Post is mayor pro-tem...

Robertson appointed to council seat

Snyder City Council appointed Dayton Robertson to fill the unexpired term of Jackie Greene in District 4 and named District 3 Councilman Mike Post as mayor pro-tem Monday.

The council met in a special session to fill the two positions as well as to consider bids and passage of three city ordinances.

Mayor Troy Williamson recommended the appointment of Robertson, which was approved unanimously by the council.

Robertson is a 1980 graduate of Snyder High School and is currently employed as an engineer with Y-Z Industries.

According to Williamson, the appointment must be approved through the attorney general's office in Austin. Robertson is expected to be sworn in at the next regular council meeting.

Post was named as mayor protem, a position held by Greene before his resignation from the council earlier this month.

Williamson presented a certificate of achievement for excellence in financial reporting to Director of Finance Jeanne Johnson for the fifth consecutive year.

The award is presented anually by the Government Finance Officers Association of the United States and Canada and is the highest form of recognition in the area of governmental accounting and financial reporting.

The council passed a replacement ordinance on second reading concerning utility rates and landfill fees. The ordinance contained only one amendment, doing away with a charge for bringing tires into the landfill if the recycling trailer currently parked at the landfill is used.

Passed on first reading was a replacement for the same ordinance, which outlines requirements for disposal of septic waste.

Changes in the ordinance will include a charge of $20 for zero to 1,000 gallons of waste generated from the same source, allowing trucks with only a 500 gallon capacity to bring in 1,000 gallons from the same source with only a $20 charge.

Each load must have a separate manifest signed by the generator of the waste and must be inspected or tested. The ordinance will require trucks to have a hatch on top to allow inspection or testing by city personnel.

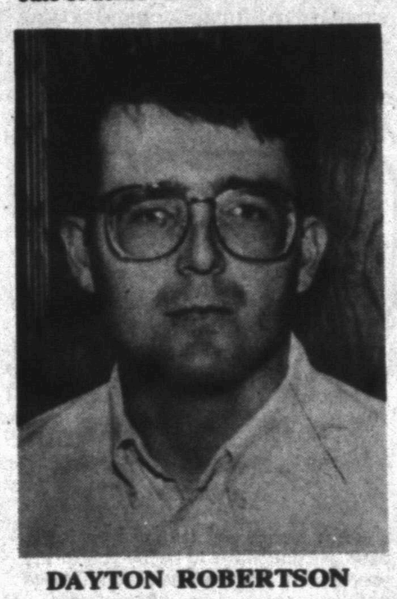

Dumping of septic waste will be through the city's wastewater treatment plant and is prohibited at the landfill. Grease trap waste will be dumped at the landfill and is prohibited through the wastewater treatment plant.

According to the ordinance, each transporter is responsible for the cleanup of materials dumped that do not meet acceptable stan-

Schools pledge to be drug free

Snyder public school students are participating in the Texas' War on Drugs Red Ribbon Campaign this week.

Snyder Lions Club has furnished red ribbons to signify the support of a drug-free lifestyle.

On the Centeral Elementary campus, the Proud to be Drug Free Red Ribbon Week will be integrated into the campus Positive Action Program to teach students how and why they can live drug free. Concepts related to students coping with the pressures, fears and worries which they face each day will be presented by classroom teachers this week and throughout the year.

Students and staff were encouraged to dress in red today.

Red Ribbon Week will conclude with a Positive Action Program assembly on Friday. Jim Rosson, principal, will recognize students who have demonstrated coping skills for a drug free lifestyle.

The third grade classrooms of Magdalena Aguirre, Judy Moss and Judy Barkowsky will provide a special program for all the students in two assemblies. The first program will begin at 8:30 a.m. for for grades pre-K through 1; the second will be at 9:30 a.m. for third graders.

Northeast Elementary faculty, staff and students will wear red ribbons each day this week. On Wednesday, everyone will be encouraged to wear red and white to signify "I'm Drug Free." Each classroom will plan special activities such as decorating their classroom door, writing poems or writing a "drug free" song.

Stanfield Elementary faculty, staff and students will wear red on Friday, along with wearing red

Federal court trial delayed

DALLAS — The U.S. District Court trial of building contractor Leonard L. Dockum, scheduled to begin Monday, has been postponed by Judge Jerry Buchmeyer.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jon Gant said the trial may be held in November or December.

Dockum, a former Sweetwater resident, has been indicted on a variety of charges related to the now-defuct First Western Savings and Loan in Colorado City.

Three employees of the savings and loan association who have pled guilty to bank fraud charges were due to testify in Dockum's trial. This included Neva Turner, a former Snyder resident, who was chief executive officer of the financial institution.

Turner, along with employees Marilyn Roberts and Kathy Byrd, have all pled guilty and are awaiting sentencing.

Maxfield has just one miss

One miss on last week's SDN Football Contest was all that came between Pat Maxfield of Rt. 2 Box 59 and a $250 perfect score.

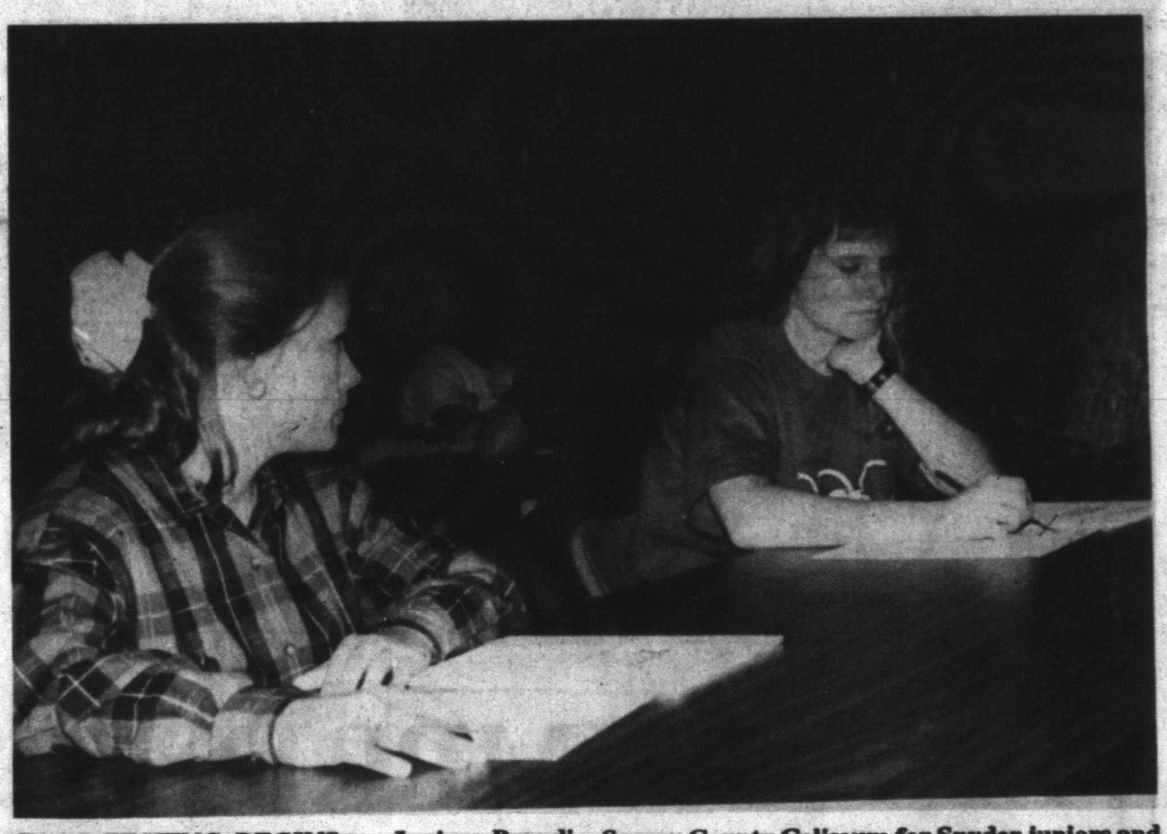

Maxfield and many others failed to call the Pittsburgh upset over Kansas City. She will receive the $50 first place money.

Six entrants had two misses each, and even using the tiebreaker procedure, three picked 35 total points, resulting in a three-way tie for second and third places.

Receiving $13.33 each are Tony Hayley of 3201 Hill Ave., Justin Humphries of RR 1 Box 80 and Joe Price of 3111 Ave. A.

Winners will be mailed their checks.

Another contest appears in this issue.

Bush expresses confidence he'll return to White House

by The Associated Press

A week before Election Day, President Bush expressed confidence that a last-minute "sea change" among voters will carry him past Bill Clinton to a second term in the White House. He embraced today's indication of economic growth and said, "If you think I'm happy, you're right."

Clinton ended his eighth and final bus tour and was campaigning in Georgia and Florida, two Southern battleground states. The Democrat stayed out of the duel between Bush and Ross Perot, who has alleged — without proof — that Republicans plotted dirty tricks to disrupt his independent campaign.

Bush was in Des Moines, Iowa, where he began his day with an interview on NBC's "Today" show. Perot has no public events on his schedule.

The president said the allegation that Republicans were planning to disrupt the wedding of Perot's daughter was "crazy" and that he found Perot's willingness to spend tens of millions of dollars of his personal fortune on campaign ads to be "a little bizarre."

Bush has been pummeled by Perot and Clinton on his economic record as president and so was anxious in a morning television interview to spotlight the 2.7 percent increase in the nation's economic growth.

Bush told NBC that he knows many Americans feel things "haven't gone too great on the economy" and that there is an impulse "to take it out on George Bush." He said he was confident voters would recognize signs of improvement as well as his accomplishments in foreign policy.

"They're going to sit down in the voting booth and they're going to compare the individual candi-

The SDN Column

The feller on Deep Creek says, "You can't fool all the people all of the time. That's why you need two political parties."

It seems like this presidential campaign has been going on since the beginning of time. The good news is there are only seven more days until the election.

Candidates at all levels are looking for something that will give 'em that extra edge. A good piece of advice is often just the advantage needed to outshine an opponent.

Earl Long, Huey's brother and three-time governor of neighboring Louisiana, once explained the secret of his political success.

"Don't write anything you can phone. Don't phone anything you can talk face-to-face. Don't talk anything you can smile. Don't smile anything you can wink. And don't wink anything you can nod."

Even after an election, friends and supporters continue to give advice.

Scurry County Judge Bob Doolittle says that often the advice is helpful. Such was the case one recent Sunday morning between Sunday school and worship at First Baptist Church.

Doolittle was looking for a seat when a young lady that had long been a family friend tapped him on the shoulder and asked, "Judge, can I give you some advice?"

As an elected official, Doolittle is accustomed to receiving suggestions, but not necessarily while attending church.

However, Judge Doolittle was appreciative for the advice.

She said, "Judge, why don't you zip your pants."

Bumper snicker seen in Fort Worth:

"My family values can whip your family values."

On the road again — if Clinton wins

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a time of audience-participation politics and talk show campaigning, Bill Clinton's bus tours match the mood. And Clinton says if he wins the White House, he'll still go on the road, campaign style.

"We want to keep doing things like this because it is so easy for a president to get out of touch," he said of his sunup-to-midnight bus tour in North Carolina. "Even somebody who has good intentions can get out of touch."

AP analysis

In the splendidly secure isolation of the modern presidency, the man in the White House does tend to become remote from the everyday lives of the people who elected him.

Clinton got a reminder Monday when a woman in Winston-Salem asked him to tell her the prices of items from a gallon of gas to a pound of hamburger to a pair of blue jeans, saying she wanted to know whether he understood what the average family faces.

"Pretty good," she rated his answers.

The Democratic nominee said he's tried to stay in touch as governor of Arkansas, and would try harder if he beats President Bush next Tuesday.

He's said he knows the difficulties involved, and feels sympathy for Bush and anyone else walled behind the security apparatus of the White House.

"We want to do more bus trips, and these town meetings," Clinton said Monday during a CBS-TV question-and-answer hour with Winston-Salem voters.

He and Al Gore, his running mate, toured central North Carolina, Winston-Salem to Kinston, in their eighth and last bus cavalcade of the campaign.

"If we win this thing, we're going to park this bus out beyond the White House," Clinton said aboard the lead bus in a procession of 15.

Campaigning by bus is hardly a Clinton creation. The wrinkle this time is that he's made it a symbol of a Democratic effort to reach hometown America, traveling the ordinary way. After his tour, Walter Mondale, the former vice president, said Midwesterners appreciated a presidential candidate who traveled among them instead of flying over them.

The bus tours also have been the centerpiece of an unprecedented dual campaign by Clinton and Gore. Conventional tactics put the presidential and vice presidential nominees in different territory, to broaden their reach. Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle have run that way. So did Democratic nominees, until now.

While Clinton and Gore have run separate, standard campaigns most of the time, they have traveled together for 17 days on the bus tours, and appeared jointly a half-dozen times beyond that. No other ticket has worked in tandem nearly so often.

As the Clinton camp tells it now, the dual campaigning varies the fare, appeals to the crowds, dramatizes the message of change and helps to blend operations and staffs. Besides, the two men get along and enjoy working together.

While that sounds carefully planned, both the bus idea and the two-man campaign bursts began as an experiment when Clinton and his advisers decided to capitalize on their Democratic National Convention sendoff by taking the road without a break. Other nominees — Michael Dukakis in 1988, Mondale in 1984 — had gone home, taken some time off, then launched the final campaign push.

The "town meetings" Clinton talks about continuing from the White House are question-and-answer sessions he'd used in seeking primary votes.

Bush has done the same with his "Ask George Bush" sessions in this campaign and the last one. Independent Ross Perot talks of holding electronic town meetings, in which people wouldn't just ask questions but could register their opinions and wishes, to be compiled by computer so that the president and Congress would know what they want done.

In office, both Bush and Ronald Reagan relied on the traditional contact points of presidents — the people they see in their travels, the letters they see at the White House.

The last Democratic president, Jimmy Carter, tried variations, with limited success in his single term. He said he'd stay close to the people, and tried to do it by holding campaign-flavor town meetings in spots including Clinton, Mass.

Carter also held a two-hour radio call-in show from the White House early in his administration, fielding 42 questions he said would help him understand people and their concerns.

It didn't last. The pressures, and crises, of the White House took hold.

Dear Abby

Youth Isn't the Compliment That All Aged Seek to Find

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My eldest sister, "Thelma," died of cancer last June. A short time before her death, I took her for a treatment, and afterward we had lunch at a nearby cafe.

The waitress offered me more coffee, then she turned to Thelma and asked, "And how about you, young lady?"

I could see that Thelma was deeply offended. She knew she wasn't young — she was 78 years old and had been fighting cancer for five years. She had lost all her hair because of the chemotherapy treatments and was very thin and frail.

Thelma had been a beauty until she fell ill. She was a talented artist and seamstress and had been active in community affairs. She refused to give up and kept going until she just couldn't any more. She made pretty scarves to cover her hairless head and wore gloves to hide her bony hands.

I resented that waitress thinking she was being complimentary by calling my sister "young lady."

Abby, please tell your readers that not all senior citizens think being addressed as "young" is the ultimate compliment. What's wrong with "ma'am" or "sir"? It sounds more sincere and respectful. Please print this for my wonderful sister.

MISSING MY SISTER

DEAR MISSING: Please accept my sympathy at the loss of your beloved sister. Thank you for writing. I'm printing your letter. Many can learn from it. I did.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here I am. I have a husband who retired last year, and he is driving me crazy! He gets dressed only when he has to go out; otherwise, he stays in his pajamas until noon — and a lot of times until 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Then he gets back into his pajamas right after 6 o'clock supper.

In the summertime, he wears only the bottoms. It is very embarrassing when people drop in — he won't even put on his trousers.

Are there other husbands like mine? And if there are any wives, out there who know how to get their men to dress presentably around the house, I sure hope they write in and share their secret with Dear Abby.

DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: I don't know what your husband's attitude was toward retirement — but from the picture you are painting, he seems to have little incentive to get dressed and go out. This could be a symptom of depression, or possibly a physical problem. Tell your family doctor, and ask him to schedule an appointment for your husband.

If everything checks out A-OK, perhaps you could explore some senior activities that would interest you both. These are supposed to be the golden years — don't let them tarnish.

DEAR ABBY: Last summer you printed a poem titled "Be the Best of Whatever You Are," and requested the name of the author.

That poem was written by Douglas Malloch. It was copyrighted in 1925 and published in 1926 by the Scott Dowd Co. in Chicago.

Douglas Malloch was my grandfather's brother. He was born in Muskegon, Mich., and spent most of his life in Chicago. He published numerous books of essays and poems, and was quite a well-known author in the 1920s and '30s. He was called "the poet who makes living a joy."

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a compulsive overeater. Does dieting to control weight followed by binge eating have any effect on my overall health?

DEAR READER: Recent studies have shown that overweight people who lose and gain weight cyclically are at greater risk of health problems (such as heart disease) than are stout folks who maintain constant weights.

Therefore, unless you're so motivated to lose that you're willing to stick to a consistent diet, I recommend that you swear off the binging cycles. You'll feel better about yourself and life will certainly be less complicated for you.

Check with your doctor about this to make sure that you don't have an undiagnosed ailment, such as diabetes, that may be contributing to your problem. Also, because of your addictive pattern of eating, you might consider counseling.

Because compulsive overeating is a form of substance abuse, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Help II — Substance Abuse & Mental Health." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Thirty years ago during a routine visit with my doctor, I mentioned I had a slight rash on my lower back. He diagnosed me with shingles and gave me a shot of either vitamin B6 or B12. Two or three days later I had another shot and the blisters dried up and the pain went away. Since then, I've known several people with shingles who have suffered for months and this treatment was never suggested for them. Why not?

DEAR READER: Shingles, a type of herpes infection of nerves in the skin, causes painful blisters. However, not all patients with this affliction progress to a full-blown rash; some have only a few minor lesions. This is what probably happened in your case, because I doubt the vitamin shots played any role whatsoever in your recovery.

Such shots are completely ineffective in curing shingles. Of course, in the 1960s, there was no treatment for this virus infection, so doctors often felt obligated to give some form of therapy, even if they knew it was ineffective.

Fortunately, today, there is effective treatment for shingles: Acyclovir (Zovirax) when taken in pill form, as early as possible in the course of the disease, will often cure the infection.

Carradine visited Rogers' birthplace

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Keith Carradine, who stars in "The Will Rogers Follies" as the cowboy humorist, sounded like a tenderfoot during a visit to Rogers' birthplace.

"I like the sound of cows. I'm much fonder of the way they sound than the way they smell, but I'm sure a fellow could even get used to that," the 43-year-old actor said Monday.

Carradine, who starred in "Will Rogers" on Broadway when it won a Tony for best musical in 1991 and is touring with the road show, visited Rogers' birthplace in Oologah, 20 miles from Tulsa. The ranch is being restored as a museum.

Delay blooming of Christmas cactus

DEAR POLLY — It looks like once again my Christmas cactus is going to be a Thanksgiving cactus. Why does it bloom so early? Is there any way I can make it bloom closer to Christmas? — JENNIFER

DEAR JENNIFER — There's probably not much you can do this year, since it's already well on its way to blooming. However, often a cactus will bloom for a good long while, so you may have some blossoms left by Christmas. You might also try keeping it in a cooler environment, where the night temperatures are from 50 to 60 degrees. This should slow down the blooming. Slightly warmer temperatures will speed it up.

Ideally, the Christmas cactus should receive at least 12 hours of darkness a night, starting in fall. If yours is blooming too early, next year you might try to keep it in prolonged light until a little later in the fall than you're used to doing.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter, "Caring for Christmas Trees and Holiday Plants," which offers more tips for caring for Christmas cactus, amaryllis, narcissus and poinsettias, as well as tips for selecting, caring for and disposing of your Christmas tree. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I recycle pancake syrup containers — the plastic kind with a handle and squeeze top. I remove the labels and fill with my favorite shampoo, conditioner or bubble bath. These items look pretty in such containers, which are handy to use. You can buy bulk shampoo, which is cheaper. Keep the bulk gallons under the sink and out of sight, and use the syrup containers instead. — SUSAN

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — My sister-in-law sent me a "receipt" book, and I'd like to share one of the receipts with everyone. The spelling is copied exactly from the book:

"Grandma's Receipt for Doing the Family Wash

1. Bild a fire in back yard to heet kettle of rain water.
2. Set tubs so smoke won't blow in eyes if wind is pert.
3. Shave 1 whole cake of lie soap in biling water.
4. Sort things. Makes three piles — 1 pile white, 1 pile cullord, 1 pile work britches and rags.
5. Stir flour in water to smooth, then thin down with biling water.

DEAR CONNIE — Well, one advantage of all that work is that you get your porch washed as well as the clothes! But my favorite part is the one about setting and counting your blessings! Thank you very much for sharing this bit of old-time household advice. It brightened my day and made me really count my blessings — one being a modern automatic clothes washer! — POLLY

Penwomen recite work

Scurry County Penwomen met on Oct. 21 in the home of Mrs. Garnet Quiett with Janelle Burk presiding. Dorothy Cox offered the invocation.

Accomplishments were reported by Betty Kellum stating that her poem, Ode to the Senior Center, was recently used on the Senior Center's activity sheet. Bertha Warren's poem, The Old Red Rooster, was used on the activity sheet at the Rotan Senior Center.

Sherry Bryant presented the program on "Revising and Condensing Poetry." She gave several ideas on revising a poem: make alterations — cross out or crumple the page and start at a new angle; and, delete all unnecessary adjectives and adverbs.

She advised her listeners to rearrange stanzas or sections in a different order and try shortening, lengthening and varying line lengths. She emphasized not using forced or cliched rhymes.

"The way a poem ends often makes or breaks it," she said, "check for prosy phrasing, dull expressions, unclear language and weak imagery, or lack of it." She concluded with a quote from Robert Frost, "A poem begins with delight and ends with wisdom."

Members then read their writings: Autumn Time, by Kellum; A Touch of Yellow and Resting Time ,by Cox; and The Squeak and Grandpa Chisom., by Warren.

Bryant read her nostalgic article, Country In My Heart, and letters from third graders where she had presented a program.

Other poems read were Autumn and Icabod Crane, by Betty Boyd; Moonlight Tears, by Quiett; and A Love More True and How Many Times, by Burk.

Kellum brought the word of encouragement, " Life is like the rose — we can smell and enjoy it after we have conquered the thorns," comparing the adversitives of life with the thorns of a rose. She concluded by reading her poem, Don't Give Up.

The hostess prize was won by Warren. Refreshments followed the meeting.

Jean Everett, hostess for the Nov. 18 meeting of The Penwomen, invites all writers and those interested in writing to attend.

Safe Halloween

By The Associated Press

Just a few precautions in choosing and creating your child's costume will make Halloween a safe one for your favorite witches, goblins, devils and ghosts:

— Avoid dark costumes. Choose light-colored clothing that's short enough to prevent tripping. Pant lengths and skirts should be no longer than ankle-length.

— Add reflective tape to costumes and trick or treat bags so that children are clearly visible to traffic.

— If possible, have your children wear their own shoes.

— Make sure children can see well through face masks, or use makeup. If you make the costume, cut eyeholes large enough for the child's peripheral vision. For proper ventilation, sew extra-large breathing holes in costumes that cover the face.

— If you buy the costume, make sure it is flame-resistant.

— Avoid hard plastic or wooden props such as daggers and swords. Substitute with foam rubber, which is soft and flexible.

— Carry a flashlight when trick or treating. Adults should accompany young children.

Cruising until the final

The United States Open Team in the NEC World Team Olympiad included five of the defending champions: Bob Hamman/Bobby Wolff, Jeff Meckstroth/Eric Rodwell and Seymon Deutsch. The sixth player, Michael Rosenberg, had replaced the late Jim Jacoby.

The American team had no trouble in reaching the final. But then they lost to a strong French quartet.

The prettiest piece of declarer-play in the final was produced by Hamman.

Against four spades, West led the heart king, cashed the heart ace and switched to the club nine.

Hamman seemed certain to lose four tricks: one spade, two hearts and one club. How did he make one of these losers disappear?

After winning the club switch with his ace, Hamman cashed the two top trumps. He followed by taking the heart queen, discarding a club from the dummy. Now came the key play. Realizing he needed the trick, Hamman cashed the diamond ace and then finessed dummy's diamond jack. When it won, a club was discarded from hand on the diamond king. Hamman continued with the club king. West refused to ruff, so Hamman exited with a trump.

West won, but he had to return a red-suit card, conceding a ruff-and-discard and allowing declarer to avoid a club loser: plus 420 to the USA.

All that for a loss of two international matchpoints! At the other table, West didn't pass over one no-trump. In the end, he played in two hearts doubled, going two down for a loss of 500 points.

Woman suing author of book

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — A woman is suing for more than $10 million over a book that claims she and soul singer James Brown were lovers.

Jacqueline Daughtry of Atlanta filed the lawsuit against author Stanley Booth and Random House last week, claiming the allegation in "Rhythm Oil" harmed her reputation and her marriage.

Booth, who lives in Brunswick, said Mrs. Daughtry told him she and the Godfather of Soul became lovers after they sang at a 1987 benefit.

Calls to Brown's attorney on Monday were not returned.

Horton could miss Eagles game

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Free safety Ray Horton will likely miss Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Eagles because of a right knee injury, Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said Monday.

"I would think Ray will be out," Johnson said. "We'll move James Washington into Ray's spot. There also is a possibility we could activate Robert Williams off the injured reserve."

Laimbeer fined for flagrant foul

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Laimbeer of the Detroit Pistons was fined $7,500 by Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president for operations, for a flagrant foul against David Wood of San Antonio in an exhibition game Thursday night.

Former UH standout Whitley dies

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Wilson Whitley, the winner of the 1976 Lombardi Award as college football's best lineman when he played at the University of Houston, died Sunday in a hospital near his home after being stricken with chest pains. He was 37.

Whitley checked himself into the hospital after complaining of chest pains, and died of an apparent heart attack, according to Houston spokesman Trey Wilkinson. He was selected in the first round of the 1976 NFL draft by Cincinnati and played for the Bengals until 1982. He ended his playing career with Houston in 1983.

Seahawks cut team sack leader

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks released 13-year veteran defensive end Jacob Green, the team's career leader in sacks.

The 35-year-old Green spent the first half of the season on injured reserve with a sprained right knee. The decision saved the Seahawks half of Green's $1.3 million salary this season.

Kennedy takes reins in Texas

Former minor league skipper is new Rangers' manager

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Kevin Kennedy knows the Texas Rangers are a power team. He also wants them to learn to run the bases and play defense.

"I'm aware there is a lot of talent on the team, but you can have power and still make things happen on the basepaths," Kennedy said. "And I will stress fundamentals from day one in spring training."

Kennedy, bench coach of the Montreal Expos, on Monday was given two years to do what 12 managers ahead of him have never done: get the Rangers into the playoffs.

"I think being No. 13 is a good omen," Kennedy said. "I'm about winning. I expect to win."

Kennedy of Tarzana, Calif., succeeded Toby Harrah, who was 32-44 after replacing the fired Bobby Valentine in July.

Harrah was offered another job in the Rangers organization but general manager Tom Grieve said Harrah has yet to say whether he will stay with the club.

Kennedy immediately went to work on assembling a staff. Texas pitching coach Tom House could be on his way out with Claude Osteen, who has worked with Kennedy, as his replacement.

"That's the task at hand right now," Kennedy said. "I need to get a staff together."

Grieve said Kennedy won't be given time to rebuild.

"Our goal is to win the American League championship," Grieve said. "It's important to me to win next year."

Kennedy was a successful minor league manager in the Los Angeles Dodgers organization, posting a 534-373 record in eight years from 1984 to 1991. Kennedy was a catcher in minor league baseball at the Triple-A level.

"I've been in the game 18 years and I haven't felt like a rookie since 1976," Kennedy said. "There's no question I'm prepared for this opportunity. I've served my apprenticeship. There was nothing left to do in the minors."

He becomes the eighth current major league manager with a catching background, joining Rene Lachemann, Gene Lamont, Jim Leyland, Johnny Oates, Buck Rodgers, Jeff Torborg and Joe Torre.

"I appreciate the Rangers giving me this opportunity to manage in the major leagues. It's been a long time coming for me," Kennedy said.

The 38-year-old Kennedy said the Rangers will run and play better defense.

"My style is very aggressive. I like to make things happen. I like to run," Kennedy said.

"I expect execution, and I stress fundamentals. I believe I'm a good communicator, and I enjoy the rapport with players," Kennedy said. "We will start on day one in spring training working on fundamentals."

He said he patterns his style after Leyland of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who also never played in the big leagues.

"I respect the way Jim runs a ballclub," Kennedy said. "He runs a good game and I'd like to do that.

"If you asked me if I'm a disciplinarian or a players' manager, I'd say I'm probably a combination of both. There are times you need discipline, and there are times you need to talk to a player and find out what makes him tick. I enjoy being around personalities. It makes it fun. I don't want to have any clones on the team."

Rangers managing partner George W. Bush said the club narrowed its search to four finalists — Kennedy; Harrah, Rene Lachemann, recently named manager of the Florida Marlins; and Jerry Royster, a manager in the Dodgers organization.

"He was a very impressive candidate," Bush said. "His first mission will be to unify the club and take us to a new era."

Kennedy can speak passable Spanish and managed four years in Latin America. The Rangers have a number of Latin players, including Jose Canseco and Juan Gonzalez.

"He'll do well with the Latin players," said Montreal manager Felipe Alou. "I know the Expos will miss him a lot. He did a great job for us."

Bills rally to beat Jets, 24-20

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills actually were rooting for the New York Jets to score. It was all about time.

The Jets obliged, taking a 20-17 lead but leaving 1:50 on the clock. That was enough, as it always is when these teams meet, for Buffalo to rally.

"If they were going to score, I'm glad they scored on the first time," Jim Kelly said after leading the Bills 75 yards in seven plays in the final 1:50 to the winning touchdown and a 24-20 victory Monday night. "We didn't have to waste our timeouts. Overall, everybody stuck in there."

And the Bills stuck it in the end zone on a play Kelly basically made up at the 12-yard line.

"I don't even think we have that in the playbook," the AFC's leading passer said of his touchdown pass over the middle to Thurman Thomas with 51 seconds to go.

"In the five years I've been here," added Thomas, who also rushed for 142 yards, "he's read it right every time."

In the last five years, the Bills have read the Jets just right. They've won 10 in a row against New York, which also has fallen six straight times on Monday night, three times to Buffalo.

"I know they were lucky to get out of here alive," Jets tackle Irv Eatman said. "We kicked their butts, but we didn't get more points than they did."

They came close, thanks to a 77-yard drive to Brad Baxter's 1-yard TD run for the lead. Ken O'Brien replaced injured starter Browning Nagle (shoulder, arch) and took the Jets the final 55 yards. Rob Moore dropped a long pass in the end zone on which James Williams was flagged for interference just before Baxter scored.

"I didn't think they would get any points there, especially after we sacked Kelly on the first play," Jets safety Lonnie Young said about the winning drive. "We're pros, like everybody else, and we've got to make the plays.

"There are all kinds of great quarterbacks and wide receivers, and we see them each week. He took their team and marched them down the field and put points on the board and we came out losers again."

For the sixth time in seven games this season. The Bills, meanwhile, snapped a two-game slide in which their muddled no-huddle scored just 13 points. They are 5-2.

The Bills, losers of two in a row after a 4-0 start, didn't get going offensively until the second quarter. Cary Blanchard's 42-yard field goal gave New York a 3-0 lead after one period.

Ken Davis dived in from the 2 for Buffalo's first touchdown 54 seconds into the second quarter. Blanchard made a 40-yarder, but the Bills took a 14-6 halftime lead with a 62-yard drive in 43 seconds. James Lofton scored on a 16-yard pass from Kelly with 18 seconds to go in the half.

"This type of victory is a big boost for us," Thomas said. "No matter what the circumstances, the Jets will play us tough. But we've got a lot of character."

Which they showed by scoring immediately after all but one of New York's scores. In the third period, the Jets went 84 yards in 10 plays and Pat Chaffey ran in from the 1, making it 14-13. The Bills came back with Steve Christie's 33-yard field goal.

Then the Jets took the lead, only to leave too much time for Kelly and his arsenal.

Bonds tops list of free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Bonds, Mark McGwire and Ruben Sierra are free, and Toronto told World Series hero Dave Winfield he can be, too.

Greg Maddux, Doug Drabek, Wade Boggs, Benito Santiago, John Smiley and Chris Bosio were among the 26 players to file for free agency Monday as baseball's business season began. There are 166 players potentially eligible to file by the Nov. 8 deadline.

Just 90 minutes after a triumphant parade through the streets of Toronto and rally inside the SkyDome, the Blue Jays said they wouldn't offer salary arbitration to Winfield and Candy Maldonado and declined to exercise 1993 options on pitchers Dave Stieb and Mark Eichhorn. That allows them to file for free agency, an early indication that teams will take a more bottom-line approach to negotiations this winter.

"It's a tough thing to do an hour-and-a-half after celebrating with 50,000 people," Blue Jays general manager Pat Gillick said. "It's not very pleasant, I'll tell you."

Toronto wants its players back, but at lower prices. Winfield, following a 26-homer, 108-RBI season, could have possibly doubled his $2.3 million salary in arbitration, and Maldonado, after hitting 20 homers, could have gotten a large raise from his income of $1,375,000.

"We'll have some discussions," said Winfield, whose 11th-inning double Saturday night gave Toronto a 4-3 victory over Atlanta and the World Series in six games.

The Blue Jays decided to pay Eichhorn a $150,000 buyout rather than a $2 million salary next year, and gave the injured Stieb a $1 million buyout rather than a $3.5 million salary. Gillick said he'd like to invite Stieb to spring training as a non-roster player, but suggested the 14-year Toronto veteran look elsewhere. Gillick would like to re-sign the others.

"Usually our style is to do things face to face," Gillick said. "Certainly the timing isn't very good, but we felt with the opportunity to do things in person, it's better than doing it over the phone."

Players who become free agents don't have to be protected in the Nov. 17 expansion draft. Few signings are expected until after the draft.

"We wanted to protect our organization down below with the 15 people, and we think we can re-sign him," Gillick said of Winfield.

Bonds, who is unlikely to re-sign with Pittsburgh, put his house in Coraopolis, Pa., up for sale on Monday.

"Barry's anxious to start talking," said Bonds' agent, Dennis Gilbert. "He's waited almost seven years to have the right."

Gilbert said he didn't envision any chance that the outfielder, who hit .311 this year with 34 homers and 103 RBIs, would re-sign with Pittsburgh.

"Barry put his house up for sale. That should answer that," Gilbert said. "Why would Pittsburgh wait all this time if Pittsburgh had an interest in signing him?"

Sierra may wind up re-signing with Oakland, but he filed for free agency anyway. His agent, Bob Woolf, has been in contact with Athletics general manager Sandy Alderson.

"We'll continue to talk," Woolf said.

Several teams didn't wait until Thursday's deadline to offer salary arbitration to 35 potential free agents, players covered by the restriction against repeat free agency within five years.

GOP owes convention vendors lots of money

HOUSTON (AP) — The Republican Party still owes vendors $467,000 more than two months after the GOP convention in Houston, federal records show.

Several vendors say they have sent multiple bills to the Republican Party for services, ranging from phone service to audio-visual equipment, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

Although the party was allocated $11 million dollars in federal funds for convention use, the GOP still owes money to the Harris County-owned Astrodome, AT&T, Southwestern Bell, the Xerox Corp. and several smaller companies.

The debts were detailed in an Oct. 15 filing with the Federal Election Commission.

Ed Nawracaj, president of General Audio Video, said the GOP has not responded to numerous phone calls and letters demanding payment for sound and lighting his Illinois company provided for the convention.

"I can't get them to talk to me. Mum's the word," said Nawracaj. "We are close to taking legal action."

According to FEC documents, General Audio Video is owed $84,000. Nawracaj, however, said he is owed $133,125, which includes the $11,000 tax owed the city of Houston.

Southwestern Bell sent an initial bill for the convention six weeks ago. Last week, they sent a second bill by registered mail, according to Gloria Delgado, Southwestern Bell spokeswoman.

"We're still waiting on the money," Ms. Delgado said.

Southwestern Bell is owed $80,000 for phone service during the convention. Ms. Delgado said company records show a different amount, but she would not divulge the amount.

Republican National Committee officials did not respond Monday to the Chronicle's questions about the outstanding debt.

Both the Democratic and Republican parties were each allocated $11 million in funds last January to pay for the political conventions. The funds are generated by the voluntary $1 check-off on federal tax forms.

FEC spokesman Scott Moxley said the money can only be used for political conventions. Unused funds and interest earned must be returned to the U.S. Treasury.

Moxley also said the FEC will audit convention expenditures by both parties.

Police note theft case

Snyder police filed a report for family violence and investigated a theft Monday.

Police were requested in the 100 block of 25th Street at 1:34 p.m. where a woman complained that she had been assaulted by her husband. She declined to file charges. Police filed a report for family violence.

At 5:57 p.m., Sherry Nachlinger came to the police department to report that a hood ornament and trunk key cover had been stolen from her 1988 Cadillac. A report for Class B theft was filed.

Officers handled numerous other calls, including helping stranded motorists and resolving domestic complaints. No arrests were made.

On The Issues

Future of manned space station

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Associated Press asks the Bush and Clinton campaigns for their stands on an issue each weekday and assembles their responses. Ross Perot's views are adapted from his public statements and campaign book, "United We Stand."

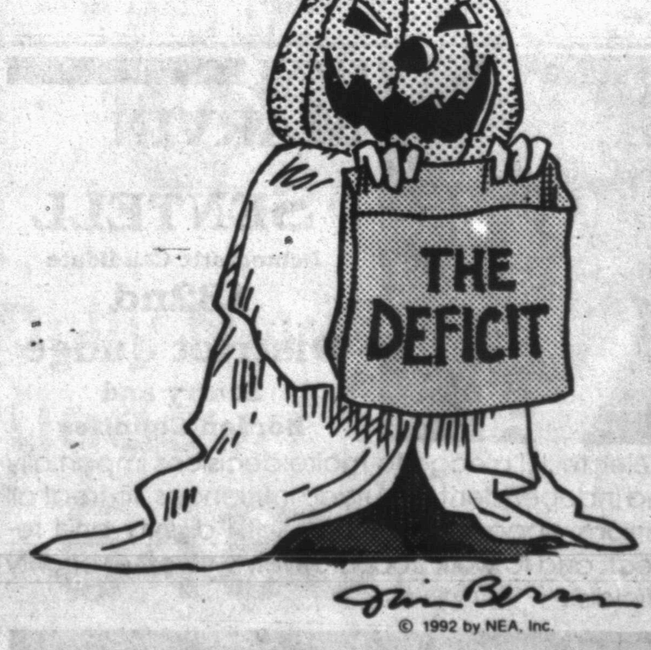

WASHINGTON (AP) — The views of the presidential candidates on the question: Should the government continue to pursue efforts to build a manned space station at an estimated cost of more than $30 billion?

Bush: "I strongly support the U.S. commitment to build Space Station Freedom. This orbiting laboratory will establish a permanent U.S. presence in space ... thereby strengthening our economy and creating jobs. We will also conduct research that will help us treat such diseases as AIDS, diabetes and cancer. We will use its unique vantage point to help monitor and protect the environment. And we will learn how to live and work in space, laying the foundation for long-duration human space flights, including trips back to the Moon and a human expedition to Mars."

Clinton: "I support a strong civilian space program. ... I also support smaller, more focused missions that address pressing concerns, such as the environment, and would base the development of larger projects, like the space station, on the twin principles of greater cooperation and burden sharing with our allies. This would help pave the way for future international ventures."

Perot: Perot has not taken a stand on this issue.

Canadians vote down constitutional reforms

TORONTO (AP) — Constitutional reform was a dead issue today after Canadians overwhelmingly rejected a reform package aimed at cooling Quebec's secessionist passions and giving the country's provinces and natives wider powers.

The defeat in Monday's nationwide referendum — the overall vote was 54.4 percent against and 42.4 percent in favor — will shelve efforts to change the system for the immediate future.

It could, however, revive separatist aspirations in French-speaking Quebec, the country's second most populous province after Ontario.

Political leaders immediately turned their attention to other pressing issues, especially Canada's lackluster economy.

"The Charlottetown agreement is history," Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said early today, referring to the capital of Prince Edward Island where the package of reforms was forged on Aug. 28.

"The principal and overriding complex task and obligation before us is to foster strong and durable economic renewal and to maintain a high Canadian standard of living in a relentlessly competitive international climate."

The reforms were voted down in six provinces and one territory, approved only by Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Northwest Territories and Ontario, where it passed by just 49.8 percent to 49.6 percent.

Quebec, home to 6.9 million of Canada's 27 million inhabitants, roundly defeated the package by a 55.4 percent to 42.4 percent margin. British Columbia's voters rejected it by an even wider margin — 67.9 percent to 31.7 percent, with the remaining 0.4 percent of the ballots ruled invalid.

Nationally, voter turnout was about 72 percent.

Negotiations to reform the constitution were originally undertaken to meet Quebec's demands for special status to protect its language and culture. Over time, however, other provinces and the natives began pushing their own concerns.

A major issue in the west was replacing the present appointed Senate with an elected body including an equal number of senators from each province. That would give provinces with small populations a better balance of power with the Parliament's lower house, which is controlled by Ontario and Quebec.

The reform package would have recognized Quebec as a "distinct society" and guaranteed it 25 percent of the seats in the lower house.

It also would guarantee the present practice filling at least three of the nine seats on the Supreme Court with Quebec judges.

In addition, the agreement would have given the provinces additional jurisdiction and recognized the inherent right of natives to self-government.

Nick auf der Maur, a Montreal city councilor, called rejection of the complicated reform package inevitable.

"We've had a populist revolt," he said. "Usually a populist revolt is in favor of change. Here, we've had a populist revolt in favor of the status quo. That's typically Canadian."

In Quebec, the agreement's defeat was a shot in the arm for the separatist movement. "This is another victory on the road to sovereignty," said Mireille Lachance, an organizer for the separatist Parti Quebecois.

dards and requirements.

Also approved on first reading was an ordinance increasing appropriations for the 1991-92 fiscal year to cover amendments in the budget totalling $142,500.

The council awarded six bids, including bids for a new motor grader, police cars and remounting of an ambulance on a new chassis.

Council members voted to purchase a Lee model G-330 grader from West Texas Equipment in Abilene at a cost of $50,071 after trading a used Allis-Chalmers grader.

Wilson Motors was awarded the bid for two new police cars at a total cost of $23,500. The bid was for two 1993 Ford LTD's 4-door sedans equipped with police packages. The city had budgeted $15,000 for each car.

The council voted to award the bid to Taylor Made Ambulances for remounting a 1985 module-type ambulance on a 1992 model chassis at a total cost of $36,350. According to Snyder EMS Director Perry Westmoreland, the cost will include some modifications to the box, making it more suited for advanced life support procedures.

Also apprved was a $700 lettering bid to have the Snyder EMS logo put on the sides and back of the ambulance.

Westmoreland told council members that Taylor Made is the same company from which the last ambulance was purchased. "We have been extremely pleased." he said. "This is the best vehicle we've bought."

Also approved was a bid from Wilson Motors for a 1993 Ford pickup for the planning and zoning department in the amount of $12,996.

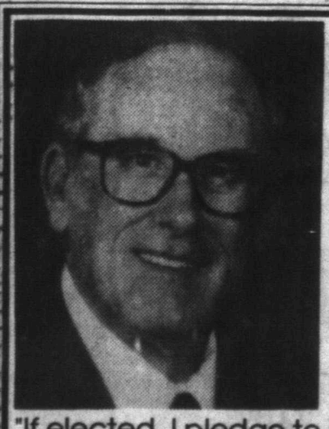

Bids for liquid alum and chlorine were approved, with PPC Industries of Sweetwater receiving the bid for chlorine at a cost of $35,286.80 for 100 tons plus 24 150-pound cylinders. The bid for liquid alum went to Rhone-Poulenc of Houston for $16,244 for 100 tons.

Present at the meeting were Mayor Williamson and council members Mike Thornton, Vernest Tippens, Jack Denman and Post. Also present were City Manager John Gayle and legal advisor Ernie Armstrong. Not present was J.D. Smith.

Israeli warplanes hit guerrilla bases again

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli warplanes and howitzers pounded guerrilla bases in Lebanon today for a second straight day, and radio reports said the army moved tanks into the Israeli-occupied buffer zone inside southern Lebanon.

Arab guerrillas, who lately have stepped up attacks on Israeli forces in an attempt to wreck the Middle East peace talks, fought back with rockets. One salvo slammed into a northern Israeli town before dawn, killing a 14-year-old boy and wounding five people, the Israeli army said.

The reported movement of Israeli reinforcements into the buffer zone raised the possibility that Israel might be planning ground attacks on guerrilla bases, which could strain the latest round of peace talks in Washington.

Israel radio first reported the movement of tanks without citing a source, but army radio later broadcast a similar story it attributed to "foreign sources in Lebanon." Army radio also said Israel had deployed "large numbers of troops" along the border with Lebanon.

The army spokesman's office refused to comment on the reports. But security sources in southern Lebanon said they had no reports of tank movements across the Israeli border.

Vandalism of Hueco Tanks rock increasing in state

HUECO TANKS STATE HISTORICAL PARK, Texas (AP) — Ancient rock drawings that have withstood wind, rain and time are being destroyed by delinquent youths armed with spray paint, markers and charcoal.

Hueco Tanks, the spectacular rock formation on the edge of El Paso County, were once inhabited of the Mogollon people. They left behind a pictorial legacy of the ancient culture.

But in the past two to three months, the drawings increasingly have been marred by gang members' graffiti. The modern scrawling has always been a problem at Hueco Tanks, but park officials say vandalism is increasing.

In mid-October, someone scrawled a man's name across part of a mask that was drawn on the wall of Cave Kiva about 1,000 years ago. Another name was written just inches away from another pictograph that has been estimated to be as much as 2,000 years old, Park Ranger Dave Parker said in a story published Monday in the El Paso Herald-Post.

Parker said graffiti can be cleaned off bare rock, but marred rock art has a slim chance at restoration.

Bush feels confident dates," Bush said.

"But look, there's an underpinning here of encouragement and then they're going to say, look, who do we really trust to do this job?" Bush said.

Bush, with campaign overseer James A. Baker III in tow, continued his non-stop dash to the finish line.

In two new tracking polls, Clinton's lead over Bush widened slightly to 11 points.

Clinton led 44-33 in ABC's poll of likely voters and 42-31 in the Cable News Network-USA Today poll. In ABC's poll, Perot rose two points to 19 percent. That poll was conducted from Friday to Sunday, before his first campaign rallies on Sunday. Perot was also at 19 percent in the CNN-USA Today poll, down one point.

Despite numbers that were glum for the Republicans, Vice President Dan Quayle was on television early today with some optimistic forecasts. "We have a lock on Texas ... and Florida, too," he said on CBS.

Bush's travels today were taking him through three states where Clinton is ahead in the polls. Kentucky, with eight electoral votes, and Ohio, with 21, were in Bush's column in 1988. The Democrats took Iowa, with seven electoral votes, last time.

The president used a friendly audience of hardware dealers in Denver on Monday to attempt for the first time to spell out how he would put his economic agenda into practice, and to sharpen the focus on philosophical differences with Clinton.

"With each program Governor Clinton puts forth, you see a philosophy where bureaucrats in Washington or some entrenched members of Congress carve out the exact same programs to try and solve problems facing people in Denver and Dallas or Dover or Delaware," Bush said.

Children learn about death early in New Orleans projects

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Four-year-old Eric Boyd died the way so many tenants of the St. Thomas Housing Project die each year — from a bullet wound.

"They was shooting all over us and it turned out it was Eric that got dead," said 5-year-old Tiwanda Royal. "You have to always watch for those bad men with guns."

In housing projects in New Orleans and other big cities, children have been gunned down — the victims of more weapons, short tempers and the drug trade.

A sniper at a Chicago housing project killed a 7-year-old earlier this month as the boy walked to school with his mother. He was the third pupil from the project's elementary school to be slain in seven months.

In New York City, tenants of the Red Hook project say they keep their children indoors when they aren't in school.

"The kids kids can't go to the playground, because the drug dealers tell you to move," said Edward Negron, the 32-year-old father of two. "It could be one o'clock in the afternoon and they could start shooting. They don't care if other people are around."

Chicago's mayor closed four buildings, tightened security and ordered tenants to carry ID cards after the Oct. 13 slaying.

In New Orleans, the city has used federal funds since last year to assign extra patrol cars to some of the city's 10 federally funded housing projects. "But we need more, more patrols, more money," Sgt. Gilbert Johnson said.

In 1991, St. Thomas led all of the housing projects in violent crime, according to the Housing Authority. From 1987 and 1991, St. Thomas tenants reported 48 murders, 27 rapes, 370 robberies and 638 assaults.

"It's not going to stop," said Alfred Maten, 47. "You hear shots all the time in here. Everybody carries a gun.

"Go up to any of these guys standing around and they could show you their gun. They think it makes them a man and then when they get mad they think nothing of shooting it. Used to be two kids had a fight and got over it. Now they shoot each other."

Eric was huddling behind his apartment door when he was shot Friday. A man outside fired more than a dozen shots from a semiautomatic pistol. A next-door neighbor of the boy was arrested. The intended target was hit in the leg and side.

"Everybody here knows somebody that was shot or killed," Mary Taylor said. "It's nothing new for us but it hurts every time."

In March, young Devon Hill was killed by his babysitter, who was playing with a gun. In 1989, a stray bullet killed 5-year-old Cornelius Vessel; a shot intended for someone else smashed into 4-year-old Tiffany LeBeau's shoulder while she played in a courtyard at a birthday party; Monica Dixon, 4, was hit in the stomach as she played on her porch; and 8-year-old Jasmine Burton was hit in the legs with a shotgun blast.

Drug dealers operate openly in the projects and junkies take shelter in the abandoned apartments. Police say children are recruited as couriers by drug dealers because they know police won't be able to hold juveniles long.

In the Desire Housing Project, the city's largest, 11-year-old Enoch Thomas was shot in the forehead in 1989, his body stuffed in a garbage bag and dumped in a vacant lot. Police said Enoch was a drug courier killed as an example to others after he took some of a dealer's money.

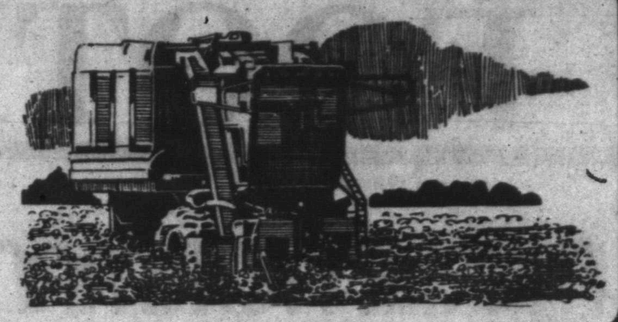

Ellenese Simms, former principal at Moton Elementary School where Enoch was in the fourth grade, said children in the projects quickly become inured to the killing around them.

"They tell us about having to get out of bed at night and lie on the floor because of drug dealers shooting at each other," Simms said. "The sad part of it is a killing isn't traumatic for these children. If you live with violence all around you, another murder isn't all that remarkable.

"I worry about children growing up and not thinking murder is remarkable."

TSGRA Referendum

The voting date for the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association's sheep and goat referendum is Oct. 29.

The referendum, which encompasses 111 counties, will, if passed, affect producers in the heart of the Texas sheep and goat production area.

If accepted by producers, the referendum would add funds to existing predator control efforts.

Producers will also vote on three directors to represent their respective districts on a Commodity Producers Board. These nine board directors will decide how the referendum's funds are to be spend.

The referendum would levy a maximum of 20 cents per head to the seller of sheep and goats at the first point of sale. The charge would be imposed on all sheep and goats sold in the 111 county referendum area.

Anyone, regardless of age, who produces sheep or goats in the referendum area is eligible to vote. Voting will be done at the county extension office in each county. Producers may vote in the county in which they live or where their ranch headquarters are.

For further information, contact the Scurry County Extension Office at 2605 Ave. M or call 573-5423.

Prescribed Burning: a practice used regularly in the management of rangeland to aid in brush control and grassland improvement.

The definition of prescribed burning is the act of applying fire to a predetermined area under conditions that the intensity and the spread of the fire are controlled. When the fire can no longer be contained in the planned area it becomes known as a wildfire. These fires are the ones which cause irreparable damage to life and property and are the reason why sound planning is so important.

There are several reasons why fire is used as a tool to improve range condition. It helps to control unwanted vegetation, improves the forage quality and quantity by stimulating grass production, improves grazing distribution by making grasses more palatable and accessible, improves wildlife habitat, makes the handling of livestock easier and reduces the wildfire hazard by burning off excess vegetation and plant litter build up.

The practice of prescribed burning is applicable on rangeland, cropland, pastureland and wildlife land. It is acceptable and allowable on CRP lands also.

One point that cannot be over emphasized is the importance of safety. Proper planning and programmed execution of the burn is essential to insuring safety of both persons and property.

The optimum time to complete a prescribed burn for the purpose of improving the quality of forage is from Feb. 1 through about March 15 in the Scurry County area. However, there are many factors affecting the timing. In most years though the burn should be completed by early March before the warm season grasses begin to green up. Parameters governing the application of the burn are just as important as the timing.

Ground moisture and humidity are two components which weigh heavily on the sucess of the burn. The direction and speed of the prevailing wind is critical too. Winds in excess of 12-15 mph usually mean the postponement of the burn where as wind direction can sometimes by corrected with the use of backfires. Air temperature should be in the area of 40 to 60 degrees.

There are numerous factors to consider when outlining a plan to burn a pasture or a field. Each one has a direct relationship on the other.

Local and state regulations need to be ascertained prior to conducting a burn. The Texas Air Control Board has policies and regulations governing the act of prescribed burns. Some counties may have specific regulations pertaining to burns in designated areas.

This year in particular may prove to be extremely volatile because of plentiful amounts of forage produced this year. If you plan to burn a field or pasture take the time to plan the burn carefully and have plenty of help in case problems arise.

You should start preparation early so that there is plenty of time to make necessary arrangements such as plowing firelanes, arranging for outside assistance, moving livestock, building fences, etc.

There are many advantages to successful burn but more disadvantages to a prescribed burn turned wildfire.

If you are interested in conducting a prescribed burn or would like to find out more about burning to improve or rejuvente your grass stand, come by the SCS office at 5309 Big Spring Highway or call us at 573-6317.

Many manufacturers are beginning to regard communication with consumers as a strategic tool rather than a burden.

A recent study suggests that most manufacturers pay attention to customer correspondence. Listening to customers pays off for the company because keeping existing customers costs less than winning new ones.

Manufacturers recognize the potential benefit of increased product sales to satisfied consumers and of reduced negative word-of-mouth communication. Manufacturers understand that they can use consumer ideas to get new product concepts and obtain information on how to market their products.

Consumers can benefit. Customers who write letters to businesses are likely to get a response to their letter — whether they criticize, praise or ask for information. In the study, over 80 percent of manufacturers responded to consumer letters within 90 days. Average response time was just 17 days.

Consumers can take advantage of manufacturers' willingness to communicate by writing about issues of concern. Rather than tolerating unacceptable purchases, a letter to the manufacturer may bring a satisfactory resolution. A letter of praise for a good product or brand could cause the manufacturer to continue production of an item that otherwise would have been discontinued.

Consumers increase their chances of getting a satisfactory response from the manufacturer by using certain strategies:

•Keep your letter sincere and reasonable. Letters which portray unreasonable anger, bitterness or hatred are likely to be ineffective.

•Ask specific questions or state your expectations clearly. This prevents a "form letter" answer and results in a response which deals directly with the problem identified.

•If cost is involved, use numbers. Cost of the same product may vary from region to region. Unless you provide cost information, the manufacturer might not understand your specific situation.

Two-way communication between consumers and manufacturers can help improve the quality and variety of products on the market. As a bonus, some manufacturers respond with coupons or special offers, thus reimbursing the consumer for problem purchases or saving additional money in the future.

Cure discovered for 'leaf rust'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists at a research center for corn and wheat say they have discovered a cure for leaf rust in an old Brazilian-grown plant that provides natural protection against the disease.

"After more than two decades of research in the field, we've finally beaten leaf rust without the use of deadly chemicals," said Donald Winkelmann, director general of the International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center.

"This corrosive disease has ravaged wheat crops on every continent for many years, costing farmers hundreds of millions of dollars annually," he said in a news release.

Announcement of the breakthrough was made this week by the Mexico-based center at the annual meeting of its representatives and those of 17 other research centers comprising the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research.

The Brazilian wheat was crossed with higher-yielding wheat varieties to produce seeds that grow abundant crops with built-in protection, the center said.
