DPS will pay Smiths for fatal crash

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

A settlement between the Texas Department of Public Safety and the family of a Pampa woman killed in a collision involving a DPS patrol car was sealed by approval of the attorney general.

However, the family's search for justice is not yet over, according to the plaintiffs' attorney.

Assistant Attorney General Adrian Young, who represented the DPS in the suit filed by the victim's husband, William Arnold Smith, and other family members, signed the $375,000 settlement order and returned it to the Gray County district clerk's office this week.

The Smiths filed a $4.71 million civil suit against the DPS and Trooper Johnny Garth Carter in March 1985, three months after Candace Ketchum Smith, then 35, died from injuries sustained in a collision involving Carter's patrol car at 17th and Hobart. Smith and his daughter Andra, 13 at the time, and Trooper Carter were injured in the accident.

The suit claimed that Carter used "excessive force" in pursuit of two speeders north on Hobart, causing the collision, and that the patrol car, with grill-mounted flashing lights, was "inherently defective and dangerous" and not suited for use in city traffic.

The DPS maintained that Mrs. Smith, who was driving the Smith vehicle, made a left turn into the path of the patrol car in pursuit.

However, the Smiths, in sworn depositions, denied that Mrs. Smith would have had any reason to turn east because the family members were traveling in a southerly direction, to a church hayride in south Pampa.

Although Young's signature ends the family's suit against Carter and the DPS, Robert Garner of Amarillo, the Smiths attorney, said the family is not through with the case.

He said he plans to file suit in federal court in Amarillo against the manufacturer of the sirens and flashing lights on the patrol unit and possibly against Ford Motor Co., the maker of the DPS car, prior to Dec. 21, when he said the statute of limitations will expire.

"I'm sure we're going to sue the manufacturer of the lights and sirens," Garner said. "Our claim is that these are defective and not suitable for in-town use."

The settlement says the Smiths "fully intend" to pursue claims against those it feels contributed to and caused the collision.

"This release is not intended to release any other person, firm or corporation except the Texas Department of Public Safety and Johnny Garth Carter," it reads.

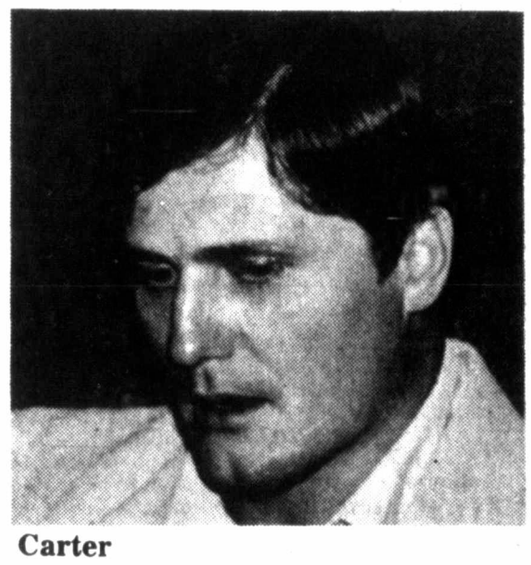

Garner said $350,000 of the settlement will come from the department's general fund, while the remaining $25,000 will be paid by Trooper Carter's insurance company.

William Smith will receive $228,000, of which $140,000 will go to pay his attorneys. Smith will also receive an additional $6,000 to pay his insurance company for net damages to the Smith's vehicle.

Mrs. Smith's father, Richard W. Ketchum, of Pineville, Ore., will receive $10,000.

The remaining $131,000 will be paid to Western National Life Insurance Co. of Amarillo to purch-

Taxes, budget cuts, horse racing, back patting, emerge from session

AUSTIN (AP) — In eight weeks of special session lawmaking, state legislators raised taxes, cut some spending, fell about $680 million short of balancing the budget and passed a mixed batch of other bills.

Left in their wake as the House and Senate adjourned Tuesday were measures that would do everything from moving the 1988 primary elections to letting voters decide whether to legalize horse race gambling.

Gov. Mark White, who convened special sessions Aug. 6 and again Sept. 8 to deal with a revenue shortfall brought on by falling oil prices, said Tuesday he was delighted with the outcome.

The 53 days of lawmaking, White said, "may be the most successful session we've seen in a number of years, and I'm very proud in the leadership of the House and Senate."

Key accomplishments, legislative leaders said, were actions taken to solve the state's financial crunch.

Lawmakers passed an $872 million increase in the sales and gasoline taxes, which White has indicated he will sign into law.

They also approved $582 million in spending cuts as another key move aimed at making up the estimated $2.8 billion state budget shortfall.

However, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee said that action still left them about $680 million short of eliminating the total projected deficit.

Here, in brief, are summaries of major legislation passed during the two special sessions:

TAXES

The $872 million, temporary tax package would raise the sales tax from 4⅛ percent to 5¼ percent, and add 5 cents to the dime-per-gallon gasoline tax. Both would take effect Jan. 1 and expire on Aug. 31.

Also included is a provision to allow counties and cities not now collecting a transit tax to add a half-penny to their local sales taxes to provide property tax relief.

SPENDING CUTS

After more than 400 hours of negotiations, often behind closed doors, House and Senate negotiators agreed on a spending-cut plan that to trim the state budget by $582 million, eliminate nearly 2,000 state jobs and wipe out a 3 percent state employee pay raise scheduled for 1987.

Woman claims hospital substituted dead monkey for child's remains

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A woman says she just wants to know "where our baby's body is" after a hospital lost the remains of her stillborn child and insisted a dead monkey was the human fetus.

Constance Lowder, 37, of suburban Wexford, and her fiance, Wilbur Bergman, said Mercy Hospital never explained how it lost the body and confused the remains with a monkey fetus wrapped in linen and found at a laundry service used by the hospital.

"They treated me really shamefully, very unprofessionally. ... No one of any authority ever tried to contact me," Ms. Lowder said Tuesday.

"I would just like to know where our baby's body is. ... Someone has to give me some answers," she said.

"They told her they lost the baby, then they come up with a monkey," Ms. Lowder's lawyer, Foster Stewart, said of hospital officials. "The next thing they'll tell her is she had a monkey."

Mercy spokeswoman Mary Donnelly said that while the hospital cannot explain how the monkey remains ended up in the laundry, "several institutions in the Pittsburgh area, who use a common laundry facility, may be involved in research using monkeys."

Allegheny County Coroner Joshua Perper said Tuesday that Pittsburgh police were investigating the discovery of the monkey and the disappearance of the infant's remains.

"There are important public health questions that have to be resolved," Perper said, indicating he was concerned about the possibility of exposing people to infection by mixing laundry from hospitals and research facilities.

Mercy still is trying to locate the remains of the fetus, Miss Donnelly said Tuesday. She would not comment on Ms. Lowder's statements that the hospital treated her badly.

Ms. Lowder, in her sixth month of pregnancy, gave birth to the stillborn baby Aug. 5.

Four days later, she learned the hospital had lost the body.

"I went to the funeral home to make the arrangements and two women from Mercy were there. They informed me they couldn't find the body," she said.

On Aug. 8, Perper said, Mercy Hospital officials asked him to identify fetal remains that were found at the laundry used by Mercy.

Perper said he reported to hospital officials that the remains were those of a monkey.

But Sister Joanne Marie Andiorio, president and chief executive officer of Mercy, insisted in a Sept. 24 letter to Perper that "there are a number of facts and circumstances giving rise to our belief" the remains were those of Ms. Lowder's fetus.

It was only after Dr. J. Lawrence Angel at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington confirmed Perper's conclusion that Mercy officials agreed to stand by them, the coroner said.

War of nerves getting needed tranquilizers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union joined with the Reagan administration today in predicting that cuts in both sides' nuclear arsenals could come out of the meeting next week between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

For the United States, presidential chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said the two days of meetings "could lead to a better understanding and, perhaps, some give here and there in order to reach an agreement so we get some arms reductions."

For the Soviet Union, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said, "It's quite possible that we can have movement" on the missile question. "We want ... our leaders to put their heads together and to think big and to find some kind of direction to solve our problems."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, meanwhile, said Reagan had accepted Gorbachev's proposal for a two-day, informal meeting beginning Oct. 11 because "the name of the game here is to solve problems."

Noting that a range of issues will be discussed, Shultz, interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" program, said:

"We are in a position, I hope, to make some progress on these problems that I think all of us would want to see resolved if it's possible to do so."

Reagan and Gorbachev are also expected to discuss the U.S. order that 25 Soviet diplomats stationed at the United Nations be expelled.

The two world leaders probably will also set a date for their long-delayed formal summit meeting in Washington, an administration official said Tuesday night.

Regan, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," noted that the U.S. and Soviet officials engaged in pre-summit arms control talks in Geneva "can't reach agreement" but that Reagan and Gorbachev are expected to issue "instructions to their subordinates as to how to proceed in order to reach agreements in Geneva and elsewhere."

The presidential chief of staff said Gorbachev had proposed the meeting in Iceland "to get a better understanding of things that could be signed at a summit later here in the United States."

With the United States and the Soviet Union already edging closer to an accord to cut back their medium-range missiles in Europe, the Rekjavik sessions could accelerate the motion that Shultz said has marked arms control talks in Geneva.

"I think there are reasonable prospects," Shultz told reporters as he outlined his recent discussions with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze that led to freedom for Nicholas Daniloff.

Optimist Zone 1 Lt. Gov. James Davis, standing right, addresses the Pampa Optimist Club's installation banquet last week.

Optimists name new officers

The Pampa Optimist and Opti-Mrs. clubs installed officers for 1986-1987 and presented awards for the year during a recent banquet.

Top honors named at the Saturday banquet were Melvin Davis, Optimist of the Year, and Alicia Snelgrooes, Opti-Mrs. of the Year. Calvin Lacy was presented a life membership for his years of service to the Optimists.

Installing officers and directors for the two clubs was James Davis, Zone 1 lieutenant governor for 1986-1987. Davis also was presented with a plaque of appreciation as outgoing president.

New Optimist officers are Harley Knutson, president; Newt Secrest, first vice president; Jim Pepper, second vice president; Calvin-Lacy, secretary-treasurer; and James Davis, parliamentarian.

Directors are Bob Finney, Melvin Davis, Dean LaRue, Bill Kidwell, Kevin Davis and Robert Dixon Sr.

Lacy also was presented a plaque of appreciation for his prior service as secretary-treasurer.

New officers for the Opti-Mrs. are Berdena Richardson, president; Alicia Snelgrooes, first vice president; Betty McGuire, second vice president; Wanda Watson, secretary; Nelda Lancaster, treasurer; and May Davis, parliamentarian.

Directors are Mary Winton, Phylis LaRue, Robbie Pepper and Jerry Owens.

May Davis was presented a plaque of appreciation as outgoing president.

Optimist of the Month for August was Bill Kidwell.

Certificates of appreciation were presented to Waldon Haynes, building upkeep; Gib Winton, kitchen; Melvin Davis, equipment room; Knutson, Babe Ruth League; Don Powell, girls' softball league; and John Maguire, program chairman.

A certificate also was presented to Doug Kidwell for his assistance to the club.

Perfect Attendance Awards went to Gip Gibson, Dr. Nick Kadingo and Secrest, all charter members.

Others were Cliff Davenport, 27 years; Kenneth York, 20; Waldon Haynes, 19; Knutson, 17; Mickey White, 17; Winton, 17; Dixon, 16; Bill Kidwell, 16; Bill Dodd, 15; Lacy, 12; Jim Davis, 9; and Richard Wright, 7.

Two-year awards went to Kevin Davis, Finney, Melvin Wills and Chico Ramirez. Melvin Davis had one year perfect attendance.

John W. Warner served as master of ceremonies. Secrest introduced guests. Bill Kidwell led the Pledge of Allegiance and Finney delivered the invocation.

McLean discusses old bra factory, approves 1987 budget and tax rate

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

McLEAN — City council members are going to wait until their regular October meeting before they set rates for groups wanting to use the city's vacant bra factory.

Council members discussed a policy for using the old 27,500-square-foot factory Tuesday at their regular semi-monthly council meeting.

The city currently uses the vacant building for its monthly flea market, while the volunteer fire department recently moved into one end.

But council members want to open the building up to the public, as long as they don't lose money on the venture. Council members discussed setting a flat daily rental rate — about $50 — to cover insurance, electricity and gas. But they wondered whether a flat rate could cover such variable expenses as gas and electricity.

Council member Jerry Don Cook suggested charging the users for "expenses" (the amount of electricity and gas used), insurance, plus $25.

The council, which was lacking members Miro Pakan and Harold Fabian, tabled action on the building fee.

Now that the volunteer fire department has moved into the old factory, Bill Thomas, a paramedic with the McLean Area Ambulance Service, asked if the service can move its vehicles into the old fire station.

"The ambulance service wants three of the old fire department bays," he said, explaining that the two vehicles would take up two of the bays and allow more room for equipment and a meeting room. The council took no action.

Also on Tuesday, the council approved the city's $122,575 general budget, which includes a 3 percent city employee pay raise.

Due to what City Secretary Stella Lee called "a decrease in cost of products, materials and operations," the 1987 budget is about $2,825 lower than the city's 1986 budget. The council also gave a final reading to a tax rate of 27.9 cents per $100 valuation.

Council members were to have given city employees an across-the-board 10 percent salary increase, but they decided at their regular September meeting to hold the pay raise to 3 percent.

Few attend hearing on Ogallala Aquifer

LUBBOCK — Many were called, but few area residents chose to attend a hearing Tuesday on whether to designate the Ogallala Aquifer as a Critical Groundwater Area.

Sponsored by the Texas Water Commission, the Lubbock hearing was held to get public input on whether the aquifer, a massive underground ocean which reaches from the South Plains of Texas to Nebraska, should be designated a Critical Groundwater Area. If it is so desigated, then parts of the area within groundwater conservation districts, will be eligible for state water development funds.

The hearing was held in two sessions at the Lubbock Civic Center.

The TWC will conduct another hearing on the Ogallala issue at 7 p.m. Oct. 14 at the Texas A&M Research Center, 6500 W. Amarillo Blvd.

Andra Smith, who was badly injured in the crash, will receive $6,500 when she turns 18 and in the three subsequent years; $35,000 when she reaches 23; and $60,000 when she turns 28.

The family's youngest child, Tiffany, 5, will receive $6,000 at age 18 and the three succeeding birthdays, $25,000 at age 23 and $50,000 when she turns 28.

William Smith, who has since remarried and resides with his family in Broken Arrow, Okla., said that although no amount of money could replace the life of a wife and mother, he is satisfied with the outcome of the case. Tort liability laws limit what the family could have received to $500,000.

The DPS has denied any comment on the case but a statement in the settlement denies any liability on the part of the department or Carter.

"It is understood and agreed that this settlement is the compromise of a doubtful and disputed claim and the payments are not to be construed as an admission of liability on the part of the defendants, by whom liability is expressly denied," the statement reads.

UIL bill clears Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill which the sponsor says could eliminate conflict between judges at loggerheads over University Interscholastic League rules and lawsuits.

Sen. Kent Caperton's proposal requiring lawsuits against the UIL to be heard in Travis County courts survived six votes in the Senate on Tuesday and was sent to Gov. Mark White.

The House-approved bill was finally passed 22-8.

It appeared the bill had stalled but a motion by Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, who opposed the measure, revived it. Nevertheless, Brown, R-Lake Jackson, voted against the measure on final passage.

Such tactics are not unusual in the Senate as a courtesy to a bill sponsor when the sponsor obviously has a majority of the votes but not enough to suspend a particular rule.

Caperton, D-Bryan, said at the outset, "Let me hasten to point out this is not a UIL bill. This was not brought to me by them. I don't want to catch any of the particular baggage that would go with that. It was brought to my attention by certain coaches ... "

The UIL has been a controversial organization among legislators for years but has survived numerous challenges to its authority.

Caperton said the bill was originated by Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, who "is quite a fan of high school football."

The measure would transfer to Travis County (Austin) suits against the UIL or suits requiring interpretation of UIL rules governing high school extracurricular activities, including athletics.

Suits involving Travis County schools would be heard by visiting judges.

Caperton said judges under pressure of a local school district sign restraining orders, and then a competing team gets a judge in its community to sign a different restraining order, which results in a "true loggerhead situation."

Such restraining orders often apply to athletic eligibility and the outcome of athletic contests. This year, conflicting court orders delayed the Class 4A baseball semifinals for a week and had to be settled in the Texas Supreme Court.

"The cases really wreak havoc ... This (bill) will allow us to expeditiously handle disputes that invariably are going to arise about UIL (rule) interpretations," Caperton said.

Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, complained that the bill would "make my people come all way down here" to settle a dispute with the UIL.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said the bill "merely brings the UIL into conformity with other state agencies so that you don't have a divergence of opinion among eight or 10 district courts ... on questions of law."

Washington also asked if it was not true that suits against individual school districts would still be filed in the county where the district is located.

"That's correct," Caperton said.

Freddie Netherton, 5, severely handicapped since birth, takes his first steps into the arms of his teacher, Gail Hunter.

Dedicated parents, teachers lead handicapped boy to walk

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — They came running in from every room to see Freddie walk.

It was something long awaited. The 5½-year-old boy, a student in the Brownwood Independent School District's Early Childhood program, took his first steps last week.

Those three little steps brought tears to teacher Gail Hunter, as she watched him haltingly make his way to her outstretched arms.

"We call him 'Lover Boy,' " Ms. Hunter said, because the child shows his affection by often clasping his arms around her neck.

The rejoicing culminated years of patient encouragement from Freddie's parents, Fred and Jane Netherton, and the teachers at the Early Childhood center.

"When Freddie was born they did not give us much hope that he would ever be able to do anything — certainly not walk or talk," Mrs. Netherton said.

At birth, Freddie weighed three pounds, 12 ounces. He stayed in the hospital for four months. Freddie did not progress as other babies and as he grew older, paid no attention to his surroundings. Through the months and years, there was little or no change.

When he was 3½, the Nethertons enrolled Freddie at Early Childhood. Teddi Mann, his first teacher, described him then as a child who just lay on his back or stomach, but could not roll over by himself. Most of the time his eyes were closed, she said.

By November 1984, he began to roll over, sit up by himself and frog hop across the floor. He was also responding to voices. Freddie kept progressing and it wasn't long before he could pull up to a standing position. As he grew in the fine and gross motor skills, so did his visual skills and expression language. He began making more sounds.

Mrs. Hunter says much of the credit for Freddie's progress goes to Billiejo Cooley, her classroom aide who has been working one-on-one with him since the fall of 1985.

But Mrs. Hunter says Freddie's success is a "team effort." Not only teachers but even maintenance and cafeteria workers at the Early Childhood center have taken an interest in Freddie and do their part for the handicapped child, she said.

Last year the maintenance department of the BISD constructed a standing box complete with padding on the side to enable Freddie to stand comfortably with support.

Since Freddie's food must be blended, the cafeteria employees prepare his noon meal. Even though this takes extra time and effort, they do it willingly. "Everyone of us love him," Mrs. Hunter said.

Lawmakers OK retirement system payments deferrals

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature has voted to postpone payments into two state retirement systems, but bill supporters say the action will not effect payments to retirees who depend on the systems.

Speaker Gib Lewis and Gov. Mark White said Tuesday the action benefits the retirement systems by guaranteeing the deferred payments would be repaid with interest.

Under the bill, signed Tuesday night by White, state payments into the Teacher Retirement System and Employees Retirement System would be deferred until February.

The House approved the bill Monday by an 82-47 margin, but without 100 votes, the payment deferrals would not begin until January, making the bill almost moot in the battle against the budget crisis.

In a final show of his strength reconsider the vote, the House backed the bill in a 106-33 vote.

White said he would sign the bill as soon as it reached his desk. Senators sent it to him later Thursday by voting approval to minor amendments added in the House.

The action came shortly before the Legislature wrapped up its special session work.

Payments to retirees would not be effected by the action, according to Lewis and White.

"If we had not taken those steps they were gambling on the possibility of not receiving any funds at all," Lewis said.

White agreed that the 100 votes were crucial.

"The retirement funds that were effected will be earning on the floor, Speaker Gib Lewis Tuesday mustered the votes needed to put the bill into immediate effect. After deciding to more money now under this bill than they are currently earning under the investment policy. So it's a plus for the retirement system," he said.

Deferring the payments frees up about $400 million for the state to use.

The Texas State Teachers Association and Texas Retired Teachers Association agreed to the bills in an effort to guard against cuts in public school funds.

"We were guaranteed that the Teacher Retirement System will not be negatively impacted in any way and that there will be no effects on payments to teacher retirees," said E.L. Galyean, TRTA executive director.

Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, fought the deferral plan, calling it "deficit financing."

Friday voter registration deadline for general election

People wishing to cast their ballots in the Nov. 4 general election have until Friday to register to vote if they have not already done so, County Attorney Bob McPherson announced this week.

Those wishing to register may do so in the office of Gray County Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray.

McPherson noted that any Texas resident 18 and older can vote in the election, provided they are registered to vote 30 days prior to the election. Those not registering before Friday will be ineligible to vote Nov. 4, he said.

Gray said those who were previously registered but have changed addresses must also notify her office of the move to be eligible to vote.

Three parties — Democrat, Republican and Libertarian — are listed on the Nov. 4 ballot and McPherson said registered voters "may vote for anyone running under the banner of any of the different parties, regardless of the party primary in which you voted or even if you did not vote in a primary election."

Several state and local write-in candidates also have filed for the November ballot.

United Way check-in Thursday

The Pampa High School cheerleaders will cheer on United Way drive volunteers at the third check-in session at 4:30 p.m. Thursday in the Pampa Community Building.

Dvision workers will be turning in the latest count of pledges and donations as they strive to reach the 1986 goal of $286,000.

At the second check-in last week, contributions had reached the 16 percent mark, running ahead of totals gained by the second report session for the 1985 drive.

Pampa United Way office executive Jan Lyle encouraged campaign volunteers, agency representatives and the general public to attend the Thursday check-in.

"We have a lot of fun," she said, noting the cheerleaders will be entertaining and refreshments will be provided.

Thursday's report session will mark the halfway point of the drive, with three more Thursday afternoon check-ins scheduled in October.

Firemen plan chili cook-off

The Pampa Fire Department will be holding its first chili cook-off on Saturday, Oct. 11, at Hobart Street Park.

Those who attend will have the opportunity to bid in a cream pie auction. The highest bidder will get the chance to hit one of four city department leaders in the face with a pie.

Standing in line for the pie throw will be Police Chief J.J. Ryzman, Fire Chief J.D. Ray, Asst. Fire Chief Ray Fisher and Emergency Management Director Steve Vaughn.

Providing entertainment will be local country band Fencewalker. M.K. Brown Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson will serve as master of ceremonies.

Fire department representatives noted there will be "lots more fun and games" during the day, in addition to the chance to eat some of the best chili in the world.

Proceeds from the cook-off activities will benefit the Pampa Fire Department's Charity Fund.

Museum schedules dinner in Miami

MIAMI — The Roberts County Museum is planning a Mexican Pile-on dinner from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday at the Miami School cafeteria.

Proceeds from the dinner will help defray expenses for a carpet for the museum's new Indian Room. Copies of the Roberts County History, Vol. II, will also be on sale. The Miami-Roberts County belt buckles, medallions, key chains and necklaces will also be available.

The new Indian Room will house what museum board members hope will be one of the largest collections of Indian artifacts in the area.

Ax murders suspect escaped in stolen vehicle

LANCASTER, Texas (AP) — After three women were hacked to death in this far south Dallas suburb, police believe, the killer got into a station wagon belonging to one of them and sped south on Interstate 45, where he was arrested about 100 miles away in Leon County for driving while intoxicated.

But it was Monday morning, 36 hours later, before the grisly murder scene was discovered. By the time an all-points bulletin could be released with a description of the stolen car, the man had already been released from jail, authorities said Tuesday.

The man, described as the only suspect in the triple killing, was believed to have hitchhiked to Houston after his release about 10 a.m. Monday, officials said.

The Leon County sheriff's department in Centerville, halfway between Dallas and Houston, didn't know about the triple slaying when it freed the man, dispatcher Bob Gresham said.

The bodies, hacked to death with a hatchet and a knife, were discovered in Lancaster about one hour before the man's release, but the statewide alert on the killing and the stolen car wasn't released until later.

Authorities identified the victims as Donna Sue Jester, 37; her cousin, Dalpha Jester, 64, who was blind and bedridden; and Laura Lee Owen, 20, a transient whom Donna Jester picked up hitchhiking and brought to the house.

Officials said all suffered multiple knife and-or hatchet wounds on the head and neck.

"We feel like the steak knife was used first and that the hatchet was used as a weapon of convenience," Lancaster Police Chief John Whitehead said.

Authorities said the suspect apparently was, like Ms. Owen, a transient who had been living at the house where the murders occurred.

A diary kept by Donna Jester spoke of a romantic relationship that had developed between the man and Ms. Owen after both came separately to live at the Jester house in early September, Whitehead said.

"She (Miss Jester's diary) said they hit it off," Whitehead said.

Officials speculated the three women were killed between 6 and 10 p.m. Saturday, probably after a quarrel between Donna Jester and the man living in the house.

"We feel like Laura was not at the house at that time, that only Donna Sue and Ms. Jester were there. We believe that Laura was coming into the house after they were killed and confronted the killer, that she turned to escape and was caught outside," Whitehead said.

The Jesters were found in a room inside the house and Ms. Owen was lying on the back porch, Whitehead said.

Donna Jester suffered 14 blows, Dalpha Jester five wounds to the head and neck, and Ms. Owen 21 blows to the head, neck and hands, officials added.

Miss Owen worked at a fast-food restaurant Saturday and clocked out at 5 p.m., the police chief said.

The diary of Donna Jester "was like she sat down and wrote a letter to herself," he said. "Her last entry was for Friday."

Donna Jester was well liked by co-workers, according to Linda Bennett, manager of operator services at Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., where Donna Jester worked for 17 years until retiring last March.

The police chief described the journal as a collection of notebooks all the same size and numerically organized by year. Investigators were concentrating on the five notebooks written this year, he said.

Whitehead said Donna Jester often brought stray dogs home and often picked up transients and wanderers.

"She had a bad habit of picking up down and outers," Whitehead said.

City of Austin rates criticized

AUSTIN (AP) — To the relief of Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, a bill was withdrawn Tuesday that would have authorized the Public Utility Commission to set electrical rates for state buildings in Austin.

The original bill approved by the House would have allowed the State Purchasing and General Services Commission to purchase electricity from the Lower Colorado River Authority instead of the city of Austin.

That provision was eliminated by Senate committee, which authorized the PUC to "reasonable rates."

Introduction of the bill on the Senate floor by Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, was greeted by criticism of the city of Austin.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Ruling in urinalysis protects civil rights

The Fourth Amendment, which protects people from unreasonable searches and seizures and requires reasonable cause before warrants may be issued, undoubtedly protects the public at large from widespread mandatory urine tests to detect illegal drugs.

The question is, does it protect government employees from such tests? Employment, after all, is not an absolute right. Employers, public and private, may require various things of current and prospective employees, and those who object are still free to seek employment elsewhere.

Judge H. Lee Sarokin of the federal district court in New Jersey has taken a long step toward ruling that the Fourth Amendment protects government employees as much as it does the public at large. He ruled that urine tests on police and fire personnel in Plainfield, N.J., were warrantless searches, and should be used only if there was a strong suspicion that a particular individual was abusing drugs. The decision was moderate and reasoned, but one wonders if it will stand.

The Fourth Amendment, like the rest of the Constitution, is a limitation on the power of government with respect to the citizenry. Private employers, however, may require reasonable — and even unreasonable — preconditions of prospective employees. Government agencies also have requirements — civil service tests, employee screening, checking references, background checks, etc. — that permit it to act more intrusively with respect to present and future employees than it could with the people in general.

So what principles should govern the government in deciding just how intrusive it is to be with certain employees?

Judge Sarokin seems to be saying that government agencies — the ruling does not apply to private employers — are bound by the Fourth Amendment not to use "mass, roundup urinalysis" as part of their screening processes. In this case, he has ruled, the Fourth Amendment not only dictates how government shall treat the people, but how is shall treat its employees.

Those who place a high value on privacy should be pleased with the ruling. The advocates of widespread urinalysis, however, are unlikely to throw in the towel on the basis of one decision. Sarokin himself acknowledged that prior court decisions had permitted urine tests in highly regulated industries like horse racing or in cases where there were well-founded suspicions of drug use on the job. And the U.S. Department of Justice has entered a similar case in Boston on the side of the city government's use of urine tests on employees, arguing that the Fourth Amendment doesn't apply to employee urine tests.

Sarokin's conclusion — that urine sampling by government as an employer should be allowed "only on the basis of a reasonable suspicion predicated upon specific facts and reasonable inferences drawn from those facts in light of experience" — is sound. In today's superhearted climate of concern about drugs, however, it is unlikely to be the last word.

Sanctions reflect hypocrisy

On any honest list of governments with the worst human rights records, South Africa's would not be at the top. Awful as its government is, plenty of others are worse. Yet it is South Africa that has been selected by the U.S. Congress to be punished by economic sanctions.

Supporters say the measure, which the president has promised to veto, is an expression of moral outrage. What it really shows is hypocrisy.

The sanctions movement is an impulse in search of a policy. The impulse is a sound one: to reject the trampling of individual freedom by untrammeled government power. But it is indulged selectively, condemning the human rights abuses of apartheid while accommodating worse regimes. The animating motives behind the movement are ideological prejudice and political expedience, not any principled devotion to human rights.

What is the point of imposing sanctions? Rep. William Gray, a Pennsylvania Democrat, says it will tell the world "that the American people do not want to provide economic support for apartheid." His colleague, California Democrat Ron Dellums, has a more ambitious goal, namely to "bring down apartheid, because it is the greatest human rights issue of our time."

Gray equates economic support with trade, which is what Pretoria gets from the U.S. and what sanctions would curtail. By contrast, nearly every country in black Africa gets direct economic aid from the U.S. government. Few of these are free, and some of them are notoriously contemptuous of human rights.

Ethiopia, a communist government that has used mass famine as a weapon against its own people, gets American aid. So does Mozambique, a one-party regime that has forced resettlement and "re-education" on hundreds of thousands of its citizens. So does Zaire, a military dictatorship renowned for its censorship, political prisoners and use of torture. Who will lead the fight to end U.S. economic support of these abuses?

Not William Gray or Ron Dellums. In fact, they are among the House members kicking around the idea of providing help, perhaps financial, to some of South Africa's neighbors, in case Pretoria responds to an international embargo by imposing its own trade sanctions against them.

That brings us to another lapse in the splendid morality of sanctions supporters. Recently, as Zimbabwean Prime Minister Robert Mugabe was urging the conference of "non-aligned" nations to press for the economic isolation of South Africa, the news came out that Zimbabwe had just signed a trade deal with the administrators of apartheid. About 53 of the 55 nations in Africa do business with South Africa. They want us to do as they say, not as they do.

Advocates of sanctions all want to transform Pretoria's political system, but they never explain why the U.S. has an urgent obligation here and not elsewhere. If we applied the same moral criteria to other countries as Congress has applied to South Africa, we would have to stop trading with most of the world, which would be futile as well as self-defeating.

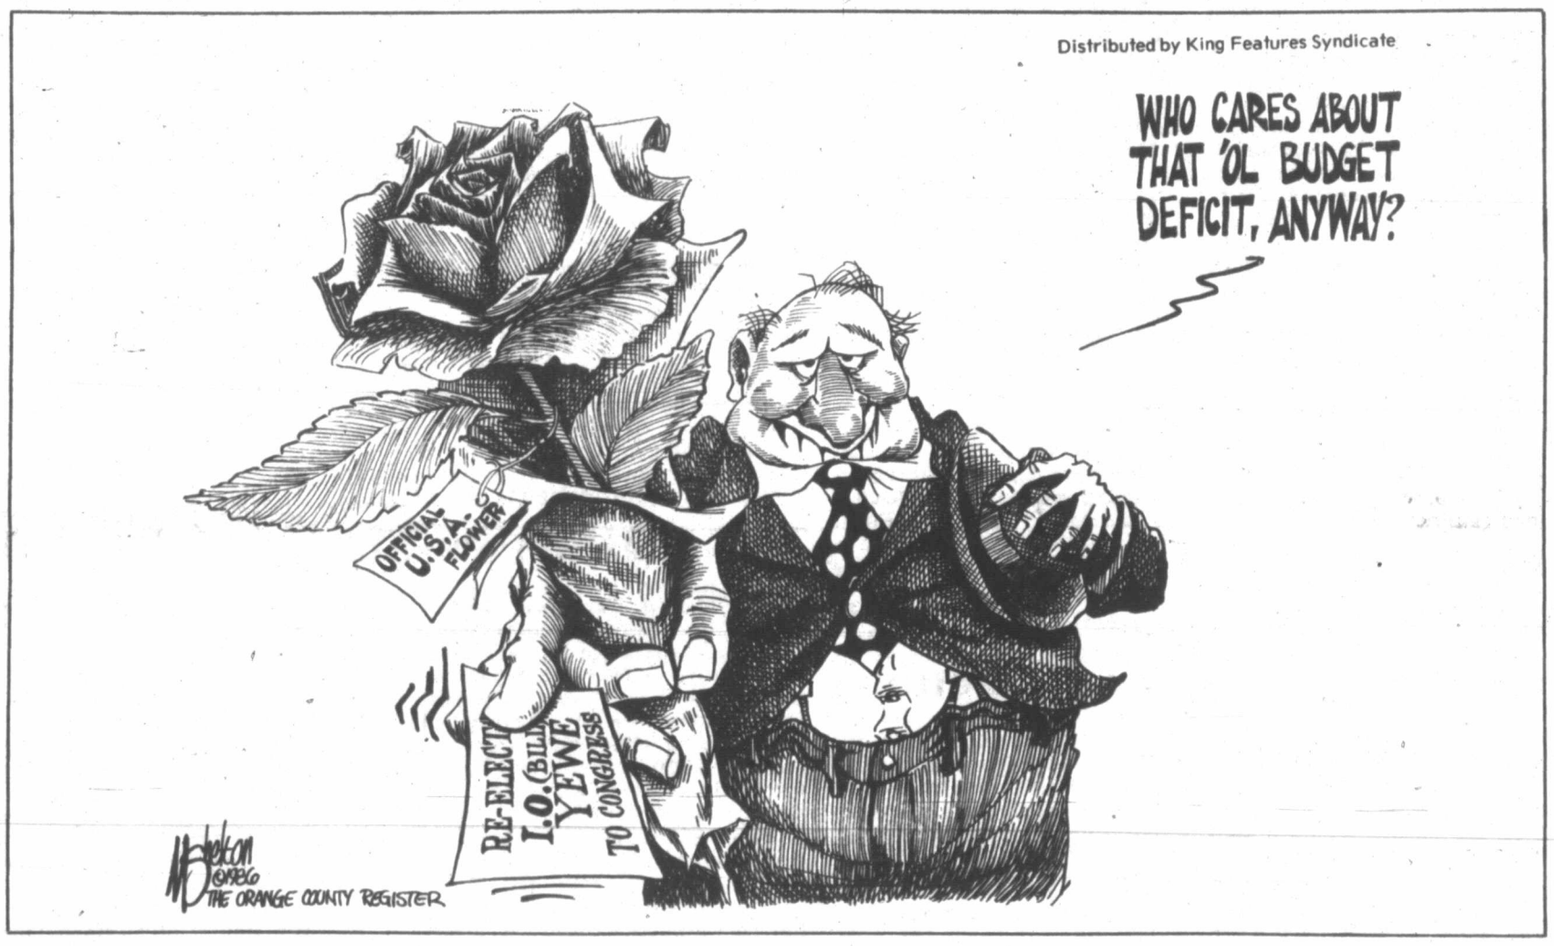

Our refusal to embargo China or Saudi Arabia or the Soviet Union, however, is not simply a realistic acceptance of what we can't change. Many of those who fervently urge American intervention in South Africa preach laissez-faire toward the rulers of Nicaragua and Angola — repressive governments just as vulnerable to U.S. pressure as South Africa.

The explanation doesn't lie in either principle or pragmatism. One reason is political. A vote for sanctions costs a member nothing, while boosting his stock among blacks.

But the real force behind the sanctions movement is ideological. Right-wing governments are targeted for punitive treatment, while leftist ones are accommodated generously.

The former are regarded as decaying and vulnerable; the latter are assumed to be riding the irresistible tide of history. Judgments like these, of course, tend to be self-fulfilling. Conservatives are also prone to selective condemnation, but that doesn't make the liberal drive for sanctions look any nobler.

The movement's supporters claim to be pushing moral ideals to the forefront in making American foreign policy. In reality, they only have dramatized the impracticality of applying those ideals consistently and the embarrassing gap between those ideals and their own practice.

World is speaking English

Some of us have blamed much world misunderstanding on a lack of communication.

All laughter and all pain sound the same. Surely if everyone in the world could speak and understand a common language we'd soon recognize our common interests and objectives.

There is now an international language.

When Shakespeare was writing in English, fewer than seven million people could read what he wrote. Those seven million who could comprehend English were English.

Today, only 400 years later, English is used by 700 million people.

English is spoken and understood in every nation in the world.

Half the business deals in all of Europe are now conducted in English.

You can tune in on radio or TV to hear spokespersons in the most remote corners of the planet — speaking your language.

Sony has made English the basic technical language of that company throughout the world.

S. William Pattis, president of the Naitonal Textbook Company, publishes books in eight different languages, but his company is expanding its English-language books because, he says, "English has become to the modern world what Latin was to the ancients."

One of every seven people in the world claims some knowledge of English, 40 percent more than 20 years ago.

English has replaced French in the world of diplomacy, has replaced German in the field of science. It is now the dominant language of medicine, electronics and space technology.

More than 80 percent of all scientific papers are published in English.

Even in the Soviet Union more than half of secondary school students study English.

Pattis is an exponent of "American English" as opposed to "British English." He would prefer to standardize the meanings of such words as "cloakroom" and "bathroom." When Americans "table" a subject, it is set aside. In British English, to "table" a subject places it on the table for immediate action.

He considers American English, where each noun does not require a gender, to be more versatile, more flexible, more adaptable. After all, "We Americans can bus children to school and school them in English."

Reagan expanded secret military budget

By Robert Walters

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (NEA) — When a plane piloted by Lt. Gen. Robert M. Bond plunged from the sky and crashed 100 miles northwest of here, senior officers at nearby Nellis Air Force Base faced a seemingly insoluble conflict.

They wanted to publicly acknowledge the death of the three-star general who was vice commander of the Air Force Systems Command — but they could not reveal any details about his fatal mission because it was part of a secret "black" program.

As a result, the Air Force issued a cryptic announcement that said Bond was killed while flying a "specially modified and equipped aircraft." Even today, more than two years after the crash, officials at Nellis will not discuss the matter.

"Black" programs in the armed forces are hardly new, but there is a growing concern among some knowledgeable observers that the Defense Department in recent years has unnecessarily conducted too many of its operations in secret.

"The issue isn't protecting technology, but hiding the basic data that citizens in a democracy ought to have access to in order to make some judgments on how their tax resources are being used," Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said in a recent floor speech.

Earlier this year, the National Journal, a Washington-based magazine acclaimed for its coverage of government, estimated that the Defense Department's "black" budget has increased more than fourfold since President Reagan took office — from $5.5 billion in 1981 to $22.6 billion requested for next year.

That includes $8.6 billion worth of research and development and procurement items not identified in any fashion and $14 billion bearing code names or vague titles.

In that last category are items such as "special programs," "special activities," "selected activities," "special update programs" and "special improvement projects."

Similarly, the Navy's budget calls for funding 15 classified research projects, all believed to involve submarine silencing and detection efforts. They bear code names such as Chalk Banyan, Link Hazel and Retract Maple.

The Air Force is seeking $2.3 billion for a project designated only as Aurora but widely believed to be the Advanced Technology Bomber (popularly known as the "Stealth" aircraft) specially designed to avoid radar detection.

Also in the Air Force budget is more than $150 million for annual operation and maintenance of the Special Tactical Unit Detachment, the purposely unenlightening title of a highly classified facility at Nellis known to insiders as "Dreamland."

Indeed, a sizable portion of every year's "black" budget is spent at Nellis. Some of it supports secrecy-shrouded "Area 51" where Bond was killed piloting a MiG-23, one of the Soviet Union's most advanced fighter planes, and where Stealth aircraft reportedly are tested.

Both Aspin and Rep. William L. Dickinson, R-Ala., the senior Republican on the Armed Services Committee, insist that the Stealth program is a notable example of a "black" project that ought to be declassified.

"Not everything can be done in public (but)... it is simply bad public policy to hide increasing amounts of government spending," they argued in a recent letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Similarly, the editors of two highly respected periodicals specializing in military affairs — Defense News and Armed Forces Journal International — have been highly critical of the Reagan administration's reliance upon the "black" budget.

Declassification does not require providing complete details of the nation's most advanced military projects to the Soviet Union. In the case of the Stealth aircraft, for example, it might involve only formal acknowledgment of the activity and disclosure of total project costs.

Silver-haired Legislature pushes annual sessions

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans should be allowed to decide whether they want their lawmakers to meet every year, not just every other year, the Silver-Haired Legislature says.

The senior legislature is meeting this week to formulate recommendations that will be forwarded to the 1987 Legislature.

Eighty-two of the 166 Silver-Haired Legislature members voted Tuesday for a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment that would allow lawmakers to meet in even-numbered years to set the state budget.

The Constitution now allows regular sessions in odd-numbered years. Constitutional amendments require approval at a statewide election.

Lawmakers set two-year budgets at the regular sessions. The Legislature also meets in special sessions called by the governor. Lawmakers Tuesday completed the second of back-to-back special sessions called to deal with the budget crisis.

"The rapidly changing economy of today could not have been foreseen by the founding fathers of our Texas Constitution," said the resolution approved by the Silver-Haired Legislature, which is made up of citizens who are 60 or older.

Among those backing the annual-session resolution was Deno Tufares of Wichita Falls, the only former Texas legislator in the Silver-Haired Legislature.

Tufares, who was a House member from 1949-1952, said the annual-session idea was put to a statewide vote by the Legislature in which he served.

"We put it to the people and the people defeated it. They have always defeated it. I can't understand why," the former Democratic lawmaker said.

But Tufares — who is listed in the Silver-Haired Legislature's guide as a magician, coach, teacher and former state representative — said Texans who have seen the problems caused by the oil slump might be ready for annual sessions.

"I think the people are getting more budgetary-minded," he said.

The resolution was authored by Helen Walter of San Antonio, who said annual budget sessions are needed to make adjustments necessitated by a rapidly changing economy.

"What's happened this year should never have happened," she said. Her resolution said annual sessions also could help monitor programs for the elderly.

The resolution was approved, although it was opposed by Raleigh Jackson of LaGrange, presiding officer of the Silver-Haired Legislature.

Jackson, retired president of Brazosport College, said the two-year budget cycle now used by the state makes it easier for state agencies and colleges to plan programs.

Visit called an opportunity to revitalize Texas church

AUSTIN (AP) — Next year's visit by Pope John Paul II is an opportunity for Texas Catholics to instill new vitality into the church in the state, the bishop of El Paso says.

The Most Rev. Raymundo J. Pena said Texas Catholics should rally behind the scheduled papal visit and begin a renewed effort toward evangelizing, or bringing the word of the Catholic faith to others.

"Because his visit will be historic, it is most important that we make it possible for this great event to be the beginning of a new era in Christianity in Texas," Pena said.

Pena's speech was the keynote address Monday for the 20th annual Texas Catholic Conference being held this week. The conference is the statewide organization of the 13 Texas Roman Catholic Dioceses.

Pena said all Catholics should be responsible for the renewed emphasis on evangelization, and he said the process should include all ethnic groups and cultures.

"It is the responsibility of this church — it is our responsibility — to evangelize the Lone Star State. Our challenge is to evangelize the culture, the ethos that is Texas," he said.

The effort, Pena said, should be directed toward non-Catholics and alienated Catholics as well as practicing Catholics. He said Catholic Texans should have the same zeal exhibited by the early missionaries who brought Catholicism to Texas.

Pena suggested that the pope's visit be an inspiration to Catholics to renew their committment to the faith. Church officials also said efforts have begun to raise $2.5 million needed to the anticipated September 1987 visit.

In a statement issued by the Catholic Diocese of Austin, the church said the money is needed to help pay costs for communictions, travel, security, printing, television, satellite time and other expenses. Hundreds of thousands of people are expected to be involved in the trip project, the church said.

White, Clements argue budget

AUSTIN (AP) — The summer special sessions showed that Gov. Mark White has a hankering for dipping into taxpayers' wallets, says GOP challenger Bill Clements.

But White said lawmakers, who wrapped up the session Tuesday by approving tax hikes and spending cuts, succeeded in denting the budget deficit without any help from Clements.

Lawmakers approved temporary sales and gasoline tax hikes, plus spending cuts, to fight the money crisis. White, who pushed the temporary tax hike, chided Clements for not releasing what White called the challenger's "secret plan."

"I don't remember him being all that much help," White said. "We've been looking for his plan. We probably wasted time looking for that plan."

Clements, in a telephone interview from Dallas, said White botched the budget battle by pushing a tax hike instead of cutting spending.

"I would certainly have identified on a prioritized basis every program in all of the agencies and I would have then started with the lowest end of the priority list and I would have either eliminated the program entirely, or I would have curtailed and cut it back to some reasonable degree, or I would have merged it with an overlapping program in another agency," Clements said.

White pushed $1.4 billion in spending cuts, but lawmakers approved only $582 million, including significant cuts that had already been voluntarily made by agencies.

Clements said his calculations show that lawmakers actually made only $45 million in spending cuts after you subtract the voluntary cuts already in place and "one-time accounting adjustments."

"We have a spending problem. Spending is out of control," Clements said, blaming it on White.

He said that since taking office in 1983, White has added an average of $1,460 per family in additional taxes.

"I think he has been totally unresponsible to the taxpayers of this state. When you boil it all down, it means that during his adminsitration, after promising 'I will not raise taxes,' — that was his promise, I even have a videotape of it — every year he has been in office he has recommended, supported or passed a tax bill," Clements said, predicting the 1986 tax bill would guarantee White's defeat iin November.

Prosecutor says

Hunter victim of thrill killing

MANSFIELD, Texas (AP) — A Johnson County prosecutor says a 20-year-old man died at the hands of three hunting companions in what may have been a thrill killing.

Alvin Goode, 20, of the Homesteads area near this North Texas city, died Sept. 22 from a gunshot wound to the head. He also had multiple gunshot wounds on his body and face, according to Cindy Dotson, a lab technician with the Johnson County Medical Examiner's Office.

Three of the victim's companions, two of them 16-year-old juveniles, are in custody. Investigators say they still have no motive for the shooting.

Assistant Johnson County District Attorney Ron Lawing said the slaying was puzzling.

"It was a planned, cold-blooded murder," Lawing said. "I've read the case hundreds of times, and I can't figure it out.

"I've talked to law enforcement officers from 15 agencies, and no one can put a finger on it," Lawing said.

"I think it was for the thrill of it. I know that's unbelievable," the prosecutor added.

"It's your worst nightmare," he said.

Andrew Tedford, 19, was being held today in the Johnson County Jail at nearby Cleburne in lieu of $250,000 bond.

Tedford moved to the Homesteads area about two months ago, but it is not known where he lived before his move.

The two 16-year-olds, also from the Homesteads area, were being held in the Johnson County Juvenile Detention Center in Cleburne.

Lawing said he will ask the juvenile court to certify the two juveniles to stand trial as adults in the slaying.

Lawing added that psychiatrists will question the two juveniles and present their findings in a hearing before a juvenile court judge.

Goode's body was so riddled with bullet holes that investigators were not able to tell exactly how many times he was shot, Lawing said. He said the weapons used were a a 12-gauge shotgun, 20-gauge shotgun and .22-caliber pistol.

"They all went hunting together in an area called the Homesteads between Alvarado and Burleson," Lawing said. "It's right close to their homes."

The Homesteads area is a large, unincorporated, mobile home area near a large pasture with trees and creek that is a popular area for hunting.

"At some point, they just turned on him," Lawing said.

Increase in murders is linked to narcotics

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A dramatic increase in the number of murders in Fort Worth is linked to narcotics, Fort Worth police officials and a criminal justice educator say.

Fort Worth has had 148 murders in 1986 through Monday, compared with only 103 at this time a year ago when the city wound up with a record of 128 homicides, according to police spokesman Doug Clarke.

The Fort Worth homicide figures are more significant when compared with those of Dallas, a city with more than twice the population. As of Monday, Dallas had reported 253 killings this year and had a total of 301 slayings in all of 1985.

"We see a fairly large increase in the number of homicides which, on the surface, appear to be drug-related," Capt. Jerry Blaisdell of the Special Operations Division, which also includes narcotics officers.

Former Fort Worth police Lt. Vernon Farris, who retired two months ago to teach criminal justice classes at Southwest Texas State University, said he noticed the trend in January.

"More and more murders in some shape, fashion or form were narcotics-related," Farris told the Dallas Morning News Tuesday in an interview from San Marcos.

Lt. Thomas Swann of the police homicide unit says there not only has been a dramatic rise in narcotics-related slayings, there has also been a rise in the number of people slain during robberies.

"And more victims have been found by the side of the road, in parking lotsm, behind bars, who who had been shot to death and dumped," Swann said. "These could have been robberies."

Many of the slayings during robberies are also drug-related, Blaisdell said.

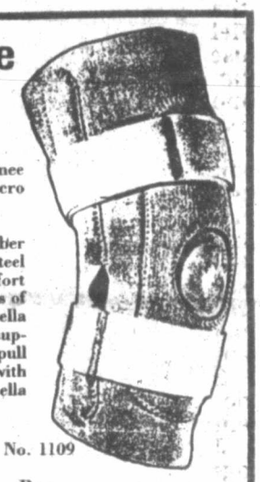

"A farily large number of these are for money to buy drugs," he said. "If you profile the individuals brought in with robbery charges, you will find a great number of them involved in the use and distribution of drugs."

"Back when I was a rookie cop, people didn't shoot a robbery victim," said Farris, who was with the police department for more than 29 years.

Police spokesman Clarke also blamed the criminal justice system in Texas for the increase in the number of killings.

"People aren't staying in prisons very long," he said. "A whole lot are being sent down there, but they're not staying. And mulitple offenders are getting out quickly."

Rubber - Thermal Knee Support

Removable stainless steel knee hinges - horse-shoe knee pad-cut-out patella opening - full limb circling velcro straps.

This knee support is constructed of ⅛" (neoprene rubber - nylon faced on inner and outer sides.) Two stainless steel removable knee hinges can be shaped to provide comfort and fit. Steels are placed on medical and lateral sides of support. Velcro straps proximal and distal to patella opening completely circle the support and add extra support by limiting the rubber stretch and providing pull over and around the steel knee hinges. Equipped with shaped felt horse-shoe type knee pad for increased patella cartilage and ligament support.

Reagan apparently failing to sustain sanctions veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's last-minute lobbying campaign to sustain his veto of economic sanctions against South Africa appears to be falling short despite administration efforts to link the issue to success at the U.S.-Soviet summit.

But Reagan is stepping up efforts to persuade senators — especially Republicans — to change their votes.

One day after a stinging 313-83 defeat in the Democratic-led House, Reagan named career diplomat Edward J. Perkins to be the nation's first black ambassador to South Africa.

And he dispatched Secretary of State George Shultz to Capitol Hill to warn GOP senators that a vote to override the veto on South Africa sanctions would embarrass the president and undercut his ability to bargain effectively with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev when they meet Oct. 11-12 in Iceland.

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who believes Reagan is making a mistake in not endorsing the sanctions legislation, said the nomination of Perkins has long been in the works and adds little or nothing to the sanctions debate.

He called the Shultz attempt to link the sanctions vote to the Reagan-Gorbachev talks "far-fetched" because "South Africa is not going to be on the agenda with Gorbachev. ... That's reaching very far."

Lugar also said the president's attempt to preempt Congress on the issue by expanding his own list of limited sanctions was too little, too late. And it would, if successful, be a victory for the government of South African President P. W. Botha and comfort "apologists" for that government's apartheid system of racial separation, he added.

When asked whether Reagan's last-minute efforts to sustain his veto will succeed, Lugar replied, "No, I don't think they are having any impact."

"We've been at this for a long time," Lugar said. "People have thought about it for a long time. And as a result they've made up their minds. I don't think there are any new arguments."

Even some of Reagan's closest allies in the Senate said there was virtually no chance the president's veto would be sustained.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., told reporters vote counts show that only 22 or 23 senators are now prepared to support the president's position.

And Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., one of Reagan's closest friends, said bluntly, "I don't think the president will make it."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Reagan "is not going to give up on this easily" and contended the margin is "tightening up." But he declined to predict Reagan will prevail.

The bill Reagan vetoed would ban all new investment and all new bank loans, end landing rights in the United States for South African aircraft and ban the import of South African iron, steel, coal, textiles, uranium, arms, food and agricultural products.

Soviet dissident movement now shattered and dispersed

MOSCOW (AP) — The dissidents who once worked with Yuri Orlov, who is to be freed next week in an East-West swap, are now scattered and silenced by an official crackdown that has banished many of them abroad or into internal exile at home.

The different treatments meted out to Soviet dissidents by the KGB secret police is a key tactic in official efforts to split and neutralize any group that challenges official Kremlin policy.

Many activists of the 1960s and 70s, like Orlov himself or Jewish activist Anatoly Shcharansky, were imprisoned for long terms in brutal conditions. Shcharansky was freed in an East-West exchange in February.

Orlov is to come to the West next week as part of the superpower accord that led to the Monday release of Nicholas Daniloff, a U.S. reporter charged by the Soviets with spying.

Other members of the dissidence movement, like Andrei D. Sakharov and his wife Yelena Bonner, are exiled to closed cities or remote parts of the Soviet Union, where they are cut off from foreigners and the intelligentsia that nurtured the movement.

Still other dissenters are banished abroad, simply deported like Nobel Prize-winning author Alexander Solzhenitsyn or exchanged in East-West swaps.

In 1979, prominent activist Alexander Ginzburg was one of five Soviet prisoners handed over to the West in exchange for two Soviet U.N. employees jailed in the United States on spying charges.

The few dissidents left at their homes are silenced by isolation and harassment that routinely includes cutting off their phones, random detentions of a few hours or days, house searches and interrogations.

All of those tactics were used against the group that Orlov, Ginzburg and others founded in 1976 to monitor Soviet compliance with the Helsinki accords on human rights signed the year before.

The measures also helped to silence other Helsinki watch groups set up in the Ukraine, the Soviet republics of Armenia and Georgia in the Caucasus, and the Baltic republic of Lithuania.

The Moscow Helsinki group, which issued scores of statements on human rights, eventually disbanded in 1982.

230,000 miners stay away from work to mourn dead

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 230,000 black miners stayed away from work today to mourn 177 workers killed in a gold mine fire last month, industry officials said.

It was the largest protest ever among the nation's nearly 600,000 black miners.

The Chamber of Mines, the industry organization, called for five minutes of silence at noon in 100 mines across the country, and the blowing of whistles to commemorate those who died in the Sept. 16 underground fire in the General Mining Union Corp.'s Kinross gold mine.

The National Union of Mineworkers, which claims 250,000 members, called for an all-day stayaway.

The mining industry provides well over half of South Africa's foreign currency earnings, and the black miners' stoppage hit gold mines hardest.

John Kingsley-Jones, spokesman for the country's largest mining house, Anglo American Corp., said 150,000 of the company's 180,000 black mineworkers did not report for their morning shifts. He said it was too early to tell what the stoppage would cost in lost production.

Kingsley-Jones said that Anglo American employees who didn't report for duty would be regarded as having been absent without permission and would forfeit a day's pay.

Businessmen in Johannesburg's black township of Soweto said they would close at 1 p.m. in memory of the dead miners, 172 of them black and five white.

In another development, President P.W. Botha, addressing the Cape Province congress of his National Party, declared that the concept of separate residential areas for different races was a cornerstone of the government's "minority population policy," and would never be removed in his lifetime.

However, he told the delegates in East London he would consider limited deviations from the Group Areas Act, which controls where whites, Asians and people of mixed-race live.

Blacks are controlled under different laws.

Flood waters spilled from Cottonwood Creek in Guthrie, Okla., Tuesday and more than 100 residents were forced out of their homes.

Thousands kept from homes by flooding in the Midwest

By The Associated Press

More than 3,500 people in four states were kept from their homes today by flooding that washed away part of a dam in Wisconsin and surrounded a tiny town in Montana.

Tornadoes touched down in Ohio and Pennsylvania on Tuesday, destroying a mobile home and injuring one person.

Flooding continued in northeastern Illinois and across Oklahoma.

The earthen portion of the dam on Lawrence Lake near Westfield, Wis., was washed away by rushing water Tuesday, along with part of a highway built on it.

Two hundred people were evacuated from the town out of fear the cement retaining wall supporting the rest of the dam would not hold.

"There's a horizontal crack in it and there's water coming every which way through the dam," said Phil Malsack, Marquette County chief deputy sheriff.

"It's a question of when," he said. "It could hold for days; it could hold for minutes."

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson declared parts of two more counties near Chicago disaster areas because of flooding that contributed to at least two deaths and left 2,650 families homeless.

Damage was likely to top $20 million and could reach $30 million, said Gregg Durham, a spokesman for the Illinois Emergency and Disaster Services Agency.

At a shelter in Mount Prospect, Ill., volunteer Kittye Hermes said at least 20 people would be spending the night, including 10 who stayed in an interim shelter at a motel in Des Plaines until the motel, too, was flooded out.

A search for Victor Cruz, 20, of North Chicago was called off again late Tuesday because of inclement weather in the area where his boat capsized in the Des Plaines River.

Nearly 4,000 northern Illinois residents were without telephone service Tuesday because of the weather.

Palwaukee Airport in Wheeling, Ill., closed for the first time in its nearly 60-year history when water overran runways. The remaining dry land at the airport was being occupied by a small herd of deer escaping floodwaters in nearby woods.

Barbara Harris of Willow Woods, Ill., returned home from a vacation in Italy to find the rising water.

"I went to Venice and I came home to Venice," she said.

Nearly 50 families were forced from their homes in Guthrie in central Oklahoma on Tuesday as Cottonwood Creek, swollen by nearly 9 inches of rain, spilled out of its banks, virtually cutting the community in half. Much of the town remained under water, said Joe Goddard, a civil defense spokesman.

A tornado touched down briefly in Cambridge Springs, Pa., destroying a mobile home and injuring the owner as severe thunderstorms struck western Pennsylvania.

Residents of 20 homes were evacuated from the northeastern Oklahoma town of Miami on Tuesday because of flooding from Tar Creek.

Three hundred residents evacuated because of flooding in Kingfisher, Okla., still had not returned to their homes. In Gideon, a tornado touched down but no damage was reported.

A tornado in Winter, Texas, damaged several barns, officials said.

Conferees OK Pentagon spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bargainers from the House and Senate are in agreement on a spending figure for the Defense Department of $291 billion, nearly $30 billion below the amount President Reagan originally sought for 1987.

Meeting behind closed doors, lawmakers agreed Tuesday on the Pentagon authorization for the fiscal year that begins today, said congressional sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The negotiators also decided to keep alive a controversial Air Force trainer plane, the sources said.

The agreement hammered out by a House-Senate conference committee is midway between the $295 billion authorized by the Republican-controlled Senate and the $287 billion total approved by the Democratic-run House, the sources said. The figure is far below the $320 billion originally sought by President Reagan for fiscal 1987.

The conferees also approved actual defense expenditures of $279 billion, a figure lower than the authorized total because authorization budgets include money that is expected to be spent in future years.

The two figures will be used by the House and Senate as they try to write the defense portion of a huge, catchall spending bill needed because none of 13 regular appropriations measures has been enacted by Congress.

Although the conferees working on an authorization bill technically are not involved in preparing the stopgap spending measure, the figures and compromises adopted by the conferees are likely to shape the Defense Department portion of the bill.

The defense conferees were plowing through 1,250 differences between the separate bills passed by the House and Senate. More than 300 remained, but the panelists were trying to complete their work by Friday so the two chambers can approve a Pentagon authorization bill before they adjourn for the year.

Among the remaining differences were major restrictions enacted by the House but rejected by the Senate. President Reagan has threatened to veto any bill that includes the House provisions, including bans on anti-satellite tests, limits on nuclear weapons construction and tests, a ban on chemical weapons, and a freeze on "Star Wars" spending.

One decision made by the conferees keeps alive the troubled T-46A, a trainer plane built for the Air Force by Fairchild Republic in Farmingdale, N.Y.

The House, under pressure from the New York delegation, had voted to keep the plane alive. But the Senate voted to kill it, a decision strongly supported by Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., He wants the Air Force to use a modernized version of its current trainer, the T-37, built by Cessna Aircraft of Wichita, Kan.

The plan approved by the conferees requires a competition involving the two planes and any other trainer aircraft that contractors want to enter into the race. At stake are contracts worth billions of dollars to build hundreds of planes for the Air Force.

Reagan says

Daniloff case not comparable to hostages held in Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicholas Daniloff's case should not be compared to that of the American hostages in Lebanon, who are held by people with whom the United States has no diplomatic ties, President Reagan says.

Reagan's statement on the hostages in Lebanon drew criticism from Peggy Say, the sister of hostage Terry Anderson.

"The biggest difference is the amount of effort" that the United States has put into securing Daniloff's release, compared with the time spent on the hostages in Lebanon, she said.

Mrs. Say, in a telephone interview from her home in Batavia, N.Y., said she was pleased that Daniloff, 51, the former U.S. News & World Report bureau chief in Moscow, was freed Monday as part of a superpower deal. He had been charged with espionage.

The deal included sending Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet employee of the United Nations, back to Moscow after he pleaded no contest to spying charges in New York.

"We have shown what we can do when we put our mind to it," Mrs. Say said, adding that now she wants the administration to focus the same kind of attention on the plight of the Americans in Lebanon.

Reagan, in a brief question-and-answer session with reporters to announce his upcoming meeting in Iceland with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, said there "hasn't been a day we haven't been engaged in efforts to get" the hostages out.

But, he said the two situations — Daniloff and Lebanon — are not comparable.

"Here we are dealing with a government in which we have diplomatic relations," he said of Daniloff's situation. In Lebanon, "we're dealing with faceless terrorists."

The hostages' captors have never been in "direct contact" with the United States, he said.

But Mrs. Say said one person, Terry Waite, an envoy of the Archbishop of Canterbury, has met with the captors in Lebanon last year. If they wanted to, U.S. officials could ask Waite how to find the captors, she said.

The Reagan administration says it will talk with anyone who might help free the Americans, but it will not negotiate with terrorists.

A group calling itself the Revolutionary Justice Organization claimed responsibility for kidnapping American University accountant Joseph Cicippio, 56, of Norristown, Pa., on Sept. 12.

Your desires to provide more for those you love will serve to fire up your ambitions in the year ahead. This noble motivation will contribute to your success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can accomplish much of value today, provided you are as enthusiastic a finisher as you are a starter. Complete what you begin. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, PO Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try not to let your marvelous imagination work against you today. If you persist in visualizing obstacles, there's a chance you'll find them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your generous nature may be imposed upon today by an acquaintance with a convincing tale of woe. Before opening your purse, check out his or her story.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will be closely observed by colleagues today. Don't make any moves that aren't in line with your highest standards.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Feeling sorry for yourself isn't one of your prime characteristics. However, today you might think you're making all the sacrifices while others reap the gains.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Sentiment could be hard on your purse today. Don't feel obligated to do business with a familiar firm if you can get a better price elsewhere.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're the type of person who usually thinks for himself and is not too easily swayed by others. But don't let a "smoothy" delude you today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You should attend to arduous jobs as early as possible today. As time ticks on, your desires to tackle challenge will lessen considerably.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extra careful today if you have to deal with merchants who have questionable reputations. If you are too gullible, someone might rip you off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) People whose support you need today might put time limits on their willingness to help you. Don't drag your feet once they give you the nod.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be extremely perceptive today, but you must use this quality wisely. If you see only the faults in others, it means your focus is misdirected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Spendthrift urges could create financial complications for you today. Don't kid yourself into believing you need something immediately if you really don't.

Carrie the jumping mule displays her winning form for handler Boyd "Junior" Greg.

Long-eared leapers gather fans

COMO, Texas (AP) — The mule myth of stubbornness just isn't so — it's all in how you talk to them, says a one-man, two-mule dynasty recognized as a top trainer in the bizarre world of mule-jumping.

"You've got to try and show authority," said Boyd "Junior" Gregg.

On the surface, mule-jumping is a simple sport: A handler leads the mule to a high-jump bar and with words alone, he coaxes the beast to jump flat-footed over the bar.

The trouble comes in the cajoling between man and mule.

"If a mule gets by with one little number, that suckerbill will really try to pull something on you next time," Gregg said. "And if he gets by with it the second time, you will never control him again."

Gregg's East Texas lingo is easy to understand once you learn that "suckerbill" is his word for anything and everything.

"You've got to work these suckerbills every day — seven days a week, rain or shine, summer and winter," Gregg said last week as he put his two powerhouse jumping mules through their paces.

Gregg's mules, including Slim who holds the national freestyle high-jump record at 5 feet, 8 inches, will be featured in Dallas next month when the American National Donkey and Mule show is held at the State Fair.

"That's the Super Bowl of mule-jumping," Gregg said.

Paul Hutchins, president of the American Donkey and Mule Society, attributes the popularity of mule-jumping, plowing and even mule-racing to the winning personality of mules.

"They're just fun to be around," Hutchins said. "You get the impression they know what is going on all the time but don't want to tell anybody."

The sport of mule-jumping emerged a decade ago as an outgrowth of raccoon hunting. Hunters rode sure-footed mules at night to follow the coon dogs. With most of the land fenced, the ability of a mule to leap became a matter of pride. Where there is pride, competition soon follows.

The mule-jumping season begins in the spring, with competitions held at least once a month in Texas and adjoining states. The season culminates each year with the state championship at the State Fair.

Gregg is also quick to dispel myths that surround his long-eared companions. He says says mules aren't at all stubborn.

"We don't use that term. And that's not because we're sensitive. It's simply not true. Mules are single-minded. They will do anything you want up to the point you put their body in jeopardy, then they will stop right there," Gregg said.

DPS gets a windfall for drug probe aid

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety treasury is $2.9 million richer thanks to the state agency's participation in a federal marijuana investigation.

U.S. Attorney Henry Oncken presented a U.S. Treasury check for $2.9 million to DPS officials Monday.

The money was DPS's 40 percent share in the proceeds of $7.3 million in civil forfeitures in the San Antonio "Cash Crop" cases.

After that sting, the U.S. assets of Emilio Quintero-Payan, 32, and Juan Jose Quintero, 37, were seized. The fugitive Quintero brothers are thought to be in Mexico.

Fall storage onions add zest and health to diet

There is a crispness in the air, football is a favorite topic of conversation and our palates are ready to replace the cool salads and light menus of summer with aromatic fare that sports a little more zest.

Fall's changeable weather provides those glorious warm days of Indian summer followed by bone chilling, damp, gray days — ideal conditions for colds and flu to develop. Proper nutrition and maintaining good health this time of year is crucial to preventing these ailments that could spoil your fall activities.

Storage onions provide many vitamins and minerals, fiber content and an array of flavors. They have just appeared in the produce departments of local grocery stores.

These onions are different from the sweet onions found during the summer months. They still sport a variety of flavors ranging from sweet to pungent but have less water content and an extended storage life.

Researchers and dieticians credit onions with the ability to contribute toward a more healthy heart and circulatory system by lowering blood pressure and reducing cholesterol in the blood. Packed with more vitamin C than an apple, the onion also boasts B vitamins, iron, calcium, potassium and protein.

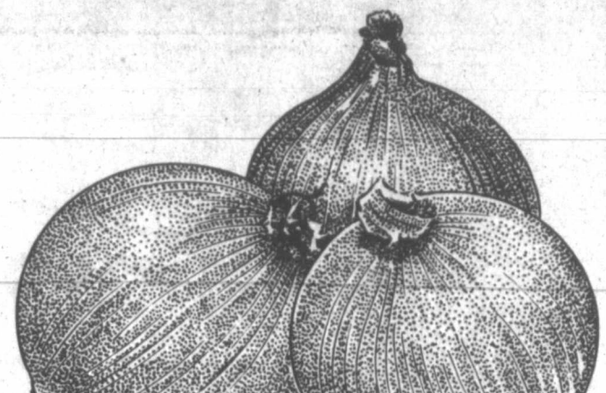

Onions may be purchased in prepackaged sacks or in bulk. When buying loose onions, choose those with short necks and dry, tissue thin skin. They should be firm or hard with a minimum of spots and blemishes. Store uncut onions in a cool airy spot in a single layer. Cut onions should be stored in a closed container in the refrigerator.

Try these adaptable recipes that utilize onions and guarantee raves from all who sample them!

ONION PATE
½ c. chopped onion
1 T. vegetable oil
¼ c. grated Parmesan cheese
2 T. soy sauce
French Bread, thinly sliced
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, chopped
2 pkgs. (3 oz. each) cream cheese, quartered
¼ c. minced fresh parsley

Saute onions and mushrooms in hot oil in large skillet over medium heat two minutes; remove from heat. Stir in cream cheese until blended. Add Parmesan cheese, parsley and soy sauce, stirring to combine. Refrigerate, covered, for three hours or until thoroughly chilled. Serve with French bread slices.

ONION DILL BREAD
1 pkg. dry yeast
1¼ c. warm low fat cottage cheese, creamed
2 T. onion, minced

2 t. dill seed
1 egg, unbeaten, plus 1 egg white
2 c. whole wheat flour
¼ c. warm water
2 T. honey
1 T. corn oil margarine, melted
½ t. soda

Soften yeast in water. Combine in mixing bowl the following ingredients: cottage cheese, honey, onion, margarine, dill seed, soda, eggs and softened yeast. Add flour gradually to form soft dough, beating well after each addition. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk, about one hour. Knead dough, turn into well greased dish or large loaf pan. Let rise 30 to 40 minutes. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 50 minutes.

HEARTLAND CHILI
½ lb. ground beef
1 med. onion, chopped
1 small green pepper, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 (28 oz.) can whole tomatoes undrained and chopped
1 (8 oz.) can tomato sauce
2 T. chili powder
½ t. salt
1 (15 oz.) can dark red kidney beans, drained

In large Dutch oven, brown ground beef with onion, green pepper and garlic; drain. Add remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover; simmer 30 minutes. Makes six one-cup servings.

ONION SOUP
1 T. margarine, melted
1 T. vegetable oil
2 med. onions, sliced
⅛ t. sugar
2 t. all-purpose flour
2½ c. water
2 unsalted beef bouillon cubes
2 T. vermouth
⅛ t. pepper
1 slice bread, toasted and cut into cubes

Combine margarine, oil and onions in pan. Cover and cook over low heat for 15 minutes. Add sugar and cook uncovered 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until onions are a deep golden brown. Mix in flour. Stir in water. Add bouillon cubes, vermouth and pepper and simmer 15 to 30 minutes. Place soup in bowls and top with cubes of toast. Makes three ½-cup servings.

GOLDEN PICKLED ONION RINGS
1½ lb. small red onions (or other mild onions), peeled
6 cloves
1 t. mustard seed
½ t. celery seed
6 black peppercorns
2 c. distilled white vinegar or cider vinegar
½ c. water
1 c. sugar
2 t. salt
1½ t. ground tumeric
⅛ t. ground cinnamon

Slice the onions ¼-inch thick and separate the slices into rings. Divide onions among three pint-size canning jars. In each jar, add the cloves, peppercorns, mustard seed and celery seed. Combine vinegar, water, sugar, salt, tumeric and cinnamon in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Remove from heat.

Fill jars with the hot solution leaving ¼-inch head space. If jars are to be stored in refrigerator, cover with doubled plastic and a screw cap. Cool and refrigerate. If they are to be shelf-stored, cover jars with two-piece dome lids and process in a hot water bath.

The pickles can be served after a day or two, but they are better after mellowing for several days or weeks. Unsealed and refrigerated, they keep indefinitely.

ONION AND RICE CASSEROLE
¼ c. margarine or butter
7 or 8 large onions (sauted until transparent)
½ c. rice
1 c. Swiss cheese, cubed
2-3rd c. half & half or milk
salt to taste

Put rice in sauce pan and cover with salted water (about one cup). Cook five minutes. Drain. Melt butter. Combine all ingredients. Bake one hour at 350 degrees F.

Oysters: Texas style!

By ANN E. GRANQUIST
Department of Agriculture

Texas oysters are in prime season and now is a great time to be enjoying them. Most oysters are sold live in the shell or fresh shucked, but you can also buy them canned and frozen breaded. Oyster connoisseurs say that the best way to enjoy oysters is raw on the half shell. However, if eating them raw doesn't appeal to you, there are other ways to enjoy this shellfish. Oysters can be baked, broiled, fried or placed in casseroles or soups.

An oyster tradition says they are in season only during the months that have the letter R, with the season beginning in September. This tradition no longer has much meaning since oysters can be eaten all year round. Oysters reproduce from May through August, and though they may be smaller during the summer months, they are just as flavorful as in the fall and winter.

When purchasing oysters in the shell, be sure the shells are tightly closed. The best way to know that an oyster is fresh is to make sure it is alive. If the shell is open, gently tap the oyster. If it is alive it will close the shell. If the shell stays open, the oyster is not fit to eat. If you have your fish store open the oysters, be sure to use the oysters immediately.

Oysters have a shallow shell on one side and a deep cupped shell on the other. Oysters are usually served in the deep shell when served raw. They should be well chilled in their shell and opened just before serving. When buying oysters you should plan to have about six oysters on the half shell per person.

When shucking live oysters you will probably need an oyster knife. Scrub oysters thoroughly with a stiff brush under cold running water. Discard any oysters with broken or gaping shells. Place oyster on firm surface with cupped side down and hinge at your left. With a heavy potholder or glove to protect your left hand, grasp oyster firmly at hinge end.

Work knife into shell on front right edge. Try to avoid plunging the knife straight into the oyster, but rather keep the knife against the shell. Move knife sharply to right and left to cut muscle attached to the shell. Lift off top shell with oyster still attached, cut meat free. Place oyster in deep sided shell with juices. Serve immediately.

This shellfish is rich in vitamins and minerals such as vitamin B-12, vitamin A, iron, phosphorus, zinc and calcium. Oysters are also high in protein and low in fat. They are low in calories with only 84 calories per 3.5 ounce serving.

Texas oysters on the half shell.

Last year 5.13 million pounds of oyster meat was harvested in Texas. This harvest was worth more than $8 million to Texas fishermen. If you would like more information on oysters or free seafood recipes, write to the Texas Department of Agriculture, 3652 N. Dixie St., Odessa, 79762.

TEXAS-STYLE BAKED OYSTERS
½ c. picante sauce
1 T. chopped fresh cilantro
½ t. Worchestershire sauce
½ t. salt
Dash of pepper
1 qt. large oysters
½ c. grated Monterrey Jack cheese
1 T. butter
Sliced dill pickles

Combine picante sauce, cilantro, Worchestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Place the oysters in a buttered baking dish and cover with picante sauce mixture. Sprinkle with grated cheese and dot with butter. Bake at 350 degrees F. until cheese is melted and the oysters are curled. Serve hot with dill pickle slices as garnish. Serves four to six.

BARBECUED OYSTERS
2 (12 oz.) containers fresh oysters, undrained
¼ c. tomato paste
2 T. chili sauce
2 T. lemon juice
1 T. Worchestershire sauce
1 t. prepared horseradish
¼ t. garlic powder
¼ t. onion powder
1-3rd c. crushed whole wheat crackers

Drain oysters, reserving two tablespoons liquid. Pat oysters dry with paper towels, and place in an eight-inch square baking dish. Combine two tablespoons oyster liquid and remaining ingredients, except crackers. Spoon over oysters. Sprinkle cracker crumbs over top of sauce. Bake at 350 degrees F. until oysters are curled and sauce is hot.

Take autumn fruit salad to next potluck

Next time you're invited for potluck, take this colorful salad. To keep the apple slices from turning brown before mealtime, brush them immediately after slicing with a mixture of lemon juice and water or ascorbic acid color keeper. Pack the salad makings and dressing in separate tightly covered containers. Then at serving time, add the dressing to the fruits and greens and toss.

AUTUMN FRUIT SALAD
4 c. torn mixed greens
1 med. apple, cored and sliced
1 c. raisins or chopped pitted dates
½ c. slivered almonds
½ c. shredded carrot
½ c. coconut
½ c. mayonnaise or salad dressing
½ c. dairy sour cream
¼ c. orange marmalade
1 T. milk.

Place torn lettuce in a large lettuce leaf-lined bowl. Arrange apples around edge of bowl. Arrange raisins, almonds, carrot and coconut in a circular design atop lettuce. Cover and chill. For dressing, combine mayonnaise, sour cream, marmalade and milk. Cover; chill. At serving time, spoon dressing over salad; toss to coat. Makes six to eight servings.

Pampan elected ADDC president

Martha Sublett of Pampa was elected president of the Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs for 1987 at the recent ADDC 35th Annual Convention in Cleveland, Ohio.

Pampan Doris Odom is to serve as the 1987 corresponding secretary and Claudia Deupree of the Amarillo Desk and Derrick Club is to serve as secretary.

More than 600 registrants, including 13 members from the Pampa Desk and Derrick Club, attended the meeting. Representatives arrived from 28 states and two Canadian provinces for the event with 103 clubs registered in attendance.

Sublett has served the Association board in the past as 1980 Region V director, treasurer in 1983, second vice president in 1985 and is currently serving as first vice president. She has served her local club in many capacities. In 1984 she was awarded Outstanding Member of the Year. She is assistant treasurer of Leonard Hudson Drilling Company.

Odom has served her local club as a director in 1979, secretary in Deupree has served the Amarillo Desk and Derrick Club as secretary, vice president and president in 1978. She has served as Region V credentials committee chairman in 1986; nominating committee chairman in 1984 and was Region V director in 1983. At the ADDC level, she has served on the by-laws review committee, The Oil and Gal Journal, The Abbreviator Update, and on the nominating committee. She is employed as a land department lease analyst with Mesa Limited Partnership.

Other officers elected to serve the board in 1987 will be Helen Turgeon from Calgary, Canada, first vice president; Barbara M. Rollinson of Seattle, Wash., second vice president; Nancy Price of Columbus, Ohio, treasurer; Dawn V. Errickson of Moorestown, N.J., Region I director; Nancy Elgin of Kansas City, Mo., Region II director; Martha Jourdan of Joyce, La., Region III director; Jo Kappelman of Corpus Christi, Region IV director; Kaye Gassie of Midland, Region V director; Karen Bailey - Cooper of Bartlesville, Okla., Region VI director; Barbara Kean of Salt Lake City, Utah, Region VII director and Irene Conn of Long Beach, Calif., Region VIII director.

Field trips attended by members included the Ken Miller Oil and Gas Museum near Shreve, Ohio, and Oil Country, Pa. Educational seminars were offered on such subjects as legislative overview, marketing, communications and leadership training.

A special presentation was made to retiring ADO employee, Emilee Flood, for her 26 years as office manager.

The welcoming speech, "Future Risks" was presented by Charles Bishop, manager of the economics department of Marathon Oil Company, Findlay, Ohio. Keynote speaker was Loretta Owens of Fort Worth, immediate past president.

Dr. Susan Arpad, director of women's studies at Fresno, Calif., State College gave a talk and slide presentation on "A Social History of the Oil Industry" for the Salute to Industry Luncheon on Friday. Lee Wilson Hoover of Plant City, Fla., first president of the ADDC in 1951 and 1952, spoke on "Reflections on ADDC's First Years" at the awards luncheon Saturday.

Frank E. Mosier, president and chief operating officer of Standard Oil Co., delivered a speech on "Save A Buck — Make A Buck."

In 1987 the official publication of the ADDC is to be published in Pampa by Pampa Desk and Derrick Club members Dorothy Roth and Jane Lowe as co-editors, Georgie Sadler as advertising coordinator and Esther McAdoo as editor of the personal column. The publication's name has been changed from The Oil and Gal Journal to The Desk and Derrick Journal, also.

The Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs furthers the education of its members by providing industry-related programs for women employees in the petroleum and allied industries. ADDC members represent virtually every profession in these industries.

Tired grandma won't stand up to babysitting demands

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My brother and sister each have two hard-to-handle children under 5 years old, who (too frequently) are left with my mother to watch. In a few weeks our family will have a reunion at our cabin. This should be a time of rest and relaxation for my mother, who takes round-the-clock care of her own frail mother.

I overheard my brother and sister talking about getting together with other family members to go golfing at the cabin. I'm sure they expect Mom to watch their kids while they play golf.

My mother is the type who can't say no, especially to her family. Poor Mom looks so tired most of the time, and I know it's because her grandchildren run her ragged. I've hinted about this to my brother and sister, but they pay no attention, and I always end up baby-sitting when Mom can't stay awake any longer. At her age, she shouldn't be taking care of kids eight hours a day.

Maybe if they see this in print, it will sink into their thick heads.

T.S. IN ST. PAUL

DEAR T.S.: Don't bet on it. Obviously your hints are not getting through to your brother and sister. It's kind of you to want to help your tired old mother, but unless she herself gathers the courage to say "Enough!" and you quit rushing in to rescue her, nothing will change.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am so mixed up and hurt I thought I would write to you for advice.

I've been going with this man for five years. (I'll call him Joe.) We both lost our mates seven years ago. I care for him very much and I know he cares for me. We are both in our 60s and have a good relationship.

I got a call from his cousin the other day. She told me that when Joe goes up north, he is going to see another woman. Abby, I need some advice. Should I come right out and tell him what I heard? Or should I keep my mouth shut?

His cousin delights in telling me catty little things about Joe, knowing it upsets me.

ALWAYS THE LAST TO KNOW

DEAR LAST: I don't know what your "good relationship" with Joe involves. If you are his one and only, and he is supposed to be yours, tell him what you heard. And be sure to tell him who told you. If you have no commitments to each other, keep your mouth shut.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I applaud your response to the letter from "Clean and Not Worried," advocating a law requiring everyone to submit to drug testing. You are one of the few people I've heard of who is not willing to jump on the bandwagon in favor of mandatory urine testing.

As a staff sergeant in the U.S. Air Force, I am subject to no-notice, routine drug testing. I have seen what happens when the presumption of innocence and the need for probable cause are disregarded.

In the Air Force, one positive urine sample (which is tested twice but is still not 100 percent reliable) results in a less than honorable discharge. Duty performance is not a consideration. Many lives and families have been ruined by a policy that is based on the false premise that a person is only as good as his/her bodily waste. I would hate to see everyone in this country living with the constant fear and uncertainty that I do.

Too many people in our great country are willing to relinquish the rights that I have pledged to give my life to defend. What a sad state of affairs.

CLEAN BUT WORRIED IN TACOMA

Children's fiction contest announced

AMARILLO — The West Texas chapter of the Society of Children's Book Writers is sponsoring a children's fiction contest in conjunction with its third annual conference on "Writing for Children and Teenagers." The contest is for adult authors who write for children.

The three categories are Young Readers (600 words maximum), Ages 9 to 12 (900 words maximum), and young adult (1,200 words maximum). Entries must be postmarked by Oct. 30.

Each entry must include a cover sheet with name, category, and title. Name must not appear elsewhere on the manuscript. Limit two entries. Fee is $3 for members of SCBW and $5 for non-members. Mail entries to Fiction Contest, Box 19254, Amarillo, 79114.

Judging the contest will be Jesse Osburn, author of three young adult novels. Osburn is president of the Tulsa Night-writers, and has conducted workshops on novel writing and short story writing at Southeastern Oklahoma State University.

Three individuals or businesses are being sought to sponsor contest awards. Each gift of $50 is tax-deductible, and the sponsor may name the award.

The conference, featuring a Texas Bluebonnet author, an illustrator, and a children's book editor, is set for Saturday, Nov. 15, at the Fifth Season Inn West in Amarillo. For more information, call 355-3241 or 352-4344.

El Progresso Club discusses collectibles

Members and guests of El Progresso Club met in "The Bunkhouse," 401 N. Purviance, for an informal look at the numerous collectibles displayed by owner Mrs. Don Morrison.

Paintings, china, crocheted pieces, grapevine wreaths, quilts, quilted vests and jackets, antique tables, chests and beds and numerous other pieces were shown in a homelike atmosphere.

Mrs. J. G. Morris and the social committee served as hostesses with Mrs. Tom Perkins, vice president, serving punch and Mrs. Glenn Radcliff registering guests.

Next meeting is to be Oct. 14 in the home of Mrs. Bruce Riehart, club president. The program topic is to be "Cooking in Texas."

Everett, Watters named SWC's top players

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff has seen some talent in his 14 years at the Waco school with the likes of Mike Singletary, Walter Abercrombie, Dennis Gentry and others who are now starring in the NFL.

But right now, Thomas Everett is outdoing them all in the Southwest Conference.

"Thomas is playing as well as any player I've ever seen," Teaff says. "Thomas is a unique player because he is in the right position on every play."

Everett certainly was in Saturday's 45-14 victory over Texas Tech. He had two interceptions in the rout to become The Associated Press SWC Defensive Player of the Week for the second time this season.

On offense, Southern Methodist's Bobby Watters, a junior from Garland, Texas, led the Mustangs to 31-21 victory over Texas Christian in the Cotton Bowl.

He hit 11 of 18 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns, ran for another score and took the Mustangs on four long touchdown drives. The performance earned him the AP's SWC Offensive Player of the Week tag.

Everett, a free safety, also broke up two more passes, made 11 tackles, and hit Texas Tech quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver on a blitz that forced a short throw returned for a touchdown by Aaron Grant.

Everett was honored on the opening week of the season for a sparkling performance against Wyoming.

Watters, meanwhile, completed eight consecutive passes during one stretch. After the game, he dwelled more on his lone interception than he did on his performance.

"I was trying to put some touch on the ball, but it slipped out of my hand," Watters said.

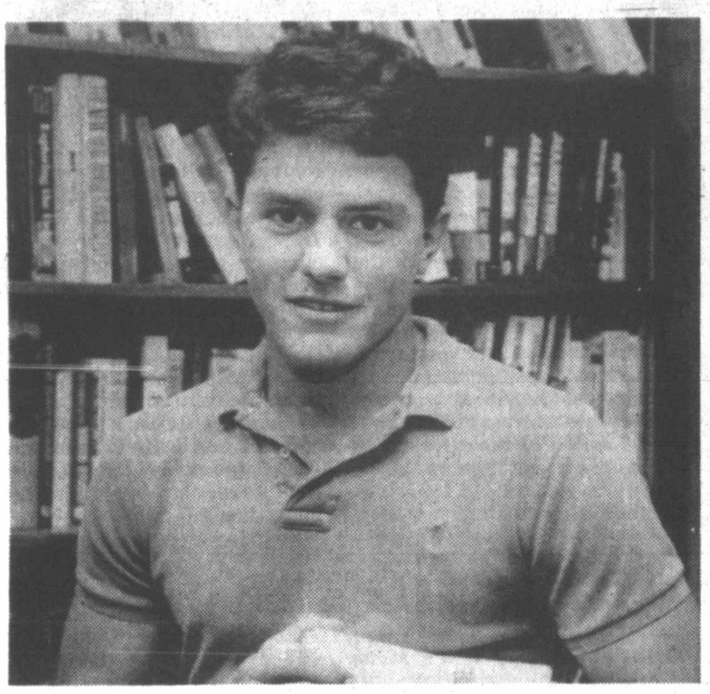

TCU's Tony Brooks returned it 54 yards before he was tackled on the SMU 1-yard-line — by Watters.

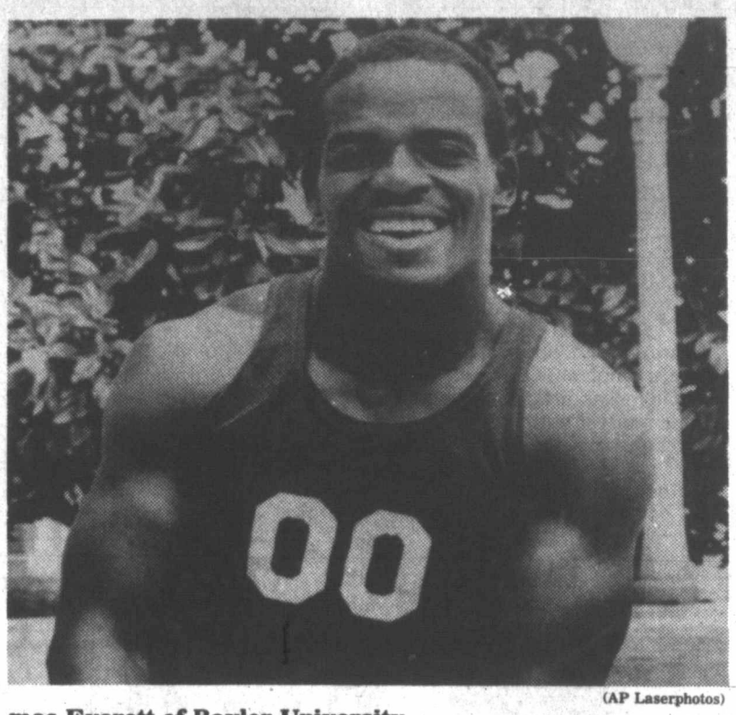

"It made me sick," Watters said.

Other than that, Watters had a tremendous day. His touchdown drives covered 80, 81, 80 and 74 yards.

"Balance is the key for us now," says SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "We can mix the pass with the run. Bobby shows a lot of poise out there. The kid has a lot of class. He showed he can bounce back from adversity."

Watters said, "We have some tremendous receivers in Jeffrey Jacobs, Ron Morris and Albert Reese. It's just a matter of getting the ball to them."

Anxious Flutie gets tryout with winless Pack

By JEFF MAYERS
AP Sports Writer

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Doug Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College, wants to play in the National Football League. The winless Green Bay Packers are looking for a quarterback to run their ball-control offense.

Both might get their wish.

"We watched him in his college career," Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg said Tuesday before Flutie's first NFL tryout. "He can be a very, very exciting football player.

"He was a quarterback that everyone said was too small, yet he got the job done and he got it done with flair," Gregg added. "He's a winner."

Tom Coughlin, a former Boston College assistant and a big Flutie booster, is an assistant to Gregg, who says the collegiate offense made successful by Flutie is similar to Green Bay's new offense.

Flutie, who has said he can run any NFL offense, indicated Coughlin was a go-between in his initial contacts with the Packers.

"I'm anxious to find a spot for myself in the NFL. I've been working out regularly ... so I feel like I'm in pretty good shape, and my arm feels pretty good.," the 5-foot-9, 176-pound Flutie, who played a year for the New Jersey Generals of the idle United States Football League, said. "The reason I'm here is because the opportunity is here. If this opportunity goes by the boards, then maybe it will be somewhere else."

Gregg is seeking a remedy for a sick offense — the Packers have scored only two touchdowns in four games this season under the direction of third-year pro Randy Wright and veteran backup Vince Ferragamo. Rookie Robbie Bosco of Brigham Young has been on injured reserve the entire season with a sore shoulder, and it's unknown when he'll return.

In addition to Flutie, Gregg worked out Chuck Fusina, who quarterbacked the USFL champion Baltimore Stars. Fusina, 6-1 and 195 pounds, played sparingly for Tampa Bay after being drafted by that NFL team in the fifth round in 1979.

"I like him," Gregg said of the former Penn State quarterback. "He's been a successful quarterback. He's a veteran, knows what he's doing. He looked good in the workout."

Fusina is a free agent, but Flutie's situation is more complicated. The Los Angeles Rams selected Flutie in the 11th round of the 1985 draft and still own his rights.

However, the Rams acquired rookie Jim Everett from the Houston Oilers last week, then gave Flutie permission to work out with the Packers. Flutie, meanwhile, is in the process of finalizing an agreement with Generals' owner Donald Trump to free him from a personal services contract.

"I'm looking, but I can't make a move yet," Flutie said. "Hopefully, because of the situation with Trump settling, there will be more opportunities."

Flutie's attorney, Bob Woolf, said there is a verbal agreement with Trump that has yet to be signed. He said he would like Flutie to have more NFL tryouts, but added: "That remains to be seen ... I'm not precluding Green Bay."

He also said he more concerned with Flutie playing football than with the size of an NFL team's media market as Green Bay has the smallest in the league.

"Doug's very anxious to play. He's been a pain in the neck to me," Woolf joked. The size of the market "doesn't bother me at all. ... That (the commercial aspect) usually takes care of itself."

At a Tuesday news conference, Gregg said he would talk to the Rams following Flutie's tryout. After a closed late afternoon workout in the Packers' indoor practice facility, Gregg declined comment when asked if he would pursue negotiations with the Rams.

But he indicated the Packers would not pursue Flutie at any cost.

"We'll have to base this on what we think is good for us, not necessarily what they (the Rams) are asking."

"It may come to nothing," Flutie said. "I'm just happy for the opportunity."

Lucas honored by lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — Former NBA player John Lucas has been honored by Texas state lawmakers for his work in steering youths away from the drug abuse that ended his basketball career.

The Legislature Tuesday approved a resolution that said Lucas' work with youths "is of great significance and indeed merits special legislative recognition and commendation."

Lucas was cut from the Houston Rockets last season after failing a drug test. He now serves as president of Students Taking Action Not Drugs, an anti-drug group based in Houston.

Lucas said the key to fighting drug abuse is to build peer pressure against it.

"We won't be looking to professional athletes. That's too far ahead for kids to look. We'll be looking for their role models to be student government presidents, high school athletes and parent-teacher leaders," Lucas said.

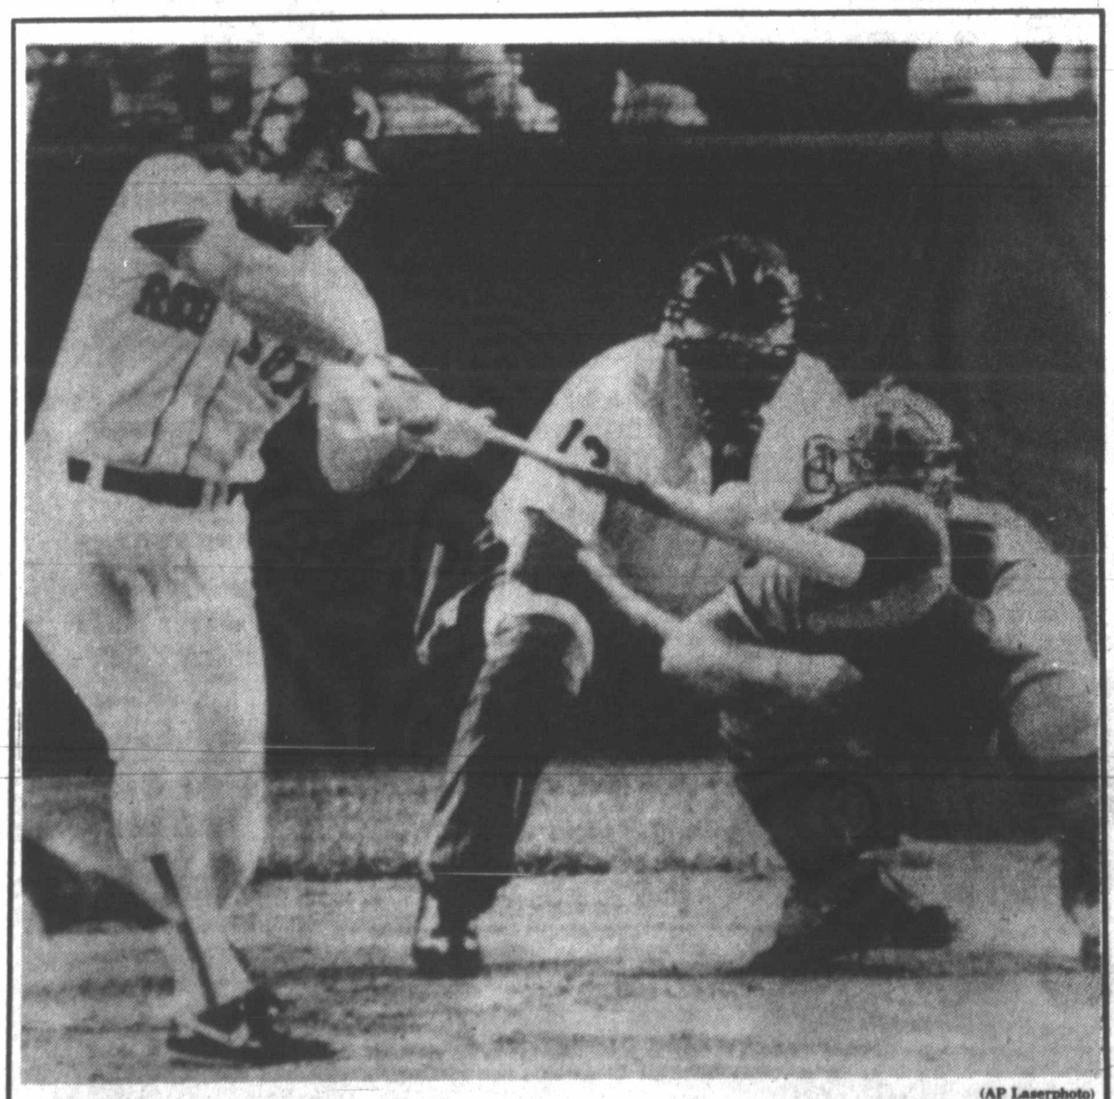

He said his problems began when he had his first beer in junior high school.

Lucas would not say if he had any plans to attempt to return to the NBA, but said he has "been talking to eight or nine basketball teams."

"For me, I have to look just at today. And today for me STAND is the most important thing," he said.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said STAND works to help youths resist peer pressure that can cause them to experiment with dangerous drugs.

"STAND perpetuates the idea that alcohol and other drugs can be destructive and a severe handicap to the maturing adolescent if not confronted early, and provides a positive forum for positive exchange of peer and community support," Wilson said.

No socializing for Landry

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry has former assistants throughout the NFL, but he doesn't buy them dinner when his Dallas Cowboys come calling. It's business, you understand.

"I don't think you can concentrate in a social atmosphere," Landry says. "That's why I don't see 'em until I seem them across the field. We don't go out to dinner or socialize."

For the second straight week, Landry will be taking on a former assistant. This time it's Denver Coach Danny Reeves in a Sunday afternoon game in Mile High Stadium. They've never matched X's and O's against each other before.

Landry is fresh off a 31-7 victory Monday night over another former assistant, Gene Stallings.

"It's always a special game to go against someone you worked with," Landry says. "But you don't think that much about it when the game starts."

Landry is 11-2-1 against his former assistants.

Asked in a telephone hookup with the media if that bothered him, Reeves said, "Coach Landry has a record like that against everybody else, too. I thought he should have been Coach of the Year last season for winning the NFC East."

Reeves said it is nevertheless exciting to go against Landry.

"We're trying to mold our organization here like the Cowboys," he said. "Just about everything I do I learned from him."

Reeves joked that the only time Landry let him call plays from the press box "was when it was third and long. I never got to call any of those first-and-10 plays."

Landry said Reeves reminds him of himself.

"Danny has a great football mind, and he kind of played (in the NFL) like I did," Landry said. "Neither one of us was very fast but we were smart enough to learn the game itself.

"I remember Danny was a free agent (running back) and we really couldn't find a spot on the roster for him. However, he had a knack for the big play so we kept him. He's smart, capable and has always been a competitor."

The Cowboys, who are 3-1 overall against the Broncos including a 27-10 victory in Super Bowl XII in 1978, lost 41-20 to Denver in 1980.

"It's tough to play a Monday night game then go there," Landry said. "We just tell our players not to think about the altitude. We don't worry about it because there is no way you can get used to it. There's no sense getting there early."

Reeves said the altitude could hurt Dallas.

"It's hard to breathe when you first get here," Reeves said. "It's like going to Dallas when you're not used to the heat. It's a definite advantage."

Landry could have one of his big guns back for the 2 p.m. clash — running back Tony Dorsett, who missed the St. Louis game with knee and ankle problems.

"Tony has a chance to work on Thursday or Friday," Landry said. "He's feeling better and some of the soreness is gone. If Tony is ready, he will start."

Landry said he is glad he worked Herschel Walker at tailback when he signed with the Cowboys in August.

"My number one objective was to have him (Walker) learn the tailback position in case Tony was hurt," Landry said. "Well, here Tony is hurt and it was very important that Herschel played as well as he did."

Walker, making his first NFL start, rushed for 82 yards on 19 carries and caught five passes for 57 yards and a touchdown.

Landry said Walker would continue to be used "in the best interests of the team. The main thing is to score and win. I love to see Herschel run and catch. But Dorsett is running as good as I've seen him."

Big-headed player finds helmet

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The search for a size 9 helmet has ended, and the football career of Anthony Williams is finally about to begin.

Williams, a 6-foot-5, 270-pound sophomore at Fort Worth Polytechnic High School, had been sidelined while the school searched for a helmet to fit him.

Even pro teams didn't have a helmet to fit the defensive tackle.

Among the Dallas Cowboys, defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones wears the largest — 8¼. Not even Chicago Bears' tackle William "The Refrigerator" Perry, a fellow 8¼, wears one that large.

James Willingham, Fort Worth assistant athletic director in charge of football, contacted almost every sporting goods company in the nation, but was told it would cost $70,000 to construct a mold large enough to accommodate Williams' head.

The search ended Tuesday, when Williams slipped on a helmet altered by Alamo Athletics of San Antonio.

The company took a size 8⅞ helmet, removed the padding and Velcro fasteners and then glued the padding in place.

"It still meets all the basic requirements," said Willingham. The helmet will cost the Fort Worth school district no more than a regular one, he said.

"We're just happy the kid can play," said John Holland of Alamo Athletics. "The helmet is not a thing of beauty, but it passes all tests and specifications."

Williams said, "It fits fine."

Lady Harvesters rally past Borger

BORGER — The Pampa Lady Harvesters came from behind in both matches to defeat Borger, 15-7, 15-12, in District 1-4A volleyball action Tuesday.

Pampa trailed in the first game 10-1 before coming back to win with Keitha Clark serving the game point. Clark, along with Serina Clinkingbeard, came off the bench to help the Lady Harvesters win the second game after trailing 7-3.

Pampa coach Phil Hall said the Lady Harvesters received strong all-around performances from Tanya Lidy and Melinda Jackson along with strong serving by Stephanie Jeffrey and Lisa Lindsey.

Pampa is now 2-2 in district play and 8-10 overall.

"The girls showed a lot of intensity and they wanted to win," Hall added.

Pampa's next district meeting is Saturday on the homecourt against Hereford. Starting time for that match has been changed from 2 p.m. to 12 noon.

Playoff beginning?

Warriors to meet Vernon Northside

By DAN MURRAY
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Last year, almost. This year, they want it.

The Miami Warriors begin their drive for what they hope is a state playoffs berth when they travel to Vernon Northside Friday for the teams' 7:30 p.m. district opener.

A 40-28 short-handed loss to Guthrie was all that kept the Warriors from making the playoffs last season. With nearly all of last year's team back, Miami naturally feels like it should be in the post-season cast this time around.

The Warriors have indicated they're capable enroute to a 2-1 record. Now it's time to prove it.

"They're totally convinced they're gonna win district," Miami head coach Currie McWilliams said. "I don't know if that's good or bad. I have a hard time understanding these kids. They're the quietest bunch of kids I've ever seen.

"I think they feel like if they play good football they can play with anybody."

The Warriors' first district opponent, Northside, is a sort of unknown quantity. McWilliams has had problems getting film on the team, and isn't sure what to expect.

He knows Northside's 1-3, but most recently the owners of a 40-point win over Rule.

"It's scary," McWilliams said. "I know they (Northside) are fairly young and they're not real big. Apparently they've got some kids down there that can put some points on the board."

Northside is a ground-oriented team, and will try to attack Miami around the ends. When Northside throws it's mostly to the wingback, and that's something McWilliams has the Warriors working on.

"We need to improve on the play of our safties," he said. "I haven't been worried as much about them as I have about us."

So much so, that once this week the Warriors went through an entire practice without running so much as a down. Drills and drills alone were the focal point.

That's because Miami knows it's favored to go to the playoffs, and the people there know how long it's been since the Warriors have. When the Warriors lost to Threeway, townsfolk brought tractor tires for them to pull the next week in practice.

If Miami does win district, McWilliams has vowed to shave his moustache and head as reward. That cutting, however, is far from certain.

"This'll be the first step to the playoffs. That's how we're approaching it," McWilliams said. "That's what it's gonna take. We're gonna have to get better each week.

Pirates ready for league opener

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

LEFORS — Buoyed by the outburst of their previously static offense, the Lefors Pirates hit the road Friday for the first time this year for their 7 p.m. district opener with Patton Springs.

The Pirates had scored just 26 points in their first three games, but last Friday they more than doubled that. Lefors pounded West Texas Christian 54-8, using for the first time minor adjustments in the offense.

They worked, as Kent Kerbo ran for four touchdowns, Kevin Mayfield for two and Kirk Kerbo teamed with Kevin Howe for 98 yards passing, including a 55-yard TD strike.

Now they're ready for the serious part of the season. Lefors' next six games are for a berth in the state playoffs.

"We watched the film and told 'em what a good job they'd done offensively...and how hard they'd worked last week," Lefors head coach Brent Fountain said. "Then we told 'em our record's 0-0 now. We told em they've got to work as hard or even harder the next six weeks if they want to go anywhere."

The Pirates should be favored against 1-2 Patton Springs. After beating Smyer 50-0, the Rangers lost consecutive games to Rochester and Wellman by the 45-point rule.

"They're aggressive and they like to hit, but the way I understand it from Wellman they're slow," Fountain said.

What speed the Rangers have is at tailback, and the sweep is a Patton Springs favorite. The Rangers are ground-oriented, operating from a variety of sets.

On defense, the leader is big middle linebacker Pedro Martinez (5-8, 215).

"He'll step up and hit you," Fountain said.

If the game turns out to be a hitting match, that would suit the Pirates fine. Lefors prides itself on its defense and aggressiveness.

"We could hold our own I think," Fountain said, tongue planted firmly in cheek.

The Pirates are ready. Enroute to their 2-2 record, they've already won more games than they did in each of the previous three years in 11-man football. They like it.

"They're fired up," Fountain said. "They're ready to go in district. They want to get a Ranger this week.

"They were pretty excited when they saw the film and saw what they've done. I don't know how many times they've told me, 'We've won twice as many as we have in the last three years.'

"They're excited about winning, and they've got that attitude about wanting to win."

Rangers' rookie gets first victory

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — To say that Texas Rangers right-hander Kevin Brown got his baptism under fire might be understating the case.

Brown, who pitched this spring for Georgia Tech University, got his first decision as a professional on Tuesday night, and it was a victory in the major leagues.

The 21-year-old Georgian pitched five innings of 6-hit, 2-run ball as the Rangers beat the Oakland A's 9-5 for their fourth win in a row.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous at the start," said Brown, who walked none and struck out four. "But I was able to control my nerves and after the first inning, I was pretty comfortable out there."

He left after five innings with a 7-2 lead.

Simpson to defend Southern

BY TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Tim Simpson, a nine-year PGA Tour veteran, gets to defend his only tour victory this week, the Southern Open.

The former University of Georgia All-American has recorded a career high in earnings this year, ranking 44th on the money list. But Simpson has not won since taking the $63,000 top prize a year ago over the par-70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

"It's been a little bit of a disappointing summer," Simpson, 30, said. "Overall this year I haven't been quite as consistent as I'd like to be.

"My annual earnings ($175,469) this year exceeded my previous high, but it seems I haven't been in the hunt to win quite as much."

Simpson had four top 10 finishes in 1985, including his Southern victory, while earning $164,702. In 1986 he has been in the top 10 three times, but not in position to win.

Simpson took last week off and stayed home to work on his game and be with his wife and daughter.

"The year is not over yet. I'm going to play the rest of the way and hope to finish real solid," he said.

The field for the 72-hole, $350,000 event that begins Thursday also has nine of this year's top 20 money-winners, including No. 2 Bob Tway, a four-time winner this year.

Tway has earned $643,946, and is $9,350 behind leader Greg Norman. Tway needs to finish ninth or better to pass Norman, who has not entered any more PGA tournaments this year.

Senate approves bill aimed at drug trafficking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chasing right behind the House in election year anti-drug fever, the Senate has passed a multi-billion dollar bill that would fight illegal narcotics through education, rehabilitation and enforcement.

The Senate bill that passed 97-2 Tuesday does not contain three controversial provisions in the House version, and it is likely a conference will be necessary to resolve the differences.

The House measure that passed 392-16 on Sept. 11 would give civilian arrest powers to the military to pursue drug smugglers, revive the now-banned federal death penalty for some drug-related killings and allow use of some illegally seized evidence in court cases.

Those provisions were strategically left out of the Senate bill to avoid a filibuster, even though two of them, the death penalty and "good faith" exception to the exclusionary rule, are popular with most senators.

But mindful that a much broader death penalty bill passed the Senate 63-32 in February 1984, and that the exclusionary rule was approved that same month 63-24, Majority Leader Bob Dole., R-Kan., said the Senate might accept the House language on those items.

However, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, predicted a conference committee would agree on a compromise "exceedingly close to the Senate bill."

If the bill is returned to the Senate with any of the three controversial provisions, Biden warned, a filibuster would "bring the bill down."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., with Dole at his side, made clear that the Senate would oppose the House military language.

Alluding to the House provision, he said, "We cannot permit the armed forces to go into hot pursuit" to arrest drug traffickers. Nor, he added, could the armed forces meet the House deadline of sealing U.S. borders against narcotics smugglers within 45 days.

Voting against the Senate bill were Sens. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., and John Melcher, D-Mont. Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, was the only senator not voting.

Soviet grain deal offer withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disappointed by a Soviet decision to pass up a massive U.S. grain deal sweetened with a $15-a-ton subsidy, the Reagan administration says the offer is dead.

"There will be no renewal of the offer," Undersecretary of Agriculture Daniel G. Amstutz said Tuesday as the midnight deadline approached without any sign that Moscow was in a shopping mood.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the proposal, which would have amounted to more than $350 million, was going out "with a whimper" because of the Nicholas Daniloff affair.

He said that once the two governments became preoccupied with Soviet espionage charges against the American journalist, who has since been released by Moscow, it was no longer possible to go through with the grain deal.

Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, charged that the plan to reward Soviet purchases under a five-year agreement with in-kind bonuses from government grain stocks had been a "fraudulent exercise" in the first place and was designed to bring on a negative response from Moscow.

Congressional investigators, meanwhile, reported to Bedell's House Agriculture subcommittee that Soviet trade officials told them the major cause of the rebuff was that even with the $15-a-ton subsidy they still could get the grain elsewhere for a further discount of $7 to $10 a ton.

Bedell acknowledged reports that the Soviets purchased 1 million tons of wheat from the European Economic Community on Friday at about $76 a ton and added he was "surprised that the Europeans have subsidized their wheat as heavily as they have."

He also said the soft wheat involved in the reports is no substitute for the hard wheat the Soviets would have bought here.

Amstutz said in a statement that the administration's reaction to the Soviet decision not to buy grain "is one of surprise and disappointment."

Names in the news

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Heather Thomas is making remarkable progress from surgery on her left knee and is expected to be released from the hospital this weekend.

Miss Thomas, 29, has undergone corrective surgery on both legs at St. John's Hospital and Health Center since being hit by a car as she crossed a street Sept. 16.

The actress, co-star of the canceled ABC-TV series "The Fall Guy," was in good condition Tuesday, a day after surgery to repair ligament damage to her left knee, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Miller.

"The ligaments in her left knee should heal in about three weeks, during which time she will continue to wear a (knee) brace," Ms. Miller said. "Meanwhile, the ligament injuries to her right knee have been repaired and are healing very nicely.

"Miss Thomas is in excellent spirits and is resting comfortably."
