cities such as San Antonio still can have industrial growth, because "a mechanism allows orderly growth consistent with environmental responsibility."

Gary D. Knight, assocate manager for environment for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, agreed with Mrs. Cockrell.

"Severely restrained growth as a result of pursuing an endless treadmill is not the answer to our nation's rising inflation and persistent unemployment," Knight said.

Medical Group Denies Basis Of Criticism

The Texas State Society of American Medical Technology considers recent criticism in the United States Senate of medical laboratories around the nation unjust and ill-founded, Aubrey Niell of Lubbock, board chairman of the state group, said this morning.

Organizing an April 21 and 22 meeting of the society here, Niell said Sen. Edward Kennedy, who has criticized the quality of medical laboratory work as not high enough, "wants everyone to believe how inaccurate medical labs are" but that something of a quality problem that existed a few years ago has since been corrected.

The two-day educational seminar will be at South Park Inn and is expected to draw 75 to 100 technologists from around the state.

Niell said medical technology has high, exacting standards, and the state society requires prospective members to pass a difficult examination.

"It's a proud organization, and it's a proud profession for people to be in," he said.

The state group was founded in 1939.

Workshops will be held at the meeting on microbiology, repair and maintenance of equipment, lab safety and radioactive isotope testing, Niell said.

The meeting is being planned in conjunction with National Medical Laboratory Week this week.

Mayor Dirk West this morning proclaimed the week Lubbock Medical Laboratory Week also.

A second purpose of the meeting, Niell said, is to promote interest in the profession and encourage young persons to consider it for a career.

"There is a need for medical technologists, and I feel it's as worthy a field as they can get into," he said.

INVENTED GAME

In 1894, M.G. Crane, of Newton, Mass., invented the game of pushball. Although Harvard University took up the game the next year, it never became popular in the United States. Great Britain played its first regular game in 1902 at the Crystal Palace, and it is still played there in preparatory and public schools, although with rules that differ from those originally laid out by Crane.

Agency Directs Test Regrading

By CARRIE LINE CURTIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A regrading of two questions on a recent fire equipment operator examination given by the Lubbock Fire Department was directed by members of the Civil Service Commission during a meeting this morning at City Hall.

Members of the commission instructed city staff personnel to regrade the two questions on the examination, after protests were filed by several men who took the test.

John King, a member of the fire department and a protester, represented the men who were objecting to the two questions. He cited inconsistencies between the material taught to fire department personnel and answers which the department considered correct on the two questions.

King said the exam participants have about 40 seconds to answer questions on the test, and they went by material which was taught to them from one certain manual.

A representative of the fire department management said the questions had been used in earlier examinations and that there had been no protest raised previously.

One question concerned the size of a "master stream." According to some references in the training manual, the answer is 350 gallons per minute. The department said the correct answer was "in excess of 400 gallons per minute," based on other references in the training manual.

Fire Department Chief Tom Foster said the old training manual placed the size of a master stream at 350 gallons per minute. However, in the new manual at least six references placed the size at 400 gallons per minute or more.

Of the 55 persons who took the examination, 25 missed that question.

Fire Department management representatives said the phrase "use thumb rule" was penciled in on the proposed exam and should not have appeared on the exam given.

Of the 55 men who took the exam, 29 missed the question on engine pressure, the department management said.

A total of six men protested a total of four questions on the fire equipment operator exam.

The commission voted to disregard protests on the two other questions, one of which included a typographical error which the Fire Department management representatives admitted to the commission.

Difficulty in securing medical opinions from orthopedic surgeons in Lubbock was pinpointed during the meeting today.

According to state law, three physicians must examine a person who protests a disability or physical examination to a Civil Service Commission.

In two cases listed on today's agenda for the commission, protesters have been unable to secure three opinions each on their cases from orthopedic surgeons here.

One man who is protesting a physical examination result for the Police Department rookie class has been able to secure only two orthopedic surgeons' opinions locally. There are a total of 14 orthopedic surgeons listed in the city, according to a city staff personnel representative.

The city staff is concerned with the legality of continuing the rookie class without the protester, who is trying to obtain a third orthopedic surgeon's opinion, the representative said.

He received a job-related injury in 1974 and is trying to return to work in the Police Department. At their January meeting, the commission voted to support Police Chief J.T. Alley's contention that the officer is not able to perform a policeman's duties.

Local attorney George Thompson, who represents Howard, said he has been able to locate only two orthopedic surgeons to evaluate Howard's disability application. He added that one local orthopedic surgeon had Howard in an examination room ready to examine him when he learned the examination was for a disability evaluation.

The surgeon then refused to examine Howard, Thompson said.

The two orthopedic surgeons who wrote evaluations on Howard's disability said he is 100 percent capable now of performing a policeman's duties, Thompson said. He added that the two physicians said the officer may have a 30 percent disability of his left arm in the future. Officer Howard is right-handed, Thompson pointed out.

The attorney said Howard can do 45 pushups using the injured arm. He added that Howard, while working as a security guard at the South Plains Mall, stopped and held one of the suspects in the robbery of the American State Bank in Wolfforth.

Thompson said stopping the man involved physical activity which would demonstrate that Howard is capable of performing a policeman's duties. He added that Howard stopped the armed bank robbery suspect after his disability occurred.

The attorney said his client wants to return to work in the police department and has been working as a security guard to supplement his income. He added that his client is not receiving any disability payments as a result of the job-related accident.

Members of the commission said the question on the case is not whether Howard is able to return to work, but rather Chief Alley's concern that Howard will not be able to perform the duties of a policeman since the accident.

Owning Magazines Costs Man $460

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Malcolm Richardson, a 29-year-old Briton, was fined $460 Monday for having three Playboy magazines.

Richardson pleaded guilty to possessing indecent or obscene matter and illicit goods which were imported unlawfully.

Homicide Ruled As Cause Of Deaths In Collision

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack said Monday the deaths of five persons who were killed Saturday in a car-truck collision were the result of criminally negligent homicide.

The five Brownfield residents were killed about 6:45 p.m. at the intersection of FM 1585 and Slide Road when their car was in collision with a department store delivery truck.

Blalack said his official inquest reports into the five deaths would list the cause of their death as homicide rather than an accidental automobile mishap.

Killed in the wreck in which three other persons were seriously injured were Mrs. Concepcion Flores, 42, Pedro "Pete" Cortez, 61, Ruben Garcia, 12, Michael Ray Salazar, 6, and Crecensio Guajardo Flores, 74.

Blalack said Department of Public Safety investigators indicated the 1969 two-door Chevrolet in which all of the victims were riding was eastbound on FM 1585 when it collided with a J.C. Penney delivery truck northbound on Slide Road.

DPS troopers, in their report to Blalack, also said a traffic control device was in operation at the intersection.

Lawmen could locate no witnesses to the mishap at the scene, but investigators Saturday theorized both vehicles skidded through the intersection and down an embankment before overturning.

Four bodies were taken from the Chevrolet, and a fifth — that of a man — was found about 15 feet east of the wreckage. He apparently was thrown when the Chevrolet overturned.

DPS officials said the driver of the truck and a passenger were not injured.

Injured in the crash were Jesse Cassarez youth was listed in satisfactory condition and Amparo Garcia was in serious condition today at Methodist Hospital. Vacilisa Garcia remained in critical condition at Methodist.

Services for Mrs. Flores and her nephew, Ruben were at 4 p.m. today in Brownfield's St. Anthony's Catholic Church with the Rev. Aidan Maguire, pastor, officiating.

Both were to be buried in Brownfield cemetery under the direction of Brownfield Funeral Home.

Their bodies will lie in state at St. Anthony's until service time.

Mrs. Flores was a native of Luling.

Her survivors include a son, Juan Garcia of the home; and two daughters, Amparo and Vacilisa Garcia, both of the home.

Ruben was born in Brownfield and attended the Brownfield public schools.

He is survived by his mother, Vacilisa Garcia of Brownfield; a brother, Jesse Garcia of the home; and a sister, Refugia Garcia of the home.

Services for Cortez and his grandson, Michael Ray Salazar, 6, will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in Brownfield's St. Anthony's Catholic Church with the Rev. Aidan Maguire, pastor, officiating.

The two will be buried in Brownfield Cemetery under direction of Brownfield Funeral Home.

Their bodies will lie in state at St. Anthony's until service time.

Cortez, a native of Devine, was married to Martina Cruz Jan. 11, 1937, in Lubbock. She died in 1977.

He had lived in Brownfield since 1941.

Survivors include four sons, Andrew, Pedro Jr., Robert and Alfred, all of Brownfield; four daughters, Mrs. Elvria Jimenez of Plains, Mrs. Sylvia Caves of Brownfield; Mrs. Yolanda Cariales of Floydada and Mrs. Rosa Martinez of Lansing, Mich.; his mother, Mrs. Maria Cortez of San Antonio; three brothers, Joe Rodriquez, Jessie Rodriquez and Leonard Rodriquez, all of San Antonio; a sister, Mrs. Juanita Arochio of Colorado City; and 23 grandchildren.

Salazar was born in Hereford May 16, 1971 and moved to Brownfield shortly after his birth.

He had attended the Brownfield public schools.

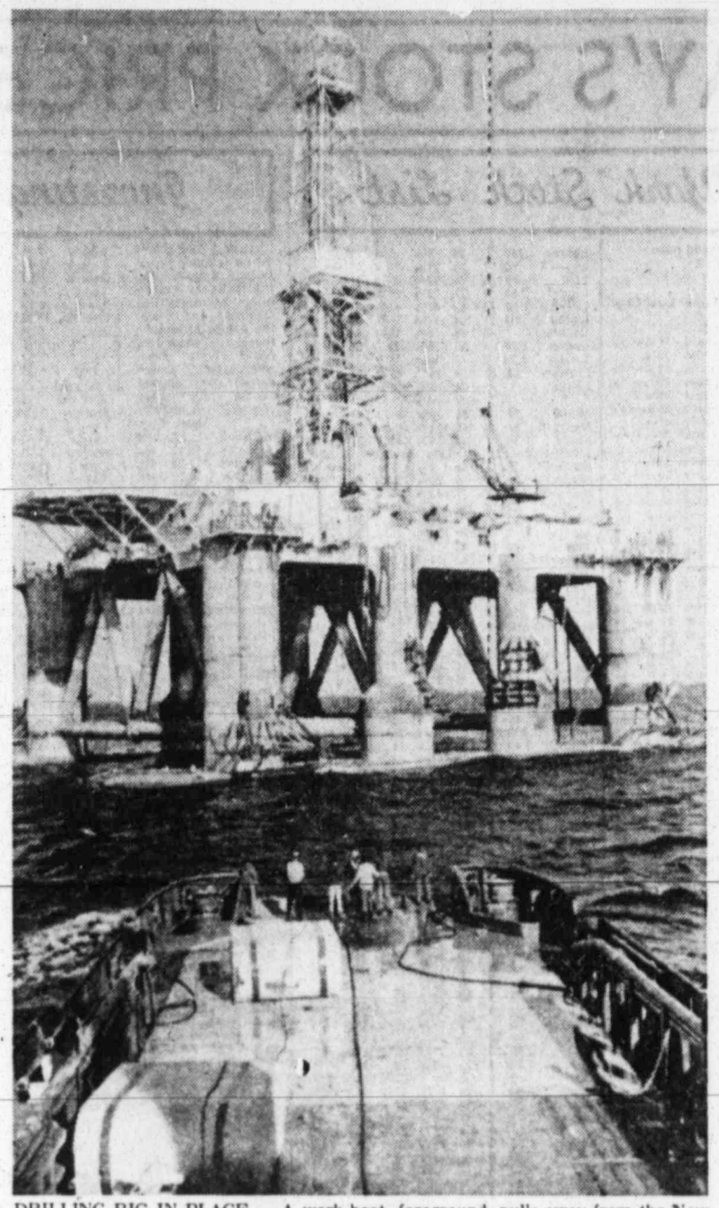

He is survived by his mother, Sylvia Caves of Brownfield.

A requiem mass for the fifth victim Crecensio Guajardo Flores, 74, will be celebrated at 3 p.m. Wednesday in Lubbock's Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church with the Rev. Curtis Halfmann, pastor, officiating.

Burial will follow in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park under supervision of Henderson Funeral Directors.

A native of Georgetown, he was a retired City of Brownfield employee and a former resident of Lockney. He was a Catholic.

He is survived by two sons, Crecensio Jr. of Lubbock and Pablo of Lockney; a brother, Bennie of Victoria; a sister, Mrs. Frances Gonzales of Houston; and eight grandchildren.

Jury To Deliberate Verdict In Robbery

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A jury this afternoon was expected to deliberate the guilt or innocence of Ned Taylor Jr., accused of aggravated robbery in connection with a 1977 incident.

Taylor, 27, of 2629 E. Cornell St., is accused of participating in a Sept. 17 robbery of the Serv-U Food Market at 704 E. Broadway St.

During testimony Monday, delivered before a seven-woman, five-man jury in Judge Thomas L. Clinton's 99th District Court, complaining witness Susie Gregorcyk identified Taylor as the man who allegedly beat her head on a checkout counter during the robbery.

After the state rested its case today, the defense called witnesses who placed Taylor in locations away from the store shortly before the robbery.

Clarence Hawkins, 32, Taylor's uncle, said the defendant had worked from midnight until 9 a.m. on the day of the robbery at a club which Hawkins formerly ran.

Hawkins said he then drove Taylor to Taylor's East Cornell Street residence, dropping him off about 9:30 p.m. The robbery reportedly took place about 10 a.m.

Taylor's mother testified she saw her son at the house about 9:30 a.m. She said Taylor woke her up and asked to use her car. The witness said she refused her son permission, then went to sleep.

Neither of the defense witnesses said they knew Taylor's whereabouts at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Gregorcyk said $247 was taken in the Saturday morning heist, in which she said two men and a woman participated.

The witness said Taylor grabbed her from behind as she opened the cash register.

"He reached over and jerked me back," Mrs. Gregorcyk said, indicating the bandit covered her mouth with a hand.

"In fact, his fingers went down in my mouth and tore it all open," she told Asst. Dist. Atty. Jim Darnell.

The middle-aged attendant said she had screamed when the man she said was Taylor grabbed her and said she also tried to press an alarm button with her foot.

Taylor, she alleged, got her down on the counter, started beating her head on it and, using profanity, threatened to kill her if she did not quiet down.

Mrs. Gregorcyk, an Idalou resident, said she had seen Taylor in the store several times before the day of the robbery. She said she picked him out of a lineup the day of the heist.

"Are you positive in your identification?" Darnell asked. "Yes, Sir, I'm positive," the witness responded.

Mrs. Gregorcyk said there were no other customers in the store when Taylor allegedly came in with the other man and a woman. She said she never saw a gun on Taylor, but said she saw the outline of what appeared to be a small-caliber pistol in the right front pocket of the other man.

In response to questions from defense attorney Jack Stoffregen, the witness said she was not fearful of a handgun, but of injury from a beating during the robbery.

Mrs. Gregorcyk said she had had an "odd feeling" when she noticed the two men and the woman at the store about 6:45 a.m. as she was preparing to open the store for business.

She said the woman entered the store twice alone before the 10 a.m. robbery.

When the robbery took place, she said, the woman, standing near the cash register, purchased some candy but indicated she did not have quite enough money to pay for it. According to her account, Taylor came up to help pay for the purchase.

It was when she then turned to put the coins in the register, Mrs. Gregorcyk said, that Taylor grabbed her from behind.

Meanwhile, the second man was standing near a meat counter, the witness said.

Employee Bob Ross, working at the meat counter, said he saw just one bandit.

"Mrs. Gregorcyk screamed and the man pulled a gun and told me to turn around," Ross related.

He said the weapon appeared to be a .25-caliber automatic. He said he did as the bandit ordered.

Ross said he could not see Mrs. Gregorcyk because of an intervening barbecue rack. He said he heard some brief scuffling noises and heard someone telling his fellow employee to "keep her head down or get it down."

Testimony indicated Taylor, along with other suspects, was found by detectives inside a house shortly after the robbery.

A witness who resided at the residence said he had known Taylor for several years but had not given him permission to enter the house.

Speaker Slated On Land Bill

Pam Rich, a spokesperson for the national Alaska Coalition in Washington, D.C., will speak during a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Mahon Library Community Room on the Alaska National Interests Lands Bill.

The bill, currently pending before Congress, concerns the preservation of some of the last wilderness lands in Alaska and the United States. The bill is opposed by oil and gas companies, land developers, mining concerns, the timber industry, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce who do not wish any environmental restrictions on the federally owned lands.

The bill would designate land already owned by the federal government into national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges and wild and scenic rivers areas.

The meeting will include a one-hour slide show, a speech by Miss Rich and a question-and-answers session.

New Home Costs Show Big Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average cost of a new house rose to $57,500 in the last quarter of 1977, the Commerce Department reports.

The figure represents a 6.5 percent increase over the third quarter. For all of 1977, housing costs were up 12.5 percent for an average price of $54,000, the department said Monday.

The department's preliminary figures show the average sales price for new homes was $58,500 in January and $59,600 in February.

By region, the department said the average price in 1977 for the Far West was $60,000, up 17 percent from 1976; in the South, $47,900, up 9.4 percent; the Northeast, $54,600, up 9.2 percent; and the Midwest, $55,000, up 13.2 percent.

School Strikes Upset Classes

By The Associated Press

Pickets were up and some educators were in jail as strikes by employees in four northern Ohio school districts upset classes for about 64,000 students.

Teachers and supportive parents walked picket lines today in Brunswick where 37 educators remained in jail for a third day in defiance of a county court's back-to-work order. The Akron 9th District Court of Appeals has upheld the order.

"We're not going back," the jailed teacher leaders said when told of the appeals court decision. A spokesman said the teachers, who were jailed Saturday, are determined to "stick it out" as long as possible.

Brunswick school Superintendent Paul Keaton said Monday he was "begging teachers to return to work, instead of making martyrs of themselves."

School officials said 39 teachers reported to work Monday, as compared with 11 on Friday.

About 3,800 teaching and non-teaching employees walked off their jobs in Toledo Monday, after bargaining reached an impasse at midnight Sunday. The Toledo Federation of Teachers said 195 of the district's 2,400 teachers worked Monday in the 52,000-pupil system.

A union spokesman said the district had offered a 7 percent pay increase, which would leave salaries about $3,000 below that of other major Ohio cities. Basic pay for Toledo teachers is $9,000 a year. The union said the school board refused to negotiate further.

Grain Futures

Wheat futures posted sizeable gains Monday, spurred by growing speculation that China has emerged as a major outlet for American grains.

After the close, the Agriculture Department confirmed a Chinese wheat purchase of more than 22 million bushels. It was the first U.S. grain sale to that nation since 1974.

Recent rumors that China was in the market for large quantities of wheat have lifted those futures to contract highs. Since the beginning of last week, the May contract has surged about 20 cents to $3.31¾ a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Grain specialists said the sale could signal the beginning of substantial new export business, possibly including feed grains.

"In the past few years, China has been adamant about avoiding the United States as a grain supplier, partly because of smut (a disease that contaminated U.S. grain shipped to China in 1974) and partly because of political tension," said an analyst.

"But now, they're a potential huge customer and the United States is the only country in the position to supply the quantities they apparently need."

Interrogation Tapes Kept By LA Police

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police have refused to hand over interrogation tapes to attorneys for George Shamshak, saying the tapes showed Shamshak had "special knowledge" of at least two Hillside Strangler murders and that a leak of that information might jeopardize the case.

Shamshak's attorney, Henry Wynn of Boston, said he needed the tapes of the 40-hour Shamshak interrogation to properly represent his client. Shamshak is being held on escape charges.

Dr. Krieg Receives Award For Research

Dr. Daniel R. Krieg, a member of the Texas Tech University faculty in plant and soil sciences, has been named the first recipient of the Research Award made by the College of Agricultural Sciences.

The award was presented at the college's fifth annual Honors Banquet-Pig Roast at the University Center.

Krieg was cited for his performance in research, primarily in the area of row crop plant physicology, and for his teaching ability as supervisor of graduate student research projects.

In announcing the award Dr. A. Max Lennon, assistant dean for research in the college, said that Krieg has an international reputation as a physiologist in sorghum and millet research.

Genetic differences in physiological responses to environmental stresses are of special interest to Krieg.

He has studied the effect of temperature on cotton seed development and the resulting germination and seedling vigor of numerous varieties.

For the past five years, however, he has been concerned primarily with the effects of environmental stress on sorghum physiology as related to yield components and seed development. He has concentrated on varietal differences in water stress tolerances.

Lennon said that the award was presented for excellent research work, for the researcher's ability to report findings so that results can be incorporated at the production level, and for the researcher's ability to teach others how to go about discovering new knowledge.

Krieg, who earned his degrees at Texas A&M University, joined the Texas Tech faculty in 1970. He is the departmental Graduate Program coordinator and chairman of its Long Range Planning Committee.

He has chaired both the college's Graduate Standards Committee and its Publications Committee. Among his university-wide responsibilities is membership on the Board of Consultants for the Texas Tech International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies.

He also is the Texas Tech representative for Sorghum and Millet Research Consortium Development for the U.S. Board of International Food and Agriculture Development (BIFAD).

Chinese Buy U.S. Wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has bought a quantity of U.S. wheat for the first time in three years, according to the Agriculture Department.

The department said Monday that 600,000 metric tons of wheat has been sold to China by private U.S. exporters for delivery during the 1978-79 marketing year beginning June 1.

China, which has bought huge quantities of foreign grain the past year, has purchased some U.S. cotton and soybean products but until now has not bought any grain since 1974-75.

However, for several years prior to that China was a prime market for U.S. wheat when traditional suppliers — including Canada and Australia — could not meet all its needs.

The China farm market developed in September 1972 with the first U.S. grain sales to that country since the communist regime took over in 1949.

By 1973-74, U.S. sales of wheat and corn rose to five million tons before dropping off to 1.5 million tons in 1974-75 and fading entirely after that.

There have been rumors for months that China would be in the U.S. grain market but until now nothing materialized. By comparison, the Soviet Union is expected to buy about 15 million tons of U.S. wheat and corn this season.

ANCIENT GRAIN REVIVED

LONDON (AP) — Quinoa, a high-protein grain cultivated by the ancient Inca Indians of South America but neglected for generations, is being revived by food researchers in Bolivia, Chile and Peru to improve substandard nutrition, the current issue of Nature Magazine says. The frost-resistant crop does well in poor, dry soils at high altitudes, has leaves that can be used as a salad and a stalk that is good for animal feed, the magazine says.

Imported Meat Quota To Stay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite some pressures to the contrary, the Carter administration has no plans now to open up the door to additional foreign meat to help relieve spiraling U.S. beef and pork prices, according to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

Imports of fresh, chilled and frozen beef, veal mutton and goat meat are controlled by a 1964 law which is keyed to U.S. production to prevent dumping of foreign meat on the domestic market. Most of the meat is low-grade beef used to make hamburger and for other processing.

"The administration has no plans to eliminate the meat import quota, as matters now stand," Bergland said Monday in a taped interview released by the Agriculture Department.

"A year from now it could be a different situation, of course," Bergland said. "We'll be watching not only our own supply and demand and prices but looking at the matters worldwide."

Some farm groups have expressed alarm over what they perceive as pressures within the administration to relax the quota formula so that more beef can enter the U.S. market.

The National Farmers Organization, for example, last week labeled such talk as "economic sadism" and urged President Carter in a telegram to put a stop to it.

"The cattle industry has barely seen light at the end of a long tunnel of loss operations," NFO President Oren Lee Staley told Carter. "Long before they are out of the tunnel, your director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, Barry Bosworth, and your new Federal Reserve Chairman, G. William Miller, have both suggested lifting meat import quotas to drive livestock and meat prices back down."

Under so-called "voluntary restraint" agreement with about 15 countries, imports of quota-type meat in recent years have been kept within a maximum level which, if exceeded, would trigger quotas.

Australia and New Zealand are the major sources of quota meat but Canada, Mexico and the others also contribute to the flow. Total imports this year are estimated at less than the quota trigger level of about 1.3 billion pounds.

Imports of quota-type meat are equal to about 5 to 7 percent of the U.S. domestic supply.

The National Cattlemen's Association, a longtime foe of arbitrarily opening the import door beyond the quota levels, wants Congress to change the 1964 law in several ways to "strengthen and improve" the mechanism.

One of the changes involves a "countercyclical formula" which would allow imports to be reduced at times when domestic low-grade beef from slaughter cows increased such as the recent years when cow herds were culled sharply as producers reacted to depressed market prices.

The proposal would allow imports to increase when per capita consumption of beef declined, a situation that exists now as producers once again begin to rebuild their herds to take advantage of expected higher cattle prices in the next few years.

U.S. Grain Reserve Continues To Grow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The three-year grain reserve designed by the Carter administration to help boost farmers' market prices continues to grow.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Monday that as of April 7 about 292 million bushels of wheat were signed up by farmers in the reserve. Also, he said, more than 18 million bushels of oats and 15 million bushels of barley have been committed.

Under the plan, farmers agree to store grain for up to three years or until market prices rise enough to trigger their release.

Russian Defector May Seek Asylum

By The Associated Press

The highest-ranking Soviet employee of the United Nations, Arkady N. Shevchenko, is in hiding after apparently defecting and U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said today: "What is sure is that he does not want to return to the Soviet Union."

Reports from Washington and from sources at U.N. headquarters in New York indicated Shevchenko was seeking political asylum in the United States. Waldheim, in Ireland on an official visit, said he did not know the Russian's intentions regarding asylum.

In Moscow, a woman who said she was Shevchenko's wife today accused U.S. authorities of a "crude provocation," claimed her husband "never had any intention" of staying in the United States and said the Americans must be holding him forcibly.

Shevchenko, the $76,000-a-year undersecretary-general for political and Security Council affairs, left his job six days ago because of "differences with his government," a U.N. statement said.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met today with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and reportedly discussed the Shevchenko affair. A State Department spokesman said: "The United States in no way attempted to influence him (Shevchenko) in his decision."

The department said it had been contacted by Ernest Gross, Shevchenko's American lawyer, who indicated that the 47-year-old Russian would not return to the Soviet Union.

A department spokesman said Shevchenko had not asked for asylum. But he said Soviet officials had requested a meeting with Shevchenko and that Gross, a former assistant secretary of state and ex-delegate to the United Nations, arranged the meeting, a formality that often precedes granting of asylum.

Gross was reported in Washington Monday night, and there was speculation that Shevchenko was with him to meet with representatives of the Soviet Embassy. The Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow declined comment.

An authoritative diplomatic source at the United Nations, who asked not to be identified, said Shevchenko was in the process of seeking asylum, the first U.N. employee ever to do so anywhere.

Waldheim, ending a trip to Dublin for talks with Prime Minister Jack Lynch, said in an interview with Irish radio that Shevchenko's decision not to return to his country was "disagreeable ... because he was the leading Soviet official in the secretariat."

Waldheim said Shevchenko informed the secretary general's office of his decision a few days ago, and "he indicated he would write me a letter giving the details, but this letter has not yet arrived."

Unconfirmed reports said Shevchenko refused an order from the Soviet government to return home and that his wife and daughter left for Moscow over the weekend after "a violent quarrel." He also has a son in the Soviet foreign service.

Associated Press reporters calling "Shevchenko" entries in the Moscow telephone directory spoke with a woman who identified herself as Leongina Shevchenko, the diplomat's wife.

She said she had returned from New York for fear the Americans would seize her and other family members as well as her husband.

"What they are saying about him is a provocation," she said. "He is a marvelous father and husband. He cannot live without his work and his family. I am 100 percent sure he will be returning. I know, and am certain. I have lived with him for 27 years ... "

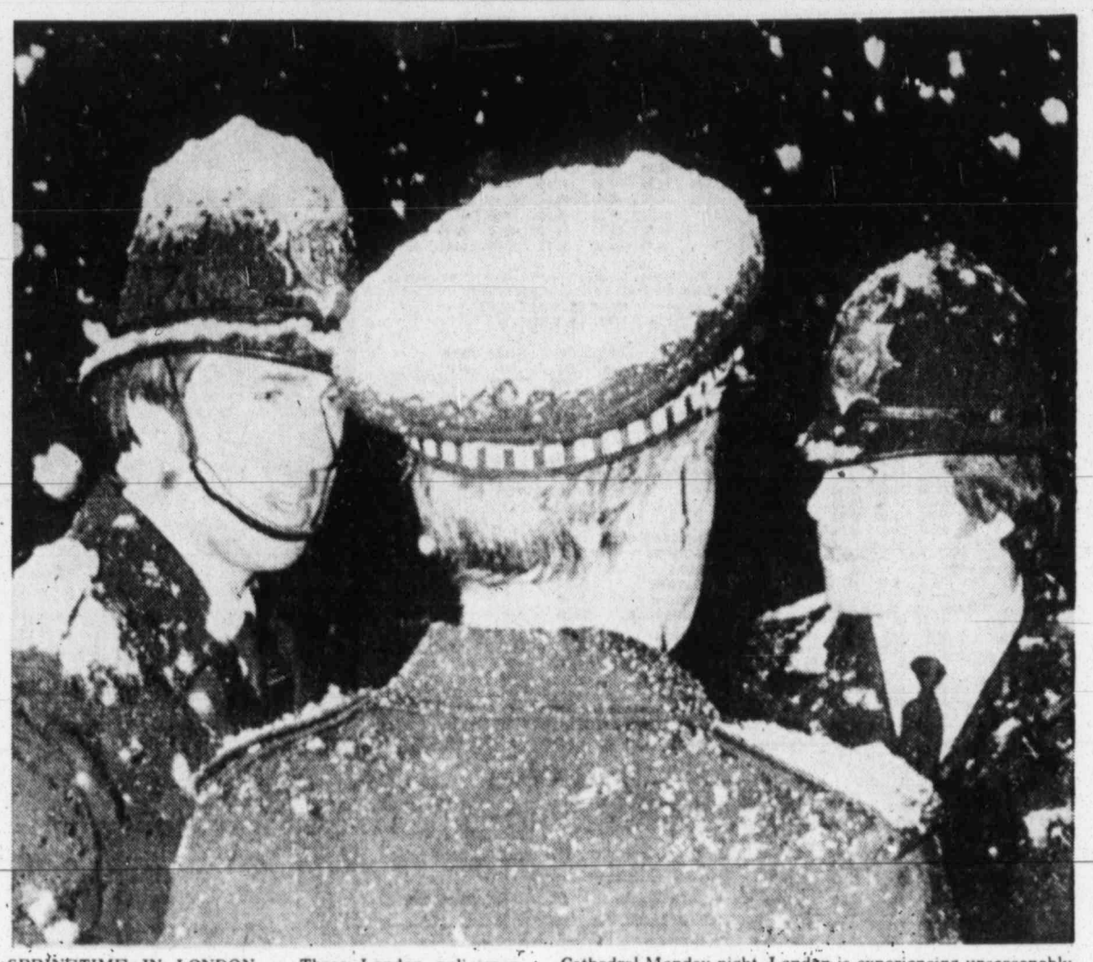

Associates said Shevchenko left his office last Wednesday, saying he was not feeling well, and told an assistant to take charge for a few weeks.

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani told reporters Monday that Shevchenko informed Waldheim he was "absenting himself from the office and in this connection he mentioned differences with his government. Efforts are now being made to clarify the matter and for the time being, therefore, Mr. Shevchenko is considered to be on leave.

"The permanent mission of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to the United Nations and United States authorities have also been in touch with the secretary-general in this respect."

The New York Times said as another possible motive for defection, "Administration officials and Western diplomats familiar with the case said there were also some personal problems involved."

"An American official mentioned a liaison Mr. Shevchenko had had with a woman in New York," the Times continued, "while Western diplomats said he had a 'health problem' and remarked that he had been known as a heavy drinker."

nice stretch of beach" on which to land, according to Loomis.

But flying back into the Gilberts would have been a poor judgment, Loomis argues, because the weather was bad.

The only good land was to the northwest, the Marshall Islands, he said. Navigational error and weather conditions could have put them far off course, he believes.

Loomis said he spent 14 months in the Marshall Islands with the Air Force, and, while stationed on Eniwetok in 1952, was assigned to putting navigational aid identification panels on some of the islands.

After landing on one atoll, inhabited by barefoot natives, a weather-beaten shoe was found near the shoreline and an airplane was located in the middle of the island, he said. The plane was covered by heavy jungle growth.

The discovery of the shoe and plane was discounted until 15 years later, when Loomis read a book about the Earhart-Noonan disappearance. The account fit in with Loomis' discovery and he became convinced he had accidentally come up with the plane which had been the object of a widespread search by the U.S. military.

The sighting of the plane puts him a step ahead of other theorists on the disappearance, he said, "because no one else has seen an airplane."

Loomis and his wife spent much of the past 10 years researching the 1937 flight and disappearance. Early this year, they gathered five other people to help in their search, including a writer, a radio reporter and two photographers.

If the group identifies the plane as that of Miss Earhart, Loomis said they will bring in an expert to make positive identification and then remove the plane from the island.

Testimony Ties Park To Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former federal official testified today that then-Rep. Otto E. Passman, D-La., once told him that commission money on U.S. rice sales might be going into a slush fund for South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

Irwin Hedges, former coordinator of the Food for Peace program, told the House Ethics Committee that Passman made the comment "in a moment of candor" during a conversation in April 1972.

Hedges said in an interview later that Passman expressed the possibility to him in a serious tone, but the former official said he had no idea then or now whether Passman had some reason to know that the South Korean president had such a slush fund.

Hedges said Passman made the remark during a conversation in which Hedges turned down Passman's request that Hedges try to get the U.S. Agriculture Department to accept rice dealer Tongsun Park as agent for a Food for Peace rice sale to South Korea.

"In a rather rambling conversation he said there are a lot of things going on in the rice movements we don't know about," Hedges testified, "and said a good part of the fee is probably moved into a slush fund for President Park himself."

An investigator noted that Tongsun Park allegedly made three payments of $10,000 each to Passman shortly before that conversation. But Hedges testified that Passman had said at one point he had no personal interest in trying to make Tongsun Park the sales agent.

Passman, 77, is under indictment on charges he accepted $213,000 in exchange for helping Tongsun Park sell U.S. rice to Korea.

Hedges said Passman told him he was making the request only as chairman of the House foreign operations appropriations subcommittee. That subcommittee originates all foreign aid bills and oversees related programs including Food for Peace.

South Korea reportedly is offering ethics committee investigators access to a former ambassador accused of distributing envelopes stuffed with $100 bills to congressmen.

But the investigators say discussions are continuing and a knowledgeable source says "the problem comes over the word 'access.'

"They may be willing to provide access, but not in ways acceptable to the committee," the source said.

He declined to specify what kind access was reportedly offered.

South Korea's offer was delivered to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill during an hour-long meeting Monday by present Ambassador Kim Hyun Chul, who went to Seoul for consultations on the question.

The former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo, and his wife were accused at ethics committee hearings last October of trying to give the $100 bill-stuffed envelopes to at least three congressmen.

A former embassy employee testified that he saw the former ambassador put about two dozen such envelopes in his coat pockets.

The former ambassador's only reply has been in a Newsweek interview in which he denied the allegations and called them ridiculous.

Meanwhile, at a hearing Monday, former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., swore under oath that he never offered to make payoffs to fellow congressmen and never considered Tongsun Park a Korean agent.

Fight Rages In Beirut

Lebanon is expected to depend on effective deployment of the U.N. force and on measures to prevent return of the guerrillas to the area.

About half the 4,000 U.N. troops slated to take up positions in southern Lebanon are on station, U.N. spokesmen say.

The Lebanese government radio called the Israeli pullback insignificant. But the government launched a simultaneous repatriation of civilian refugees to the invaded southern regions.

As the first convoy of refugees set out southward, Syrian tanks and armored cars went into action along the half-mile line between Beirut's Ein Rummaneh and Chiyah districts after Christian snipers in Ein Rummaneh and Moslems in Chiyah exchanged fire from rooftop positions.

The Syrians, ordered to "shoot to kill without warning at any armed person and to silence fire from any direction," opened up with machinegun volleys. The fighting was localized. But the staccato of machine gun bursts and thuds of explosions scared people off the streets in adjacent neighborhoods.

Eight persons were reported killed and 27 wounded in two days of intermittent fighting in the two slum districts. Schools, shops and cafes were closed, and the police said 36 mortar rounds were fired during the night.

Christian militia leaders accused the Palestinians of starting the clashes to "divert attention from the issue of the armed guerrilla presence in south Lebanon." A guerrilla spokesman denied Palestinians were involved.

Canal Pact Foes Lose Court Plea

the opponents, said a strategy meeting produced a "consensus" that they still have the 32 votes and probably one more. Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., said the opponents have "the best chance we've had yet" to defeat the pact, which must carry by a two-thirds vote to be approved.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the treaties' floor manager, told the Senate that the Panamanians might be "overreacting" to the DeConcini amendment, but said "an appropriate way" should be found to dispel their concern.

"The problem is not what we did in clarifying our (U.S.) rights, but in what the Panamanian people are afraid we did," he said.

In an interview, Church said some kind of statement may be drafted asserting that the reservation concerns only threats to the canal's neutrality and not Panama's internal affairs.

Growing opposition to the neutrality pact has come from the three largest Panamanian political parties, student leaders and businessmen.

DeConcini says his proposal had no broad purpose, but that he would not agree to soften it. In fact, he says he will vote for the second treaty only if a similar reservation is added.

DeConcini meets with Carter at the White House on Wednesday.

The second pact spells out procedures for the U.S. turnover of the canal to Panama by 2000. Its defeat next Tuesday would nullify the first one, which covers the period after 2000.

The White House, meanwhile, said Panamanian officials were told by a top Carter aide last Wednesday that "in no way would an amendment undercutting the legality of the DeConcini amendment be adopted by the U.S. Senate."

Frank Moore, the White House congressional liaison chief, also said he advised Panama's ambassador, Gabriel Lewis, that "in no way should they (Panama) become involved in proposing language for an amendment or reservation."

Moore was responding to queries about a purported transcript of the meeting, in which Lewis was quoted as warning of possible violence and asking the administration to draft a resolution to "neutralize" the DeConcini amendment.

Moore said through a Carter spokesman that the alleged transcript was "riddled with inaccuracies."

staff. Nearly all top White House staff members are paid at least $40,000 a year, some making as much as $56,000.

— An order to executive branch agencies to hold down purchases of goods whose prices are rising rapidly.

— A call for congressional budget committees to report regularly to Congress on the inflationary effect of pending legislation.

But a number of the steps Carter said the government will take to reduce inflation were proposed some time ago, such as a revision in airline regulation that the president said had led to substantial cuts in some airline passenger fares.

Carter said he would veto any farm legislation that would increase food prices or his budget, referring to a Senate-passed emergency farm bill that he said would boost food costs by 3 percent.

"Reducing the inflation rate will not be easy and it will not come overnight," he said.

"There are no easy answers. We will not solve inflation by increasing unemployment. We will not impose wage and price controls. We will work with measures that avoid both extremes," he said.

He said he would use "every means" at his disposal to resist pressures to increase the budget.

He said congressional committees are now working on proposals that would add as much as $13 billion to next year's spending levels.

He singled out tuition tax credits, highway and urban transit programs, Postal Service financing, the farm legislation and defense spending.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell called the speech a "no-nonsense speech, devoid of comforting illusions."

The administration originally predicted prices would rise 6.1 percent this year. But some government economists say the increase could be closer to 7 percent.

Since returning from a trip to Africa and Latin America, the battle on inflation has been the No. 1 topic on the president's schedule.

He spent much of the weekend working on the speech after meeting earlier with congressional leaders, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and Charles Schultz, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

While White House aides said Carter wants to hold down military pay, a spokesman for the Council of Economic Advisers, Peter Gould, denied the administration was seeking wage constraints. He commented, "There will be no firm controls on pay. Period."

Aides said Carter is continuing to push for speedy passage of his energy program, sent to Congress nearly 12 months ago.

Carter has advocated raising federal taxes on gasoline to discourage use of the fuel, and cut to oil imports, but such a tax would also raise prices and contribute to inflation.

One White House aide said "a strong emphasis on energy" was written into today's speech because oil imports remain "the key to the problem." The United States imports approximately half of the petroleum it uses.

The role of the energy legislation in fighting inflation has been one of Carter's frequent themes, as he attempts to deal with the worst trade deficit in the nation's history and the declining value of the dollar.

Commerce Department figures indicate the United States imported $4.5 billion more in goods than it sold abroad in February, topping the $3.6 billion balance-of-payments deficit of last October and marking the 21st monthly deficit in a row.

The deficit was a blow to the administration's attempts to reduce the balance-of-payments figures below last year's $26.7 billion.

Tax Defended By President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says Social Security tax increases approved in December are a reasonable price to pay for benefits received from the system.

He urged Congress on Monday to avoid hasty cutting of the higher payroll taxes and said passage of his proposed income tax reduction would be a better idea.

Carter wrote congressional leaders, "It is often forgotten that those (Social Security) taxes pay for important benefits for our people. Our first priority must be the protection of the Social Security system, and the restoration of confidence of those who support it and those who benefit.

"We believe that most Americans would agree that this is a reasonable price to pay to ensure that the Social Security system is once again made sound."

The House Democratic Caucus last week went on record in favor of reducing the payroll tax increases.

A tax table issued by the House Ways and Means Committee shows that a person who received $10,000 in 1977 paid $585 in Social Security taxes. That would increase to $715 in 1987.

Registration Slated For Adult Meeting

Registration is being received at Lubbock's Second Baptist Church, 5300 Elgin Ave., for a single adults conference scheduled at the church April 21-22.

An announcement story in last Sunday's Avalanche-Journal carried incorrect dates of April 29-30 for the two-day event.

This is the second seminar for singles to be held at Second Baptist. Last year's event drew up to 200 persons. More are expected this year, church leaders said.

Conference facilitators will include: Dr. Sarah Frances, chairman of the Department of Sociology at Louisiana College, Pineville, La.; Dr. Hardy Clemons, senior pastor of Second Baptist Church, Lubbock; Dee McGraw, consultant, Better Business Bureau, Lubbock; Lee Pennington, Lubbock certified financial planner; Dr. Dudley Strain, pastor emeritus of Lubbock's First Christian Church; Bob Watts, Lubbock marriage and family counselor; and Robert Wells, a staff pastor at Second Baptist.

Daniel Says Tax Suit Puts Hill 'On Spot'

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Attorney General John Hill is "on the spot" because of a suit challenging the constitutionality of the state's property tax system, Democratic attorney general candidate Price Daniel Jr. said here Monday.

However, Daniel said he doesn't know what he would do if he were in Hill's shoes now.

Daniel, 36, acknowledged there are times that the state's chief lawyer must uphold state law regardless of his philosophical feelings about it.

For example, the three-term state representative said he would have upheld the state's death penalty law in court as Hill did.

But Daniel, a former Speaker of the Texas house, said he was unsure what his position would be regarding the property tax suit.

The suit, filed by state Rep. Wayne Peveto of Orange, challenges the "inequitable" manner property taxes are collected in Texas.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has said he supports the aims of the suit and has urged Hill not to fight the litigation.

Daniel said he also supports Peveto's aims in filing suit and supports property tax reform efforts in Texas.

"It puts Hill on the spot," Daniel said. "I hope he comes up with a way to constitutionally bring about property tax reform."

Daniel said he could not say what his position on the suit would be because "I haven't reveiwed the alternatives the attorney general has."

The Liberty attorney said polls show he is leading his Democratic opponent, former Texas Secretary of State Mark White, by 12-16 percent.

He said the apparent lead has made it difficult to arouse any interest in the race for attorney general, even though the officeholder is responsible for "interpreting, upholding and enforcing" the laws of the state 365 days a year.

Daniel pledged, if elected, to take action to protect consumers and the environment, to set an example in civil rights and to "see the taxes owed in the Hughes case come into the state."

The next attorney general will be called upon to "advise the legislature on public school finance," Daniel said.

While in Lubbock Monday, Daniel announced a list of 32 supporters who will serve on his Lubbock County Steering committee.

Included on the list are City Council members Carolyn Jordan and Bill McAlister.

"I am proud to have such a distinguished group of community leaders serving on my Lubbock County campaign steering committee," he said.

Daniel also named Harold Phelan, Hockley county attorney, the campaign chairman in that county, and Jimmy Pigg, a John Deere employee, the campaign chairman for Terry County while campaigning in those counties Monday.

Following a public reception Monday afternoon, Daniel met with Mexican-American leaders at a reception and visited leaders of Black church leaders Monday night.

Honor Given To Student

The chairman and faculty of the department of range and wildlife management at Texas Tech University have selected John Galbraith as the outstanding student in the department for 1978.

Galbraith, a graduating senior, is the son of Hugh M. Galbraith of San Antonio. He received his award, at the recent Annual Pig Roast and Ag Honors Banquet of the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Galbraith is a past national president of the Council of Student Chapters of the Soil Conservation Society of America and has served as president of the local chapter.

He has been a member of the Aggie Council and the Range and Wildlife Management Club and an active member of both range plant identification teams and the soil judging team of the department.

Galbraith took first in the nation in 1977 in range plant identification and placed second nationally in soil judging. He also took first at the 1977 regional soil judging contest.

Local Nurse Named To Education Post

Ella Herriage, a registered nurse and in-service education coordinator at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Centers, has been elected in-service education representative by members of the Texas Nurses Association.

In that position, she will fill a two-year term with three other Texas nurses on the TNA Continuing Education Approval and Recognition Program Review Committee. Committee members were selected at the TNA convention now underway in El Paso.

Crew Braves Storm To Transport Man

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The Royal Air Force sent a helicopter through a blizzard to Aberdeen to pick up 46-year-old Robert Anderson and fly him to Glasgow for an emergency heart operation.

The weather forced the chopper down twice on the way to Aberdeen and again after it collected Anderson. Then it had to stop at an RAF base northeast of Edinburgh to refuel, and Anderson had a heart attack and died.

Carter Takes Bold Steps In Curbing Arms Trade

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is underscoring his determination to curb the arms race by opening exploratory talks with the Soviet Union on banning hunter-killer satellites in space and resuming separate negotiations on arms sales to developing nations.

Analysis

At the same time, negotiations for a new treaty to impose ceilings on U.S. and Soviet long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles are entering a critical phase with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's mission to Moscow late next week.

By moving on all three fronts this Spring the White House appears to be undertaking a concerted drive to fulfill Carter's 1976 presidential campaign premise to take the lead in curbing the arms trade — even while he has not made good on the twin promise to cut defense spending.

Carter is making his moves at a time when the U.S.-Soviet relationship may be at a vital juncture.

Brezhnev said the U.S. administration was showing "indecision and inconsistency" in deference to domestic hard-liners.

The scene of the speech was symbolic — near the Siberian city where 3½ years ago Brezhnev and President Gerald R. Ford concluded a tentative agreement to limited arms trade. That agreement has yet to be completed and put in treaty form.

Over the last several weeks, the United States and the Soviet Union have been pelting each other with accusations and veiled threats. Carter, in a March 17 speech at Wake Forest University, raised sharp questions about the direction of Soviet policy.

So far, only the Russians have developed the capacility to seek out satellites in orbit and destroy them.

Vance first broached the idea of banning anti-satellite weapons during a vist to Moscow a year ago. Last month the administration formalized the proposal.

Within a few weeks, even while questioning U.S. interest in arms control, the Russians agreed. A site is to be selected for the talks, which are planned for sometime next month.

The arms sales negotiations, meanwhile, are directly linked to Carter's campaign commitment to reduce U.S. weapons proliferation.

Talks on this subject are especially aimed at curbing sales to developing nations. In 1976, according to CIA estimates, the Russians delivered $2.19 billion worth to such countries while the United States supplied them with almost $4 billion in arms.

As president, he has ordered an 8 percent cut in new commitments, but also proposed selling U.S. jets to Egypt and Sudan in order to improve relations with the two relatively moderate Arab countries.

Also, the NATO countries, Japan, Australia and New Zealand were exempted from the 8 percent cutback and the Pentagon acknowledged in January that total U.S. arms sales could rise by nearly $2 billion this year to a total of about $13.2 billion.

Tech Seniors To Be Asked For Donations

Members of the Texas Tech Student Foundation will call about 4,000 graduating seniors of Tech this week as part of the second annual Senior Challenge Telethon.

The seniors will be asked to pledge $10 a year for three years, or to donate their $7 general property deposit to the foundation.

The money then will be allocated by the foundation to four areas: academic recruiting, freshman orientation, intramural sports and scholarships. A student can designate another area to which he wants his contribution donated.

The goal for this year's telethon is $10,000-about double the amount pledged during the first Senior Challenge.

The Student Foundation also sends out a newsletter called "Thumbprints," to help keep Tech graduates up to date with campus events.

Seniors will be called from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. through Thursday.

City Artist Included In Sidewalk Show

John Richey, a Lubbock artist, will be featured among about 50 artists during the Sidewalk Artists Association showing to be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from 1-6 p.m. Sunday at the Monterey Shopping Center at 50th and Flint Ave.

City Annexation Approved

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The annexation of 158 acres in Southwest Lubbock, delayed two months by a Justice Department investigation of its possible impact on minority voting patterns, has been approved, city officials learned Monday.

A notation on the notification letter shows the federal agency approved the case on the last day of its 60-day grace period for review of the application. Earlier this year, the Justice Department took 120 days to grant approval of a similar Southwest Lubbock annexation.

The newly annexed tract is bordered by Indiana and Memphis avenues and by 98th and 106th streets. It also includes 660 feet east of Indiana Avenue and 150 feet west of Memphis Avenue.

City council members approved the annexation last December, and data and the addition application were sent to the Justice Department in February.

The voting rights section of the department has 60 days in which to review all municipal annexations and to determine whether they would adversely affect minority voting strength.

Since 1975, when the law authorizing the reviews became effective, the federal government has not rejected a Lubbock annexation application. However, Justice Department attorneys indicated to city officials earlier this year that they seriously considered denying the incorporation of 960 acres in Southwest Lubbock.

Had that been done, city officials predicted denial of Flagg's later request.

However, after 120 days and only hours before the decision deadline, the Justice Department in January approved the 960-acre addition, which is bounded by 82nd and 98th streets and by Quaker and Frankford avenues.

The federal worker reviewing the case hinted repeatedly to city officials she would recommend denial of the application because she believed predominantly white residents would move into the annexed area to the detriment of the city's minority voters.

When her 60-day grace period ended, she requested additional information about the city, thereby gaining an additional two months for consideration and strengthening city speculation the case would be denied.

The Justice Department wanted to know, among other things, the projected population, by race, of the 960-acre area as well as population, racial and ethnic changes in the city since the 1970 census.

City planning staffers supplied the information reluctantly, saying that because the 960 acres virtually were vacant — only 16 persons lived there — it would be impossible to accurately forecast racial makeup of future inhabitants.

On the day its deadline expired, Justice Department attorneys sent a letter to the city, notifying it that the annexation was approved.

Flagg's annexation still had to pass the federal scrutiny, but city officials predicted that it would be approved because it was so similar to the 960-acre tract in location and population.

City Planning Director Jim Bertram at the time said, "It would be hard to turn Flagg's down because basically it's vacant land, the same as (Cecil) Jennings'."

The Justice Department did not inform the city of its criteria for approving Jennings' or Flagg's annexations. And Bertram said the city does not plan additional annexations in the near future.

Irons Promotes 'Magnet School'

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Superintendent Ed. Irons and other educators Monday told westside parents and students they'd be making a mistake to drop out of vocational programs simply to avoid attending Dunbar High — where, under Lubbock's new integration plan, those courses will be relocated next year.

Irons said the new Dunbar Magnet Complex will offer "the very best" in facilities and teachers. And he said other incentives, such as shuttle buses and optional early-morning classes, will be provided to encourage transfers there from Monterey and Coronado high schools.

The presentations of Irons and other school officials seemed persuasive to many of the approximately 250 parents and students who gathered at the Monterey cafeteria. Several had entered the meeting wary of the planned relocation of "cooperative," work-study courses; in fact, just last month pupils told the school board they would quit the programs rather than leave their neighborhood schools.

But Irons hopes such students will reconsider. Indeed, after Monday's meeting, he said he is confident that "most students will stay with the programs." Preregistration for fall classes — and comments of parents — support that statement.

"We were wavering back and forth on whether to enroll in distributive education for next year," said the mother of one Monterey junior. "But on the basis of what we've heard tonight, I feel pretty sure we're going to give it a try (at Dunbar)."

Dunbar High and Struggs Junior High, on the city's east side, are the two secondary schools U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward has ordered Lubbock to integrate. Woodward tentatively has approved the school board's plan to close Struggs and combine that facility with Dunbar as a districtwide "magnet complex" offering unique programs to draw students voluntarily from other high schools.

As part of the plan, Coronado and Monterey will discontinue their programs in distributive education, cooperative health education, industrial cooperative training and home economics cooperative education. Those four programs will be moved to the Dunbar-Struggs campus. Coronado and Monterey students enrolling in such courses would be required to attend Dunbar.

In the same way, Monterey's electronics program also will be moved to Dunbar.

Irons and other school officials answered parents' questions and concerns about the plan at Monterey's annual orientation session on vocational programs.

Irons disclosed some aspects of the magnet program that had not been revealed earlier:

— Besides the four vocational courses and the electronics program, Dunbar will offer other unique courses, perhaps a "jazz and rock ensemble" program to draw students there.

— Another special feature is that Dunbar may have academic courses starting as early as 7:30 a.m. for vocational students who may have to work across town. Such an option, Irons said, would allow students to get out of school about 10:30 a.m. to begin the "work experience" part of the vocational program.

Irons said Coronado and Monterey students attending Dunbar for the four cooperative vocational courses or the electronics program will be required to be "full-time students" at Dunbar. However, he said, students attending Dunbar for other special courses, such as jazz-rock ensemble, could opt to be only part-time Dunbar students.

Students next year will have the option of graduating with either Dunbar or their previous school, Irons said.

He said 375 students now are enrolled in the four cooperative courses at Coronado and Monterey, and "we're estimating about 340 will report to Dunbar" when the programs are relocated next year.

But Irons said the programs may not lose any students if parents and youngsters will give the Dunbar Magnet Complex a chance to work. He urged parents to visit Dunbar before school gets out.

School officials said having large vocational programs at Dunbar — instead of divided programs at Monterey and Coronado — will allow the district to consolidate its resources and offer better courses.

State Panel To Receive Jail Plans

Lubbock County Commissioners Monday approved plans for a new county jail.

The architectural-engineering firm of Maeker and Stephens will take the blueprints to Austin for consideration Friday by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

"I really don't expect any problems with them, but I would be a little surprised if they didn't ask us to do something," Arnold Maeker told the commissioners at the end of his 2 1/2-hour afternoon presentation.

Estimates prior to the letting of bids, which is expected to take place in May, have been that the jail complex may cost about $4 million.

The plans are for it to house 270 inmates in three cellblock-like areas with a 90-prisoner capacity in each area.

Covering about 58,000 square feet in a one-level complex east of the existing county jail, it will be further broken down into 45-man units of 16 single cells, two six-man cells and two eight-man cells with six day rooms for the unit.

Maeker and Edwin Stephens offered the basic plans along with bidding alternatives including the deletion of building the jail to make possible the addition of a second floor in the future.

The alternatives are included to give the commissioners options to hold down the cost if the overall cost is more than they think the county can afford.

Sheriff C.H. Blanchard and Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin attended the meeting with County Judge Rod Shaw and Commissioners Coy Biggs, Alton Brazell, Jim Lancaster and Edgar Chance.

Southwest Asks Rate Increase

By The Associated Press

Southwest Airlines Co., which instituted low-cost economy air fare rates that forced other airlines to follow suit, is asking the Texas Aeronautics Commission to allow Southwest to increase its basic one-way fares by $3 and its basic round-trip fare by $5.

The company has experienced a 121 percent average increase in input costs during the 1973-1977 period — about $3 per passenger — without a corresponding increase in fares, according to Southwest Airlines' annual report.

If the commission approves, Southwest's basic pleasure-class fare would be $18 for a one-way ticket and $35 for a round-trip ticket. Its basic executive-class fare would be $28 one way and $55 round trip.

The company does not anticipate another fare increase until the 1980s, said Herbert D. Kelleher, newly-elected chairman, president and chief executive officer.

Shepperd To Lead UT Ex-Students

AUSTIN (AP) — John Ben Shepperd of Odessa has been elected president of the University of Texas Ex-Students' Association for a two-year term.

Area Man Arrested On Drug Charges

ROSWELL, N.M. (UPI) — Bonds of $20,000 have been set for two men arrested for posession and conspiracy to distribute almost 100 pounds of marijuana discovered in plane which landed at the Roswell Industrial Air Center.

The suspects, identified as Wayne Fagan of Midland, 30, and Gerland Brockelsby, 31, of Los Angeles, were arraigned Monday before Magistrate Bobby Ramirez.

State Police said the twoengine turboprop plane had landed at the airport Friday to refuel.

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

Usually, an end play is designed to snare a specific defender. Once in a while a hand turns up where declarer doesn't care who wins the key trick. Consider this example.

North had an awkward responding hand—too good for a simple heart raise, yet not strong enough to jump to three hearts. He solved his problem by temporizing with two diamonds. South contented himself with a raise to three diamonds because he did not want to go beyond three no trump. However, when North next raised hearts, South opted to make a slam try with a spade cue-bid. North had done all he could, so he decided to forgo a club cue-bid and simply converted to the heart game.

West led a club, and declarer was reasonably satisfied with the dummy. He played the jack of clubs in case West was leading from the queen. East covered and declarer won the king. The queen of hearts was run to the king, and the club return was taken by the ace. After cashing the ace of trumps to draw the outstanding cards in that suit, declarer made a vital play when he ruffed a club to eliminate that suit from dummy.

The ace and king of diamonds were cashed, and the fact that West showed out on the second round did not bother declarer at all. He simply cashed the ace of spades, exited with a spade and claimed his contract.

Since this was only declarer's second loser, he did not care who won the spade trick. If it was West, he would have to return a black suit, enabling declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a diamond from the other, so that he would lose only one diamond. If East won the spade, he would either have to cash the queen of diamonds, or also yield a ruff-and-sluff. Either way, declarer could lose no more than one diamond trick.

DOG HELPS PATIENT

GENEVA (WNS) — Marianne Suares, 13, was wasting away with a kidney disease that responded briefly to medical treatment but then went bad again. That's when her doctor showed up one day with a mongrel dog as a gift. "He was about to be put down, and I thought you would like to keep him alive," Marianne was told. Friendship between girl and dog blossomed, and so did Marianne's health. One year later Marianne is back at school, and the mongrel placed third in an obedience contest.

Nurses Find Profession Basically Same In U.S.

By SALLY LOGUE
Family News Staff

Fifteen registered nurses of three countries, New Zealand, Canada and Australia, are in Lubbock for a year working at Methodist Hospital.

The women came to Lubbock because of the opportunity it offered them to live and work in the United States.

The nursing profession itself really isn't different in the U.S. than in the women's native countries, but as Fay Kozar of Canada said, "The situation is very different."

Jennifer Evans of Kangaroo Flat, Australia agreed saying that one of the hardest things to become accustomed to is the different terminology.

Miss Kozar and Miss Evans also agreed that the working conditions are very different in the U.S.

"In Canada, there is an excess of nurses and jobs are really scarce. That's one of the reasons I decided to come here. The nurses, because of the shortage of the staff here, must work much harder than at home," said Miss Kozar.

Robyn Cddick of North Shore, New Zealand, said the thing that seemed strangest to her is the 'everybody pays' system. "I'm sure it's just because I'm bock an enjoyable town and the people used to socialized medicine that we have, although I suppose your insurance programs cover most everything."

All of the women said they found Lubfreiendly, but all confessed some homesickness.

Diane Crispin of Whangariei, New Zealand, said she had a hard time adjusting to the flatness of West Texas. "I really miss the sea," she added.

Miss Kozar echoed those feelings by saying, "I miss all the snow and trees and rolling hills of Canada, and of course my family."

Shela Rudmann, of Johannesburg, South Africa, by way of Sydney, Australia, said the hardest thing for her to adjust to was the West Texas accent. "The terminology here is vastly different than where I come from. Here if someone says he wnat to visit with you he only means he wants to talk, in my country if you say that it means to come into my home. It was all very confusing at first," she said.

When asked if they plan to stay in Lubbock when their present one year work visas expire Miss Crispin seemed to sum up all of the the women's feelings when she said, "I would like to travel further and see more of the country, but you really can't say, so much happens in a year.

Energy Saving Kitchen Hints

By GAYNOR MADDOX

During World War II, there was an aluminum shortage. Everyone was asked to contribute pots and pans to the war effort.

Now it's energy that the country needs. Cornell University and the New York State Energy Office have joined the fuel conservation campaign by offering the following hints for saving energy in the kitchen:

Match your cookware to the dimensions of your stove burners. The bottom of a utensil should not extend more than one inch beyond the outer ring of the surface unit. The flame or coil should not extend beyond the pan.

Turn the heat down when the food reaches cooking temperature. Then use the lowest possible heat level to complete the cooking.

Aluminum and copper are the best heat conductors. Because of its thickness, cast-iron heats up slowly; it is better for long cooking. Glass and ceramic-glass are poor conductors of range-top cooking.

Use a minimum amount of water for cooking. Many people forget that heating water requires energy.

Pans should be straight-sided and covered with tight lids. Turn off electric and smooth-surface units a few minutes before cooking is completed. Let residual heat finish the cooking.

The efficiency of your oven depends largely on how you plan your menus. If carefully planned, two or three batches of food can be cooked at the same time.

Don't peek when baking or roasting. Every time the oven door is opened, the temperature inside drops 25-to-75 degrees. Let a timer tell your when to check for doneness.

Defrost foods before cooking. Preheating the oven is unnecessary unless the food contains leavening agents, such as baking powder.

Warning: Never use your gas oven for extra heat. Escaping gas may cause an explosion or asphyxiation.

Small cooking appliances have enclosed heating elements, so they often require less energy for cooking than do ovens or stoves. Electric frypans, coffee makers, toasters, toaster ovens, broilers and egg-cookers use less fuel than built-in appliances.

The pressure cooker is another energy-efficient utensil. It requires one-third the cooking time of conventional methods.

Clothes Dryer Can Act As Humidifer

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Venting a clothes dryer indoors to humidify your home can save energy and the initial cost of a humidifier, but it has pitfalls. Housing specialist Ardis Hutchins says only electric dryers are safe to use this way. Gas dryers are not because they can create deadly carbon monoxide when they burn gas to form heat. Carbon monoxide is colorless and odorless.

Miss Hutchins, said indoor venting is not advisable if it creates dust problems that persist even when nylon hose are used as an extra lint trap on the exhaust duct.

It also is inadvisable if so much moisture condenses indoors it causes mold, mildew and wood rot. The first clue to too much moisture is condensation on windows, she said. She added houses usually won't handle the moisture of two or three dryer loads a day.

Herbs, Spices May Replace Sugar In Some Recipes

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Physicians, nutritionists and others in scientific fields continue to insist that Americans eat an unhealthy amount of sugar.

There is growing evidence that sugar in its many forms may be the cause of heart attacks and cancer. We know definitely that it is one of the causes of overweight. That alone rules against its unrestricted use.

Anita Fial, head of the American Spice Trade Association's experimental food testing department, reports on experiments with fruit recipes that use very little sugar — or none at all.

"We have found that in many instances herbs and spices can be used to take the place of parts or all of the sugar customarily used in household recipes," says Fial. "These recipes really taste good and your family will actually welcome them.

"Right now," she adds, "apples, pears, Emperor grapes, bananas and pineapples are plentiful. These and other fresh fruits are essential to a sound diet." And they are naturally sweet.

"Creative use of seasonings can be immensely helpful in adjusting to many kinds of dietary restrictions," notes Fial. The following suggestions from her test kitchen are designed to increase the inherent sweet taste of foods.

— "Serve desserts or snacks at room temperature or warmer, rather than chilled. Scientists tell us that the optimum temperature for the detection of sweet taste is between 35 and 50 degrees Centigrade (about 95 to 120 degrees Farenheit).

— "We found that in a basic applesauce recipe (using 4 cups of sliced McIntosh apples and one-fourth cup each water and sugar), the sugar can be reduced by at least 50 percent when 1 teaspoon cinnamon is stirred into the finished product.

— "We cooked pears in a syrup made of 1 cup water and one-half cup sugar and compared them to pears cooked in a mixture of equal parts water and orange juice. We included in the latter recipe a 2-inch piece of cinnamon and a few whole allspice berries. No sugar was added. Panelists felt that the spiced pears were very flavorful and didn't really lack sweetness.

— "Whole pears were also poached in water combined with a mixture of whole cinnamon, ginger and allspice. Here, too, the pleasant spicy flavor more than offset the need for added sugar.

— "Fruit drinks, the perfect replacement for soda pop, also benefit from the addition of spice."

The Spice Trade Association has published the nutrient compositions of all major spices both by gram weight and teaspoon measures. The publication is available free from the American Spice Trade Association, Empire State Bldg., New York, N.Y. 10001.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl, and my dad and I disagree on something I hope you will be able to help us settle. He says he will abide by your decision.

My friend Sue's mother works all day and she thinks it's OK for Sue to have friends (both boys and girls) over to the house from 3:30 to 5. At Sue's, we play pool, cards and just talk. My dad has forbidden me to go to Sue's after school anymore. He says he trusts me, but doesn't think that girls my age should be in a house with boys unsupervised. I've tried to tell him that nothing goes on there (it doesn't). He thinks a boy might try to get something off me and I'm not mature enough to say no.

How do you feel about this?

FOURTEEN AND DECENT

Dear Fourteen: If you have proven yourself to be a decent, honest, obedient and sensible girl, I see no reason why you shouldn't be allowed to go to Sue's after school — a few days a week. (Not every day, however. Playing pool and cards and "just talking" is fun, but it doesn't get your homework done.) I think teenagers should be allowed a reasonable amount of freedom to socialize, providing they are always where they say they will be, and always come home when they say they will.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: NOT MEDDLING was upset with her daughter-in-law for failing to acknowledge her wedding gifts three months past the wedding. This brings up an important issue: Why wasn't the mother-in-law equally upset with her son? Half the gifts were probably from his friends and relatives. Why didn't he write?

My husband and I both wrote our thank-you notes — he to those he knew, and I to those I knew.

As long as women accept the full burden for these time-consuming tasks, they will be made to feel guilty if the tasks aren't performed.

LUCKY AND KNOWS IT

• • •

Dear Lucky: You're on target. A surprising number of readers wrote to express the same sensible view.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are getting along in years. He made out a will, but I have none.

My husband tells me that if he dies first, everything will go to me.

But what if I die first? Everything I own will go to him, and there are a few personal things I would like members of my family to have. My husband is not the kind of person who would carry out my wishes, even knowing what they were.

I don't want to cause a row, but I would feel better knowing that if I went first, my few personal things would go to those I want to have them. How can this be arranged? I'll be watching for your answer.

OVER 70 IN MISSOURI

• • •

Dear Over: It's as easy for you to draw up a will as it was for your husband. See your lawyer.

Explanations Reduce X-ray Fears

BOSTON (AP) — Keeping children at ease during an X-ray examination is sometimes difficult but at Children's Hospital Medical Center here the trick is turned with brief, illustrated explanations.

Elizabeth A. Haas and Donald J. Solomon, of the center's radiology department, devised easily understood descriptions of where the X-ray examination will occur, who will be involved and, step by step, exactly what will be happening. Each explanation is printed on brightly colored paper containing simple drawings.

Although designed for 8-to 13-year-olds, the material is sent to all patients between 3 and 14.

"The relaxed, informal tone of the explanations comes through to the child regardless of whether he reads it himself or has it read to him by an adult," Miss Haas said. Technologists query the child before the examination to see if it has been read and then answer any questions.

Results of the technique are characterized as "positive" in allaying fears of children. Besides informing the children and their parents, the technique shows the youngsters that they are recognized as individuals by a hospital staff concerned with their questions and anxieties, Miss Haas said.

TV Documentary Examines Changes In Vietnam

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last December, three young documentary-makers did what no U.S. TV staffer had yet been able to do: visit Vietnam for a show about life there since communist troops won the war in 1975.

Their show, "Vietnam: Picking Up the Pieces," will air Tuesday night on public TV in most cities. It was made by Jon Alpert, his wife, Keiko Tsuno, and Karen Ranucci, all of New York.

Alpert, 29, says he has no idea why the Vietnamese gave them the nod instead of crews from CBS, ABC or NBC (the last was allowed to send in a reporter, but only well after Alpert's gang started work).

"I guess it's really because we made persistent pests of ourselves to the Vietnamese," theorized Alpert, whose unusual expedition was done for WNET, New York's public TV station.

The pestering included frequent trips to the Vietnamese mission at the United Nations and simply dispatching tapes of his other documentaries to Saigon officials, he said by phone from New York.

His intent, he said, wasn't to do a hard-news program about the country in which the U.S. fought its longest war.

"We just wanted to see what life's like now for Average Joe Binh," said Alpert, who'd never been in Vietnam before.

He and his crew spent 2½ weeks in the north, another two in the Saigon area. They could have driven to Saigon via the famed Ho Chi Minh Trail, he said, but declined because his wife was pregnant.

Their travels took them from factories to a "re-education" camp for former Saigon military officers, from an unscheduled visit with a Saigon family to the city's slums and still-thriving black market.

There were surprisingly few restrictions, Alpert said, save for a ban on trips to military installations, which ended his hopes to tape scenes of the old U.S. military base at Cam Ranh Bay.

"If we pressed them, they were rather accommodating," he said. "They didn't appear to be hiding anything from us."

His first impressions of Saigon: "Your mouth just opens up. In Hanoi, it's all ox-carts and bicycles. In Saigon, it's motorcyles, all that blue smoke and all the peddlers.

"I never saw so many peddlers in my life. And the black market was full of stereos, TV sets, fans, air conditioners."

He said he even saw one chap put down the equivalent of $2,000 in piasters for a tape recorder with the explanation that "they took up a collection for it in the office and would use it there."

There weren't many troops on Saigon's streets, he said, the urchins that once picked pockets, sold newspapers and shined shoes downtown were gone and the wartime military bunkers were deserted.

The U.S. Embassy now is the Oil Ministry, he added, and the presidental palace a state house "full of big, fat Russian tourists taking photographs" when he visited the place.

Playboy magazines are no-nos now, "but you could buy a textbook on American democracy for $2," he marveled.

Any hostility toward him, an American, from Saigonese who felt America had let them down?

"No, I didn't get that feeling," he said. "It wasn't 'the United States let us down.' It was more that they (who talked about it) want to leave and would like to go to the United States."

"It depended on who you talked to," Alpert said. "If you talked to people who'd been associated with the Americans, their living standards had been reduced, and many were unhappy...

"The others, well, they're just hanging in there, as always. But I didn't get any feeling of antagonism towards the government."

Did the authorities try to censor any interviews?

It happened a few times, he said, but in a curious way.

In the north, a doctor whose friends were killed in a U.S. bombing raid, said "I hate the Americans" in an interview. But an official present ordered the doctor to make a "do-over."

He wanted the physician to soften his statement, Alpert said, because the first one "wasn't the party line, which is: 'You don't like the American government, but the American people are OK.'"

The doctor dutifully complied and was recorded again.

"But we still had both statements on tape," the producer said, adding that he neither was asked nor offered to fork over to government officials the doctor's first bitter statement.

"So that was the type of censorship they exercised," he said. "And it was rather useless."

Parking Meters Often Inaccurate

CHICAGO (UPI) — Motorists or the city stand better than a 50 percent chance of being gypped every time a coin is put into one of the city's 35,000 parking meters.

The Chicago Tribune reported recently it tested 100 meters around the city with precision stopwatches and discovered that 57 were inaccurate.

One of every five meters ran fast, some by as much as 17 minutes per hour. But 37 of the meters surveyed gave motorists more time than they paid for, as much as 7½ minutes per hour.

Several meters jammed, one of them so badly it wouldn't register any time at all.

"There's a lot of defective meters out there," said Patrolman James Coughlin, who along with two clerks, mans the police department's meter complaint unit.

Edward T. Murphy, assistant commissioner of the Department of Streets and Sanitation, disagreed.

"It's an extremely rare thing for a motorist to get shortchanged on a meter ... one in a million," he said. "Almost all (the complaints) are invalid."

Airlines To Offer Expanded Services

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two major airlines will soon announce a major expansion of services at Newark International Airport, The Star-Ledger of Newark has reported.

The expansion program by Delta Airlines and United Airlines will result in the replacement of many older and smaller jets with newer jets that have about 50 percent increased passenger capacity, the newspaper said.

A Delta spokesman said the airline would replace Boeing 727s on many of its flights to Atlanta with Lockheed L1011s and Douglas Super DC8s. The move is scheduled to begin April 30.

United Airlines has scheduled a news conference at the airport April 19 to announce what an airlines spokesman described as "major additions in service at Newark." The spokesman would not discuss details.

Shakespeare Tragedie
Staged With Austerity

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — A leering "Julius Caesar" and a jangling "King Lear" gave first-nighters a glum and jumpy weekend.

By scheduling coincidence, the two new troupes resident at the Brooklyn Academy of Music and the Juilliard School spinoff that calls itself The Acting Company, set Sunday for their respective premieres.

By odd chance there was a startling similarity between the productions, each being staged with somber austerity. What went on, however, was extremely different, although rarely commendable.

In the BAM presentation of "Julius Caesar," director Frank Dunlop takes a campy British look at Shakespeare's story of fierce politics in ancient Rome. His strangest option turns Mark Antony, the avenger of Caesar's assassination, into a simpering, petulant little fop, played with wet-lipped glee by Austin Pendleton.

The affair is salvaged from utter fatuity by an extraordinarily powerful portrayal of the arch conspirator Cassius by Richard Dreyfuss, this year's Academy Award winner for best actor. Dreyfuss began as a stage performer and with superb voice and sheer authority makes the lop-sided concept interesting.

George Rose is adequate although scarcely an imperious commander, knifed down at a side-stage door which is all that is evident of the Forum. The Brutus of Rene Auberjonois, although meritorious, never quite matches Cassius, and Holly Villaire does well in the cameo role of wife Portia.

The rest of the company lazes in articulation and superficial characterization. The very spare scenic display was contributed by Carole Lee Carroll, while Dona Granata has arrayed the patricians in white costumes and turned the plebians into a horde of black-robed monkish mendicants.

The Acting Company, on the stage of the American Place Theater, rates somewhat higher for collective ensemble effort in "King Lear."

The drawback to greater enthusiasm is that being mostly very young, the members are sorely tried in portraying the deep turmoils of one of Shakespeare's most difficult scripts.

New Soap Opera Offers 'Firsts'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There used to be 14 soap operas on the air. Now, this vast sonata of daily woe and worry is getting a 15th attraction, "High Hopes." It stands out in three ways.

It isn't a network show, as are the others. It's made in Toronto, not New York or Hollywood. And its lead character, played by Bruce Gray, is a family counselor — who happens to be divorced.

It premiered last week both on Canadian TV and in about 30 cities in the United States, including New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, says Dick Cox, executive producer of the 30-minute daytime series.

And, he says, "High Hopes" is the first-ever syndicated soap opera on American TV, excluding "Mary Hartman"and "Forever Fernwood," which spoofed the traditional soap opera form.

"There've been attempts to make them before, but this is the first to actually succeed," says Cox, whose show is distributed by a subsidiary of the New York-based Young and Rubicam advertising agency.

Cox, speaking by phone from Fun City, said "High Hopes" was launched even though 14 network soapers are at large mainly because of "a situation that came about in the last couple of years."

The situation, he said, was that "the networks were in a seller's market. The advertisers felt they were being overcharged. The prices for programs were going up, but not the ratings."

Advertisers thought, therefore, that network soap operas "were getting less efficient, to their way of thinking," he added.

At the same time, he said, stations trying to buy their own programs found the prices "absolutely astounding. It looked like a bit of a vacuum for both sides.

"So we decided to go in and offer the advertisers an alternative that would be less expensive and more efficient than the networks, and also give stations a way of acquiring a program with no cash outlay."

The latter was done, he said, in a "barter" deal: stations can sell four minutes of commercial time in each "High Hopes" if they air the three minutes of national advertising that comes with each program.

Cox said about a third of the stations carrying the new show are network affiliates. All the stations air it between 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. in their markets, he added.

He was asked if he thought his show, if successful, will prompt production of more syndicated soap operas and cause a trend in which network affiliates start taking those shows instead of the network wares.

"Well, I know at the moment of three imitators of what we're doing," he said. "Their shows are in the planning stages.

"And I've read trade stories that suggest the networks are concerned with our activities. I'd like to think we are that important, although I'm not sure that's the case...

TV Documentary Examines Changes In Vietnam

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last December, three young documentary-makers did what no U.S. TV staffer had yet been able to do: visit Vietnam for a show about life there since communist troops won the war in 1975.

Their show, "Vietnam: Picking Up the Pieces," will air Tuesday night on public TV in most cities. It was made by Jon Alpert, his wife, Keiko Tsuno, and Karen Ranucci, all of New York.

Alpert, 29, says he has no idea why the Vietnamese gave them the nod instead of crews from CBS, ABC or NBC (the last was allowed to send in a reporter, but only well after Alpert's gang started work).

"I guess it's really because we made persistent pests of ourselves to the Vietnamese," theorized Alpert, whose unusual expedition was done for WNET, New York's public TV station.

The pestering included frequent trips to the Vietnamese mission at the United Nations and simply dispatching tapes of his other documentaries to Saigon officials, he said by phone from New York.

His intent, he said, wasn't to do a hard-news program about the country in which the U.S. fought its longest war.

"We just wanted to see what life's like now for Average Joe Binh," said Alpert, who'd never been in Vietnam before.

He and his crew spent 2½ weeks in the north, another two in the Saigon area. They could have driven to Saigon via the famed Ho Chi Minh Trail, he said, but declined because his wife was pregnant.

Their travels took them from factories to a "re-education" camp for former Saigon military officers, from an unscheduled visit with a Saigon family to the city's slums and still-thriving black market.

There were surprisingly few restrictions, Alpert said, save for a ban on trips to military installations, which ended his hopes to tape scenes of the old U.S. military base at Cam Ranh Bay.

"If we pressed them, they were rather accommodating," he said. "They didn't appear to be hiding anything from us."

His first impressions of Saigon: "Your mouth just opens up. In Hanoi, it's all ox-carts and bicycles. In Saigon, it's motorcyles, all that blue smoke and all the peddlers.

"I never saw so many peddlers in my life. And the black market was full of stereos, TV sets, fans, air conditioners."

He said he even saw one chap put down the equivalent of $2,000 in piasters for a tape recorder with the explanation that "they took up a collection for it in the office and would use it there."

There weren't many troops on Saigon's streets, he said, the urchins that once picked pockets, sold newspapers and shined shoes downtown were gone and the wartime military bunkers were deserted.

The U.S. Embassy now is the Oil Ministry, he added, and the presidental palace a state house "full of big, fat Russian tourists taking photographs" when he visited the place.

Playboy magazines are no-nos now, "but you could buy a textbook on American democracy for $2," he marveled.

Any hostility toward him, an American, from Saigonese who felt America had let them down?

"No, I didn't get that feeling," he said. "It wasn't 'the United States let us down.' It was more that they (who talked about it) want to leave and would like to go to the United States."

Any grumbles of hard, lean times under the new regime?

"It depended on who you talked to," Alpert said. "If you talked to people who'd been associated with the Americans, their living standards had been reduced, and many were unhappy...

"The others, well, they're just hanging in there, as always. But I didn't get any feeling of antagonism towards the government."

Did the authorities try to censor any interviews?

It happened a few times, he said, but in a curious way.

In the north, a doctor whose friends were killed in a U.S. bombing raid, said "I hate the Americans" in an interview. But an official present ordered the doctor to make a "do-over."

He wanted the physician to soften his statement, Alpert said, because the first one "wasn't the party line, which is: 'You don't like the American government, but the American people are OK.'"

The doctor dutifully complied and was recorded again.

"But we still had both statements on tape," the producer said, adding that he neither was asked nor offered to fork over to government officials the doctor's first bitter statement.

"So that was the type of censorship they exercised," he said. "And it was rather useless."

Parking Meters Often Inaccurate

CHICAGO (UPI) — Motorists or the city stand better than a 50 percent chance of being gypped every time a coin is put into one of the city's 35,000 parking meters.

The Chicago Tribune reported recently it tested 100 meters around the city with precision stopwatches and discovered that 57 were inaccurate.

One of every five meters ran fast, some by as much as 17 minutes per hour. But 37 of the meters surveyed gave motorists more time than they paid for, as much as 7½ minutes per hour.

Several meters jammed, one of them so badly it wouldn't register any time at all.

"There's a lot of defective meters out there," said Patrolman James Coughlin, who along with two clerks, mans the police department's meter complaint unit.

Edward T. Murphy, assistant commissioner of the Department of Streets and Sanitation, disagreed.

OHIO SHAKESPEARE

LAKEWOOD, Ohio. (UPI) — The Great Lakes Shakespeare Festival has six plays set for its summer season beginning July 7: "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "King John," J.M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," John Gay's "Polly," John O'Keefe's "Wild Oats," and the one-man show about G.B. Shaw, "My Astonishing Self."

Airlines To Offer Expanded Services

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two major airlines will soon announce a major expansion of services at Newark International Airport, The Star-Ledger of Newark has reported.

The expansion program by Delta Airlines and United Airlines will result in the replacement of many older and smaller jets with newer jets that have about 50 percent increased passenger capacity, the newspaper said.

A Delta spokesman said the airline would replace Boeing 727s on many of its flights to Atlanta with Lockheed L1011s and Douglas Super DC8s. The move is scheduled to begin April 30.

United Airlines has scheduled a news conference at the airport April 19 to announce what an airlines spokesman described as "major additions in service at Newark." The spokesman would not discuss details.

Shakespeare Tragedies Staged With Austerity

By WILLIAM GLOVER

By scheduling coincidence, the two new troupes resident at the Brooklyn Academy of Music and the Juilliard School spinoff that calls itself The Acting Company, set Sunday for their respective premieres.

By odd chance there was a startling similarity between the productions, each being staged with somber austerity. What went on, however, was extremely different, although rarely commendable.

In the BAM presentation of "Julius Caesar," director Frank Dunlop takes a campy British look at Shakespeare's story of fierce politics in ancient Rome. His strangest option turns Mark Antony, the avenger of Caesar's assassination, into a simpering, petulant little fop, played with wet-lipped glee by Austin Pendleton.

The affair is salvaged from utter fatuity by an extraordinarily powerful portrayal of the arch conspirator Cassius by Richard Dreyfuss, this year's Academy Award winner for best actor. Dreyfuss began as a stage performer and with superb voice and sheer authority makes the lop-sided concept interesting.

George Rose is adequate although scarcely an imperious commander, knifed down at a side-stage door which is all that is evident of the Forum. The Brutus of Rene Auberjonois, although meritorious, never quite matches Cassius, and Holly Villaire does well in the cameo role of wife Portia.

The rest of the company lazes in articulation and superficial characterization. The very spare scenic display was contributed by Carole Lee Carroll, while Dona Granata has arrayed the patricians in white costumes and turned the plebians into a horde of black-robed monkish mendicants.

The Acting Company, on the stage of the American Place Theater, rates somewhat higher for collective ensemble effort in "King Lear."

The drawback to greater enthusiasm is that being mostly very young, the members are sorely tried in portraying the deep turmoils of one of Shakespeare's most difficult scripts.

Director John Houseman starts David Schramm at such a choleric high as the aging ruler of old England that he seems in imminent danger of cardiac collapse ever after. Clangorous sound effects when the tumult really soars suggest rush hour bedlam at Times Square.

Florid exaggeration sullies Kevin Conroy's Edgar-Mad Tom assignment, and there is a collegiate willingness rather than in-depth understanding to James Harper's Kent, Gregg Almquist's Gloucester and the work of most of the other courtiers.

Frances Conroy makes gentle Cordelia something of a prim spinster. The fawning sisters, Mary Lou Rosato and Patricia Hodges, are comfortably neurotic.

Ming Cho Lee's towering gray unit set and Nancy Potts' costumes of some bygone knightly era enhance the intended sobriety of a very earnest but noisily uneasy excursion into classic tragedy.

New Soap Opera Offers 'Firsts'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There used to be 14 soap operas on the air. Now, this vast sonata of daily woe and worry is getting a 15th attraction, "High Hopes." It stands out in three ways.

It isn't a network show, as are the others. It's made in Toronto, not New York or Hollywood. And its lead character, played by Bruce Gray, is a family counselor — who happens to be divorced.

It premiered last week both on Canadian TV and in about 30 cities in the United States, including New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, says Dick Cox, executive producer of the 30-minute daytime series.

And, he says, "High Hopes" is the first-ever syndicated soap opera on American TV, excluding "Mary Hartman" and "Forever Fernwood," which spoofed the traditional soap opera form.

"There've been attempts to make them before, but this is the first to actually succeed," says Cox, whose show is distributed by a subsidiary of the New York-based Young and Rubicam advertising agency.

Cox, speaking by phone from Fun City, said "High Hopes" was launched even though 14 network soapers are at large mainly because of "a situation that came about in the last couple of years."

The situation, he said, was that "the networks were in a seller's market. The advertisers felt they were being overcharged. The prices for programs were going up, but not the ratings."

Advertisers thought, therefore, that network soap operas "were getting less efficient, to their way of thinking," he added.

At the same time, he said, stations trying to buy their own programs found the prices "absolutely astounding. It looked like a bit of a vacuum for both sides.

"So we decided to go in and offer the advertisers an alternative that would be less expensive and more efficient than the networks, and also give stations a way of acquiring a program with no cash outlay."

The latter was done, he said, in a "barter" deal: stations can sell four minutes of commercial time in each "High Hopes" if they air the three minutes of national advertising that comes with each program.

Cox said about a third of the stations carrying the new show are network affiliates. All the stations air it between 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. in their markets, he added.

He was asked if he thought his show, if successful, will prompt production of more syndicated soap operas and cause a trend in which network affiliates start taking those shows instead of the network wares.

"Well, I know at the moment of three imitators of what we're doing," he said. "Their shows are in the planning stages.

"And I've read trade stories that suggest the networks are concerned with our activities. I'd like to think we are that important, although I'm not sure that's the case...

By TIM AHERN

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Betty Ford, long in fragile health, has checked herself into a hospital for treatment of what the former first lady describes as an "insidious" problem of "over-medicating myself."

The acting superintendent of the U.S. Naval Hospital where Mrs. Ford was admitted at about 11 a.m. Monday — two days after her 60th birthday — denied that she was in any way addicted to drugs.

"It's an insidious thing and I mean to rid myself of its damaging effects. There have been too many other things I've overcome to be forever burdened with this," said Mrs. Ford.

Her statement was issued shortly after she was driven from her new desert home in Palm Springs, 100 miles east of here, to the Navy hospital in this Los Angeles suburb.

Her husband, former President Gerald Ford, said later in the day that he would continue his schedule of appearances in Alabama and would not return to California before Friday.

Capt. James Zimble, acting superintendant of the five-story hospital, said Mrs. Ford was in the alcohol and drug rehabilitation center for what he described as "a problem with medication." He said she was in "fine condition."

He denied that Mrs. Ford was in any way addicted to drugs, but refused to elaborate beyond Mrs. Ford's statement. Zimble refused to say what medication was involved or how long she would be hospitalized, although sources said two or three weeks was likely.

Mrs. Ford has suffered from arthritis and a pinched nerve in her neck for several years.

Dr. Neil Diess, a Los Angeles County Medical Association official, said in a telephone interview that a number of drugs are usually used for arthritis, which can cause painful inflammation of joints. Those drugs include cortisone and painkillers such as codeine, aspirin or Darvon, he said. But he had no knowledge about Mrs. Ford's treatment, he said.

The statement from Ford's office quoted the former president as saying the current hospitalization of his wife was "in no way related to the cancer which Mrs. Ford experienced nearly four years ago. The cancer has been totally arrested and her subsequent recovery complete."

In 1974, Mrs. Ford was discovered to have breast cancer and underwent a mastectomy and related treatment.

According to Mrs. Ford, "over a period of time, I got to the point where I was overmedicating myself."

Her health was a factor in the decision of the Fords to move to the dry Palm Springs area after Jimmy Carter's victory over Ford in the 1976 election. They had homes in Washington, D.C., and their home state of Michigan.

"Palm Springs agrees with me," she told The Associated Press three weeks ago, shortly before moving into the Fords' custom-built, lavish house along the Thunderbird Golf Course in the Palm Springs suburb of Rancho Mirage. "My health problem is arthritis and the desert is great for my arthritis."

According to Mrs. Ford, her decision to enter the hospital was made last week. On April 1, her husband cut short a series of appearances on the East Coast and flew home to Palm Springs amid reports of his wife's ill health.

At that time, Mrs. Ford's problems were described as a combination of a cold and the pressures of the move to the new home. Ford was home April 1-2, then returned to the road, visiting Chicago.

Short Outspends Foes In State Senate Race

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Rep. E.L. Short, campaigning for Kent Hance's state senate seat, so far has outspent his opponents by more than 2 to 1, listing expenditures of more than $50,000 in campaign expense reports filed with the state.

Short is followed in order by banker and Texas Tech University Regent Don Workman, former state Rep. Delwin Jones, former Lubbock Mayor Morris Turner and former Brownfield state Rep. Jesse George.

Short, who purposely is not soliciting any contributions, has loaned his campaign $50,000 and received contributions of $1,875.

Of that amount, Short has spent $50,208.

Jones has received contributions totalling $9,193, including $5,274 from a prior campaign balance. He listed expenditures of $9,705.

Turner, who was expected to run the richest campaign, has collected $11,695 and spent $8,648.

Of the $50,000 spent by Short, over $47,000 has gone to a political consulting firm in Austin for "political advertisements and services."

Contributors of over $50 to the Short campaign include: the Good Government Political Action Committee, Fort Worth, $500; Viela C. Boseman of Idalou, $250; Harry Short, of Post, $100; Tom Hale of Tahoka, $100; Jack Looker of Ingram, $100; K.R. Durham, Tahoka, $100; Wayne Huffaker, Tahoka, $100; Gerald Huffaker, Tahoka, $100; Roy Wicker, Seminole, $100; and Paige Eiland, Stanton, $100.

Workman's major expenses were nearly $10,000 for billboards, $2,063 for television advertising, $1,808 for bumper stickers and $1,034 for posters and brochures.

Workman listed two contributors of over $1,000 — Jerry Stelter of Lubbock who donated $1,050 and O.B. Ratliff of Lubbock who contributed $1,000.

Those donating $500 to Workman's campaign are: Richard Pflug of Lubbock, Gene Murrell of Lubbock, Campbell H. Elkins of Lubbock, John F. Lott, Jr. of Post, Sue Stevens of Denver City, S.E. Cone Jr. of Lubbock, Louis Rochester of Odessa, and Jack D. Williamson of Lubbock.

Jones has paid $3,220 to Webster and Harris Advertising Agency and $1,050 to Lubbock Poster Co. for his largest expenditures.

He has loaned his campaign $2,438 and has received $100 contributions from Hugh Newton, Sammy Tate, Dan Young, Tom Cherry and J.R. Crisp Jr., all of Lubbock. Jones also received a $100 speaking fee from Bob Greenhill of Lubbock.

Turner's largest outlays have been $2,030 to Robert Wilkes of Lubbock, and $1,557 to West Advertising. He has paid Campaign Associates, Inc., of Wichita, Kan., $590.

He has loaned the campaign $2,250 and received $9,060 in contributions over $50. Bob Jordan of Lubbock contributed $600 to the campaign.

Those donating $500 to Turner's campaign were: Macky McKee of Lubbock, Roy K. Furr of Lubbock, Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Wise of Lubbock and Leroy Elmore of Lubbock. J.A. Finley gave $300 to the campaign effort.

George has received contributions totalling $2,250 from Ella Castleberry of Morton and $1,000 from Gerald Anderson of Lubbock.

Contributors of $200 were Cordia Mae Cates of Brownfield, Mr. and Mrs. Don Cates of Seminole and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cates of Lubbock.

So far Salinas has received contributions totaling $3,700 and has spent $2,650.

Salinas listed a $1,000 contribution from a doctors' political action committee (TEX PAC) and $500 contributions from LUPAC, a political action committee of life underwriters, and from LIFT IV, a political action committee of lawyers.

Contributors of $200 were Kenneth Kerr of Lubbock, the American General Political Action Committee of Houston, Roy K. Furr of Lubbock, the Acme Fund of Houston and Patrick A. Abeyta of Lubbock.

Airhart listed three contributors of $100: Martha Airhart of Lubbock, Bob Lokey of Lubbock, and Bob Manley of Amarillo.

Hester received $400 from W.L. Hester, $100 from Joe Greenlee, W.B. Rushing and Leonard Mitchell, and $50 from Lee English, Brian McPeak and W.L. Smith. All contributors are of Lubbock.

In the race for state representative, District 75-A, Democrat Xen Oden, who is unopposed, has received $1,182 in contributions and spent $954.

Transpac of Lubbock donated $75, and Mrs. Oden received $50 from Jacquelin Collins of Lubbock and Mrs. John McLarty of Lubbock.

Republican Nolan J. "Buzz" Robnett has collected $3,423 and spent $2,096 to his opponent, Jack Chappell's contributions of $715 and expenses of $640.

Robnett's contributions include a personal loan of $2,900 he made to the campaign and $100 contributions from Robert H. McKelvy and Jerry Bradshaw, both of Lubbock.

Farm Bill Support Urged By Briscoe

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe wrote Texas congressmen Monday, asking them to vote for the farm bill pending before the House despite President Carter's threat of a veto.

"I support this legislation and I hope that you will cast your vote in favor of the bill, a bill which will provide reasonable aid to farmers during this growing season," he said.

He said the administration's argument the bill would be inflationary "ignores the need for more comprehensive steps which can have an anti-inflationary impact by creating additional markets for American agricultural products."

Traffic Panel To Study Tech Terrace Solutions

By CARRIE LINE CURTIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Members of the Citizens Traffic Commission will try two temporary solutions to the traffic problem at Tech Terrace Park on weekends before deciding on a permanent solution during their regular May meeting.

Commission members, city staff personnel, and representatives of the neighborhood agreed Monday that several temporary solutions must be tried before the commission can arrive at a permanent decision on the traffic problem. The action came during a special commission meeting.

Another temporary solution proposed by Dr. Martin Gundersen will be tried the following two weekends. He proposed no turns off Flint Avenue into the park area on 23rd, 24th and 25th streets, and making 23rd, 24th and 25th streets one-way thoroughfares west of the park area.

Gundersen and Tom Sawyer, representatives of the neighborhood, said they felt the residents would not object to waiting another month for a permanent decision on the traffic problem, as long as the commission shows that it is trying to find a permanent solution.

Staff members will mail results of the two temporary solutions to the commission members to study before the regular May meeting, at which time a decision will be recommended to the City Council.

City information officer Vaughn Hendrie and Maj. Carroll Bartley of the Lubbock Police Department both agreed that the temporary solution tried last weekend did not remedy the problem.

During that period, traffic flow was restricted on the park's west side to a one-way direction. A policeman was stationed on Gary Avenue north of 24th Street and north of 25th Street to direct traffic away from the park's west side and onto Indiana Avenue.

Hendrie said most of the cars simply pulled into driveways along the thoroughfares, backed up and went around the same route again. He added that many cars attempted to make U-turns in front of the policemen stationed at the barricades last weekend.

Bill McDaniel of the city's traffic and engineering department said law enforcement and education of the public on a traffic flow plan must be included in a permanent solution.

During the meeting Monday, the commission also voted to recommend to the city council installation of a four-way stop sign at 55th Street and Wayne Avenue. Western Hills Baptist Academy requested the sign because more than 260 children cross the intersection a day at its facilities.

Teacher Group Backs Hance

State Sen. Kent Hance has received the endorsement of the Texas Educators Political Action Committee in his race for U.S. Congress.

Russell Owen Jr. of Dallas, chairman of the 37-member TEPAC board of trustees, said the endorsement list is an indicator of "friends of education" candidates.

The committee, the political action arm of the Texas State Teachers Association, endorsed 115 candidates, including Democratic gubernatorial candidate John Hill.

Owen said TEPAC plans to make a $10,000 contribution to the Hill campaign fund but emphasized the money comes from voluntary contributions of individual teachers.

No TEPAC endorsements were made in the race for state senate from the 28th District or in either of the Lubbock races for state house of representatives.

The Texans in Nursing Coalition for Action in Politics (TexN-CAP) also endorsed candidates recently and threw their support behind state Rep. Froy Salinas' bid for re-election from District 75-B and the campaign effort of Democrat Xen Oden to become the District 75-A state representative.

May 26 Added As Class Day For Schools

May 26 has been designated a day of instruction for the Lubbock Independent School District. It will serve as the makeup date for classes that were dismissed Feb. 17 because of inclement weather. It will also be the new date for the final day of instruction this school year.

Elementary school students will pick up their grade reports on Saturday, May 27 as previously scheduled.

Quarter examinations for students in grades seven though eleven are rescheduled for May 25 and 26.

Seniors will have their graduation exercise the same dates as originally planned, but there are some changes of their end-of-year activities. Final examinations for seniors will now be May 22, and check-out activities are changed to May 23. A new date of May 24 is reserved for individual school graduation rehearals.

Commencement exercises are set for Estacado and Monterey on May 25, for Coronado and Dunbar on May 26, and for Lubbock High on May 27. A combined commencement sermon for the five schools will be Sunday, May 21.

The end-of-year schedule for adult classes will be the same as originally planned.

Man Assessed Prison Term

Pleading guilty to murder was Kirby Vance Jones, 32, of 1506 E. 24th St. He was assessed the prison term by Dist. Judge Denzil Bevers on the recommendation of the Criminal District Attorney's office.

The victim was shot at 2309 Elm Ave. about 7:55 a.m. and died later that morning at a local hospital.

According to stipulated testimony from witness Gary Lee Neal, Sanders and another man got into an argument over the rules of a pool game. Neal said in the testimony that the man left the place and returned a short time later with a shotgun.

Other stipulated testimony introduced into evidence by Asst. Dist. Atty. Cindy Miller identified Jones as the man with the shotgun.

Newspaper Requests Workers To Resign

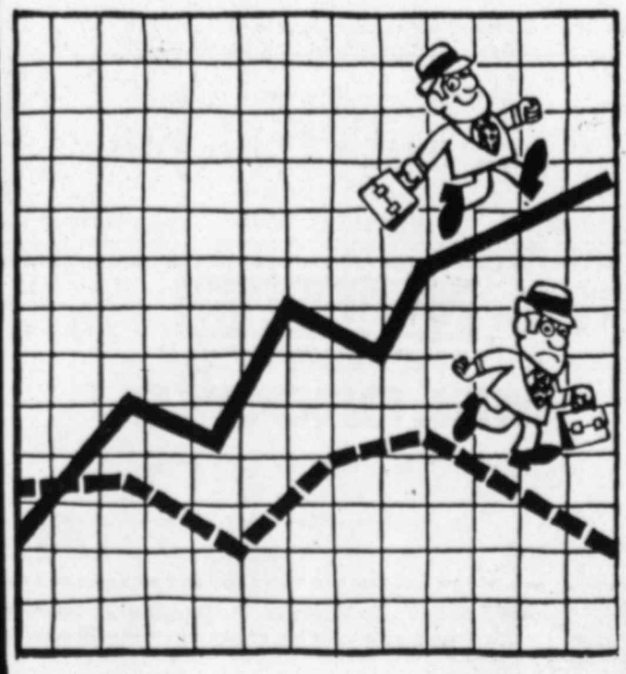

NEW YORK (AP) — With only four days to go before a management-imposed contract deadline, the New York Post has asked dozens of editorial, advertising and clerical employees for their resignations.

The newspaper began interviewing selected Newspaper Guild members Monday, offering them a chance to resign voluntarily with full severance pay and additional benefits.

Martin Fischbein, special assistant to publisher Rupert Murdoch, confirmed word from Guild officials that individuals the newspaper seeks to drop from the payroll were being called in.

The Post has set Friday midnight as a deadline for a new contract agreement with the Guild — a move the union has interpreted as a lockout threat by publisher Rupert Murdoch.

Former FBI Chief, Aides Indicted On Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department, concluding that responsibility for FBI excesses in the anti-radical campaign of the early 1970s rests at the top, has obtained the indictment of former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and two of his highest former aides.

In the culmination of a long and painful internal investigation, the department also dropped its prosecution of John J. Kearney, a former FBI supervisor in New York, who was indicted a year ago in connection with FBI break-ins, mail openings and wiretappings between 1970 and the summer of 1972.

"I am thoroughly delighted, pleased and vindicated," said Kearney, who was the first agent in FBI history to be charged with a felony involving his official duties. He resigned in 1972 to enter private business.

C News
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Tuesday, April 11, 1978

In a case personally guided by Attorney General Griffin B. Bell, a federal grand jury Monday indicted Gray, former Associate FBI Director W. Mark Felt and former Assistant Director Edward S. Miller on a charge of conspiring to violate the rights of citizens through unlawful break-ins.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Gray issued a statement through his lawyer saying he had "never participated in or knowingly authorized any illegal conduct during my tenure as acting director of the FBI."

Felt, who called the indictments a "tragic mistake," said that he, Gray and Miller had rejected a Justice Department offer last week to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge.

Said Felt, formerly the No. 2 official in the FBI high command:

"Irrespective of my personal case, these indictments will have a chilling effect on all law enforcement and the intelligence community. These agencies have already been impaired in recent years, and this is just another push downhill.

"In my own career up against mobsters, criminals, spies and the mad bombers of the Weather Underground, I never approached a case with criminal intent and never got any personal gain from a case."

Bell, who announced the indictments at a news conference Monday, also said he was taking unspecified disciplinary action against J. Wallace LaPrade, an assistant FBI director and head of the bureau's New York office, "for his conduct in these matters."

Bell said 70 other persons — 68 in the FBI and two in the Justice Department — will be subjected to disciplinary action ranging from censure to dismissal. Most of them were members of the New York office, which conducted the anti-radical campaign under Kearney's supervision.

Bell said a thorough review of FBI activities during pursuit of fugitive members of the radical Weather Underground showed that the responsibility lay at the top and that Kearney's prosecution could not be justified.

Bell, in a written statement, said he had "determined that in this case the most severe sanction of the criminal prosecution should be brought to bear at the highest levels of authority and responsibility at which the evidence will support prosecution."

Kearney's indictment sparked a nationwide storm in which politicians and rank-and-file law enforcement officers charged that Kearney was being made a scapegoat for actions ordered by his superiors. More than $500,000 had been raised for a legal defense fund in his behalf.

Bell said that "documentary evidence has been uncovered which indicates that officials at the highest levels of the FBI authorrized certain illegal activities in the Weatherman cases.

"While that evidence does not relate directly to Mr. Kearney's activities, the department cannot with any confidence assert that similar authorization did not exist for these activities."

Bell said that after Kearney's indictment, the Justice Department learned that an unnamed "former high FBI official" was willing to testify that he once relayed to Kearney the personal wishes of then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover that "any available means be utilized to catch Weatherman fugitives."

It is known that the official was William Sullivan, a former assistant director who was killed last year in a hunting accident.

Bell declined comment when asked whether the grand jury indictment would have charged Hoover were he still alive.

Gray was appointed acting FBI director by then-President Richard M. Nixon in May 1972 after Hoover's death. Gray's nomination to be permanent director was withdrawn in 1973 in the wake of questions raised about his handling of the Watergate and ITT cases, including his destruction of Watergate documents at the request of a White House aide.

In the past, Miller has said he authorized FBI break-ins on approval by Felt, who in turn has said the go-ahead came from Gray. Gray, now practicing law in Groton, Conn., denied through his lawyer that he ever approved any illegal actions.

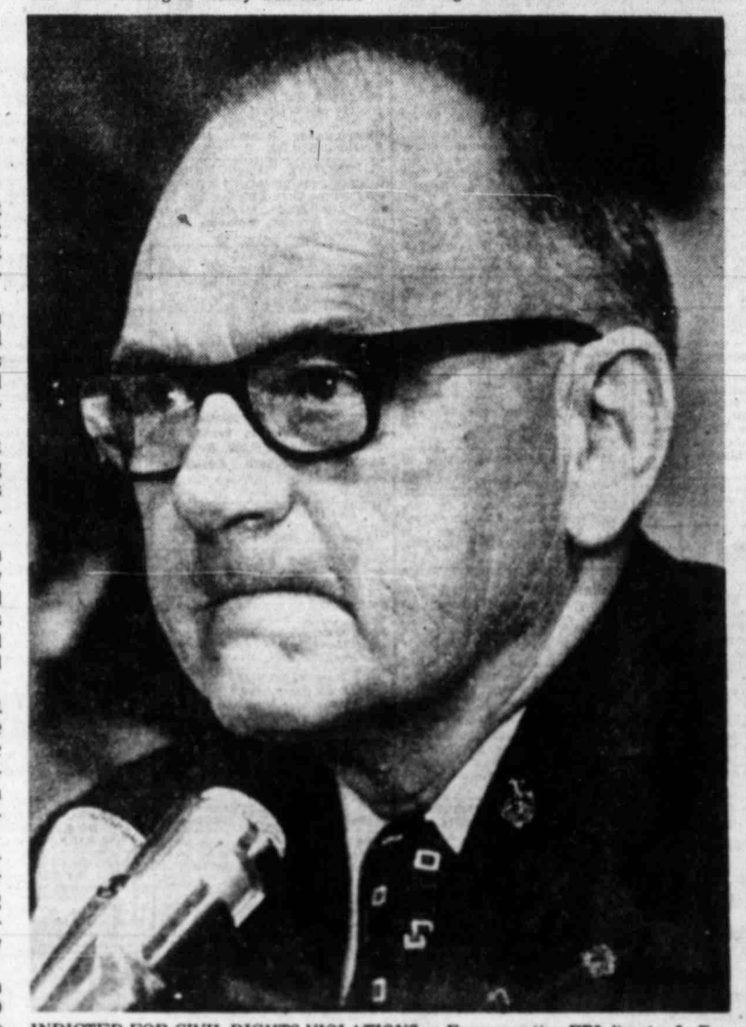

The indictment charges that the three men conspired with unnamed others to cause agents to break into the New York residences of Jennifer Dohrn, Frances Schreiberg, Mortimer Bookchin and Leonard Machtinger, and the Union, N.J., home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Cohen.

The grand jury said the entries violated the Fourth Amendment rights of friends and relatives of Weatherman fugitives against unreasonable search and seizure.

In filing a formal document in a New York court disposing of the charges against Kearney, Justice Department lawyers said "it is clear that defendant Kearney ... was acting in accordance with the wishes and approval of his superiors in the FBI."

Bell said he had no evidence that knowledge of the FBI activities went beyond the FBI to either the Justice Department or the Nixon White House. Nixon and several of his former aides were interviewed by Bell's special team of attorneys assigned to the case.

Bell said that dropping charges against Kearney did not mean that carrying out orders was an excuse to break the law. "It is not an excuse, but it would not be just to prosecute him for activities that are not likely to recur."

Minorities Still Face Housing Discrimination Despite Law

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Ten years ago today, as the nation mourned the assassination of Martin Luther King, President Lyndon Johnson signed a landmark civil rights bill that he hoped would end racial discrimination in housing.

Officially called the Civil Rights Act of 1968 but better known as the Fair Housing Law, it meant that never again could a real estate broker legally slam the door in a black person's face.

Or as NAACP official Nathaniel Jones explains it: "For the first time, it placed the majesty of the law on the side of those who wish to do the right thing. And it placed the brand of illegality on those who want to discriminate."

But merely passing a law making discrimination illegal did not make the evils magically disappear. Slow progress has been made, but those who still discriminate have found ways of doing so that are more subtle than door-slamming but just as effective.

President Carter, declaring April "Fair Housing Month" to mark the act's 10th anniversary, said a week ago, "Ten years after passage of the national fair housing law, many Americans still experience discrimination when they attempt to purchase or rent or finance a home or an apartment for themselves or their family."

So, the fair housing struggle launched a decade ago continues, with pluses and minuses.

— An effort was made to move minorities from decaying cities into suburbs, but some wonder whether this was really what the urban poor wanted or needed.

— Suits were filed and won, but often the housing in question was rented or sold before the court decided. Today legislation is being considered to change this.

— Civil rights lawyers cite New Jersey, Massachusetts and Cleveland as places where minorities, business and real estate interests, and the government have joined to fight housing discrimination. In other areas, especially some northern cities, real estate brokers still steer blacks away from white areas and into black ones.

The key provisions of the Fair Housing Law banned discrimination in housing transactions, except single-family housing not sold through a broker and rental space in dwellings with four or fewer units. The Department of Housing and Urban Development was given responsibility for overseeing the law's enforcement.

From initial funding of $2 million and 100 staffers in 1969, HUD's Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity has grown to 457 staffers and a $15 million budget to handle some 3,500 discrimination complaints yearly, says Thomas Jenkins of the HUD housing office.

Civil rights activists like Tom Gale, the National Urban League's housing specialist, criticize HUD's "lack of aggressiveness" in shaping a concerted open housing policy.

But HUD has gotten agreements from housing industry groups like the National Association of Realtors and the National Association of Home Builders forbidding discrimination among its members.

And, says Jenkins, "we have an agreement that the federal government won't build facilities in communities that won't provide fair housing opportunities. That causes localities to be a bit more forward-looking."

Another weapon against discrimination resulted from a 1974 lawsuit that claimed HUD was undermining its own guidelines by placing almost all public-assisted housing in cities and hardly any in suburbs.

HUD was ordered to set up criteria that now make it harder to put public housing in cities and easier in suburbs. But this turned out to be less of a victory for minorities than it first seemed.

"In fact, the units that were built in suburbs were not in great demand by central city families because they lacked the supporting services to make families comfortable. And meanwhile, the central cities were losing needed new federal housing," says Gale.

Nonetheless, Gale and others feel that the biggest gains in open housing have been in the suburban placement of public housing. They say the private housing industry has made much slower progress in combating discrimination than have public agencies.

A spokesman for the National Association of Realtors says: "We are doing our part by spreading the word that housing discrimination is illegal. ... And the public now accepts that fair housing is the law of the land."

The spokeman noted that his group is a "self policing orgnization" and that HUD should work for "voluntary compliance within our industry."

As it now stands, HUD's work is based largely on persuasion and mediation. It can investigate discrimination complaints and take them to court — a process than can take a year or more, by which time the house or apartment is usually long since off the market. There is little HUD or anyone can do to stop a broker in the meantime from denying a home to a black, and quickly selling to a white.

But a drastic change in the 1968 act is being studied in Congress that would give HUD power to block a sale or rental if discrimination is suspected. The change would also extend the statute of limitation on a discrimination violation from six months to three years. HUD and civil rights groups back the change, but the real estate industry is likely to object because it would virtually end self-policing.

"It would bring HUD forcefully into the picture. As it now stands, it's a Pyrrhic victory to win a legal battle and lose the housing unit," says Gale.

Agency For Handicapped Under Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal office charged with protecting the civil rights of the handicapped is under investigation for possibly discriminating against deaf people.

Chuck Goldman, general counsel of the federal Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board, confirmed Monday his office is checking a complaint against the Office for Civil Rights in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The complaint charges that HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. and civil rights director David Tatel have failed to provide equipment for the deaf to communicate with the civil rights office by telephone.

The complaint was filed by the National Association of the Deaf and Charles Crowe, a Morganton, N.C., deaf man.

Crowe went to the Office for Civil Rights more than a year ago to complain about a school for the deaf in North Carolina.

The civil rights office wrote Crowe, asking him "to call collect on the telephone to talk about his case," the complaint said. "However, OCR had no telecommunication device for deaf people to receive the deaf man's call."

Deaf people can hook up a teletype machine to a standard telephone line and send printed messages to an office with similar equipment. The office can send return messages.

Lou Mathis, a spokesman for the Office for Civil Rights, said the office has been trying for "almost a year" to purchase the teletypes for its Washington and 10 regional offices. But he said procedural problems within HEW have held up the order.

Marc P. Charmatz, attorney for the National Association of the Deaf Legal Defense Fund, said the lack of such equipment was a barrier to communication that prevented deaf people from using federal facilities.

The Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board was established to ensure that federally financed facilities built or remodeled since 1968 are accessible to the handicapped.

Califano is chairman of the board, but Goldman said he will not be permitted to participate in the case because he and his agency are subjects of the complaint. The board includes eight other department heads.

The barriers board has not cited any federal agencies for failure to have the teletypes. The board only acts on complaints, and this was the first protest of its kind received since the agency was formed more that a year ago.

Federal agencies serving the nation's estimated 35 million handicapped and two million deaf people have several ways of communicating with citizens. For instance, some agencies employ staffers trained in sign language and others use written correspondence.

A spokesman for the barriers board, Larry Allison, said the agency has a teletype machine and one of its primary users is a deaf attorney assigned to investigate the case against the civil rights office.

Goldman, the counsel, said the board is empowered to investigate and punish cases in which physical or other obstacles prevent the handicapped from using federal facilities. There are few precedents to determine limits of its authority.

Standards Hike Cost Of Cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government regulations add $666 to the average cost of an automobile and tack on $1,500 to $2,500 to the price of a new home, a new study says.

And growing government regulation "albeit unintentionally, can have strongly adverse effects on employment. The minimum wage law has priced hundreds of thousands of people out of labor markets. ..." said the report by Murray Weidenbaum.

Weidenbaum, a professor at Washington University of St. Louis, prepared the study for the congressional Joint Economic Committee. It was released Monday by Sen. Lloyd Bensten, D-Texas.

"Government regulation literally has become a major growth industry, an industry supported by the taxpayer," Weidenbaum said.

Weidenbaum predicted "there is likely to be more and not less government intervention in internal business decision making" in the future.

New Directory May Include 'Blue Pages'

By The Associated Press

Telephone company officials are considering changes in future directories to separate residential and business listings and to provide new "blue pages" for governmental and school offices to make them easier to find.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has been experimenting for more than a year with a new directory, which could be put into effect in the near future.

Government, school listings and some street references form the basis for a new blue pages section, making it easier to locate city, county, state or federal offices in the experimental book.

The traditional white pages are divided into two sections in the newest directories — residential numbers and business numbers — with the new blue pages separating the two sections.

Southwestern Bell officials said the residential listings are being further streamlined in the experimental directory with what they call surname suppression. Rather than printing the name Smith for every Smith listing, the new directory lists last names only once, in capital letters, and then indents listings under that name in smaller type.

Company officials said the skyrocketing cost of paper is one of the reasons the change is being pursued. Surname suppression, they said, allows the company to print more names on a page without sacrificing convenience and legibility.

CONTEMPORARY 2 Story
Our opinion is that you will LOVE this 2 story contemporary home with a blush of conservatism. Master BR on the ground floor, separate powder room, superb dining area, lovely den-living that is complimented by a handsome fireplace and beautiful staircase. Upstairs there are two bedrooms (terrific view) and a semi-pullman bath. Summer fun is yours on a 22x12 covered and protected patio. Price 46,950.

THANK GOODNESS
for owners like this! Moving to a larger home and leaving a 1843 sq. ft. home in an oustanding mature area for those of us that like established additions. 3 BR, living room combined with the dining room, 26x20 beamed & carpeted den that has knotty pine paneling and a serving window, built-in Hutch, 2 baths & 2 car garage and very affordable and nice.

A LEFT — RIGHT HOUSE
Curved streets make it slow moving to get to. But WOW for pleasant living and safety for the kids. Extremely nice 3 BR with a living room that has an attractive wrought iron separative for pleasant dining. Refrigerated air, 2 car garage and a very pretty color format. AND BEST OF ALL this home is only 28,500. The loan established & the equity is $6848.00 We believe this is one-if not the most reasonable-equity in our city. Check this home $6848 EQUITY.

Coach 'Kidnapped' To Raise Funds

To gain publicity for their fund-raising drive, Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity staged a mock kidnapping Monday of Texas Tech football coach Rex Dockery, demanding as "ransom," the sale of $3,000 worth of tickets to raise money for the Texas Boys Ranch.

Dockery was spirited away in a helicopter after eight fraternity members nabbed him while he sat drinking coffee with Texas Tech President Cecil Mackey in the University Center.

A "ransom note," left with Dr. Mackey, was read aloud to about 150 students who gathered to watch the stunt. The note demanded the sum of $3,000 in tickets be sold to benefit the Boys Ranch.

The fraternity is attempting to raise money to buy a refrigerated food storage locker for the Boys Ranch. Tickets are $1 and can be purchased from any Lambda Chi Alpha member, at the University Center or by calling the fraternity.

The individual or organization buying the most tickets will be honored Friday and awarded an all-expense paid evening in Dallas. A plaque naming the largest contributor to the project also will be erected at the Boys Ranch.

Fraternity spokesman Thomas Morris said about $50 in tickets were sold Monday afternoon immediately after Dockery was whisked away, and other fraternities and civic organizations will be asked to purchase tickets this week.

New York Opera To Raise Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices are going up at the New York City Opera, which prides itself on how much less it costs than the Metropolitan Opera next door.

John S. Samuels III, chairman of the board, said "constantly rising costs" have forced it to raise some prices.

Top prices will go up from $12.50 to $16. At the Met, they will be $35.

The City Opera's fall season will open with a special two-week run of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta." There will be a new productions of Giordano's "Andrea Chenier."

Monterey, LHS Set For 'Typical' Showdown

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Two real opposites, emotional Lubbock High and unemotional Monterey, attract each other today in Lowrey Field for the District 4-AAAA baseball lead.

The rah-rah gang of coach Vince Buffamonte (1-1 and 12-5) and the placid people of coach Bobby Moegle (4-0 and 14-4) shake hands and come out swinging at 2:30 p.m. If either team sweeps the twin bill, it gains an enviable position in the first-half race. If the teams split the doubleheader, the race may go down to the final game.

The two teams are opposites because of the drastic difference in their tradition and approach to the game. Yet each coach has turned his baseball camp into a respected power in recent years.

Moegle's teams have won 16 of 18 district titles. His Monterey clubs have won two state championships and his teams reflect the calm manner which he displays in a game.

"I'm not an emotional person and I don't ask the kids to be something I'm not. I don't think you can be emotional every day and be effective. When you try to stay peaked, you'll have a mental lapse on some days and you can't perform. So the emotion isn't a part of our philosophy," the MHS coach said.

Meanwhile, Buffamonte ended Moegle's string of nine straight district titles when LHS grabbed the crown in 1976 and if the third-year coach doesn't want to see emotion, he will "go to see a tennis match."

"They (Monterey) have exactly the opposite approach to ours. We get excited when we see a kid take a good drink of water. We try to play every game like it's our last one. I think the fans enjoy seeing the guys play with emotion. It shows everybody you enjoy the game," Buffamonte said.

Buffamonte thinks the fans will enjoy today's games which he predicts will be "typical, Lubbock High-Monterey games with good hitting, good pitching and a lot of excitement."

The Lubbock coach feels his Westerners are the team to beat because "I always think that way." Meanwhile, the more relaxed Monterey mentor says "I don't know who the team to beat is until you get through playing."

The two coaches probably even differ in the area of mutual respect, too. In measuring his respect for Buffamonte, Moegle replied with a blunt "no comment." However, the more relaxed Buffamonte praised his counterpart.

"We get after it during the heat of a game but he's a great coach," Buffamonte said. "He gets good material and he makes them better because he knows his stuff. I've never met a kid from Monterey who didn't know his stuff, too, and that includes (LHS outfielders Terry) Brady and (Jamie) Greene."

Brady and Greene, both juniors, started their sophomore baseball seasons at Monterey. Brady transferred to LHS after the first quarter of this school year while Greene left Monterey's JV squad last season. A third LHS starter, senior catcher Ernest Rodriguez, never played in his sophomore year at Monterey and played for the LHS JV last year.

While none of trio developed into stars at Monterey, each aided the Lubbock High program.

"They're about the only ones we haven't had trouble with," the LHS coach joked. "I think if Terry and Jamie have a problem, it's trying to impress us more than they need to.

"The two coaching situations are entirely different. Bobby has different kinds of problems than I have and I have different ones than he has. I never have to worry about too many players in my program while he probably has so many in his that he has to make decisions on them."

One of Moegle's easiest decisions concerns the selection of his starting pitchers, Ron Reeves (7-0) and Derek Hatfield (5-3). Lubbock will start Andy Vasquez (1-0) and Abel Cardenas (7-2) with regular David Rush (4-3) getting a rest.

CORONADO-HEREFORD

Meanwhile at Hereford, Coronado (0-2 and 6-11) hopes to even its league record against the Herd (0-4 and 6-9). Chris Hill (3-4) and Kevin Bunch (2-4) are Hereford's top starters while CHS coach John Dudley plans to pitch Gene Segrest (1-3) in the first game and either Russell Johnson (2-2) or Jim Wells (1-0) in the nightcap.

Outfielder Ricky Powell was hospitalized Sunday and missed Monday's workout. So the junior appears doubtful for today's 2:30 p.m. twin bill.

Oliver, Zisk Spark Rangers Past NY

By The Associated Press

He wears "0" on his back because he feels he is starting his major league career from scratch.

He hits, he runs the basepaths like a whippet and he catches the ball in left field like nobody the Texas Rangers have ever had before.

"This is a player's dream," Al Oliver said Monday night after the Rangers had sent the New York Yankees packing with a 5-2 victory on a nationally televised "Beat The Yankee Hankee Night."

Oliver spent 10 years with Pittsburgh in the National League but never felt appreciated.

"Did you hear that ovation I got for that catch I made?" asked Oliver. "This is such a great atmosphere here — to be appreciated like that. My season is complete now even if I don't get another hit all season."

Oliver collected two hits off Yankee starter and loser Dick Tidrow, 0-1, who lost the first game of his career to the Rangers after seven victories.

But it was Oliver's tremendous catch of a long drive by Mickey Rivers that brought the biggest accolades of the night from the shivering 14,299 fans, many of whom were waving "Beat the Yankee" hankies handed out as they entered the ballpark. Although Bucky Dent scored on the sacrifice fly, it kept the Yanks away from a big inning.

"He's an All-Star outfielder besides being a bonafide .300 hitter," Ranger Manager Bill Hunter said of the hustling Oliver.

Richie Zisk, another of Ranger owner Brad Corbett's million-dollar off-season acquisitions, drilled a two-run homer to follow Oliver's double in the sixth inning and chase Tidrow.

"It's a great RBI position batting fourth behind a guy like Oliver," Zisk said. "You have a .300 hitter in Mike Hargrove leading off; then you have Bert Campaneris, who leads the major leagues in sacrifice bunts."

Dock Ellis, 1-0, dazzled the hard-hitting Yanks on one hit over the first five innings and yielded only an unearned run before his shoulder tightened.

"It should be okay," Ellis said later in the dressing room. "It has been bothering me some since spring training."

Roger Moret, who threatened last week to jump the team after an argument with a teammate, went the final four innings to gain a save, permitting one run on five hits.

"I have got to stay here now. I'm happy now," Moret said after the Rangers had taken two games in the three-game series from the world champions.

"I think he (Ellis) probably hurt his arm throwing a spitter," said Graig Nettles. "He was going to his mouth a lot. Not just the time they called it."

Nettles was awarded first base on a walk when Ellis stepped on the mound, then went to his mouth on a full count.

"He (Ellis) mixed in a few that looked a little funny. I don't blame him. I'd throw a spitter every pitch if I was a pitcher," added Nettles. "The umpires don't call it."

Ashe Seeking Top 20 Berth

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. Will you give your opinion about Arthur Ashe making it back into the top rank of tennis players? Also, is Ashe in any kind of business that he can rely on after his career is over?
—Cary Washington, Nashville, Tenn.

A. Ashe, 35 this year, does not expect to make it back to the absolute top (he was No. 1 in the world only three years ago) after recovering from heel surgery, but he hopes to make it back to the top 20. He's currently No. 78.

Ashe is considering entering politics in New York state. Tennis writer Norman Arey was with him in Atlanta recently when Ashe addressed 750 black students and came on strong: "Young black people today expect easy work and high pay. The voting age in most states is 18, but you people aren't voting. The gross national product for blacks in 1977 was $77.7 billion. What do you think $7.5 billion of that went for? Liquor. That's a lot of partying. It's a waste."

Q. What are the salaries of the umpires for the baseball playoffs and the World Series? Are they picked for ability or for seniority? Who selects them?
—Bill McClone, Port Ryan, Ill.

A. The umps get $6,000 for working a playoff series, $10,000 for the World Series. The Series fees rise to $11,000 each this year, then to $11,500 and $12,000 the next two years.

The umpires are supposedly chosen on ability by the presidents of each league on advice of their chiefs of umpires.

Q. Can you tell me the first team to go South for spring training?
—Donny Blanchard, St. Louis

A. The boys at Seymour Siwoff's office in New York, where all baseball records are kept, kicked this around for us and came up with the Chicago White Sox. Charles Comiskey took his club to Hot Springs, Ark., in 1910. If anyone in the readership knows of an earlier effort, please advise.

Q. Does the home team have an actual advantage in baseball because of the last-of-ninth turn at bat? If so, how much of an advantage is it?
—Doyle Kreeger, Detroit

A. The home team has an edge, but it's a slight 53 percent over the full season. Home teams have it better in other sports: 58 percent in the NFL, 60 percent in college football and 64 percent in hockey. For the NBA basketball playoffs over the past 25 years, the advantage is a whopping 67 percent.

Q. Will any of Secretariat's foals qualify for the Kentucky Derby this year?
—Al Thomason, West Palm Beach Fla.

A. That remains to be seen, but six have been nominated — Acratariat, Short Chute, Cold Reception, Sacrebleau, Syntariat and Seclusive.

Reds, LA Making Shambles Of Astros

By The Associated Press

Both the Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers know the value of a hot start in a pennant race and are making the most of their early games in the 1978 baseball season.

They're also making a shambles of the Houston Astros.

The Reds started off the season in high style by beating Houston four straight games. Then on Monday night, the Dodgers also pumped up their record to 4-0 by whipping the beleagured Astros 5-2.

The repeated beatings have left no psychological marks on the Houston team, according to Manager Bill Virdon, but they have left the National League's West Division whipping boys with a sorry 0-5 record, the worst in baseball.

"The last time I was with a team that had a start like this was my last year at Pittsburgh when we started with a 4-22 record," Virdon said. "But we finished third in a 10-team league. I'm not that worried — yet."

"We know the Reds are getting off to a good start and that's why we're giving it all we've got," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey. "The key right now for us is to get off to a quick start and stay with the Reds."

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals walloped the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-2, the Atlanta Braves edged the San Diego Padres 8-7 and the New York Mets blanked the Chicago Cubs 6-0.

Ron Cey tagged a solo home run and run-scoring single to highlight the Dodger victory. Cey led off the second inning with his first homer of the season to stake Doug Rau to an early 1-0 lead and later belted a run-scoring single in the seventh to put the Dodgers in control at 3-1.

Cardinals 11, Pirates 2

Mike Tyson drove in four runs, three with a home run that capped a six-run burst in the first inning, to help St. Louis whip Pittsburgh in a rain-delayed Cardinals' home opener.

Keith Hernandez stroked four hits for the Cardinals and drove in two runs. His RBI were matched by Gerry Morales and Ted Simmons in a 14-hit St. Louis attack.

"We can score," said Simmons. "If we put it together like we did tonight, we're going to be a tough club."

Braves 8, Padres 7

Darrel Chaney's two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning gave Atlanta a comeback victory over San Diego. The victory was Atlanta's first of the season and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Chaney's homer off reliever Bob Shirley followed Barry Bonnell's two-out single to center field. The Braves had trailed 5-0 in the third inning after San Diego's Dave Winfield drove in four runs with a two-run homer and a two-run single.

"Anytime I hit one out, it's got to be a mistake," said Chaney, normally not known for his power hitting. "The pitch had to be up. I couldn't hit one out if it wasn't up. When I saw the umpire signal 'home run' I was excited. I had reason to be. I don't hit many home runs to win games."

Mets 6, Cubs 0

Craig Swan pitched a five-hitter and Steve Henderson and Ken Henderson each drove in three runs to lead New York over Chicago.

The Mets got two runs off Dennis Lamp in the fourth inning when Tim Foli, Steve Henderson and Ken Henderson each doubled. They wrapped it up in the eighth against reliever Paul Reuschel, scoring four runs when Foli singled, Steve Henderson hit his third homer of the year, Ed Kranepool singled and Ken Henderson hit his first homer.

Swan, making his first appearance of the season, allowed only two Cubs to reach second base.

HIGHLIGHTS

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — Milwaukee's Larry Hisle, who blasted two home runs and drove in seven runs last week, was named the American League's Player of the Week. Hisle had a .385 batting average in helping Milwaukee sweep a three-game series with the Baltimore Orioles.

Pitcher Larry Christensen of the Philadelphia Phillies, who shut out St.Louis 7-0 last week and drove in four runs with a homer and a single, received the honors in the National League.

HARNESS RACING

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — No No Yankee, the champion 2-year-old pacer of 1977, was syndicated for $2.5 million, a record for a 3-year-old standardbred. The syndication was put together by Alan Leavitt, Paul Fontaine, the original owner, will continue as a member of the syndicate and Walter Ross will remain as trainer and driver. No No Yankee is a prime contender for the Triple Crown of pacing.

HOCKEY

TORONTO — Three non-playing executives have been elected — one posthumously — to the Hockey Hall of Fame's builder category, raising the total number of builders in the Hall to 59. The inductees are the late J.P. Bickell, founding president of Maple Leaf Gardens; Sam Pollock, vice president and general manager of the Montreal Canadiens and W. Thayer Tutt, president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States.

Bickell, who along with Conn Smythe was instrumental in organizing the Toronto Maple Leafs, died Aug. 22, 1951. Under Pollock's 13 years of managing, the Canadiens have won eight Stanley Cups. Tutt became the second president of the AHA of the U.S. in 1974.

GENERAL

MEXICO CITY — Los Angeles city officials and International Olympic Committee President Lord Killanin met secretly to try settle a growing dispute over the organization of the 1984 Summer Olympics. However, IOC officials and other sources were pessimistic — at least for the time being — that the differences will be settled. Los Angeles is the only bidder to host the Games and the IOC must decide to accept or reject the city's offer at its next meeting in Athens May 17-18. Knowledgeable sources say Mexico City, Munich and Montreal are willing to step in with bids if the Los Angeles deal falls through.

HORSE RACING

BALTIMORE — Turn the Guns, $8, posted a half length victory over Gray Frost in the $14,000 Alma North Purse at Pimlico Race Course.

RRC Banquet Tickets On Sale

Tickets are now on sale and reservations are being accepted for next Tuesday's Red Raider Club-sponsored banquet to honor Tech men's athletes.

Speaker for the program will be longtime LSU head football coach Charlie McClenton.

The program will begin at 6:30 p.m. in Lubbock Coliseum, and RRC officials promise it will be completed by 8:30.

Ticket prices are $6 and may be obtained by contacting the RRC office, 762-8680. Deadline is Saturday for reserving a spot in the food line. The banquet is open to any Tech fan and not just Red Raider Club members.

Also, Tech athletes in the various sports are recognized for outstanding achievement.

Girls City Crowns To Be Decided

Meadowbrook Golf Shop will battle Solartech and Furr's Cafeteria will take on Southwest Rotary tonight in the championship battles of the Lubbock Girls Basketball League.

The championship games will be held tonight at Atkins Junior High, the Furr's-SW Rotary game to begin at 6:30 p.m. and the other contest to follow at 7:45.

Meadowbrook girls defeated Cleveland Athletic Supply 26-14 in one semifinal game, and Solartech nipped Gold Award Agents 31-28 in the other contest. The game between the winners tonight will decide the seventh-eighth grade championship.

EHS, DHS Gear For Loop Meet

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Without even looking at a calender, it's easy to determine that the District 3-AAA track meet is just around turn No. 2.

How? Just look take a look at last weekend's cinder results, particularly Estacado's and Dunbar's. Each week the city's two AAA teams have posted better and better times.

And last weekend at the Brownfield meet that was no exception as the Matadors won the title and the Panthers finished third.

"We've been gearing everything toward the district meet," said Estacado boss Percy Hines. "That's what the season is all about, running well at district."

Hines, who went as far as to say that the Matadors have an "excellent chance" of winning the loop title in two weeks, said they performed well at Brownfield.

"I didn't think we could win the meet because of the extra relay races they had," Hines said. "But we had some surprises that scored some points and that helped us out."

One of the surprises, Hines said, was the way Todd Parsons stepped into 440 relay team and "held his own." Parsons replaced sprinter Kenzie Burrell on the team after Burrell was declared ineligible because of grade problems.

According to the EHS coach, Burrell, who has already run a 9.8 100-yard dash this season, may be lost for the season.

"I hate to think negative thoughts," Hines said, "but it looks like we'll have to go with other people in Kenzie's place."

Burrell will miss his third straight meet this weekend when the Matadors journey to Lamesa.

"We got good performances out of Freddie (Ivory) again, although he was hurt, and our mile relay," Hines explained.

Ivory, the city's top long jumper, leaped 21-10½ which is far below his Hub-leading 23-1. Estacado's mile relay registered 3:26.0, a second faster than it's previous best.

During the mile relay, the Matadors got sterling performances out of Preston Davis (50.0) and Todd Moore (50.3). Hines predicted the duo would break the 50-second barrier this week.

"We still need to find one more good leg on the mile relay," Hines said. "If we can do that, then we might be able to go somewhere."

Also Billy Don Hardaway, primarily a shot and discus man during his high school stint, placed a surprising second in the long jump. Hardaway, an all-state basketball player as well as a state meet performer the last two years, jumped 21-8¼, a little more than two inches off the mark set by Ivory.

"Competely out of the blue, Wayne (Williams) came up to me and asked me if he could run the half," Ford explained. "He had been our fifth quarter-miler, and he just wanted to compete. So we put him in, told him how to run the race and you can see what he did."

Ford said he felt Hardaway always had the possiblity of turning into a good long jumper.

"He (Hardaway) saw the distances they were jumping at the City Meet so he thought he would give it a try," Ford said. "So I went down and got him a size 13 and let him go."

In a pair of shoes designed for the shot put, Hardaway leaped 21-2. "It was unbelieveable," Ford said.

However, Dunbar also lost one of its top sprinters last week when Kenneth James, a state competitor last year, was suspended from the team for disciplinary reasons.

Raiders Fall

The University of Texas men's tennis team blanked Texas Tech 9-0 Monday afternoon in Southwest Conference net action at the Tech courts, dropping the Raider's loop mark to 0-7.

Tech will finish the regular season April 14 when it travels to Arkansas from a bout with the Hogs.

Oakland Nudges Mariners 1-0 In Home Opener

ed his batterymate, saying, "Dock doesn't have a spitter. I won't mention any names, but I have caught some other guys who threw the spitter. My glove showed it last year."

Sundberg put his mitt on display Monday night and said, "There's nothing in there . . . before, it's been known to have bug spots in it."

Detroit comes to town tonight with Doc Medich of Texas facing the Tigers' Dave Rozema.

A's 1, Mariners 0

Rookie John Johnson and reliever Dave Heaverlo combined on a three-hitter in the A's home opener that drew an unexpectedly good turnout of 17,283. The A's, who seemed destined for a move to Denver until a week ago, were cheered enthusiastically by the crowd, which was 5,000 more than last year's home opener.

Because few of the fans had bought tickets in advance, many were delayed by long lines outside the stadium and missed the first inning. A's owner Charles O. Finley issued an apology through the public address announcer.

Royals 4, Orioles 2

Al Cowens drove in three runs with a pair of triples and Paul Splittorff checked Baltimore on seven hits through 81-3 innings. Cowens tagged Nelson Briles for a two-run triple in the third inning and tripled again in the eighth.

Angels 3, Twins 0

Don Baylor's two-run homer in the seventh inning following Joe Rudi's double broke up a scoreless duel between Ken Brett and Dave Goltz. Brett scattered five hits, walked two and struck out the same number and was helped by a pair of brilliant fielding plays by second baseman Bobby Grich.

Indians 5, Red Sox 4

Andre Thornton's three-run homer helped Cleveland to an early 4-0 lead but the Indians won it in the nilnth on Buddy Bell's single, an error by Boston second baseman Jerry Remy and Ron Pruitt's single. Carlton Fisk's homer off former batterymate Mike Paxton drew Boston even in the sixth, but Paxton allowed only a fluke single from then until the ninth, when he gave way to Jim Kern.

Chaparrals Face Challenge Against H-SU Nine

ABILENE (Special) — "The easy part of our schedule is over," Lubbock Christian College coach Larry Hays commented Monday, thinking about today's twin bill against Hardin-Simmons.

"It'll be a challenge for us just to have our minds on the game today. I'm afraid we'll be thinking about the weekend conference series with Midwestern."

Hays did indicate he was pleased with the split with Texas Wesleyan last weekend which left the Chaps tied at 8-4 with the Rams for the Texoma Conference lead. "Anytime you face the No. 7 team in the nation on the road and get a split, you're pleased. I am disappointed that we didn't win the second game Friday, though, because I felt we had it won."

Today's 1:30 p.m. meeting against the Cowboys promises to be as exciting as the first game, a 10-9 LCC win in the Abilene Intercollegiate Tournament over Spring Break.

H-SU won two of three games from Cameron State on the road last weekend and now stands 25-15. The 'Pokes will send Kenneth McLeod (6-3, 3.75 ERA) and Don Lawson (5-4, 5.81) against the Chaps today.

Hays will counter with John Ross (4-1, 5.21) and either Mickey Crump (2-1, 5.52) or Dan Sanders (0-0, 5.93).

LCC is currently leading the NAIA in hitting with a .355 team norm. H-SU owns a 291 team average with six regulars above .300, including left fielder Rusty Hamrick (.394) and centerfielder Alan Lakatta (.346 with team-high 36 RBIs). First baseman Phillip Tippen has eight homers this year.

The Cowboys beat Cameron 7-6 and 10-0 and lost 11-4 last weekend.

Tim Leslie, who tops the nation in hits (58), RBIs (59) and HRs (15), leads the Chaps with a .463 average, but that's too low to be listed among the Top 20.

The Chaps hold an 11-4 advantage over H-SU in a series that dates back to 1972, but neither team has managed to win more than three games in a year.

LCC Keeps Top District Listing

Lubbock Christian retained the No. 1 position in the weekly District VIII baseball poll thanks to that doubleheader sweep Saturday in Fort Worth against Texas Wesleyan.

The Chaps are now 32-11 on the year and lead TWC, which is 32-16-2.

The University of Dallas, which had a 10-game winning streak snapped by Pan American Saturday, moved from fourth to third, and the Crusaders now stand 20-16.

Jarvis Christian, which has won nine of its last 12, leaped from eighth to fourth and now stands 17-15-1. Wiley (15-13) moved up one place to fifth, Midwestern (13-14) fell three spots to sixth, Dallas Baptist tumbled two berths to seventh with a 14-18-1 ledger, Paul Quinn (15-20) fell a notch to eighth and LeTourneau (8-6) remained ninth.

Austin College (6-19), Bishop (6-13) and Texas College (1-14) round out the poll.

LCC and TWC currently share the Texoma Conference lead with 8-4 marks, followed by Midwestern at 5-7 and DBC at 3-9. Jarvis and Paul Quinn share the South Zone lead with 3-1 marks. UD and Austin are both 2-0 in Central Zone play and Wiley stands 4-1.

Winners of the Texoma Conference and each zone automatically qualify for the district tournament to be held May 7-10 at Arlington. Three at-large teams will be selected on the basis of the rankings.

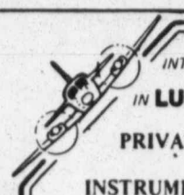

Then, the top two-ranked teams will receive first-round byes, with the No. 3 rated team facing No. 6, and No. 4 playing No. 5 in an elimination game. After that, the meet reverts to a double elimiation format.

Winner here advances to the Area II Tournament, which will be held at Tucson, Georgetown or Lubbock May 17-19.

CONTINENTAL CHICKENFEED™ FARES.
No restrictions and no lower fares anywhere we fly.

Chickenfeed Fares are simple. There are no lower fares anywhere we fly. You'll save up to 69% to cities in Texas. And at least 40% on weekdays, 30% on weekends to our other mainland cities.

They're this pure. There are no restrictions of any kind. No buying your ticket a month in advance. No minimum stays. No maximum stays. Fly one way or round trip. And get a full refund if you cancel.

There are no fairer fares. We don't treat a Chickenfeed passenger foully. Your reservation has the same guarantees as regular Coach. Or First Class, for that matter.

We've taken off all restrictions. It's your turn to take off. Call your Travel Agent or Continental at 763-8031. Ask for the Chickenfeed Fare. Then make tracks for somewhere nice.

Sample One Way Fares Lubbock to:	Regular Coach Fare	Chickenfeed Fare	Percentage Savings
Dallas/Ft. Worth	$48	$15*	69%
El Paso	49	15*	69%
Los Angeles	109	65	40%

*Intra Texas Chickenfeed Fares apply now between 7:00 PM and 6:30 AM on weekdays, plus all day Saturday and Sunday; fares slightly higher all other times. Chickenfeed Fares effective May 15. Weekdays (Monday-Thursday); weekends (Friday-Sunday). Fares shown above include a 3% general fare increase on file by all carriers for effectiveness May 1, 1978. Subject to CAB approval.

We really move our tail for you.
