White names regents, returns only Bucy to post

By KIRSTEN KLING
University Daily Staff Writer

J. Fred Bucy (Dallas), Wendell Mayes Jr. (Austin) and Dr. William Gordon McGee (El Paso) will serve as Texas Tech's new regents. Gov. Mark White made the announcement Thursday.

The men will serve on the Tech Board of Regents for the next six years.

White selected the three men to serve on the Tech board from among more than 30 applicants. Each member of the board serves a six-year term, and three regents' terms expire each Jan. 31 of odd-numbered years.

Although all three regents whose terms expired in January, including Bucy, Dr. Nathan Galloway and Joe Pevehouse, expressed interest in reappointment, Bucy was the only current board member appointed for another term.

There is no limit to the number of terms a person can serve as a regent, according to the rules and regulations of the Tech Board of Regents.

Although none of the regent appointees were available for comment, Tech President Lauro Cavazos said he is pleased with the governor's regent choices.

"I am very pleased and delighted," Cavazos said. "It's a distinguished honor for Fred Bucy to serve another term on the board."

Cavazos said he knows Mayes well and that the two men were in the same graduating class. Cavazos said he does not know McGee.

"I personally appreciate the appointments. It's a real job to be a regent," Cavazos said.

Bucy has been a Tech regent the past 12 years and served as chairman of the board from 1980 to 1982. He graduated at Tech in 1951 with a bachelor's degree in physics. He received a master's degree in physics at the University of Texas at Austin.

Bucy, 56, is chief executive officer of Texas Instruments, a council member of the Woodrow Wilson Center, a member of the Society for Exploration and Geophysicists and a former member of the Presidential Commission for a National Agenda for the Eighties. He also is a member of the National Academy of Engineering and the Institute of Electric and Electronic Engineers.

Mayes, 61, is chairman of the board of KCRS and KWMJ radio in Midland and KCWM and KVIC radio in Victoria. Last week he was named one of 11 Distinguished Engineers for 1985 by the Tech College of Engineering.

Mayes graduated with honors in electrical engineering, and he was inducted into the Tech Mass Communications Hall of Fame in 1978. Also in 1978, Mayes was named Pioneer Broadcaster of the Year by the Texas Association of Broadcasters.

He is director of Texas Commerce Bank of Austin and a partner in Corsicana Cable Television Co.

"He'll be one of the better ones," said Billy Ross, chairman of the Tech department of mass communications.

"He understands communication and engineering and taught at UT," Ross said. "He is a broad individual and will represent many aspects of campus."

The third regent appointee, McGee, 51, is the senior pathologist at the Hotel Dieu Medical Center in El Paso. He is president of the board of directors of the Texas Medical Foundation and vice chairman of the Texas Medical Association. He also is on the board of directors for Blood Systems Inc., a regional blood bank.

Dr. Michael Hughson, a pathologist and an associate of McGee's, said McGee expressed his pleasure in the regent selection.

"He realizes it will be a great deal of work, and he was kind of concerned about handling the workload — so he will cut down on his workload here," Hughson said.

Hughson said McGee feels a great responsibility for people in medicine and understands the needs of the Tech Health Sciences Center and Tech regional academic health centers in Amarillo, Odessa and El Paso.

"He's an articulate man and has a great sense of responsibility," Hughson said. "He feels the medical schools do need representation."

Hughson said McGee is not related to Dr. William Gordon of Lubbock.

White satisfied with House plan for state budget

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — The $36.4 billion, two-year state budget, given final approval by the Texas House on Thursday, is a good plan that won't require additional taxes, Gov. Mark White said.

"I'm very pleased that they were able to reach the compromises to permit a balanced budget without any new taxes," White said.

Although some lawmakers have said they worry a tax hike may yet be needed to balance the budget, House Speaker Gib Lewis voiced confidence that a $106 million increase in fees and a quadrupling of college tuition will pay for state government operations.

The House voted 135-11 preliminary approval of the budget on Wednesday and sent it to the Senate on a voice vote Thursday. The Senate is working on its own spending plan, so the final state budget will be written by a House-Senate conference committee.

The House-approved budget, tightest in 10 years, would add money for welfare, prisons, mental hospitals, public schools and highways. Higher education would receive average decreases of 4 percent, and many state agencies would suffer heavy cuts.

The governor said the budget "is not exactly the way I would have drafted it," and indicated he will wait on the conference committee version before making any final decisions.

But he rejected rumors of a special legislative session, saying, "I don't have any plan to call one."

White indicated he could support a compromise proposal that would quadruple state college tuition over the next two years, then allow the 1987 Legislature to consider possible future increases.

"It's a compromise I would be in a position to support. I'm pleased to see that there is going to be additional money for scholarships and for needy students," he said.

"Even with the increases, we'll still be the least expensive tuition of any of the states in the nation."

White discounted complaints of some students, particularly medical and dental students who will face even larger tuition hikes, that the increases will cost them their educations.

"I dare say, there will not be a single soul who will have to drop out of their school because of any change in the tuition pattern," he said.

State employees have been angered at the failure of lawmakers to approve a pay raise for them.

The House bill includes a possible 3 percent raise for the 180,000 state workers — if seven revenue-raising bills also pass. Senators say there is no money to fund a raise.

"I like what they (the House) have done. But the Senate has not (acted)," White said, adding that he will work with the conference committee "actively trying to help them find a way to at least make some provision for increased salaries."

Council allows group housing for retarded

By KEVIN SMITH
University Daily Staff Writer

The Lubbock City Council unanimously passed an amendment Thursday that will allow mentally retarded individuals to live in group housing within the city, helping ease overcrowding at Lubbock State School.

The amendment involves reorganizing zoning ordinances to permit group housing units for the mentally retarded to be constructed in areas now zoned for low density residential housing.

Jim Bertram, assistant city manager for development services, said the zone changes in such cases will be considered on an individual basis.

An individual or agency requesting an exception to the low density residential (R-1) zoning to allow for a group housing unit for the mentally retarded to be located in a specific area will have to present the individual case to the Zoning Board of Adjustment, he said.

The amendment will allow group housing for the mentally retarded to be located in areas zoned for other residential uses dependant upon ZBA consideration and approval.

The need for group housing for the mentally retarded within the Lubbock community is a result of a mandate from the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (TDMHMR), requiring all state supported schools for the mentally retarded to bring overcrowding problems into compliance with state law by the summer of 1985.

Bertram said given that time frame to work in, the amendment would give an avenue for the Lubbock State School to comply with the TDMHMR mandate.

Prior to passage of the amendment, some city council members expressed a concern over whether such group housing units would be concentrated into one area of the city.

Lonnie Willis, superintendent of state schools in Lubbock, said the home would not be concentrated in one area and all homes would be properly supervised by qualified personnel.

"We will try to distribute homes around the city. I can guarantee we would not concentrate houses in one area," said Willis.

Willis also said Lubbock State Schools have stringent restrictions placed on locations and staff of the proposed homes.

The homes themselves would consist of six residents plus two house parents. Willis said the homes would be monitored by qualified social workers and medical staff personnel.

Another concern voiced by some city council members included the city's options if the homes caused problems within the neighborhood where they were located. City Attorney John Ross said granting the amendment does not insulate the homes from any city ordinances and that failure to comply with city ordinances would result in the same legal actions applied to anyone else.

In other business, the council voted unanimously to accept the final report of the Lubbock: 2005 Committee. The committee has been working for the past year to investigate and establish goals for the city for the next 20 years.

In accepting the report, Mayor Alan Henry said the success of the report was so effective that three mayors from other cities have asked his advice on starting similar projects.

Tech business major dies; family may receive degree

By LINDA BURKE

Services for George O. Lowlor III, 25, of Lubbock will be at 11:30 a.m. today at Christ Lutheran Church, 7800 Indiana Ave. A private burial will take place under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors immediately following the services.

Lowlor, a Texas Tech senior, died at 9:44 p.m. Monday at Methodist Hospital after a brief illness. He was a May commencement candidate at Tech in business administration.

Officials in the College of Business Administration said Thursday they are attempting to grant Lowlor's degree posthumously to his family at the May ceremony.

Lowlor was employed at First Federal Savings Bank and was a member of Christ Lutheran Church. Survivors include his parents, Mr.

Lowlor

and Mrs. George O. Lowlor Jr. of Lubbock, and two sisters, Theresa J. Bramhalf and Rebecca Lowlor, both of Lubbock.

Student lobbyist against tuition hike

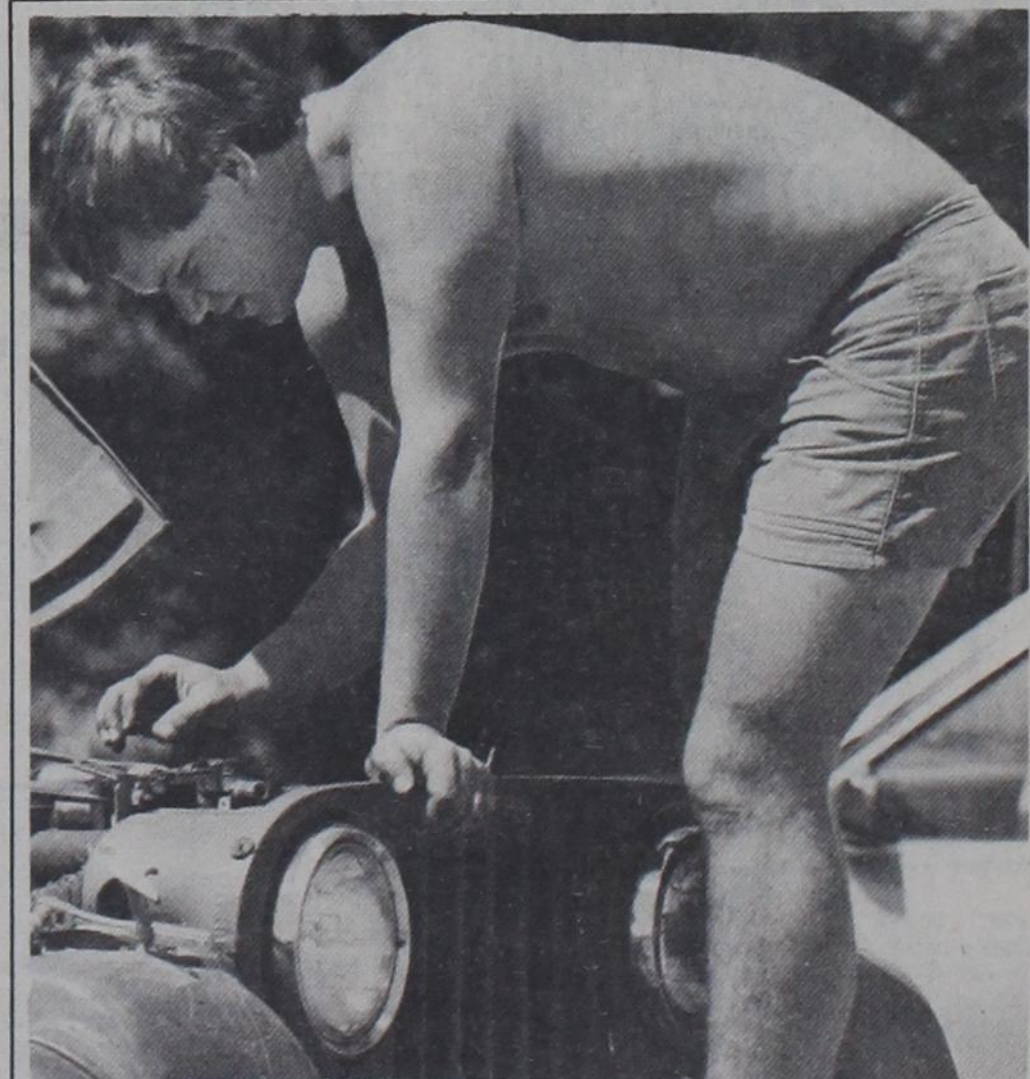

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A 28-year-old pre-med student who hopes to become a doctor says her stint as an unofficial lobbyist at the Texas Legislature has been rough as she calls on lawmakers to disicuss proposed tuition increases.

"I'm getting into a rejection complex," said Nan Kurio, a University of Texas graduate who just completed pre-med studies for entry into medical school this summer.

"I told other students, 'After you talk to one or two people, you'll be in the bathroom crying,'" Ms. Kurio said.

The Senate this week debated a bill that would increase general state college tuition four-fold over the next two years.

No-choice wouldn't be better than pro-choice

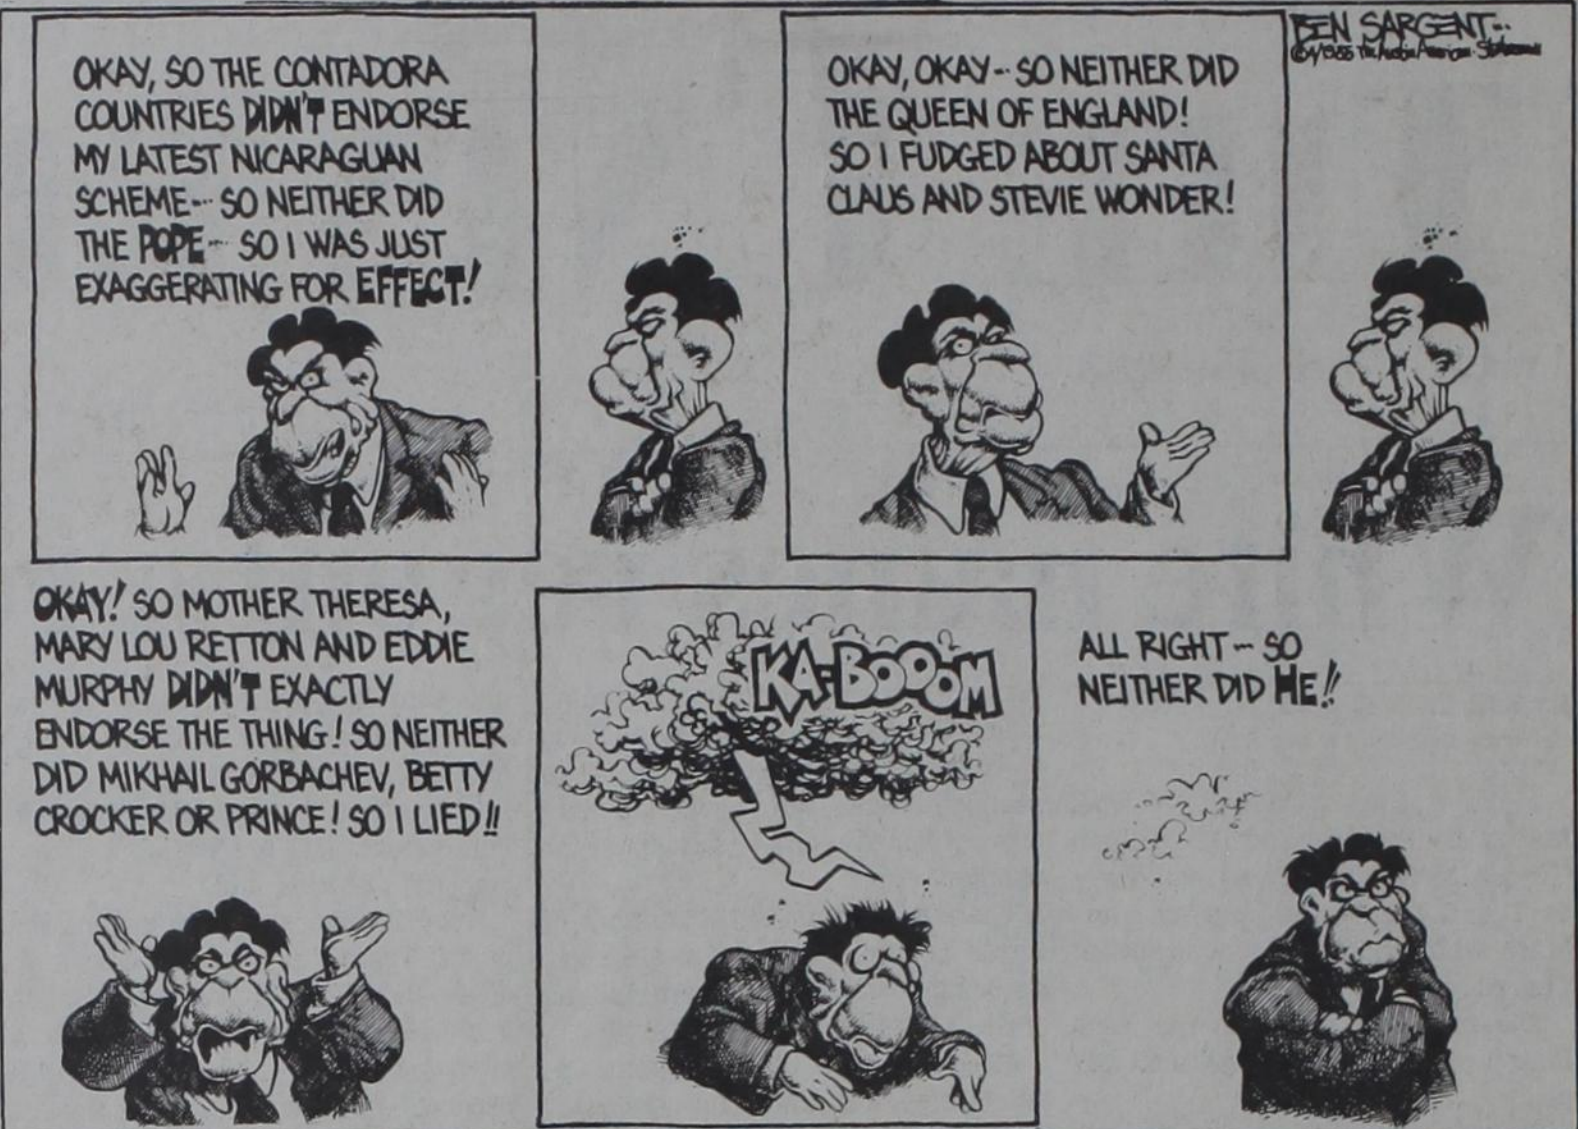

ERIC DARROW

I am writing in response to the latest letter on abortion by Kevin P. Treible. I'm writing not in an attempt to sway his opinion, for it has been my experience that attempting to open such a closed mind is about as worthwhile a pursuit as beating oneself about the head and neck with a frying pan. However, I would like to address a few of the misconceptions presented in his last letter in an attempt to put his "facts" in a more rational perspective. Mr. Treible speaks of two views of life, absolute and relative. He attempts to explain life as an absolute state. However, there is nothing absolute in life. He charges that the relative attitude toward life has led to the annual abortion rate of 1.5 million since 1973. I'm just wondering if Mr. Treible thinks abortion just magically appeared in 1973. A little research reveals that in the 10 years prior to the 1973 Supreme Court decision, the abortion rate rose steadily from an estimated .5 million to more than 1.2 million annually. Of these, less than 10 percent were legal. Further, in 1968 the mortality rate for women having abortions was about 170 per 1,000. Of these women, less than 10 percent were having legal abortions.

These numbers compare to 20 maternal deaths per 1,000 abortions in 1980, divided nearly equally between legal and illegal. Thus, it seems that outlawing abortion doesn't greatly deter women from having them. It just makes them a hell of a lot more dangerous. Mr. Treible next discusses embryology. By the way, he does a good job of showing that he indeed knows nothing about it. With the advent of new embryological techniques and some longstanding pathological situations, defining when life truly begins is neither cut nor dried. I'm referring to the technique of in vitro fertilization and gestational trophoblastic disease (hydatidiform moles). A hydatidiform mole, simply defined, is an embryo (a fertilized egg) which implants itself in an inappropriate area. Instead of developing into a baby, the embryo develops into a tumor. Remember, this is a fertilized egg which becomes cancerous! Can this be defined as life? You decide. There you have it, Mr. Treible. With a little further research maybe you will be enlightened to your ignorance. As for the movie, "The Silent Scream," please note that this movie depicts the "butchering" of a fetus of at least seven months gestational age.

However, more than 90 percent of all abortions occur within the first trimester, and more than 70 percent occur within the first eight weeks. These embryos (the first trimester is often called the embryonic stage) have very poorly developed nervous systems (their pain pathways are not yet developed) and can in no way sustain their lives outside the womb. In fact, they barely resemble humans at all. In closing, I would just like to briefly touch on Mr. Treible's discussion of forced immorality. I would like to know when the last time was that a maternity ward was bombed or a doctor's life was threatened for delivering a baby. Abortion is a very sensitive and personal issue. The decision whether or not to terminate a pregnancy is never taken lightly, and the issues are never black and white. Educating people on the use of contraceptive protection is the way to decrease the number of unwanted pregnancies. Denying women the right to a safe, legal abortion definitely is not the answer.

Remember, Mr. Treible, "pro-choice" may lead to lawlessness, but no-choice most certainly will lead to nazism. Eric Darrow is a doctoral student in physiology.

Missing chance to learn

To the Editor: On April 25, Mr. Kevin P. Treible wrote about the theory of evolution and boasted about his intelligence. I have taught a course on "Organic Evolution" (i.e., the evolution of organisms) at Texas Tech since 1977. It is ironic that Mr. Treible, although obviously interested in the subject, has not bothered to learn the facts in a formal course before accepting or rejecting them as evidence in support of the theory of evolution.

terests, recreation and school spirit (just to mention a few). There are no grade or academic requirements needed for membership, neither are there any rush or initiation proceedings. A person who joins H.S.S. is encouraged to participate at the meetings and in committees and should be willing to share his/her ideas. Concern and involvement with the organization, university and the Tech community are part of being an H.S.S. member.

One method is through an organization that has open-minded members. I believe H.S.S. is a contingent of these highly honored values. Don't get me wrong, I think your (Luis Avila's) ideas are good, but I also think Ramon Muentes' ideas are good, too. Both of you wrote about what you conceived another's opinion as being distasteful. Yes, I, too, wrote about another's (Aguero's) outlandish opinion. Therefore, we all have at least one thing in common, right? Writing about people's opinions ... Wrong!

Moreover, it is sad that he presumably came to this university to receive an education and is missing his chance. Oscar F. Francke Associate professor Department of biological sciences

The Hispanic Cultural Week is just what it states. The week is presented to share some Hispanic culture, tradition and aspects with the Tech campus and the Lubbock community.

Yes, this is just the basis of H.S.S. and the H.C.W. I believe H.S.S. is capable and has the potential of expanding; and even potential for a successful awareness movement. Of course, my opinion being open-minded and with an open viewpoint without constraints.

We as students have a drive, a drive for success, for achievement, for rising above the status quo (personally, racially and as a country as a whole). Again, some methods to accomplish this are through awareness, activeness, competitiveness, expressiveness and much, much more.

I would like to encourage both of you to continue to be active in voicing your opinions and sharing your ideas with others. In fact, I would like to encourage all individuals to strive for this. I believe through this method everyone's ideas and needs will at least have a fair chance.

I invite both of you and all others interested, to become active or more active in the drive for success as a whole. You are all welcomed to share your ideas with the membership of the Hispanic Student Society. Come join the enlightening. Henry G. Torres President, Hispanic Student Society

Castration could deter those who commit rape

TOM DIRKS

There have been more reported campus-related sexual assaults in the first part of 1985 than in the previous four years. Although other major reported crimes have been declining, this one seems to still be on the upswing. Tech has not taken this problem very lightly and, to its credit, has implemented many new policies to try to ensure the safety of female students. Sexual assault is a very serious crime because of the many lasting mental and emotional scars that it leaves on its victim. It is a violent disregard of the rights of another person. It shows the lack of value and respect an individual has toward another human being. It doesn't surprise me, though, that this is a rising problem in the United States. Everywhere you turn people's sexual drives are being fed by society. This is happening through the mass media, movies, books, music, pornography, advertising, bathroom stalls, friends and many other influences. Americans are daily bombarded by sexual suggestions. With all of this input, it shouldn't be surprising to find people entertaining the thoughts of sexual abuse and seeking to find ways in which to fulfill them. Some men try to fulfill these desires in the privacy of their own bedrooms, some find girlfriends, some people easily consent to one-night stands, some pay money, and some assault. Many of the media that promote sex blow it out of proportion and build a fantasy world with it. As these sexual fantasies are prompted, people will eventually try to carry them out in real life. Pornography has got to be one of the sickest forms of this exploitation. This article may start to get some students a little mad, because I'm talking about a sacred cow in the minds of many. Some students may also think that it is nobody's business if you want to look at magazines that degrade women and make them sex symbols for males to exploit and abuse. I agree that it is your own business if you want to look at and buy sicko magazines. What makes me mad, and should make the female students on campus mad, is that the UC has the gall to sell that junk, especially in light of the increasing evidence linking sexual assault and pornography. How can this policy be in the best interest of students? I hope that if the UC evaluates its current practice, it will pull this garbage off the shelves and value the lives of people over money. If students want sex magazines that badly, let them walk to the 7-Eleven. I would think that the university would do all it could to curb the problem of sexual assault. I know that pulling the magazines is no cure, but it would communicate some consistency in the university's thinking. The judicial system certainly doesn't help this problem either. The attackers are hard to prosecute and when found guilty, are given light sentences. This is one student who would advocate castration as a penalty for the guilty. Some may think this is too severe and harsh, but it depends on what your standard is. The old Jewish law named death as a just penalty for sexual assault. If I were a Las Vegas gambler, I'd bet 100 to 1 that their rape would be lower than ours. For some reason, I'm simple enough to think that these kinds of penalties might help control this sickness in our society. One thing is certain? you would not have to worry about repeat offenders. Castration may take some time to pass through legislation and implement, but pulling magazines off shelves seems like a change that could happen overnight. Think about it, those of you who are responsible!

To the Editor: This is in response to the attempted predicated misinterpretation of the Hispanic Student Society and the Hispanic Cultural Week made by Luis Avila on April 23.

Mr. Avila, again I recognize the fact that each individual is entitled to express his opinion, and yes, without even knowing facts about the subject they wish to opine on. I also recognize the fact that you alone are not the only individual who has misinterpreted H.S.S., and not the only one aiming at predicating the beginning of what could turn out to be long-lasting misinterpretations.

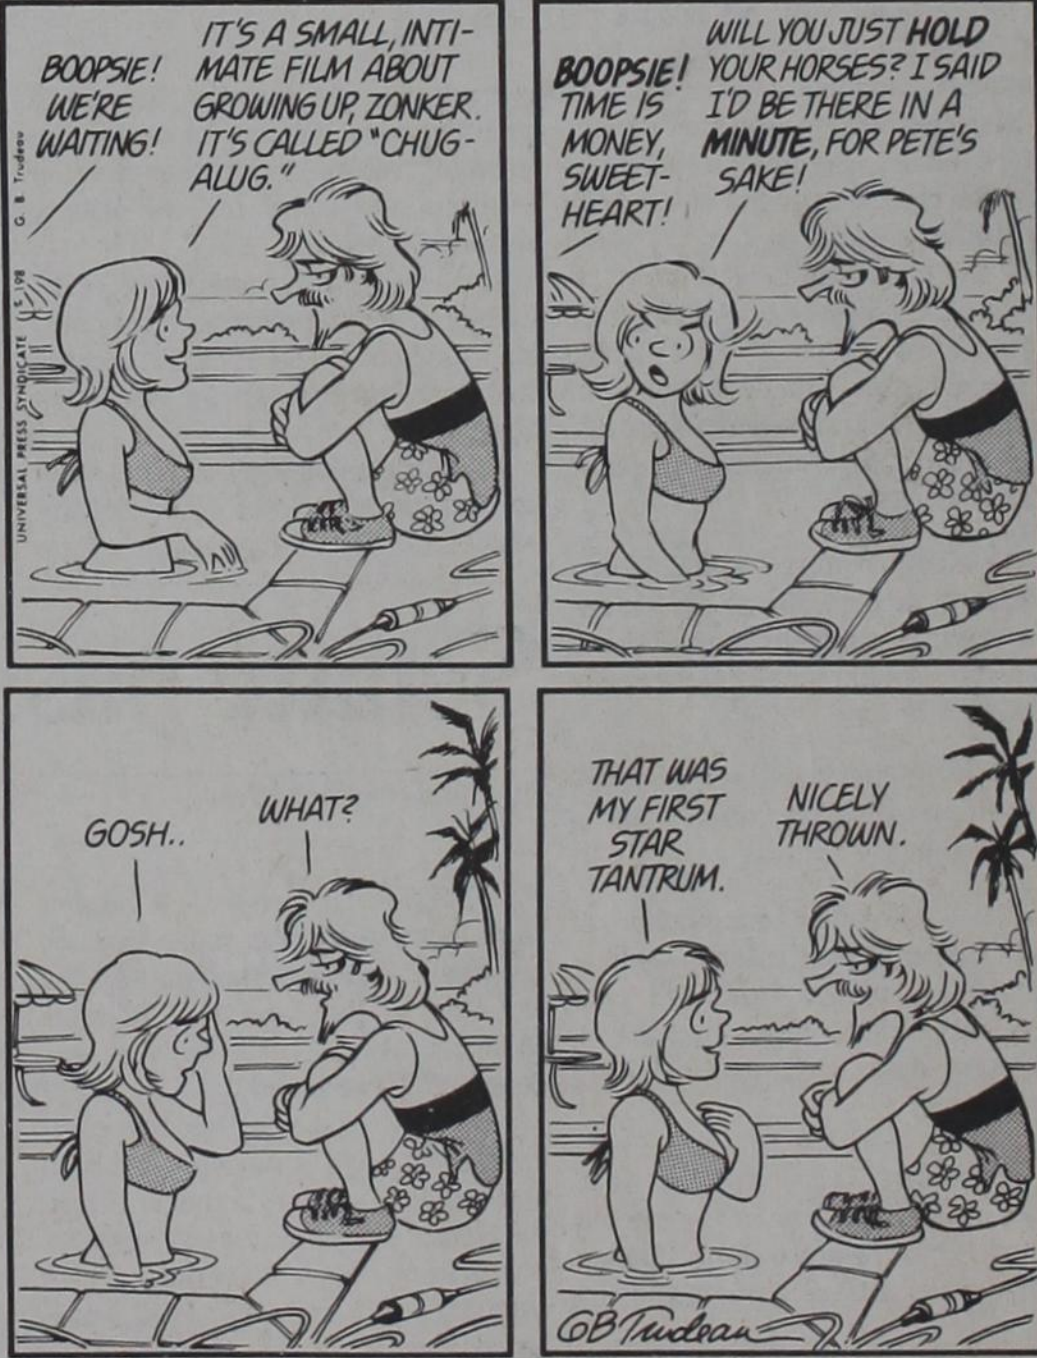

Maybe I can help clarify some of your presumptions made public April 23. The Hispanic Student Society is not solely a "Mexican-American Association"; H.S.S. is an organization that is open to all Texas Tech students, faculty and staff. The organization is primarily geared toward the interaction of its members with the Tech community by promoting educational interests, campus activities, cultural interests, social in-

Refugee supporter calls for change in U.S. policy

By FRANK BASS
University Daily Contributing Writer

To listen to Ed George speak, there is no greater outrage today than the laws that prevent Central American refugees from being able to settle in the United States.

He may be right. Under international law, countries such as the United States are obliged to grant asylum to political refugees coming from the war-torn region, George said.

George also said that under the Reagan administration, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has been returning political refugees to their native countries, where they face persecution and sometimes death.

"If the purpose of the INS policy is to keep the U.S. from being flooded with brown people from the south, then I wish they'd just acknowledge that," said George, a Tech humanities professor.

The INS has said that 98 percent of the persons coming to the United States from such countries as El Salvador and Guatemala are economic refugees and face no political persecution at home.

George

The policy has led more than 200 churches from all over the United States to form a loose organization known as Sanctuary.

George, who is a member of the South Plains Clergy and Laity Concerned (CALC), says he fully supports the goals of the Sanctuary movement.

Sanctuary churches have provided food, shelter, clothing and transportation for illegal aliens who are fleeing their countries. In doing so, however, the church members have faced federal prosecution.

Two Brownsville Sanctuary workers were convicted two months ago in a Houston trial, and 16 others, including Nena MacDonald of Lubbock, are facing trial in Phoenix, Ariz.

"The continuing rise of the Sanctuary movement indicates a growing awareness of the situation," George said.

George said more than 2 million refugees from Central American countries have entered the United States illegally since 1981.

"A major problem is that refugees can't expect any hospitable treatment from the U.S.," George said.

He pointed to the language barrier, medical aid and illegal alien status as the major problems refugees have to deal with in coming to the United States.

"They're here illegally, and they have to avoid hospitals or any other situation where they might have to fill out an official document," George said.

George also claims that a U.S. military presence in the region is responsible for a considerable amount of political unrest.

"There is an obvious danger of American invasion, if you look at Central American history over the past 55 years," George said. "You don't have to be a gung-ho, pro-Sandinista to be skeptical of the U.S."

George also showed documentation that suggests that the American-backed governments in El Salvador and Guatemala have engaged in indiscriminate bombing of civilian populations in an attempt to defeat communist rebels.

He compares U.S. policy in the region to "setting fire to the house, going inside and locking the door."

"The big falling of Ronald Reagan's Central American policy has been a preoccupation with violence, coercion and military presence as a problem solver," George said.

George said that in order to obtain a peaceful solution to the political unrest in Central America, the United States must view the situation from a long-range perspective.

George said he is concerned about U.S. support for CIA-backed contras fighting the Sandinista government of Nicaragua. George claims that a substantial number of contras, dubbed "freedom fighters" by President Reagan, actually are supporters of former Nicaraguan dictator Antonio Somoza.

Peace Corps volunteer work for people who want new skills

By NANCY WILLIAMS
University Daily Contributing Writer

Students who are interested in travel, meeting people and doing gratifying work might find an after-graduation tour with the Peace Corps a route to take after college.

The Peace Corps has about 5,400 volunteers serving in 60 developing countries in Africa, Asia, the Caribbean and Central and South America. Three of the current volunteers are former Texas Tech students.

To qualify for the Peace Corps, a person must be over 18 years of age, be a U.S. citizen, have a bachelor's degree or five years' work experience, be in good health and have eight references.

The Peace Corps requires enough screening to weed out the wrong types of people.

"It's tougher to get in," said Trevor House, a Peace Corps recruiter and former volunteer.

"I guess our biggest need is for people who are interested in being trained in a new skill," House said.

Volunteers can choose from 70 different programs in agriculture, health, construction, education and business.

But the Peace Corps recently has added five new "generalist" programs to interest people in the liberal arts. The new areas include fishery, community development, beekeeping, appropriate technology and agricultural extension.

The Peace Corps is different from most foreign aid programs, although the goals — helping people in less fortunate areas — have remained the same since the early '60s when President John Kennedy created the program.

"The difference in our program is we tend to stay and see a project through," House said.

Volunteers have a choice of three geographical areas in which they want to work. The Peace Corps makes every effort to stay within those requests, he said.

"We are more interested in where you don't want to go," House said.

Once assigned to an area, the volunteer chooses where he or she wants to live. The Peace Corps pays rent plus provides $300 a month for living expenses. Money also is provided to set up house.

"Some volunteers live in cities, others might live in thatched huts,"

House said.

For more information about the Peace Corps, interested persons should telephone 1-800-442-7294.

Cotton plant researchers growing plant to resist drought, disease

By LIZ REYNA
University Daily Staff Writer

More than 20 cotton plants in the Texas Tech greenhouse that have been regenerated from single stressed seed tissue cells will be placed in the field for experimentation within a year, according to Norma Trolinder, a biology graduate student.

The research, which is done by the departments of biology and plant and soil sciences, is conducted in the cellular level of the cotton plant to breed a crop that can resist drought, salt, herbicides, insects and disease.

In January, the biology department had only four normal cotton plants, and the plant and soil sciences department had two plants. The departments now have 20 and four plants, respectively.

Trolinder conducts the research in the biology department. Nick Gawel, a graduate in the plant and soil sciences department, conducts the work for his department. Both parts of the research are funded by U.S. Department of Agriculture Plant Stress Institute at Tech.

"As soon as one blooms, we want to see if it sets seeds. We don't care what the plants look like. We only care about the seeds," Trolinder said. "Our goal is to get enough seeds to look at the second generation."

The second generation seeds will be planted in the field, and then those seeds will be put under water or salt stress, according to Trolinder.

She said the cotton plants in the greenhouse simply were regenerated by single stressed seed tissue cells but that no stress has been applied to the process.

"We are trying to improve the process, and the embryos look normal, so we are going to put them in peat pellets and germinate them there instead of a tube. We save a lot of time by doing this," she said.

"We don't have the number of cultures they (biology department) have," said Gawel. "We are looking for embryos that give us more plants all the time."

He said the biology department may have about 1,000 cultures, and out of that number only 15 plants are grown. The research conducted by the plant and soil sciences department works with a limited number of cultures.

The plant and soil sciences department's research, which uses the differentiated cell method, can start germinating plants with water and salt stresses within a year, according to Gawel.

Two methods exist for breeding a cotton plant from single stressed cell. One method involves growing a plant from a differentiated cell.

The other method is cell suspension, which has produced more than 20 plants. The biology department uses that method.

'No-Hitter Day'

Tech vs. TCU baseball game to feature crusade against child abuse

By KELLI GODFREY
University Daily Staff Writer

The South Plains chapter of the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse (NCPA) and the Texas Tech Athletic Department will be host to a "No-Hitter Day" beginning at noon Saturday at the Tech Diamond during the Tech-TCU baseball double-header.

Lubbock Mayor Alan Henry will proclaim Saturday "No-Hitter Day" as part of the NCPA crusade against child abuse and neglect. Pamphlets and informational flyers will be handed out to parents and children at the games Saturday. The information will discuss child abuse prevention and what children should do if they are abused.

Mark Dozier, NCPA program director, said the purpose of "No-Hitter Day" is to inform parents that child abusers can be helped and that children must tell someone when physical or sexual abuse is occurring.

Almost 4,000 children in Lubbock County are either sexually or physically abused each year. The South Plains chapter of NCPA helps place abused or neglected children in foster homes and emergency shelters while counseling the abusive adults.

"It may not make a difference tomorrow, but we must inform parents that it is not acceptable to abuse their kiddos. I'm a firm believer that there's a lot of parents who can be helped," Dozier said.

Spiderman comic books depicting typical abuse situations will be handed out to children at the game encouraging the children not to keep secret the actions of abuse. Bookmarks suggesting alternatives to angry outbursts, such as counting to 10, telephoning a friend, or taking deep breaths, will be given to adults.

Dozier said "No-Hitter Day" was started in 1982 in Kansas City at a Kansas City Royals baseball game. He said that because sexual and physical abuse of children is not a topic easily discussed, handing out literature to sports spectators is a convenient way to inform both children and adults.

"They (NCPA) tied it to baseball because it is a well-respected, non-violent sport," Dozier said.

The national "No-Hitter Day" will be observed Saturday by several major league ball clubs, including the Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees.

Tech baseball coach Gary Ashby said he is interested in promoting the NCPA fight for child abuse prevention.

"We are happy to contribute in any way we can to this event, Ashby said. "Child abuse is something that we need to know about. If this day can help that in any way, we are glad to be a part of it."

Romance rule draws fire

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — A proposed rule at the University of Texas at Arlington to curb teacher-student romances has drawn fire from some who say the rule would be unenforceable and an infringement on the personal freedom of faculty members.

The university should not "legislate morality," said urban studies professor Sherman Wyman.

Supporters say the rule merely puts accepted standards of professional conduct into writing.

"You ask, 'Why write it down?' I say, 'Why not?'" said economics professor John McCall.

The debate led the UTA Faculty Senate on Wednesday to postpone a vote on the rule until September.

The policy was proposed by the UTA deans, who suggested including the rule in the faculty handbook. Accounts of the rule's purpose differ.

"I recognize that the spirit of it is to prevent sexual harassment in the classroom," said engineering professor Donald Lile, whose senate committee studied the policy and recommended its approval "with reservation and without enthusiasm."

But Academic Vice President W.A. Baker, who headed the panel that recommended the rule, said it was aimed at romantic relationships, not sexual harassment.

"When I was a faculty member, it was understood you did not engage in that type of relationship with students," he said.

Historical marker placed at Tech president's grave

To Honor His Memory

A Texas historical marker was placed at the grave of former Texas Tech President Bradford Knapp Thursday at the City of Lubbock Cemetery.

Knapp was Tech's second president from 1932 until his death in 1938.

The new marker, set beside Knapp's headstone, commemorates Knapp's leadership in agricultural education plus his service as the first director of the U.S. Cooperative Extension Service. Knapp also was a dean of agriculture at the University of Arkansas and a president of those universities now known as Oklahoma State, Auburn and Tech.

Cavazos bestows cadet awards

By CHERYLE LOCKE
University Daily Staff Writer

More than 40 awards were given to Texas Tech Army and Air Force ROTC cadets at the National Awards Ceremony Thursday.

Lauro Cavazos presented cadets Gaudalpe Cuellar and George Rideout with a sabre and the prestigious Texas Tech University President's Award.

The award is presented to cadets who contribute substantially to Tech and the ROTC program and maintain the highest academic standing within the ROTC program.

The Military Science Proficiency Award went to Bruce MacNair. The Military Science Proficiency Award goes to a cadet who has distinguished himself or herself through service to the ROTC at Tech. MacNair received a .45 Colt pistol as part of his award.

The Commandant's Award went to Robert Ashbaugh. The award is presented to the senior cadet who has demonstrated exceptional dedication and perseverance in superiority to the army corps of the cadets.

Ashbaugh also received the General Richard E. Cavazos Award which President Cavazos presented. The award is given in honor of the first US Army general with a Spanish surname who graduated from Tech.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

UD Correction

The University Daily incorrectly reported Thursday in "Campus Briefs" that courses in astronomy are being moved from the department of physics to the department of mathematics. A corrected version of the brief follows:

Courses in astronomy are being moved this year from the department of mathematics to the department of physics. Professor Preston Gott will teach courses 1300-001 lecture and 1100-301 lab next fall. In the spring, Gott will teach lecture course 1301 and lab 1101. Students will use a newly installed observatory west of the Health Sciences Center Building as well as Moody Planetarium in the Texas Tech Museum.

'Clockwork' antagonist to play Arthur

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Malcolm McDowell says his portrayal of "Arthur the King" in the CBS movie shows the monarch of Camelot in a classic dilemma — torn between love and duty and unable to get any more magical help.

"It's a romance and chivalry which is so alien to our times today," he said. "But that's what legends are all about."

The three-hour version of the Arthurian fantasy, one of the most enduring legends of all times, will be broadcast tonight on CBS. It was first scheduled for last year. But one top CBS programmer recently was quoted as saying that the movie was disappointing and confusing to follow.

"Arthur the King" also stars Candice Bergen as the wicked sorceress Morgan Le Fay; Edward Woodward as Merlin the Magician; Lucy Gutteridge as Merlin's love, and Dyan

Cannon as an American tourist whose guided tour of England takes an unexpected turn.

The Stonehenge segment was filmed in England, but all the rest was made in Yugoslavia. The fortified walls of Dubrovnik stood in for Camelot.

McDowell may be unfamiliar to television audiences. He is best known for the theatrical films "A Clockwork Orange," "Time After Time," "Caligula," "Cat People" and "Blue Thunder."

McDowell is married to Mary Steenburgen, his co-star from "Time After Time." They have two young children.

He and his wife appeared in "Little Red Riding Hood and the Big Bad Wolf" for Shelley Duvall's "Faerie Tale Theater" on Showtime, the payable network. "We did it for the kids as much as anything else," he said. "I was the Big Bad Wolf. Mary was pregnant when we did it but you can hardly tell. She kept that basket in front of her."

McDowell said his roles as Alex, the antagonist in "A Clockwork Orange," and Arthur were "quite different. But in the terms of technique they are nearer than you think. Arthur was the catalyst for the story, as was Alex. Alex was more fun because he's both the aggressor and the victim."

"Arthur wasn't that broad. To play a king requires a kind of inner peace. It has to do with confidence, although the king is indecisive. The king was born to it rather than having to win it through sweat and toil. His changes were more internal. He thinks Merlin can help him with a potion or two. I played him as though he were slightly over the hill."

"In the beginning he's worldly, kingly, but by the end he's worn out. He's got all the world's troubles on his shoulders. He can't understand his wife's behavior."

'Millionaire' checks bank transaction

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Fred Minton was a millionaire-for-a-day — sort of.

But it was easy come, easy go for the California psychologist, who promptly went to First City Bank of Dallas to correct its million-dollar mistake.

Minton's instant riches materialized Tuesday after he went to First City to send a $1,000 money order to his bank in California.

When Minton, who was in town to help a local attorney select jurors, finally got a chance to look at his receipt that evening, he could hardly believe his eyes.

It said First City was sending $1,010,000 to his bank in Valencia.

"That is a lot of money," he told The Dallas Morning News. "It was so much, as a matter of fact, that it was the first time in my life I have ever felt like I was truly walking on air."

Minton said he began considering the possibilities.

"I would use some of it for investment," he said. "Second thing would be to give some vent to my personal feelings about charities and church and religious work, things that I haven't been able to do anything about except pray ..."

But Minton said the prospect of winding up behind bars quickly brought him down to earth. Wednesday morning, he went back to the bank to straighten things out.

First City Vice President Jerry Donovan didn't have much to say.

But according to Minton, "You have never seen a banker so appreciative in all your life. His anxiety could be seen on his shaking hands."

By PETE WILKINS
University Daily Staff Writer

The Paxton Group, a four-piece electro-acoustic contemporary music ensemble led by Steve Paxton, assistant professor of music at Texas Tech, recently returned from a 10-day tour of England.

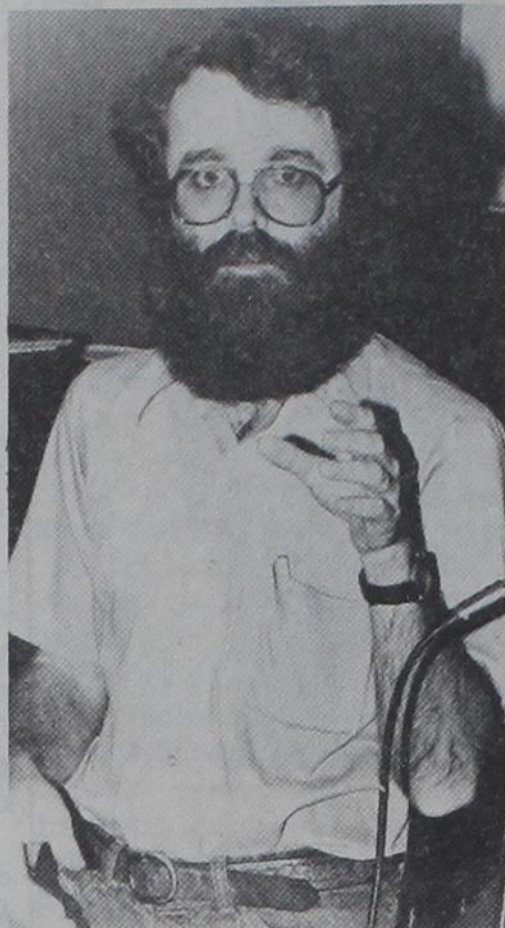

The Paxton Group performed concerts in San Antonio and New York City before leaving for England, where they performed a series of concerts in London, Exeter and Oxford. While in England, the ensemble joined British concrete poet Paula Claire. The poet has collaborated with the Paxton Group on earlier occasions, including a poetry/music presentation at Tech last semester.

"We performed for a lot of very different type groups," Paxton said of the England concerts. "Generally everyone was very receptive."

The first performance took place in an art gallery at the Exeter College of Art and Design. Paxton described the audience as "real interested." Much of the material presented by the Paxton Group requires a good deal of audience participation.

The group also performed in Exeter Cathedral, one of the largest cathedrals in England. "There were about 20 or 30 people there for the performance, with another 100 or so passing through," Paxton said.

"That was a real mixed sort of audience. There were people who came specifically to hear, and people who came by accident."

The University Daily / Kent Pngel

In addition to Paxton, the ensemble consists of Tech music composition major John Griffith, Ray Dillard and Cynthia Cole, who also tour as a percussion/vocal duo from Canyon.

While in Oxford, the Paxton Group met up with Peter Stacy, who plays flute and bagpipes. The group performed a workshop/discussion in Oxford, and a concert.

Although the crowds varied from place to place, Griffith described the British audience as "pretty much the same" as its American counterparts. "We met up with a lot of people who were real helpful and interested," Griffith said.

"It was a lot of fun. I enjoyed traveling around pretending I was a performer, not a schoolteacher," Paxton said. Although the group got to do a little sightseeing in London, Griffith described their spare time as "pretty much packing up and moving."

"That was probably our biggest headache, carting stuff around," Griffith said. "We took about twice as much stuff as we'll take next time. The easiest part was when we got to England and rented a van."

In addition to equipment hassles and a tape player that malfunctioned early in the tour, Griffith said that the food in England was "a little heavy and bland."

Paxton said that their "most memorable performance" was their sole concert in London, at the University College of London, which has an extremely long history of accommodating radicals.

The performance took place in the university pub, which was frequented by "people with strange haircuts sitting around smoking hashish," Paxton said.

"The people in attendance were real unique, what people here would call 'punks,'" Griffith said. Despite a seemingly "hip" crowd, Paxton said that most everyone present was indifferent to the music, except for a few friends the group had invited.

Paxton and Griffith said eventually they would like to return to England, provided they could find a better venue in London and perhaps take less equipment. Paxton said, the big plan is to do a performance at the New Music America festival scheduled for Houston in the summer of 1986.

The most immediate plan for Paxton is to participate in the Electric Music Festival Thursday in the Tech Museum. The festival will feature Stuart Hinds, who has music degrees from the University of Michigan and Tech. Hinds is working on his doctorate. Also present will be Arthur Durkee, a composer based in Ann Arbor, Mich.; John Griffith and Paul McMillon.

The performance, which will consist of "electro-acoustic performances, computer-generated sounds and tape music," will begin at 8 p.m. in the main gallery of the museum.

list of weird drinks

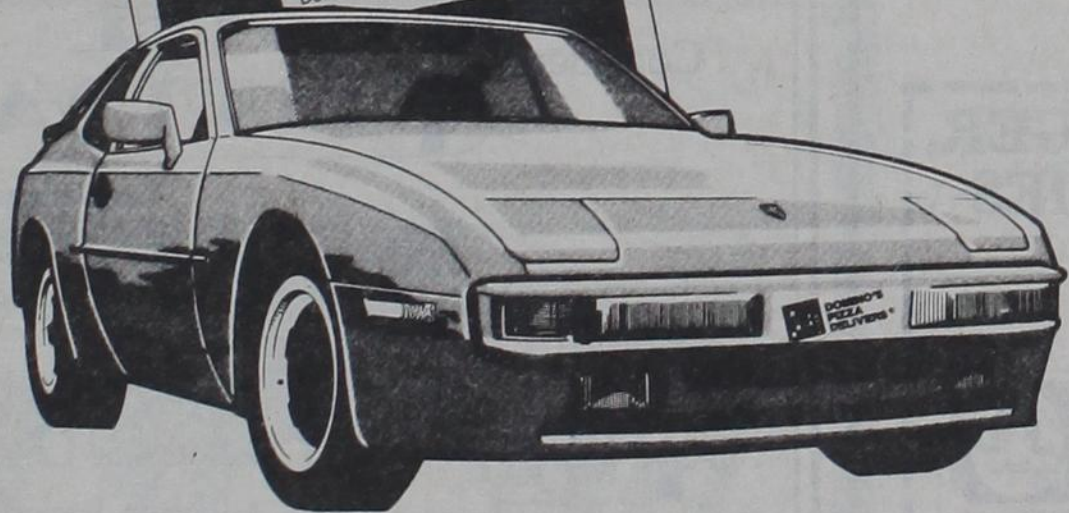

Pink pigs, green pigs and peanut butter milkshakes.

Those and other drinks were reason enough for Texas Monthly magazine to choose the White Pig No. 1, located at 2402 Fourth St., as the place with the "best weird drinks" in Texas. The local drive-in restaurant was selected in the April 1985 "Best of Texas" issue.

"I didn't even know they (Texas Monthly) were going to pick the White Pig," said owner Gene Schleuse, who said he is honored by the award.

Schleuse said the pink, green, brown and purple pigs are his weirdest drinks, with the various milkshakes running close behind.

Softballer Kathy Hall took the long way to Tech

By NANCY EASTBURN
University Daily Contributing Writer

When Kathy Hall tried out for the Texas Tech women's softball team four years ago, she paid her own way from El Paso. She also paid her way to West Texas State and the University of New Mexico.

Hall played her first year of college softball at New Mexico, then transferred to Tech.

"I was very happy about my decision to transfer," Hall said.

Coach Kathy Welter had a lot to do with Hall's transfer. "I had known Coach Welter before when she had recruited two girls from the Amateur Softball Association (ASA) team I played on," Hall said. "When I came to Tech to try out, I liked the school, but I didn't like the coach who was here at the time."

"Tech did not even have a field, and that's all everybody talked about. Promises — promises by everybody to get a field. There is still no field, but, oh well."

Hall has played for Tech on partial scholarship for two years and played her last year on a full scholarship.

A senior management information systems major, she said she plans to graduate in December.

"There is no professional softball league for women," Hall said. "Well, there is the ASA, but it is not a professional league and it is not played in Lubbock."

Hall has been playing softball most of her life. The 21-year-old first played in El Paso on a Bobby Sox team, part of a girl's softball association based in California. At 15, Hall spent her summers playing "real softball" in the ASA.

"You get to slide and steal — you get to do everything," she said.

Tech's problem of not having a field with adequate facilities meant that Hall and her teammates traveled out of town to tournaments.

"Because Angelo State and West Texas State dropped their softball programs, the closest people we play is UNM, and that's a six-hour drive," Hall said.

"Teams would come play here if we had good facilities. We can't even use the intramural fields because there are only 13 team members, and it would deprive so many more Tech students of using the field."

"But I realize a field would cost a lot, and women's sports are not big money makers."

Hall said that today's society has not accepted women athletes. "They like the Olympics. They like to see the track girls run and the volleyball team play. They really get fired up," Hall said. "Some people who have never seen women athletes compete are amazed at how well girls perform."

The Tech softball team was ranked 16th in the nation last year. "We had so many injuries that we didn't really click right," she said. "If we wouldn't have had the injuries, we would be fighting for a spot to win nationals."

The team flew to Stockton, Calif., where it competed in its final tournament. The Raiders defeated the University of San Francisco in Hall's last college game.

"People don't even know Tech has a softball team, and it's an inter-collegiate sport," she said. "We beat some top teams in the country and were ranked 16th in the preseason, and the only team that got noticed is the basketball team."

"I was disappointed about not making it to the national tournament, but I'm the only senior on the team and next year should be a really big year for the team."

Winless Stewart rips Woodlands for 66 to take first-round lead

By The Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — Payne Stewart, winless the past two years on the PGA tour, fired a six-under par 66 that included seven birdies and a lone bogie Thursday to charge into a one-stroke lead over four challengers after the first round of the $500,000 Houston Open.

The touring pros, playing on The Woodlands' Tournament Players Course for the first time, recorded 55 sub-par rounds.

The only blemish on Stewart's round over the par 72, 7,042-yard Tournament Players Course came on the final hole when he bogeyed after hitting his second shot into a water hazard in front of the green.

"I just got too quick with the six-iron on the last hole and hit it in the water," said Stewart, a former Southern Methodist University golfer. "It was kind of a bad way to end the day."

"But I played real solid today. I only missed two fairways, the first and last."

Stewart's last tournament victory was in the 1983 Walt Disney Classic, but he finished 11th on the tour money list last year with $288,795. It was the most money ever won by a golfer who didn't win a tournament.

Stewart, who equaled his best round of the year, took a one-shot lead over Mike Nicolette, Calvin Peete, David Frost and Keith Fergus, all in with five under par 67s.

England's Ken Brown and Buddy Gardner were another shot back with four under par 68s.

Frost, a rookie from South Africa, birdied three of the final four holes en route to his best tournament start this year.

"It's good to be up there with the leaders for a change," he said.

Peete missed an ace by four inches on the par three No. 16 hole that would have given him a share of the first round lead.

"I'm on top of the world, it was a good round," Brown said. "I know that if I play my best golf there's no reason I can't do well here and win."

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, trying to win his third consecutive tournament, shot a two-under par 70.

Stewart, who tied for fifth place in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am, ripped up the front nine with four birdies, including long putts of 25, 14 and 15 feet.

Stewart continued on the back side with birdies on 12, 13 and 16. He parred No. 17 before suffering his only lapse of the day on the final hole of the day.

Stewart's tee shot sailed off the fairway into a hamburger concession stand and he hit a six iron in the water hazard in front of the green on his second shot, resulting in his only bogie of the day.

Brown, Harpenden, England, played a steady round for his four-under par 68.

Raiders face Frogs in attempt to end year on winning note

By KENT BEST
University Daily Staff Writer

The Texas Tech baseball team closes out its 1985 schedule Saturday and Sunday against TCU in a three-game Southwest Conference series at the Tech Diamond. The Red Raiders and the Horned Frogs will play a double-header beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday and a single game at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Tech (18-30 for the season, 2-16 in the SWC) will be trying to reverse a nine-game losing skid against the Frogs. The Raiders also need a three-game sweep of TCU to vacate the conference cellar. TCU carries a 29-14 season slate and a 5-10 league ledger into the series.

Tech won't be playing for any postseason accolades, but head coach Gary Ashby said the series is important to his players and to the future of Tech baseball.

"The TCU series is an important one to us for a couple of reasons," Ashby said. "It's important for our senior players to go out on a good note and it's also important for us to have a good taste in our mouths coming into next year. It will be a tough series for us because TCU has a solid ball club, but we should have some incentive since we'll be winding up the season at home."

Senior relief pitcher Mark Puckett said the series against the Frogs will be an emotional one for the Raiders.

"We've had a pretty rough season," Puckett said. "We'd like to go out with at least two victories against TCU. We've got swept in every series except Rice, and now it's down to a battle of the cellars."

Tech is coming off three straight losses to the Texas Longhorns, while the Horned Frogs dropped two of three to Arkansas in Fort Worth. But despite the winless drought the Raiders have suffered through this season, highlights have not been nonexistent.

Tech is hitting at a .310 clip as a team, helped largely by designated hitter Johnny Viales' .400 pace. Viales is the only Raider hitting at the magic .400 mark, but shortstop Tommy Dobyns (.344), first baseman Bob Gross (.341), and outfielder Todd Howey (.302) all are hitting above .300.

Viales and Dobyns are leading the Raiders in home runs with 11 each, while Gross has swatted 10 roundtrippers. Dobyns also leads the team in RBIs with 46, followed by Viales with 42 and Gross with 41.

The Raiders are expecting a large turnout for Saturday's twinbill as the Famous Chicken (formerly the San Diego Chicken) will perform during the second game of the double-header. The Chicken performed at last season's Tech-Baylor contest in front of 2,500 fans. Ashby is hoping for an even bigger turnout this weekend.

"For families who have never been out to see us play a game, this will give them a chance to do so with a little more of an entertainment showcase to see," Ashby said. "As far as I'm concerned, the Chicken is the best entertainment available to American baseball today. He travels all over the country for all kinds of events, but baseball is his main drawing card. If you don't see him now, you may not get to see him again."

Puckett said the added attraction of the Chicken should help motivate the Raiders.

"It always feels good to look up in the stands and see some fans getting radical. It will be nice to have some fans back in the stands for once," he said.

Admission for the Raider-TCU doubleheader is $1 for children and Tech students and $5 for adults.

Tech tracksters try to recover in California

The Texas Tech men's 400-meter relay team will try to redeem its poor showing in last weekend's El Paso Invitational Saturday at the Mount Sac Relays in Walnut, Calif.

The Raiders finished third in El Paso but broke the NCAA qualifying standard for the sixth time in the spring season.

"We'll have to get Carl Carter on the relay," Tech coach Corky Oglesby said. "Charles Ricks has a little bit of a hurt leg, so we'll use Carl this week and see what he can do."

Carter owns the school record in the 100 meters with a time of 10.12 and anchored last year's 400-meter relay team that made it to the NCAA finals.

Delroy Poyser, another member of the relay team, beat the school record in the triple jump in El Paso by two feet with a leap of 54-9. The jump qualified Poyser for the NCAAs and ranks him among the national leaders in the event.

Other events in which Raiders are expected to compete in Walnut in addition to the 400 relay and the triple jump are the discus, the 110-meter and 400-meter hurdles, the 100-meter dash and the 800-meter relay.

Freshman Carl Chancellor will compete in the discus after setting the school record with a throw of 189-11 earlier in the spring. Chancellor's record is one inch short of the NCAA qualifying mark.

Women give men scare in Legends

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Defending champions Billy Casper and Gay Brewer birdied five consecutive holes to take a one-shot lead on Thursday with an 8-under-par 62 in the opening round of the $500,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament but Kathy Whitworth and Mickey Wright gave them a scare.

Whitworth and Wright, the first women ever to play in a PGA sanctioned event on an equal basis with men, stole the show with an early run then settled for a respectable 5-under par 65.

The teams of Ken Still and Roberto DeVicenzo, and Charlie Sifford and Jim Ferree were locked in second place in the 72-hole better ball tournament with a 7-under par 63s.

Art Wall and Doug Sanders and Orville Moody-Billy Maxwell were at 6-under par 64.

Brewer birdied six holes, including a 25-foot chip-in with a sand wedge, and holed a 35-foot putt. Casper made putts of 20 and 10 feet for birdie on the last two holes.

However, the Whitworth-Wright team drew the largest gallery from the announced attendance of 11,000 and their fans were rewarded with steady shotmaking from the same tees as the men.

Their score tied or beat 22 of the 28 teams and stunned some of their competitors. It tied them for fifth place with Don January-Gene Littler, Fred Haas-Dick Mayer, and Australians Kel Nagle and Peter Thomson, "I didn't think they could do that to be quite honest," said Bob Goalby. "That's awful good. Were they playing from the same tees?"

The 45-year-old Whitworth, winner of a record-shattering 87 professional tournaments, birdied four of the first six holes. She chipped in from off the green for a birdie with a pitching wedge from 30-feet on the 18th hole.

Denham, Bubba named ALLSWC academic team

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Bubba Jennings of Texas Tech and Mike Wacker of Texas, both consensus members of the All-Southwest Conference basketball team, were named Thursday as members of the SWC all-academic basketball team, the league said.

Also named to the men's squad were Arkansas sophomore Eric Poerschke, Baylor senior David Glover, Houston senior Reid Gettys, Rice junior Terrence Cashaw, Southern Methodist sophomore Scott Johnson, Texas A&M freshman Paul Crawford and Texas Christian freshman James Dixon.

The team is made up of one male and one female athlete from each conference school, chosen by committees consisting of the athletic academic counselor, head coach, athletic director and faculty representative of each school.

Named to the women's team were Arkansas senior Doris Gaiser, Baylor senior LaTressia Holliman, Houston senior Nell Haskins, Rice junior Sandra Tilden, SMU senior Scotti Wood, Texas junior Cara Priddy, A&M junior Ann Trinka, TCU junior Julie Hendrickson and Tech junior Melinda Denham.

Cowboys may get 2nd choice

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas may try to get Minnesota's second spot in the National Football League draft now that the Vikings apparently aren't going to sign quarterback Bernie Kosar, Cowboys vice president Gil Brandt said.

Brandt said he may call Vikings general manager Mike Lynn later this week to see what kind of trade can be made for the pick. If they can make a deal, Brandt said the Cowboys would draft either Miami wide receiver Eddie Brown or Pittsburgh tackle Bill Fralic.

USFL owners discuss '86 plans

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When United States Football League owners meet Monday in Teaneck, N.J., to plot their course for 1986, the explosions may rival the blasts at Fort Sumter that signaled the start of the Civil War.

On one side of an internal struggle are advocates of reasserting the league's decision last August to switch to a fall schedule next year. They are led by Commissioner Harry Usher and owners Myles Tanenbaum of the Baltimore Stars and Donald Trump of the New Jersey Generals.

"It's wrong to have lured fans into support of the fall season, then to turn away and walk out on them," says Tanenbaum, a fervent believer in spring play until his team was forced to move from Philadelphia when the move to the fall was announced. It now plays in College Park, Md., pending the fall switch.

The spring advocates are led by John Bassett of the Tampa Bay Bandits, owner of the league's most financially successful franchise.

"This is our team, our fans, our time of the year and that's when we're going to play," Bassett says of the spring. "There are other owners in the league who will stay with us in the spring and there are a lot of football players and a lot of cities and a lot of rich people who would like to own football teams in those cities."

In the background of the dispute lurks the league's failing financial fortunes and its inability to obtain a network television contract for a fall schedule.

Attendance is off 6 percent over nine weeks compared to 1984 and last week's rating of 3.0 for its Sunday telecast on ABC was its lowest ever. Moreover, ABC is asking for a rebate because the USFL's original commitment to field teams in the nation's top three markets and eight of the top 10 has been abrogated by moves out of Chicago, Washington, Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit.

The advocates of the spring argue that without a network TV contract for the fall — and all three major networks say they will not provide one — it would be folly to take on the National Football League in the autumn.

But their adversaries content that because the switch forced the removal of teams from Philadelphia, Detroit and New Orleans, the commitment is already made.

To remain in the spring, Bassett and his supporters need votes from 10 of the 14 USFL teams — Los Angeles doesn't have a vote, but the Chicago franchise does, although it suspended operation this season pending the switch to the fall.

Tanenbaum, meanwhile, says there are five teams solidly behind continuing plans to switch to the fall. "The minimum is five. There are more for the fall, but I stop counting when I reach five," he said Thursday.

Women netters in tough battle at SWC tourney

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will close out its season this weekend in Corpus Christi in the Southwest Conference Championship Tournament Friday through Sunday.

Tech finished in seventh place during the regular season, and coach Mickey Bowes said he doesn't see much of a chance for his team to finish higher. "We're pretty much locked into seventh place," he said. "I don't think we can move up, but we won't lose any ground either."

Texas, ranked No. 3 in the NCAA Division I poll and the overwhelming favorite going into the tourney, won the regular season title in convincing fashion. With a perfect 8-0 mark, the Longhorns were beaten in only four individual matches in the conference season, rolling up an impressive 68 individual wins.

Behind Texas, the remaining positions are SMU in second with a 6-2 record and 44-26 individual mark; Rice at 5-3, and 39-31; Texas A&M at 4-4, and 40-32; tied for fifth are TCU and Houston, each with 5-3 and 39-33 numbers; Tech at 1-7 and 27-45, and Arkansas with 2-6, and 23-49 marks. Ninth place Baylor, which was 0-8 and 3-69, did not qualify for the tournament.

McLain slapped with 23 years by Florida judge

By The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Denny McLain, major league baseball's last 30-game winner, was sentenced Thursday to 23 years in prison by a federal judge who chided him for not accepting his conviction on racketeering, extortion and drug-dealing charges.

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth A. Kovachevich cited the former Detroit Tigers pitching sensation's "failure to admit to yourself your own guilt," as well as his involvement with drugs as important factors affecting her decision.

McLain, 41, who sat through most of the proceedings, stood in the packed courtroom as she ordered him to serve eight years each for racketeering, conspiracy and extortion, with the sentences to run concurrently.

She then tacked on the maximum 15 years for his attempt to deal three kilos of cocaine in 1982 and fined him $8,900.

McLain probably will serve one-third of his sentence — eight years — before he would become eligible for parole, the government said.

"I'll pay for my conviction the rest of my life. I've gone through a lot of shame and disgrace," McLain told the judge, reading from a prepared statement. "The lessons I've learned in the last 13 months have prepared me for the rest of my life."

Afterward, defense attorney Arnold Levine, who conferred with his client in a holding cell, said McLain was "destroyed by the length of the sentence."

"I think that much time was uncalled for. I didn't have any quarrel with the eight years," Levine said. "But I thought the consecutive was too harsh."

Levine said he will ask that McLain be allowed to go free on bond while he appeals the conviction. A hearing is expected to be set later.

"He expects we'll be successful on appeal and he'll be out in about 10 months," Levine said.

McLain, who compiled a 31-6 record and led the Tigers to the World Series in 1968, was convicted March 16 following a 14-week trial. Co-defendants Seymour Sher and Frank Cocchiaro received maximum 20-year prison terms for racketeering, conspiracy and extortion.

"I don't know how you get to where I am from where I was 17 years ago," McLain said.
