"Try Religious Field," Is Miller's Plea To Grads

BACCALAUREATE SERMON HURLS ITS CHALLENGE

Pastor Says Church Work Is Greatest of All Great Tasks

STUDENTS ATTEND

Members of Graduating Classes Here At Grace M. E.

Such was the parting challenge to the college and high school graduating classes, made Sunday morning by Rev. Leslie Miller, pastor of the Grace Methodist church, at the annual baccalaureate sermon.

"It may be the garment of luxury, the cloak of disobedience, the cape of thoughtlessness, it may be a more serious garment that you must sell, but for it exchange a sword with which you may fight the world. That was the advice given his disciples by the Christ, that is the command that He gives you today—you who are about to start out upon the long road of life, to climb the great hill to fame. Your weapon must be both a spiritual and an educational one. Through the sword of the spirit only may the success you desire be obtained."

Touches on Science

To further his point, Rev. Miller went deep into the problems of the life a student must face on his departure from the classroom. He took up the fields open to future men; then he took the possibilities of each field and around them built his charge to the two student bodies.

The realm of science, he stated, still offers a big field for those interested. It is a field that has been lessened somewhat by the ends of wars, but there still remains the demand for men who can see into physical possibilities.

In dealing with war, the minister charged the students to carry on the work that has been started in the past few years, that of exterminating the great god Mars. He expressed the belief that "the past eleven years has done much to lessen the possibilities of more wars. Why? Because it has seen much of the glamor taken from the conflict and leaves behind only the ugliness of men fighting their fellowmen. The deadly gases, so powerful scientists tell us, that one drop can kill hundreds of men, too have helped to sound the death knell of the war.

"Yes, the last few years have seen the passing of war. When you take away the glamor of flaring banners, of beating drums, of tramping feet, you have removed the romance, and that means the death of anything."

Law As a Vocation

"There is the world of law, a field that offers perhaps more possibilities than any other. In the past few years the spirit of lawlessness has become more and more pronounced with inadequate law enforcement facilities.

"There is the field of commerce. Here again is a great opportunity for you of tomorrow. There is the field of education, and of charity and a thousand other lives, all of them waiting for you.

"Lastly, and to my mind, most important of all is the field of religion. It is the controlling power of all, the most needed and the most certain to lead to success. Only through a belief in the spiritual life may any of us have the success that we hope to attain.

"In this field, however, there are two warring factions, and here lies the opportunity of you who are setting out today. There is thoughtlessness and there is the intemperate love of luxury that are fighting your true self, the real life you should lead. We can not all be great in the fields of science or commerce; we can not all attain fame as diplomats or presidents; we can not all even be successful; but we can, as the first battle in real life, draw our weapons against these two enemies of Christ.

"We do not any of us thinkingly sin; we do it thoughtlessly; we do it on the spur of the moment, not regretting until it is too late. This is human nature but it is such to be fought, and not until it is conquered will we be master over ourselves.

"In luxury there is not prominent evil. It is merely the sense of worthlessness it instills in all of us. The seeds of destruction find a fertile soil in luxury. Surely and truly will we hasten our own end if we persist in remaining in useless idleness while others work on.

"We speak of ourselves as a Christian people, but mark my words, we are far from having attained that ideal Christianity. To come at least to perfection, or near it, we must wield the spiritual sword, the sword of kindness and religion that will ultimately be the winner over the evils that exist in life today.

Throwing a Challenge

"The whole world is throwing a challenge in your face. It is a challenge to succeed, to prove your mettle, a challenge to cope with others and win the prize. Christ bids you to take that challenge and follow it through. Sell your garment, if you have no weapon and with the sword you then buy, stamp out this growing evil that is coming over the world, so that when your time comes, others may look back and know that you have carried on the battle and have left something lasting behind though you never attained to the heights of a president or a millionaire. Carry on the battle so that you yourself may know that you have done your part.

River, Not Content With Claiming Lives, Refuses To Give Up Its Victims

MEMPHIS, May 10—(AP)—Divers endeavoring to explore the hull of the steamer M. E. Norman, which capsized near Coahoma Landing, Miss., late Friday with a loss of probably 23 lives, today were forced to forego their efforts for a time at least. The current was found to be too swift, wireless messages from the scene said. It was said, however, that an effort might be made later.

Work of getting the bodies out of the hull will, until the current subsides be confined to efforts to tear away enough of the superstructure to permit the current to wash bodies out where they might be recovered, it was said.

A derrick boat was anchored over the sunker craft today.

United States engineers in charge of the work are doing everything in their power to recover the bodies, it was said. Major D. H. Connelly in charge of the engineers' corps fleet here and who was on the ill-fated craft, has been at the scene virtually all of the time. He returned to Memphis last night for a few hours rest and returned at 8 o'clock this morning.

Probability that bodies may be discovered many miles down the river, perhaps as far as Helena, Arkansas, was expressed by river men. Others, however, pointed out that these was a big eddy a short distance from the scene of the sinking and that it was probable that some of the bodies were in this place.

The Norman sank in probably the worst stretch of water between Memphis and Helena. The current at this point runs at the rate of about nine miles an hour and the banks of the stream are high and composed of sand. The swiftest part of the current is near the east bank of the river.

OVER 1,500,000 ACRES RUINED BY DRY SPELL

That Much in Small Grain Abandoned Because Of Drouth

AUSTIN, May 10.—More than a million and a half acres of small grains, and over 600,000 acres of winter wheat were abandoned by Texas growers, on account of the drouth, according to the U. S. crop estimate for Texas, prepared by H. H. Schutz, statistician, at Houston, based on data gathered May 1.

Fall and winter wheat, oats, barley and rye suffered severely from the drouth and the freezing weather of December and January.

Livestock Saved.

The livestock situation has been saved by the recent rains, the report pointed out; and while cattle, sheep, goats, horses and mules came through the long spell thin from lack of grass, improvement is now promised.

Over 9,000,000 acres of winter wheat throughout the country was abandoned, bringing the estimated production down to 444,000,000 bushels, as compared with 590,000,000 in 1924.

Labor Normal.

Up to the break in the drouth in most sections of Texas, there was a labor supply estimated at 22 per cent above the demand, instead of the usual shortage, but since farm work has started in earnest, the demand for farm labor has been extremely heavy, the report discloses.

More than a million acres of new land is being put into cultivation in Texas this year, reports to the government indicate.

BELIEF GROWS BURKETT WILL RACE IN 1926

Ex-Senator Shows That He Still Would Be Governor

JIM SEEMS THROUGH

All He or Ma Will Want Is A Senatorship, Is Belief

AUSTIN, Texas, May 10.—There is a growing belief that Joe Burkett Eastland county former senator, and opponent of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson in the first primary last year, may again be a candidate for governon in 1926, with the support of the present administration behind his campaign.

This opinion was strengthened when, in the appointment of judges of the new Eastland court of civil appeals, Burkett, who passed the first bill two years ago creating the court, was known not to have wanted a place on the court. He had already been appointed state highway commissioner, at a salary of $2,500 a year for the portion of his time required in that work, and his friends believe he could have become chief justice of the 11th civil appeals court had he wanted the office. But he did not want it, and didn't want to be "buried" politically as a judgeship is supposed to take a man out of politics.

"I am too young a man for that," he said.

Mrs. Ferguson's campaign showed that she wanted one term, and only one term as governor. James E. Ferguson has been twice elected governor, and besides that, occupies a position of unprecedented power in another term. If he runs for any office, it is most generally believed he will aspire to the United States senate.

The Ferguson political organization is a powerful factor in determining the democratic nomination. It carried, through all the lean years between impeachment and Mrs. Ferguson's election, around 100,000 votes; and now should carry many more. It can unquestionably place a candidate, even regardless of his own individual following, into a second primary.

Burkett, who supported Mrs. Ferguson in the second primary, who is an official in the administration, a confidential friend of the Fergusons, a young man who holds the record of being the youngest district judge ever elected in Texas, is regarded as more than merely a possible candidate.

He is now foremost among all those who may be looked upon to carry on in line with the present administration, as the likely Elisha.

Los Angeles Back From Isle Flight

LAKE HURST, N. J. May 10.—(AP)—The navy dirigible Los Angeles returned early today from her pioneer flight to Porto Rico. The ship was sighted over the landing field at 3:10 but it was 3 hours before she was brought into the hanger.

The lightness of the craft, resulting from fuel consumption, combined with the heavy, damp atmosphere to make the landing more than usually difficult. Twelve attempts to bring the ship earthward failed before the great bag was under control of the ground crew.

The trip to Porto Rico was declared a complete success by Captain Steele, who was in command. Weather conditions were for the most part excellent he said, although on Friday night rain and heavy thunderstorms were encountered off Florida.

Erstwhile Stage Hands But Play To Keep From Losing Their Own Jobs

NEW YORK, May 10. — After 20 years as stage hands Jim Thorpe stage electrician and Lloyd Kelly stage carpenter, rose suddenly tonight to the status of impresarios—owners of "Princess Ida", the rival of the Gilbert and Sullivan operatta playing at the Shubert theater.

Even the seventy members of the cast did not know that the two men had bought the play until after tonight's performance. When they went in search of their salaries they found Jim and Lloyd nonchalantly paying off.

"Princess Ida" was revived less than a month ago by Lawrence J. Anhalt, who decided that it was a "flop" and that he would close it tonight. Jim and Lloyed talked the situation over between chores, decided that the production could make money and pooling their savings, bought it from scenery to cast. They said they would continue it here and later perhaps send it on the road. "Don't think we are going to get temperamental now that we're impressarios" said Jim, "we bought the show because we didn't want to be thrown out of our jobs".

"We're going right along as we've been going", his partner said. "I'm going to stick to electricity and Jim is going to keep on doing the carpentering."

Panhandle On Its Way to Season Of Prosperity, He Says

"Prospects for West Texas were never brighter, never in her history has the panhandle and region west faced the future with hope so high as she does now", remarked W. H. Abernathy, secretary of the Paducah chamber of commerce on a visit to Wichita Falls yesterday.

Mr. Abernathy who has just returned from the Mineral Wells convention and a trip to other West Texas towns states that farmers and merchants alike are optimistic over the future, both in an agricultural and commerical way. With the long felt need of rain satisfied buring the past two weeks, farmers and cattlemen have been able to return to work, according to the visitor.

"Throughout the Panhandle everyone seems satisfied over conditions in general while crop prospects, though not as good as in the past, are still such that no discouragement is felt among the farmers."

Mr. Abernathy, who is well known over the Paducah territory, is returning to him home today.

STRAND MOVIE RELATES TALE OF REVOLUTION

Hard Road of 1776 Retold In Film Masterpiece, Janice Meredith

The story of the hard road America trod to win its freedom, tempered with the spice of as pretty a love story as was ever told—that's Janice Meredith, starring Marion Davies, which began its four-day run at the Strand yesterday. With all the questionable glamor of the revolutionary struggle as a background these two, a colonial damsel and a colonel in the continental army, furnish a drama all of their own, all the while a hero Washington forces a ragged army across an ice-bound river and captures a drunken force of Hessian troopers for the first real victory of the American revolution.

"Janice Meredith," a Metro-Goldwyn picturization of Paul Leceister Ford's novel of the same name drew exceptional crowds Sunday. The entire proceeds will be given to the Kiwanis club for the benefit of the day nursery.

Stars in 1774.

The film carries the thread of the story of the revolution throughout, the action starting in 1774 when the eastern Atlantic seaboard was seething with the opposition to George III, king of England, and the domineering policy he had instituted in his government of the American colonies.

In the midst of the embryo rebellion the peaceful Greenwood manor, New Jersey home of rich old Squire Meredith and his family is seen with

GERMANY REMAINS CALM

BERLIN, May 10.—(AP)—A blue sky is all that now is needed to make perfect Berlin's welcome to President-Elect Von Hindenburg on his arrival from Hanover, Monday afternoon. SENATOR SEES U. S. ECONOMIC DANGER AHEAD

Morris Shepherd Foresees A Corporate Empire Ahead of Country

FEW CONTROL WEALTH

Economic Independence Is Only Way to Avoid Dangers, He Says

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 10.—Joseph Weldon Bailey served two terms in the senate of the United States. Morris Sheppard, a native Texan, became Bailey's successor and Sheppard has more than two terms to his credit. He is the author of the eighteenth amendment and the godfather of the nineteenth amendment. "The saloon must go" was his early slogan. And the saloon has gone. "Ballots for women" was his second slogan, and woman has the ballot.

Now Senator Sheppard sees in the distance a corporate empire in control of the republic unless the voters of America battle for economic and political independence. He sounded his warning at Mineral Wells when he appeared before the annual convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce. He admits that the United States is the richest nation in the world. He charges the largest portion of its wealth is held by a comparative few.

Home Owners Richer

He asserts that the home owners of 1776 were far richer in ownership qualities than the United States of today. He charged that the majority today are tenants and employes. He announced the parting of the ways between the old individualism and a new autocracy is here. He charged that the farmer is at the mercy of giant corporations which control industry and distribution.

He bluntly said that 20 per cent of the people are engaged in agricultural pursuits, but those 20 per cent get only 17 per cent of the wealth which they create. Moreover he said the cotton farmer of Texas scarcely receives the cost of production and a small profit and that gradually the farmer is being driven to lower standards of living than any American ought to tolerate.

Facing the cattlemen of the west, the senior senator said those engaged in the livestock industry have ceased to

MAN AND WIFE BADLY BURNED IN EXPLOSION

G. C. Coplin and Wife Are Injured When Gas Explodes

G. C. Coplin and his wife were painfully but not seriously burned early Sunday night when a gas explosion in their home at the rear of 806 Fifth street started a fire that caused damage of about $100 to the property. Mr. Coplin suffered severe burns about the back and shoulders, while Mrs. Coplin was burned around the hands and face.

The man and his wife had just entered the house after returning from the city about 10 o'clock and Mr. Coplin struck a match to look for a light, he said. The moment the flame flared out a sharp explosion rocked the building, followed by a burst of flame. Mr. Coplin's coat and shirt were burned from his back.

Both rushed from the room and neighbors, attracted by the blast, called the fire department. Firemen had little difficulty in subduing the blaze which was burning wallpaper and curtains in the house.

The injured pair were taken to the Wichita Falls medical clinic offices in the Waggoner building where their burns were dressed by Dr. Q. B. Lee. Later they returned to their home.

Other than that escaping gas from a faulty fixture had accumulated in the building, firemen could offer no explanation for the explosion.

RAIN AND COLD HOLD SWAY IN WICHITA AREA

Heavy Storms With A Low Temperature Prevail Here

DOWNPOUR IS GENERAL

Farmers Delayed Again In Getting Started In Fields

With an accompaniment of temperatures that smacked more of Montana frigidity than Texas balminess, rain and wind held away over North Texas Sunday. It was a day cold, cloudy, raw and disagreeable ;one that carried no inkling of the parching heat that a sure to follow t.

For the third time in less than two weeks Wichita Falls was drenched again with a heavy rain. The storm swept in with startling suddeness at 2 o'clock Sunday morning and persated with more or less intensity until long after daylight. Unpaved roads were again transformed to bottomless quagmire sand this time, farmers looked somewhat askance at the skies, hoping for a letup that would allow work in the fields.

Electrical Storm.

A severe electrical storm accompanied the rain for a few hours and ominous flashes of lightning played overhead for a time.

Sunday afternoon was cool and cloudy with a constant threat of rain that failed to materialize. A thickening cloud blanket late in the day gave promise of more rain but this, too, had done nothing at a late hour last night except send the thermometer still lower. Extra clothing and heated rooms were really in demand early in the evening.

Rain Widespread.

Reports reaching here from sections of the Wichita Falls trade territory indicated the rain was general. The Panhandle and plains country to the northwest was thoroughly soaked again, as was that section to the southwest. From San Angelo northeast through and beyond this city the showers were heavy. The rain fall tapered off somewhat to the southeast, although Dallas and Fort Worth, with intermediate points, sent word of general rains.

The storm apparently came from the west ,or from the southwest, and moved on into southern Oklahoma.

RAIN IN PANHANDLE.

CHILDRESS, Texas, May 10.—Heavy rains covered the entire Panhandle-Plains section last night and today. The rain was heavier west of Childress than in the city.

The Denver road reported a washout eight miles east of Memphis, which delayed traffic several hours.

Lake Childress, this city's source of water supply, has been raised 18 inches during the past two weeks but last nihgt's rain raised the water level three feet. The lake now is at its highest point, lacking about four feet of reaching the spillway. The lake covers more than 400 acres and is 70 feet deep at the outlet well. The present supply is sufficient to last the city four years.

Farm lands are socked and it will be two or three days before the farmers can enter the fields. Much cotton and feed crops have been planted and are up to a good stand. Range conditions were never better.

ONE INCH FALL RECORDED.

SAN ANGELO, May 10.—Rains averaging an inch fell today over Schleicher, Sutton and Crockett counties, relieving sections that had had little moisture in months.

RAIN AT DALHART.

DALHART, May 10.—Two and three-quarters inches of rain fell here in 48 hours ending at noon today.

RIVER STILL RISING.

DALLAS, May 10.—Trinity river already overflowing lowland farms, continued to rise today and will reach the 35-foot stage at Dallas by tomorrow morning the local weather bureau predicts. The stage here was more than 33 feet late today and the predicted rise of two additional feet will put the stream ten feet over bank levels. Little damage has been reported so far as livestock previously had been removed from the danger zone.

OAK CLIFF SUFFERS

DALLAS, May 10.—The lives of several persons were endangered by an electrical storm and rain which visited Oak Cliff between 3:30 and 4 o'clock Sunday morning during which time lightning struck two houses, one of which was seriously damaged.

The roof was burned from the home of Mrs. W. J. Warren. She said all occupants of the house had been roused by the storm and were awake when lightning struck the place. The loss was estimated at $2,000.

Advertising an Aid To Religion, Is Claim Of Ad Club Speaker

HOUSTON May 10.—(AP)—The kingdom of God on earth can be brought nearer reality by advertising provided advertisers "wrap the material things in the covering of great unifying and enobling ideas," Congressman Charles Aubrey Eaton of New Jersey declared in an address before the Associated Advertising clubs of the world here today.

"While we are selling things of the material kind, we must sell also the imperishable things of the spirit," he declared. "Thus only can the art and science of advertising continue to be the beautiful handmaiden of human progress leading the weary feet of all nationas forward along convergent paths until by and by we shall reach the sunlit land of human understanding, complete cooperation, friendship, and peace, which will mean the dawning of the kingdom of God on earth."

One Big Problem.

"Human society throughout the civilized world," continued the speaker, "is now grappling with one supreme, common problem. This problem briefly stated is, how shall the masses of men everywhere who produce by the toil of brain or brawn, achieve the same participation in the economic resources of th. world that they already have achieved in, the political, intellectual, and spiritual resources of the world."

"Having achieved in some measure full political and religious participation of the good things of life," this economic participation is the great central question agitating every civilized society, he said.

"We propose to cure the evils of capitalism," he said, "by making more capitalists; and at this moment the great reassuring fact is that the vast majority of our people have acquired joint ownership in the nation's wealth by savings deposits, life insurance policies, and purchase of stocks, bonds, lands, homes, and of more or less permanent commodities.

"Three great outstanding movements today looking to a more complete participation of al lthe people in the economic resources of the world, so far as America is concernel, are: first—development of the representation system in the larger industries; second—the rapidly increasing numbers of people of all classes who by thrift and wise investment are acquiring ownership in public utilities, industries, railroads, banks, and other forms of economic service; and third — the growing movement for co-operative marketing among farmers which has as its objective the bringing of agriculture as an economic understanding to the level now occupied by manufacturing industries."

SENATOR SEES

have an effective voice in marketing meat products and outside combinations are infinitely enriched by the labor of the stockmen of the commonwealth. Senator Sheppard had fought the big five packers to a finish in the years of the Wilson administration.

Lead Cattle Fight

Senator John B. Kendrick of Wyoming, led the fight for the livestock industry of the nation. Charles A. Culberson, then a senator, was lined up with Kendrick and Sheppard. These men of the west and the southwest won. They forced the big five packers to separate themselves from the other food product industries of the country.

Now the famous decree has been set aside and one of the achievements of the Wilson administration has been dissipated or discarded. Kendrick and those who stood with him are just where they started more than 12 years ago. This is not saying that the suspension of the decree was without justice or merit.

In the days of Woodrow Wilson the livestock men won their contentions. In the days of Calvin Coolidge, but not by his order, the cattlemen have lost that which they won in the years gone by. Senator Sheppard is certain that the corporate empire is about to be substituted for the republic of the fathers and will be substituted unless the sons of the fathers enlist for the battle of economic and political independence. He has a solution. He demands decentralization of industry in the United States and restoration of processes of manufacture to individuals and local controls. This is his third slogan or declaration of principle:

Secure Independence

"People must secure economic independence without which political independence is an empty name. The operators of industry must have the prospects of becoming owners. The Texas Technological college, judged by its possible results, is the most significant step in the history of a free people since the battle of San Jacinto. Texas must make within her border everything that Texas needs. With five million cattle, for instance, she virtually is giving away hides and then buying them in manufactured products at enormous prices. We must reopen the channels of opportunity so the tenants may become owners."

If the corporate empire is about to be ushered in as the successor of the republic and the institutions of the fathers, what are the Texas senators and representatives going to do about it. Texas should be made the greatest of manufacturing states. Texas produces all the raw material. Texas has the natural gas and lignite. Texas has water power if Texas rivers were harnessed. Texas is the neighbor of Mexico and the Pan-American republic, all great consumers of cotton goods. Texas is at the very door of the Panama Canal.

Why shouldn't Texas come in to her own some day. Senator Sheppard is on the right track. The cotton of Texas should be consumed in Texas mills, and the wool of Texas in the mills of Texas. Texas should have tanneries and shoe manufacturing plants to supply the millions who buy footwear in the southwest, in Mexico and in all the Pan-America. There are 20 million of potential buyers in these lands where Spanish is spoken. Why not supply their needs?

N. Y. Baby Farm Fatal To Another; Question Woman

23rd Dies as a Result of Boche Widow's Care.

BAIL $36,000

Malnutrition and Neglect Charged to Woman.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—The baby death toll of Mrs. Helen Augusta Geisenvolk's East 86th Street "baby farm" has reached 23, it was announced by the authorities today. The woman, widow of a Prussian army officer and a former German Red Cross nurse, was held for investigation by the grand jury.

The 23rd victim, a two-year-old boy, died at Bellevue hospital last night. His father had taken him from Mrs. Geisenvolk's "baby farm" yesterday morning to the hospital for treatment of ailments said to have been caused by malnutrition and neglect.

Not My Baby.

Mrs. Geisenvolk was held on a charge of having attempted to give a strange baby to William Angerer, when he called for his own child, Stephen, 7 months old, last Tuesday. The Angerer child still is missing and a half dozen children taken from the "baby farm" remain at Bellevue, unidentified and unclaimed.

Mrs. Geisenvolk offered no defense when arraigned. Her bail of $35,000 on the substitution charge was continued and the magistrate imposed additional bail of $1,000 when children's society agents charged the woman with having voilated the terms of her city license in that she had kept a score of children in her place, while her permit called for only seven.

Chief Assistant District Attorney Pecora, who has assigned a large force of men to the investigation said that his office soon would "make a homicide charge against some one in this case."

Charged With Manslaughter.

Investigators said they had learned that Mrs. Geisenvolk had been indicted on a charge of manslaughter in May, 1918, at which time she conducted a maternity hospital and nursery in Upper Park Avenue. The charge was said to have grown out of death of Anna Seburg, which resulted from a criminal operation. Dr. Arthur Camitzer also was named in the indictment, according to Assistant District Attorney Ryan, who said the case had been dropped for lack of evidence.

Two mothers told the authorities today they believed their babies had met fates similar to that of the Angerer child. The infants had been left with Mrs. Geisenvolk, both said, and ultimately had disappeared. One of the babies was reported by the woman to have died, but the disappearance of the second according to the mother, never has been explained, although she had instituted kidnaping proceedings against Mrs. Geisenvolk in 1921. Those proceedings later were dropped "for lack of evidence," she said.

Second Letter Is Received In Germist Probe

CHICAGO, May 10.—A second letter, purporting ot refute suspicions uttered by Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock concerning William D. Shepherd and his wife, was received today by Judge Harry Olson, he announced. Shepherd was indicted by the grand jury for the murder of young William N. McClintock by typhoid inoculation, and his wife was ordered held as an accessory to the crime. A coroner's jury recommended that both the Shepherds be held to the grand jury in connection with the death of Mrs. McClintock, 16 years ago.

Judge Olson, who was instrumental in securing the indictment of the Shepherds, refused to make public the letter, said to be from a St. Louis, Mo., woman.

Numerous new angles of the investigation are being followed as the result of a letter received earlier from Mrs. Myrta Osborn of Houston, Texas, who asserted that Billy had expressed the belief his mother was poisoned by the Shepherds and that they also intended harming him. She also said that Mrs. McClintock had referred to the Shepherds as "human barnacles" and had expressed distrust of them.

A law, which would prohibit a murderer from inheriting from the person he murdered was proposed in another letter received by Judge Olson today. Billy McClintock left the greater portion of his estate, valued at over $1,000,000, to Shepherd, his foster-father. As the law now stands even if Shepherd were convicted of the youth's murder he would inherit the estate. The letter from Attorney Carl Eppler of Quincy, Ills., told of an effort to pass such a law by State Senator Charles R. McNay several years ago, which was defeated in the Illinois legislature.

Senator McNay was elected to the legislature again last year and will resubmit his bill at the next session, Attorney Eppled wrote.

Secretary Treasury Denies Debt Refund Move

WASHINGTON, Fay 10.—Coincident with the return to Washington from Paris today of Under Secretary Winston of the treasury who spent several weeks in the French capital on a vacation trip, there was widespread speculation, particularly in diplomatic circles as to the possible significance of his visit, in connection with the Frdench war debt question.

Washington officials including Mr. Winston, made the flat statethat they knew of no recent development looking to initiation of negotiations for a refunding agreement between France and the United States. Some other quarters hinted that a direct move to foster the beginning of debt conversations either had been made or soon would be made. Among some diplomats, the view was expressed that conversations of this kind appeared to be impeding, judging by the course of developments in London, Paris and Berlin, in connection with the security question and the connection of that problem with the French financial situation.

Mr. Winston admitted that all phases of international financial matters which fall within his jurisdiction had been touched upon during informal conversations in Paris not only with Ambassador Herrick but also with French governmental officials with whom he came in contact. He emphasized however, that he had made it clear to everybody concerned that he was on a vacation and that he was not delivering official messages in an unofficial way.

Two Suicides In Houston Gives Up Life's Battle In Different Parts of City

HOUSTON, May 10.—Two persons, a man and a women, gave up the battle of life in Houston Saturday afternoon in widely separated parts of the city.

"I can not get well. I beg God's forgiveness and hold no ill towards anyone. Goodbye to my dear family and children". This note, pinned to the dress of Mrs. N. O. Townsend, about 40, is believed by police to explain the finding of her body in a bayou which skirts the rear of the York Sanitarium, where she was a patient. The body was recovered from the bayou shortly after 4 p. m.

A man identified as Harvey Stevenson of Palestine, about 28, was found dead in a local hotel at 3:15 p. m., and 13 chloroform bottles, 12 of them empty, are believed by police to be responsible for his death. J. E. Kent, ambulance driver for the Houston Undertaking company, said he was in the army with Stevenson two years and eleven months in France and that the body was that of Stevenson. Both were in Company G, 143rd infantry, according to Kent.

The man registered as J. E. Parnell of Galveston.

HIS BEST FRIEND

This is a note of warning to sweethearts and fiances—or even those who are about to be sweethearts and fiances.

There will come a time after you've been going around with HIM for some weeks, when HE'LL tell you: "Oh, say I want you to meet Rod—he's my pay, you know. You're sure to like him. (He's great. I want you two to be good friends. Gosh, we've had some great times together. I've known him ever since he was a kid. When I come up Saturday night, I'll bring him."

Now let me state right here, the chances are hundred to one against your liking friend Rod.

No matter how perfect he may be, his best friend is sure to be a total loss in your eyes.

You'll resent the easy familiarity with which Rod makes casual allusion to the girl who figured prominently in his life, before you met him.

Oh yes—you and Rod will never be playmates.

But—no matter how deep-rooted your dislike for the luckless best friend—no matter how firm a distaste you acquire for him—that must be one of the secrets you take with you to the grave—that is if you intend that he shall be a permanent fixture in your home.

Never, by any hint, any word or deed let him suspect that you don't think Rod is the world's best.

Be just as enthusiastic as possible Pull out the few virtues you did find in Rod and talk about them with glowing enthusiasm.

Even if he points out that Rod has a few faults—don't you agree with him.

Let him offer his share of unfavorable criticism, if he wants to. But don't try adding any remarks of your own.

He'll rise up in a righteous rage, and ask you how you dare to disapprove of anyone so eminently satisfactory and altogether perfect as the great Rod.

After a while, you'll get so you won't mind having Rod around so very much.

And by adopting an attitude of friendly good-nature to him, you'll be doing more to ingratiate yourself with him than you could have perhaps accomplished in years.

Also, if you had adopted any other attitude toward the best friend, you would have hurt him so much that have crumbled to ruins.

Don't take a chance on losing him by razzing his best friend.

Defense Plans For Hawaii To Cost Millions

—WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP). Approved war department estimates for the defenses of the Hawaiian islands involve a total of $40,000,000 of which about one-half has already been expended. The figures are exclusive of projects for development of the Pearl Harbor naval base for which a separate $6,000,000 proposal has been authorized by congress although no appropriations have yet been made.

The figures on the army defense project came to light today in connection with results of the joint army and navy maneuvers to test the present garrison against a surprise attack. While official reports of the outcome of the war game are not expected to reach Washington for a week or two official advices have already disclosed, in the judgment of officers who have read carefully press accounts from the scene that the half finished defense project cannot be relied upon to protect the Pearl Harbor naval base from enemy investment in the event of such a surprise attack in force as was simulated in the maneuvers.

The aggregate cost of $40,000,000 for the land defenses of the island of Aahu, which has been discussed at length by congressional committees covers the additional interior communication system of roads and other means of rapid transport which observers here believe the offical reports will show might have prevented the landing of the "black" forces.

North Texas Clubs Prove Supremacy Over Entries From South

YOU KNOW ME AL — The Adventures of Jack Keefe —By Ring Lardner

(Copyright, 1925, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

PANTHERS AND TANNERS LOOK BEST IN LOOP

Erstwhile Biffing Bears Go Under on Northern Invasion

BUFFS COME TO LIFE

Dick Morgan Squares Off With Roy Crumpler Today

Everybody played Sunday but our noble Spudders and Dell Pratt's Wacoans. Excess moisture at the Spud plant stopped hostilities deader than a clergyman's assistant at a pool and poker festiva by mistake, before the two bludgeoning aggregations ever got started.

Atz's Cowtowners, as was expected pulled the rush act on the brutal bruisers from the southern section, San Antonio's hitherto cyclonic attack wilting to less than a gentle zephyr before the wrong-armed curvatures of Josephus Pate. Bears bucked the dust in 12 to 1 defeat.

The other South Texas entry didn't fare so well, Shreveport's Sports rambling rather roughly over Beaumont's Exporters by a 12 to 5 computation.

And, that's that for the North Texas supremacy. Cowtown's got a finger grip on the top rung of the percentage ladder. Erstwhile bustin' Bears are reclining in second, and the Spudders stand in a fair way to overtake both of the leaders before the week is out.

The Tanner drive starts this afternoon. Skipper intends to send Devilish Dick Morgan, hilarious heaver who blanked Bersen's boys on his last out, to the promontory this p. m. Pratt will start Roy Crumpler. Both clubs are in fairly good shape, it was broadcasted from rival headquarters last eve. Golvin of the Spudders is still limping, however. And Pete Turgeon's wing isn't so sprightly.

DALLAS, May 10(AP)—The Texas league race continued nip and tuck during the last week, with San Antonio and Fort Worth and Wichita Falls making the strongest bids for championship honors. San Antonio came north with a slight lead it maintained through Saturday, due partly to the heavy rains which cancelled about half of the week's games. The San Antonio-Fort Worth series which opened today will give the two leaders their first real test of strength.

Rain Thwarts Comparison

Owing to the rain, there was little opportunity to measure the comparatime strength of the north and South Texas teams in their first inter-sectional clashes of the season. In those few games that were played the North Texas teams improved their standing at the expense of the South Texans. The rain, which brought gloom to the club owners, brought joy to the fans, who rejoice in the prospect of numerous double headers when the South Texas teams again come north.

The Dallas club, with victories over San Antonio and Waco, continued its winning spurt which started the week previous. After tenanting the cellar for most of the season, Larry Gardner's Steers seem to have found themselves. They are getting good pitching for the first time. Wichita Falls also had a good week, mainly at the expense of Beaumont. Williams turned in another well pitched game for the Spudders. Rip Wheeler, one of the Spudders' best pitchers, made his first start yesterday, but his wildness forced his retirement. When he gets into condition and can help Osborn and Williams, the Spudders are expected to cause trouble. Shreveport profited at the expense of Waco and San Antonio, but the Sports are still displaying a tendency to explore the cellar. Fort Worth, with a loss to Houston and victories over Beaumont, gained a notch. Kemner, Oklahoma youngster, made his first start in the box for Fort Worth, and scored an impressive victory over Beaumont.

Houston Looks Good

Houston made the best showing of any of the South Texas teams, scoring victories over both Fort Worth and Wichita Falls. The Buffs got good pitching from Goodwin, Barnes and Littleohn. San Antonio lost ground since it left home, and did not win a game in North Texas during the week. The Bear bats, which had been rattling fences in ferocious fashion in South Texas, seemed impotent when they reached northern latitudes. Waco and Beaumont likewise made a poor showing against their North Texas rivals, the latter taking undisputed possession of last place.

The coming week will see the end of the North Texas invasion, after which the northern clubs will hie south.

COLORS DISRUPT GERMANY.

BAYREUTH, Bavaria, May 10.—The Reich color question is becoming more complicated. The official Bavarian colors, blue and white, are to be supplanted temporarily by the old colors of the empire, black, white and red, and not the colors of the republic, black, red and gold.

The Bayreuth city council has decided by 15 to 11, the latter being opposition votes of the social democrats, to display the black, white and red flag on all public buildings on the day of Von Hindenburg's inaugura tion and also to send him a message of felicitation.

Peerless George On Road to One Of Best Seasons

Sisler Plays Faultlessly And Wops Agate for .419 Average

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—(AP)—George Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Browns not only has accomplished one of baseball's greatest "comebacks," but apparently is well on the road this year to one of his greatest seasons in baseball.

Forced out of the national pastime the whole of the 1923 season by an attack of sinus trouble, which impaired his vision and which interfered considerably with his play last season, the "peerless" George this years seems destined to reach the highest pinnacle of baseball's supremacy, if his performance thus far can be taken as a criterion.

Last winter, when Sisler asserted emphatically that he expected to be as good as ever in 1925, baseball fans throughout the country wished him well, but were frankly dubious. They apparently remembered his play last year when he faced pitchers with his head cocked to one side, and pushed feebly at pitchers, seldom connecting solidly with the ball.

Although he did manage to eke out a batting average of .305, his all-around performance was not impressive, and many predicted that he would not be a great player again.

But this year, it is another story, he has participated in 25 games, batting for an average of .419, several points better than he did at any time in his career. He has faced all kinds of pitching and has yet to participate in a game without obtaining one or more hits.

But his batting average does not tell the full tale of Sisler's remarkable play.

Last year he was always "in the hole" to opposing pitchers, but not so this year.

Any doubt as to Sisler's play is promptly and unequivocally dispelled by the Brown's manager himself. He attributes his remarkable success to confidence.

CHAMPS TO BENEFIT BY PITCHER'S TRADE

The trade, whereby Washington draws Joe Harris of the Rex Sox for Pitcher Paul Zahnizer and Outfielder Roy Carlyle, ought to be a mighty good one for the champions, as they get a strong right-hand batter and do not have to part with a valuable player, comments Henry P. Edwards in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Like the Cleveland team of a year ago, Washington, this spring, was decidedly long on left-hand hitting outfielders, and short on gardeners who bat right-handed, McNeeley being the only one of the latter class. Goslin, Rice, Matthews, Leibold and Carlyle all hit from the first base side of the plate.

Harris not alone can play the outfield but is a fair first baseman. Buck Harris also can use him as a pinch hitter. Joe batted .301 for the Red Sox last season but it so happened Joe drove in seventy-seven runs, which shows he was an exceedingly timely batsman.

With Harris on the job, Washington will not be handicapped to any great extent if Joe Judge's trick knee runs true to form and keeps Judge out of the game now and then. Whenever Judge was forced to lay off in 1924, the Nats were weakened, as Shirley, who has been his understudy batted only .234.

Exchange Professorship Idea Is Carried to Football Field

WILLIAM ROPER

FIELDING H. YOST

For several years now American and foreign colleges have been exchanging professors for various periods in the belief that such exchanges broaden the scope of the colleges and gives the men involved new thoughts on their work. This idea has now invaded the athletic angle of collegiate activities. Fielding H. "Hurry up" Yost, famous coach of the University of Michigan eleven and Harvey Smery, one of his aides have just returned to Ann Arbor after directing the spring activities of the Princeton football squad And William W. "Bill" Roper, famous Princeton mentor, with two of his aides, Al Wittmer and at Poe are now working with the Wolverine candidates.

WHITE SOX HAVE AN INFIELD GOOD AS ANY

When major league infields are under discussion the first defense line of the Chicago White Sox must be seriously considered, says H. G. Salsinger in the Detroit News. Here is a bang-up infield, a combination that will help the Chicago pitching and be the cause of considerable grief among opposing teams this season.

There is not another infield in the league today that presents the double play combinations that Chicago does and it is the double play that is a pitcher's best asset.

All championship teams have carried strong infields, at least they had powerful combinations at second base. The White Sox are protected at first and third as well as around second, and while no one claims that Chicago is a championship outfit it is still better than the average.

Big Earl Sheely is not the fastest first sacker in the game but he is a good fielder, a heady ball player and the finest throwing target in the league. He has not dropped five thrown balls since he made his major league debut years ago, and he has a good throwing arm. E. Trowbridge Collins remains the best of all second basemen and in Ike Davis the White Sox have a shortstop that has range, speed, deterity, aggressiveness and a good arm.

East Supremacy Is Established In Major Leagues

Feature of Past Week Is Meteoric Rise of Macks

NEW YORK, May 16.—(AP)—The fourth week of major league baseball accomplished the double result of establishing early eastern supremacy in both circuits and in so clearly defining the status of every team that no position in the standing remained under dispute at the close.

With no lapse in the powerful hitting which carried them through the early season period of ineffective pitching, the Philadelhia Athletics claimed the major interest of baseball men by attaining and holding undisputed possession of first place in the American league through five victories in six starts against the Yankees and Cleveland Indians. Evidence of ability to rise in emergencies with a determined offensive thrust was seen in the fact that three of their triumphs were scored by single run margins while an impressive rally in the tenth annexed a fourth verdict.

The rise of the Mackmen after more than ten years in the American league depths to the heights occupied by the championship machine of Baker, Collins, Plank, Bender and other diamond immortals, accompanies brilliant pitching by the undefeated Sam Gray and timely hitting by Simmons, Bishop and Miller.

The Washington Senators, tripped in two games by Chicago and Boston, dropped back to second place, while Cleveland, pace-makers of a week ago, were caught in the Philadelphia undertow.

The Brooklyn Robins after a slow start, rallied sharply under improved hurling by Grimes, Petty and Ehrhardt and contributed the week's best performance in the National by winning five of their seven games. Fournier's exceptional batting was an inspiration.

Braced by the terrific hitting of their pilot, Ty Cobb, the Detroit club outbatted and outscored the teams in both loops, but failure of their pitchers to show signs of improvement prevented the Tigers from vaulting out of the pit on an even break for the week.

Unexpectedly good pitching which confronted both teams in the east checked Chicago at Boston and Cincinnati at Brooklyn and the New York Giants had to win only three or their five games to retain the National league loft.

The Browns remained in fifth place in the American with an even break for the week, content in their enthusiasm over the hitting streak of George Sisler. The St. Louis National entry, breaking up their long losing spell, in the first of the week, bore up by a display of hard hitting which did not subside even as they passed the portals of the Polo Grounds.

A revival of old time slugging coupled with a fair brand of pitching checked the steady drop of the Yankees, who were charged with two defeats by a single tally and with a third only after extra innings were required.

The Boston Braves put in their best week of the season, rising to sixth place in crest of superlative mound performances by Genewich, Marquard, Cooney and Barnes.

The two Sox entries in the American, Boston and Chicago, failed to budge from their positions of a week ago, while the Robins and Phillies exchanged berths in the National to the advantage of the Brooklyn club.

PLAN CLOSER BLOCKADE

Cosat Guard Officials Hope to Annihilate Rum Fleet.

WASHINGTON, May 10. — Coast guard officials turned today to a consideration of ways and means of further expanding their program designed to compel the rum row bootleggers to quit in disgust.

While confidential reports to guard headquarters continued to disclose evidence of vandalism, attacks, threats and attempts to bribe guardsmen and destroy guard property, Rear Admiral Billard, coast guard commandant, was in constant touch with his advisers and subordinates in mapping out plans to outguess the smugglers and their agents.

Officials do not care to disclose at this time, the nature of the expansion to be attempted. It was indicated, however, that the program includes the use at an early date of some of the new 100 foot steel patrol boats, contracts for which were let during the winter. None is ready for service yet, but it is likely that some of them will be available within a short time.

The day's developments included announcement from headquarters that a patrol boat had burned to the water's edge, under suspicious circumstances at Key West. Following as it did a series of other mishaps to boats of the dry flotilla, officials accepted it as the work of the "enemy" in the rum war.

Yankees Get Well on Five Brown Pitchers By 13-1 Score

CHICAGO, May 10. — Johnny Mostil's home run drive into the left field bleachers with a runner on base, broke up a 12-inning game today and gave Chicago a 10 to 8 victory over Washington, before a crowd of more than 50,000 persons. The world's champions went on a batting rampage in the sixth inning, driving Faber off the hill and with the aid of Connally's wildness scored seven runs. The locals plugged along and tied the count in the eighth when Gregg stepped in and checked the rally. Gregg weakened toward the finish. Lyons pitched great ball when he went to the hill. The score:

THE RULING PASSION.

Canon Donaldson, discerning dean of Westminster Abbey, lists what are to him the seven cardinal social sins of this wicked world of ours. They are, he says:

1. Politics without principles.
2. Wealth without work.
3. Pleasure without conscience.
4. Knowledge without character.
5. Commerce and industry without morality.
6. Science without humanity.
7. Worship without sacrifice.

And of these, says Canon Donaldson, the passion for the accumulation of riches at all costs, preferably without earning them, is a disease of the great mass of the British nation.

It is not without justice that Americans are called money mad. But this disease, this passion for the accumulation of riches, preferably without earning them, imbues all of mankind, savage and civilized.

Let us pass over the question of whether it is a sin; for it may be a blessing. What is the reason for it? The mere desire to possess? To be powerful?

The answer is even simpler, it seems to me.

The human sees wealth as a release from work, from activity, from motion.

He doesn't understand, or forgets, that we exist physically, because our organism is the seat of constant motion; and if we are to exist intellectually, it can only be by means of continual occupation—no matter with what so long as it is some form of practical or mental activity.

Our nature is essentially restless in character; because life in all its infinite varieties, consists in movement. We very soon get tired of nothing to do; it is intolerable boredom.

The "idle rich" are never idle for long.

Activity—doing something, if possible creating something—how fortunate it is that men cannot exist without that!

A man instinctly wants to use his strength to see, if he can, what effect it will produce.

From this point of view, those are happiest of all who are conscious of the power to produce works animated by some significant purpose; it gives a higher kind of interest to the whole of their life.

NEW YORK'S MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN.

Apparently, Governor Smith of New York has forgotten the alliance with Mayor Hylan of New York City which prevented a split in the Empire state democracy during the presidential campaign. He has even forgotten that he stands a lone leader almost without a following. In an effort to build up a following which will put his party once more in undisputed control of state affairs, he has undertaken to bring about the downfall of Hylan. The mayor is not "regular," and for this reason it is understood that Smith and the Tammany Hall organization have determined upon his retirement.

There seems little doubt among political observers that this movement will prove successful in defeating Hylan for renomination. It appears, too, that Hylan cannot hope for re-election as an independent. Leading groups of independent voters in New York City are said to have indicated that they will support the Smith candidate. Even the republicans would be disarmed against the organization man. In their recent activities, they have fought Hylan and have let Tammany alone. Now they can hardly turn about and make an effective fight. Besides, they realize that the contest between the democratic factions will monopolize public interest.

But if Hylan is driven from power, it is not at all certain that the state democracy will be the gainer. As one Hylan supporter has put the matter, the record of the party in the city cannot be severed from the official career of the man who has been most conspicuous in making that record. When Hylan falls the party will seem to have repudiated its own stewardship of municipal affairs. The effect will be to strengthen the republicans. They will have a new man and practically a new following to deal with, neither of which can have the strong popular support formerly enjoyed by an undivided democracy. The city may still be held by the democrats but any weakening there is bound to have a bad effect upon their political fortunes in the state.

SPEAKING OF THE MAGIC VALLEY.

A magic valley enthusiast says that more than one million acres makes the lower Rio Grande valley; that 795,000 acres can be irrigated; that the present cultivated area embraces 275,000 acres; that more than 12,000 cars of vegetables were shipped out during 1924 and upward of 85,000 bales of cotton; and that approximately 30,000 acres are planted to citrus fruit, and then he submits more interesting figures.

From 1910 to 1920 the population of the lower Rio Grande valley increased 154 per cent. Between 1904 and 1924 assessed valuations mounted from $6,000,000 to $80,000,000. During the same period banks grew from one to twenty-six, and bank deposits from $162,000 to more than $17,000,000.

It is most appropriate to spring these figures while the men who are winning the west and telling of its growth and achievements are in convention assembled in the city of Mineral Wells. Texas, all Texas, is on the onward march.

AMERICAN BANKERS ARE HAPPY.

American bankers say that the re-establishment of the gold standard in Great Britain with the protection of a $300,000,000 American credit, is certain to stabilize trade and since agricultural products form a large portion of American exports to Europe, the American farmer eventually is expected to share in this prosperity.

More than eight million bales of cotton will have been taken by foreigners at the close of the cotton years the coming July, and if the demand is as great the coming year then the cotton grower of the south will share some of this promised prosperity. It is the surplus that fixes the price, and there is ever a large surplus of American cotton.

By Dr. Frank Crane

THE MORAL INFLUENCE OF MONEY.

Money underlies almost every form of moral activity.

People work mainly because they have to; it is necessary to make a living and to get on. The only way they can do this, on an average, is by working for it.

In other words, to be of service to the community, of such kind of service as it is willing to pay for, you must put forth all of your activities.

The average man works in order to get his pay. That is, the necessity of working underlies the service to the community.

Anyone who attempts to do good to a community without pay is open to suspicion because it is likely that he is not doing the kind of good it wants.

Perhaps in the case of philosophers, religious teachers and poets, this does not hold completely. There are exceptions to every rule. But the majority of mankind would not be of service to their fellows unless they had to scratch around and make a living.

Useful service to your fellow men is at the bottom of most kinds of work.

It is the real reason why we enjoy work. Most of us would not be willing to take a tin cup and beg money on the corner. We like to feel that we are doing something that is worth people's paying for.

This is at the basis of self-respect. Mr. Henry Ford claims that he does not given much to charity, but he is kindest to people when he provides them with opportunity for work and pays them good wages. It is a question whether this kind of service to the community is not better than accumulating money any old way and then giving it without return.

The average man does not want charity. All he works for is to be of service and to receive that pay for it which is commensurate.

Money, therefore, and the desire to make it is at the basis of true morality.

So much so that when a man has reformed, or is good in every other respect, but has no money sense, he is not yet dependable. One of the surest signs of reform, or righteousness, is that a man pays his debts and respects his obligations.

This feeling also is at the bottom of all true morality.

A NEW WAR CLOUD.

A wave of reaction over southeastern Europe has been glimpsed as one unfortunate consequence of terrorist activities in Bulgaria. But a far graver result appears at least possible. This is a major Balkan conflict, threatening to involve all Europe.

Rumania, Greece and Jugo-Slavia have been alarmed by the permission granted Bulgaria by the allied ambassadors' council to increase her armed forces in order that she may deal adequately with the red revolutionaries. Jugo-Slavia especially is preparing to defend herself against possible Bulgarian aggression, having been accused of sympathizing with the "reds." Bulgaria, the enemy of the other Balkan powers in the late war, will not be trusted very far.

Of Bulgaria's three suspicious neighbors, Jugo-Slavia by all odds is the most sensitive and aggressive. She is practically absorbing the attention of France and Great Britain in their efforts to keep peace in the Balkans. But it is not certain that she will receive their kind offices with gratitude or even with patience. Although generally trustful of France, Jugo-Slavia may feel disposed to look out for herself in the present situation, for which she must hold the western powers partially responsible, since Bulgaria is arming with their permission.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Seeing Straight.

Children think straight because they see straight.

To them objects appear as they are, and are not distorted out of shape by some preconceived notion of what they ought to look like.

They ask simple, direct questions about life.

If they got simple direct answers—whenever their parents and teachers know enough to give simple and direct answers, their education would progress more rapidly.

But the grown up attitude is that the child is rather an amusing creature, whose ignorance of the world is such that their questions are not to be taken seriously.

So they are put off with "you will know more about that when you are older," or "you wouldn't understand if I told you."

By and by they come to the justifiable conclusions that it is small use trying to get any information about the world from their parents, and begin to get it any way they can.

As a consequence they are often misled, and put on wrong roads, and soon become as indirect and uncertain of what they know as were their progenitors.

Even in the school room, there is still a tendency to regard the questions of children as born either of impertinence or stupidity.

It is within the power of every teacher to help a child far more than is possible by merely cramming one lesson on a given subject into its growing and inquisitive mind.

But courses of study are laid down and must be followed, or stern principals and school superintendents will be heard from.

So even the teacher, who understands children, and knows what a power for education is that question mark in their brains, has to stick to her subject, and the child gets about half as much good out of a school term as he might.

Some day teachers and parents will learn to take children seriously, as they want to be taken, and ought to be taken.

Then they will get the greatest possible result out of the child's ability to see straight and think straight.

Children and savages, unspoiled by the complications of civilization go direct to the heart of the problems they have to solve.

But they cannot get from life all the experience they need.

Some way must be found to bring them the benefit of the experience of all those who have gone before.

That must be found in books and in teaching.

It ought to be supplied man-to-man fashion; with no toploftiness, no despising of the supposedly inferior mind, no patronizing airs.

As a rule the child thinks more clearly than does his teacher, whose intellect has been twisted by pedagogy.

If he is interested he will do most of the work of gaining knowledge himself.

But he will never be interested, if he is given to understand that he must take exactly the facts fed him and no more—accept them as truth, and not reason about them, and regard his teacher and his text books as infallible.

He will hate books and schools and teachers, wait with impatience to be released from his task, and all his life look forward to the day when school days will be ended forever.

What Today Means To You

By MARY BLAKE

TAURUS—MAY 11TH

No very favorable conditions prevail today and the planetary aspects are distinctly adverse. Any negotiations of importance, any act that may vitally affect your career or your life, should, if possible; not be consumated, and only unavoidable routine duties should receive your attention. The signs denote an absence of clearness of vision, a lack—albeit temporary—of keenness of judgment, and any decision made under such cloudy conditions is not usually productive of the best results. Speculation and all hazardous risk must be avoided, and it would be wise to defer, until some more opportune moment the execution of any agreements or contracts that involve financial obligations.

Not much of an assuring nature can be prognosticated about the health, during infancy, of the child born today. It will suffer, more than is usual, from the ailments of childhood, and will demand constant vigilance and unremitting care. Its disposition will be patient and unselfish, while its character will be, at once engaging and reliable. It will not reveal much aptitude or liking for sports and pastimes, but will be very painstaking in all its studies, although at no time does it promise to be brilliant. Its success will lie more in a subordinate capacity than in one of command or leadership.

It is more than difficult to analyse the characters, or dissect the temperaments, of those who today celebrate their natal anniversaries. They can, when they so will it, be so charming, so affectionate, and so unselfish, that it is difficult to realize that the same person can be consumed with envy, jealousy, and malice. They are very often irresponsible, acting without thinking, and speaking without deliberation.

They, by their demonstrativeness, often raise the object of their affection to the dizzy heights of happiness, only, almost at the same moment, to bring them to the abyss of despair by an unexpected burst of unjustified temper and malevolent anger. One can never be sure of them for many hours together and no matter what happens, they, in their opinion, are always right as according to their judgment, infallibility is a monopolistic privilege conceded to them alone.

Their love and friendship are of uncertain value, as the first is fitly expressed by a sense of possession and the latter is chiefly available for those who can be patronized, or to whom favors can be shown.

HOW IT STARTED

"Negro" and "Nigger."

"Negro," our name for the colored American as well as the entire Ethiopian race, originated with the Spaniards who first applied it to the earliest colored men who appeared on the Mediterranean or were discovered on their native shores by Spanish explorers. "Negro" is simply Spanish for "black."

Also the term "nigger" used interchangeably with "negro," particularly in the south, though it is regarded sometimes as derogatory or a more or less contemptuous slang term, is in fact inoffensive and a good legitimate word. It is derived from the Latin "niger," meaning black.

DALLAS ACTORS WIN.

"No Count Boy" Given Best Play Prize for Second Year.

NEW YORK, Maay 10.—The "no count boy," a comedy of negro life in eastern South Carolina, by Paul Green, presented by the Little Theater of Dallas, Texas, won the Belasco cup for the second year for the best production in the little theater tournament.

The play was one of four previously chosen fo rthe finals in the third annual tournament and following th caward tonight it was announced that competitions will be continued each year.

The plays were judged by a jury of nationally known critics

MATTERS OF HEALTH

It matters not whether fence or face,
A little paint improves the place.

Nobody loves a fat man but everybody loves a fat salary.

The bedbug is a blood sucking insect—so's a humbug.

And we spent all our money
For doctors and rugs,
Until we stopped sweeping
Our carpets and rugs.

Many a faint heart has chased a street car and caught a hearse.

A change of pastures makes fat cattle, but a change of milk makes sick babies.

"I've heard the laughing water,"
Said a waggish sort of gink:
"But must admit I've never seen
A drinking water drink."

"City Will Feed Garbage to Hogs." If they mean road hogs, we favor the project.

Vacant lots, strewn with trash and overgrown with grass and weeds are unsightly and a menace to public health.

Oh, we caught the rain from heaven
And we stored it in a tank;
But we never caught the fever
To the water that we drank.

For the protection of children who are unaccustomed to country life, summer camps should be supplied with water of known purity, should be well drained and free from disease carrying insects.

Fate of Journalism School at T. U. To Be Decided at Meet

AUSTIN, Texas, May 10.—Hope that the department of journalism of the University of Texas may be saved fro mthe two-year break of Governor Ferguson's veto of its salaries hinge on the meeting of the university regents in Galveston, May the 19th.

Until that meeting is held, none of the staff of the journalism school will make other arrangements next year.

At that meeting, apetition signed by every student of journalism, urging the department be saved in some way, will be considered by the regents. More than 60 students have told the regents in that petition if the school is closed, they will have to go to the University of Missouri, Columbia, -or other schools outside the state, to complete their professional education. The regents will be told there is every likelihood the legislature two years hence will restore the appropriations, which amount to only about $20,000 a year on the present scale.

M. E. Foster, Houston publisher, regent, himself a Ferguson appointee, and other regents are said to have pledged their efforts to saving the journalism department.

The regents have sufficient latitude if a majority of them are so disposed, to save the school on its present scale, out of the fund "for adjustment of salaries," it is asserted.

Students and those connected with the journalism school, are hoping the regents will take such action as will prevent disintegration of the school, its student body and faculty, which would, if the appropriation were restored two years hence, set the school back for years in its progress and standing, it is said.

Irrigation

SUB-IRRIGATING THROUGH PIPES

A business man here who has a small tract of land near the city wants to know whether it would pay him to install a system of underground pipes through which he would irrigate his land.

He expects to develop his little farm to the highest degree but also wants it to pay its way. His idea is that subirrigation is the most desirable and that such a system would produce far better crops.

A properly installed system of underground pipes or tile would be very fine. The land could be irrigated almost automatically and with but little labor cost. There would be less labor in cultivation. When the water was shut off the same pipes could be made to serve as a drain to rid the soil of excess water. They would also serve as ventilators, putting air into the soil which is just as essential for plant growth as water.

All the above are advantages of such a system. But there are some disadvantages. The cost of a properly installed sub-irrigation system is very high. The crops produced would have to be very valuable to make it pay. Such systems are used to a limited extent in California where water is scarce and high priced and the crops produced give big money returns.

If the pipes laid were of iron or steel it would only be a few years until they would rust out and have to be replaced. In other words depreciation would be large.

If they were of tile there would almost surely be trouble from roots growing in them and choking them up. They would have to be cleaned at frequent intervals. This makes for high maintenance cost.

We doubt very much whether the cost of such a system would be justified by the conditions existing here now.

POEMS THAT LIVE

From the Spanish of Villegras.

'Tis sweet in the green spring,
To gaze upon the wakening fields around:
Birds in the thicket sing,
Winds whisper, waters prattle from the ground.
A thousand odors rise,
Breathed up from blossoms of a thousand dyes.

Shadowy and close, and cool,
The pine and poplar keep their quiet nook;
Forever fresh and full,
Shines at their feet the thirst inviting brook;
And the soft herbage seems
Spread for a place of banquets and of dreams.

Thou, who alone art fair,
And whom alone I love, art far away,
Unless thy smile be there,
It makes me sad to see the earth so gay;
Of leaves, and flowers, and zephyrs go again.

Ambassador To Mexico Says Relations Between Two Countries Improved

MEXICO CITY, May 10.—The American ambassador, James R. Sheffield today said that the relations between Mexico and the United States have been improved by the recent statement of President Calles with respect to a speech by the Russia Soviet foreign minister, N. Tchitcherin that Mexico would not allow any country with which she maintained diplomatic relations to use this friendship to carry out political propaganda. Tschitcherin's speech indicated that Soviet activities at Mexico City were being directed against Mexico's frendly neighbors.

The May Day incident, the ambassador considered closed. He had not changed his opinion, however, regarding the necessity of not using his automobile for the purpose of avoiding the possibility of international complications consequent upon his failure to receive military protection and his unwillingness to carry the permit issued by the Mexican confederation of labor which had decreed the suspension of street traffic for several hours on that date.

Neither the May Day occurences nor the conflicting statements in the press, from the embassy and the Mexican foreign office upon the Jalapa case, the ambassador said would influence the routine report which he plans to present to the state department on his visit to Washington. He expects to sail for Vera Cruz, May 23 and from New York on his return to Mexico June 30.

More Truth Than Poetry

TO A WREN

I'm glad to greet you in the spring
When from the south your way you wing,
And perch beside my door and sing.

I like to hear, at close of day,
Your cheery and exuberant lay,
While twilight melts from gold to gray.

I joy to watch you build your nest
With such a brave and eager zest—
That knows no weariness nor rest.

But when, amid "the white dawn clear,"
Beside my window you appear
And chant your carol of good cheer—

I cannot say that I rejoice
To listen—though I have no choice—
To your somewhat tumultuous voice.

You went to bed, as birds all do,
At eight o'clock—I went at two,
A fact that should appeal to you.

If you these hours must allot
To song, pray seek some other spot—
I need the sleep—though you do not.

You should remember, little bird,
That hearts are far more deeply stirred
By songs that are most seldom heard.

A lay at twilight is enough,
And though you'll haply think me rough—
I'll say you overdo your stuff!

THE HOHENZOLLERN BOYS WILL BE THERE

The new Hindenburg line will be a job line.

NOT UNREASONABLE

We can understand the objections to putting lead in gasoline. At the present price the buyer is entitled to silve or gold.

UNANIMITY OF OPINION

A well known sociologist says the newspapers print too much crime news. The criminals agree with him.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

ALTHOUGH LIFE HAS CHANGED SINCE DAD'S DAY, OLD HUMAN NATURE ISN'T A BIT DIFFERENT, AND HIS CHILDREN OUGHT TO BE SPANKED AND DISCIPLINED JUST AS HE WAS

Through the death of a daughter-in-law two grande hildren of tender age were recently committed to the care of a friend of mine. Having brought up a family of fine sons and daughters, this intelligent and energetic woman naturally thinks that she knows something about rearing children. But her ideas do not meet with the approval of the undisciplined and pampered modern youngsters.

"Why, grandmother," they exxclaim continually to her, "you have such old-fashioned ideas about things! You are trying to raise us like children were raised in dad's day!"

To them dad's day is archaic and grandmother's time is prehistoric, for in those dim, benighted ages children were made to mind. They were expected to be humble-minded and self-effacing, and not to speak until they were spoken to.

Nobody had thought any more then of a child's right to self-expression than they thought of the radio. Nobody then expected a child to monopolise the conversation at dinner any more than they expected to talk to Europe by wireless. Nor had it entered into the mind of man that you would break a self-willed child's spirit and develop the inferiority complex in it by making it behave and inculcating a respect for law and order in it.

Parents still put their faith then in spanking instead of moral suasion as a means of regeneration, and fathers and mothers still ruled their families instead of the household being bossed by a babe in arms or girls and boys in their teens.

A strange state of affairs, truly. Vastly different from now, when parents frankly admit that they can do nothing with their 10 or 12 year old children, and that they have no authority over them; when the children monopolize the conversation; when mother and father only have the use of the automobile at such times as Johnny and Susie are not joy-riding in it; when mother can only weep when Mamie takes off most of her clothes and goes to a dance, because she can't stop her from doing the things that shock her; when callow boys and girls tell their fathers and mothers where to get off, instead of listening to their advice; and when youth doesn't even pretend to have any respect for age.

No wonder that the youngsters of today, observing the untrammeled freedom of their generation, think that the homely virtues that were drilled into their parents is old stuff, and that it is just as foolish and out of date to be taught to obey and to be self-deprecatory as it would be to learn how to play croquet and ride a high-wheeled bicycle.

But what the modern child and modern parents do not seem to realize is that, while we have many new mechanical inventions that have changed the outward conditions of life, life itself remains the same and we have the same old human nature. We haven't improved on that and we haven't altered the immutable law of cause and effect.

In dad's day he had the trotting horse, and the side-bar buggy, and the lancers, and the church sociable, and only the more prosperous had electric lights, and we were still gasping over the marvels of the telephone and phonographs were wheezing. Now we have high-powered cars, and jass and cabarets, and all-night clubs, and petting parties, and wireless telegraphy, and the radio. But what we sow we still reap, and the wages of sin is still death.

There is no modern invention that saves the boy or girl who goes wrong from being punished just as bitterly as they were in dad's day or grandma's day, or great-grandfather's day. The boy who drinks prohibition booze gets even more soddenly drunk and descends even more quickly to the gutter than did the sot of pre-Volstead days. The profligate youth who wastes himself and his substance on wine, women and song finds himself feeding on the husks amid the swine, just as prodigal sons have always done.

Nothing keeps the girl who dallies along the primrose path from bruising her feet on the stones and crucifying herself on the thorns that are concealed among the flowers. Shame is still the portion of the wild women who flout the convention of society.

And honor and riches and the respect of one's fellow creatures are still the reward of clean living, of sobriety, of self-control, of thrift and industry.

Such being the case, the old virtues still doing business at the old stand and still paying dividends in happiness and prosperity, what's the matter with still teaching them to children and still bringing them up as they were in dad's day??

Dad was taught obedience, which is a respect for law and order; and dad's father never had to get up in the night and bail him out of a police court as he had had to do his son.

Dad was taught self-control, and made to do things because it was his duty to do them. He was taught to speak the truth and deal fairly. He was taught to deny himself, and had the habit of industry ingrained in him, and it has made of him a good citizen, a good husband and father, and a prosperous man.

Doubtless the way that dad was raised does seem old-fashioned now, but it brought results that modern parents do not seem to be getting with their up-to-date methods.

DOROTHY DIX.

The GILDED ROSE

by May Christie

Who's Who in the Story.

Rosilyn Ridgeway learns on her wedding day from idle gossip that she has been married for her money. Before her enormous fortune was left her, she had been an overworked little drudge in her father's inn.

Landis Ridgeway, her husband, is a brilliant, fascinating man, who was forced into the marriage by his mother.

Florence Ridgeway, an aristocratic old lady, who saw poverty staring her in the face, and chose the easiest way out. Rosilyn loving her husband, knows that he is still in love with

Lydia Harbrook, a beautiful, cold society girl who is bent on marrying

Stevie Van Vorst, a wealthy old roue, although she is really fond of Landis in her selfish way. She is in Paris when she hears of Landis' marriage, and immediately returns to the United States. With her goes

Rupert Briscoe, a dissipated man of the world, who has seen Rosilyn but once, and yet is deeply interested in her. Lydia learns of this interest, and when the two reach New York, she suggests that they ask the young Ridgeways to join them for dinner. She and Briscoe concoct a plot, whereby through an apparent misunderstanding Rosilyn and Briscoe will be left alone together all evening, while she will be with her beloved Landis. Thus it happens that Landis is amazed to find her waiting for him in the lobby of Claridge's.

Landis phones to find out why his wife has not joined them, and learns that she left the hotel with Briscoe —leaving word that they will join Lydia and Landis in a few minutes.

CHAPTER 26
"My Girl!"

Landis and Lydia had dined often here together in the old days, and the staff recognized them. The head waiter led them to a table in a corner, specially designed for tete-a-tete.

"For four, please," Landis said, succinctly.

(Lydia decided she must make the best of that!)

A soft, golden light cast a becoming glow. Surreptitiously she drew forth her tiny pocket mirror, and with a little sigh of satisfaction realized that never in her life had she looked lovelier!

Rupert had obviously played the game, and taken off the bride.

Aloud she said, nonchalantly:

"I want some salted almonds, please. Then, I think, iced canteloupe to follow—or will you have smoked salmon, Landis? That used to be a favorite dish with you in the old days, I recollect."

Yes, he would have smoked salmon. It was nice of Lydia to recall his predilections . . . .

Her eye scanned the menu with a practiced glance.

"What about vol-au-vent for you You always loved it. See how I have your weakness at heart!" She gave a little laugh as light and trilling as a bird's.

"Curious how the others haven't come along!" He glanced at his watch again. Then, regarding her sharply:

"You didn't make any mistake about the rendesvous, did you?"

She raised her beautifully pencilled brows.

"Didn't Rupert 'phone you up, and give you time and place"

"He did. Claridge's at eight."

"Me also."

"Then," said Landis slowly, "there isn't anything we can do but wait for them to turn up, and meantime enjoy ourselves as much as possible!" He gave her his first real smile of the evening.

("Thank heaven! he's thawing!" thought the siren.)

She was very gay and amusing after that. More than once his laugh rang out. Lydia had wit and "bon camaraderie," when she chose to give full play to these attributes.

He had contrived to bring along a bottle of sparkling muscatel. It wasn't merely the wine—of excellent vintage though it was—that went to his head a little. It was Lydia's amazing beauty.

She was a Golden Girl tonight, indeed! The old, despairing feeling swept over him.

"Are you glad I came, Landis? Or are you sorry?" Her voice had a sweet tremulo, like the wind-swept chords of a harp in some lonely forest. Her fingers, trailing on the tablecloth, contrived to touch his hand—or did he dream it?

"Lydia!" He trembled to that touch of hers. "Oh, Lydia—!"

"If you'd only waited, Landis. If you'd only believed me when I said—"

"Don't, dear! I can't—bear it!"

"I havent changed! I never shal These other men are nothing, nothing to me!"

A fluttering breath came from her lips. He could feel the old, intoxicating perfume of it.

"Landis!"

"Yes, Lydia!"

"There hasn't been a moment in all these long weeks—since we parted—that I haven't thought of you!"

Silence between them.

"Say you believe me, Landis! When I—I got the news of your marriage—I—I almost died!"

With sheerest misery in those handsome eyes of his—those restless, questing eyes that so fascinated women—he turned his head away from her.

Her slender fingers touched his wrist.

"Oh, Landis! Please—"

The orchestra—as though in league with Lydia—broke into that trembling melody of passion, the great love-song from the opera "Samson et Delilah."

White-faced, he turned to his companion.

"I can't stand it, Lydia! It seems as though tonight Fate were driving us together. Do you remember—the last time we heard that song"

Did she remember?

Scented night of June! The sweet perfume of the fields along the river's bank! Landis and she canoeing peacefully, after a long day spent together! They had moored under a drooping willow, and through its slender branches they had seen the moon come up—a big, white, maddening moon—a honeymoon!

Against the polished wood of the canoe, the water had splashed a crooning melody.

And then—

From a house across the river there had come the cadence of that exquisite love-song, gentle at first, then wild with passion and despair. A great operatic star, in melting baritone that had moved vast audiences, was pouring out his whole heart to the summer's night.

Held close in Landis' arms, she could feel his heart, too, thudding against hers . . . .

Perfume and song and passion! What a night of nights!

For a moment, here in the fashionable New York restaurant, Lydia closed her eyes and lived again through each pulsating moment.

Love! It beat about her like the spiced perfume of poppies, drugging the brain and setting the very soul afire.

Compared to that wild ecstacy of the gods, what did money and position matter? They were trivialities, less than nothing.

Ah! if only she had married Landis, and never need they separate again!

But it wasn't too late now. She'd win him back!

See how he trembled to her touch! See how the pupils of his eyes dilated when he met her glance!

Under her breath she half-whispered, half-sung the words of the aria:

"Say—just once again—just once again—that you adore me!
Tell me—once again — Oh! once again—I implore thee—"

To Landis it brought back pulsating memories, so that his breath caught in his throat.

Higher and higher, passion on passion, rose the throbbing melody.

Lydia's slim fingers touched his wirst. From the very tips of them flowed electricity, rushing to his heart and senses.

"Landis!"

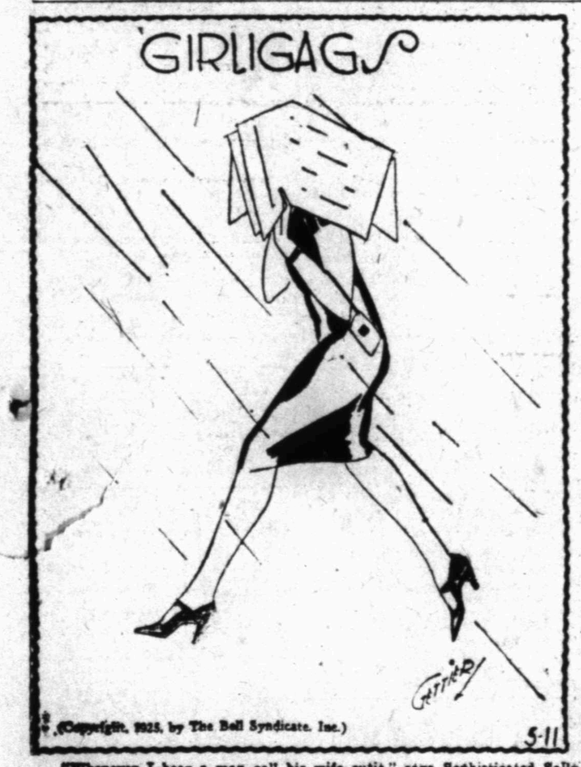

Delilah's voice was never half so sweet, so beautiful.

"My—girl!" The passion in those two brief words! His fingers, long and brown and sensitive, closed over hers with agonizing grip.

Here was his love beside him—his—and no one else's! As for his insane marriage with the innkeeper's daughter, that was nothing but a dream, a nightmare, from which he would awake to utter happiness!

A pulse was fluttering maddly in Lydia's white throat. He had kissed the rise and fall of it so often—he would kiss it once again tonight—would drown his sorrows in the mad intoxication of her kisses!

THIMBLE THEATRE "The Fast Breaker" —By SEGAR

STRAND

its new bond-servant, Charles Fownes, by birth an aristorat, but a bond-servant nevertheless. Marion Davies as the pretty, 16-year-old daughter of the house, Janice Meredith, is seen here first.

The revolution develops in the colonies and Charles Fownes is accepted in the continental army as a colonel under the name of Jack Brereton. Greenwood manor, due to the tory sympathies of the old hard-headed squire becomes general headquarters for the British soldiers, Lord William Howe and other notables making it their residence during the New Jersey campaign.

While on a dangerous mission through the English lines Colonel Brereton visits the Meredith stables to change horses. He meets Janice and confesses his love for her, leaving the stable just in time to avoid capture by a British picket.

Captured and Escapes.

Lord Clowes, a British adventurer with the rank of a colonel, suspects that Brereton will return and watching Janice succeeds in capturing the intrepid young colonel the next night, only to have him escape when Janice cuts his bonds.

Janice is taken to Trenton, arriving on Christmas night when a Hessian soldiery under Colonel Rahl is drinking and making merry.

In the meantime Washington's ragged troops are seen crossing the Delaware river, despite almost impossible conditions. With Rahl's Hessians all drunk from the night's festival Washington attacks the town and with a very small loss to his own army succeeds in capturing it with all of its stores, the historical incident furnishing Janice a chance to save her lover's life and start him at the same moment on the road away from her.

The squire's insistence leads to a marriage with Philemon Hennion, a neighbor boy, which is all but consummated when cocky Jack Brereton enters the room, captures Philemon even as he says "I will" and informs the squire that while he has stolen a husband from the daughter he is ready and willing to repay the debt personally at any time.

This chance comes when, after another estrangement at Philadelphia where Janice learns of the real aristocratic birth of Brereton, the British forces capitulate at Yorktown. The revolution over the two have the rest of their lives to live happily ever after in.

The story follows substantially the tale of Ford. The real hardships of the American forces during their long struggle are shown in detail and the heroic character of Washington is excellently pictured. Much detail is spent on picturizations of the crossing of the Delaware river, the night at Trenton, the winter at Valley Forge, the ride of Paul Revere, and the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The photography is good, brilliant lighting effects being produced in some of the fighting scenes. Marion Davies, beautiful as ever, is the star, in her role of Janice Meredith.

MARKETS

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—The cotton market last week was somewhat more active with a general downward trend of prices. The decline started during the preceding week by the breaking of the drouth in Oklahoma and then in Texas and was carried into the early days of the past week by generous rains in most parts of the state. As a result of this great improvement in the western part of the belt, prices eased until on Thursday, July traded as low as 23.05 and October 22.16, or a decine compared with the closing of the preceding Saturday of 106 and 121 points, respectively.

The government weekly weather and crop report issued Wednesday claimed that absence of sufficient moisture in many portions of the central and eastern sections of the belt was preventing germination of seeds and the low temperatures were causing injury to plants already up. This checked the enthusiasm of the shorts and led to some coverings, but it was only after the low levels of Thursday were reported that the market showed a real inclination to rally because in addition to the low temperatures there commenced to be more or less complaint from Texas that the continued rains were retarding the completion of planting already late in the northern and western portions.

As a result of these influences and particularly the continued rains in Texas on Saturday, the market showed some disposition to rally but before the improvement made much headway bullish feeling was halted by an official forecast for general showers in the central and eastern divisions of the belt over Sunday. Should these promised rains materialize, where needed, the market would likely be forced to lower levels, but if the predicted rains do not materialize, there would likely be a steadier tone to the market. In Saturday's short session, traders on both sides of the account were inclined to restrict their activities to evening up commitments.

Financial

NEW YORK, May 10.—Trade movements last week still moved uniformly but general business sentiment was distinctly more cheerful. This improvement was ascribed partially to the strength manifested in the securities and grain markets and to the widespread feeling of satisfaction which was engendered by Great Britain's return to the gold standard.

While it was too early to expect any tangible results of England's policy to appear, economists asserted there could be little doubt of the ultimate favorable effect of having $35,000,000,000 out of a total world trade of $45,000,000,000 placed safely on a gold basis. Some fears were expressed that Britain would find it difficult to maintain the gold standard in the face of last year's adverse trade balance of almost a billion and a half dollars, but financial authorities argued that sound currency in itself would act as a strong corrective of an unfavorable trade balance.

The domestic trade picture last week was spotted with contrasting areas of improvement and reaction. The predominant note in the basic industries, was one of unsettlement, due to the backward tendency of prices and the failure of a seasonal revival in business to develop.

The slackening pace of operations was perhaps most pronounced in the steel industry, with the mills working at barely 70 per cent of capacity, a further contraction in output reported and prices again shaded. Although the United States Steel corporation announced a reduction of 416,996 tons in unfilled orders at the end of April, Chairman E. H. Gary, after an inspection trip of the company's properties, said he found many of them in full swing. Temporary recessions, he added, were not at all surprising and general business throughout the country was strong. Healthy and vigorous and might be expected so to continue.

The maintenance of freight traffic late in April around the year's best levels did much to offset the less favorable March earnings statement of the combined class one carriers. This showed net operating income of $73,116,672 or $7,203,375 below the corresponding month last year. The most encouraging features of the railroad outlook were the prospects for progress in merger developments.

At the same time the investment market showed unmistakable signs of vitality. New financing expanded to a total of approximately $130,000,000, contrasted with $36,000,000 in the preceding week. The keen demand for high grade securities was gauged by the sale of a $60,000,000 4½ per cent New York City loan, which brought the highest price paid for such an issue in 16 years and netted the city a cash premium of more than $1,000,000. Corporation issues were quickly subscribed and high rating railroad bonds were placed wthout recourse to a public offering.

Financial authorities, attempting to estimate the effects of Great Britain's return to the gold sandard, agreed that one of the net results would be to develop more active competition between London and Wall street for foreign loans. For the present, it wasesaid, England is more concerned with insuring the success of the gold resumption policy and protecting sterling exchange, but once its stability has been fully restored, London is expected to reach out for new business.

In the long run the trend of money rates is expected to determine the placement of foreign loans, and in this respect American bankers believe they will have an davantage which will offst Grat Brian's long stablshd pr-war supmacy in international financing.

One of the developments noted last week was a marked decrease in the British buying of bonds in this market. Although there was no official prohibition against purchase here, English invvestors were understood to be withholding business from New York in line with the Bank of England's desire to check the export of capital for a time following the return to a gold basis.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, May 10.—Bond prices rose to new 1925 high levels last week, in many respects the most progressive of the year in the bond market. The prevailing ease of money rates stimulated trading in all sections of the list, bringing a marked expansion in the volume of business and resulting in general advances of 1 to 10 points or more.

Mary the Supreme Mother Of All Time, Says Powers In His Sunday Sermon

The First Baptist church was filled to capacity Sunday morning to hear Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor, speak on the subject: "The Mother of a Great Son", using as his scripture text: "And when they were come unto the house, they saw a young child with his mother, and fell down to worship him." In part Dr. Powers said:

"It is a good custom that we have established of pausing one Sunday in the year, to honor our mother. Some of these mothers are here with us today; some are back in the old home far away, some have crossed into the Better Land, but, wherever they are, their spirits are with us today, and the spirit of our Lord, Jesus Christ. I hope, as we worship and as we wait before the Lord, we will, in our imagination, look into their faces again; that we will hear their voices in words of love. I think it befitting that I should speak to you this morning about the mother of a great son. When mother held you in her arms and looked on your face, there was a halo around her face that told her you were to be a great woman or a great man. When the wise men came to where Joseph and Mary were, they presented their presents and gifts, they worshipped the child and not Mary, the mother.

All Like That

"All mothers are that way—they would have us praise and glory in their children, not in themselves. As I speak of Mary, I realize that there has gathered around her a legend, mythology and superstition that we do not take part in, but Mary remains as the most highly favored and honored of all women that ever walked upon this earth, the one whom God selected—who was a fitting instrument of service; one who was humble, in every way fitted to give to the world a son who was to be born a Savior. The scripture gives us a full description of Mary's character. She was, in her spirit, in her faith, in her personality, in the submissiveness of her will, a fitting instrument for God to select to give to the world a Redeemer. Her soul bursts forth in beauty. Mary, the mother of the great son, was such a woman, and if you mothers would be mothers of great sons, you must be such a woman.

"Mary had many good characteristics. First, she was a woman of pure and noble character. If you would have noble sons, you must be noble yourselves. When God gave his only begotten son, he chose such to be the mother, when He chooses a woman to be the mother of a great son, He chooses such women. Of course, none of us can fulfill the ideal and dream of our mothers but we all could strive to fulfill every dream of greatness. If you women are to give noble children to the world you must be noble yourselves. Mary is, above all, a pure character. We know that, because when God, the Most High and Holy One comes near and speaks to Mary, there is no fear. Now, when God came to Issaiah, Isaiah said, I am a man of unclean lips; when he came to John, John falls as one dead, but when he comes and speaks to Mary and announces that the Holy Ghost shall came to Isaiah, Isaiah said, I am a overshadowed by the Most High. Mary does not falter but says, behold thy handmaid, Lord, be it as thou wilt. Second, Mary was a woman of humble spirit; she magnifies the Lord and not herself.

Humble Spirit

"She trusts in the Lord and not in herself. The humility of this woman's spirit! The purity and the humility! Mary feels that she needs a savior as much as any other woman that ever lived. The scripture teaches that if you would have great sons and daughters, you must be great and noble too. Mothers, that lesson comes to us from the mother of our Lord. Third, if you are to have great sons, and daughters, you are not to talk too much about their greatness. Place yourselves in the place of Mary. Listen to the message in the Old Testament. Follow prophesy and hear the singers chant and prophets prophesy, come down until there bursts over the little city of Bethlehem the lone song of the angel; come with those rude shepherds to the manger where they fall down and worship the child; then the wise men come from the East with frankincense and myrrh. See if you can sympathize with the sighs and humility of this mother of this great son who kept all these things in her heart and pondered them and waited 30 years to break the silence—until God's time for these things to be revealed? Can you, mothers, put yourselves in Mary's place? I imagine you would have told it to your neighbors and then to the world. How we love to tell the smart things our children did when they were tiny things; of John and Mary and the prizes they won in school, of the houses they build after they were out from school, and of the car they ride in. We do not get tired of telling it, but we worry other folks.

"Mary kept these things in her heart and waited until God's time. Not many of us can do that, but it would be better for John and Mary if we could do it. I think Mary wanted to keep him to herself; that the glare and the glory of the Divine would be too great for humans and she held it back. She felt that the other brothers and sisters ought to have a chance; for that reason, she kept it back. If we could do that with John and Mary! They are wonderful children. If we could just keep silent! Ah, mothers and fathers of these boys and girls, if they are to be noble men and great women, you must take them out of the house and put them out in the cold; from under your wing; pt them in the public school where they will have to strive with the world, where they can realize just where they are. Sometime, those things spoil instead of building, because of the foundation the mother has built. Those children ought to receive a modest appreciation of their own modest gifts from their mothers and their fathers, and receive from them a sense of their responsibility to the one from whom they came. If you would be a great mother of a great son do not talk too much of their greatness. I know it is mighty hard, but it will spoil John and Mary; they will fall with a thud when they strike the world. Relate yourselves to them so that they will be able to withstand what they meet in the world.

Help His Ideals

"Fourth, if you would be a mother of a great son, enter him into his ideals, into his hopes, his longings. Mary teaches this by warning. It seems that the mother of the infant, and the mother of the young man Jesus, differed in some ways. Higher critics say, she is not the same mother. In infancy of Jesus, Mary fulfills the dreams of the mother, but in young manhood of Jesus, Mary seems to fall short. Not by Mary's example, but by her warning. For instance, when they went up to the temple, this is brought out; and again at the marriage feast of Canaan where Jesus made the wine for the guests. Mary was trying to push her child forward. If you are to be the mother of a great son and a great daughter, do not push the children forward. Don't soil and spoil your children. Anything that is pitiful, in the world, to me, is a lot of little runty, shriveled, half-grown men and women; for mothers to pull the children out of the nursery, out of the Sunday school, out of their babyhood and childhood and boyhood and girlhood and their youth, trying to make men and women of them; like green apples that fall and shrivel and rot, are these half-grown men and women, pulled by their mothers while they are green and fit for nothing but to be fed to hogs.

"O, let the apple get ripe. There is a glory in it when it comes to natural fruition that can never be if they are pulled before they are ripe. Let the children be children; let the girl play with her dolls and be willing to wait, and they will blossom and bloom into manhood and womanhood that God intended they should. Mary seemed to try to push Jesus out before his time. Again, Mary's mother-love rises up in rebellion against the thought that her son is to come to the cross; she tries to bring her son to rulership instead of service; to crown instead of cross; she misunderstood for only a little while. Mary, the mother of Jesus stood by the cross. No word of complaint; there must have been sorrow as she looked on her son on the cross. Then finally, his last words to John: "Son, behold thy mother; mother behold thy son." She goes away without a word. Women, this morning, let us crawl back, let us climb back, let us look up and embrace the ropes and faith and ideals of those homes and lay hold of the hand of our mother's savior and walk with him."

Lockhart Production Goes to 5,500 Barrels

SAN ANTONIO, May 10.—Production in the Lockhart fields around 5,500 barrels daily from 24 wells with 80 or more rigs running, most of which are on inside locations and likely to be producers. Of major importance during the past week in the Lockhart field is the well of Randolph et al, on the south of the Brownlee lease out of the Beatty tract which, at a little below 1300 feet looked like it might make a 1200-barrel well.

Outside of the proven field, a feature of the week's developments is a new string of wildcat tests by various interests, stretching all the way from the Luling field on the northeast to beyond Somerset on the southwest. Scrivener et al. on Geronimo creek, west of Kingsbury, have derrick material on the ground. The Jennings test on the Vogel farm southwest of Seguin has the derrick rebuilt and it was understood would spud in Friday.

Another feature of the week is the development of the gas wells north of Corpus Christi. Seagraves and Moody and interests associated with them are drilling a number of wells in Refugio and south in San Patricio near White Point. Houston Oil company has let the contract for its pipe line to Houston and has sold a minimum of $500,000 worth of gas from Jackson county to the Texas Gulf Sulphur company for its mines at Gulf. Houston Oil company has also started additional wells in Like Oak county.

Boy of Slain Father Won't Talk; Is Held For Coroner Inquest

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—An order to hold Edward G. Dillon without bond for a re-opening of the inquest into the slaying of his father, Wm. A. Dillon, was issued by Coroner Bopp of St. Louis county today.

The 19-year-old youth, who was arrested at his University City home late Friday and has been held since in Clayton jail, St. Louis county, is being detained because he "consistently and stubbornly" refused to tell where he was the night his father was slain April 30, and for several preceding days, the police say.

He is the beneficiary under three accident insurance policies for a total of $25,000 which the physician carried.

Dillon had been held incommunicado, while continuous efforts of detectives to get him to tell his whereabouts at the time of the killing were balked by his calm refusal to answer to inferences that he wished to conceal conduct on his part that had nothing to do with the crime.

The re-opening at the inquest has been set for Tuesday. A coroner's verdict of homicide at the hands of persons unknown had been returned. Dr. Dillon's body was found the morning of May 1, on Washington university stadium running track, with a bullet wound in the head and left knee. The position of the wounds indicated the shooting could not have been self-inflicted.

Judge Kay Lauds British as They Acknowledge Debt

Warm approbation of England for its return to a gold standard was voiced Sunday morning by Judge John C. Kay in his weekly Bible talk to his men's class at the Strand theatre. He said the British were able to accomplish what they had in the financial line, and had the moral fiber to declare for payment of their debts because they also had the King Jame's version of the Bible. His talk in full, heard by 535 persons, was as follows:

For a little topical subject this morning, I want to speak to you for a moment about England. This is not as advertisement of England, but of something greater than that great country.

How is it that recently the English pound has come back practically to par, and that the traded in the South Seas, the bushman in Australia, the Chinaman up his great Yellow River, and all other peoples are willing to accept the English pound? I think it is the greatest thing that has happened since the war ,that the pound comes back to life. It is because John Bull said that "I am going to pay," that "I don't repudiate anything, I don't deny anything," and, he comes up to the counter of the world with his boots a little torn and muddy, with many scars on him, and many debts, and yet, he says: "I am going to pay," and straightway New York said to him: "John, you can get whatever you want over here."

Why Is It.

Now, England is the only one of them that has done that. Is it because the Englishman is a better man? Is it because he is a higher race? Is it because he is more aristocratic? I think not. I think it is because he has had, for hundreds of years, that priceless heritage, the King James Bible.

I think that book, and the religion of that book, and the morals of that book, have made the English character what it is, and he and his people are the only ones that have had it in that form. Ah, what a fine thing it was when old King James called together the scholars from the world; the Greek from Athens, the doctor from Rome, the Hebrew from Jerusalem, the philosopher from Alexandria, and the scholars from Europe, and said to them :"Now, take the scriptures, take these books of the old and of the new gospel—take them, Hebrew as they are, Greek as they are, Latin as they are,—take them and put them into that lilting beautiful tongue that is written by Grover Chaucer, take it, and put it, into the simple language of these men who have made the English tongue, and we will put the English tongue where it will become the language of humanity. And, it is because of that book, I think, that women and mothers are more honored and more respected wherever the English tongue is spoken, than in any other land, because, they had the beautiful characters.

I am not one of those that grows excited about the modern freedom of women. I am not one of those that grow excited about women going into politics and into social organizations. I think it is a great thing! Hear me, when I say it. I think it is a great thing that a woman can get away from her dust-pan, and her brooms, and the beating of rugs, and the kitchen, and all these things, put on her bonnet and go some place and meet somebody. God help that lowly, narrow man that thinks his wife ought to be a house cat. This, I think, is the English view. This, I think, is the view of he Bible, and of the church, and of God, and of good men.

Speaks of Baptism.

Now, I come to a very different subject, and that is the story of the lesson of the day. It is about the ordinance of baptism. It is a very difficult, it is even a dangerous thing that I should discuss it as a theological doctrine, and I shall not fattempt any such labor of hercules but, instead of that I am going to talk to you for a moment about the ceremonies of the church.

Your idea, and mine, about what they ought to do in the church, and how they ought to do it, depends largely upon where our ancestors came from. Now, up in Scotland, among the snowy mountains, and the ice, and the awful winds, and blizzards, and the frost and the storm, the people there look upon God in the light of nature, as a strong, mighty, stern and terrible power. And, thus it is that out of that country has come views about the church that are strong, stern and unbending, whilst in the south, along the shores of the Mediterranean, where everything is light, and laughter, and music and flowers, has come another church with the most gorgeous ceremonies, natural to such a climate, and to such a people. I think that that makes the distinction, and I think that you will see that it does.

What are the important ceremonies of the church? Am I to be taught? —Am I to believe that whether I should take the communion kneeling or standing, or at a table, or at my seat is vitally important? Am I to be taught, am I to believe that righteousness and religion, and the gospel, and that heaven and earth depend upon a mere ceremony? I refuse to believe it. Now, then, if these things are ceremonies, what is an act of worship? To my idea, the highest act of worship that a human can attain to, is prayer. When a man gets down on his knees and undertakes to talk to God, you have come to do something beyond, and above, and stronger, and mightier than any ceremony. Another thing that is stronger than ceremony, is to believe the Bible. Another thing that is stronger than ceremony is to believe in good men and good women. I see all of these fellows that you see. I see the women. But, you know, I make it a point of my life to believe in my fellowman. I like b'. I think in 99 cases out of a 100 he is doing just about the best he can under his circumstances. I like to believe that. It suits me to believe that, and I do believe it.

As I have said to you before, it also involves a belief in God. Now, the fellow that doesn't believe in God, doesn't believe in you. If you found a fellow that didn't believe in God, and talked to him 20 minutes, if you could stand it that long, I will give you a suit of clothes if he don't reveal to you in this 20 minutes that he don't believe in man either. That's an unbreakable rule. That's a rule that is sort of a law in physics. Now, there is no ceremony in my belief of man. I might bow and scrape and be polite, and carry on a nice polite conversation with many compliments, and still not believe in him. All these things are ceremonies.

You have met today to honor Mothers. The best way to honor a Mother is to honor and to love little children. It is right hard to say whether it pleases the woman most to tell her that her bread is light or that her baby is heavy. But, woe unto that unfortunate man who tells her that her bread is heavy and her baby is light.

So, all that I want to get before you this morning, out of this lesson, is not to try to sail through life, and sail into eternity, upon a ceremony, but go through life and face eternity pon eternal verities and truths, believing that it is the inside of a man, that it is his heart within him, that makes him or breaks him.

Through A Woman's Eyes

ARE YOU WILLING TO TAKE A BACK SEAT

"Shall I live with my children?"

That is the problem of almost every widow with no children at home, who is financially independent and therefor has her choice of living alone or making her home with a married son or daughter. To most women who have spent their lives in bringing up a family, the temptation is to live with her children. Contrary to popular belief that she has borne responsibility long enough and will be only too glad to be able to live alone and have nothing to do, the woman whose interests have been in her homeand family, sees nothing attractive in that kind of life. She does not want to throw off the harness; she is lost without it. But her alternative? Can she fill the void and find contentment by living with her children?

"That is what I am up against", a woman writes to me, "Since my husband died I have been living alone. I am not a woman who is used to running about and I find my life empty and lonely. My happiest hours are spent with my son and his family. I am fond of my daughter-in-law and their two children are my greatest delight. Occasionally, when the young couple want to stay out too late to leave their maid with the children, I go over and spend the night. And I always hate to go home.

"At such times I feel, since they want me to come to live with them, and they really do, why shoudn't I? Yet everyone advises against it. They say that the quickest way to end pleasant relations with a daughter-in-law is to live in the same house with her and that I don't know how lucky I am not to be compelled to do so. Women who have tried it out have told me that they would rather be alone in a hovel than live in a palace with a daughter or son-in-law. I feel, nevertheless, that I would be happier with my son and my crandchildren, but I am a little afraid".

If you want to be with them more than you want your independence, tell your landlord to put a "To Let" sign on your flat, grandma, and go to them. But no matter how well off financially you may be, you will be giving up your independence. When mother lives alone and comes over to spend the night with the children so that son and daughter-in-law can stay late she is doing them a favor. When mother lives with them, it is taken for granted that she will stay at home when they want to go out, and it won't occur to them to say, "thank you!"

Don't forget too, that you are not going back to your old position as mistress of an establishment. Your daughter-in-law wants to run her own home, just as you did yours. Where devoted mothers and daughters live together, there is naturally friction occasionally. When the situation is with a daughter-in-law this may start a conflagration that will leave in ashes the affection between you and strain the relationship with those you hold most dear.

If you are lonely and want the companionship of your son and his children you must pay for it by taking a back seat. It is because many women are not willing to do this, because most of them are absolutely unable to do it, that they prefer to live alone, if they are able to. In some instances, of course, it is a case of "sour grapes". The women who says most emphatically that she would rather starve than live in the home of a married son or daughter, may be one whose son-in-law has forbidden her to cross his doorstep or whose daughter-in-law would fly the coop at the mere thought of having to take her in. She may be a busy-body and a trouble maker. She may be unable to withstand the temptation to run their home and their lives for them. So she may not have the opportunity which she derides so scathingly.

While it is true that living with married children is not always an easy position for the mother and mother-in-law, it is by no means an impossible one. Many women have found happiness in this way. But they are the women who know how to make themselves unobtrusive, who are willink to seek privacy at times when "three are a crowd", who can maintain an attribute of sufficient detachment not to take sides in a quarrel even when their child is in the right! —who indeed have rare talent of being able gracefully to take a back seat! These are the women who not only get along with their daughters or sons-in-law; they are loved and respected and revered and become frequently, in spite of themselves the strongest influence in the household.

If you are such a woman, grandma, if you have considered all this and are willing to pay the price, pack your trunk and go to live with your children. And may God bless you all!

KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Farmer Shoots Wife, Tells Children, Then Takes Own Life.

FREDERICKTON, Mo., May 10.—Henry Ruth, farmer, killed his wife and then committed suicide at their home here today. Ruth shot his wife while she slept in bed this morning, and later advising the children of his deed, said he would kill himself.

The children ran to the home of a neighbor and when they returned with assistance, Ruth was found dead. Domestic troubles were believed to have prompted the act.

Believe Huge Army Needed in Morocco

PARIS, May 10.—(AP)—Opinions expressed unofficially in war office circles, is that Marshal Lyautey, governor general of French Morocco, will need 100,000 men to suppress the rebellious move of Abd-El-Krim and complete the pacification of Morocco. It may require a campaign of several months to defeat the tribesmen.

Ten days have elapsed since Abd-El-Krim as head of the tribesmen, invaded French territory in Morocco and judging from the reinforcements which have been poured into the zone of action daily from France and Algeria, the effectiveness of Marshal Lyautey now must be close to 70,000 men.

During these ten days the French troops have been unable to expel the Riffians from French territory, and some of the French posts still are besieged. They are being reprovisioned by airplane.

It is expected another ten days will pass before the French counter offensive develops. Military circles here aver that the officers leading the tribesmen in the field are maneuvering like veterans and that they evidently acquired their experience on the European battlefields in the world war. A turning movement around the French right wing in the direction of El Abitha attempted by the Riffians they say, bore the stamp of another similar movement during the 1914 campaign in France.

French airplane scouts report "important concentrations of the enemy in positions strongly entrenched." A pitched battle along a front of sixty miles will take place as soon as the French feel they have sufficiently strong reserves to continue the action until the tribesmen are driven into the mountains to the north.

Methodist Young People Lay Plans For National Week

A mass meeting of all young people in the First Methodist church was held Sunday afternoon in the church auditorium with Educational Director Raybon Porter, presiding as chairman. The meeting was held for the purpose of making and discussing definite plans for the Methodist Young Peoples Week May 25-31, inclusive.

About 80 members were present, among them representatives from all the Methodist churches of the city.

Various committees were appointed for the week as follows:

Harold White, director in charge of all events. He called for volunteers for committee work and these appointments made for "The Rock": Robt. Bushness, stage carpenter; Mrs. Jim Bachman, matron of wardrobes; Roy Carter, electrician; Alfred H. Kass, in charge of ticket sale; Mrs. Alice Whitehead, chairman of the telephoning committee.

In connection with the circus various parts were assigned to these members: E. R. Highfill, general treasurer for the week. Manager of side shows, A. A. Oxford. Clown promoter, Clarence Witherspoon; concessions, Roy Carter. Grand announcer, Leroy Vincent.

The proceeds realized from all events will be used to send delegates to Mount Sequoyah to the young peoples training school which will be held in June. The three chief aims of young people's week are educational, recreational and inspirational.

Dr. Walter J. Johnson, pastor of First M. E. church will deliver the special sermon to young people on Sunday night, May 31.

France Denies Having Received Debt Note

PARIS, May 10.—The French foreign office this afternoon professed complete ignorance regarding any debt note which it was reported from Washington the American government had forwarded to Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, for transmission to the French government.

Resumption of negotiations at Paris regarding a settlement of the French debt to the United States would cause no surprise. It is said this would be the logical outcome of the conversations, M. Daeschner, the French ambassador, has been having on the subject since he took up his post in Washington.

Mississippi Governor Orders Dismissal Of Suit Against Ford

JACKSON, Miss., May 10. — Disclaiming all responsibility for the anti-trust suit filed by State Revenue Agent W. J. Miller, in which the state seeks to impose $12,000,000 penalties against the Ford Motor company, Governor H. L. Whitfield tonight called upon Mr. Miller to bring about dismissal of the suit, out of regard to Mississippi's position in the eyes of the world.

The governor's statement, after declaring that the revenue agent had not consulted with him before filing the suit, contends that "the filing of the suit is fraught with most unfortunate consequences for Mississippi. At the very moment, when as chief executive of the state, I have been bending every effort to encourage new industries to establish themselves in Mississippi the press of the nation is proclaiming that 'Mississippi is gunning for big business.'"

A Prisoner of Love

Polly was the daughter of missionaries living in China. Came the revolution. Polly was captured by Chinese bandits and held for ransom. Her terror was indescribable until she learned that the bandits were led by a white man—a young American—one of her own race to whom, she thought, she could turn for help. But she had yet to learn to what depths of degradation a white man can sink. The memory of those terrible days will remain with her to her dying day. She has written about it under the title "My Captain" in True Story Magazine for June. And this is but one of 18 big features. Get the June True Story today.
