Ranchers, farmers, residents...

Everyone affected by drought

By Joyce May
Staff Reporter

A handful of area farmers and ranchers turned out at a Thursday morning gathering with Sondra Ziegler, aide to U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, to spell out the extent of damage the worsening drought has done to their businesses.

The scorched earth and little or no water in lakes, tanks and creeks in Scurry County should speak for itself — farmers and ranchers in the area are in desparate need of relief.

Not only would a good Texas-size rainstorm come in handy, but disaster aid is needed as well.

The Senate earlier this month approved spending $500 million in disaster aid, but half of that will likely go to the Dakotas and Minnesota.

However, with the drought growing worse in Texas, Oklahoma and parts of the Southeast, Congress is expected to increase the assistance before adjourning in October.

Ziegler, director of Gramm's regional office in Lubbock, was one of a team of senior staff members Gramm sent out across the state on a drought damage assessment tour to meet with local agriculture officials and hear their concerns.

Scurry County's group had plenty to relate.

Rancher Johnny Eicke said the drought is forcing him to sell off his cattle because he can no longer afford to feed them.

"Because there has been very little rain, I haven't grown any grass. I'm fixin' to start hauling off cows," he said, adding, "What we need is an emergency feed program."

Joe Hefner, Scurry County Farm Service Agent, said there is one program that offers feed assistance to ranchers, called the NAP program, which is a non-insured crop disaster assistance program, but with the required paperwork and documentation, ranchers would not see any help until January.

Also, to be eligible producers must have an area that has suffered a 35 percent loss.

"The problem," Hefner explained, "is you have to wait until all production is through before you can make an application to be approved. But, forage that is growing now will continue to grow until the first frost."

Another complication is with small grain production.

"When small grain is planted this fall, if by chance we got a rain, that would affect the loss percentage."

"That doesn't make sense — buying feed in January to feed the cows we sold in June. We need to feed these cows now before ranchers sell them," Hefner said.

"Six months is too late," County Extension Agent Greg Gruben said.

For most area cotton farmers, the future is looking just as grim.

Insurance checks may later help somewhat, but as Eicke put it, "I don't want to farm for insurance."

The group also discussed the apparent flaws in the insurance industry.

Drew Bullard, Scurry County's Republican chairman, said of the industry, "It doesn't seem to be working."

The group agreed.

Cotton farmer Steve Moore is feeling that as much as anyone.

Moore, who had to dry plant because of insurance requirements, is now struggling to maintain a field that will probably yield little to no cotton.

"I had to plant it even though there is no rain," he said "I just happened to be in a little strip that got an inch of rain."

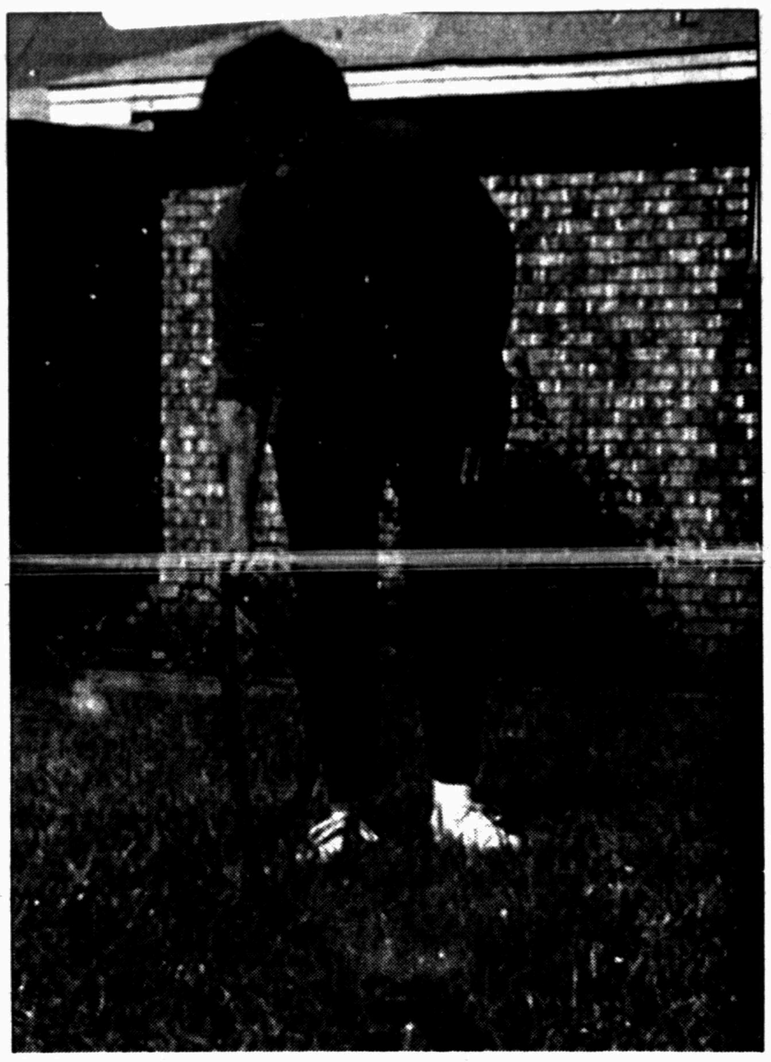

"It's wrong to have to dry plant cotton," Doug Foster said.

Now Moore is having to upkeep the fields including, spraying and keeping weeds out.

"If he walks away from it," Hefner said, "the insurance will reduce the guarantee citing a non-insurable clause — weeds."

Moore will also have to pay the

Slain police officer eulogized today as hero and role model

WASHINGTON (AP) — A police officer gunned down at his post in the U.S. Capitol was eulogized by his brother today as a hero, role model and one who "had a way of bringing people together."

"They call him a hero here — he's always been my hero," Henry Chestnut told thousands of mourners in Ebenezer AME Church in suburban Fort Washington, Md. "A bullet cannot strike down the system or institution of law and order."

Capitol Police Officer Jacob J. Chestnut and detective John Gibson were killed a week earlier in a shootout with an assailant who was wounded in the attack. Hundreds of police officers from across the nation came to pay final respects.

Police say a security camera inside the Capitol's Document Room door entrance captured a chilling look at the firefight that killed Chestnut. The tape shows the attacker's left hand, gun drawn, and then Chestnut, who was talking to a tourist, crumbles to the floor.

The killer, face obscured by a wide-brimmed hat, walks through the metal detector and moves the pistol into his right hand. After a few steps, his body contorts, as though he shot or was shot at, before he runs out of the picture behind a woman.

A miles-long procession of police vehicles was to escort Chestnut's body to Arlington National Cemetery, where Gibson was given a hero's burial Thursday.

More than an hour before the start of Chestnut's funeral, color guards formed in drizzling rain in front of the church and 26 bagpipers from the Chicago Police Department prepared for the procession.

"This is our tradition," said the band's leader, John McDonald. "In this job you have to stick together both in life and in death."

The man charged in the Capitol shootings, Russell E. Weston Jr., remained hospitalized with gunshot wounds, too ill to appear in court.

He has entered no plea to a charge of killing federal officers, a charge that could bring the death penalty. His lawyer asked Thursday for a three-week delay in the initial court date but the judge did not rule immediately.

Attorney A. J. Kramer has met with Weston at least twice this week but has refused to answer questions about his client's mental condition. Weston's family has said he is a diagnosed paranoid schizophrenic who often ranted against the federal government and believed agents had planted land mines around his Montana cabin.

Weston is accused of walking through a Capitol metal detector, shooting Chestnut in the head, pressing on into the building filled with tourists, legislators and staff members, then shooting Gibson during a gun battle in which he was also shot.

A fourth person shot during the gunfight, a 24-year-old tourist from Northern Virginia making her first trip to the Capitol, said Thursday she can identify the gunman.

In her first public remarks, Angela Dickerson also said she knows who shot her, but she would not identify that person for reporters.

Counts to send issue survey to constituents

Residents in the 70th House District should soon be receiving an issue survey from the office of Rep. David Counts.

"The 76th session of the Texas Legislature is less than six months away," Rep. Counts said. "Now is the time for us to take a hard look at the issues that Texas should consider in order to prioritize our needs."

During the months before the legislature meets, Counts will be seeking input from citizens from throughout the district to help ensure that their viewpoints are represented.

"Your response to this state-issue survey is very important to me," said Counts. "Your input on each issue will be analyzed and compiled as the responses are received. Additionally, I will forward a summary of the responses from our area of the state to Gov. Bush and House Speaker Pete Laney."

Counts has worked closely with Gov. Bush and Speaker Laney on several issues, including tort reform, juvenile justice reform, public education, private property rights and property tax relief.

"I'm asking everyone to please respond to the important questions on the survey," said Counts.

371 bond issue ballots cast with two early vote days left

Early voters cast 64 ballots Thursday to bring the total of early votes to 371 in the $20.4 million Snyder Independent School District bond election.

SISD residents are voting on a $20.4 million bond proposal for improving the district's aging facilities and to bring the buildings up to current electrical and plumbing codes.

The election is set for Aug. 8.

Citizens who reside in the school district may vote early through Tuesday at the administration building between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The proposal calls for major renovations on all the district's campuses with the exception of Central Elementary. Plans call for the district to close the 50-year-old structure if the bond issue passes.

If the bond issue is approved, renovation and construction of the facilities could begin as early as next spring. It is estimated that the entire project could take two to three years to complete as the work would have to be scheduled with as little interruption to class room work as possible.

The renovation plans include replacement of heating and air-conditioning systems.

The plans also call for the replacement of portable buildings on the Stanfield and Northeast Elementary campuses, and the closing of the 50-year-old Central Elementary building.

Federal judge loosens FDA restrictions on ads on drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration may not block drug companies from distributing certain information to doctors about unapproved uses of medicines, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth ruled Thursday that certain FDA restrictions on drug marketing violated First Amendment rights of free commercial speech.

"It's a tremendous victory," said Richard Samp of the Washington Legal Foundation, a conservative group that filed the lawsuit. "It means there will be a much freer flow of truthful information."

The controversy began when FDA received complaints from doctors that what they thought were independent medical seminars were really sponsored by drug companies that paid speakers to endorse medicines for uses not approved by FDA.

It is legal for doctors to prescribe any drug on the market however they see fit, but companies can only promote their products for FDA-approved uses. Thus, FDA said drug companies couldn't promote unapproved drugs under the guise of a medical seminar.

The Washington Legal Foundation sued, also attacking FDA policy that prohibited drug makers from giving doctors reprints of medical studies or textbooks that backed unapproved drug uses.

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: Rick Craig, long-time editor and publisher of the Hamlin Herald, is joining the staff of the state's largest semi-weekly newspaper — the Hood County News in Granbury.

Craig, his father and his grandfather put out lots of weekly papers in Jones County. Along the line, he collected some interesting goofs that appeared in headlines:

--Milk drinkers are turning to powder.

--Iraqi head seeks arms.

--Lawmen from Mexico barbecue guests.

--Smokers are productive, but death cuts productivity.

--Blind woman gets kidney from dad she hasn't seen in years.

You can always depend on Plainview editor Danny Andrews for a pun:

Some friars were behind on their belfry payments, so they opened up a small florist shop to raise the funds.

Since everyone liked to buy flowers from the men of the cloth, the rival florist across town thought the competition was unfair. He asked the priests to close down, but they would not.

He went back and begged the friars to close, but they ignored him. He then asked his mother to go and plead with the friars to get out of business. They ignored her too.

The rival florist then hired Hugh McTaggart, the roughest and toughest thug in town to "persuade" them to close.

Hugh beat up the friars and trashed their store, saying he'd be back if they didn't close shop.

Terrified, the friars did close — thereby proving that..

Hugh, and only Hugh, can prevent florist friars.

Stephen Henry, in the Levelland News-Press, told a good lawyer story.

An attorney was addressing a panel of jurors and asked if any of the prospective jurors were related to any of the principals in the case.

One fellow spoke up and said the opposing attorney was his brother-in-law.

"Would that relationship prevent you from being able to consider the evidence in an unbiased way?"

The prospective juror shook his head and said, "Naw, I think just as much of you as I do him."

It's Harleys on Easy St. for Powerball winners

WESTERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — What Sandy Jarrell wants most is a Harley, just like her husband's. And now what Sandy wants, Sandy can have.

With the money her husband has won in the Powerball lottery, the Jarrells can buy a matched set. If one's not enough, they can get another ... and another ... and another ... and another.

Sandy's husband, John, is one of 13 co-workers who won the record $295.7 million jackpot Wednesday night.

The winners, who nicknamed themselves "the Lucky 13," work at Automation Tooling Systems in this Columbus suburb. They bought 130 tickets — spending $10 apiece — at a gasoline station in Richmond, Ind., about 100 miles away.

Each will get $12.42 million before taxes, their lawyer said.

"It took a long time to believe we actually hit it," Jarrell said Thursday. "You go from totally excited to scared to death."

The jackpot was worth $295.7 million in payments over 25 years. But the winners, all men, took the cash option — one payment of about $161.5 million.

The Lucky 13 won't officially be the winners until the Indiana lottery office validates the ticket. That's expected within the next week.

The Jarrells, both wearing black Harley Davidson apparel, told reporters gathered on the lawn of their humble home that their three children had drawn up quite a wish list, including games and dirt bikes.

A new Harley cycle was tops on Mrs. Jarrell's list. The family is also talking about a new house, a car and investments. Jarrell hasn't decided whether to keep his job.

Mrs. Jarrell was the first to realize they had won. She watched the drawing live on television, writing down the winning numbers on a piece of paper while her husband slept. "Turn on the light! Turn on the light!" she screamed. They read the numbers to each other to make sure they were right. She called her dad, who sent her sister over to double-check.

Other members of the Lucky 13 tried to remain anonymous. All showed up at their jobs Thursday but had a hard time settling down to work, company spokeswoman Barbara Palmer said.

"Actually, they came to gloat, I think," Ms. Palmer joked. "No, they came to share in their good fortune with us."

During a meeting at the plant, attorney Larry Sturtz told the winners, who range in age from their 20s to 50s, to plan their estates, get sound investment advice and be wary of people describing themselves as long-lost friends or relatives.

"Brothers-in-law, sisters-in-law, distant cousins ... are going to come out of the woodwork now and ask for a piece of the action," he said.

Jarrell said other members of the group talked about buying houses, cars and investing properly. When asked whether co-workers who didn't play were sorry, Jarrell replied: "There's probably a few of them."

One might be Robert Kronk, who said he dropped out of the pool three months ago after seven years as a member because he wanted to choose his numbers instead of having them picked at random.

Kronk said he's happy for his co-workers and isn't bitter or jealous. He's still hoping a little of the payoff will come his way.

"I'm sure they'll take care of me. ... I've helped them out before," he said.

With 80.1 million possible combinations, a player's chance of choosing the winning six numbers was remote. But that wasn't a deterrent for many people who formed long lines outside many of the 45,000 retailers selling Powerball tickets in 20 states and the District of Columbia.

An Illinois couple set a record in May for a single-ticket winner by hitting a $195 million Powerball jackpot.

Man arrested again after more threats

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who went to prison for threatening U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, has been arrested on charges he made new threats recently against Archer and others.

Randall Myers, of the southwest Houston suburb of Katy, served a 12-month federal prison term for threatening U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, in 1995. Myers, who officials said is in the second year of a three-year probation, was arrested Thursday.

Deputy U.S. Marshal Michael Nagle said officers arrested Myers after going to his residence and finding two rifles, a semi-automatic carbine equipped with a laser aiming device and a loaded .22-caliber rifle.

Myers, 52, could face additional federal counts as a convicted felon illegally in possession of firearms, Nagle said.

Myers had been ordered to receive psychiatric medical care from the Veteran's Affairs Medical Center in Houston as part of his probation.

Nagle said Myers recently became upset with his medical care and, between March and July, made a series of threatening phone calls to Archer's offices. He is alleged to have threatened Archer and members of his staff.

2 Virginia babies switched at birth, genetic tests show

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Two newborn girls went home with the wrong mothers three years ago in a switch that authorities are investigating as a deliberate criminal act.

Safeguards at the University of Virginia Medical Center, where the girls were born, would have prevented accidental misidentification, hospital officials said Thursday.

The switch was revealed after one of the girls underwent three genetic tests earlier this month. DNA results proved that blue-eyed, blond-haired girl, who 30-year-old Paula Johnson has loved and raised since bringing her home from the hospital, is not her biological child.

Ms. Johnson has hired an attorney, thought no lawsuit has been filed.

"She's a beautiful child. She's a wonderful child," Ms. Johnson said in today's Richmond Times-Dispatch. "I'm not worried about me, but I need to protect my children."

The blood and DNA test results prompted the University of Virginia Medical Center to contact another family who had a daughter about the same time. Tests indicated they also are raising someone else's child.

Hospital spokeswoman Marguerite Beck, citing patient confidentiality, declined to identify the other family. Ms. Johnson has expressed the hope of eventually tracking down and meeting her biological daughter.

"I don't want to scare this other family in any way," she said. Ms. Johnson declined to say what prompted her to seek the genetic tests.

"We are really hoping the other parents out there will come to us and help us work through this together," Cynthia Johnson, Paula Johnson's attorney, said in today's Washington Post. The women are not related.

Two other light-haired, blue-eyed girls were born at the hospital at about the same time on June 30, 1995. "Nothing has been found to indicate that more than two infants were involved," the university said in a prepared statement.

The hospital follows a common procedure in which babies and their mothers are assigned identical numbered identity bracelets immediately after birth.

"They have all the same number code," said Dr. Thomas A. Massaro, chief of staff at the university's Health Sciences Center. "The baby gets two of them, one on the wrist and one on the ankle, and the mother gets the larger one on the wrist."

The bands cannot be removed accidentally, Massaro said. "They have to actually be cut off or pulled very hard."

Campus police are investigating the matter as a criminal act.

The case recalls that of Kimberly Mays, who was switched at birth with Arlena Twigg at a Florida hospital where they were born in 1978. The swap became public in 1988 when Arlena died of heart disease and tests showed she was not the biological child of Regina and Ernest Twigg.

The case drew national attention as Kimberly was the subject of various custody battles, with a judge ruling the Twiggs had no legal rights to act as her parents or even visit her.

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Decades after his television show was canceled, its costumes put aside and his freckle-faced co-star long retired, Robert E. Smith couldn't always keep a low profile.

"I walk into a supermarket and nobody recognizes me," Smith once said. "Then I open my mouth and somebody always says, 'That's Buffalo Bob!'"

The man whose cheerful cowboy voice fascinated toddling baby boomers each afternoon on "The Howdy Doody Show" died Thursday of cancer. He was 80.

For 13 years in his genial role as the fringe-wearing "Buffalo Bob," Smith was famous for teasing his youthful viewers with the same question as host of the live program that was a must-see at the dawn of the television age.

"What time is it?" he would intone.

"It's Howdy Doody time!" the kiddie studio audience in the Peanut Gallery — and baby boomers around the nation — would gleefully respond.

Smith, who lived in the western North Carolina town of Flat Rock, died at a hospital in nearby Hendersonville, said family publicist Kelly Stitch. She said the family would not release any other details.

The "Howdy Doody Show" went off the air in 1960 after 13 seasons and more than 2,500 shows, a grueling rate of three live shows a day, five days a week.

But Buffalo Bob and his co-star, the permanently cheerful marionette Howdy Doody, were more than mere celebrities. They were like family to their young fans — and the young at heart.

Columnist Bob Greene wrote in 1987 that the show "may have been the most important cultural landmark for my generation."

Among the show's other much-loved citizens of the town Doodyville, U.S.A. were: Clarabell the Clown, Princess Summerfall Winterspring, Phineas T. Bluster, Dilly Dally, Chief Thunderthud, Trapper John and Flubadub.

One of the performers who played Clarabell was Bob Keeshan, later to become TV's Captain Kangaroo.

"No one knows how hard we worked all those years," Smith told People magazine in 1987. "Live TV is the most difficult thing to do in the world. You're on the spot all the time."

Recovering from a 1954 heart attack that sidelined him for months, he actually did some appearances from a specially built studio in the basement of his home. The former radio man returned to the NBC studio a year later.

After his return, he told The Associated Press he drove himself out of "a feeling of pride. You're happy that people want you to entertain them." He said the heart attack taught him to "remember your limits."

Smith was never bitter after the show went off the air, saying: "We had a good run. Besides, how many TV shows ever lasted 13 seasons?"

In the 1960s, Smith retreated from his spot in front of the TV camera and went back into radio, this time as an owner. He bought three radio stations and dabbled in real estate.

In 1970, he got a call out of the blue from a student at the University of Pennsylvania, who asked him to bring Howdy Doody to the school and do a show.

"I thought he was putting me on," Smith said.

He wasn't.

College students who had grown up watching Howdy Doody felt right at home back in the Peanut Gallery. Over the next six years, Smith and his famous sidekick made hundreds of appearances across the country.

Smith got his start on the radio and his nickname in his hometown, Buffalo, N.Y. "I did just about everything you could do on the radio when I was 15," he said.

Two years later, he joined the vaudeville act of singer Kate Smith, playing the piano at times and other times playing master of ceremonies. He was back working successfully in radio when NBC was looking for someone in 1947 to be host of a children's television show.

Here is another deal from the European Mixed Championships. This is from the team event, and surprisingly the declarer went down in three no-trump although there was a guaranteed line of play. Can you spot it? West leads the club seven, playing fourth highest from good suits and second highest from bad.

In North America, after South opens one diamond instead of one heart, perhaps the final contract would be in diamonds. As the cards lie, six diamonds would make. And even if three no-trump were reached, West might well lead a heart, letting the contract get home. Here, though, when South rebid one no-trump to show a minimum balanced hand, North wasn't thinking about a diamond slam. He settled for the unscientific three no-trump.

After winning with her club ace, declarer played out three rounds of spades. This gave East the opportunity to switch to the heart three. West took declarer's 10 with his king, returned the heart five to his partner's queen, and another heart gave the defenders five tricks: one spade and four hearts.

South's heart holding is a guaranteed stopper only if West attacks the suit. So, declarer should win with the club ace, cash the spade ace, play a club to the dummy, and run the spade jack.

Here, the finesse wins and South has nine tricks: three spades, one diamond and five clubs. But suppose the finesse loses. As the defenders cannot cash four heart tricks, West does best to switch to a diamond. However, South rises with dummy's ace, runs the clubs, discarding his blocking spade king, and finishes the spades, again collecting nine tricks.

Dear Abby

Time Spent With Kindred Spirit Is Causing Man to Go Broke

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1998 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating this girl for a couple of months. When I first saw her, I liked her. When I got to know her, I fell for her. I wanted to spend every minute with her. We have so many things in common — similar backgrounds, a love of books, authors and the theater. I like everything about her.

The only concern I have about this relationship is that I can't afford to pay for everything whenever we go out. Even though she only works less than part time and I work full time, I'll be broke soon with the way we're going. I don't want to ruin a potentially terrific relationship over money. What can I do?

BROKE IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR BROKE: Level with your girlfriend about the high cost of living in the city. If she is a "woman of the '90s," she will understand that dating expenses should be shared. You are fortunate to live in San Francisco. It's a wonderful city that offers many low-cost things to do. Be creative in your search for economical entertainment, and I'm sure the two of you can find plenty of affordable activities.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is to the mother who was hurt because she received a card from her son that he had created on a computer. I send computer cards only to people I sincerely care about.

I sometimes spend several hours choosing just the right graphic, the right words (usually I compose my own), and a perfect type style. I am 57 years old, and not only does this give me experience on the computer, it allows me to spend time thinking about the person for whom I am making the card — remembering the things I admire about that person and our fun times together.

Abby, anyone can go to a store and purchase a card for a couple of dollars in about five minutes with no problem. My advice to the son of "Hurt Momma" is to buy 10 cards at one time, sign and address them, then mail them at the appropriate times. This takes no thought, and in my opinion, Momma doesn't deserve any!

CAROL DUNN,
FORT COLLINS, COLO.

DEAR CAROL: I am delighted with the many original and creative computer cards that have arrived as a result of "Momma's" letter. One even had my picture on the front! Read on for another reason that computer cards can be a lifesaver:

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old who can't drive and whose parents work long hours and many weekends. No one is available to take me to a card store, but my computer is always here.

When friends or family members are having a birthday, I enjoy making a card for them. They love receiving them, too. I include little inside jokes or write a poem.

Just because it isn't a commercial card doesn't mean the card is not special. "Hurt Momma" should be grateful instead of hurt. The card came from her son's computer, but it also came from his heart.

COMPUTER CARD LOVER,
CAROL STREAM, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the column on pet peeve words, I submit my own creation, the following poem:

Those Four-Letter Words
Some four-letter words offend me,
Whether by ear or in a book;
The ones that evoke the worst feelings in me
Are: iron, dust and cook!

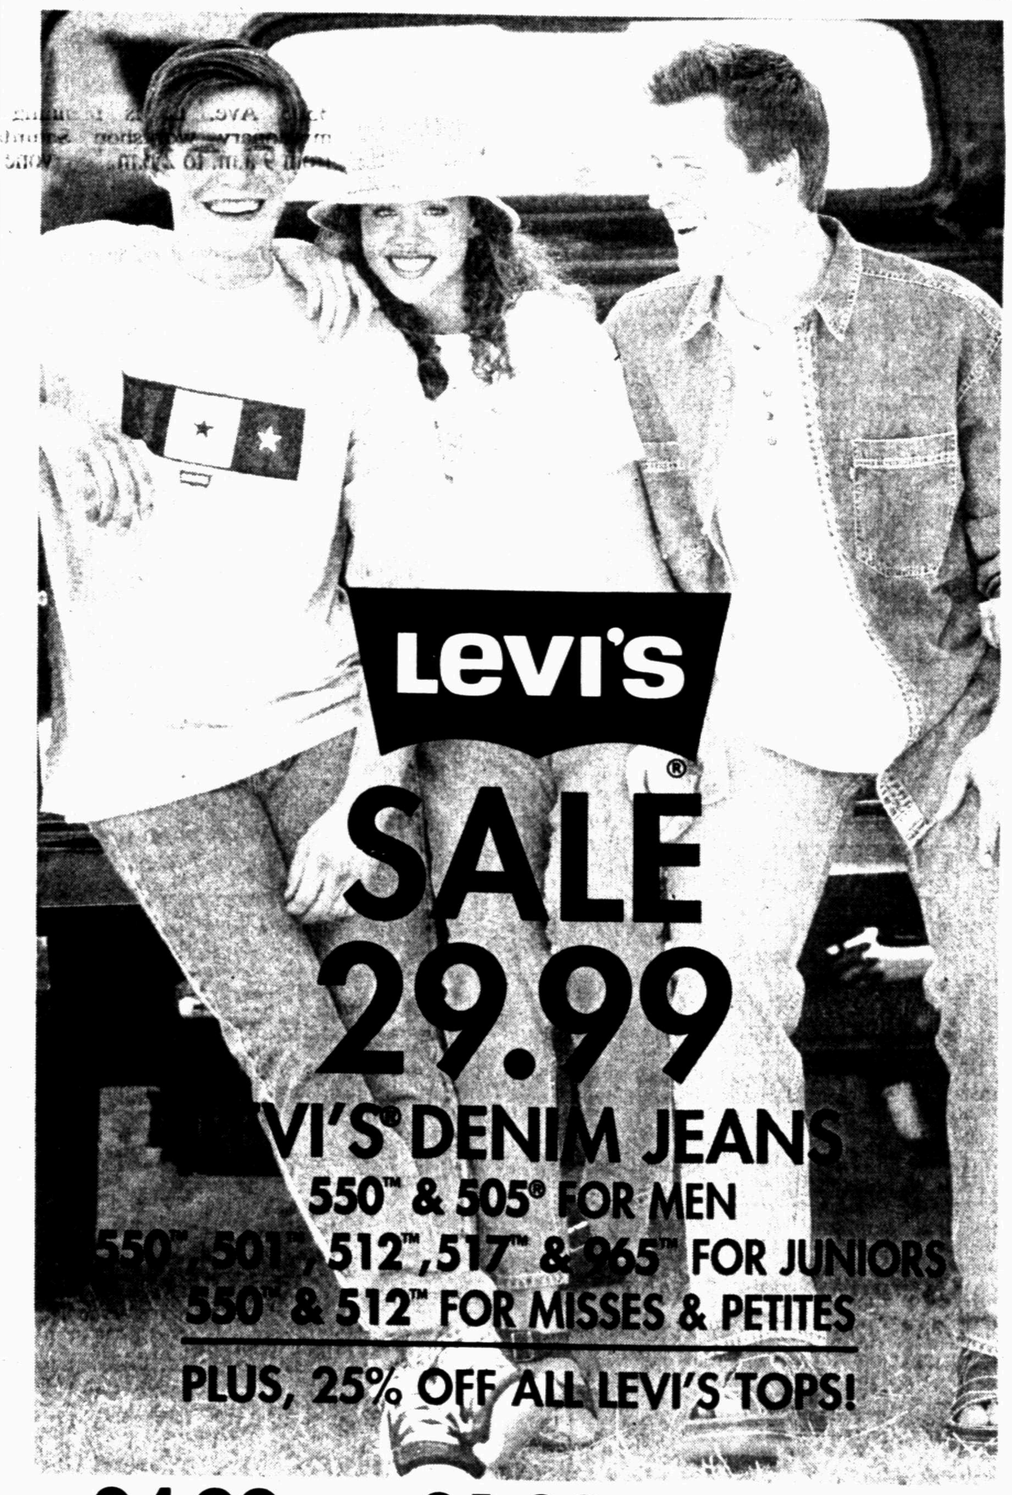

PATRICIA YONKOSKE,
BARNESBORO, PA.

Against Seattle tonight...

Dallas starters will play at least a quarter

IRVING (AP) — Forgive Chan Gailey is he doesn't get cold chills walking into Texas Stadium tonight for the first time in his first game as head coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

It's a preseason game against Seattle and Gailey said he doesn't plan to get all "goose bumpy."

Gailey, who replaced Barry Switzer following a disastrous 6-10 season, was offensive coordinator for the Pittsburgh Steelers. He's a former head coach of the Birmingham Fire of the old World League and once took Troy State to the NCAA Division II national title.

Gailey has never been on the coaching staff of a team playing a game in Texas Stadium.

He said he was try to treat his first game as a Cowboys coach just like any other game.

"Maybe fireworks are supposed to go off," he said, "but if I go out there all goose bumpy I'll have a hard time leading the team in the clutch. I've got a job to do and how can the team play if I'm pinching myself because I'm in Texas Stadium? I want us to win but I'm not going to be turning cartwheels."

Gailey is in a hurry to install his new offense and he said the first of five exhibition games and two scrimmages gives him a chance to see what the team has learned in minicamps and a hard-working training camp in Wichita Falls.

He will be missing one of his regulars, guard Everett McIvor, who suffered a neck cut in an unexplained dorm incident Wednesday night at Midwestern State University. Backup wide receiver Macey Brooks also will be out after undergoing testicular surgery.

The starters will go about a quarter or so for Dallas.

"We'll play the regulars a lot more than we would in an ordinary preseason game because we're trying to get our offense in," Gailey said."We need to look at ourselves on film playing against somebody other than ourselves."

Running back Emmitt Smith said the team needs work, work, work.

"This will give us a chance to evaluate where we are," Smith said. "It will be good for us to be hitting somebody else for a change."

Wide receiver Billy Davis said "We need to play against somebody else. It's getting where our defense knows all our plays."

The game will feature Ricky Watters' debut with Seattle after a sterling career at Philadelphia and Chris Warren trying to get back at his old teammates after signing as a free agent with Dallas in the off-season.

Warren had an eight-year career with Seattle. The Cowboys cut Sherman Williams, a former second-round draft pick. to make room for Warren.

Clarence Shelmon, the running backs coach, also comes to Dallas from Seattle.

Dallas plays Seattle in a regular season game on Sunday, Nov. 22 in Texas Stadium.

"I'm looking forward to going against my old teammates," Warren said. "Any player who has left a team always wants to play well against them when they meet again.

Warren will backup Smith and could be one of quarterback Troy Aikman's go-to men on third down.

Shelmon said he, too, is looking forward to meeting the Seahawks.

"It will feel odd for me and Chris to be on the other sidelines but we're looking forward to it," Shelmon said. "We're Cowboys now."

Warren scored 44 touchdowns and rushed for 6,706 yards in his eight year career with Seattle. He also caught 194 passes for 1,324 yards.

"Chris has great hands," Gailey said. "He's an excellent receiver. We'll use him a lot on third downs."

Dallas has never beaten Seattle in the preseason.

It's the first meeting between the two teams since 1979 and the first preseason meeting in Texas Stadium. Dallas lost on the road to the Seahawks 27-17 in 1979 and 23-17 in overtime in 1977. Dallas is 4-1 against Seattle in regulation games.

Raggedy Ann, Andy action this weekend

There are two things for certain for this year's Raggedy Ann and Andy Golf Tournament set for this weekend at Snyder Country Club.

It will be hot — and a new champion will be crowned since defending champs Larry and Marian Barker are not playing this year.

There is a favorite, however. Dallas' David Armstrong, brother of District Judge Ernie Armstrong, has teammed up with Texas Tech golfer Brooke Lowrance of Snyder.

Others who could make a run for the title are Alton Patterson and Penny Perry, Randy and Daysha Weaver, Cloyce and Anita Talbott and Ernie and Amy Armstrong.

There will be five flights, determined after Saturday's round.

Division I golfers, which will make up the championship and president's flights, will tee off with a shotgun start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Division II golfers, which will be divided into three flights after the opening round, tee off at 1:30 p.m.

Sunday's tee times are 8:30 a.m. for first, second and third flights, while the championship and president's flights will have a 1:30 p.m. start.

Format is a two-person scramble, and practice rounds are being played today.

Homer sinks Astros; Marlins avoid sweep

HOUSTON (AP) — At least the dismantled defending world champion Florida Marlins can still depend on Livan Hernandez.

Hernandez pitched a five-hitter for his sixth complete game — third-most in the NL — and Cliff Floyd hit a three-run homer as the Marlins avoided a four-game sweep with a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Thursday.

The Marlins, losers of 14 of 17, finished the road trip 2-8 though Hernandez sent them home with a good feeling after shutting down the Astros, who had scored 57 runs in their previous eight home games.

"I felt good, I had good control on all pitches, fastball, slider and curve," Hernandez said. "I've thrown this well before. But this was a good game because it was against a very good team."

Hernandez (9-7) struck out seven and walked three. He got Ricky Gutierrez on a called third strike with runners on first and second to end the game.

The Astros won the first three games of the series, but Florida came back to snap a four-game losing streak. Houston leads the season series 5-1.

The Astros could have won again, but too many mistakes cost them the sweep.

The Marlins went ahead 4-1 in the fifth when Craig Counsell beat out an infield hit when Shane Reynolds couldn't get to the bag in time for a throw from first baseman Jeff Bagwell.

Guzman shuts out struggling Texas

TORONTO (AP) — Juan Guzman thinks his career with the Toronto Blue Jays is over.

Guzman, expecting to be traded at any moment, pitched eight shutout innings Thursday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Texas Rangers 1-0.

"I'm going to miss this place because can you imagine I've been here eight years, all my friends, plus this is one of the best organizations there is," Guzman said. "It doesn't matter where I go, I got my buddy Ramon (Martinez) in L.A. but wherever I go it doesn't matter to me. I'm just going to work hard."

Guzman (6-12) allowed five hits, struck out three and walked three while throwing 106 pitches.

"The trade rumors have been going on for about two months and in the last two months I think I've pitched my best," Guzman said.

Randy Myers, also rumored to be on the trading block, pitched the ninth for his 26th save.

"Stick around. Four or five teams are interested in me," Guzman said after meeting with manager Tim Johnson before the game. Guzman requested the meeting to see if he could stay back in Toronto and wait for the call instead of leaving with the team for a road trip.

Baseball's non-waiver trading deadline is Friday night at midnight EDT. Before the game, Toronto traded designated hitter-catcher Mike Stanley to Boston for two minor league pitchers.

Shannon Stewart singled home the game's only run in the fifth inning against Esteban Loaiza (0-2) after Darrin Fletcher singled and moved up on a grounder.

"I hit it well enough to get through but I didn't hit it good. I cracked a bat," Stewart said. "I felt grateful just to get a hit."

Making his third start since being traded from Pittsburgh, Loaiza allowed four hits in eight innings. He struck out a career-high nine and walked two.

"It was a great performance between Guzman and myself," Loaiza said. "It was a battle. I'm really satisfied about what I did today."

Juan Gonzalez, who had missed the last two games because of a strained hamstring, pinch hit and grounded out with none out in the ninth with a runner in scoring position. Myers got the next two outs on fly balls.

Weaver takes fourth place

ABILENE — Battling the wind, the heat and a strong field, Snyder's Daysha Weaver finished fourth in the American Junior Golf Association West Texas Junior tournament that ended Thursday at Abilene Country Club.

Weaver, bound for the University of North Texas this fall, fired a 77 Thursday to finish with a 229 — seven strokes behind Kristin Dufour of Austin who shot a 76 Thursday to finish with a 221. Dufor will play for the University of Texas this fall.

Kristin Tavcar, also of Austin, shot a final-round of 77 to finish third at 224. Stephanie Dukes of Fort Worth had the day's best score with a 73 and finished third at 227.

Maiko Senda of Dallas dropped to an 82 on Thursday and carded a three-day total of 229. Randi Reed of Snyder finished with an 88 on Thursday for a 270.

Senate OKs funding for U.S. troops in Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate quietly has approved $1.9 billion for U.S. forces in Bosnia, while soundly rejecting a move to force the Clinton administration to start withdrawing troops.

The moves, boosts to the Clinton administration's Bosnia policy, came during Senate passage Thursday of a $252 billion defense appropriations bill.

Reflecting continued concern about the open-ended NATO operation in the region, the Senate adopted a contrary message on the crisis in the Serbian province of Kosovo. Senators sought to head off U.S. involvement in Kosovo by requiring presidential consultation with Congress before any military involvement.

Other wide-ranging provisions in the Senate version of the House-passed bill would sweeten military pay increases, help soldiers kick the tobacco habit, and deny visas to foreign government officials involved with the worst human rights abuses.

Under both House and Senate versions of the bill, military spending will increase just 1 percent for fiscal 1999, which begins Oct. 1. The exact figure and other issues in the legislation will be resolved by a House-Senate conference committee before the measure goes to President Clinton.

The House bill pointedly left out administration requests for $1.9 billion to keep U.S. troops in Bosnia.

But the Senate, in an amendment accepted by voice vote without debate, approved an "Overseas Contingency Operations Transfer Fund" that matches the president's request for Bosnia. The bill does not mention Bosnia but allows the defense secretary to use the money for emergency funding of military operations.

The Senate rejected, on a 69-30 vote, an attempt by Sens. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, and Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., to reduce U.S. forces in Bosnia and neighboring areas from more than 8,500 to 6,500 by next February and 5,000 by October 1999.

The votes were a demonstration of Senate unwillingness to force the administration's hand in dealing with Bosnia, despite the rejection of funding by the House and strong criticism from both Republicans and Democrats of the Bosnia deployment.

The action on Kosovo is similar to weak restrictions already imposed on extending troops in Bosnia.

Clinton would retain the option of a Kosovo deployment under the amendment, as long as he justifies it to Congress. He would have to explain the mission, the cost and a timetable for pulling out.

The administration has not said it plans to send more troops to the Balkans. But Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., predicted: "The United States and Western European nations are on the verge of an expensive and dangerous involvement in Kosovo."

Under the Senate bill, military pay would go up 3.6 percent next year, rather than the 3.1 percent approved last month by the House. Salary funds would be increased by cutting amounts for operations and maintenance in all branches of the military.

The House bill sets aside $20 million for compensating victims and rebuilding a cable car system damaged Feb. 3 when a low-flying Marine jet sliced a gondola cable in the Italian Alps, killing 20 people. The Senate version contains no funding but recognizes a U.S. obligation to compensate victims and calls for quick and fair resolution of the matter.

In a measure aimed primarily at China, the Senate voted to deny visas to any foreign officials involved in religious persecution, forced abortions, forced sterilization or genital mutilation.

An amendment by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, appropriates $50 million for anti-smoking programs in the military. The money would come from cuts to military consultants.

After record Powerball sales, some changes may be in order

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Do you dare meddle with Powerball? After the long lines and traffic jams leading up to the record $295.7 million jackpot, some think so.

The record jackpot won Wednesday night was once unimaginable for a concept born 11 years ago simply as a way for five states and the District of Columbia to compete with bigger, multimillion-dollar lotteries.

But Powerball wasn't much of a ball at all to ticket vendors forced to accommodate an onslaught of treasure-seekers or to the stores left idle by the crush of lines that snaked along for blocks.

For Ashok Sheth, whose Greenwich, Conn., cigar store was under siege for 10 consecutive days by out-of-state ticket-buyers, enough is enough.

"Whoever has created this Powerball monster has to do something," Sheth said.

That would be Ed Stanek, the director of the Iowa Lottery and creator of the Powerball, who has acknowledged he may have midwifed a Frankenstein monster.

"It's not appropriate that we allow people to spend six hours or 10 hours in line to buy a ticket," said Stanek "It's not appropriate that we have traffic jams in any city in the country waiting to buy tickets."

But, he asked, "what can you change about the world's most successful lotto game?"

Plenty, say those who had to endure the crowds, particularly retailers in Connecticut, which is bordered by the populous, non-Powerball states of Massachusetts and New York. The state sold 32 million tickets in four days.

The jackpot won by 13 Ohio machinists — who sent a delegate 100 miles to Richmond, Ind., to buy the winning ticket — was the second mind-numbing payout in just three months. In May, an Illinois couple won $195 million.

Connecticut Gov. John Rowland said the state would reimburse Greenwich for police overtime and other Powerball-related costs and would make other border communities eligible for aid.

Stanek said the West Des Moines-based Multi-State Lottery Association, Powerball's governing body, will study improvements such as more terminals, faster computers and the ability to quickly add machines when jackpots swell.

What is not being suggested by lottery officials is lowering the odds, which now stand at 80.1 million-to-1 against picking the winning numbers. It was raised from 55 million-to-1 in November to boost sluggish sales and offer harder-to-win but bigger jackpots — thereby creating more interest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When negotiating an agreement today, be careful not to put yourself in an awkward situation. Never bargain from a position of weakness rather than strength.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Taking opportunities for granted today will provide you with only a portion of their potential. Utilize every break that comes your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Luck is fickle today. Enterprises with friends should work out well, but things that are speculative could turn out to be bummers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's smart to seek wise counsel, but also put credence in your hunches and judgment. Between the two, you'll get the right answers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Enjoy your pals for the right reasons today. Don't try to involve them in ambitious or material plans; save proposals of this nature for another time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is one of those strange days when you can be wise and prudent in certain areas, yet foolish and extravagant in others. Strive for balance.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's important to have the courage of your convictions today. If you believe what you are doing is right, don't cave in to pressure just to appease your peers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may experience a strong temptation today to reveal something told to you in strict confidence. You won't like yourself if you weaken.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try not to be self-serving today. In situations where everyone is supposed to benefit, seek only what you deserve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's best to focus on a single objective today, instead of spreading your forces thin. Too many irons in the fire could be counterproductive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Devote as much time as possible to things you enjoy doing today. Temporarily shelve your workaday cares, and if they pop back in your mind, dismiss them.

Painful ear-popping in planes

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: When I travel by air, my ears bother me tremendously. For several days thereafter, my ears are painful and I cannot hear well. I've tried drinking extra fluids and using chewing gum. Is there any help for me?

DEAR READER: When we ascend in an airplane, we pass from near sea level to an area where the external air pressure is much reduced, even in a pressurized cabin. During ascent, air leaves the middle ear chamber through vents called the Eustachian tubes. This enables the pressure to equalize between the middle ear and the cabin. Usually, this causes no problem. Our ears pop and that's it.

On the descent, however, the situation is reversed. As atmospheric pressure builds, the air presses against the ear drums and the Eustachian tubes. As it enters the middle ear chambers, our ears pop and we again equalize the pressure.

The hitch is that it's much more difficult for the air to enter the middle ear than it is for the pressure to escape. If, for example, a traveler has allergies, congestion or a cold, the Eustachian tubes may be swollen shut and air cannot enter them. This leads to the well-known symptoms of pain and hearing loss that will, however, slowly dissipate once we have been on the ground for several days.

Thus, the easiest way to prevent this unpleasant condition, called "baro-otitis," is to facilitate the passage of air through the Eustachian tubes.

Yawning and swallowing hard — and frequently — will often solve the problem. So you need to have water or juice in hand when you descend. Or, you may have to anticipate the problem by using antihistamines or nasal sprays before flying. Finally, the Valsalva maneuver may help. Close your mouth, pinch your nose and strain. This causes a buildup of pressure in your middle ears that may open the Eustachian tubes and allow equalization to take place.

Remember that if you wait too long, pressure equalization becomes far more difficult. Start your maneuvers as soon as the aircraft begins to lose altitude and keep at the process every few seconds if your ears continue to feel blocked.

Should these suggestions fail to solve your problem, obtain an exam by an otolaryngologist.

Against Union Pacific...

Fed regulators refuse to take new action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite concerns by some that Union Pacific Railroad has yet to fully tame persistent congestion on its tracks in Texas and the Gulf Coast, federal regulators today refused to impose new short-term corrective measures against the nation's largest railroad.

Industry trade associations representing aggrieved shippers had urged the Surface Transportation Board to extend emergency measures that it ordered against Union Pacific nine months ago. Those corrective actions expire Sunday.

But the board, in its decision, said congestion in the Houston-Gulf Coast area has been reduced to the point that federal intervention no longer is necessary.

"Given the significant improvements in Houston area rail service, there is no longer any basis on which we could issue an emergency service order requiring UP to give up traffic to other carriers in that region," the board wrote.

Under the emergency service order imposed last Oct. 31, Union Pacific was directed to share some Texas track with two competitors, Texas Mexican Railway Co. and Burlington Northern Santa Fe.

Today, the board provided a 45-day "wind-down period" in which Tex-Mex and BNSF would gradually return to their former, pre-service order operations.

Union Pacific officials said they respect the STB's decision.

"While we hoped the emergency service order would expire on schedule, today's decision by the STB certainly confirms that there is no longer a service crisis in the Houston-Gulf area," said Union Pacific Corp. CEO Dick Davidson.

A Texas Railroad Commission member who has been a vocal critic of the railroad's performance expressed shock that the STB refused to take new action. "Can you believe this?" said Commissioner Charles Matthews, calling the decision an "Alice in Wonderland kind of ruling."

Drought affects everyone

boll weevil assessment fee and later harvest the fields.

"If there is no chance of the cotton coming up, why make the guy plant?" Moore asked.

The fruits of Moore's labor will probably be small as the insurance companies will not come anywhere close to covering the cost of planting his crop.

He estimated that in a total disaster, his coverage will pay approximatley $25 an acre while he's spending about $75 per acre on the crop.

A lack of water is as much a growing concern among ranchers as it is to farmers.

"Water is more critical than feed," Hefner said.

"Some ranchers depend on ponds and creeks for watering. They have no pipelines, no windmills. So what are their options? They have to haul water, sell the livestock or move to another pasture."

"You can go buy feed," Eicke said, "but I can't afford to haul water.

For some farmers, irrigation is not even feasible.

"We are limited on how many people have water. We don't have enough water irrigation," Gruben said.

The rippling effect of the drought to the economy is these farmers and ranchers will not be spending money.

"Communities will hurt," Hefner said. "People can't buy clothes, vacations, new vehicles."

John Short said he felt that the rest of the state and country is just now starting to take notice of a problem West Texans have almost always dealt with.

"Things are getting in motion now that the state is hurting."

Ziegler said," Up until three weeks ago, we didn't even know if they (Washington) were aware, people don't know if they can't see it."

"It's not real until it's on TV," Bullard chimed in.

A Texas A&M University study has estimated more than $1.4 billion in direct farmer losses due to the drought and $4.6 billion in overall economic loss.

The Senate recently approved a Gramm resolution urging the U.S. Department of Agriculture to streamline the drought declaration process and make sure Farm Service Agencies have sufficient personnel to deal with the expected volume of loan requests.

Gramm, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, praised the vote.

"Senators who are working on the Agriculture Appropriations Bill have recognized that the drought which is ravaging Texas will require rapid response."

The resolution also directed the U.S. Forest Service to help the state combat wildfires, and to allow haying and grazing on land that is part of the Conservation Reserve Program.

"Texas agricultural producers are in dire need of immediate assistance from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and haying on CRP acreage will provide relief to livestock producers as well as help minimize fire hazard conditions," the senator said.
