HUD approves Midland funds

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland has been approved for $1.094 million in Community Development Block Grant funds for 1981-82 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The announcement came this morning from the office of U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

This marks the first time in four years that Midland will be receiving more than $1 million that will be earmarked for improvements on the south and east sides.

The application called for $500,000 in housing rehabilitation with the remaining monies going for paving streets, including Lamesa Road from Mississippi Avenue to Wadley Avenue and Indiana Avenue from Dallas to Marshall streets, curbs and gutters on the streets and buying playground equipment for Sparks and Washington Parks and sprinkler systems in three parks.

City Manager James Brown commented that "I'm glad they (HUD) went along with our application. The council had reached a compromise on it."

That compromise came late last week after the council had been warned by Dallas HUD officials the application would be denied if the city's Housing Assistance Plan wasn't altered to meet the city's housing needs.

The HAP, at that time, listed no new construction for elderly and handicapped persons or for small and large families whose incomes fall below the norm in Midland.

The compromise involved HUD agreeing to change the boundaries in Midland for the target areas of locating this new construction. And the City Council agreed to include 50 units of rental units for elderly and handicapped persons this first year of the three-year HAP goals and 90 the following year. Then the second and third years should see the council applying to build 140 units of housing

Officers capture two escapees

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Two of three inmates who escaped from the Midland County jail Sunday have been captured by law enforcement officers in Odessa and San Angelo.

Wallace Lee Sims, 33, was picked up about 7:30 p.m. Thursday by San Angelo police and deputies from the Tom Green County Sheriff's Department.

Frank Sidney Smith, 21, was arrested by Odessa police following an armed robbery of the Albertson's supermarket at 1350 E. 8th St. early this morning.

According to a spokesman for the Odessa police department, officers Con Brazeal and Clifford Blackstone responded to the robbery call and spotted a man matching the description of the robber near a building close to the store.

The suspect, who police said was carrying a rifle and two Alberston's shopping bags, attempted to flee but was captured after the officers managed to corner him during a brief chase on foot.

An Albertson's employee told police a man walked into the store shortly before 1 a.m., brandished a rifle and demanded money from an open cash register. The man dumped an undisclosed amount of cash in a shopping bag and fled on foot.

Sims reportedly was captured at the home of relatives in San Angelo.

Still at large this morning was 38-year-old Willie Bustillos Jr. The three men overpowered two jailers late Sunday night during a routine security check and escaped after obtaining keys to a fire escape door in the county jail.

Smith was awaiting transfer to the state prison at Huntsville, after being sentenced to 10 years on a robbery conviction.

It was his second escape from the jail. On May 5, he ran off from an outside garbage detail and was captured in the yard of an abandoned house near the downtown area about three hours later.

Sims was being held on burglary and credit card abuse charges, while Bustillos had been jailed on theft charges.

All three now face felony escape charges. Sims already has been returned to Midland County, and Smith is expected to be transferred from Odessa sometime today.

Tax compromise battle continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Senate Republicans say yes and House Democrats say maybe to one last pass at a tax compromise, the White House insists that President Reagan is unwilling to give any more on his plan for a 25 percent cut over three years.

In the meantime, less than a month from the president's deadline for getting a bill to his desk, the Senate will defy tradition and go ahead with its own, Reagan-like measure without waiting on the House.

To the White House's surprise, talk of reopening negotiations was resurrected Wednesday by Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole of Kansas. He said Republicans could give up an extra share of relief for low- and middle-income workers while Democrats could give Reagan the three-year tax cut he wants.

But there were no immediate takers.

House Democrats, battered in earlier confrontations with Reagan, were skeptical, although Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski will meet with Dole, his Republican counterpart, to explore the possibilities.

Asked today about Dole's overture to Rostenkowski on a compromise, White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said, "That's his privilege. In this case, we did not approve of that line."

On Wednesday, Speakes issued a carefully worded statement saying Reagan "will not compromise on the basic plan...across-the-board cuts for three years and 25 percent."

"That's what he agreed to," Speakes said. "He wants a tax cut for all Americans, not just some Americans."

He underscored Reagan's opposition today, saying the president "surely has no plans to compromise. He's adamant on it."

O'Neill responded to the White House statements by leveling another volley at Reagan.

"It is now clear that the real obstruction to a tax cut is the president's insistence on the original Kemp-Roth proposal. The president has set his heart on a tax bill that real Democrats cannot in good conscience support," the speaker said today.

He added, "As long as he (Reagan) insists on an unfair bill, a bill that shortchanges the middle class and penalizes working people, we are set for a tough fight."

After Speakes' statement Wednesday, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said he still thinks there is room for compromise as long as Reagan gets a bill that covers three years, benefits every class of taxpayer and provides special incentives for savings and investment. That would fit any compromise envisioned by Dole.

Rostenkowski did not react publicly to Dole's invitation to talk, which the senator repeated at the White House on Thursday. But some other Democrats who did only served to cloud the issue further.

"It will never happen," Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., a member of the Ways and Means Committee, said of the compromise effort.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he thought talk of a compromise was "over-exaggerated."

And O'Neill, who already has lost three major tests over budget policy, did not sound excited about the prospect of another round of negotiations. He recalled that Democratic leaders tried for several weeks to negotiate a tax bill with the White House, only to have those efforts abandoned after Reagan struck a deal with conservative Democrats.

"Well, we got shot down so quickly when that tried to happen that I don't know whether it's worthwhile trying now or not," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "But Rostenkowski will talk to Dole again."

Meanwhile, Baker announced that the Senate — tired of waiting on the House — will go ahead with its own tax-cut bill next week. In fact,he told anews conference, his plans call for the Senate to complete action on the measure by the end of the week. That version, written by Dole's committee, is very close to what Reagan recommended.

"There is a growing belief in Washington — and I'm afraid I share it — that there certainly is no rush in the House" to pass the bill, Baker said.

The House traditionally originates tax legislation, but Baker said he sees no reason the Senate cannot go first. Even if the Senate can pass the largest tax cut in history with no more than four days' debate, there is no assurance that will force the House into quicker action. The bill cannot become law until it clears both houses in identical form.

The Ways and Means Committee, which is continuing to write its own bill, now plans to wrap up work by July 24 and have the House pass the measure on July 31. That would give a House-Senate conference one week to work out differences in the two versions before Congress leaves for a month-long recess.

Israeli warplanes raid Palestinian strongholds

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes raided Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon today and the military command in Tel Aviv said the air strikes destroyed Soviet-made mobile rocket launchers used by the PLO.

The Voice of Lebanon Radio of the right-wing Christian Phalangists said 20 guerrillas were killed or wounded by incendiary bombs dropped by the jets. A U.N. spokesman in Beirut said four sorties were flown by Israeli jets but had no details.

Other than the Voice of Lebanon report, which could not be independently confirmed, there were no other reports of casualties.

The Israeli military said that the jets hit Katyusha rocket batteries and artillery positions on both sides of the Zaharani River in southern Lebanon and that all the aircraft returned safely to Israel.

It was the first reported Israeli air raid in Lebanon since June 2 and came as U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib met with Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan to talk about resolving the Syrian-Israeli confrontation over Syria's anti-aircraft missiles in eastern Lebanon.

A spokesman for the provincial governor's office in the southern city of Sidon said the jets bombed and rocketed the guerrilla-held areas of Habboush, Wadi El-Akhdar and Eitneit in several runs, beginning at 11 a.m. — 5 a.m. EDT.

Eitneit is 25 miles north of Israel's northernmost town of Metulla, and near a major Syrian military base at the western edge of the Bekaa Valley.

It was the first Israeli air strike reported in Lebanon since Israeli jets knocked out an Al Fatah guerrilla command post north of the port city of Tyre on June 2, killing six people and wounding 11, according to Lebanese authorities.

The targets of today's strike were between 11 and 12 miles north of the Israeli border in the area between the former market town of Nabatiyeh and the oil terminal of Zahrani, according to the Lebanese spokesman.

Troops may be used to quell British riots

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Home Secretary William Whitelaw said today army troops might have to patrol Britain's cities if the street rioting of the past seven nights gets worse.

Whitelaw, the government minister responsible for police and public order, said he opposed deploying troops or creating a special police riot squad, but that the use of soldiers could never be ruled out to deal with outbreaks of "extreme ferocity."

"It is not impossible they would be used in certain circumstances, but I hope it would never arise," Whitelaw said in Warrington, Cheshire, 20 miles from Manchester's trouble-torn streets which he was to tour later in the day.

He added that the experience in violence-torn Northern Ireland proved that sending troops in as a "last resort" created another problem: "How to get the army out."

Whitelaw said the government was "perfectly prepared" to reintroduce the Riot Act, repealed 14 years ago, to strengthen police powers to break up mobs and make arrests before violence erupts.

He said the government will certainly propose a law making parents responsible for criminal actions by their children.

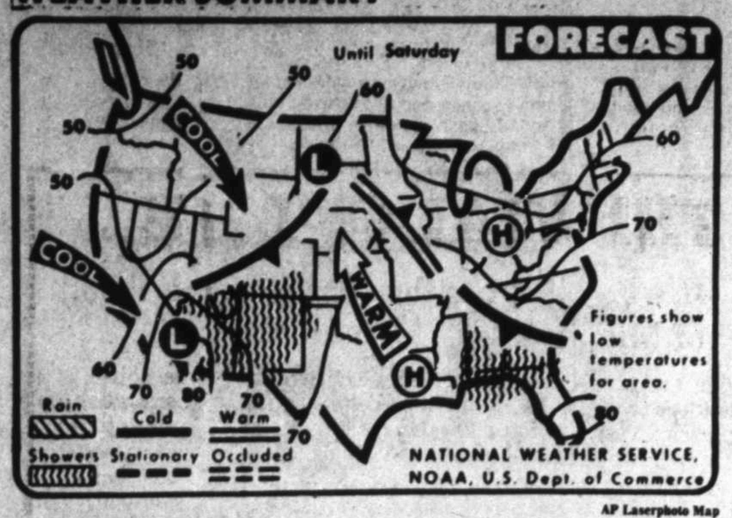

Police Federation Chairman Jim Jardine, who met Whitelaw Thursday, said he has asked for police to be supplied with body armor, armored personnel carriers, water cannons and plastic bullets to combat rioters. Most officers now have only steel-reinforced helmets and plastic shields.

"If the police don't win, the rioters will take over the whole of the centers of Liverpool, Manchester or London. Then God help us," Jardine said.

On Thursday night, rioting spread across 11 London neighborhoods and broke out again in Manchester. But the police struck back forcefully and seemed to be getting the upper hand.

Scotland Yard said it met jeering mobs in strength with bobbies carrying riot shields, arrested more than 50 people in London and dispersed the gangs of white and black youths who were roaming the streets and looting shops.

Mild temperatures will continue here

Relatively mild temperatures will continue greeting Midlanders for at least the next couple of days, as the mercury should reach only the mid-90s.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport also has forecast a slight chance of precipitation, with the probability set at 20 percent for tonight.

Thursday's high of 94 fell far short of the record 103 set in 1964 while the overnight low of 67 was only three degrees off the 64 degree mark set in 1961. An official 0.05 inch of rainfall was recorded during the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today.

Partly cloudy conditions should reign at least through Saturday with 5-10 mph winds tonight increasing to 10-15 mph Saturday afternoon.

Midland to get HUD's CD funds

for low-income small and large families.

Richard Hennessy, director of the city planning and community development department, noted the city had until July 13 to make the changes on HAP's goals.

On that date, 75 days would have passed since the application had been submitted to HUD. According to that agency's rules, if no action is taken within 75 days, the application is automatically denied.

Mayor G. Thane Akins noted, however, that the action came "swiftly" after the city mailed its revised plan to HUD early this week.

"I thought it was rather swift for approval," he said. "They (HUD) move quickly when they get what they want. They move in mysterious ways."

Funds for the city's use will become available Oct. 1 for the 1981-82 fiscal year, according to Hennessy, who added that he's "happy it's (the application) been approved."

Money for construction of 50 units of housing for elderly and handicapped will come from another category, according to Hennessy. And it will have to be the Housing Authority which applies for the money and operates the units.

The mayor noted that the council probably will get the Housing Authority started on that application later this month. "We haven't even talked about this with them (Housing Authority board members). We just changed the application last week to include the units. But I would think we will do something."

HUD already has indicated there is money available under the Low Income Housing Assistance category for the 50 units, Akins said.

The mayor, who has been opposed philosophically to public housing for low-income families but not to the CD funds, said, "We're going to make good use of that money ($1.094 million). The people who really need the help will get it.

"Areas of the city will be enhanced with the additional funds. I'm happy to proceed with the projects."

Worst fire in decades contained

By TOM MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A suspicious fire that began in a bathhouse frequented by homosexuals raced through dozens of buildings in a downtown district today, destroying half a city block before it was contained, officials said.

"This is the worst fire we've seen in the city in many, many years," said Fire Chief Andrew Casper. "I can't remember back to another fire of this magnitude, area or intensity. It's been a very, very tough fire to combat."

At least five people suffered minor injuries, and officials estimated that the damage would reach a multi-million dollar figure.

The Red Cross estimated that 30 to 35 people lived in the industrial area, which also contained several homosexual bars and about two dozen apartment units. The agency said 15 people had asked for shelter.

The blaze began about 2 a.m. PDT at a bathhouse in a dead-end alley, and four hours later it still had not been extinguished. The fire went to five alarms, the highest fire priority, about a half-hour after it erupted.

A thick column of smoke and flame rose over the city, and the heat radiated blocks away in the cool San Francisco night.

More than 200 firefighters battled the fire with virtually every piece of available equipment.

"We have almost the entire firefighting force of San Francisco committed this morning to this fire," Casper said.

Dispatcher David Taylor said he had received orders to call in all off-duty firefighters to man stationhouses that emptied as crews sped to the fire.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately known, but Casper said it was of "very suspicious" origin.

The fire fed on natural gas lines running through the mostly industrial, South-of-Market district, officials said.

The bathhouse, known as the Barracks and frequented by homosexuals, was in the process of being remodeled. It collapsed early in the fire, Casper said. A four-alarm arson fire caused one death and more than $1 million damage to the same building in 1977, he said.

Fenibo Jicks, who fled his apartment two doors from the bathhouse, said the Barracks "was just in flames, that house went up in an explosion. "There was a little boom" before the building collapsed, he added.

Craig Ferguson, 24, a resident in one of at least four apartment buildings involved in the fire, said a newly installed smoke alarm woke him about 2 a.m.

Odessan killed

SWEETWATER — An Odessa man was killed Thursday morning in a mishap involving six vehicles on Interstate 20 east of Sweetwater, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Thomas Michael Carroll, 31, of Odessa was killed when his car was hit by a veering truck, said a DPS spokesman.

The truck, traveling west on I-20, swerved into the rest area after colliding with the back of another car pulling a trailer. The truck hit four cars parked in the area, one of which was Carroll's.

Carroll was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Brenda Ritchey.

Three other drivers were reported injured in the accident.

Youths riot during funeral

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops fired a hail of plastic bullets at rock-throwing youths during a funeral procession for IRA hunger striker Joe McDonnell today and several people were believed injured, reporters at the scene said.

The trouble broke out, the reporters said, when troopers tried to trap the masked gunmen who fired a volley over the coffin of McDonnell in thet-traditional salute of the Irish Republican Army. The organization is outlawed here and in the Irish republic.

The procession was on its way to Milltown Cemetery in West Belfast for the burial.

The violence erupted shortly after a Roman Catholic priest said the British government had not plaed fair with negotiators who tried to save his life.

"There were tragic and unnecessary circumstances in which Joe died," the Rev. Frances McCorry said to a crowd of 2,000 mourners at St. Oliver Plunkett Church in West Belfast, just 500 yards from the McDonnell home.

The Roman Catholic priest said McDonnell, the fifth man to die in the Maze prison fast, had hoped the Irish Commisssion for Justice and Peace would find a way to end the hunger strike, but "the commission's integrity and truthfulness was not matched by that of the British government."

McDonnell's wife, Goretti, and two children, 10-year-old Bernadette and 9-year-old Joseph, wept during the service. McDonnell's body was to be buried next to that of Bobby Sands, the first hunger striker to die.

The British Northern Ireland office said Patrick McGeown, 25, a member of the outlawed IRA who is serving a 15-year sentence for bombing, refused breakfast at the Maze this morning. The IRA announced earlier that he would take McDonnell's place in the hunger campaign for politcal prisoner status.

Security forces were braced for a renewal of the violence that has resulted in three deaths since McDonnell succumbed early Wednesday, his 61st day without food.

Police reported a Catholic teenager, 15-year-old Daniel Barrett, was shot in the neck Thursday night by British soldiers in the Ardoyne district of North Belfast, where gunmen attacked a military observation post.

A police spokesman also said three officers and two civilians were wounded in other sniper attacks during the night.

Sources who asked not to be identified said the Irish Commission for Justice and Peace had "renewed hope" that a solution to end the fasts could be found, but gave no details. The commission is made up of five clergymen and laymen.

It was also announced that two top aides to Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald of the Irish Republic would meet today with Britain's deputy foreign minister, Ian Gilmour, in an effort to get the negotiations restarted.

The IRA wants to end British rule of Northern Ireland, where Protestants outnumber Catholics about two-to-one, and unite it with the Irish Republic, where Catholics are in the majority.

Supporters of the hunger strikers told a news conference held outside the Maze Thursday that the fasting would continue until the government negotiates directly with the prisoners.

Panel meets to plan party congress

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party's Central Committee met today in the face of renewed labor unrest to plan next week's crucial party congress that will vote on reforms won by striking workers a year ago.

The Central Committee session began at the end of a week of warning strikes that temporarily shut down Baltic ports, the Polish national airline and public transport in a major city.

Warsaw Radio said the Central Committee, working on the congress agenda, heard a report from Politburo member Kazimierz Barcikowski, who said the congress has an "unsatisfactory number of worker-delegates and of farmers, women and young people."

Meanwhile, the independent union Solidarity said the union local in Kutnow, an important railroad junction 44 miles west of here, would stage a two-hour transit strike on Monday if food supplies in the town of 60,000 did not improve by then.

On Thursday, a warning strike by 6,000 LOT airline workers delayed an estimated 1,500 passengers at Warsaw airport. Nine domestic flights were scrubbed and 18 domestic and international flights were delayed.

LOT workers threatened another strike for July 24 after the government rejected a union demand that the employees' nominee be appointed to head the national airline. The government named a general to the post instead.

A second warning strike Thursday halted public transport for two hours in the northwestern industrial city of Bydgoszcz. The strikers there demanded dismissal of the municipal director of transportation, accusing him of abusing his position and using public workers for private building projects.

Both strikes were organized by branches of Solidarity but drew the ire of Solidarity's national chief, Lech Walesa.

Walesa, who helped organize walkouts which spawned the Soviet bloc's first independent union last summer, denounced the work stoppages as "bad and dangerous."

Speaking to workers in Gdansk, one of the Baltic ports shut down by a one-hour work stoppage for better working conditions Wednesday, Walesa said the strikes prompted speculation that the union was seeking postponement of the party congress.

Visitor injured

A visitor to Midland suffered a broken hip in a two-car accident at 1600 W. Front Ave. Thursday afternoon, according to the Midland Police Department.

Levin McGlothlin, 41, of Bridgeport, W.Va., suffered a broken hip when the car he was driving collided with another vehicle driven by Edward G. Cope, 44, of 1600 Neely Ave.

Cope received minor injuries in the accident. McClothlin was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital, but was later transferred to a hospital in Oklahoma City, Ok.

Seminole man killed

A Seminole man was killed Thursday afternoon when his truck overturned, according to a spokesman with the Department of Public Safety.

Aubrey Cecil Bryant, 62, of Seminole was driving his truck on a paved road 12 miles north of Seminole when the left front ball joint snapped, causing the vehicle to go off the road.

The truck overturned 2½ times, killing the driver. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Fred Connally.

Official says Savings and Loan standards improving

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The financial standing of savings and loan associations in Texas is sound and should improve as changes in savings plans are initiated, according to two officials with the Texas Savings and Loan League.

Tom King, league president, and Durward Curlee, executive vice president of the league, discussed the outlook for S&Ls during a news conference Thursday at Midland Regional Airport.

Curlee explained that the federal government's deregulation of savings institutions is boosting their ability to offer a wide range of savings plans with variable interest rates to the public. Before, the S&Ls had been limited to a set amount of interest and its savings plans.

An example of the deregulation, said Curlee, is the ability for S&Ls to offer checking accounts with interest. In the near future, an added feature will be a Money Market fund.

That fund won't be offered, though, unless it can meet set criteria. Those requirements include not endangering the amount of money invested in the fund and backing from securities.

Americans have dropped their savings habit as inflation has increased, Curlee pointed out, but it hasn't stopped the flow of money going out on home mortgages. New savings plans that will be devised by the money institutions should entice those people back.

Homes and home mortgages are in the process of change, said both officials. Instead of the standard fixed rate mortgage, S&Ls have resorted to variable rate mortgages in which the loan is refigured at various years. These adjustable rate mortgages aren't a new idea, according to Curlee, but have been in use throughout the world. In fact, the U.S. borrowed its plan from Canada.

"The consumer will have to know more about his mortgage; it will be more complex," said Curlee.

This new mortgage plan better reflects the changing lifestyle of Americans, who no longer stay in one place all their lives. "People no longer buy a house at 28 and live there until they die," Curlee explained.

And people are having to resort to smaller homes because of the high housing costs.

In view of worried mumblings about the future for S&Ls, Tom King contended the thrift institutions are healthy. "For Texas, we are exceptionally sound; we have $40 billion in assets. Our system is set up for expansion of money. You don't have to worry about security of our loans."

He acknowledged the upcoming changes in the thrift institutions. "We're going through a transition period right now."

But the high demand for housing in Texas should keep the S&Ls in business, they said. And apparently high interest rates haven't affected house sales in the Permian Basin, an area referred to by Curlee as the "Kuwait of Texas."

The two officials praised President Reagan's budget and tax cuts, claiming these will stimulate the economy and bring down interest rates. But they criticized Treasury Secretary Donald Regan for opposing some plans to boost business for savings and loan institutions.

"Reagan is the first president since Harry Truman to demand a steady and predictable growth of the money supply. And cutting taxes has never caused a deficit," said Curlee.

The two confirmed that people have been withdrawing more money in recent months, rather than leaving it in savings. "People are not saving, they're investing. And if they're not investing, they're speculating, and that's dangerous," said Curlee.

The men also criticized Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve, for his maneuvers last summer to bring down the interest rates "to get Carter re-elected (as president)."

Interest rates plummeted to 12 percent from a high of 20 percent, said Curlee. While it created more money in a very short period of time, it also induced spiraling inflation.

If Reagan's program goes into effect, the executives expect to see the interest rates drop to 11 percent in a year to 18 months.

"Inflation the last three months has been 8.5 percent. Usually, the interest rate (on long-term loans) is 3 points above that and it would be 11.5 percent," explained King.

Fugitive arrested

Corpus Christi group plans statewide taxpayers lobby

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The city where the mayor and city council sued every citizen in town over a property tax revolt last year will host a meeting of tax reformers from around the state next week.

The Corpus Christi Taxpayer's Association in 1979 won approval of a city referendum putting a 68 cents per $100 valuation and 6 percent annual increase limit on city taxes.

Corpus Christi city fathers responded by suing the citizenry, the taxpayer group retaliated with recall petitions, and the suit was finally dropped.

The tax group now is trying to put together a statewide coalition to lobby the Texas Legislature. Groups from Galveston, League City, Texas City, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Victoria and other communities are expected to attend the July 18 meeting here.

"It (a statewide group) would enable us to bring pressure on groups of legislators for a single purpose, instead of scattering our efforts. If we could go to legislators in six or seven locations, it would be far more fertile ground," said Victor B. Penuel Jr., president of the Corpus Christi Taxpayer's Association.

"As far as I know this is the first step. We've had a lot of enthusiastic joiners so far. There's quite a sizeable group around. Our problem is getting hold of them," Penuel said.

He said the proposed coalition would have different goals from Texas 13, former attorney general Waggoner Carr's group that is pushing for initiative and referendum on the state level with the aim of slashing state taxes.

"Texas 13 is fine, except they seem to shoot at a very heavy reduction of taxes at the state level. ... We are looking at the local level," Penuel said.

He said Carr's Texas 13 group "is hung on reducing taxes by a mandate of the people. That's a little narrower than most of us like. "

Because of the divergent viewpoints of the various taxpayer groups, Penuel said he is not sure what kind of statewide organization might emerge from the upcoming meeting.

"There are a lot of decisions to be made — whether it will be a loose conglomeration or what," he said.

He said the Corpus Christi group was interested in getting more taxpayer control over local school boards.

"At least seven taxing entities have legal authoritity to issue bonds or taxes," Penuel said. "Holy mackerel. ... You can go on and on ad nauseum of people who could sock it to you. Most of them don't. They are low key and don't cost you much money. The big ones are the local independent school district and the city.

"Hell, no one wants to fight against educating children. ... What we're interested in is making sure that money is spent wisely," he said.

Blind woman says crime as serious a problem as ever

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A blind woman who lost a 25-cent package of crackers to a mentally handicapped thief said Thursday that his arrest did nothing to deter crime at her concession stand and that she wants the government to help him.

"Evidently, the kids don't read the newspapers and don't know what happened to this man," said Nancy E. Anderson, 29, who blames schoolchildren for most of the crime at her stand in the Federal Courts Building.

Officials had hoped to make an example of Roy Bowman to "help Nancy out," as one federal prosecutor said.

They didn't know that the 19-year-old transient was mentally handicapped when they arrested him on June 18 as he was trying to sell a pint of blood to get money for food.

After his arrest, officials learned Bowman had been a ward of the Indiana Welfare Department until he turned 19. Recently, he had been sleeping on park benches and in vacant houses and foraging for food, federal officials said.

A federal magistrate ruled Tuesday that a charge of theft on government property should be dropped and said that instead Bowman should be committed to Central State Hospital, an institution for the mentally ill in Indianapolis.

Miss Anderson is glad the charge was dropped, but she doesn't agree with the federal magistrate's plan.

"I hate to think of anyone being in a mental institution," she said, adding, "Evidently, he is not all that ignorant since he knew he could sell his blood to get money for food ... he has been mg it."

Miss Anderson said Bowman should be placed in a government-run sheltered workshop for the mentally retarded, where he could learn to be independent.

Miss Anderson and her brother have operated the concession stand for more than five years.

Since the city bus company placed a stop near her stand about three years ago, Miss Anderson said, she has been victimized by petty thefts, often by schoolchildren.

"Those kids have got more money than I have. They come in here with $10 bills to buy a 25-cent candy bar," she said.

Miss Anderson said she and officials of the state Agency for the Blind, which has 34 concession stands, prefer to reduce thefts 2ithout prosecuting anyone.

Jamaica touted

HOUSTON (AP) — Jamaica's prime minister says his country has more to offer American businesses than just a vacation paradise.

Edward Seaga told a group of Houston businessmen Wednesday that his country acts as barrier to Communist influence in the Caribbean, notinG that many U.S. businesses would be threatened if the 28 Democratic nations in the region were to follow in Cuba's political footsteps.

"If they follow that course, the sea lanes that bring the oil ... are not going to be what you consider them now. You are a part of the key to whether Jamaica succeeds or not," he said.

Seaga also will visit Chicago and Minneapolis this week in an effort to entice American investors to help rebuild his country's economy, which experts say is on the brink of financial disaster.

Conservatives find no Senate support in fight of O'Connor nomination

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative groups trying to mount a political offensive against Sandra D. O'Connor's nomination to the Supreme Court are finding a fight and seeing no support in a Senate inclined to confirm her.

At a Capitol Hill news conference backed by 21 conservative and anti-abortion organizations, a spokesman said Thursday that the Reagan administration may have "covered up" information about Mrs. O'Connor's alleged pro-abortion stance.

They claimed that as a member of the Arizona Senate in 1970 she cosponsored and voted in committee for a measure that would have legalized abortion on demand. The bill never was enacted.

Within hours of the news conference, conservative Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., took to the Senate floor to denounce criticism of the Arizona appeals court judge as "a lot of foolish claptrap."

Later, in a television interview, Goldwater stepped up his counterattack by accusing the Moral Majority and the National Right to Life Committee, two groups in the forefront of the battle against the nomination, of "taking more of a fascist line than a conservative line."

Howard Phillips, spokesman for the groups and head of the Conservative Caucus, told reporters that the O'Connor nomination was a "major blow" to the conservative bloc that helped elect Reagan last fall.

"It can be expected that the O'Connor nomination could diminish the prospects for Republican gains in the House and Senate in 1982," he added.

Phillips noted that several senators have expressed a desire not to be "railroaded" into voting for Mrs. O'Connor, while acknowledging, "I'm not aware that any senator has taken an unequivocal position against the nomination."

An Associated Press survey Wednesday and Thursday found 33 senators committed to vote for Mrs. O'Connor and 20 leaning that way. There were no declarations of opposition, with 45 senators undecided and two not responding to the survey.

Phillips said the conservatives are urging the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is tentatively set to begin confirmation hearings later this month, to wait until October. He said the conservative groups would start asking grass-roots organizations to work against the nomination or at least for a delay in considering it.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., joined Goldwater in defending Mrs. O'Connor's record on abortion.

Baker said she never had supported the concept of abortion on demand, and he predicted the conservative attacks would not stand in the way of her confirmation.

Goldwater, in a Senate speech, labeled the conservative criticism "a lot of foolish claptrap (from) people who do not know what they are talking about."

In an interview Thursday night on Washington television station WDVM, Goldwater said of the Moral Majority and National Right to Life Committee: "I don't think they can call themselves conservative when they're really taking more of a fascist line than a conservative line."

He added: "You are not arguing with conservative philosophy when you use the ERA or abortion because they can't be judged conservative or liberal."

Goldwater said the nominee should be "the best person to serve on that court whether she's a woman, black, brown, Christian, Jew....I don't like to see a very talented person who can improve the court crucified because a few people are opposed to one position she took 11 years ago."

The conservative groups held their news conference in a room arranged by Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H.

However, Humphrey spokesman Paul Carrier said the senator was undecided on Mrs. O'Connor and had made the arrangements without knowing what the groups intended to say.

Phillips, the Conservative Caucus chief, said the administration could easily have gotten information about Mrs. O'Connor's alleged pro-abortion positions by contacting pro-family groups in Arizona.

Survey finds solid support

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half the Senate either supports Sandra D. O'Connor for the Supreme Court or is leaning that way, and there are no definite votes against her yet, an Associated Press survey shows.

The survey, taken Wednesday and Thursday, found 33 senators committed to vote for the 51-year-old Arizona appeals court judge and 20 leaning toward supporting her nomination as the first woman Supreme Court justice.

There were no declarations of opposition, with 45 senators undecided and two not responding to the survey.

But many among the 45 undecided senators said they were pleased President Reagan had chosen a woman and, while they had made no firm decisions, would be inclined to support her from what is known from initial press reports and other sources about her background.

Those committed to Mrs. O'Connor spill across the political spectrum, ranging from Republicans S.I. Hayakawa of California and Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the Judiciary Committee chairman, to Democrats Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Alan Cranston of California, the assistant minority leader.

Many senators who said they support Mrs. O'Connor indicated that could change if investigations into her background turned up some unexpected problems.

Typical of the responses was that of Sen. LLoyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who declined to say he would definitely vote for Mrs. O'Connor.

"I don't know much about the nominee, but I commend the president for his decision to name the first woman to sit on the highest court in the land," Bensten said.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee which must consider the nomination, cautioned against a rush to judgment.

While Mrs. O'Connor's credentials appear excellent, he said, "our relatively recent experiences with the nominations of Judges (Clement) Haynesworth and (G. Harold) Carswell have shown the danger of reaching judgments too quickly."

Blowing our horn

There's an old saying: "If you don't blow your own horn, no one else will." We hope our readers will forgive us if we do just that for a few minutes today.

On Page 7-A is announcement that during the past year no less than 220 major awards for journalistic excellence have been presented to Hearst Corporation newspapers.

Included in the announcement are a list of members of the Newspaper Division of Hearst, along with some of the more prestigious of the 200-plus awards. We're proud The Reporter-Telegram is included in the list of winners.

In addition to the award noted, ratings received by your newspaper only recently include a second place in general excellence in our circulation category in Texas, a second in features and a second in sports. And those are in addition to others awarded by out-of-state newspaper people in Associated Press and Texas Press contests during the past 12 months.

We wanted to point this out, not because it will cause businesses to place more advertising in our newspaper than they otherwise would or because more people will subscribe to The Reporter-Telegram simply because of it. But because we hope the awards will indicate to you that we are making a serious, all-out effort to provide the best community newspaper possible editorially, and in all aspects, including spot news, features, photography, news selection and presentation and in those specialized fields of coverge each of which has its own importance and its own following.

But it goes beyond that. We're proud to be a part of a newspaper family which is in the midst of not only expansion but improvement.

Hearst Corporation President Frank A. Bennack Jr. has said among management's top goals is to make the Hearst newspaper name "one of the most highly regarded in the country" and tremendous strides are being made in that direction in our newspapers across the country.

Those papers serve as wide a variety of people as could be imagined, big city readers and those in small towns, men and women whose political persuasions range from liberal to conservative in cities where chief interests center on industry, agriculture, state government, tourism or in Midland's case, oil and business, as well as others.

Since Hearst newspapers are basically autonomous, as would have to be the case considering the broad spectrum of interests and readership they serve, the result, we believe, comes as close to the typical "hometown-owned newspaper" that is possible to achieve while having access to the benefits of being part of an organization that can call on its New York and Washington-based sources for the benefit of all.

The results of this new planning and coordination being implemented by Hearst for its papers are only now beginning to be noted, particularly by newspapers acquired by Hearst in recent years.

But we can assure you readers here will benefit.

Tank isn't too tough

It's beginning to look as if the Army's new XM-1 battle tank is a real clinker.

The huge war machine has failed tests for durability and reliability. It has lots of breakdowns and is next to impossible to fix under combat conditions.

The vehicle is heavy on gasoline, too. It is estimated it will get only 130 miles to a 500-gallon tankful in combat — creating a massive logistics problem.

According to a Chicago Tribune story this week, the government's General Accounting Office has issued a highly critical report on the MX-1.

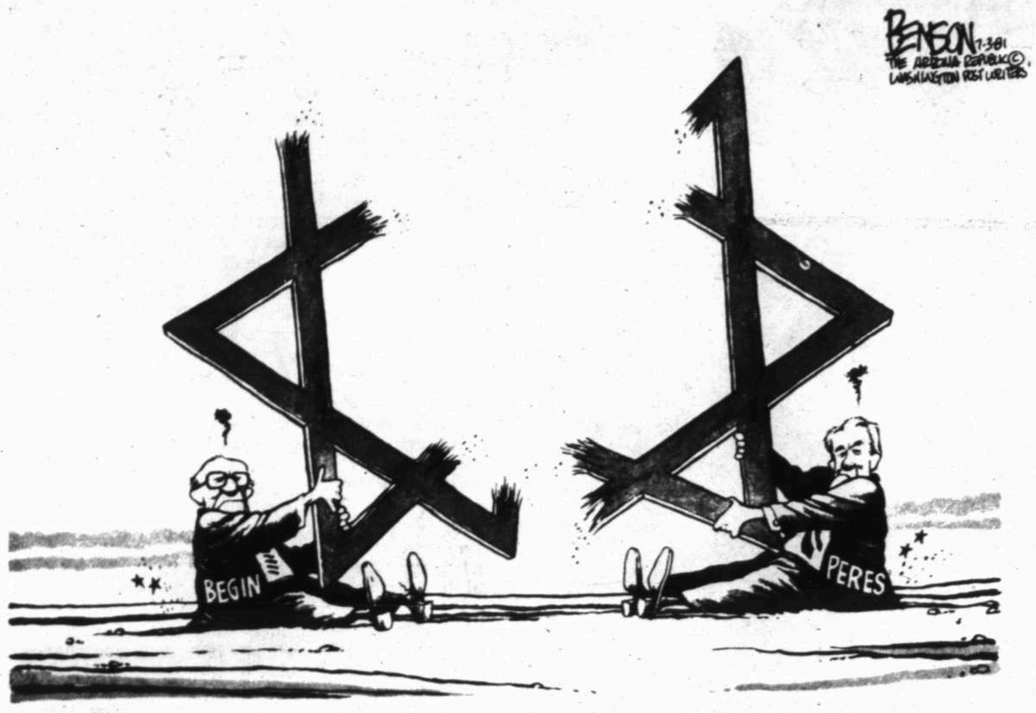

Earlier reports on the tank indicate it is prone to transmission troubles and tread wear. The XM-1s cost about $2 million each, twice as much as the Army's former main battle tank, the M-60.

The Army wants 7,058 of the new tanks at a total cost of $19 billion. It points out that XM-1 is twice as fast as the M-60, has a better aiming system for is 105mm cannon and carries vastly superior armor plating

"Driving the M-60 is like moving a house," one tank commander said. "The XM-1 is like driving a Cadillac."

Even so, if the new tank cannot take its lumps in the field, something must be done, and fast.

The Pentagon should get the matter straightened out with the builder, Chrysler Corp., before many more millions are spent.

A CHANGING WORLD

President's opinion may get changed

When President Reagan not so long ago said, in response to a question, that he felt he was being treated fairly by the press, he was whistling in the dark, seeing the political world through rose-colored glasses or hiding his real feelings.

John Pinkerman

The chortling of the increasingly left-wing big city press and the major television networks nationwide over the rejection of Ernest Lefever as assistant secretary of state for human rights was the shrillest expression so far of the so-called working press' distaste for the Republican president, but the sniping plus the written and cartooned derision of Mr. Reagan has been evident all along.

It seems still to grind on reporters, columnists, editorial writers and cartoonists in the major sheets published in New York, Los Angeles and Washington that Mr. Reagan defeated their darling, Jimmy Carter, by more than 8 million votes and won an electoral landslide mandate, 489 to 49.

Washington and New York TV "experts" also seem to find Mr. Reagan hard to stomach after four years with the liberals and leftists that were so much a part of the previous Democratic administration.

The cartoonists go far beyond the writers. Their humor, if humor is what an editorial cartoon is supposed to project, has degenerated into savage expressions of anguish, anger and insults. If their scratching is designed to make readers think — as editorials seek to do — they are succeeding. They are causing readers to think these masters of brush and pen have descended to depths of poor taste that are not worthy of publication by their bosses, who either share such gutter standards or find — as other businesses do — that employees are generally unmanageable these days.

The confidence in and post-election support for the president by the American public seems particularly difficult to swallow among the elite in the news "game" and this even goes for some in the supposedly pro-conservative CNN, the cable news network of conservative multimillionaire Ted Turner of Atlanta, Ga.

This public confidence is reflected in what one ultraliberal major newspaper described as a national mood of optimism that has been inspired by the new president.

But, lest any Reagan supporters or other conservatives might find this admission by a liberal organ healthy, the story then proceeded to explain that the public really didn't know what it was talking about or thinking about, and that Mr. Reagan's projection of this mood of hope and confidence was strictly phony.

It called this mood of confidence "more psychological than tangible." It mentioned several polls in which, for instance, people said generally that "the country is going in the right direction," that the administration is moving positively, that there is a sizable upward jump in national optimism.

Then this story sought to tell the people polled that they were slightly nuts. It noted that Wall Street, more wrong than right historically in judging the nation's economic future, "is showing skepticism." It gave no credit to the new president for a substantial drop-off in the inflation rate.

Such are some of the specifics. Both writers and TV talkers have other ways in which to discredit a president — or any other person. They exaggerate and accentuate the negative plus casting doubt on the genuine nature of the positive. Even the presumably "clean" national wire services are getting careless in their editing of liberal reporters' coverage of Mr. Reagan.

Perhaps high-speed electronic writing and editing techniques are responsible for this failure, but that does not make it any more excusable.

The Lefever incident, however, brought out the Reagan detractors full blast. The man obviously was not qualified for the job for which he was nominated but his rejection was not quite the historic disaster for a president that the press sought to make it.

While he may continue to say publicly that he's getting fair treatment, Reagan privately may come to have other thoughts.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Car dealer victimized by interest rates

WASHINGTON — Sky-high interest rates have made it difficult if not impossible for many American families to buy their own homes. For Don Bessler of New Carlisle, Ind., though, the interest rates have made it impossible to earn a living.

Jack Anderson

Bessler had been a Chevrolet dealer for nine years but last August, he threw in the towel, becoming one of 1,650 auto dealers across the country to give up in 1980. It was the wildly fluctuating interest rates that knocked him out.

Like most small businessmen, Bessler's operation depended on short-term loans that provided the necessary capital for his inventory. In the case of auto dealers, the inventory is known as a "floor plan" — the number of vehicles they must have on display to give buyers the wide range of choices they have become accustomed to over the years.

Obviously, no car dealers can afford to purchase their stock of cars outright from the manufacturer. They have to borrow, generally at interest rates one or two percentage points above the prime rate that bankers offer their lowest-risk borrowers.

At the same time, most customers who wanted to buy Bessler's Chevies were no more able to pay cash for their cars than he was. They had to borrow from banks or other lending institutions — at even higher rates than Bessler was paying.

High interest rates, added to the inflation-caused higher prices of new cars — scared off many potential buyers. This left Bessler with a larger inventory of unsold cars, on which he was paying ever-higher interest rates.

The figures are mind-blowing: Nine years ago, Bessler told my associate Tony Capaccio, he was paying from $500 to $700 a month in interest on the 40 to 60 vehicles in his inventory. By last August, his interest charges had reached $5,000 a month, at the very time his sales were being held down by customers' inability or unwillingness to finance their cars.

For Bessler, "the bottom really fell out of the bucket" in January of 1980. In the next few months, he laid off six of his 12 employees, including his stepfather. He still couldn't make ends meet, and finally had to call it quits.

Another problem facing dealers was uncovered by investigators for Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa. They found evidence that, in the Midwest region, representatives from at least one major automaker — Ford — were discouraging its dealers from participating in government-backed loans from the Small Business Administration. One possible motive behind this squeeze play was that SBA loans offered competition to financing that Ford itself provided for the dealers.

Upon learning that a dealer had applied for an SBA loan, congressional investigators found, Ford would raise the collateral requirements on its own loans to dealers. This meant they would not have enough collateral left to meet the SBA's requirements, and the government loan would fall through.

After Bedell complained to Ford, the company issued a memo to its field representatives stating that it is not company policy to require additional collateral for dealers who apply for SBA loans.

Footnote: The ripple effect of the demise of so many dealers can be telling. Although they comprise only 2 percent of retail establishments, auto dealers generate nearly 14 percent of retail sales, have a $10 billion payroll and generate another $1.2 billion in advertising expenses.

NICARAGUAN AID — The Reagan administration suspended economic aid to the Nicaraguan government April 1 because of evidence that the Sandinista regime was providing arms and other support to leftist rebels in El Salvador. But American dollars are still flowing freely into Nicaragua through the Agency for International Development.

The AID money is going to private businesses and volunteer organizations. It had been approved by Congress earlier, and was not covered by the president's suspension order. My sources say AID's obligations to the private sector should keep the agency involved in Nicaragua until early next year.

Lawrence Pezzullo, who just announced his resignation as ambassador to Nicaragua, was in Washington recently lobbying for re-allocation of economic assistance. But his reception was lukewarm at best.

AID officials still hope some form of assistance request can be taken to Congress this summer. They note that intelligence agencies no longer report that Nicaragua is arming the Salvadoran leftists. But intelligence analysts say the Sandinistas are providing other types of support, including clandestine radio stations that broadcast leftist propaganda to El Salvador. That's a stumbling block that would have to be removed before economic aid can be renewed.

While AID officials favor resumption of economic assistance to Nicaragua, the agency has now been put under the thumb of State Department political offices, where there is strong resistance to the idea. Meanwhile, Nicaragua has turned to the Soviet bloc and Libya for aid.

OUTSPOKEN FRESHMAN — Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., has a far different personal style from that of Jacob Javits, the man he replaced. D'Amato is blunt where Javits was diplomatic, rough where Javits was smooth. Recently, the new senator was discoursing to intimates about the Israeli raid on Iraq's nuclear reactor. In his unmistakable New York accent, D'Amato was heard to say: "The French! They're the worst. They created the situation — for money!"

INSIDE REPORT:

Soviet propagandists leading assault against foreign policy

WASHINGTON — Shrill criticism by respected liberals of President Reagan's foreign policy, aimed foremost at U.S.-Soviet relations, is playing into the hands of growing anti-American tendencies in Western Europe and giving the Kremlin new stature.

Rowland Evans

Indeed, it is arming the Kremlin's propaganda machine with powerful ammuniton in the battle to exploit European fears about NATO's nuclear modernization program.

Robert Novak

Reagan has been postponing a major foreign policy speech on one occasion after another, but the intensity of the attack by leading figures of the flawed, once-potent Eastern foreign policy establishment now leaves him no alternative. Political and diplomatic advisers believe the great communicator can easily explain the principles that guide a foreign policy his liberal critics find unacceptable, but that he must do so soon.

What triggered the mood of urgency was shock from the president on down at former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's surprising charge on "Meet the Press" June 21. "It is a real question in Moscow," said Vance, "as to whether or not there is any possibility of resuming serious negotiations" between Washington and Moscow.

Although Vance's sincerity is not questioned, that mirrors propaganda coming out of the Kremlin, led by President Leonid Brezhnev himself, to undermine the credibility of the Reagan administration. "Vance is now telling our European friends and his own country that Brezhnev is right and Reagan and (secretary of state) Al Haig are wrong," one incensed official told us.

The recent string of embarrassments suffered by Haig and the White House on peripheral issues puts a thin gloss of credibility on the attempt to savage the Reagan-Haig performance. The unseemly assault by Haig's aides on United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick damaged Haig. Likewise, the clumsy White House announcement on July 1 that those F-16 aircraft withheld from Israel would — or would not — be released portrayed confusion.

But that is gloss. Vance and other critics are striking at the heart of the Reagan-Haig policy and pronouncing judgments seemingly based on this criterion: Is the policy acceptable to the Russians? Asked whether Reagan's decision to make communist China eligible for lethal arms would encourage Soviet intervention in Poland, Vance said the arms decision "reduces any leverage we may have with the Soviet Union."

Likewise, probed about the administration's long-planned refusal to be rushed into strategic arms negotiations with Moscow, Vance replied: "I do not believe that they (Reagan) have a policy with respect to arms control." From a former secretary of state whose first arms control initiative for Jimmy Carter in 1977 was a bust and whose second attempt resulted in a treaty the Senate refused to ratify, that response had Orwellian overtones.

Much of the Reagan-Haig record in handling the Soviet Union remains out of public sight. Top officials, including U.S. diplomats in Moscow, have engaged in more than 50 private talks with Soviet officials, many not publicized. More to the point, during the presidential campaign Reagan carefully differentiated his arms control thinking from the Nixon-Ford-Carter failures, removing SALT from its elevated shrine.

Top to bottom, Reagan's advisers are determined not to be sucked into a SALT-directed Soviet policy of the kind that now leaves the U.S. dangerously exposed to Soviet strategic power. They will not dilute their insistence that Soviet conduct itself will determine American policy.

Vance's chastisement of the president over his decision to make China eligible for lethal weapons was particularly galling to Reagan operatives (and has been publicly countered by Zbigniew Brzezinski). Vance fought prevailing Carter administration policy to pull the U.S. and communist China closer. Vance and his top Soviet adviser, Marshall Shulman, argued it would be "provocative" to Moscow.

Vance even resisted Carter's decision to give China most-favored-nation treatment — because the Russians did not have it. It was an open secret that if Carter had been re-elected, the ban on the sale of lethal arms to China would have been lifted.

Soviet propagandists are making such skillful use of the liberal campaign against the Reagan-Haig foreign policy that Afghanistan is becoming a forgotten issue. Some presidential advisers think an answer is overdue and that Reagan must make it soon.

Trudeau, Reagan to meet today

Interest rates, Canadian energy on agenda

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau faces a stern American rebuke over his country's restrictive energy investment policies as he confers with President Reagan on the upcoming economic summit of industrial powers.

For his part, Trudeau wants to know when Reagan's economic program will show results and bring down near-record interest rates that are pinching the economies of other industrialized nations.

Reagan, who is meeting Trudeau for the second time, planned to receive his guest at the White House today for a working lunch. The two leaders last met in Canada in March.

The session's main purpose was to prepare for the annual economic summit conference for leaders of the seven richest industrial democracies July 20-21 in Ottawa.

As summit host, Trudeau has been meeting in advance with other participating heads of state in hopes of orchestrating a harmonious conference despite intense European criticism of high U.S. interest rates.

Before leaving Ottawa on Thursday, Trudeau complained that the interest rates are "far too high," especially with moderating inflation.

He said he remains supportive of Reagan's policies but is becoming impatient for positive results. Trudeau said he would ask Reagan: "We're trusting you, but when do you think it's going to work?"

Reagan, who was to be accompanied by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, planned to use today's discussions to complain about a Canadian investment policy aimed at reducing foreign ownership of energy companies, U.S. officials said.

And Trudeau may reiterate Canadian concern about U.S. air pollution known as acid rain that drifts north across the border, Canadian officials said.

"The main item on the menu is the summit," a U.S. State Department official, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday. "But I think it is quite likely those other issues will come up."

Reagan administration officials and members of Congress are growing increasingly angry with Canada's energy policies, which U.S. critics label as nationalistic and discriminatory against U.S. investors.

Canada is seeking to reduce foreign ownership of its energy resources from a current level of 70 percent to 50 percent or less by granting numerous financial advantages to Canadian-owned energy companies.

This is particularly galling to American business interests in light of recent attempts by Canadian companies to acquire U.S. energy properties. The latest example is the attempt by Seagram Co. of Canada to take over Conoco, the ninth-largest U.S. oil company now trying to merge with American chemical giant Du Pont.

Some members of Congress want to retaliate by imposing similar restrictions on U.S. companies if Canada doesn't change its policy.

"This is a matter of more than growing concern in the United States," Deputy Treasury Secretary R. Tim McNamar said in a telephone interview Thursday.

McNamar, the No. 2 Treasury Department official, charged that Canadian officials are pursuing "increasingly nationalistic policies" that may force the United States to reassess its policies.

"We have not been able to convey to them that they have turned the tables into a one-way street in terms of what Canadian companies can do in the United States and what U.S. companies cannot do in Canada," he said.

With today's session, Trudeau will have met with all the summit participants except Italy's new premier, Giovanni Spadolini, who took office June 28. Also attending the summit will be the leaders of France, Great Britain, West Germany and Japan.

The summit, the seventh in a series dating back to 1975, is expected to focus on Reagan's anti-inflation policy of restrained federal spending and tight credit. That has kept interest rates high, creating serious economic problems for the other industrialized nations.

The high U.S. rates have driven down the value of foreign currencies because investors are finding it more appealing to put their money in U.S. dollars. To remain competitive, the other industrial nations have had to raise their interest rates, a move that is hurting their economies.

Haig off to support U.S., Caribbean plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is flying to the Bahamas to meet with foreign ministers from Canada, Mexico and Venezuela to forge a joint development program for Central America and the Caribbean.

But there is widespread skepticism that the four officials, when they meet Saturday, can overcome their differing political objectives in the region and approaches to development to form an effective program.

The United States and Mexico, for example, have an interest in promoting political stability and economic development in the region, but there is broad disagreement between them on security issues.

President Reagan said in a speech in Chicago this week that he is intent on attacking the "root causes of instability" in the region while making it clear "the United States will not tolerate interference by Cuba with the lives and freedom of other nations."

Mexico, although agreeing to explore the possibility of a coordinated approach to the area's development, has insisted it will not take part in any plan whose purpose is to "fight against the Soviet Union or communism."

Mexico has close ties with Cuba and strongly supports the Sandinista government in Nicaragua. The Reagan administration has suspended economic aid to Nicaragua, alleging it is supporting leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Haig, after leaving Washington today, will be joined at the meeting by Foreign Ministers Jorge Castaneda of Mexico, Jose A. Zambrano of Venezuela and Mark MacGuigan of Canada.

There are problems other than political differences. The contribution of Mexico and Venezuela — the area's two major oil producers — centers almost exclusively on selling oil to its poorer neighbors at cheaper rates.

Canada is emphasizing development assistance and has announced plans for a sharp aid increase to Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean and Central America.

The Reagan administration is focusing its attention on easing trade restrictions, as long as they would have no serious effect on U.S. producers, and promoting private investment rather than development aid.

But U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said it would be a mistake to assume — as some analysts do — that the broad differences will make a coordinated approach impossible to achieve.

"There room for an exchange of views," one official said. "Through this kind of consultation, we can share our experiences about what has happened before and we can avoid overlaps."

Body identified as missing Tyler girl

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Pathologists still have not determined the cause of death of an 11-year-old girl whose body was found Tuesday in a creek outside Tyler, but Smith County Sheriff J.B. Smith says he assumes the girl was murdered.

"This case will be investigated as a capital murder," Smith said. "This is one of the worst crimes we have investigated since I became sheriff (five years ago), and the first I recall involving a child this age."

He said the investigation has yielded "several leads" but no suspects.

Trisha McRoy was missing from the couch where she slept when her family awoke Saturday morning. A hole had been cut in the screen door.

A fisherman found her decomposed body lying face down and covered with mud in a creek five miles from her parent's house outside of Tyler.

The girl's blind father, Gene McRoy, said Thursday he was "relieved" that Trisha's body had been identified.

"All I want to do is remember Trisha the way she was," he said. "I just hope they (authorities) catch this individual so it won't happen again to some other little girl."

After a two-day autopsy, pathologists in the Dallas County Medical Examiners Office identified the body through "inverted fingerprints" and hair samples, Smith said. Inverted fingerprints, taken when a body is too deteriorated to give normal prints, are made by peeling back the skin of the fingers and getting a print from the underside.

Peace Justice Mary Guthrie of Troup said pathologists had asked her to delay ruling on the cause of death, but she said she was "100 percent certain this is a homicide."

Pathologists would run "every test possible" to see if the girl had been sexually molested, she said.

The funeral is tentatively set for 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Bullock to offer six new redistricting plans

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock will have no less than six different plans to offer the Legislative Redistricting Board if the board must draw new districts for the Texas House.

That was the testimony Thursday of Bullock employee Richard Sorgee, who was subpoenaed in a lawsuit challenging the House redistricting bill passed by the Legislature.

State District Judge Harley Clark hears his fourth day of testimony today. He had planned on ruling by 1 p.m., but his timetable could be sabotaged by more testimony.

Bullock is a member of the Legislative Redistricting Board, which would draw new House districts if the courts strike down the plan approved by the Legislature.

The five-member board already must draw Senate districts because Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the Senate redistricting bill.

Bullock has been charging hard on redistricting. He set up a team last October to sift population data, challenged the House and Senate bills in requests for Attorney General opinions, and hired his former deputy, Robert Spellings, as a special consultant on redistricting.

A group of plaintiffs, including three Mexican-American legislators, is challenging the House plan.

The plaintiffs say the plan violates a state constitutional provision that says legislative district boundaries may not split counties unless necessary to equalize population. The House plan cuts 34 counties.

Plano police officer fired

PLANO, Texas (AP) — A Plano police officer who said he shot and killed a Garland man because the man attempted to run over him has been fired for violating department policy, according to Police Chief James McCarley.

McCarley said Robert Crable "violated the rules regarding the use of force and firearms" in the May 3 shooting death of Rocky Shannon Shelton, 19, who had been stopped for a traffic violation. The dismissal was to be effective today, McCarley said.

Crable, 29, said he will appeal the dismissal.

Crable said he chased Shelton for several miles after clocking Shelton's car at a speed of 61 mph in a 30-mph speed zone. Crable told officers the chase continued through a residential area and ended up in a cul-de-sac when he was able to corner Shelton.

The officer, who has been suspended with pay since the day after the incident, said as he approached Shelton's car the man accelerated and the officer pushed himself off the car's hood before firing as the car drove away.

Witnesses said they did not see Shelton drive his car toward Crable.

A Collin County grand jury heard evidence in the case May 27, but took no action.

The FBI is investigating possible civil rights violations in the case, an FBI spokesman said.

FBI field supervisor Parks Stearns said officer Peggy Marksberry, who witnessed the shooting, was placed under hypnosis and gave a statement to Plano police.

Frank Johnson, a Dallas lawyer who represented Crable, said he has heard that officer Marksberry's statement contradicted Crable's.

Man kills father

MELISSA, Texas (AP) — A 35-year-old Collin County man who shot his father to death after his father killed his mother and critically wounded the son with a shotgun has told authorities, "Daddy shot Mama and me, and I shot Daddy," police say.

Wayne Kemp was in stable condition Friday at Collin Memorial Hospital, following the Thursday night shootings.

Dead are Selby Kemp, 71, and his wife, 64-year-old Clara Kemp.

The couple apparently was arguing and drew Wayne Kemp's attention when he heard a shot and went outside with a .410 shotgun looking for his father, investigators said.

"He (Wayne Kemp) must have walked down to the end of the home, and Selby shot him," Collin County Sheriff's Deputy S.F. Deffibaugh said. "Selby shot Wayne, and as Wayne fell he turned around and shot Selby."

Drowning tragedy leaves Mexia permanently scarred

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — The timing could hardly have been worse.

It was June 19, "Juneteenth," anniversary of the day that Texas slaves learned they were free. Along the banks of Lake Mexia, hundreds of blacks celebrated with song and dance, food and drink.

The revelry spilled into the evening. Before midnight, three young blacks were arrested for alleged possession of marijuana. At least two were handcuffed. Two deputies, one of them black, and a probation officer loaded the teen-agers in to a 14-foot metal boat. It had neither lifejackets nor space for six men.

SOME CLAIM the handcuffs were removed. Others claim they were not.

Perhaps 35 feet offshore, the boat capsized. The officers survived. The youths drowned.

The public outcry has been predictable. Some contend the arrests were racially motivated, the deaths barely short of murder. State Rep. Ron Wilson, a Democrat, recently held a news conference to charge that the Limestone County Sheriff's Department was "directly responsible" for the drownings and was actively engaged in a monstrous coverup.

A grand jury is expected to look into the case, probably in mid-July. But Mexia and the sheriff's office are already scarred by the tragedy.

AT 74, ALICE COTTON JESSIE is a respected and delightfully unassuming pillar of the Mexia community, a black woman of charm and compassion.

A schoolteacher for almost half a century, Miss Jessie, as she is called, has seen Mexia at its best and worst. In an interview, she said the relationship between Mexia whites and its blacks, who account for 30 percent of the 7,000-plus population, has been "remarkable."

For 72 of her 74 years, she said, she has spent Juneteenth at Lake Mexia. But she remembers nothing so tragic as the events of last June 19.

"Some mistakes were made," she said, choosing her words carefully. "It was sad. There are mixed emotions. Some think one thing, some another.

"But in my heart I don't think they meant any harm to those boys. I think something happened that nobody thought could happen. With that many people out there, you need law enforcement.

"It was just an unfortunate affair."

---

WHAT IS KNOWN of the Lake Mexia episode raises questions rather than answering any. Why, for instance, were a 23-year-old deputy, a jailer and a probation officer arresting people in the first place? Why were the suspects herded into a boat with only a 600-pound capacity for delivery to a sheriff's command post across the lake?

How was it that the three officers survived and the three youths did not?

Two of the youths, Carl Baker and Stephen Booker, both 19, were good swimmers. Anthony Freeman, 18, was not. Friends said he was "scared to death" of the water.

Kenny Elliott, the young deputy, was hospitalized for shock after the drownings. At a court of inquiry late last month, Elliott refused to testify. He invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, as did Kenneth Archie, 24, a black reserve deputy and full-time jailer.

THE THIRD MAN, David Drummond, 32, a probation officer, was the only person involved to give the court an account of the incident.

He said he had gone into the park with the deputies to buy soft drinks and was merely an onlooker when Elliott arrested the youths. Drummond said two of the young men were initially handcuffed together, but that the handcuffs were removed before or as soon as they got into the boat.

AP Laserphoto

Alice Cotton Jesse, 74, discusses the drownings with a reporter.

Despite the insistence of some witnesses that the three were handcuffed when they drowned, autopsies showed no bruising on the wrists or other signs of struggle.

Drummond said attempts were made to save the victims, and Freeman at least one was lifted atop the overturned boat. He slipped off, they said.

Elliott and Drummond reached shore unassisted. Archie was rescued as he clung to the boat.

The final body — that of Booker — was not recovered until the following Sunday.

---

SHERIFF DENNIS WALKER, 41, looks like Hollywood's idea of a Southern law officer but appearance is as far as the stereotype goes.

He has earned a reputation as a hard working sheriff who, with limited men and money, had improved department operations. In an interview, he reluctantly responded to criticism stemming from the drownings.

"We don't go over there (to the park) hunting for someone to arrest," Walker said. "We're there to police the crowd, to keep order, to preserve the peace.

"There's a lot of good people out there, and they're generally a quiet group. The problems over the years have been minimal. I can't recall ever making an arrest (at Juneteenth celebrations) and I've been on the grounds many times."

DID WALKER think his young deputy acted improperly by arresting the teen-agers?

"How do you instruct an officer not to do his sworn duty?" he replied.

Would he have made an arrest in the same situation?

"In my own mind I know, but I don't want to say anything that might hurt someone."

Couple indicted in girl's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas couple was accused Thursday of murdering a 16-year-old New York girl whose body was found weighted down in an alligator-infested ditch at the Sabine National Wildlife Refuge near Lake Charles, La.

Ernest Lee Harris, 35, of Houston, and Sharon Ann Rada, 24, of Austin, were indicted by a Harris County grand jury in the death of Lorelei Marie Wickers, of Sayville, N.Y.

Miss Wickers, who had been living in Houston, was beaten and shot once through the mouth before her body was found June 5 by a fisherman.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Frels said Miss Wickers apparently was killed June 3, and her body driven across state line and dumped in the water. Authorities said the body was weighted down by barbells.

Get 'quick prints' at Davis Fast Photo Service

The professionals at Davis Fast Photo Service Inc. in the Town & Country Shopping Center can get you your color pictures in a hurry — with quality to last a lifetime.

Troy Davis, owner of Davis Fast Photo, has been a professional photographer in West Texas a number of years. In December, Davis opened Midland's first true "quick prints" shop featuring film developing and printing with one-hour service.

How can he do it so fast?

Davis owns one of 12 brand new, complete photo finishing machines called a C-41 Processor. This new machine can develop color negatives and process a roll of prints in less than one hour's time — at no extra cost.

The most modern processing equipment available, the C-41 Processor is commanding so much attention from photo professionals Davis says there is a three-year waiting list on orders.

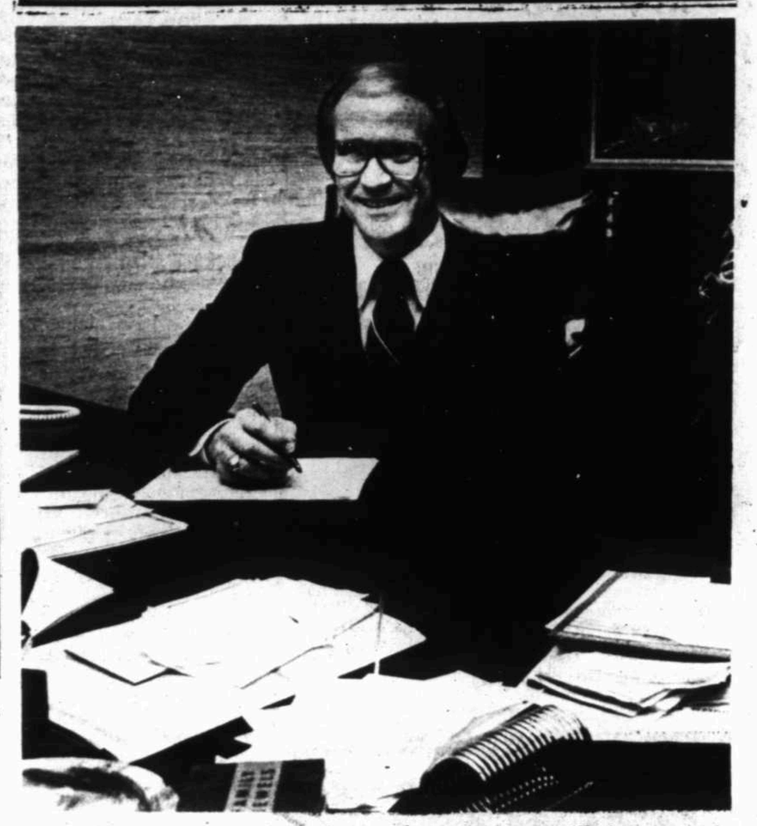

A completely color-balanced machine, the C-41 Processor is checked for accuracy daily. Able to develop 35mm film, as well as 126 and 110, the processor produces quality glossy prints that you will want to keep for a lifetime.

And Davis Fast Photo can do reprints of color negatives in one hour as well.

Davis Fast Photo is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Stop by and see them at the Town & Country Shopping Center, across from Furr's Cafeteria.

Bill Dillon and his staff at 1202 Andrews Highway will give you a quotation on your automobile, home, boat, business or life, and hospitalization insurance. This quotation will suggest adequate limits of liability that is so vital for your overall financial protection.

Protect assets with adequate insurance

Many people still carry the same liability insurance protection on their automobile insurance policy that they carried 20 years ago. Your insurance company need not pay more in damage to the victim of an accident for which you are held liable than the dollar amount of the liability coverage provided for in your insurance policy. If you have $10,000 in auto liability insurance and the court awards $50,000 in medical expenses and other compensation to the person injured by your car, you must pay him the additional $40,000 out of your pocket — which could ruin you financially. It makes sense to protect your assets, says Bill Dillon. If your net worth or assets total $100,000, you need liability on your automobile, home boat, and business to cover you for this amount or more.

Bill Dillon points out the pitfalls of the minimum property damage liability limits of $5,000. Most applicants for automobile insurance will take increased limits of liability when I point out the cost of auto repairs and replacement of many cars on the road today may cost above $20,000. In a multiple car accident in which you are liable, property damage can be staggering. Cost of increasing the bodily injury and property damage liability limits is surprisingly small. Bill believes that the average middle income household should carry $100,000/300,000 on bodily injury and $50,00 on property damage.

The base Homeowners policy in the State of Texas has residential and personal liability limits of $25,000. Bill Dillon recommends a minimum of $100,000 and the cost of this increase is approximately $3.00 a year. The liability on your Homeowner policy covers liability a rising from people being injured on your premises. The liability also extends to liability arising from accidentsin golfing, hunting, or other activities anywhere the insured may be.

Guide developed to teach children about Klan

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Teachers should combat active recruiting by the Ku Klux Klan in the nation's elementary and high schools by encouraging class discussions on extremist groups, the National Education Association said Thursday.

A new curriculum guide developed by the Connecticut Education Association, the Council on Interracial Books for Children and the NEA urges discussions on the Klan and the broader issues raised by what the NEA termed "other extremist hate groups."

The curriculum was made public as the NEA opened its annual convention here.

"The Klan trades on misinformation, half-truths and a lot of myths. We needed something to counter the Klan propaganda," said Ruth Charnes of the Connecticut group, who worked on the guide.

A special committee appointed to look at what educators saw as "an alarming increase in activity by extremist groups" determined that the teaching aide was needed, said John Leeke of the NEA's Instruction and Professional Development staff.

The extent of the Klan's involvement in schools isn't known, said Dimples Armstrong, who chaired the CEA task force.

"We're not keeping any tallies; we don't know the actual numbers," she said. "We just know that we read about it in the newspapers."

Reports of Klan activity among young people cited by the NEA included:

—An attack with baseball bats on patrons of a homosexual bar by Oklahoma City high school students who claimed membership in two Klan youth groups.

—The burning of a school bus in Decatur, Ala., by children wearing Klan T-shirts during an anti-busing rally.

—A request from a group of 10 boys, ages 13 to 20, and their Klan sponsor to join the Boy Scouts of America. The Scouts turned down the charter request after learning the sponsor was training the boys in use of firearms, hand-to-hand combat and racist ideology at a KKK paramilitary camp outside Houston, Texas, the NEA said.

Soviet Union battles agricultural failures

MOSCOW (AP) — A hotel clerk in the Ukrainian city of Kiev, booking a dinner reservation for a guest, whispers into her telephone, "Does your restaurant have meat tonight? The reservation is for a foreigner."

A man with relatives in a city in northern Russia says residents there are issued cards guaranteeing them the right to buy two kilograms (4.4 pounds) of meat a month. "But rarely is there that much," the man adds.

The food problem in the Soviet Union is no secret. There are regular official pronouncements, and much unofficial grumbling over perennial shortages of meat, milk, fruits and vegetables.

Now, authorities are working on a new "food program" to help resolve the problem.

"We know we have food problems," said one Soviet agricultural expert. "If we didn't, we would have plenty of milk and meat."

In recent months, travelers report, butter has been in short supply in Kiev, the capital of the Ukraine; tea has been at a premium in the Volga River city of Kuibyshev, and meat has been hard to get in scores of cities.

Even when food is available, distribution can be a problem. Sometimes stores in different parts of a city have widely differing selections. City and countryside differences are so great that women from country towns are often seen at Moscow train and bus stations with satchels full of meat and butter from the capital's outlets.

Western and Soviet analysts are inclined to blame the sluggish growth of Soviet agriculture more on inefficiency than climate. But they note that floods, cold, drought and other climatic dangers are more frequent here than in many other countries.

Commenting on the difference in U.S. and Soviet agriculture, one Soviet expert said, "The difference is not quantity but quality. American cows give more milk and meat than Soviet cows." U.S. and Soviet livestock herds are the same relative size, just over one animal for every two people.

In a major policy address earlier this year, President Leonid I. Brezhnev devoted considerable time to what he acknowledged as a "food problem," outlining a 10-year program designed to increase food production, raise more fodder for livestock, improve transportation and storage facilities, and keep prices low.

"The first job is to increase the output of those agricultural products whose shortages are causing particularly disturbing interruptions in supplies. I refer above all to meat and other animal products," Brezhnev said.

Soviet meat production rose marginally from an annual average of 14 million metric tons in 1971-75 to 15.1 million tons in 1980. Annual milk production rose from 87.4 million tons in 1971-75 to 90.7 illion tons last year.

Per-capita Soviet consumption of meat each year is about 127.6 pounds, compared to 212 pounds in the United States and 143 pounds in Poland in 1980.

In contrast to the Poles, who vocally protest meat shortages, the average Soviet citizen keeps his complaints quiet, although there have been unconfirmed reports recently of food protests in provincial cities.

Soviet officials have set a target of raising per-capita meat consumption to the "scientifically healthy level" of 180.4 pounds a year, and boosting milk production as well.

This year, the Soviet government expects to spend 37 billion rubles (about $51 billion) on agriculture, much of it going to develop meat of new grain-growing lands, particularly in Soviet Central Asia.

Soviet planners have also been instructed to channel more money to auxiliary industries such as transport and storage.

Officials acknowledge that "very high" amounts of agricultural products are lost through poor storing and shipping.

The new food program will try to increase production of chemical fertilizers, assure better drainage and irrigation and bring more agricultural machinery into use.

But Brezhnev acknowledged in February that work on implemetning the food program "has just begun."

Some 25 million Soviets work on farms out of a total population of 266 million people. There are 4 million farm workers among 224 million Americans.

Authorities hope that increased mechanization will make Soviet farmers more productive, and eventually free agricultural personnel for work in labor-short cities.

A Moscow newspaper argued recently that the Soviet food problem is partly the result of improved standards of living and higher wages. Food prices at state stores have remained the same for years, but incomes have risen sharply, adding to demand.

Much of the extra money winds up at private farmers' markets, where tomatoes can cost the equivalent of $4.90 a pound and meat and other food items are also sold at high prices. But the government's eventual goal is to have sufficient food supplies available at low-priced government outlets.

House approves MX missile

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is supporting the MX missile, but is expressing doubts about a plan to shuttle it among 4,600 concrete shelters in Utah and Nevada.

By a vote of 316-96, the House on Thursday rejected a move to cut $2.4 billion for the mobile missile system from a $136 billion military spending bill.

But they approved by voice vote, subject to a possible roll-call later, a proposal to delay the shelters until President Reagan decides whether he backs the concept.

FURTHER ACTION on the bill was scheduled for today. The legislation may not be completed until next week.

Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., sought elimination of the MX missile funds, saying, "The notion of nuclear superiority is a fleeting absurdity."

"The gut point is that the MX system is required" to protect the United States from nuclear attack, countered Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y.

Rep. James V. Hansen, R-Utah, offered the amendment to withhold funds for so-called multiple protective shelters for the MX pending a presidential decision.

UNDER THE PLAN first proposed by former President Carter, 200 of the 192,000-pound missiles would be moved around among the 4,600 shelters to keep the Russians in the dark about where they are.

Opponents of the plan argued that it is too expensive and probably would not work. They said it would be better to base the missiles on small submarines or in Minuteman missile silos.

Bell cancels plans for information service test

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. today announced it was cancelling plans for a test of an electronic information service planned for this summer in Austin.

But it also said the Bell system was not about to back out of the electronic home information market.

Bell's vice president for revenues and public affairs, Paul Roth, gave "protracted regulatory and legal proceedings" as the major reason for Bell's decision to cancel the 14-month test in 700 Austin homes and businesses.

He said the Bell system would look for "other means to move ahead" in learning how equipment works and customers react to electronic home information.

The Texas Daily Newspaper Association has blocked the start of the test by filing a protest with the Texas Public Utility Commission. A commission examiner was to begin full-blown hearings on the test Aug. 3 and the commission had held a number of other proceedings this year.

Bell had challenged PUC's authority in court and had obtained a 3rd Court of Civil Appeals ruling that the PUC could not halt preparations for the Austin test without a public hearing.

TDNA had contended that Bell's power over the telephone transmission lines over which the information would flow to home and office computer screens would give the company an unfair competitive advantage over others seeking to enter the instant home information service industry.

Gov. Brown bows to pressure; Spraying to begin immediately

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government told California Gov. Jerry Brown today to approve aerial spraying of areas infested by Mediterranean fruit flies or face a quarantine of many of the state's agricultural products Monday. Within hours, Brown said he was bowing to the pressure said the spraying would begin.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block told a morning news conference that the infestation of medflies has raised concern for the safety of fruit and other crops in other states.

"We are prepared, indeed, intend to entirely quarantine the state of California on Monday unless severe, immediate action is taken" to spray what the department referred to as an 80-square-mile area of infestation, Block said.

TWO HOURS LATER, Brown told a Los Angeles the impending Agriculture Department quarantine "leaves California with no alternative. We are being forced into aerial spraying."

Spraying of the pesticide Malathion will begin in the infested area south and east of San Francisco as soon as safety procedures are worked out and residents informed, he said.

Block had no immediate comment on Brown's statement.

But the spraying may not be enough to forestall an eventual quarantine, Block said earlier. "We could ultimately find that we'll have to quarantine the whole state anyway," he told reporters.

Block said he is dispatching a department task force to California this weekend and will send Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng, a former California state commissioner of agriculture, to the state next week to assess the situation.

NOT ALL AGRICULTURAL products were included in the threatened quarantine, officials said. Only crops that are prime host plants, such as citrus fruit, apples, avacados, cherries, dates, grapes, olives, peaches, pears and some types of tomatoes, were listed.

A statewide quarantine would prohibit movement from California of those kinds of crops unless they had been inspected and found free of medflies or fumigated.

In all, California produces roughly half of the nation's summertime produce, meaning that a ban would be felt nationwide.

While Assistant Agriculture Secretary C.W. McMillan said he could not estimate the cost impact on consumers of any statewide quarantine, he said he would be relatively insignificant compared to uncontrolled medfly inestations of food crops.

BLOCK SAID HE talked with Brown this morning by telephone. "I'm not convinced he's ready for aerial spraying" to control the medflies but may change his mind after the California legislature meets today," Block said.

The fruit flies, which feed on more than 200 crops, including virtually every fruit except watermelons and pineapple, were detected in the state last year.

Officials imported Peruvian fruit flies thought to be sterile and designed to interrupt the breeding cycle. But many of the Peruvian flies have proved to be fertile themselves and some officials say the imports have added greatly to the problem.

Brown, in refusing to order the aerial spraying, had cited citizen protests and scientific studies that say the chemical agent, Malathion, could potentially cause cancer and birth defents.

OTHER EXPERTS, however, say the concentration of Malathion that would be used in the spraying is safe. The Environmental Protection Agency takes the position that Malathion, a derivative of nerve gas that has been used against the fruit flies for years, is safe to use.

Harvey Ford, deputy administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the situation is so critical that the "only solution" is rapid and direct control of the pests, meaning aerial spraying of Malathion.

California now has a 630-square-mile area east and south of San Francisco under quarantine. Brown has called out the National Guard and used volunteers to stop cars leaving the area to look for fruit and to strip backyard fruit trees.

The state's growers, who have sought the aerial spraying, say the quarantine "easily can be an economic disaster" for the state's $14-billion-a -year farm industry.

And state officials have predicted that if the medflies, about one-third the size of a common housefly, break out of the quarantine area into the Napa, San Joaquin, Salinas and Sacramento vallies, the entire state could be "permanently infested within a year, with little likelihood of later eradication."

BROWN'S REFUSAL to allow the aerial spraying also drew fire on the floor of the House.

Rep. William Thomas, R-Calif., said the entire California House delegation sent a letter to Block on Thursday, urging him to take whatever steps possible to insure aerial spraying is begun.

"The decision not to spray in California is a jeopardy to the health of the people of California," Thomas said. While Block can order a quarantine, he does not have the power to order the spraying.

And Rep. KIKA DE LA Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, called the situation "a very serious threat to our food production ... and our markets abroad."

State officials in both Texas and Florida have pushed hard for aerial spraying in California.

Florida has said it would consider taking measures to protect its own crops from infestation if the federal government does not act. Texas last year imposed a temporary quarantine to keep California produce out.

Israeli military government fires mayor

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli military government fired the mayor of a West Bank Arab village after he was convicted by a military court of aiding a Palestinian infiltrator, authorities said.

Mohammad El Machrazi, mayor of Dhahariyah, five miles southwest of Hebron, claimed he was fired because his views are close to those of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israel Radio said. The PLO is outlawed in Israel.

A military government spokesman said Thursday that the mayor was fired under a Jordanian law that allows dismissal of an official for committing a serious crime. Machrazi was convicted of aiding a guerrilla who infiltrated from Egypt six months ago, the state radio said.

Israel relies mainly on Jordanian law to administer the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, captured from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war.

Her honor Judge O'Connor

Midlander knew her while attending high school

By LOREN BERGER
Lifestyle Writer

A high school acquaintance of Sandra Day O'Connor said Thursday she was not surprised when she saw the television broadcasts announcing President Reagan's nomination of the first female justice to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Bill Mewhorter, 2310 Maxwell Drive, who attended Austin High School in El Paso with Mrs. O'Connor, where both women belonged to the same writing club, said, "I didn't recognize her at first until an old classmate from Lubbock called. Although her hair was very dark in high school, she still has the same beautiful blue eyes and the space between her teeth. I can still see the similarity."

"She was very reserved and always a lady," Mrs. Mewhorter recalled. "She always went by Sandra — it was never Sandy."

Although Mrs. Mewhorter said she did not know the 51-year-old Arizona Court of Appeals judge personally during high school, she said that El Paso was so small that "everybody knew everybody else.

"I remember she was a top honor student and sort of knew her direction. She was very bright. She appeared to be the type that always knew what she wanted to do. She was very tall and slender — just a nice, nice person and an all-around girl. There were three or four really outstanding students in the class and she was definitely one of them."

The 1946 yearbook of the 153 graduating Austin High School seniors lists Mrs. O'Connor's involvement in the National Honor Society, speech and writing organizations and a Spanish language club. "She was always on the front row in the pictures," said Mrs. Mewhorter, pointing to a group of club photographs. "She still has the same expression — kind of a humble look."

She said that Reagan's statements about the nomination of the first female Supreme Court justice, who would bring an end to the all-male court, seemed to coincide with the qualities her former classmate displayed during their senior high school days.

"I feel she's very deserving," Mrs. Mewhorter said. "She seems to be real well-rounded and I doubt there's anything about her that's extremist. As I read in the paper, she doesn't have any skeletons in her closet."

Mrs. Mewhorter said Mrs. O'Connor lived with her grandmother while she attended her last two high school years at Austin High School after she transferred from the Radford School for Girls in El Paso. "She really didn't talk about her family that much but we knew her parents lived on a ranch in Arizona," Mrs. Mewhorter said.

After completion of FBI files and other background information, Mrs. O'Connor's nomination will be submitted to the Senate where a positive confirmation could allow the female judge to join the court when its next term begins in October.

Sandra O'Connor, nominated this week for the U.S. Supreme Court, is shown in a 1946 graduation photo. Mrs. Bill Mewhorter of Midland, a high school classmate of Mrs. O'Connor's at Austin High School in El Paso, recalls that she was an outstanding person even then. In right photo, Mrs. O'Connor dons the robe she wears in her current post as a judge of the Arizona Court of Appeals.

One article in Tennis USA magazine was titled "Midland Women in a League All By Themselves." It tells in the May issue of the formation of the Midland Women's Tennis Association in 1977 by Kay Smith and Barbara Rowland.

Ms. Moseley wrote of several who helped in formation of the successful group, among them Em Carnett, City Park and Recreation Department, Midland College and Brian Gilley.

She wrote that the organization has been so successful that in three-and-a-half years, it has expanded to include over 300 members.

Ms. Moseley attributes that success to the social interaction and competition, and because there are so many women in Midland who love the game of tennis and want to make it work.

She also had an article entitled "Ministering to Children and Their Families" published in Educational Ministries With Families. It ran in the June issue.

The article centered around the Child Development Program at St. Luke's United Methodist Church here.

The program is devoted to nurturing young children and their families through a philosophy of teaching everyone that there is a God, God loves everyone, and through the caring of other people, each person can see His actions.

What to do while shrink on vacation

NEW YORK (AP) — The heck with the searing heat, missing Mets and Yankees and rising subway fares. For some New Yorkers, the real summer trauma is coping with their analysts' vacations.

So, to help worried patients left in the city while their analysts head to Amagansett, Martha's Vineyard and points east, Network for Learning sponsored a seminar on "What to Do When Your Shrink is On Vacation."

About 20 people — a tiny cross-section in the city with the highest number of therapy patients in the world — showed up Wednesday night. Sipping white wine and fanning themselves in the stuffy Upper West Side classroom, they discussed the prospects of a summer on their own.

Mary Daly, creative director of Network for Learning, posed such questions as: Where do your shrinks go on vacation? Where would Freud have gone? Do you feel like you're paying for your shrink's vacation?

DEAR ABBY

Saying it with flowers could take all night

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You said when a woman wears a flower over her LEFT ear it means "I'm available." A flower over the RIGHT ear means "I'm taken," and a flower over BOTH ears means "Let's negotiate."

Actually, a flower over the LEFT ear means "I'm taken." But you failed to mention that a flower worn on the BACK of the head means "Follow me," and a flower worn on the TOP of the head means "Let's fool around." — PUA LILA IN HONOLULU

DEAR PUA: Thanks for the correction. My Hawaiian "expert" gave me cockamamie information. But I'm intrigued by the additional flower signals. Now, all the tourists will be on the lookout for ladies wearing three flowers: one over the right ear, another on the back of the head and one on top!

DEAR ABBY: I'm 40 and have been divorced for seven months. My husband left me for another woman. She has six kids. (I have five, but only three are at home.)

My 22-year-old daughter lives at home. We get along fine, but here's the problem. She has a boyfriend, and I also have a boyfriend. Her boyfriend comes over about five nights a week and they sit in the living room, talking or watching TV until 2 a.m. My boyfriend comes over maybe once or twice during the week, and only every other weekend. My younger kids (13 and 16) have the good sense to go to their rooms and leave us alone, but my daughter and her boyfriend don't budge. Abby, we need a little privacy. I'm afraid my boyfriend will quit coming around if he can't see me alone. He takes me out to dinner now and then, but afterward he can't even kiss me goodnight without an audience.

My daughter's boyfriend goes out two or three times a week, spends his money, then tells her he can't take her anywhere. I'm beginning to think maybe my daughter is jealous of me. What should I do? — NO PRIVACY

DEAR NO: Have a frank talk with your daughter and agree to some ground rules stating which nights the house will be exclusively yours and which nights will be hers. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I met a girl a few months ago, and I asked her out. We had a great time, but when I tried to kiss her goodnight, she said, "Don't rush it." I felt like an idiot. I figured she didn't like me, so I didn't call her for a long time. Then I got to thinking that maybe it was to her credit that she didn't jump at the chance to kiss a guy she's only known a few hours. Anyway, I asked her out again and we had a wonderful time. This time I didn't try to kiss her, but when we said goodnight, she gave me a hug, which meant more to me than a kiss.

My advice to guys who don't get kissed on the first date is to call the girl for a second date. Don't feel rejected. It's nice to know that there are still some girls who place a high value on their kisses. I, for one, appreciate a girl who's hard to get. — BRISTOL, CONN.

DEAR BRISTOL: And it's nice for a hard-to-get girl to know that she's appreciated.

DEAR ABBY: I've read a lot in your column about tipping waitresses, but has leaving a tip for the maid in a hotel or motel gone out of style? My friends say it has, but I disagree. Who is right? — BONNIE IN PALM BAY, FLA.

DEAR BONNIE: Leaving a tip is a gesture of appreciation for a job well done. Such thoughtful generosity never goes out of style. (Especially when you're on an expense account.)

DEAR ABBY: The teacher who punishes an entire class for the misbehavior of a few children is teaching that guilt can be collective as well as individual. The idea of collective guilt was the basis of Theodore Roosevelt's order to dishonorably discharge an entire regiment (black) in 1906 when not one soldier would confess to a murder in Brownsville, Texas.

It also served to justify Franklin Roosevelt's imprisonment of 110,000 Japanese-Americans in 1942 solely on the suspicion that some among them might be planning to commit a crime.

Adolf Hitler applied the same principle in killing all the men of Lidice, Czechoslovakia, sending the women to concentration camps and putting the children in German institutions as punishment for the killing of one Nazi leader.

These are only three examples of the principle of collective guilt in action. A teacher who chooses to apply that principle in her disciplinary actions should be aware of the moral lessons she is teaching her children. — JOHN M. STEVENS, PROFESSOR OF EDUCATION, CALIF. STATE U., HAYWARD, CALIF.

DEAR DR. STEVENS: Thank you for a valuable observation.

CONFIDENTIAL TO CINDY IN MINNEAPOLIS: If it were my decision, I'd marry the man who was the best provider but didn't know how to kiss. It's easier to teach a man how to kiss than to make $85,000 a year.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-you-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250)

'Space invaders' teach trig

SWARTHMORE, Pa. (AP) — Taking a cue from popular video games like "Space Invaders," a team of educators and computer specialists is working on a colorful display of animated geometric shapes to teach trigonometry.

"Trig is generally at the top of most people's lists of disasters in high school," said Swarthmore College professor Eugene A. Klotz, who is working on the new program.

Using a bank of inexpensive home computers and a $150,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, Klotz and his colleagues are designing a trig-teaching program they hope will be fun and that will allow students to browse through a computer full of sines, cosines, and tangents as easily as they can a book.

Trigonometry proves a major stumbling block for many high school and college students because its functions are more easily visualized than talked about, Klotz said.

"The use of color and animation will clarify complicated figures, allow added emphasis in figures and text and contribute significantly to visual interest," he said. "We think an entertaining visual, video game approach will help get rid of 'math anxiety.'"

In addition to standard keyboard controls, the trig-teaching program will employ controls users may twist and jiggle to make things happen on the computer screen.

Control of the displays will allow the students to regulate the speed and content of a trig program, Klotz said.

"We plan to have spectacular color displays and graphics. And if the student didn't get it the first time, he or she will be able to back up and try it again," he said.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Ideas for preserving hand-me-downs

DEAR HELOISE:

Twelve years ago when my daughter was born, I started packing away clothes and baby equipment as it was outgrown.

The clothes, blankets, sheets, as well as all the frilly little dresses were washed, then packed in cardboard cartons, with blue tissue paper on the top and bottom of the clothes.

The baby furniture, cradle, crib, highchair, etc., were all washed with mild soap and water, wrapped with brown paper or old sheets and sealed in large plastic garbage bags.

When my son was born five years later, everything was in great condition and as he outgrew things they were packed away again.

Last summer our second daughter was born, so out came everything again — this time after six years of storage.

The amazing thing is that all the frilly clothes are 100 percent usable after being packed away 12 years! My friends can't believe I really have had to buy hardly anything for my third child.

My advice to new mothers is to pack everything carefully and fight inflation. Sure beats having to start over when the next baby arrives, especially at today's prices. — Evelyn Katz

+ + +

Sure does, luv. You're really steering new moms in the right direction with your good advice.

To add a word of my own advice, should any little garments which can safely be bleached have stains, soak them in a mild solution of bleach and dishwasher compound before storing.

Use about one-fourth cup liquid laundry bleach and about one-half cup dishwasher detergent to a gallon of hot water. Do not use an aluminum container to soak the clothes in as it will discolor.

If the garment should not be put in hot water, first dissolve the compound in about a quart of very hot water, then add this to the remaining three quarts of cooler water.

As to wrapping the garments in blue tissue or blue colorfast cloth before storing to keep them from yellowing, don't ask me how or why this works — I'm no scientist — but from all accounts it really does.

Readers tell us wedding gowns, baptismal gowns, etc., have been preserved, beautifully, for years, packed away with TLC and blue tissue paper.

Thanks for telling us your way to help beat inflation. — Hugs, Heloise

COFFEE BREAK

Dear Heloise: For nine-to-fivers who take a vacuum bottle of coffee to work, here's how I keep from throwing out leftover cofee at the end of the day.

I fill the bottle with boiling and keep a jar of instant coffee and teabags at my desk.

It saves time in the morning not having to make extra coffee, I have a fresh cup at a moment's whim, and the vacuum bottle doesn't get dirty. — Carol Vix

BAG ORGANIZER

Dear Heloise: Don't know if everyone is as frugal as I, but those who are and who save all plastic bags might like to know my way of having those of different sizes in order, rather than just stuffed in a drawer, etc.

I found that empty tissue boxes of various sizes kept in a drawer are really great to keep the bags separated as to size. (I.E. bread bags, produce bags, etc.)

The boxes are labeled so the size I need is always within easy reach. — Marilyn Davis

DOUGH-CUTTING CUE

Dear Heloise: When I make chicken and dumplings, I like to roll the dough out very thin (as for pie crust).

The only problem in doing this is that when a use a knife to cut it, it teares rather than cuts it.

One day, for some reason, I decided to try a pizza cutter. It worked like magic.

It took only a minute and was so much neater. No more tearing of the dough and no more wasted time. — Cindy T.

CAKE COVER

Dear Heloise: Have you ever baked a lovely, tall angel food caked, frosted it with your prettiest frosting, topped it with birthday candles, only to find it wouldn't fit into your usual cake saver?

Cover it with an overturned canning kettle or spaghetti cooker. Works like a charm. — Mrs. S.

IDEAS FROM IDEAS

Dear Heloise: Isn't it wonderful how we get ideas from ideas?

The hint about using a plastic ice bucket for garbage to be used later as compost was excellent.

Not having one, nor wanting to buy a bucket, I cut off the electric cord and am using my de-activated slow cooker ("it don't work no more"). It looks very decorative with its painted on fruits and flowers.

Now, I run the disposal very seldom, thus saving energy. — Ruth Norman

BREAD-MAKING CLEAN-UP

Dear Heloise: If you are a bread baker, you know what a chore it is to clean the bowl in which the bread is mixed.

I've learned that crumpled aluminum foil will clean it up in a hurry. It cuts right through the doughy mess, then you can just toss the foil into the garbage.

I save the foil used to cover foods, etc., tearing it into sizes needed and keep it on hand for cleaning all my baking dishes too. No grungy scrubber to wash. — M. Hale

Crafts are now part of decorating mainstream

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

RHINEBECK, N.Y. (AP) — Each June for the past eight years, a long-stemmed yellow rose has appeared as if by magic on Carol Sedestrom's desk on the opening day of the Northeast Craft Fair at the Dutchess County Fairgrounds here.

"We've never been able to find out who is leaving the rose," says Mrs. Sedestrom, who is president of American Craft Enterprises, the marketing arm of the American Craft Council, sponsor of the show.

"But," she adds, "it's an awfully nice tradition."

The yellow rose may have remained constant, but there have been some big changes at the crafts fair. And these changes reflect the growth of importance of handmade objects in the United States over the past decade.

The show — which is open to the public for the weekend and last year attracted 47,000 weekend visitors — has two wholesale days. Last year, 3,500 retailers from all over the United States and Canada visited and many ordered goods in quantity. This year 4,000 were expected to attend.

This year, 2,300 craftsmen submitted slides of their work in application for the 520 available booths. But according to Carol Sedestrom, the most important change is not just the growth of the fair. It is that now crafts are an integrated part of the American decorative arts business.

Ten years ago, craftsmen were considered (and considered themselves) hippies and dropouts from society. Today, they are part of it. As proof of this, they are earning their living at their craft, she said.

Though each craftsman is an individual, comments of a number turned up a common pattern — superior education, boredom in establishment jobs and a willingness to risk going into business for themselves.

Take Jane MacKenzie, for example. She had a master's degree in art and was working as a commercial artist.

"I ended up day-dreaming on the job a lot," she said.

So when she got an idea for a product she could make and sell, she decided to go into business for herself. She designed the machinery she needed to turn out the sophisticated, animal-shaped occasional furniture pieces she planned to produce and with a partner opened Fauna Furniture in Washington.

"We go to two craft fairs a year — Baltimore and Rhinebeck — and we usually get enough orders from retailers for about half a year's production at each," she said.

Is she better off than she was in commercial art?

"I like being my own boss; I'm glad I did it," Miss MacKenzie replied.

Then there is Curtis Scott. A Texan, Scott was a tenured art professor at a university. But he felt he wasn't getting anywhere. So he became a craftsman, borrowing money to travel to his first show at Rhinebeck three years ago. Scott says he now deals with 50 galleries in 20 states as well as with individuals who buy his ceramics.

"I still miss the kids I used to teach," he said. "But I am better off financially. And I think it's wonderful in this day of microprocessors and high technology to be able to make a product by hand, sign it and stand up for it."

Risa Dimm had an art background in college. Her husband, Lewis, with whom she operates a pottery in Livingston, N.Y., was a biology major before they started their business. They were distinguished recently by having their delicate, white and blue, hand-made ceramic dinnerware chosen for use at the Carter White House.

After nine years in business, they can produce about $75,000 worth of retail volume of hand-made dinnerware in a year. They do all the work themselves and are assisted by two employees who help with other tasks around the studio.

"When we started, we were naive. We didn't know about business. We had the romantic idea of going off into the country somewhere and making pots. You learn over the years about the necessity of knowing about marketing, advertising, packing, shipping, meeting orders on time and so on," said Mrs. Dimm.

The sales represented by craftsmen established in their own businesses are tiny in comparison to the overall multi-billion-dollar sales volume of the decorative home furnishings industry. Yet, this year sales of crafts shown only at the four shows sponsored by the American Craft Council may total more than $10.4 million. Besides Rhinebeck, shows are held in Baltimore in February, Dallas in April and San Francisco in August.

"When we started in Baltimore, we were doing about $1.5 million at Rhinebeck and some craftsmen were afraid Baltimore would cut into this. Instead, we did about $800,000 at Baltimore and Rhinebeck continued to produce sales of about $1.5 million for the craftsmen," according to Mrs. Sedestrom.

Last year at Rhinebeck, sales were estimated at about $4.5 million and this year's Baltimore market had sales of about $3.3 million. These figures are a clear indication of the growth of appeal to many consumers of hand-made products, noted Mrs. Sedestrom.

Today's craft fair and today's craft people are far more sophisticated than they used to be.

"Buyers are more demanding. It is no longer enough that something is hand-made. The competition is greater and the level of workmanship is higher," Mrs. Sedestrom said.

Isabel receives mixed welcome to Madrid

MADRID (AP) — Former Argentine President Isabel Peron arrived in Spain today after five years in prison at home and was met by cries of support from Peronists and shouts from other Argentinians who called her a witch.

Police jostled with photographers, reporters and the crowd for 15 minutes before the widow of the late Argentine President Juan Domingo Peron could clear customs. She made no comments before leaving Madrid's Barajas airport for a downtown hotel.

Flanked by her personal entourage, Spanish Civil Guards and national police, she sped away in a black sedan.

Mrs. Peron flew to Madrid from Buenos Aires four days after she was released from prison. She was overthrown and arrested in 1976, accused of misusing government funds after she succeeded her husband on his death.

The 50-year-old widow still is titular head of the Peronist Party but is barred for life from political activity.

A Spanish friend, attorney Ignacio Collante y Diaz Ordonez, said Mrs. Peron was returning to Spain, where she and her husband spent 11 years in exile, for a vacation, to think and "to breathe the air of freedom."

An estimated 200 Peronists jammed around the airport customs door waving Argentine flags and chanting "Isabel, Isabel."

A smaller opposition group identified by the Peronists as Argentine leftists shouted against the former chorus girl who who rose to the presidency after being elected vice president on the same ticket with her husband.

Peron's Madrid physician, Francisco Flores, greeted Mrs. Peron with a bouquet in the midst of the pushing and shoving crowd.

Mrs. Peron was expected to spend two or three days at the Hotel Ritz, but she has an open invitation from Pilar Franco, sister of the late Spanish dictator, to take a vacation at her farm in northern Spain.

Boiler explosion kills 17

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A boiler explosion collapsed a three-story silk weaving factory in the western state of Gujarat, killing at least 17 people, injuring at least 75 and leaving more than 400 trapped in the rubble, the United News of India reported today.

The news agency quoted police on the scene as saying the building collapsed late Thursday as workers were changing shifts. Officials said the death toll from the blast could rise as rescue teams comb the debris.

The plant is near the town of Surat, 150 miles north of Bombay.

Rescue teams dug holes to let in air and excavated a tunnel to pull out the victims, the agency said. Of the 78 injured taken from the building, 16 were reported in serious condition.

Witnesses said they heard a loud explosion and saw a huge fire at the boiler with flames shooting up the plant's chimney. Prabodh Rawal, Home Affairs Minister of Gujarat state said he asked the army to send troops to help with the rescue operations.

Rawal said that police reinforcements and firefighters from nearby cities were rushed to the accident site.

Thieves grab $2 million in diamonds

HONG KONG (AP) — Two men threw acid in the face of a Belgian jewelry merchant, grabbed his briefcase and made off with polished diamonds worth $2 million, police said. It was the biggest robbery in Hong Kong's history.

The merchant, 30-year-old Zayman Serge, was attacked in Hong Kong's business district at lunchtime, just after leaving the office of an import-export firm. Police said one assailant grabbed him from behind while the other threw acid in Serge's face.

They picked up his briefcase, which contained hundreds of packets of polished diamonds, and disappeared into the noontime crowd.

India won't develop nuclear weapons

By JAMES W. HATTON
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said today India will not develop nuclear weapons, even if its neighbor and archrival Pakistan gets the bomb.

But Mrs. Gandhi told a news conference the planned sale by the United States of sophisticated F-16 jet fighters to Pakistan — with which India has fought three wars — was pushing the subcontinent into an arms race.

"The F-16 represents the introduction into this region of a class of aircraft a generation ahead of anything operating with other air forces of the area," she said in a prepared statement. "Our entire country is deeply concerned that Pakistan is acquiring such sophisticated aircraft.

"The offensive strike capability of even one such aircraft is at least three times that of the MiG-21," the Soviet-made workhorse of the Indian air force, Mrs. Gandhi said. She made no mention of the MiG-23 jets India has begun receiving from the Soviet Union, or the sophisticated MiG-25s it has on order.

MRS. GANDHI SAID India, which exploded what she called a "peaceful nuclear device" in 1974, is pursuing a peaceful nuclear policy and is not developing weapons. Other accounts of the 1974 test described it as an atom bomb and described the event as India's initiation into the circle of nations with nuclear weapons capability.

Asked if India would abandon its peaceful nuclear policy if Pakistan develops a bomb, te prime minister said, "No, we don't believe in the deterrent theory. I don't know how it would help if we also had nuclear weapons."

Discussing the same issue in March 1980, Mrs. Gandhi told the Indian Parliament that India might explode atom bombs if it were in the national interest and that the issue to be considered would be whether "our entering the nuclear race will safeguard our interest or endanger it."

Today's statement comes three days before American and Indian negotiators open talks on the continued sale of nuclear fuel to India for its atomic power station at Tarapur. The United States is threatening to cut off sales of enriched uranium because India has refused to open all its nuclear facilities to full international safeguards and inspection.

INTELLIGENCE EXPERTS from several Western countries say Pakistan is working on nuclear weapons — which Pakistan denies heatedly — and frequent predictions are heard in India that Pakistan will set off an atomic blast in the near future.

Asked about next week's talks, Mrs. Gandhi declined comment. But she said defiantly: "We will keep Tarapur going."

Although the prime minister did not elaborate on plans to keep the American-built, 400-megawatt reactor running, it is generally believed that the 12-year old power plant outside Bomba would be converted to use plutonium oxide which India could produce itself by reprocessing spent fuel from previous shipments. Plutonium can also be used in nuclear weapons.

The last U.S. fuel delivery came last fall after a heated debate in Congress. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission forbade two 19.8 million ton shipments, saying it bas illegal because India would not agree to the international safeguards as U.S. law requires. Then-President Jimmy Carter overrode the commission, but the House voted against his order. The sale finally went through when the Senate narrowly backed Carter.

Orthodox demands may split Israel's supporters

NEW YORK (AP) — Demands by its religious party that Israel place Orthodox restrictions on the right of converted Jews to immigrate there threaten support for Israel among American Jews, a Jewish leader says.

Such a step would mean "a serious rupture of the unity of the Jewish people," said Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing U.S. Reform Judaism.

He said most American Jews are non-Orthodox but are deeply committed to Israel and Judaism, and asked:

"By what right does anyone question their Jewish legitimacy? How can we ask them to continue to sacrifice for Israel when their children's right to enter Eretz Israel is put to question? How can any Jewish leader after Auschwitz permit the setting up of a selection process at Jerusalem's gates?"

The reaction followed reports that the country's Agudat Israel party has demanded restricting amendments to the "Law of Return," under which any Jew may become an Israeli citizen upon arrival, as a condition of aligning itself with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Begin needs the support of the party to form a government with a parliamentary majority, and he is reported to have agreed to the terms.

Army officer killed by Pakistanis

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Pakistani soldiers shot and killed an Indian army captain "without provocation" on the border between the two rival nations, the Indian army said today.

"The captain was moving from one post to another well within our territory when he was shot at," an army official told a reporter.

He said the shooting occurred Tuesday in the Poonch district of India's Kashmir state. The official declined to be identified and gave no other details.

The Press Trust of India, a domestic news agency, said several Indian soldiers were wounded in the incident, and Indian troops returned fire in a two-hour exchange.

Gun duels erupt occasionally along the 1,400-mile border between the two nations, which have fought three wars since they became independent in 1947, but Tuesday's incident was apparently the most serious this year.

Oil pressure loss, overheated engines common

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

The checklist from How to Deal with Motor Vehicle Emergencies is continued this week with information on overheated engines and oil pressure loss. Though these seem to be everyday occurrences with common sense solutions, all of us could benefit from a quick review.

Loss of Oil Pressure: If the oil pressure light doesn't go off shortly after the engine is started or if it comes on while you are driving, you have TROUBLE. That light is signaling a drop in oil pressure which, if uncorrected, could cause serious engine damage and/or a breakdown. The oil pressure loss can be due to two things: low on oil or bad oil pump not properly supplying engine.

Obviously, with the light on, the first thing to do is pull off the road and check the oil. If the oil level is at or below the "add mark on the dipstick, ADD OIL BEFORE DRIVING ANY FARTHER. If indeed the oil level is the problem, that should take care of it. If the light stays on, that wasn't the problem...you probably have big troubles.

Overheated Engine: A leak in the radiator or hoses, a faulty water pump, a bad thermostat, a broken fan belt or slow moving traffic can cause engines to over heat. How do we know our cars are overheating: the needle creeps toward "HOT" on a gauged car or the light flashes on the instrument panel.

The various problems listed can be repaired or dealt with easily (some by the novice, some by the professional) and should be done promptly. First, pull off the road and let the engine cool; then, correct the problem if possible. Fan belts and thermostats can be replaced if drivers carry basic tools and spare parts with them. Hose leaks sometimes can temporarily be patched with friction or adhesive tape; or, ruptured hose ends can sometimes be removed, the damaged end cut off and hose replaced. In this case, ¾" — 1" hoses work best because they're flexible and usually a little long.

As far as water levels, check your radiator "overflow" tank for coolant level indications. If you don't have the tank, check the radiator itself after it's cool. If a source of water is available, replace lost fluid.

If your car only heats up in slow moving traffic, there are several things you can do. Preferrably pull off the road, turn the engine off and let the car cool down. Short of this, and unless you're at the critical point of overheating: turn off the air conditioner; shift to neutral while stopped; and, during long delays in traffic, slightly increase the engine's idling speed. Finally, and you're gong to think I'm crazy in this heat, turn your HEATER on and roll down the windows. This helps reduce the engine temperature.

Beware of fraudulent out-of-state office supply companies in area

Out-of-state office supply companies are again preying on Permian Basin businesses trying to sell everything from lightbulbs to typewriter ribbons, according to the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

A company that is engaged in an office supply scheme will usually make the sales presentation by telephone, according to Linda Truitt of the BBB. By learning to identify a fraudulent sales pitch, a company may be able to prevent wasting hundreds of dollars a year, Ms. Truitt said.

She advises companies to be cautious if any of the following sales pitches are used:

1. The supplier is in distress. He is being forced to liquidate stock, someone made a mistake, or the merchandise was shipped to the wrong address and he needs someone to help him out.
2. He casually states the Chairman of the Board, the purchasing agent, or your superior placed the order.
3. He gives you the impression he is a representative of your regular supplier. Since reputable companies do not solicit orders by telephone, do not be fooled into ordering because of threatened price increases or special discounts.

Once an order is placed, the merchandise received is usually of substandard quality and not brand-name as stated by the salesman. Often larger quantities than were ordered are received, or the bill may be larger than the original agreement.

Call the BBB 563-1881 if you have any complaints about a company of this type.

Town fathers boot boomtown's marshal

PARACHUTE, Colo. (AP) — This boomtown's tough-talking, one-man police department — Marshal Everett Morrow — has had his badge pulled from his vest, but he's yet to lay down his guns.

The town fathers voted 6-0 Thursday night to fire the man they believe represents a bygone Western era, so they can bring in a bigger, modern force to cope with the problems brought on by the oil-shale boom.

The struggle to oust Morrow also was sparked by the marshal's outspoken opposition to Mayor Floyd McDaniel and his losing effort to have the mayor recalled in the spring.

Morrow responded to the vote with the retort: "There ain't nobody who runs Everett Morrrow no place. My fight has only begun."

With his lawyer urging him to say little about his legal plans, Morrow promised to appeal in court. Earlier he threatened to sue McDaniel and members of the town council.

A recent study of Parachute by the Colorado Division of Criminal Justice was critical of Morrow's conduct and said five officers are needed to keep up with the oil boom.

The population in this town on the western side of the Rockies has doubled in just eight months to 700 people. Oil companies, who have offered to pick up the salary tab of a modern police force, say 7,000 people may permanently drop into Parachute by 1990.

Until a few months ago, Parachute didn't even have a saloon. Now, bar fights among construction workers are common.

Town lawyer Steve Carter told the council that Morrow had used his office for personal gain, was leaving the town open to lawsuits because of his heavy-handed ways and had contributed to town feuding.

Morrow's lawyer, Webb Walker of Glenwood Springs, denied the allegations, questioned the legality of the hearing and said none of the charges were proven. Morrow did not speak at the 2½-hour hearing.

Traffic signal work planned in Midland, area towns

Work has begun to improve or install new traffic signals in Midland, Andrews and Odessa, according to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

A contract costing $268,000 has been awarded to Automation Systems Company of Odessa for the project, expected to take 140 working days.

Locations in Midland are intersection of Wadley Avenue with Ward and A streets; intersection of Neely Avenue with Garfield Street; intersection of State Highway 349 and State Highway 158.

Locations in Andrews are intersection of U.S. 385 with Mustang Drive north of Andrews and intersection of S.H. 385 with Mustang Drive south of Andrews.

Locations in Odessa are intersection of U.S. 80 with West County Road, intersection of Spur 492 with Dawn Avenue, intersection of Parkway Boulevard with Oakwood Drive and intersection of 52nd Street with U.S. 385.

Installation or modernization of the traffic signals at these intersections should help provide increased safety and orderly traffic movement in these heavily traveled areas.

John Aldridge, resident engineer in Midland, is in charge of the project with District Engineer W.A. Lancaster of Odessa providing overall supervision.

Reagan abandons human rights key

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is formally dumping human rights as the key factor in whether foreign nations may buy American arms. "We will deal with the world as it is, rather than as we would like it to be," the new policy declares.

The administration also is abandoning what it says was former President Carter's policy of "unilateral restraint" on arms transfers abroad.

"We do not take the position that there is something immoral about arms sales," said one of two senior administration officials who briefed reporters on the new arms transfer guidelines.

Nonetheless, the officials, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, denied that the policy will ignite a new arms race in conventional weapons.

Although the new arms sale policy never mentions human rights, and although human rights no longer will be "the sole criteria" for judging weapons transfers, the officials said the administration will adhere to current laws requiring that human rights be one element considered in arms sales.

"It doesn't have to be spelled out in order to be present," one official said.

His colleague predicted that U.S. sales of non-nuclear weapons to other countries will remain at the current level of about $14 billion to $15 billion a year.

"We are playing some modest catchup and that's it," an official said. "We have throttled back (on arms sales) and the Soviets have gone forward in rather majestic terms."

The Carter administration, with support from Congress, limited sales to otherwise friendly countries with poor human rights records. It also tried to engage the Soviet Union in negotiations to cut down weapons deals.

The new policy represents a major shift in both respects.

It was not known immediately which countries would benefit from the policy changes, but one official noted, "We clearly will sell to more countries than before."

The Reagan administration recently has bristled under criticism that it lacked a formal foregn policy. The arms sale guidelines puts at least one element of that policy on paper.

When applied "judiciously," the guidelines say, arms sales can deter aggression, help enhance U.S. defense production capabilites and "demonstrate that the United States has an enduring interest in the security of its friends and partners."

Neither the Soviet Union nor other arms exporting nations are demonstrating any great interest in limiting arms sales, according to the document.

"In the absence of such interest, the United States will not jeopardize its own security needs through a program of unilateral restraint," it said.

Ticking off figures, one official said the Soviet Union was selling weapons around the world while the Carter administration was preaching restraint.

For instance, he said, the Soviets sold 1,761 supersonic planes last year, compared with 510 by the United States, and 13,564 anti-aircraft missiles compared with 562 by this country.

"The policy changes being initiated should not be seen as heralding a period of unrestrained military transfers," the policy document states. "The United States retains a genuine interest in arms transfer restraint and remains prepared to consider specific proposals directed towards that end."

Under the new guidelines, requests for arms will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. Among the items to be considered are:

—An assessment of the military threat.

—The stability of the region involvedd.

-The needs of U.S. forces.

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

There is a time for everything under the sun, but you have to be careful to pick the right moment. Declarer got a step ahead of himself on this hand and paid dearly.

With 23 points in high cards and a perfectly balanced hand, South had a classic two no trump opening bid. With 11 points and a five-card suit, North felt that six no trump was well within the reach of the combined holding, so he wasted no time in bidding it.

West was reluctant to lead from a weak four-card suit headed by the jack, so he settled on a heart as his opening slavo. Declarer won the ten in dummy and immediately led a diamond toward his hand. East played low and the queen won. Declarer crossed back to dummy with a high club and led another diamond.

East found a killing defense. He hopped up with the ace of diamonds while the blocking king of diamonds was still in declarer's hand. Eventually, West took the setting trick with the jack of clubs.

Declarer's error was at the very first trick. The time had not yet come to use dummy's heart entry. Observe the difference if declarer wins the first trick in hand, crosses to the king of clubs and leads a diamond from the table. East must play low and the king wins. Declarer re-enters dummy with the ace of clubs and leads another diamond.

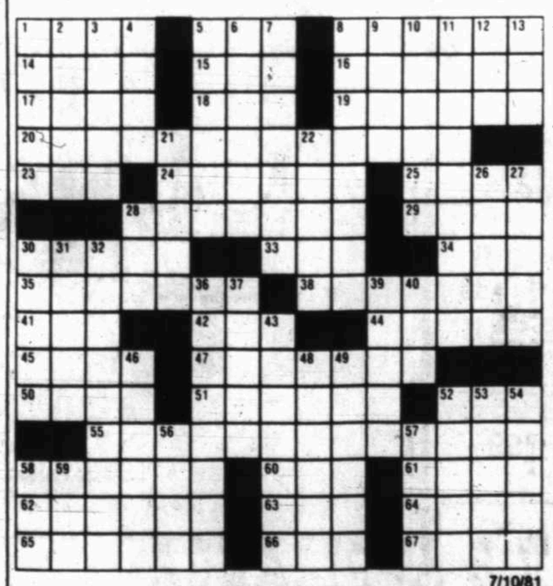

If East holds up the ace again, declarer wins the king and continues a diamond. Now dummy's diamonds are established and declarer still has a heart entry to the table. And it does not help East to win the second diamond with the ace and return a heart to attack dummy's entry. Declarer simply wins the heart in hand with his remaining high heart, cashes the king of diamonds to set up two long cards in dummy, and gets back to the table with a heart to enjoy his diamonds and secure the slam.

Brian TenHopen, an 8-year-old student at a vacation Bible school in Grand Rapids, Mich., winches as he receives a shock from a 12-volt battery. The Rev. Dwight Wymer, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, says he uses the wired chiar to shock the youngsters into "hearing His word."

'God's word' comes as a shock

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The minister places the child on a small stool. As the Bible school class watches, he counts down from 10 and pushes a button, sending piercing shocks from a 6-volt battery into the child's buttocks.

The Rev. Dwight Wymer says he has been pushing the button for six years now as his way of teaching children how to "hear the word of God," and says the practice "is not dangerous."

"I've done nothing wrong — I'm teaching God's word," he said.

But Dr. Richard Potter, director of the city health department, said he thought the shocks did the children no good, physically or mentally.

"It seems to me like it would have the opposite effect and cause the child to reject the teachings because of the association with pain," Potter said.

Three children received shocks Monday night at the opening session of the one-week summer Bible school at Wymer's Immanuel Baptist Church. At Thursday night's class, some parents said they were uncomfortable with what was going on, but were not pulling their children out of the class.

"Sometimes God talks to you and calls you and we just don't listen," Wymer told the children that first night. "But sometimes he can shock you into hearing his word, and this just makes that demonstration clear."

Brian TenHopen, 8, said the shock he received "hurt me until I went home and got in the tub. But it was fun, everybody was laughing, and I wanted to do it."

Seven-year-old Pat Popma said he volunteered for the shock but "wouldn't do it again. It hurts. I was going to cry, but all my friends were watching me."

Kent County authorities could not be reached on whether Wymer could be prosecuted, and the city attorney said he would not address the issue unless a complaint were brought against the minister.

Wymer said he has received no complaints from parents.

The stool, which Wymer built himself, has a metal screen placed in a hole cut in the seat. Two wires connect the screen with a 6-volt lantern battery, and the device is hooked to a hand-held push-button.

The 36-year-old pastor has headed the church for two years and said he opened last year's Bible school by giving shocks to children.

He said he decided to build the stool after reading a magazine that provides suggestions to ministers who lead Bible classes. He said he has used it off and on for six years on children, mainly at parties.

"I can tell you the effectiveness ... just from Monday night," he said. "Just as soon as I said God wants to speak to you, are you listening, they immediately quieted down like, 'Yeah, I want to hear.'"

The Rev. Bruce Bode of the non-denominational Fountain Street Church here said he was appalled. "I tried to imagine what religious beliefs are being communicated to these children," Bode said. "Here again, it seems to me, that we have another example of the repudiation of reason by religion."

The Rev. Elbert Bytwork, pastor of Pinegate Community Christian Reformed Church and head of his own Bible school, said he "had never heard of such a thing."

After Radarange Ovens passed a series of torture tests, the U.S. Government granted Amana an exemption from displaying a warning label on the door of all "RR" series Radarange Ovens (and derivative models).

In one of these brutal tests, Amana actually hit the door seal with a 5-pound steel ball from a height of 8 feet! And after every test, the Amana ovens did not allow microwave leakage in excess of the Federal standard. Because the patented Amana Choke Door Seal reflects microwaves back into the oven.

No other microwave oven manufacturer in the world has earned this U.S. Government exemption.

Do mysterious envelopes hold key to strike?

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The contents of mysterious envelopes delivered to representatives of club owners and players could hold the key to settlement of the baseball strike that entered its fifth week today.

Hours before the start of a meeting of all 26 club owners in New York Thursday night, federal mediator Ken Moffett delivered large envelopes to the adversaries' chief negotiators, the player union's Marvin Miller and management's Ray Grebey. Moffett also arranged for the negotiators' first bargaining session in six days for today at 2 p.m.

THE NEW York Times said the envelopes contained a proposal designed to lead to an end of the strike.

"He didn't come all the way from Washington just to arrange a meeting (for today) and those envelopes did not contain engraved invitations to the meeting," the Times quoted an unnamed source as saying.

"I'm going to be very disappointed if nothing good happens" in upcoming sessions, Moffett said after returning home to Washington, D.C.

Both sides in the strike have claimed a united front after meeting among themselves this week. Player representatives had met in New York on Tuesday.

Ed Fitzgerald of the Milwaukee Brewers, chairman of management's Player Relations Committee, said after Thursday night's meeting that the owners had engaged in "a full discussion" and said recent reports of splits among them are untrue.

"THERE ARE no dissidents," Fitzgerald said. "The communications throughout have been excellent. The discussions proved we are all aware of how everyone else felt. We will continue the process we have been working on since we started seeking a solution."

"If there is dissension among the owners, it was not visible at the meeting today," said American League President Lee McPhail.

Eddie Chiles, owner of the Texas Rangers and reported to be one of the dissident owners, emerged from the meeting with handkerchief around his head as he met reporters.

"I'm bloodied but unbowed," he said.

He quickly added that he was joking.

"There was a lot of constructive conversation," he said. "It was not a meeting where specific proposals were presented, but a general discussion of the whole situation, where we've been, where we're going and how we'll get there.

"THERE WAS quite a spirit of unanimity by all the owners."

Meanwhile, hearings before a National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge were expected to conclude today.

Joe Burke, general manager of the Kansas City Royals, testified that management does not have complete control over baseball's salary structure.

Burke pointed to salary arbitration, where an independent third party choses between wage proposals from the player and the club, and also noted more indirect influences.

"If you stop signing the players that make up the nucleus of your club, you come under tremendous pressure from your fans and the press," Burke said.

Burke was among five witnesses called during the fourth day of testimony before Judge Melvin Welles involving the Major League Players Association's charge of unfair bargaining by the owners.

The union, on strike since June 12, wants Welles to order the owners to open the clubs' financial records.

MILLER, the players association's executive director, testified as a rebuttal witness that, without the financial records, the players "are still bargaining in the dark without very basic information."

The strike "is over a demand that the players give up something that they have," Miller said in reference to free agent movement without compensation.

"It is a demand which, in my mind, the players might give more consideration to if they saw that the clubs' financial situation was precarious," Miller said.

Cubs win 7-6 to take series

SAN ANTONIO—Midland's Cubs came up with two runs in the eighth inning to score a 7-6 Texas League victory over the San Antonio Dodgers here Thursday night before 3,126 fans, closing out the six-game series with a 4-2 edge. On their last trip to San Antonio, the Cubs came away 0-5.

Third baseman Fritz Connally continued his hot hitting, collecting two hits for the fourth night in a row. In the sixth inning, the former Baylor star belted a two-run homer during a four-run rally. It was Connally's ninth homer of the season and second of the series.

Connally also launched Midland's winning rally by singling to open the eighth, knocking Rich Rodas out of the box. Randy LaVigne greeted reliever Tom Neidenfeur with a double off first baseman Gregg Brock's glove and after Carmelo Martinez walked to load the bases, Mike Diaz singled home two runs.

Lefthander Norm Churchill, the third of four Midland pitchers, picked up the win, his sixth of the season, while Rob Blyth fanned three in 1 2/3 innings of relief to get his ninth save.

Neidenfeur, now 8-3, was tagged with the loss.

The Cubs are off today, but return to Midland's Cubs Stadium to open a Saturday to open a five-game series against the Jackson Mets, winners of the first half East Division race. Jackson will be followed into Midland by Arkansas.

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The United States men's and women's softball teams maintained their unblemished records with victories Thursday in the world youth softball championships.

The U.S. men's team, looking a little leg-weary after a marathon victory over Japan early Thursday, hung on to defeat Mexico 6-4. The women's team defeated previously unbeaten Australia 7-0.

Stockton ignores gusts

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Flag-whipping wind gusts of nearly 20 mph troubled much of the field in the Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament Thursday, but they suited Dave Stockton just fine.

That's because Stockton, who won the GMO in 1968 and 1973, is familiar with the vagaries of Tuckaway Country Club's course.

Stocton, battling what he said is his worst putting slump of his 18-year career, compensated with superb woods and iron play and shot a first-round 65, 7-under par for the 7,010-yard layout.

Tour rookie Rod Nuckolls was one stroke back at 66, while Thomas Gra, another rookie, and Bobby Wadkins had 67s.

George Archer, whose 12 tour victories include the 1969 Masters, had a 68. So did David Sann, Jay Haas, Lyn Lott, Bob Gilder, Rod Curl, Chi Chi Rodriguez, John Fought, Tim Simpson, Skeeter Heath, Mike Smith and Tom Storey.

Defending champion Bill Kratzet shot a 72. Lon Hinkle, 16th on the tour's 1981 earnings list at $116,004 and top money winner entered here, was in danger of missing the cut after his 76.

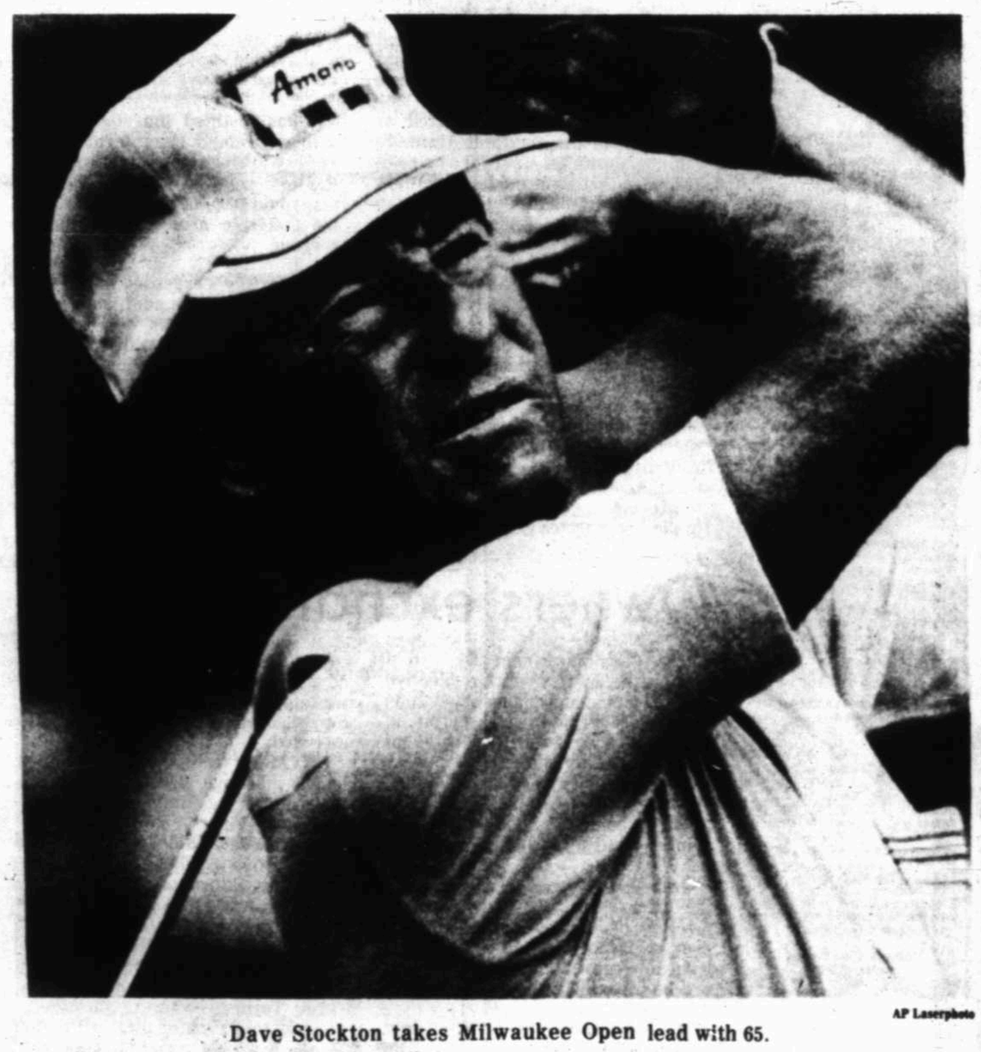

The GMO, bypassed by many of golf's big names because of next week's British Open, lost one of its best draws when Bobby Clampett was disqualified after he failed to sign his scorecard. Clampett, who had a 71.

Stockton, who set Tuckaway's competitive course record with a 63 enroute to his victory here in 1973, flirted with that mark Thursday. He was 8-under par through his first 17 holes before he missed an 11-foot putt and took his only bogey on No.18.

Stockton, 39, said he was able to cope with the winds because he knows Tuckaway well.

"This is a wide open field," he said. "It's not the U.S. Open, and it's a tournament that's important for a lot of young kids to win.

"But if the wind blows like today and you have to figure different shots because of it, it helps the older guys who have played here before," he said. "Today the wind was just the opposite of the way it was blowing yesterday."

Moses is late; sub used in race

LENINGRAD (AP) — American star hurdler Edwin Moses failed to arrive in Leningrad only hours before the start of the U.S.-Soviet track meet, and a team manager said another American has been substituted for tonight's 400-meter hurdle race.

Moses's absence reduced to 11 the number of U.S. national champions who will take part in the two-day meet at Lenin Stadium, the first between the two track squads in three years and the first major U.S.-Soviet athletic competition since the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Assistant team manager Fred Newhouse said said Moses would be replaced in his event by David Lee of University City, Mo., who finished third in last month's U.S. national championship meet in Sacramento, Calif.

Among the 30 Americans champions, others who passed up the U.S.-Soviet meet included teen-age sensation Carl Lewis, the U.S. titlist in the 100 meters and long jump, and Evelyn Ashford, U.S. women's champion in 100 and 200 meters.

Still, the meet has generated widespread interest. The Soviets said it is being televised in 32 countries and reported by 250 journalists from 15 nations.

U.S. Coach Harmon Brown of Foster City, Calif., said, "American athletes were very disappointed by having several years of preparation frustrated by not being able to compete in the Olympic Games. But I think one must realize that American sportsmen, like those all over the world, are not politicians ... and are subject to the same will of the people as occurs in all other aspects of a democratic society.

"The boycott decision," Brown said, "was supported by a good majority of the American people."

Nikolai Popov, chairman of the Leningrad Sports Comittee, told reporters that the boycott was the United States' "own business" but said, "We did not suffer greatly because the U.S. team did not come. The U.S. athletes lost more."

Other U.S. stars include Foster in the 110-hurdles; triple jump national champion Willie Banks of Los Angeles.

Wipe out the season and start over again

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

They could treat it like a third inning rainout. Postpone the season, wipe out all the records and save a season full of asterisk for 1981. All it would take would be one asterisk...season cancelled because of strike.

However, that doesn't insure that there would be a 1982 season. The issue of free agency compensation drags on unresolved.

What the Players Association and Owners need are some solutions, and, in view of the current impasse, it means exploring areas beyond the scope of present negotiations.

FIRST, THINGS, first. The owners could offer Marvin Miller the commissionership of baseball. As a ceremonial figurehead for the owners, it would render him impotent. Unfortunately for the owners, Marvin didn't become uncrowned commissioner of baseball and ruler of all he surveys because he was naive.

Since free agency-compensation is the sole source of dispute. Let's remove free agency, by limiting contracts to one year and conducting open bidding on all players at the end of each season.

We'd also eliminate the free agent draft and major league controlled farm systems. The major league clubs certainly would be reluctant to foot the bills in the minors for the development of players over whom they would have no control for more than a year.

Thus, baseball would return to the way it was in the beginning.

The minors would sign and develop their players as of yore. Unlike the old days before the extensive farm system and scouting networks, the minor league team wouldn't be able to sell a prospect to the majors, since the bidding would be open on all players each year.

Since the number of players maturing into major league caliber is miniscule, the minors would have to depend on a contract with each player calling for a percentage of his salary, should he make it to the majors, as their source of income for the player development service rendered.

It really wouldn't be a hardship on the players since major league salaries would spiral out of sight, making Dave Winfield look like a charity case.

THE PERCENTAGE could be set, at say 20-to-40 per cent, or fluctuate according to the player's earning power in the majors. More successful players would make more money for his minor league benefactor. A Jim Rice, George Brett or Steve Carlton would be a bonanza for the minor league club.

The amount would have to be substantial, since very few players would make it to the majors from any given farm club. One out of 22 would be good. The minors would also be underwriting the development of the players who never made it.

A COMPLICATION would be a player moving up from A to AA and then AAA before making the big leagues. Would he be obligated for a percentage to each club, just the last club or what?

Somehow the A and AA clubs must benefit, and handsomely, for their part in the development.

Another problem would be developing a scouting system. Where would the players come from? Who would scout these kids? The majors would be reluctant to do so since they have no control of the player and the minors couldn't afford to set up a scouting system, the kind in existence today. Colleges are a partial, but not complete answer.

However, these are minor, pardon the term, annoyances. Now that we have solved the free agency and compensation problem, let's play ball.

Haden faced injustices with L.A.

BY MELVIN DURSLAG
Hearst Feature Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Each time we talk to Mr. Pat Haden, the quarterback for the Los Angeles Rams, we reflect darkly on the great injustices of society.

One coming to mind, for instance, was the recent arrest in Detroit of Leon Spinks for carrying in his car a .357 Magnum.

Driving in Detroit, what else would a man be carrying, unless, of course, he was packing a SAM-7?

For social atrocity, the pinch of Leon ranks with what happened to Haden at Anaheim last year. He had been injured and removed from the game. When the message board revealed he had broken his finger, a large cheer spiraled from the seats.

A broken neck, you assumed, would have been worth a standing ovation.

Surveying the Anaheim scene from his vantage point last winter, Haden saw no reason to return to the Rams. He was demoted to second string, meaning he faced another year of inactivity if Vince Ferragamo remained, and he foresaw an unpleasantry even if Ferragamo departed.

"If Ferragamo decides to stay with the Rams," Pat said at the time, "that would mean the bench for me again. Not fond of the bench, I would ask to be traded. And even if Ferragamo leaves, it won't be a happy picture. Ram fans will be so mad at the club for letting him get away that they will take out their anger on me."

As you know, Ferragamo has departed to La Belle Province, where they don't yet pay off in francs, but where they have dredged up enough Canadian gold to make Vince the hemisphere's highest paid quarterback.

All benefits considered, he probably is earning a half-million a year in Montreal. The game there is lively, the atmosphere is appealing, the injury risk is minimal — and all life doesn't end when one bids adieu to the National Football League.

At least, that's the way some people look at it, obviously including Ferragamo.

Haden demurs, contending he never would have left Anaheim in similar circumstances.

"I wouldn't have done it," says Pat, "but the fact that Vince doesn't agree gives me cause for reevaluating my football life with the Rams. I know I'll never shake the wrath of a lot of fans in Anaheim. But I am afforded the excitement of a fresh start and a chance to be in control again of what happens. Being in control is important. I missed it during the time I wasn't in control. It's a bad feeling."

Surviving challenges during his time in pro football from Daryle Lamonica, Joe Namath, James Harris, Ron Jaworski and Ferragamo, Haden went out of control late in the 1979 season when he broke his hand against Pittsburgh.

The next thing he knew, Ferragamo was starting quarterback until the day this year he chose to leave for Montreal.

Since Haden in his time has been a winning thrower, he now is being asked to do what Jim Plunkett was asked to do at Oakland, namely, come from somewhere in his past to reestablish himself as a man who can do quality work.

Centainly, Plunkett did it last year with the Raiders, leaving scientists to ask incredulously what had happened to Jim during the years he couldn't hit the side of the Bay Bridge.

In baseball, something reasonably similar happens to pitchers between starts. A proven performer will go from outrageously good to outrageously bad, and vice-versa.

With guys who use their arms, what is the mysterious transformation that takes place, changing their work dramatically? What dark force causes them to fall in and out of rhythm for no reason seemingly visible?

"People think I'm nuts when I tell them this," Tommy John confided one time, "but when I'm standing out on the mound certain days, the baseball feels like a handball. Other days, it feels like a grapefruit. I tend to believe this is related to the fluid level of the body, but there is no medical backing for this theory."

Nolan Ryan always has contended that the primary cause of inconsistency is loss of concentration. Nolan told us one day:

"This results from personal problems you bring to the park with you, from watching a relief pitcher warm up, from an upset over an umpire's call and from a teammate's error. Once you lose your calm, you usually lose your rhythm, which takes care of your accuracy."

Both Haden and Plunkett can understand the foregoing analyses, but still see in football-throwing one dimension not incident to pitching a baseball.

"No one blocks for a pitcher," says Pat. "This means his throw doesn't require the kind of help that a quarterback requires. And when a quarterback doesn't get that help, you have a major reason why he has bad days and good."

It is advisable that Haden's next days be good, because in Anaheim's frame of mind now, bad days can lead only to final days.

And no one will make allowances for the fluid level in the body.

Injury denies Velasquez record

NEW YORK (AP) — An injury to morning-line favorite Rita's Ace denied jockey Jorge Velasquez an opportunity to become the first rider in New York history to pilot seven winners in as many races in a single day.

Velasquez was forced to settle for a 6-for-6 performance, a New York record nonetheless. Rita's Ace, a 3-year-old filly, was ordered scratched from the ninth race Thursday at Belmont Park.

Raider move to LA may prompt others to leave

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The former president of the Oakland Coliseum has fears that a move by the Oakland Raiders to Los Angeles might prompt other tenants of the facility to leave as well.

Robert T. Nahas, who retired as president of the Oakland-Alameda County complex last year, said Thursday that while the facility might not go broke if the Raiders depart, the stadium operators would remain obligated to pay off $14 million owed for the original construction.

And he expressed the fear that other teams might also vacate the facility, which houses the Oakland A's baseball team and the Golden State Warriors of the National Basketball Association.

Nahas was called to testify by attorneys for the Oakland Coliseum, which joined the U.S. District Court antitrust suit on the side of the National Football League in an attempt to prevent the Raiders from moving to the Los Angeles Coliseum.

The Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission are suing the NFL because of the league's refusal to allow the defending Super Bowl champions to move south.

Nahas testified that the stadium authority would be able to pay its yearly obligations without the Raiders, pointing out that the NFL team paid $600,000 in rent in 1980, and the Coliseum grossed $4 million in revenue.

The facility's expenses were $2 million, he said. But in addition it had to pay $1.5 million on construction bonds. The Coliseum still owes $14 million on the construction.

William Cunningham, general manager of the Oakland Coliseum, testified that the Raiders appeared not to be negotiating in good faith in 1979 and 1980 aw Al Davis, the team's managing general partner, considered moving to Los Angeles.

Owners exchange views

After the owners' first collective meeting since the strike started June 12, Fitzgerald said it was "merely an exchange of views. We're always interested to receive those views. As far as bargaining, we do that at the table. Views were exchanged and PRC was asked to continue what it has been doing — find a solution by bargaining."

Grebey, director of the PRC, called the discussions "the most positive meeting of PRC shareholders I've ever attended. We had a good dialogue and conversation and none of it will be wasted. It was a constructive meeting."

The session was held under tight security at the offices of Louis Hoynes, National League attorney and a member of the PRC bargaining committee.Each club was represented and the importance of the meeting was emphasized by the fact that John Fetzer, owner of the Detroit Tigers, attended.

FETZER rarely appears at major league meetings, preferring to leave those matters to Jim Campbell, president of the Tigers.

In strike-related developments, AL umpire Mike Reilly said he had received his entire paycheck for the month of July although the umpires were contractually entitled to be paid only through July 12. Reilly responded that the league "probably wants to stay on the good side of us."

Ted Turner, owner of th Atlanta Braves, gave striking pitcher Preston Hanna a job as a sports production assistant with Turner's Cable News Network.

Seitz stands firm on baseball ruling

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Peter M. Seitz, the man whose arbitration ruling changed the face of baseball, sits in his book-lined Central Park West apartment, peacefully smoking his pipe and pouring over new papers while the game lies dormant in the throes of a labor stalemate.

He would be the last to regard himself as the "Trigger Man" although the current 29-day-old strike by players can be traced indirectly to the landmark decision he made two days before Christmas in 1975.

"I decided it as a lawyer and an arbitrator," said the grandfatherly, scholarly New Yorker, a self-styled onetime Brooklyn Dodger fan, who ruled that pitchers Dave McNally and Andy Messersmith, their contracts terminated, could offer their services to another club.

This epic finding, upheld later in the courts, shattered baseball's century-old reserve clause, binding a player to one club for life or until traded or sold, and opened the door to free agency, spawning scores of instant millionaires.

It is the owners' efforts to recover some of the power they lost 5½ years ago that has shuttered big league ball parks in the first midseason strike in the game's long history.

Seitz today is disinclined to talk about it. Once outspoken on the case and its consequences, he has discovered that his statements often are taken out of context and given the wrong interpretation. So, lawyer-like, he insists that he not be quoted.

Apparently the veteran arbitrator, who has handled numerous important cases unconnected with the playing fields, sees bigtime, well-heeled sports suffering the same growing pains that has plagued all aspects of private industry during the past century.

It's a tug-of-war of economic strength, listing from side to side like some huge ocean liner caught in a stormy sea.

The clout, it so happens, now belongs to the players. They have had it only since Seitz's decision in 1975 and are reluctant to give too much of it back. After all, the owners exercised dogmatic control for decades, resisting every effort for change.

A phone call was placed to Seitz, asking if he had any opinions on how the current strike might have been averted. What went wrong? Who went wrong? Were the owners too stiff-necked and unyielding in surrendering some of the power they held so long? Were the players, after finally being released from their chains, too greedy, demanding too much, too quickly?

It was felt that Seitz, a man of brilliance and understanding, could address himself to the subject to the enlightenment of all.

He preferred to pass. His reasons are respected.

It is interesting to hark back to those chilly December days in 1975 and to note how baseball reacted to the shock.

If the decision were allowed to prevail (as it was,) warned Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, "it would be a disaster for the players, the clubs and, most of all, the fans."

Lee MacPhail, president of the American League and a man who learned baseball at the knee of his father, called it "financially suicidal."

The heads of the other major sports organizations were equally shocked, and apprehensive lest the same blow fall on the roofs of their houses. They predicted a new age of bargaining and compromise.

It came to pass, but not the way expected. Baseball had five years of prosperity — bigger crowds, greater interest, larger TV contracts, a mushroom of new millionaire super stars. Then came the strike.

It is a crisis situation for the game. Players are strong and adamant in their determination to cling to long-denied gains. The owners are split and desperate, grasping for a vagrant log to keep them afloat.

As for Seitz, he was fired by baseball owners two minutes after he made his decision.

It didn't shake him at all.

"What I did was inevitable," he said at the time. "The owners were too stubborn and stupid. They were like the French barons in the 13th Century. They accumulated so much power they wouldn't share it with anybody."

Then he added: "What I did was no Emanicipation Proclamation. "Involuntary servitude had nothing to do with it."

It was strictly law.

Work started on '84 games

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Shovels full of dirt gave evidence that physical preparations for the 1984 Summer Olympic games are under way.

A ground-breaking ceremony for the cycling velodrome at California State University-Dominguez Hills, the start of a $4 million privately financed structure, was held Thursday.

Actually, ground preparation had started a few days before the officials applied their shovels to the soil.

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, commented, "Southern California now has the potential of being the cycling center of the United States."

Money for the velodrome comes from the Southland Corporation of Dallas, which operates the 7-Eleven stores throughout the nation.

The firm's board chairman, John P. Thompson, said while he wasn't a cyclist, he "hopes this will mean a resurgence of the sport in the United States. We haven't made very good showings."

The velodrome will be an outdoors facility with a paved course.

Emphasis was placed on the fact the LAOOC has asked private industry to finance the Games so there would be no cost to the taxpayers. The velodrome was the first facility to be started although several corporations have made commitments in other fields.

The oval will be 333.3 meters (11,093 feet) and will have 30-degree banking. There will be permanent lighting and seating for 2,000.

Ueberroth said 50 nations were expected to compete in cycling with about 550 individuals entered.

Fabi looking to extend Can-Am winning streak

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Practice and qualifying began today for a weekend of sports car racing at the Watkins Glen road racing course with Teo Fabi of Italy hoping to extend his Can-Am winning streak to three and the Italian Lancia factory scrambling to stay ahead of Porsche in the battle for the world endurance title.

Another round of qualifying will be held Saturday before the start of the 185-mile, 55-lap Can-Am race over the Glen's twisting 3.377-mile course.

The annual Six-Hour World Endurance Championship of Makes race comes Sunday and will decide whether Lancia repeats as world endurance titlist.

Fabi, 26, of Milan, a former ski racer, has dominated the Can-Am series this year, shattering records as he won races at Mosport near Toronto and at Mid-Ohio near Lexington, Ohio.

Bear is upset

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama football Coach Bear Bryant says he's embarrassed by controversy over legislation that would allow him to coach past the mandatory retirement age of 70.

And Bryant, 68, said Thursday that he wants the entire matter dropped.

The Alabama Legislature last spring passed a law to allow the University of Alabama board of trustees to exempt any employee from mandatory retirement.

The bill's sponsors said it was aimed at Bryant, who needs nine victories to pass Amos Alonzo Stagg's career coaching record of 314 conquests.

The State Retirement Systems board had threatened a lawsuit against the bill, saying it unfairly applied to a limited number of people and would harm the system's financial integrity.

Stroney struggles in first pro year

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The road to success in her first year on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour has been filled with obstacles for Lynn Stroney, a 21-year-old Ohioan who decided to join the pro ranks shortly after her high school graduation.

"Perhaps, I'm not mature enough mentally," said Stroney Thursday after her 2-under-par 70 in the opening round of the 72-hole $150,000 Mayflower Classic. "It takes time to get that maturity, but a good tournament will change that."

Stroney's round of 37-33 placed her two strokes off the pace set by Debbie Austin, who took sole possession of the lead with nines of 35 and 33. Judy Rankin and Marlene Floyd were tied for second at 69 going into today's second round on the 6,101-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course.

Stroney earned only $554 after joining the pro tour last July. This year, the Girard, Ohio, resident has earned $4,707 and has failed to make the cut in eight of her 17 tournaments. Her best finish was a tie for 22nd in May.

"Last year I was a little discouraged, but this year I've been pretty happy," said Stroney, who was unsuccessful in her first three attempts to qualify for the tour after graduating from Liberty High School in Youngstown.

"I tried one quarter of college but decided that wasn't for me," added Stroney, who worked as a telephone operator and desk clerk in Hollywood, Calif., while trying to improve her play.

"I once got to talk to Diana Ross," she recalled when questioned about her work as an operator.

The maturity Stroney says she's been lacking may have been demonstrated when she scored a triple bogey 6 on the 185-yard, par-3 fourth hole. The stage for potential disaster was set when Stroney hooked a 3-iron out of bounds.

After the triple bogey, Stroney had four birdies and 10 pars which sent her to the press room for her first news conference as a pro.

Austin, a veteran of more than 13 years on the tour, also demonstrated the importance of maturity when she overcame some bad luck that led to her only bogey on the back nine.

"I hit a perfect 5-iron to the green," said the 33-year-old Austin. "But the ball hit a sprinkler head and bounced 30 yards over the green."

The bogey on the 426-yard, par-5 hole came after Austin, seeking her first victory since 1978 and her seventh overall, followed four birdies on the back nine.

"It wouldn't be so aggravating if I hit a crummy shot, but I hit a fine shot. I was mad, but I realize you can't do anything about it after it happens," Austin said, "So, I went out and nearly birdied the next hole."

Stroney was tied at 70 by Sharon Barrett, 19, Spring Valley, Calif., who is the youngest player on the tour. Veterans Barbara Barrow and Vicki Tabor also had 70s on the opening day.

Jan Stephenson and Beth Daniel were in a group of seven tied at 1-under 71. Other members of the group were Mary Dwyer, Peggy Conley, Chris Johnson, Louise Parks and Janet Alex.

Strike not slowing down J.R. Richard

HOUSTON — Housto Astros pitcher J.R. Richard, attempting a comeback from a stroke last July, is making progress despite the major league baseball strike, his agent says.

"This strike is having less an effect on J.R. than on some other people," Tom Reich said Thursday. "He is going about his business as usual. I watched him pitch a couple of weeks ago and he's doing fine."

Richard had been throwing batting practice during Astros home stands, but the strike ended that part of Richard's workout.

McCoy McLemore, a former member of the Houston Rockets basketball team who trains daily with Richard, said Richard's control also was improving.

"He's throwing up in the 90s (miles per hour) and his control is better," McLemore said. "He looks like he's ready to pitch to me."

Reich said no decision had been made whether Richard would start his comeback with the Astros or in the minor leagues.

By The Associated Press

Doubles by Dan Gladden and Doran Perdue in the fourth inning powered the Shreveport Captains to a 9-4 victory over the Jackson Mets.

The winning pitcher was Glenn fisher, 4-5. Tom Thurberg, 4-5, was the loser.

In other Texas League action, Midland nipped San Antonio, 7-6, Amarillo defeated El Paso, 10-7, and Tulsa slipped past Arkansas, 5-3.

Jerry DiSimone's three-run homer in the ninth inning boosted the Amarillo Gold Sox to a 10-7 victory over the El Paso Diablos.

DiSimone earlier had a solo homer and Joe Lansford had a two-run homer, his 19th of the season, for the Gold Sox.

Mike Barba, 3-3, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Chick Valley, 6-2.

George Wright drove in two runs and scored another, but the Tulsa Drillers had to count on some clutch relief pitching in the ninth inning to take a 5-3 victory over the Arkansas Travelers.

Jack Lazorko struck out a pinch hitter with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth to preserve the Tulsa victory.

The winning pitcher was Walt Terrell, 8-6. Jerry Jackson, 4-6, was the losing hurler.

Secret slush fund allegations face Mason

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Allegations of a secret slush fund for coaches at the University of Arizona have added a new dimension to the fraud trial of former football coach Tony Mason.

Mason, head coach from December 1976 to April 1980, testified Thursday the slush fund was created by the university's booster club and was in use until he ended it in early 1977 because it was "wrong."

Mason named Glenn R. Daniel as the man who operated the fund.

Called to the stand, Daniel, a member of the university faculty, invoked the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination 24 times — 19 of them in front of the jury.

He refused to answer slush fund-related questions from defense or prosecution — including whether basketball coach Fred Snowden and former head football coach Jim Young received more than $30,000 and Mason $700, $750 or more than $1,500.

The trial continuestoday.

Joseph Hartnett, an investigator for Mason, said Daniel told him Snowden, Mason and Young, "had used" the fund and the money was raised through lunches and raffles, but mentioned no figure.

Mason also said Athletic Director David Strack told him of the fund.

Mason's attorney, William T. Healy, sought to recall Strack, who already has testified, back to the stand, but his appearance was postponed while Strack consulted an attorney.

At one point, outside the jury's presence, Healy told Judge Robert B. Buchanan that Strack had "denied" the fund existed. Healy said the fund apparently amounted to $25,000 or $30,000.

Mason, testifying for a fourth day, is being tried on 15 felony counts for allegedly defrauding the school by submitting false expense accounts. He said he learned of the fund shortly after joining the university in December 1976.

The prosecution contends any slush fund is irrelevant to the charges against Mason. At the close of Mason's testimony, chief prosecutor Lindsay E. Brew attempted to ask the defendant, "You thought that it was wrong (to take cash) so you decided to lie on your travel claims?" Healy objected strenuously.

Mason said Strack told him of the fund and that "the Young-Smith staff was using it — and the other coaches." Larry Smith, an assistant under Young, succeeded Mason as head coach. Hartnett did not quote Daniel as mentioning Smith's name.

Mozart symphony has U.S. premiere

By MARY CAMPBELLL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Mozart symphony written in 1765 but discovered just this year had its American premiere here Wednesday — twice.

"Symphony in F major, K. 19a," written by Mozart at age 9, was performed by the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra first for President Reagan, his wife, Nancy, and 300 invited guests on the south lawn of the White House, and then for a sold-out crowd at the Kennedy Center's Concert Hall.

The Kennedy Center performance lasted 13 minutes — two minutes longer than the one at the White House.

At the Kennedy Center, conductor Leonard Slatkin, played harpsichord and — still seated — conducted during rests in his music, which was the practice in Mozart's time.

Slatkin, music director of the St. Louis Symphony, played an eight-bar improvised solo, as Mozart indicated on his score should be done. He also conducted the repeats in the score, making the piece lunger than the White House performance.

"I wanted to save something, to make tonight different," Slatkin said after the Kennedy Center concert. "Also, the solo harpsichord couldn't be heard outdoors."

Reagan called the piece "lovely" and said it was a thrill to hear its American premiere.

The White House concert, which lasted half an hour, also included the overture to "Cosi fan tutte" and the last movement of the "Linz Symphony."

At a reception afterward, Slatkin said he told the president that his parents had been Hollywood musicians and had performed scores of some of Reagan's films.

In a brief talk before the White House concert, Slatkin said the Mozart symphony was more than just a curiosity written by a child. "We think we have a genuine mini-masterpiece on our hands," he said. "It has humanity, vitality, original ideas. This is indeed an important occasion."

The Bavarian State Library in Munich announced the discovery of the symphony in February.

Broadway actor has taste for cigars

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Arts Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — This may sound strange, but Chaz Chase likes to eat cigars. Lighted ones. And lighted cigarettes. And matchbook flambee. Dessert is a yellow flower and a shirtfront.

He so dines without a burp or a word eight times a week in Broadway's "Sugar Babies." He's in the first act, a tiny, sad-faced man in baggy clothes and a battered slouch hat.

Now 80, he estimates that since 1919 he's downed four million lighted cheroots, one owned by Winston Churchill. He first got the idea of dining El Ropo from Joe Frisco, the stuttering comic.

"That's what stunted my growth, I think," he mused, puffing on a stunted stogie at lunch. Chaz, 5-foot-2½ in an updraft, also occasionally nibbles at a tiny harmonica but never swallows it.

"I tried it once but it didn't go down right."

Since the vaudeville era, the Chaz Chase Diet has survived the Depression, three wars and radio. It's been seen in 18 Broadway shows, in major cities around the world and on TV.

It even was part of a 1963 cultural exchange tour dispatched by the late President John F. Kennedy to enlighten the natives of Afghanistan, India, Laos, South Vietnam and Hong Kong.

His cigar munch-in wowed the multitudes, he reports, so did Buddy Rich's drumming, but not comic Joey Adams, particularly in Afghanistan: "He insisted on doing Eddie Cantor and I don't think they knew Cantor so well."

His big break was in 1924, in the Ziegfeld Follies, working with Will Rogers, "a beautiful person," and W.C. Fields, "a great comedian, but as a person he was null and void."

After World War II, he and his cigars lighted up Paris, which he still considers headquarters and where he counts among his friends the great mime, Marcel Marceau, and Jacques Tati, the film funnyman.

He worked at the noted tourist haven, the Lido, for six years — "I was the first distraction" — and then seven more at the Crazy Horse, also known for lavish displays of women.

"A gentleman named Bernandine ran it," he said. "A genius. He invented a system of lights that dress and undress the girls."

Then, as now, he lived surrounded by chorus girls, whoopee and loud music at night, then by his family and quiet during the day, returning after sundown to his trade of eating lighted cigars.

"Well," he says of this split-ticket existence, "one's work and the other isn't. You gotta differentiate between the two, otherwise you're not going to have any kind of life."

Oddly enough, Chaz only lasted briefly in the old-time burlesque that "Sugar Babies" salutes: "I wasn't funny enough, got overpowered by guys like Bert Lahr, Phil Silvers."

Audiences then and now? "They laugh more whole-heartedly now. Back then, you'd have a smattering of applause and a lot of, you know, 'Bring on the broads' and 'Take it off, honey.'

"The owners got more and more vulgar. That's what killed it."

Despite his smoke-filled gypsy life, Chaz has been married to the same woman 50 years, and has a daughter and three grandchildren. One of them is a nutritionist.

Sure, he says, she urges him to quit eating lighted cigars, to take aboard a better, non-burning brand of vegetable.

"They all do," he said. "Everyone does. But cigars don't bother me, matches don't bother me. I get heartburn from food."

New courtroom drama to begin airing on TV this fall

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The courtroom, from Joan of Arc to the Old Bailey to "Perry Mason," has always been a center of drama and fascination.

As a reporter I've covered many trials, and not even the dullest case ever failed to attract spectators hoping to share in its suspense and tension. Every courtroom has its aficionados, and at recess I would overhear them as they huddled in the hallway and critiqued the performances.

Few authors have been able to resist the raw human emotions that are unleashed before the bar. Nor could television. Besides such courtroom dramas as "Perry Mason," "The Defenders" and "Judd for the Defense," real cases were re-enacted in "Day in Court," "Accused" and "Traffic Court."

NOW, IN THIS AGE of reality television, comes "The People's Court," in which actual small claims cases are tried before a judge and are legally binding.

"The People's Court," from Ralph Edwards Productions, will be syndicated to stations for airing five times a week in the fall.

Presiding over the cases is former Judge Joseph A. Wapner, who sat on the Los Angeles Superior Court for 18 years and still hears special cases. The litigants have agreed to a hearing that is taped in a courtroom set in a studio.

Two cases were heard in the pilot. In the first, a woman who bought three Cartier watches demands her money back because the watches are fake. In the second, a woman seeks $100 damages from a mover she claims scratched her furniture.

NEITHER SOUNDS particularly exciting, but you'd be surprised at the amount of emotion the parties can work up over such small amounts. And that emotion is what causes spectators to creep into the backrows of courtrooms.

Unfortunately a game show atmosphere has crept into "The People's Court." Stephanie Edwards, who guides us through the proceedings, is, well, the hostess. It takes on the aspect of which-contestant-will-win? When the judge retires to consider his decision, Miss Edwards solicitions the opinions of the spectators.

In the first case, the plaintiff, confined to a wheelchair, bought the so-called Cartier watches out of a cigar box from a young woman in a restaurant. She paid $75 each for the watches that normally sell for $1,000. After hearing both sides, the judge decided for the defendant. He said the plaintiff "knew the value of a Cartier" and it was a matter of "buyer beware."

THE SECOND CASE is rather humdrum, except for an amusing digression about whether the mover filched a box of the woman's underpants. The judge again finds for the defendant. He says, "It's a case that requires proof, and you didn't even tip the scales."

In both cases Miss Edwards found that the spectator's opinions coincided with the judge's decisions.

After each decision the loser is asked for reaction. Both were bitter. The mover tried to put in a word, but Miss Edward told him not to speak. He ignored her and said, "This goes to show that crime doesn't pay."

Wapner says he hopes the cases have been not only entertaining "but educational in the judicial process of arbitration and how to conduct yourself in court."

JAMES F. NELSON, presiding judge of the Los Angeles Municipal Court, said in a letter to the producers "the judges and staff members present (for the screening of the pilot) were enthusiastic about the quality and realism of the show."

Nelson added, "Certaining your show will do much to increaqse public awareness of the nature of the small claims proceeding and its value to a public which, all too often, thinks of the courts as remote and inaccessiblde as well as time consuming and expensive."

I won't argue with that. I'm sure the bench-warmers I used to encounter in court will love it. The game show fans may love it, too. But, I'd rather take my case to a higher court.

Hearings asked on Du Pont's porposed purchase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Democratic senators, citing a "threat to the competitive economy," are calling for close scrutiny of the Du Pont Co.'s proposed purchase of Conoco Inc.

Du Pont is the nation's largest chemical firm; Conoco ranqs ninth among U.S. oil companies.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, say the proposed merger poses "such a threat to the competitive economy and to the American consumer and small businessperson, that (it) should not be approved without the closest scrutiny."

The two senators have asked the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission to closely study the proposed merger before deciding whether to approve it, saying it will "give Du Pont a significant advantage over its competitors."

They also called on Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to hold hearings on the proposal "to explore the competitive and other consequences for the consumer, small business, and the American economy."

In their letter to Thurmond Thursday, Kennedy and Metzenbaum said:

"Since this takeover seems to be just the beginning of a long series of such huge combinations, this would afford the committee a good opportunity to study what could develop into a fundamental change in the structure of the American economy."

The letter added, "This is the kind of issue that would seem to fit precisely within the antitrust responsibilities of the Judiciary Committee and that the committee ought not to ignore."

Thurmond abolished the antitrust committee, which had been headed by Metzenbaum, when he took over as Judiciary chairman earlier this year.

In their letter to Attorney General William French Smith, the senators noted that "80 percent of Du Pont's products" are based on petrochemicals, of which "oil and gas constitute an indispensable element."

"Conoco's oil and gas thus will give Du Pont a significant advantage over its competitors, since the merger will guarantee Du Pont a stable supply during potential energy shortages," they said.

Kennedy and Metzenbaum told Smith, "It has been reported that the administration does not plan to oppose any merger unless it has obvious horizontal effects, i.e., the merger is not between competitors who have major market shares. We hope those reports are unfounded.

"Such a policy would be inconsistent with current law, which has long proscribed significant vertical mergers," they continued. "We hope that the department, which is pledged to enforce the law, does not overturn this established jurisprudence by unilateral executive action and without congressional approval."

Du Pont and Conoco announced Monday they had reached agreement for the Wilmington, Del., chemical firm to aquire all outstanding Conoco stock for $6.9 billion.

Du Pont filed a registration statement Tuesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which evaluates mergers of such scale.

Employees file suit against Monsanto

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A $1.35 billion lawsuit has been filed against Monsanto Co. on behalf of former employees who claim they were exposed to toxic chemicals that caused health problems ranging from cancer to heart disease.

The suit was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court here on behalf of 43 former employees at Monsanto's chemical plant in nearby Nitro, including some workers who have since died of cancer, according to the workers' lawyer.

Lawyer W. Stuart Calwell, who filed the suit, said today that it increases the total amount of damages sought from the chemical manufacturer to more than $4 billion. He said the suit filed this week is in addition to an earlier claim filed on behalf of another 72 former employees.

"All of our claimants have varying kinds of illness that, at least initially, have been linked to exposure to the chemicals they worked with," he said. "We're still getting calls from others."

Calwell said he expects that as many as 200 former employees eventually will join the lawsuit.

Monsanto officials directed questions this morning to Merle Mahler, the Nitro plant's director of personnel. His office reported that he was unavailable for comment.

The company's lawyer in the case, Charles Love, was out of town and also unavailable, his office said. But the company has submitted a general denial of responsibility with the court in connection with the first lawsuit, which was filed in mid-April.

Both suits allege that Monsanto knew exposure to chemicals in use at the plant posed potential hazards to employees, but that managers were directed to keep such information from the workers.

Calwell said the suits cite company documents, including a memo to plant managers in the early 1970s directing them to make "as limited a response as possible" to employee inquiries about potential health problems.

Health problems cited by the claimants include heart disease, leukemia and other cancers, kidney disease, skin lesions, nervousness and mental health problems.

"The earliest date of employment of any of them is about 1940," Calwell said. "Some of the chemicals involved are still in use at the plant, while use of others has been discontinued," he said.

First drilling rig enters Georges Bank

BOSTON (AP) — After seven years of controversy and court action, the first drilling rig neared Georges Bank today to begin the hunt for gas and oil in one of America's richest fishing areas.

The Zapata Saratoga, a 260-foot semi-submersible drilling rig was expected to arrive at a drilling site 175 miles off Cape Cod sometime late today, said Norman Altstedter, a spokesman for Shell Oil Co. in New York.

The Saratoga, which left the Gulf of Mexico late last month, was being towed by an ocean-going tug making six knots an hour, Altstedter said. It's final destination is Block 410, a tract of ocean Shell and three other oil companies leased for $34.7 million in January 1979.

Another convoy of supply ships based in Davisville, R.I., is scheduled to meet the Saratoga sometime this weekend with additional crew members who will aid in anchoring operations. The rig now carries a crew of 50.

Towering 80 feet above the water, the rig will be set in place by eight 40,000-pound anchors that are dropped in a circle around the drilling rig and then secured to the structure with 2,500 foot lengths of steel chain and wire ropes.

Once secured in place, the rig will begin drilling through 460 feet of water. Shell has plans to drill as deep 18,000 feet in hopes of tapping some of the 150 million to 530 million barrels of oil and two trillion cubic feet of gas estimated to lie under the shoals and sandy ridges of Georges Bank.

Once drilling operations start, Shell and its partners — Cities Services, Phillips Petroleum and Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. — will spend close to $100,000 a day in the hunt for hydrocarbons.

Within the next two weeks, the Saratoga will be joined by the Alaskan Star, another drilling rig operated by Exxon Corp., which will be drilling in a spot 110 miles southeast of Nantucket. That rig now is in Narragansett Bay, taking on supplies.

Mobil and Getty Oil also are expected to have drilling rigs in the Georges Bank by late summer.

The drilling operations follow years of court action and negotiations among the oil companies, the federal government and environmentalists. Federal officials first proposed offshore oil leases in 1974, but actions by those concerned about the impact on the rich fishing area delayed the lease sales several times until late 1979.

Georges Bank provides a livelihood for hundreds of New England fishermen who last year took nearly 300 million pounds of cod, haddock and other fish from the 20,000 square miles of shoals.

Forest wastes made into high octane fuel

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A high octane fuel that may be better than gasoline has been produced from waste products generated in the effort to turn pine and other forest residues into liquid fuel.

Dr. Ed Soltes, a wood chemist and leader of a research team at Texas A&M University's Forest Science Laboratory, said his group has taken the process of making fuel from plants one step further by turning the by-products of the fuel-making process into still more fuel.

"Tars, chars and gasses are created when plants are broken down using heat," Soltes said. "We have taken the tars and by using technology similar to that used in the petrochemical industry, have broken them down still further into hydrocarbons similar to those found in engine fuels." The research, sponsored by the Texas A&M Center for Energy and Mineral Resources and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, greatly improves the technological feasibility and possibly the cost-effectiveness of producing liquid engine fuels from plants, Soltes said.

He said the technique can be applied to tars generated from any plant, including agricultural products such as corn cobs, wheat stems, wood chips or bark.

"One advantage of fuels from pine residues over fuels from other plant material is that engines will not have to be altered," Soltes said.

"The stuff that we are producing is virtually the same as the gasoline used in your automobile engine today." It might even be better than the gas found on the market because these hydrocarbons are very high in octane, he said.

"It's conceivable that we could be producing an octane booster for gas, depending on how it is processed."

The researchers are also identifying processes that produce significant yields of tars and oils, which would help establish direction for future research and development work.

"Right now we don't know whether diesel fuels can be produced in cost-competitive situations with conventional diesel fuel," said the Texas A&M forestry scientist. "But the advent of fuels from residues to power equipment for agricultural purposes, much of which runs off of diesel, can make a significant impact on national priorities in the use of such residues and on diverting petroleum reserves to higher-valued uses."

Gulf Oil to help Angola develop offshore oil fields

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gulf Oil will help Angola develop its offshore oilfields with an $85 million loan approved by the U.S. Export-Import Bank despite the United States' refusal to recognize the African nation's Marxist government.

The loan agreement, originally approved last year under former President Carter, was signed this week, a spokesman for the Ex-Im Bank said Thursday. It was the first time the bank approved aid to Angola since the former colony won its independence from Portugal seven years ago.

Gulf and the state-run Angolan oil corporation will use the money jointly to develop the Atlantic Ocean oilfields on the western coast of Angola, said Ex-Im spokesman Art Obester. The aim is to increase production from 100,000 barrels daily to 200,000 by 1985.

Obester said final approval of the loan had been delayed while the bank worked out a complex financing package with several banks.

The Export-Import Bank, a federally funded organization, provides low-cost loans to finance foreign purchases of American products. The Reagan administration had originally proposed cutting back new lending, but Congress refused to go along with the cuts. Instead, it is proposing to raise the bank's spending limits.

The Reagan administration has said publicly that the United States won't recognize the Angolan government as long as an estimated 20,000 Cuban troops remain there. The Cuban soldiers were originally sent to Angola in 1976 and helped Marxist forces take over the government.

Administration officials have asked Congress to repeal a 1976 law banning U.S. aid to rebels trying to overthrow Angola's government.

During his confirmation hearings, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said American failure to back Angolan rebels led to the Marxist victory in 1976.

Panel gives oil companies second chance to drill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee voted Wednesday to give a group of oil companies a second chance to drill for oil and natural gas in the Santa Barbara channel, although their drilling rights expired eight years ago.

The committee approved legislation that would restore the balance of a 5-year drilling lease to the Pauley Group, a consortium of 11 oil companies.

The group paid $74 million in 1968 for five years of exclusive drilling rights on two offshore California sites.

But in 1969, after the Pauley Group had operated for only 11 months, a well on a nearby tract operated by Union Oil Co. blew out of control, beginning the infamous Santa Barbara oil spill. Drilling operations in the area, including the Pauley site, were suspended.

Drilling was later allowed to resume under stricter standards of liability. But the revised liability standards presented a problem to the Pauley Group.

Marcus Faust of the House Interior Committee staff said large oil companies had enough money to guarantee their compliance with the revised standards.

But the smaller independent companies making up the Pauley Group, with less cash, were unable to afford insurance under the stricter liability standard and could not resume drilling, he said.

The group sued the government in the U.S. Court of Claims, seeking its money back. It lost the suit, however, and since has been lobbying Congress to have its drilling rights restored although its lease expired in 1973. Faust said the Pauley Group has now found insurers willing to cover the drilling risk.

The bill approved by the committee would restore the 4 years and 1 month of the lease without further payment by the Pauley Group. However, it would have to pay a 50 percent royalty rate on any oil and gas discovered rather than the 16 2-3 percent rate specified in its original lease.

The bill now goes to the House floor. Similar legislation is now pending in the Senate Energy Committee.

RRC to hold public hearing on application

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission will hold a public hearing at 9 a.m. July 23 on an application by Sellers Oilfield Service Inc. for a permit to operate a reclamation plant near Andrews in Andrews County.

Sellers proposes to locate the plant 1.5 miles east of Andrews at the intersection of Highway 176 and Ruskin Road.

Sellers plans to relcaim tank bottoms, oil spill materials and other similar materials. The plant wil have an initial capacity to reclaim 200 barries per day, with a planned ultimate capacity of 500 barrels per day.

The hearing will be held at the RRC offices at 1124 South Interstate Highway 35, Austin.

Oil group says it can handle speedup in offshore drilling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the claims of some oil companies, the oil service industry is ready and willing to meet the large speedup in offshore drilling being proposed by Interior Secretary James Watt, industry representatives said Wednesday.

The manpower and equipment is available to meet Watt's goal of offering virtually the entire U.S. and Alaska coastline for lease over the next five years, officials of the National Ocean Industries Association said.

The association represents 475 firms which do the preliminary seismic work, supply the giant drilling rigs and provide other support services for oil companies' drilling efforts.

Watt's five-year plan has drawn fire from state officials, environmentalists and even oil companies who claim it is too ambitious. Several oil companies have said the plan will strain their resources because they do not have the necessary equipment and person,el.

However, NOIA officials, who supply their services under contract to oil companies, disputed that contention.

"The accelerated leasing schedule is well within our capacity," said Paul Kelly of Zapata Corp., which operates offshore rigs. "We are experiencing an unprecedented boom in the construction of seismic vessels, oilfield service vessels and drilling rigs."

Between now and 1985, NOIA said, 260 new drilling rigs will be built, representing a 50 percent expansion in the worldwide fleet.

Kelly said that an additional 100 rigs could be built annually by 1983 by U.S. shipyards, which are facing a slump in merchant marine construction.

The oil service officials said they believed many of the oil company responses to Watt's plan had been taken out of context. They said their reading of the industry was that it generally supported Watt's moves.

Exxon, Mobil and Atlantic Richfield were among the oil companies voicing reservations about Watt's plan.

Atlantic Richfield said, "We do not believe the industry can respond effectively and efficiently year after year to such extensive offerings."

The U.S. and Alaska coastline is divided into 22 planning areas ranging in size from 9 million to 160 million acres. Watt proposes offering entire planning areas for leasing instead of following past practice of having oil companies nominate tracts in which they are interested and then leasing much smaller areas.

Watt's goal of offering between 200 million and 300 million acres for lease each year compares to about 15 million acres that would have been offered under the Carter administration plan which Watt is seeking to change.
