Police searching for gunman who robbed Rip Griffin's

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
News Editor

Big Spring police are continuing their search for a gunman who robbed Rip Griffin's Truck/Travel Store, the store's clerk and two patrons just after 10 p.m. Monday.

According to reports filed by investigating officers, the store's clerk, Mike Smith, reported the robbery at 10:10 p.m. Monday evening.

The gunman entered the back garage area of the truck stop, brandished a small caliber handgun and ordered the store's occupants to lie face down on the floor.

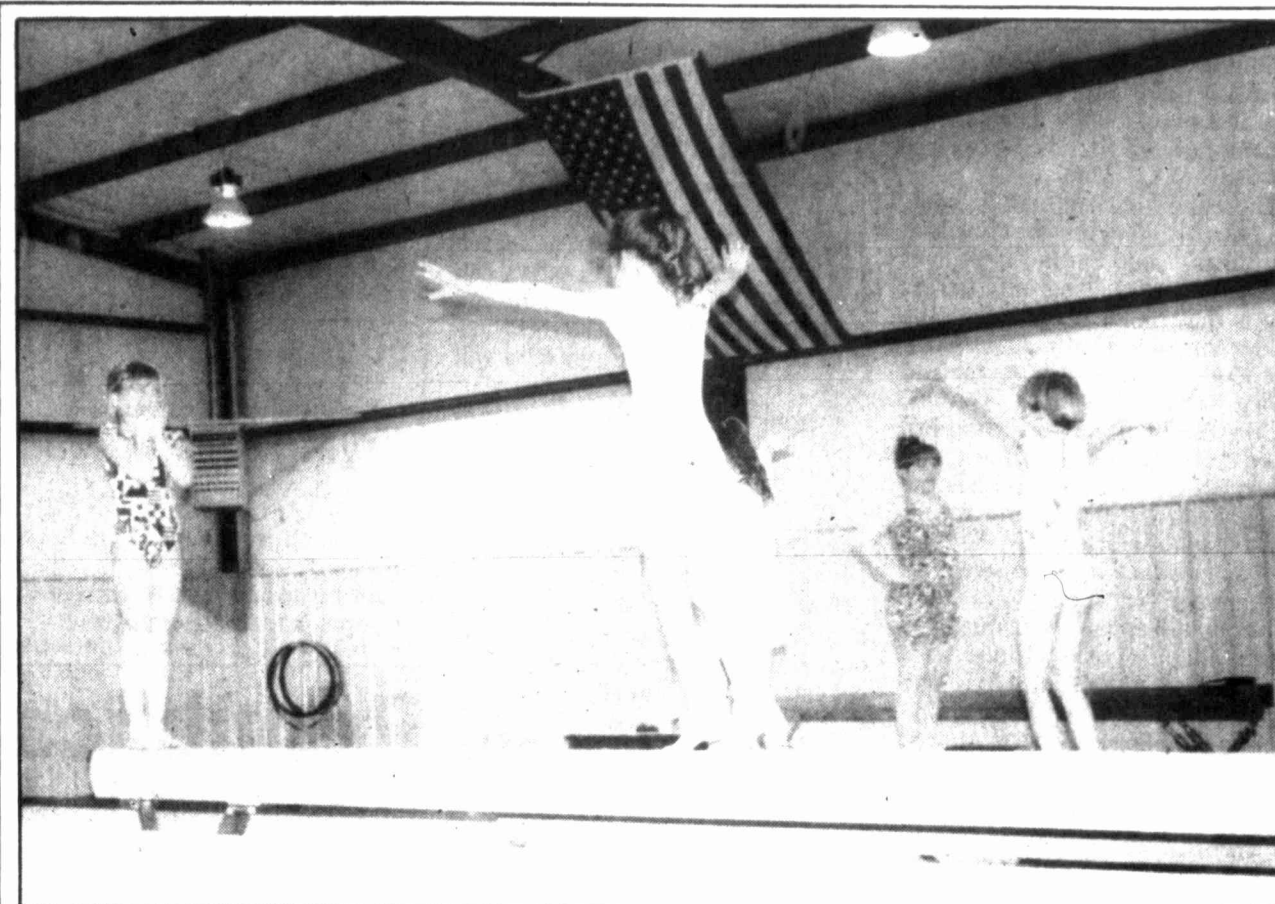

According to Detective Sgt. Scott Griffin, the gunman then took the wallets and watches of the three people inside the store and took an undisclosed amount of money from the store's cash register.

Reports show the individual victims reported their wallets with a total of $561 in cash.

The robber then ordered the victims to remain on the floor and fled in an unknown direction, Griffin said.

Police say the victims described their assailant as a black man, approximately six feet, two inches tall and weighing about 170 pounds. He was wearing a blue baseball cap, a denim jacket with a hood, blue jeans and white tennis shoes.

The robber was also wearing black, fingerless gloves and sported a light, three-day beard that does not cover severe acne scars on his face.

Prairie dog control on tap for council meeting

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council will discuss prairie dog control at its meeting today at 5:30 p.m.

Assistant City Manager Tom Decell recently met with Chester Antilly who gave a proposal to the city for humanly trapping and removing prairie dogs, at a rate of $125 per day that he works. Antilly believes he can eliminate or greatly reduce the impact of the problem with the prairie dog populations.

Antilly emphasized that no prairie dogs would be destroyed, as he has a ready use for all he could relocate. He has a 30 acre tract of land east of Abilene, and was considering building a prairie dog town there for his own use and profit.

In addition, after April 15, the due date for all female prairie dogs, Antilly indicated that he would come back free of charge as he has a market for the baby prairie dogs.

Also on the agenda is a review of a Texas Department of Transportation speed limit study Big Spring Traffic Commission and its recommendations for FM 700: The speed limit between Miami Street and the entrance to the Big Spring State Park should remain at 45 miles per hour; the sections of FM 700 from Miami Street east to Interstate 20, and from the entrance to the State Park west to Business 20 should be increased to 50 mph.

The primary reason for not changing the 45 mph limit between Miami Street and the entrance to the state park are two dangerous intersections with FM 700-Wasson Road and Virginia. At Virginia and FM 700, there have been at least two fatalities in the last six years.

In other business, City Manager Lanny

Lambert is recommending an increase in the charge for returned checks to $15. The city currently charges only $5 for a returned check, based on an August 1980 ordinance, Lambert says is now inappropriate and out-of-date.

The Howard County Sheriff's Posse and Gatti Productions from Tustin, Ca., have requested a circus permit for March 8, 1994 and have produced a certificate of insurance for the coliseum, Howard College and the city of Big Spring for that March 8 date. The council will consider approval of the circus permit request.

Also being discussed is a study by Tom Ferguson, director of finances for the city, of new rates for water purchases by the city from the Colorado River Municipal Water District. Due to an annual increase in charges of $141,030 in the fixed rate and $5,500 in water delivery charges, the net increase in charges to the city are $146,530, Ferguson said, in a Jan. 19 letter to Lambert, city manager.

"I have calculated several combinations of increases in our life line rate and per thousand rate that will generate this amount. Based on 9,524 billable units inside the city and 270 billable units outside the city and projected water sales of $1.945 billion gallons, the combinations of increases are as follows: Life line rate only-$1.21 per unit, per thousand rate only-$10.0 cents per thousand, Life line rate and per thousand rate is 59.4 cents per unit plus 5 cents per thousand, and life line rate and per thousand rate-$4.2 cents per unit plus 3 cents per thousand.

The city council will consider these different rate change proposals in tonight's meeting at Building 1106 at the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark located at 2000 Air Park Drive West.

1995 budget could make crop insurance more of a bargain

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Crop insurance will become more of a bargain for growers under a key proposal in the 1995 agriculture budget.

The proposal is one of several calls for legislation in the Agriculture Department's $60.3 billion budget, released Monday. The budget cuts 1994 spending by 7 percent.

Congress also will be asked to approve user fees and a reorganization plan for the department.

Under the proposal, crop insurance would replace disaster payments as the main method of helping growers through droughts, floods and other calamities.

The proposal had been in effect last summer, some of the $2.1 billion in disaster money that Congress approved for victims of Midwestern floods and Southern droughts would have been covered by insurance instead.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corp., however, hasn't been doing well. It had a $3.6 million deficit coming into 1994 because losses have exceeded premiums.

One reason is that too few people take part, and those who do are in states with the highest risks. Also, Congress has been too willing to come through with disaster payments, which don't count against the deficit.

"This year's flood demonstrated over and over again that it is time to create a single crop protection system that works," said Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy. "Right now we have a crop insurance program and congressional disaster appropriations, both of which are too expensive and self-defeating."

Under the crop insurance proposal, farmers would have to sign up for basic catastrophic coverage in order to take part in farm programs or receive aid from the Farmers Home Administration. The basic coverage would be free, except for a paperwork-handling charge of $50.

The plan would pay farmers only if they lost more than 50 percent of their crop. Then they would get only 65 percent of the value of those crop losses that exceed 50 percent of the normal yield.

Unlike current crop insurance, prevented and delayed plantings would be covered. Many growers lost insurance coverage during the heavy rainfall and flooding in the Midwest last year because they never got their crop in the ground.

Farmers could buy more coverage at government-subsidized rates.

The details won't be ready until later this month. And one key question is how to force Congress to refrain from handing out more payments.

All the department can promise now is provisions that "will reduce the likelihood" of further ad hoc assistance.

Because disaster payments have been off budget, lawmakers will have to agree on how to add some of those payments to the crop insurance program's costs when calculating the deficit.

In other parts, the budget proposal makes no changes in core farm programs. It assumes normal weather, improved trade and earlier program cuts will cause a $3.6 billion drop in spending for subsidies and other mandatory payments to farmers.

Some $78.6 million would be spent to bring 300,000 more acres of farmed or cultivated wetlands out of production by paying easements to farmers.

Proposed user fees include enough to raise $103 million for the Food Safety and Inspection Service. The service plans to hire about 200 more inspectors and increase research on food safety.

The budget would increase spending for targeted research into food safety and pesticide alternatives. But Congress would have less to spend for favorite research and building projects.

Sarajevo buries its dead 10 years after Olympics

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Ten years ago today, Muslims, Serbs and Croats celebrated the opening of the 1984 Winter Olympics. This morning, in the shadow of the Olympic stadium, Sarajevo residents laid to rest more of their war dead.

The stadium has been wrecked by shelling in a 22-month-old war that has killed more than 200,000 Muslims, Serbs and Croats. The stadium is now a base for French peacekeepers.

"The only thing that still reminds me of the Olympics are the crowds of journalists," said Sarajevo resident Dragan Laganin. "The only difference is that I know they will not be writing anything happy about Sarajevo now, just the horror, terror and misery."

Alija Izetbegovic, the Bosnian president, promised in a letter to the International Olympic Committee that his Muslim-dominated forces would hold their fire during the Winter Games that begin this week in Lillehammer, Norway.

The hard-line leader of Bosnia's Croats, Mate Boban, quit today in a move that could improve the prospects of peace negotiations that resume Thursday in Geneva. At least that's what the optimists hope for.

Boban, leader of the Bosnia Croats' self-proclaimed state of Herzeg Bosnia in southern and western Bosnia-Herzegovina, had been associated with a breakdown in a Muslim-Croat alliance against the Serbs.

The Croats have suffered heavy losses in recent fighting with the Muslims in central Bosnia.

Funerals were held today for 20 of the 68 people killed when a shell slammed into a Sarajevo marketplace Saturday. Forty were buried Monday in ceremonies rushed due to the danger of sniping and shelling from Serbs in the hills.

The bitterness at the funerals reflected the repressed anger and frustration over the world's failure to take action to end the siege of Sarajevo.

As Sarajevo buried the dead from the market massacre, European leaders once again stalled on decisive action to end the Bosnian Serb siege and opted instead to pass the responsibility on to NATO.

The 16 NATO nations plan to meet Wednesday in Brussels, Belgium.

The Clinton administration decided Monday night to ask its NATO allies to authorize air strikes if the Serbs persist in their attacks or if they do not remove their more than 500 heavy guns from high spots around Sarajevo.

European Union foreign ministers meeting in Brussels could not reach consensus Monday on France's call to set a deadline for Serbs to end their attacks or face Western bombing runs. The foreign ministers will let NATO decide.

Russia also weighed in, issuing a tough new warning: Any NATO air strikes on the Serbs — Russia's Orthodox Christian, Slavic brethren — would have serious repercussions for East-West relations.

The NATO allies last year blocked a similar U.S. appeal, partly out of concern U.N. peacekeepers might get caught in the cross-fire.

At Monday's EU meeting, only the Netherlands, Belgium and Italy favored France's proposed ultimatum. Other European nations balked, notably Greece, which holds the EU's rotating presidency and is allied by its Orthodox religion with the Serbs.

In Moscow, Deputy Foreign Minister Vitaly Churkin warned NATO that retaliatory air strikes could "cast a very dark shadow on our relationship."

Russia's rhetoric has hardened since parliamentary elections in December showed the appeal and strength of nationalists, like Vladimir Zhirinovskiy, who strongly oppose international efforts against the Serbs.

Trying to get bread

Azerbaijani women stand in a long line, showing their identification cards, in order to get free bread in the city of Imishli, about 38 miles from the border with Nagorno-Kharabakh, recently. Due to the war with Armenia and the economic crisis, only local residents can get bread here. More than 15,000 people have died and a million lost their homes in the six-year war over Nagorno-Kharabakh after the predominantly-Armenian population began a campaign for independence.

Republicans want deeper cuts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican lawmakers want President Clinton to take a bigger bite out of the deficit, and they have another problem with his new budget: It's missing the two cornerstones of his political agenda, health care and welfare reform.

"This is an MIA budget," declared Sen. Pete Domenici, drawing on the military abbreviation for missing in action.

The 1995 budget war officially begins today with a parade of administration officials defending the spending plan on Capitol Hill.

Clinton faces trouble on both fronts.

Some liberal Democrats are unhappy because they say many of his cuts hit badly needed programs, such as money for public housing, job training for low-income youths and health services for Indians.

Clinton would eliminate 115 small programs and hold hundreds of others at or below this year's levels — cuts that were required to conform with last year's $500 billion deficit-reduction package.

Republicans and Democrats alike said they would oppose some of Clinton's planned cuts, many of which — like reduced operating aid for mass transit systems — have been rejected by past Congresses.

"There are many that will never happen, and they're put in knowing they'll never happen," said Domenici, who as ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee will be a key player in the budget wars. "This is an MIA budget because most of the administration's most important proposals — such as health care and welfare reform — are completely missing," the New Mexico Republican said.

The biggest objection in Republican ranks: Clinton should have cut more.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said Clinton's program eliminations amounted to only "about one-fifth of 1 percent of the federal budget."

It's "kind of like treading water," Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, said.

Except for reductions in Medicare and Medicaid he proposed to pay for his health care initiative, Clinton offered no significant reductions in the two-thirds of the budget devoted to benefit programs and servicing the federal debt.

Interest payments on the federal debt for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 will be $213 billion, one of the biggest items in the entire budget.

Along with attacks from lawmakers of both parties, the White House may get some unwelcome news today from the Congressional Budget Office, which is likely to recommend that mandatory health insurance premiums in Clinton's health reform proposal be treated as part of the federal budget.

The impact: It could dramatically inflate the stated federal costs, making passage of Clinton's health care reforms even more difficult.

While the Republicans are complaining that Clinton should have shrunk the deficit more, the steps he's proposing would help reduce the deficit to a projected $176.1 billion in fiscal 1995, the lowest level since 1989.

Rare accident kills one, maimes second jumper

The Associated Press

YUMA, Ariz. — Army investigators will begin today trying to figure out why two expert parachutists from their showcase team, the Golden Knights, hit each other, killing one and leaving the other a double amputee.

Two parachutists collided during a practice jump Sunday at the base on the Colorado River 25 miles north of Yuma that serves as the team's winter training camp. The accident will be investigated by the U.S. Army Safety Center in Fort Rucker, Ala., said Chuck Wullenjohn, a spokesman for the proving grounds.

Sgt. Jose Aguilon, of San Antonio suffered a fatal heart attack after landing in a tree, Wullenjohn said. Sgt. Dana Bowman, of North Ridgeville, Ohio, landed in a parking lot near the intended target, suffering injuries that forced amputation of both legs below the knee, he said.

Bowman, a veteran of 300 jumps, remained in serious condition today at Barrow Neurological Institute in Phoenix. Aguilon had been in more than 1,500 jumps with the Golden Knights.

It was the sixth death in the team's 35-year history and the first since 1987, said Sgt. Jose Pruneda, a spokesman at the team's base in Fort Bragg, N.C.

The accident was not caused by faulty equipment, Walker said.

The team spends about six weeks in Yuma to train before it begins its yearly schedule of more than 300 shows, Wullenjohn said. They were practicing Monday.

Deaths

Norma Jo Williams

Graveside services for Norma Jo Williams, 65, Stanton, will be 3 p.m. today at Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home, Stanton.

Mrs. Williams died Sunday, Feb. 6, 1994 at Martin County Hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was born July 25, 1928 in Honey Grove and married Glenn Williams in May of 1975 in California. She lived in Snyder for nine years and in Stanton for the past three months.

Survivors include her husband; Glenn Williams, Snyder; two sons: Randy Crow, Odessa, and Rickie Crow, Carrollton; two daughters: Diann Nelson, Midland, and Dasha Rudloff, Odessa; two sisters: Joyce Gunter, Ft. Worth, and Donna Fry, Leonard; 12 grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Richard Bissell Jr.

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Richard M. Bissell Jr., a former deputy director of the CIA who was the principal architect of the failed Bay of Pigs invasion, died Monday. He was 84.

Bissell had been on track to succeed CIA Director Allen Dulles, but after the Bay of Pigs debacle in 1961, President Kennedy told both they would have to resign.

The failure overshadowed Bissell's achievements at the CIA, where he guided the clandestine program to build the U-2 reconnaissance plane and later its supersonic successor, the SR-71, as well as the first orbiting spy satellite.

Bissell supervised the delivery of supplies to Allied troops around the world during World War II, then helped administer the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe after the war.

Simon Dack

NEW YORK (AP) Dr. Simon Dack, who founded The Journal of American Cardiology and was its editor in chief for decades, died Monday of congestive heart failure. He was 85.

Dack helped develop the first cardiac stress test and was a founding fellow of the American College of Cardiology.

He was head of Mount Sinai Medical Center's Adult Cardiac and Prenatal Cardiac Clinic and, from 1972 to 1974, acting chief of the hospital's division of cardiology.

The journal's name was changed to the Journal of the American College of Cardiology in 1983. Dack was editor in chief from 1958 to 1983 and then editor until his retirement in 1992.

Norman Del Mar

LONDON (AP) — Norman Del Mar, a conductor and author who focused on the works of late Romantic composers like Sir Edward Elgar, Gustav Mahler and Richard Strauss, died Sunday of cancer at 74.

The final volume of his acclaimed three-volume work on the life and music of Strauss appeared in 1972.

Del Mar was professor of conducting at London's Royal College of Music from 1972 to 1990. He made over 70 recordings.

Marija Gimbutas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marija Gimbutas, an archaeologist who challenged conventional views when she concluded that civilizations in Stone Age Europe worshipped goddesses, died of cancer Wednesday at 73.

A professor emeritus of European archaeology at the University of California at Los Angeles, Gimbutas wrote 20 books.

Her more recent works referred to European cultures dating back 6,000 to 8,000 years as "true civilizations" without war, boasting organized cities run by women.

After studying thousands of female images from those cultures, she concluded that the primary deities were also women.

Robber slays student and his companion

HOUSTON (AP) — An 18-year-old high school student who gave haircuts to neighborhood kids to earn enough money to buy new athletic shoes was shot to death after he and a companion agreed to give their shoes and other items of value to robbers, authorities say.

Adam Joseph Martin, 18, a junior at Wheatley High School, was shot to death Sunday night after he handed over his $125 Nike sneakers to two robbers, an eyewitness said.

"He was proud of those shoes, bless his soul, but he gave them to them (the robbers), and they still shot him," said his aunt, Pearl Lewis. "You give it to them, and they still kill you."

Martin and Gregory Dewayne Pennamon, 20, were walking in north Houston Sunday night when a car pulled over and two men inside demanded their shoes, jackets, caps and Pennamon's portable radio. One of the men was armed with a pistol, Pennamon said.

Pennamon gave up his shoes, a pair of Adidas sneakers, and narrowly escaped his friend's fate by sprinting out of the line of fire as the car sped away.

Roommate of victim identifies killer

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A slain Tyler secretary's roommate says she first thought she saw her friend's lover in her room the night of her murder, but later changed her mind.

A defense attorney for Kerry Max Cook questioned Paula Rudolph closely Monday on her subsequent identification of their client as the man in Linda Jo Edwards' room before her 1977 slaying.

"I saw a male figure, and I immediately assumed it was Linda's boyfriend," Ms. Rudolph testified in Cook's third capital murder trial in the Tyler case.

The boyfriend, who also took the stand Monday in the trial's second week, was a married man named James Mayfield. He was expected to continue his testimony today.

Ms. Rudolph testified Monday she looked in Ms. Edwards' room when she came home the night of the murder.

Lawyer wants his license back

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso man who pleaded guilty to involvement in the assassination of a federal judge has asked a state judge to give him his law license back.

The request came from Joe Chagra Jr., who surrendered his law license after pleading guilty to conspiracy charges stemming from the 1982 murder of U.S. District Judge John Wood in San Antonio.

Chagra served 6 years in prison and has been working as a paralegal in El Paso.

In a civil lawsuit being heard this week, Chagra asked Visiting Judge Pete Lowry of Austin to restore his license to practice law. Trial of the case, which began Monday is expected to last about two weeks.

Settlement falls through between plant, neighbors

ODESSA (AP) — An attorney for more than 1,000 South Odessa residents says he's pessimistic about further chances for a settlement with a rubber plant blamed for causing headaches and nausea in a neighborhood.

Michael McLeaish's negotiations on a settlement offer from Dynagen Inc. broke down last week after more than 900 plaintiffs had already agreed to the $1.5 million proposal.

Dynagen originally offered the sum, plus 15 annual college scholarships, if McLeaish could gather the signatures of 900 plaintiffs by Jan. 1. Talks continued throughout January even though McLeaish didn't meet his deadline.

"I'm at my wit's end," McLeaish said Friday. "I just can't do it again. As far as I'm concerned, this case is going to trial."

Agent: Davidians sought fiery end

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some burning Branch Davidians didn't flee the flames that swept through their prairie home, and at least one David Koresh follower ran into the raging fire, an FBI agent says.

A woman jumped from the compound's second story, then dashed back inside the burning building. An FBI agent ran in after her, agent John Morrison testified Monday.

Selection of jury starts in ethics trial

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Jury selection was set to start today in U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's trial on criminal ethics charges after the first day of proceedings sputtered past pre-trial motions and a bomb threat.

At the end of Monday's action, Judge John F. Onion Jr. told 40 potential jurors not to discuss the case nor listen to news reports about it.

The jury will be selected from that group and another group of 40 people.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, faces charges that while she was Texas treasurer she used state funds, state employees and state computers for political and personal purposes, and then altered computer records as part of a cover-up.

Mrs. Hutchison, who was state treasurer from January 1991 to June 1993, has denied any wrongdoing, and says she is the victim of a politically motivated attack by Democrats. Prosecutors have denied politics had anything to do with pursuing the case.

Onion moved the trial from Austin to Tarrant County because of the politically charged atmosphere in the state capital.

If convicted on all counts, Mrs. Hutchison could face up to 20 years in prison.

Mrs. Hutchison, seated in the courtroom Monday beside her lead attorney, Dick DeGuerin, waived an arraignment and pleaded innocent to all charges.

"She wants to say in front of the jury, 'I'm not guilty,'" DeGuerin said. Shortly afterward, the proceedings were halted after a bomb threat, related to the trial of anti-abortion protesters, was called into the Tarrant County Justice Center. The building was evacuated for 1 1/2 hours.

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison leaves the Tarrant County Courtroom in Fort Worth after the first day of her ethics trial Monday. The senator is charged with using state employees and equipment for personal benefit during her tenure as Texas treasurer.

When the proceeding resumed, Onion ruled on several motions brought by attorneys in the case.

He granted Mrs. Hutchison's motions to keep her trial from being broadcast on cable television, via the Court Television Network, or to allow a newspaper to take photographs inside the courtroom during the trial. Prosecutors did not argue against those motions.

In another motion, Onion ordered that the schedules of Democratic Gov. Ann Richards be given to him, but kept sealed.

DeGuerin subpoenaed the records, but Col. James Wilson, chief of the Texas Department of Public Safety, did not want to turn them over. "Those are blueprints for an assassin or a stalker if they can get their hands on them," he said.

DeGuerin has not said why he wants them, but in the past he has argued that Mrs. Hutchison is being accused of conduct that is legal and common among other state elected officials.

Mrs. Hutchison declined to speak at length to reporters. During a recess, she commented briefly, "I want to get back to the job I was elected to do."

Last June 5, Mrs. Hutchison won in a landslide special election the remaining term of Lloyd Bentsen, who was appointed Treasury secretary. She is seeking re-election to a full six-year term.

Five days after her victory, the Travis County district attorney's office raided the state Treasury, serving subpoenas and gathering boxes of records.

Shuttle crew salvages science from satellite

The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The crew aboard shuttle Discovery helped researchers salvage what science they could from a troubled satellite today after efforts to dispatch the craft failed.

The five astronauts and cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, the first Russian to ride in a U.S. shuttle, also prepared for a hookup with the Russian Mir space station. The ship-to-ship contact was to be attempted through a broadcast of ABC's "Good Morning America."

Meanwhile, the $13.5 million Wake Shield Facility continued to conduct its work while dangling on the end of the shuttle's 50-foot arm. Efforts to release the satellite were scrapped on Monday because of a faulty guidance system.

Physicists had hoped to grow seven immaculate semiconductor films in the satellite's pure vacuum wake as the 12-foot steel disk flew 46 miles behind the shuttle. Instead, they will get films grown 50 feet away on the end of the arm.

Those samples might be slightly more pure than what can be grown on Earth, but they will certainly be tainted from flying so close to Discovery, mission managers said.

NASA said six gallium arsenide wafers had been grown by the time crew members woke early today. The crew was to conduct additional tests with the satellite before stowing it in the cargo bay later in the day.

The crew also worked on joint U.S.-Russian medical and radiation tests and tended 12 NASA-sponsored studies aboard a commercial laboratory module riding in the payload bay.

President Clinton visited Mission Control on Monday and told the crew he was proud to see NASA and the Russian space agency working together.

"I think this is the first step in what will become the norm in global cooperation in space," Clinton said, noting the planned effort to build a space station with the Russians.

Arctic front making things colder

The Associated Press

An Arctic cold front moved southward into West Texas early today, bringing with it a slight chance of light snow in the Panhandle tonight and Wednesday and rain changing to snow over the South Plains on Wednesday.

The front was located early today in southern sections of the Panhandle and northern sections of the low rolling plains.

Skies will be clearing from the west on Wednesday afternoon.

In North Texas, the front was nearly stationary across northwestern portions. Temperatures fell below freezing north and west of a line from Sherman to Mineral Wells to Abilene before dawn today.

Forecasts called for cloudy skies with scattered showers and thunderstorms over North Texas tonight. It will be cloudy, windy and colder with scattered showers and thunderstorms on Wednesday. Some freezing rain or sleet is possible in northwest sections on Wednesday night.

There is also a chance of showers and thunderstorms across most of South Texas tonight.

Lows tonight will be near 10 in the Panhandle and in the 30s and 40s elsewhere in West Texas, the 40s and 50s in North Texas and in the 40s in the Hill Country and in the 50s and 60s elsewhere in South

Views on fortune telling key in selecting a jury

The Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE — The defense wants to know what potential jurors think about fortunetellers in the capital murder trial of two people accused of hiring gunmen to kill a teen-ager.

The defense questioning signaled a likely strategy of attacking the credibility of fortuneteller Maria Mercedes Martinez, who pleaded guilty last week and agreed to testify for the prosecution.

Dora Garcia Cisneros is accused of enlisting Mrs. Martinez and Daniel "El Guero" Garza in a scheme to kill 18-year-old Joey Fischer, who had broken up with Mrs. Cisneros' daughter several months before he was gunned down in March 1993.

Attorneys spent more than an hour questioning individuals Monday for potential service on the panel that will weigh capital murder and conspiracy charges against Mrs. Cisneros, 56, and Garza, 43.

Two jurors were seated Friday, and two more were added to the panel Monday. Attorneys expected the painstaking process to continue into next week as they work their way through a pool of about 160 citizens.

Cameron County District Attorney Luis Saenz asked the potential jurors whether they would be able to consider the death penalty if the defendants are convicted. He struck one woman from jury duty after she said she believed that God was the only one who should take a life.

Mrs. Cisneros' defense attorney, Tony Canales, asked the panelists whether they believed in fortunetellers.

"They just want to get your money and that's it," one of the jury candidates said.

"That's right," Canales replied.

Canales also asked how they felt about people who make plea bargains for lighter sentences in exchange for testimony against co-defendants.

Canales and Garza's attorney, Fred Galindo, asked potential jurors whether they understood that defendants in Texas cannot be convicted solely based on the testimony of an accomplice.

Both Mrs. Cisneros reportedly were clients who sought the advice of Mrs. Martinez, 72.

The indictment alleges that Mrs. Cisneros told Mrs. Martinez that she would pay anyone to kill Fischer, who had broken up a relationship with Mrs. Cisneros' youngest daughter in mid-1992.

It alleges that Mrs. Cisneros passed money and a picture of Fischer to the killers through Mrs. Martinez and Garza.

Mrs. Cisneros didn't know Garza; their only connection was through the fortuneteller, according to testimony at pretrial hearings.

The indictment accuses Garza of hiring Israel Olivares and Heriberto Puentes Pizana to kill Fischer and paying them with Mrs. Cisneros' money.

Kidnapped boy believed to be dead

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A baby boy who was the subject of an interstate search died at the home of a woman charged in his abduction, according to testimony at her hearing.

But investigators do not know whether to believe Cathy Lynn Henderson's claim last week that Brandon Baugh died in the baby sitter's home, April Bacon, assistant chief deputy of the Travis County sheriff's department, said Monday.

Mrs. Henderson's lawyer also said Monday that Brandon was believed to have died. The woman was babysitting the 3-month-old boy and two other children Jan. 21 at the house near Pflugerville when she fled to Missouri.

Lawyer Nona Byington of Austin told a grand jury Monday she could not answer several questions because she was bound by the attorney-client privilege.

Prosecutors then filed a motion in State District Judge Jon Wisser's court to compel Ms. Byington to cooperate.

Ms. Byington reportedly received a map on which Mrs. Henderson indicated the location of Brandon's body. Authorities have been searching for a shallow grave between Austin and Waco since last week, according to the Austin American-Statesman.

The newspaper said that an aircraft search Monday centered on Bell, Falls and McLennan counties for a grave. But some prosecutors and investigators argued that Brandon still might be alive.

Wisser postponed until today a ruling on whether Ms. Byington can be forced to tell grand jurors what she has learned about Brandon's whereabouts.

Prosecutor Rosemary Lehmberg said after a recess that investigators cannot take Mrs. Henderson's word for Brandon's fate and that if he is alive, then the crime continues.

Bacon testified that Mrs. Henderson, in Kansas City, initially had told FBI agents that Brandon was alive.

"The reason we're here today is we want to know that, and we don't," said Ms. Lehmberg.

But Ms. Byington's attorneys argued that because it's likely Brandon is dead, she cannot be forced to turn on her client.

Mrs. Henderson was arrested last week in Independence, Mo., and was returned to Texas to face state and federal kidnapping charges.

Investigators, in an affidavit used to obtain search warrants for Ms. Byington's office and car Friday, said "a cooperating individual" had said a map was faxed to the lawyer and then overnight-expressed to her office last week.

Although the search warrant was signed by Supreme Court Justice Jack Hightower, Ms. Bacon said the judge was not told of Mrs. Henderson's contention that Brandon is dead.

Stefanie Wilkerson, in costume as Clifford the Big Red Dog, entertains students at St. Mary's Episcopal Church Monday morning. Clifford will make guest appearances throughout the week during the school's first Scholastic Book Fair.

Book fair brings Clifford to St. Mary's students

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Clifford the Big Red Dog, a character in a series of children's books written by Norman Bridwell, will make special appearances at St. Mary's Episcopal School this week.

For the first time, the school is participating in the Scholastic Book Fair program. Faculty and several parents of students wanted to promote the fair and raise the interest of children and other parents.

"We were going to put someone in a dinosaur costume and have them come here," said Cindy Kountz, parent of student John Kountz, chairwoman of the book fair and a member of Friends of St. Mary's.

When Kountz talked to people at the national Scholastic Book Fair office, they recommended and provided the perfect character costume:

Clifford.

"The kids just go crazy over Clifford," said Kountz. "He gets into all kinds of trouble." Several Clifford books are among the classics and award-winning books available at the book fair.

Stefanie Wilkerson, a fellow Friend of St. Mary's, will appear in costume as Clifford from 8-8:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m.-12 p.m. and 3-3:30 p.m. every school day this week.

Wilkerson's son, Jared, was costumed as a Dalmation to further promote the event.

Kountz said the school hopes to raise money from the book fair to go toward a school computer fund. The school has no computers in its classrooms. The school library will also benefit from sales at the book fair.

St. Mary's will also have a rummage sale on March 5 to supplement money raised by the book fair.

New children's books focus on Black History Month

By KAREN MACPHERSON
Scripps Howard News Service

With winter in full swing, here are some good new children's books to curl up with, including some with a focus on Black History Month:

BABIES & TODDLERS:

Betsy's a frog who wants to do more than just hop and jump. To Betsy, the real joy in a frog's life comes from leaping and even dancing. In "Hop Jump" (Harcourt Brace & Co., $13.95), author-illustrator Ellen Stoll Walsh details Betsy's efforts to teach her friends that they can both hop and dance. Walsh's renderings make these frogs lovable but not cutesy, and young readers will love how the creatures seem to bounce off the page. (Ages 2-4).

PRE-SCHOOL:

— Mr. Bear's plans for a sleepy winter night are rudely interrupted when he takes his wife's place as babysitter for a neighbor's raucous children. That's when Mr. Bear finds out just how hard it is to care for kids, particularly babies that just won't stop crying. In "Mr. Bear Babysits" (Artists & Writers Guild Books, $13.95), author-illustrator Debi Gliori presents his plight with warmth and humor. Best of all, Gliori shows that Mr. Bear can transfer some of the lessons he learned from his babysitting stint to his own home. (Ages 3-7).

— Adults think the gravel pit across the street from their neighborhood is ugly, but the children know better. To them, it's a mountain to climb, a beach without an ocean and "an album crossed with tracks of deer and bear who come at night."

In "A Rumbly Tumbly Glittery Gritty Place" (Harcourt Brace & Co., $13.95), author Mary Lyn Ray shows how children find pleasure in life's simplest things. Children (and their parents) will identify with the young protagonists' love of collecting the gravel stones. The illustrations by Douglas Florian are colorful, but his childlike drawings are an acquired taste. (Ages 2-5).

— Publishers are always developing new ways to lure young readers, using pull-tabs, fuzzy covers or lift-up flaps to make a book more interesting. "Special Street" (Artist & Writers Guild Books, $16.95) gives another dimension to these efforts, as author-illustrator Renate Kozikowski has created both a book and a toy.

Young readers first pull out the book's accordion-style pages, which depict a pastel-colored street with shops and shoppers. Then readers can cut out the characters on three separate cardboard sheets slipped into a pocket at the beginning of the book.

Using the characters and pulled-out street scene, readers can follow the story as an adult reads, or they can create their own storyline. It's ingenious and it's fun. (Ages 3-6).

— Miss Bilberry has a lovely life in a pale yellow house at the base of the great blue mountains. There was just one problem: she couldn't stop wondering whether her life would

In "Across the Blue Mountains" (Gulliver, $14.95), author-illustrator Emma Chichester Clark details Miss Bilberry's perilous journey to the other side of the mountains, a journey that ends with a humorous twist that children will love. Clark's illustrations are full of color and wit. (Ages 3-6).

SCHOOL-AGE:

— Author Jacqueline Woodson has a flair for bringing characters to life and for keeping her storylines unpredictably realistic. She uses both talents to good advantage in "Maizon at Blue Hill" (Dell Yearling, $3.50). The book is the second in a well-written trilogy about a pre-teen African-American girl named Maizon Singh, and it depicts Maizon's efforts to adjust.

It's not that Maizon can't handle the schoolwork — she's brilliant, and she knows it. But being one of five African-American students at the school only adds to her homesickness as she tries to decide whether to fit in or keep herself separate.

While Maizon's race plays a key role in her dilemma, Woodson handles the story with such sensitivity that readers of all races can learn some lessons about life. (Ages 10-13).

— Author Lou Ann Walker gives young readers a rare inside glimpse of the artistic process in "Roy Lichtenstein: The Artist At Work" (Lodestar, $15.99). Lichtenstein, famous for his pop-art, comic book-style paintings, is the perfect artist to Walker's text is clear but doesn't patronize her readers, while Michael Abramson's photographs provide essential information on Lichtenstein's life and art. Best of all, Lichtenstein provides readers with an art lesson designed to help make their own drawings "lively." (Ages 8-12).

— Author Angela Shelf Medearis knows how to take history and make it both meaningful and interesting for young readers. In "Come This Far To Freedom: A History of African Americans" (Macmillan, $14.95), Medearis details the lives of important African Americans while providing an overall perspective of how they fit into history.

Her research has turned up all kinds of fascinating facts about such people as King Askia the Great, an African king whose name means "thief" but who is remembered for his efforts to educate his people, and the Africans brought to America in 1839 as slaves on a ship called the Armistad but who won their freedom in a rare jury trial. (Ages 8-teenage).

— It's a hot summer night, and 12-year-old Margie and her five-year-old cousin Ethel are bored with a capital "B." So they're delighted when Margie's dad suggests they sit on the front steps outside a nearby school and listen to him tell some of his favorite stories.

In "Front Porch Stories at the One-Room School" (Dell Yearling, $3.50), author Eleanor E. Tate uses this premise to combine some interesting character development with the retelling of some of the best stories she heard growing up. The result is a book that's difficult to put down. (Ages 6-12).

TEENAGE:

— Carolyn Meyer has written a riveting story of a fight against racial prejudice in "White Lilacs" (Gulliver, $3.95). Meyer's story is based on the true story of a black community in Denton, Texas, whose members were uprooted from their homes when surrounding white neighborhoods wanted to build a park.

Teens freeze in cool gear

By STEVEN EISENSTADT
Providence Journal

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. — Dress warm, her mother called out as Dori Dykstra headed off to school this week.

Yeah, right, the 15-year-old thought.

Despite the single-digit temperatures and razor winds, Dori would just as soon have shown up at South Kingstown High School in polyester pants and a Barry Manilow T-shirt as in bulky winter wear.

Her only concession to the cold was a long coat, but she refused to wear the hood. All that stood between her feet and the frozen ground were a pair of canvas sneakers.

Gloves? "I have some in my pocket," she said, "but they're ugly."

Mittens? "Mittens look silly."

A hat? "I don't like hats. Hats are ugly."

Boots? "I hate boots. They're big and cloddy."

Don't you get cold? asked a reporter who resembled the Michelin Man in his thick, thigh-length parka.

"Yeah," Dori confessed. "A little."

By the looks of things at South Kingstown High School, Dori is not the only teen-ager who would rather be cold than uncool.

Take, for example, Dori's best friend and fellow freshman, Meghan Elderkin.

"I didn't start wearing socks until Dec. 31," she said. "And forget gloves. ... They itch. Boots? I can't wear them in school. They look too funny, and they don't match any of my outfits."

Freshman Janelle Smith explained her distaste for cold-weather gear this way:

"I don't want to look like a big snowman."

Jennifer Erdman, a junior, said she actually saw a young man at school this week wearing ... shorts. She thought he was only a little crazy.

Nearby, freshman Jess Foreman was slipping on a pair of heavy gloves. He summed up his feelings about classmates who refuse to wear them with one word: "Dumb."

Curious George comes to video

By PATTI THORN
Scripps Howard News Service

Animator John Matthews should have known: Where there's Curious George, there's trouble.

You remember George, the story-book monkey with a gorilla-size penchant for mischief. Puzzle left out on a table? There's George, swallowing a piece of it. Man selling balloons? Count on George to grab the bundle and be whisked into the sky, causing rubbernecking drivers down below no end of traffic woes.

It's no surprise, then, that when Matthews decided to bring George to life on video, that darned monkey gave him more headaches than he ever gave the man with the yellow hat.

Blame it on George's co-creator, Margaret Rey.

"She was very hard to get along with," said Matthews in a recent phone interview from his home and studio in Lake Arrowhead, Calif. "She said, 'I hate your monkey,' and she'd yell at me. She came to California, and the filming was going along and she'd say, 'STOP! STOP! BACK! BACK! That picture. Keep that picture and get rid of the rest.' It was making me miserable."

Matthews laughs in retrospect, a solid belly laugh. And he has every reason to be cheerful. His video, "The Adventures of Curious George," filmed a decade ago but sidetracked by a battle over publishing rights, finally has been released by Golden Book Video.

With the eight original "Curious George" books (two by Rey and her husband Hans Augusto, the rest by Hans alone) selling 8 million-plus copies since the first one was published in 1941, Matthews' work should have no trouble finding a modern audience.

In addition, the tape joins three other titles in the John Matthews series: "Stanley and the Dinosaurs," "Frog and Toad are Friends" and "Frog and Toad Together." In April, two more titles — "Mouse Soup" and "Uncle Elephant" — will be added.

All told, that's a passel of video critters. "My life is made up of mice, monkeys and mooses," said Matthews, a puppeteer, songwriter and animator whose works have appeared on PBS, HBO, and ABC, among other venues.

Matthews decided to commit George to film in 1981 in what was a pioneering project for stop-motion animation. Stop-motion involves using puppets or clay, rather than drawings, for animation. The figures are moved slightly for each shot — 24 shots equals one second of animation — to achieve fluid motion on film.

"There were no books; no one had done a film like that. There was crude claymation, but the mentality's changed a lot over the years," said Matthews.

He used a 6-inch tall Curious George doll sewn by his wife, Niki — and based his first film on "Curious George Goes to the Hospital." At Rey's insistence (she held approval rights to the project), Matthews later added a segment based on her deceased husband's first book, "Curious George."

Matthews still cringes at the plot. In the story, the man with the yellow hat steals George from the jungle in order to put him in the zoo. The idea may have been fine for children in 1941, he said, but in today's world of stranger-danger, the story feels more ominous.

"I argued vehemently with Rey against it, or to change the story. But a lot of authors, they get sacred with their stuff. There was no getting around it. I had to do it or starve. It cost me an Academy Award nomination," said Matthews, who noted that Academy members were, indeed, put off by the storyline.

Rey was involved in every aspect of the films, said Matthews, down to the color of George's hair. Nervous breakdowns notwithstanding, the attention to detail paid off. The tapes are charming reflections of the books, with George achieving just the right mix of innocence and guile, and the man with the yellow hat affording the perfect touch of rueful paternalism.

Matthews has long since moved on to other projects. And what of his sparring partner?

Despite the creative tension, Matthews notes that he and Rey, now about 90, eventually became friends. "She's very venerable — is that the word? She's still alert."

Not that he won't tell a story or two when prodded. Matthews recalls taking Rey to Descanso Gardens on one of her trips to California. There, a certain purple rose caught her attention.

"I MUST smell this ROOOSE," she said. Matthews gleefully imitates Rey's German accent. "She knelt down, and there was a ledge, and she fell face first into the rose bush — just passed out face-first into the rose bush. Everyone thought that I pushed her."

Well, did he?

Naah, said Matthews. But even long distance, you can tell there's a Curious George-like gleam in his eye.

Messages to Your Body

Love Some Body ... Yours!

The Mini Page celebrates Valentine's Day with love notes to some body ... your very own.

When you do these loving things, your body will get the message that you really care.

You want to treat your body well. It's the only body you'll ever have!

1. Get plenty of exercise.
2. Wash your hands before eating and after going to the toilet.
3. Eat well-balanced meals. Choose healthy foods over junk food.
4. Dress for the weather.
5. Brush your teeth after meals and before going to bed. Floss daily.
6. Talk over your problems with your parents or a friend.
7. Get enough sleep and rest.
8. Sit and stand straight and tall.
9. Wear your bike helmet and watch out for safety hazards.
10. No body likes smoking, drugs or alcohol.
11. Don't spend too much time in front of the TV.
12. Take a bath or shower every day or two.

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Cheese Toast Heart

You'll need:

- 2 slices of bread per serving
- 1 teaspoon butter or margarine per serving, softened
- 1 slice American cheese per serving

What to do:

1. Cut a square out of a slice of bread.
2. Using a glass as wide across as the bread is square, cut a circle out of another piece of bread.
3. Cut the circle in half and arrange in a heart shape as shown.
4. Spread butter or margarine on bread.
5. Put hearts on baking sheet. Cover with cheese.
6. Bake in a preheated, 400-degree oven for 10 minutes or until cheese melts.

You Have Some Body to Love!

Inside interviews help us get to know you

♥ Muscular system

"I am made up of more than 600 muscles. Some muscles you can control — for example, when you move your arm. Other muscles work without your telling them to — for example, when your heart beats."

♥ Skeletal system

"I am the 206 bones that build a frame to give your body shape. I help you move and also protect your organs."

♥ Digestive system

"I am made up of your mouth, esophagus, stomach, large and small intestine and other organs. I break down food so nutrients can be used by your blood."

♥ Urinary system

"I am made up of the kidneys and bladder. Waste products from your blood are filtered through your two kidneys. The kidneys send urine (waste and water) to the bladder."

♥ Respiratory system

"I am made up of your lungs and windpipe. I bring in oxygen and give off carbon dioxide when you breathe."

♥ Nervous system

"I am a network of nerve cells. My main centers are your brain and spinal cord. I send messages from one part of your body to another."

♥ Circulatory system

"I am made up of your blood, your blood vessels and your heart. I carry oxygen, nutrients and blood to all parts of your body."

♥ Endocrine system

"I am made up of glands that produce hormones (chemicals). Hormones help other body systems work. For example, the pituitary gland produces a hormone that regulates your growth rate."

YOU CAN experiment #1

How Can A Ball Of Muscle Be A Pump?

WHAT YOU NEED: An empty squeeze bottle with a closing top, like a dish soap bottle

WHAT TO DO: The next time you take a bath, take a few minutes to turn your dish soap bottle into a pump. Before you get in the tub, ask someone who's allowed to use a knife to cut a small hole in the bottom of the bottle. You have to be able to cover the hole with your finger.

1. Cap Open

2. Cap Shut

3. Beakman Place

WHAT IS GOING ON:

Your squeeze bottle behaved a lot like the heart. It got bigger and smaller and sucked in and squeezed out bath water. The heart does the same thing with blood.

Our hearts are divided into four chambers. Chambers A and B are called atria (A-tree-umz). C and D are called ventricles (VEN-tree-culz). They squeeze and unsqueeze to pump blood.

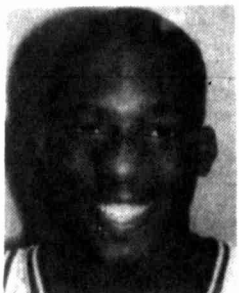

Your experiment and your heart wouldn't work without valves. In your tub, the valves were your finger on the hole and the cap. In our heart, the valves are little flaps of muscle that open and close. In this simplified drawing, the valves have circles around them. The valves make sure that blood (or bath water) goes in only one direction.

Hawks survive overtime duel, end losing skid

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

If you hit the offensive boards hard enough and long enough, good things happen. The Howard College men's basketball team learned that Monday.

In overtime, Howard grabbed two offensive boards and converted them into points as the Hawks (16-9, 5-3 in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference) outlasted the New Mexico Military Institute Broncos 90-86 at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

BROWN

The win placed Howard three games ahead of NMII (10-12, 2-6) with four to play in the race for the WJCAC's fourth and final playoff spot.

Preceding the clutch rebounding in overtime, however, was some money play from Howard point guard Tony Brown. Brown drove the lane and rolled in a 6-footer to tie the game, then charged inside again for an easy deuce, putting Howard ahead 82-80 with 2 minutes, 17 seconds left in overtime.

POE

On the other end, NMII's Fil Carrasco missed a three-point try from the corner, and Brown, who's all of 5-foot-10, grabbed the rebound. Charles Poe, who led Howard with 22 points and 14 rebounds, missed from close range, but Spencer Stewart grabbed the rebound and scored, putting the Hawks up 84-80 with 1:26 to go.

Howard led 84-82 when Poe put back a Kavossy Franklin miss. Howard's final four points came on Brown free throws that iced the game for the Hawks, but the play both coaches were talking about after the game happened after two Brown misses.

Howard led 86-83 when NMII fouled Brown to stop the clock with 28 seconds left. Brown missed both free throws, and NMII had its chance to tie the game with a trey. The Broncos couldn't get a clean shot away, however, as T.J. Runyan forced an ugly three-pointer over Howard's Tavares White that banged off backboard and rim with 12 seconds left.

NMII coach Reggie Franklin said there was a reason the shot looked so bad.

"Even the Howard coach told me after the game that he was fouled on that three-pointer. He said he wouldn't have blamed us if we would have protested that one, but I already had one technical. I get another one and I'm gone."

"We're lucky he didn't get to shoot three free throws," said Howard coach Tommy Collins. "Tavares clobbered him."

If you don't believe referees can decide a game, good luck trying to convince Franklin. Franklin drew a technical foul with 6:08 left in the first half.

"We got screwed in this game by the referees," Franklin said.

At one point, NMII was too far behind to pass out blame.

Howard trailed 21-17 but outscored NMII 23-4 in the final 7:05 of the first half to take a 40-25 halftime edge. Kavossy Franklin and White started the spurt with consecutive three-pointers, and Ken Carter ended it with a tip-in to beat the halftime buzzer.

Brown scored 21 points and picked up the offensive slack for Franklin, the WJCAC's leading scorer, who had six points. Franklin scored 34 at NMII Jan. 13, a night the Hawks won in overtime, 94-92.

Jerard Billingsley, who fouled out with 50 seconds left in regulation, added 17 for the Hawks.

Mike Rencher led NMII with 29 points and 11 rebounds, while Columbus Abrams added 20. Rencher hit 14 of 21 shots, and the Broncos shot an uncanny 65 percent (24 for 37) after halftime. In one second-half stretch, NMII scored on seven consecutive possessions.

Those kind of numbers for NMII had Collins in his increasingly regular role as a basher of his team's defense.

"It's a win, and we had to win, but

Howard College's Jerard Billingsley (22) flies to the hoop for two points Monday in the Hawks' 90-86 overtime win over the New Mexico Military Institute. The Hawks and Lady Hawks travel to Hobbs Thursday to play New Mexico Junior College. The women's game starts at 6 p.m.

I'm still disappointed. We're still not playing defense," Collins said. "We had a 15-point lead and just came out like we were going to sit on it. We're struggling in areas we shouldn't be struggling in."

"He just says things like that to get us to push harder," said Poe, "but in the first semester we were playing a lot better defense than we are now. I don't know what it is."

Howard 17, Three-point shooting - NMII 5-19 (Nabors 0-1, Runyan 2-4, Elam 0-5, Snead 1-2, Carrasco 0-2, Wilkinson 2-5), Howard 4-8 (Brown 1-2, Billingsley 1-1, Franklin 1-2, White 1-3).

Harding will practice with Kerrigan

By The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — They won't be rooming together, but Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan will have to practice together at the Winter Olympics.

Following a long-held policy of having teammates train together, the International Skating Union assigned the two Americans to the same Practice Group 1 at the Hamar Olympic Amphitheatre.

"Absurd," said Kerrigan's coach, Evy Scotvold.

There aren't many definites in the Harding-Kerrigan drama because it's still unfolding, but this much is certain:

Harding will still be an Olympian when the Winter Games open this weekend. Whether she marches in the opening parade or stays on the U.S. team was not so clear Monday.

Once she gets here — perhaps accompanied by her new boyfriend — there's a room reserved for her in the Olympic Village in Hamar, Norway, site of the figure skating competition.

There's a room there, too, for Kerrigan, whose assault inside a Detroit arena last month has been linked to Harding.

Kerrigan will definitely live in the village, and wants to march in the parade of athletes when the Olympics open Saturday, Scotvold said.

There's no chance she and Harding will be roommates or even next-door neighbors.

"I don't think they will be anywhere near each other," Scotvold said.

"But who knows, really?"

By late Monday, no decision had been made on whether a U.S. Olympic Committee panel would meet to decide if Harding should remain on the team. Officials said they were still waiting for key materials before making the call.

Because many people involved

were traveling to Norway, it probably will be late in the week before a decision is made on whether to convene the USOC's Games Administrative Board.

The New York Times reported Tuesday the USOC is "leaning" toward calling Harding before its disciplinary board. The newspaper, citing an unidentified Olympic official familiar with the committee's plans, said a tentative hearing date has been set for Feb. 15.

Richard Pound, an IOC executive board member from Canada, said irreparable damage could be done to Harding and the Olympic community if the skater were banned but later found innocent of all criminal acts.

"I think it's a real minefield for them because the stakes are so big," Pound said. "If Tonya Harding doesn't make it to these Games, I guess she doesn't make it to any Olympics ever. It's a big responsibility."

"The danger is of making a mistake that can't be remedied. You can make a mistake by erring on the side of assuming that somebody's not guilty."

Grad student files assault complaint on Aggies

By The Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — A Texas Tech graduate student who says he was punched in the face by a Texas A&M player in last weekend's fracas has filed an assault complaint with university police.

Scott Patterson, 23, says he was hit by A&M basketball player Joe Wilbert during a brawl between Aggie players and Tech fans.

Meanwhile, Tech officials on Monday took steps to try to prevent future confrontations between fans and visiting teams' players after they reviewed a videotape of the fracas.

That altercation erupted among a handful of Tech fans and several Aggie players who stayed on the court a minute or so to celebrate A&M's 89-88 victory.

Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said a barricaded aisle from the visitors' bench to the exit ramp will help control the crowds and give teams a safe corridor to their dressing rooms. More exit space and more ushers and security guards also are planned, he said.

University police escorted some A&M players to their locker room, forcing Aggie head coach Tony Barone and his other players to walk amid Red Raider fans off the court.

Fans first scuffled with Barone when he stopped to confront a fan yelling obscenities, a witness said. At least two Aggies threw punches and another tried climbing into the stands to reach a fan. Tech supporters leaned over the handrails and threw punches at the players.

The 5-minute push-and-shove fracas followed a highly charged game that came down to last-second free throws and drew both coaches' ire at referees.

It was described as one of the most violent confrontations between players and fans in the history of the Southwest Conference.

"I think players and coaches should have safe passageway to the dressing room," said Tech men's coach James Dickey. "But I think you should have the fans right on top of you."

Women's coach Marsha Sharp said her team also had trouble getting off the court Saturday night after the Lady Raiders' 67-64 loss at College Station.

"There were a lot of people who were talking, grabbing and yelling at us all the way across there," Sharp said. "We, I think, made a run for it."

The entire conference should evaluate game security and look at factors like positioning of the bands, mascots and ballboys, she said.

Jordan signs minor-league pact with Sox

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Even though Michael Jordan may have no chance of making the Chicago White Sox, general manager Ron Schueler felt he had no choice but to bring him to spring training.

"As much improvement as he has made, it's still a million-in-one shot," Schueler said Monday after Jordan signed a minor league contract following a workout at a packed, made-for-media event.

But Schueler, a former major league pitcher, said there was little doubt about inviting the world's most famous basketball player — albeit a retired one — to spring training next week in Sarasota, Fla.

"If I don't give him the opportunity, 27 other general managers would. In a second."

Why? Jordan hasn't played baseball since he was in high school and is 30 years old, trying to play a sport that those at the highest level have been playing most of their lives.

"Because of who he is and his athletic ability," Schueler said. "We're talking about the top athlete in the world."

And one who would draw crowds wherever he went, as he did Monday during a 90-minute workout at the Illinois Institute of Technology, not far from Comiskey Park.

Jordan took more than 50 cuts in the batting cage and hit only several line drives. He also fielded grounders and shagged fly balls in, of all places, a gym.

Baskets that he reached so easily in leading the Chicago Bulls to three straight NBA titles, were raised to the roof. And the baseball made a strange thud as it hit the wood floor. One grounder went right through Jordan's legs.

But it's hitting that will determine how far Jordan will go in this improbable quest.

"He can hit pitches in the mid-

Michael Jordan laughs during a brief workout for the Chicago White Sox Monday in Chicago.

80s," said Ed Gottfried, an Illinois Institute of Technology pitcher, who threw to Jordan on Monday. "I don't know about a guy like Roger Clemens. But I think he has a better than average shot of making it."

The prevailing feeling is that Jordan will not be able to handle the 90 mph pitches in the majors, despite his athletic ability. But the challenge for Jordan is proving those who doubt him wrong.

"It's going to be tough reacting to the ball. But he can learn," said White Sox second baseman Joey Cora, who has worked out with Jordan the last two weeks.

"I've never been afraid to fail," said Jordan, who retired from the Bulls last October, claiming he had nothing left to prove and wanted to spend more time with his family and away from the spotlight.

"That's something you have to deal with in reality. You're not always going to be successful. I think I'm strong enough as a person to accept failure. But I can't accept not trying."

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1994

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have the vitality to succeed. Sit down and carefully plot your course. A partner is clearly there for you. Tonight: Be with a group of friends.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your management skills are highlighted today. Take action quickly, and stay on top of your choices. The more in tune you are to solutions, the better you will feel. Expect the unexpected when dealing with a partnership. Tonight: Make a must appearance.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): News from a distance that might seem shocking will turn out to be positive. Tune in to another's agenda, and be ready to make quick changes. Your instincts surrounding a work-related matter are correct. Tonight: Get physical.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Renegotiate a financial arrangement. Creativity and understanding go a long way. Lighten up. You will be able to make a big difference. Tonight: Have a long-overdue talk.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Playful encounters are right up your alley today. Another's efforts make you feel better. What you hear as criticism is really meant as a constructive idea. Don't overreact. Look to positive changes on the home front. Tonight: Move furniture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stay focused today on work. You have many options, as a conversation leads you in a new direction. Be willing to brainstorm until you find the right answer. Tonight: Get some exercise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Think positively when dealing with a child or other loved one. New options have you seeing a situation differently. Be aware of what another is really saying. Tonight: No risky business.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be sensitive to a family member who is out of sorts. Tune in to your bottom line. Get past any confusion about what is going on. A positive approach will go far. Ask for what you need to make your life work. Tonight: Entertain at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is important not to reveal all you know about a situation. You hold the trump card, and your intuition is correct about an important situation. Be careful when communicating. Tonight: Let loose and party.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today's focus is on a financial option. You know what you want, so examine various ways you can make it happen. Be confident about your potential and what you have to offer. Tonight: Do errands on the way home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are being difficult with a boss. Be sensitive to your alternatives, as the activity at work has you hopping. Take time out later in the day to manage a situation properly. Tonight: You might be on overload.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Anger ignites you today. Look for different ways of escaping a bad situation. You will feel far better than you initially thought possible. Be aware of what another expects from you. News from a distance is exciting. Look to a change of perspective. Tonight: Do something just for you.

IF FEB. 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The unexpected could occur during the year ahead, forcing you to take much time off. You will need to watch how you handle anger in your daily dealings. If you keep it inside it could damage your health. Express it and you will get past your problems effectively. Your career will be highlighted, and your intuition will be on target. Just watch yourself during periods of stress. Use your time off to deal with stress creatively. Focus on your personality and getting more of what you want. AQUARIUS pushes you to the max.

THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Neighbor ignores girl's constant screams

DEAR ABBY: I heartily agree with Stan Ziegler when he wrote that children should scream when they are in danger—or when they think they're in danger. Yes! Scream loudly and long! But there's another side to this: The little girl next door to us screams so much that we no longer pay any attention to her screaming.

Some parents evidently think it's cute when their children screech in restaurants and stores. I even heard a proud mother say to passers-by in a store, "That was her indoor scream. You should hear her outdoor scream!"

Not only does indiscriminate screaming negate the good that screams can accomplish when a child is in danger, it endears neither the parents nor the child to those who have to listen to it. — NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR "N.N.O.T.": As soon as a child is old enough, he or she should be made to understand that screaming for no reason whatsoever can pose a serious problem. Screaming should be reserved for emergency situations when one needs help!

DEAR ABBY: As a conscientious dog owner, I was upset to read about the incident recounted by Mr. Ziegler in his recent letter. There are far too many stray dogs, and dogs that are not under the full control of their owners. One uncontrolled dog can give all dog owners a bad name.

I also agree with Mr. Ziegler that screaming is an important defense tool for children. This is definitely the case when a child is already being mauled by a dog. However, it is important to note that dogs that are not accustomed to being around children will regard a screaming child as prey. Even the mildest dog will become jumpy and act strangely around a screaming child. Aggressive dogs will react to a child's scream by attacking the child!

While a child will do well to scream at a clear and imminent threat, the child who screams in the presence of dogs unnecessarily places him or herself in danger. — NATHANIEL D. BURGESS, LOS ANGELES

DEAR MR. BURGESS: Although I knew that dogs and other animals are quick to sense fear, I was not aware that a dog would treat a screaming child as prey—but how else could a frightened child call out for help?

Most of us have read at least one nightmarish account of how a dog suddenly attacked a terrified child. A good rule to follow: Never leave a very young child unattended.

DEAR ABBY: I believe that many years ago you had a letter in your column about a snoop guest who was known for her obsession for looking in everybody's medicine cabinet.

The solution was to fill the cabinet with marbles, which would make a horrendous noise as they poured out of the cabinet.

I have been wondering all these years, just how did she get the marbles into the medicine cabinet? — DICK IN WALNUT CREEK

DEAR DICK: Good question—you got me there, pal; what took you so long to ask?
