C-City grand jury raises questions

Gomez shooting case awaits action

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — The composition of the second grand jury that will hear the Sammy Gomez case does not appropriately represent the minority population of Mitchell County, and the inclusion of a Colorado City councilman on the panel presents a conflict of interest, state and local LULAC officials have charged.

However, Ron Dusek a spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's office — which, along with the Mitchell County district attorney's office, will oversee the proceedings — said the allegations "are not something we're going to jump into. That's something for a defense attorney to argue in court."

Grand jurors who will hear the case were sworn in May 19 — the date the case was originally scheduled to be presented to the grand jury.

But the Attorney General's office postponed the hearing, saying it had not concluded its investigation.

Asked when the hearing would be held, Dusek said, "I don't know the exact date; they're still trying to get it ready to present to the grand jury."

The grand jury that heard the case one week after Sammy Gomez was fatally shot May 13, 1988 by Billy Ray Williamson, a part-time Colorado City police officer, voted not to indict the officer.

City officials have said Williamson shot Gomez — a suspect in a sexual assault case — because the 27-year-old attempted to attack him and Lt. Pat Taylor with a knife.

However, attorneys representing the Gomez family — Ruben Sandoval, a San Antonio civil rights lawyer, and John Garcia, LULAC state director — have alleged police "summarily executed" Gomez and planted a throwdown knife at the scene.

Gomez died as a result of a bullet wound to the back of the head, according to a final autopsy report, which was not yet complete when the grand jury met.

Members of the second grand jury scheduled to hear the case are: Stan Hackfeld, Donnie Hale, Shirley Clifton, Jerry Wilbourn, Eric White, Emma Godina, Gene Hanks, Ruben Alvarez, Debra Reyes, Mike Herrington, Tim Oden and Bobby Lemons, jury foreman.

Three of the 12 grand jury members have Spanish surnames, but the Hispanic population of Mitchell County is much higher than 25 percent, contend LULAC officials, who are also objecting to the inclusion of White, the only black person on the grand jury, because he is a Colorado City councilman.

An ethnic breakdown of the general population of Mitchell County has not been compiled, according to officials in the county courthouse.

Oscar Ortiz, president of the local LULAC chapter, contends the Hispanic population of Colorado City is approximately 40 percent.

According to Colorado City school district statistics, 39 percent of the students in the district have Spanish surnames and eight percent of the students are black.

Unsolved murders puzzle officials

Editor's note: This is the first of two articles on unsolved slayings in Howard County.

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

Murder is no stranger to West Texas.

The state has one of the highest murder rates per capita in the country and one of the highest number of people in death row. While many of the murder cases play themselves out in the courts — through sensational trials or plea-bargained agreements — others simply fall through the investigative and legal cracks.

Law enforcement authorities fight a battle, sometimes a very hopeless one, to bring the guilty to justice. In some cases the evidence law enforcement authorities receive is so minimal they are left without a motive or a clue, and with the passage of time the murderers and murdered are virtually forgotten.

In Howard County, there have been at least three unsolved murders in the last 20 years. Attracting community-wide attention at the time of their occurrence, the murders are now relegated to history.

The Happy Howry case was one that city police believed they had finally solved when a convicted murderer told authorities he was responsible for Howry's death. Howry's murder in late April of 1982 had produced few tangible leads until death row inmate Otis Edward Toole claimed responsibility for the murder.

Toole, speaking to a Texas Ranger from a federal prison in Florida, told of how he and his more reknowned accomplice, Henry Lee Lucas, had murdered the Odessa business man.

The documented version Toole gave authorities was that he and Lucas picked up Howry at the Greyhound Bus Station in Odessa. During the drive to Big Spring, Howry was hit on the head with a tire tool, knocking him unconscious.

Howry was then reportedly tied up by the two convicted murders and placed in the trunk of his vehicle, a cream-colored 1980 Chevrolet Malibu.

Inside the Big Spring city limits, Howry was said to have been removed from the vehicle and beat to death with a tire tool by Toole while Lucas held down Howry, according to Toole.

The memo regarding Toole's version of Howry's death ended, "Case closed, both suspects are in custody at this time."

But Toole, like Lucas, would later recant may of his confessions. Howry's murder would be one of those murders for which Toole would later deny he was responsible.

And although police detectives secured a wealth of data about Howry's death, more than 50 pages in documentation, information regarding other possible suspects was limited in the case.

Barring Toole's confession, the only other information about possible suspects or motives came from concerned citizens who told police

Students discuss rally

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING — Leaders of the student protest movement proposed Saturday that demonstrators hold a climactic rally this week to "celebrate our great victory" and then end their historic two-week occupation of Tiananmen Square.

The call came as hardliners expanded their purge of moderates, whose sympathy for the students triggered the fiercest power struggle since the leftist ideological purges of the Cultural Revolution.

Student leaders said it was time to change tactics in their push for greater freedom and an end to official corruption. But they said protesters in Tiananmen Square, whose numbers have fallen sharply to about 10,000, would have the final say on ending the sit-in.

Top student leaders Wu'er Kaixi, Wang Dan and Chai Ling held a news conference at the square and called for a city-wide march and mass rally Tuesday to culminate the protest movement that began April 15.

Students later said they also planned a march Sunday. They said they expected up to 300 schools and institutes to join the march around Beijing, but that factory and office workers — who previously joined in massive demonstrations that electrified the nation — would probably stay away.

"Factories are now taking economic measures against workers who participate," one student leader said. He said some have had their pay docked for taking part in the rallies.

On Saturday former President Li Xiannian made the first public acknowledgement that China was experiencing a power struggle, accusing some Communist Party leaders of plotting to create confusion in the country.

Elmore pledges July Fourth fireworks

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring's Fourth of July apparently will be complete with a fireworks display that's being described as "the largest in West Texas."

In a turnabout from several weeks ago — when the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce decided not to take the lead in providing a fireworks display — chamber member and Chrysler auto dealer J.B. Elmore has stepped forward with a pledge to underwrite the fireworks display on South Mountain.

Chamber executive officer Whayne Moore made the official announcement Friday that the city will be treated to a fireworks display, which is budgeted to be nearly twice as long as last year's 38-minute show.

Moore lauded Elmore, who put his weight behind a similar promotion last fall to finance the George Bush Inaugural trip by the Midland Lee High band.

The traditional event was again being threatened because of a lack of funding.

Chamber of Commerce board members voted April 19 to leave any funding and fund raising for a Fourth of July event in the hands of the public. That move came one year after a chamber committee spent weeks making pleas for donations of any size to finance a $5,000 fireworks display.

Although that goal was eventually attained, the chamber's board decided in April that any such effort should rest with the public, while the chamber should expend its efforts to attempt to increase business and industrial development in the community, Moore explained.

It was soon after that Elmore stepped forward and proposed funding the event to ensure residents an Independence Day observation.

Elmore, who came to Big Spring in early 1988 from Atlanta, Ga. to operate the Chrysler, Dodge and Jeep franchises, said that he wanted to do something for the community, and saw this as one method.

Moore said: "He responded to the challenge and the need of the community," and the chamber's role has been to coordinate the details.

The auto dealership has pledged a contribution of $100 for every automobile sold from May 30 through July 4th. Based on a budgeted $8,500, Moore said negotiations with Western Enterprises, Inc., an Oklahoma-based fireworks company, has resulted in a 66-minute production that will begin at dark from South Mountain.

More than 750 posters will be distributed throughout the Permian Basin — some by the Midland Lee school students who benefitted from Elmore's earlier push — to attract visitors from outside the community.

Moore said that the typical arrangements for July 4 fire protection will be made through Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard.

they had seen Howry before his death.

One man reported he had a seen a man with coal black hair and "piercing eyes" driving Howry's car; another person reported seeing Howry in front of the First National Bank of Odessa with a taller, younger man with black hair and wearing a dark blue suit. The incident reportedly occurred one day after Howry was first discovered missing.

For some time after the murder police sought a somewhat heavy-built man with orange, curly hair for questioning in the murder. One woman reported she had seen Howry in a green suit, hitch-hiking towards Snyder.

The descriptions and details were sketchy at best and sometimes contradictory of statements made by other supposed witnesses.

What was known was that Howry, 66, was last seen alive by his mother April 25, 1982 at a Wendy's in Odessa, after Howry attended a morning church service. Another verified sighting of Howry did not occur until May 6, 1982, when his body was discovered in the 500 block of Sunset Avenue by two SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf students.

". . . We saw something under a tree. We were not sure if it was a drunk, so we whistled to see what happened. The body did not move so we moved to the left and down toward the tree to see if it might be dummy, but we found a dead body . . . We went to a house and called for the police," one of the students, whose name is still kept confidential, said in the report.

Howry's badly decomposed body would be found lying on his back under some underbrush, next to a cedar tree. It appeared he had been there for several days.

His T-shirt was soiled; his long-sleeve shirt pulled up and unbuttoned and his slacks unzipped; the pants pockets were pulled out a little. His blood-stained waist-belt had been found days before when a city resident reported finding Howry's car on the front lawn of a residence on east Second Street.

A police search of the area where Howry's body was located recovered a few coins, a pocket knife and a pair of fingernail clippers. A tire tool believed to have been the instrument of his death was discovered in a grassy area southwest of the body.

After consulting a pathologist, former Justice of the Peace Bobby West ruled Howry died of a crushing blow to the skull by a heavy instrument. When Howry's car had been found eight days before, on April 28 — the tire tool was missing.

A search of Howry's car raised as many questions as it answered. Why were there cigarettes butts in the car if he didn't smoke? Or beer cans if he didn't drink? Why was the car littered with debris if he was a basically clean person? And why did a man who was not the type to pick up hitch-hikers apparently violate his own rule?

Another question — why Howry made routine trips to Big Spring even though he had no business or relatives here — also failed to have an answer, although it did create a certain morbid speculation by family and friends.

So far the questions have remained unanswered.

In Monday's Herald: Two more slayings that remain unsolved and on the books of Howard County investigators.

terest in the case because if Williamson were indicted and subsequently convicted, the ruling could lead to a civil suit against the city of Colorado City, said Ortiz.

Mitchell County District Attorney Frank Conard said the grand jury members are chosen by a three-member jury commission. The commission consists of past grand jury members selected by District Judge Weldon Kirk.

The grand jury commissioners are instructed to select 20 potential grand jurors who "are representative of a cross-section of the community," Conard said.

From the list of 20 potential jurors, the first 12 grand jurors who meet the qualifications for service are selected to serve, Conard said.

Asked about potential conflicts arising from White's service on the grand jury, Conard said, "I don't know if that would be a conflict or not."

While the District Attorney's office is serving as prosecuter in the case, the District Judge oversees grand jury selection, Conard said.

Kirk could not be reached for comment Friday concerning the jury selection process.

White, when asked if he thought his service would present a conflict of interest, said, "I'd rather not say anything. I'm a fair man, that's all I can say."

But Ortiz contends, "I don't see how (White's service) could not be a conflict of interest."

Sandoval said the inclusion of White on the jury was one of his primary objections to the hearing, which he has previously said would degenerate into "a circus."

"First of all, there is a man on the grand jury who is a city councilman," he said. "That's going to create problems for sure."

"We also do not think the grand jury represents a cross-section of the community," Sandoval added.

"We're not adequately represented at all," said Ortiz. "This is the same representation as when the grand jury met the first time.

"It's obvious the outcome is going to be the same, despite the fact that now they have more evidence to present . . .We just don't think its going to be a fair hearing."

Ortiz contends the jury selection does not represent a cross-section of the community, but rather is a reflection of the area's "good ol' boy" system.

"There's nothing wrong with the system itself; it's the human element that makes the system bad," he said.

Since Colorado City is a small town and many members of the grand jury have known Williamson and other city officials for many years, Ortiz alleges that a fair hearing cannot be conducted in Colorado City.

"It's like me killing someone and having members of my family on the grand jury . . .," he said.

However, Conard refuted charges that a fair grand jury hearing could not take place in Colorado City, saying, "Most grand jury members realize how serious this is. . .

"When a grand jury gets in there and takes that oath and starts hearing the testimony, they really try to do what's right in accordance with what they think is right."

If a person feels that he cannot fairly consider a case, he can excuse himself from service, he said.

Conard — a former deputy sheriff and criminal defense attorney who began his tenure as district attorney in January — said, "I believe in things being done right and the legal way. And that's the way things are going to be run in my district."

But John Garcia, state LULAC director, said his organization is "concerned (the grand jury) has been placed in Colorado City, where we expect there will be an extreme amount of pressure for the jury to clear those responsible for what happened."

Ortiz and the attorneys representing the Gomez family said they will continue pushing for a federal grand jury on the case. They also said Texas LULAC recently approved a resolution supporting the local chapter's efforts, and that the case will also be on the agenda of the LULAC national convention in July.

"This thing is not going to go away," Ortiz vowed. "Before we get through everybody is going to know about this, and justice will be done."

Jordan — living her dream

By KASEY GOLDEN
For the Herald

As a child growing up in Big Spring, Pam Jordan played cops and robbers in city parks and neighborhood streets.

Today the 29-year-old — who is the city's highest ranking female patrol officer — is cruising the city's streets trying to take a bite out of crime.

"I'd like to think we can make a difference," said Jordan, who was recently promoted to patrol lieutenant.

Jordan is a Big Spring native and graduate of Big Spring High School. As an "Air Force brat", Jordan said she "bounced around a lot" and lived in several towns but moved back to her hometown to work in law enforcement.

She was strongly motivated since childhood to become a police officer and the greatest reward has been helping people, Jordan said, adding that her strong sense of justice needs to be served in some way.

Jordan said she has never wanted to do anything else but police work.

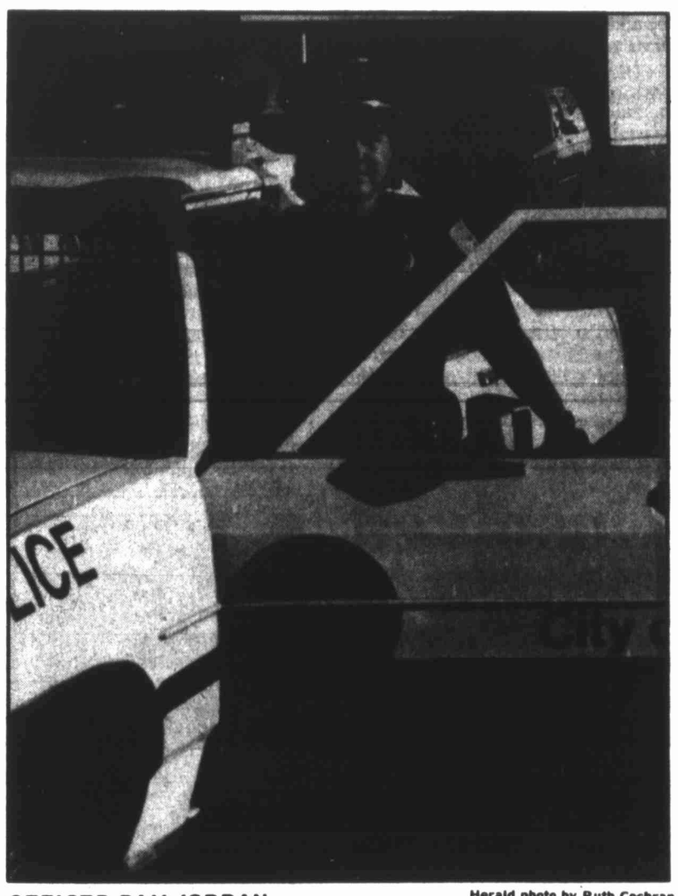

"I had an uncle that was a police officer. I really looked up to him. I guess from the time I was a young child I wanted to be a police officer," Jordan said.

"I checked into being a police officer when I was under 21. But there weren't too many places hiring that young," she said.

Instead, Jordan attended Howard College and got her certification as an emergency medical technician. She worked with a Wichita Falls ambulance service for 3½ years before starting her police officer career in Big Spring in 1981.

Although she enjoyed her work as an EMT, Jordan said she never got over her desire to be a police officer. Her uncle was a big influence.

"I remember talking to him. I read a lot of library books on police officers. I just had that much interest," said Jordan who climbed through the ranks to her present status.

Jordan has had no regrets even though she's had a few close calls with flying bullets.

"Sure it bothers me," said Jordan, who has suffered some abrasions, but has never been wounded in the line of duty.

"As far as the work, it can be dangerous. You never know how people are going to react to a traffic ticket. But I can't let it bother me to the point where I can't do my job."

Jordan said the only thing that she dislikes about her work are some people's attitudes — "not wanting to get involved — the 'I didn't see anything' syndrome," she said.

Jordan began as a patrol officer and has worked in the detective division and narcotics. As a detective she worked several child abuse cases, and said those were her least favorite. The only thing Jordan said she doesn't like to hear is when another police officer is hurt and needs help.

Fortunately for Jordan, few of the calls she's responded to have resulted in injury.

"A lot of calls can be dangerous. You don't always know what you're getting in to. But an average call turns out very well and nobody gets hurt," Jordan said.

suspected of participating in the protest movement were being told to write "reports" detailing their activities. The reports could be used against them, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The developments came two days after Communist Party leader Zhao Ziyang was reportedly stripped of power and placed under house arrest. Zhao's fall signaled a victory for China's 84-year-old leader, Deng Xiaoping, and other leaders who oppose political reform.

Zhao's ouster must be confirmed by a meeting of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, which is expected soon. Party officials from provinces and cities were gathering in Beijing to prepare for the meeting, sources said.

Sources said Zhao has been accused of heading an anti-party clique.

One diplomat referred to the clique as a "new Gang of Four," a reference to ultra-leftist radicals who ruled China during the last years of the Cultural Revolution of 1966-76. They were purged by Deng when he took power in 1978.

Included with Zhao are Politburo member Hu Qili, Vice Premier Tian Jiyun and Defense Minister Qin Jiwei, Chinese sources said.

Chinese and diplomatic sources said Qin used his influence to keep troops in Beijing from enforcing martial law, which Premier Li Peng announced May 20.

Millions of people have taken to the streets in defiance of martial law, and Beijing residents put up blockades to prevent troops from entering the city.

Students waiting Saturday at the Beijing railroad station to go home said they would bring their message out to the countryside.

"We have to tell the people to arise, including peasants, workers, intellectuals and others from every walk of life," said a 24-year-old student from Wuhan who asked not to be identified.

Another student, Yang Jianjun from the Liaoning Fuxing Institute of Mining and Technology in northeastern China, said he and fellow students might return to Beijing to demonstrate again.

Escapee's search on

NAVASOTA (AP) - Texas Department of Corrections officers used dogs Saturday to search for a prisoner who escaped from his job outside the Pack II Unit.

TDC spokesman David Nunnlee said that John Amonette, 25, was discovered missing about noon Saturday when the crew from a sewage plant went to lunch.

Amonette had been serving a four-year term for convictions on charges of theft of services in Lubbock and Hale Counties.

Coelho stepping down in major Democratic shakeup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Tony Coelho, the No. 3 Democrat in the House, said Saturday he will resign from Congress to spare himself and his party the ordeal of a protracted ethics investigation like the one that torched the career of Speaker Jim Wright.

The surprise announcement means House Democrats could be installing a totally revamped leadership team by the end of next week, with Thomas S. Foley of Washington the likely new speaker and several candidates vying for the next two posts of majority leader and majority whip.

The end appeared near to Wright's 2½-year reign as speaker — and perhaps his 34½-year career in the House — because of charges brought by the House ethics committee.

The Texas Democrat stands accused of arranging bulk sales of his book as a way to evade House limits on outside income and of taking gifts from a developer friend with an interest in legislation.

Wright's lawyers failed last week in an attempt to persuade the House ethics committee to drop at least some of the charges in exchange for the speaker's resignation. He was in seclusion this weekend, and the House leadership was preparing for him to deliver a resignation speech Wednesday.

Coelho, the current whip, began running for the post of majority leader last week when it became known that Wright was thinking about quitting.

However, Coelho was coming under increasing scrutiny because of his business dealings, including a deal where a California savings-and-loan official arranged and helped finance a junk bond investment.

A newspaper reported that a federal investigation had begun, and on Friday Common Cause, the group that lobbies for stricter government ethics, called on the House ethics committee to investigate Coelho's finances.

"I have simply spent too much time building the party and trying to help people to have my attention or abilities devoted to such distractions," Coelho said in a resignation statement that called the charges "needless and baseless."

Coelho said his colleagues had expressed confidence in him and he would have won the majority leader's race.

"Undoubtedly, some will think this decision was motivated by weakness in my political standing or my legal position. They are entitled to their opinion, but they are wrong," he said.

Coelho's statement, made available to news organizations, made no mention of it, but several legislators said privately that he had been admonished by others not to run for higher leadership. He would become more of a target, and further injure the party structure, they said.

Coelho, himself, remained out of public view on Saturday. His statement said the resignation is effective June 15 — his 47th birthday.

Even before Coelho dropped out, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri was being urged to challenge for the majority leader's post. With his friend Coelho out of the race, Gephardt began his campaign in earnest on Saturday.

Gephardt said he was "stunned" by Coelho's decision and praised the California congressman as "an extraordinarily able and effective leader."

Gephardt yielded a job in the Democratic leadership to run for president in 1988. He is now promising colleagues he will not run for president in 1992 if he wins the majority leader's job.

Meeks not elgible for parole for ten years

By KIMBALL PERRY
For The Big Spring Herald

With Tuesday's double murder conviction, Staff Sgt. Jeffrey L. Meeks will spend at least 10 years in the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., unless his automatic appeal overturns the verdict.

Because a unanimous verdict was not returned by the military jury, Meeks could not be given the death sentence. He did, however, receive life imprisonment, reduction in rank, forfeiture of pay and a dishonorable discharge.

Because he got a life sentence, Meeks cannot even be reviewed for parole until he serves 10 years of his sentence, said Janet Wray, Fort Leavenworth spokeswoman. And it routinely takes 10 years for the military appeal process to run its course unless the verdict is overturned in the first appeal, said Lt. Col. John Nix, Fort Benning's Deputy Staff Judge Advocate.

As the convening authority of the Meeks' court-martial, Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire, Fort Benning's commander, must approve the jury's decision and punishment before Meeks could be sent to Fort Leavenworth. If Spigelmire upholds the jury's findings, the case automatically will be appealed to the Court of Military Review. If the decision is upheld in that court, it is automatically reviewed to the Court of Military Appeals.

If upheld in that court, the case could then go through civilian courts, up to the Supreme Court, Ms. Wray said.

The Disciplinary and Adjustments Board of Fort Leavenworth hears a parole case after one-third of the sentence has been served. If a soldier is sentenced to life imprisonment, he is eligible for parole after 10 years, Ms. Wray said.

Sentences for soldiers who are not on death row range from "extremely hard time to isolation to parade units where individuals live in military-like barracks," said U.S. Army spokesman Lt. Col. Greg Rixon.

"Every inmate, unless they have a death sentence, is occupied in some way," said Ms. Wray, "they maintain the (post) golf course, bag groceries in the commissary, run the car wash, maintain the post, raise livestock, can get their General Equivalency Diplomas, learn shoe repair, upholstery, carpentry and plumbing."

The Disciplinary Barracks were founded in 1874 and hold inmates from the Army, Marines and Air Force. Navy officers are also imprisoned there, but the Navy has its own prison for enlisted soldiers.

Leavenworth is also the home of a federal penitentiary located adjacent to the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks.

Former chief wins disability claim

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

A former Big Spring Fire Chief was awarded an undisclosed amount in a disability claim by the state Firemen's Pension Commissioner Tuesday.

CARL DORTON

Former fire chief Carl Dorton won his second case against the Board of Trustees of the Firefighters Relief and Retirement Fund, which had sought to block Dorton's attempt to receive disability benefits.

"He simply can't perform as a firefighter any longer," Dorton's attorney Hardy Wilkerson said Wednesday. Wilkerson said Dorton was entitled to his firefighter's benefits because he had three back surgeries while serving on the fire department, all of which were the result of injuries in the line of public service.

In a 3-2 vote in July, the local board disapproved Dorton's pension request on the grounds that it wasn't proven to their satisfaction he was entitled to a disability claim.

Former board chairman Nolan Beall, former vice chairman and current chairman Paul Brown and trustee Steven Hedges — all members of the fire department — voted to deny Dorton's claim. Trustees Cotton Mize, former city mayor and Tom Ferguson, city finance director and board secretary — voted to approve the claim.

The panel, usually composed of seven members, was short by two members at the time because of resignations by the board's lay members.

City attorney Jean Shotts said Friday the board denied Dorton's claim because he took another job after he quit his job with the fire department, raising questions about the seriousness of his injuries.

Brown agreed. He said Saturday the board turned down Dorton's claim because "he wasn't eligible for it; he was still capable of doing his job as fire chief."

Asked if appeals by the board to Dorton's benefits entitlement claim were the result of conflicts between firefighters and the former chief, Brown replied, "Where did you hear that? That's kind of ludicrous . . . The pension is a legal matter."

Office politics would not enter into considerations about whether Dorton was entitled to his claim, he said.

Brown declined to speculate if the board would appeal. He said the matter is likely to be a topic of discussion at the next meeting of trustees for the relief and retirement board, scheduled for Tuesday. He did not know the meeting time.

If the board appeals the case, the next step will be to file suit in Travis County District Court, Wilkerson said.

Shotts said it isn't a question of whether Dorton will receive he pension, but if he will receive it now or 15 years from now.

Dorton, who served as a firefighter since 1973 and a fire chief since 1984, resigned from the fire department in June of 1988. He currently serves as Howard County 911 administrator.

Dallas jetliner hijacked

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban immigrant who escaped from a mental hospital tried to hijack an American Airlines jetliner to Cuba on Saturday, but he surrendered after the plane landed at Miami, authorities said.

The Boeing 727 carrying 157 passengers and crew en route from Dallas to Miami was diverted toward Cuba temporarily before heading back to its original destination. The hijacker was armed with a starter's pistol and two knives, but no one was injured.

He was identified as Pedro Rene Comas-Banos, 37, who came to the United States exactly nine years ago Saturday as part of the Mariel boatlift, said FBI agent William Gavin.

The suspect has a history of mental problems, most recently escaping from an institution in the Los Angeles area, Gavin said, adding that the date of that escape is not yet known.

Dressed in olive-drab fatigues and a bomber-type jacket, the sandy-haired Comas-Banos boarded an American Airlines flight in Los Angeles on Saturday morning and then transferred to the Miami-bound flight in Dallas, Gavin said.

"After the flight left the ground on its way to Miami, he produced a demand note and said he wanted to be taken to Havana," Gavin said. Speaking only Spanish, the hijacker told the flight crew he was carrying a bomb in his briefcase, which actually contained a starter's pistol used in track races, two pocket knives and a pair of scissors.

The pilot turned back toward Miami after reporting he didn't have enough fuel to get to Havana, which Gavin said was true. 'There was no bluff here this morning," Gavin said. The plane never entered Cuban airspace.

Ninety minutes after Flight 1098 parked in a remote corner of Miami International Airport, Comas-Banos allowed children to leave the jet and then gave himself up, Gavin said.

Azar new mayor of El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — Suzie Azar became the first woman mayor in El Paso history Saturday with a landslide victory over fellow city council member Ed Elsey in a runoff election.

"I'm thrilled to death. I'm ready to go to work," Mrs. Azar said. "117 years is a long time for El Paso to wait (for a woman mayor) and I'm glad they waited for me."

With all the votes counted, final, but unofficial totals showed that Mrs. Azar captured 65 percent of the votes to only 35 percent for Elsey. Mrs. Azar got 29,961 votes to 16,218 votes for Elsey.

"When you get a margin like 65 percent that's a mandate from the people that they're willing to work with you," Mrs. Azar said.

The new mayor faces problems posed by widespread poverty and rapid growth.

Senate approves state budget

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate on Saturday approved a $47.4 billion budget to run state government for the next two years, one that calls for no tax increase and represents a 12 percent increase in spending.

Sen. Kent Caperton, the Senate's chief budget writer, said the proposal was the best that could be done with limited state revenues.

"We can't really puff up our chests . . . but we don't have to hang our heads," the Bryan Democrat said.

House budget chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the House will consider the conference committee budget Sunday.

The budget calls for increased spending in all major areas of government — education, health and human services, criminal justice — but because of increased revenue projections and one-time bookkeeping maneuvers, the spending plan will not require a require a tax increase.

But Caperton said the state was running out of tricks — such as payment delays and fund transfers — to balance the budget.

Caperton and other senators said they wished they could have allocated more funds, but said they made an effort to invest funds in programs that will prevent future problems.

"I think we're beginning to understand that it's much more expensive to pay for problems that follow neglect and callousness," Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, said.

The budget represents a 12 percent increase from overall current spending and is 14.7 percent, or $3.6 billion more in general revenue, which are tax funds.

The budget calls for increasing public school spending by 6.4 percent, or $655 million, with $450 million of that going toward equalizing funding to poor school districts. Poor schools have sued the state, saying Texas' school financing method is discriminatory. The case is pending before the Texas Supreme Court.

In health and human services, lawmakers expanded Medicaid programs for the poor; raised the income eligibility requirements to qualify for Medicaid for nursing home care; and allocated $18.4 million for AIDS services, a $15 million increase from the last two-year budget appropriation.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said the AIDS funding was not as much as was needed to fight what he called "the plague of the 21st century" but represented a good start.

The budget calls for increasing criminal justice spending by 21 percent, or $1.8 billion for prison expansion and reforms to divert inmates from the state prison.

Senators briefly took Gov. Clements to task for not accepting a proposed cigarette tax increase that would have generated $440 million in state and federal funds.

Higher education faculty would receive a 5 percent increase for fiscal 1990

Veto comes to life

Veto.

A relatively new word enters the Big Spring political vocabulary.

Maxwell Green may make his tenure as mayor an interesting one, if his first weeks are any indication.

Although the new mayor, understandably, needs to adjust to the responsibilities of his office, he doesn't seem a bit shy in stepping forward and acting as he believes he should in the best interests of the city.

His decision to veto council action speaks loudly to a couple of issues.

The first is what he apparently perceives to be the confusion that prevailed in the Parks and Recreation Board's recommendation to the council. The ensuing council vote — of 5-1 — at Tuesday night's meeting repealed the $5-per-day camping fee at Comanche Trail Park.

The second, and much bigger issue, is Green's perception of the mayor's role on the Big Spring City Council. Treated in the past as a largely symbolic, conciliatory seat with equal voting rights, Green's attention to detail in regard to the city charter offers a wholly different perspective of the mayor's position.

Longtime observers of city business don't recall a time when the mayor issued a veto. In fact, a former city councilman admits — along with may others — that he didn't even realize the mayor possessed the right to veto council action.

This issue may grow a bit before it's settled, since the charter calls for a vote of four councilmembers to override a veto — a charter established at the time when there were four councilmembers besides the mayor. Now, at a time when there are six, the original intent is in question.

The question of whether the framers of the charter expected a unanimous vote to override a veto may require a court case. The city's legal counsel seems at a reasoned position: A judge has reviewed the charter since the council was expanded to seven members and until ordered otherwise, four is what is required.

A protracted, legal fight could prove cumbersome and we hope that will not be necessary. It's doubtful that Green's veto was cast toward that end.

Although the question of a slight fee for camper parking may seem a mild issue to stir such a stink, the principle has to be respected: Green did not believe the issue was clearly explained by those making the recommendation and his willingness to take such action on this matter to ensure reexamination shows spunk.

Gregg Street heat

It was hot in Big Spring last week, but the temperatures seemed even hotter on the south end of Gregg Street.

If you didn't notice, then you've avoided the construction efforts along Big Spring's prime thoroughfare.

Tempers were flaring there, intensified by extreme heat, as would-be travelers encountered work crews and stop signs — in places where they are not accustomed to either.

There has been at least one collision as a result, which is ironic when you consider that the thrust of the widening is to make Gregg Street a safer place to travel, and public pleas to take action to avoid more of the same are beginning to surface.

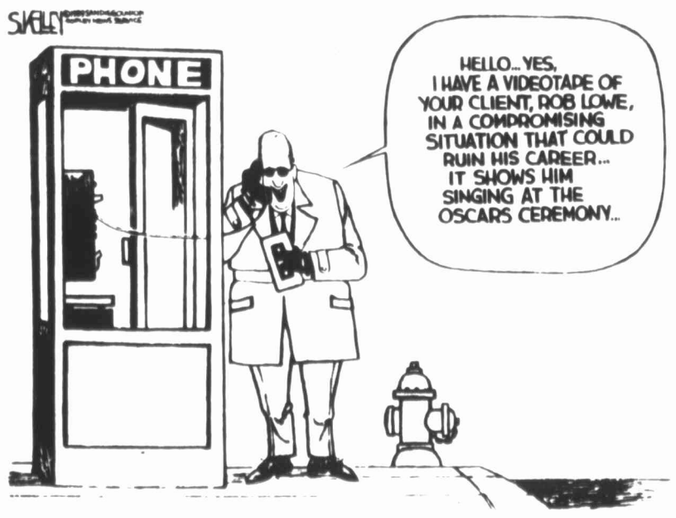

Is there a logical way to do so?

We face a long summer of construction on this street and everyone involved wants to avoid disruption of traffic and business for those whose livelihood is dependent on traffic to shops along Highway 87.

Nearly every one of those businesses is making provisions for customers to be able to reach their stores via side streets. While urging shoppers to patronize their businesses on Gregg Street, we do so by recommending that you travel Lancaster or Scurry to reach your destination.

It will benefit you, make travel safer and help allow construction workers to proceed with their duties.

This is a time when we need to give inconvenienced Gregg Street businesses all the support we can — and it's possible to do so while ensuring your own safety.

'Look out' on Gregg Street

Dear editor:

I am writing out of concern for drivers who travel Gregg Street frequently. Gregg Street has become more congested than usual because of the widening project by the Highway Department.

The intersection at 18th and Gregg Streets has become particularly hazardous due to the traffic signal being removed and the four-way stop signs being installed.

I passed an accident Thursday evening at the intersection and Friday, as I was taking my daughter to school, we almost became another accident statistic.

I was traveling east on 18th, made my stop and was proceeding into the intersection when a car, traveling south on Gregg Street at a high rate of speed, ran the stop sign without even a hint at having tried to stop. If I had been one foot farther into the intersection, we would have been hit and probably seriously injured.

There are signs on Gregg Street warning drivers of the upcoming stop signs — but it is obvious that these signs are either being ignored or unobserved by a number of drivers. If this situtation is not corrected, someone is going to be seriously injured or killed.

I understand Mr. Chetty's and the Highway Department's problems and headaches with this project and realize there is no way to avoid some small inconveniences. However, the four-way stop signs on Gregg Street are extremely ineffective, considering the volume of traffic on this major thoroughfare.

Before someone is seriously injured or killed, can't another solution be found? One literally is taking one's life into his own hands if you have to travel on Gregg Street.

I'm all for improving our city's streets — but at this price?

Couldn't this section of Gregg Street be monitored a little more thoroughly, using police radar to force drivers to control their speed?

Anything is better than nothing.

Thanks to merchants

To the editor:

The local square dance club had its 20th Annual Square and Round Dance Festival May 19 and 20. This festival was attended by 250 people from as far away as 100 miles, Lubbock to San Angelo, Abilene to Crane. Twenty six local merchants contributed gifts, which were drawn at random and presented to the dancers as door prizes during the two days. This good will speaks highly of our community spirit to the surrounding area. The Big Spring Squares express their thanks to these generous merchants who reflect that spirit and encourage the community to support our local business merchants in the same high spirit.

Soviet thoughts in Hill country

By JESSE TREVINO

A drive through the rain-cleared air of the Central Texas Hill Country seems an unlikely time to ponder U.S.-Soviet relations.

But heading west, with Fredericksburg only an hour away and images of hot German pastries dancing in my head, my thoughts turn to things German. And to West Germany, and the fight West Germany is having with the U.S. over the modernization of NATO's short-range nuclear missles in Europe.

That fight was brewed by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who has reminded the Germans of their continent's penchant for war. Perhaps the Germans are sensing the 30-year itch that is now overdue, and listen to Gorbachev because he offers some hope that Europe's periodic plunge into war will not be repeated.

Another war and no one will be left to surrender.

No one will march in a victory parade. An image of the damage a short-range missile could inflict on the fields around me interrupts my gaze.

This year's heavy spring rains have turned the fields green and the cows fat.

If Germany looks like this, perhaps some innate attraction to the Hill Country caused the Germans to settle an area that reminded them of their homeland. The German homeland has been a divided nation for 44 years.

Now, thanks to Gorbachev, the NATO alliance may be dividing as well. Gorbachev has made his country's vulnerability a political asset. For so long, the West was convinced it had to match the Soviets missile for missile.

Now, thanks to Gorbachev's publicizing Russia's problems, those attitudes seem to be changing, at least in parts of the West. Confusing thoughts, these.

My own personal feelings tell me it is no easy thing for a man who is a product of a history as long as Russia's to put forth the proposals Gorbachev is making.

Russian history has always inched along behind that of the West.

The country's immense size renders fast progress impossible, and the harsh Russian winter leaves too short a growing season for new ideas.

From time to time, enlightened Russian leaders such as Peter the Great have tried to include their country in the community of nations.

None has succeeded.

The winter always comes too soon, the new ideas are frozen solid and disappear under the Russian snows. The question of Gorbachev's possible insincerity may determine the ultimate danger he poses to the West.

But even if he is sincere, I think he, too, is doomed to failure.

Turning that massive country around must be like trying to turn an aircraft carrier.

The turn must be slow and grand.

It takes a long time to complete, and cannot be accomplished by the splashing about of one man with oar. The same thing is true of the recent events in China.

The electronic reporters were calling the million students in Beijing's central square a revolution.

Their protests may be something new, but not everything new is a revolution.

And could the Chinese and Russians patch up, as the press reported, their 30-year disagreement over the course of a three-day summit?

Isn't this all a bit hurried? I still remember being huddled around a scout campfire in West Texas, listening to John Kennedy's voice on the radio, challenging the Soviets over Cuba.

Despite Kennedy's victory, the Soviets forced him to abandon the Monroe Doctrine.

Kennedy won on the question of missiles, but the U.S. lost because our policy against European intervention in the western hemisphere was ended. Today, we do not have a man of Kennedy's stature in the White House. And the stature of the man in Moscow is far greater than that of Nikita Krushchev who history now teaches outsmarted Kennedy, although we choose to believe otherwise because a nuclear war was averted. Gorbachev will continue to grow in power and influence because he has no foil in Washington.

The world is changing, but not in the way glowing press reports from Moscow and Beijing would indicate.

Certainly we can disarm missles, and certainly we should seek peace.

But the Soviets have achieved a superiority in influencing the world's thinking, and that is unsettling. John Kennedy's ace in the hole during the Cuban missle crisis was much more than his own conviction.

When he danced the dance that took us to the brink of war, he enjoyed the certainty of having the world behind him. We don't have the world behind us today.

We are losing a fight we think we are winning simply because we think democracy and pluralism are arriving in the Soviet Union and China. Ahead, Fredricksburg looms, cleansed by the rains.

I dare not look in the rearview mirror.

That is the east behind me, and someone may be gaining.

To Texas from the Tiananmen

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
Publisher

"Like the Alamo without bullets."

That's Bob Lewis' description of the scene in Tiananmen Square in Beijing, China, where he and others are visiting in connection with a Rotary International convention in Seoul, South Korea.

Lewis — better known to Herald readers and other West Texans as "Tumbleweed Smith" — said his visit to the scene of the student occupation in Tiananmen Square "was a very moving moment, really something!"

Lewis, never one to sit back and simply observe, said in a telephone interview Saturday that he broke from his group and approached the tri-level monument that has been the center of the student's occupation.

Describing Tiananmen Square as the "biggest square in the world, capable of holding about two million people," Lewis said that he ascended the monument and had no difficulty in reaching the student leaders at its top.

"I asked if I could speak to the leaders. I told them that I had a tape recorder and I wanted to interview the student leaders. . . . I carried a Texas flag with me as well," he said.

He described the 50,000 to 60,000 demonstrators as "very peaceful, sleeping in makeshfit tents and on tarps and blankets." Asked if it was reminiscent of the demonstrations in the United States in the '60s, Lewis replied: "It was like the Alamo without bullets."

Among the surprises he discovered was the student leaders' lack of awareness that their demonstrations have been the focal point of the international media. "They are unaware that every newscast in the world and major headlines in the newspapers" are dealing with their story.

"They are not getting that from their media here," he said.

The students who have been deomonstrating in the city better known as Peking have only two objectives, Lewis said: Elimination of corruption within the Chinese government and freedom of the press.

This is no passing fancy for the students. Lewis said they seem quite sincere when they describe their willingness to "fight to the end . . . and give up their lives to see changes come about."

The Texas flag he carried remained behind when he left. Lewis said he offered the flag "to show the support" of the principles of democracy near the end of his interview with the students, "and they nearly cried. It was very emotional."

At that point, the Texan said, the student leader turned, unfurled the flag over the balcony's edge, commanded a loudspeaker and spoke to his fellow students in his native tongue. The result was a resounding cheer; Lewis flashed the victory sign and was swept with a strong sense of emotion, he said.

He was relaying his experiences from a hotel in Beijing — at 11 a.m. Saturday, Big Spring time and 1 a.m. Sunday there — where Lewis and his wife Susan had arrived three days earlier. Others from Big Spring on the trip include Charles and Joan Beil and Hayes and Dorothy Stripling, although the Lewises had not seen either couple since arriving in China.

Although aware of the turmoil in China at the time of their trip, Lewis said "we were not prepared for the experience we've had."

"It's been a moving experience — a deep one. Most everyone has gone to the square. I wouldn't be here without visiting the square."

They reached Beijing via Hong Kong after their visit to Seoul. Although Seoul and Beijing are geographically close, direct airflight from Seoul to China is not allowed, he said.

The Lewises are to arrive in Big Spring Thursday after one more day in Beijing and another day in Hong Kong. Their return trip includes a flight to Los Angeles and visit to San Francisco.

The students' dedication to their cause resulted in one Texas-sized observation from Bob in Beijing: "If there was somebody here with a T-shirt distributorship that proclaimed 'Democracy, Beijing '89'," he said, it would be a sellout for sure.

Nancy Reagan just says no

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Citing concerns of residents fearful of crime and addicts in their neighborhoods, former first lady Nancy Reagan just said no to plans for a drug rehabilitation center that would bear her name.

Mrs. Reagan cited local concerns for her decision to abandon the $10 million Nancy Reagan Center for Drug Rehabilitation, a spokesman said Friday.

"There is a God. I'm on the verge of tears," said Lew Snow, vice president of the Lake View Terrace Homeowners Association, the group opposing the center. "I think it shows you can beat city hall.

"Despite all the pressures that people with money and power can put on a mixed community of all races and incomes, they can still pull together to defend themselves and win."

Residents of the rustic Lake View Terrace neighborhood 20 miles northwest of downtown had objected to the drug treatment center, claiming it could bring crime to the neighborhood and traffic jams when Mrs. Reagan visited it.

Phoenix House, which operates 10 drug treatment centers nationwide, said Mrs. Reagan's decision to withdraw ended its efforts to take over the closed Lake View Terrace Medical Center, but indicated another San Fernando Valley location would be sought to bear Mrs. Reagan's name.

Investigators seek cause of blow up

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Nearly 300 people were kept from their homes Saturday while investigators tried to find out why an underground gasoline pipeline blew up in the same spot where a train derailed two weeks earlier.

Ten homes were destroyed and five were damaged in the eight-hour fire. Seventy homes were evacuated, and Ms. Joyner said it was unclear when the 270 displaced people would be be allowed to return home.

The death toll from official sources has fluctuated, rising to three, then reduced to two. On Saturday the city police spokeswoman said there were three dead: a woman, another adult and a child. But Deputy Coroner Jim Sedgwick said as far as he knew the San Bernardino County coroner's office had received two bodies.

The explosion occurred just days after experts assured city officials and residents that the Calnev Pipe Line Co.'s underground 14-inch pipeline had escaped damage from the May 12 train wreck.

The Southern Pacific freight train flew off curving tracks atop an embankment and smashed a row of homes on Duffy Street. Two trainmen and two boys in a home were killed. The train fell atop the ground where the pipe is buried.

The cause of the blast remained under investigation, but Calnev manager Ken Seal has said the pipe might have been damaged by the wreck.

Astronaut wrote his own words

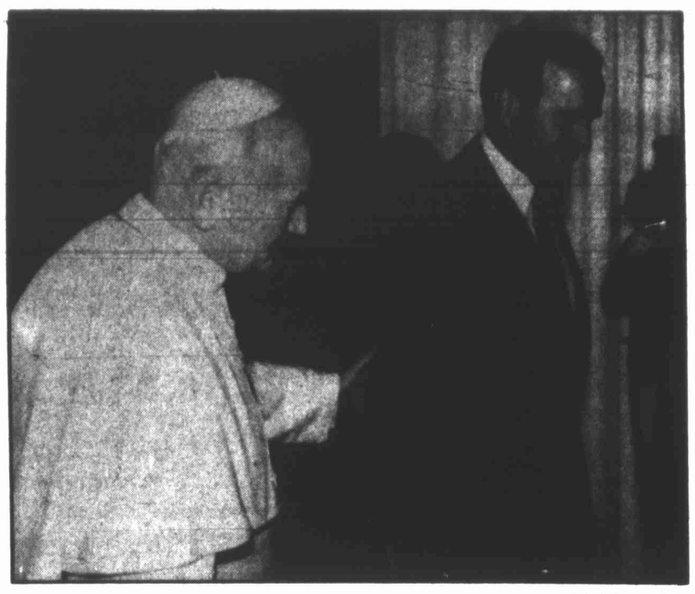

WASHINGTON (AP) — For nearly 20 years, space buffs have wondered who composed the words "That's one small step for a man" which Neil Armstrong said when he stepped on the moon.

Now, with the one-score anniversary coming up July 20, Armstrong says that not only were those words his own, but that he composed them on the spot.

Armstrong, commander of the Apollo 11 moon mission, was reunited with his two crew mates for a news conference Friday to satisfy requests for interviews in connection with celebrations planned across the world to mark the event.

He was asked when exactly he decided on the words "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind," which he said after climbing down the ladder on the lunar lander.

"It was a statement that was natural in the sense of the time," Armstrong said. "I thought about it after we got there."

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II leads the way for President Bush to his private study Saturday for talks.

Bush assures pope of disarmament progress

VATICAN CITY (AP) — President Bush assured Pope John Paul II on Saturday that the United States is making progress to reduce armaments and is committed to helping spur economic and political reforms in the pontiff's homeland and elsewhere across Eastern Europe.

The pope, after nearly an hour of private talks with Bush in the papal library, praised the American president's commitment "to liberate the youth of America from the destructive forces of drug abuse" and to alleviate poverty.

The pope called for renewed efforts to battle the "moral crisis" afflicting society all over the world.

A senior Vatican official, who requested anonymity, said the sweeping changes in communist Eastern Europe and the civil war in Lebanon were the main themes of the private talks between the two men.

"While we are still far from realizing the Biblical injunction to turn our swords into plowshares, we have made progress in reducing armaments, and in decreasing the threat of war," Bush told the pope.

Turning to the civil war in Lebanon, Bush said, "We've heard your eloquent appeals for an end to the violence in Lebanon, and my heart, too, aches for the people of that once peaceful land."

The Vatican visit came near the end of the first full day of Bush's trip, which takes him to Brussels on Sunday for a summit with NATO allies divided over how best to proceed on arms talks with the Soviet Union.

As a Pole and head of a church that plays an important role in eastern Europe, John Paul has an unusual vantage from which to offer advice on the changes taking place in the region.

Both the pope and the president recalled passages from Bush's inauguration speech. The pope approved Bush's declaration that the only proper use of power is to serve people, and Bush said anew that "a new breeze is blowing" across the world and bringing greater freedom.

"May God bless America, and make her strong in her defense of human dignity and in her service to life," including the life of "the weakest and most defenseless ones, those as yet unborn," the pope said, repeating an anti-abortion plea he also made at the end of his last U.S. pilgrimage

Moslems clash with London police

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of Moslems on Saturday fought among themselves and clashed with police during a march to demand Britain change its blasphemy laws and allow them to challenge "The Satanic Verses" in court.

Police said 84 people were arrested and six policemen were injured during the march, most in street battles in front of the Houses of Parliament.

An estimated 20,000 demonstrators waved banners denouncing author Salman Rushdie and shouted slogans such as "Rushdie must die."

An effigy of Rushdie hanging from gallows was thrust high into the air. Rushdie, a British author, wrote "The Satanic Verses," a novel that some say is insulting to Islam.

Britain's rarely used blasphemy law makes it illegal only to insult the Christian state Church of England. Moslems want it extended to reflect Britain's multi-ethnic society, saying this would give them legal grounds for opposing "The Satanic Verses."

Soviet congress rejects reformers

MOSCOW (AP) — The new Soviet congress dealt reformists a major setback Saturday by rejecting maverick Boris Yeltsin and several other prominent reformers who were seeking seats on the powerful Supreme Soviet.

Thousands of Yeltsin supporters gathered in Moscow to protest the election results, and reformers in congress vowed to form an opposition bloc to challenge the ruling Communist Party.

The furor was set off when the 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies chose which of its members would serve on the new Supreme Soviet, a full-time, 542-seat legislature.

Congressional deputies voted Friday to fill the Supreme Soviet seats from among 573 candidates chosen by congress deputies from their home regions. The results were announced Saturday.

In secret balloting for the Supreme Soviet, congressional deputies elected a number of reform advocates from the tiny Baltic republics, whose representatives nominated only as many candidates as they had seats.

OAS mission to Panama fails

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A delegation from the Organization of American States left Panama on Saturday after four days of futile talks aimed at finding a solution to Panama's political crisis.

The delegates indicated they would ask that another OAS mission travel to Panama soon for additional talks with Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and the political forces trying to oust him.

Noriega, who blames the United States for Panama's troubles, told the mission it was up to the political parties to sit down and negotiate. Opposition leaders insisted Noriega must negotiate because he is the real power in Panama.

The OAS sent the mission, headed by Secretary-General Joao Baena Soares, to seek a solution to the impasse created by the annullment of the elections. International observers say Noriega's hand-picked candidate, Carlos Duque, lost to Endara.

The Panamanian government claimed the United States interfered openly in favor of the opposition by providing financial assistance and by repeatedly calling for the ouster of Noriega, the Defense Forces chief and the power behind the government.

Washington obtained a public condemnation of Noriega from the OAS, which also blamed Noriega for post-election violence, including attacks on the opposition candidates.

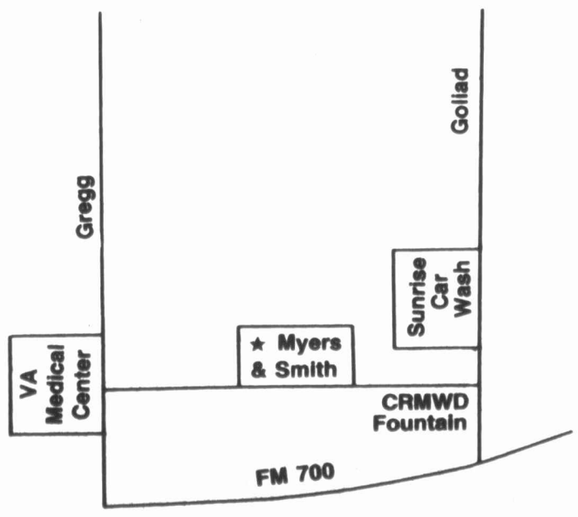

The OAS delegates will submit a full report on their mission to the OAS, which must decide what to do next.

Noriega has been indicted in the United States on drug trafficking charges, but he denies the allegations and says Washington wants him out of power.

Blacks, Hispanics demand resignation of Clements aide

AUSTIN (AP) — Black and Hispanic lawmakers Saturday demanded the resignation of Gov. Bill Clements' top legal adviser, saying they are convinced the aide said he didn't want more minorities serving on big city juries.

Clements and the aide, general counsel Rider Scott, denied that the statement was made to Rep. Rick Crawford.

But Crawford, R-Amarillo, told a news conference that Scott had made the statement about Crawford's bill to expand pools of potential jurors by using drivers license lists rather than voter registration lists.

"Rider Scott said, 'I do not want any more minorities serving on juries in Dallas and Houston,' " Crawford told reporters. "I was appalled . . . And he wouldn't be working on my staff, I'll tell you that."

Asked if he might have misunderstood Scott, Crawford replied: "There is absolutely no motivation that I could possibly have to be making this up . . . What he said is what I quoted."

News reports about the statement, which Crawford said was made in April, surfaced this week. That prompted the Legislature's black and Mexican-American caucuses to demand Scott's ouster.

"It's a reflection of the governor's office. It makes us feel like second-class citizens. It is hard to believe, in this day and age, that the governor of the state of Texas would have someone that is insensitive to the rights of our minority citizens," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen.

"It is unfortunate. But we've been forced to take this course of action. The chief legal adviser to the governor of this state cannot reflect such an attitude," said Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston.

Scott, a former Dallas County prosecutor, subsequently issued a statement to say he did have questions about the bill — but those related to the possibility that the bigger jury lists could include felons, teens under age 18, illegal aliens and others not qualified to be jurors.

"I respect Rep. Crawford, but obviously there is a misunderstanding about my initial concern over the bill. I have devoted my life to creating a fair and equitable criminal justice system that serves all the people of this state," Scott said.

"I deeply regret any and all implications of the last few days, and if any offense has been taken I sincerely apologize," Scott said.

Clements signed Crawford's jury bill last week.

But the governor, who has been dogged by questions about Scott's alleged statement, sought to downplay the growing political controversy.

"I'm not going to try to get to the bottom of anything. I don't know anything about it. I've asked Rider and he has absolutely denied that he said anything like that. As far as I'm concerned, that is the end of it — lock, stock and barrel," Clements said.

But Evans, Hinojosa and other minority lawmakers voiced anger.

"We are convinced that, in fact, the statement was made. The failure to act in regard to this issue . . . would be an affirmation of the statements made by Mr. Scott," Evans said.

"For those of us who have worked with Rider Scott in the past know that he has been insensitive not only to the rights of minorities but also to the rights of women," Hinojosa charged.

Senate OKs legislative pay proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate voted Saturday to place on a November statewide ballot a proposal to tie legislators' salaries to that of the governor, a plan which would triple paychecks for lawmakers.

Related stories: 10-A

The proposed constitutional amendment was approved 21-7, and was returned to the House with an amendment.

If accepted by the House, voters on Nov. 7 would be asked to decide whether lawmakers — who now get $7,200 a year plus some expense money — should be paid one-fourth of the governor's salary, which would be $93,432 under a budget proposal before the Legislature.

The House speaker and lieutenant governor, who now draw the same as lawmakers, would make one-half the governor's salary.

Under current proposals, that would mean a $23,358 annual paycheck for lawmakers and $46,716 for the speaker and lieutenant governor, beginning in 1991.

A separate ballot proposal would tie the daily stipend paid to lawmakers while in session to the federal income tax deduction for travel to Austin on business. At the current level, that would mean a raise in per diem from $30 to $81, the maximum allowed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, noted that legislators had not had a pay raise since 1975, and the $7,200 they make a year in "real dollars" is now worth $3,300. The per diem, he said, has dropped in "effective purchasing power" from $30 to $14

"We make less than the proposed congressional minimum wage," Barrientos said.

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said the Legislature might be tempted in the years ahead to pay the governor "close to what they pay the football coach at Texas A&M or other great schools."

"Do you really believe that this body would ever pay the governor of the state of Texas what the coach at A&M makes?" Barrientos said.

The Senate amendment by Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, provides that no law changing legislative salaries could take effect until a general election had intervened.

She said this means that if the Legislature raised the governor's salary, the corresponding increase for lawmakers would not occur until a general election had taken place.

Dredging responsibile for erosion at refuge

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers report acknowledges that its dredging of the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway has contributed to extensive erosion at a coastal wildlife refuge that is habitat for the endangered whooping crane.

"More than 90 acres (of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge) have been washed away" since the waterway opened in 1949, said Ken Bonham of the Corps of Engineers district office in Galveston.

Bonham said up to three feet of bank line at the marshy refuge are eroding each year, caused by a combination of wave action from traffic on the waterway and exposure to open areas of bay waters.

The assessment began last January in response to a lawsuit threatened by the National Audubon Society and the Coastal Bend Audubon Society. The organizations said they would sue the Corps of Engineers for failure to comply with the Endangered Species Act by not curbing the erosion.

While the corps was conducting the study, the conservationists could not sue, said Lori Potter of the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund Inc. in Denver. Ms. Potter is attorney for the Audubon groups.

"At this point," she told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, "we're going to watch very closely to see what the Fish and Wildlife Service does to solve the problem. The main significance for us so far has been that the corps finally acknowledges that their dredging has an impact on the habitat."

The assessment was conducted by comparing aerial photographs of the refuge taken in the 1950s to those taken in 1986.

Under federal law, the corps now must consult with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on how to prevent or reduce harm to the cranes' habitat, Bonham said.

The wildlife service has 90 days in which to recommend to the corps how the dredging of the waterway could be altered.

There are only about 200 whooping cranes in existence. Most of the whoopers winter at or near the 54,829-acre refuge.

A changing China: Ideology accommodating reality

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Ideology is not rigid. It is not dogma. Sooner or later it must accommodate reality, a process seldom undertaken without difficulty and controversy.

That observation was made several years ago by Prof. George Lodge in "The American Disease," a book about the transformation of American capitalism, but it fits neatly with what is occurring in China.

Values may persist from generation to generation, but ideology must accommodate change, Lodge said. Sometimes it doesn't; outmoded ideology tends to linger, while people and institutions depart from it in pragmatic ways.

"Eventually, we can no longer practice what we preach, and we are not yet able to preach what we practice," said Lodge, who teaches at Harvard Business School.

The result: An ideological schizophrenia. New practices bring forth a new ideology to justify itself, but loyalty to old ways discourages articulation. A legitimacy gap develops. The old hymns are still sung, but practices change.

As the gap widens, two conflicting pressures converge, one seeking to force errant institutions back into conformity with the old theology and the other seeking more forceful expression of the new ideology.

What China and the entire socialist world are experiencing is probably nothing new when viewed in this context, except perhaps in the sharpness of the convergence. How do you erect monuments to Marx and ignore him too?

Lodge's book, written in 1984, was an attempt to describe how the two great political ideologies of individualism and communitarianism interact in a changing America, one that casually identifies itself as capitalistic.

But, as he and others have pointed out, raw individualism in the United States has been muted by the necessities of community interests, and now in China and other socialist nations, individualism forces communism to evolve.

In the United States, change was anticipated and institutions erected to make change peaceful. And in a century of slow but constant change, capitalism has evolved into something vastly different from what it was.

Thirty-eight years ago, William I. Nichols, editor of "This Week" magazine, wrote an article called "Wanted: A New Name for 'Capitalism.'" He felt that in too many people's minds, especially the minds of foreigners, "it stand for the primitive economic system of the nineteenth century."

How, he asked, shall we describe this system — "imperfect, but always improving, and always capable of further improvement — where men move forward together, working together, building together, producing always more and more and sharing together the rewards of their increased production?"

As told by Frederick Lewis Allen in his social history, "The Big Change," Nichols had heard various suggestions, such as "the new capitalism" or "democratic capitalism," "economic democracy," "industrial democracy," "distributism," "mutualism," and "productivism."

Could there be a more descriptive name, he wondered, and so he asked his readers. He got 15,000 responses.

But, just as a China experimenting with individualism may continue to sing the hymns of communism, the United States is still referred to as capitalist America.

Mastertec Services owner Gary Mowers has announced that his independent Xerox Copier repair business will be expanding its Services in Big Spring. Mastertec Services will be providing service on Xerox, Toshiba, Ricoh, 3M, Pitney Bowes and other major brands of copiers.

Mowers said he expects the need for a qualified independent guaranteed copier service will continue to grow in the Big Spring market.

Mowers worked for Xerox Corporation for 12 years in Houston as a technician and manager. Prior to starting Mastertec in 1985 he was service manager for an office equipment dealership for four years.

Other technicians working with Mastertec are service manager Daniel Helm and Xerox specialist Danny Willard. Willard spent many years in Big Spring servicing Xerox copiers prior to relocating to San Angelo.

A new producer with excellent downhole pressures has been completed in Glasscock County's SFM Field, about 17 miles northwest of Garden City.

Sun Exploration of Midland is the operator.

Sun's No. 1 So. O. Woody "B" flowed 746,000 CF natural gas per day on flowing tubing pressurfe of 2,415 PSI.

The absolute open flow was calculated to be an even 8,000,000 CFD. Sun bottomed the well at 10,348 feet and perforated the Strawn Formation for production at 10,130 to 10,348 feet into the wellbore.

Plug-and-abandon orders have been issued for an unsuccessful developmental well in Glasscock County's C&C Field, about four miles east of Garden City. Designated as the No. 1 Kohl, the well was spudded on Oct. 18 and bottomed at a depth of 10,080 feet with no commercial shows. Davis and Carr Energy of Midland is the operator.

Borden County

Pumping 107 barrels of oil per day plus 30,000 CF casinghead gas, the No. 3 Wolf is the newest producer in Borden County's Reinecke East Field.

The well was brought on line by Sharp Image Energy of Big Spring in a lease about 19 miles southeast of Gail.

Sharp Image took the hole to total depth of 7,150 feet and plugged it back to 6,370. Production will be from a perforated interval in the Leonard Limestone, 5,516 to 5,552 feet into the hole.

Martin County

First production figures have been posted for the No. 1 Scharbauer, a developmental bid in Martin County's portion of the Spraberry Trend.

Parker and Parsley Petroleum of Midland is the operator.

Drillsite was 20 miles west of Lenorah.

On an open choke, the well showed ability to pump 61 barrels of 39-gravity crude per day along with 59,000 CF casinghead gas. Water production totaled 150 barrels daily.

The well was drilled to a 9,700-ft. bottom and will produce from Dean and Spraberry perforations ranging from 8,061 to 9,591 feet into the hole.

STANTON — Stanton High School held commencement exercises for the Class of 1989 at the football stadium Friday night. At right, the graduates-to-be prepare to file into the stadium. Group is designing newspaper network

McKINNEY (AP) — Tucked away in offices across the street from the Collin County Courthouse in McKinney, a handful of individuals are laying the groundwork for an ambitious satellite network designed to link newspapers across the United States and Canada.

McKinney-based Newspaper Satellite Network, scheduled to go on the air in early September, will join a growing field of more than 50 other private business networks already tapping the potential benefits of satellite technology.

However, NSN will fill a unique niche, offering training, education and motivation telecasts to newspapers in North America. "We think it is going to revolutionize the training and education industry within the newspaper industry itself," said Phillip D. Russell, 40, founder of NSN.

NSN, with a staff of five, is a subsidiary of Newstar Communications Inc., a privately-held company formed in January. Prior to that time, Russell had worked for about a year on a business plan for NSN.

Russell has an equity interest in the venture along with other investors, and he acknowledges that pulling together a successful satellite network requires significant start-up costs.

"The costs are substantial. There's no doubt about it," he said. "But we think in the long run, it's definitely going to justify itself."

Russell, a McKinney resident, says NSN has already finished, or is in the process of completing, programs for its subscribers at an Allen production facility on topics such as co-op advertising and selling against competitive media.

By the time NSN goes on the air, the network is projected to have more than 100 initial subscribers. Although the industry is relatively narrow, Russell said, more than 1,600 daily newspapers currently operate in the United States and Canada.

"We know we need to do a better job in the newspaper industry of training and educating employees. The problem is the approach has been sporadic from corporate, or upper management, in the training area," said Russell.

NSN is charging subscribers an up-front affiliation fee along with a monthly subscription fee for its services.

Analysts: OPEC likely to resist pressure

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Upward pressure on oil prices likely will be met with stiff resistance from OPEC when the overseas oil cartel meets in Vienna June 5, analysts say.

OPEC will make a concerted effort to raise production quotas, thus putting more oil on the market and lowering the price to perhaps $18 a barrel or less by the end of the summer, said David Bodin, associate coordinator of energy markets and strategy for the Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Paris, France.

The move would dash domestic producers' hopes of a continuing, major turnaround for the U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude price, currently in the $19-$20 range.

Chances are reduced for significantly higher production and continued dramatic increases in U.S. profit potential.

The development of new reserves critical to the future of the domestic petroleum industry continues to be in jeopardy, said Bill Carl, president of Carl Oil and Gas in Corpus Christi.

"We can produce existing oil and gas at $18 a barrel, but there aren't too many exploration plays or development plays that are attractive at $18. In other words, we can't replace our reserves at $18," Carl said.

With a $40-billion oil trade imbalance already, a $200-billion trade imbalance will be reached by the turn of the century if the current pace of oil imports continues, he said.

He called it unacceptable that half the nation's oil is imported.

Spot prices for West Texas Intermediate, the U.S. benchmark crude, were as low as the $12-$13 dollar range only last fall.

But analysts predict a short life for the runup attributed to rising demand, diminished refinery capacity, a major North Sea oil rig explosion and the Alaskan tanker spill this spring.

"We certainly aren't looking at $25 a barrel for West Texas (Intermediate)," said Joyce Yanchar, analyst for Data Resources in Lexington, Mass.

More and more people have car phones these days. These devices put the power executive in constant contact, enable salespeople to stay in touch with their offices, even help real estate brokers make timely appointments with clients. But car phones should not be abused.

The first responsibility of a driver is to drive safely. Don't make a call while driving; pull over to the shoulder or into a parking area, put the car in park, and then call.

If a call comes in while you're driving, pull off the road, or ask the caller if you can return the call when road conditions allow.

Consider installing a speaker microphone in your phone system. These are usually installed on the visor so that you can talk on the phone and still keep both hands on the wheel.

Don't make long calls from your car. Even off the road, parked on the shoulder, you may be at risk from passing traffic.

Group tries to preserve Route 66

WASHINGTON, Ill. (AP) — A group of nostalgic Illinoisans with fond memories of two-lane blacktops and cruising on country roads is trying to rally support for the historical preservation of a highway.

But they're not trying to save just any piece of asphalt with white lines and gravel shoulders.

This group wants to preserve and commemorate the legendary U.S. Route 66, which was wiped off Illinois maps in 1976 upon completion of Interstate 55 and erased nationwide in 1985. More than half of the old roadway is gone, while other pieces exist as local stretches of road.

"You'd be surprised how many people have a love affair with that old road," said Mike Yates, one of the group's leaders. "But there's a lot of people out there who have strong feelings about Route 66 and what it represents."

To Yates and about 35 other people scattered around the state, Route 66 represents a bygone era of small towns bustling with business created by travelers funneled down Main Street by the nation's highways.

"Many people associated Route 66 with freedom, opportunity, adventure and romance," said another organizer, Tom Teague of Springfield. "It was the epitome of the open road."

Yates fondly remembers small motels, roadside hamburger joints, shade-tree mechanics and others who made a living in rural America thanks to highway traffic.

"Route 66 really was Main Street, U.S.A.," Yates said. "It was the 'mother road,' as Steinbeck called it, that carried people west from Chicago to all the way to the shores of the Pacific Ocean at Santa Monica, Calif. It was an important road for Americans traveling by car."

According to the book "Route 66, a Photographic Essay," Route 66 was formed in 1926 when 2,448 miles of existing and new roads were connected to establish a link between Chicago and the West Coast.

It was dubbed the "gateway to the west" and linked eight states and such cities as St. Louis; Tulsa, Okla., and Oklahoma City; Amarillo, Texas; Albuquerque, N.M.; and Flagstaff, Ariz., on its way to the Los Angeles basin.

"I remember driving on Route 66 near Springfield a few years ago," Teague said. "The road was dipping and curving in topographical rhythm. It caressed the geography instead of bulling it over like the interstates do. Route 66 had character."

The popular song about Route 66, ("Oklahoma City looks oh, so pretty.... Get your kicks on Route 66.") added to its appeal, as did the 1960s television show featuring two men in a sports car who experience carefree adventures on Route 66.

"That's always been in the back of my mind — just taking off down the highway," Yates said. "That's part of the attraction."

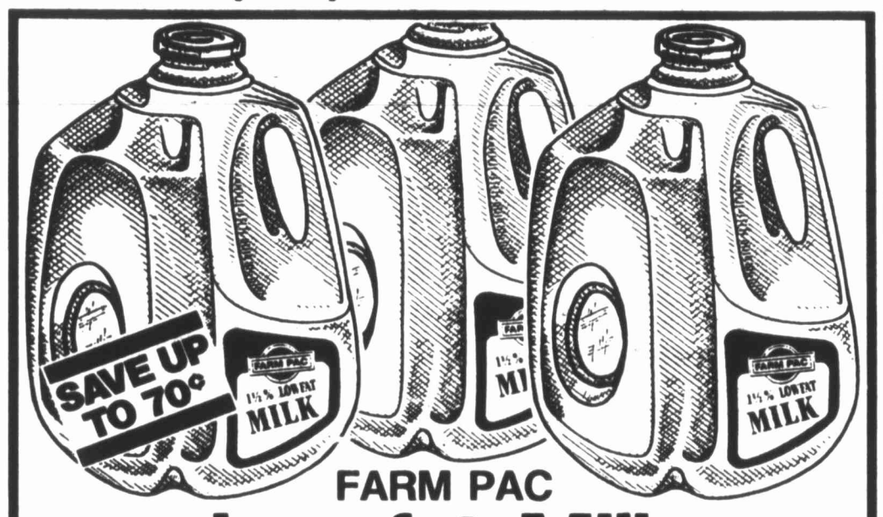

Yates and Teague are trying to form a Route 66 Association of Illinois. Two preliminary meetings have attracted three dozen people interested in preserving and enjoying the estimated 1,000 miles of remaining highway.

They are supporting a resolution before Congress to authorize a study of the feasibility of preserving what's left of the road and naming it a national scenic highway. And Teague wants Illinois lawmakers to follow the example of their Arizona counterparts, who rededicated a 158-mile stretch of the old Route 66 in 1988.

"They wrote a song about this road and sang 'you can get your kicks on Route 66.' I can't imagine anyone singing 'you can shuck and jive on I-55.' It just doesn't have the same appeal," Teague said.

Legislative briefs

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, right, and Sen. Bob Glasgow, who has the chair, watch as Sen. Carlos Truan uses a tactic to delay action on a bill regarding taxation of in-transit good which he opposes.

Dropout drivers bill passes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate completed legislative action Friday on a bill to reduce the Texas student dropout rate by requiring those under 18 to be in high school or graduated to obtain a driver's license.

A dropout under 18 could obtain a license, however, if he or she had been enrolled for at least 45 days in a program to pass the high school equivalency exam for a diploma.

The theory behind the bill is that not being allowed to drive until age 18 would motivate students to stay in school.

Currently, one of every three high school students in Texas drops out before graduation.

Opponents of the bill have argued that the bill would all but preclude students who have left school from getting a job.

The House-approved bill cleared the Senate on voice vote, without debate, and was sent to the governor.

Open record bill dies before vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation that would have made government records more accessible to the public died under House rules when the stroke of midnight arrived before it could get a vote.

But the sponsor said Saturday that Gov. Bill Clements' opposition, not the rules, was the killer.

"I understand the need for the rules. What I don't understand is the governor's unwillingness to try and negotiate and try to work out an acceptable agreement," Rep. Orlando Garcia, D-San Antonio, said.

Gov. Bill Clements' office had indicated he had reservations about the measure and probably would have vetoed it, Garcia said.

The bill died because of the 72-hour rule. Bills failing to get initial House approval 72 hours before the end of the regular session are sent to legislative oblivion. The session ends at midnight Monday.

Garcia's bill came up for consideration before the full House just a few minutes before midnight. Rep. Randy Pennington, R-Houston, delayed consideration of the measure with a parliamentary question.

AUSTIN (AP) — The last stand of the Texas Indian Commission ended in defeat Saturday, when the House refused to approve an amendment to an unrelated bill that would have continued the agency another two years.

Lawmakers against the proposal argued that the commission — the modern version of similar bodies dating back to the first days of the Republic of Texas — has outlived its usefulness.

"This amendment is continuing an agency that has no function," said Rep. Jack Vowell, R-El Paso, who opposed the measure by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston.

Wilson's amendment followed previous votes in the Senate and a House committee to keep the Indian Commission. But Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, had prevented a "sunset" bill on the agency from being voted on by the full House.

That bill, if it had been approved by the full House and signed by Gov. Bill Clements, would have continued the three-member commission another 12 years.

The Sunset Commission staff, which reviews whether agencies should be continued, recommended the Indian Commission be discontinued because the federal government was taking over responsibilities of the reservations.

Gibson said the Indian Commission would have cost taxpayers $6 million over the next 12 years.

Watered-down pickup bill rejected

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate on Saturday refused to accept House amendments that watered-down a proposal to prohibit children from riding in the back of pickup trucks.

"We'd like to clean up the potential for child abuse that the House has left us," said Sen. Carl Parker, who authored the bill.

Parker's bill would have made it illegal for children to the ride in the beds of pickup trucks. He said the practice was dangerous.

The House approved the bill, but added amendments that would exempt families whose only vehicle was a pickup and would allow children in the back of pickups if the vehicle was going below 40 mph.

The Senate appointed five senators to hammer out differences in the bill with House members in conference committee.

Health bill's future uncertain

AUSTIN (AP) — A rural health care bill sent to Gov. Bill Clements by lawmakers faced an uncertain fate Saturday because of Clements' concern about a provision to make the state pay for some malpractice claims.

"Obviously, the governor is a staunch supporter of rural health care, and he wants the strongest rural health care legislation possible," said Jay Rosser, deputy press secretary to Clements.

"He does, however, have serious reservations about the indemnification provisions of the bill, which could amount to a taxpayer nightmare. Certainly that provision will be reviewed very, very carefully by our office," Rosser said.

Under the bill's indemnification plan, the state would cover the first $100,000 of malpractice awards related to obstetrical and emergency care, and the first $25,000 for other types of care.

The provision would apply only to doctors who contribute more than 10 percent of their practice to charity care.

The bill, among other items, also would establish a center for rural health initiatives, and a health professions resource center, at the Department of Health; address the transfer of patients between hospitals; and emphasize rural health care in state medical schools.

Rep. Mike McKinney, bill sponsor, won House approval of Senate changes in the bill to send it to the governor.

The Senate added the indemnification plan and took out a provision that would make it more difficult to patients who receive emergency care to bring malpractice lawsuits. It also removed a provision that limited liability at $250,000 for non-economic losses in suits brought after the delivery of a child to a woman on Medicaid.

Duke's son objects to seeing dad in lipstick

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The Duke in lipstick?

That's the way John Wayne was depicted on a greeting card, wearing a cowboy hat and bright, red lips. The message inside was about being homosexual.

"We find it repugnant," said Michael Wayne, the oldest of John Wayne's seven children.

Wayne is one of a host of relatives of dead celebrities who want the state of New York to give them exclusive rights to the names and images of famous family members. The relatives testified Monday at a legislative hearing.

A proposal before the Legislature would require the commercial media, artists and others who want to use the dead celebrity's persona to get permission. It would be up to the relative to decide how much the user would have to pay.

The exclusive rights would last 50 years after the celebrity's death. Violations would be a misdemeanor.

Nine other states, including California, have such laws. But in the nation's publishing and media center, Madison Avenue has free rein when it comes to using dead celebrities as pitchmen.

"The public that admired him has a right to have his public image protected, and who better to protect it than his family?" Wayne said of his Oscar-winning father.

"It's not fair that just anybody can walk up and take your relative's name and twist it around and do any kind of thing they want to do," added Ilsis Nicole Holiday, sister of jazz singer Billie Holiday.

Holiday objected to what she considered a false portrayal of her sister in the Diana Ross movie "Lady Sings the Blues."

Also at the hearing were Robyn Astaire, Fred Astaire's widow; Julia Ruth Stevens, daughter of Babe Ruth, and Everett Fields, grandson of W.C. Fields. They brought out books, posters and trinkets that contained their relatives' images.

Opponents of the proposal argued that it would impinge on First Amendment rights to free expression. One opponent charged that celebrity relatives were out to do some exploitation of their own.

Authorities doubt building boom alone can ease prison jam

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. prison system is like a stopped up pipe. Built to contain a stream of criminals, the plumbing is overflowing.

Spillover inmates end up in tents in Florida and on surplus troop barges in New York City. In Texas, POW-style camps may be built.

Some states have installed jury-rigged emergency valves to free prisoners ahead of their time. But last year, when courts freed a wave of Philadelphia inmates, they committed a wave of new crimes. And 10 days after one Florida prisoner got an early release he was charged with killing two cops.

The states swamped the worst are trying to bail themselves out with new prison construction. California, 70 percent over the brim, is spending $3.2 billion on building. President Bush wants an extra $1 billion in 1990 for federal prisons, which are 55 percent over capacity.

Authorities say these vast amounts and desperate measures are not enough to ease the jam and the threat of riot that goes with it. They propose shorter sentences for non-violent criminals, and more use of work release, probation, restitution, halfway houses and electronically monitored house arrest.

"The entire system is filled beyond capacity. It's clogged," said Anthony Travisono, executive director of the American Correctional Association.

"It's like trying to mop the bathroom floor without turning off the spigot on an overflowing bathtub," said Gordon Bonnyman, a civil rights lawyer in Nashville, Tenn.

Recent mandatory sentencing rules and a jump in drug-related prosecutions have packed prisons, officials said, but the flood of inmates is not new. This year was the 14th straight that opened with the U.S. prison population at an all-time high. The number imprisoned has nearly tripled since 1975.

The 627,402 people behind bars at the start of this year were 60,504 more than the system was designed to hold, according to the Justice Department.

Are the streets safer?

"There's not a criminologist or a sociologist in the country that can say as a result of more incarcerations we have lowered the crime rate," said Herb Hoelter, director of the National Center on Institutions and Alternatives. "We've been blackmailed by our fear of crime."

If so, it's expensive blackmail. The annual tab for locking people up is $16 billion a year. In some places the $20,000 cost to imprison an inmate each year could send a student to Stanford or Harvard, or pay a cop's salary.

An average new prison costs $40 million. Last year, the system grew by 42,967 inmates, which translates to the need for 86 new prisons.

States are building furiously. This year, $9 billion is being spent for construction. An additional $6 billion is on states' wish lists.

But if the number stayed the same, and every projection says it will keep accelerating, it would take eight years just to build cells for all the inmates who need them, the Correctional Association said.

Even corrections officers say new prisons won't solve overcrowding.

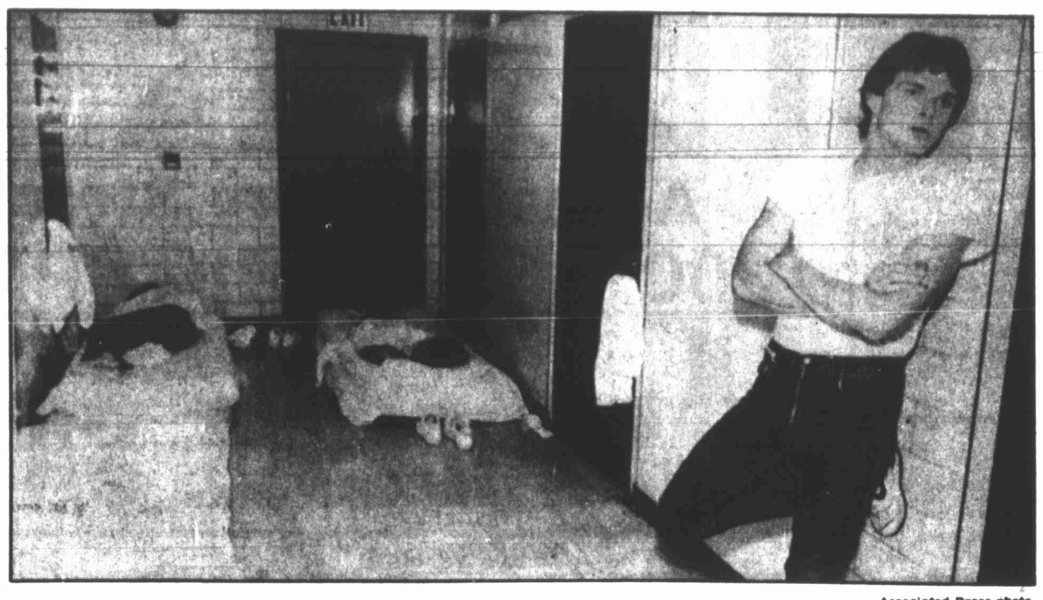

"Nobody has been able to build their way out of the overcrowding problem. Once built, a prison bed will soon find an inmate," said Larry Meachum, commissioner of the Connecticut Department of Corrections.

If all 24,000 beds that Bush wants to add to federal prisons were available immediately they would eliminate only the overflow; the 48,039-inmate system is 55 percent over capacity.

Americans "expect criminals to serve hard time, to suffer," said Robert Johnson, professor of justice at American University in Washington, D.C. "They want these people off the streets, but they're not inclined to think through what it will cost."

Because of a court-ordered cap, Texas closed its system to new inmates in April, the 31st time since 1987 the doors were shut. That just burdens county jails.

Nine states have military-style boot camps where young felons trade their sentences for a few months of pre-dawn wakeups, pushups and hard labor under bombastic drill sergeants.

CONCORD, Mass. — An inmate leans against a hallway used to house prisoners at the Massachusetts Correctional Institute. Prisons throughout the U.S. are overflowing with a record 627,402 prisoners behind bars at the start of the year, 60,504 more than the system can hold, according to the Justice Department.

Project targets much-hated bird

McALLEN (AP) — Not much love is wasted on the great-tailed grackle, a marauding, sometimes cannibalistic bird that is the preferred target of pellet gun owners in South Texas.

Grackles thrive where human civilization disturbs the natural balance. There are so many of the birds in the Lower Rio Grande Valley that many people compare them to rats, cockroaches and houseflies.

Farmers call them expensive.

Scientists have joined the grackle war in an effort to reduce millions of dollars in agricultural damage caused by the prolific birds, and have discovered a grackle weakness they believe can be used as a weapon:

The grackles love dog food. The birds even have a favorite brand.

"They like the Purina High Pro," said Alan Tipton, coordinator of the project at Texas A&I University in Kingsville. "It sounded crazy at first. We got laughed out of a couple of meetings (at scientific conferences) when we would tell them about it."

A&I's Caesar Kleberg Wildlife Research Institute treats the dog food with a poison called DRC 1339, which causes kidney failure.

"This is just one technique we think you can put into an arsenal of different techniques," Tipton said.

GRACKLE

The arsenal already includes a number of scare tactics designed to keep the grackles out of fields: propane-powered cannons, fireworks, fishing line and balloons with huge eyes to look like predators.

The McAllen-based project was developed with the U.S. Department of Agriculture and receives $300,000 a year in federal funding.

Citrus growers have the most to gain from the project. A&I scientists estimate that grackles in 1987 caused $2.2 million in damage to the Lower Rio Grande Valley's orange and grapefruit industry.

"Do I like them? No." said Joe Kutzenberger, president of K-Y Farms in Harlingen, with more than 400 acres in citrus.

"We're losing 30 to 40 percent of our fruit crop (to grackles) on some of our groves," Kutzenberger said.

Hungry grackles damage citrus with their long, sharp beaks.

If they don't destroy the fruit, they leave scars that make oranges and grapefruit marketable only as juice. Juice brings the grower far less money than fresh fruit.

Other crops also suffer, said Joe Palacios, a wildlife biology technician with the USDA's Animal Damage Control office in McAllen.

"This is the guy that just gave it up," he said, showing an abandoned peach orchard near Hargill, where the peaches were so mutilated by grackles the grower plans to bulldoze the trees.

Adult male great-tailed grackles grow to about 18 inches and have shiny, purplish black plumage and yellow eyes. Females are smaller and brownish-gray.

The bird, known scientifically as Quiscalus mexicanus, is expanding its range northward and westward.

The grackle population is steadily increasing, while many other species have suffered from destruction of natural habitat.

BLM to kill 1,500 ravens

CALIFORNIA CITY, Calif. (AP) — As many as 1,500 ravens are targeted for execution to protect Mojave Desert tortoises, which are too slow to escape the birds' hunting prowess.

Hundreds of tortoise shells stacked next to some raven nests help the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to identify 200 to 300 ravens that habitually feast on young tortoises.

In a pilot program to protect the tortoises, the agency began killing the birds last week at one site, and two more sites are being prepared for the four-month kill.

The agency said up to 1,500 ravens could be killed if it saves enough tortoises. In recent years, ravens have been killing a disproportionate number of tortoises.

In spots, ravens are responsible for 85 percent of young tortoise deaths, said agency wildlife biologist Ted Rado.

Once rare in the desert 125 miles northeast of Los Angeles, the ravens now number between 10,000 and 12,000 — 15 times their 1968 population.

Officials have prepared for the raven kill by getting the birds accustomed to a diet of hard-boiled eggs. At the appointed hour, the eggs are laced with Starlicide, a poison originally used to kill European starlings.

"We've gone to great pains to absolutely minimize the poisoning" of non-target animals, Rado said.

The eggs are wired to a platform and removed at night. Officials said Starlicide breaks down into non-toxic compounds so the dead ravens will pose no threat to wildlife higher in the food chain.

Other ravens will be shot with rifles, which Rado suspects will prove a less successful method. He said the birds will likely learn quickly to steer clear of humans.

IRS UPDATE

Several recent IRS announcements may be of interest to you —

Section 89 Rules Delayed. The 1986 Tax Reform Act included Section 89, a provision intended to eliminate discrimination in employee benefit plans. The business community has been outspoken about its displeasure with Section 89 and the additional costs and recordkeeping burden it will create. The labor community is equally unhappy with Section 89, fearing that it represents the first step in the eventual taxation of all employee benefits. Reacting to the outcry to change or even eliminate Section 89, the IRS has moved the effective date of the provision to October 1, 1989. Congress is expected to review Section 89 before that date and to consider changing the provision to make it less costly and burdensome for business.

Contributions to 401(k) Plans Increase. The maximum contribution a taxpayer could make to his company's 401(k) plan in 1988 was $7,313. The indexed-for-inflation figure for the maximum 1989 contribution is $7,627.

Specially Coded Envelopes are being provided by the IRS for taxpayers to use in making quarterly estimated tax payments. Taxpayers are cautioned not to use these coded envelopes for any other type of payment, or there could be a delay in getting the payments to the appropriate IRS office. The taxpayer could then be subject to late penalty and interest charges.

Medicare Surtax. Taxpayers who are eligible for Medicare will be assessed a surtax $22.50 per $150 of their 1989 federal income tax liability up to a maximum surtax of $800 per individual. The IRS announced that any estimated tax penalties created by the Medicare surtax will be waived for 1989. The surtax must be included in quarterly estimated taxes beginning in 1990.

Steers completing good offseason

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

After six months of training, the Big Spring Steers' offseason football program is coming to a halt. After a lackluster 3-6 season, the Steers began work in November. It will end Tuesday.

It has all left Steers head coach David Thompson happy. "We had a good time," said Thompson. "We started a week after football. We put them though a very rigorous program. It wasn't pleasant. I've never worked kids like this before. But we've gotten better — we needed to get better."

In his first full offseason at Big Spring Thompson made it very clear what the order of the program was — you go through the entire program, if one quits in the spring, no football in the fall. If a person didn't go through offseason in the spring, no football.

"It wouldn't be fair to the others if I let someone come out that didn't go through spring workouts," said Thompson. "Those that did go through the program went through a lot of hard work."

And Thompson's strict rules and work habits seem to be paying off. Two players quit and three new players joined. The Steers will have 48 players in varsity and junior varsity football. There will be 48 more freshmen footballers.

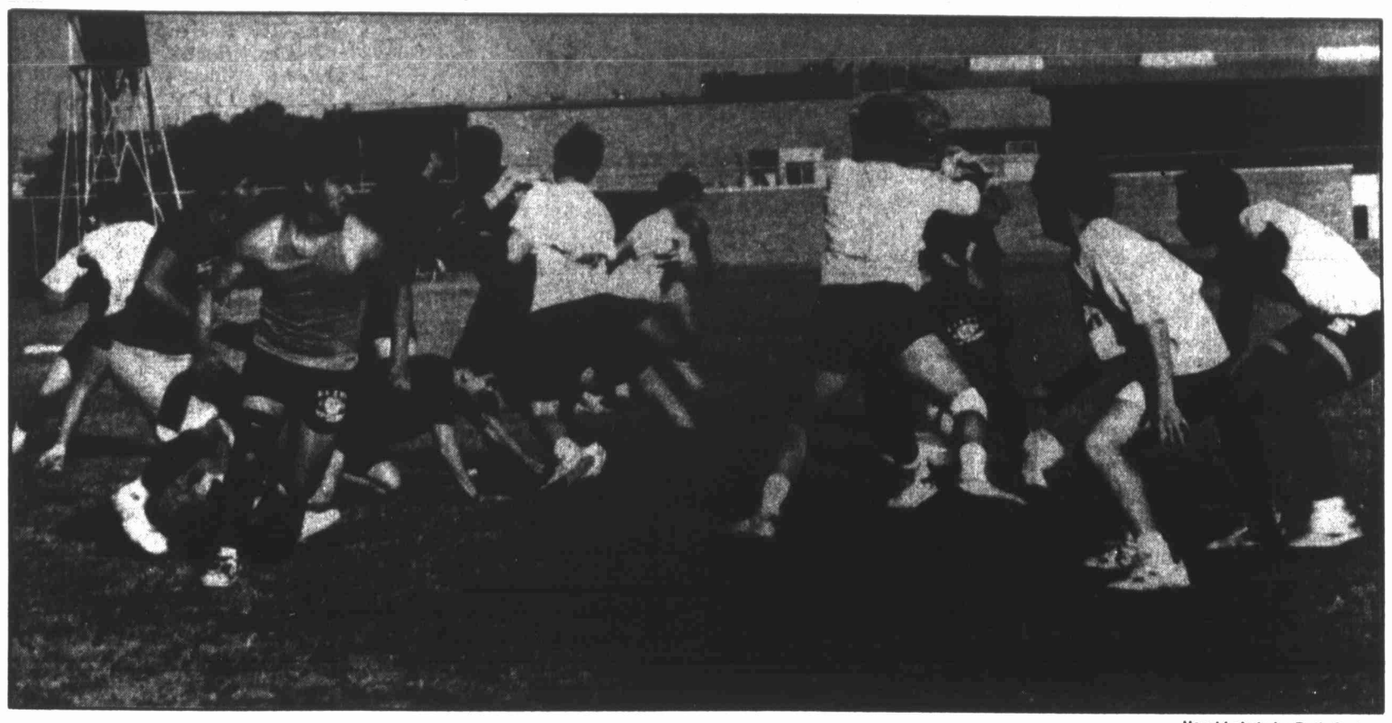

Thompson's workout program included lots of weight lifting, running and agility drills. The last couple of months have been devoted to learning the offense and defense.

Defensive coordinator Dwight Butler says this has been a big learning period for his defenders. "We've got a bunch of people in positions they've never played before," said Butler. "We're a lot quicker now, more than we've ever been. We've been fairly aggressive. I hope they pick that back up in the fall. If they do, we'll have a chance to be competitive."

Thompson agrees with his assistant coach on the overall improvement of the team. "We really concentrated hard on the weights, quickness, agility-type stuff, running and footwork," said Thompson.

"We've got a couple of kids that are running 4.5 (40-yard dash). A good example is Freddie Rodriguez — he started out running a 4.9, now he can run a 4.5. We've had several kids like him that have really improved from

Michael Jordan to the rescue!

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan's short jumper with three seconds left capped a rally from a 13-point deficit late in the game and gave the Chicago Bulls a 99-97 victory over Detroit Saturday for a 2-1 lead in the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

Chicago trailed 90-77 with 6:18 left before Jordan, who scored 17 of his 46 points in the final period, led the startling comeback.

He scored 10 during a three-minute span, and his drive with 53 seconds left made it 97-95 before Horace Grant tied it with two free throws with 28 seconds remaining after a foul by Dennis Rodman.

Bill Laimbeer was called for an offensive foul with nine seconds left, setting up Jordan's game-winner for Chicago. He took an inbounds pass from Scottie Pippen and drove to the right of the basket before putting in a jumper.

The Bulls, seeking their third straight upset in the playoffs, retained the homecourt advantage in the series with Saturday's victory. Half of the four remaining games of the best-of-7 series are scheduled for Chicago, starting Monday with Game 4.

Mark Aguirre led Detroit with 25 points, while Vinnie Johnson had 19, including 11 in the fourth quarter. Bill Cartwright scored 15 for the Bulls.

The Bulls led 31-29 with 10:32 left in the second quarter before Johnson's 3-point goal sparked a 9-0 spurt that made it 38-31.

After a Chicago free throw, a basket by Aguirre started a run in which he scored the next 11 points for the Pistons as they extended their margin to 49-38 with 2:54 left in the half.

Three free thows by John Long completed the 27-11 run and gave the Pistons a 56-42 advantage. During the Detroit spurt, Chicago had only two field goals in 10:13.

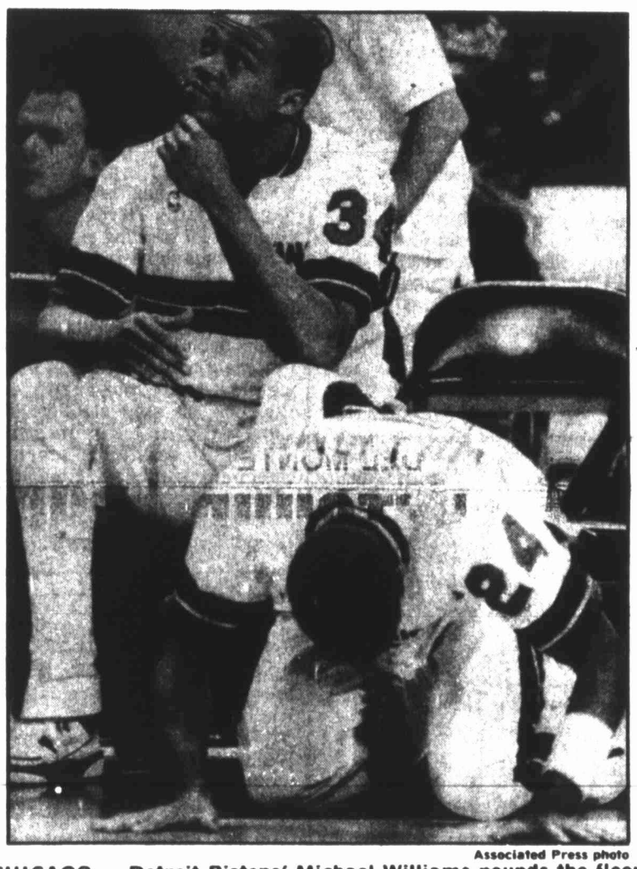

The Bulls closed the gap to 56-45 at halftime on a three-point play by Jordan with 18 seconds left.

Chicago, which finished 16 games behind Detroit during the regular season, got as close as seven points twice in the third quarter, the second time at 74-67 on a drive by Jordan with 6:23 remaining.

The Pistons, who got eight rebounds from Rodman in the quarter, went on to lead 77-66 at the end of the third period, the halftime margin.

Aguirre, who managed only 22 points in the first two games, had seven in a span of 1:16 to help the Pistons take a 19-11 lead. But Jordan, who scored 13 of Chicago's first 19 points, responded with six during an 8-1 spurt that got the Bulls within one.

Detroit, which beat the Bulls in six straight games during the regular season, is seeking to make the NBA Finals for the second straight season.

Lakers one win away from reaching finals

PHOENIX (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers have their broom ready.

Seeking their third straight NBA title, the Lakers are within one game of a third straight sweep in the playoffs.

They can wrap up their Western Conference finals with the Phoenix Suns by winning Game 4 Sunday afternoon at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

Los Angeles used another fourth-quarter rally to beat Phoenix 110-107 Friday night for a 3-0 lead in the best-of-7 series.

No team in NBA history has ever come back from an 0-3 deficit to win a seven-game playoff series. Moreover, the Suns have lost all five previous playoff series to Los Angeles, getting swept 4-0 in 1982 and 3-0 in 1985.

"They got their work cut out for them," Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said. "We're a little bit ahead of the pack right now, but we still have 48 minutes of basketball to play and we have to win one more before we move on.

"Phoenix is a proud team and they're going to come hard. We just have to be ready. I just hope we don't have to do what we did in Seattle (in Game 4) and come back from 29 points down" to win 97-95 on May 14.

The Lakers, who swept Portland 3-0 and Seattle 4-0, now are 10-0 in the playoffs this season, setting a league record for consecutive postseason victories. They have won 12 consecutive playoff games dating back to last year and 15 straight overall counting this regular season.

"It's not a big concern to us. We don't ever talk about any streaks. That can end tomorrow and it won't mean anything," Magic Johnson said. "We just need to keep taking it one game at a time. We need to keep working, working, working to get our goal. We just have to go in and do it again Sunday."

In each game, defense won it for the Lakers.

After Phoenix erased a 93-83 fourth-quarter deficit to take a 105-102 lead with 1:22 remaining Friday night, Los Angeles reserve center Mychal Thompson blocked a jumper by Dan Majerle with 22 seconds remaining and then helped force the Suns rookie guard to miss two 3-point goals down the stretch.

The Lakers hit eight free throws — four by Thompson — in the final 64 seconds to seal the victory.

"The last minute and a half was all defense," said Johnson, who finished with 20 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds. "Defense has been the key all season. If the game's close, we'll win it. There's no safe lead

Okamoto takes five-stroke lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto of Japan overcame swirling winds Saturday and shot a 4-under-par 67 to open a five-shot lead over Beth Daniel after three rounds of the LPGA Corning Classic.

LPGA

Okamoto, who had previous rounds of 69 and 66, had a 54-hole total of 11-under 202.

Daniel, who trailed by only one stroke going into the third round, carded a 71 for 207.

The wind has affected play each round at the 6,006-yard, par-71 Corning Country Club course, and only five golfers were below par after three rounds.

Okamoto, who is ninth on the LPGA's career money list, was the runner-up in last week's LPGA Championship. She has been playing well recently after a slow start.

Since taking a month off before the LPGA Championship, she has had seven consecutive rounds below par. Before the LPGA Championship, she had only five of 23 rounds below par.

Okamoto struggled a little, but helped herself with a strong short game. She had four birdies and two bogeys on the front nine, and a steady back nine with seven pars and two birdies.

Pat Bradley was third, seven shots behind, at 209. Patty Sheehan and first-round coleader Dawn Coe were tied for fourth at 211.

Unknown leading in Atlanta

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Jay Don Blake, who has never finished better than ninth in a PGA Tour event, tapped in a short birdie putt on the final hole to complete a 2-under-par 70 and take the lead after three rounds of the Atlanta Classic Saturday.

Blake, who missed a long eagle putt on the par-5 finishing hole, held a one-shot advantage over another non-winner, Duffy Waldorf, who had a 71 on the hilly, 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

Blake, who also led after the first round, had a 9-under 207 total for 54 holes in the $900,000 event that will be worth $162,000 to Sunday's winner.

Wayne Grady, the Australian who led at the halfway point, parred the first 14 holes before carrying over the green on No. 15, taking a drop and missing a 4-foot par putt. He also bogeyed 17 and 18 for a 75, dropping him four shots off the lead.

Larry Mize, the 1987 Masters champion, long-hitting Davis Love III and rookie Kent Kluba each posted 69s that left them only two shots off the lead.

"I'm happy with the way I played, but I'm a little disappointed because I thought it could have been better," Mize said after putting together a string of four birdies starting on the second hole.

"I felt like I left a lot out there," Love said after four poor tee shots cost him three bogeys. "I'm confident. There's not a lot of guys shooting low scores."

Love, winner of the Heritage two years ago, highlighted his round by holing a 40-foot bunker shot for a birdie on the 16th.

"I'm savoring every minute of it," said Kluba, who has won only $398 for a 69th-place tie at Hattiesburg, Miss., this year.

Mike Miles, a second-year pro who has won only $9,232 in his career, turned in the lowest round of the day, a 66, for 210.

Three others who started the day one shot off the lead had their problems. Mike Hulbert skied to a 79-216, Canadian Ray Stewart had a 75-212 and Larry Silveira 76-213.

Defending champion Larry Nelson birdied the last three holes for a 68 that put him in a group at 211. Nelson has won this event twice and owns one U.S. Open and two PGA titles.

The group tied with Nelson also included Calvin Peete, who shot a 70, and Scott Simpson and Bob Tway, each with 71s.

Indy 500 — fast, inexperienced

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The fastest field ever for the Indianapolis 500 also is one of the least experienced, and that's enough to make even longtime chief steward Tom Binford a little edgy.

"The only way you'll all get through is to take care of each other," Binford told the drivers at their public prerace meeting Saturday.

The 33-car field includes only four Indy rookies — there have been as many as 11 — but 15 drivers with three years' or less experience here.

"The veterans have talked to the younger drivers and we've had several meetings to go over procedures and make sure everybody is aware of what can happen out there," Binford said. "In the end, it's up to them."

Rookie Bernard Jourdain of Mexico, the slowest qualifier in the field at 213.105, will start in the middle of the seventh row, with faster cars in front and in back and on both sides.

"As we all know," Binford said, "the start of the race can be a nightmare. In the 16 years I've been chief steward, we've had two problems — one before the green light came on and last year."

The first was in 1982 when Kevin Cogan, in the middle of the front row, lost control moments before the start, slid into A.J. Foyt, then across the track into the path of Mario Andretti. Back in the pack, Roger Mears and Dale Whittington also collided. The race was later restarted without incident.

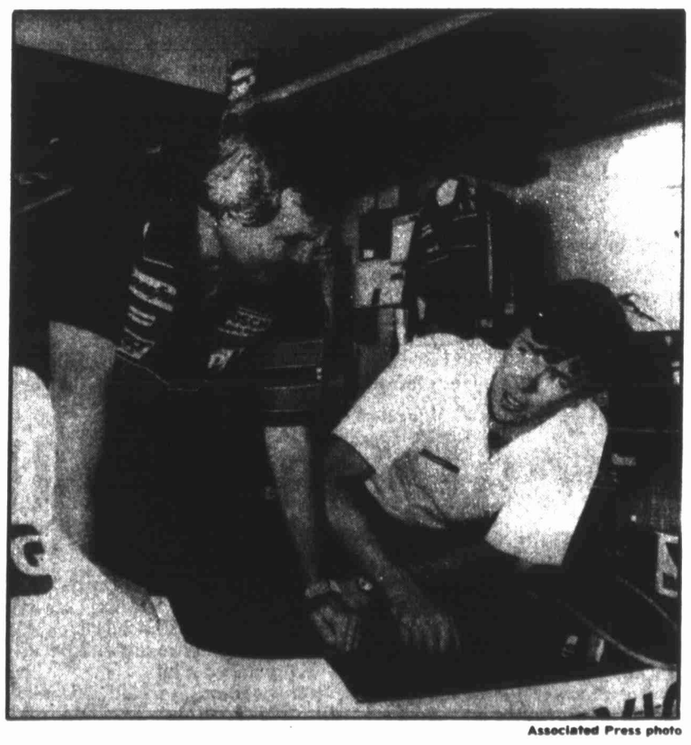

A year ago, the field took the green flag for the start, but Scott Brayton spun and collected both Roberto Guerrero and Tony Bettenhausen in the second turn.

"I've said it plenty of times before, but I can't emphasize it enough, it's a shame if you turn a 500-mile race into a one-mile race for yourself," Binford said.

Pole-winner Rick Mears will set the pace for the field to the starting line, but Binford pointed out that the cars in the back of the pack will not be able to see whether the green flag is waved.

"If the row in front of you is slowing down, they are probably slowing down for a reason. Don't take that as an opportunity to take advantage of them."

Binford also reminded the drivers of fuel, caution period and pit road procedures.

Four Oakland hurlers whitewash Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Curt Young and three relievers combined on a six-hitter as the Oakland Athletics beat New York 3-0 Saturday for their second straight shutout over the Yankees.

Young, 2-4, allowed four hits in five innings. Gene Nelson followed three innings of one-hit relief and Dennis Eckersley came in to start the ninth. He faced two batters and left holding his right shoulder. Riok Honeycutt got the last two outs for his second save.

AL

Todd Burns, Honeycutt and Eric Plunk had combined for a one-hitter Friday night, facing the minimum 27 batters. The Yankees had not been shut out in consecutive games since California did it on May 19 and 20, 1984.

Dave Henderson hit a two-run single in the first inning and Dave Parker homered in the second off Dave LaPoint, 5-3, who allowed eight hits in seven innings.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO (AP) — Carlos Martinez hit first major-league homer to snap a sixth-inning tie as Chicago ended a seven-game losing streak.

Melido Perez, 3-5, allowed eight hits, struck out four and walked two in seven innings. Bobby Thigpen finished with three-hit relief fon his seventh save, striking out three.

John Cerutti, 1-3, gave up 10 hits in eight innings, struck out six and walked none.

With the score tied at 3, Martinez homered to right with two outs in sixth. It was his 55th major-league at-bat.

Royals 5, Tigers 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Mark Gubicza pitched a seven-hitter to win at home for the first time in five starts this year and Jim Eisenreich had a single and two doubles.

Randy Nosek, a 22-year-old right-hander called up from Class AA London, Ontario, walked eight in 4 2-3 innings as he made his major-league debut. He allowed three hits and struck out three.

Gubicza, 4-4, struck out five and walked two in his fourth complete game. He had been 0-3 in Royals Stadium.

The loss dropped the Tigers' road record to a major-league worst 5-16.

Orioles 5, Indians 1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mickey Tettleton hit his sixth homer in 12 games and Dave Schmidt and Mark Huismann combined on a four-hitter Saturday night as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Cleveland Indians for their fifth consecutive victory.

Baltimore, which beat Cleveland Friday, ensured its first series victory on the road against an AL East team since sweeping the Indians from April 10-12, 1987. The Orioles had lost 22 series on the road against the East and split two since then.

Cubs down Reds by 5-3 margin

CHICAGO (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe pitched a four-hitter and Damon Berryhill and Dwight Smith each drove in two runs Saturday as the Chicago Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-3 for their ninth victory in 11 games.

NL

Sutcliffe, 6-3, yielded a solo homer to Chris Sabo in the third inning and a two-run shot to Eric Davis in the ninth.

Previously unbeaten Jose Rijo, 4-1, gave up six hits and four runs in four innings as Cincinnati, which had won each of Rijo's nine previous starts this season, had its four-game winning streak snapped.

Berryhill's sacrifice fly and Smith's infield single gave Chicago a 2-0 lead in the first inning and Berryhill and Smith hit run-scoring singles in the third. In the fifth, Vance Law singled to score Berryhill, who doubled off Tim Birtsas.

Giants 6, Phillies 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Atlee Hammaker allowed one hit in six innings and Robby Thompson and Kirt Manwaring each had three hits. Hammaker yielded a leadoff home run to Steve Lake in the third inning, then retired the next 12 batters before Jeff Brantley relieved. Craig Lefferts pitched the final 2 1-3 inning for his eighth save.

Loser Alex Madrid allowed eight hits and five runs in five innings for the Phillies, losers of four straight. San Francisco took the lead in the first inning on singles by Ernest Riles, Manwaring and Jose Uribe. After Lake's homer tied it, the Giants scored four runs in the fifth.

Thompson doubled with one out, Will Clark was walked intentionally and an error by third baseman Mike Schmidt on Kevin Mitchell's grounder loaded the bases. Riles hit a rwo-run double and, after Tracy Jones was walked intentionally, Manwaring added a two-run single. Thompson homered in the sixth, his fifth of the season and second in two games.

Rangers, Twins brawling

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Buechele of the Texas Rangers and Minnesota Twins catcher Brian Harper triggered a bench-clearing brawl Saturday night after Harper accused Buechele of stealing signs.

Pete Incaviglia led off the second inning with a double and scored on Buechele's double. With Jeff Kunkel batting one out later, according to third base umpire Dave Phillips, Harper went out to the mound and told Buechele to stop stealing his signs to pitcher Allan Anderson.

Kunkel doubled, scoring Buechele, and as Buechele crossed home plate, he pointed at Harper and said something. Harper pushed Buechele and the two began to wrestle. Texas' Scott Fletcher ran over from the on-deck circle and helped Buechele wrestle Harper to the ground.

Both benches emptied and the other Twins' fielders also joined the fray. A third Ranger, Geno Petralli, was the first to reach the pile.

After a delay of about 10 minutes, order was restored and Buechele and Harper were ejected. Kunkel moved from center field to third base to replace Buechele, with Cecil Espy taking over in center. Tim Laudner replaced Harper.

Results of the game was not in by press time.

Coach suspended for hazing on school bus

BROWNFIELD (AP) — A W[illegible] Texas high school withdrew baseball team from the st[illegible] playoffs and suspended its head coach with pay because of a hazing incident on a bus while the team was returning from a game.

The Brownfield school board ordered a playoff game Friday against Dalhart forfeited. Head coach Les Schubert was suspended with pay for the alleged hazing incident on Tuesday during the Cubs' ride home from Monahans, where they beat Fabens in a bi-district game.

Two sophomores reportedly were ordered to the back of the bus and held down by their arms and legs and given pink bellies by underclassmen who beat them across their stomachs and chests.

Brownfield's school board ordered the Cubs, five-time defending district champion, to forfeit its playoff game on Friday against Dalhart and voted unanimously that Schubert be suspended with pay.

Four coaches, including Schubert, were on the bus and did nothing to stop the alleged hazing, said Buzz Timmons, the father of one of the victims.

Timmons' 16-year-old son, Clay, suffered welts and bruises on his stomach, chest and right arm. Timmons was treated by Dr. Carl Smith of Brownfield, who at first feared that he might have suffered internal injuries.

The second alleged hazing victim and his parents have refused to talk about the incident.

Schubert's couldn't be reached for comment because his phone number is unlisted.

Timmons, pastor of the First Baptist Church in nearby Wellman, said he was shocked by his son's beating but believed that hazing had become an accepted tradition of the Brownsfield baseball program.

"My intent from the onset was to, one, see that it's (hazing) stopped and, two, the protection of my son," Timmons told the Lubbock Avalanche Journal.

Armando Sedeno, the Cubs' head coach from 1985 to 1988, and who is now an assistant coach at Spring Westfield, said that horseplay among players was allowed during his stint in Brownfield, but that he never encouraged or participated in hazings or initiations.

"As far as telling a player he had to be initiated, no way," Sedeno said. "The guys would get back there (on the bus) and play around, but you couldn't call it a tradition. It was a matter of kids being kids."

Brownfield Independent School District superintendent Don Hendley, on advice from his attorney, refused comment.

But board member Brenda Rudd, a Brownfield attorney, confirmed that Schubert was suspended Wednesday, with pay, by Hendley.

Former gridder drowns after saving two youths

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — Former NFL player Jerry Anderson drowned Saturday after pulling two boys out of a rain-swollen river.

"Mr. Anderson jumped in the water and managed to get the little boys out, but witnesses said he went under two or three times and about the fourth time, he didn't come back up," police Capt. Bill Todd said.

Todd said rescue workers pulled Anderson from the lake and took him to a local medical center, but efforts to revive him failed.

Five years ago, Anderson helped Tulsa, Okla., residents who were trapped in buildings and cars during a flood. He was honored by the city for his heroic actions.

Anderson, 36, grew up in Murfreesboro and attended Northeastern Oklahoma A&M Junior College, where he played football for two years before transferring to the University of Oklahoma. Anderson was a cornerback on the Sooners' 1975 national championship team.

Anderson played briefly in the NFL for Cincinnati and Tampa Bay. He also played in the Canadian Football League before his career was ended by a knee operation in 1982.

in a playoff game, especially if you're playing us.

"We're an experienced team. We don't get rattled. We never panic. We just keep working until we get something that works."

"We just kept our poise and executed properly down the stretch," said Lakers forward James Worthy, who had 14 of his 29 points in the fourth period and also grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds.

The Suns made 61 percent of their field goals (14 of 23) in the second period to take a 54-50 halftime lead before Los Angeles went to a trapping defense.

"Coach Riley got on us at the half and felt like a trap would work," Johnson said. "We put in the trap all through the second half and that was the key."

"We were trying to step up the tempo in the third quarter when they finally went to their zone defense," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "Part of the time, it was just a straight zone.

Kevin Johnson, the league's most improved player this season, was held to seven second-half points and 22 overall.

last year.

"In all, I think we've had a good spring. The kids have worked hard and have had good attitudes. They've gotten stronger and quicker.

"Defensively we've looked good running to the football. We've gotten fairly aggressive, and that's what we've needed. Offensively we'll mix the run and pass. We'll spread it out more. We'll do a few different things. We'll line up in a one-back offense and sometimes we won't have any backs. I feel we can adjust to anything. We'll take what we can get."

The Steers will have eight offensive lettermen returning next year: quarterback Rance Thompson, tight end Joe Downey, wide receivers Neal Mayfield, Kenny Everett and Jason Davis, tackles Pete Buske and Ronnie Payne and guard Gary Watkins.

Defensively there are five lettermen returning: cornerbacks Terry Bailey and Tim McQueary; linebacker Jermain Miller; tackle Pat Wilbert and safety Rye Bavin.

Little League

The organization celebrates 50th anniversary

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first of a two-part series about Little League baseball. Part two will be Monday.

Fifty years ago on June 6, a group of neighborhood kids played an organized game of baseball on a scaled-down field in Williamsport, Pa. They called it the Little League. Today more than 2.5 million young boys and girls play on 140,000 Little League baseball teams in the United States and 33 foreign countries. But despite its immense popularity, the organizer of that first game is not happy about the way the Little League turned out.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — When you drive south on Route 15 in north-central Pennsylvania, just as you top the crest of Bald Eagle Mountain pull over and cast your gaze to the valley below.

If there could be an ideal spot for the birthplace of Little League baseball, you are looking at it.

The Susquehanna River, its very name a poem, winds down from the green Allegheny hills through a town of 40,000 souls who live in clapboard houses with porch swings and shade trees, a timeless scene off a postcard labeled "America."

Move closer. An American flag large enough to cover a small infield draws your eye to the north bank of the river. It flies proudly in front of a 45-acre complex of buildings and ball fields, the international headquarters of Little League, Inc.

Little League baseball celebrates its 50th anniversary this year. Boys who played in the first Little League game, on June 6, 1939, have grandchildren playing in the league today.

Still, a half-century seems a relatively brief span for any activity, however appealing, to attain such astonishing growth and earn such a solid place in the national culture. A Little League ballpark has become as common a sight as a church spire in cities, villages and suburbs across the land.

A three-team league of 30 Williamsport boys in 1939 was the seedbed for what Little League, Inc. today calls the largest sports

Coach goes to bat for one of his players

HOUSTON (AP) — A Little Leaguer with cerebral palsy, who had been kicked off his team, played in the last game of the season after the organization's national office intervened.

Tucker Church, a 15-year-old who was told this week he couldn't finish the season on his team of 9- and 10-year-olds, played Friday night after obtaining a doctor's note that he'd be safer playing on a team of younger boys.

Tucker was kicked off the team and his coach was forced to resign this week because another team competing for the same playoff spot complained about the player's presence on the younger team, the Sharpstown Pirates.

"I knowingly broke their rules so I resigned right away. But what this is really about is adults who cared too much about winning." — Little League coach Scott Davis.

Davis said Tucker, who is 4-foot-9 and weighs 56 pounds, could not compete with boys his own age.

"I knew the age rule, but in my heart I just couldn't see this kid not play baseball," Davis said. "He loves it so much."

A Houston Little League administrator received a complaint from the playoff competitor and applied the age rule against Tucker Wednesday night.

But the Little League national office in Williamsport, Pa., was flooded with calls about the matter Friday and officials there ruled Tucker could play if he presented proof from a doctor that said he'd be safer on the younger team.

"They wanted to know what we were doing to this poor kid so I called the Texas state office and said we have to make this right," said Joe Losch, assistant to the president of Little League baseball.

Tucker's letter came from Dr. Red Duke, a well-known Houston physician, but the teen was resigned to not playing Friday because Davis was not going to coach.

Sharpstown Little League president Lercy Simoneaux reversed the earlier ruling and allowed Davis to coach.

In the third inning Tucker entered the lineup and struck out in five pitches.

"I swung as hard as I could," said Tucker, who hits .167 and falls often. "I don't know what he threw me. I'm not sure I saw it."

Tucker's team lost 13-4 Friday night, ending their season. His teammates carried him off the field on their shoulders.

Little League

organization in the world. Today, 2.5 million youths play on 140,000 teams in 6,000 leagues in the United States and 33 foreign countries. If all the Little Leaguers joined hands the line would stretch from the Susquehanna to the Rockies.

"Of course I had no idea what Little League would become," says Carl Stotz, who founded the league while working as a clerk in a lumber yard. "All I envisioned at the time was a neighborhood program. Some of what it has become I am not in favor of."

At 79, Stotz still lives in Williamsport. He is a man with an incredible memory and a compulsion to keep daily logs and save receipts.

"It isn't that I enjoy saving things," he once explained to his daughter who complained about the clutter. "It's just that I can't bear to throw anything away."

He can show you, for example, that the total expenses for the first Little League season came to $174.63, that the collection taken up at the first game netted $1.42, that the first boy-sized catcher's mask, ordered from Chicago and which he still has, cost $1.67, the first dozen balls $2. The first year's deficit was $36.72, which Stotz made up out of his own pocket as he did every year until 1943 when the league finally finished in the black.

Now Little League, Inc. has assets of more than $10 million and a staff of 70 paid employees at its headquarters. It charges each of those 140,000 teams a charter fee of $14 each year and earns millions on endorsements of athletic equipment and royalties on the Little League name, which is copyrighted, and the logo, which Stotz designed. The business of Little League is unquestionably big league.

Stotz's memory of how it all began is vivid.

One August day in 1938 he was playing catch with his two nephews, Jimmy and Harold Gehron, ages 6 and 8, in his back yard at 1108 Isabella St. Running backward, he tripped over the jagged stumps of a cut-down lilac bush and bruised his ankle. His left ankle.

"I sat on the back steps there," he recalls, pointing, "rubbing my ankle.

"I said to the boys, 'How would you like to play on a regular team with uniforms, a new ball for every game and bats you can really swing?'

"One of them said, 'Uncle Tuck' — that's what they called me — 'who would we play?'

"I decided on the spot it would have to be a league of teams."

Stotz gathered up a group of neighborhood boys each evening and went to a flat field at Memorial Park where picknickers played softball.

"I used folded newspapers for bases, threw the ball to various positions and had the boys run the bases. We tried different distances between the bases until I found what I thought would be right for them, and paced it off. It came close enough to 60 feet that I rounded it off to that."

Through the winter Stotz worked out the details, rules, age limits and the like, which have remained essentially unchanged. He called on 57 merchants before he found the first sponsor, Lycoming Dairy.

"When Carl passed out the uniforms, the day before the first game, it was one of the proudest days of my life," recalls Bill Bair.

Memorial Day: One of honor

"War would end if the dead could return." — Stanley Baldwin

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

It was my father who first gave me a sense of what Memorial Day is all about.

We were searching for shade at the Heart of the City Festival last year when we stopped to rest by the memorial at the county courthouse.

The memorial — on the east side of the courthouse — lists the names of Big Spring residents who died in WW I, WW II, Korea and Vietnam.

Dad knew a few of the men who died during the Second World War, and related to me some of his memories.

He recalled how he went through high school with one man, and used to hang around with a couple more. One guy was memorable to Dad because of his fondness for pork and beans.

It's funny what you recall.

Anyway, while Dad was clicking off his recollections, it struck me — really for the first time — that these were more than names on a marble slab.

Until that time, they really didn't seem real to me. Oh, I knew that they had died in service to their country and all that, but I only realized it in the abstract.

Dad's recollections changed all that.

They were ordinary men — folks a lot like you and me — who had normal dreams and aspirations and hopes. Probably the last thing they wanted to do was go off to some foriegn country and get killed by a bunch of Nazis.

But they did, all the same.

The visit to Big Spring by the Moving Wall — the replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial — further reinforced those new-found feelings.

It was impossible to stay in the vicinity for any length of time — while watching friends and loved ones of the deceased leave momentos — and walk away without some appreciation of the sacrifice those men and women made.

Having been fortunate enough not to serve in combat, I nevertheless have wondered several times about how I would have performed under fire, or if I had the courage to do so.

I joined the Air Force in 1974, knowing full well that I might have to answer that question some day. Fortunately, I never had to find out.

But the men whose names grace the memorial did.

What was it that drove these men to lay down their lives? Was it patriotism? Did they have some kind of romantic vision about charging forth and clearing the earth of the Hun (or Vietcong) menace? Or was it something more mundane, like they were in the wrong place at the wrong time?

More than likely, it was something along the lines that they went to do their duty as their government wished them to do, and a bullet got in their way.

And they became heroes.

Oh, I'm sure they wouldn't have thought of themselves as heroes. As stated before, they were ordinary folks who wanted nothing more than to return to their ordinary lives back home.

But, because they died — because they made that supreme sacrifice for their country — they are heroes; at least, they should be.

I'm not trying to glamorize war. I've heard enough battle stories to know that armed conflict is a mean, nasty, hellish thing that no one should ever have to encounter.

At the same time, however, we should honor those who never returned from the battlefield. It is largely through their efforts that you and I are not the subjects of some dictator — as is the case in many other countries.

So, it seems that the least we can do on Memorial Day is remember — and salute — those who died for us.

But let's not stop there. There are thousands of veterans who still carry the hideous scars of conflict. They didn't die, but they paid a huge sacrifice, also.

All of them — the dead and the wounded — deserve so much more than we can ever repay.

But, let's at least try.

SKETCHY BUSINESS

From witness memory to artist's rendering

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

To most people, it's simply a lunch box-sized, brown wooden box containing several diagrams of human facial features.

But police consider it one of their most effective tools in identifying suspected criminals.

"Generally, you'll get it pretty close to what a photo will look like," Police Sgt. Roger Sweatt said of the Identi-Kit, a collection of pre-drawn slides combined to form composite drawings.

"I know that there are some cases that (a composite drawing) has turned us on to a suspect," Sweatt said.

"It has been used to solve some crimes. Sometimes something like this is all they have to go on," he said.

It's the Identi-Kit, rather than the services of a trained police artist with a pencil and sketch pad, Big Spring police officers use when making facsimilies of a suspect's physical discription.

"You see in the old movies where (a police artist) uses a sketch pad to come up with a drawing. That's really not done much anymore," he said.

The composite kit contains about 150 different diagrams: noses, hair, eyes, eye brows, ears, lips, chins and head apparel — there's even a ski-mask diagram. However, the kit does not include scars, moles or birthmarks. Those features have to be drawn in by the officers.

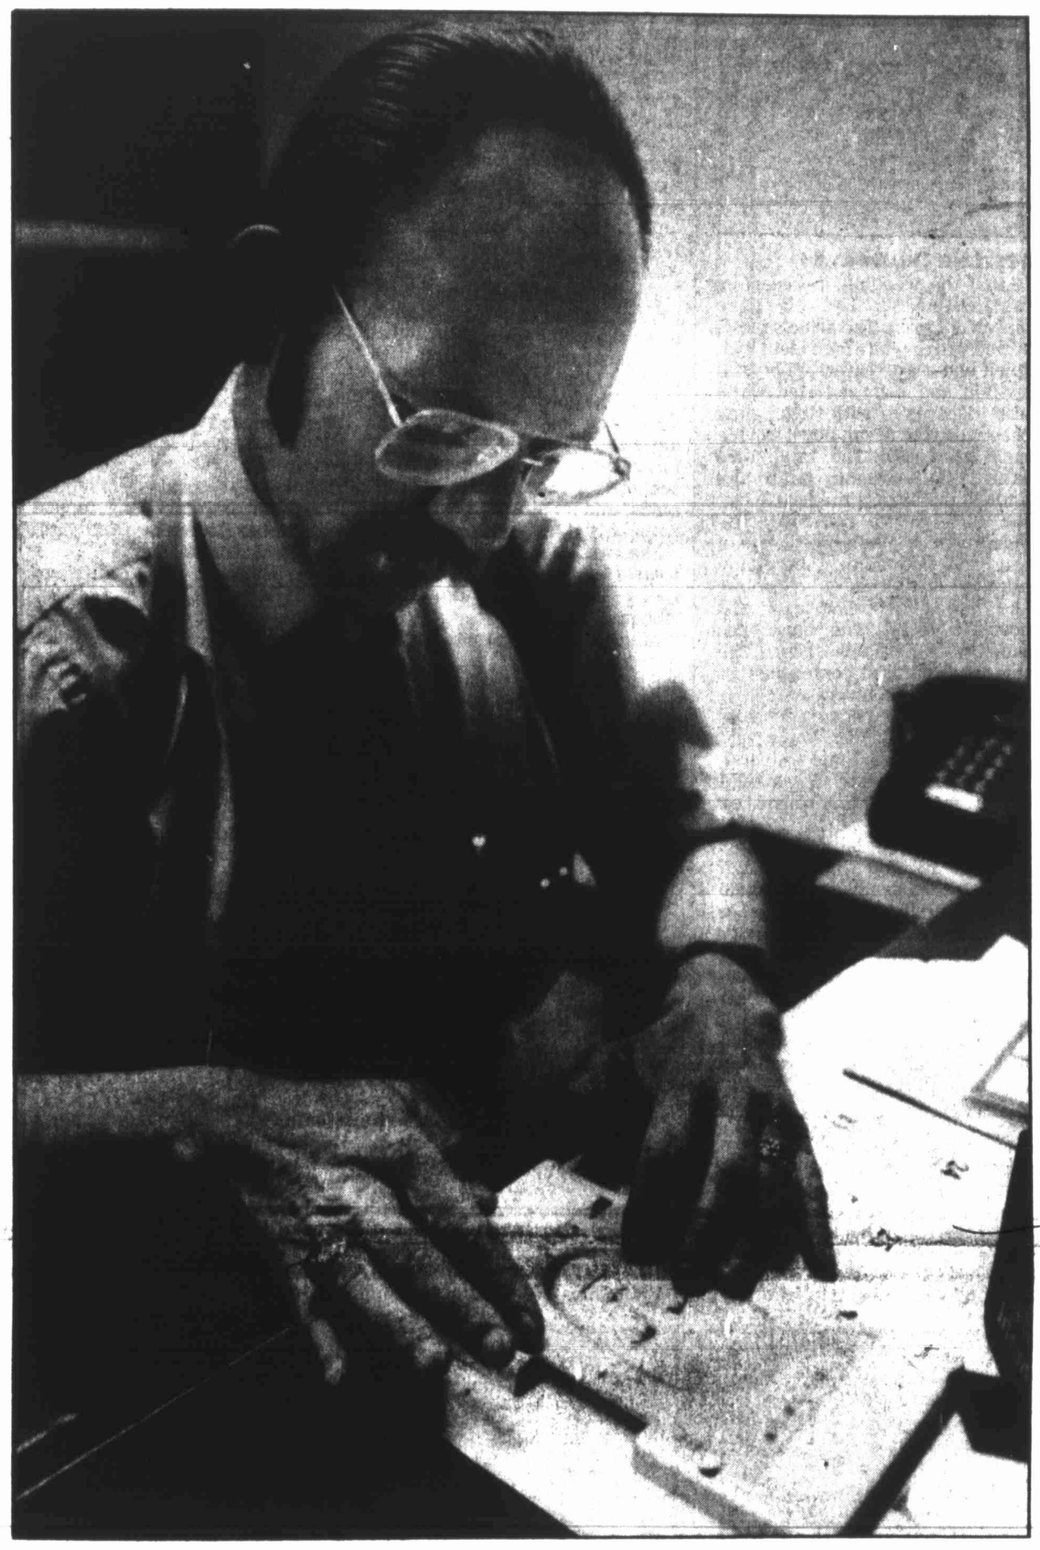

Still, Sweatt said, "It lets you get pretty specific about a suspect's description."

To make the drawings, a composite artist begins by finding a diagram that fits the facial outline of a suspect, placing it against a light-colored backdrop to highlight the features. Next, diagrams for eyes, nose and lips are added. Eyebrows, hair and other facial markings are some of the last things to be overlayed onto the composite picture.

But before police start a composite drawing they ask a witness certain questions. "We start with a general description: height and weight, age and build," he said. There are no diagrams for those features, but they can influence how a composite picture looks.

Composite drawings are most often used for major felonies, such as robberies and some murders. "Basically we use it any time we have a serious-type offense, where the victim can give us a real good facial discription," he said. "It's used when you have a victim who can describe someone to you, but you don't have a picture."

The effectiveness of the Identi-Kit to match a profile with the actual suspect often depends on the alertness of witnesses, Sweatt said.

Big Spring Police Sgt. Roger Sweatt works with Identi-Kit, a collection of pre-drawn slides that are combined to form composite drawings.

"I know that there are some cases that (a composite drawing) has turned us on to a suspect," Sweatt said. "It has been used to solve some crimes. Sometimes something like this is all they have to go on.

for. There are some cases, like aggravated robberies, where they're fuzzy on the faces; they were focusing on the weapon — and I don't blame them, I would too," he said.

Sweatt said police find it beneficial to interview victims and witnesses almost after the fact to make sure the perpetrator's description is still

"What it depends on is whether the victim can tell us physical characteristics to look fresh in their minds.

"Because we want them right away at the station some people think we're impatient," he said. "That's the last thing we want them to think. We never want to get them in a rush."

If witnesses feel they are being pressured, "they'll say 'it's this chin,' when it's not maybe . . . We want them to take the time to be sure a picture is accurate; to let us get as good a composition as we can," he said. A detailed composite can take an hour or more.

Once police develop a composite drawing, it can be circulated among authorities or to the general public. "It can go either way. . . . They may give it just to the officers or to the general public. It just depends," he said.

The Identi-Kit used by Big Spring police is the same composite system used by law enforcement offices all over the country, although many police departments are beginning to use computerized composite drawings.

Sweat said the computerized version has several benefits over traditional composite drawings. "It's a lot quicker, more convenient, a little bit clearer, more conducive to detail," he said. It also allows the artist to print a computer composite off the screen with the press of a button.

Police Chief Joe Cook said one of the main benefits of having a computerized composite drawing system is the hundreds of possible characteristics, while Identi-Kit is limited to about a 150 characteristics — allowing the composite to more accurately reflect the suspect's description.

Cook said he's particularly impressed with a computer composite program called Compu-Sketch, and an accompanying software program called Compu-Scene, which would allow police to diagram accident and crime scenes.

Cook said he would like to see the police department purchase the software, but said he has doubts the city is willing to pay the $5,000 price tag.

It costs $300 a year to rent the Identi-Kit from the kit's developer, Smith & Wesson. The company will not sell the kits, Cook said.

The standard Identi-Kit has been in existence since the early 1970s. Although the kit lacks the detail of a trained police sketch artist, it has the advantage of being easy to use, he said.

Sweatt agreed. "This is something anybody could use; something anybody could learn. It's more convenient, more easy to use than (sketchings). Once you get somebody used to it, it's a pretty straight-forward deal."

Several city policemen have been trained to use the kit; four officers have received certification in it's use, which entitles officers to use composite drawings in the courtroom as evidence, Cook said.

To obtain certification, officers are sent to a special training school, where they are taught to use the kit effectively.

"You learn how to use this and the different images for each feature. You learn why people are fuzzy on things and how to get a better composition out of people," said Sweatt, who is not certified. "It provides training in description; it tells you what to look for."

Recreating the mayor — for illustration purposes only

The composite kit is a relatively easy thing to use, Police Sgt. Roger Sweatt said.

After a witness has described the basic facial outline of a suspect, police can narrow the dozens of facial features in the kit's collection to a select few, Sweatt said. For example, even though there are about 40 noses: based on whether the subject is male or female, Caucasian or otherwise, police can narrow the number of expected choices to about half a dozen.

A photograph of Mayor Maxwell Green was described by a reporter to Sgt. Jerry Edwards recently for the purpose of creating a likeness to accompany this article.

The progression of the facsimile is illustrated in the series of four drawings above, in which specific features are combined to create the final likeness — next to the mayor's photograph.

As the composite artist assembles a facial portrait, he arranges the facial features on cross-hairs at the bottom of the picture and the side. The kit does allow for variance though; all of the facial features can be moved up or down and somewhat to the side.

Not only does this allow an officer to easily re-create a suspect's description by following the listed numbers, but also means facial descriptions can be sent to other law enforcement authorities with an Identi-Kit system simply by sending the code letters and numbers.

GARY DON CAREY

Q.: My face and back are breaking out with blackheads and bumps. What can I do?

A.: I don't know your age, which makes a difference, in the answer you are looking for.

It is normal for a youth of 13 to 20 to begin having problems with their skin. During the adolescent period, the activity of the sebaceous glands, (oil glands) is stimulated, thereby contributing to the formation of blackheads and pimples.

When the hair follicle is filled with an excess of oil from the sebaceous gland, a blackhead forms. The treatment of blackheads or pimples is to reduce the oiliness by using cleansers, soap, and water. Keep your face and body clean. Try also, to change your eating habits. Lots of greasy fried goods can attribute to excessive oil in your body.

If your condition worsens, consult a dermatologist.

HINT

Sweating is a natural way to clean your pores. After sweating be sure to clean your body with soap and water, then use an astringent, then a moisturizer. Remember to drink plenty of water while sweating.

Starry-eyed romantic needs some down-to-earth sense

DEAR ABBY: Something has been haunting me for a long time and I need to get it out of my system and settled once and for all. When I was 15 years old, I fell in love with a man who was 45. I will call him Scorpio. My parents refused to let me be with him, so we parted. As fate would have it, I fell in love again when I was 19, but that marriage lasted only six years, and we divorced.

Following my divorce, I met another man I'll call Pisces, but I kept seeing Scorpio every chance I got because I couldn't get him out of my mind. So here I was, divorced and dating the Pisces, but still in love with the Scorpio.

The Scorpio knew I was dating the Pisces, but the Pisces didn't know about the Scorpio until last Easter when the Pisces stayed too long, and Scorpio showed up early at my house.

Needless to say I felt terrible about it because I knew I wasn't being fair to either one of them. I finally told the Pisces that I couldn't see him any more — it was over. I really didn't want to end it with the Pisces, but I didn't want to lose the Scorpio either. Well, to make a long story short, I married my Scorpio five months ago.

Last week I saw in the newspaper that my Pisces took out a marriage license to marry a 24-year-old girl! Now I can't get the Pisces out of my mind. I want to write to him and tell him I still have feelings for him, and also that I wish him well in his marriage. Half of me says to write to him and the other half of me says not to. What should I do? — CAPRICORN

DEAR CAPRICORN: Listen to the half of you with the brains in it, and don't write to Pisces. Stay out of his life and concentrate on making your marriage with Scorpio work.

DEAR ABBY: Our son, age 33, is getting married for the third time. His fiance has never been married and is planning a large church wedding.

Our son's first wedding was a traditional church wedding with all the trimmings, showers, gifts, etc.

The second time he married a young woman who had been married before, so it was much smaller, but most of our friends and relatives sent them wedding gifts anyway.

Now I feel very awkward sending wedding invitations to our friends and relatives a third time. I am also afraid the bride-to-be will wonder why there will not be a wedding shower from my son's friends and relatives.

Abby, how do people feel about this? We honestly don't know what to do, but we've been through all this twice already. — ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

DEAR ENOUGH: Your signature expresses my feelings, too, but it's unfair for a first-time bride to miss out on gifts because she's No. 3.

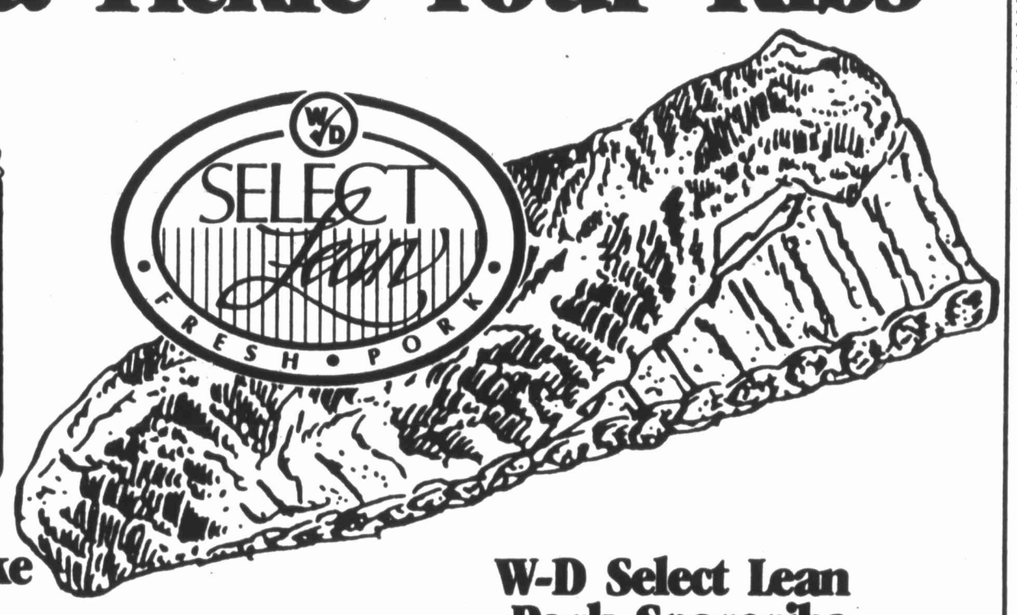

Skip the shower, but go ahead and invite those friends and relatives you want, and whatever they choose to do about a gift will be up to them.

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Saturated fat is out

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

Saturated fat is out, unsaturated fat is in. That's the news from several major national food manufacturers and fast food chains.

And it's good news for health-conscious Americans concerned about reducing their risk of heart disease and stroke because artery-clogging saturated fat is a major contributor to these health problems.

The switch from saturated to unsaturated fat is an important step in the fight against heart disease. Remember, though, that total fat in most altered products remains virtually the same. Thus, consuming them may not help reduce cancer risk since cancer has been linked to both saturated and unsaturated fat intake.

Some companies have recently switched from beef fat, coconut oil, palm oil, palm kernel oil or lard to less saturated vegetable oils for some or all of their products.

Many companies have changed the type of fat used in some, but not all, of their products. Look for unsaturated vegetable oils such as corn and soybean oil. Avoid saturated fats like lard, beef fat and tropical oils such as coconut and palm oil.

Many fast food manufacturers also have switched from saturated fats for frying on all or some of their menu items.

To cut down fat consumption to 30 percent of calories — as recommended in the American Institute for Cancer Research Dietary Guidelines to lower Cancer risk — you still need to keep a sharp eye on snack and fast foods. However, no one is immune to temptation, so if you do indulge occasionally, consider those foods made with unsaturated fats.

Bird lady studies her feathered friends

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Tumbleweed Smith

Mary Reed lives in a little place called Wildwood south of Woodville. It's a small resort community built around a creek-fed lake and an 18-hole golf course. Tall pines grace the landscape.

While Mary was a teacher she became interested in birds. "When the kids studied things from nature they seemed more interested," says Mary. She put bird feeders just outside the classroom windows and the children became accustomed to seeing different types of birds.

She says to be a bird watcher you need two things: a good bird look and a good pair of binoculars. She uses the Golden Guide to Birds of North America because she likes the way the groupings are done. It also has a chart that explains bird calls.

Mary conducts classes to teach people how to become bird watchers. She never charges for her services. "It's more fun that way," says Mary.

She has filing cabinets full of letters from people who attended her bird watching classes. Most of the letters tell her how their lives had been changed for the better since they became bird watchers.

Her backyard is full of things for birds. She even had her husband plant a dead tree where the birds can perch. Three bird baths have water dripping into them. "It's always best to have some movement in their water. It attracts more birds."

She has a single piece of copper tubing coming out of a faucet next to each bird bath. It extends upward, makes a rainbow curve and drips into the bird bath.

Mary doesn't put out birdseed in the summer months. "Natural food is better for them and there are so many natural things out there." She hangs a concoction of suet, peanut butter, oatmeal, bird seed and syrup in the trees during winter months.

She observes how birds sleep. "They have a trigger mechanism in their feet. When they go to sleep on a branch of a tree, their feet lock around the branch. That way, they won't fall while they're sleeping."

She likes bird watching because it gets her outside. "Then when I'm outside, I can't help but notice the flowers, trees, plants and other things in nature. Besides, it's an activity you can do with friends."

Last year she put up houses for bluebirds and established a bluebird trail. "We built 73 houses and put them up around Wildwood, mostly in people's back yards. We raised 149 birds. We kept thorough notes on the project."

These are the eastern variety of bluebirds, about the size of a sparrow. The other day a neighbor went to Mary's house carrying a small bluebird in a cloth. It had flown into a window. Mary's husband held the bird for a while in his hands and talked to it. He noticed every once in awhile the bird would open its eyes.

In less than an hour the bird was feeling better and flew up to a ceiling fan. Mary's husband thought it was fully recovered so he went outside to release it. Outside, the little bird uttered a cry as it flew to the nearest limb. Within five seconds there were two bluebirds on either side of the little bird.

In another five seconds three other bluebirds had come in to check out the situation. They huddled around the little bird to check it out and see if it was all right. The birds stayed there about eight minutes, then flew off together.

"The bluebirds are here all the time," says Mary. "We might not see them, but they're here." She calls her place a bluebird paradise. Her house has a large picture window that allows her to look out into her backyard. She designed her house so she could watch the birds even while cooking. "When company comes, we watch the birds. Even non bird watchers get involved. Along with the birds, we have eleven squirrels that come to play. There's never a dull moment."

Minister's work draws attention

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — With a finger pointed to the rear of the church, the minister commanded a young man to stand.

"Michael Stone!" said the Rev. Johnny Ray Youngblood before 1,000 witnesses. "I'm goin' a tell you what my mama once told me: At the rate you're goin', someone's goin' a kill you. Man, you got a baaaaad attitude. You hear me?

"And friends of Michael's, if you see him in trouble . . . you deal with him. You hear me?"

The St. Paul Community Baptist Church congregation heard, all right, punctuating his scolding with amens and yessirs.

Youngblood's words were daring, but his daring has a solid record:

- As co-chairman of the East Brooklyn Congregations, a group of 55 churches and a synagogue, he led an effort that turned an abandoned section of eastern Brooklyn into a community of working-class families by building 1,250 homes. The project, called Nehemiah after the Biblical prophet who rebuilt the walls of a burned-out Jerusalem, has inspired similar plans in Baltimore and Los Angeles. Congress recently passed a "Nehemiah" law that provides incentives for cities to copy the Brooklyn project.
- He formed an alliance two years ago with city banks to secure jobs for black high school graduates; 300 now have entry-level positions.
- And the church, located in one of New York City's toughest areas, was surrounded by storefront drug operations until he lobbied police to enforce a law that locked up buildings in which people were arrested for drugs; then, the church bought 14 properties. The church now rents 11 stores and three houses.

"We need a whole new culture," the 40-year-old Youngblood said in an interview. "And I think the church might have to become the incubator."

Politicians, community activists and preachers from more than 100 cities have made pilgrimmages to Nehemiah homes. Many then go to hear Youngblood's gospel.

"He's a new type of leader," said Gov. Mario Cuomo, one of those escorted by Youngblood to the homes. "He's good at putting together coalitions and working cooperatively. There's none of the demagogue in him."

"He's making the Old Testament come alive," said Michael Gecan, the New York area organizer for the Industrial Areas Foundation, a group founded by the late Saul Alinsky to train community organizers and build citizen groups. "He's becoming a national leader, quietly."

Some black leaders say too quietly.

"As a clergyman, he's a premier example of the strong, new black clergy today," said the Rev. Calvin Butts, pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem and a civil rights activist. "But in terms of whether he's had a profound impact on the major issues this city faces today, I say he has no public presence.

"On the issue of police brutality, when you look at the number of people who took radical stands, Johnny Ray Youngblood is not there. When you think of the lack of proper health care for the poor, Johnny Ray Youngblood is not there. And at a time when we need new leaders in this city to improve the climate of racial tension, he has not spoken out," Butts said.

"Speaking out," said Youngblood, "is not always the best way to get results. I think I am involved in the vital issues. Housing is one. Education is one."

And yet Youngblood has found that his behind-the-scenes work has not led to more Nehemiah homes elsewhere in New York — and he's starting to speak out.

"We will build in the South Bronx," Youngblood told a crowd of 5,000 at a recent rally at a 4.2-acre Bronx site that is now all rubble and broken glass.

The demonstration came after Mayor Edward Koch had rebuffed Nehemiah backers who wanted to build homes there. Koch favors a developer's plan to build 350 condominiums, starting at $95,000, while Nehemiah wants to build 90 homes, beginning at $57,000.

Nehemiah depends on interest-free loans from a $10 million church fund, large tracts of land donated by the city, property tax abatements and city grants of $10,000 a house.

"You will own homes in the South Bronx," Youngblood vowed. "The South Bronx may look like a graveyard, but all resurrecting takes place in graveyards."

Youngblood is a Southerner, raised in a three-room house in New Orleans by a God-fearing mother and a stern father. In his youth, he liked "to go out with the guys, run with the girls," but his mother set him straight. "Her word was like the echo of God," he said.

He earned a master's degree in divinity in Rochester, N.Y., and in 1974, St. Paul's deacons hired him.

He was 26, married, with an infant son.

"We were looking for a leader," recalled William Brandon, a church member since 1934 and a deacon in 1974. "We had been through a lot of crises with different ministers. We decided to turn him loose."

Then, the congregation had only 72 people.

But Youngblood's oratory and community work drew scores of newcomers. In 1979, the congregation moved to a bigger building, which they expanded this year.

Now, St. Paul has 4,500 members.

The church has a $2.5 million budget, 27 staff members, 400 volunteer workers and an elementary school. About 45 percent of the families are tithers, meaning they pledge 10 percent of their salaries to the church.

Crowds of 1,000 or more pack the two Sunday services, which begin the instant music director Eli Wilson hits the keys of an electronic keyboard. The 80-member choir, two drummers and congregation are a beat behind and in seconds people are up, clapping their hands and stamping their feet. The floor bounces.

From the pulpit, Youngblood is part entertainer and part teacher. He is funny at times, fiery at times, straight-talking all times.

He asks the black men to stand, visitors to stand and children with report cards to come to the front as their grades are read. There is calculation in this: He wants more men to come, more new members and better grades for the children.

The reverend pays special attention to young people. "We are rallying around the African proverb that it takes a whole village to raise a child," he said in an interview.

Michael Stone knows.

"It was hard to hear what he said," the 17-year-old said a few weeks after Youngblood disciplined him from the pulpit for getting into a fight after Bible class.

"But I've been controlling my temper better these days," he said. "His doing that made a lot of people keep an eye out on me. It helped."

"As a clergyman, he's a premier example of the strong, new black clergy today. But in terms of whether he's had a profound impact on the major issues this city faces today, I say he has no public presence." — Rev. Calvin Butts.

Workers save dog that befriended mail carriers

By JUDY BERNAS
The Odessa American

ODESSA (AP) — Mail carriers and dogs have long been enemies.

Dogs have the sense of when the mailman comes around the corner and the carriers seem to know which dogs to avoid.

And the mail carriers at the main office of the U.S. Postal Service in Odessa have had their share of encounters with dogs.

But none like Pablo.

Pablo was different than most of the dogs the mail carriers ran into.

He was a friend to every mail carrier and an enemy to anyone who tried to hurt them. He also abridged the post office oath: Neither rain, nor sleet nor snow will keep Pablo from the mail carriers. "He never called in sick, either," said carrier Jimmy Graham.

He lived on the route Graham now runs and carrier Penny Smith used to run. "The people that owned him couldn't keep him tied up. He'd follow the Jeep everywhere. If there was someone new on the route, they knew where to go because they'd follow Pablo."

Pablo wouldn't let any harm come to the mail carriers. "If someone went to get a mail carrier, he wouldn't let that happen. But he wasn't a mean dog," said carrier Sonya Harlow.

ODESSA — Pablo, the dog, befriended mail carriers that he ran into on their routes. He would hang around at the post office when he wasn't walking with mail carriers.

The two were happy together. The part German Shepherd greeted mail carriers in the morning, followed a route and even spent nights or weekends at the post office.

In the mornings, Pablo would run from carrier to carrier. "I think he thought we were all coming out to play with him," said carrier Pat Eubanks.

It all ended when someone reported Pablo. The dog catcher put Pablo in the pound and set a time for him to be destroyed.

However, the mail carriers weren't about to let Pablo die. They all chipped in either 50 cents, $1 or $5. They bailed Pablo out of the pound for $51.

He now lives with a mail carrier's sister, Edna Aguero, in southwest Odessa. In a house with a big backyard, kids to play with and a regular mailman, Pablo has a new home.

Instead of mail carriers, Pablo now follows Aguero's children, Kristi, Santos and Christopher.

Smith, who Pablo followed for more than two years, said he was just a puppy when he began following her. She used to park her postal Jeep across from the house he lived at and then follow her on the route.

"He was so sweet. He saved me a few times. Some kids were walking a pit bull and he got loose. Fortunately, the dog went after Pablo instead of me."

"Pablo is like one of us," Smith said, "and we were all upset when he got picked up. I miss him."

Eubanks remembers Pablo clearly. "I've only run that route about three times and he followed me all around. He came up to the Jeep at a stop sign and kissed me. I went home and told my husband that I was in love."

The eyes have it

By HARPER'S BAZAAR

The eyes have it for summer beauty, and a little mascara goes a long way toward highlighting your baby blues or bright browns.

Health is the first thing to think about, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, and the experts advise keeping your mascara fresh.

Most experts recommend replacing mascara every three months, because microorganisms on your lashes latch onto the mascara brush and are inserted back into the tube. Preservatives usually kill most of them, but extended use overtaxes this defense.

In addition, many women, particularly those who wear contact lenses, suffer irritations from eye makeup. According to a recent study, 66 percent of women nationwide wear contact lenses or glasses and 42 percent of all women have sensitive eyes.

One way to minimize sensitivity is to use hypoallergenic mascara.

How you apply mascara can be important, and pro Elizabeth Drabinski offers this advice:

— Prep your lashes with a conditioner or apply a bit of gentle daytime moisturizer on your lashes and then press them lightly between thumb and index finger. Allow to dry completely before proceeding.

— Mascara should always go on after shadow and liner. If your lashes are very sparse or straight, curl them. Place the eyelash curler as close as possible to the roots, resting your elbow on a table for support. Squeeze for 10 seconds. Slowly open a bit before releasing all the way. To prevent lash tears and pinched lids, replace the rubber gripper before it cracks.
